1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Statement on Fair Use

Statement on Fair Use

RELEASE NO. 184 AUGUST 2010

LexisNexis Matthew Bender recognizes the balance that must be achieved between the operation of the fair use doctrine, whose basis is to avoid the rigid application of the copyright statute, and the protection of the creative rights and economic interests of authors, publishers and other copyright holders.

We are also aware of the countervailing forces that exist between the ever greater technological advances for making both print and electronic copies and the reduction in the value of copyrighted works that must result from a consistent and pervasive reliance on these new copying technologies. It is LexisNexis Matthew Bender's position that if the "progress of science and useful arts" is promoted by granting copyright protection to authors, such progress may well be impeded if copyright protection is diminished in the name of fair use. (See Nimmer on Copyright § 13.05[E][1].) This holds true whether the parameters of the fair use doctrine are considered in either the print or the electronic environment as it is the integrity of the copyright that is at issue, not the media under which the protected work may become available. Therefore, the fair use guidelines we propose apply equally to our print and electronic information, and apply, within §§ 107 and 108 of the Copyright Act, regardless of the professional status of the user.

Our draft guidelines would allow for the copying of limited materials, which would include synopses and tables of contents, primary source and government materials that may have a minimal amount of editorial enhancements, individual forms to aid in the drafting of applications and pleadings, and miscellaneous pages from any of our newsletters, treatises and practice guides. This copying would be permitted provided it is performed for internal use and solely for the purpose of facilitating individual research or for creating documents produced in the course of the user's professional practice, and the original from which the copy is made has been purchased or licensed as part of the user's existing in-house collection.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender fully supports educational awareness programs designed to increase the public's recognition of its fair use rights. We also support the operation of collective licensing organizations with regard to our print and electronic information.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulation, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work.

PREFACE 1973

This set of books is designed to provide lawyers with forms they need in their everyday practice, to set forth the law necessary for the effective use of the forms, and to delineate to procedure that must be followed in the various actions, special proceedings, and procedures covered.

The set contains four kinds of articles: (1) pleading (the articles Complaints and Cross-Complaints, Answers, and Demurrers, Motions to Strike, Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, and Motions for Non-suit and Judgment); (2) procedural (e.g., the articles Attachment, Claim and Delivery, Motions After Trial, Reference, and Summary Judgment); (3) specific action (e.g., the articles Assault and Battery, Contracts, Injunctions, Negligence, Nuisance, Reformation of Instruments, and Rescission and Restitution); and (4) subject matter (e.g., the articles Fences, Fires, Garages and Gas Stations, and Hospitals).

Each article is "definitive" in the sense that it sets forth the governing law as found in the state and federal Constitutions, statutes, court rules, and appellate cases. It is "didactic" in the sense that through the forms it attempts to show the practicing lawyer what to do rather than to involve him in the dialectics as to why it should be done.

As with the law itself, there has been, since Volume 1 was published in 1962, a continual change or evolution in the approach and specific content of each article, and much of this change results from comments and suggestions received from practicing lawyers.

Anyone who has followed the development of the law over the past several years in California cannot help but be aware of the vast changes that have been effected. The individual's right to privacy, which for so many years lay dormant, has exploded into a dynamic expanding area with more and more statutes, both state and federal, being enacted to preserve the right and more courts being inclined to enforce it. Laws that have tended to invade this right, such as the antiabortion statutes, have been held unconstitutional by the courts. Consumers' remedies against manufacturers and others in the marketing chain and the protection of the environment against waste and pollution are two new and rapidly expanding areas of law. Courts have rediscovered procedural due process and held a plethora of statutes, such as those involving civil arrest, attachment, claim and delivery, and so forth, unconstitutional; moreover, the language of the courts in some of their opinions suggests that they are about to rediscover substantive due process as well, and when that happens a great many more statutes of questionable social value will no doubt fall by the wayside.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice attempts to keep pace with these changes and to provide the legal profession with the law and forms just as quickly as possible. To do this, some volumes have had to be completely revised in order to accommodate the changes. In revising a volume, every article, and not just the ones fatally afflicted, is thoroughly reexamined and brought up to date in a manner that cannot be matched by mere annual supplementation, which is subject to intense time pressures. Moreover, in revising a volume, new articles are added when required by the carving out of new areas of the law.

The new and revised specific action and procedural articles also contain a practice or procedural guide taking the lawyer through the various steps of the proceeding involved and alerting him or her to things he or she must do that might otherwise be forgotten under the pressures of a busy schedule.

As in the past, our aim shall continue to be to provide service a notre puissance to all members of the California bar and bench, and we sincerely hope that they, in turn, will continue to supply us with their comments and suggestions so that we may, working together, provide the best books possible.

Since 1938, California's population has almost tripled. This human explosion has had its impact on litigation and on legislation. There has in the last 25 years been an increase of more than 200 volumes of California and California Appellate Reports-an increase of about 50 percent-and the number of Codes has increased six times. The dramatic changes in practice and procedure that these 25 years have brought about makes any law book published 25 years ago less valuable. Indeed, such a law book is now virtually obsolete. Litigation and legislation have rendered it undependable-dangerous to rely on. Because of this tremendous increase in reported cases and codes and the changes in practice and procedure, it has been deemed desirable to publish a new, modern, and comprehensive compilation of pleading and practice forms based exclusively on California cases, referenced exclusively to California statutes, rules, and texts, and annotated with California case notes.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice is a new and modern publication. The forms that comprise this set have been reproduced from California court records or contributed by California practicing attorneys. Every form has been meticulously checked against the latest California statutes and rules. They conform to present-day practice.

TABLE OF CONTENTS. Following the title of each article under which forms are classified will be found a Table of Contents. An examination of these tables gives testimony to the comprehensiveness of coverage. Note that in each article the forms are separately numbered. The reference to any form is the abbreviation of the article to which it is classified, followed by the number of the form.

INTRODUCTION. Following the Table of Contents is a text statement as to the practical aspects of the law distinctive to the article to which it relates. It is broken down into paragraphs with italicized headings. For a more detailed discussion, of course, textbooks on local practice and procedure should be consulted.

GOVERNING STATUTES. In each article under this heading, references are made to pertinent provisions of the California Codes. Statutory references also follow most of the individual forms.

RULES OF COURT. The newly compiled California Rules of Court numbers in a single sequence all rules of practice and procedure adopted by the Judicial Council and the Supreme Court in effect April 1, 1962. Wherever applicable these rules are referred to throughout California Forms of Pleading and Practice, the citation references being to the rules according to their newly assigned numbers.

MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES. For perhaps the first time in any California legal publication, references are made to pertinent provisions of the municipal codes and charters of the larger cities in California.

PERTINENT DECISIONS. Here are found short, succinct statements indicating relevant holdings in California cases. Notes of decisions also follow the particular forms to which they are pertinent.

LAW REVIEWS. References here are to helpful articles in the various California Law Reviews.

TEXT REFERENCES. Text publications, where a more detailed discussion of the subject matter of the article may be found, are referred to here.

INDEX. In addition to the indexes at the end of each of the volumes, there will be in the final volume a general detailed index to all the forms.

TABLES. The last volume will include tables consisting of cross references to the form from pertinent sections of the California Codes, and also such other tables as may be considered to be of practical value to users of the forms.

CONTRIBUTORS. To the hundreds of California practicing lawyers who have made available to our editors transcripts containing forms of pleading and practice, the publisher wishes to express its thanks and appreciation. In the final volume of the set, the names of all such contributors will be listed.

Firm in its confidence in the merits of this publication, hopefully the publisher looks forward to the day when California Forms of Pleading and Practice will not only be found in most of the offices of California attorneys, but will be universally recognized as California's most accurate and dependable compilation of pleading and practice forms.

Release 184 of California Forms of Pleading and Practice Annotated updates the publication in many areas noted in more detail below.

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Arbitration Tolled During Pendency of Civil Action. The California Supreme Court in Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665 holds that by statute effective January 1, 2007, if an arbitration agreement requires that arbitration of a controversy be demanded or initiated by a party to the arbitration agreement within a stated period of time, the commencement of a civil action by that party based upon that controversy, within that period of time, tolls the applicable time limitations contained in the agreement, from the date the civil action is commenced until 30 days after a final determination by the court hearing the action that the party is required to arbitrate the controversy, or 30 days after the final termination of the civil action, whichever date occurs first [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.12]. The end of a tolling period under this provision, i.e., 30 days after the final determination, simply means that the contractual limitations clock begins to run again from where it stopped at the filing of the civil action. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.40[1].

Agreed Limitation on Arbitration Discovery. In Dotson v. Amgen, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 975 , the court holds limitations on discovery contained in arbitration agreements are generally enforceable so long as they entitle the parties to discovery sufficient to adequately arbitrate their claims, including access to essential documents and witnesses, as determined by the arbitrator; and in challenges to clauses of arbitration agreements limiting discovery, the courts assume that the arbitrator will operate in a reasonable manner in conformity with the law. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings, § 33.25[1][b][ii].

Review of Error of Fact or Law in Award. This chapter's analysis on review of error of fact or law when confirming an arbitration award is reorganized according to (1) judicial review of merits under California statutes, (2) expanded judicial review under the California Rule, (3) the effect of the Federal Arbitration Act on judicial review, and

(4) expanded arbitral review. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.10.

APPEALS AND WRITS

Prejudicial Error Not Required on Appeal When Error Questions Structural Fairness of Trial. In Biscaro v. Stern (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 702 , the court of appeal held that the trial court's failure to rule on a continuance as an accommodation under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100, was a structural error, and was reversible per se without a showing of prejudice. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.10[1].

Deadlines for Filing Notice of Appeal. In Anderson v. Chikovani (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1397 , the court of appeal held that if a party files a valid motion for new trial and the trial court issues a timely order denying that motion, but no one serves the order or notice of entry of that order, then the applicable deadline for filing the notice of appeal from the judgment is 180 days after entry of judgment. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.14[1].

Mandate Petition Requires Proper Pleading. In Galbiso v. Orosi Public Utility Dist. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 652 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff's failure to allege that an agency had a duty to act in a certain way was fatal to a cause of action for mandate. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.31[2].

ATTORNEYS

Attorney's Duty of Loyalty Not Unlimited. In Oasis West Realty, LLC v. Goldman (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 688 , the court of appeal held that, as a private citizen, an attorney may sign a petition and ask neighbors to sign a petition that was adverse to a prior client's interests. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.31.

Vicarious Disqualification of Attorney's Law Firm Not Automatic. In Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 776 , the court of appeal held that when an attorney with client confidences moves from one private law firm to another, there is a rebuttable presumption of imputed knowledge to the law firm, which may be rebutted by evidence of effective ethical screening. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.150[6][a].

Actual Injury May Occur When Incurring Legal Fees Caused by Defendant's Malpractice. In Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court of appeal held that if attorney malpractice consists of negligent advice that prompts plaintiff to sign a contract he or she later seeks to rescind, actual injury for purposes of triggering the statute of limitations may be sustained when the plaintiff hires a new attorney to pursue rescission, as plaintiff at that point incurs liability for legal fees due to the first attorney's malpractice. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[2][b].

Attorney Signature Recital Not Basis for Tort Liability to Opposing Attorney. In Freedman v. Brutzkus (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1065 , the court of appeal held that an attorney who, on behalf of a client, signs a contract that contains a signature recital reading "approved as to form and content" does not by doing so make a representation to the attorney for the other contracting party that may form the basis for tort liability to that other attorney. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.200[3][a].

Limitation of Actions for Attorney Malpractice. Jocer Enterprises, Inc. v. Price (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 559 holds that although the tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 are exclusive with regard to legal malpractice claims, the broad terms of the fourth tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)--the provision applicable to legal and physical disabilities--encompass the circumstances described in the general tolling provisions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 351, which generally provides that if, when the cause of action accrues against a person, he or she is out of the state, the action may be commenced within the applicable limitations period after his or her return to the state. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[2][f].

CIVIL PROCEDURE

Allegations Commonly Used --Complete Absence of Notice to Fictitiously Named Defendant in Summons Violated Code Civ. Proc. § 474. In Carol Gilbert, Inc. v. Haller (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 852 , the court held that the complete absence of the notice required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474 to notify defendant that he was served as a person sued under a fictitious name was a violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 474, and service of an amended pleading did not serve as "process" under § 474 to satisfy the requirement. See Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used, § 20.12[4].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Settlement Negotiations. In Seltzer v. Barnes (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 953 , an action by a condominium owner against an attorney arising from the negotiation of a settlement agreement in a prior case, alleging fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress, the trial court erred in denying defendant's anti-SLAPP motion, because settlement negotiations were an exercise of the right to petition and the statements made as part of the negotiations were in connection with the underlying lawsuit for the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2). See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376, § 376.43[1][a].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Foreign Lawsuits. In Guessous v. Chrome Hearts, LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1177 , an action between business competitors, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to strike because petitioning activity undertaken in a foreign country by filing lawsuits in France was not protected by the anti-SLAPP statute, as neither the United States nor the California Constitution granted a United States citizen the right to petition a foreign government. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Homeowners Association's Communications. In Turner v. Vista Pointe Ridge Homeowners Assn. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 676 , the court of appeal held that a trial court erred in granting a homeowners association's anti-SLAPP motion on the ground that each cause of action alleged by the homeowners against the association arose out of a dispute over architectural guidelines and related to communications from the association pertaining to purported noncompliance with guidelines and a dispute about architectural guidelines was a public issue. There was no indication that the association's actions giving rise to the dispute were undertaken in furtherance of the right of petition or free speech. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[3][c].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Activities in Representing Former Client. In PrediWave Corp. v. Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1204 , the trial court erred in granting the anti-SLAPP motion of a law firm and lawyers that had previously represented the plaintiff-company, which sued the law firm based on its representation of the company and its former president and CEO, because the principal thrust of the company's causes of action was that the company and the former president had an irreconcilable conflict of interest, and, as former client, the company did not bring the lawsuit to deter speech and petitioning activities done by their own attorneys on their behalf but rather to complain about the quality of their former attorneys' performance. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Malicious Prosecution Action. In Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204 , a malicious prosecution action against the attorneys representing plaintiff in the underlying slander litigation, which was dismissed as resulting of terminating sanctions imposed for plaintiff's refusal to follow court orders and comply with his discovery obligations, the trial court properly granted defendants' anti-SLAPP motion as to the malicious prosecution cause of action, because, although plaintiff established a prima facie showing that the underlying action was terminated in her favor and brought without probable cause, plaintiff failed to establish a prima facie showing that defendants acted with malice. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.17[1].

Declaratory Relief--Court Has Discretion to Stay Action Between Liability Insurer and Insured Even if Issues Are Different From Those Presented in Underlying Action. Generally, a court must stay a declaratory judgment action between an insurer and insured to adjudicate coverage issues under a liability policy, if factual issues presented in the declaratory judgment action will necessarily be resolved in an underlying action brought by a third party against the insured. A California court of appeal has held that if the declaratory judgment action can be resolved on legal issues or factual issues unrelated to those in the underlying action, the trial court still has discretion to stay the declaratory judgment action [Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 221] . See Ch. 182,

Declaratory Relief, §§ 182.20[3], 182.22.

Demurrers--Compulsory Cross-Complaint. In Align Technology, Inc. v. Tran (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 949 , the trial court properly sustained a demurrer to the complaint by a former employer against a former employee alleging breach of contract and conversion of patents belonging to the employer, on the grounds that under Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30, the compulsory cross-complaint statute, the employer was required to raise the claims in response to the former employee's prior cross-complaint filed in a prior action by the employer against the employee. However, the trial court abused its discretion in denying the employer leave to amend for the employer to provide additional allegations as to when it discovered the misconduct at issue. See Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, § 206.14[1][h].

Dismissal--Indigent Pro Se Prisoner. In Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672 , the trial court abused its discretion by choosing the "drastic measure" of dismissal of an indigent prisoner's pro se action against a prison doctor for failure to appear telephonically at the case management conference and subsequent order to show cause hearing, without first determining that the prisoner had been afforded meaningful access to the courts and that his failure to appear at the required hearings was willful. See Ch. 212, Dismissal, § 212.62[3].

Dismissal--Court Congestion. In Jordan v. Superstar Sandcars (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416 , the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing plaintiffs' action based on the finding that plaintiffs failed to establish that bringing the action to trial was impossible, impracticable, or futile based on two court-declared moratoria on civil trials preventing civil cases from being tried, which did not prevent or interfere with plaintiffs prosecuting their case, and, with regard to an alleged de facto moratorium during the final year within which plaintiffs were required to bring their case to trial, while few civil cases were being tried due to a backlog in cases, cases approaching the five-year cutoff were being tried. See Ch. 212, Dismissal, § 212.125[4][c].

Injunctions--Preliminary Injunction Bond May Be Forfeited or Waived. In Smith v. Adventist Health System/West (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 729, the court of appeal held that a bond required under Code Civ. Proc. § 529a may be waived or forfeited by the person to be enjoined. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.46[1].

Judges-- Disqualification Challenge by Appeal. Fink v. Shemtov (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1160 holds Code Civ. Proc. § 170.3(d) provides that the determination of the question of the disqualification of a judge is not an appealable order and may be reviewed only by a writ of mandate from the appropriate court of appeal sought only by the parties to the proceeding. A party's attempt to challenge the trial court's order striking that party's statement of disqualification by way of appeal is improper. See Ch. 317, Judges, 317.51.

Limitation of Actions-- Attorney Malpractice. Jocer Enterprises, Inc. v. Price (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 559 holds that although the tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 are exclusive with regard to legal malpractice claims, the broad terms of the fourth tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)--the provision applicable to legal and physical disabilities--encompass the circumstances described in the general tolling provisions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 351, which generally provides that if, when the cause of action accrues against a person, he or she is out of the state, the action may be commenced within the applicable limitations period after his or her return to the state. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[2][f].

Limitation of Actions-- Arbitration Tolling. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665 holds Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.12 provides that if an arbitration agreement requires that arbitration of a controversy be demanded or initiated by a party to the arbitration agreement within a period of time, the commencement of a civil action by that party based upon that controversy, within that period of time, shall toll the applicable time limitations contained in the arbitration agreement with respect to that controversy, from the date the civil action is commenced until 30 days after a final determination by the court that the party is required to arbitrate the controversy, or 30 days after the final termination of the civil action that was commenced and initiated the tolling, whichever date occurs first. The end of the tolling period simply means that the contractual limitations clock begins to run again, not that the limitations period ended. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[3].

Motions to Reconsider--Relief From Default. In D.R.S. Trading Co., Inc. v. Barnes (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 815 , after plaintiff obtained a default judgment against defendants, the trial court, after initially denying defendants' motion for relief from default, properly reconsidered its decision under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 and granted the motion, because the trial court had jurisdiction to reconsider its order under the circumstances. In Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868 , the court of appeal held that to the extent defendants' second motion for relief from default relied upon the mandatory provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), it did not ask the trial court to reconsider its previous order under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a), because the first order was entirely correct when made and the second motion rested on an entirely different legal theory, invoked a different statutory ground, and relied in very substantial part on markedly different facts. See Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions, § 374.12.

Small Claims Cases--New and Revised Judicial Council Forms. The California Judicial Council has promulgated new and revised forms for use in small-claims cases. The forms are effective for use beginning July 1, 2010. See Ch. 526, Small Claims, §§ 526.161, 526.162, 526.164, 526.164A, 526.164B, 526.166, 526.166A, 526.167, 526.167A, 526.167B, 526.176.

Summary Judgment--Expert's Declaration Contradicting Prior Statement. In Alvis v. County of Ventura (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 536 , an action against a county as a result of a massive landslide after heavy rains, although the trial court admitted plaintiff's expert's declaration into evidence over the county's objection that opinions expressed in his declaration were without foundation and some of them contradicted his prior statements, the trial court properly found the declaration did not constitute substantial evidence so as to raise a triable issue of fact because it contained assertions that directly contradicted his prior statement in a report to an insurance company and the contradiction was unexplained. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.24[1][e].

Summary Judgment--Prior Motion for Summary Adjudication Did Not Bar Motion for Summary Judgment. In Nieto v. Blue Shield of California Life & Health Ins. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 60 , the trial court properly exercised its discretion in determining that Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2) did not bar summary judgment because the operative motion addressed an issue not raised by the prior motion. Even assuming it did not assert a new issue, the trial court had inherent authority to reconsider sua sponte its prior order denying defendant's second motion for summary judgment. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.34[3].

Vexatious Litigants--Adverse Litigations. In Fink v. Shemtov (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1160 , the trial court properly declared plaintiff a vexatious litigant on the ground that he commenced, prosecuted, or maintained at least five separate litigations that were finally determined adversely to him. He conceded that the first, second, and fifth cases listed in the vexatious litigant order each qualified as litigation finally determined adversely to him. The third case also qualified, because the appellate court's decision showed that judgment was entered in his favor, but he appealed from the judgment and the appellate court affirmed, thereby finally determining the appeal adversely to him. Two more litigations were determined adversely to him because his notices of appeal were untimely filed. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.13[3].

CIVIL RIGHTS

No Right to Internal Campaign Information Because of Impact on First Amendment Rights. In Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147 , the Ninth Circuit held that proponents of Proposition 8, which was later challenged in court, as to which the opponents sought disclosure of internal campaign information, made a prima facie showing of an arguable First Amendment infringement by demonstrating the consequences objectively suggesting an impact on, or chilling of, associational rights. Applying the First Amendment's more demanding heightened relevance standard, plaintiffs did not demonstrate an interest in obtaining disclosures sufficient to justify the deterrent effect on the free exercise of the constitutionally protected right of association. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and

Demonstrations .

No Prelitigation Notice Required for Title IX Action. In Mansourian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2010) 594 F.3d 1095 , a class action by female wrestlers against a university for money damages for violation of effective accommodation under Title IX, based on the elimination of women from the varsity wrestling team, the trial court erred in finding that plaintiffs were required to give defendant prelitigation notice of and an opportunity to rectify the specific alleged violation. The trial court erred in granting the university summary judgment on ground that the record demonstrated a history and continuing practice of program expansion for women under Option Two under Title XI. Further, the trial court erred in dismissing the students' action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violation of the Equal Protection Clause by maintaining an athletics program that discriminated on the basis of gender on the ground that Title IX's enforcement scheme was sufficiently comprehensive to demonstrate that Congress intended to preclude § 1983 claims when it enacted Title IX, because Title IX does not bar § 1983 suits to enforce rights under the Equal Protection Clause. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

Nominal Damage Award Sufficient to Support Award of Attorney's Fees. In Mahach-Watkins v. Depee (9th Cir. 2010) 593 F.3d 1054 , the Ninth Circuit held that although plaintiff obtained only nominal damages in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and a state wrongful death action, the trial court properly awarded attorney's fees, because plaintiff's success in achieving a liability verdict was significant, independent of any damage award, even though the difference between the damages sought and obtained somewhat disfavored the award of attorney's fees. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Blanket Strip-Search Policy Passes Muster. In Bull v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2010) 595 F.3d 964 , the Ninth Circuit held that a blanket jail policy requiring strip searches of all arrestees classified for custodial housing in the general population was facially reasonable under the Fourth Amendment, notwithstanding the lack of individualized reasonable suspicion as to the individuals searched. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Attorney's Fees Properly Awarded to Prevailing Defendant in CDPA Action. In Jankey v. Lee (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1173 , because an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party is mandatory under Civ. Code § 55, and because no finding that plaintiff's claim was frivolous is required under Civ. Code § 55, nor is Civ. Code § 55 preempted by the Americans With Disabilities Act, the trial court properly awarded the prevailing defendant attorney's fees. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Governmental Immunity in Action Under Civ. Code § 52.1. In County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 218 , an action against a county and district attorney alleging civil rights violations under Civ. Code, § 52.1, based on the seizure of property after a criminal investigation, the trial court erred in denying defendants' motion for summary adjudication on the grounds of prosecutorial immunity under Gov. Code §§ 821.6, 820.8, 815.2(b), 815.6, 820.2. See Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

Teacher-Led Recitation of Pledge of Allegiance Not Establishment of Religion. In Newdow v. Rio Linda Union Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2010) 597 F.3d 1007 , the Ninth Circuit held that a state statute and a school district policy requiring the teacher-led recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance by students in public schools, but not compelling students to participate, and Pledge itself, did not constitute the establishment of religion prohibited by United States Constitution. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Refusal to Classify Pupil as Autistic Rather Than Mentally Retarded Violation of IDEA. In Weissburg v. Lancaster School Dist. (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1255 , an administrative law judge's conclusion that a school district misclassified a pupil as mentally retarded rather than autistic qualified the parents for attorney's fees under IDEA as the prevailing party, even though the pupil was not denied a fair appropriate public education because he received instruction by a qualified teacher. Further, the parents were entitled to attorney's fees even though the pupil was represented by his paternal grandmother, who was a practicing attorney, but not his legal guardian or acting in place of his natural or adoptive parent. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

CLASS ACTIONS

Predominance of Common Issues in Class Actions Involving Reliance of Defendant's Misrepresentations. Two recent appellate decisions illustrate when consumer claims of reliance on a seller's misrepresentations about a product can be litigated on a classwide basis. In one case, the claim was that, in reliance on the defendant's deceptive conduct, consumers purchased an illegal product they would not otherwise have purchased. The action did not seek actual damages, but instead sought restitution. The court of appeal concluded that class certification was appropriate, because the materiality of the defendant's alleged deceptive conduct could be determined on a classwide basis [Steroid Hormone Prod. Cases (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 145] . The other case involved claims of actual damages suffered by class members who had purchased the medication Vioxx believing it to be safe and more effective than a less-expensive generic medication, based on misleading information provided by the manufacturer of Vioxx. The court of appeal concluded that class certification was inappropriate, because each individual's claim was dependent on a showing of his or her specific medical needs and history [In re Vioxx Class Cases (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 116] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[2][b].

Class-Action Settlement Notice Must Include Unambiguous Class Definition. A California court of appeal has held that a trial court reviewing a class-action settlement for fairness must ensure that the class definition is unambiguous, so that persons receiving notice of the settlement will be able to determine whether they are members of the class [Cho v. Seagate Tech. Holdings, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 734] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.21[1].

Rules Regarding Class Certification in Unfair Competition Cases Clarified. In Steroid Hormone Product Cases (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 145 , the court of appeal held that when a plaintiff sought class certification under the unfair competition statute in a lawsuit seeking the disgorgement of money received by selling over-the-counter nutritional supplements that contained steroids that were illegal to sell or possess without a prescription, class certification was improperly denied on the grounds of individualized factual inquiries about whether that illegality was material to the decision to purchase. In McAdams v. Monier, Inc. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 174 , the court of appeal held that as individualized proof of reliance and injury are not generally required for nonrepresentative class members when a class action seeks restitution for alleged misrepresentations in extensive, long-term advertising campaigns, issues concerning reliance by and injury to unnamed class members will not foreclose a class action in that context. In Pfizer Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 622 , however, the court of appeal held that in advertising campaigns of shorter duration, for example, a campaign lasting only six months, evidence that many or most of the proposed class members were never actually exposed to alleged misrepresentations can defeat an attempt to certify a class by showing that there was no class-wide injury. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

CONSERVATORSHIPS AND GUARDIANSHIPS

Guardianships--Standing Under Prob. Code § 1510(a) Requires Showing of Ultimate Facts Demonstrating Financial Misconduct or Other Information to Warrant Court Intervention. In Suleman v. Superior Court (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1287 , the court held that an "other person on behalf of the minor" under Prob. Code § 1510(a) is a person who pleads ultimate facts demonstrating financial misconduct, or alleges other information sufficient to warrant court intervention in the management of the minor's money or other property. See Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, §§ 280.60, 280.84.

Conservatorships--No Error in Accepting Stipulation to Reestablish Conservatorship. In Conservatorship of Deidre B. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1306 , the court held that a trial court did not err when it accepted a stipulation from appellant's appointed counsel stating that appellant consented to the reestablishment of a conservatorship of her person and waived her right to a formal hearing. See Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators, §§ 281.51, 281.73.

Guardianships--Trial Court Did Not Abuse Discretion in Awarding Compensatory Costs to Guardian. In Guardianship of K.S. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1525 , the court held that in a dispute relating back to the removal of a trustee of a life insurance trust for day trading with trust funds and paying himself for services, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding compensatory costs to the guardian of the trust beneficiaries under Prob. Code § 2622.5 based on its finding of bad faith and objective unreasonableness. See Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts, §§ 290E.41, 290E.63.

Conservatorships--Statutory and Due Process Right Not Violated When Court Proceeded in Proposed Conservatee's Absence. In Conservatorship of John L. (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 131, the California Supreme Court held that a hearing to establish a conservatorship under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act did not violate the act or the conservatee's constitutional right of due process when the court accepted representation of the conservatee's attorney and proceeding with the hearing in the proposed conservatee's absence. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.144[6][a].

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Laws That Discriminate Against Out-of-State Persons. This chapter adds new sections on the constitutionality of laws that discriminate against out-of-state persons, including National Association of Optometrists & Opticians Lenscrafters, Inc. v. Brown (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 521 , which holds to determine whether the laws have a practical discriminatory effect, it is necessary to compare the out-of-state entity with a similarly situated in-state entity. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.22.

Preemption--Plain Language. In Sanchez v. Aerovias De Mex., S.A. de C.V. (9th Cir. 2010) 590 F.3d 1027 , the court holds that when interpreting a preemption clause, courts must give effect to its plain language unless there is good reason to believe Congress intended the language to have some more restrictive meaning. Interpretation does not occur in a contextual vacuum, but rather is informed by two presumptions. First, the states are independent sovereigns in the U.S. federal system, so courts have long presumed that Congress does not cavalierly preempt state law causes of action. Second, the purpose of Congress is the ultimate touchstone in every preemption case. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.23[2][b].

Waiver of Express Preemption. In California Energy Com. v. U.S. Dep't of Energy (9th Cir. 2009) 585 F.3d 1143 , the court holds federal law may provide procedure and standards for administrative waiver of express preemption of state law by the federal law; and an appellate court will uphold an agency decision on a waiver application only on the basis of the reasoning articulated therein. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.23[2][c].

CONTRACTS AND COMMERCIAL LAW

Sales of Goods--Express Warranty Under U.C.C. In Weinstat v. Dentsply Int'l, Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1213 , the court illuminated the meaning and effect of Com. Code § 2313 concerning express warranties in sales of goods. See Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties, § 502.23[1].

COSTS AND ATTORNEY'S FEES

Recovery Is Offset to Determine Prevailing Party. In Goodman v. Lozano (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1327 , the California Supreme Court held that the term "prevailing party" does not include a plaintiff who prevails on the issue of a defendant's liability but who recovers nothing from the defendant because the judgment against the defendant is offset by the amount of plaintiff's settlement with codefendants prior to trial. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.15[1][d].

Equitable Powers to Award Attorney's Fees. Rudnick v. Rudnick (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1328 holds courts have inherent equitable power in limited situations to award attorney's fees when it was warranted by the equities of the case, and may be granted under (1) the "common fund" principle, (2) the "substantial benefit theory," and/or (3) the "private attorney general" theory. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.224.

DISCOVERY

Work Product Protection-- Witness Statements. Coito v. Superior Court (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 758 holds that written and recorded witness statements, including those taken by counsel, are not attorney work product. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.102.

Mediation Confidentiality. Porter v. Wyner (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 949 holds that communications between an attorney and client are not within mediation confidentiality. See Ch. 191,Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.125A.

Deposition Subpoena for Production of Business Records. This chapter has been updated with revised Judicial Council Form SUBP-010, Deposition Subpoena for Production of Business Records [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2020.410-2020.440], effective July 1, 2010. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, § 193.228[1].

EMPLOYMENT

Employer's Current Application of Discriminatory Practice May Be Subject of Disparate-Impact Claim, Even if Claim Based on Previous Adoption of That Practice Would Be Time-Barred. The United States Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff who does not file a timely charge under Title VII challenging the adoption of a discriminatory practice may assert a disparate-impact claim in a timely charge challenging the employer's later application of that practice [Lewis v. City of Chicago (2010) 2010 U.S. LEXIS 4165] . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[2][a].

Employment-Arbitration Award Must Be Vacated if Legal Error in Award Deprives Employee of Hearing on FEHA Claim. The California Supreme Court has held that an employment-arbitration award is subject to vacatur if a legal error in the award prevents the employee from obtaining a hearing on a claim based on the Fair Employment and Housing Act or on other unwaivable statutory rights [Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 665] . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.55[2], and see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16].

California State University Employee May Sue on Whistleblower-Retaliation Claim After Adverse Decision on Administrative Complaint. The California Supreme Court has held that Gov. Code § 8547.12(c), which authorizes a California State University employee to file suit on a whistleblower retaliation claim if the university has not "satisfactorily addressed" the employee's administrative complaint within 18 months, refers to satisfaction of the complaining employee, rather than some good-faith standard for investigation of the complaint. The employee may therefore sue after receiving an adverse administrative decision [Runyon v. Board of Trs. of Cal. State Univ. (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 760] . See Ch. 118, Civil Service, §§ 118.58, 118.147[2].

Industrial Welfare Commission Wage Orders Define Employment Relationship for Purposes of Action to Recover Minimum Wages or Overtime Compensation. The California Supreme Court has held that for purposes of an employee's action to recover minimum wages or overtime compensation under Lab. Code § 1194, the relevant "employer" is defined by the applicable Industrial Welfare Commission wage order [Martinez v. Combs (2010) 49 Cal. 4th 35] . See Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.40[3][a], 250.62[3].

Evidence of Employee's Unfitness Allowed to Prove Negligent Hiring Claim Even When Vicarious Liability Also Alleged. In Diaz v. Carcamo (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 339 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff seeks to impose on an employer both vicarious liability for the tort of an employee and direct liability for negligent hiring and retention of that employee, the trial court does not err when allowing the plaintiff to introduce evidence of the employee's unfitness in order to establish the negligent hiring and retention claim, even if that evidence would be inadmissible as proof that the employee was negligent on the occasion that forms the basis for plaintiff's suit. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.12[2].

Frequency of Use of Vehicle for Employer Business Does Not Defeat Application of Required-Vehicle Exception to Coming-and-Going Rule. In Lobo v. Tamco (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 297 , the court of appeal held that for purposes of establishing respondeat superior liability, if an employer requires or reasonably relies upon the employee to make his or her personal vehicle available for use for the employer's benefit, the fact that the employer only rarely makes use of the employee's personal vehicle should not, in and of itself, defeat application of the required-vehicle exception to the coming-and-going rule. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[4][c].

EQUITY

Promissory Estoppel. In Garcia v. World Savings, FSB (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1031 , the court holds the doctrine of promissory estoppel cannot be invoked and must be held inapplicable in the absence of a showing that a promise had been made upon which the complaining party relied to his or her prejudice. The promise must be clear and unambiguous in its terms, and to meet this standard, a promise need only be definite enough that a court can determine the scope of the duty, and the limits of performance must be sufficiently defined to provide a rational basis for the assessment of damages. The fact that a promise is conditional does not render it unenforceable or ambiguous; if extrinsic evidence is needed to interpret a promise, then obviously the promise is not clear and unambiguous. Thus, promissory estoppel cannot be established from preliminary discussions and negotiations. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.94[2][c], [3].

Eqitable Estoppel and Government Bodies. Steinhart v. Cty. of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1298 holds that equitable estoppel only applies to a governmental body when necessary to avoid grave injustice and when the result will not defeat a strong public policy. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.94[3].

Doctrine of Waiver Operates Defensively Only. Supervalu, Inc. v. Wexford Underwriting Managers, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 64 holds the doctrine of waiver operates defensively only. In other words, it protects a party from unfair advantage sought by another. It is not designed to permit a person, offensively, to thereby obtain unfair advantage. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.151

Equitable Estoppel Proven Without Fraud. Superior Dispatch, Inc. v. Ins. Corp. of N.Y. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 175 holds the defendant need not intend to deceive the plaintiff to give rise to an equitable estoppel. That is, an estoppel may arise although there was no designed fraud on the part of the person sought to be estopped. It is enough if the party has been induced to refrain from using means or taking action that is within his or her power, by which the party might have retrieved his or her position and prevented his or her loss. Where the delay in commencing action is induced by the conduct of the defendant, the defendant may not assert the expiration of the statute of limitation as a defense. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.170[2].

Equitable Powers to Award Attorney's Fees. Rudnick v. Rudnick (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1328 holds courts have inherent equitable power in limited situations to award attorney's fees when it was warranted by the equities of the case, and may be granted under (1) the "common fund" principle, (2) the "substantial benefit theory," and/or (3) the "private attorney general" theory. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.224.

FEDERAL COURTS

Mootness. Alvarez v. Smith (2009) 130 S. Ct. 576 holds that an actual controversy must exist at all stages of review, not just when the complaint is filed. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal, § 265.16[4][a].

State Immunity Under the Eleventh Amendment. Alaska v. U.S. (9th Cir. 2009) 564 F.3d 1062 holds that to determine when Congress has validly abrogated state immunity under the Eleventh Amendment, a court must resolve two predicate questions: (1) whether Congress unequivocally expressed its intent to abrogate, and (2) if so, whether Congress acted pursuant to a valid grant of constitutional authority. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal, § 265.18[4][c].

Removal Is Absolute for Conduct Performed Under Color of Federal Office. Medical Dev. Intl v. Cal. Dept of Corr. and Rehab. (9th Cir. 2009) 585 F.3d 1211 holds that the right of removal created by 28 U.S.C § 1442(a) is absolute for conduct performed under color of federal office, and the policy favoring removal should not be frustrated by a narrow, grudging interpretation of the statutory language (receiver acting under color of federal office). See Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal, § 265.31[3].

INSURANCE

Underlying Complaint Need Not Specifically Allege Negligence of Indemnitor. In UDC-Universal Development, L.P. v. CH2M Hill (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 10 , the court of appeal held that the complaint underlying an indemnity claim need not allege negligence specifically on the part of the indemnitor in order to trigger a duty to defend on the part of that indemnitor, and it is sufficient that the complaint describe factual circumstances that suggest the possible negligence of the indemnitor, and the indemnitee then specify in a cross-complaint or otherwise that at least some of the damage would have been caused by the indemnitor's negligence. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.36.

Court Modifies Punitive Damages in Insurance Bad Faith Case. In Amerigraphics, Inc. v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1538 , the appellate court found substantial evidence supporting a punitive damages award against the insurer, but modified the amount of punitive damages award from $1.7 million (10:1 punitive to compensatory damages) to $500,000 (3.8:1 punitive to compensatory damages). See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[5].

Insurer Providing Defense May Intervene. In Gray v. Begley (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1509 , the appellate court held that an insurer providing a defense under a reservation of rights may intervene in the action when the insured attempts to settle the case to the potential detriment of the insurer. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.117.

Material Misrepresentation in Insurance Application Bars Coverage. In Superior Dispatch, Inc. v. Insurance Corp. of N.Y. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 175 , summary judgment for the insurer was proper in insured's action based on denial of coverage, because of the insured's material misrepresentation in the application regarding the specific commodities hauled by its trucking operation. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.18[3].

JUDGMENTS, ENFORCEMENT, AND DEBT COLLECTION

Collection on Secured Certificate. In Ho v. Hsieh (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 337 , the court of appeal explained the procedure to be used to reach a debtor's interest in a security represented by a certificate. See Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.65[4][c].

Fraudulent Transfers--Requirement That Creditor Must Be Injured. In Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 834 , the court discussed and applied the rule that a creditor has no cause of action under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act to set aside a putatively fraudulent transfer unless the creditor has been injured by the transfer. The case illustrates how the minimum-bid requirement for a judicial sale of a homestead [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.710 et seq.] can operate to preclude the possibility of injury for a particular creditor. See Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances, § 270.34.

JUVENILE LAW

Social Worker Affidavit. This chapter is updated with the July 1, 2010, Judicial Council Form, JV-210, Application to Commence Proceedings by Affidavit and Decision by Social Worker. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction, and General Procedures, § 327.150.

Judicial Council Forms. This chapter is updated with the July 1, 2010, Judicial Council Forms, including: JV-300, Notice of Hearing on Selection of a Permanent Plan; JV-320, Orders Under Welfare and Institutions Code Sections 366.24, 366.26, 727.3, 727.31; JV-510, Proof of Service--Juvenile; JV-800, Notice of Appeal--Juvenile; JV-810, Notice of Intent to File Writ Petition; and JV-825, Petition for Extraordinary Writ. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.351, 328.390, 328.392, 328.400, 328.401, 328.402.

PHYSICIANS

Medical Board's Duties to Publish Information. In Fulton v. Medical Bd. of Cal. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1510 , the court of appeal held that the Medical Board of California was required to publish and update information about actions against an individual that were initiated while he was licensed to practice in California, even if he was no longer licensed to practice medicine in California. See Ch. 414, Physicians: Licensing and Discipline, § 414.67.

PROBATE

Trusts--CCP § 366.2(a) Barred Action Against Successor Trustee. In Property Trust v. Newman Trust (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 287, 296 , the court held that the one-year statute of limitations of CCP § 366.2(a) applied to a lawsuit against a trust based on actions of a deceased trustee. The court reasoned that a suit for breach of fiduciary duty and accounting, which was filed against a successor trustee more than one year after the decedent trustee's death and alleged that the decedent trustee had concealed financial information, was time-barred under CCP § 366.2(a) because it could have been brought on a liability of the person claim. See Ch. 454, Claims Against Estate, §§ 454.51, 454.253.

Trusts--Beneficiary Had Standing to Sue Another Beneficiary for Breach of Trustee's Duties. In King v. Johnston (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1488 , the court held that although a successor trustee had been appointed, a trust beneficiary had standing to sue a fellow beneficiary, under either a third-party participant theory or a constructive trustee theory, for aiding the former trustee in transferring property out of the trust in breach of the trustee's duties. See Ch. 560,Trusts, §§ 560.184, 560.444.

Trusts--Trust Is a Relationship to Hold Property and Not a Separate Entity From Its Trustees. In Presta v. Tepper (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 909 , the court held that when two individuals entered into a real estate partnership acting in their capacity as trustee of a family trust, the partners were the individuals, not the trusts, and that an ordinary express trust created under Prob. Code § 15200 is not a separate entity and cannot be a partner as contemplated by Corp. Code § 16101. See Ch. 560, Trusts, §§ 560.41, 560.361.

Trusts--Spendthrift Provision Does Not Insulate Trustee-Beneficiary From Liability for Breach of Fiduciary Duty. In Chatard v. Oveross (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1098 , the court affirmed a surcharge order and held that a trust beneficiary, who also acted as trustee and committed a breach causing financial harm to the trust, could have her interest in the trust estate impounded to satisfy a claim arising from her misfeasance notwithstanding the existence of the spendthrift provision. See Ch. 560, Trusts, §§ 560.224, 560.381(2).

Trusts--Court Has Equitable Power to Charge Reasonable and Necessary Fees. In Rudnick v. Rudnick (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1328 , the court held that when a trust beneficiary instigates an unfounded proceeding against the trust in bad faith, a probate court has the equitable power to charge the reasonable and necessary fees incurred by the trustee in opposing the proceeding against the beneficiary's share of the trust estate. See Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.444.

Trusts--Modification Petition Does Not Violate No Contest Clause. In Balian v. Balian (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1505 , the court held that under Prob. Code § 21305(b)(1), a Prob. Code § 15409 modification petition to delete a special needs provision because the settlor misunderstood the circumstances did not violate a no contest clause as a matter of public policy, and the safe harbor petition was properly granted. See Ch. 444,Will Contests, §§ 444.14, 444.33, and Ch. 560, Trusts, §§ 560.16, 560.361.

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Pitchess Discovery Not Available in DMV Administrative Per Se Hearings. In Brown v. Valverde (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1531 , the court of appeal held that a driver facing license suspension following arrest for driving under the influence may not seek discovery of confidential peace officer personnel records pursuant to Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 531 . See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.48[2][a].

REAL ESTATE

California Environmental Quality Act--Statutes of Limitations. In Stockton Citizens for Sensible Planning v. City of Stockton (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 481 , the California Supreme Court held that the 35-day statute of limitations set forth in Pub. Res. Code § 21167(d) begins to run on the filing of a notice of exemption (NOE), whether or not the NOE is substantively or procedurally flawed. See Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters, § 418.15[2].

California Environmental Quality Act--Statutes of Limitations. In Committee for Green Foothills v. Santa Clara County (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 32 , the California Supreme Court held that the filing of a notice of decision triggers the 30-day statute of limitations in Pub. Res. Code § 21167(e) for all CEQA challenges to the decision announced in the notice. See Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters, § 418.15[2].

Options to Purchase Real Property. In Steiner v. Thexton (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 411 , the California Supreme Court concluded that although an agreement was titled "Real Estate Purchase Contract," the label was not dispositive. Rather, the Court looked through the agreement's form to its substance, and determined that the agreement contained the classic features of an option. See Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser of Real Property, § 569.27.

SCHOOLS

Teacher-Led Recitation of Pledge of Allegiance Not Establishment of Religion. In Newdow v. Rio Linda Union Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2010) 597 F.3d 1007 , the Ninth Circuit held that a state statute and a school district policy requiring the teacher-led recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance by students in public schools, but not compelling students to participate, and Pledge itself, did not constitute the establishment of religion prohibited by United States Constitution. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Refusal to Classify Pupil as Autistic Rather Than Mentally Retarded Violation of IDEA. In Weissburg v. Lancaster School Dist. (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1255 , an administrative law judge's conclusion that a school district misclassified a pupil as mentally retarded rather than autistic qualified the parents for attorney's fees under IDEA as the prevailing party, even though the pupil was not denied a fair appropriate public education because he received instruction by a qualified teacher. Further, the parents were entitled to attorney's fees even though the pupil was represented by his paternal grandmother, who was a practicing attorney, but not his legal guardian or acting in place of his natural or adoptive parent. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

TORTS

Actual Injury May Occur When Incurring Legal Fees Caused by Defendant's Malpractice. In Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court of appeal held that if attorney malpractice consists of negligent advice that prompts plaintiff to sign a contract he or she later seeks to rescind, actual injury for purposes of triggering the statute of limitations may be sustained when the plaintiff hires a new attorney to pursue rescission, as plaintiff at that point incurs liability for legal fees due to the first attorney's malpractice. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §

Attorney Signature Recital Not Basis for Tort Liability to Opposing Attorney. In Freedman v. Brutzkus (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1065 , the court of appeal held that an attorney who, on behalf of a client, signs a contract that contains a signature recital reading "approved as to form and content" does not by doing so make a representation to the attorney for the other contracting party that may form the basis for tort liability to that other attorney. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.200[3][a].

Amendment of Complaint Permitted After Demurrer in Attorney Conspiracy Case. In Central Concrete Supply Co., Inc. v. Bursak (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1092 , the court of appeal held that, in appropriate circumstances, a trial court may permit amendment of a complaint after sustaining a demurrer based on failure to comply with Civ. Code § 1714.10 when the complaint seeks to hold an attorney liable for conspiracy. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy, § 126.14[2][e].

Constructive Notice of Damages Sought Insufficient to Support Default Judgement Damage Award. In Stein v. York (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 320 , the court of appeal held that if a complaint fails to state an amount of damages sought, constructive notice of the amount of potential liability on the part of the defendant is insufficient to support an award of damages through default judgment. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.43.

Evidence of Employee's Unfitness Allowed to Prove Negligent Hiring Claim Even When Vicarious Liability Also Alleged. In Diaz v. Carcamo (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 339 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff seeks to impose on an employer both vicarious liability for the tort of an employee and direct liability for negligent hiring and retention of that employee, the trial court does not err when allowing the plaintiff to introduce evidence of the employee's unfitness in order to establish the negligent hiring and retention claim, even if that evidence would be inadmissible as proof that the employee was negligent on the occasion that forms the basis for plaintiff's suit. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.12[2].

Frequency of Use of Vehicle for Employer Business Does Not Defeat Application of Required-Vehicle Exception to Coming-and-Going Rule. In Lobo v. Tamco (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 297 , the court of appeal held that for purposes of establishing respondeat superior liability, if an employer requires or reasonably relies upon the employee to make his or her personal vehicle available for use for the employer's benefit, the fact that the employer only rarely makes use of the employee's personal vehicle should not, in and of itself, defeat application of the required-vehicle exception to the coming-and-going rule. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[4][c].

Communications Decency Act Immunized Forwarder of Defamatory E-Mail. In Phan v. Pham (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 323 , the court of appeal held that the federal Communications Decency Act provided immunity from liability to a person who forwarded an allegedly defamatory e-mail on to others with added prefatory remarks to the forwarded message that essentially stated only that the truth would come out in the end. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.75.

Litigation Privilege Protects Conduct to Compel Testimony of Witness for Criminal Defense. In Kemps v. Beshwate (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1012 , the court of appeal held that because the right to compel the attendance at trial of witnesses on behalf of a criminal defendant is a constitutionally protected right, conduct undertaken to compel a witness to attend and testify is protected under the litigation privilege. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.61[4].

Dismissal for Discovery Abuses Supported Favorable Termination Finding in Malicious Prosecution Action. In Daniels v. Robbins (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 204 , the court of appeal held that when a plaintiff seeks to prove the elements of a malicious prosecution claim against the attorneys who prosecuted the underlying action, the favorable termination requirement may be shown with evidence that the underlying action was dismissed as a sanction for discovery abuses when the court determines that the underlying plaintiff could not have proved his or her case with admissible evidence, and the fact that the discovery abuses may have been the fault of the client rather than the attorneys does not matter for purposes of establishing the favorable termination element on the cause of action even as brought against the underlying attorneys. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, §§ 357.14[1] and 357.17[2][a].

CHP Officers Owed Duty Not to Disseminate Gruesome Photos of Decedent on Internet Absent Official Reason for Dissemination; Privacy Action Also Supported. In Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 856 , the court of appeal held that officers of the California Highway Patrol owed a duty of care to the family of an 18-year-old girl who died when she was decapitated in an automobile accident when the officers e-mailed nine of the photographs of the decedent to their friends and family members, allegedly as a Halloween prank because of the gruesome nature of the photographs, and thousands of Internet sites picked up the images and some of the plaintiffs received personal e-mails from strangers taunting them with the gruesome photographs. The court also held that the relatives of the decedent could state a cause of action for public disclosure of private facts based on revelations about the decedent if that conduct invaded the privacy of those surviving relatives. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][iii], and see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.32.

Facility Owed Duty to Provide Medical Care to Infant Child Incarcerated With Mother Under Pregnant and Parenting Women's Alternative Sentencing Program Act. In Lawson v. Superior Court (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1372 , the court of appeal held that because a child residing with his or her incarcerated mother under the Pregnant and Parenting Women's Alternative Sentencing Program Act is dependent on the personnel running the housing facility when medical care is needed by the child, a special relationship between the facility and the infant daughter of an inmate existed sufficient to impose a duty to care on facility staff to provide timely care for the infant. The court also held, however, that a child residing with an incarcerated mother is not a "prisoner" for purposes of the Tort Claims Act, and thus although neither the State nor the state employee were entitled to claim the special immunities of Gov. Code §§ 844.6 and 845.6, the complaint did not state a cause of action for failure to provide medical care to a prisoner in violation of Gov. Code § 845.6. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][x], and see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.103[2].

Duty of Employer at Multi-Employer Sites to Report Hazards Supports Tort Action for Failure to Report. In Suarez v. Pacific Northstar Mechanical, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 430 , the court of appeal held that taken in conjunction, Lab. Code § 6400(b) and 8 Cal. Code Regs. § 336.11 impose a duty of care on each employer engaged at a multi-employer work site, both construction and non-construction, to report all non-obvious hazards about which the employer learns because its own employees were exposed to the hazard during the course of their work, even if that employer did not create the hazard, and a breach of this duty is actionable in tort by any worker at the site who is subsequently injured by the hazard if it is not reported. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[5][b].

Lack of Evidence Showing Property Can Be Repaired at Reasonable Cost by Reasonable Means Can Defeat Continuing Nuisance Claim. In McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 56 , the court of appeal held that failure to provide evidence showing that plaintiff's property can be repaired or the damage abated at a reasonable cost by reasonable means will defeat a claim that a nuisance should be treated as a continuing nuisance. The court also held that expert witness testimony may be required to prove that abatement or repair can be achieved at a reasonable cost by reasonable means, and failure to designate an expert to provide such testimony can defeat an effort to prove a continuing nuisance. See Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.17.

Publisher's Decisions on Content and Placement of Advertisements Protected by First Amendment. In Stewart v. Rolling Stone LLC (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 664 , the court of appeal held that the constitutional right guaranteeing freedom of the press protects publishers from liability to persons mentioned in articles for decisions as to the content and placement of advertisements, even when the advertisements are part of a double-gatefold page layout that includes the editorial content that mentions the plaintiffs. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36[12].

PUC Not Liable for Death at Railroad Crossing It Did Not Control. In Public Utilities Com. v. Superior Court (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 364 , the court of appeal held as a matter of law that the PUC did not control a railroad crossing at which a fatal accident occurred and thus could not be held liable for a dangerous condition on public property, even though many years earlier the PUC had recommended that a gate be placed at the crossing but then failed to ensure that the gate was installed. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.81[2].

Failure to Notify of Contractual Noncompliance May Support Claim Under False Claims Act. In San Francisco Unified School Dist. ex rel. Contreras v. Laidlaw Transit, Inc. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 438 , the court of appeal held that a request for payment made to a public entity under a contract to provide goods or services impliedly constitutes a certification that the vendor has complied with its express contractual requirements, and a request for payment made without notifying the government entity that the vendor is not in compliance with the material terms of the contract may be the basis of a claim under the False Claims Act. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, 468.21[3].

TRIAL

Constitutional Reasons Support Peremptory Challenges. In People v. Mills (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 158, 189 , the California Supreme Court held that the defendant's constitutional rights were not violated when the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges to excuse African-American jurors because each challenge was supported by constitutional reasons. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.42.

Timing Regarding Polling Jury. In Bell v. Bayerische Motoren Werke Aktiengesellschaft (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1108 , the court of appeal held that any challenge to the verdict based on the polling must be asserted before the jury is discharged if the purported defect is apparent and could be corrected, or else the challenge is forfeited. See Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts, § 326A.14[3].

UNFAIR COMPETITION

Proposition 64 Did Not Bar Claim for Injunction Prosecuted After Plaintiff Settled Remaining Claims. In Zermeno v. Precis, Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 773 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff suffered actual injury sufficient to meet the requirements for standing under Proposition 64, but prior to the passage of Proposition 64 entered into a settlement agreement under which plaintiff released all claims for that injury at least partly in exchange for the right to pursue a claim for injunctive relief, the general rule applying the changes made by Proposition 64 to actions pending at the time of its passage in November 2004 does not bar such a plaintiff from prosecuting the action for injunctive relief. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Rules Regarding Class Certification in Unfair Competition Cases Clarified. In Steroid Hormone Product Cases (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 145 , the court of appeal held that when a plaintiff sought class certification under the unfair competition statute in a lawsuit seeking the disgorgement of money received by selling over-the-counter nutritional supplements that contained steroids that were illegal to sell or possess without a prescription, class certification was improperly denied on the grounds of individualized factual inquiries about whether that illegality was material to the decision to purchase. In McAdams v. Monier, Inc. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 174 , the court of appeal held that as individualized proof of reliance and injury are not generally required for nonrepresentative class members when a class action seeks restitution for alleged misrepresentations in extensive, long-term advertising campaigns, issues concerning reliance by and injury to unnamed class members will not foreclose a class action in that context. In Pfizer Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 622 , however, the court of appeal held that in advertising campaigns of shorter duration, for example, a campaign lasting only six months, evidence that many or most of the proposed class members were never actually exposed to alleged misrepresentations can defeat an attempt to certify a class by showing that there was no class-wide injury. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Current Ownership of Trade Secret Not Required to Seek Damages for Misappropriation. In Jasmine Networks, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 980 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff is not required to prove current ownership of the relevant trade secret in order to prosecute an action for misappropriation of a trade secret, and it is sufficient that the plaintiff had an ownership interest in the secret during the time period for which damages are being sought. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[10].

This chapter presents selected new developments in California law divided by the year in which the changes were included in this publication, and arranged according to topic. Topics are arranged alphabetically, and entries within a topic are arranged by chapter number, with the newest developments first. New developments may include new legislation, case authorities, rules of court, regulations, forms, and other legal developments.

For the latest developments of the current release, review the "What's New?" file on lexis.com or on the CD-ROM product, or use the most current Publication Update that is shipped with the printed pages that updates this publication.

§ 1.10 Alcoholic Beverages

State Laws Regarding Wine Distribution Governed by Commerce Clause. In Granholm v. Heald (2005) 161 L. Ed. 2d 796 , the U.S. Supreme Court held that U.S. Const., amend. XXI, § 2 does not allow states to regulate wine shipments on terms that discriminate in favor of in-state producers. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses, § 18.37[1][a].

[1] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Private Arbitration--California Supreme Court Agrees: Ethics Standards Preempted by Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The California Supreme Court has agreed with the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals [see Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119] that the Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators, although intended by the California Legislature to apply to NASD (and NYSE) appointed arbitrators, are in fact preempted by the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, which requires oversight and approval of NYSE and NASD rules by the Securities Exchange Commission. This decision should end the delays and confusion involved when the contract calls for arbitration in accordance with NYSE Rules or the NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure. See Jevne v Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings) (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 935 , in Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.14[1][a], [2][a].

Private Arbitration--Second Level Arbitrator Can Do What Court Cannot. There is nothing wrong with a contract provision for review by a second arbitrator to do what a trial court or appeal court could not do: review the award for errors of law [Cummings v. Future Nissan (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 321] . The provision reviewed in Cummings had the defendant/employer paying the costs of the review, which was completed within a reasonable time. A party wishing to object to an arbitrator review provision must do so at the time of the petition to compel arbitration and will forfeit any claims against the validity of the provision by waiting until the time of that review to raise the objection. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.50[2]; Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.28[7].

Private Arbitration--Consolidation When One Contract Calls for Three-Arbitrator Panel. The right to a three-arbitrator panel is such a substantial right--it minimizes the risk of factual or legal error, which are subject to only limited judicial review--that a court ordering consolidation of arbitrations must order arbitration before a three-arbitrator panel if one of the contracts involved provides for arbitration before a panel [Parker v. McCaw (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1494] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.21[3].

Private Arbitration--Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals Finds Ethics Standards Preempted by Securities Exchange

Act of 1934. In the first case decided at the Circuit Court of Appeals level, the Ninth Circuit in Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119 held that the Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators were intended by the California Legislature to apply to NASD-appointed arbitrators, but that the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 has preempted them. The issue should soon be addressed by the California Supreme Court, which held argument in March 2005 in Jevne v. Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings), S121532. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.14[1][a], [2][a].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Cannot Dismiss Arbitration for Change in Law. Once the court has ordered arbitration, an arbitrator has no power to dismiss the arbitration by reexamining whether the parties were bound by the arbitration provision, even if the law changes while the matter is being arbitrated. The proper course in that situation is to petition the trial court pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c) to reconsider its original order compelling arbitration. See Malek v. Blue Cross of California (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 44 , now covered in Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.20[1].

Private Arbitration--When Party No Access to Arbitration Provider Organization Specified in Contract. When a party is no longer a member of the organization that was to conduct the arbitration and therefore not entitled to use that organization's services as arbitrator unless the other party consents, and that party does not consent, arbitration cannot be ordered. See Provencio v. WMA Securities, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1028 , now covered in Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.12.

Private Arbitration--Neutral Arbitrator's Failure to Disclose Prior Service As Neutral Arbitrator Requires Vacatur of Award. Chs. 33 and 34 have been updated to reflect International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, etc. v. Laughon (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1380 , which held that the 2001 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.9 and 1286.2(a)(6)(A) express a Legislative intent that failure to disclose any of the matters enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a) satisfy the "might cause a reasonable person to question" standard for determining bias. Thus, a court must vacate an award once it is shown that the neutral arbitrator failed to disclose in a timely fashion one of the matters required to be disclosed. There is no room for argument that the undisclosed matter is not one that might cause a reasonable person to question the arbitrator's impartiality. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.14[3][a], [f], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[d].

[2] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Private Arbitration--Consumer Adhesion Contract's Prohibition Against Classwide Arbitration Is Unenforceable. In a definitive blow to commercial interests, the California Supreme Court held that a class arbitration prohibition in a consumer contract of adhesion amounts to an exculpatory clause [Civ. Code § 1668] and is unconscionable and unenforceable when its practical effect is to deprive consumers individually damaged in small amounts, of any redress at all. This position, the Court said, does not run afoul of the Federal Arbitration Act, because unconscionability is a generally applicable contract defense, not one specifically applicable to arbitration agreements, and is not foreclosed by Green Tree Financial Corp. v. BazzleGreen Tree Financial Corp. v. Bazzle (2003) 539 U.S. 444 , which involved contract interpretation and a far narrower holding [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (Boehr) (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.32.

Private Arbitration--Second Level Arbitrator Can Do What Court Cannot. There is nothing wrong with a contract provision for review by a second arbitrator to do what a trial court or appeal court could not do: review the award for errors of law [Cummings v. Future Nissan (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 321] . The provision reviewed in Cummings had the defendant/employer paying the costs of the review, which was completed within a reasonable time. A party wishing to object to an arbitrator review provision must do so at the time of the petition to compel arbitration and will forfeit any claims against the validity of the provision by waiting until the time of that review to raise the objection. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.50[2]; Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.28[7].

Private Arbitration--Unconscionability. It takes more than a form contract to render an arbitration provision procedurally unconscionable. A purchaser of a used motor home mistakenly relied on inferences to be drawn from the parties' relative bargaining positions to prove procedural unconscionability and claimed the contract was one of adhesion. The court of appeal in Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159 disagreed, distinguishing other relationships. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[3][a], [b].

Private Arbitration Under AAA Commercial Rules. When an arbitration agreement provides that any dispute will be arbitrated in accordance with American Arbitration Association's Commercial Arbitration Rules, which specify that the arbitrator will decide arbitrability, the parties' intent is clear and the arbitrator, not a court, must determine whether the dispute must be submitted to arbitration. See Dream Theater, Inc. v. Dream Theater (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 547 , now covered in Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.13[2], 32.21[1][a], [c][ii].

Private Arbitration--Uninsured Motorist. Once an insurer that has paid its insured the full amount of the uninsured motorist coverage, it cannot be compelled to arbitrate. Any damages sustained by the insured attributable to the accident that are over and above the uninsured motorist policy limits have no relevance in uninsured motorist arbitration, nor are such damages relevant to any bad faith claim the insured may have against the insurer. See State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Balen) (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1424 , now covered in Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.92[5][a].

Private Arbitration--Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Preempt Stay of Arbitration Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c). The California Supreme Court has declared that Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c), which allows a trial court to stay either the arbitration or related litigation if common questions of law or fact are involved and some parties to the litigation are not bound by the arbitration agreements, is not preempted by the FAA because the FAA has no procedural provisions applicable in state court, and because Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c) is not special rule applicable only to arbitration but evenhanded law that allows trial courts to avoid conflicting rulings on common issues of fact [Cronus Investments, Inc. v. Concierge Services (2005)]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.24[2][b], [c], 32.43[8][d], [g], 32.63[13][c], 32.94[3][b][iv].

Employer-Employee Arbitration Agreement May Be Unconscionable Even If Employee Was Represented by Attorney. A California Court of Appeal has held a mandatory employment arbitration provision unenforceable, even though the employee's attorney reviewed the provision before the employee signed it. The court emphasized that the provision clearly was substantively unconscionable, because only the employee's claims were required to be arbitrated, the provision required a prearbitration dispute-resolution procedure controlled by the employer, and it imposed a severe limitation on the time for the employee to assert claims. That high degree of substantive unconscionability, plus the nonnegotiable nature of the provision, were sufficient reasons to deny enforcement of the provision. See Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16].

Private Arbitration--Under Federal Arbitration Act, Arbitrator Determines Gateway Claims of Waiver. In a matter governed by the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 3, not Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(a), applies and the arbitrator determines whether a party has waived the right to compel arbitration This rule is further complicated by the fact that even if the matter is governed by the FAA, a waiver claim that involves litigation conduct is to be determined by the court. Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 955 . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.21[1][c], 32.25[1][b].

Private Arbitration--Unconscionability--Court Refused to Remake Agreement to Provide for Adequate Discovery. Ch. 32 has been updated to reflect the latest case finding arbitration provisions in an employer-drafted mandatory agreement unconscionable and unenforceable in the context of attempts by an employee to vindicate unwaivable rights: Fitz v NCR (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702 . Fitz involved claims under the Fair Housing and Employment Act (FEHA; Gov. Code § 12940). The arbitration agreement did not provide for adequate discovery and granted a "carve-out" to allow the employer to litigate intellectual property-related claims against the employee. Because there was an express agreement regarding discovery, the court could not imply an agreement to allow sufficient discovery. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.21[[3][b], [f], 32.22[2][c].

Arbitration Agreement Between Claimants Does Not Bar Interpleader Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that if interpleaded claimants have an arbitration agreement, but the interpleading party is not a party to that agreement, the arbitration agreement does not deprive a trial court of jurisdiction to determine whether the claims can be interpleaded and whether to discharge the interpleading party. See Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32 , now covered in Ch. 314, Interpleader, § 314.16[2][a].

[3] Judicial Review

Private Arbitration--Neutral Arbitrator's Failure to Disclose Prior Service As Neutral Arbitrator Requires Vacatur of Award. Chs. 33 and 34 have been updated to reflect International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, etc. v. Laughon (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1380 , which held that the 2001 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.9 and 1286.2(a)(6)(A) express a Legislative intent that failure to disclose any of the matters enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a) satisfy the "might cause a reasonable person to question" standard for determining bias. Thus, a court must vacate an award once it is shown that the neutral arbitrator failed to disclose in a timely fashion one of the matters required to be disclosed. There is no room for argument that the undisclosed matter is not one that might cause a reasonable person to question the arbitrator's impartiality. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.14[3][a], [f], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[d].

[4] Mediation

Settlement Judge Can Be Mediator and Must Remain Neutral. In a case involving a stipulation that their settlement conference be a mediation, the settlement judge exceeded his authority by making "findings" as to settlement valuations and insurers' conduct (refusal to mediate) being in bad faith [Travelers Casualty and Surety Company v. Superior Court (Roman Catholic Diocese of Orange) (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1131] . Orders in excess of mediator's proper role must be vacated and expunged or, as here, sealed [Travelers Casualty and Surety Company v. Superior Court (Roman Catholic Diocese of Orange) (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1131] . See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13[6].

Court-Ordered Mediation--Tolling of Mandatory Dismissal Period. Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation, has been updated with an illustration to show the calculations under Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.7(b), which extends the mandatory dismissal date if mediation is or remains submitted more than four years and six months after the plaintiff filed the action [Gonzalez v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1124] . See Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation, § 37.30.

Voluntary Mediation--Attorney's Fees. The standard form for a residential purchase agreement now provides that a prevailing party in litigation or arbitration who refused a request to mediate made before the commencement of those proceedings is barred from recovering attorney fees. A court of appeal applied that provision in the context of a lawsuit filed to enable recording of a lis pendens when mediation was refused after the action was commenced. See Frei v. Davey (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1506 , now covered in Ch. 30, Using Alternative Dispute Resolution, § 30.12[1].

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.12

§ 1.12 Appeals

[1] Abandonment, Dismissal, Stipulated Reversal

1999 Legislation Creates Presumption Against Stipulated Reversals. In Hardisty v. Hinton & Alfert (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 999 , the court of appeal held that the idea that a stipulated reversal under Code Civ. Proc. § 128(a)(8) should be made available whenever it would assist parties in resolving their disputes was repudiated by 1999 legislation. See Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal, § 48.12[2].

[2] Briefs

Appellate Arguments Waived if Not Properly Briefed. In Berger v. California Insurance Guarantee Association (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 989 , the court of appeal held that the defendants waived an issue on appeal when they failed to make any coherent argument or cite any authority or facts to support the issue. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.35[1].

By Failing to Discuss Unfavorable Evidence, Appellant Forfeited Argument. In Ferraris v. Alexander (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1417 , the court of appeal held that the argument portion of a brief must relate the facts as found by the trial court, and then persuade the appellate court that those facts were insufficient to support the trial court's holding. The argument may not emphasize only the evidence favorable to the appellant and ignore the evidence on which the trial court relied to make its ruling. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13[2][c][iv].

Court May Disregard Arguments Made for First Time in Reply Brief. In Banning v. Newdow (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 438 , the court of appeal refused to hear a constitutional challenge to a "reasonableness" standard because the appellant did not raise the issue in his opening brief. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13[4].

[3] Class Actions

Named Plaintiff May Not Appeal on Behalf of Nonappealing Class Members When Named Plaintiff Not Aggrieved. In Estrada v. RPS, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 976, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 261 , the court of appeal held that a named plaintiff in a class action is not the "guardian" of class members, and, therefore, did not have standing to appeal on behalf of dismissed class members when he could not show that he was aggrieved by their dismissal. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[1][a][iii].

[4] Hearing and Decision

Court of Appeal May Review Only Specific Portion of Judgment From Which Appeal Taken. In Readylink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1006 , the court of appeal held that a notice of appeal referring only to one paragraph of an injunction does not give the appellate court jurisdiction to review the other paragraph of the injunction. See Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.17[4][c][viii].

[5] Notice of Appeal

If Notice of Appeal Is Clear and Unambiguous, Reviewing Court Will Not Construe Notice to Allow Review of Order Not Specified in Notice. In Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 212 , the court of appeal refused to liberally construe a notice of appeal that did not specify that the appellant sought to appeal the new trial order or make it reasonably clear that plaintiffs were trying to appeal from it. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.11[2][a][ii].

Improper Appeal May Be Treated as Petition for Writ. In Molz v. Daily Journal Corp. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836 , the court of appeal held that even if the order at issue there were not appealable, the court would treat the appeal as a petition for writ relief because the record contained all the required elements and the question at issue presented significant public policy implications. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[2][c].

Order Made After Final Judgment May Be Appealed. In Yeboah v. Progeny Ventures, Inc. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 443 , the court of appeals held that when a trial court refers a matter to a master or referee after ordering an accounting, the court's initial order directing the accounting is interlocutory. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[3][b].

Notice of Appeal Liberally Construed. In Walker v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 15 , the California Supreme Court held that an appellate court should treat a notice of appeal from an unappealable order denying a new trial as an appeal from the underlying judgment when it is reasonably clear appellant intended to appeal from judgment and respondent would not be misled or prejudiced. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.11[2][d].

Appeal of Judgment Against One Defendant May Violate One Final Judgment Rule. In C3 Entertainment, Inc. v. Arthur J. Gallagher & Co. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1022 , the court of appeal held that when the liability of one defendant is intertwined with and dependent on an earlier non-final judgment against another defendant, entry of judgment in the first defendant's favor is premature and the judgment cannot be appealed without violating the one final judgment rule. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[1][a].

Notice of Appeal Liberally Construed. In Morgan v. San Joaquin Community Hospital (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1169 , the court of appeal held that a self-represented litigant's purported motion for reconsideration and/or appeal was a timely notice of appeal. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.11[2][d].

11 U.S.C. § 108(c)(2)* Provides 30-Day Extension of Time for Court to Rule on Motion for New Trial. In ECC Construction, Inc. v. Oak Park Calabasas Homeowners Association (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1031 , the court of appeal held that a notice of appeal filed within 30 days of notice of ruling on a motion for new trial was timely because the 30-day deadline for ruling on a motion for new trial set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 660 passed while an automatic stay was in effect. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.14[1].

Denial of Certification to Entire Class Is Appealable. In Lebrilla v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1070 , the court of appeal held that the denial of certification to an entire class is appealable, although, absent other error, a trial court ruling supported by substantial evidence generally will not be disturbed. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.35[9][b].

[6] Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law

Appellant's Brief Must Fairly and Fully Set Forth Both Sides' Evidence. In Boeken v. Philip Morris Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640 , the court of appeal held that a recitation solely of the appellant's own evidence was not a fair summary for purposes of determining whether any inferences drawn by the jury were reasonable and supported by substantial evidence. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.13[1][b].

Statutory Interpretation Requires De Novo Review. In Law Offices of Dixon R. Howell v. Valley (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1076 , the court of appeal held that whether a statute requires dismissal of an action is a question of statutory interpretation that the appellate court must independently review. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.14[4][b].

Independent Review Standard Applies to Statutory Interpretation of Undisputed Facts. In Librers v. Black (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 114 , the court of appeal held that the application of a statute presents a question of law to be reviewed de novo if the relevant facts are not in dispute. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.14[4][b].

Dicta May Be Controlling Law. In Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association v. City of Fresno (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 914 , the court of appeal refused to reject dicta by the California Supreme Court without a compelling reason. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.31[2].

Issue of Estoppel Cannot Be Raised for First Time on Appeal. In Honig v. San Francisco Planning Department (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 520 , the court of appeal held that the rule that issues not raised in the trial court cannot be raised for the first time on appeal is especially applicable to the doctrine of estoppel, which includes factual elements that must be established in the trial court. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.63[1][d].

[7] Stay of Proceedings

Stay Suspends Trial Court's Power to Enforce, Vacate, or Modify Judgment or Order While Appeal From That Judgment or Order Pending. In Varian Medical Systems, Inc. v. Delfino (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 180 , the California Supreme Court held that a trial court had no jurisdiction to hear proceedings on the merits following an appeal from the denial of an anti-SLAPP motion. See Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings, § 43.42[11].

[1] Admission and Discipline

California Supreme Court Has Inherent Power of Admission of Attorneys in California. In Gadda v. Ashcroft, 363 F.3d 861 (9th Cir. 2004) , the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal held that federal law does not preempt the California Supreme Court's authority to regulate attorneys who practice only immigration law and only in federal courts. See Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline .

[2] Fee Arbitration

Dismissal Discretionary for Failure to Provide Notice to Client of Right to Arbitrate. In Law Offices of Dixon R. Howell v. Valley (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1076 , the court of appeal held that dismissal of an attorney's action against a client for fees for failing to provide written notice of the client's right to arbitration under the MFAA is discretionary rather than mandatory. See Ch. 72, Notice to Client of Right to Arbitration .

[3] Practice and Ethics

Attorney Must Represent Client with Undivided Loyalty. In Apple Computer, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1253 , the court of appeal held that a conflict of interest existed when a class representative was an attorney employed by co-counsel of the attorney representing the class. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Court Determines Whether Attorney's Employment Creates Conflict of Interest. In Abbott v. United States Internal Revenue Service, 399 F.3d 1083 (9th Cir. 2005) , the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that there was no conflict of interest when the lawyer for a taxpayer was employed as a consultant by the IRS while he represented the taxpayer before the IRS. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Order Granting or Denying Motion to Disqualify Attorney Reviewable by Writ or Appeal. In Apple Computer, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1253 , the court of appeal held that a petition for writ of mandate accompanied by a request for an immediate stay is preferable to a direct appeal because generally extraordinary writs are determined more speedily than appeals, and the specter of disqualification of counsel should not be allowed to hover over the proceedings for an extended period of time for an appeal. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Disqualification of Firm Not Required When Client Consulted With Firm Briefly Three Years Previously With Attorney No Longer Working With Firm. In Goldberg v. Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 752 , the court of appeal held that disqualification of a law firm is not required under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) if the lawyer who handled the previous matter is no longer working for the firm and left before the new matter arose, because there is no concern that the "tainted" attorney will spread information to the "nontainted" attorneys. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Attorney Owes Duty to Intended Beneficiary Under Probate Code §§ 21350 and 21351. In Osornio v. Weingarten (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 304 , the court of appeal held that when a client seeks an attorney's services to effect a transfer of assets to a beneficiary who is presumptively disqualified from receiving a donative transfer under Prob. Code § 21350(a), the attorney owes a duty of care that runs both to the client and to the intended beneficiary to advise the client that the proposed transfer, if challenged, would have a significant likelihood of failing unless steps are taken under Prob. Code § 21351 to exempt the transfer from this statutory presumption of disqualification. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

If Second Representation Uses Confidential Information Attorney Acquired in First Representation, Attorney Disqualified. In Farris v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Company (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 671 , an attorney was disqualified when he previously represented an insurer in coverage issues and, in his new firm, subsequently represented an insured in a bad faith action against the insurer. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Successor Fiduciary May Assert Professional Negligence Claim Against Attorney Hired by Predecessor. In Borissoff v. Taylor & Faust (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 523 , the court held that a successor fiduciary of an estate in probate has the authority to assert a professional negligence claim against an attorney retained by a predecessor fiduciary to provide tax assistance for the benefit of the estate. See Ch. 458B Probate: Suspension, Removal, and Resignation .

Duty of Class Attorney May Extend Beyond Certified Claims. In Janik v. Rudy, Exelrod & Zieff (2004)) 119 Cal. App. 4th 930 , the court of appeal held that if an attorney represents the plaintiff class in a class action lawsuit, the certification of the class does not relieve the attorney from a duty to advise about other potential claims that plaintiffs may have that arise from the same facts that underlie the certified claims. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

§ 1.14 Automobiles

[1] Drivers Licenses

Driver Violates Veh. Code § 12500 Even if Driver Does Not Know License is Invalid. In People v. Spence (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 710 , the court of appeal held that it was irrelevant that a driver claimed he never received notice that his driver's license was suspended when he was convicted under Veh. Code § 12500 with driving without a driver's license. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.20.

Cough Syrup Considered Alcoholic Beverage for Purpose of Veh. Code § 23136. In Bobus v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 680 , the court of appeal held that the primary goal of Veh. Code § 23136 was to enhance public safety, rather than to discourage minors from consuming alcoholic beverages. Thus, a minor's driver's license was properly suspended when she was found driving with a blood alcohol concentration of more than 0.01 percent purportedly because she drank cough syrup containing alcohol. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.155[6][g].

[2] Liability

Losses Arising Out of "Use" of Vehicle. In State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Grisham (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 563 . the court of appeal held that in determining whether a loss arises out of the "use of" a vehicle, the "predominating cause," or "substantial factor" test applies, which precluded liability coverage for a dog's jumping out of the camper shell of an unattended pickup truck and biting a pedestrian. See Ch. 88, Automobiles: Automobile Insurance, § 88.15[4][b].

[3] Insurance and Uninsured Motorists

Insolvency Triggering Uninsured Motorist Coverage. In Romano v. Mercury Ins. Co. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1333 , the court of appeal held that an insurer's inability to pay a claim "because of insolvency," triggering uninsured motorist coverage, means actual insolvency precipitating nonpayment of a claim within a year, regardless of whether any court or insurance commissioner took the formal step of ordering the insurer into liquidation. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.10[4][e].

No Arbitrable Controversy Once Uninsured Motorist Limits Paid. In State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1424 , the court of appeal held that if an insurer has paid the uninsured motorist limits of its policy, no controversy remains to be arbitrated under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f). See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][c].

Insurance Coverage for Nonowned Automobiles. In Nava v. Mercury Casualty Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 803 , the court of appeal held that a vehicle registered to, but not owned by, a listed driver who was the father of the permissive driver of another vehicle, is not a nonowned automobile for which coverage is provided. See Ch. 88, Automobiles: Automobile Insurance, § 88.15[6][b].

§ 1.15 Bankruptcy

[1] In General

Bankruptcy --Major 2005 Legislative Changes. The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8 (Apr. 20, 2005)] made substantial changes to the Bankruptcy Code and other bankruptcy-related statutes, effective October 17, 2005 (or earlier, in a few cases). Some of the significant changes in bankruptcy law affecting individuals are:

- Introduction of measures intended to prevent abusive filing by individuals.
- Suppression of selected abusive creditor practices.
- Enhancement of the survivability of debts for family support.
- Increased protection for retirement savings, education savings, and personal information.
- Regulation of businesses offering debt-relief services.

See Ch. 94, Bankruptcy , which has been completely revised to reflect the Bankruptcy Code changes that are within the scope of that chapter. Conforming changes have also been made in other chapters.

[2] Automatic Stay

Automatic Stay--Limitations Period. In ECC Construction, Inc. v. Oak Park Calabasas Homeowners Assn. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1031 , the court held that if the judgment debtor files a bankruptcy petition so that the automatic-stay period overlaps or falls within that 10-year limitation period, then the limitation period is extended for as long as the applicable automatic-stay provision precludes the commencement of judicial proceedings against the debtor within that 10-year period. See Ch. 94, Bankruptcy, § 94.30[5].

Automatic Stay--Damages for Violation. In Dawson v. Washington Mut. Bank (In re Dawson) (9th Cir. 2004) 390

F.3d 1139 , the court held that actual damages may be recovered by an individual who is injured by a willful violation of the automatic stay, and those damages may include damages for emotional distress. See Ch. 94, Bankruptcy, § 94.32.

[3] Discharge

Discharge of Debt--Student Loans. In Educational Credit Management Corp. v. Mason (In re Mason) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2004) 315 B.R. 554 , the court held discharge is available if a debtor shows an undue hardship for payment of student loans. Although repayment of the full amount of the loans would impose an undue hardship on the debtor, if repayment of some lesser amount would not then the court may grant a partial discharge. See Ch. 94, Bankruptcy, § 94.53.

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.16

§ 1.16 Business and Commercial

[1] Consumer Contracts and Loans

Consumer Loans Secured by Real Property. In Wolski v. Fremont Investment & Loan (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 347 , the court held that a yield spread premium (YSP) paid in connection with a residential mortgage loan was not included in the definition of points and fees payable by a borrower at or before closing under Fin. Code § 4970. The transaction did not violate the predatory lending law because it was not a "covered loan"; the total points and fees exceeded six percent only if the YSP was included. See Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans, §§ 127.31[2], 127.120[2].

[2] Corporations

Corporations--Shareholder Derivative Suits--Nature of Action. In Schuster v. Gardner (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 305 , the court held that a shareholder's action for officer/director breach of fiduciary duty was a derivative action, and thus the demurrer to plaintiff's complaint was properly sustained for lack of standing. See Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions .

Corporations--Shareholder Derivative Suits--Attorney Fees in Derivative Action. In Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438 , the court held that the trial court has a duty to review an agreement to pay attorney fees negotiated as part of the settlement of a shareholder derivative suit, but unlike the obligation of a court when fashioning a fee award, the court's task is to determine if the negotiated fee is fair and reasonable. That negotiated fee need not perfectly duplicate the fees that would be awarded under the "substantial benefit doctrine." See Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions .

Annual Statement. Corp. Code § 1502.1 provides that in addition to the annual statement required by Corp. Code § 1502, every publicly traded company must file another statement describing: (1) the name of the independent auditor that prepared the most recent auditor's report on the corporation's annual financial statements; (2) a description of annual compensation and loans made to any member of the board; (3) whether an order for relief has been entered in a bankruptcy case with respect to the corporation or its officers or board members within the previous 10 years; and (4) whether any officer or board member was convicted of fraud within the previous 10 years. See Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

Notice by Electronic Transmission. Corp. Code § 20 now provides definitions for electronic transmission of notices sent by corporations and for notices sent to the corporations, and that the communications must create a record that is capable of retention, retrieval, and review, and that may thereafter be rendered into clearly legible tangible form. See Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports .

Electronic Meetings. Corp. Code § 600 now provides a meeting of the shareholders may be conducted, in whole or in part, by electronic transmission by and to the corporation or by electronic video screen communication. See Ch. 166, Corporations: Shareholders' Meetings and Voting .

Securities--Broker-Dealer Agent. Corp. Code § 25004 now provides definitions for when an agent is an employee of a broker-dealer. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, § 515.10 et seq.

Securities--Broker-Dealer Liability. Corp. Code § 25501.5 now provides a person who purchases a security from or sells a security to a broker-dealer that is required to be licensed and has not, at the time of the sale or purchase, applied for and secured from the commissioner a certificate that is in effect at the time of the sale or purchase authorizing that broker-dealer to act in that capacity, may bring an action for rescission of the sale or purchase or, if the plaintiff or the defendant no longer owns the security, an action for damages. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

[3] Preemption

Federal Law Does Not Preempt Bus. & Prof. Code § 25241. In Bronco Wine Company v. Jolly (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 943 , the California Supreme Court held that federal law does not preempt Bus. & Prof. Code § 25241, which prohibits the use of the word "Napa" in wine brand names where the grapes are not grown in Napa Valley. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses, § 18.37[6][a].

[4] Sales

Express Warranty. This chapter is updated with Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949 , which holds whether a seller has created an express warranty or merely made nonactionable statements of opinion is for the trier of fact to determine from all of the circumstances of the transaction. See Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties, § 502.23[1].

Definition of Consumer. This chapter is updated with Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949 , which holds a third party beneficiary of a contract for such goods or services is not a "consumer" within the meaning of the Consumers Legal Remedies Act. See Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act, § 504.10[1].

[5] Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings

Suretyship and Guaranty--Continuing Guaranties. In Central Building, LLC v. Cooper (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1053 , a case in which the principals of a corporation executed personal guaranties of payment on the corporation's commercial lease, the court of appeal held that the guaranty agreements were continuing guaranties of performance under the lease that applied to lease amendments. See Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.17

§ 1.17 Civil Procedure

[1] Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

Out of State Declarations. Kulshrestha v. First Union Commercial Corp. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 601 holds for a declaration to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5, the declaration must either state on its face that it was executed in California or state that it is declared under the laws of the state of California. See Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, § 15.11.

[2] Answers

Affirmative Defenses. Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089 , holds the defense of illegality based on public policy is not waived by the defendant's failure to include it as an affirmative defense in the answer to the complaint. See Ch. 26, Answers, § 26.17[7][d].

[3] Anti-SLAPP Motions

Civil Harassment. Thomas v. Quintero (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 635 holds that petitions for injunctive relief filed under California's civil harassment statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6] are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute, with the exception of a request for a temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c). See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[4].

Automatic Stay. Varian Medical Systems, Inc. v. Delfino (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 180 holds a defendant's appeal of the denial of an anti-SLAPP motion operates to automatically stay all further trial court proceedings on the merits; however, further proceedings on matters not subject to the anti-SLAPP motion are not stayed by the appeal, nor is the appeal of the denial of a motion to strike on the grounds that a cause of action is exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17 subject to the automatic stay. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[12].

Anti-SLAPP Motion Inapplicable to Breach of Loyalty Claim. In Benasra v. Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1179 , the court of appeal held that a claim for breach of loyalty under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310 is not subject to a special motion to strike pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Eliminating Parts of a Cause of Action Prohibited. Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 90 holds an anti-SLAPP motion may not be used like a motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 436, eliminating parts of a cause of action that plaintiff cannot substantiate. When a cause of action refers to both protected and unprotected activity, it is sufficient for purposes of the anti-SLAPP motion that plaintiff can show a probability of prevailing on any part of its cause of action. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[11][b].

[4] Complaints and Cross Complaints

Signature Requirement. CLD Construction v. City of San Ramon (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1141 holds a corporation's failure to have an attorney sign the complaint on behalf of the corporation is a defect that may be corrected, on such terms as are just in the sound discretion of the court. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.23[1].

Venue. K.R.L. Partnership v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 490 holds a plaintiff/cross defendant against whom a compulsory cross complaint has been filed is not entitled to seek a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b based on a claim of improper venue as determined by reference to the cross-complaint. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.53[5][b].

[5] Continuances

Continuance--Servicemembers Civil Relief Act. This chapter is updated with George P. v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 216 , which holds that while the initial 90-day stay is essentially automatic under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, the granting of an additional stay is discretionary. A request for an additional stay may be denied if the servicemember's ability to appear and participate in the civil action is not adversely affected by his or her military duties. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.20[2][a].

Reversible Error. Oliveros v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1389 holds failure to consider all the facts and circumstances that are relevant to the determination of a continuance, and overemphasis on the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, is reversible error. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.14.

Illness or Death of Trial Counsel. Hernandez v. Superior Court (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1242 holds a request for a continuance supported by a showing of the serious physical illness or death of trial counsel will generally be granted absent a lack of diligence or other abusive circumstances. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.21.

Continuance for Discovery in Support of Summary Judgment Motion. Lerma v. County of Orange (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 709 holds that an inquiry into whether a continuance is needed for discovery does not end once the court determines that a continuance is not mandatory under Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(h); the court must then determine whether the party requesting the continuance has nonetheless established good cause therefore, and this determination is within the court's discretion. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.36.

[6] Coordination

Electronic Submissions to Judicial Council. Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 1511.5, effective July 1, 2005, permits the electronic submission of specified coordination documents to the Chair of the Judicial Council using email, the technical requirements for submission, and the method for documents that require a signature under penalty of perjury. See Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions, §§ 125.37[1], 125.101[2].

Specifying Damages. Falahati v. Kondo (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 823 holds when the complaint contained no specific factual allegations with respect to the particular defendant seeking relief from the default judgment and did not specify the amount of damages plaintiff sought from the particular defendant, the default judgement against that defendant was void. See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.23[1].

Requesting Entry of Default. Judicial Council Form 982(a)(6) for requesting entry of default, effective February 18, 2005, is included. See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.90.

[8] Injunctions

Scope of Injunction Must Be Narrowly Tailored. In Huntingdon Life Sciences, Inc. v. Stop Huntingdon Animal 129 Cal. App. 4th 1228 , the court of appeal held that an injunction against a corporate employer is inappropriate to enjoin the actions of certain employees. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.13.

Anti-Slapp Motion to Strike Applicable to Preliminary Injunction. In Thomas v. Quintero (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 635 , the court of appeal held that a petition for injunctive relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 is subject to a special motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute. However, the court held that no motion to strike can be filed in response to the TRO procedure provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.44.

Injunction Upheld When Defendant's Speech Not Protected. In Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400 , the court of appeal held that the defendant's speech was not protected by the First Amendment when it was between purely private parties, about purely private parties, on matters of purely private interest. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.71[3].

Preliminary Injunction Requires Verified Showing of Threatened Harm. In Gray v. Superior Court (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 629 , the court of appeal held that there was no competent evidence supporting an injunction when a criminal complaint was signed under penalty of perjury by the Chief Deputy District Attorney, but there was no indication that the attorney had any personal knowledge of facts alleged. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.42[4].

[9] Interpleader

Voluntary Deposit of Funds in Interpleader Action May Be Made at Any Time. A California Court of Appeal has held that in an interpleader action, a voluntarily deposit of funds that the stakeholder admits are payable may occur at any time, even though Code Civ. Proc § 386(c) expressly authorizes such a deposit only at the time of filing the complaint or cross-complaint. See Wells Fargo Bank v. Zinnel (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 393 , now covered in Ch. 314, Interpleader, §§ 314.22[1], 314.23[1].

Arbitration Agreement Between Claimants Does Not Bar Interpleader Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that if interpleaded claimants have an arbitration agreement, but the interpleading party is not a party to that agreement, the arbitration agreement does not deprive a trial court of jurisdiction to determine whether the claims can be interpleaded and whether to discharge the interpleading party. See Dial 800 v. Fesbinder (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 32 , now covered in Ch. 314, Interpleader, § 314.16[2][a].

Mandatory Disqualification on Review. Housing Authority of the County of Monterey v. Jones (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1029 holds Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6)(C) is broad enough to require the disqualification of a judge from a Superior Court appellate panel reviewing a judgment where that same judge heard a pretrial matter involving a contested factual or legal issue related to the merits, or made a procedural determination that had a substantial effect on the ultimate outcome, or where the determination, though not directly appealable, is related to an issue on appeal from the final judgment. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.43[6].

Reconsideration of Disqualification. Geddes v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 417 holds while a judge that has been disqualified has no authority to act on substantive matters, the new judge assigned to the case may hear a motion for reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 on the basis that the disqualified judge is "unavailable." If the new judge finds the disqualification is erroneous, the disqualified judge's authority to rule on the matter is reinstated. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.82.

Number of Peremptory Challenges. This chapter is updated with a completely revised analysis of peremptory challenges under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 in light of The Home Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 34 Cal. 4th 1025 , wherein the Supreme Court clarifies when a side may exercise additional peremptory challenges when parties have adverse interests, the burden for showing adverse interests, and the effect of late added parties. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.77[3].

Peremptory Challenges After Remand. State Farm v. Superior Court (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 490 holds a trial court's decision on motions regarding conflicts of laws issues did not constitute a "trial" such that parties would be entitled to make peremptory challenge pursuant to CCP § 170.6(a)(2) after remand. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.122[10][c].

[11] Judgments

French Judgment Not Enforceable Without Service of Summons. In Renoir v. Redstar Corp. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1145, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 , the California Court of Appeal held that after plaintiffs obtained a French judgment against the defendants and sought to have the judgment enforced in California under the Foreign Money-Judgments Act, the trial court erred in denying defendants' motion to set aside the judgment as void for lack of personal jurisdiction based on plaintiffs' failure to serve a summons on defendants. Defendants' knowledge of the action did not satisfy the requirement of adequate service of a summons and complaint, and defendants' brief references to issues related to whether the trial court correctly enforced the French judgment did not constitute a general appearance. See Ch. 318, Judgments .

Foreign Corporation Doing Business in California. Snowney v. Harrah's Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1054 holds foreign corporations, in this instance Nevada hotels, that purposefully and successfully soliciting business of California residents, can reasonably anticipate being subject to litigation in California in the event their solicitations caused an injury to a California resident. Even though the Nevada hotels conducted no business in California and had no bank accounts or employees in California, the hotels were subject to California personal jurisdiction because they used an internet website advertising to California residents, had a wholly owned subsidiary operating offices in California to assist customers who contact those offices and attempt to attract a limited number of high-end gaming patrons to Nevada gaming hotel properties, advertised extensively in California through billboards, newspapers, and radio and television stations located in California, listed a toll-free phone number for making reservations at their hotels in their California advertisements and on their web site, and many of their California patrons used this number to make reservations, and regularly sent mailings advertising their hotels to selected California residents. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, §§ 323.14[4][a], [b], 323.15[5][d].

Forum Selection Clause. In Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 , the court summarizes the state's choice-of-law provisions in regard to potentially unconscionable choice-of-law clauses, and applies the Restatement Second of Conflict of Laws. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Fourm, and Appearances, § 323.34[1].

Motion to Quash. Roy v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 337 holds a defendant who chooses to demur or move to strike must also move to quash; he or she cannot reserve the jurisdictional objection and later file it with his answer if his challenge to the pleadings fails. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.50[1].

[13] Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

Reclassification of Case. Ytuarte v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 266 holds, under the Walker test, the superior court must deny a motion to reclassify the case as limited (and thus keep the matter in the unlimited civil court) unless it appears to a legal certainty that the plaintiff's damages will necessarily be less than $ 25,000. This standard of "legal certainty" is not met when it appears a verdict within the unlimited court's jurisdiction is "possible." See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.67[5].

Concurrent Jurisdiction. Donaldson v. National Marine (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 503 holds the federal supremacy principles prohibit state courts of general jurisdiction from refusing to entertain suits under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) [45 U.S.C.S. § 51 et seq.], which is incorporated by reference into the Jones Act [46 U.S.C.S. App. § 688 et seq.], solely because suit is brought under federal law or because enforcement of the federal right of action is deemed contrary to state policy or apt to cause inconvenience and confusion because of differing state and federal standards. Thus, states must entertain suits timely filed under the Jones Act despite state limitation statutes that might otherwise bar suit. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.25[1].

Administrative Remedies. Neil & Associates v. Jones (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 917 holds a trucking company participating in the California Automobile Assigned Risk Plan (CAARP), a statutorily created program governed by the Insurance Commissioner designed to make automobile liability insurance available to those unable to obtain insurance through ordinary methods, is not required to exhaust the administrative remedies available to those participating in the CAARP before bringing a Lukenas v. Bryce's Mountain Resort, Inc. (W.D. Va. 1975) 66 F.R.D. 69. lawsuit in which the central issue was the determination of the proper premium to be charged, a matter governed by the CAARP's and the Insurance Commissioner's internal regulations. However, the doctrine of primary jurisdiction required the trial court to stay proceedings and refer the premium billing dispute to the Department of Insurance and the Insurance Commissioner. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.15.

Native American Intertribal Disputes. Ackerman v. Edwards (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 946 holds 28 U.S.C. § 1360 does not confer on California jurisdiction over disputes between tribal members and tribes. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.24[1].

Void or Voidable Acts. People v. American Contractors Indemnity Co. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 653 holds in determining whether a prematurely entered summary judgment is void or voidable, the court must look first to the language of the relevant statute. The court's failure to comply with Penal Code § 1306 by prematurely entering summary judgment did not deprive it of jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bail bond forfeiture or personal jurisdiction over the surety, and thus the premature entry of summary judgment was voidable, not void. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.42[1].

[14] Limitation of Actions

Delayed Discovery. Fox v. Ethicon Endo-Surgery, Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 797 holds for a party to adequately allege facts supporting a theory of delayed discovery, the plaintiff must plead that, despite diligent investigation of the circumstances of the injury, he or she could not have reasonably discovered facts supporting the cause of action within the applicable statute of limitations period, and that as to cross-actions against codefendants or new parties, the statute of limitations is not tolled by the commencement of a plaintiff's action. The principle underlying the rule that a statute of limitations is suspended by the filing of the original complaint is that the plaintiff has thereby waived the claim and permitted the defendant to make all proper defenses to the cause of action pleaded. But, where the controversy is limited to cross-defendants, none of whom has done any act in the nature of a waiver, the reason for the rule does not exist. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, §§ 345.19[3][a], 345.19[3][c], 345.20[5][a].

Myers-Milias-Brown-Act. Coachella Valley Mosquito and Vector Control Dist. v. California Public Relations Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1072 holds the statute of limitations for making a Myers-Milias-Brown-Act unfair practice charge to the California Public Employment Relations Board is six months. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.262A.

Usury. In Gibbo v. Berger (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 396 , the court held when a loan is usurious the creditor is entitled to repayment of principal only, and that the statute of limitations on recovery of usurious interest does not apply if the lender has initiated foreclosure proceedings based on the usurious note; in that case the borrower may cross-complain for recovery of all interest actually paid. See Ch. 568, Usury .

Choice of Law Provision. Hughes Electronics Corp. v. Citibank Delaware (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 251 holds a choice of law provision that states the contract will be governed by the "laws" of a particular state incorporates that state's "borrowing statute." A borrowing statute requires that each cause of action be timely under the state chosen by the contract and any state in which the claim arose, effectively applying the shorter of the two states' limitations periods. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.13[2].

Limitations Period Begins Running As to All Physicians Once Plaintiff Suspects Someone's Medical Malpractice. In Knowles v. Superior Court (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , the court of appeal held that in a medical malpractice action, the limitations period begins running as to all potential defendants when the plaintiff suspects medical negligence on the part of someone, and it is not necessary that the plaintiff suspect a particular physician for the statute to begin running as to that physician or any other physician who may have been negligent. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[15] Motions to Reconsider

Motions to Reconsider--Interim Orders. Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094 , which reviewed the split of authority regarding reconsideration of interim orders in the absence of new facts of new law, holds a court has the jurisdiction to review interim orders on its own motion, but that a party may not file a written motion to reconsider that has procedural significance if it does not satisfy the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008. The court concluded that the Legislature did not want to hinder the courts' ability to act, but rather to protect the courts from repetitive motions. The court did suggest that proper procedure would be for a court that had a concern about an erroneous prior ruling to inform the parties, solicit briefing, and hold a hearing. See Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions, § 374.12.

New Circumstances. Johnston v. Corrigan (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 553 , which holds a court's failure to consider properly submitted points and authorities may constitute "new circumstances" such that the trial court has jurisdiction to grant reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(a). See Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions, § 374.16[1].

[16] Parties

Intervention. City of Malibu v. California Coastal Com. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 897 holds a party may not intervene in an action where the party seeking intervention has identical interests as a party already in the action but can only speculate on the type of damage involved, and the party already litigating the matter is an able advocate of his/her and the other party's position. See Ch. 395, Parties, § 395.34[2].

[17] Res Judicata

Issue Preclusion from Bankruptcy Proceeding. Roos v. Red (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 870, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 446 holds issue preclusion applies to a bankruptcy court's factual findings in a wrongful death case, and the defendant's right to a jury trial was not denied simply because the court had given collateral estoppel effect to the bankruptcy court's findings on the issue of liability. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.15[3][k].

Post Complaint Facts. Allied Fire Protection v. Diede Const. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 150 holds res judicata is not a bar to claims that arise after the initial complaint is filed. Although the parties litigated a breach of contract action in federal court, res judicata did not bar plaintiff from later suing defendant on a fraud theory in state court where plaintiff was unaware of the facts forming the basis for the fraud suit until after the federal complaint was filed. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.18.

Small Claims Action. Pitzen v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1374 holds issue preclusion may be applied to prevent a plaintiff from relitigating an issue litigated and expressly decided against the plaintiff in a small claims action. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.15[3][i].

[18] Service of Summons and Papers

Certified Mail. Bear Creek Master Assn. v. Edwards (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1470 holds Code Civ. Proc. § 1020 is permissive; where a notice is required to be sent by mail, and compliance with the mailing requirement may be satisfied by sending the notice by registered mail with a return receipt requested. This section does not require mailed notices to be sent by registered mail. Likewise, while a signed return receipt may create a rebuttable presumption that the notice was received, the absence of such a signed return receipt does not negate any other presumptions concerning mailed items; and a party cannot defeat notice by a willful failure to accept certified mail. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.34[7][a].

[19] Summary Judgment and Adjudication

Effect of Admissions. Scalf v. D.B. Log Homes, Inc. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1510 holds all admissions elicited in the course of discovery are not created equal under the D'Amico rule [D'Amico v. Board of Medical Examiners (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 1] ; and deposition answers are simply evidence and do not constitute incontrovertible judicial admissions as do concessions in a pleading or answers to requests for admissions. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.33[2][g][i].

Motion for Reconsideration. Le Francois v. Goel (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1094 holds Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2) does not restrict the court's ability to reconsider its prior interim rulings on its own motion, and the specific requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(2) govern the motion for reconsideration rather than the general provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.39.

Objections to Evidence. Andrews v. Mobile Aire Estates (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 578 holds a party opposing a summary judgment motion has the right to waive evidentiary objections; it is therefore error for a trial court to interpose and sustain its own hearsay objection. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.25[4].

Preparation of Order. Carnes v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 688 holds the court may not grant a summary judgment motion without any specification of the reasons for doing so, and the drafting of the order may not be given solely to the prevailing party without specifying the basis for the ruling. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.37[2].

Notice of Motion. Urshan v. Musicians' Credit Union (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 758 holds a court's setting of a motion for summary judgment 10 days before trial violated the Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a) notice requirement, and the two days to the prepare motion denied the party's due process rights. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.20[1].

Declaration Supporting Motion. Kulshrestha v. First Union Commercial Corp. (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 601 holds for a declaration in support of a motion for summary judgment to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5, the declaration must either state on its face that it was executed in California or state that it is declared under the laws of the state of California. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.24[1][a].

Evidentiary Objections. Vineyard Springs Estates, LLC v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 633 holds when evidentiary objections are in a proper form, a trial court must rule on the objections; it is imperative that a trial court rule on evidentiary objections regardless of whether the motion is denied or granted, and failure to rule on the objections is reversible error. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.25[4].

Continuance for Discovery. Lerma v. County of Orange (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 709 holds that an inquiry into whether a continuance is needed for discovery does not end once the court determines that a continuance is not mandatory under Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(h); the court must then determine whether the party requesting the continuance has nonetheless established good cause therefore, and this determination is within the court's discretion. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.36.

Limited Liability Companies. This chapter is updated with a revised interpretation of Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 and where venue may lie for a limited liability company. See Ch. 571, Venue, § 571.18[3A].

Change of Venue Based on Cross Complaint. K.R.L. Partnership v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 490 holds a plaintiff/cross defendant against whom a compulsory cross complaint has been filed is not entitled to seek a change of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b based on a claim of improper venue as determined by reference to the cross complaint. Rather, the cross complaint is to be tried in the same county that has been established as the proper venue based on the original complaint. See Ch. 571, Venue, § 571.36.

[21] Vexatious Litigants

Relitigation in Federal and State Courts. Holcomb v. U.S. Bank Nat. Assn. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1494 holds that although one plaintiff attempted to relitigate matters that had been finally determined when he filed an untimely motion for reconsideration in a federal court case and then filed a similar action in state court, he did not repeatedly relitigate within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(2), the vexatious litigant statute. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.13[3][b].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.18

§ 1.18 Civil Rights

[1] Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations

Ordinance Prohibiting Eviction Threats Unconstitutional Content-Based Regulation. In Baba v. Board of Supervisors of San Francisco (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 504 , the court of appeal held that a rent control ordinance prohibiting landlords from making bad faith threats of eviction was unconstitutional content-based regulation of speech under state and federal speech protections. The ordinance regulated both commercial and noncommercial speech, and the provision regulated speech that was neither false nor inherently misleading, and it was not narrowly tailored to serve governmental interest. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations, § 59.12[3][a].

Qualified Immunity for Denying March Permit and Dispersing Prayer Service to First Amendment Area. In Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739 , Federal Park Service employees were entitled to qualified immunity in a Bivens action based on denial of a march permit to protestors without a concomitant promise on their part not to engage in civil disobedience and the dispersal of their prayer service that began as an alternative to the march. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations, § 59.12[2][c].

[2] Discrimination in Business Establishments

Unruh Act Covers Marital Discrimination. In Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824 , the California Supreme Court held that, although domestic partners registered under the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 are the equivalent of spouses for purposes of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, prior to the effective date of the Domestic Partner Act, a county club's policy of denying to domestic partners of members the same benefits granted to spouses of members did not violate the Unruh Act. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.12[4].

Barrier Removal on Foreign-Flag Cruise Ships. In Spector v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd.Spector v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd. (2005) 125 S. Ct. 2169 , the U.S. Supreme Court held that barrier removal required by Title III of Americans With Disabilities Act that would bring a foreign-flag cruise vessel into noncompliance with International Convention for Safety of Life at Sea, or any other international legal obligation, and would create serious difficulties for the vessel and have a substantial impact on its operation, would not be readily achievable. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights:

Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.52[3].

[3] Interference With Civil Rights

Governmental Agency Can Be Liable for Statutory Penalty Under Tom Bane Civil Rights Act. In Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transit Authority v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court held that a county transportation authority could be liable for statutory penalties under Civ. Code §§ 51.7, 52(b)(2) despite Gov. Code § 818, which precludes a public entity's liability for damages imposed primarily for sake of example and by way of punishing defendant. See Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence, § 117A.11[1][c].

[4] Government Funded Programs

Retaliation Within Scope of Private Right of Action Under Title IX. In Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Ed.Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Ed. (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1497 the district court erred in dismissing the complaint of a schoolteacher and coach alleging that the board of education retaliated against him for complaining about sex discrimination in a high school athletic program in violation of Title IX. The error was because (1) retaliation falls within Title IX's prohibition of intentional discrimination on the basis of sex, and (2) retaliation against the teacher for advocacy of the rights of the girls' basketball team was discrimination on the basis of sex. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities, § 112.16[3].

[5] Post War Civil Rights Statutes

Standing Under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1981. In Bains LLC v. ARCO Prods. Co. (9th Cir. 2005) 405 F.3d 764 , the court found that a corporation has standing to bring a U.S.C.S. § 1981 claim against a defendant that employs the corporation as a contractor but imposes ethnic discrimination against the corporation's employees. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.12[2][d].

No Action Under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 to Enforce Telecommunications Act. In City of Rancho Palos Verdes v. AbramsCity of Rancho Palos Verdes v. Abrams (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1453 , the United States Supreme Court held that Congress did not mean for the judicial remedy expressly authorized by the Telecommunications Act of 1996 to coexist with an alternative remedy available in a 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 action, because the Act adds no remedies to those available under § 1983 and limits relief in ways § 1983 does not. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[1][a].

Police Officer Entitled to Qualified Immunity. In Brosseau v. HaugenBrosseau v. Haugen (2004) 125 S. Ct. 596 , a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action against a police officer for excessive force in shooting a suspect in the back as he attempted to flee the scene, the United States Supreme Court held that the officer was entitled to qualified immunity. The Court found that the officer made a decision that, even if constitutionally deficient, reasonably misapprehended the law governing the circumstances she confronted. Her actions fell in the hazy border between excessive and acceptable force, and the case law did not clearly establish that her conduct violated the Fourth Amendment. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[11][b].

Political Party That Prevailed in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 Action Entitled to Attorneys' Fees. In Democratic Party of Washington State v. Reed (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 1281 , the court found that a prevailing party in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 should ordinarily recover attorneys' fees unless special circumstances could render such an award unjust. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.17[2][a][i].

[6] Prisoners' Rights

Prison Officials Failed to Show Three Strikes to Bar Suit--In Forma Pauperis Status. In Andrews v. King (9th Cir. 2005) 398 F.3d 1113 , the Ninth Circuit held that the trial court erroneously dismissed a prisoner's action under the three strikes provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). This provision prohibits a prisoner from proceeding in forma pauperis if the prisoner has, on three or more occasions while incarcerated or detained in any facility, brought an action or appeal that was dismissed on grounds it was frivolous, malicious, or failed to state claim on which relief could be granted. State prison officials failed to meet their burden of producing evidence that the prisoner had brought the required number of actions, because only one case plainly qualified as a strike. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[7].

Strict Scrutiny Is Standard for Reviewing Prison Racial Classifications. In Johnson v. CaliforniaJohnson v. California (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1141 , the United States Supreme Court held that strict scrutiny is the proper standard of review for the California Department of Corrections' unwritten policy of racially segregating prisoners in double cells in reception centers for up to 60 days each time they enter a new correctional facility. The Court would not decide whether the policy violated the Equal Protection Clause. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.17[2].

No Claims Under § 1983 for Denying Parole Dates. In McQuillion v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2004) 369 F.3d 1091 , the Ninth Circuit found that an inmate's claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, based on alleged conspiracy between the California governor and others to deny parole to inmates serving life sentences by abusing state statutes that authorized the governor to be involved with parole, was barred by collateral estoppel to the extent he attempted to sue members of the Board of Prison Terms because an earlier complaint against them on the same grounds was dismissed based on their absolute immunity. However, collateral estoppel did not apply against the remaining defendants, because they were not entitled to absolute immunity. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Incarcerated Father Had No Right to Be Present at Paternity Proceeding and Error in His Absence at Dependency Proceeding Was Harmless. In In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 588 , the California Supreme Court held that in a hearing held in the absence of an incarcerated biological father, but in the presence of his counsel, a juvenile court properly found the mother's husband, not the biological father, was the child's presumed father, because a proceeding to declare a presumed father is governed by Pen. Code § 2625(e), which gives the court discretion whether to order the prisoner produced and the juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in proceeding without the biological father's personal attendance at the hearing. Under Pen. Code § 2625(d), the juvenile court erred in adjudicating the child a dependent of the court without the biological father's presence or his waiver of the right to be present, but the error was harmless because the father was not prejudiced by his absence. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

§ 1.19 Civil Service

California Supreme Court Rejects Seniority-Based Preference in State Civil Service. The California Supreme Court has held that the constitutional merit principle for state civil service hiring and promotion bars the Legislature from adopting a program, or approving a collectively bargained program, that requires the application of an absolute seniority-based preference. See California State Personnel Bd. v. California State Employees Assn., Local 1000, SEIU, AFL-CIO (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 758 , now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.19[1].

Psychological Screening Now Mandatory for State Peace Officer Candidates. The State Personnel Board now requires all candidates for peace officer positions in the state civil service to undergo psychological screening as part of the application process, and the Board has issued regulations prescribing procedures for psychological screening. See Cal. Code Reg. §§ 172.4-172.10, now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.16.

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.20 Class Actions

Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 Facilitates Removal to Federal Court. This chapter is updated throughout with the federal Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-2, 119 Stat. 4], which took effect February 18, 2005, and provides special rules for federal courts' exercise of diversity jurisdiction over interstate class actions, adds new provisions to facilitate the removal of class actions from state court, and imposes new consumer-protection requirements for the settlement of class actions. For discussion, see Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.10[2], 120.13, 120.21[2].

Waivers. The California Supreme Court has held, in Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 , that a contractual provision waiving the right to pursue a class remedy for disputes arising under the contract is not necessarily unenforceable, although some class-action waivers in consumer contracts, such as in unmarkable "bill-stuffer" form, are unconscionable and unenforceable. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[6].

Attorney's Fees. In a recent court of appeals case, Consumer Cause, Inc. v. Mrs. Gooch's Natural Food Markets, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 387 , the court held that an unnamed member of a putative class who successfully objects to class certification and approval of a proposed classwide settlement agreement is not entitled to an award of attorney fees under the "private attorney general" statute. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.24[3], [4].

Named Plaintiff May Not Appeal on Behalf of Nonappealing Class Members When Named Plaintiff Not Aggrieved. In Estrada v. RPS, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 976, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 261 , the court of appeal held that a named plaintiff in a class action is not the "guardian" of class members, and, therefore, did not have standing to appeal on behalf of dismissed class members when he could not show that he was aggrieved by their dismissal. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[1][a][iii].

Individual Showing of Damages by Each Class Member Does Not Make Class Action Inappropriate. The California Supreme Court has held that a class action is not inappropriate simply because each class member may at some point be required to make individual showing of eligibility for recovery or amount of damages; rather, determining whether common questions predominate requires the court to compare costs and benefits of adjudicating plaintiffs' claims in a class action with the costs and benefits of proceeding by numerous separate actions. See Sav-on Drug Stores, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 319 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions , Introduction.

Duty of Class Attorney May Extend Beyond Certified Claims. In Janik v. Rudy, Exelrod & Zieff (2004)) 119 Cal. App. 4th 930 , the court of appeal held that if an attorney represents the plaintiff class in a class action lawsuit, the certification of the class does not relieve the attorney from a duty to advise about other potential claims that plaintiffs may have that arise from the same facts that underlie the certified claims. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.21

§ 1.21 Contracts

[1] Breach of Contract

Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. In Celador International Ltd v. The Walt Disney Co. (C.D. Cal. 2004) 347 F. Supp. 2d 846 , the court held a claim for breach of the implied covenant is separate and distinct from a contract claim in three situations: (1) if no contract claim is alleged; (2) if the plaintiff is seeking recovery in tort; and (3) if the plaintiff alleges that the defendant acted in bad faith to frustrate the benefits plaintiff was to receive under the contract. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.12.

[2] Damages

Scope of Contract Damages. In Robinson Helicopter Company, Inc. v. Dana Corporation (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979 , the court holds the scope of a contract remedy assumes that the parties can negotiate the risk of loss occasioned by a breach; accordingly courts enforce those obligations each party voluntarily assumes and award only those benefits they expected to receive. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.56[3][a].

Pleading General Damages. In Lewis Jorge Construction Management, Inc. v. Pomona Unified School District (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960 , the court held general damages for breach of contract are those losses that arise directly and inevitably from any similar breach of any similar agreement; special damages are secondary or derivative losses arising from circumstances that are particular to the contract or to the parties and are recoverable if the special or particular circumstances from which they arise were actually communicated to or known by the breaching party or were matters of which the breaching party should have been aware at the time of contracting. See Ch. 177, Damages ., and Ch. 140, Contracts § 140.101[3][f] ,.

Usury. In Gibbo v. Berger (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 396 , the court held when a loan is usurious the creditor is entitled to repayment of principal only, and that the statute of limitations on recovery of usurious interest does not apply if the lender has initiated foreclosure proceedings based on the usurious note; in that case the borrower may cross-complain for recovery of all interest actually paid. See Ch. 568, Usury .

[3] Fraudulent Conveyances

Right to Jury Trial. In Wisden v. Superior Court (Sims) (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 750 , the court held because the right to trial by jury existed for common-law fraudulent transfer claims when the California Constitution was adopted in 1850, in California a plaintiff still has a right to trial by jury on a claim for fraudulent transfer. See Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances .

[4] Illegal or Unconscionable Contracts

Public Policy. In Yoo v. Robi (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1089 , the court held that substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that a singer's personal manager violated the Talent Agencies Act in procuring performance engagements without a license, thus rendering his contracts void and barring recovery of a commission. See Ch. 140, Contracts, §§ 140.23[2], 140.83[12], 140.44[3].

Unconscionable Contract. In Crippen v. Central Valley RV Outlet (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1159 , the court held: (1) there is no general rule that a form contract is procedurally unconscionable; rather, procedural unconscionability arises from the manner in which the contract is presented to the party in the weaker position; (2) no extrinsic evidence of procedural unconscionability is required if a great disparity of power can be inferred from the parties' relationship or from the contract itself; and (3) surprise may be found if a contract merely refers to rules set forth in another source that the customer would have to see prior to signing in order to learn the full import of the contract. acted in bad faith to frustrate the benefits plaintiff was to receive under the contract. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.25.

[5] Recission

Recission of Third-Party Beneficiary Contracts. Schauer v. Mandarin Gems of California, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 949 holds a third party beneficiary has no standing to rescind a contract. See Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution, § 490.19.

[6] Statute of Frauds

Email Signature. Lamle v. Mattel, Inc. (Fed. Cir. 2005) 394 F.3d 1355 holds, applying California common law, an email signed with a party's name was held to have satisfied the statute of frauds, assuming that a binding oral agreement existed and that the email included all the material terms of that agreement. See Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds, § 530.15[3].

§ 1.22 Copyright

Copyright Liability--Types. In Ellison v. Robertson (9th Cir. 2004) 357 F.3d 1072 , the court held that there are three types of liability for copyright infringement: (1) direct infringement, (2) contributory infringement, and (3) vicarious infringement. See Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.27.

Copyright Liability--Damages and Limitation of Action. In Polar Bear Prods., Inc. v. Timex Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 700, 72 U.S.P.Q.2d 1289 , the court held actual damages must be suffered "as a result of the infringement," and recoverable profits must be "attributable to the infringement," and an infringement suit is time-barred if it is based on an act of infringement that the plaintiff discovered, or reasonably should have discovered, more than three years before commencement of the suit. See Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.27.

Copyright Liability--Online Liability Limitations. The Online Copyright Infringement Liability Limitation Act [17 U.S.C. § 512], enacted as title II of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act [Pub. L. No. 105-304], creates four safe-harbor defenses that Internet service providers may raise to limit their liability for claims of copyright infringement. These defenses relate to (1) transitory digital-network communications, (2) system caching, (3) information residing on systems or networks at the direction of users, and (4) information-location tool. See Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.27.

§ 1.23 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Unnamed Objector to Settlement of Putative Class Action Not Entitled to Attorney's Fees. In Consumer Cause, Inc. v. Mrs. Gooch's Natural Food Markets, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 387 , the court held that an unnamed putative objector who successfully opposed the settlement of a class action was not entitled to attorney's fees under either the equitable substantial benefit theory or as a private attorney general under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Approval of Negotiated Fee in Shareholder Derivative Action Was Abuse of Discretion. In Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438 , the court held that in approving a negotiated settlement of a shareholder derivative action including an attorney's fee award, the trial court abused its discretion. The court used factors unsupported by the record in calculating the amount of fees, and enhanced the lodestar amount by applying multipliers for which there was scant evidentiary support; and there was very little real benefit conferred on corporation and shareholders as a result of litigation. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Motion for Attorney's Fees for Post Injunction Litigation Not Untimely. In Crespin v. Shewry (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 259 , the Court of Appeal held that the plaintiffs' motion for attorney's fees after successfully defending a permanent injunction, which was brought three years after the last litigation on the injunction, was not untimely. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702 did not govern the time for the bringing motion. Further, defendant was not unfairly prejudiced by the delay, because even a motion timely under Rule 870.2 would have required the parties to reconstruct litigation activities occurring five years earlier, and the delay did not prevent settlement of the fee issue. The fact that the judge that granted the injunction retired in interim also did not show prejudice. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Failure to Mediate Precluded Attorney's Fees Award to Prevailing Parties. In Frei v. Davey (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1506 , prevailing defendants in an action to specifically enforce a residential purchase agreement were not entitled to an attorney's fees award. The agreement required mediation as a condition precedent to commencing arbitration or litigation, and the defendants' course of conduct constituted a refusal to respond to a clear and unequivocal request to mediate. Further, the defendants' refusal to mediate was not excused. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Attorney's Fee Awards in Civil Rights Actions Deductible From Plaintiff's Gross Income. The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 [Pub. L. No. 108-357] now provides that an award of attorney's fees recovered by a plaintiff and paid to the plaintiff's attorney in a civil rights action, including an action brought under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, is deductible from the plaintiff's gross income for income-tax purposes. See I.R.C. § 62, now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.56[8].

Anti-SLAPP Motion Inapplicable to Breach of Loyalty Claim. In Benasra v. Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1179 , the court of appeal held that a claim for breach of loyalty under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310 is not subject to a special motion to strike pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

Political Party That Prevailed in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 Action Entitled to Attorneys' Fees. In Democratic Party of Washington State v. Reed (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 1281 , the court found that a prevailing party in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 should ordinarily recover attorneys' fees unless special circumstances could render such an award unjust. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.17[2][a][i].

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

[1] Contracts

Scope of Contract Damages. In Robinson Helicopter Company, Inc. v. Dana Corporation (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979 , the court holds the scope of a contract remedy assumes that the parties can negotiate the risk of loss occasioned by a breach; accordingly courts enforce those obligations each party voluntarily assumes and award only those benefits they expected to receive. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.56[3][a].

Pleading General Damages. In Lewis Jorge Construction Management, Inc. v. Pomona Unified School District (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 960 , the court held general damages for breach of contract are those losses that arise directly and inevitably from any similar breach of any similar agreement; special damages are secondary or derivative losses arising from circumstances that are particular to the contract or to the parties and are recoverable if the special or particular circumstances from which they arise were actually communicated to or known by the breaching party or were matters of which the breaching party should have been aware at the time of contracting. See Ch. 177, Damages ., and Ch. 140, Contracts § 140.101[3][f] ,.

[2] Tort and Punitive Damages

State to Receive Share of Punitive Damages Awards Until 2006. In new Civil Code § 3294.5, the legislature, to meet pressing budgetary needs, has provided that only 25 percent of any punitive damages award must be paid to the plaintiff in a civil action, with the other 75 percent paid to the state treasury and made available for annual budget appropriation by the state, with a share of that amount going to pay the plaintiff's attorney. However, this statute only applies to actions that are filed after August 16, 2004, and that are finally adjudicated, including any appeals, prior to July 1, 2006, unless a later-enacted statute extends or deletes the 2006 repeal date. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Supreme Court Clarifies Proper Considerations in Awarding Punitive Damages. In Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1159 , the California Supreme Court held that although the wealth of a defendant alone cannot justify a high punitive damages award and cannot substitute for tailoring the award to the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct or to the amount of compensatory damages, the state has a legitimate interest in deterring future misconduct and may still allow juries to consider the wealth of the defendant in awarding punitive damages. In addition, the Court concluded that it may be appropriate in some rare circumstances to proportion punitive damages to some measure of harm other than the actual amount of compensatory damages awarded, such as uncompensated harm or potential damages that were not--but could have been--inflicted, if these potential damages are a truer measure of the risk created by the defendant's conduct. However, the use of potential harm as a measure must be limited to potential harm that was actually intended by the defendant or was reasonably likely to occur from the defendant's conduct. In the companion case of Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1191 , the California Supreme Court held that the state may, to further its legitimate goal in deterring future misconduct through an award of punitive damages, consider whether the type of misconduct perpetrated against the particular plaintiff was an isolated event or was but one instance in a pattern of similar misconduct in determining the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, which in turn will necessarily affect the amount of punitive damages awarded. See Ch. 177, Damages , Punitive Damages Award Against Tobacco Company Reduced to $50 Million. In Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640 , the court of appeal reduced a punitive damages award against a tobacco company from $100 million to $50 million on a compensatory damage award of $5.5 million, concluding that a 9-to-1 ratio was warranted given the extreme reprehensibility of the company's longstanding conduct in adding substances to its cigarettes to increase their addictiveness, gaining smokers by fraud and through its long denial of the dangers of smoking, and marketing a product that was more dangerous than consumers expected. In addition, the court held that in a fraud action, communication and reliance may be shown by evidence that the plaintiff was influenced by widespread advertising targeted at a group of which the plaintiff was a member, even if the plaintiff cannot specify that any particular advertisement or statement was made directly to him or her or that the plaintiff relied on any one advertisement. See Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit § 269.15[2] ,.

Evidence Plaintiff Paid for Own Medical Expenses Admissible to Prove Damages. In Smalley v. Baty (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 977 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff has paid for past medical services out of his or her own pocket, evidence of this payment is admissible to prove damages. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Shareholder Not Entitled to Recover for Lost Future Corporate Profits. In Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 212 , the court of appeal held that a corporate shareholder does not have an ownership interest in corporate profits and cannot recover individually for lost future profits suffered by the corporation. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Punitive Damages Upheld Against Ex Post Facto Challenge. In Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1155 , the court of appeal held that because an award of punitive damages in a civil claim does not constitute a criminal punishment, a statute reviving the limitations period for a common law tort cause of action, thus allowing a plaintiff to seek punitive damages after the time for filing the action had originally expired, does not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Hospital Emergency Lien Limited to Amount Owed by Plaintiff to Hospital. In Parnell v. Adventist Health System/West (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 595 , the California Supreme Court held that a hospital's lien rights against a patient's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor under Civ. Code § 3045.1 do not extend to the difference between the amount the hospital agreed to receive from that plaintiff under a managed care contract and the full-rate amount that the hospital would have charged to a patient not covered by the managed care contract, although the Court noted that hospitals are free to negotiate with patients the right to assert that greater lien amount in those managed care contracts. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

Joint and Several Liability for Noneconomic Damages in Civil Conspiracy Action. In Kesmodel v. Rand (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1128 , the court of appeal held that the passage of Proposition 51 did not change the rule of joint and several liability for noneconomic damages in a case of civil conspiracy. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy , Introduction.

Nine to One Ratio of Punitive Damages to Compensatory Damages Approved. In Bardis v. Oates (2004) 119 Cal.

App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal reduced a punitive damages award from $7 million to $1.5 million, concluding that a punitive damages to compensatory damages ratio of just over 9 to 1 was justified because the defendant's conduct was highly reprehensible and the amount of compensatory damages did not fully reflect the outrageousness of the conduct. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Child's Mental Disability Does Not Preclude Loss of Companionship Damages in Wrongful Death Action. In Knowles v. Superior Court (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , the court of appeal held that mental retardation does not necessarily render a child less able to suffer loss of companionship damages, as the plaintiff in a wrongful death action, than a child with no such mental disability. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

[1] In General

Reorganization of Discovery Statutes. The Civil Discovery Act of 1986 is repealed and replaced with a new Civil Discovery Act on July 1, 2005. This publication is extensively updated throughout to reflect the new statutory citations in the reorganized code where many sections of the former Act are pulled apart and reassembled in a new code scheme. Correlation tables are included to help you quickly identify the citation for the new provision that replaces the familiar old provision.

[2] Depositions

July Mandatory Judicial Council Forms. Three new mandatory deposition subpoena Judicial Council forms effective July 1, 2005 are included. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, §§ 193.226, 193.227, 193.228.

[3] Interrogatories

Boilerplate Privilege Objections in Response to Interrogatories Do Not Waiver Right to Assert Privilege. In Best Products, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1181 , the court of appeal held that defendant's failure to provide a privilege log did not constitute waiver of its right to assert attorney-client privilege and work product protection in regard to interrogatories propounded by plaintiff, when defendant provided a timely, albeit boilerplate, response. See Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories, § 194.16[4].

[4] Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations

Discovery: Clergy-Penitent and Psychotherapist-Patient Privileges Construed. In Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (People) (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 417 , a case investigating allegations of child sexual assault committed by two priests, the court of appeal held that documents generated in the course of "troubled-priest interventions" were not privileged as penitential communications under Evid. Code § 1032, because both parties to the original communications knew they would be transmitted to a third person. Further, only one memorandum from a member of the Archbishop's staff to a priest's psychotherapists was protected by psychotherapist-patient privilege, because this document supplied the troubled priest's therapeutic team with information about his personal history as an aid to diagnosis and treatment. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, §§ 191.70[2], 191.80[4].

Disclosure of Records Concerning Probation-Conditioned Psychotherapy. In In re Christopher M. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 684 , amended, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 382 , the court of appeal held that probation conditions that required all records related to juvenile defendant's treatment be made available on request to the court and the probation department were reasonable and did not violate juvenile's right of privacy or his psychotherapist-patient privilege, given the state's legitimate countervailing interest in protecting the public against defendant's violent conduct and in determining whether he was fully complying with his probation conditions. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.70[2].

Discovery of Police Officer Personnel Records. In Garcia v. Superior Court (City of Santa Ana) (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 , the court of appeal held, as an issue of first impression, that a criminal defendant may file a declaration under seal in support of his or her Pitchess motion on the grounds that it contains information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and attorney work protection. The court also outlined the procedures a trial court should follow when faced with a sealed declaration or affidavit in support of a Pitchess motion. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.153[13].

[5] Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence

Boilerplate Privilege Objections in Response to Request for Inspection and Production of Documents Do Not Waiver Right to Assert Privilege. The court of appeal in Best Products, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1181 found no waiver of the attorney-client and work product privileges when defendant asserted those privileges in a timely manner, "albeit in a boilerplate fashion," but failed to file a privilege log as part of its opposition to plaintiff's request to inspect and product. See Ch. 195, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence, §§ 195.16[1], 195.18.

[6] Sanctions

Sanctions May Not Be Awarded Ex Parte. In Sole Energy Co. v. Hodges (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 199 , the appellate court ruled that a failure to notify and provide an opportunity to be heard to the defendants that their defaults might be entered as a discovery sanction violated former Code Civ. Proc. § 2023(b) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030) and due process, because sanctions for abuse or misuse of discovery may not be awarded ex parte. See Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.19.

Stipulation Was Tantamount to Requisite Court Order Compelling Responses, for Purposes of Awarding Terminating Sanctions. In Mileikowsky v. Tenet Healthsystem (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 262 , the court of appeal held that a stipulation signed by both parties waived the right to insist on a formal order compelling responses, as required by former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030 and 2031, as a precursor to imposing terminating sanctions, when plaintiff's discovery violation was willful, preceded by history of abuse, and evidence showed that less severe sanctions would not produce compliance. See Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.13[3][b][iii].

[7] Scope, Regulation and Timing

Non-Party Insurer's Financial Information Is Not Discoverable Under Former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017(b). In Catholic Mut. Relief Soc'y v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 879, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 , the court of appeal held that a non-party liability insurer's financial condition was not discoverable under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017(b) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.210), which provided for discovery of the existence and contents of an insurance policy. The court also held that former § 2017(b) did not authorize discovery of reinsurance policies because an injured plaintiff could not be considered a third party beneficiary to the reinsurance contracts. Finally, the insurer's financial condition was not discoverable for settlement purposes under the general relevancy rules of former § 2017(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.010). See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.21[1].

PART II. 2005 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.26

§ 1.26 Employment

[1] Discrimination

California Supreme Court Rejects "Deterrence Standard" for Determining Whether FEHA Retaliation Plaintiff Has Suffered Adverse Employment Action. The California Supreme Court has held that to qualify as an "adverse employment action" under FEHA, an employer's retaliatory act against an employee must have a material effect on the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment; it is not sufficient that the act deter the employee from engaging in protected activities. See Yanowitz v. L'OrealUSA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.37[3][a].

Widespread Workplace Favoritism Based on Sexual Relationships May Create Hostile Work Environment. The California Supreme Court has held that widespread workplace sexual favoritism on the part of a supervisor toward female employees with whom the supervisor is conducting consensual sexual affairs may create a hostile work environment for other employees. See Miller v. Department of Corrections. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.36[5][b][iii], 115.37[1][b].

Ministerial Exception to Fair Employment and Housing Act Explained. A California Court of Appeal has explained the scope of the nonstatutory "ministerial exception" to state civil rights laws. See Hope Int'l Univ. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.20[2][d], 115.22[6][e].

Disparate Impact Theory Applies to Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The United States Supreme Court has held that the disparate impact theory is available in Age Discrimination in Employment Act cases, although the scope of disparate-impact liability under the ADEA is narrower than under Title VII. See Smith v. City of JacksonSmith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[4][a].

Public Employee Need Not Exhaust Employer's Internal Administrative Remedy For Nonstatutory Wrongful-Termination Claim Related to FEHA Claim. A California Court of Appeal has held that a public employee who asserts a Fair Employment and Housing Act claim and a related nonstatutory claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy need not exhaust the internal administrative remedy provided by the employer with respect to the nonstatutory claim before filing a civil action, if the resolution of that claim would have a preclusive impact on the FEHA claim. See Williams v. Housing Auth. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 708 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1][a], [g].

Attorney's Fee Awards in Civil Rights Actions Deductible From Plaintiff's Gross Income. The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 [Pub. L. No. 108-357] now provides that an award of attorney's fees recovered by a plaintiff and paid to the plaintiff's attorney in a civil rights action, including an action brought under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, is deductible from the plaintiff's gross income for income-tax purposes. See I.R.C. § 62, now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.56[8].

Preprinted Workers' Compensation Release Form Settles Only Claims Within Scope of Workers' Compensation System. The California Supreme Court has held that the standard language of the mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874] releases only those claims that are within the scope of the workers' compensation system, and extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that the parties intended the preprinted release form to encompass any other claims. See Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.35[1][a], 115.54[8], 115.106[2].

[2] Employer Liability

Commercial Traveler Rule Not Applicable to Respondeat Superior Case. In Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal refused to apply the "commercial traveler rule," under which a workers' compensation claimant can be acting in the course and scope of employment during the entire period of travel on an employer's business, to a respondeat superior case. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[3].

Action Against Employer for Employee's Torts Must Name Employer as Defendant Within Limitations Period. In Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff seeking to hold an employer liable for the torts of an employee must name the employer as a defendant prior to the running of the applicable statute of limitations, even if the claim against the employee is not barred by limitations. The court also held that if the employee's debts have been discharged by bankruptcy, shielding the employee from suit, and the plaintiff neglected to name the employer as a defendant prior to expiration of the statute of limitations, the plaintiff may not pursue the action against the employee in order to obtain a judgment that might be enforced against the employer. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.19[1].

Hirer of Independent Contractor May Be Liable for Injury to Employee for Breach of Regulatory Duty. In Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 281 , the court of appeal held that a hirer of an independent contractor may be liable to an employee of the independent contractor if the hirer breaches a duty imposed on the hirer by regulation and the breach affirmatively contributes to the employee's injury. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][b][iv].

Vicarious Liability Requires Causal Connection Between Negligence and Injury. In Dixon v. City of Livermore (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 32 , the court of appeal held that an employer could not be vicariously liable for the negligence of an employee if there was no causal connection between that negligence and the plaintiff's injuries. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.14.

Businesses Classified as Private Carriers Not Vicariously Liable for Torts of Independent Contractor Drivers. In Hill Brothers Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1001 , the court of appeal held that businesses that are classified as "private carriers," that is, businesses that use the highways only to transport their own products incidental to carrying on their business, are not vicariously liable for the acts of independent-contractor drivers. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][c].

[3] Termination and Discipline

Whistleblower Claiming Retaliation Must Exhaust Employer's Internal Administrative Remedy. The California Supreme Court has held that a public employee must exhaust the employer's internal administrative remedy before suing for retaliation for statutorily protected "whistleblowing" activity under Lab. Code § 1102.5 or Gov. Code § 12653. See Campbell v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1][g], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[20].

School District's Denial of Part-Time Employment Does Not Violate Fundamental Public Policy. A California Court of Appeal has held that Education Code § 44922, which authorizes school districts to establish programs allowing senior employees to work part time, does not create a fundamental and substantial public policy. Therefore, an employee whose request for a reduced workload under such a program has been denied may not use that denial as the basis of an action for wrongful constructive discharge in violation of public policy. See Sinatra v. Chico Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 701 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[3][b][i].

First Amendment* Does Not Support Claim Against Private Employer for Wrongful Termination in Violation of Public Policy. A California Court of Appeal has held that the First Amendment's free speech provision fails to establish a public policy against terminations by private employers for speech-related activities, because the First Amendment applies only to government actions and expresses no public policy regarding terminations by private employers. See Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[3][f].

Employer-Employee Arbitration Agreement May Be Unconscionable Even If Employee Was Represented by Attorney. A California Court of Appeal has held a mandatory employment arbitration provision unenforceable, even though the employee's attorney reviewed the provision before the employee signed it. The court emphasized that the provision clearly was substantively unconscionable, because only the employee's claims were required to be arbitrated, the provision required a prearbitration dispute-resolution procedure controlled by the employer, and it imposed a severe limitation on the time for the employee to assert claims. That high degree of substantive unconscionability, plus the nonnegotiable nature of the provision, were sufficient reasons to deny enforcement of the provision. See Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16].

Employer Has Cause of Action for Intentional Interference With At-Will Employment. The California Supreme Court has held that an employer may recover damages from a third party who intentionally engages in an independently wrongful act (i.e., one that is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard) that induces an at-will employee to leave the employer. See Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.22[6], 249.33.

Corporate Agents Not Personally Liable for Wages of Corporate Employees. The California Supreme Court has held that an employee's suit to recover statutory minimum wages or overtime compensation must be brought directly against the employer and may not be maintained against shareholders, officers, directors, or other agents of a corporate employer. See Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.40[3][a], 250.62[3].

Special Limitations Period for Actions to Recover Compensation for World War II Slave Labor Inapplicable to Claims Against Japan. A California Court of Appeal has held that Code Civ. Proc. § 354.6(c), which provides a special limitations period for actions to recover compensation for labor performed as a Second World War slave labor victim or forced labor victim, does not apply to claims against Japan or its nationals, because it conflicts with the federal policy (embodied in the 1951 Treaty of Peace with Japan) that such claims are to be resolved diplomatically. See Taiheiyo Cement Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 380 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.34[1][b].

§ 1.27 Guardianships and Conservatorships

New Judicial Council Forms. The following Judicial Council forms have been adopted for use in guardianship and conservatorship proceedings, effective July 1, 2005: Ex Parte Application for Order Authorizing Completion of Capacity Declaration (GC-333), Ex Parte Order re Completion of Capacity Declaration (GC-334), Notice of Hearing (GC-020), Attachment to Notice of Hearing Proof of Service by Mail (GC-020(MA)), Clerk's Certificate of Posting Notice of Hearing (GC-020(C)), Proof of Personal Service of Notice of Hearing (GC-020(P)), Notice of Opening or Changing Guardianship or Conservatorship Account or Safe Deposit Box. See Ch. 281, Appointment of Conservators, §§ 281.101A, 281.101B; Ch. 284, Notice, §§ 284.70, 284.70A, 284.70B, 284.70C; Ch. 290A, Asset Management, § 290A.120.

Conservators--Authority With Respect to Conservatee's Marriage. In Michael J. v. Superior Court (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 37 , the court held that a conservator of the person and estate of a mentally disabled person who is unable to communicate his or her wishes does not have the authority to bring a proceeding for the dissolution of the conservatee's marriage, but may bring a proceeding for legal separation if necessary to protect the assets of the estate, subject to the probate court's approval. For discussion, see Ch. 290C, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Actions and Disputed Claims, § 290C.11.

§ 1.28 Hospitals

Hospital Emergency Lien Limited to Amount Owed by Plaintiff to Hospital. In Parnell v. Adventist Health System/West (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 595 , the California Supreme Court held that a hospital's lien rights against a patient's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor under Civ. Code § 3045.1 do not extend to the difference between the amount the hospital agreed to receive from that plaintiff under a managed care contract and the full-rate amount that the hospital would have charged to a patient not covered by the managed care contract, although the Court noted that hospitals are free to negotiate with patients the right to assert that greater lien amount in those managed care contracts. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.29

§ 1.29 Insurance

[1] In General

Arbitration Clause in Disability Insurance Policy Upheld. In Boghos v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 495 , the California Supreme Court upheld a binding arbitration clause in an individual disability insurance policy despite assertedly contrary language in the Certificate of Insurance. See Ch. 308, Insurance .

Recoupment of Sums Advanced by Insurer if No Duty to Defend. In Scottsdale Insurance Co. v. MV Transport (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 643 , the California Supreme Court held that an insurer under a standard CGL policy, having properly reserved its rights, may advance sums to defend its insured against a third party lawsuit, and may thereafter recoup those costs from the insured if it is determined, as a matter of law, that no duty to defend ever arose because the third-party suit never suggested the possibility of a covered claim. See Ch. 308, Insurance , Part I, Subpart E.

Property Insurance Coverage of Losses Due to Weather Conditions. In Julian v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 747 , the California Supreme Court held that a "weather conditions" clause, excluding coverage for losses incurred when weather conditions contribute to a loss caused by excluded perils, did not violate Ins. Code § 530 under the facts in that case, which involved a landslide induced by excessive rain. See Ch. 308, Insurance , Part I, Subpart I, Form 138.

Life Insurance Coverage May Exist Even Without Specific Formalities. In Hodgson v. Banner Life Insurance Co. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1358 , the court of appeal held that Ins. Code § 10115 imposes a coverage obligation whenever the conditions for issuance of a policy of life insurance have been satisfied, but the formalities of issuance and deliverance have not occurred. See Ch. 308, Insurance , Part I, Introduction; Part I, Subpart B, Introduction.

Liability of Insurance Broker to Insurer. In Century Surety Co. v. Crosby Insurance, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 116 , the court of appeal held that an insurance broker who forged a document regarding the insured's loss history, and submitted it with an insurance application, may be liable to the insurer for fraud and negligence. See Ch. 308, Insurance, §§ 308.10 et seq., 308.170 et seq.

Retroactive Overcharging of Premium Not Owed Is Not Basis for Tort Action. In Jonathan Neil & Assocs., Inc. v. Jones (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 917 , the California Supreme Court has held that an insurance company's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, based on the insurer's retroactive overcharging a premium it knows is not owed, is not the basis for a tort action, outside the context of the deliberate mishandling of claims that would otherwise give rise to tort remedies. See Ch. 308, Insurance .

[2] Indemnity and Contribution

No Comparative Indemnity From Party Who Violated No Tort Duty. In BFGC Architects Planners, Inc. v. Forcum/Mackey Construction, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 848 , the court of appeal held that an indemnitor cannot be liable for comparative indemnity to the tortfeasor if the only duties allegedly violated by the indemnitor are contractual duties owed to the tort victim, the indemnitor had no contractual relationship with the tortfeasor, and there is no other basis for the indemnitor's liability in tort. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[3] Subrogation

Insurer That Obtained Partial Subrogation Had Right to Intervene. In Hodge v. Kirkpatrick Development, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 540 , an insurer had a statutory right to intervene in a construction defect lawsuit brought by the insureds against third-party tortfeasors, after the insurer obtained partial subrogation rights against the third parties by paying a portion of the insured's claims for property damage to their house. See Ch. 536, Subrogation .

[4] Uninsured Motorists

Insolvency Triggering Uninsured Motorist Coverage. In Romano v. Mercury Ins. Co. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1333 , the court of appeal held that an insurer's inability to pay a claim "because of insolvency," triggering uninsured motorist coverage, means actual insolvency precipitating nonpayment of a claim within a year, regardless of whether any court or insurance commissioner took the formal step of ordering the insurer into liquidation. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.10[4][e].

No Arbitrable Controversy Once Uninsured Motorist Limits Paid. In State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1424 , the court of appeal held that if an insurer has paid the uninsured motorist limits of its policy, no controversy remains to be arbitrated under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f). See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][c].

§ 1.31 Liens

Hospital Liens--Underlying Debt Required. In Parnell v. Adventist Health System/West (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 595 , the California Supreme Court held that a lien under the Hospital Lien Act [Civ. Code § 3045.1 et seq.] requires the existence of an underlying debt owed by the patient to the hospital and that, absent such a debt, no lien may attach. See Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences .

Hospital Emergency Lien Limited to Amount Owed by Plaintiff to Hospital. In Parnell v. Adventist Health System/West (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 595 , the California Supreme Court held that a hospital's lien rights against a patient's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor under *Civ. Writ of Mandate Granted Concerning Discovery Orders Only When Question of First Impression. In Toshiba America Electronics Components v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 762 , the court of appeal granted a writ petition when it was ruling for the first time on the question of which party should pay to translate electronic data compilations to obtain usable information responsive to discovery requests. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

Petitioner Has Standing to File Petition for Writ of Mandate If Question Involves Public Interest. In Marshall v. Pasadena Unified School District (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1241 , the court of appeal ruled that a contractor and a taxpayer had a public interest in filing a petition for writ of mandate challenging a school district's failure to use competitive bidding procedure. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.33

§ 1.33 Marriage and Cohabitation

[1] Cohabitation and Domestic Partnerships

Criminal Penalties for Destruction of Household Property. A husband or wife may be held criminally liable for intentionally causing harm to property in which the other spouse has an interest, whether the property is individual or marital, and whether the harm occurs inside or outside the marital home. People v. Wallace (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 144 rejected a husband's argument that a cohabiting spouse could not be guilty of vandalizing community or separate property inside the marital home. See Ch. 122, Community Property .

Domestic Partnership Forms. The Secretary of State has issued new forms for Declaration of Domestic Partnership (Form DP-1), Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership (Form DP-2), and Revocation of Termination of Domestic Partnership (Form DP-3) reflecting the provisions of the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 that became operative January 1, 2005. Also discussed are new forms of Petition and Response (Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-103, FL-123) issued pursuant to the Act's provision for court proceedings for dissolution of domestic partnerships. These forms are covered in Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation .

Domestic Partners' Agreements. Parties to existing domestic partnerships became subject generally to the rights and responsibilities provided by state law for married persons on January 1, 2005, when the California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act of 2003 became operative. Amended Fam. Code § 297.5 gives those parties up to June 30, 2005, to make agreements between themselves that will be enforceable in the same manner as premarital agreements. This development is covered in Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation .

Unmarried Partner's Child. A nonmarital partner who supports a child in reliance on his partner's representations that he is the child's father, but then discovers that the child in not his, may not sue the partner on an unjust enrichment theory for the return of his support expenditures. McBride v. Boughton (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 379 , states that to give a former putative father the right to restitution from the child's biological parents would give priority to the former putative father's desire to be made financially whole, to the potential detriment of the child's ongoing needs. See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation .

[2] Dissolution of Marriage and Child Support

Separate Property Contributions to Separate Estate. New legislation [Fam. Code § 2640(c)] provides for reimbursement to a spouse who makes contributions from separate property to the acquisition of property in the other spouse's separate estate, unless there is a written transmutation or waiver of the right to reimbursement. See Ch 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation .

Dependent Exemption. Federal legislation has amended the Internal Revenue Code to adopt a new definition of "dependent" and to revise the rules relating to the dependent exemption in the case of divorced parents. Under the new definition, a parent who resides with a "qualifying child" for over half the year is entitled to the exemption without regard to what portion of the child's support the parent provides. See Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

Innocent Spouse Relief. Relief under Internal Revenue Code Section 6015(b) or (c) requires a tax understatement or deficiency. In Foor (Jeanine F.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-54 , relief was denied because there was no understatement when proper tax amount was reported but not paid. In Demirjian (Louise) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-22 , relief was denied because there was no deficiency when amended returns corrected an earlier understatement). However, if no understatement or deficiency exists, equitable relief may still be available under Internal Revenue Code Section 6015(f), as shown by Foor (Jeanine F.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-54 , where relief was granted even though the taxpayer had reason to know that taxes would not be paid. See Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

[3] Member of Armed Forces

Marriage of Member of Armed Forces. Fam. Code § 420(b) provides a procedure for a member of the armed forces, who is stationed overseas and serving in a conflict or a war and is unable to appear for the licensure and solemnization, to enter into marriage by the appearance of an attorney-in-fact. See Ch. 359, Marriage .

[4] Same-Sex Marriage

Same-Sex Marriage. The California Supreme Court has unequivocally stated that Family Code Section 300 limits marriage in California to marriage between a man and a woman and flatly prohibits persons of the same sex from lawfully marrying in California in Lockyer v. City and County of San Francisco (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1055 . The Court held that same-sex marriages performed by city officials acting outside their authority are void from inception. This development is covered in Ch. 359, Marriage .

§ 1.34 Newspapers

Newspaper of General Circulation. This chapter is converted to easy to use section format and is updated with In re Molz (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 836 , which holds a newspaper may not seek modification of a prior decree regarding which cities are within its scope as a newspaper of general circulation using Gov. Code § 6024 (modification of decree); a change of this type is in substance a petition for an order declaring it to be newspaper of general circulation and requires the newspaper to follow the procedural requirements of Gov. Code §§ 6021, 6022 and provide notice of the petition to the public. Whether a newspaper of general circulation that was established prior to 1923 may obtain an adjudication that it is a newspaper of general circulation for every city incorporated since 1923 within the county in which the newspaper is established is a question that has not yet been decided by the courts. See Ch. 386, Newspapers, §§ 386.13, 386.16.

§ 1.35 Patents and Trademarks

Exclusive Jurisdiction. In Holiday Matinee, Inc. v. Rambus, Inc. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1413 , the court held the question of whether a federal court has exclusive jurisdiction depends on plaintiff's own statement of the claim in the complaint. If a review of the plaintiff's "well-pleaded complaint" (considering only what necessarily appears in it and unaided by anything alleged in anticipation or avoidance of defenses that the defendant might interpose) makes it clear that plaintiff's right to relief necessarily depends on resolution of a substantial question of federal patent law, then federal-court jurisdiction is exclusive. See Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions .

Infringement of Registered Mark. In In re Lorillard Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 982 , the court held a district court's denial of a motion for an ex parte seizure order would not be appealable under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1) (appeal from interlocutory orders) because it would be neither an automatically appealable literal refusal of an injunction nor a practical denial of ultimate injunctive relief. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.24.

Noncommercial Speech. In Nissan Motor Co. v. Nissan Computer Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 378 F.3d 1002 , the court held an injunction prohibiting Nissan Computer Corporation from linking its website visitors to other websites that presented disparaging or negative commentary about Nissan Motor Company because of ongoing trademark dispute was content-based restriction on noncommercial speech and thus was inconsistent with the First Amendment. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.27.

Patent License. In SuperBrace, Inc. v. Tidwell (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 388 , the court held that because the federal patent statutes contain no provisions governing licenses, federal courts have fashioned a rule of federal common law to apply in cases concerning transfers of patent licenses. However, in California, the supreme court has determined that state law, not federal common law, should be applied in deciding whether a patent license is assignable. See Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions, § 411.10 et seq.

Application of MICRA Noneconomic Damages Cap Clarified When Absent Parties at Fault Are Not Subject to MICRA. In Francies v. Kapla (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1381 , the court of appeal held that in an action against a health care provider, when adjusting damages to account for the comparative fault of nonparties who are not subject to MICRA, a noneconomic damages award should be reduced prior to applying the $250,000 cap of Code Civ. Proc. § 3333.2. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.18[1], and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

Good Faith of Physician Providing Emergency Care Clarified For Purposes of Statutory Immunity. In Reynoso v. Newman (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 494 , the court of appeal held that in applying Bus. & Prof. Code § 2395, which immunizes a health care provider from liability when providing emergency health care in good faith, the good faith belief that an emergency existed extends only to the subjective belief of the physician while actually providing treatment to the patient, and proof is not required that prior to arriving at the scene, the physician held a good-faith belief that he or she was responding to an emergency. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

Physician Must Have Knowledge of Condition Placed Upon Patient's Consent to be Liable for Battery. In Piedra v. Dugan (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1483 , the court of appeal held that if a patient or his or her representative gives conditional consent to a general course of medical treatment, a physician must have knowledge of that condition in order to be held personally liable for battery for failing to abide by the condition. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

Limitations Period Begins Running As to All Physicians Once Plaintiff Suspects Someone's Medical Malpractice. In Knowles v. Superior Court (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , the court of appeal held that in a medical malpractice action, the limitations period begins running as to all potential defendants when the plaintiff suspects medical negligence on the part of someone, and it is not necessary that the plaintiff suspect a particular physician for the statute to begin running as to that physician or any other physician who may have been negligent. § 1.37 Probate

[1] Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation

Presumed Mother Status. The California Supreme Court has issued three decisions affirming that the lesbian partner of a child's birth mother also may be deemed to be the child's mother. In Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108 , the Court held that under the Uniform Parentage Act, a woman may be a presumed mother of a child of her lesbian partner if they agree to raise the child together, she receives the child into her home, and she holds the child out as her natural child. In K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130 , the Court held that when a woman provides ova to her lesbian partner so that the partner can bear a child who will be raised in their joint home, both women are considered to be the child's parents. In Kristine H. v. Lisa R. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 156 , the Court held that the lesbian mother of a child was estopped from challenging the validity of a stipulated judgment declaring that she and her lesbian partner were the child's parents. See Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation .

Intestate Succession. In Jackson v. Fitzgibbons (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 329 , the court held that a child is no longer considered the "issue" of his or her natural parent for purposes of intestate succession when the parental rights of the parent have been terminated. See Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation .

[2] Attorney Liability

Attorney Owes Duty to Intended Beneficiary Under Probate Code §§ 21350 and 21351. In Osornio v. Weingarten (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 304 , the court of appeal held that when a client seeks an attorney's services to effect a transfer of assets to a beneficiary who is presumptively disqualified from receiving a donative transfer under Prob. Code § 21350(a), the attorney owes a duty of care that runs both to the client and to the intended beneficiary to advise the client that the proposed transfer, if challenged, would have a significant likelihood of failing unless steps are taken under Prob. Code § 21351 to exempt the transfer from this statutory presumption of disqualification. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

Successor Fiduciary May Assert Professional Negligence Claim Against Attorney Hired by Predecessor. In Borissoff v. Taylor & Faust (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 523 , the court held that a successor fiduciary of an estate in probate has the authority to assert a professional negligence claim against an attorney retained by a predecessor fiduciary to provide tax assistance for the benefit of the estate. See Ch. 458B, Probate: Suspension, Removal, and Resignation .

[3] Claims Against Estate

Medi-Cal Claim for Benefits Provided to Decedent. In Fitch v. Select Products Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 812 , the California Supreme Court held that the Department of Health Services may not assert a Medi-Cal lien for costs incurred in treating a decedent's final illness against a recovery in a wrongful death action when this recovery does not and could not include these medical expenses. See Ch. 454, Probate: Claims Against Estate .

Statute of Limitations for Action to Recover Medi-Cal Benefits. In Shewry v. Begil (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 639 , the court held that the statute of limitations for a recovery action by the Department of Health Services seeking reimbursement for Medi-Cal benefits provided to a decedent begins running on the date on which notice under Prob. Code § 215 is given, not on the date of the decedent's death. See Ch. 454, Probate: Claims Against Estate .

[4] Disposition Without Administration

Domestic Partnerships. In Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824 , the California Supreme Court held that in light of the domestic partnership law, which substantially equalizes the status of registered domestic partners and spouses, businesses are required to treat registered domestic partners the same as spouses in order to comply with the Unruh Act. See Ch. 441, Probate: Disposition Without Administration .

Domestic Partnerships. In Knight v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 14 , the court held that the legislature's enactment of Fam. Code § 297.5, giving registered domestic partners the same rights and obligations as spouses, is not an improper legislative amendment of the defense of marriage initiative (Proposition 22). Because Proposition 22 did not address domestic partnerships, changing the domestic partnership law did not amend the initiative. See Ch. 441, Probate: Disposition Without Administration .

[5] Inventory and Appraisal

Transmutation Agreements. In In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1096 , the California Supreme Court reaffirmed its decision in Estate of MacDonald (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 262 , that a purported transmutation agreement must expressly state that the characterization or ownership of the subject property is being changed. The Court held that there is no exception from the "express declaration" requirement for partial performance of an agreement to transmute property. See Ch. 451, Probate: Inventory and Appraisal .

[6] Statutory Notice Requirements

New Judicial Council Forms. The following revised and new Judicial Council forms have been adopted for use in probate proceedings, effective July 1, 2005: Notice of Hearing (DE-120), Attachment to Notice of Hearing Proof of Service by Mail (DE-120(MA)), and Proof of Personal Service of Notice of Hearing (DE-120(P)). See Ch. 447, Probate: Statutory Notice Requirements .

[7] Will Contests

Revocation by Dissolution of Marriage. In Estate of Coleman (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 380 , and Regents of University of California v. Benford (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 867 , the court held that provisions of a trust incorporated in a decedent's will, appointing his wife as trustee, granting her a power of appointment, or transferring any property or income from property to her were revoked by Prob. Code § 6122 on the dissolution of their marriage, because that statute provides that the terms of a trust incorporated in a will must be administered and distributed as though the former spouse had predeceased the decedent. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests .

Missing Will. In Lauermann v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1327 , the court held that the term "duplicate original," as used in Prob. Code § 6124, does not include a photocopy of the will that has not been personally signed by the testator and the witnesses. Therefore, the presumption of revocation applies when this is the only copy of the will that can be produced. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests .

No-Contest Clause. In Estate of Davies (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1164 , the court held that the surviving spouse of a beneficiary under a decedent's will does not violate the no-contest clause of the will by filing a "safe harbor" petition seeking a determination that the beneficiary satisfied the survivorship condition in the will. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests .

§ 1.39 Public Administration

Time Period for Employer to Deny Liability Runs for Date of Filed Claim. In Honeywell v. Worker's Compensation Appeal Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24 , the California Supreme Court held that the WCAB improperly interpreted the provisions of Labor Code § 5402 (90-day time period for presumption of compensability) in a WCAB decision. The statute is clear that the 90-day time period for an employer to deny liability runs from the date that the employee filed a claim form, and does not include the date that the employer received notice or knowledge of the injury. See Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law, § 470.12[1].

Dismissal for Failure to Exhaust Internal Administrative Remedies. In Campbell. v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311 , the California Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal of a lawsuit brought against the Regents of the University of California by a former employee who had been terminated by the university. The court held that the former employee's lawsuit was barred because the employee failed to exhaust administrative remedies before filing her lawsuit. Specifically, the court held that the former employee failed to exhaust required university internal administrative remedies. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[2][a].

Statutory Descriptions Are Required for Closed Session Agenda. Gov. Code § 54954.5 provides a statutory list of closed session agenda item descriptions that are sufficient to comply with the law. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.14[2].

Case Defines the Private Attorney General Fee Award Authorization. In Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604 , the California Supreme Court held that attorneys fees awards against public entities under the provisions of the private attorney general fee award statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5] and under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) fee award statute [Gov. Code § 12965(b)] can be authorized under the "catalyst" theory without proof of a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties, such as a judgment on the merits, a consent decree, or a court ordered settlement. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

PUC Has Jurisdiction Over Matter About Which It Is Authorized to Make Policy, Over Which It Has Assumed Jurisdiction, and Which It Continues to Regulate. In City of Anaheim v. Pacific Bell Telephone Company (2004)

119 Cal. App. 4th 838 , the court of appeal held that the PUC has exclusive jurisdiction to resolve a dispute about who must pay for relocation of telephone company's overhead facilities to underground. See Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.12[2].

§ 1.40 Public Entities and Officers

Action for Childhood Sexual Abuse Against Public Entity Must Comply With Tort Claims Act. In County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1263 , the court of appeal held that an action against a public entity stemming from an act of childhood sexual abuse is subject to the provisions and time limitations of the California Tort Claims Act and must first be presented to the public entity, and if the entity rejects the claim, the plaintiff has only six months after the rejection of the claim to file an action against the entity, regardless of the longer limitations period of Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.1. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Whistleblower Under False Claims Act Required to Exhaust Internal Grievance Procedures. In Campbell v. Regents of University of California (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311 , the California Supreme Court held that a former employee of the University of California was required to exhaust internal grievance procedures prior to filing suit against the university for retaliatory discharge under the whistleblower provisions of the False Claims Act. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions .

Actions Under False Claims Act May be Arbitrated. In County of Solano v. Lionsgate Corp. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 741 , the court of appeal held that actions under the False Claims Act may be subject to a contractual arbitration provision, if the language of the arbitration provision in the contract encompasses claims under the Act, and that an arbitrator has the authority to award civil penalties under the Act. See Ch. 469, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Act .

Police Officer Entitled to Qualified Immunity. In Brosseau v. HaugenBrosseau v. Haugen (2004) 125 S. Ct. 596 , a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action against a police officer for excessive force in shooting a suspect in the back as he attempted to flee the scene, the United States Supreme Court held that the officer was entitled to qualified immunity. The Court found that the officer made a decision that, even if constitutionally deficient, reasonably misapprehended the law governing the circumstances she confronted. Her actions fell in the hazy border between excessive and acceptable force, and the case law did not clearly establish that her conduct violated the Fourth Amendment. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[11][b].

Governmental Agency Can Be Liable for Statutory Penalty Under Tom Bane Civil Rights Act. In Los Angeles

County Metropolitan Transit Authority v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court held that a county transportation authority could be liable for statutory penalties under Civ. Code §§ 51.7, 52(b)(2) despite Gov. Code § 818, which precludes a public entity's liability for damages imposed primarily for sake of example and by way of punishing defendant. See Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence, § 117A.11[1][c].

Compliance With Tort Claims Act Is Prerequisite for Seeking Damages for Violation of Information Practices Act. In Bates v. Franchise Tax Board (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 367 , the court of appeal held that when damages are sought from a state agency under the Information Practices Act, Civ. Code § 1798 et seq., the plaintiff must first comply with the claims filing requirement of the Tort Claims Act and allege such compliance in the complaint. See Ch. 429, Privacy .

Minors Alleging Molestation Claim Against Public Entity May Be Granted Additional Time for Meeting Claims Presentation Requirements. In Curtis T. v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1405 , the court of appeal held that, when determining whether a plaintiff has timely complied with the Tort Claims Act's claims presentation requirements, courts may equitably grant additional time for the accrual of molestation claims by minors who, because of their young age, inexperience, ignorance, or other vulnerabilities, were unable at the time of the assault to comprehend the wrongfulness of the conduct. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

Civil Penalty for Commission of Hate Crimes May be Imposed Against Public Entity. In Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court of appeal held that the civil penalty provided by Civil Code Section 52(b)(2) for victims of hate crimes may be imposed against a public entity because the civil penalty is designed to provide an economic incentive for victims to bring suit and is not primarily punitive in nature. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

PUC Has No Jurisdiction Over Municipally Owned Utilities Unless Provided by Statute. In Santa Clara Valley Transportation Authority v. Public Utilities Commission (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 346 , the court of appeal held that the PUC does not have exclusive railroad crossing jurisdiction over municipally owned light rail crossings pursuant to Pub. Util. Code §§ 1201, 1202. See Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.12[2].

[1] Arbitration

Arbitration of Disputes--Small Residential Building Contracts. In Woolls v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 197 , the court held that under the facts of the case, the requirements in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191 (regarding the title of a provision for arbitration of disputes in a contract for work on specified residential property) were not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C.S. § 1 et seq.] because the contractor failed to show that the transaction at issue involved interstate commerce. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

[2] Building Contracts

Actions by Unlicensed Contractors. In MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412 , the California Supreme Court found that Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 (recovery of compensation paid to unlicensed contractor) does not allow a contractor who was unlicensed at any time during contractual performance to recover compensation for individual acts performed while he or she was duly licensed. However, if fully licensed at all times during contractual performance, a contractor is not barred from recovering compensation for the work solely because he or she was unlicensed when the contract was executed. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

[3] Easements

Creation of Easements by Owner Who Conveys Less Than Full Title. In Beyer v. Tahoe Sands Resort (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1458 , the court found that a property owner who conveys less than full title may validly create easements in his or her favor on the property. See Ch. 240, Easements, § 240.12[1][c].

[4] Eminent Domain

Constitutional Limits of Exactions. In Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A. Inc. (2005) 544 U.S. 528, 125 S. Ct. 2074, 161 L. Ed. 2d 876 , the U.S. Supreme Court made clear that Nollan v. California Coastal Commission is limited to the context of exactions. The Court emphasized that the rule articulated in Nollan is not whether the exaction would substantially advance the same interests that land use authorities asserted would allow them to deny the permit altogether. See Ch.

247, Eminent Domain .

Federal Takings Claims. In San Remo Hotel, L.P. v. City & County of San FranciscoSan Remo Hotel, L.P. v. City & County of San Francisco (2005) 125 S. Ct. 2491 , the U.S. Supreme Court held that the full faith and credit rule bars relitigation in federal court of issues decided by the state court that are dispositive of the federal takings claims. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain .

Date of Valutation. In Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 619 , which involved an eminent domain "quick take" proceeding where the condemnor applied for a prejudgment order for possession on a deposit of probable compensation for the owner, the court found that the date of valuation is the date the deposit of probable compensation was made. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain .

[5] Landlord and Tenant

Mitigation by Landlord Does Not Waive Right to Damages. In Lu v. Grewal (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 841 , the court of appeal found that a landlord who operated a gas station after it was abandoned by the tenants, and turned a profit, was not precluded from seeking damages under Civ. Code § 1951.2 (landlord's remedies on breach by tenant). See Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy, § 332.24[4][f].

[6] Lis Pendens

Fraudulent Conveyance Claims. In Kirkeby v. Superior Court (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 642 , the California Supreme Court held that a fraudulent conveyance claim affects title to or the right to possession of specific real property and therefore supports the recording of a lis pendens. The Court found specifically that a creditor's action to set aside as fraudulent a debtor's transfer of real property, brought under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, is a "real property claim" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 405.4 because it is a cause of action that would, if meritorious, affect title to real property. See Ch. 348, Lis Pendens .

[7] Mobilehomes

New and Revised Mobilehome Regulations. Register 2004, No. 28 (operative July 6, 2004) amended the "Mobile Home Parks and Installations" regulations [25 Cal. Code Reg. § 1000 et seq.] and added new "Special Occupancy Parks" regulations [25 Cal. Code Reg. § 2000 et seq.]. Included in these regulations are (1) the requirement to comply with the California Environmental Quality Act before developing and constructing a mobilehome park [see 25 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1030, 1032(b)]; (2) requirements regarding the information a mobilehome park owner must provide when there has been a change in the park's name, ownership, or possession [see 25 Cal. Code Reg. § 1014]; and (3) requirements surrounding mobilehome installations and foundation systems [see 25 Cal. Code Reg. § 1020]. See Ch. 369, Mobilehomes and Mobilehome Parks .

[8] Mortgages and Trust Deeds

Lending Practices in Home Mortgages--Preemption of Local Regulation. In American Financial Services Assn. v. City of Oakland (2005) 34 Cal. 4th 1239 , the California Supreme Court held that Fin. Code § 4970 et seq. fully occupies the field of regulation of predatory lending tactics in home mortgages. Thus, the legislation preempted a city ordinance regulating such lending practices, including an ordinance's regulation of loans not covered by the state statute. See Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.21A[7].

[9] Zoning and Planning

Environmental Regulations Affecting Real Estate--Constitutionality of California Coastal Commission. In Marine Forests Society v. California Coastal Commission (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1 , the California Supreme Court found that the current statutory provisions governing the composition of the Coastal Commission do not violate the separation of powers clause of the California Constitution. However, the Court also found that the history of the State Constitution, as well as case law, made it clear that the California Constitution, unlike the United States Constitution, does not categorically preclude the Legislature from enacting a statutory provision authorizing the Legislature itself to appoint a member or members of an executive commission or board. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning .

Regulation of Time-Share Developments. The Vacation Ownership and Time-Share Act of 2004 (VOTSA) [Bus. & Prof Code § 11210 et seq.], which went into effect on July 1, 2005, provides for the disclosure to purchasers and prospective purchasers of time-share plans and exchange programs by time-share developers and exchange companies. It requires specified time-share plans offered for sale in California or created and existing in California to comply with specified fee, registration, notice, and disclosure requirements, including the issuance of a public report by the California Real Estate Commissioner. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning .

§ 1.42 Schools

School District's Denial of Part-Time Employment Does Not Violate Fundamental Public Policy. A California Court of Appeal has held that Education Code § 44922, which authorizes school districts to establish programs allowing senior employees to work part time, does not create a fundamental and substantial public policy. Therefore, an employee whose request for a reduced workload under such a program has been denied may not use that denial as the basis of an action for wrongful constructive discharge in violation of public policy. See Sinatra v. Chico Unified Sch. Dist. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 701 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[3][b][i].

Zero Tolerance Policy Resulting in Expulsion Did Not Violate State Law or Due Process Rights. In T.H. v. San Diego Unif. Schl. Dist. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1267 , a school district's "zero tolerance" policy governing expulsions, which required the principal or a designee to immediately suspend and recommend for expulsion a pupil who committed specified acts at school or a school activity off school grounds, did not violate state law by eliminating the principal's statutory discretion to decide not to recommend a student for an expulsion hearing. The policy also did not violate state or federal constitutional due process rights, because it provided the required procedural protections. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Schoolteacher's Probationary Status Begins on Date of Contract, Not Date of Credential. A California Court of Appeal has held that if a teacher serving under an emergency permit accepts a new contract as a probationary teacher during the school year, the teacher's probationary status begins on execution of the new contract, even if the validity date of the teacher's credential preceded the beginning of the school year. See Fine v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 1070 , now covered in Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students .

[1] Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offers

Post Section 998 Offer Payments Properly Included in Determination of More Favorable Judgment. In Arias v. Katella Townhouse Homeowners Assn., Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 847, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 113 , an action by a condominium owner for damages and declaratory relief against the homeowners association for failure to maintain common areas resulting in damage to her unit, the trial court properly determined that the owner obtained a judgment more favorable than the Section 998 offer made by association, which the owner had refused, by including voluntary post-offer payments made by the association to the homeowner and the value of the association's agreement to make repairs in conformance with its legal obligations. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Offer to Multiple Plaintiffs to Settle for Waiver of Costs Improperly Conditional. In Menees v. Andrews (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1540 , a § 998 offer by defendant to two plaintiffs to settle the action for a waiver of costs did not confer liability for expert witness fees on the plaintiffs after they failed to prevail at trial because the offer was conditional. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Section 998 Offer Including Attorney's Provision Not Fatally Uncertain for Failure to Specify Amount. In Elite Show Services, Inc. v. Staffpro, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 263 , the defendant's failure to specify a dollar amount for attorney's fees in a settlement offer under § 998 did not render the offer so uncertain as to be unenforceable. The failure to specify a dollar amount would not have precluded the court from ascertaining with reasonable certainty the defendant's obligations under the offer had plaintiff accepted it, because applicable statutory and rule provisions set forth the procedure for determining the amount of attorney's fees to be awarded pursuant to a contractual provision. The offer was not also uncertain because the plaintiff would have been required to incur additional, nonrecoverable attorney's fees to bring a motion to have the court determine the fee amount if the parties could not reach an agreement. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

[2] Costs and Attorney's Fees

Unnamed Objector to Settlement of Putative Class Action Not Entitled to Attorney's Fees. In Consumer Cause, Inc. v. Mrs. Gooch's Natural Food Markets, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 387 , the court held that an unnamed putative objector who successfully opposed the settlement of a class action was not entitled to attorney's fees under either the equitable substantial benefit theory or as a private attorney general under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Approval of Negotiated Fee in Shareholder Derivative Action Was Abuse of Discretion. In Robbins v. Alibrandi (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 438 , the court held that in approving a negotiated settlement of a shareholder derivative action including an attorney's fee award, the trial court abused its discretion. The court used factors unsupported by the record in calculating the amount of fees, and enhanced the lodestar amount by applying multipliers for which there was scant evidentiary support; and there was very little real benefit conferred on corporation and shareholders as a result of litigation. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Small Claims Judgment May Have Collateral Estoppel Effect. A California Court of Appeal has held that collateral estoppel may apply to prevent a small-claims plaintiff from relitigating an issue that was decided in small claims court, if the small-claims record is sufficiently clear to enable a court in a subsequent action to determine that the issue was actually litigated and expressly decided against the plaintiff in the small claims action. § 1.46 Taxes

Dependent Exemption. Federal legislation has amended the Internal Revenue Code to adopt a new definition of "dependent" and to revise the rules relating to the dependent exemption in the case of divorced parents. Under the new definition, a parent who resides with a "qualifying child" for over half the year is entitled to the exemption without regard to what portion of the child's support the parent provides. See Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

Innocent Spouse Relief. Relief under Internal Revenue Code Section 6015(b) or (c) requires a tax understatement or deficiency. In Foor (Jeanine F.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-54 , relief was denied because there was no understatement when proper tax amount was reported but not paid. In Demirjian (Louise) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-22 , relief was denied because there was no deficiency when amended returns corrected an earlier understatement). However, if no understatement or deficiency exists, equitable relief may still be available under Internal Revenue Code Section 6015(f), as shown by Foor (Jeanine F.) v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 2004-54 , where relief was granted even though the taxpayer had reason to know that taxes would not be paid. See Ch. 227, Dissolution of Marriage: Tax Effects of Dissolution .

Information Practices Act. In Bates v. Franchise Tax Bd. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 367 , the court held the Franchise Tax Board is subject to the requirements and remedial provisions of the Information Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1798 et seq.], under which every state agency is required to limit the collection and retention of personal information to what is necessary to accomplish the agency's specific purpose. Damages can be recovered, in an appropriate case, for a violation of the act. Injunctive relief against violation of the act is available, and the legal prohibitions against enjoining the collection of taxes do not prevent giving effect to the act's provision for injunctive relief in an action against the FTB. See Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments, § 540.10 et seq.

Time Period for Hearing on for Reduced Assessment. In Helene Curtis, Inc. v. Los Angeles County Assessment Appeals Boards (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 29 , the court held the board remains empowered to decide the application after expiration of the two-year period. Expiration of the period does not prevent the board from acting on an application; rather, it operates as a milestone to encourage completion of the process. Accordingly, if reinstatement of a procedurally terminated application is necessary in order for the board to make a determination on the merits, the board may reinstate the application after expiration of the two-year period. See Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments, § 540.10 et seq.

§ 1.47 Torts

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Action for Childhood Sexual Abuse Against Public Entity Must Comply With Tort Claims Act. In County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1263 , the court of appeal held that an action against a public entity stemming from an act of childhood sexual abuse is subject to the provisions and time limitations of the California Tort Claims Act and must first be presented to the public entity, and if the entity rejects the claim, the plaintiff has only six months after the rejection of the claim to file an action against the entity, regardless of the longer limitations period of Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.1. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Elder Abuse Actions Governed by Two-Year Limitations Period. In Benun v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 113 , the court of appeal held that actions for the abuse of elderly or dependent adults brought under Welf. & Inst. Code § 15600 et seq. are governed by the two-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proce. § 335.1 applicable generally to actions for personal injury or wrongful death, rather than the limitations period for medical malpractice found in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5. See Ch 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.36A.

[2] Airlines and Airports

Claim Against Airline for Bad Faith Refusal to Perform Under Contract Was Preempted. In Power Stds. Lab, Inc. v. Federal Express Corp. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1039 , the court of appeal held that the plaintiff was preempted by the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 from recovering for an airline carrier's bad faith delay in paying for damage to transported goods. See Ch. 16, Airplanes and Airports, § 16.10[6].

[3] Assumption of Risk

Manufacturer of Swimming Pool Liner Not Shielded by Primary Assumption of Risk Doctrine. In Bunch v. Hoffinger Industries (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278 , the court of appeal held that the manufacturer of a swimming pool liner was not shielded from liability by the primary assumption of risk doctrine for failing to warn of the hazards of diving into a shallow pool. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics .

[4] Attorney Professional Liability

Negligent Expert Witness May Seek Indemnification From Hiring Attorney. In Forensis Group, Inc. v. Frantz, Townsend & Foldenauer (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 14 , the court of appeal held that an expert witness, sued for negligence by the clients on whose behalf the expert was hired, could seek indemnity from the clients' former law firm, which hired the expert. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

No Malpractice Action for Bad Legal Advice That Led to Commission of Felony. In Chapman v. Superior Court (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff could not pursue a legal malpractice action if the receipt of bad legal advice led to the plaintiff's commission of a felony. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

[5] Carriers

Roller Coaster Is Common Carrier. In Gomez v. Superior Court (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1125 , the California Supreme Court held that roller coasters and similar amusement park rides are common carriers and that a passenger's purpose in purchasing transportation, whether it is to get from one place to another or to travel for entertainment or sightseeing, does not determine whether the transportation provider is a common carrier under the Civil Code. See Ch. 109, Carriers .

Businesses Classified as Private Carriers Not Vicariously Liable for Torts of Independent Contractor Drivers. In Hill Brothers Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1001 , the court of appeal held that businesses that are classified as "private carriers," that is, businesses that use the highways only to transport their own products incidental to carrying on their business, are not vicariously liable for the acts of independent-contractor drivers. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][c].

Common Carrier Must Pick Up Persons or Property at Some Point and Put Them Down at Another. In City of St. Helena v. Public Utilities Commission (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 793, 802 , the court of appeal held that a Napa Valley wine train was not a common carrier because it provided a round-trip excursion, rather than picking up passengers at one location and putting them down at another location. See Ch. 109, Carriers .

[6] Conspiracy

Joint and Several Liability for Noneconomic Damages in Civil Conspiracy Action. In Kesmodel v. Rand (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1128 , the court of appeal held that the passage of Proposition 51 did not change the rule of joint and several liability for noneconomic damages in a case of civil conspiracy. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

[7] Conversion

Prejudgment Interest Awarded for Period After Recovery of Converted Goods. In Irving Nelkin & Co. v. South Beverly Hills Wilshire Jewelry & Loan (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 692 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff regains possession of converted goods prior to adjudication of the right to possession of those goods, either through a writ of possession under Code Civ. Proc. § 512.010 et seq. or otherwise, the plaintiff's right to prejudgment interest continues beyond the point at which the plaintiff regained possession and extends to the entry of judgment. See Ch. 150, Conversion, § 150.16[2][b].

[8] Damages

State to Receive Share of Punitive Damages Awards Until 2006. In new Civil Code § 3294.5, the legislature, to meet pressing budgetary needs, has provided that only 25 percent of any punitive damages award must be paid to the plaintiff in a civil action, with the other 75 percent paid to the state treasury and made available for annual budget appropriation by the state, with a share of that amount going to pay the plaintiff's attorney. However, this statute only applies to actions that are filed after August 16, 2004, and that are finally adjudicated, including any appeals, prior to July 1, 2006, unless a later-enacted statute extends or deletes the 2006 repeal date. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Supreme Court Clarifies Proper Considerations in Awarding Punitive Damages. In Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1159 , the California Supreme Court held that although the wealth of a defendant alone cannot justify a high punitive damages award and cannot substitute for tailoring the award to the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct or to the amount of compensatory damages, the state has a legitimate interest in deterring future misconduct and may still allow juries to consider the wealth of the defendant in awarding punitive damages. In addition, the Court concluded that it may be appropriate in some rare circumstances to proportion punitive damages to some measure of harm other than the actual amount of compensatory damages awarded, such as uncompensated harm or potential damages that were not--but could have been--inflicted, if these potential damages are a truer measure of the risk created by the defendant's conduct. However, the use of potential harm as a measure must be limited to potential harm that was actually intended by the defendant or was reasonably likely to occur from the defendant's conduct. In the companion case of Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 1191 , the California Supreme Court held that the state may, to further its legitimate goal in deterring future misconduct through an award of punitive damages, consider whether the type of misconduct perpetrated against the particular plaintiff was an isolated event or was but one instance in a pattern of similar misconduct in determining the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct, which in turn will necessarily affect the amount of punitive damages awarded. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Punitive Damages Award Against Tobacco Company Reduced to $50 Million. In Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640 , the court of appeal reduced a punitive damages award against a tobacco company from $100 million to $50 million on a compensatory damage award of $5.5 million, concluding that a 9-to-1 ratio was warranted given the extreme reprehensibility of the company's long-standing conduct in adding substances to its cigarettes to increase their addictiveness, gaining smokers by fraud and through its long denial of the dangers of smoking, and marketing a product that was more dangerous than consumers expected. In addition, the court held that in a fraud action, communication and reliance may be shown by evidence that the plaintiff was influenced by widespread advertising targeted at a group of which the plaintiff was a member, even if the plaintiff cannot specify that any particular advertisement or statement was made directly to him or her or that the plaintiff relied on any one advertisement. See Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit § 269.15[2] ,.

Evidence Plaintiff Paid for Own Medical Expenses Admissible to Prove Damages. In Smalley v. Baty (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 977 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff has paid for past medical services out of his or her own pocket, evidence of this payment is admissible to prove damages. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Shareholder Not Entitled to Recover for Lost Future Corporate Profits. In Sole Energy Co. v. Petrominerals Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 212 , the court of appeal held that a corporate shareholder does not have an ownership interest in corporate profits and cannot recover individually for lost future profits suffered by the corporation. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Punitive Damages Upheld Against Ex Post Facto Challenge. In Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1155 , the court of appeal held that because an award of punitive damages in a civil claim does not constitute a criminal punishment, a statute reviving the limitations period for a common law tort cause of action, thus allowing a plaintiff to seek punitive damages after the time for filing the action had originally expired, does not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Hospital Emergency Lien Limited to Amount Owed by Plaintiff to Hospital. In Parnell v. Adventist Health System/West (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 595 , the California Supreme Court held that a hospital's lien rights against a patient's recovery from a third-party tortfeasor under Civ. Code § 3045.1 do not extend to the difference between the amount the hospital agreed to receive from that plaintiff under a managed care contract and the full-rate amount that the hospital would have charged to a patient not covered by the managed care contract, although the Court noted that hospitals are free to negotiate with patients the right to assert that greater lien amount in those managed care contracts. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

Fraud Accompanying Breach of Contract Supports Award of Tort Damages. In Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp., (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979 , the California Supreme Court held that a helicopter manufacturer could recover tort damages, including punitive damages, from a parts manufacturer that provided vital parts, knowing that they were not in conformity with manufacturing specifications as detailed in the contract between the parties. The Court concluded that the parts manufacturer committed the intentional tort of fraud when it provided certificates of compliance with the parts, even though it knew that the parts were not in compliance, and the helicopter manufacturer relied on these affirmative misrepresentations to its detriment when accepting the nonconforming parts. See Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

Nine to One Ratio of Punitive Damages to Compensatory Damages Approved. In Bardis v. Oates (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal reduced a punitive damages award from $7 million to $1.5 million, concluding that a punitive damages to compensatory damages ratio of just over 9 to 1 was justified because the defendant's conduct was highly reprehensible and the amount of compensatory damages did not fully reflect the outrageousness of the conduct. See Ch. 177, Damages .

Child's Mental Disability Does Not Preclude Loss of Companionship Damages in Wrongful Death Action. In Knowles v. Superior Court (2004)118 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , the court of appeal held that mental retardation does not necessarily render a child less able to suffer loss of companionship damages, as the plaintiff in a wrongful death action, than a child with no such mental disability. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[9] Death and Survival Actions

Bankruptcy Court Adjudication Given Collateral Estoppel Effect in Subsequent Wrongful Death Action. In Roos v. Red (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 870, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 446 , the court of appeal held that the doctrine of collateral estoppel may be used to prevent a wrongful death defendant from relitigating the issue of liability, if a bankruptcy court, in determining whether a wrongful death judgment would be dischargeable in bankruptcy, had already adjudicated the issue and concluded that the defendant's conduct in causing the deaths was intentional. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

Terminated Parent-Child Relationship Severs Right of Child to Sue for Wrongful Death of Parent. In Jackson v. Fitzgibbons (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 329 , the court of appeal held that if a court order finally and conclusively terminates the relationship between a birth parent and his or her child, that child loses standing to sue for the wrongful death of that parent, regardless of whether the child has been adopted by another at the time of the death of the birth parent. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

Child's Mental Disability Does Not Preclude Loss of Companionship Damages in Wrongful Death Action. In Knowles v. Superior Court (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , the court of appeal held that mental retardation does not necessarily render a child less able to suffer loss of companionship damages, as the plaintiff in a wrongful death action, than a child with no such mental disability. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

[10] Emergency Vehicles

Liability for Costs of Emergency Response Expanded. In new Government Code § 53159 and amended Government Code § 53155, any person who intentionally, knowingly, and willfully enters into any area that is closed or has been closed to the public is liable for the expenses of an emergency response required to search for or rescue that person, or if the person was operating a vehicle, any of his or her passengers, plus the expenses for the removal of any inoperable vehicle. Also, a person who drives a vehicle on a public street or highway that is temporarily covered by a rise in water level and that is barricaded is liable for the expenses of any emergency response required to remove the driver, any passenger in an inoperable vehicle, or the vehicle itself. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles .

[11] Employer Liability

Commercial Traveler Rule Not Applicable to Respondeat Superior Case. In Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal refused to apply the "commercial traveler rule," under which a workers' compensation claimant can be acting in the course and scope of employment during the entire period of travel on an employer's business, to a respondeat superior case. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[3].

Action Against Employer for Employee's Torts Must Name Employer as Defendant Within Limitations Period. In Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff seeking to hold an employer liable for the torts of an employee must name the employer as a defendant prior to the running of the applicable statute of limitations, even if the claim against the employee is not barred by limitations. The court also held that if the employee's debts have been discharged by bankruptcy, shielding the employee from suit, and the plaintiff neglected to name the employer as a defendant prior to expiration of the statute of limitations, the plaintiff may not pursue the action against the employee in order to obtain a judgment that might be enforced against the employer. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.19[1].

Vicarious Liability Requires Causal Connection Between Negligence and Injury. In Dixon v. City of Livermore (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 32 , the court of appeal held that an employer could not be vicariously liable for the negligence of an employee if there was no causal connection between that negligence and the plaintiff's injuries. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.14.

[12] False Imprisonment

Civil Code § 47(b)* Inapplicable to Act of Making Citizen's Arrest. In Kesmodel v. Rand (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1128 , the court of appeal held that the absolute privilege of Civil Code § 47(b) does not apply to the act of making a citizen's arrest, which is affirmative conduct that constitutes more than the communicative act of reporting potential criminal activity to the police. See Ch. 257, False Imprisonment .

Decision Not to Prosecute Does Not Vitiate Probable Cause to Arrest. In Johnson v. Lewis (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 443 , the court of appeal held that a subsequent decision not to prosecute made by prosecutors does not vitiate probable cause to arrest for purposes of a subsequent action for false imprisonment. See Ch. 257, False Imprisonment .

[13] Fraud and Deceit

Punitive Damages Award Against Tobacco Company Reduced to $50 Million. In Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1640 , the court of appeal reduced a punitive damages award against a tobacco company from $100 million to $50 million on a compensatory damage award of $5.5 million, concluding that a 9-to-1 ratio was warranted given the extreme reprehensibility of the company's longstanding conduct in adding substances to its cigarettes to increase their addictiveness, gaining smokers by fraud and through its long denial of the dangers of smoking, and marketing a product that was more dangerous than consumers expected. In addition, the court held that in a fraud action, communication and reliance may be shown by evidence that the plaintiff was influenced by widespread advertising targeted at a group of which the plaintiff was a member, even if the plaintiff cannot specify that any particular advertisement or statement was made directly to him or her or that the plaintiff relied on any one advertisement. See Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , § 269.15[2].

[14] Invasion of Privacy

No Invasion of Privacy Claim for Publication of Truthful Information Contained in Public Court Records. In Gates v. Discovery Communications, Inc. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 679 , the California Supreme Court overruled an earlier holding and held that the publication of truthful information that is part of a public criminal court record is constitutionally protected regardless of any claim that the information is not newsworthy. The Court also held that the passage of time did not lessen this constitutional protection. See Ch. 429, Privacy ,

[15] Libel and Slander

Judicial Privilege Waived By Contractual Agreement Not to Make Public Comments. In Wentland v. Wass (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1484 , the court of appeal held that the judicial privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) did not apply in a case seeking liquidated damages following a breach of a contract in which the defendants had agreed not to make public comments accusing the plaintiff of wrongdoing in connection with his role as managing partner of a business venture. The court concluded that in contractually agreeing not to make such public statements, the defendants had waived the protection of the litigation privilege. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander .

Pre-Litigation Demand Letters Sent to Multiple Potential Defendants Covered by Judicial Privilege. In Blanchard v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 903 , the court of appeal held that when pre-litigation demand letters are sent to a large number of potential defendants, a plaintiff need not actually file suit against every defendant to be entitled to the protection of the judicial privilege as to all of the demand letters. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander .

[16] Malicious Prosecution

Unsuccessful Petition for Injunction Against Harassment Not Grounds for Malicious Prosecution Action. In Siam v. Kizilbash (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1563 , the court of appeal held that an unsuccessful petition for an injunction prohibiting harassment under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 is not a proper basis for a subsequent malicious prosecution action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process .

Default Judgment Will Not Support Malicious Prosecution Action. In Bergman v. Drum (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 11 , the court of appeal held that a default judgment in the underlying action does not establish probable cause for bringing a malicious prosecution action because the trial court does not have the benefit of the presentation of evidence on the merits by both sides in the underlying lawsuit. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process .

Dismissal for Lack of Standing Not Favorable Termination for Subsequent Malicious Prosecution Action. In Hudis v. Crawford (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1586 , the court of appeal held that a dismissal due to a lack of standing, which is a jurisdictional defect, does not constitute a favorable termination reflecting on the merits of the action for purposes of a subsequent malicious prosecution action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.10 et seq.

[17] Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

Unrelated Plaintiff Cannot Recover Under Bystander Theory for Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress. In Rodriguez v. Kirchhoefel (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 427 , the court of appeal held that, in an action to recover for negligent infliction of emotional distress, a bystander who is not actually related to the injured person, such as by blood or marriage, cannot recover regardless of how close the relationship between the persons may be. See Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress .

Supreme Court Clarifies Foreseeability Required to Impose Premises Liability on Businesses for Third-Party Criminal Conduct. In Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 224 , the California Supreme Court clarified that the degree of foreseeability needed to impose a particular duty to prevent harm caused by a third party varies, depending on the burden of imposing the preventative measures suggested by the plaintiff in the particular case. A heightened degree of foreseeability, which may include evidence of prior similar incidents, is necessary to impose a duty on a defendant to take great or onerous preventative security measures. A lesser degree of foreseeability is all that is required if the plaintiff seeks to impose a duty to take preventative measures that are simple or create only a minimal burden on the defendant. See Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability , § 421.15[2][a].

Store Employees May Have Duty to Call Police During Ongoing Criminal Conduct. In Morris v. De La Torre (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 260 , the California Supreme Court held that to protect invitees, including customers and potential customers, from criminal conduct as it is occurring, store or restaurant employees may have a duty to take minimally burdensome measures, such as issuing a warning or calling 911, if those measures can be undertaken without increasing the risk of harm to the employees. See Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability , § 421.15[4].

Fraud Accompanying Breach of Contract Supports Award of Tort Damages. In Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp., (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979 , the California Supreme Court held that a helicopter manufacturer could recover tort damages, including punitive damages, from a parts manufacturer that provided vital parts, knowing that they were not in conformity with manufacturing specifications as detailed in the contract between the parties. The Court concluded that the parts manufacturer committed the intentional tort of fraud when it provided certificates of compliance with the parts, even though it knew that the parts were not in compliance, and the helicopter manufacturer relied on these affirmative misrepresentations to its detriment when accepting the nonconforming parts. See Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

Violation of Cal-OSHA Rules May Be Used to Establish Presumption of Negligence. In Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915 , the California Supreme Court held that, subsequent to an amendment to Labor Code Section 6304.5, a plaintiff may now introduce evidence of a violation of Cal-OSHA statutes and regulations to establish a presumption of negligence under Evid. Code § 669, so long as the plaintiff is not an employee of the defendant. See Ch. 244, Elevators and Escalators .

Manufacturer of Swimming Pool Liner Not Shielded by Primary Assumption of Risk Doctrine. In Bunch v. Hoffinger Industries (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278 , the court of appeal held that the manufacturer of a swimming pool liner was not shielded from liability by the primary assumption of risk doctrine for failing to warn of the hazards of diving into a shallow pool. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics .

Communication of Threatened Harm Made to Psychotherapist by Patient's Family Member Can Trigger Duty to Warn. In Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 807 , the court of appeal held that although Civil Code § 43.92 states that a communication of threatened harm to another person made to a psychotherapist must come from the patient to trigger a duty to warn, the duty to warn is also triggered under the statute if the threat of harm is communicated to the psychotherapist by a member of the patient's immediate family for the purpose of facilitating and furthering the patient's treatment. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.110 et seq., and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.30 et seq.

[19] Premises Liability

Supreme Court Clarifies Foreseeability Required to Impose Premises Liability on Businesses for Third-Party Criminal Conduct. In Delgado v. Trax Bar & Grill (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 224 , the California Supreme Court clarified that the degree of foreseeability needed to impose a particular duty to prevent harm caused by a third party varies, depending on the burden of imposing the preventative measures suggested by the plaintiff in the particular case. A heightened degree of foreseeability, which may include evidence of prior similar incidents, is necessary to impose a duty on a defendant to take great or onerous preventative security measures. A lesser degree of foreseeability is all that is required if the plaintiff seeks to impose a duty to take preventative measures that are simple or create only a minimal burden on the defendant. See Ch. 380, Negligence , and Ch. 421, Premises Liability , § 421.15[2][a].

Store and Security Guard Not Liable for Failing to Take Further Response to Vague Suspicions Reported by Plaintiff. In Roe v. McDonald's Corp. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1107 , the court of appeal held that the defendants could not be liable for the sexual assault of the plaintiff, who had previously reported to a clerk at a fast-food restaurant, and to a mall security guard who was standing in line with her, that a man outside the restaurant had been eying her and making suggestive facial expressions. Because the man was not to be seen when the guard and a store employee looked for him, the court concluded that in the absence of a more definite threat beyond the plaintiff's vague suspicions, the defendants could not have foreseen the sexual assault and were under no duty to take further steps to protect the plaintiff under the circumstances. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[2][d].

Ordinance Imposing Duty on Landowners to Maintain Adjacent Sidewalks Upheld. In Gonzales v. City of San Jose (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1127 , the court of appeal held that a charter city, through a valid exercise of its police powers, may pass an ordinance that imposes a duty on landowners to keep adjacent public sidewalks in a safe condition, and may impose liability on the property owner for injuries that occur to a pedestrian if the landowner fails to do so. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.12[7].

Landowner Not Liable for Injury Caused to Employee of Tenant by Tenant's Work Conditions. In Laico v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 649 , the court of appeal held that a petroleum company could not be held liable for an injury sustained by an employee of a business that leased property owned by the petroleum company, when the injury was caused by work conditions created by the tenant. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability .

[20] Trespass

Under Civ. Code § 3334(b), "Benefits" Not Obtained Absent Financial or Business Advantage. In Watson Land Co. v. Shell Oil Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 69 , the court of appeal held that in a trespass action, for purposes of determining the benefits obtained by the person wrongfully occupying the property under Civ. Code § 3334(b), "benefits" are not obtained unless the trespass provided the trespasser with a financial or business advantage. Therefore, the avoidance of remediation costs by a trespasser who dumps some material on the property cannot be recovered as a "benefit obtained" by the trespasser, although the remediation costs themselves can be recovered under Civ. Code § 3334(a), which allows recovery for the reasonable cost of repair or restoration. See Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.21[1].

Predispute Contractual Waiver Is Unenforceable as Jury Trial Waiver. In Grafton Partners v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 944 , the California Supreme Court overruled Trizec Properties, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1616 , and held that a predispute waiver of a jury trial is not authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 631 and that only waivers authorized by § 631 are consistent with article I, section 16 of the California Constitution. Thus, a predispute contractual waiver of a jury trial cannot waive a jury trial. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

Implied Assertions Are Hearsay. In People v. Morgan (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 935 , the Court of Appeal held that implied assertions are hearsay, but that case law, recognized and accepted when the Evidence Code was adopted and continuing thereafter, has created an exception to the hearsay rule for this reliable type of evidence. In this case, while executing a search warrant for evidence of possession of a controlled substance for sale, an officer answered the phone and heard the caller ask to buy drugs. The caller's statements, some of which were in response to the officer's questions, were hearsay, but admissible under a judicially created exception to the hearsay rule. See Ch. 551, Trial .

Right to Jury Trial on Fraudulent Conveyance. In Wisden v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 750 , the California Court of Appeal held that plaintiff was entitled to a jury trial on a claim of fraudulent conveyance because the right to jury trial existed at English common law in an action to recover an alleged fraudulent conveyance of a determinate sum of money, and there was no evidence that any change in English common law occurred between 1791 and 1850. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.13[1][a].

Witness Unavailability. In People v. Winslow (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 464 , the trial court did not err in determining that the teenage victim, who suffered from cerebral palsy and learning deficiencies, was unavailable to testify at trial because of mental illness or infirmity and because he was unable to testify without suffering substantial trauma. The victim suffered from post-traumatic stress syndrome manifesting in recurrent flashbacks of the incident, among other symptoms, and involving severe stress syndromes that were persistent and could be disabling, and his physician opined that for him to testify at trial would be damaging to his emotional state at the current time. See Ch. 551, Trial, § 551.72.

Admission of Statement as Spontaneous Declaration Was Prejudicial Error. In People v. Pirwani (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 770 , a prosecution based on the defendant's alleged theft of money from a resident of a residential, intermediate-care facility for physically dependent adults at which the defendant worked, the trial court erred in admitting a statement by the resident to a social worker about her dealings with the defendant as a spontaneous declaration. Although at time she first telephoned the social worker, the resident was tearful and evidently quite shaken by news she was about to be evicted from the care facility for non-payment of rent, two days elapsed before the substantive discussion between the two women. Further, the two-day lapse was apparently punctuated by a visit to a police station, so that the resident patently had the chance to return to a calmer mental state. The cumulative effect of errors in admitting this statement and statements by the resident to police accusing the defendant of theft was prejudicial to the defendant and required reversal. See Ch. 551, Trial .

§ 1.49 Trusts

Revocation of Trust. In Gardenhire v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 882 , the court held that when a trust expressly permits revocation during the settlor's lifetime by written notice signed by the settlor and delivered to the trustee, and the settlor does not limit or qualify the term "written notice," the settlor is deemed to have authorized revocation by any writing that unambiguously manifests his or her intention to revoke the trust, including a will. § 1.50 Unfair Competition

Nonrestitutionary Disgorgement Into Fluid Recovery Fund Not Permitted in Unfair Competition Class Action. In Madrid v. Perot Sys. Corp. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 440 , the court of appeal held that in a class action suit brought under the unfair competition statute, disgorgement into a fluid recovery fund is limited to disgorgement of restitutionary funds and does not extend to amounts that are not restitutionary in nature. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Requirements for Proving Fraudulent Business Practice Under Unfair Competition Statute Clarified. In Blakemore v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 36 , the court of appeal held that in an action brought under the unfair competition statute, proving a fraudulent or deceptive business practice only requires a showing that members of the public are likely to be deceived, and unlike common law fraud, does not require allegations of actual deception, reasonable reliance, and damage. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Interference With Contract Claim May Be Asserted Against Owner, Officer, or Director of Contracting Company. In Woods v. Fox Broadcasting Sub., Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 344 , the court of appeal held that a claim for interference with contract may be brought against an owner, officer, or director of a company whose contract was the subject of the litigation, although such defendants may defend on the grounds that their conduct was privileged or justified. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Gun Manufacturers and Dealers Not Liable Under Unfair Competition Statute for Actions of Gun Dealers and Users. In In re Firearm Cases (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 959 , the court of appeal held that gun manufacturers and distributors, acting legally, could not be liable under the unfair competition statute for harm caused by gun dealers and users. Although the defendants' conduct may have created a risk of harm, the plaintiffs were required, but failed, to provide evidence of a causal connection between the defendants' business practices and the alleged harm (evidence that the defendants' conduct caused or was likely to cause substantial injury). See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Restitution Under Unfair Competition Statute Measured by Amount Defendant Received. In Inline, Inc. v. Apace Moving Systems, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 895 , the court of appeal held that because a plaintiff is not entitled to damages under the unfair competition statute, the proper measure of restitution is the amount received by the defendant as a result of the improper conduct, even if the amount of monetary damage suffered by the plaintiff as a consequence of the conduct is greater. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

Prevailing Cartwright Act Defendant Not Entitled to Recover Attorney's Fees Even Under Contractual Provision. In Carver v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 498 , the court of appeal held that a prevailing defendant in an action under the Cartwright Act cannot recover attorney's fees even under a contractual attorney fee provision, if the legal work that was performed to defend against the claims under the Cartwright Act overlapped with work to defend against other claims that would otherwise be covered by the contractual provision. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

§ 1.51 Workers' Compensation

Independent Medical Review. The Administrative Director has promulgated the final versions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9768.1-9768.17, regarding the independent medical review process that is triggered by an injured employee's disagreement with a third opinion by a physician in a medical provider network. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][d][v].

Permanent Disability--Description--Rating--Apportionment. The Administrative Director has promulgated the final versions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9725-9727, 9785, 9805, and 10150-10165.5, regarding aspects of permanent disability, including its description, rating, and apportionment. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[4][a] -[d].

Supplemental Job Displacement Benefit. The Administrative Director has promulgated the final versions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10133.50-10133.60, regarding supplemental job displacement benefits. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[2A][a] -[f].

Employer Denial of Claims-- Time to Deny. The Supreme Court in Honeywell v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24 , has rejected the proposition that the 90-day period during which the employer's rejection of liability will avoid the presumption of compensability of the employee's injury begins to run when the employer receives knowledge of an injury or asserted injury, even though no claim form has been filed. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.43[4][c].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment--Retroactive Application of SB 899. The court of appeal in Kleemann v. W.C.A.B. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 274 , has held that there was no "existing order, decision, or award" in the case before it, within the meaning of Section 47 of SB 899, and that the Legislature intended Section 47's language that SB 899 "shall not constitute good cause to reopen or rescind, alter, or amend any existing order, decision, or award" to be consistent with the general rule that statutory rights end during litigation with repeal or amendment of the statute unless appeals were exhausted and a final judgment existed. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Civil Actions--Employment Relationship--Independent Contractors--Exemptions. The court of appeal in Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1515 , has held that the exemption from the contractor's license requirement contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7049 for construction or maintenance work incidental to "clearing or other work upon the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes" meant that the trial court erred in ruling that the defendant was an employee as a matter of law pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[3][c].

Penalties--Delay in Payment of Benefits--Retroactive Application of SB 899. The court of appeal in Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 , has held that new Lab. Code § 5814, as enacted by SB 899, and which became operative on June 1, 2004, applies to all injuries in cases pending on that date. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][a].

Penalties--Delay in Payment of Benefits--Multiple Penalties. The court of appeal in Green v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 , has held that agreed medical evaluator opinions and a stipulation may each result in liability under new Lab. Code § 5814 and may each qualify as a separate, legally significant event, and that the legislature did not eliminate multiple increases in compensation for conduct occurring either before or after an award, as long as the events are "separate and distinct." See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][d].

Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund--Identity of Employer. The court of appeal in Rea v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 625 , has held that the UEBTF may not be joined in any proceedings unless a legal person or entity has been identified as an illegally uninsured employer in an application and special notice of lawsuit and that employer has been served with the application and special notice of lawsuit in the manner provided for service of summons in the Code of Civil Procedure. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.13[4][b].

Exclusive Remedy--Petition for Writ of Mandate. The court of appeal in Veguez v. Governing Board of the Long Beach Unified School District (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 406 , has held that an employee's petition for writ of mandate, seeking differential pay and reinstatement under Ed. Code §§ 44977 and 44987.1, not tort damages for a work-related injury, was not preempted by the exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation law. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.313[4].

Permanent Disability--Rating. The Administrative Director has promulgated emergency regulations 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10150, 10151 (repealed), 10152, 10154 (repealed), 10158, 10160, 10165.5, effective 1/1/2005, which have been approved by the OAL, regarding aspects of permanent disability, including its rating via a new schedule. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.14[5], 577.45[4][a], [b], [d][iii], 577.46[3][e], 577.421[2], 577.422[3].

Utilization Review Standards. The Administrative Director has promulgated emergency regulations 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.6-9792.11, effective 12/13/2004, regarding standards for utilization review of requests for medical treatment services. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][c].

Cal-OSHA Regulations-- Admissibility. The California Supreme Court, in Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915 , has held that Lab. Code § 6304.5, as amended effective January 1, 2000, allows plaintiffs to use Cal-OSHA provisions to show duty or standard of care to the same extent as any other regulation or statute, whether the defendant is the plaintiff's employer or a third party. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.320[2].

Preprinted Workers' Compensation Release Form Settles Only Claims Within Scope of Workers' Compensation System. The California Supreme Court has held that the standard language of the mandatory preprinted form used in settling workers' compensation claims [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10874] releases only those claims that are within the scope of the workers' compensation system, and extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show that the parties intended the preprinted release form to encompass any other claims. See Claxton v. Waters (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 367 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.35[1][a], 115.54[8], 115.106[2].

§ 1.60 Adoptions

Presumed Father's Consent to Adoption. Family Code § 8604(a) has been amended to provide that a presumed father's consent is not required for a child's adoption unless he became a presumed father under Fam. Code §§ 7540-7541, 7570-7577, or 7611(a)-(c) before the mother's consent became irrevocable or before her parental rights were terminated. See Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.15[3].

Abandonment of Child. In In re Amy A. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 63 , the court held that the fact that a parent has not communicated with a child or that the parent intended to abandon the child does not become material unless the parent has "left" the child within the meaning of Fam. Code § 7822. A parent leaves a child by voluntarily surrendering the child to another person's care and custody; actual desertion is not required for a finding of abandonment. See Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.68[1].

Standing to File Petition for Independent Adoption. In In re Michael R. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 126 , the court held that persons not designated in Fam. Code § 8802(a) lack standing to file a petition for an independent adoption. Thus, for example, a long-term caretaker may proceed with adoption only after obtaining guardianship of the child. See Ch. 12B, Adoptions: Unmarried Minors, § 12B.110[1].

Compliance With Indian Child Welfare Act. In In re X.V. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 794 , the court held that if a trial court has reason to know that the proceedings involve an Indian child, it has a duty to give the notice required by the Indian Child Welfare Act or to ensure the social services agency's compliance with the notice requirements. This duty is sua sponte, because notice is intended to protect the interests of Indian children and tribes despite the parents' inaction. Several other recent appellate decisions have also emphasized the importance of strict compliance with the notice requirements of the Act. See Ch. 12B, Adoptions: Unmarried Minors, § 12B.270.

§ 1.61 Alternative Dispute Resolution

[1] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Private Arbitration-- Code Civ Proc § 998 Applies to Uninsured Motorist Arbitration. Uninsured motorist arbitration conducted pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2, is a form of contractual arbitration governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., and thus is an arbitration within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 [Pilimai v. Farmers Ins. Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133] . When the insured's Section 998 offer is not accepted and an arbitration award for a larger amount is granted, the maximum liability provision of Ins. Code § 11580.2(p)(4) does not preclude the successful insured's recovery of costs under Code Civ. Proc § 998 even if those costs, when added to the award, exceed the coverage limits [Pilimai v. Farmers Ins. Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.92[3][c]; Ch. 33, Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.29[2].

Private Arbitration--No Immunity for Breach of Contract. Neither the arbitrator nor his or her sponsoring organization has immunity from breach of contract actions for the arbitrator's withdrawal, for no stated reason, after hearing all the evidence and thereafter failing and refusing to render an award [Morgan Phillips, Inc. v. JAMS/Endispute, L.L.C. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 795] . See Ch. 33, Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.30.

Private Mediation--No Exception for Fraud Challenge. When a mediated settlement agreement is attacked as having been obtained by fraud, duress, or undue influence, there is no exception to the mediation confidentiality privilege. The party seeking to have the mediation settlement agreement set aside bears the burden of proof, which he or she likely cannot meet without waiving the mediation privilege [In re Marriage of Kieturakis (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 56] . See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13[4].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator, Not Court, Decides Scope of Arbitrable Issues Under Rules Chosen by Parties. When the contract calls for arbitration in accordance with the American Arbitration Association Rules, which specify the arbitrator is to determine his or her own jurisdiction, including any objections with respect to the existence, scope, or validity of the arbitration agreement, the arbitrator, not the court, determines which issues are arbitrable [see Rodriguez

v. American Technologies, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1123] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c][ii].

Private Arbitration--Parties Chose Federal Arbitration Act, Including Procedural Provisions, to Govern Arbitration. The Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.), unlike Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c), gives a court no option but to compel arbitration when a party to the arbitration agreement is also a party to a pending court action with a third party, and there is a possibility of conflicting rulings on a common issue of laws or fact. Under a contract that contains no explicit choice of law provision but a broad and unconditional provision calling for the parties to arbitrate "in conformance with" and "in agreement with" the FAA, the parties will be deemed to have adopted all of the FAA, including its procedural provisions; and a California court will have no authority to exercise its discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c), but must order arbitration even in the face of possible conflicting rulings [see Rodriguez v. American Technologies, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1122] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.43[8][g][ii].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator, Not Court, Decides Challenge Based on Illegality of Underlying Contract. Pursuant to 9 U.S.C. § 2 and Buckeye Check Cashing, Inc. v Cardegna (2006) 163 L. Ed. 2d 1038 , under the Federal Arbitration Act, when the challenge is to the validity of the contract as a whole, not just the arbitration clause, the issue of the illegality of that contract is to be determined by the arbitrator. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c][ii].

Private Arbitration--Two More Unconscionable Class Arbitration Waivers. In Klussman v. Cross Country Bank (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1283 and Aral v. Earthlink, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 544 , after choice of law analysis, which found California had a more compelling interest in resolution of the statutory claims asserted than the states whose law was specified as applicable by the contracts at issue, two court of appeal cases refused to enforce class arbitration waivers. Both involved relatively small individual losses, causes of action under California consumer protection statutes, and attempts to represent classes consisting of only California residents. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.32.

Private Arbitration--Statement as Settlement Conference as Basis for Agreement to Binding Arbitration. An agreement to arbitrate and the resultant award can be confirmed on the basis of estoppel. One party was estopped to deny the promise of its apparent agent, made at a settlement conference, to pay the full amount of a binding arbitration award [CalFarm Ins. Co. v. Krusiewicz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 273] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][b].

Private Arbitration--Nonsignatory Agent Is Entitled to Enforce Arbitration Agreement. One of the better-known exceptions to the rule that only parties to an arbitration agreement can enforce it is the doctrine that allows an agent of a signatory to compel arbitration under an agreement which it did not sign [Westra v. Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Inv. Brokerage Co., Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 759] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[5][c].

Private Arbitration--Unwaivable Statutory Rights. Claims under the California Franchise Investment Law (Corp. Code § 31000 et seq.), the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.), the Uniform Trade Secrets Act (Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.), and the Unfair Competition Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.) have been added to the list of those that make up the so-called Armendariz criteria [Indep. Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (Mail Boxes Etc., USA, Inc.) (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 396] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.22[2][b], [3].

Private Arbitration--Effect of Clause Prohibiting Consolidation. Like a clause prohibiting classwide arbitration, a clause prohibiting consolidation of arbitrations may be unconscionable, and thus, void and unenforceable. The determination of unconscionability is for the court to make, and it most assuredly should not be made by an arbitration service provider as an administrative proceeding without at least referring the matter to an arbitrator [Indep. Ass'n of Mailbox Ctr. Owners, Inc. v. Superior Court (Mail Boxes Etc., USA, Inc.) (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 396] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 33.21[1][e].

Private Arbitration--Uninsured Motorist Arbitration. The January 1, 2004, amendment to Ins Code § 11580.2(i)(1) (requiring an insured to commence litigation against the uninsured motorist, settle the claim, or demand arbitration within one year of the accident in order to preserve his or her claim against the insurer) was not retroactive. Thus, insureds who were injured by an uninsured motorist on June 16, 2002, lost any cause of action against their insurer by failing to demand arbitration and by not filing suit against the uninsured motorist until June 19, 2004 [Bullard v. Cal. State Auto. Ass'n (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 211] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.92.

[2] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Private Arbitration--Court Has No Authority to Appoint Successor Arbitrator When Delays in Completion of Arbitration Are Not Fault of First Arbitrator. Under Bosworth v. Whitmore (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 536 , the court ruled that although a trial court has authority to set a completion date within which the arbitrator must render his or her award, and although an arbitrator may be removed for failure to act, when the delays in concluding the arbitration are not chargeable to the arbitrator, but to the parties and/or the arbitration administrator, there is no failure to act within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.6; and a court has no authority to remove that arbitrator and appoint a successor. When a court removes an arbitrator and appoints a successor without authority, any award made by the successor is void. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.13[1][b].

[3] Judicial Review

Private Arbitration-- Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) Requiring Award To Be Vacated, Is Not Preempted by Federal Arbitration Act. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830 held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A), which governs vacation of arbitration awards under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), applies only in federal courts, and it is not inconsistent with the purpose of the FAA, as it does not undermine the enforceability of arbitration agreements but merely requires the vacating of an award if the arbitrator failed timely to disclose a ground for disqualification of which he or she was aware. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][d][i].

Private Arbitration--Award Must Be Vacated for Arbitrator's Failure to Disclose Appointment as Arbitrator in Second Arbitration During Pendency of First Arbitration. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A); Cal Rules of Ct, Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(c), (d)(4)(A)(i), 12(b), (c) and Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830 , an arbitrator who does not disclose an intent to entertain additional offers from the parties or their lawyers, and despite the prohibition of Standard 12(c), accepts such an offer, must disclose that fact to the parties in writing within 10 calendar days. If an arbitrator who has not disclosed his or her intention to accept employment from a party of lawyer for a party accepts employment as a dispute resolution neutral from a party or lawyer while the arbitration is pending and fails to disclose that fact, any award rendered by that arbitrator must be vacated. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][d][iii].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Cannot Require Employee to Pay Costs and Fees of Arbitration When Statutory Rights Are at Issue. The Armendariz criteria are applicable whenever an employee or former employee seeks to vindicate an unwaivable statutory right. Thus, an arbitrator cannot render an award that requires the employee to pay any portion of the fees and expenses of arbitration. The proper remedy is to correct the award, by amending it to require employer to pay all arbitral costs and fees, not to vacate it [Jones v. Humanscale Corp. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.29[1]; Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.20[1].

Private Arbitration--Cost Award for Prevailing Party in Arbitration-Related Judicial Proceeding Is Mandatory. The court must award costs as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2, in any judicial proceeding connected with arbitration, including petitions to confirm and to vacate awards. The award of costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 is mandatory, and the court's determination under Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 of which party, if either, is the prevailing party in a post-arbitration judicial proceeding is a judicial function distinct from the arbitrator's decision to award or not to award fees in the arbitration itself [Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Inv. Brokerage Co. v. Woodman Inv. Group, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 508] . See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, §§ 34.18[2], [3], 34.58.

Judicial Mediation--Settlement Agreement Admissible. Under Stewart v Preston Pipeline, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565 , a settlement agreement can comply with Evid. Code § 1123, and thus be admissible, even if it is not signed by all parties. Signature by counsel is enough because waiver of confidentiality is a procedural matter. See Ch 31, Mediation, § 31.14[1].

Judicial Mediation--Rules Applicable to Court-Connected Mediators. Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation, had been revised to a discussion of the rules of conduct for mediators on court panels [Cal. Rules of Ct, Rules 1620-1620.9] and the rules relating to complaint procedures against them [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1620.1, 1622-1622.3]. Neither set of rules are intended to create a cause of action against a mediator who does not perform in accordance with Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 1620-1620.9. See Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation, §§ 37.34, 37.35.

[5] Reference

Judicial Reference--New Judicial Council Forms. New Judicial Council Forms ADR-109, 110, and 111, Stipulation or Motion for Reference, Order Appointing Referee, and Referee's Report, all optional as of January 1, 2006, have been added to Ch. 38, Reference. See Ch. 38, Reference, §§ 38.60, 38.63, 38.70.

Judicial Reference--Another Clause Requiring Judicial Reference Upheld. Another clause requiring judicial reference of a construction defect case has been upheld [Trend Homes, Inc. v. Superior Court (Azperren) (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 950]. See Ch. 38, Reference, § 38.11[4].

[1] Amicua Curia

Amicus Curia Not Real Party in Interest for Attorney's Fees Liability Purposes. In Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1169 , the California Supreme Court held that an amicus curiae may not be held liable to a prevailing party for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 22, Amicus Curia, § 22.17.

[2] Notice of Appeal

Document Must Literally Be Entitled "Notice of Entry" to Start Appeal Clock Running. In Sunset Millennium Associates, LLC v. Le Songe, LLC (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 256 , the court of appeal held that a 14-page minute order with notice of entry language on page 13 did not comply with the requirement of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2(a)(1) that a document providing notice of entry must be so entitled. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

Reclassification Order Not Appealable. In Garau v. Torrance Unified School District (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 192 , the court of appeal held that an order reclassifying and transferring a case to the limited jurisdiction department was not an appealable order. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[2][b].

Interlocutory Order May be Directly Appealed. In Godinez v. Schwarzenegger (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 73, 87 , the court of appeal held that an exception to the one final judgment rule applies when a court renders an interlocutory order collateral to the main issue, dispositive of the parties' rights in relation to the collateral matter, and directing payment of money or performance of an act. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[1][a].

[3] Record on Appeal

Appellate Record May Not Be Augmented to Include Matter That Was Not Before Trial Court. In Electronic Funds Solutions v. Murphy (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 151 , the court of appeal denied a request to augment the appellate record with discovery responses that were not before the trial court when it entered judgments. See Ch. 44, Appeal: Preparing and Filing the Record, § 44.91.

[4] Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law

If Material Facts Are Largely Undisputed, Appellate Court Applies De Novo Standard of Application of Statute. In Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1169 , the California Supreme Court applied a de novo review standard as to whether the California Business Council could be assessed attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.63[4][d].

Issues Omitted From Appellate's Opening Brief Waived. In Singh v. Lipworth (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 40, 42 , the court of appeal held that points raised for the first time in a reply brief (other than those which are strictly responsive to arguments in the respondent's brief) are waived, unless the appellant shows good cause for failing to include them. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.10[5].

§ 1.62A Attorneys

Attorney Liability--Subjective Standard Applied to Continuous Representation Tolling of Attorney Malpractice Statute of Limitations. In Gonzalez v. Kalu (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 21 , the court of appeal held that if an attorney unilaterally withdraws or abandons a client, the attorney's representation ends for purposes of starting the statute of limitations on a malpractice action when the client actually has or reasonably should have no expectation that the attorney will provide further legal services. Therefore, the representation may end when the attorney provides express notification to the client that the attorney will perform no further services, or, if the attorney remains silent, the end of the representation may be inferred from the circumstances of the case. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[2][c].

Attorney Liability--Attorney Acting as Escrow Holder Liable to Non-Client for Conversion. In Virtanen v. O'Connell (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 688 , the court of appeal held that an attorney acting as an escrow holder could be liable for conversion to a non-client who placed property into escrow, if the attorney disposed of the property in a way that was not in accordance with the escrow instructions provided when the property was deposited. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.200[1].

Attorney Liability--"Continuing Representation" Tolling Provision Applied in Transactional Malpractice Action. In Fritz v. Ehrmann (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1374 , the court of appeal held that if a case involves attorney negligence in the preparation of transactional documents, the statute of limitations is tolled under the continued representation provision when the client comes to the attorney after the potential malpractice manifests itself, and before the limitations period has run, in an attempt to have the attorney rectify the problem or mitigate the damage, and it does not matter if the attorney was not actually "continuing to represent" the client with respect to that specific subject matter between the time the documents were completed and the time that the client returned with the problem. The court also held that if an attorney commits two distinct acts of malpractice with two distinct injuries or potential injuries, the statute of limitations may accrue and run for one injury without affecting the limitations period for bringing suit for the other injury. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.170[2][b] and 76.170[2][c].

Attorney Liability--Collateral Estoppel Applied to Legal Malpractice Action. In Mooney v. Caspari (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 704, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728 , the court of appeal held that a real estate developer and a real estate broker shared a common interest in pursuing a claim against the developer's former joint venture partner when their real estate venture broke down, such that it was appropriate to apply the collateral estoppel doctrine to the broker's lawsuit against the developer's attorney after the developer's own action against the attorney was terminated in favor of the attorney. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.180.

Attorney Practice--To Determine Conflict of Interest, Lawyer's Knowledge Imputed to Lawyer's New Firm. In Pound v. DeMera DeMera Cameron (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 70 , the court of appeal held that when a lawyer possessing material confidential information changes firms, the lawyer's knowledge is imputed to the new firm. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.113[6].

Attorney Practice--Law Firm Partnership Agreement Not Illegal Fee Splitting Arrangement. In Anderson, McPharlin & Connors v. Yee (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 129 , the court of appeal held that Cal. Rule Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 did not apply to a law firm's partnership agreement requiring a former partner to pay the firm 25 percent of revenues of services rendered, during the 24 months following former partner's departure from the firm, to the firm's clients who had followed the partner when he departed. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.531[7].

Attorney Practice--Attorney Has Authority to Bind Client Without Consulting Him or Her, Even Against Client's Wishes. In Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565 , the court of appeal held that a stipulation waiving mediation confidentiality does not impact a client's substantial rights; therefore, the client is bound by the attorney's agreement. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.220[1].

[1] Defects and Repairs

Automobiles--Application of Lemon Law Limited to Vehicles Bought in California. The California Supreme Court has held that insofar as the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act applies to new motor vehicles [see Civ. Code §§ 1793.2(d)(2), 1793.22], the Act is limited in application to vehicles that were bought in California [Cummins, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 478] . See Ch. 91, Automobiles: Actions Involving Defects and Repairs, § 91.12[1].

[2] Liability

Inference That Employee Drove Employer's Vehicle With Permission May be Proper. In Taylor v. Roseville Toyota, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 994 , the court of appeal held that if a driver involved in an accident is an employee and if the owner of the vehicle is the driver's employer, a jury may infer that the vehicle was driven with the permission of the owner, and the fact that the employer failed to monitor or adequately supervise how the employer's vehicles were used may be evidence that the employer gave implied permission for their use. See Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action, § 82.16[1][e][i].

Employer's Admission of Vicarious Liability May Preclude Evidence of Negligent Entrustment of Vehicle. In Jeld-Wen, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853 , the court of appeal held that in the context of a negligent entrustment claim made against an employer for injuries caused by an employee/driver, if the employer makes a pretrial admission of liability for any negligence of the employee/driver under respondeat superior principles, the negligent entrustment claim becomes moot, and the trial court may not admit evidence that the employer knew of the employee's prior accidents. See Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action, § 82.11[2].

[3] Uninsured Motorists

Uninsured Motorist Claims. In Pilimai v. Farmers Insurance Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133 , the California Supreme Court held that the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 apply to uninsured motorist arbitrations conducted pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3A].

Recovery of Attorney's Fees. The Ninth Circuit has held that while the Bankruptcy Code does contain some provisions regarding attorney's fees, it does not contain any provisions that create a general right for the prevailing party to be awarded attorney's fees in federal bankruptcy litigation. Moreover, no fees are available under state law for litigation of substantive federal bankruptcy issues in bankruptcy court [Deroche v. Arizona Indus. Comm'n (In re Deroche) (9th Cir. 2006) 434 F.3d 1188]. See Ch. 94, Bankruptcy, § 94.54[1][c].

[1] Consumer Contracts and Loans

Consumer Contracts--Class-Action Waiver Unenforceable. The California Supreme Court has held that in some cases in California, class-action waivers in consumer contracts of adhesion are unenforceable, whether the consumer is being asked to waive the right to class-action litigation or the right to class-wide arbitration. Moreover, the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] does not preempt California law in this respect [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100] . See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.25[2][a].

[2] Limited Liability Companies

Limited Liability Companies--Permitted and Prohibited Activities. Corp. Code § 17002(b) now permits an LLC to operate as a health care service plan licensed under Health & Safety Code § 1340 et seq. if it is a subsidiary of a licensed plan and if it is established to serve an existing line of business of the parent plan [Stats. 2005, ch. 16, § 1]. See Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies, § 346.10[5].

Limited Liability Companies--Assumption of Liability Upon Merger. New Corp. Code § 17554.5 [Stats. 2005, ch. 286, § 7] provides that upon merger, an LLC or other business entity will be deemed to have assumed the liability of each disappearing LLC or other business entity to prepare and file tax and information returns and to pay any tax liability. See Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies, § 346.16[1].

[3] Partnerships

Limited Partnerships--Assumption of Liability Upon Merger. New Corp. Code § 15678.10 [Stats. 2005, ch. 286, § 5] provides that upon merger, a surviving limited partnership or other business entity will be deemed to have assumed the liability of each disappearing limited partnership or other business entity to prepare and file tax and information returns and to pay any tax liability. See Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships, § 404.21[10]; Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties, §§ 405.14, 405.43.

[4] Securities and Franchise Regulation

Corporate Securities--Limited Offering Exemption Notice. 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.102.14, which sets forth the requirements for a limited offering exemption notice of transaction, has been amended to require electronic filing unless the issuer claims a hardship exception. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, § 515.14[5][g].

Franchises--New Motor Vehicle Dealerships. 13 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 585, 595, which specify the contents of a protest by a franchisee to the New Motor Vehicle Board, have been amended. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, § 515.520.

Franchises--Fair Practices of Equipment Manufacturers, Distributors, Wholesalers, and Dealers Act. The law governing contracts between equipment dealers and suppliers [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 22900-22927] has been extensively revised and expanded [Stats. 2005, ch. 712]. Among other things, the 2005 legislative changes expand the definition of equipment to include all-terrain vehicles and other machinery, revise provisions dealing with discriminatory pricing, establish procedures for approving or denying a transfer of a dealership when a dealer dies, and prohibit suppliers from engaging in other practices deemed coercive and discriminatory with respect to dealers. Existing restrictions on termination and nonrenewal are now limited to contracts with dealers and suppliers who are not single-line dealers or suppliers. The legislation also establishes a procedure for approval or denial of dealer requests for transfer of a dealer's business. Statutes governing inventory return policies and inventory purchase requirements have been modified, and a definition of fair market value for inventory return purposes has been added, as well as exclusions from the repurchase requirements. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, §§ 515.210 -515.221, 515.380 -515.382, 515.580.

PART III. 2006 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.65 Civil Procedure

[1] Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

Amended Pleadings--Time to Amend. In Harlan v. Dept. of Transportation (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 868 , the court held that while leave to amend within 10 days is standard under Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1320, the court may grant leave to amend "upon any terms as may be just and shall fix the time within which the amendment or amended pleading shall be filed" [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(c)]. In fact, even if the court has not ordered additional time beyond the standard 10 days, the court has the discretion to accept a late filing even after the 10 days has expired, effectively fixing a new time for amendment; and the late filing may be accepted even without noticed motion requesting an extension of time. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.17[1][b].

[2] Anti-SLAPP Motions

Official Proceeding. In Kibler v. Northern Inyo County Local Hospital Dist. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 192 , the California Supreme Court holds a hospital's peer review procedure qualified as an "official proceeding authorized by law" under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2) because the procedure is required under Bus. & Prof. Code § 805 et seq.; not only is the peer review process an important tool in protecting the public, but a hospital's decisions resulting from peer review are also subject to judicial review by administrative mandate; therefore, peer review committees are involved in "matters of public significance" pursuant to section 425.16(a) and therefore statements made in connection with issues under consideration by a hospital peer review committee are subject to anti-SLAPP protection. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[6][c].

Litigation Privilege. In Flatley v. Mauro (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 299 , the California Supreme Court holds a defense attorney's communications made to plaintiff constituted extortion and therefore were not protected activity for purposes of the anti-SLAPP statute. The court emphasized that the question of whether defendant's conduct leading to the lawsuit was illegal as a matter of law is preliminary and unrelated to the second prong of the anti-SLAPP determination. Defendant then argued that section 425.16 protected all pre-litigation communications, even those that constitute extortion. The court disagreed, stating that litigation-related activity which is privileged under the litigation privilege is not necessarily protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. The attorney's threats to publicly accuse plaintiff of rape unless he paid money was clearly criminal extortion as a matter of law, and because those actions formed the basis of defendant's special motion to strike, the motion was properly denied. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[7].

Malicious Prosecution. In Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260 , the California Supreme Court holds that the purpose of a SLAPPback is to "seek compensation for damages beyond the attorney fees and costs awarded to the defendant who prevails on the special motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute." The purpose of these provisions is "to stack the procedural deck in favor of the SLAPPback plaintiff confronted with a special motion to strike;" however, the Legislature did create a categorical rule exempting SLAPPbacks from the anti-SLAPP statute. Section 425.18(h) provides a narrow exception to the general rule that malicious prosecution actions are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute in cases where the filing and maintenance of the underlying action was illegal as a matter of law. In practical terms, as with all anti-SLAPP motions, defendant must first make the required threshold showing that the challenged action arises from protected activity. Plaintiff then carries the burden of demonstrating that the underlying action was illegal as a matter of law and in doing so must identify with particularity the statute or statutes violated. Because it is procedural in character, the SLAPPback statute applies retroactively to pending actions that originated prior to section 425.18's effective date. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[7B][a], [b].

Attorneys Fees and Costs. In S.B. Beach Properties v. Berti (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 374 , the California Supreme Court holds that if a defendant does not get its anti-SLAPP motion on file prior to a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of an action, defendant is not entitled to fees or costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c); although defendant may incur fees in preparing such a motion prior to plaintiff's dismissal of the action, the court reasoned that allowing recovery of fees in such a situation would run counter to the purpose of section 425.16, which is to discourage prolonged litigation. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[13][b].

Emails Regarding Public Interest. This chapter is updated with Integrated Healthcare Holdings, Inc. v. Fitzgibbons (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 515 , which holds a doctor's e-mail to a small number of people articulating his concerns about struggling company's acquisition and operation of four hospitals was subject to protection under the anti-SLAPP statute because the email concerned an issue of widespread public interest. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[6][c].

Prevailing Party. This chapter is updated with the following cases regarding recovery of attorney's fees and costs as a "prevailing party" for purposes of the anti-SLAPP statute: Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 328 , where a defendant was successful in striking a trade libel cause of action and therefore was a prevailing party despite losing anti-SLAPP motion on three other causes of action; ComputerXpress, Inc. v. Jackson (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 993 , where defendants were prevailing parties as they were successful in striking five of nine causes of action alleged in complaint; and ARP Pharmacy Services, Inc. v. Gallagher Bassett Services, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1307 , where a grant of judgment on the pleadings does not render an anti-SLAPP motion moot; therefore, a defendant prevailing on both a motion for judgment on the pleadings and an anti-SLAPP motion is entitled to its attorney's fees. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[13].

Restraining Orders. This chapter is updated with City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606 , which holds petitions for workplace violence restraining orders under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 are subject to the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16]. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[4].

Public Issues. This chapter is updated with Ruiz v. Harbor View Community Assn. (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1456 , which holds the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16] covers private letters concerning matters of public interest. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[6][c].

Recovery of Attorney's Fees and Costs. This chapter is updated with City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606 , which holds an award of fees is mandatory; however, in accord with Endres v. Moran (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 952 , a moving defendant cannot be said to have prevailed and therefore recover attorney's fees when his or her anti-SLAPP motion is only granted as to one of numerous causes of action. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[13][a].

SLAPPback Suits. Effective January 1, 2006, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 is added to the Code and defines the term "SLAPPback" [Stats. 2005 ch. 535, § 2]. A SLAPPback is any cause of action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process arising from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action that has been dismissed pursuant to an anti-SLAPP motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. The Legislature found that a SLAPPback is distinguishable in character and origin from an ordinary malicious prosecution action, and, in fact, is consistent with the Legislature's intent to protect the valid exercise of the constitutional rights of free speech and petition by its deterrent effect on SLAPP litigation. Therefore, a SLAPPback should be treated different from an ordinary malicious prosecution action in terms of the application of the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[7B][b].

Public Interest. In Terry v. Davis Community Church (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1534 , the court discussed the definition of "an issue of public interest" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(4) and the court held that the societal interest in protecting children from child molesters was clearly a public interest such that the speech in question was protected under the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[6][c].

Hearing Schedule. Effective January 1, 2006, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(f) is amended to require the clerk to schedule the hearing not more than 30 days after the service of an anti-SLAPP motion. This amendment was specifically in response to, and for the purposes of, overruling cases holding that a defendant who files an anti-SLAPP motion bears the burden of demonstrating the delay was due to the court's docket conditions rather than the attorney's calendar. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike, § 375.24[8].

[3] Captions

Captions of Pleadings and Papers--E-mail Address. Cal. Rules of Ct, Rule 2.111 is amended to provide an attorney must include the attorney's e-mail address, if available, at the top of pleadings and papers; however, a clerk cannot reject a paper for filing solely on the ground that it does not contain an attorney's or a party's fax number or e-mail address on the first page. See Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions, § 108.11[2].

[3A] Change of Name

New Forms for Gender Change and Issuance of Amended Birth Certificate. The Judicial Council has issued new forms for use in obtaining a court order reflecting gender reassignment and requiring the issuance of an amended birth certificate, as a separate proceeding from a name-change [Cal. Judicial Council Forms NC-300, NC-320, and NC-330]. See Ch. 377, Name, Change Of, §§ 377.77, 377.78, 377.79.

[4] Complaints and Cross Complaints

Complaints and Motions--Uniform Filing Fees. Effective January 1, 2006, the state has adopted a uniform schedule of filing fees and other civil fees for the superior courts throughout the state, known as the Uniform Civil Fees and Standard Fee Schedule Act of 2005. Surcharges may be tacked onto the uniform fee for filings in complex cases, unlawful detainer actions, and, where imposed, for court construction funds in the county or county and city of Riverside, San Bernardino, and San Francisco [see Gov. Code §§ 70600 et seq.]. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.26[1], Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.18.

Complaints--Insufficient Fees. Legislative amendments now provide the clerk must void the filing if the party who tendered a returned check or on whose behalf a returned check was tendered has not paid the full amount of the fee and the administrative charge by a means specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 411.20(a) within 20 days of the date on which the notice was mailed, and any filing voided by this section can be disposed of immediately after the 20 days have elapsed without preserving a copy in the court records, notwithstanding Gov. Code § 68152 [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.20(b)]. The clerk must void the filing if the party who tendered a check in an amount less than the required filing fee or on whose behalf a check in an amount less than the required filing fee was tendered has not paid the full amount of the fee and the administrative charge by a means specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 411.21(a) within 20 days of the date on which the notice was mailed, and any filing voided by this section may be disposed of immediately after the 20 days have elapsed without preserving a copy in the court records, notwithstanding Gov. Code § 68152 [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.21(b)]. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.28.

[4A] Default

Default--Relief Limited to Demand. This chapter is updated with Electronic Funds Solutions v. Murphy (2006) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1161 , where the court held compensatory damages on default cannot exceed the $50,000 amount prayed for in the complaint; phrase "in an amount in excess of $50,000" does not provide notice of unlimited damages and the recoverable damages on default are limited to $50,000. See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.42.

[4B] Fax Filing

Fax Filing. Effective July 1, 2006, the Rules of Court no longer require a $1 fee for each page of a document filed by fax directly with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct, Rule 2.304]. See Ch. 264, Fax Filing and Service .

[5] Judges

Temporary Judges--Revised Rules of Court. This chapter is updated with the revised Rules of Court effective July 1, 2006 that completely rewrite the procedures for appointment and disqualification of temporary judges. The Rules of Court distinguish between temporary judges appointed by the trial courts [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.810 et seq.] and temporary judges requested by the parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.830 et seq.]. These two types of temporary judges are subject to different qualification standards and different disqualification criteria and procedures. Court-appointed temporary judges have more standards to meet before appointment, such as training and continuing education, and there are more instances where other activities may disqualify the attorney from serving. Temporary judges requested by the parties, are privately compensated, and do not have the degree of standards required for court-appointed temporary judges. See Ch. 317, Judges , §§ 317.20 -317.22.

Disqualification of Judge--Prospective Employment With Dispute Resolution Professional. A judge may be disqualified for cause under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(8)(A) for current or prospective employment as a dispute resolution neutral where (1) the judge directs the parties to participate in an alternative dispute resolution process in which the dispute resolution neutral will be an individual or entity with whom the judge has the arrangement, has previously been employed or served, or is discussing or has discussed the employment or service; or (2) the judge will select a dispute resolution neutral or entity to conduct an alternative dispute resolution process in the matter before the judge, and among those available for selection is an individual or entity with whom the judge has the arrangement, with whom the judge has previously been employed or served, or with whom the judge is discussing or has discussed the employment or service. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.44A.

[6] Judicial Notice

Judicial Notice--Legislative Intent. Kaufman & Broad Communities, Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 26 , provides a comprehensive list of legislative history documents that are admissible and inadmissible under the doctrine of judicial notice for proving legislative intent. See Ch. 321, Judicial Notice, § 321.17[7][c].

[7] Jurisdiction

Personal Jurisdiction--Waiver B Notice-- Kaufman & Broad Communities, Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 26, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 520 Ch. 321, Judicial Notice, § 321.17[7][c] Seeking Injunctive Relief.

Factor Health Management v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 246 , the court held that a party waives objections to California personal jurisdiction and makes a general appearance under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.11 if the party seeks an order to show cause for a preliminary injunction and files a motion for discovery in connection with the order to show cause. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.62[2].

Subject Matter Jurisdiction--Tribal Immunity. This chapter is updated with Campo Band of Mission Indians v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 175 , where the court held the tribe's Compact with the state included a waiver of the tribe's tribal sovereign immunity relating to patron claims for negligence resulting in personal injury up to specific limits, thus the court had limited subject matter jurisdiction over the patron's claim against the tribe. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.24[3].

[8] Limitation of Actions

Employment Discrimination of Minors. Gov. Code § 12960(d)(4) is amended to provide the one-year period of Gov. Code § 12960 for filing an administrative complaint under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act [Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.] is extended for one year from the date the aggrieved party attains majority. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[11][a].

[9] Pretrial Proceedings

Civil Case Cover Sheet. Judicial Council Form CM-010, Civil Case Cover Sheet, is updated effective January 1, 2006. See Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.130.

[10] Reconsider and Renewed Motions

Motions to Reconsider--Use of Motions In Limine. In Coshow v. City of Escondido (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 687 , the court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 is not the exclusive vehicle by which a court can reconsider issues previously decided by demurrer and summary judgment; a trial court may revisit its prior rulings on its own initiative and use a party's motions in limine as a basis for granting judgment on the pleadings. See Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions, § 374.12.

[11] Res Judicata

Privity. This chapter is updated with Rodgers v. Sargent Controls & Aerospace (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 82 , which holds the fact that plaintiff was represented by same counsel as plaintiffs in a prior cases was not sufficient to extend the doctrine of privity to the plaintiff's present case; plaintiff had no proprietary interest in the prior cases and could not be charged with notice that he "avoided the prior proceedings at his peril." See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.15[4][a].

Arbitration Award. In Richard B. LeVine, Inc v. Higashi (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 566 , the court held res judicata can even operate to bar a plaintiff from litigating a claim against a non-arbitrating party where an arbitration award eliminated the basis for that party's liability. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.14[3][g].

[12] Service of Summons and Papers

Summons--Proof of Service of Summons. After payment of the applicable fees, the plaintiff or cross complainant may have the clerk issue one or more summonses for any defendant, but the clerk must keep each original summons in the court records and provide a copy of each summons issued to the plaintiff who requested issuance of the summons. Amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 412.10, effective January 1, 2006, deleted the requirement of giving the plaintiff the original summons, and deleted the requirement that the summons be returned or a declaration of lost summons be filed with the court [2005 Stats. 300, § 2]. Proof of service of the summons must be filed within 60 days after the time the summons and complaint must be served upon a defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b)]. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, §§ 518.14[1], 518.21.

Summons--Incarcerated Persons. Legislative amendments provide that service of summons directed to a person who is incarcerated within any institution in California is made to the sheriff or jailer, and may be served by any person who may lawfully serve process; the sheriff or jailer served with a paper in a judicial proceeding must forthwith deliver it to the prisoner, with a note thereon of the time of its service; to neglect to do so makes the sheriff or jailer liable to the prisoner for all damages occasioned thereby [Penal Code § 4013(a)]. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.17[17].

[13] Stay of Action

Notice of Termination or Modification of Stay. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650(d) is amended to provide when a stay is vacated, is no longer in effect, or is modified, the party who filed the notice of the stay must immediately serve and file a notice of termination or modification of stay. If that party fails to do so, any other party in the action who has knowledge of the termination or modification of the stay must serve and file a notice of termination or modification of stay. Once one party in the action has served and filed a notice of termination or modification of stay, other parties in the action are not required to do so. A mandatory form of notice, Judicial Council Form CM-181, Notice of Termination or Modification of Stay, is provided for this notice. See Ch. 137, Continuing Duties During Litigation , §§ 137.13, 137.64.

[13A] Stipulations

Setting Aside. This chapter is updated with Mileikowsky v. Tenet Healthsystem (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 262 , which holds a poor outcome is not a principled reason to set aside a stipulation by counsel; such as where a discovery stipulation waives a party's right to insist on a formal order compelling responses as a precursor to an issuance of evidentiary, issue, or terminating sanctions. See Ch. 533, Stipulations, § 533.17[1][a].

[14] Summary Judgment and Adjudication

Summary Judgment--Notice of Motion. This chapter is updated with Barefield v. Washington Mutual (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 299 , which holds when increasing the 75 days' notice required by two court days for overnight delivery, the two court days are added on at the end of the 75-day period; and with Boyle v. Certainteed Corp. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 645 , which holds a court cannot shorten the 75-day notice period required for a motion for summary judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a) by issuing a general order providing for an expedited summary judgment on 60 days' notice. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.22.

Summary Judgment--Sufficiency of Evidence. This chapter is updated with Andrews v. Foster Wheeler (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 96, 113 , which holds speculative expert declarations lacking factual basis and consisting of merely general statements are not sufficient to create a triable issue of material fact. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.25[3][b].

Summary Judgment--Issues Not Raised in Motion. This chapter is updated with County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 326 , which holds where a defendants' summary judgment motion was based solely on the statute of limitations, and did not assert that plaintiffs had failed to state a cause of action due to the absence of allegations of physical injury to their buildings, and plaintiffs were given no opportunity to respond to defendants' motion on that unstated ground, it was reversible error for the trial court to grant the motion. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.33[3].

Summary Judgment--Defects in Motion. In Parkview Villas Assn., Inc. v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (2005)

133 Cal. App. 4th 1197 , the court held that it is an abuse of discretion for a court to grant summary judgment based on deficiency in opposing party's separate statement where the separate statement plainly indicated which proposed material facts were disputed and included general references to supporting evidence but did not set forth the nature of the dispute or specific citations to the evidence. Similarly, in Zimmerman, Rosenfeld, Gersh & Leeds v. Larson (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1466 , the court found a trial court has discretion to overlook procedural errors in the moving and opposition papers, but only if the evidence presented warrants it, and that glaring omissions and concessions cannot be overlooked. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.21[3].

[1] Abortions

Remedy for Unconstitutional Abortion Statute Not Necessarily Invalidation. In Ayotte v. Planned Parenthood (2006) 126 S. Ct. 961 , the United States Supreme Court considered the remedy to be applied to a state law that unconstitutionally requires parental notification before performing an abortion on a pregnant minor, with no exception for medical emergencies. The Court held that the lower courts were not required to have invalidated the law wholesale, because they could issue a declaratory judgment and an injunction prohibiting the statute's unconstitutional application. The Supreme Court would remand for lower courts to determine whether to grant an injunction prohibiting unconstitutional applications or to hold that consistency with legislative intent required invalidating the statute in toto. See Ch. 4, Abortion and Birth Control Methods, § 4.11[2].

[1A] Associations and Clubs

New Legislation on Governance of Unincorporated Associations. The California Legislature has enacted legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 116] regarding the governance of unincorporated associations, including termination of membership, expulsion from or suspension of membership, membership voting, and liability of members for harm. For discussion, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs, §§ 61.14, 61.24, 61.25, 61.31[1].

[2] Discrimination in Business Establishments

Employer's Duty Under FEHA to Accommodate Disability Applies Even If Employee Is "Regarded As" Disabled. A California Court of Appeal has held that under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, an employer's duty to accommodate an employee's disability, and to engage in good-faith interactive process to determine reasonable accommodations, applies whether the applicant or employee is actually disabled or is "regarded as" disabled. See Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.35[1][a].

Unruh Act Explicitly Bars Marital Status and Sexual Orientation Discrimination. With the Civil Rights Act of 2005 [2005 Stats., ch 420], the Legislature amended Civ. Code § 51 to specifically include marital status and sexual orientation as prohibited bases of discrimination under the Unruh Act, and amended Civ. Code §§ 51.5, 51.8, and 53 to prohibit discrimination under those sections based on the characteristics specified in § 51(b), (e), thus conforming those sections with the Unruh Act. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

[3] Housing Discrimination

Procedure Changed for Challenging Racially Restrictive Covenants. The California Legislature has amended the Fair Employment Housing Act [2005 Stats., ch 297] to change the procedure for challenging racially restrictive covenants. Instead of filing an application with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing, a person holding an ownership interest of record in property he or she believes is the subject of an unlawfully restrictive covenant may record a document titled Restrictive Covenant Modification. Before recording the modification document, the county recorder submits it and the original document to the county counsel, who determines whether the original document contains an unlawful restriction based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, familial status, marital status, disability, national origin, source of income, or ancestry. The county counsel returns the documents and informs the county recorder of the determination. See Ch. 117: Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination, § 117.15[5].

[4] Interference With Civil Rights

Bane Act Conformed to Unruh Act; Legislature Provides Three-Year Statute of Limitations. In the Civil Rights Act of 2005 [2005 Stats., ch 420], the California Legislature amended Civ. Code § 51.7 to conform the prohibited bases of action with the prohibited bases of discrimination under the Unruh Act. In other legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 123], the Legislature enacted a three-year statute of limitations for actions under § 51.7 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(n)]. For discussion, see Ch. 117A: Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence, § 117A.12[1].

Attorney General Defines Hate Crimes and Required Motivation. In 88 Op. Atty Gen. Cal. 141 (2005) , the Attorney General opined that if a perpetrator commits a sexual assault wholly or partly because of the victim's gender, a hate crime has not been committed unless the perpetrator also acts on some animosity or other bias motivation toward the victim's gender. See Ch. 117A: Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence, § 117A.12[2][a].

[4A] Post-Civil War Rights Statutes

Prima Facie Showing of Intentional Discrimination in Racial Discrimination Claim Under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. In Lindsey v. SLT (9th Cir. 2005) 432 F.3d 954 , the Ninth Circuit adapted the McDonnell Douglas test for proving intentional discrimination in an employment discrimination context to a claim of racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. The court then held that a hotel's placing of a smaller bar mitzvah event in the main ballroom, instead of an African-American organization's annual fashion show and luncheon, which had been held in the main ballroom for the previous three years, and the placing of the fashion show and luncheon in a much smaller ballroom, showed a prima facie case of discriminatory treatment in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1981. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.12[2][a].

Attorney Lacked Standing to Seek Fees or to Challenge County's Settlement Policy. In Pony v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2006) 433 F.3d 1138 , the Ninth Circuit held that when the prevailing party did not exercise her rights to pursue attorney's fees, but, instead, waived them as a condition of settlement with the county, her former attorney had no standing to pursue attorney's fees. A putative assignment of the right to fees to the attorney was invalid because the right to seek attorney's fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 is a substantive cause of action which cannot be transferred contractually. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.17[2][h].

[5] Prisoners' Rights

Enforcement of Prisoners' Civil Rights. In Hill v. McDonough (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2096 , the United States Supreme Court held that an action challenging the constitutionality of the drug sequence a state likely would use to execute a prisoner by lethal injection, rather than an action challenging the validity of the death sentence, was a type of action that may proceed under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. And, there is no requirement the claim be raised by petition for writ of habeas corpus. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[1].

PLRA Requires Proper Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. In Woodford v. Ngo (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2378 , the Supreme Court held that a prisoner cannot satisfy the Prison Litigation Reform Act's (PLRA) exhaustion requirement by filing an untimely or otherwise procedurally defective administrative grievance or appeal, but that proper exhaustion of administrative remedies is necessary. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[2].

PLRA Applies to Privately Operated Prison; Exhaustion Required for Claim of Magazine Confiscation. In Roles v. Maddox (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1016 , the Ninth Circuit held that the PLRA's exhaustion requirement applies with equal force to prisoners held in private prisons as to prisoners held in prisons operated by local or state governments or the federal government. Further, an allegation of confiscation of a prisoner's magazines was a prison condition to which the exhaustion requirement applied. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[2].

Prisoner Could Sue State For Damages for Violation of Title II of Americans With Disabilities Act. In United States v. Georgia (2006) 126 S. Ct. 877 , the United States Supreme Court held that a prisoner could maintain an action against the state for damages for violation of Title II of the Americans With Disabilities Act to the extent the state's conduct violated the prisoner's constitutional rights, including violations of the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities, § 112.15[2][h], and Ch. 114: Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.10[1].

No Deprivation of Criminal Defendant's Right of Access to Courts. In People v. Ringo (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 870 , an in propria persona criminal defendant failed to show denial of access to the law library and to the court. The defendant had advisory counsel who adequately protected his rights, and there is no Sixth Amendment right to law library access when an in propria persona defendant is assisted by advisory counsel. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.13[2].

Sexual Abuse Protection for Inmates. Under the Sexual Abuse in Detention Elimination Act [Pen. Code §§ 2635 et seq.], prison inmates have the right to be protected from sexual abuse while held in institutions operated by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. See Ch. 114: Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.26.

§ 1.66 Civil Service

Municipality Need Not Bargain With Employees Regarding Implementation of Study That Minimally Impacts Working Conditions. The California Supreme Court has held that a city was not required to "meet and confer" with its police employees regarding the city's implementation of a study to determine whether its police were engaging in racial profiling, so long as the study would have only a minimal impact on the employees' working conditions. See Claremont Police Officers Assn. v. City of Claremont (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 623 , now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.52[3].

Legislative Attempt to Bypass State Personnel Board Review of Disciplinary Actions Is Unconstitutional. The California Supreme Court has held that Cal. Const., art. VII, 3(a), invalidates the Legislature's attempt, under Gov. Code § 18670(c)-(e), to authorize an entity other than the State Personnel Board to review disciplinary actions taken against state civil-service employees. See State Personnel Bd. v. Department of Personnel Admin. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 512 , now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.48[1], 118.59.

§ 1.67 Class Actions

California Law Applies in Interstate Class Action Alleging Unlawful Recording or Telephone Calls. In a case involving alleged privacy violations resulting from a Georgia business's recording of its telephone conversations with California residents, the California Supreme Court concluded that California law (which prohibits recording without the consent of all participants [see Penal Code §§ 632-632.7]), rather than Georgia law (which allows recording with the consent of one participant), should apply. See Kearney v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 95 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.14[3][b][ii].

Court Denying Class Certification May Not Order That Former Potential Class Members Be Notified of Their Possible Individual Claims. A California Court of Appeal has held that once class certification has been denied, the trial court cannot order notification of former potential class members of their possible legal claims. The Court of Appeal reasoned that in non-class litigation, it is not the trial court's role to order notification to third parties of their possible legal claims. See Experian Info. Solutions, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 122 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.19[1].

Court May Allow Precertification Discovery to Seek Class Representative. In Best Buy Stores, L.P. v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 772 , the Court of Appeal has held that if a conflict of interest prevents a lawyer from serving as both class representative and counsel for a putative class, the trial court may allow precertification discovery for purpose of seeking a new class representative, so long as the court acts to protect the privacy rights of potential class members. See Ch. 120, Class Actions , 120.15[1], [5].

Legislative Attempt to Bypass State Personnel Board Review of Disciplinary Actions Is Unconstitutional. A California Court of Appeal has held that the statute governing the distribution of the unpaid residue of class-action settlements, Code Civ. Proc. § 384, is inapplicable when a settlement agreement contains its own provisions for distributing residue that is not paid to class members. However, in such a case the trial court must scrutinize the settlement and approve it only after determining that it is fair, adequate, and reasonable. See In re Microsoft IV Cases (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 706 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.22[2].

"Opt-in" Class Actions Barred. A California Court of Appeal has held that a court may not require that class members affirmatively request inclusion in a certified class before liability is determined; such an "opt-in" procedure is neither required by constitutional due-process principles nor permitted by applicable court rules. See Hypertouch, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1527 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.19[3], 120.41[6].

§ 1.68 Contracts

Enforcement of Foreign Law Under Choice-of-Law Provision. In Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 886, 895 , a California appellate court has concluded that if enforcement of a particular provision in a consumer contract of adhesion could be contrary to a fundamental policy of California, but nevertheless would be consistent with the law of the state that the contract specifies will govern the parties' rights and obligations, and if the party opposing enforcement is asserting claims in a California court against a resident of that other state solely under the law of that state, the California court may conclude that the other state has a materially greater interest in seeing its law enforced than California has in enforcing its contrary fundamental policy [Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 886] . On the other hand, if the party opposing enforcement is asserting claims under California law, then the court may conclude that California's interest in enforcing its fundamental policy is greater than the other state's interest in enforcing its contrary law [Klussman v. Cross Country Bank (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1283] . See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.30[3].

Treating Repudiation as Anticipatory Breach. In Howard S. Wright Constr. Co. v. BBIC Investors, LLC (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 228 , a California appellate court held that after repudiation of a contract, if the aggrieved party normally would be entitled to mechanic's lien rights, a lien would have to be recorded within 90 days "after [the aggrieved party] completes his contract." A contract is complete for purposes of commencing the recordation period when all work under the contract has been performed or excused--or has been otherwise discharged, as would be the case when the aggrieved party elects to treat repudiation of the contract as an anticipatory breach. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.54.

Promissory Estoppel. A court of appeal has concluded that a plaintiff seeking recovery on a promissory estoppel theory must prove, as in ordinary contract actions, that the defendant's breach of promise was a substantial factor in causing the plaintiff's injury [US Ecology, Inc. v. State of California (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 887] . For discussion and a form for a complaint alleging a promissory estoppel cause of action, see Ch. 140, Contracts, §§ 140.23[8], 140.106.

Quantum Meruit--Recovery Under Statutes Mandating That Services Be Provided and That Providers Be Reimbursed. A court of appeal has concluded that quantum meruit may be the basis for an action to recover the reasonable value of the plaintiff's services when a statutory scheme (1) requires the plaintiff to provide the services without regard to the recipient's ability to pay and (2) requires the defendant to "reimburse" the plaintiff for providing the services [Bell v. Blue Cross of California (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 211] . For discussion, see Ch. 121, Common Counts, § 121.25[2][a].

Copyrights and Trademarks--Exemption From Infringement Liability. The Family Movie Act of 2005 [17 U.S.C. § 110(11)] authorizes household viewers of movies (whether the movie is being broadcast on television or is being played from a videotape or disc) to use any suitable technology for the purpose of skipping objectionable video and audio portions of a movie. The act also authorizes manufacturers to create, and distributors to provide, suitable technology for that purpose. All such activity is protected by specific exemptions from liability for infringement under the Copyright Act and the Lanham Act. Suspension for Nonpayment of Taxes. In Kaufman & Broad Communities, Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33 , the court held that if a corporation's status has been suspended for nonpayment of taxes, the corporation's liability insurer may not defend a lawsuit in the corporation's name. However, the insurance company may intervene in a lawsuit to protect the rights of the insured suspended corporation, and intervention is the insurance company's only procedural option. See Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity, § 160.15.

Dissenters' Rights After Merger. In Singhania v. Uttarwar (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 416 , a California appellate court has held that after a merger, shareholders on notice that the corporation is obligated by statute to provide a statement of the price determined by the corporation to represent the fair market value of dissenters' shares, and that the statement constitutes an offer by the corporation to purchase dissenters' shares at the price stated, can act to protect their interests as potential dissenters by promptly demanding a buyout price from the corporation. If unsuccessful, the shareholders can seek judicial relief by petitioning for a writ of mandate to compel the corporation to immediately provide a statement of the buyout price as required by statute. The court concluded that there is no reason for derailing the statutory buyout procedure when the corporation sends the required notice of approval of a reorganization, and the notice omits the required statement of a fair-market price for dissenters' shares, but the corporation does provide the full text of Corp. Code §§ 1300-1304 as required by statute. See Ch. 169, Corporations: Reorganizations, § 169.18.

§ 1.70 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 998* Applies to Inverse Condemnation Proceedings and Expert Witness Fees Allowable From Inception of Action. In Regency Outdoor Advertising, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 507 , the California Supreme Court held that the categorical exclusion of eminent domain proceedings from the application of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 does not preclude its application in inverse condemnation proceedings, and that expert witness fees awarded under § 998 are not limited to those incurred after the offer to compromise is made. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.17[2].

Arbitration Plaintiffs Are Eligible for Deposition and Exhibit Preparation Costs Under § 998. In Pilimai v. Farmers Ins. Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133 , the California Supreme Court held that an uninsured motorist arbitration pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2 was an "arbitration" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and subject to § 998's cost-shifting provisions. Further, the "maximum liability" provision of § 11580.2(p)(4), limiting the maximum liability of an insurer when bodily injury is caused by one or more motor vehicles, whether insured, underinsured, or uninsured, to the insured's underinsured motorist coverage limits, less an amount paid to the insured by or for any person or organization that could be held legally liable for the injury, did not preclude court-awarded costs under § 998 to the insured when costs plus the damages awarded the insured would exceed the coverage limit. Finally, the Court held that arbitration plaintiffs such as the plaintiff in this case are eligible for deposition and exhibit preparation costs pursuant to § 998(d). See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.17[1].

Insurance. In Essex Insurance Co. v. Five Star Dye House, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1252 , the California Supreme Court held that an insured's assignment of a bad faith cause of action against an insurance company based on wrongful denial of benefits carries with it the right to recover Brandt fees that the assignee incurs to recover the policy benefits in the lawsuit against the insurance company. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[6].

Costs Recoverable in Trade Secret Misappropriation Actions. Under an amendment to Civ. Code § 3426.4, the prevailing party now has a right to recover costs, including expert witness fees, if a claim of trade secret misappropriation is made in bad faith, a motion to terminate an injunction is made or resisted in bad faith, or the misappropriation was willful or malicious. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.32[1].

Neighbors Obtaining New Hearing Entitled to Attorney's Fees. In Bowman v. City of Berkeley (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 173 , a mandamus action by neighbors who successfully petitioned to vacate a city's original approval of a housing project for senior citizens, the trial court properly awarded attorney's fees to the neighbors. The neighbors were concerned as much with the process by which the city approved the project as with the project itself, and the court could choose to credit their professed intentions if their credibility were at issue. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56[2].

[1] Examinations

Court Order for Mental Examinations Must Specify Tests. In Carpenter v. Superior Court (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 249 , the court of appeal held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.320, the trial court must "specify the ... diagnostic tests and procedures" of mental examination by naming the tests and procedures to be performed; ordering "standardized written psychological tests" of "emotional and cognitive functioning" failed to meet the statutory requirements. See Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations, § 197.17[6].

[2] Expert Witness

Simultaneous Exchange of Expert Witness Information. In Fairfax v. Lords (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1019 , the court of appeal held the trial court committed prejudicial error by allowing a medical malpractice defendant to delay his designation of retained expert witnesses until 20 days after plaintiff had designated his own expert, instead of enforcing a simultaneous exchange of information as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210(a)]. See Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information, § 198.11[1].

[3] Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations

Tax Return Privilege Does Not Apply to Foreign Taxes. In Firestone v. Hoffman (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1408 , the court of appeal concluded that although California case law does create privilege for tax returns, that privilege does not apply to foreign taxes. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.124[2].

Newsmedia Privileges Are Available to Online Journalists. In O'Grady v. Superior Court (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1423 , an action brought by a manufacturer of computer hardware and software alleging misappropriation of trade secrets, the court of appeal held any subpoenas seeking unpublished information from online journalists would be unenforceable through contempt proceedings in light of the California reporter's shield [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(b); Evid. Code, § 1070]; and discovery of petitioners' sources was also barred by the conditional constitutional privilege against compulsory disclosure of confidential sources. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, §§ 191.123[1], [2][b], 191.123[4][c].

Mediation Confidentiality Waiver. In Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565 , the court of appeal held that the requirement in Evid. Code § 1123, that the written settlement agreement be signed by the settling parties, did not require that an effective mediation-confidentiality waiver be signed by each of the litigants, provided that the written waiver was signed by each of the settling parties or their respective counsel. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.125.

Discovery: Clergy-Penitent and Psychotherapist-Patient Privileges Construed. In Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 417 , a case investigating allegations of child sexual assault committed by two priests, the court of appeal held that documents generated in the course of "troubled-priest interventions" were not privileged as penitential communications under Evid. Code § 1032, because both parties to the original communications knew they would be transmitted to a third person. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.70[2].

Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210* Extends to Any Cause of Action That Relates to Trade Secret. In Advanced Modular Sputtering, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 826 , a trade secret civil discovery case of first impression, the court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210 is not limited in its application to a cause of action under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, for misappropriation of the trade secret, but extends to any cause of action that relates to the trade secret. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.82[2].

Evidence Preclusion Sanctions Available for Repeated Pattern of Abuse. In Karlsson v. Ford Motor Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1202 , the court of appeal upheld evidence preclusion sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030 against defendant minivan manufacturer on the issues of warnings and the technical feasibility of safer, alternative seat belt design, because the manufacturer's repeated pattern of abuse led to loss of evidence on failure to warn. See Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.13[3][b].

Terminating Sanctions. In Electronic Funds Solutions, LLC v. Murphy (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1161 , the court of appeal found striking defendants' answer under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2023(b)(4)(A) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(d)(1)) an appropriate discovery sanction, based on defendants' "pervasive and consistent" misuse of the discovery process. See Ch. 192, Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.13[3][b][iii].

[5] Scope, Regulation, and Timing

Third Party Financial Discovery in Legal Malpractice Cases. In Hecht, Solberg, Robinson, Goldberg & Bagley LLP v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal App. 4th 579 , the court of appeal, addressing the standards governing an important aspect of third party financial discovery in legal malpractice cases, held that even assuming non-party petitioner law firm had protectible financial privacy rights, those rights did not preclude discovery that was relevant to essential issues, such as collectibility, in this legal malpractice action brought by real party in interest client against other attorneys, because the malpractice plaintiff could show that the requested financial and insurance information was relevant and material to prove that a better result should have been obtained for him by current attorney defendants. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing , §§ 190.64[2], [7].

Civ. Code § 2527 Reporting Requirement Is Unconstitutional. In ARP Pharmacy Svcs., Inc. v. Gallagher Bassett Svcs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1307 , the Court of Appeal held that the fee study reporting requirements in Civ. Code § 2527 and the related penalty and enforcement provisions in Civ. Code § 2528 violate the free speech provision of the California Constitution because they violate the free speech rights guaranteed to prescription drug claims processors by compelling speech, and regulation is not narrowly tailored to achieve a governmental interest to encourage insurers to pay pharmacists fair rate for drug dispensing services. See Ch. 214, Drugs and Pharmacists, § 214.81[1].

Elections--Voter Registration Confidentiality. Amendments to Elec. Code § 2194 now provide voter registration card information must not be used for any personal, private, or commercial purpose, including, but not limited to the harassment of any voter or voter's household; the advertising, solicitation, sale, or marketing of products or services to any voter or voter's household; or reproduction in print, broadcast visual or audio, or display on the Internet or any computer terminal; and the signature of the voter shown on the voter registration card is confidential and must not be disclosed to any person, except as provided by law. See Ch. 243, Elections, 243.17[1].

Elections--Challenge to Voter Registration. Amendments to Elec. Code § 2194 now provide the home address or signature of any voter must be released whenever the person's vote is challenged pursuant to the Elections Code; the address or signature must be released only to the challenger, to elections officials, and to other persons as necessary to make, defend against, or adjudicate the challenge; and an elections official must permit a person to view the signature of a voter for the purpose of determining whether the signature matches a signature on an affidavit or registration or a petition, but cannot permit a signature to be copied. See Ch. 243, Elections, § 243.17[2][c].

Elections--Affidavit of Registration and Required Postings on Confidentiality. New Elec. Code § 2157 provides for statewide standards for the affidavit of registration and voter registration cards, and includes such requirements as type size and color of ink, statements regarding confidential voter status and misdemeanor punishment for using voter registration information for commercial purposes, and a toll-free fraud hot line telephone number maintained by the Secretary of State that the public may use to report suspected fraudulent activity concerning misuse of registration information. New Elec. Code § 2157.2 also requires state ballot pamphlets and local and state web sites to post required text on voter confidentiality and reporting suspected misuse of such information. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.16[2], [4].

Initiatives--Title and Ballot Summary. The California Supreme Court in Costa v. Superior Court (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 986 held that slight discrepancies between the ballot summary version submitted to the Attorney General and the version circulated for signature may be permissible if the discrepancies do not mislead the public or otherwise frustrate or undermine the purposes underlying any of the applicable constitutional or statutory provisions or threaten the integrity of the electoral process. However, the Court narrowed its holding to the facts of the case in finding that the discrepancy was inadvertent, and emphasized that its holding did not mean that the proponents of an initiative measure properly may circulate, even inadvertently, a version of the measure that differs from the version submitted to the Attorney General; the Court's conclusion in the Costa might not be warranted under other circumstances. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.21[2][a].

[1] Discrimination

Hostile Work Environment Sexual Harassment Plaintiff Must Show More Than Crude Language and Conduct. The California Supreme Court in Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Prods. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211 now holds that a hostile work environment sexual harassment claim is not established (1) by a coworker's crude language and lewd gestures that are not directing sexual innuendos or gender-related language toward the plaintiff or toward women in general; or (2) by infrequent sexual comments directed at employees other than the plaintiff, if those comments do not permeate and destroy the plaintiff's work environment. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36[5][b].

Fair Employment and Housing Act Does Not Obligate Employer To Create New Position for Employee With Disability. A California Court of Appeal has held that an employer that has provided a reasonable accommodation for an employee with a temporary disability is not obligated to transform that accommodation into a permanent position once the employee's temporary disability becomes permanent. See Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.35[1][a].

[2] Employer Liability

Premises-Line Rule Inapplicable in Respondeat Superior Case. In Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 458 , the court of appeal refused to apply the "premises line rule" in the respondeat superior context and held that an employer could not be vicariously liable for an employee's automobile accident that occurred while the employee was turning into the parking lot on the employer's premises. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[3].

[3] Termination and Discipline

"At Will" Employment Contract Need Not Specify That Termination May Be Without Cause. The California Supreme Court has held that an employment contract stating that the employment was "at will" and terminable "at any time" unambiguously created an at-will employment relationship, even though did not also state that termination could be without cause. Because there was no ambiguity about the at-will nature of the employment, additional contractual provisions regarding a 90-day probationary period and annual reviews did not expressly or impliedly create a right to be terminated only for cause. See Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.13[1], 249.30.

"Materiality" Test for Adverse Employment Action in FEHA Retaliation Suit Also Applies in Retaliation Suit Under Whistleblower Statute. A California Court of Appeal has held that to qualify as an "adverse employment action" under the whistleblower statute, Lab. Code § 1102.5(b), an employer's retaliatory act against an employee must have a material effect on the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment; it is not sufficient that the act deter the employee from engaging in protected activities. In so holding, the Court of Appeal adopted the same test that the Supreme Court recently announced in Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028 , for retaliation actions under the Fair Employment and Housing Act. See Patten v. Grant Union High Sch. Dist. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1378 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.15[2].

Court of Appeal Strikes Down IWC-Created Exemption From Meal-Period Requirements. A California Court of Appeal has struck down a provision of Wage Order No. 16-2001 that created a new exemption from employers' statutory duty to provide meal periods for certain collective bargaining agreements [see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11160, P 10(E)]. The court held that the Wage Order exceeded the Industrial Wage Commission's authority because its creation of a new exemption was inconsistent with the limited exemptions expressly set forth in Lab. Code § 512. See Bearden v. U.S. Borax, Inc. (2006) 179 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2993, 138 Cal. App. 4th 429, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14[2][f].

Employer May Not Use "Averaging" to Establish Compliance With California Minimum Wage Law. A California Court of Appeal has held that an employer may not use "averaging" (under which some hours would be compensated at less than the minimum statutory or contractual rate so long as the average compensation for the relevant pay period equals or exceeds the minimum rate) to establish compliance with the California minimum wage law, even though averaging is permissible under federal law. See Armenta v. Osmose, Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 314 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.11.

Employees' "Walking Time" After Start of Workday Is Compensable. The United States Supreme Court has held that under the Fair Labor Standards Act, as amended by the Portal-to-Portal Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq., an employee is entitled to compensation for time spent walking to the employer's production area after donning required protective gear. See IBP, Inc. v. Alvarez (2005) 126 S. Ct. 514 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.41[1][d].

Code § 3105(b)*, a court may grant reasonable visitation rights to a person who previously served as the legal guardian of a child if the court determines that such visitation is in the child's best interest [see Ch. 290H, Guardianship and Conservatorships: Termination of Guardianship and Conservatorships, § 290H.11[6]].

§ 1.77A Injunctions

Declaratory Judgment Does Not Render Request for Injunction Moot. In Syngenta Crop Protection, Inc. v. Helliker (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1464 , the court of appeal held that a declaratory judgment is a cumulative remedy and does not preclude injunctive relief based on the same facts. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.40[4].

Decision to Grant a Restraining Order Rests in Trial Court's Sound Discretion; Abuse of Discretion Occurs Only When Court Has Exceeded the Bounds of Reason or Contravened the Uncontradicted Evidence. In Biosense Webster, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 827 , the court of appeal held that a trial court improperly granted a temporary restraining order prohibiting a company from commencing or taking any action to enforce any noncompetition agreement or restrictive covenant against three of its former employees in any court other than the Los Angeles County Superior Court or federal court in the State of California. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.85[1].

Attorney's Fees. In Essex Insurance Co. v. Five Star Dye House, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1252 , the California Supreme Court held that an insured's assignment of a bad faith cause of action against an insurance company based on wrongful denial of benefits carries with it the right to recover Brandt fees that the assignee incurs to recover the policy benefits in the lawsuit against the insurance company. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[6].

Parties Entitled to Sue for Insurance Bad Faith. In Century Surety Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 922 , the court of appeal held that the spouse of the named insured, who was a co-owner of the insured business, was an insured within the CGL policy definition, entitling her to sue the insurer for bad faith. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[3].

Insurer's Duty to Indemnify. In County of San Diego v. Ace Property & Casualty Ins. Co. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 406 , and Powerine Oil Co., Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 377 , the California Supreme Court reached different conclusions, based on different insuring language, with respect to excess liability insurers' obligations to indemnify the insured for administrative cleanup and related costs outside the context of damages in a lawsuit. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.114[4].

Liability for Failure to Obtain Coverage. In Business to Business Markets, Inc. v. Zurich Specialties London Ltd. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 165 , the court of appeal found that a surplus lines insurance broker owed a duty to a third party to obtain adequate insurance as requested, based on the relationships formed among the third party, the retail broker it contacted, the surplus lines broker, and the insured company, because the commercial contract between the third party and the insured required the insured to obtain that coverage. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.173.

[2] Indemnity and Contribution

Intentional Tortfeasor Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability Under Proposition 51. In Thomas v. Duggins Construction Co., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1105 , the court of appeal held that an intentional tortfeasor is not entitled to apportionment of liability under Proposition 51 for noneconomic damages if the negligence of another contributed to the injury, regardless of whether the negligent person is the plaintiff or a third-party tortfeasor. The court also held that because no apportionment is permitted, a party who is vicariously liable for an intentional tort may be liable for all of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][c][vi], [f].

Manufacturer of Defective Product Not Entitled to Reduction of Damages for Fault of Noninjured Product Owner. In Ford v. Polaris Industries, Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 755 , the court of appeal held that a product manufacturer liable for a product defect could not reduce its liability under Proposition 51 by pointing to the fault of the product owner, who was not the injured party. The court had already held that under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, the product owner owed no duty of care to the injured party. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][d].

Good-Faith Settlement Provisions May Be Applied Without Action in Which Co-Tortfeasors Were Named as Co-Defendants. In Bob Parrett Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1180 , the court of appeal held that the good-faith settlement provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 may apply even if equitable indemnity claims are not pursued in an action in which the injured party has actually named the tortfeasors as co-defendants. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[2].

Indemnity of Residential Builder by Subcontractor for Builder's Negligence Unenforceable. Pursuant to amended Civ. Code § 2782(c), for residential construction contracts entered into after January 1, 2006, provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting the construction contract and any amendments to the contract that purport to indemnify or defend the builder by a subcontractor against liability for claims of construction defects are unenforceable to the extent that the claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder, or the builder's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or for defects in design furnished by those persons, or to the extent the claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.34[2].

Indemnity Agreement Did Not Cover General Contractor's Own Negligence. In McCrary Construction Co. v. Metal Deck Specialists, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1528 , the court of appeal held that if responsibility for workplace safety is shared between a general contractor and subcontractors under their contractual agreements, but the general contractor specifically assumes responsibility for eliminating the known danger of holes left in a roof by a subcontractor after the subcontractor failed to correct the dangerous condition, the general contractor engaged in active negligence by failing to ensure that the holes were covered and marked appropriately. Because an indemnity agreement with the subcontractor did not specifically cover the general contractor's own negligence, indemnity of the general contractor was inappropriate. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.02[5][b].

Code Civ. Proc. § 356* Does Not Extend Statute of Repose in Construction Defect Cases. In Inco Development Corp. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1014 , the court of appeal held that in a construction defect case, a bankruptcy stay that ended prior to expiration of the 10-year period imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 did not extend that 10-year period under Code Civ. Proc. § 356, because Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is technically a statute of repose, not a statute of limitations. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.70[3].

Proposed Allocation of Non-Adjudicated Claims Requires Evidence of Reasonableness. In Jones v. John Crane, Inc. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 990 , the court of appeal held that in multi-defendant actions, if there is no pretrial finding that a settlement with defendants who did not go to trial was reached in good faith, an allocation of non-adjudicated claims by the trial court requires the plaintiff to present to the court evidence of the reasonableness of the proposed allocation, including evidence of a rational basis for the allocation and that the allocation was reached in an atmosphere of appropriate adversity with the settling parties. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][e].

§ 1.79 Mandate and Prohibition

Court May Have Discretion to Hear Writ Petition Filed Beyond 60-Day Limit. In Bob Parrett Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1180 , the court of appeal held that absent an applicable statute, courts have discretion to hear a writ petition filed beyond the judicially imposed 60-day limit. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.63.

Petitioner for Writ of Mandate Must Establish That There Is No Plain, Speedy, and Adequate Remedy, in the Ordinary Course of Law. In BarrattAmerican, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 685 , the California Supreme Court dismissed a mandate petition, holding that the issue in the petition seeking to compel the City to review and adjust building permit fees could be determined in a validation action, and therefore the petitioner had an adequate remedy at law. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.50.

Party on Whom Alternative Writ Has Been Served May Make Return by Demurrer, Verified Answer, or Both. In Caliber Bodyworks, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 365 , the court of appeal held that a return must be in the form of a demurrer or verified answer, not a memorandum of points and authorities in opposition to the petition. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.85[1].

Writ Petition Following Demurrer May Be Proper. In Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185 , the court of appeal held that a writ petition following a demurrer was proper when waiting for resolution after a final judgment would undermine a party's sovereign immunity. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.51[4][a].

§ 1.80 Marriage, Cohabitation, and Harassment

[1] Annulment

Fraud. In In re Marriage of Meagher & Maleki (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court held that a husband's misrepresentations about his financial status, which were intended to fraudulently induce his wife to invest in a business venture with him, to enable him to gain control of her assets, was not the type of fraud that constitutes an adequate basis for granting the wife an annulment. See Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights, § 25.15[5][c].

Domestic Partnership Rights. In Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 824 , the California Supreme Court held that in light of the legislature's intent to create a policy favoring domestic partnerships similar to the policy favoring marriage, the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 51) requires businesses to treat registered domestic partners the same as married couples, and precludes them from granting married couples benefits they deny to persons registered as domestic partners. Subsequent to this decision, Civ. Code § 51 was amended to prohibit discrimination based on marital status or sexual orientation [2005 Stats., ch. 420, § 3]. See Ch. 359, Marriage, § 359.13[4].

Proposition 22. In Knight v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 14 , the court held that the Domestic Partner Act does not violate Proposition 22, codified in Fam. Code § 308.5, which states that only marriage between a man and a woman is valid or recognized in California. This Proposition was intended only to limit the status of marriage to heterosexual couples and to prevent the recognition in California of same-sex marriages that have been, or may in the future be, legitimized by laws of other jurisdictions. By enacting the Domestic Partner Act, the legislature has not created a "same-sex marriage" by another name. See Ch. 359, Marriage, § 359.13[4].

Standing to Sue for Wrongful Death of Domestic Partner. In Bouley v. Long Beach Memorial Medical Center (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 601 , the court held that the 2002 and 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, giving domestic partners standing to sue for wrongful death, operate retroactively and apply to deaths occurring before January 1, 2002. In Armijo v. Miles (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1405 , the court held that giving domestic partners standing does not violate the California Defense of Marriage Act (Fam. Code § 308.5) because it has nothing to do with marriage. See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation, § 387.11[2][e].

Custody Rights of Lesbian Cohabitants. The California Supreme Court has recognized in a number of cases that lesbian cohabitants may both be a child's mother, with attendant custody and support rights and obligations. In Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108 , the Court held that under the Uniform Parentage Act a woman may be a presumed mother of a child of her lesbian partner if they agree to raise the child together, she receives the child into her home, and she holds the child out as her natural child. In K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130 , the Court held that when a woman provides ova to her lesbian partner so that the partner can bear a child who will be raised in their joint home, both women are considered to be the child's parents. In Kristine H. v. Lisa R. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 156 , the Court held that the lesbian mother of a child is estopped from challenging the validity of a stipulated judgment declaring that she and her lesbian partner are the child's parents. See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation, § 387.11[5][c].

[3] Community Property

Recovery in Legal Malpractice Action. In In re Marriage of Klug (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1389 , the court held that a wife's recovery in her settlement of her legal malpractice action against the couple's former attorney was her separate property, even though two necessary elements of her cause of action--duty and breach--occurred during marriage, when she did not suffer any loss or injury until after separation, and when it was the husband's actions, with the attorney's aid, in transferring funds offshore that resulted in the injury the wife claimed in the malpractice action. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.32[2][b].

Reimbursement. In In re Marriage of Weaver (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 858 , the court held that when a husband contributes his separate property interest in real property, which he acquired by gift during the marriage, to the parties' acquisition of their community property, joint tenancy interest in the property, the husband is entitled to reimbursement for the equity value of his separate property contribution on dissolution of the marriage; and the husband and wife are each entitled to one-half of the value of the remaining community property interest in the property. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.33[4][a][ii].

Transmutation. In In re Marriage of Benson (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1096 , the California Supreme Court held that there is no exception from the "express declaration" requirement of Fam. Code § 852(a) for partial performance of an agreement to transmute property. The writing requirement of Fam. Code § 852(a) cannot be satisfied when there is no writing at all about the subject property, and when a transmutation would have to be inferred from acts surrounding the parties' purported agreement. In In re Marriage of Starkman (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 659 , the court held that a clause in a trust agreement, which provided that the property transferred to the trust was community property unless the transferor spouse identified it as separate property, was insufficient to create a transmutation to community property of the husband's separate property which he transferred to the trust and did not identify as separate property. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.34[3][b].

Undue Influence. In In re Marriage of Mathews (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 624, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , the court held that a husband receives an advantage or benefit from his wife's execution of a quitclaim deed to real property in his favor, so that the property becomes his separate property. The husband has the burden of establishing that the wife's execution of the quitclaim deed was freely and voluntarily made, with full knowledge of all the facts, and with a complete understanding of its effect of making the property the husband's separate property. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.51[4][a].

[4] Dissolution of Marriage and Child Custody/Support

Goodwill as Community Asset. In In re Marriage of McTiernan & Dubrow (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1090 , the court found that there was no goodwill in a husband's career as a motion picture director because there was no "business." It noted that Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14101 and 14102 refer to the goodwill of a business, and that a business is a professional, commercial, or industrial enterprise with assets, not a natural person. The court rejected the contention that the term "business" also includes "a person doing business." See Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.131[7][a].

Reimbursement for Support Payments. In In re Marriage of Sherman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 795 , the court held that each support payment made by a party must be treated as a separate obligation or debt. To secure reimbursement under Fam. Code § 915, a party must show that the other spouse had nonexempt separate income available at the time that spouse used community funds to make a support payment. A spouse has a right to use community funds to make a support payment when the spouse does not have nonexempt separate income available to use for that purpose. See Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.300[2][b].

Custody if Household Member Is Registered Sex Offender. Family Code § 3030(a) has been amended to provide that a court may not grant physical or legal custody of a child to a person if anyone residing in the person's household is required, as a result of a felony conviction in which the victim was a minor, to register as a sex offender under Penal Code § 290, unless the court finds that there is no significant risk to the child and states its reasons in writing or on the record. See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.12[5][l].

Order for Drug Testing. In Deborah M. v. Superior Court (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1181 , the court held that the "least intrusive method of testing" which the court is required to order when requiring a parent to submit to drug testing under Fam. Code § 3041.5 means urine testing and that testing must comply with strict federal standards; hair follicle drug testing is not permitted. See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.12[5][m].

Effect of Party's Military Service Out of State. Family Code § 3047 has been added to provide that a party's absence, relocation, or failure to comply with a custody order is not, by itself, sufficient to justify a modification of the order if the reason for the absence, relocation, or failure to comply is the party's activation to military service and deployment out of state. See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.27[2][a].

Hearing in Move-Away Case. In In re Marriage of Brown & Yana (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 947 , the California Supreme Court held that an evidentiary hearing in a move-away situation should be held only if necessary. A court may deny the noncustodial parent's request to modify custody based on the relocation without holding an evidentiary hearing to take oral evidence if this parent's allegation or showing of detriment to the child is insubstantial in light of all of the circumstances presented in the case or is otherwise legally insufficient to warrant relief. An evidentiary hearing serves no legitimate purpose or function if the noncustodial parent is unable to make a prima facie showing of detriment or has failed to identify a material, contested factual issue that should be resolved by taking oral testimony. See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.28[2][d].

Income Available for Child Support. In County of Orange v. Smith (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1434 , the court held that sublease rental payments a parent receives are included in his or her gross income for purposes of determining child support, even if the parent does not include these payments as income on his or her tax return. In In re Marriage of Calcaterra & Badakhsh (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 28 , the court refused to accept the father's statement of his gross income, based on the variances in his income shown by his tax returns, loan applications, income and expense declaration, and testimony. In In re Marriage of Heiner (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1514 , the court held that the entire amount of a lump sum, undifferentiated personal injury award or settlement received by a party is not income for purposes of calculating child support; however, the components of a personal injury award that are intended to be compensation for loss of income and loss of earning capacity may be considered by the court as income for child support. In In re Marriage of Henry (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 111 , the court held that an increase in the equity value of a party's residence is not income for purposes of calculating child support. See Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, § 224.105[1].

Using Imputed Income to Calculate Child Support. In In re Marriage of Eggers (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 695 , the court held that when a supporting parent quits a job, the court may conclude that the parent's conduct reflects a divestiture of resources required for child support obligations. It may impute income to that parent based on his or her earning capacity if the amount of income imputed is supported by evidence of opportunity and ability to work reflecting that level of income. See Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, § 224.105[5].

Modification of Support Order Due to Military Service. Family Code § 3651 has been amended to provide that a party to a support order who is activated to military duty or National Guard service may request modification of a support order by filing a Notice of Activation of Military Service and Deployment and Request to Modify a Support Order [Cal. Judicial Council Form FL-398]. See Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, §§ 224.178, 224.220.

Consideration of Parties' Retirement Plans in Setting Spousal Support. In In re Marriage of Schmir (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 43 , the court held that when considering the parties' retirement plans in setting spousal support, a court should weigh the public policy favoring provision for one's retirement against all other circumstances in the case. Courts have broad discretion to determine whether to consider as income available for spousal support purposes contributions made by a participant to his or her retirement plan. See Ch. 225, Dissolution of Marriage: Spousal Support, § 225.116.

[5] Harassment and Domestic Violence

Burden of Proof in Civil Harassment Proceeding. In Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400 , the court held that a lesser standard of proof is required to show harassment in a proceeding for civil harassment than is required to show a criminal threat under Penal Code § 422, which specifies that the threat must be so unequivocal, unconditional, immediate, and specific as to convey a gravity of purpose and an immediate prospect of the execution of a crime resulting in death or great bodily injury. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.12.

Parties to Civil Harassment Proceeding. In Huntingdon Life Sciences, Inc. v. Stop Huntingdon Animal Cruelty USA, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1228 , the court held that the summary procedures of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 only apply to natural persons, not to corporations, partnerships, or other entities. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.13.

Defendant's Response to Civil Harassment Petition. In City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606 , and Thomas v. Quintero (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 635 , the courts held that a defendant may file a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, challenging a petition under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 for injunctive relief; such a motion may not be used, however, to challenge an application for an interim restraining order issued pending a hearing on the petition for injunctive relief. In Siam v. Kizilbash (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1563 , the court held that a malicious prosecution action cannot be based on an unsuccessful civil harassment petition; the defendant's remedy is to seek sanctions for the filing of a frivolous petition. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.14.

Civil Harassment Order. Code of Civil Procedure § 527.10 has been added, and provides that any injunctive order issued in a civil harassment proceeding must prohibit the defendant from taking any action to obtain the address or location of the plaintiff or the plaintiff's family members, caretakers, or guardian, unless there is good cause not to make this order. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.15[1][b].

Workplace Violence Injunction. In City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606 , the court held that the petitioner who requests an injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 must establish a nexus between the unlawful violence or credible threat of violence and his or her workplace. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.34[3].

Domestic Violence Protective Order. Family Code § 6322.7 has been added, and provides that any domestic violence protective order must prohibit the enjoined party from taking any action to obtain the address or location of a protected party or a protected party's family members, caretakers, or guardians, unless there is good cause not to make this order. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.53[1].

Contempt Proceeding to Enforce Order. Code of Civil Procedure § 1218(d) now gives district attorneys and city attorneys the authority to initiate and pursue a court action for contempt against a party for failing to comply with a court order entered under the DVPA. See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.56[5].

[6] Paternity

Semen Donor. In Steven S. v. Deborah D. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 319 , the court held that Fam. Code § 7613(b), which provides that a semen donor is not the resulting child's legal father, applies even if the sperm donor and the woman who conceives the child are known to each other and the woman acknowledges that the donor is the child's father. This statute does not make an exception for known sperm donors or for cases in which the parties have an intimate relationship. See Ch. 412, Paternity .

Motion to Set Aside Judgment of Paternity. The Judicial Council has adopted new forms [Cal. Judicial Council Forms FL-272, FL-273, FL-274, FL-276, FL-278] that may be used to seek an order setting aside a judgment of paternity under Fam. Code § 7646. See Ch. 412, Paternity .

§ 1.81 Physicians and Other Medical Personnel

Additional Injury Not Necessary for Physician to Be Liable for Performing Unnecessary Surgery. In Tortorella v. Castro (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal held that even in the absence of additional injury, a physician may be liable for performing a surgery that was unnecessary under the appropriate standard of care. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.11[5].

Signed Consent Form Not Determinative in Lack of Informed Consent Claim Against Physician. In Quintanilla v. Dunkelman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 95 , the court of appeal held that although a physician may defend a claim of lack of informed consent on the grounds of a signed consent form, the adequacy of a written consent form is a factual issue for the jury. In that case, the court upheld a jury verdict for a Spanish-speaking patient who had signed a pre-surgery consent form written in Spanish, because she testified that she did not read Spanish, she was rushed through the pre-surgery admissions procedures and told to "sign here" and "initial there," and neither the examining physician nor the surgeon had adequately explained what procedures were going to be performed. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.13[8].

Failure of Physician to Report Suspected Child Abuse Governed by MICRA Limitations Period. In David M. v. Beverly Hospital (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1272 , the court of appeal held that a claim that a physician negligently failed to report suspected child abuse is a claim for professional negligence that is governed by the limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5 and is not subject to the general tolling rule that would otherwise apply during a person's minority. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.47[3][a].

[1] Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation

Judicial Council Forms. Two official Judicial Council forms have been updated: Form DE-121 [see Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.146] and DE-122 [see Ch. 447, Probate: Statutory Notice Requirements, § 447.64]. In addition, Judicial Council form DE-295, Ex Parte Petition for Final Discharge and Order, has been added [see Ch. 458E, Probate: Discharge, § 458E.51].

Assignment of Interest. New Prob. Code § 11604.5(b) specifies requirements that must be met when a beneficiary has assigned all or part of his or her interest in a decedent's estate to a "transferee for value" in exchange for a cash advance or other consideration. For discussion, see Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation, § 458D.107.

[2] Statutory Notice Requirements

Judicial Council Forms. Two official Judicial Council forms have been updated: Form DE-121 [see Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.146] and DE-122 [see Ch. 447, Probate: Statutory Notice Requirements, § 447.64]. In addition, Judicial Council form DE-295, Ex Parte Petition for Final Discharge and Order, has been added [see Ch. 458E, Probate: Discharge, § 458E.51].

Notice to Director of California Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board. Prob. Code § 216 has been added, effective January 1, 2006, to require notification to the Board of a decedent's death if the decedent has an heir who is confined in a local or California state correctional facility. See Ch. 447, Probate: Statutory Notice Requirements, § 447.14[7].

[3] Taxes

Transfers With Retained Life Estate. In Strangi v. Comm'r (5th Cir. 2005) 417 F.3d 468 , the court held that a transferor retains "possession or enjoyment" of property within the meaning of I.R.C. § 2036(a) if the transferor retains a substantial present economic benefit from the property rather than a speculative contingent benefit that may or may not be realized. See Ch. 453, Probate: Estate Tax, § 453.13[12][c].

Deduction for State Death Taxes. For estates of individuals dying after 2004, the value of the taxable estate is determined by deducting from the gross estate any estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession taxes actually paid to a state for any properly included in the gross estate. This deduction may be claimed on line 3b of IRS Form 706. It replaces the credit for state death taxes allowed for decedents dying before 2005. No dollar limits are imposed on the amount of this deduction. See Ch. 453, Probate: Estate Tax, § 453.18[6].

[4] Will Contests

No Contest Clause. In Zwirn v. Schweizer (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1153 , the court held that a beneficiary who claimed the decedent orally agreed to give the beneficiary 50 percent of the decedent's estate violated the no contest clause of the decedent's will by filing a creditor's claim and seeking to prosecute an action to enforce that claim. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14[2].

§ 1.82A Public Administration

Agency Interpretation Invalid Because Not Probably Adopted as a Regulation. In Morning Star Company v. State Board of Equalization (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 324 , the California Supreme Court held that the Department of Toxic Substances Control interpretation of a statute that virtually all California corporations with 50 or more employees "use, generate, store, or conduct activities in this state related to hazardous activities" was a regulation subject to APA requirements, and was therefore invalid because the interpretation was not properly adopted as a regulation under the provisions of the California APA. See Ch. 472, Public Agency Rules, § 472.20[1].

Liquor License Applicant Bears Burden of Proof. In Coffin v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 471 , the court of appeal held that the applicant for a liquor license bears the burden of proof regarding the applicant's eligibility for a liquor license from the start of the application process until the Department makes a final determination. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses, § 18.13[3].

Revocation of License Must Be Related to Fitness to Practice. Pursuant to Donaldson v. Dept. of Real Estate (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 948 , when licensees are convicted for crimes of moral turpitude, the department must prove that the conviction was substantially related to the licensee's fitness to engage in the profession in order for the department to suspend or revoke the license of the licensee based on the conviction. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[2].

§ 1.83 Public Entities and Officers

Joint Powers Agreement Not Sufficient to Hold City Liable Because Police Chief Had No Authority to Enter Into Agreement on City's Behalf. In Authority for California Cities Excess Liability v. City of Los Altos (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1207 , the court of appeal held that an agreement reached by a city police chief was not an agreement binding on the city under Gov. Code § 895, because no law authorized the police chief to reach agreements on behalf of the city. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[9][a].

Primary Assumption of Risk Protected Community College From Liability to Baseball Player Hit by Pitch. In Avila v. Citrus Community College District (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148 , the California Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine protected a community college from liability to an intercollegiate baseball player who was struck by a pitch, even if the pitch was thrown at the player intentionally. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was part of the game. The Court also held that the immunity granted by Gov. Code § 831.7 to public entities for injuries sustained during hazardous recreational activities did not apply, concluding that school-sponsored athletics were not "recreational" in nature, but rather were part of a school's educational mission. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[5][b], Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][i], Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[8], and Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.14.

No Negligence or Strict Liability Causes of Action by Public Entities Against Lead Manufacturers; Fraud and Nuisance Action Seeking Abatement Allowed. In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292 , the court of appeal held that public entities, suing as the owners of buildings that contained lead paint, could not state a cause of action for negligence or strict liability against lead manufacturers, because the plaintiffs could not allege any actual damage to the buildings themselves. However, the court also held that an earlier Supreme Court holding allowing recovery for economic loss without accompanying property damage or personal injury applies to any action involving intentional, affirmative fraudulent conduct on the part of the defendant, if that fraudulent conduct exposes the plaintiff to liability to third parties, and therefore the public entities could pursue an action for fraud against the manufacturers. Finally, the court held that the public entities could pursue an action for public nuisance seeking abatement, although they could not recover through a nuisance action for damage caused to their own buildings. See

Equitable Estoppel Applied to Guidance Counselor Who Threatened to Humiliate Sexual Abuse Victim. In Doe v. Bakersfield City School District (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 556 , the court of appeal held that a school district was equitably estopped from resisting a petition to file a late claim because a school guidance counselor, who had sexually molested the plaintiff beginning in junior high school and continuing until after the plaintiff was out of high school, continually threatened to humiliate the plaintiff publicly, and these threats actually deterred the plaintiff from reporting the abuse even after he graduated from school. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.67[1].

Claims Against Judicial Branch Entity Subject to Tort Claims Act. Under newly enacted Gov. Code § 905.7, claims against a judicial branch entity for money or damages based on an express contract or for an injury for which the judicial branch entity is liable are subject to the claims filing requirements of the Tort Claims Act. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.22[1].

Tort Claims Act Claim Presentation Requirements Clarified. Gov. Code § 911.2 has been amended to provide that for purposes of determining whether a claim was presented within the required six-month period of the Tort Claims Act, the presentation date is: (1) the date the claim is submitted with the filing fee; (2) if a fee waiver is granted, the date the claim was submitted with an affidavit requesting the fee waiver; or (3) if a fee waiver is denied, the date the claim was submitted with an affidavit requesting the fee waiver, so long as the filing fee is paid within 10 calendar days after the mailing of the notice of denial of the fee waiver. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.23[4][a][i].

Funds Held in Trust for Private Parties Not "State Funds" Under False Claims Act. In State of California v. Altus Finance (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1284 , the California Supreme Court held that the assets of an insolvent insurer held by the Insurance Commissioner in trust for creditors of the insurer were not "state funds" as necessary to state a claim under the False Claims Act, because "state funds" include only funds that are part of the public treasury, the diminution of which would harm taxpayers. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, § 468.21[2].

[1] Adverse Possession

Hostile Occupancy. In Preciado v. Wilde (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 321 , the court of appeal found that a plaintiff who held title to property as a tenant in common and who sought to quiet title based on adverse possession failed to carry his burden of proving ouster. See Ch. 13, Adverse Possession, § 13.17[3][e].

[1A] Building Contracts

Comprehensive Revision of Law Governing Home Improvement Contracts. The statutes governing home improvement contracts have been comprehensively revised [2005 Stats., chs. 48, 385]. The legislation revises and refines the elements of home improvement contracts to prescribe in great detail the required contents of these contracts. It also defines and sets forth requirements for "service and repair" contracts in similar detail. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

[2] Brokers

Supplemental Property Tax Bills. 2005 legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 392, § 2] makes it the sole responsibility of the seller of residential real property in a transfer subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. (disclosures on transfer of real property), or the seller's agent, to deliver to the prospective purchaser a prescribed disclosure notice concerning supplemental property tax bills. See Ch. 103, Brokers, § 103.31[14][d].

[3] Condominiums

Homeowners' Associations Required to Adopt Rules Safeguarding Election Procedures. The Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act has been amended, operative July 1, 2006 [2005 Stats., ch. 450], to require homeowners' associations in common interest developments to adopt rules to safeguard the procedures used in conducting elections to provide, among other things, equal access to association media for all candidates and members with a point of view to express, and voting procedures that preserve confidentiality. The legislation gives members the right to bring a civil action for violations of the rules. See Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest

Developments, § 124.23[3].

Options of Homeowners' Association for Collecting Assessment Debts of Less Than $1,800. New legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 452] precludes a homeowners' association from resorting to judicial or nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings to collect on a debt arising from delinquent regular or special assessments when (1) the debt arose on or after January 1, 2006, and (2) the delinquent amount is less than $1,800. Available enforcement options include filing a civil action in small claims court to recover the amount in arrears. The legislation also imposes some new conditions on the association's right to foreclose assessment liens equal to or more than $1,800. See Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments, § 124.23[15].

[4] Deeds

Restrictive Covenants--Procedure for Removal From Recorded Documents. The statutory procedure for removing a restrictive covenant (such as a race-based restraint on alienation) from a recorded document [see Gov. Code 12956.2] has been changed [2005 Stats., ch. 297, § 2]. For discussion, see Ch. 184, Deeds, § 184.66[2][b].

[5] Homesteads

Declared Homestead Entitled Homeowner to Trustee Sale Proceeds. In Title Trust Deed Service Co. v. Pearson (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 168 , an interpleader action by the trustee of a deed of trust after a nonjudicial foreclosure sale to distribute the surplus proceeds, the trial court erred in refusing to acknowledge the declared homestead exemption afforded by Code Civ. Proc. § 704.720(c) by denying the homeowner's motion to amend his answer to include the declared homestead, because the judgment lien created by the recording of an abstract of judgment, only attached to equity in property above and beyond the recorded homestead exemption and any preexisting liens on the property. See Ch. 294, Homesteads .

[6] Landlord and Tenant

Interrogatories in Unlawful Detainer Proceedings. The Judicial Council form interrogatories for use in unlawful detainer proceedings has been revised and updated. See Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions, § 333.120.

[7] Mobilehomes

Fees for Enforcement of Rules Under Mobilehome Residency Law. Under 2005 legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 24, § 1], management of a mobilehome park may charge a reasonable fee if, in good faith, it has removed and stored a homeowner's or resident's personal property in order to bring the premises into compliance with park rules and regulations. Written notice of the intent to remove the property must be provided [see Civ. Code § 798.36]. For discussion, see Ch. 369, Mobilehomes and Mobilehome Parks, § 369.66[1].

[8] Mortgages and Trust Deeds

Expiration of Ancient Trust Deeds. In Ung v. Koehler (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 186 , the court of appeal found that a beneficiary of a deed of trust who is otherwise entitled to claim the 60-year time limit on expiring deeds of trust, does not lose that entitlement by filing a notice of default before exercising a power of sale that specifies the "final maturity date" of the underlying debt. See Ch. 555, Trust Deeds, § 555.18[4][b].

Regulation of Certain Secured Loans. The regulation of certain secured consumer loans has been revised [see Fin. Code § 4970 et seq.; 2005 Stats., ch. 531]. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds, § 555.21A[1].

Temporary Relief From Mortgage Payments for Service Members in Iraq and Afghanistan. 2005 legislation [2005 Stats., ch. 291] provides for the temporary relief from mortgage payments under Mil. & Vet. Code § 800 et seq. to a member of the U.S. military reserve or California national guard called to active duty as a result of the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan. For discussion, including coverage of eligibility for deferment of payment and limitations on relief, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds, § 555.21B.

Trust Deed Foreclosure--Notice of Sale After Postponements. The trustee's power to postpone a foreclosure sale under a deed of trust has been clarified, and requirements for a new notice of sale after postponement have been changed [see Civ. Code § 2924g(c); 2005 Stats., ch. 224, § 2]. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds, § 555.57[4].

[9] Vendor and Purchaser

Real Property Sales Agreements--Seller's Disclosures. The seller of residential real property in a transfer that is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. (concerning required disclosures by sellers), or the seller's agent, now is required to deliver to the prospective purchaser a prescribed disclosure notice concerning supplemental property tax bills, in addition to the other disclosures required by statute [2005 Stats., ch. 392, § 2]. For discussion, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser, § 569.13[2].

Real Property Sales Agreements--Notice of Law Enforcement Database of Registered Sex Offenders' Locations. The required form of notice [see Civ. Code § 2079.10a] has been changed, for contracts entered into on and after April 1, 2006 [2005 Stats., ch. 722, § 1]. See Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser, § 569.13[5].

§ 1.84A Schools

School Not Liable for Student's Killing by Drunk Driver While on Way to Off-Campus Bus Stop. In Bassett v. Lakeside Inn, Inc. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 863 , the court of appeal held that a school district was not liable for a student's being killed by a drunk driver off school property while the student was on the way to a school bus stop, because the student was not and should not have been under school supervision at the time. See Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.12[3].

Primary Assumption of Risk Protected Community College From Liability to Baseball Player Hit by Pitch. In *Avila v. § 1.85 Settlement

Providing for "Binding Mediation" Made Stipulation for Settlement Unenforceable. In Lindsay v. Lewandoski (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1618 , the court held that although leaving an unresolved term for future agreement is not invariably fatal, because a settlement may be enforceable under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 if the parties agree the remaining issue will be decided by arbitration, the agreement at issue was not enforceable because the court could not tell what the parties meant when they provided for "binding mediation" of a payment dispute. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release, § 520.21[2].

Statute of Frauds Did Not Bar Action to Enforce Settlement Agreement and Four-Year Statute of Limitations Applied. In Pietrobon v. Libarle (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 992 , an action to enforce a settlement agreement, the Court of Appeal held that the statute of frauds did not render the agreement invalid, even though the agreement by its terms was not to be performed within one year from its making and the defendant did not sign the agreement, and the four-year statute of limitations for a written contract applied. The defendant agreed to the terms of the settlement on the record of the settlement hearing and affirmed the agreement and its terms in his testimony at the trial of the action to enforce the agreement. Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 did not apply because the underlying matter was dismissed and the parties did not request that the court retain jurisdiction. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release, § 520.20.

Section 998 Offer and Acceptance Requirements. Effective January 1, 2006, the Legislature has amended Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to require that the written offer must include a statement of the offer, containing the terms and conditions of the judgment or award, and a provision that allows the accepting party to indicate acceptance of the offer by signing a statement that the offer is accepted. Any acceptance of the offer must be in writing and signed by counsel for the accepting party or, if not represented by counsel, by the accepting party. See Ch. 86, Automobiles: Pretrial Motions and Settlement Negotiations, § 86.12[2][a][ii]; Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.17[4]; Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Small Claims Jurisdiction Expanded; Official Forms Updated. The Legislature expanded the jurisdiction of small claims courts to include claims up to $7,500 made by natural persons. The Legislature enacted related provisions, including a specification of the scope of personal advisory services to be offered to small claims litigants, as well as continuing education requirements for temporary judges serving in small claims court [see 2005 Stats., chs. 600, 618, amending *Code Civ. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.87

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Surviving Heirs Cannot Recover for Own Injuries Under Elder Abuse Statute; Elder Abuse Action Does Not "Relate Back" to Wrongful Death Action. In Quiroz v. Seventh Ave. Center (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1256 , the court of appeal held that if an abused person protected by the elder abuse statute dies, the surviving heirs cannot recover the remedies provided by the statute for their own injuries in a wrongful death action. The court also held that because they seek recovery for different injuries, a cause of action asserted under the elder or dependent adult abuse statute does not "relate back" to a cause of action for wrongful death, and a plaintiff must state an action under the elder abuse statute within the applicable limitations period for it to be timely. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, §§ 5.31 and 5.36A, and Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.44[1].

60-Day Period for Filing Certificates of Merit in Sexual Abuse Cases Applicable to Certificate Explaining Late Filing. In McVeigh v. Doe I (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 898 , the court of appeal held that in sexual abuse lawsuits brought by plaintiffs who are at least 26 years of age, the certificates of merit required to be filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 may be filed up to 60 days after the complaint is filed, regardless of whether the statute of limitations has run when the certificates are filed, and that this 60-day period also applies to a certificate that explains why the certificates were not filed with the complaint. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, §§ 5.14[1] and 5.60[5].

Revival of Actions for Childhood Sexual Abuse Applicable Only to Actions Against Third Parties Arising From Employment Relationship. In Aaronoff v. Martinez-Senftner (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 910 , the court of appeal held that the 2002 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1, which revives actions for childhood sexual abuse against certain third parties who failed to take steps to stop known abuse, does not apply to claims brought against the actual perpetrator of the sexual abuse. Moreover, the claim against a third party must arise from an employment relationship, and a claim of abuse that is the result of a parent-child relationship is not covered under the revival statute, even if some of the abuse occurred at the parent's site of employment. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Tolling of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d) Inapplicable to Elder Abuse Action. In Smith v. Ben Bennett, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1507 , the court of appeal held that because the applicable limitations period in an action under the Elder Abuse statute is not the MICRA limitations period, the tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d), which extends the limitations period in an action for professional negligence of a health care provider for 90 days after issuing a notice of intent to sue, does not apply to a cause of action for elder abuse. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.36A.

[1A] Assault and Battery

Judicial Immunity Provides No Immunity for Assault or False Imprisonment. In Regan v. Price (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1491 , the court of appeal held that judicial immunity does not protect judges and other judicial actors from liability for assault and battery if the judge abandons the traditional role of the judge and uses brute force against a litigant. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.31, and Ch. 257, False Imprisonment, § 257.22[2].

[2] Conspiracy

Exceptions to Prefiling Order Requirement for Alleging Attorney-Client Conspiracy Applied. In Berg & Berg Enterprises, LLC v. Sherwood Partners, Inc. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 802 , the court of appeal, in a case of attorney-client conspiracy involving the prefiling order requirement of Civ. Code § 1714.10, held that an attorney for an assignee for the benefit of creditors does not owe an independent duty to the creditors or to any one of them individually, and thus the exception for an independent duty owed to the plaintiff did not apply. The court also held that in applying the exception for conspiracy to violate a legal duty in furtherance of the attorney's financial gain, the phrase "in furtherance of the attorney's financial gain" requires that the attorney derive economic advantage over and above the monetary compensation received in exchange for professional services actually rendered on behalf of the client, regardless of whether the attorney fees charged are alleged to have been excessive. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy, § 126.14[2][c][i], [ii].

[3] Damages

Medicaid Lien Limited to Amount of Recovery for Medical Expenses. In Arkansas Department of Health & Human Services v. AhlbornArkansas Department of Health & Human Services v. Ahlborn (2006) 547 U.S. 268, 164 L. Ed. 2d 459 , the United States Supreme Court held that in an action against a third-party tortfeasor, a state's lien for medical expenses paid on behalf of a Medicaid recipient is limited to the amount of the recovery that is allocated to the recipient's medical expenses. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[1].

No Negligence or Strict Liability Causes of Action by Public Entities Against Lead Manufacturers; Fraud and Nuisance Action Seeking Abatement Allowed. In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292 , the court of appeal held that public entities, suing as the owners of buildings that contained lead paint, could not state a cause of action for negligence or strict liability against lead manufacturers, because the plaintiffs could not allege any actual damage to the buildings themselves. However, the court also held that an earlier Supreme Court holding allowing recovery for economic loss without accompanying property damage or personal injury applies to any action involving intentional, affirmative fraudulent conduct on the part of the defendant, if that fraudulent conduct exposes the plaintiff to liability to third parties, and therefore the public entities could pursue an action for fraud against the manufacturers. Finally, the court held that the public entities could pursue an action for public nuisance seeking abatement, although they could not recover through a nuisance action for damage caused to their own buildings. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.47[1], and Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.25[5].

Medi-Cal Lien Limited to Recovered Medical Expenses Paid by Medi-Cal. In Fitch v. Select Products Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 812 , the California Supreme Court held that the Director of Health Services may not assert a Medi-Cal lien against a wrongful death recovery that does not include compensation for the decedent's medical expenses covered by Medi-Cal. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[1].

[3A] Death and Survival Actions

Surviving Heirs Cannot Recover for Own Injuries Under Elder Abuse Statute; Elder Abuse Action Does Not "Relate Back" to Wrongful Death Action. In Quiroz v. Seventh Ave. Center (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1256 , the court of appeal held that if an abused person protected by the elder abuse statute dies, the surviving heirs cannot recover the remedies provided by the statute for their own injuries in a wrongful death action. The court also held that because they seek recovery for different injuries, a cause of action asserted under the elder or dependent adult abuse statute does not "relate back" to a cause of action for wrongful death, and a plaintiff must state an action under the elder abuse statute within the applicable limitations period for it to be timely. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, §§ 5.31 and 5.36A, and Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.44[1].

No Right to Jury Apportionment of Settlement Recovery in Wrongful Death Action. In Kim v. Yi (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 543 , the court of appeal held that apportionment of damages among wrongful death plaintiffs by a court does not deprive the plaintiffs of the right to a jury trial, even if the plaintiffs are not members of the same family and the proceeds are from a settlement. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.20.

Privette* Doctrine Applicable if Injured Party Is Independent Contractor Hired by Another Independent Contractor. In Michael v. Denbeste Transportation, Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1082 , the court of appeal held that the Privette doctrine, which provides generally that the hirer of an independent contractor is not vicariously liable for an injury to an employee of the independent contractor, applies even if the injured party is actually an independent contractor, rather than an employee, of another contractor. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][b][iii].

Premises Liability May Be Asserted Against Hirer of Independent Contractor for Injury to Contractor's Employee. In Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 , the California Supreme Court held that a hirer who is also the owner or possessor of property may be liable under a premises liability theory for an injury to the employee of an independent contractor if: (1) the hirer knows or reasonably should know of a concealed, preexisting hazardous condition on the premises; (2) the contractor does not know and could not reasonably have discovered the hazardous condition; and (3) the hirer fails to warn the contractor about the hazard. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts , §§ 248.22[2][b][iv], [c].

Premises--Line Rule Inapplicable in Respondeat Superior Case. In Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 458 , the court of appeal refused to apply the "premises line rule" in the respondeat superior context and held that an employer could not be vicariously liable for an employee's automobile accident that occurred while the employee was turning into the parking lot on the employer's premises. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[3].

Preemption of Class Actions Alleging Securities Fraud Inducing Stockholder to Hold Stock. In Merrill Lynch v. DabitMerrill Lynch v. Dabit (2006) 547 U.S. 71, 164 L. Ed. 2d 179 , the United States Supreme Court held that the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 (15 U.S.C.S. § 78bb(f)(1)(A)) preempts class action suits alleging fraud or misrepresentation in connection with the sale or purchase of securities, including actionable conduct that induces a decision to hold already-purchased securities, if those suits are brought in the name of 50 or more class members. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.15[1].

Justifiable Reliance Not Shown if Action Was Required by Law. In Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517 , the court of appeal held that because an employer was required by law and by its workers' compensation insurance policy to report any claims to its insurer, the employer could not demonstrate reliance on an alleged fraudulent claim filed by an employee when it reported the claim to the insurer. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.16[9].

[5A] Games and Sports

Primary Assumption of Risk Protected Community College From Liability to Baseball Player Hit by Pitch. In Avila v. Citrus Community College District (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148 , the California Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine protected a community college from liability to an intercollegiate baseball player who was struck by a pitch, even if the pitch was thrown at the player intentionally. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was part of the game. The Court also held that the immunity granted by Gov. Code § 831.7 to public entities for injuries sustained during hazardous recreational activities did not apply, concluding that school-sponsored athletics were not "recreational" in nature, but rather were part of a school's educational mission. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[5][b], Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][i], Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[8], and Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.14.

Court Decides Whether Defendant in Primary Assumption of Risk Case Increased Risks of Activity. In Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732 , the court of appeal held that in an assumption of risk case involving a sporting activity, the trial court, rather than the jury, decides the question of whether the defendant increased the risks inherent in the activity. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.12[3].

Personal Trainer Not Liable for Death of Client. In Rostai v. Neste Enterprises (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326 , the court of appeal held that the assumption of risk doctrine protected a personal trainer from liability when a client suffered a heart attack due to overexertion during his first workout with the trainer. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[6], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][b].

Primary Assumption of Risk No Shield if Minor Operated ATV Without Compliance With Applicable Safety Regulations. In Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732 , the court of appeal held that the operation of an all-terrain vehicle by a minor without first complying with reasonable safety regulations governing that operation increased the risks of injury to other operators beyond those inherent in the activity, and that imposing liability for that conduct would not chill vigorous participation in off-road, recreational all-terrain vehicle use. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[7][f], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][vii].

[5B] Insane and Other Incompetent Persons

Clarification of Immunity of Mental Health Professionals for Conduct of Persons Granted Early Release. In Coburn v. Sievert (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1483 , the court of appeal held that for purposes of applying the immunity provided to mental health professionals for actions caused by persons granted early release from treatment facilities, the releasing professional is only required to show that the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152 actually dealing with early release have been met and need not show compliance with other provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.96.

Amendments to Provisions Governing Disclosure of Results of HIV Testing. Amendments to various Health & Safety Code provisions governing disclosure of HIV test results include increases in the amount of the applicable civil fines. A new provision, Health & Safety Code § 121022, mandates disclosure to state and local health officials but otherwise provides for confidentiality. Newly amended Health & Safety Code § 121025 now provides for a private right of action if a person negligently, willfully, or maliciously discloses the content of confidential public health records to a third party. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.250 et seq.

Assault Actionable Under Anti-Paparazzi Statute. Civ. Code § 1708.8, the so-called "anti-paparazzi" statute, has been amended to make actionable an assault committed with the intent to capture any type of visual image, sound recording, or other physical impression of the plaintiff. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.34A.

[6A] Libel and Slander

In Action Against Non-Media Defendant, Plaintiff Bears Burden of Proving Falsity of Defamatory Statements Concerning Public Interest. In Integrated Healthcare Holdings, Inc. v. Fitzgibbons (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 515 , the court of appeal held that a private-figure plaintiff bears the burden of proving the falsity of allegedly defamatory statements in an action against non-media defendants, if the statements concern a matter of public interest. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.55[6].

Motion to Strike Under Anti-SLAPP Statute Denied if Litigation Privilege Would Not Apply to Same Conduct. In A.F. Brown Electrical Contractor, Inc. v. Rhino Electric Supply, Inc. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1118 , the court of appeal held that because the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) does not extend to pre-litigation communications made when no lawsuit was seriously being considered, a motion to strike a cause of action under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 is properly denied if based on the same conduct. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.52.

Complaints to School Board Granted Judicial Immunity Even Without Formal Hearings. In Lee v. Fick (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 89 , the court of appeal held that because a complaint constitutes part of the official proceedings, it is not necessary that the official body take any particular action on the complaint for the complaint itself to be protected under the judicial immunity provided in Civ. Code § 47(b). Therefore, written complaints from parents to a school board about a coach's conduct were protected, even though no formal hearings were ever requested or held. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.61[3].

Malicious Prosecution Plaintiff Cannot Meet Favorable Termination Requirement By Comparing Judgment to Settlement Offer. In StaffPro, Inc. v. Elite Show Services, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1392 , the court of appeal held that a malicious prosecution plaintiff cannot meet the favorable termination requirement merely by demonstrating that the termination was more favorable to that party than the terms of a settlement offer made by that party earlier in the underlying action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.14[1].

Severability of Underlying Action Only Relevant to Probable Cause Element of Malicious Prosecution Claim. In StaffPro, Inc. v. Elite Show Services, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1392 , the court of appeal held that in a malicious prosecution action based on an underlying lawsuit involving multiple, severable causes of action, only some of which were terminated in favor of the malicious prosecution plaintiff, severability of the underlying action only comes into play when analyzing the lack of probable cause element of the malicious prosecution cause of action, and the element of favorable termination is concerned only with the result in the underlying proceeding as a whole. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.14[5].

Probable Cause for Bringing Civil Suit Not Defeated By Opposing Attorney's Assertion of No Liability. In Marijanovic v. Gray, York & Duffy (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1262 , the court of appeal held that if the plaintiff in an underlying civil action has some evidence suggesting that a particular party may be liable, a mere assertion by the attorney for that potentially-liable party that the party is not liable, without more, is not enough to defeat a finding of probable cause for bringing an action against that party for purposes of establishing a subsequent malicious prosecution action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.16[1].

Litigation Privilege Extended to Noncommunicative Conduct Used to Enforce Judgment. In Rusheen v. Cohen

(2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1048 , the California Supreme Court held that if the gravamen of an action is a communicative act, the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47 extends to noncommunicative acts that are necessarily related to the communicative conduct, including acts necessary to enforce a judgment, thereby providing a defense to an abuse of process claim based on such conduct. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.56[1].

Continuation of Meritless Litigation Not Abuse of Process. In Ramona Unified School District v. Tsiknas (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 510 , the court of appeal held that continuing to pursue litigation that has been determined to be without merit, such as through the filing of an amended complaint or a motion for attorney's fees, is not actionable as an abuse of process, although it may be actionable under a cause of action for malicious prosecution. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.53[1].

Special Procedures to Strike "SLAPPback" Suits. Effective October 5, 2005, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18 provides special procedures for a motion to strike a cause of action for malicious prosecution or abuse of process if that cause of action arises from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action that was itself dismissed pursuant to the anti-SLAPP statute, Code of Civ. Proc. § 425.16. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.24[2].

[8] Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

Manufacturer of Defective Product Not Liable for Emotional Distress to Non-Using Buyer. In Gu v. BMW of North America, LLC (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 195 , the court of appeal held that unlike the duty owed to a user, a car manufacturer does not owe a duty of care to prevent causing emotional distress to the buyer of the car if that buyer was not the party using the car at the time of the injury and if that buyer did not witness the injury-causing event. See Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, §§ 362.11[6][d][iv], 362.13[5].

[8A] Negligence

Cause of Action for Negligent Transmission of HIV Recognized. In John B. v. Superior Court (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1177 , the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff who has contracted HIV from a sexual partner may state a cause of action for negligent transmission of HIV. Moreover, this cause of action does not require actual knowledge by the defendant that he or she was infected at the time of transmission, but instead it is sufficient that the defendant, under the totality of the circumstances, had reason to know that he or she was infected. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[4].

Primary Assumption of Risk Protected Community College From Liability to Baseball Player Hit by Pitch. In Avila v. Citrus Community College District (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 148 , the California Supreme Court held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine protected a community college from liability to an intercollegiate baseball player who was struck by a pitch, even if the pitch was thrown at the player intentionally. The Court determined that the risk of being hit with a pitch was inherent in the game of baseball, and despite the fact that the conduct was in violation of the official rules of the game, intentionally throwing a pitch at or near a batter was a recognized strategy that was part of the game. The Court also held that the immunity granted by Gov. Code § 831.7 to public entities for injuries sustained during hazardous recreational activities did not apply, concluding that school-sponsored athletics were not "recreational" in nature, but rather were part of a school's educational mission. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[5][b], Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][i], Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[8], and Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.14.

Personal Trainer Not Liable for Death of Client. In Rostai v. Neste Enterprises (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 326 , the court of appeal held that the assumption of risk doctrine protected a personal trainer from liability when a client suffered a heart attack due to overexertion during his first workout with the trainer. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[6], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][b].

Primary Assumption of Risk No Shield if Minor Operated ATV Without Compliance With Applicable Safety Regulations. In Huff v. Wilkins (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 732 , the court of appeal held that the operation of an all-terrain vehicle by a minor without first complying with reasonable safety regulations governing that operation increased the risks of injury to other operators beyond those inherent in the activity, and that imposing liability for that conduct would not chill vigorous participation in off-road, recreational all-terrain vehicle use. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[7][f], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][vii].

Parent Not Liable for Rape of Daughter's Friend After Friend Left Parent's Home. In Margaret W. v. Kelley R. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 141 , the court of appeal held that in an action seeking to hold a defendant liable for the criminal conduct of a third party, foreseeability of harm must be measured by what the defendant actually knew, not by constructive knowledge or information that the defendant arguably should have known, but did not. In this particular case, a mother who invited her daughter's teenaged friend to spend the night at her home was not liable for the friend's being raped after leaving the house while the mother was out, because the mother had no actual knowledge to suggest any danger of rape. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][a].

Issue of Causation Should Have Gone to Jury in Store Clerk's Action Alleging Failure to Provide Security Guard. In Mukthar v. Latin American Security Service (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 284 , the court of appeal held that in an action brought by a convenience store clerk, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of the defendant, a security company that failed to provide an armed security guard at the store one night as they were under contract to do. Noting undisputed evidence that the security guard was normally positioned about a foot from the door where the clerk was injured by a woman who was trying to shoplift, the court of appeal held that the issue of causation should have gone to the jury. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.72[2].

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Snowboarders. In Lackner v. North (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1188 , the court of appeal held that a snowboarder has a duty not to board at a high rate of speed into a flat area used for resting without looking ahead to see and avoid contact with other skiers or boarders who are using the area to rest between runs. In Mammoth Mountain Ski Area v. Graham (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1367 , the court of appeal held that requiring a snowboarder to watch where he or she is going and not engage in a snowball fight while snowboarding at a high rate of speed would not deter vigorous participation in the sport or otherwise fundamentally alter the nature of snowboarding. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[5][b], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][c][ii], [d].

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Police Officer Training Class. In Saville v. Sierra College (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 857 , the court of appeal, in applying the primary assumption of risk doctrine to a case in which a student in a community college police officer training class was injured while participating in training exercises demonstrating police officer arrest and control maneuvers, held that the risk of injury was inherent in the physically-demanding maneuvers and the instructors had no duty to eliminate all risk of injury to the students, since doing so would invariably chill vigorous participation in the training exercises. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][e].

[8B] Nuisance

No Negligence or Strict Liability Causes of Action by Public Entities Against Lead Manufacturers; Fraud and Nuisance Action Seeking Abatement Allowed. In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292 , the court of appeal held that public entities, suing as the owners of buildings that contained lead paint, could not state a cause of action for negligence or strict liability against lead manufacturers, because the plaintiffs could not allege any actual damage to the buildings themselves. However, the court also held that an earlier Supreme Court holding allowing recovery for economic loss without accompanying property damage or personal injury applies to any action involving intentional, affirmative fraudulent conduct on the part of the defendant, if that fraudulent conduct exposes the plaintiff to liability to third parties, and therefore the public entities could pursue an action for fraud against the manufacturers. Finally, the court held that the public entities could pursue an action for public nuisance seeking abatement, although they could not recover through a nuisance action for damage caused to their own buildings. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.47[1], and Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.25[5].

[8C] Premises Liability

Driveway Owner Granted Recreational User Immunity for Injury on Intersecting Public Trail. In Miller v. Weitzen (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 732 , the court of appeal held that a homeowner's right of way to construct a driveway over an adjacent public trail fits within the definition of an "interest in real property" under Civ. Code § 846, thus providing the owner immunity from liability for injuries to recreational users that occur where the trail intersects the driveway. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.21.

[9] Railroads

No Duty to Warn of Dangers Associated With Walking Alongside Moving Train. In Christoff v. Union Pacific Railroad Co. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 118 , the court of appeal held that at points along a railroad track other than a road crossing or a train station, a railroad is under no duty to warn of the hazards of walking along a track while a train is passing. See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.62[3][c].

[9A] Trucks

Federal Regulation May Be Used to Determine Negligence of Commercial Truck Driver. In Weaver v. Chavez (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1350 , the court of appeal held that a regulation issued under the federal Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act requiring a commercial motor vehicle driver to use extreme caution and to reduce speed if hazardous conditions (such as rain or snow) exist, is a higher standard of care than the reasonable care standard imposed by state law, and this higher federal standard may be used to determine the negligence of a commercial vehicle driver during hazardous driving conditions. See Ch. 553, Trucks, § 553.11[1][c].

[10] Tort Claims Act

Joint Powers Agreement Not Sufficient to Hold City Liable Because Police Chief Had No Authority to Enter Into Agreement on City's Behalf. In Authority for California Cities Excess Liability v. City of Los Altos (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1207 , the court of appeal held that an agreement reached by a city police chief was not an agreement binding on the city under Gov. Code § 895, because no law authorized the police chief to reach agreements on behalf of the city. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[9][a].

Equitable Estoppel Applied to Guidance Counselor Who Threatened to Humiliate Sexual Abuse Victim. In Doe v. Bakersfield City School District (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 556 , the court of appeal held that a school district was equitably estopped from resisting a petition to file a late claim because a school guidance counselor, who had sexually molested the plaintiff beginning in junior high school and continuing until after the plaintiff was out of high school, continually threatened to humiliate the plaintiff publicly, and these threats actually deterred the plaintiff from reporting the abuse even after he graduated from school. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.67[1].

Claims Against Judicial Branch Entity Subject to Tort Claims Act. Under newly enacted Gov. Code § 905.7, claims against a judicial branch entity for money or damages based on an express contract or for an injury for which the judicial branch entity is liable are subject to the claims filing requirements of the Tort Claims Act. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.22[1].

Tort Claims Act Claim Presentation Requirements Clarified. Gov. Code § 911.2 has been amended to provide that for purposes of determining whether a claim was presented within the required six-month period of the Tort Claims Act, the presentation date is: (1) the date the claim is submitted with the filing fee; (2) if a fee waiver is granted, the date the claim was submitted with an affidavit requesting the fee waiver; or (3) if a fee waiver is denied, the date the claim was submitted with an affidavit requesting the fee waiver, so long as the filing fee is paid within 10 calendar days after the mailing of the notice of denial of the fee waiver. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.23[4][a][i].

§ 1.87A Trial

No Discretion to Reopen Jury Selection Once Jury Is Empaneled. In People v. Cottle (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 246 , the California Supreme Court held that under the Trial Jury Selection and Management Act, which governs civil and criminal proceedings, a trial court does not have discretion to reopen jury selection after the trial jury has been impaneled, but before alternate jurors are sworn. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.43.

No Jury Trial Right for Appointment of Proceeds of Settlement of Wrongful Death Action. In Kim v. Yi (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 543 , the court ruled that in an action arising from a wrongful death action involving several decedents, there is no right to have a jury apportion the proceeds of the settlement of the action. The apportionment proceeding is equitable and is a special proceeding. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.15[2][g].

Exercise of All For-Cause Challenges Not Required Before Exercise of Any Peremptory Challenges. In People v. Avila (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 491, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 133 P.3d 1076 , the California Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 226 does not dictate that all challenges for cause be exercised before any peremptory challenges may be exercised. A procedure in which challenges are exercised in groups, even if within each group challenges for cause are exercised before peremptory challenges, does not violate the statutory mandate. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.39[5][a].

Prosecutor Must Offer Explanation for Challenge of Juror When Prima Facie Case of Discrimination Shown. In Yee v. Duncan (9th Cir. 2006) 441 F.3d 851 , the Ninth Circuit held that when a criminal defendant established a prima facie case of gender discrimination in the prosecutor's use of a peremptory challenge during jury selection, and the prosecutor was unable to recall the basis for the challenge, the trial court could not substitute findings of the prosecutor's sincerity, together with circumstantial evidence indicating a lack of a discriminatory motive, for the prosecutor's failure to offer a non-discriminatory explanation for the challenge. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.42[6][b].

California Constitution Superseded Evidence Code § 787. In In re Freeman (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 630, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 850, 133 P.3d 1013 , a writ of habeas corpus after a conviction resulting in imposition of the death penalty, the California Supreme Court held that there was more than substantial evidence to support the referee's finding that the character and reputation for honesty and integrity of the district attorney who had prosecuted the case and later executed an affidavit and testified that the judge had improperly colluded with him during jury selection was poor, relying in part on testimony concerning specific instances of the prosecutor's dishonesty in violation of Evid. Code §§ 787, 1101(a). The Court found that the enactment of Cal. Const., art. I, § 28(d) superseded all California restrictions on the admission of relevant evidence except those preserved or permitted by the express words of § 28(d) itself, and among the superseded provisions was Evid. Code § 787. See Ch. 551, Trial, § 551.123[5].

No Contest Clause. In McIndoe v. Olivos (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 483 , the court held that a proposed challenge to the validity of amendments to a living trust that was to be divided into a survivor's trust and an exempt trust on the trustor's death, thereby removing the contestant as a beneficiary and cotrustee of the survivor's trust, did not violate the no-contest clause of the exempt portion of the trust. See Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.17.

Indemnification of Trustee. In Terry v. Conlan (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1445 , the court held that if litigation is necessary to preserve the trust, the trustee is entitled to reimbursement for his or her expenditures from the trust; however, if the litigation is specifically for the trustee's benefit, the trustee must bear his or her own costs. See Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.91.

Charitable Gift. In L.B. Research & Ed. Foundation v. UCLA Foundation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 171 , the court held that a conditional contract, not a charitable trust, was created by an instrument giving a $1 million contribution to the university but also providing that if this money is not used as directed, the fund must be transferred to another institution. See Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.290.

§ 1.89 Unfair Competition

Costs Recoverable in Trade Secret Misappropriation Actions. Under an amendment to Civ. Code § 3426.4, the prevailing party now has a right to recover costs, including expert witness fees, if a claim of trade secret misappropriation is made in bad faith, a motion to terminate an injunction is made or resisted in bad faith, or the misappropriation was willful or malicious. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.32[1].

Litigation Privilege No Defense Against Unfair Competition Action Brought by Nonparty to Underlying Litigation. In American Products Co., Inc. v. Law Offices of Geller, Stewart & Foley, LLP (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1332 , the court of appeal held that the litigation privilege is not a defense in an unfair competition action brought against an attorney if the plaintiff was not a party to the earlier litigation in which the allegedly protected conduct occurred. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.32[2].

Well-Defined Trade Rule or Standard May Support Action for Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage if Rule or Standard is Independently Actionable. In Stevenson Real Estate Services, Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Services, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215 , the court of appeal held that in an action between competitors who are bound by well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association, or profession, a violation of those rules or standards may constitute wrongful conduct that is actionable as interference with prospective economic advantage, so long as the rule or standard allegedly violated provides for, or gives rise to, a sanction or means of enforcement for a violation. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133[6].

Large Video Rental Retailer's Revenue-Sharing Agreements With Movie Studios May Have Violated Unfair Business Practices Statute. In Eddins v. Redstone (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 290 , the court of appeal held that the trial court erred by not considering whether revenue-sharing agreements between a large video rental retailer and large movie studios tended to destroy competition between the large video rental retailer and smaller, independently owned rental outlets that were not doing business with the studios under the same revenue-sharing agreements. The court also held that liability cannot be imposed under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17045 for price discrimination if that liability is premised on agreements made between two companies that are part of the same corporate family, because these companies form part of a single economic enterprise with a complete unity of financial interest. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.52[4].

State Antitrust and Unfair Competition Claims Alleging Damage in California Caused by Out-of-State Conduct Not Necessarily Preempted by Commerce Clause. In RLH Industries, Inc. v. SBC Communications, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1277 , the court of appeal held that the Commerce Clause does not necessarily prevent the application of state antitrust and unfair competition laws to out-of-state conduct causing damage in California, but determining whether a particular claim under state law would be preempted by federal law requires a factual analysis of the burden that would be imposed on interstate commerce. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.78[1].

Refusal to Deal With Competitor Not Actionable Under Unfair Competition Statute. In People's Choice Wireless, Inc. v. Verizon Wireless (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 656 , the court of appeal held that a supplier's refusal to deal on favorable terms with a competitor, although perhaps injurious to the competitor, is not necessarily actionable as an injury to competition under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.31[5][a].

PART III. 2006 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.90 Workers' Compensation

Medical Liens Filing Fees. In repealing Lab. Code § 4903.05, the legislature has repealed the requirement, enacted in 2003, that a filing fee of $100 accompany each lien for medical treatment expenses or for medical-legal expenses, and it has enacted Lab. Code § 4903.6, placing specified restrictions on the filing of such liens. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.262.

Workers' Compensation Insurance--Roofing Contractors. In amending Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(e), the legislature has made workers' compensation insurance mandatory for all roofing contractors holding Class C-39 licenses, even for those who have no employees. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Workers' Compensation Insurance--Roofing Contractors. In enacting Ins. Code § 11665, the legislature has required an insurer who issues a workers' compensation policy to a roofing contractor holding a Class C-39 license from the Contractors State License Board to perform an annual payroll audit for the contractor. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Petitions for Writ of Review--Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons. The California Supreme Court has amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.494, effective July 1, 2006, to require each party, other than the Appeals Board, to comply with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 14.5, concerning serving and filing a Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.510[3].

Permanent Disability-Apportionment. The court of appeal in E J Gallo Winery v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1536 , has held that an employee who sustained multiple disabling injuries while working for a single self-insured employer was entitled to compensation for total disability above any percentage of permanent disability previously awarded, and that the correct formula for apportioning awards in this situation required calculating the most recent award without regard to whether a previous award existed, then subtracting the dollar amount of the previous award from the dollar amount of the most recent award. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[5].

Aliens/Undocumented Workers. A new section of text discusses the rights of undocumented workers to workers' compensation benefits. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[5].

Medical Provider Networks. The Administrative Director has adopted the final versions of the medical provider network regulations, 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9767.1-9767.15. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][d][i] -[iv].

Utilization Review Standards. The Administrative Director has promulgated final regulations, 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.6-9792.10, effective September 22, 2005, regarding standards for utilization review of requests for medical treatment services. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][c].

Physician Fee Schedule. The Administrative Director has promulgated the final version of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9789.11, the physician fee schedule. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][b].

Appeals Board Forms. The Appeals Board has promulgated new versions of DWC WCAB Form 3, Stipulations With Request for Award, and DWC WCAB Form 5, Stipulation and Award and/or Order. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.470, 577.472.

Appeals Board Forms. The Appeals Board has promulgated a new version of DWC WCAB Form 15, Compromise and Release. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.460.

Apportionment --Existing Order-- Applicability of SB 899. The court of appeal in Marsh v. Workers' Comp. Appeals. Bd. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 906 , following Kleemann v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd., affirmed an Appeals Board order that remanded the case to the worker's compensation judge (WCJ) for the purpose of determining the applicability of SB 899, enacted 10 days after the WCJ's order denying apportionment, when the employer petitioned for reconsideration of the WCJ's order in light of SB 899. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Civil Actions --Respondeat Superior-- Commercial Traveler Rule. The court of appeal in Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1 , has held that the "commercial traveler rule" of workers' compensation law could not be incorporated into the respondeat superior doctrine of civil tort law. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[6][b][iii].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment--Retroactivity of SB 899. The court of appeal in Rio Linda Union School District v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Scheftner) (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 517 , has held that submission orders and orders closing discovery, issued prior to the effective date of SB 899, April 19, 2004, were not "existing" orders that could not be reopened due to the prohibition set forth in Sec. 47 of SB 899, so that SB 899's repeal of the former apportionment statutes, Lab. Code §§ 4663, 4750, and 4750.5, and enactment of new apportionment statutes, Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664, applied to the present case. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Wrongful Death Actions --Liens-- Medi-Cal. The California Supreme Court in Fitch v. Select Products Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 812 , has held that a Medi-Cal lien could not be asserted against a wrongful death action, when the damages recoverable by the plaintiff in that action did not and could not include compensation for medical services provided to the decedent by Medi-Cal. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.318[2].

Civil Actions--Fraudulent Workers' Compensation Claim. The court of appeal in Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517 , affirming the trial court's order pursuant to an employee's anti-SLAPP motion that struck the employer's complaint that alleged the employee's filing of a fraudulent workers' compensation claim, held that the employer failed to demonstrate a probability that it would prevail on the merits of its fraud claim and that permitting an employer to bring a civil action for fraud against an employee while a workers' compensation proceeding was pending could have a chilling effect on the employee's exercise of the right to file a workers' compensation claim. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.19[1].

Evidence--Admissibility. The court of appeal in Grupe Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Ridgeway) (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 977 , has held admissible at trial the testimony of a vocational rehabilitation counselor developed as a consequence of meetings between the counselor and the injured employee, all of which took place following closure of discovery at the mandatory settlement conference, since, at the conference, the employee had identified the counselor as an expert trial witness. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.157[4].

Employment Relationship--Immigration Status. The court of appeal in Farmer Brothers Coffee v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Ruiz) (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 533 , has held that a worker, who at the time of injury was an illegal alien who had obtained his job by showing the employer false Social Security and green cards, was an employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits, excluding reinstatement and back pay, and that, by virtue of Lab. Code § 1171.5, neither the Federal Immigration Reform and Control Act nor Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Bd.Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Bd.Hoffman Plastic Compounds, Inc. v. National Labor Relations Bd. (2002) 535 U.S. 137 , preempted California from providing workers' compensation coverage to a worker who was unlawfully employed. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[5].

Answer to Petition for Penalties. A new form has been added that illustrates an answer to an applicant's petition for penalties pursuant to Labor Code § 5814. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.506.

§ 1.101 Alternative Dispute Resolution

[1] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Private Arbitration--Class Arbitration Prohibition and Unwaivable Statutory Rights. The California Supreme Court has considered class arbitration prohibitions in the context of unwaivable statutory rights, specifically wage claims under Lab. Code §§ 500 et seq. and 1194. The prohibition should not be enforced if the court finds that class arbitration would be a significantly more effective way of vindicating the rights of affected employees than individual arbitration [see Gentry v. Superior Court (Circuit City Stores, Inc.) (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443 (remanding for trial court to make that determination)]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.32.

Private Arbitration--Under Federal Arbitration Act, Court, Not Arbitrator, Determines Existence of Contract to Arbitrate. Under federal law, issues regarding the validity or enforcement of a putative contract mandating arbitration should be referred to an arbitrator, but challenges to the existence of a contract as a whole must be determined by the court prior to ordering arbitration [Sanford v. Members Works, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 483 F. 3d 956] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator, Not Court, Determines Limitations Defense. The defense that the claim sought to be arbitrated is barred by the statute of limitations is for the arbitrator, not the court, to decide. The statute of limitations is an affirmative defense that falls naturally within the plain language of the parties' agreement to arbitrate [Wagner Construction Co. v. Pacific Mechanical Corp. (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 19] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c][ii].

Private Arbitration--Minor's Right to Disaffirm Arbitration Contract Requires Vacating Award. The statutory rights of a minor to disaffirm both the agreement containing the arbitration provision and any adverse arbitration award are one of the exceptional circumstances that require vacating an award on public policy grounds. The court in Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809 found that the minor had disaffirmed the contract and held that, as a separate ground, the award could also be vacated because no guardian ad litem was appointed for the minor when the parent's interests were adverse to the minor's. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[9], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][b][v].

Private Arbitration--Disqualified Judge's Order Compelling Arbitration Is Void. If a judge who is disqualified does not disclose the disqualification but instead hears and determines the petition to compel arbitration, that order must be vacated, because a disqualified judge's rulings are void regardless of their legal correctness. However, any ensuing award does not necessarily have to be vacated [Rossco Holdings, Inc. v. Bank of America (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1353] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.95[2], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][b][v].

Private Arbitration--Arbitration Clause in Retainer Agreement and MFAA. Relying on Aguilar v. Lerner (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 974 , the court of appeal in Ervin, Cohen & Jessup, LLP v. Kassel (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 821 held that a client who has waived his or her rights under the MFAA by failing to request arbitration within 30 days after receipt of the notice required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a) can be compelled to arbitrate a fee dispute with the former attorney under the retainer agreement governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.12[[4].

Private Arbitration--Unconscionability. When a party resisting arbitration challenges the entire agreement as unconscionable, not just the arbitration clause, under the Federal Arbitration Act, that determination is for the arbitrator to make [Higgins v. Superior Court (Disney/ABC International Television, Inc.) (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1238] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c][i], [b][iii].

Private Arbitration--Attempt to Incorporate Arbitration Clause by Reference Failed. A preliminary title report referenced and incorporated the standard form ALTA policy, which included an arbitration clause, but a CTLA form of policy was actually issued. Although the CTLA policy also contained an arbitration clause, and the court of appeal found the argument that it should be incorporated had a sort of "no harm, no foul" appeal, they concluded that it was unreasonable to rely on an arbitration clause in a nonexistent policy to deny the policyholders the right to a jury trial [Kleveland v. Chicago Title Ins. Co. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 761] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[2].

Private Arbitration--Arbitration Agreement Covers Later Treatment for Different Condition. An arbitration agreement has been held to require arbitration of a malpractice claim arising from treatment of a different condition two years after the agreement was signed, despite the parties not having an "open book account" relationship because nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295 prevents a medical malpractice arbitration agreement from including provisions in addition to those required by the statute and this agreement clearly provided that it applied to future treatment [Reigelsperger v. Siller (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 574] . See Ch. 39, Tactics and New Developments in ADR, §§ 39.60, 39.61[1], 39.65.

Private Arbitration--Unconscionability. HDTV subscription service provider's arbitration agreement was found unconscionable and unenforceable in Cohen v. DirecTV, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1451-1455 . The class arbitration prohibition was imposed unilaterally in a bill stuffer, relatively small amounts were involved, and the situation otherwise satisfied the requirements enunciated in Discover Bank. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.32.

Private Arbitration--Arbitration Demand Not Subject to Motion to Strike. Because an arbitration claim filed only in an agreed arbitral forum and not asserted by the claimant in any complaint, cross-complaint or petition filed in court is not a "complaint" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, it is not subject to a motion to strike under that section [Sheppard v. Lightpost Museum Fund (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 315] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.11, 32.41, 32.90[3].

[2] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Can Consider Submitted Issue That Is Beyond Scope of Contractual Authority. Parties may submit for decision issues they are not contractually compelled to arbitrate. If they do so, the losing party cannot then claim on appeal that the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers as specified in the arbitration clause [J.C.Gury Co. v. Nippon Carbide Indus. (USA), Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1300] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.20[3][a], [e], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][e].

Private Arbitration--Upholding Arbitrator's Power to Issue Successive Incremental Partial Awards . Arbitration awards may contemplate future proceedings. In fact, the ongoing and changing nature of trust administration may require them--for instructions, to settle accounts, to fix compensation, and to allow, compromise or settle claims. Thus, an arbitrator does not abuse his or her discretion by issuing an award that determines some matters, but reserves jurisdiction to determine ongoing matters [Roehl v. Ritchie (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 338] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration : Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.28[1A].

Private Arbitration--Certification Program for Out-of-State Counsel Extended. The automatic repeal date for the version of Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4 that overruled Birbrower v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 119 and established a program for certification of out-of-state counsel so they can represent people in California arbitration matters has been extended from January 1, 2007, until January 1, 2011. There are minor changes in the certification requirements, which are discussed at Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.23[3].

Private Arbitration--Prior Service as Uncompensated Mediator Need Not Be Disclosed. A proposed neutral arbitrator has no duty to disclose his or her prior service as an uncompensated mediator in a mediation in which an attorney for one of the parties to the arbitration served as attorney for one of the parties in the mediation. Neither Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a) nor Ethical Standards 7(d)(5), (8), or (14)(A) require disclosure of uncompensated service as a dispute resolution neutral, nor does acting as an uncompensated mediator in a single mediation in which an attorney for one of the parties to the arbitration represented a party to the mediation constitute a professional relationship or a circumstance that would cause a reasonable person to entertain doubt whether the arbitrator was impartial [Guseinov v. Burns (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 944] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.14[1][a], [2][a], [3][a][[iv].

[3] Judicial Review

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Can Consider Submitted Issue That Is Beyond Scope of Contractual Authority. Parties may submit for decision issues they are not contractually compelled to arbitrate. If they do so, the losing party cannot then claim on appeal that the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers as specified in the arbitration clause [J.C.Gury Co. v. Nippon Carbide Indus. (USA), Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1300] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.20[3][a], [e], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][e].

Private Arbitration--Arbitration Has Discretion Not to Postpone Hearing. Not every request for postponement of an arbitration hearing needs to be granted. Although an award must be vacated if the rights of the party were substantially prejudiced by the refusal of the arbitrator to postpone the hearing on sufficient cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)], faced with a long course of delays (including filing three lawsuits to stop the arbitration) and a last minute request to add a new claim that the plaintiff had known about from the beginning (three years earlier), it was held no abuse of discretion for the arbitrator to hear and determine the matter even though the plaintiff did not appear at the arbitration hearing [SWAB Financial, LLC v. E* Trade Securities, LLC (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1181] . See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][f] [iii].

Private Arbitration--Minor's Right to Disaffirm Arbitration Contract Requires Vacating Award. The statutory rights of a minor to disaffirm both the agreement containing the arbitration provision and any adverse arbitration award are one of the exceptional circumstances that require vacating an award on public policy grounds. The court in Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809 found that the minor had disaffirmed the contract and held that, as a separate ground, the award could also be vacated because no guardian ad litem was appointed for the minor when the parent's interests were adverse to the minor's. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration , § 32.21[9], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][b][v].

Private Arbitration--Disqualified Judge's Order Compelling Arbitration Is Void. If a judge who is disqualified does not disclose the disqualification but instead hears and determines the petition to compel arbitration, that order must be vacated, because a disqualified judge's rulings are void regardless of their legal correctness. However, any ensuing award does not necessarily have to be vacated [Rossco Holdings, Inc. v. Bank of America (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1353] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.95[2], and Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][b][v].

Order Compelling Arbitration Not Appealable Final Order. In Vivid Video, Inc. v. Playboy Entertainment Group, Inc. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 434 , the court of appeal held that a ruling as to who decides a matter's arbitrability is not an appealable final order. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.12[2][a].

[4] Mediation

Mediation--Briefs and E-Mails Not Admissable. Briefs prepared in aid of mediation and e-mails that discussed them were protected by mediation confidentiality and not admissible in the related legal malpractice action. A purported conversation by the attorney, in which he made a reduced settlement demand, allegedly without the client's authorization, was not protected [see Wimsatt v. Superior Court (Kausch) (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 137] . See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13[3].

Private Mediation--Trial Courts Cannot Order Parties to Complex Litigation to Mediate. Trial courts have no authority to order parties to a complex civil action to attend and pay for private mediation [Jeld-Wen, Inc. v. Superior Court (Marlborough Development Corp.) (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 536] . See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.10[2].

§ 1.102 Appeals

[1] Notice of Appeal

Denial of Class Action Is Appealable. In Berry v. American Express Publishing, Inc. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 224, 228 , the court of appeal held that an order sustaining demurrers to class action allegations is appealable to the extent that it prevents further proceedings as a class action. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.35[9][c].

Documents Mailed by the Clerk to Trigger 60-Day Period for Filing Notice of Appeal must Strictly Comply With California Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a). In Alan v. American Honda Motor Co., Inc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 894 , the California Supreme Court held that California Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(1) requires a single document, either a "Notice of Entry" or a file-stamped copy of the judgment or appealable order, that is sufficient in itself to satisfy all of Rule 8.104(a)'s conditions, including the requirement that the document itself show the date on which it was mailed. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

[2] Review of Standards and Appellate Rules of Law

Decisions of Every Division of Court of Appeal Are Binding on All State Superior Courts. In Cuccia v. Superior Court (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 347, 353-354, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 796 , the court of appeal held that under stare decisis, precedent is binding even if the judge disagrees. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.63[5][a].

When Demurrer Sustained Without Leave to Amend, Appellate Court Decides Whether There Is Reasonable Possibility That Defect Can Be Cured by Amendment. In City of Dinuba v. County of Tulare (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 859, 865, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 614 , the California Supreme Court held that on appeal from a judgment dismissing an action after sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend, the appellate court gives the complaint a reasonable interpretation, reading it as a whole and its parts in their context. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.63[3][h].

Appellant Has Burden to Identify Appeal Issues. In Huong Que, Inc. v. Luu (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 400, 409, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 , the court of appeal held that the appellant has the burden to identify and establish deficiencies in the evidence; the appellate court is not required to independently search the evidentiary record to determine its sufficiency. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards, § 41.13[1][b].

To Constitute "Substantial Evidence," Evidence Must Be Reasonable, Credible, and of Solid Value. In Bridgeman v. McPherson, (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 277 , the court of appeals holds that unsworn memoranda of points and authorities and hearsay do not constitute substantial evidence. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.13[1][d].

Order Compelling Arbitration Not Appealable Final Order. In Vivid Video, Inc. v. Playboy Entertainment Group, Inc. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 434 , the court of appeal held that a ruling as to who decides a matter's arbitrability is not an appealable final order. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.12[2][a].

Waiver of Issues on Appeal. In Expansion Pointe Properties Limited Partnership v. Procopio, Cory, Hargreaves & Savitch, LLP (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 42, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 156 , the court of appeal held that theories not fully developed to trial court cannot create a triable issue on appeal. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.35[4][a].

[4] Costs on Appeal

Power of Trial Court After Remittitur. In In re Justin S. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1434-1435, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 , the court of appeal held that if appellate directions to the trial court are ambiguous, they are interpreted in accordance with the views, reasoning, and holdings expressed in the appellate opinion as a whole. See Ch. 53, Appeal: Remittitur and Costs on Appeal, § 53.42[1][c].

[5] Record

Purposes of Notice to Prepare Reporter's Transcript Are to Inform Court Reporter Which Portions of Oral Proceedings to Transcribe, to Limit Scope of Appellate Review, and to Enable Respondent to Determine Whether to Request Transcription of Additional Portions of Proceedings. In Ermoian v. Desert Hospital (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 475, 497, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754 , the court of appeal held that a notice to prepare a reporter's transcript is insufficient to bring defects in statement of decision to the trial court's attention. See Ch. 44, Appeal: The Record, § 44.51.

PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.103 Attorneys

Holding Barring Recovery of Damages for Lost Punitive Damages Claim Applied Retroactively. In Expansion Pointe Properties Limited Partnership v. Procopio, Cory, Hargreaves & Savitch, LLP (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 42 , the court of appeal held that the Supreme Court's 2003 holding preventing the recovery of damages in a legal malpractice suit for a lost opportunity at punitive damages in an underlying lawsuit applies retroactively, even if the negligent attorney was retained prior to the date of the Supreme Court's decision. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.92[2].

Reinsurer Not Client of Insurer's Attorney. In Zenith Ins. Co. v. O'Connor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 998 , the court of appeal held that if an insurer contracts with a reinsurer to obtain reimbursement coverage for some of the insurer's coverage liabilities, and the insurer subsequently hires an attorney to represent it when a claim is brought against its insured, the reinsurer on that claim does not become a client of the insurer's attorney in the absence of an express agreement between the retained attorney and the reinsurer. In addition, the reinsurer is not a third-party beneficiary of the attorney's services given the potential, if not actual, conflict of interest between the insurer and the reinsurer. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.200[3][b][v].

Professional Rules of Conduct Do Not Prohibit Representation if Only Adverse in Matter Where Attorneys Do Not Represent Either Client. In Fremont Indemnity Company v. Fremont General Corporation (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 50 , the court of appeal held that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)(3) does not prohibit the concurrent representation of clients whose interests are adverse only in a matter in which the attorney does not represent either client. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.111[3][b].

Court Should Look at Totality of Circumstances to Determine Whether to Disqualify Attorney Under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E). In Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1566 , the court of appeal held that the public defender's office should not be automatically disqualified when the public defender's office had previously represented a witness for the prosecution. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.113[6][b][ii].

No Malpractice Action Against Attorney if Statute of Limitations Expired Prior to First Consultation Between Attorney and Client. In Slovensky v. Friedman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1518 , the court of appeal held that a client has no malpractice action against an attorney for failing to achieve a better result in underlying litigation if the statute of limitations had already expired on that underlying suit before the client first consulted the attorney about filing a lawsuit, because the client cannot prove that the attorney's negligence caused harm to the client. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.90.

Attorney Being Disqualified Has Burden of Proving No Exposure to Confidential Information. In Ochoa v. Fordel, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 898 , the court of appeal held that an attorney whose disqualification is sought has the burden of proving that he or she had no exposure to confidential information relevant to the current action. That burden requires an affirmative showing and is not satisfied by a cursory denial. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice, § 72.113[5][c].

When Expert Witness Interviewed by Opposing Council, a Rebuttable Presumption Arises. In Shandralina G. v. Homonchuk (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 395 , the court of appeal held that when a law firm retains an expert witness who was interviewed previously by opposing counsel and exposed to the opposing side's confidential information, a rebuttable presumption arises that the expert disclosed that confidential information to the law firm that subsequently hired the expert witness. However, the presumption does not apply when the expert witness remains a consultant for and in the employ of the party that originally retained the expert. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice, § 72.113[6][b][v].

MFAA Trumps CAA. In Schatz v. Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 674 , the court of appeal held that the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act gives clients the right to trial de novo after nonbinding arbitration even when they have signed prospective waivers of trial after arbitration; in such situations the MFAA trumps the California Arbitration Act. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice, § 72.613[2].

Criminal Defendant Can Sue Attorney for Failing to Secure Return of Property Without Proof of Actual Innocence. In Brooks v. Shemaria (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 434 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff who had been represented by an attorney in a criminal defense case need not prove actual innocence in order to pursue a fee dispute claim or a claim that the attorney committed negligence in failing to secure the return of plaintiff's property that had been seized in connection with the criminal arrest, at least when the relevant law enforcement authorities had concluded that the property should have been returned to plaintiff. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.10[2], 76.70.

Attorney Malpractice Defendant May Defeat Causation With Showing of Court Error. In Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568 , the court of appeal held that an attorney sued for malpractice is permitted to defend on the grounds that the court in the underlying case made an error and that had the court made a proper decision, and that the malpractice plaintiff would not have been damaged. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.71.

Requirement of Factual Innocence in Malpractice Action Against Criminal Defense Attorney Extends to Lesser-Included Offenses. In Sangha v. LaBarbera (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 79 , the court of appeal held that the factual innocence requirement applicable when suing a criminal defense attorney for malpractice applies not just to the criminal charges actually brought against the criminal defendant, but to lesser-included criminal offenses as well. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.10[2], 76.70.

Uninsured Motorist Coverage--Personal Liability Umbrella Policy Covers Vehicle. In California Capital Ins. Co. v. Nielsen (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1221 , an appellate court held that when the owner and the operator of an otherwise uninsured vehicle have liability insurance coverage for bodily injury damages through a personal liability umbrella policy, that vehicle is not an uninsured motor vehicle. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.10[2][d].

Implied Consent to Blood Alcohol Testing Doesn't Require Actual Driving. In Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P. 3d 328 , the California Supreme Court held that the implied consent statute applies broadly and generally to the motoring public (i.e., those who take advantage of the public streets, roads, and highways to operate a motor vehicle), and does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to the arrest for driving under the influence. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Driver's Licenses, § 92.40[1].

[1] Commercial Code

Commercial Code--UCC Revisions. Legislation enacted in 2006 [Stats. 2006, ch. 254] generally revised, reorganized, and renumbered the basic definitional provisions in Article 1 of the California Commercial Code to conform to revisions of the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) proposed by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Law. In addition, this legislation also revised the California Commercial Code version of Article 7 of the UCC, which governs documents of title, including bills of lading and warehouse receipts, and establishes the rights, duties, and liabilities of a warehouse operators and carriers. The Article 7 revisions incorporate national UCC changes and include provisions specifically applicable to electronic documents of title. The changes affect numerous references in this publication to the Commercial Code articles affected by the legislation, including changes throughout Ch. 213, Documents of Title, and Chs. 500 through 504, dealing generally with sales and other transactions under the Commercial Code.

[2] Fraudulent Transfers

Fraudulent Transfers--Jury Instructions. The California Judicial Council approved a new series of jury instructions for use in cases governed by the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), Series 4300 (LexisNexis Matthew Bender Official Publisher)]. Citations to particular instructions in the series have been added at appropriate places throughout Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances.

[3] Limited Liability Companies

LLC Franchise Tax Liability--Limited Liability Companies. New Rev. & Tax. Code § 17947 provides that an LLC is not subject to franchise tax for a taxable year if it files a timely final annual return for the preceding taxable year, does no business in California after the end of the year for which it filed that return, and files a certificate of cancellation before the end of the 12-month period beginning with the date that return was filed. See Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies, § 346.11[3].

Removal of Cross From County Seal Did Not Violate Establishment Clause. In Vasquez v. Los Angeles County (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 1246 , the Ninth Circuit held that a religious Christian county employee had standing to state an Establishment Clause claim based on the county's removal of a cross from the county seal, but that the claim was without merit. Removal of the cross had a secular purpose, a reasonable view of the removal of the cross was as an effort to restore neutrality and ensure continued compliance with the Establishment Clause rather than hostility to religion, and the plaintiff failed to allege excessive entanglement. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations, § 110.13[1][a].

Declarations--Conclusory. This chapter is updated with Johnson v. Superior Court (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 297 which holds a declaration that is conclusory in nature is insufficient to establish the nonexistence of any triable issue of material fact, and thus may not serve as a basis for granting summary judgment. See Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, § 15.20[3].

[2] Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

Amended Complaints--Leave to Amend. This chapter is updated with Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235 , which holds leave to amend a complaint is entrusted to the sound discretion of the trial court. The exercise of that discretion will not be disturbed on appeal absent a clear showing of abuse. More importantly, the discretion to be exercised is that of the trial court, not that of the reviewing court. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.13[1][a].

[3] Anti-SLAPP Motions

New Chapter for Anti-SLAPP Special Motions to Strike. With Release 170, this publication adds a new chapter specifically devoted to anti-SLAPP special motions to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 et seq.]. Analysis of this subject was previously contained in former Ch. 375, Motions to Strike. Now the material has been extracted from former Ch. 375, reorganized, and updated with the latest case law developments on anti-SLAPP motions; and the former Ch. 375 is reorganized to address standard motions to strike pleadings or portions of pleadings. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings and Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti-SLAPP .

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Mixed Causes of Action. In Gallanis-Politis v. Medina (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 600, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701 , the court holds in certain cases, a complaint may allege causes of action arising from both activity protected by the anti-SLAPP statute and activity not protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. Such "mixed" causes of action are subject to an anti-SLAPP motion to strike "unless the protected conduct is merely incidental to the unprotected conduct;" and a supervisor's investigation in response to county counsel's inquiry stemming from discovery requests was at heart of plaintiff's retaliation claim and therefore claim was subject to an anti-SLAPP motion to strike. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[4].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Hearing. In Hall v. Time Warner, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798 , the court reaffirms the requirement that the anti-SLAPP motion must be scheduled by the clerk of the court for a hearing not more than 30 days after service unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 37618[1].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Hearing. In Hall v. Time Warner, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798 , the court reaffirms the requirement that the anti-SLAPP motion must be scheduled by the clerk of the court for a hearing not more than 30 days after service unless the docket conditions of the court require a later hearing. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.18[1].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Protected Activity. In Rohde v. Wolf (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 28, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348 the court holds a defendant attorney's allegedly defamatory voice mail messages to plaintiff's real estate broker were made in connection with a piece of real property, which was an asset that was the subject of a dispute over which all involved parties threatened litigation; therefore, the statements were made in connection with an issue under review by a judicial body within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1)(2). See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[1][a].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Protected Activity. In Philipson & Simon v. Gulsvig (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 347, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 504 , the court holds the defendant's conduct in initiating State Bar sponsored fee arbitration proceeding and later filing civil complaint were protected activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2); plaintiff law firm therefore had to show a probability of success on the merits regarding its claims of breach of contract, breach of implied covenant of good faith, fraud, and misrepresentation claims against defendant. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[1][a].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Issue of Public Interest. In Hall v. Time Warner Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 798 , the court holds the defendant's interview of Marlon Brando's former housekeeper at her nursing home regarding Brando's will constituted conduct in connection with an issue of public interest; distribution of Brando's assets was an issue of public interest and television interview contributed to public discussion of the issue. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[1][c].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Issue of Public Interest. In McGarry v. University of San Diego (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 97, 117, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 , a controversy surrounding university football coach's termination was of concern to a substantial number of people such that university officials' statements to newspaper and statements to parents during meeting constituted protected speech in connection with a public issue within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[1][c].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Non-Protected Activity . In Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. 1105 Alta Loma Road Apartments, LLC (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1273 , the court holds the gravamen of plaintiff Department of Fair Employment and Housing's complaint against landlord was disability discrimination, not landlord's actions in connection with rental control removal proceeding and filing of unlawful detainer action; mere fact that plaintiff filed complaint after protected activity took place does not mean complaint arose from protected activity. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Non-Protected Activity. In Freeman v. Schack (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 719, 726-727, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867 , the court holds in an action by class action litigants against their attorney for breach of contract, negligence, and breach of fiduciary duty, principal thrust of complaint was not attorney's filing or settlement of litigation, but rather was his unethical conduct in representing a party with interests adverse to his clients; because protected activity was merely incidental to unprotected activity, action was not a SLAPP suit. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Non-Protected Activity. In Wang v. Wal-Mart Real Estate Business Trust (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 790, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 , the court holds a complaint for breach of contract, fraud, and conspiracy to defraud did not arise out of protected activity under the anti-SLAPP statute in case where landowner sued Wal-Mart and others on the basis of a contract to sell land for a Wal-Mart store; the alleged improper conduct on defendants' part did not arise from petitioning activity in pursuing the necessary permits, but rather from conduct and practices involved in carrying out contractual duties, and the thrust of the complaint challenged the manner in which the parties dealt with each other rather than the activity of pursuing governmental approvals for development. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Non-Protected Activity . In Marlin v. Aimco Venezia, LLC (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 154, 160-162, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 488 , the court holds a defendants' actions in terminating plaintiffs' tenancy and removing plaintiffs' apartment from the rental market under the Ellis Act were not activities undertaken in furtherance of defendants' constitutional rights of petition or free speech; although filing and serving the Ellis Act notice and notice to vacate may have constituted protected activity, plaintiffs' complaint requesting declaratory relief did not arise out of the filing and serving of the notice, but rather out of the termination of the tenancy, which was not protected activity under the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Carpenter v. Jack In The Box Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 454, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839 , which holds a plaintiff prevailing on a special motion to strike may seek attorney's fees as a part of the motion to strike, by a subsequent noticed motion filed at any time prior to the conclusion of the lawsuit, or as part of a cost memorandum at the conclusion of the lawsuit. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.22[2].

Issue of Public Interest. This chapter is updated with Morrow v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1424, 1436-1437, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 , which holds statements made by a local superintendent and a superintendent of schools regarding a principal's inability to properly handle high school violence concerned an issue of public interest under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e), and the superintendents' special motion to strike the principal's causes of action for invasion of privacy and defamation based on those statements was therefore granted. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.20[3][a].

Religious Rights. This chapter is updated with Castillo v. Pacheco (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 242, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 305 , which holds because the anti-SLAPP statute does not extend to claims arising out of the free exercise of religion, the statute was not available in a lawsuit arising out of defendants' religious ceremonial outdoor fires and the trial court properly denied defendants' special motion to strike. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

Public Interest. This chapter is updated with Holbrook v. City of Santa Monica (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1242 , involving a lawsuit by two city council members seeking declaratory relief against the City of Santa Monica based on the fact that the city council meetings frequently run late into the night was not in the public interest within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b); the court held the action concerned members' preference for particular working hours, not public interest and, if successful, would not confer a significant benefit on the public as a whole. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[3][a].

Attorney's Fees and Costs. This chapter is updated with Maughan v. Google Technology Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1242 , which holds a trial court did not abuse its discretion in reducing attorney fees and costs sought by prevailing defendant from $112,000 to $23,000; trial court determined that attorneys experienced in anti-SLAPP litigation would not have needed to spend 200 hours preparing a motion and that 50 hours was a more reasonable figure. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[6].

Arbitration. This chapter is updated with Sheppard v. Lightpost Museum Fund (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 315 , which holds the anti-SLAPP statute does not apply to claims pending in such nonjudicial forums as private arbitration proceedings. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.13[2].

Issue of Public Interest. This chapter is updated with Taus v. Loftus (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 683 , which holds that two articles published in a scientific journal responding to an article published in a different journal regarding suppressed memories of childhood abuse were protected speech under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3) and (4), and were matters of public interest given the controversy of suppressed memories. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[3][c].

Discovery. This chapter is updated with Britts v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1112 , which holds the stay of discovery for an anti-SLAPP motions includes any discovery motions pending at the time the special motion to strike is filed. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.19.

[4] Complaints and Cross Complaints

Signature on Complaint. This chapter is updated with Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755 , which holds where a complaint was signed by the party's father, instead of by the party or his or her attorney of record, the plaintiff's failure to comply with the subscription requirement did not constitute an incurable defect where the correction is promptly made and the court finds that the plaintiff actually assented to the filing of the action. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.23[1].

Notice of Related Cases. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300 is amended to require notice of a related case, and provides a pending civil case is related to another pending civil case, or to a civil case that was dismissed with or without prejudice, or to a civil case that was disposed of by judgment, if the cases (1) involve the same parties and are based on the same or similar claims, (2) arise from the same or substantially identical transactions, incidents, or events requiring the determination of the same or substantially identical questions of law or facts, (3) involve claims against, title to, possession of, or damages to the same property, or (4) are likely for other reasons to require substantial duplication of judicial resources if heard by different judges. The Notice of Related Case must be served and filed as soon as possible, but no later than 15 days after the facts concerning the existence of related cases become known. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.25; Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions, § 125.11, Ch. 137; Continuing Duties During Legislation, § 137.12.

Continuances--Right to Defend. This chapter is updated with Cadle Co. v. WorldWide Hospitality Furniture (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 504 , which holds a trial court abused its discretion in entering judgment against the corporate defendant where brief trial continuance would have permitted the defendant to file the required informational statement, restore the corporation's good standing with the state, and defend the litigation. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.45[3][a].

[6] Defaults

Default Awarding Damages Properly Set Aside on Legal Malpractice Complaint. In Levine v. Smith (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 , a legal malpractice action, the trial court properly set aside a $2.5 million superior court default judgment as void because it was greater than the amount demanded in the first amended complaint. The first amended complaint sought damages based on contract and tort theories according to proof, and the filing of a statement of damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11 before the default was entered based on the sixteenth cause of action for emotional distress based on the same professional negligence did not make the action one for personal injury or wrongful death within the meaning of § 425.11. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders .

[6A] Injunctions

Injunction May Limit Free Speech. In Balboa Island Village Inn, Inc. v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1161, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339 , the California Supreme Court held that following a trial at which it is determined that the plaintiff defamed the defendant, the court may issue an injunction prohibiting the defendant from repeating the statements determined to be defamatory. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.71[3].

[7] Judges

Judicial Administration and Judicial Ethics and Discipline. This chapter is updated with two new, comprehensive parts on Judicial Administration and Judicial Ethics and Discipline. With analyses on trial court administration, as well as judicial agencies and appellate administration, practitioners can review judicial policies that will have an effect on litigation. The analysis of judicial ethics and discipline reviews the California Code of Judicial Ethics and the processes of the Commission on Judicial Performance for disciplining judges. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.83 et seq.

Inconvenient Forum--Appearance. In Britton v. Dallas Airmotive, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 127, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 487 , the court holds Code of Civ. Proc. § 418.10 provides requirements for bringing a forum non conveniens motion when a defendant has not yet appeared in an action, and Code of Civ. Proc. § 410.30 applies to a defendant bringing a forum non conveniens motion after having generally appeared in the action. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30(b), a defendant who has generally appeared may make a forum non conveniens motion at any time, not only on or before the last day to plead. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.32.

Inconvenient Forum--Demurrer. In Miller-Leigh v. Henson (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1143, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 83 , the court holds a challenge to a forum selection clause cannot properly be raised by demurrer. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.34[6].

Jurisdiction--Sovereign Immunity. In Lawrence v. Barona Valley Ranch Resort and Casino (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1364, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23 , the court holds that although an Indian trit waived its sovereign immunity to certain negligence claims against it, such waiver did not constitute a consent to suit in state court on negligence claims against it; instead, the tribal court was the exclusive forum for the resolution of such claims. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.25[3].

Forum Non Conveniens. This chapter is updated with Morris v. AGFA Corp. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1452 , which holds a trial court must be flexible in its weighing of the Stangvik factors. Private and public interest factors must be applied flexibly, without giving undue emphasis to any one element. The doctrine of forum non conveniens may not be based on identification of a single factor rather than the balancing of several. An undue emphasis on a single factor is especially threatening to a balanced analysis because some of the matters to be weighed will by their nature point to a grant or denial of the motion. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.35[4].

Forum Non Conveniens. This chapter is updated with Sinochem Int'l Co. Ltd v. Malaysia Int'l Shipping Corp. (2007) 127 S. Ct. 1184, 167 L. Ed. 2d 15 , which holds a district court has discretion to respond at once to a defendant's forum non conveniens plea, and need not take up first any other threshold objection. In particular, a court need not resolve whether it has authority to adjudicate the cause (subject matter jurisdiction) or personal jurisdiction over the defendant if it determines that, in any event, a foreign tribunal is the more suitable arbiter of the merits of the case. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.33.

Sovereign Immunity. This chapter is updated with Agua Caliente Band of Cahuilla Indians v. Superior Court (2006)

40 Cal. 4th 239 , which holds, in a case with limited applicability, that a tribe lacks immunity from suit for its alleged failure to follow the Political Reform Act's mandated reporting requirements. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.24[2].

[9] Limitation of Actions

Limitation of Actions--Discovery Rule. In Lyles v. State of California (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 281, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 696 , the court holds the discovery rule is not so broad as to delay accrual indefinitely until the plaintiff stumbles upon a claim. Rather, the plaintiff discovers the cause of action when he at least suspects a factual basis, as opposed to a legal theory, for its elements, even if he lacks knowledge thereof--when, simply put, he at least suspects that someone has done something wrong to him, "wrong" being used, not in any technical sense, but rather in accordance with its lay understanding. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions § 345.19[3][a].

Limitation of Actions--Employment Discrimination. This chapter is updated with Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S. Ct. 2162, 167 L. Ed. 2d 982 , which holds the time frame for filing a charge of employment discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is triggered when a discrete unlawful practice takes place. A new violation does not occur, and a new charging period does not commence, upon the occurrence of subsequent nondiscriminatory acts that entail adverse effects resulting from the past discrimination. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.19[3][a].

Limitation of Actions--Arbitration. This chapter is updated with Wagner Construction Co. v. Pacific Mechanical Corp. (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 19, 25, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434, 157 P.3d 1029 , which holds a court may not deny a petition to compel arbitration on the ground the statute of limitations has run on the claims the parties agreed to arbitrate. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[3].

Limitation of Actions--Action for Vested Vacation. This chapter is updated with Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568 , which holds there are three statutes of limitations that might apply to a claim by a former employee seeking payment for unused vested vacation because the claim could be characterized as one based on (1) an oral employment contract, (2) a written employment contract, or (3) a liability created by statute. A two-year limitations period applies to oral contract claims, as provided by Code Civ. Proc., § 339(1). A four-year limitations period applies to claims based on written contracts, as set forth in Code Civ. Proc., § 337(1). See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, Appendix, § 345APP.204.

Limitation of Actions--Sexual Abuse of Minor. This chapter is updated with Perez v. Roe (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 171 , which holds the part of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 purporting to revive previously dismissed complaints has been found to violate the state's constitutional separation of powers doctrine. Where final judgments have been entered in earlier actions under the statute of limitations that previously existed, and those judgments were upheld on appeal, they became final for separation of powers purposes and cannot be legislatively revived. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[11][a][v].

Limitation of Actions--Decedent Estate. This chapter is updated with Stewart v. Seward (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1513 , which holds where a claim arises from an alleged oral promise or agreement concerning distribution from a decedent's estate, the action is governed by the limitations period of Code Civ. Proc., § 366.3. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[12].

[10] Notice of Related Cases

Expanded Categories. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300 is amended to require notice of a related case, and provides a pending civil case is related to another pending civil case, or to a civil case that was dismissed with or without prejudice, or to a civil case that was disposed of by judgment, if the cases (1) involve the same parties and are based on the same or similar claims, (2) arise from the same or substantially identical transactions, incidents, or events requiring the determination of the same or substantially identical questions of law or facts, (3) involve claims against, title to, possession of, or damages to the same property, or (4) are likely for other reasons to require substantial duplication of judicial resources if heard by different judges. The Notice of Related Case must be served and filed as soon as possible, but no later than 15 days after the facts concerning the existence of related cases become known. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.25; Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions, § 125.11; Ch. 137, Continuing Duties During Legislation, § 137.12.

Notice of Related Case. This chapter is updated with the July 2007 revised Judicial Council Form CM-015, Notice of Related Case, which requires additional information about related cases. See Ch. 137, Continuing Duties During Legislation, § 137.61.

[11] Pretrial Proceedings

Pretrial Proceedings--Collection Cases. This chapter is updated with the July 2007 Rules of Court that now provide specified collection cases seeking $25,000 or less as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.740(a), and in which the defendant does not file a responsive pleading, are exempt from differential case management rules. See Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.32[4][d].

[12] Reconsider and Renewed Motions

Motions to Reconsider--Sanctions. This chapter is updated with Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261 , where the court held it would be an abuse of discretion for a trial court not to reconsider, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c), its sanction order against a plaintiff in a case where appellate court decided that plaintiff's action was not barred by applicable statute of limitations and therefore plaintiff did not bring the case in bad faith; appellate court's decision regarding statute of limitations issue constituted a "change of law" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c). See Ch. 374, Motions to Reconsider, § 374.14[1].

[13] Relief from Judgments and Orders

Relief From Default Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault Was Mandatory. In Matera v. McLeod (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 44 , defendants were entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to mandatory relief from defaults entered by the court after striking defendants' answer as a sanction for failure to comply with a discovery order and from the resulting default judgment, based on defendants' attorney's affidavit of fault. The default judgment entered by the court was a "default judgment" within the meaning of the statute, and defendant's attorney's neglect was the sole cause of defendants' failure to comply with the discovery order resulting in the terminating sanction. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders .

Default Awarding Damages Properly Set Aside on Legal Malpractice Complaint. In Levine v. Smith (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 , a legal malpractice action, the trial court properly set aside a $2.5 million superior court default judgment as void because it was greater than the amount demanded in the first amended complaint. The first amended complaint sought damages based on contract and tort theories according to proof, and the filing of a statement of damages under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11 before the default was entered based on the sixteenth cause of action for emotional distress based on the same professional negligence did not make the action one for personal injury or wrongful death within the meaning of § 425.11. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders .

Res Judicata. In Smith v. Exxon Mobile Oil Corp. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 69 , the court has declined to apply collateral estoppel for equitable reasons after determining that the party against whom the doctrine was to be invoked had not, through no fault of its own, had a "full and fair opportunity" to litigate the claim in the prior litigation. In a case where defendant's expert was unable to testify at the last minute due to his daughter's death in a car accident, the court held it was not equitable to apply collateral estoppel on the issue of defendant's liability in a subsequent lawsuit involving the same issues. The court noted that the unavailability of a crucial witness at the prior proceeding might render the use of collateral estoppel inappropriate and, in the "unusual and compelling" circumstance presented in that case, collateral estoppel should not have been applied. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.19[5].

[14] Service of Summons and Papers

Service of Summons--Substitute Service: This chapter is updated with Summers v. McClanahan (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 403 , which holds for determining who is a proper agent for acceptance of service on behalf of a defendant, a specific appointment is not required, but the principal-agent relationship must be close and enduring enough to make it highly probable the defendant will receive actual notice; and service on an actor's personal manager did not comport with statutory requirements despite defendant having actual notice of the complaint. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.16[2][a].

Service of Summons--Collection Cases: This chapter is updated with the July 2007 Rules of Court that now provide the 60-day service of summons requirement of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.110(b) does not apply to collections cases, as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.740(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.740(c)(1)]. A "collections case" is an action for recovery of not more than $25,000, exclusive of interest and attorney fees, arising from a credit transaction for property, services, or money. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.15[4].

Service of Summons--Mail Service: This chapter is updated with Cruz v. Fagor America, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 488 , which holds when read together, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.40 and 417.20 permit completion of service by mail outside California when the return receipt is signed by a person so authorized by the defendant, and evidence that a mailed summons actually reached the individual to be served is sufficient to establish valid service, and thus to establish substantial compliance, even if the summons was signed for by someone who did not have the authority to do so. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.16[5].

Summary Judgment--Objections to Evidence. This chapter is updated with Demps v. San Francisco Housing Authority (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 564, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 204 , which holds a trial court presented with timely evidentiary objections in proper form must rule on the objections or they are deemed waived and the objected-to evidence will be included in the record; where counsel expressly requests ruling on objections and court fails to do so, objections may not be waived. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.25[4].

Summary Judgment--Objecting to Evidence. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1354 is amended to require unless otherwise excused by the court on a showing of good cause, all written objections to evidence in support of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication must be served and filed at the same time as the objecting party's opposition papers. The rule now describes two specific format requirements for written objections to evidence in support of or in opposition to summary judgment and summary adjudication motions. All written objections to evidence must be served and filed separately from the other papers in support of or in opposition to the motion, and a proposed order for each objection must be included. New forms are added to the chapter showing either format and proposed order. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, §§ 537.25[4], 537.86, 537.87.

[15A] Venue

Venue. In Metropolitan Transit System v. Superior Court (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 293, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 , the court holds where a local agency files a compulsory cross-complaint asserting a claim in the county where it resides against a nonresident of that county, the cross-defendant has the right to move for a change of venue pursuant to Code

Civ. Proc. § 394. See Ch. 571, Venue, § 571.19[3][a].

[16] Vexatious Litigants

Weighing of Evidence. This chapter is updated with Moran v. Murtaugh Miller Meyer & Nelson, LLP (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 780 , which holds the court must order a plaintiff to furnish security if the court determines that plaintiff is a vexatious litigant and that there is no reasonable probability that the plaintiff will prevail in the litigation. In determining whether there is a reasonable probability plaintiff will prevail, the court is permitted to weigh the evidence rather than simply assume the truth of plaintiff's alleged facts. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.14.

PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.106 Civil Rights

[1] Discrimination in Business Establishments

No Need to Demand Equal Treatment Under Unruh Act. In Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 160, 166-180, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142, 158 P.3d 718 , the California Supreme Court held that in order to recover under the Unruh Act, plaintiffs who are discriminated against when they present themselves at a business establishment and pay the price of admission need not demand equal treatment and be refused. Thus, men who alleged that they patronized a club on several occasions and were charged an admission fee higher than the fee charged to women were not required to request nondiscriminatory treatment and be refused before stating a claim under the Unruh Act. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.11[9].

[1A] Housing Discrimination

Refusing Mortgage to Day Care Operator Stated Claim Under Unruh Act and FEHA. In Sisemore v. Master Financial, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 719 , the court of appeal held that an allegation that a mortgage lender rejected a mortgage application because it did not lend on homes operating a day care for profit stated a claim under the Unruh Act, because arbitrary occupational discrimination is prohibited under the Act. The court also held that the allegations stated a claim under the FEHA for intentional discrimination on the basis of source of income, and on a disparate impact theory under Gov. Code § 12955.8 by alleging that the lender's policies disproportionately affected women and families with children. Finally, a nonprofit housing corporation had standing to sue as an "aggrieved person" under FEHA because it alleged that it was required to divert scarce resources to address the lender's alleged wrongful conduct. See Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination, § 117.17[6].

[1B] Interference With Civil Rights

Bane Act Covers Interference With Right to Free Public Education. In Austin B. v. Escondido Union Sch. Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 454 , the California Court of Appeal held that under the Bane Act, the constitutional right with which the defendant interferes can include the right to a free public education embodied in Cal. Const., art. IX, § 5. See Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence, § 117A.11[e].

[2] Post-Civil War Statutes

No New Bivens Claim for Retaliation. In Wilkie v. Robbins (2007)551U.S.537, 127 S. Ct. 2588, 168 L. Ed. 2d 389 , the United States Supreme Court held that a rancher did not have Bivens claims against officials of the Bureau of Land Management, because the rancher had a variety of administrative and judicial remedies to redress his injuries, and the Court would not create a new Bivens remedy to redress his injuries collectively on a theory of retaliation for exercising his property rights. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post Civil War Statutes, § 113.14[7][e].

Claims Based on Publication of Attorney's Disciplinary History Were Time Barred. In Canatella v. Van De Kamp (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1128 , an attorney's claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 filed in 2005, based on the California State Bar's publication of summary of plaintiff's disciplinary history, were barred by California's one-year, rather than two-year, statute of limitations. The cause of action was more than one-year old as of the effective date of the two-year statute of limitations (January 1, 2003), because run plaintiff saw the summary in the print version of the bar journal in 2000, and knew or should have known that the same summary appeared on Internet website. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post Civil-War Statutes, § 113.14[9][c].

Challenge to Extradition Procedures Not Subject to Heck Favorable Termination Rule. In Weilburg v. Shapiro (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1202 , the Ninth Circuit held that a challenge to extradition procedures under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 did not implicate the validity of the underlying conviction, so that the favorable termination rule of Heck v. Humphrey did not apply. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post Civil-War Statutes, § 113.14[5].

Evidence Can Contradict Plaintiff's Version of Facts on Summary Judgment. In Scott v. Harris (2007)550U.S.372, 127 S. Ct. 1769, 167 L. Ed. 2d 686 , the United States Supreme Court held that on a motion for summary judgment in a case arising under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, when there have not yet been factual findings by a judge or jury, courts are required to view the facts and draw reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the party opposing the summary judgment motion. In qualified immunity cases, this usually means adopting the plaintiff's version of the facts. However, if there is undisputed evidence contradicting the plaintiff's version of the facts, such as a videotape of the events, so that no reasonable jury could believe the plaintiff's version of the facts, a court should not adopt that version of the facts for purposes of ruling on a motion for summary judgment. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Statutes, § 113.14[11][b].

No Attorney's Fees for Preliminary Injunction if No Permanent Injunction. In Sole v. Wyner (2007)551U.S.74, 127 S. Ct. 2188, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1069 , the United States Supreme Court held that under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, a plaintiff who obtains a preliminary injunction but is denied a permanent injunction after a dispositive hearing on the merits is not entitled to attorney's fees as a prevailing party. A final decision on the merits denying permanent injunctive relief ordinarily determines who prevails in the action for purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b). See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Statutes, § 113.17[2][b].

Statute of Limitations on False Arrest Starts to Run Once Plaintiff Subject to Legal Process. In Wallace v. Kato (2007) 127 S. Ct. 1091 , the United States Supreme Court held that the statute of limitations on a § 1983 claim of false arrest commenced to run when the plaintiff appeared before the examining magistrate and was bound over for trial, rather than when the charges against him were ultimately dropped. Because state law provided a limitations period of two years, and more than two years elapsed between that date and the filing of suit, even leaving out the period before the plaintiff reached his majority, the action was time barred. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Statutes, § 113.14[9][c].

[3] Prisoners' Rights

Exhaustion Rules Under PLRA Exceeded Judicial Authority. In Jones v. Bock (2007) 127 S. Ct. 910 , the United States Supreme Court held that the adoption by the Sixth Circuit of rules requiring a prisoner to allege and demonstrate exhaustion of administrative remedies in the complaint, permitting suit only against defendants identified by the prisoner in an initial grievance, and requiring courts to dismiss an entire action if the prisoner failed to satisfy the exhaustion requirement as to any single claim in the complaint are not required by the PLRA, and crafting and imposing them exceeded proper limits on the judicial role. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[2].

No Cognizable Liberty Interests in Inmate Classification or Prison Publication Regulations. In Myron v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 716 , the Ninth Circuit held that California prison regulations governing inmate classification did not create cognizable Eighth or Fourteenth Amendment liberty interests, because the classification of prisoners did not present the type of atypical, significant deprivation in which a state might conceivably create a liberty interest. Further, a California regulation allowing inmates to participate in the publication and distribution of an inmate publication only with the institution head's specific approval did not create a liberty interest importing the Fourteenth Amendment, because a prison official's determination that a prisoner may not engage in the publication and distribution of an inmate publication also did not present the type of atypical significant deprivation in which a state might conceivably create a liberty interest. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.12[1].

Denial of Use of Comb-Binding Machine to Bind Petition for Certiorari Denied Access to Courts. In Phillips v. Hust (9th Cir. 2007) 477 F.3d 1070 , a prison librarian's denial of the use of a comb-binding machine to an inmate filing a petition for certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, resulting in denial of the petition as untimely, contrary to the prison's established past practice, violated the inmate's right of access to the courts. The librarian was not entitled to qualified immunity, because the librarian violated the inmate's right of access to the courts when she arbitrarily denied him access to the comb-binder contrary to the consistent practice of the prison both before and after the event at issue, and both the right of access to the courts and the right not to be subjected to the arbitrary and selective enforcement of prison regulations were clearly established at the time of the librarian's action. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.13[3].

Felony Probation Does Not Take Away Right to Vote. In League of Women Voters of California v. McPherson (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1469, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585 , the California Court of Appeal held that persons confined in local facilities as a condition of felony probation or persons for whom a felony offense is punishable by fine or imprisonment in county jail and the trial court enters judgment imposing something other than imprisonment in state prison, who are otherwise qualified to vote, are entitled to register and vote in elections. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.27.

Litigation Privilege Applies to Action Under State Constitutional Right to Privacy. In Jacob B. v. County of Shasta (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 948, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477, 154 P.3d 1003 , the California Supreme Court held that the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b), which generally protects from tort liability a publication made in connection with a judicial proceeding, protects against a cause of action based on California's constitutional right to privacy, and protected a letter that the supervisor of a county victim witness program wrote in connection with a family law proceeding involving visitation rights, which provided information regarding whether one of the persons being considered for visitation had molested his nephew one decade earlier. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[19].

No Standing to Bring Federal Privacy Action. In Fleck & Assocs. v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1100 , the Ninth Circuit held that a federal trial court was required to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction based on lack of standing an action by a corporation that operated a gay men's social club, which alleged that the city's ban of live sex act businesses violated the corporation's federal privacy rights. The complaint failed to demonstrate that the corporation suffered a distinct and palpable injury to any cognizable corporate right of privacy, and the corporation did not have associational standing to assert the rights of its customers. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.330[2].

Disclosure of Medical Information to Persons Involved With Patient's Care Permitted. Under newly added Civ.

Code § 56.1007, a health care provider, service plan, or contractor may disclose to a family member, another relative, a domestic partner, or a close personal friend of the patient, or to any other person identified by the patient, medical information directly relevant to that person's involvement with the patient's care or payment related to the patient's care. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[4].

Disclosure of Medical Information to Persons Involved With Patient's Care Permitted. Under newly added Civ. Code § 56.1007, a health care provider, service plan, or contractor may disclose to a family member, another relative, a domestic partner, or a close personal friend of the patient, or to any other person identified by the patient, medical information directly relevant to that person's involvement with the patient's care or payment related to the patient's care. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[4].

California Privacy Statute Applicable to Telephone Calls May Be Applied to Calls Made From Another State. In Kearney v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 95 , the California Supreme Court held that Pen. Code § 632, which allows recording of a telephone conversation only if all parties agree, applies to a confidential communication that takes place partly in California and partly in another state that has a law requiring the permission of only one party. However, the Court permitted the plaintiffs to seek only injunctive relief in this particular case due to the uncertainty that would have existed prior to the Court's decision as to which state's law would govern. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.34[2].

Drug Testing of Ward Upheld. In In re Carmen M. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 478 , the court of appeal upheld a juvenile court order for the drug testing of a ward of the court who had a documented history of drug abuse, because the drug testing order in that case was narrowly tailored to require testing only if the staff of the minor's group home believed that the minor was under the influence. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[12][a].

§ 1.107 Class Actions

Employees' Class-Arbitration Waiver Does Not Bar Class Arbitration of Claims for Overtime Pay, if Class Arbitration Would Allow More Effective Vindication of Claims. The California Supreme Court in Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443 has held that a class-arbitration waiver in an employment arbitration agreement is not enforceable to preclude class arbitration by employees whose unwaivable statutory rights to overtime pay [see Lab. Code §§ 500 et seq., 1194] have allegedly been violated, if the trial court determines that class arbitration would be a significantly more effective way of vindicating the employees' rights than individual arbitration. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[6].

Trial Court Ordinarily Should Resolve Procedural Class Issues Before Addressing Substantive Merits of Case. The California Supreme Court has reaffirmed the general rule that in a putative class action, the trial court ordinarily should decide whether class treatment is appropriate before the court adjudicates the merits of the case. The purpose of this general rule is to protect the defendant from "one-way intervention," under which potential class members could elect to stay in the class after a favorable merits ruling but opt out after an unfavorable merits ruling. However, the Supreme Court also noted that the class defendant may waive this protection by failing to object to merits adjudication or by actively seeking adjudication of the merits. And even in the absence of a waiver by the defendant, the trial court may decide class issues after a merits determination if there is a compelling justification for doing so, such as when the plaintiff makes a belated motion for class certification based on a change in circumstances occurring after a merits determination. See Fireside Bank v. Superior Court (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1069 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.18[2], 120.41[3], 120.51[2].

Particularized Individual Liability Issues Prevent Class Certification. A California Court of Appeal in Dunbar v. Albertson's, Inc. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1422 has affirmed a denial of class certification, in an action seeking overtime compensation based on a claim that a putative class of grocery managers had been misclassified as executive employees exempt from the overtime wage laws. The denial of class treatment was based not on the mere presence of individual liability issues--i.e., the need to establish that each grocery manager had been misclassified as an executive--but on the significant variation in the grocery managers' work from store to store, and from week to week. Thus, establishing liability required very particularized individual liability determinations that predominated over common issues. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[2][b], [4].

Proposed Class Does Not Meet Ascertainability Requirement if Class Definition Rests on Determination of Liability. A California Court of Appeal has held that class certification is not appropriate when the proposed class definition is not based on objective criteria, but instead requires a merits-based determination in order to establish whether a particular person is a member of the class. See Sony Elecs. Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1086 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[3].

Court May Order Precertification Notice to Prospective Class Members To Enable Them to Protect Their Privacy. The California Supreme Court has held that although pre-certification notice to prospective class members is not generally authorized or required, if prospective class members' identifying information is disclosed in precertification discovery, it may be appropriate for a court to order that notice be provided to prospective class members so that they may take steps to protect their privacy. See Pioneer Elecs. (USA) Inc. v. Superior Court (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 360 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.19[1], 120.41[6].

Judgment Denying Class Certification May Have Issue-Preclusive Effect on Subsequent Putative Class Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that a judgment denying class certification in one action will preclude relitigation of the class-certification issue in a subsequent action brought by a different plaintiff, if all of the requirements for the application of collateral estoppel are met. See Alvarez v. May Dept. Stores Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1223 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.20[1], 120.23[2].

§ 1.107A Constitutional Law

New Chapter on Constitutional Law. This publication is updated with a new chapter on constitutional law. This new chapter provides a comprehensive review of the structure of the California constitution, with reference to corresponding United States Constitution provisions. Topics of analysis include division of powers among state government and between state and federal governments, governmental powers, substantive civil constitutional rights, procedural due process, equal protection and privileges and immunities, and procedures for challenging the constitutionality of laws or governmental actions. This chapter also identifies constitutional law issues that exist throughout other areas of law. With extensive cross referencing to other topics and chapters, this new chapter acts as a gateway for finding focused constitutional law analysis and forms on specific topics and fact patterns. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law .

Litigation Privilege Applies to Action Under State Constitutional Right to Privacy. In *Jacob B. v. County of Shasta (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 948, 56 Cal. § 1.107B Contempt

Direct Contempt Order Must Describe Prior Order. In In re Ringgold (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1001 , the court holds that if an adjudication of direct contempt is based on the violation of a prior order, the written direct contempt order must describe the prior order. See Ch. 135, Contempt, § 135.31[3].

Direct Contempt Order Must Describe Prior Order. In Goold v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court holds that Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(a) authorizes a trial court to award attorney's fees and costs to the complainant in all contempt proceedings, including those involving violations of Family Code orders that are otherwise punishable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1218(c). See Ch. 135, Contempt, § 135.33[3], [4][f].

Electronic Funds Transfers --Division 11 of California Commercial Code. Detailed coverage of Division 11 of the California Commercial Code [Com. Code § 11101 et seq.], covering electronic funds transfers, has been added to Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks in this release (Release 170). Division 11, which is derived from UCC Article 4A, governs a specialized method of payment commonly referred to in the banking community as a wholesale wire transfer. A funds transfer that is subject to Division 11 typically comprises a series of transactions, beginning with the originator's payment order, made for the purpose of making payment to the beneficiary of the order. A funds transfer is completed on acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary of the originator's payment order [Com. Code § 11104(a)]. The added coverage discusses the scope of Division 11, the funds transfer process, and the nature and incidents of payment orders. It incorporates the detailed rules set forth in Division 11, as well as the explanatory materials in the Official UCC Comments and the limited California case law that exists under Division 11. See Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits , and Checks.

Art--Sale of Work Is Protected Speech. In White v. City of Sparks (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 953, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20621 , the Ninth Circuit held that an artist's sale of his or her original artwork constitutes speech protected under the First Amendment. See Ch. 57, Art, § 57.98.

Contracts--Acceptance of New Terms Posted on Web Site. In Douglas v. United States Dist. Court (9th Cir. 2007) 495 F.3d 1062 , the Ninth Circuit considered (for the first time by any federal court of appeals) whether to enforce a modified consumer service contract when the customer claimed that the only notice of the modified terms consisted of posting the revised contract on the service provider's web site. The court concluded that the revised contract could not be enforced unless the customer received proper notice of how the contract had been changed, and then signified assent to the changes. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.22[5][f].

§ 1.108 Corporations

Foreign Corporations--Transaction of Intrastate Business. Corp. Code § 191(b) has been amended to provide that a foreign corporation is not considered to be transacting intrastate business merely because of its status as shareholder, partner, or member of another entity. See Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity, § 160.54[3].

Listed Corporations--Election of Directors. New Corp. Code § 708.5 provides that a listed corporation that has eliminated cumulative voting may amend its articles or bylaws to require approval of the shareholders to elect a director in an uncontested election. See Ch. 166, Corporations: Shareholders' Meetings and Voting, § 166.30[1]; Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management, § 167.12[2].

Public Benefit Corporations--Election of Directors. Corp. Code § 5220(a) has been amended to provide that directors in public benefit corporations may now be elected for terms of up to four years. See Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations, § 388.110[1].

Franchise Tax Liability--Corporate Conversions and Dissolutions. Corp. Code § 1155(e) has been amended to eliminate the requirement that a statement or certificate of conversion may be filed with the Secretary of State only after the converting corporation files a Franchise Tax Board certificate of satisfaction of tax liability. See Ch. 169, Corporations: Reorganizations, § 169.16[6]. Similarly, Corp. Code § 1905 has been amended to require a certificate of dissolution to state, relative to franchise tax liability, merely that a final franchise tax return has been or will be filed. See Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution, § 170.63.

§ 1.109 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Trial Court, Not Arbitration, Was Venue to Resolve Claim for Attorney's Fees. In Acosta v. Kerrigan (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1124 , a California appellate court held that when a trial court is responsible for deciding a petition to compel arbitration, it also is responsible for resolving a claim for attorney fees made in connection with that petition to compel arbitration, and that attorney's fees were properly awarded at the interim stage of granting the petition to compel arbitration. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Sublessees Entitled to Attorney's Fees After Voluntary Dismissal of Unlawful Detainer. In Drybread v. Chipain Chiropractic Corp (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1063 , after sublessors dismissed an unlawful detainer action against sublessees without prejudice, the sublessees were entitled to attorney's fees under the attorney's fees provision in the sublease, despite the limitation of Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) which precludes attorney's fees when a complaint is voluntarily dismissed. The attorney's fees clause was broad enough to encompass noncontract claims, and plaintiffs pleaded a tort-based claim based on unlawful holdover possession after expiration of the lease, not on a breach of the lease. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Sheriffs' Association Entitled to Private Attorney General Attorney's Fees Award for Enforcing Right Under POBRA. In Riverside Sheriffs' Assn. v. County of Riverside (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 414 , the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 was proper in an action by a sheriffs' association under the Peace Officers' Bill of Rights Act [Gov. Code § 3303] to enforce the right of representation for sheriffs during a criminal investigation of sexual improprieties with female inmates, because Gov. Code § 3309.5(3) did not provide the sole authority for a fee award in an action under POBRA, and the action secured an important right affecting the public interest. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5* Does Not Allow Award of Expert Witness Fees and Other Costs. In Benson v. Kwikset Corp. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1254 , the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff over $400,000 in fees for retained expert witnesses and investigators, plus charges for long distance telephone calls, copying, faxes, overnight deliveries, messenger services, and other miscellaneous expenses. The general costs statute applied and precluded recovery of expert witness fees and other expenses except when expressly authorized by law. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Taxpayers Not Entitled to Attorney's Fees on Common Fund or Substantial Benefit Theory. In Abouab v. City and County of San Francisco (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 643 , taxpayers petitioned for a writ of mandamus to compel a city to recognize a change in property ownership, which would result in a substantial increase in property taxes collected from the property. The taxpayers then sought attorney's fees under both the common fund and substantial benefit theory. The Court of Appeal held that although the catalyst theory could apply to the common fund and substantial benefit theories, the taxpayers were not entitled to attorney's fees under either theory even though the city eventually assessed increased property taxes against the property. The taxpayers were not prevailing parties, because there was no favorable result in the writ proceeding; under the catalyst theory, the taxpayers did not meet their burden of having given the city presuit notification; and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that there was no sound basis to find that the taxpayers were more than an initial impetus behind the creation of the benefit. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.55[1], [2].

Dismissed Defendant Must Obtain Order or Judgment of Dismissal to Be Awarded Costs. In Boonyarit v. Payless Shoesource, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 241 , a negligence action in which plaintiff voluntarily dismissed one defendant, the trial court erred in awarding that defendant costs as a "prevailing party" under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), because no order or judgment of dismissal was entered. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Home Buyer Entitled to Costs and Attorney's Fees. In Wakefield v. Bohlin (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 963, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 400 , an action by a home buyer against the sellers for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, the Court of Appeal held that, as to costs, despite good faith settlements with other defendants, the buyer obtained a net monetary recovery against one seller and thus was categorically entitled to costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032. As to the seller's wife, who was also a defendant, although the jury entered verdicts in her favor so that she categorically qualified as a prevailing party, the unity of interest exception applied. As to attorney's fees, although fees were not available under the contract because the cause of action was in tort, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, the buyer was the prevailing party and entitled to a fees award, because he obtained a jury verdict and monetary award against the one seller on the negligent misrepresentation claim, and the other seller was not a prevailing seller, because the contract plainly contemplated that either buyer or seller would prevail. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Real Estate Sellers Entitled to Attorney's Fees Without Mediation. In Van Slyke v. Gibson (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 491 , an action based on a real estate transaction, the prevailing sellers were entitled to an attorney's fees award under the standard California Residential Purchase Agreement attorney's fee provisions, which provided that the buyer and seller agreed to mediate any dispute or claim arising between them out of the agreement or any resulting transaction, before resorting to arbitration or court action. The sellers did not have to seek mediation because they sought fees for their defense of the buyer's action, not for prosecution of their cross-complaint, and the sellers' attorney telephoned the buyer's attorney and proposed arbitration and mediation but was rebuffed and the sellers the in a pretrial brief confirmed they offered arbitration and mediation to the buyer but he rejected those alternatives. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

§ 998 Applies to Actions Under Song-Beverly Act. In Duale v. Mercedes-Benz USA, LLC (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 880, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 711 , an action under the Song-Beverly Act seeking rescission of the contract for the sale of a car, contract revocation and damages and penalties, Code Civ. Proc. § 998 operated to cut off the recovery of post-offer attorney's fees and costs for otherwise prevailing plaintiffs who failed to obtain a judgment more favorable than the offer made by defendants under § 998, despite being the prevailing parties under the Song-Beverly Act attorney's fees provision. Even though the cost-shifting feature of the Song-Beverly Act was more the specific statute, it did not trump or supersede the provisions of § 998 because the two could be reconciled. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 Proper for Relief Through Preliminary Injunction. In County of Colusa v. California Wildlife Conservation Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 637 , the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that a county was the successful party against state agencies on a cause of action alleging that the state agencies failed to follow the notice procedures of the Williamson Act and failed to make the required findings prior to approving the acquisition of a conservation easement on private property for public use in ruling on a motion for a preliminary injunction. The practical result of the county's lawsuit was an agreement regarding the easement, which excused the findings requirement and apparently satisfied the county's notice concerns. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.110 Discovery

[1] Depositions

Revised Rules of Court Requirements for Ex Parte Applications. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1201 slightly changed the requirements for ex parte applications. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, § 193.221[3][a].

[2] Interrogatories

Discovery: Court's Authority to Hear Motion to Compel Response to Interrogatories Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.290(b). In Sinaiko Healthcare Consulting, Inc. v. Pacific Healthcare Consultants (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 390 , the court of appeal held that the mere service of an untimely interrogatory response, which may or may not reflect a good faith effort to comply with the party's discovery obligations, does not divest the trial court of authority to hear and grant a motion to compel responses under Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.290(b). That decision rests on the court's "sound discretion." See Ch. 194, Interrogatories, §§ 194.16[1], 194.19, 194.21.

[3] Privileges

Discovery of Police Officer Personnel Records. In Garcia v. Superior Court (City of Santa Ana) (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 63 , the California Supreme Court affirmed that a criminal defendant may file a declaration under seal in support a Pitchess motion on the grounds that it contains information protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege and attorney work protection. The court outlined the procedures a trial court should follow when faced with a sealed declaration or affidavit in support of a Pitchess motion. See Ch. 191, Discovery : Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.153[13].

Evidence Code Established a Human Trafficking Victim-Caseworker Privilege. Evid. Code § 1038 establishes a human trafficking victim-caseworker privilege. A trafficking victim, whether or not a party to the action, has a qualified privilege to refuse to disclose, or to prevent another from disclosing, a confidential communication between the victim and the caseworker. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.80[7].

Non-Party Insurer's Financial Information Is Not Discoverable Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.210. In Catholic Mut. Relief Soc'y v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 358 , the California Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.210 does not authorize discovery of reinsurance policies by an injured plaintiff to facilitate settlement of the underlying tort action. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.21[1].

Requests for Admissions Cannot Be Used in SVPA Cases. In Murillo v. Superior Court (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 730 , the Fourth Appellate District held, as a matter of first impression, that requests for admissions may not be propounded in Sexually Violent Predator Act (SVPA) proceedings because their use would eviscerate the SVPA's requirement that the state prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt and, when the case is tried to a jury, obtain a unanimous verdict before a person may be committed. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation and Timing, § 190.11[3][c].

§ 1.111 Elections

California Voting Rights Act of 2001 Not Subject to Strict Scrutiny. In Sanchez v. City of Modesto (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 660 , the court of appeal held that the California Voting Rights Act of 2001 (CVRA) is not facially invalid and passes rational-basis review. The CVRA is race-neutral because it does not favor any race over others or allocate burdens or benefits to any groups on the basis of race. Curing vote dilution is a legitimate government interest and creation of a private right of action like that in the CVRA is rationally related to that interest. See Ch. 243, Elections, § 243.19.

Legislature Cannot Combine Unrelated Changes in Single Constitutional Amendment. In Californians for an Open Primary v. McPherson (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 735 , the court held that the Legislature's proposed submission, in a single constitutional amendment, of two changes to the state Constitution that are not germane to a common theme, purpose, or subject, violated the separate-vote requirement of Cal. Const., art. XVIII, § 1. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.12[2][f].

[1] Civil Service

Same Official May Initiate Disciplinary Proceedings and Conduct Skelly Hearing for Public Employee. A California Court of Appeal has held that an official who initiates disciplinary proceedings against a public employee may also serve as the hearing officer at the employee's Skelly hearing, at which the employee has the opportunity to respond to the charges on which the proposed discipline is based. See Flippin v. Los Angeles City Bd. of Civil Serv. Comm'rs (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 272 , now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.13[3].

[1A] Discrimination

Title VII Limitations Period Runs From Time of Discriminatory Act and Is Not Extended Merely Because Subsequent Events Entail Adverse Consequences of Discriminatory Act. The United States Supreme Court has held that if an employer's intentionally discriminatory pay raise decision results in lower paychecks for an employee, the employee must file a Title VII charge within the applicable 180- or 300-day period after the pay raise decision [see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(1)]; once the applicable limitations period has lapsed, a charge cannot be based on the mere fact that paychecks issued within the limitations period entail adverse effects resulting from the past discriminatory pay raise decision. See Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 127 S. Ct. 2162 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.23[2][b], 115.51[2][a].

Same-Sex Harassment May Consist of Attack on Victim's Sexual Identity. A California Court of Appeal in Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006)140 Cal. App. 4th 1547 has held that harassment between members of the same sex can be "because of sex" if it involves an attack on the plaintiff's sexual identity. Moreover, there is no requirement that the motive for the harassment be sexual in nature; sexual harassment occurs when sex is used as a weapon to create a hostile work environment. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22[4][b], 115.36[5][a].

Procedures For Administrative Claims Under FEHA Clarified. California Courts of Appeal in Blum v. Superior Court (2006)141 Cal. App. 4th 418 and Wasti v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 667 have issued decisions clarifying procedural requirements for administrative claims of employment discrimination filed with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing. One court held that the verification requirement for an administrative complaint can be satisfied by the signature of the aggrieved person's attorney. Another court ruled that if an aggrieved employee files an administrative complaint and immediately requests a right-to-sue letter, the administrative complaint need not be served on the employer. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1][c].

Employer May Terminate Employee Who Is Unable to Work After Completion of Family Leave. A California Court of Appeal has held that the California Family Rights Act's guaranty of an employee's reinstatement after returning from family and medical care [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(l)] is not violated by an employer that terminates an employee who is unable to return to work at the completion of the maximum available leave. See Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][a], [h].

Federal Immigration Reform and Control Act Does Not Preempt California Law. The Ninth Circuit has held that the federal Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA), which forbids employers from knowingly employing unauthorized aliens [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2)], does not preempt California statutes that make employment-law protections available to all individuals regardless of immigration status [see Civ. Code § 3339; Gov. Code § 7285; Lab. Code § 1171.5], at least not when an employer can comply with the IRCA without creating a conflict with state law. See Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22[3], 115.54[2], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[19].

Employer Has Duty to Take Steps to Prevent Unlawful Retaliation Against Employees. A California Court of Appeal has held that Fair Employment and Housing Act requires employers to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent unlawful retaliation against employees who engage in activity protected under the Act. See Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1216 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.37[1][a], [3][a], 115.94.

[2] Termination and Discipline

Employees' Class-Arbitration Waiver Does Not Bar Class Arbitration of Claims for Overtime Pay, if Class Arbitration Would Allow More Effective Vindication of Claims. The California Supreme Court in Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443 has held that a class-arbitration waiver in an employment arbitration agreement is not enforceable to preclude class arbitration by employees whose unwaivable statutory rights to overtime pay [see Lab. Code §§ 500 et seq., 1194] have allegedly been violated, if the trial court determines that class arbitration would be a significantly more effective way of vindicating the employees' rights than individual arbitration. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.55[2]; Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[6]; Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16]; and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes , §§ 250.12[1], 250.34[1][a].

Physician May Be Terminated for Failure to Comply With Employer's Directives That Are Medically Appropriate. A California Court of Appeal has held that, although public policy prohibits the termination of a physician for advocating for medically appropriate health care [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 2056(c)], an employer may terminate a physician for refusing to comply with the employer's directives that are themselves medically appropriate. See Sarka v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 261 , now covered in Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[4].

Federal Immigration Reform and Control Act Does Not Preempt California Law. The Ninth Circuit has held that the federal Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA), which forbids employers from knowingly employing unauthorized aliens [see 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a)(2)], does not preempt California statutes that make employment-law protections available to all individuals regardless of immigration status [see Civ. Code § 3339; Gov. Code § 7285; Lab. Code § 1171.5], at least not when an employer can comply with the IRCA without creating a conflict with state law. See Incalza v. Fendi N. Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005 , now covered in Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22[3], 115.54[2], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[19].

[3] Wage and Hour Disputes

Employer May Deduct Expenses From Gross Income to Determine "Profit" for Purposes of Employee Profit-Sharing Plan. The California Supreme Court in Prachasaisoradej v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 217, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 407 has held that the deduction of an employer's expenses from gross receipts to calculate net profits for purposes of an employee profit-sharing program does not run afoul of the statutory and regulatory prohibitions against unauthorized deductions from wages [see, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 221-224, 400-410, 3751(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(8)], so long as no unauthorized deductions are made from employees' regular wages. See Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.20[1].

Employees' Class-Arbitration Waiver Does Not Bar Class Arbitration of Claims for Overtime Pay, if Class Arbitration Would Allow More Effective Vindication of Claims. The California Supreme Court in Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443 has held that a class-arbitration waiver in an employment arbitration agreement is not enforceable to preclude class arbitration by employees whose unwaivable statutory rights to overtime pay [see Lab. Code §§ 500 et seq., 1194] have allegedly been violated, if the trial court determines that class arbitration would be a significantly more effective way of vindicating the employees' rights than individual arbitration. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.55[2]; Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.12[6]; Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16]; and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes , §§ 250.12[1], 250.34[1][a].

No Limit on Terminated Employee's Claim for Unused Vacation. A California Court of Appeal has held that there is no limit on years of vested, unused vacation time that terminated employee may claim under Lab. Code § 227.3; rejecting the reasoning of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, the court held that the statute of limitations only limits the time in which the employee may file suit after the termination of employment. See Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.16[2][c], 250.34[1][b], and Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, § 531.67[1].

Three-Year Limitations Period Applies to Employee's Claim for Pay Covering Missed Rest and Meal Periods. The California Supreme Court in Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Prods., Inc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1094 has held that the three-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. 338(a) applies to an employee's claim under Lab. Code § 226.7(b) for additional pay based on the employer's failure to provide requisite meal periods or rest periods. See, now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.32[4][b], 250.34[1][b], and Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, §§ 531.62, 531.65[3], 531.67[1].

§ 1.112A Equity

New Chapter on Equity. This publication is updated with a new chapter on equity. This new chapter provides a comprehensive review of this overarching principle of law. Topics of analysis include the nature, jurisdiction, and principles of equitable power; equitable causes of action; equitable remedies; defenses to actions in equity; equitable defenses of general application; specific equitable relief against particular wrongs; and proceedings for relief in equity. This chapter also identifies equitable issues that exist throughout other areas of law. With extensive cross referencing to other topics and chapters, this new chapter acts as a gateway for finding focused equity analysis and forms on specific topics and fact patterns. See Ch. 251, Equity .

Interpretation of Insurance Contracts Under Civ. Code § 1646. In Frontier Oil Corp. v. RLI Ins. Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1436 , an appellate court held that pursuant to the choice-of-law rule in Civil Code § 1646, California law governed the interpretation of a commercial general liability policy for oil and gas operations in California that was executed in Texas. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.22.

Indemnitee's Failure to Tender Defense to Indemnitor Does Not Bar Recovery of Defense Costs. In City of Watsonville v. Corrigan (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1542 , the court of appeal held that if an indemnitor does not offer to provide a defense, the fact that an indemnitee provides its own defense without first tendering defense of the action to the indemnitor will not preclude the indemnitee from recovering its defense costs, at least in the absence of language in the indemnity agreement that demonstrates a contrary intent. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.41[2][a].

Settlement for Amount of Limitation of Liability Clause Not in Good Faith. In TSI Seismic Tenant Space, Inc. v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 159 , the court of appeal held that a settlement between a plaintiff and one defendant for the $50,000 amount specified by a pre-existing limitation of liability clause should not have been found to have been in good faith pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, because the settling defendant's proportionate share of culpability in relation to the amount of potential damages was vastly greater. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[5][b].

Allocation of Primary and Excess Insurance. Ins. Code § 11580.9 has been amended to allocate primary and excess insurance coverage for a power unit and attached trailer. See Ch. 88, Automobiles: Automobile Insurance, § 88.17[10].

Restrictions on Indemnity Agreements Between Public Entities and Design Professionals. Under newly added Civ. Code § 2782.8, for contracts or contractual amendments made after 2006 between a public agency and a design professional such as an architect, landscape architect, professional engineer, or land surveyor, agreements purporting to require the design professional to indemnify the public agency are unenforceable except to the extent that the design professional agrees to be liable for the design professional's own negligence, recklessness, or willful misconduct. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.34[2].

Nature of Underlying Action Relevant in Subrogation. In State Farm General Insurance Co. v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1098 , the court held that in applying the doctrine of superior equities in a subrogation action, the nature of the underlying cause of action is a relevant factor in balancing the respective equities of the parties. See Ch. 536, Subrogation, § 536.17[2].

Insurer Not Required to Cover Costs and Attorney's Fees Assessed Against Insured for Willful Act. In Combs v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1338 , the court of appeal held that if Ins. Code § 533 precludes the duty of indemnity, it also prevents coverage for the insured's costs of suit, such as attorney's fees. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.115[2].

Automobile Insurance. In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Progressive Marathon Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1 , the court held that "liability loss" within the meaning of Ins. Code § 11580.9(d) (which determines primary liability coverage among policies when one policy describes or rates leased automobile as "owned") includes uninsured motorist coverage. See Ch. 88, Automobiles: Automobile Insurance, § 88.17[3][a].

Prop. 51 Inapplicable to Strict Liability Action Based on Single Product. In Bostick v. Flex Equipment Co., Inc. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 80 , the court of appeal held that Proposition 51 does not apply to a strict product liability action when the plaintiff's injuries are caused solely by a single defective product and all of the defendants are in the same chain of distribution. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][c][v].

Sovereign Immunity Prevents Assigning Percentage of Fault to Public Entity. In Munoz v. City of Union City (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 173 , the court of appeal held that when no statutory basis exists for imposing liability on a public entity, no percentage of fault can be attributed to a public entity under Proposition 51 regardless of whether the entity is named as a defendant in the suit. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][d].

Ass'n (9th Cir. 2007) 494 F.3d 788* , the Ninth Circuit held that a credit card company is not liable for contributory or vicarious copyright infringement merely because the company, with knowledge that certain websites sell content wrongly appropriated from a copyright holder, refuses to stop processing credit card payments to those websites by Internet users. § 1.114 Family Law

[1] Adoptions

Presumed Fathers. Under the UPA, as interpreted in the case of Gabriel P. v. Suedi D. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 850 , fathers are classified as "alleged," "biological," and "presumed" fathers. A presumed father has greater rights than an alleged or biological father. See Ch. 12, Adoption: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.15[2].

Termination of Parental Rights. Parental rights may be terminated under Fam. Code § 7825 only when parent's unfitness is demonstrated by facts underlying the felony conviction; mere existence of felony conviction is not sufficient to prove parental unfitness. See In re Baby Girl M. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1528 , now covered in Ch. 12, Adoption: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.104[1].

[2] Community Property

Scope of Interspousal Fiduciary Duties. In re Marriage of Walker (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1408 holds that the 2002 amendments to Fam. Code § 721, which based scope of spousal fiduciary duty on duties that did not exist before the 2002 amendments, makes Fam. Code § 721 retroactive, to extent that Corp. Code §§ 16403, 16404, and 16503 impose greater duties on partners than did former Corp. Code §§ 15019-15022. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.51[4][a].

Presumption of Undue Influence. In In re Marriage of Balcof (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1509 , the court found that the presumption of undue influence was not rebutted when wife secured husband's agreement to transfer 20 percent of his separate property corporation and his share of marital residence to her as result of her threats and numerous instances of verbal and physical abuse directed at husband. See Ch. 122, Community Property , § 122.5[4][d].

No Presumption of Undue Influence Based on Facts. In re Marriage of Burkle (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 712 holds that a presumption of undue influence does not arise in interspousal transaction unless one spouse obtains unfair advantage or obtains property for which no or clearly inadequate consideration has been given, and does not apply to postmarital agreement in which both spouses obtain advantages, both are represented by counsel, each is offered full access to other's records relating to marital assets, and both acknowledge in agreement that neither has obtained unfair advantage from agreement. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.71[4].

No Presumption of Undue Influence in Mediated Marital Agreements. In re Marriage of Kieturakis (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 56 holds that a presumption of undue influence applies to unequal marital settlement agreements but not to marital settlement agreements reached through mediation, agreements in which parties acknowledge that no undue influence was exercised, or when undue influence is alleged with respect to judgment that has long been final. See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.71[4][a].

[3] Dissolution of Marriage

Alternate Property Valuation Date. When a party precludes experts from valuing property as of date of trial by failing to provide needed information, e.g., due to poor record-keeping, the court may value property as of an alternate date, such as the date of separation. See In re Marriage of Nelson (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1546 , now covered in Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.52[2][b][i].

Termination of Spousal Support Based on Domestic Violence. The court is not required to consider the factors outlined in Fam. Code § 4320 in making its determination under Fam. Code § 4325. The presumption of Fam. Code § 4325 applies even when the parties' settlement agreement provides that spousal support is not subject to modification or termination. See In re Marriage of Cauley (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1100 , now covered in Ch. 225, Dissolution of Marriage: Spousal Support, § 225.119.

[4] Family Law Enforcement

Retroactivity of Family Code Amendments. In a unanimous decision, the California Supreme Court relied on Fam. Code § 4, a previously unnoticed section, to move the issue of retroactive application of amendments to existing law or the addition of new law to the forefront of consideration by Family Law practitioners. See In re Marriage of Fellows (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 179 , now covered in Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies, § 258.12[5].

Applicability of Laches Defense. In In re Marriage of Fellows (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 179 , the Court held that Fam. Code § 4 (c) established that amendments to the California Family Code apply retroactively unless otherwise provided by law; thus, the statute at issue barred a laches defense even when the failure to make payments occurred before the statute's enactment. See Ch. 258, Family Law Enforcement: General Enforcement Principles and Remedies, § 258.12[5].

[5] Parent and Child

Registered Domestic Partner Petition to Establish Parental Relationship. A registered domestic partner of the birth mother is entitled to bring a petition under Fam. Code § 7611(d) to establish her parental relationship with a child born to the birth mother by artificial insemination from an anonymous donor. The court must determine first whether the petitioner is a presumed parent of the child under Fam. Code § 7611(d), and then, whether this is an appropriate action in which to rebut the presumption that the petitioner is the child's parent. See Charisma R. v. Kristina S. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 301 , now covered in Ch. 394, Parent and Child, § 394.14A.

§ 1.115 Federal Courts

Preemption. This chapter is updated with Hall v. North American Van Lines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 683 which holds the existence of a defense based upon federal law is insufficient to support federal jurisdiction. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 235.14[4].

Removal--Amount in Controversy. This chapter is updated with Lowdermilk v. United States Bank Nat. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 994 , which holds a defendant seeking removal in an action in which the plaintiff's complaint prays for relief in an amount below the jurisdiction amount must prove with "legal certainty" that the amount in controversy is satisfied, and attorney fees are included in the amount in controversy for determining federal class action jurisdiction if an award of fees is authorized by statute. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 235.15[6][a][i].

Removal--Notice of Grounds. This chapter is updated with Williams v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 975 which holds the civil removal statute has no requirement that all grounds for removal be listed in the notice; if the original complaint supports federal jurisdiction on both diversity and federal question grounds, the defendant is not required to list both grounds in notice of removal. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 235.38[2][a].

Removal--Review. This chapter is updated with Reddam v. KPMG LLP (9th Cir. 2006) 457 F.3d 1054 , which holds a remand order based on events subsequent to removal, which caused the district court to lose jurisdiction, is subject to review, because the remand was not taken for one of the grounds listed in 28 U.S.C.S. § 1447(c). See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 235.40[5][a][ii].

Well-Pleaded Complaint Rule. This chapter is updated with Hall v. North American Van Lines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 683 which holds the presence of underlying federal issues does not create jurisdiction over a well-pleaded state law claim. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 235.33[2][a].

§ 1.116 Juvenile Law

Reorganized Rules of Court and Judicial Council Forms. The juvenile law chapters of this publication are revised throughout with the 2007 reorganization of California Rules of Court and the latest revisions and additions to Judicial Council Forms. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures ; Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings ; and Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

Rehearing. This chapter is updated with In re B.A. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1411 , which holds upon application for rehearing, the judge must read the entire transcript of the proceeding before the referee and independently weigh and evaluate the evidence. The judge may then either grant the rehearing or adopt the referee's findings and deny the request for rehearing. A judge's signed and dated handwritten note on the order denying a rehearing within the 20-day requirement of Welf. & Inst. Code § 252 will satisfy the timeliness requirement of that section even if a formal minute order is not prepared within that time. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procedures, § 327.20[2][g][iii].

Indian Child Welfare Act--Dependency. This chapter is updated with a revised analysis of the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.] in regard to dependency proceedings, with detailed review of notice under both federal and California law, non-federally recognized tribes, expert witnesses, and includes new practice tips. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.32A.

Appellate Counsel. This chapter is updated with a new section on appointment of counsel for children in dependency appeals. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.62[3][e].

Indian Child Welfare Act--Delinquency. This chapter is updated with a revised discussion of the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.] in regard to delinquency proceedings, and the case of In re Enrique O. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 728 which holds Rule 1439(b), which has since been renumbered as Rule 5.664, does not expressly contradict the federal statute by requiring ICWA notices and procedures occur in all out of home placements arising out of acts that would be crimes if committed by an adult. On the other hand, the court expressed no opinion as to when, if ever, a delinquency proceeding could fall within the ambit of ICWA. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.25.

Maximum Penalties--Delinquency. This chapter is updated with People v. Demirdjian (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 10 , which holds a minor who is prosecuted in criminal court is subject to different maximum penalties, depending upon the age at which they committed their offenses. For juveniles under the age of 16, who were 14 or 15 when the crime was committed, a life term without the possibility of parole is not permitted, leaving the maximum possible term as 25 years to life with the possibility of parole. For offenders 16 years of age or older, punishment may be a life term without the possibility of parole. In no case can a minor prosecuted in adult court be sentence to death. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.64[5].

§ 1.118 Patents and Trademarks

Trademarks--Antidilution Law Revised. The Trademark Dilution Revision Act [Pub. L. No. 109-312 (Oct. 6, 2006)] amends the Trademark Dilution Act [Pub. L. No. 104-98 (Jan. 16, 1996)], which added provisions in 15 U.S.C. § 1125 for the purpose of protecting famous trademarks, whether registered or unregistered, from subsequent uses (by persons other than the famous-mark owners) that blurred the distinctiveness of a mark or tarnished or disparaged it, even in the absence of a likelihood of confusion. The provisions of 15 U.S.C. § 1125(c) that were added in 1996 were to be applied when unauthorized users attempted to trade on the goodwill and established renown of famous marks, and thereby diluted their distinctive quality. The 2006 act revises section 1125 to eliminate a flaw cited by the U.S. Supreme Court, which held that the 1996-enacted language of 15 U.S.C. § 1125(c) "unambiguously require[d] a showing of actual dilution, rather than a likelihood of dilution" before a famous-mark owner could obtain injunctive relief [Moseley v. V Secret Catalogue, Inc. (2003) 537 U.S. 418, 432-433, 123 S. Ct. 1115, 155 L. Ed. 2d 1] . In addition, the 2006 act clarifies some issues of interpretation of the 1996-enacted language of 15 U.S.C. § 1125(c) that had been noted by courts of appeals [see generally H.R. Rep. No. 109-23 (2005)]. Consequently some Ninth Circuit cases will have diminished relevance under the new version of 15 U.S.C. § 1125(c) [e.g., Nissan Motor Co. v. Nissan Computer Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 378 F.3d 1002 ; Playboy Enters. v. Netscape Communs. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 354 F.3d 1020 ; Thane Int'l, Inc. v. Trek Bicycle Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 894 ; Mattel, Inc. v. MCA Records, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 894 ; Panavision Intern., L.P. v. Toeppen (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1316] . For discussion of the new version of 15 U.S.C. § 1125(c), see Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.27.

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.119

§ 1.119 Physicians and Other Medical Personnel

Occurrence of Pre-Discussed Medical Complications Can Trigger Statute of Limitations in Medical Negligence Action. In Garabet v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1538 , the court of appeal held that the occurrence of complications that had been discussed prior to the providing of medical treatment can trigger the running of the statute of limitations in cases in which the patient alleges that the treatment was performed negligently or should not have been performed at all. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.47[1].

Colorado Physician Liable for Prescribing Medicine for California Resident via Internet. In Hageseth v. Superior Court (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1399 , the court held that California had jurisdiction to prosecute a Colorado physician under Bus. & Prof. Code § 2052 for practicing medicine in California without a California license when the physician prescribed medication over the Internet and that medication was sent to a California resident. See Ch. 414, Physicians: Licensing and Discipline .

Nursing Homes--Violation of Patients' Bill of Rights. In Fitzhugh v. Granada Healthcare & Rehab. Ctr. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 469, 473-474 , the court held that a cause of action for violation of the Patients' Bill of Rights [see Health & Safety Code § 1430(b)] survives the death of the resident or patient. See Ch. 351, Long Term Health and Residential Care, § 351.21[4].

MICRA "Personal Injury" Does Not Cover Purely Economic Injury. In Vazquez de Mercado v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 711 , the court of appeal held that, for purposes of establishing the applicability of MICRA to the conduct of a medical professional, the term "personal injury" covers only injury that impairs the well-being or mental or physical health of the plaintiff, and the term does not cover purely economic injury. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.13[2], and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, §§ 415.10, 415.49[5].

New Requirements for Electronically Created Health Care Directive. Prob. Code § 4673 has been amended to allow a directive or power of attorney for health care to be created electronically, but to be effective, it must be acknowledged by a notary public and otherwise meet the requirements for a written directive, and if it contains a digital signature, that signature must meet certain requirements. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.15[8].

Hospital May Indemnify Nonemployee Member for Peer Review Activities. Under newly added Health & Safety Code § 32128, the board of directors of a local hospital district has the authority to agree to indemnify a nonemployee member of the medical staff for damages and costs associated with being named a defendant in a civil action stemming from the member's participation in medical peer review activities, although the authority to indemnify for punitive damages is subject to restrictions. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.15[13].

Malpractice Award Reporting Requirements for Physicians and Dentists Updated. Bus. & Prof. Code § 801 et seq. has been amended to change the reporting requirements for malpractice awards and settlements in suits brought against dentists. See Ch. 209, Dentists, § 209.18, and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.51.

Health Care Services Contract May Provide for Arbitration of All Future Claims. In Reigelsperger v. Siller (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 574 , the California Supreme Court held that if an arbitration agreement in a health care services contract meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295, the parties may agree to arbitrate all future claims, even those stemming from treatment for different injuries. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.51.

Requirements for Serving Notice of Intent to File Medical Malpractice Action Clarified. In Jones v. Catholic Healthcare West (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 300 , the court of appeal held that although compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 et seq. is not mandatory when serving a notice of intent to commence a malpractice action against a health care provider, a plaintiff who does not comply with those provisions must show that defendant received actual notice. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.90[4].

§ 1.119A Probate and Estate Practice

No-Contest Clauses--Election of Beneficiaries. In Colburn v. Northern Trust Co. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 439, 447 , the court upheld a no-contest clause in a testamentary trust which forced the trustor's former wife and their children to choose between enforcing their rights under an existing martial dissolution judgment by filing creditor's claims, or relinquishing those rights and taking the gifts provided for them in trustor's trust. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14[4][a]; Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.16[1].

No-Contest Clauses--Application to Actions Under Uniform Principal and Income Act. In McKenzie v. Vanderpoel (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1442 , the court upheld a no-contest clause in trust instrument that applied to any attempt to "impair" the trust, and therefore extended to the trust beneficiary's adjustment petition under the California Uniform Principal and Income Act to reallocate principal and income, when such a reallocation would have resulted in more income to the beneficiary than allowed by the trust, and would have resulted in the invasion of trust principal reserved to other beneficiaries. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14[4][a]; Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.16[1].

§ 1.120 Public Administration

Implied Consent to Blood Alcohol Testing Doesn't Require Actual Driving. In Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328 , the California Supreme Court held that the implied consent statute applies broadly and generally to the motoring public (i.e., those who take advantage of the public streets, roads, and highways to operate a motor vehicle), and does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to the arrest for driving under the influence. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Driver's Licenses, § 92.40[1].

Federal Preemption and Savings Clause. In Capital Research and Management Company v. Brown (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 58, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 , the court holds the provisions of the National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 (NSMIA) [15 U.S.C. § 77r] did not preempt the California Attorney General from bringing an enforcement action under California Corporations Code §§ 25216, 25401 against an investment advisor and registered wholesale broker dealer for statutory violations. The state enforcement action was protected by the savings clause of the preemption provisions of federal law [15 U.S. C. § 77r (c)(1)]. See Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administration Law, § 470.16[1][a].

Government Contracts. In Benn v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 478, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563 , the court holds that a non-profit corporation did not have a due process of law protected property interest in contracts with the county of Los Angeles to provide foster care services, nor did it have a protected interest under a federal statute, the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act [42 U.S.C. § 671]. The contracts were not permanent, there was no good cause for termination clause, and there was no extreme dependence by the non profit corporation on the continuation of the contract terms by the county. Thus, the county decision to confer do not refer status on the corporation did not violate due process of law. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions, § 470A.21[5].

Notice Requirements. In California School Employees Association v. Livingston Unified School District (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 391, 400, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 923 , the court holds a school district's notice procedures denied a terminated employee due process of law because those procedures were not reasonably calculated under the circumstances to inform the terminated employee of his right to request a hearing to challenge the termination. The school district required that an employee request a hearing within five days of the date of mailing the notice to the employee. The former employee requested a hearing within five days of receiving actual notice of the termination. The notice was mailed during the summer time, when the school employee was not working and was on vacation. The districts notice procedures violated the reasonable calculated to inform standard for procedural due process of law termination. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions, § 470A.43[2].

Right of Cross Examination. In Stardust Mobile Estates v. City of San Buenaventura (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 218 , the court holds that the due process of law right to cross examine witnesses was not violated in a rent review board hearing proceeding. This was because the issues in the proceeding and the hearing record was based primarily on documentary evidence and reports from experts on both sides in the litigation for which there was no need to test credibility since the issues in the case did not turn on live witness testimony. The Court of Appeal also rejected procedural due process challenges based on the lack of discovery and based on conflicting advocacy and advisory roles by outside counsel for the rent board. The court concluded that discovery in mandate proceedings was limited because judicial review under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1094.5 (administrative mandamus) was based on the hearing record before the agency. The Court of Appeal rejected the conflicting roles defense of unconstitutional bias even though the lawyer in question had advised the rent board. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions, § 470A.46[3].

California Industrial Welfare Commission Rulemaking. In Small v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 222, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 410 , the court holds the Industrial Welfare Commission (IWC) was delegated the authority under Labor Code § 517(a) to adopt wage orders relating to elections to adopt and repeal alternative workweek schedules. The IWC adopted Wage Order No. 16-2001 (Wage Order 16 [Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11160] applicable to the construction industry that required new alternative workweek schedules elections when the number of employees working for 30 days increased above 50 percent since the prior election. The California court of Appeal overturned the decision of the superior court which had invalidated the wage order. The superior court gave three reasons for setting aside the wage order: 1) lack of required adequate statement of the basis for the rule; 2) lack of proper publication of the wage order; and 3) the wage order is unreasonable, arbitrary, capricious, and unfair because it contained an unworkable definition of a specific craft in the construction industry. See Ch. 472A, Agency Rulemaking Procedures, § 472A.31[1][k].

Skelly* Hearings. In Flippin v. Los Angeles City Board of Civil Service Commissioners (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 272, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458 , the court rejected a due process of law challenge in a Skelley [Skelly v. State Personnel Board (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 194, 539 P.2d 774] hearing context based upon the practice that the same public employee that investigated and then initiated the employee discipline proceeding also acted as the Skelley hearing officer. That same employee also made the recommendation that the employee be discharged. There was no due process of law violation because the agency hearing procedure after the Skelley hearing included the following elements; another supervisor imposed the penalty; there was a full evidentiary hearing before a neutral hearing examiner, and there was review of the hearing examiners decision by the civil service commission board. See Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, § 473.24.

Ex Parte Communications. In Chevron Stations Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 116, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 6 , the court holds that the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control violated provisions of the California Administrative Procedures Act [Gov. Code § 11430.10] because the Department prosecutor sent an ex parte communication (prosecutor's hearing report) to the department decision maker prior to the time the decision maker decided whether or not to adopt the proposed decision of the administrative law judge. The Court of Appeal in Chevron Stations relied upon the decision of the California Supreme Court in the Quintenar case [Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2006) 40 Cal. 4th 1, 4-6, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585, 145 P.3d 462 (Department rejected ALJ proposed decision)]. The Court of Appeal held that the ex parte communication violated the California Administrative Procedures Act even though the Department adopted the proposed decision of the administrative law judge. The Court of Appeal also held that the licensee established a prima facie case of a violation of the ex parte communications prohibition in Gov. Code §§ 11430.10 to 11430.70. Once that showing was made, the Department had the burden of proof to justify the department's practices under the APA, and the department failed to meet that burden of proof before the Board. The court of appeal rejected the department's efforts to make this showing for the first time on appeal. See Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, § 473.28[1].

Equitable Estoppel. In California School Employees Association v. Tustin Unified School District (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 510, 55 Cal. Rptr.3d 739 , the court rejected the assertion of equitable estoppel against an employee organization by a school district because the litigation position of the organization was not inconsistent with the terms of a collective bargaining agreement that addressed similar issue. Since there was no inconsistency, there was no change of position by the school district, and no basis for the application of equitable estoppel as a defense. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearing, § 473F.54[1][b].

Equitable Estoppel. In Feduniak v. California Coastal Commission (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1346, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 591 , the court rejected the application of equitable estoppel as a defense to enforcement of a restoration order by the California Coastal Commission against a homeowner with a three hole golf course on the homeowner's property. The Court of Appeal rejected this defense against the Coastal Commission because of lack of proof of three elements of estoppel: 1) The Commission lacked knowledge that the golf course violated the easement and permit conditions; 2) regulatory inaction by the Commission related to the golf course for many years did not satisfy the requirement that the Commission intended that others would take action based upon its failure to enforce the requirements of the; and 3) application of estoppel against a government agency would nullify a strong land use related policy designed to protect the public. Another California Court of Appeal rejected the application of the laches defense to actions taken by the California Coastal Commission ordering that homeowners who had developed a three hole golf course on their land restore the land to its native state as an area of dunes with vegetation. Laches was rejected as a defense to enforcement of the order by the Commission, because there was no unreasonable delay in the enforcement of the easement, no acquiescence by the commission in the easement violation and the application of the defense would nullify an important public policy. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearing, § 473F.54[1][b].

Attorney'S Fees. In People ex rel Brown v. Tehama County Board of Supervisors (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 422, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 , the court holds the California Attorney general could not recover $173,450 in attorney's fees incurred in litigation with county agency defendants to enforce provisions of the subdivision map act even though the attorney general was the prevailing party in that lawsuit because the attorney general could not satisfy the financial burden requirement for recovery of attorneys fees under Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Attorney's Fees. In Zuehlsdorf. v. Simi Valley Unified School District (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 249, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 , the court holds attorney's fees (in the amount of $6,334) were properly awarded under Gov. Code § 800 to a father of a high school student who successfully challenged the school district's decision that prevented the high school student from participating in high school athletics. The daughter was reinstated into the athletics program after the superior court granted a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction enjoining the school district from prohibiting the student's athletic participation. The superior court found that the denial of athletic participation by the school district was arbitrary and capricious within the meaning of the Government Code. The superior court denied an application by the father for a permanent injunction because of mootness in that the student had completed the athletic season, and there was no need to further enjoin the school district. The Court of Appeal upheld the fee award concluding that there was an adequate factual finding that the school district acted arbitrarily and capriciously in denying athletic participation, and that the father was a prevailing party under Gov. Code § 800 notwithstanding the denial of the permanent injunction on the grounds of mootness, because the father achieved his litigation objectives, getting his daughter reinstated into the athletic program at her high school. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Judicial Review--Exhausting Administrative Remedies. In Ohton v. Board of Trustees of the California State University (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 749, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111 , the court holds a state university employee who filed an action for damages for retaliation under the California Whistleblower Protection Act [Gov. Code § 8547.12] was required to exhaust administrative and judicial remedies before filing a civil lawsuit. The employee had failed to file a petition for a writ of administrative mandamus to challenge the action of the university in retaliating against him, and was required to seek mandamus relief before bringing the civil lawsuit. The Court of Appeal ordered a remand of the matter to the trial court to give the employee the opportunity to amend the complaint to add a petition for a writ of mandate. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.11[2][a].

Judicial Review--Exhausting Administrative Remedies. In Eight Unnamed Physicians v. Medical Executive Committee of Medical Staff of Washington Township Hospital (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 503, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 100 , the court holds a group of physicians that challenged the refusal of the hospital at which they worked to order a consolidated hearing rather then hold eight individual hearings failed to exhaust administrative remedies because there was an available internal hospital remedy available (appeal of the JRC decision to the hospital board) to challenge the refusal to consolidate the hearing. The California Court of Appeal held that the failure to exhaust administrative remedies required reversal of the petition granting a writ of mandate requiring the consolidation of the hearings. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.12[1][a].

Judicial Review--Exhausting Administrative Remedies. In Imagistics International, Inc. v. Department of General Services (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 581, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 18 , the court holds an unsuccessful bidder for a state contract failed to exhaust administrative remedies required to challenge the award of the contract to another bidder. The protestor challenged the adequacy of the administrative remedies by claiming that the protest arbitration process violated due process of law because the protest coordinator and the Office of Administrative Hearings were too closely aligned with the Department of General Services. The protestor claimed that it violated due process of law to have a small body of OAH hearing officers hear bid protests because DGS is a repeat player in bid protests administrative proceedings. The Court of Appeal rejected this argument and found that due process of law was not violated in these circumstances. Thus, the bid protestor was required to pursue the administrative remedy specified in these circumstances, protest arbitration. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.12[1][a].

Judicial Review--Exhausting Administrative Remedies. In McAllister v. County of Monterey (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 253, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , the court holds the administrative jurisdiction exception to exhaustion of administrative remedies did not apply to excuse failure to exhaust administrative remedies by a challenger to a coastal development permit who failed to appeal to the California Coastal Commission a county decision to grant the permit to a neighboring landowner. The challenger argued that the county action was void and therefore exhaustion was not required, but the court of appeal rejected that argument and held that exhaustion is required for as applied challenges to agency action based on voidness. The Coastal Commission had jurisdiction over this type of dispute at the appellate level. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.12[4].

Laches. In Womack v. San Francisco Community College District (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 854, 54 Cal. Rptr 3d 558 , the court accepted the laches defense and held that it precluded a teacher's lawsuit for reinstatement as a regular employee against the San Francisco Community College District. The court held that the teacher waited too long to challenge an adverse personnel decision. Public employees who want to challenge adverse personnel decision by their employers must see writ review within a reasonable time after completion of the administrative proceeding. The teacher waited nine years to claim the right to full time employment from the time that the teacher first taught a full time unit load. The teacher filed a writ of mandamus action under Code of Civil Procedure 1085, but then waited three years to prosecute the mandamus action and obtain a hearing on the merits. The court of appeal did not accept the reasons offered by the plaintiff for these delays, specifically ignorance of the law, because the teacher had an experienced attorney to represent him. The court held that the teacher acquiesced in the challenged employment action and that the school district was prejudiced by the substantial delay in making the teacher's challenge in that the district had the potential for increased liability for back pay in the form of a seven-year wage differential if the teacher had been misclassified. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.22.

Judicial Review of Penalty Assessments. In Flippin v. Los Angeles City Board of Civil Service Commissioners (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 272, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458 , the court holds judicial review of an agency assessment of a penalty is very limited and the standard of review is arbitrary, capricious, or abuse of discretion. The reviewing court cannot substitute its judgment for that of the agency and can not overturn a penalty assessment that has a reasonable basis of support. The appellate court review of a trial court penalty determination is de novo and without deference to the trial. The California Court of Appeal reversed the superior court decision that overturned a penalty assessment by a city review board of upholding the discharge of a public employee when the employee was found to have committed serious misconduct that reflected adversely on other public employees of the same agency. The discharge penalty had a reasonable basis in the fact record and the agency did not abuse its discretion in sustaining the discharge of the public employee. Therefore it was improper for the superior court to overturn the penalty assessed against the employee. See Ch. 474B, Standards of Judicial Review, § 474B.16[4][e].

Judicial Review of Disciplinary Penalty. In Kolender v. San Diego County Civil Service Commission (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 464, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 84 , the court holds it was an abuse of discretion for a county civil service commission to reduce a disciplinary penalty imposed by a county sheriff on a county employee from a permanent demotion to a temporary demotion. The sheriff challenged the change in penalty by petitioning for a writ of administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 (penalty reduction was abuse of discretion because criteria for penalty assessment in law enforcement employment is harm to public service, and commission erroneously relied upon inaccurate performance evaluation to reduce penalty). See Ch. 474B, Standards of Judicial Review, § 474B.16[4][e].

County's Discretion Limited in Determining Eligibility for Indigent Relief. In Alford v. County of San Diego (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 16, 32, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 596 , the court of appeal held that a flat income cap eligibility standard that does not consider an individual's ability to pay all or a part of subsistence medical care is not permitted under Welf. & Inst. Code § 17000. See Ch. 527, Social Services, § 527.13[2].

Mandamus Permitted for Parties with Standing to Complain about Social Service Benefits. In California Association for Health Services at Home v. State Department of Health Services (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 696, 705-707, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 102 , the court of appeal held that interested persons who are neither applicants for nor recipients of public social service benefits, but who otherwise have standing to complain, may challenge invalid regulations by traditional mandamus pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1085. See Ch. 527, Social Services, § 527.60.

PAS Results Admissible in Evidence. In Roze v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176 , the court of appeal held that preliminary alcohol screening test results are admissible in evidence at a trial, but the trier of fact may not give them much weight, depending on the method by which they were conducted. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' License, § 92.47[2][b].

Superior Court May Not Overrule PUC Order. In Anchor Lighting v. Southern California Edison Company (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 541 , the court of appeals held that the PUC's interpretation of Public Utilities Code may not be disturbed, even if it is invalid, unless it fails to bear a reasonable relation to the statute's purposes and language. See Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.141.

Churches--Religious Use of Public Property. In Faith Ctr. Church Evangelistic Ministries v. Glover (9th Cir. 2006) 462 F.3d 1194 , the Ninth Circuit held that a county's policy and practice of prohibiting the use of a public library meeting room for religious worship services, while allowing its use for other religion-related purposes, was permissible on the ground of preserving the intended purpose of that meeting room as limited public forum. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations, § 110.34[1].

§ 1.120A Public Entities and Officers

Stipulation of Innocence in Penal Code § 851.8 Proceeding Lacks Collateral Estoppel Effect in Subsequent Proceeding Under Penal Code § 4900. In Tennison v. California Victim Comp. & Government Claims Bd. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1164 , the court of appeal held that a stipulated finding of innocence in an earlier proceeding under Penal Code § 851.8 does not have collateral estoppel effect in a subsequent proceeding for compensation under Penal Code § 4900. The court also held that a reviewing court should apply a substantial evidence standard when reviewing a decision of the Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board. See Ch. 465, Public Entities and Officers: Civil Claims Arising From Criminal Acts, §§ 465.63[2][b], 465.64[2].

Use of "False Record or Statement" Not False Claim Under False Claims Act. In Fassberg Construction Co. v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 720 , the court of appeal held that, while a general contractor made a "claim" under the False Claims Act each time it submitted a request for a progress payment to a housing authority with which it had a construction contract, the submission of weekly payroll reports in support of those requests for payment did not constitute individual claims and a civil penalty is available only for the making of each false claim. The court also held that requests to modify the construction contract were not actionable claims, although any subsequent request for payment based on a falsely documented change request would be a false claim. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, § 468.21[3].

§ 1.121 Real Estate, Land Use, and Environmental Laws

[1] Building Contracts

Contractor Licensing--Legislature Enacts Prohibitions Related to Individual With Revoked Contractor's License Who Performs Acts for Which License Is Required. Supplementing currently ineffective administrative remedies, legislation has been enacted to deter those whose contractor's license has been revoked for good reason from continuing to conduct business under the licenses issued to associates or family members [Stats. 2006, ch. 171]. The legislation imposes misdemeanor charges against revoked licensees who associate with a licensed contractor and act in any capacity other than as a supervised employee. It also imposes misdemeanor charges against licensees who knowingly employ a revoked licensee in any capacity other than as a supervised employee. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts, § 104.83A.

[2] Easements

Easements--No Ownership in Fee When Easement Is Restricted in Scope. A California appellate court has held that an easement incorporating a right of exclusive use may fall short of ownership in fee when the easement is restricted in scope. See Blackmore v. Powell (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1593 , now covered in Ch. 240, Easements, § 240.12[1][b].

State Registry for Conservation Easements. 2006 legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 531] requires the state Resources Agency to establish a central public registry of all conservation easements held or required by the state, or purchased with state grant funds. For discussion, including coverage of the registry's required information, see Ch. 240, Easements, § 240.12[6].

[3] Eminent Domain

Eminent Domain--Public Entity May Not Use Property for Any Use Other Than Use Stated in Resolution of Necessity Unless New Resolution Is Adopted. 2006 legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 602] prohibits a public entity from using a property for any use other than the public use stated in its resolution of necessity, unless the entity first adopts a new resolution that finds the public interest and necessity of using the property for a new stated public use. Pursuant to the legislation, a public entity is also required to adopt a new resolution finding the continued public interest and necessity of using a property for its original stated public use if the property was not put to use within 10 years of adoption of the original resolution. If an entity fails to adopt a new resolution under either circumstance, it must offer a right of first refusal to repurchase the property to the original owner or owners, under specified conditions. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, § 247.32[4A].

Eminent Domain--Property Owner Has Right to Leaseback Property Taken by Eminent Domain When Property Will Not Be Developed Within Two Years. Pursuant to 2006 legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 602], a public entity must offer a one-year leaseback agreement to the owner of any property acquired after January 1, 2007, under any of the following circumstances: (1) pursuant to eminent domain, (2) following adoption of a resolution of necessity for the property, or (3) before adoption of a resolution of necessity but after written notice that the public entity could take the property by eminent domain, unless the entity states in writing that development or redevelopment of the property is scheduled to begin within two years of its acquisition. The leaseback offer is not required if the public entity states in writing that a leaseback would create or allow the continuation of a public nuisance to the surrounding community. The leaseback is subject to the property owner's compliance with specified conditions, including payment of fair market rent. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, § 247.33.

Eminent Domain--Order of Pre-Judgment Possession Now Requires Prior Notice and Opportunity to Respond for Property Owner and Occupants. New legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 594] prevents the issuance of a pre-judgment order of possession, formerly available on ex parte application, without giving the property owner and occupants prior notice, an opportunity to respond, and a hearing if the motion is opposed. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, §§ 247.113, 247.308 -247.309.

Eminent Domain. This chapter is updated with Mt. San Jacinto Comm. College Dist. v. Superior Court (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 648 , which holds when a deposit of probable compensation is made in a "quick take" proceeding, in which the condemnor applies for a prejudgment order for possession on a deposit of probable compensation for the owner [Code Civ. Proc. § 1255.410 et seq.], and the trial court determines that the deposit equals or exceeds the probable amount of the owner's just compensation, the property must be valued on the date of the deposit. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, § 247.134.

[4] Environment

California Global Warming Act. In 2006, the California Legislature passed landmark legislation with the goal of curbing greenhouse gas emissions. The California Global Warming Solutions Act of 2006 [Stats. 2006, ch. 488; Health & Safety Code § 38500 et seq.] establishes the first comprehensive greenhouse gas regulatory program in the United States. See Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters, § 418.91[1].

[5] Landlord and Tenant

Landlord-Tenant: Notice to Terminate Tenancy. 2006 legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 842] reenacts formerly repealed provisions requiring that an owner of a residential dwelling give at least 60 days' notice before terminating the tenancy or 30 days' notice before termination if the tenant had resided in the dwelling for less than one year, or if other circumstances were satisfied [see Civ. Code § 1946.1]. See Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions, § 333.11.

[6] Mobilehomes

Mobilehome Residency Law Does Not Preempt Local Rent Control Ordiances. The California Supreme Court held that the Mobilehome Residency Law (Civ. Code § 798 et seq.) does not preempt local rent control ordinances insofar as they allow mobilehome park owners to separately charge park residents for property taxes imposed on mobilehome park land [Cacho v. Boudreau (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 341] . See Ch. 369, Mobilehomes and Mobilehome Parks, § 369.66[5].

[7] Zoning

Regulation of Time-Share Developments--Regular and Special Assessments. 2006 legislation [Stats. 2006, ch. 429] permits the owners' association of a time-share development to levy regular and special assessments against the time-share owners and to secure a lien against delinquent assessments. For discussion, including what an association may recover if an assessment is delinquent, see Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.286[6A].

Equitable Estoppel. This chapter is updated with Feduniak v. California Coastal Com. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1346 , which holds the doctrine of equitable estoppel did not bar the Coastal Commission from ordering a homeowner to remove a private three-hole golf course from around his house and restore area to its native sand dune vegetation in accordance with applicable restrictions on landscaping, even though property had been in visible violation of coastal development permit conditions for 18 years. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.317[6].

Special Ed Teacher Not Liable for Battery of Autistic Students. In Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860 , the court of appeal held that a special education teacher was not liable for battery when his touching of autistic students was reasonable under the circumstances and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the defendant intended to harm the students. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.13[3][a].

Voluntary Student Assignment Plans Based on Race Did Not Survive Strict Scrutiny. In Parents Involved in Community Schools v. Seattle School Dist. No. 1 (2007)551U.S.701, 127 S. Ct. 2738, 168 L. Ed. 2d 508 , the United States Supreme Court held that when a school district voluntarily adopts a student assignment plan that relies on race to determine which public schools certain children may attend, the district must show that the plan is necessary under the strict scrutiny standard of equal protection analysis. Under the strict scrutiny analysis, school districts did not carry their burden of showing that the ends they sought justified classifying individual students on basis of their race and discriminating among them on that basis. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.15[1].

School Could Discipline Student Displaying Pro-Drug Banner. In Frederick v. Morse (2007)551U.S.393127 S. Ct. 2618, 168 L. Ed. 2d 290 , the United States Supreme Court held that schools may take steps to safeguard those entrusted to their care from speech that can reasonably be regarded as encouraging illegal drug use, and that school officials did not violate the First Amendment by confiscating a pro-drug banner at a school-sanctioned and school-supervised event held offsite and suspending the student responsible for it. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.34[1].

School Violated Educ. Code § 48907 by Announcing Editorial Was Not Protected Speech. In Smith v. Novato Unif. School Dist. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1439, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 508 , the Court of Appeal held that a controversial student editorial on immigration was protected speech under Educ. Code § 48907, because there was no evidence the student-author intended to cause substantial disruption of the school. The school district did not violate § 48907 by holding meetings providing an opportunity for protestors to express their reactions to the editorial or by sending a letter disavowing the author's viewpoint, but it did violate § 48907 by announcing that the editorial was not protected speech, which was likely to chill future speech. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.34[5].

Charter Schools Provided Field Trip Immunity. Under amended Educ. Code § 35330, charter schools have been added to the list of entities that are immune from liability for injuries to persons who voluntarily participate in field trips or excursions. See Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.12[3].

Four-Year Limit on Conduct for Which School District May Dismiss Teacher Is Subject to Equitable Exceptions. The California Supreme Court has held that Education Code § 44944(a), which bars the dismissal of a teacher by a school district for events occurring more than four years before the district initiates dismissal proceedings, is not absolute, and application of the four-year limit may be limited by equitable principles in an appropriate case. See Atwater Elementary Sch. Dist. v. California Dep't of Gen. Servs. (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 227 , now covered in Ch. 512, Schools: Certification, Dismissal, and Related Employment Issues, § 512.28[6][g].

Parents Can Represent Themselves Under IDEA. In Winkelman v. Parma City Sch. Dist., (2007)550U.S.516, 127 S. Ct. 1994, 167 L. Ed. 2d 904 , the United States Supreme Court held that when parents and their child, dissatisfied with the outcome of the due process hearing, seek review in a United States District Court, the parents on their own behalf may proceed in court unrepresented by counsel even though they are not trained or licensed as attorneys. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.33[5][g].

No Violation of IDEA Without Material Failure to Implement IEP. In Van Duyn v. Baker School District (9th Cir. 2007) 481 F.3d 770 , the Ninth Circuit held that when a school district does not perform exactly as called for by the IEP, the district does not violate the IDEA unless it is shown to have materially failed to implement the child's IEP. A material failure occurs when the services provided to a disabled child fall significantly short of those required by the IEP. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.33[5][a].

Student Rights and Responsibilities: Partial Attorney's Fees Award Under IDEA Vacated for Failure to Consider Degree of Success. In Aguirre v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 2006) 461 F.3d 1114 , the Ninth Circuit held that attorney's fees awarded under IDEA are governed by the standards set forth by the United States Supreme Court in Hensley v. Eckerhart and its progeny for fee awards under 42 U.S.C. § 1988. Thus, although a district court's partial attorney's fees award to a mother may ultimately prove consistent with Hensley, the award was vacated and remanded to the district court, because it did not appear that the court considered the mother's degree of success. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.33[5][f].

School District May Not Classify Teachers Based on Types of Credentials Held. A California Court of Appeal has held that the classification of a certificated employee as probationary or temporary depends on the position he or she occupies, and a school district may not determine the employee's classification based on the type of credential or certification he or she has. See Bakersfield Elementary Teachers Assn. v. Bakersfield City School Dist. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1260 , now covered in Ch. 512, Schools: Certification, Dismissal, and Related Employment Issues, § 512.19.

Release of Liability for Gross Negligence Violates Public Policy. In City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747 , the California Supreme Court held that an application form signed by parents releasing a city and its employees from liability for "any negligent act" related to a child's participation in the city's summer camp for developmentally disabled children violated public policy and was unenforceable to the extent it released liability for future gross negligence. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Changing Date for Performance of Settlement Agreement Was Proper. In Osumi v. Sutton (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1355 , on motions to enforce a settlement agreement, the trial court did not create a material term of the settlement or otherwise err when it extended the closing date for a real property transaction. To grant the relief sought by both parties, the trial court had to impose a new closing date. The trial court also did not err when it ordered plaintiff to sign a purchase agreement incorporating a revised counteroffer, and in refusing to award plaintiff interest from the original closing date or his costs or attorney fees. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Personal Injury Plaintiff Entitled to Prejudgment Interest From Date of First § 998 Offer. In Ray v. Goodman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 83 , the court held that in a personal injury action, under Civ. Code § 3291, when there are two successive unaccepted Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offers tendered by a successful plaintiff in personal injury litigation, and that plaintiff subsequently recovers a judgment in excess of either offer, the prejudgment interest awarded pursuant to § 3291 begins from the date of the first offer. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.125

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Attachment for Financial Abuse Under Elder Abuse Statute Allowed. Under new Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.01, a plaintiff who is awarded damages in an action for financial abuse under the Elder and Dependent Adult Abuse statute is authorized to seek attachment against the defendant's property, and an attachment may be issued whether or not other forms of relief are demanded. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Standing Under Elder Abuse Statute Amended When Abused Person Has Died. Under amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.3, the rules governing standing for bringing an action under the Elder and Dependent Adult Abuse statute when the abused adult has died have been modified. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.37.

Prevailing Defendant Not Entitled to Attorney's Fees Under Elder Abuse Statute. In Wood v. Santa Monica Escrow Co. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1186 , the court of appeal held that, unlike a prevailing plaintiff, a prevailing defendant is not entitled to recover attorney's fees under the Elder and Dependent Adult Abuse statute, and if all causes of action arose from a single transaction, a prevailing defendant is not entitled to attorney's fees even if there are issues in common with other causes of action under which fees might be recovered. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Neglect Under Elder Abuse Statute Clarified. In Sababin v. Superior Court (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 81 , the court of appeal held that a health care provider may be liable for neglect under the Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Act even if some care is provided, for example, if the provider knows that it is supposed to be providing a certain type of care on a daily basis, but provides that level of care only sporadically, or there is otherwise a significant pattern of withholding portions or types of care. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.33[3].

Court Rules Childhood Sexual Abuse Revival Statute Is Unconstitutional. In Perez v. Roe 1 (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 171 , the court of appeal held that the Legislature's attempt when amending Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1(b), which is applicable to childhood sexual abuse, to revive causes of action that were adjudicated to finality under the prior statute of limitations is a violation of the separation of powers doctrine, because the power to resolve cases conclusively by rendering dispositive judgments rests with the judiciary alone. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

[2] Animals

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Strict Liability Cause of Action Brought Under Dog Bite Statute. In Priebe v. Nelson (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1112 , the California Supreme Court held that the assumption of risk doctrine was a defense to the imposition of strict liability under the dog bite statute, Civ. Code § 3342, for an injury to a kennel worker, but remanded the case for retrial on common law claims that were beyond the scope of the Court's review. See Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability, § 23.31[4], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.173[1].

[3] Assault and Battery

Special Ed Teacher Not Liable for Battery of Autistic Students. In Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860 , the court of appeal held that a special education teacher was not liable for battery when his touching of autistic students was reasonable under the circumstances and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the defendant intended to harm the students. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.13[3][a].

Recovery for Domestic Violence Occurring More Than Three Years Before Suit is Brought Allowed. In Pugliese v. Superior Court (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1444 , the court of appeal held that, although the three-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.15(a) uses the "last act" of domestic violence as a trigger, a plaintiff may recover for domestic violence occurring more than three years before suit is brought if plaintiff proves a continuing course of abusive conduct and files suit within three years of the last act. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.30[3].

[4] Carriers

Commercial Code Sections Updated. Citations to the Commercial Code have been updated to reflect changes made by the legislature to bring that Code into conformity with the revisions of Uniform Commercial Code Article 1 proposed by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Law. See Ch. 109, Carriers, § 109.60 et seq.

[5] Damages

Plaintiff May Recover Full Billed Amount for Medical Services Even if Medical Lien Sold at Discount. In Katiuzhinsky v. Perry (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288 , the court of appeal held that if a medical provider sells a plaintiff's account and lien to a third-party financial services company at a discount, but plaintiff remains liable to the financial services company for the full amount charged for the medical services, plaintiff may recover as damages from a third-party tortfeasor the full amount charged if that is a reasonable amount for the services rendered. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.45[3][b].

Award for Lost Anticipated Profits Reversed. In Parlour Enterprises, Inc. v. Kirin Group, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 281 , the court of appeal reversed a damage award for lost anticipated profits for unopened business franchises when projections made by plaintiff's expert witness lacked sufficient factual support. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.45[6].

Punitive Damages Barred in Survival Action When Only Actual Damage Alleged is Nonrecoverable Emotional Distress. In Berkley v. Dowds (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 518 , the court of appeal held that if a decedent's representative files a survival action seeking to recover for injury sustained by the decedent before death, but the only injury alleged is emotional distress, there is no basis for an award of punitive damages because there can be no compensatory damages, as the representative is precluded by statute from recovering for the decedent's pain and suffering. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[12].

Punitive Damages for Harm to Nonparties Unconstitutional. In Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007)549U.S.346, 166 L. Ed. 2d 940 , the United States Supreme Court cautioned that while harm caused to nonparties may be considered when evaluating the reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct, such as when the evidence shows that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, an award of punitive damages specifically intended to punish for harm allegedly caused to nonparties violates due process. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[5][a], [14].

Punitive Damages Evidence Must Show Defendant's Financial Liabilities. In Baxter v. Peterson (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 673 , the court of appeal held that in order to support an award of punitive damages, a plaintiff must present evidence showing not just the defendant's financial assets, but financial liabilities as well. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[16].

Lien Created Prior to Notice of Hospital Emergency Lien Takes Precedence. In County of San Bernardino v. Calderon (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1103 , the court of appeal held that a hospital emergency lien is not created under Civ. Code § 3045.1 until proper notice is given to the defendant, and if a competing lien exists that was created prior to the hospital lien, that competing lien has priority. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[3].

Evidence of Full Value of Medical Services Admissible, Even if Provider Accepted Lesser Amount. In Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1150 , the court of appeal held that if a health care provider has agreed to accept a compromise amount as payment in full for services provided, evidence of the full, reasonable value of those services may be admitted at trial to provide a more complete picture of the extent of the plaintiff's injuries. If such evidence is admitted, it is incumbent on the defendant to ensure that the jury's verdict specifies what damages, if any, are being awarded for past medical expenses, to enable the court to reduce the award, if necessary, and to reflect the amount that was actually paid for the services. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.45[3][b].

Evidence of Defendant's Financial Worth Not Limited to California Activities in Proving Appropriate for Punitive Damages Amount. In Buell-Wilson v. Ford Motor Co. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 525 , the court of appeal held that in proving an appropriate measure for punitive damages, evidence of the financial condition of the defendant is not limited to the defendant's financial condition as it relates to California activities, but properly includes the defendant's overall worth. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[16].

Legal Malpractice Action Not Action for Personal Injury Under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11. In Levine v. Smith (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1131 , the court of appeal held that an action for legal malpractice is not considered to be an action for personal injury for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11, and no statement of damages is required under that statute, although a plaintiff is limited to the amount of damages specified in the complaint if a default judgment is entered. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.43.

[6] Death and Survival Actions

Trial Court Jurisdiction to Allocate Settlement in Wrongful Death Action Approved; Declarations Insufficient to Show Decedent Was About to Divorce. In Corder v. Corder (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 644 , the California Supreme Court held that if a wrongful death action has been brought to trial against non-settling defendants, that trial court has jurisdiction to apportion the proceeds from a settlement with other defendants when the plaintiff heirs cannot agree to an allocation, and when making the allocation, the assessments and intentions of the settling defendant in settling the case for the amount it did are irrelevant. The Court also held that mere declarations made by a decedent that he was unhappy in his marriage and was considering divorce were insufficient evidence to support a finding that the marriage was in fact about to end. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, §§ 181.17[4], 181.20.

Judgment May Be Backdated to Precede Plaintiff's Death When Death is After Jury Verdict. In Cadlo v. Metalclad Insulation Corp. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1311 , the court of appeal held that a trial court may enter judgment nunc pro tunc when a plaintiff dies after a jury verdict, but before judgment is rendered, in order to date the judgment prior to the plaintiff's death. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.45[1].

Duties of Research Institutions to Decedent's Survivors Under Willed Body Programs Clarified. In Conroy v. Regents of University of California (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 132 , the court of appeal held that absent an express contract to do so, a research institution does not have a duty to a decedent's family to track the body or its specific disposition. In Melican v. Regents of University of California (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 168 , the court of appeal held that a research institution that contractually agrees only to dispose of a decedent's remains in accordance with state law has no duty to return any remains to the decedent's family. It may voluntarily undertake to do so, however, although such a voluntary undertaking will not support the imposition of liability if the remains returned have been commingled with the remains of another corpse. See Ch. 180, Dead Bodies, § 180.14[4]; Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11[4].

Wrongful Death Plaintiffs May Be Forced to Arbitrate Claims. In Fitzhugh v. Granada Healthcare & Rehabilitation Center, LLC (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 469 , the court of appeal held that if some wrongful death plaintiffs are contractually obligated to arbitrate their claim, other heirs may be required to join the arbitration in order to keep the action consolidated. However, the court noted that plaintiffs cannot be forced to arbitrate their wrongful death claim if none of the plaintiffs are contractually obligated to arbitrate the claim, and the fact that the decedent would have been required to arbitrate any claims against the defendant will not obligate the decedent's heirs to arbitrate their wrongful death action. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.12[7].

Registration With Local Authority Insufficient to Acquire Rights Under Domestic Partnership Act. In Velez v. Smith (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1154 , the court of appeal held that registration of a domestic partnership with a local authority such as a city is insufficient to acquire rights under the Domestic Partnership Act; registration with the Secretary of State is required. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.14[2].

Relation-Back Doctrine Does Not Apply When Adding New Plaintiff in Wrongful Death Action. In San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1545 , the court of appeal held that if an attempt is made to add a plaintiff to a timely-filed wrongful death action, the limitations period runs to the time of amendment or intervention for that plaintiff and the "relation back" doctrine does not apply. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.23[1].

Liability Imposed for Costs of Response to False Police Report. Under newly added Gov. Code § 53153.5, any person 18 years old or older who is convicted of making a false police report in violation of Pen. Code § 148.3 may be liable for the expense of any appropriate emergency response that proximately results from the false report. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, § 246.15.

Police Pursuit Immunity Statute Amended. Discussion of Veh. Code § 17004.7 has been updated to reflect new criteria for granting immunity to public entities that adopt written policies to govern the vehicular pursuit of suspected criminals, when that pursuit results in injury. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, § 246.12[3][b], and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.102[3].

[8] Employer Liability

Employee Seeking Indemnification of Defense Costs From Employer Bears Burden of Proving Costs Incurred. In Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 220 , the court of appeal held that when seeking indemnification of defense costs from his or her employer, an employee bears the burden of proving which costs were incurred in defense of claims arising from employment with that employer, even if apportionment of costs is required because the underlying claims arose from employment with multiple employers. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.20[2].

[9] False Claims Actions

Public Entity May Not Sue as Qui Tam Plaintiff Under False Claims Act. In State ex rel. Harris v. Pricewaterhouse Coopers, LLP (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1220 , the California Supreme Court held that because the statutory definition of "person" under the False Claims Act does not encompass a state or local government entity, a public entity may not bring an action as a qui tam plaintiff on behalf of another government agency. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, § 468.22[1].

[10] Fraud and Deceit

Oakland Raiders Waived Right to Sue Coliseum for Fraud. In Oakland Raiders v. Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1175 , the court of appeal held that the Oakland Raiders National Football League team had waived the right to sue the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum for fraud in inducing the Raiders in 1995 to sign a long-term agreement to play at the Coliseum, because after learning during the 1995 season that season ticket sales were not as high as they had been told, the Raiders subsequently entered into a new contract with the Coliseum in September 1996 concerning the same subject matter as the previous contract. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.31[6].

[11] Games and Sports

Sports Facility Under No Duty to Notify Users of Presence of Defibrillator. In Rotolo v. San Jose Sports & Entertainment, LLC (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 307 , the court of appeal held that sports facility operators do not owe a duty to sports participants to provide advance notice of the availability of an automatic external defibrillator at the facility for use should a medical emergency arise. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.32.

Liability for Negligent Supervision of Seventh-Grade Golf Class to Be Determined Through Prudent Person Standard. In Hemady v. Long Beach Unified School Dist. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 566 , the court of appeal held that when a seventh-grade student in a physical education golf class was inadvertently hit in the face by a golf club swung by another student, the potential liability of the instructor and school district was not barred by the primary assumption of risk doctrine, but was to be determined through application of a prudent person standard of care. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.31[1], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][b].

Skier Not Liable for Blind Turn. In Towns v. Davidson (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 461 , the court of appeal held that a snow skier will not be held liable for a collision caused by quick and aggressive skiing, as this is an inherent part of the sport, even if the skier makes a quick turn without looking. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, & Athletics, § 273.30[7][h].

MICRA "Personal Injury" Does Not Cover Purely Economic Injury. In Vazquez de Mercado v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 711 , the court of appeal held that, for purposes of establishing the applicability of MICRA to the conduct of a medical professional, the term "personal injury" covers only injury that impairs the well-being or mental or physical health of the plaintiff, and the term does not cover purely economic injury. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.13[2], and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, §§ 415.10, 415.49[5].

Private Action to Enforce Evid. Code § 1158 Permitted. In Thornburg v. El Centro Regional Medical Center (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 198 , the court of appeal held that a patient may file a civil action to enforce Evid. Code § 1158 (disclosure of medical records) if a hospital fails to make records available under the conditions prescribed by the statute, and that failure includes charging more for copies than permitted. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.23[2].

Litigation Privilege Applies to Action Under State Constitutional Right to Privacy. In Jacob B. v. County of Shasta (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 948, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477, 154 P.3d 1003 , the California Supreme Court held that the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b), which generally protects from tort liability a publication made in connection with a judicial proceeding, protects against a cause of action based on California's constitutional right to privacy, and protected a letter that the supervisor of a county victim witness program wrote in connection with a family law proceeding involving visitation rights, which provided information regarding whether one of the persons being considered for visitation had molested his nephew one decade earlier. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[19].

Disclosure of Medical Information to Persons Involved With Patient's Care Permitted. Under newly added Civ. Code § 56.1007, a health care provider, service plan, or contractor may disclose to a family member, another relative, a domestic partner, or a close personal friend of the patient, or to any other person identified by the patient, medical information directly relevant to that person's involvement with the patient's care or payment related to the patient's care. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[4].

California Privacy Statute Applicable to Telephone Calls May Be Applied to Calls Made From Another State. In Kearney v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 95 , the California Supreme Court held that Pen. Code § 632, which allows recording of a telephone conversation only if all parties agree, applies to a confidential communication that takes place partly in California and partly in another state that has a law requiring the permission of only one party. However, the Court permitted the plaintiffs to seek only injunctive relief in this particular case due to the uncertainty that would have existed prior to the Court's decision as to which state's law would govern. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.34[2].

Drug Testing of Ward Upheld. In In re Carmen M. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 478 , the court of appeal upheld a juvenile court order for the drug testing of a ward of the court who had a documented history of drug abuse, because the drug testing order in that case was narrowly tailored to require testing only if the staff of the minor's group home believed that the minor was under the influence. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[12][a].

Video Game Maker Not Liable for Appropriation of Singer's Likeness. In Kirby v. Sega of America, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 47 , the court of appeal held that the First Amendment protected a video game maker from a suit for commercial appropriation of likeness brought by a singer with a distinctive stage persona, concluding that there were sufficient transformative elements in the character such that the character was not a mere likeness or literal depiction of plaintiff. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36[12].

Researcher Who Used Deception to Obtain Private Information From Plaintiff's Foster Mother Could Be Sued for Intrusion. In Taus v. Loftus (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 683 , the California Supreme Court denied a motion to strike a cause of action for invasion of privacy by intrusion against an academic researcher who allegedly used deception to obtain personal and private information from the plaintiff's former foster mother. The researcher allegedly deceived the foster mother into believing that the researcher was working with a psychiatrist who plaintiff had worked with and trusted, and the foster mother would not have shared plaintiff's personal information had she known the truth. The Court in that case also held that otherwise private facts that have clear scholarly interest may be considered newsworthy. See Ch. 429, Privacy, §§ 429.34[3], 429.40[4].

[14] Libel and Slander

Injunction Prohibiting Repetition of Defamatory Statements Permitted. In Balboa Island Village Inn, Inc. v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141 , the California Supreme Court held that a narrowly drawn injunction issued after a trial at which defendant's particular speech has been adjudicated to be defamatory may properly enjoin the defendant from repeating the defamation and is not considered an unconstitutional prior restraint on speech. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.33.

Anti-SLAPP Statute Does Not Protect Conduct That Is Illegal as Matter of Law. In Flatley v. Mauro (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 299 , the California Supreme Court held that even assuming that the litigation privilege might apply to pre-litigation conduct that is illegal, a defendant may not successfully pursue a motion to strike under the anti-SLAPP statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, if the underlying conduct taken by the defendant was illegal as a matter of law, because illegal conduct is not constitutionally protected. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.52.

Federal Communications Decency Act Provides Immunity for Internet Republications Made With Notice of Potential Defamation. In Barrett v. Rosenthal (2006) 40 Cal. 4th 33 , the California Supreme Court held that the Federal Communications Decency Act of 1996, which provides a statutory immunity from common law liability for defamation for Internet publications that originate from a different party, applies to republications made with notice of the potential defamatory nature of the content. The Court also concluded that the immunity extends to all individuals who use an interactive computer service, regardless of whether the "use" at issue consists of merely receiving defamatory information, or screening and removing defamatory publication from an Internet site, or some other use of the interactive computer service. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.75.

Actual Malice to be Shown by Clear and Convincing Evidence to Defeat Motion to Strike. In Christian Research Inst. v. Alnor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 71 , the court of appeal held that a public figure plaintiff attempting to defeat a motion to strike a defamation action under Code Civ. Proc. § 426.16 must show a probability of demonstrating actual malice by clear and convincing evidence, and neither the trial court nor a reviewing court is required to consider the evidence of actual malice in the light most favorable to the plaintiff or draw all permissible inferences in favor of plaintiff. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.52.

Employer Is "Provider" Under Federal Communications Decency Act When Providing Internet Access to Employees. In Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790 , the court of appeal held that an employer that provides its employees with Internet access through the company's internal computer system is a "provider" of an interactive computer service for purposes of the federal Communications Decency Act. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.75.

[15] Malicious Prosecution

Voluntary Dismissal to Avoid Further Litigation Hardships Not Favorable Termination for Defendant for Malicious Prosecution Purposes. In Contemporary Services Corp. v. Staff Pro Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1043 , the court of appeal held that voluntary dismissal in order to save the cost of further litigation, rather than because the plaintiff lost faith in the merits of the claim, does not constitute a favorable termination for the defendant for purposes of establishing a subsequent malicious prosecution claim. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.14[3].

Postjudgment Settlement Constituted Favorable Termination for Malicious Prosecution Purposes. In Siebel v. Mittlesteadt (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 735 , the California Supreme Court held that if a malicious prosecution plaintiff received a favorable judgment on the merits at trial in the underlying action, but the parties subsequently settled the action without the malicious prosecution plaintiff giving up any portion of the favorable judgment, the postjudgment settlement constitutes a favorable termination of the underlying action for the malicious prosecution plaintiff. See Ch.

357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.14[3].

Denial of Anti-SLAPP Motion Does Not Show Probable Cause to Bring Action. In Hutton v. Hafif (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 527 , the court of appeal held that denial of a motion to strike brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 cannot be used to support a finding that the underlying action was brought with probable cause for purposes of a subsequent malicious prosecution lawsuit. The court also held that a defendant prevailing on a special motion to strike a SLAPPback suit is not entitled to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c). See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, §§ 357.16[3], 357.24[4].

Plaintiff's Attorney May Be Liable for Filing Appeal After Discovering Case Lacks Probable Cause. In Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260 , the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff's attorney may be liable for malicious prosecution for filing an appeal in a case after the attorney discovers that the action lacks probable cause. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.16[1].

SLAPPback Statute Applicable to Pending Cases. In Soukup v. Law Offices of Herbert Hafif (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 260 , the California Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18, the so-called SLAPPback statute, applies to cases pending at the time of its enactment, because the statute effects only procedural changes. The Court also held that in applying the statute, an underlying suit is "illegal as a matter of law" if the defendant concedes the illegality of the assertedly protected activity or if the illegality is conclusively established by the evidence presented in connection with the motion to strike. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.24[4].

Action Seeking Injunction Under Workplace Violence Safety Act Will Not Support Malicious Prosecution Action. In Robinzine v. Vicory (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1416 , the court of appeal held that filing an action for an injunction under the Workplace Violence Safety Act, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8, will not support a subsequent malicious prosecution action if the request for an injunction is denied. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.11[7].

Pre-Injury Waiver of Liability for Negligence Does Not Extend to Gross Negligence. In City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 747 , the California Supreme Court held that even if a pre-injury agreement purporting to excuse a potential defendant from liability for negligence is valid and enforceable, the same release will not generally excuse the defendant from liability for gross negligence. In that specific case, the Court held that an agreement releasing a city from liability for negligence committed against a developmentally disabled child who was participating in a recreational camp designed for the needs of such children violated public policy and was unenforceable to the extent that it could be used to release the city from liability for gross negligence. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.171[2][b].

Subcontractor Liable to Contractor's Hirer for Substandard Performance. In Stonegate Homeowners Assn. v. Staben (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 740 , the court of appeal held that despite the lack of privity of contract, it is clearly established that a subcontractor on a construction project can be held liable in negligence to the party who hires the general contractor if the subcontractor's work is below the applicable standard of care in the industry. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.31[3].

[17] Premises Liability

Landlord Owed Duty of Care When Knowing That Tenant Threatened Others With Firearm. In Barber v. Chang (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1456 , the court of appeal held that a landlord who knows that a tenant has brandished firearms at others while threatening them with harm has a duty to take reasonable precautions to prevent harm, although the precise scope of that duty will depend on the particular facts and may under the appropriate circumstances be satisfied by minimally burdensome measures such as calling the police. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.12[5][c].

Landlord Not Liable for Injury Caused by Tenant's Dog. In Chee v. Amanda Goldt Property Management (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1360 , the court of appeal held that evidence that a particular breed of dog generally has certain characteristics, by itself, does not establish that a landlord had actual knowledge that a tenant's dog had any dangerous propensities. The court also held that in the absence of actual knowledge of the danger posed by a tenant's dog, a landlord cannot be held vicariously liable for an injury caused by the dog merely because the covenants, conditions, and restrictions governing the residence purport to make the landowner responsible for the acts and omissions of the owner's delegates. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.12[5][c].

Landlord With Unlawful Detainer Judgment Owes Duty to Inspect. In Stone v. Center Trust Retail Properties, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1435 , the court of appeal held that, for purposes of a subsequent premises liability action, a landlord that has instituted a successful unlawful detainer action has a duty to inspect the property that attaches upon entry of judgment in the unlawful detainer action, even if the tenant has not yet vacated the premises, and includes a duty to make subsequent inspections at reasonable intervals. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.12[5][c].

Sufficient Evidence of Causation Shown in Suit Against Property Owner by Tenant Who Was Raped. In Ambriz v. Kelegian (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1519 , the court of appeal held that a woman raped in her apartment complex by a transient known to have loitered in the complex in the past had provided sufficient evidence to show a triable issue of fact on causation in a suit against the property owner by demonstrating that there were gates to the complex that did not lock properly and that unauthorized males had been using these gates to gain access. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[3].

[18] Products Liability

Plainly Visible Snowmaking Equipment Was Not Defective. The appellate court rejected the strict products liability claim of a skier who collided with a plainly-visible snow making hydrant. Souza v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 262, 271, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 389 . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[2][c]; 460.104[24][i1].

MTBE Plaintiffs Need Not Have Used the Product to Have Standing to Assert Products Liability Action. A property owner alleged that MTBE-containing gasoline sold by defendant leaked from gas stations into the plaintiff's water system. The court held that strict liability does not require use of a product by an ultimate consumer, and may include foreseeable uses of a product while it is still on the market. See Nelson v. Superior Court (2006)144 Cal. App. 4th 689 now covered in Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.460.11[2][b], [c]; 460.31[1]; 460.31[2][b][ii]; 460.104[1]; 460.104[6][m]; 460.140[3][ii]; 460.161[2].

Economic Loss Rule Bars County's Lead Paint Abatement Action. Municipalities filed an action seeking to recoup the costs of abatement of lead-based paint in their buildings. They alleged only that lead paint is harmful to human beings, and did not allege any physical injury to their buildings. The deterioration of lead paint did not constitute a physical injury to their buildings sufficient to support a negligence or strict liability cause of action. See County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292 , now covered in Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[4]; 460.31[1], [2][a]; 460.104[1], [6][o], [22a][a], [22a][c].

Establishing Causation in Asbestos Cases. Appellate courts addressed the requirement of proving exposure to a defendant's asbestos product in two cases. In Weber v. John Crane, Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1433 , one court clarified that a defendant does not shift the burden of production to the plaintiff by showing that the plaintiff has no personal recall of the defendant's product. Rather, the defendant must make an affirmative showing that the plaintiff will be unable to prove his or her case by any means. In Andrews v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 96 , a defendant met its initial burden of making a prima facie showing that a triable issue of fact did not exist regarding causation. See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[9][iv]; 460.104[10].

Constitutional Limitations on Punitive Damages. In Buell-Wilson v. Ford Motor Co. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 525 , the plaintiff was rendered a paraplegic in a Ford Explorer rollover. The appellate court reduced the remitted $75 million punitive damages award to $55 million. The court determined that a two-to-one ratio with compensatory damages was appropriate. In Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc., (2006) 2006 Cal. LEXIS 9289 , a cigarette case, the Supreme Court depublished and granted review of a decision affirming a $28 million punitive damages award, an amount 33 times greater than the compensatory damages award. See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.33[2]; 460.104[15][a], [b]; 460.104[21][a.1], [c]; 460.140[3][b][ii]; 460.168[3][a].

Preemption of State Law Claims Regarding Train Seats and DVT. A woman died from deep vein thrombosis (DVT) after riding on an Amtrak train. The state law claims regarding seats and seating configurations were unduly burdensome on the passenger train industry and were preempted by the Commerce Clause. The claim alleging a duty to warn passengers of the dangers of DVT, in contrast, was not preempted. See Haynes v. AMTRAK (C.D. Cal. 2006) 423 F. Supp. 2d 1073 , now covered in Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[2][a], [6][a], [10][a][i]; 460.52[f]; 460.104[24][m]; 460.104[39]

Primary Assumption of Risk Did Not Bar Claims Against Personal Watercraft Manufacturer. The plaintiff sustained severe orifice injuries after falling off the rear of a personal watercraft. Primary assumption of risk did not foreclose plaintiff's strict products liability claim. When the operator of the jet ski prevailed on summary judgment based on primary assumption of risk, the manufacturer was not entitled to a verdict form permitting allocation of fault to her under Civ. Code § 1431.2(a). See Ford v. Polaris Indus., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 755 , now covered in Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[9][b]; 460.53; 460.70[3]; 460.104[7]; 460.104[29][i]; 460.104[42a].

Same Standard of Causation Applied to Negligence of Employee and Employer Under FELA. In Norfolk Southern Railway Co. v. Sorrell (2007)549U.S.158, 166 L. Ed. 2d 638 , the United States Supreme Court held that, in an action under the Federal Employer's Liability Act (FELA), the same standard of causation applies to an employee's contributory negligence as applies to the railroad's negligence. See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.42[2].

New Requirements for Audible Railroad Warning Signals. Pub. Util. Code § 7604 has been amended to incorporate federal regulations governing audible warning signal requirements for railroads. See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.62[4][e].

Expert Witness Fees Unavailable Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 in FELA Action. In Miller v. Union Pac. R.R. Co. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 451 , the court of appeal held that, in an action brought in state court under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, expert witness fees cannot be awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 when a party receives a more favorable outcome at trial than the amount of a rejected settlement offer, as such fees are not recoverable under federal law. See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.44.

[20] Shipping

Shipping and Maritime Statutes Updated. Citations to the Death on the High Seas Act, the Jones Act, and other maritime and shipping statutes formerly codified in 46 U.S.C.S. Appendix have been updated to reflect recodification in Title 46. See primarily Ch. 100, Boats and Boating, and Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping.

[21] Tort Claims Act

Motion to Preserve Evidence Not Action Sufficient to Meet Tort Claims Act Limitations Period. In Orr v. City of Stockton (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 622 , the court of appeal held that a petition to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. does not constitute the filing of a "suit" for purposes of the six-month limitations period of the California Tort Claims Act. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.42[1][a].

Deputy District Attorneys Protected by Prosecutorial Immunity. In Miller v. Filter (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 652 , the court of appeal held that persons appointed as deputy district attorneys are protected by prosecutorial immunity under Gov. Code § 821.6, even if there is a ministerial defect in the appointment process, so long as the deputy district attorney acts under color of authority and is performing the proper function of a deputy district attorney at the time. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.64[7][a].

Public Entity May Not Be Sued Under False Claims Act. In Wells v. One2One Learning Foundation (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 1164 , the California Supreme Court held that a public entity may not be sued under the False Claims Act. The Court also held, however, that private entities that engage in traditional public entity activities and are perhaps subject to some public entity oversight, such as charter schools, may be sued under the Act if they otherwise meet the statutory definition of "person." However, a plaintiff bringing an action under the False Claims Act need not comply with the California Tort Claims Act before filing suit. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, §§ 468.21[2], 468.22[5][a].

Recreational Trail Immunity Applicable in Defective Design/Maintenance Claims. In Amberger-Warren v. City of Piedmont (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1074 , the court of appeal held that recreational trail immunity is available to a public entity even when the claim alleges defects in the design or maintenance of the trail. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[7].

Police Pursuit Immunity Statute Amended. Discussion of Veh. Code § 17004.7 has been updated to reflect new criteria for granting immunity to public entities that adopt written policies to govern the vehicular pursuit of suspected criminals, when that pursuit results in injury. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, § 246.12[3][b], and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.102[3].

Claims Filing Requirement Inapplicable to Action Against Charter School. In Knapp v. Palisades Charter High School (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 708 , the court of appeal held that claims against charter schools run by nonprofit corporations that are legal entities independent from the chartering school districts are not subject to the claims filing requirement of the Tort Claims Act, as a charter school is not considered to be a public entity. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.22[4].

Substantial Compliance With Claims Filing Requirement Found. In Connelly v. County of Fresno (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 29 , the court of appeals held that a claimant who described the general facts surrounding a car accident allegedly caused when a county employee ran a stop sign and stated that she sought "unspecified medical, lost income, future medical," met the substantial compliance test for filing a claim with the county, as it put the county on notice of personal injuries suffered by the claimant in the accident and that the claimant did not at that time know the extent of the injuries or the associated costs. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.23[3][e].

Time for Filing Suit Against Public Entity Generally Runs From Rejection of First Filed Claim. In Sofranek v. County of Merced (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1238 , the court of appeal held that if an amended claim is timely filed against a public entity that relates to the same transaction or occurrence that gave rise to the original claim, the six-month period for filing suit generally runs from the time that the first claim is rejected. The court also held, however, that if a government entity sends notice upon rejection of an amended claim that the claimant has six-months from rejection of the claim to file suit, the entity may be estopped from relying on rejection of the original claim for purposes of calculating the six-month period for filing suit. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, §§ 464.42[1][a], 464.47[4].

Public Entity Immunity for Malicious Prosecution Inapplicable to Claim for Arrest Without Probable Cause. In Gillan v. City of San Marino (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1033 , the court of appeal held that a public entity is not immune from suit under Gov. Code § 821.6 for an arrest made without probable cause. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.64[7][a].

[22] Trucks

New Rules Governing Towing of Vehicle Parked on Private Property. The legislature has amended Veh. Code § 22658, which governs the towing of a vehicle parked on private property. See Ch. 553, Trucks, § 553.13[4].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.126

§ 1.126 Trials

[1] Evidence

Forensic Report Properly Excluded as Not Meeting Timeliness Requirement of Official Record. In Glatman v. Valverde (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 700, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , a proceeding to require the Department of Motor Vehicles to set aside the suspension of a driver's license, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding the results of the driver's blood alcohol test were not timely recorded as required by Evid. Code § 1280(b) to be admissible under the hearsay exception for public records. The forensic report was prepared one week later, and, although it was only five working days after the arrest, memory was subject to erosion with every day that passed. Further, the record was silent as to the Department's recordation policies and procedures, and Evid. Code § 664 did not create a presumption the analysts timely recorded the test results. See Ch. 551, Trial .

Burn Victim's Statements to Police Admissible as Spontaneous Declarations. In People v. Pedroza (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 784, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 636 , a murder prosecution based on a husband's burning of his wife, the statements of the wife to police officers in response to their questions were admissible under the Evid. Code § 1240 hearsay exception for spontaneous declarations. Two officers encountered the victim and asked only what happened and then followed up by asking how she was burned and spoke to the victim for approximately 10 to 15 seconds, and the victim's response, minutes after she sustained severe burns and while she was still suffering from resulting intense pain, suggested her statements were the product of the stress of the moment, not deliberation. Although a third officer spoke to the victim for about five minutes and asked more questions than the other officers, the evidence supported the trial court's finding that the victim's answers were nonetheless spontaneous. See Ch. 551, Trial .

[2] Juries and Jury Selection

Jury Trial Waiver in Forfeiture Proceeding. In People v. $17,522.08 United States Currency (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1076 , the court found a statutory right to a jury trial in a civil forfeiture proceeding, but found that a claimant who represented herself waived a jury trial by consent under Code Civ. Proc § 631, because she did not request a jury trial or announce one was required, and she did not post the required jury fees. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.15[2][h].

Prosecutor's Inability to Remember Why She Excused Male Prospective Juror Only Evidence of Discriminatory Use of Peremptory Challenge. In Yee v. Duncan (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 893 , the Ninth Circuit held that a party's failure to satisfy the burden to produce evidence of nondiscriminatory reasons for the exercise of peremptory challenges once the opposing party has presented a prima facie case, becomes evidence added to the inference of discrimination raised by the prima facie showing, but does not end the inquiry. Thus, the prosecutor's failure to provide a reason for striking a male potential juror because she could not remember why she struck him, was not an automatic violation of the defendant's equal protection rights. It was not objectively unreasonable for the California Court of Appeal to conclude that defendant did not meet his ultimate burden of establishing purposeful discrimination by accepting the prosecutor's statement that she forgot why she exercised the peremptory challenge as credible, and voir dire testimony suggested a gender-neutral reason for the challenge. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.42[6][b].

No Jury Trial Right in Unfair Competition Law Action. In Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278 , a class action by employees brought under the Unfair Competition Law (UCL) alleging that the employees were improperly denied payment for overtime work, the defendant-employer was not entitled to a jury trial. The UCL provides only for equitable remedies, the fact that contract issues may have been implicated did not transform the equitable action into a legal one, the employer's affirmative defense based on a wage order did not require a jury trial, and the existence of a factual issue did not require a jury trial. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

Defense Counsel's Oral Waiver of Jury Trial at Status Conference Waived Jury Trial. In Cadle Co. v. World Wide Hospitality Furniture, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 504 , the defendant's attorney's oral consent to a jury waiver at the final status conference, stated in open court and entered in the court minutes, provided a basis for a jury waiver under Code Civ. Proc. § 631(d)(3). See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

Peremptory Challenges to African-American Prospective Jurors Proper. In People v. Phillips (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 810, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 678 , a robbery prosecution, it was proper for the trial court to require explanations from the prosecution for peremptory challenges to only two of three prospective African-American jurors who were the subject of the African-American defendant's Batson/Wheeler motion, because the trial court properly determined that the facts did not support an inference of discrimination against one prospective juror. The trial court did not fail to elicit sufficient reasons for the peremptory challenges of other two jurors, because the prosecuting attorney disclosed she had mistakenly dismissed one prospective juror because she relied on information in the questionnaire of another juror with the same last name, and the prosecutor's reason for excusing one prospective juror based on his body language was not too vague to rebut the prima facie showing of group bias. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, 322.76[5][6][ii].

No Jury Trial Right in Rescission Action. In NMSBPCSLDHB v. County of Fresno (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 954 , the court held that a rescission action in which the plaintiff sought to recover money, which was something other than the consideration paid by plaintiff, which was land, was an action in equity and plaintiff was not entitled to a jury trial. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

No New Trial on Conflicting Evidence of Juror Misconduct. In Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 624 , the California Supreme Court, upon an independent review of the record, concluded that the moving party failed to discharge its burden to persuade the Court of jury misconduct warranting the grant of new trial, when the trial court failed to specify reasons for granting a new trial on juror misconduct grounds, the testimonial evidence submitted by the parties in the form of juror declarations was sharply conflicting on every material issue, and the party supporting the grant of a new trial submitted no other evidence to support its motion. See Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

[3] Motions After Trial

No New Trial on Conflicting Evidence of Juror Misconduct. In Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 624 , the California Supreme Court, upon an independent review of the record, concluded that the moving party failed to discharge its burden to persuade the Court of jury misconduct warranting the grant of new trial, when the trial court failed to specify reasons for granting a new trial on juror misconduct grounds, the testimonial evidence submitted by the parties in the form of juror declarations was sharply conflicting on every material issue, and the party supporting the grant of a new trial submitted no other evidence to support its motion. See Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.127 Trusts

No-Contest Clauses--Election of Beneficiaries. In Colburn v. Northern Trust Co. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 439, 447 , the court upheld a no-contest clause in a testamentary trust which forced the trustor's former wife and their children to choose between enforcing their rights under an existing martial dissolution judgment by filing creditor's claims, or relinquishing those rights and taking the gifts provided for them in trustor's trust. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14[4][a]; Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, §§ 560.16[1].

No-Contest Clauses--Application to Actions Under Uniform Principal and Income Act. In McKenzie v. Vanderpoel (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1442 , the court upheld a no-contest clause in trust instrument that applied to any attempt to "impair" the trust, and therefore extended to the trust beneficiary's adjustment petition under the California Uniform Principal and Income Act to reallocate principal and income, when such a reallocation would have resulted in more income to the beneficiary than allowed by the trust, and would have resulted in the invasion of trust principal reserved to other beneficiaries. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, §§ 444.14[4][a]; Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.16[1].

Remainder Beneficiary of Trust May Seek Court-Ordered Account If Trustee Fails to Respond to Request for Information. A California Court of Appeal has held that a remainder beneficiary of a trust, who generally does not have a right to receive the trustee's annual accounting, may petition the court to compel the trustee to report information about the trust or to account, if the trustee does not respond to the beneficiary's request for information. See Esslinger v. Cummins (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 517 , now covered in Ch. 7, Action for Accounting, § 7.13[2].

PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.128 Unfair Competition

Standing Under Unfair Competition Statute Lacking When Unlawful Conduct Caused No Actionable Harm. In Daro v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1079 , the court of appeal held that in an action under the unfair competition statute, if the cause of action is based on an unlawful business practice, plaintiff cannot predicate standing to sue on an injury caused by lawful conduct of the defendant that is somehow connected to defendant's unlawful conduct, if that unlawful conduct does not itself cause actionable injury to plaintiff. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Contractual Provision Prohibiting Customer From Hiring Business's Employees Unenforceable. In VL Systems, Inc. v. Unisen, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 708 , the court of appeal held that a broad provision in a contract with a customer prohibiting that customer from hiring the employees of the other contracting party for a specified term, and imposing a penalty on the customer if doing so, violates Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, since it limits the ability of the affected employees to change employment and does so without extracting a prior agreement from the employees or ensuring that the employees even have advance notice of the restriction being placed on their employment opportunities. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.71[2][c].

Cable Company's Tying of Digital Music or FM Channels to Cable Television Service Not Illegal. In Belton v. Comcast Cable Holdings, LLC (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1224 , the court of appeal held that a cable company did not engage in an illegal tying arrangement when requiring customers to purchase basic cable television in order to receive FM or audio-only music channels. As the plaintiffs admitted they had no interest in purchasing basic cable, the tying arrangement did not injure competition in that market. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.77[4].

Precertification Discovery Denied in Unfair Competition Class Action. In Cryoport Systems v. CNA Ins. Companies (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 627 , the court of appeal held that, in an action under the unfair competition statute, a plaintiff who has been given an opportunity to amend but cannot meet the requirements for standing, and who has not identified a substitute plaintiff who does meet the requirements for standing, does not have a right to precertification discovery in an attempt to locate an appropriate representative to continue the original plaintiff's action as a class action. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[2].

No Antitrust or Unfair Competition Claim Based on Exclusive Agreement Between Blue Cross and Provider Group. In Lori Rubinstein Physical Therapy, Inc. v. PTPN, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1130 , the court of appeal rejected antitrust and unfair competition claims stemming from an exclusive provider contract between Blue Cross and a physical therapy provider group brought by competing physical therapy providers. Under the contract between Blue Cross and the defendant provider group, the provider group would accept reduced rates from Blue Cross for its services but would be the exclusive preferred provider of physical therapy services for Blue Cross members. The court concluded that such agreement was expressly authorized by these statutes, notwithstanding the fact that it inhibited the ability of competing providers to compete on the basis of price. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.73[9].

Proposition 64 Applies to Actions Pending at Time of Passage, but Ordinary Rules of Amendment Apply. In Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's, LLC (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 223 , the California Supreme Court held that the changes to the requirements for standing in an action brought by a private plaintiff under the unfair competition statute, as enacted by Proposition 64, apply to actions that were pending when Proposition 64 was passed. However, in Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan Association (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235 , the Court also held that the ordinary rules governing the amendment of complaints and their relation back to the original complaint apply to these pending lawsuits. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Federal Test for Determining Unfair Conduct Applied in Consumer Action Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Camacho v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1394 , the court of appeal adopted a test for determining actionable unfair conduct in consumer actions brought under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. that is patterned on the test applicable in similar cases brought under the Federal Trade Commission Act. Under this test, a consumer must show that the injury: (1) is substantial; (2) is not outweighed by any countervailing benefits to consumers or competition; and (3) is not one that consumers themselves could reasonably have avoided. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.31[5][b].

Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601* Does Not Protect Assets of Buyer Business. In Strategix, Ltd. v. Infocrossing West, Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1068 , the court of appeal held that an agreement prohibiting the seller of a business from soliciting the employees and customers of the buying company is not enforceable under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.73[1].

No Right to Jury Trial in Action Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278 , the court of appeal held that there is no right to a jury trial in an action that is brought solely under the unfair competition statute, even if a jury trial would be available in an action to enforce directly a statute the violation of which forms the basis for the unfair competition action. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[6].

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART IV. 2007 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.129

§ 1.129 Workers' Compensation

Medical Treatment Utilization Schedule. In promulgating 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9792.20-9792.23, the Administrative Director has adopted, as required by Lab. Code § 5307.27, a medical treatment utilization schedule. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][c].

Permanent Disability-- Apportionment. The California Supreme Court in Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1313 has held that "Formula A" adopted by the Supreme Court in Fuentes v. W.C.A.B., pursuant to which the percentage of disability attributable to a new injury is calculated by subtracting the old permanent disability rating from the new permanent disability rating, then consulting the table for the award due this difference, remains the proper method for calculating apportionment. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01, 577.14[3][e].

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Appeals Board en banc in Baglione v. Hertz Car Sales (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 444 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has, by a 4-3 vote, rescinded its previous decision in Baglione v. Hertz Car Sales (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 86 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , which had also been decided by a 4-3 vote, and held that, for compensable claims arising before January 1, 2005, in order for the 1997 schedule for rating permanent disabilities to apply, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4660(d), the existence of permanent disability must be indicated in either a pre-2005 comprehensive medical-legal report or a pre-2005 report from a treating physician, and that, otherwise, the 2005 permanent disability rating schedule applied. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Appeals Board en banc in Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 456 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has, by a 4-3 vote, rescinded its previous decision in Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 95 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , which had also been decided by a 4-3 vote, and held that, for compensable claims arising before January 1, 2005, only if the last payment of temporary disability indemnity was made for any period of temporary disability ending before that date would the 1997 schedule for rating permanent disabilities apply to determine the extent of permanent disability, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4660(d), and that, otherwise, the 2005 permanent disability rating schedule applied. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule--Comprehensive Medical-Legal Report--Notice Under Labor Code § 4061. The court of appeal in Costco Wholesale Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 148 has reached the same conclusion as the Appeals Board reached in Baglione v. Hertz Car Sales (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 444 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) and Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 456 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (see above), regarding the interpretation of the third sentence of Lab. Code § 4660(d). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The court of appeal in Zenith Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 461 , has agreed with Costco Wholesale Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 148 , and Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 456 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) (see above), and held that the employer was required to provide notice under Labor Code § 4061 "together with the last payment of temporary disability indemnity," which in this case was in August 2005, and that the employer was, therefore, "not required to provide the notice required by Section 4061 to the injured worker," pursuant to Labor Code § 4660(d), prior to 2005. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The court of appeal in State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1311 has held that the WCAB's decision to apply the 1997 permanent disability rating schedule was not supported by substantial evidence, since a 12/15/2004 single-sentence report by the treating physician stating the physician's belief that permanent disability was within reasonable medical probability as a result of the employee's 7/21/2004 industrial injury was not followed by any other treating physician's report that provided reasoning to support the physician's conclusion, and that medical opinion is not substantial evidence if it does not indicate the reasoning behind the physician's opinion. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Petitions for Reconsideration--Time to File--Amended Award. The court of appeal in Nestle Ice Cream Co. v. W.C.A.B. (Ryerson) (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1104 has held that the WCJ's amendment of an award by increasing the amounts of retroactive temporary disability payments and vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance awarded meant that the employer's subsequent petition for reconsideration, timely filed as to the amended award, but untimely as to the original award, was timely filed. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.212[1].

Discrimination-- Labor Code § 132a. The court of appeal in Andersen v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1369 has held that an employer had discriminated against its employee, in violation of Lab. Code § 132a, by requiring the employee, who had returned to work following industrial injuries, to use earned vacation time rather than sick leave to attend medical appointments needed to care for those industrial injuries, while permitting employees with non-industrial injuries to use their sick leave for medical appointments. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.18[1].

Third-Party Actions --Settlement-- Notice and Consent. The court of appeal in McKinnon v. Otis Elevator Co. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1125 has held, pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3853, 3859, and 3860(a), that when the employer fails to adequately notify its employee of its subrogation lawsuit and proposed settlement involving an alleged third-party tortfeasor and fails to obtain the employee's consent to settlement of that suit, and when the settling alleged third-party tortfeasor, prior to settlement, was or reasonably should have been aware of the possibility of the employee's claim for damages against the tortfeasor, the alleged tortfeasor cannot use the mere settlement and dismissal of the employer's subrogation action to bar the employee from maintaining an action for damages against the alleged tortfeasor. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.335[3][a][i].

Workers' Compensation Coverage--Contractors' Licenses--Suspension of License. The court of appeal in Wright v. Issak (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1116 has held that a contractor's license is automatically suspended, pursuant to Lab. Code § 7125.2(a)(2), for failure to obtain workers' compensation insurance, whereas, pursuant to Lab. Code §

7125.2(a)(1), suspension of a license for failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance requires notice from the registrar of contractors. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Petition to Reopen--New and Further Disability--Temporary Disability Benefits. The court of appeal in Sarabi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 920 has held that the Appeals Board had jurisdiction to order additional temporary disability benefits more than five years after the date of injury when the employee filed a timely petition to reopen and his new and further disability commenced within five years of the date of his injury. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.222[4][a].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment--Public Safety Employees. In amending Lab. Code § 4663, the legislature has provided that the statute's apportionment provisions do not apply to injuries or illnesses covered under Lab. Code §§ 3212 through 3213.2. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e], 577.46[3][c].

Medical Treatment--Predesignation of Personal Physicians. In amending Lab. Code § 4600, the legislature has extended until December 31, 2009, the right of workers for companies that offer group health insurance to predesignate their personal physicians and has removed the cap seven percent of California workers who may take advantage of this right. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][a].

Death Benefits. In amending Lab. Code § 4702, the legislature has clarified that a survivor's entitlement to a deceased employee's accrued and unpaid compensation does not diminish a survivor's entitlement to full statutory death benefits. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.13[2][b].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment. The court in Nabors v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 217 , has followed E & J Gallo Winery v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1536 , and held that the correct formula for apportioning awards to an employee who sustained multiple disabling injuries while working for the same employer required calculating the most recent award without regard to whether the previous award existed, then subtracting the dollar amount of the previous award from the dollar amount of the subsequent award. Thus, as in Dykes, "Formula C," rejected in Fuentes, was held to be, following SB 899, the correct formula. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment--Appeals Board's Deferral of Issue. In light of conflicting court of appeal opinions regarding calculation of apportionment, the Appeals Board has announced that it will defer deciding such issues in the cases that come before it until the Supreme Court has resolved the conflict and uncertainty. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment. The court in Brodie v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 685 , has followed the courts of appeal in E & J Gallo Winery v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1536 , and Nabors v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 217 , in holding that Formula C, as articulated in Fuentes, was the correct formula for apportioning permanent disability. However, the court in the present case held that the correct use of Formula C required that the current dollar value of the percent of the prior disability be subtracted from the monetary value of the overall current disability. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment. The court in Welcher v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 818 has held that SB 899's repeal of Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4750 and enactments of new Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664 neither clearly expressed nor necessarily implied an intent to abandon "Formula A" established by the Supreme Court in Fuentes. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Medical Treatment --ACOEM Guidelines-- Retroactive Application of SB 899. The court in Sierra Pacific Industries v. W.C.A.B. (Chatham) (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1498 has held that § 47 of SB 899, providing that the amendment, addition, or repeal of any law made by SB 899 applied prospectively from the date of SB 899's enactment (April 19, 2004), regardless of the date of injury, means that the ACOEM Guidelines apply to determine what is reasonable medical treatment in all cases in which no such determination had been made as of April 19, 2004. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][a].

Penalties--Delay in Payment of Permanent Disability Benefits. The court in New United Motors Manufacturing, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Gallegos) (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1533 has held that an employer, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814(b), may avoid a Lab. Code § 5814 penalty if the potential violation of that statute is discovered by the employer prior to a claim for a penalty by the employee, and the fact that the employee discovered the potential violation before the employer did is immaterial. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][a].

Temporary Disability--Seasonal Workers. The court in Signature Fruit Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 790 has held that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4653, temporary disability during a seasonal employee's in-season period of regular employment was payable based on two-thirds of the employee's in-season average weekly earnings, but the seasonal employee was not entitled to temporary disability during the off-season when the parties stipulated that the employee did not have any off-season earnings. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][a].

Psychiatric Injury--Actual Events of Employment. The court in Sonoma State University v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 500 has held that an employee's psychiatric injury satisfied the standard for compensability set forth in Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1) only if it was proven that events of employment were predominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric disability taken as a whole. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][d][i].

Civil Actions--Employment Relationship. The court in Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72 has held that the plaintiff, injured while repairing the defendant's roof, was the defendant's employee pursuant to Lab. Code § 2750.5, which operated to allow the plaintiff's lawsuit, despite the fact that the plaintiff, by virtue of Lab. Code § 3352(h), was not an employee of the defendant for workers' compensa- tion purposes, when the court of appeal found that the plaintiff was not a licensed roofing contractor and, therefore, not an independent contractor. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment--Overlap--Burden of Proof. The court in Kopping v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1099 has held that the Appeals Board correctly determined that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 4664(b), an employee was not entitled to prove that he was medically rehabilitated from a prior permanent disability when he sustained a subsequent industrial injury, but that the Board incorrectly determined that the employee had the burden of disproving overlap between the current permanent disability and the previous disability in order to establish his claim to permanent disability benefits. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Employment Relationships--Independent Contractors. The court in JKH Enterprises, Inc. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046 has held that substantial evidence supported the determination by the Department of Industrial Relations that the drivers for plaintiff courier service were functioning as employees rather than as true independent contractors and found that the question of the hiree's status must be considered in light of the history and remedial and social purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, and the court followed S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341 in finding that the functions performed by drivers did not require a high degree of skill, that the functions constituted an integral heart of plaintiff's courier service business, that, by obtaining clients in need of the service and providing workers to conduct it, plaintiff retained all "necessary" control over the operation as a whole, and that these circumstances were enough to find an employment relationship for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act, even in the absence of plaintiff's exercise of control over the details of work and with plaintiff being more concerned with the results of the work rather than with the means of its accomplishment. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[3][c].

Psychiatric Injury---Sudden and Extraordinary Employment Condition. The court of appeal in Matea v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1435 , has held that an employee suffered a psychiatric injury as a result of a sudden and extraordinary employment condition, making his psychiatric injury compensable even though it occurred during his first six months of employment, when lumber fell into an aisle and onto the employee's leg. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][d][ii].

Utilization Review. The court of appeal in State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Sandhagen; State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1050 , has held that: (1) an Appeals Board holding that an employer's failure to meet the utilization review deadlines specified in Lab. Code § 4610(g)(1) prevented the employer from using the utilization review process and rendered the untimely utilization review reports inadmissible was a final order subject to judicial review via petition for writ of error; (2) the Appeals Board acted within its authority in prohibiting the use of a report generated by an untimely utilization review process in subsequent proceedings challenging the treatment decision; (3) an employer has discretion to undertake or not to undertake utilization review with respect to any particular proposed medical treatment; and (4) both employers and employees may utilize the provisions of Lab. Code § 4062 in objecting to a treating physician's medical determination. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][c].

Civil Actions---Statute of Limitations. The court of appeal in Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261 , has held that a personal injury action filed under Lab. Code § 3706 is subject to the three-year statute of limitations in Code of Civ. Proc. § 338(a). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.312[2][a].

Permanent Disability--Apportionment. The court of appeal in Davis v. W.C.A.B.; Davis v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 324 , has held that, when the legislature enacts a statute, the legislature is presumed not to have intended to overthrow long-established principles of law unless such an intention is clearly expressed or necessarily implied, and that the plain language of Lab. Code §§ 4663 and 4664 reflects a legislative intent to retain "Formula A" established by the Supreme Court in Fuentes. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.14[3][e].

Death Benefits---Decedent's Estate. The court of appeal in Six Flags, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 91 , has held that Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B), which provides that, when a worker without dependents suffers a fatal industrial injury, the employer must pay $250,000 to the deceased worker's estate as a workers' compensation death benefit, is unconstitutional. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.13[2][b].

§ 1.150 Abortions and Birth Control Methods

No Duty of Physician to Inform Pregnant Mother of Right to Abortion. In Barragan v. Lopez (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 997 , a wrongful life action brought by twins born with cerebral palsy, the Court of Appeal held that a doctor who treated the mother did not owe her a duty to advise her of her right to an abortion under Health & Safety Code § 123462(2). Before the twins became viable fetuses, there was no evidence they had any hereditary trait or other physiological condition that should have led the doctor to predict they would be born impaired, and the mother's pregnancy progressed in a normal fashion without any evidence of potential complication; after the twin fetuses became viable, there was no evidence of any significant fetal anomaly or endangerment of the mother's life by continuing the pregnancy; and, after the mother began experiencing significant complications during her pregnancy, under Health & Safety Code § 123468, it would have been improper for the doctor to advise the mother that she had a right to an abortion since the fetuses were viable. See Ch. 4, Abortion and Birth Control Methods, § 4.21.

§ 1.151 Alternative Dispute Resolution

[1] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Determines Discovery Matter Involving Nonparty. The California Supreme Court has held that an arbitrator has the power to hear and determine discovery matters involving nonparties, for example a challenge by a nonparty to a subpoena issued by a party for documents. The matter is to be heard and determined first by the arbitrator, but the nonparty has the right to full judicial review of the arbitrator's discovery order [Berglund v. Arthroscopic Laser & Surgery Center of San Diego, LP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 528]. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.25[1][c][i].

Private Arbitration--Insurance Appraisers Are Arbitrators Too. An appraiser in an appraisal under Ins. Code § 2071 is functioning as an arbitrator and is entitled to immunity [Lambert v. Carneghi (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1129-1137, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 626]. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.30[1], [3].

[2] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Private Arbitration--Uninsured Motorist Arbitration. The California Supreme Court clarified issues required to be arbitrated under mandatory uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage. Coverage questions, i.e., whether the claimant is an "insured" within the policy definition is not a matter for arbitration. Whether the insurer is bound by a default judgment against the driver who was at fault is to be arbitrated because it falls squarely within the questions of liability and damages statutorily subject to arbitration [Bouton v. USAA Casualty Insurance Company (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 1190]. See *Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.92[5]*a].

Private Arbitration--Federal Arbitration Act Preempts Jurisdiction of Labor Commissioner. The United States Supreme Court has considered Ferrer v. Preston (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 440 , and reversed, finding that the Federal Arbitration Act supersedes state laws lodging primary jurisdiction in another forum, whether judicial or administrative. At issue was Lab. Code § 1700.44(a), which purports to vest exclusive jurisdiction in the Labor Commissioner to determine application of the Talent Agency Act to a particular management contract [Preston v. Ferrer (2008) 552 U.S. 346, 128 S. Ct. 978, 169 L. Ed. 2d 917, 923, 927-929]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.21[1][c][ii], 32.24[2][b], [g].

Private Arbitration--Under Federal Arbitration Act Statutory Grounds for Vacating Award Are Exclusive. The United States Supreme Court has addressed the circuit split regarding the parties' ability to expand the scope of judicial review of an arbitration award and held in line with the Ninth Circuit that the grounds enumerated in 9 U.S.C. § 10 are exclusive, and the parties cannot expand the scope of review by contract. A provision for review of the award for legal error is void and unenforceable [Hall St. Assocs., L.L.C. v. Mattel, Inc. (2008) 552U.S. 576, 128 S. Ct. 1396, 170 L. Ed. 2d 254, 259, 263-265, 268]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][b][i].

Private Arbitration--Class Arbitration Waiver in Context of Wage and Hour Laws. The First Appellate District, Division One has considered a class arbitration prohibition in the context of employees' statutory rights regarding hours and wages, and followed Gentry v. Superior Court (Circuit City Stores, Inc.) (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443 , finding the prohibition unconscionable and unenforceable [Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 138, 148-149]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.32[2][a], [c].

Private Arbitration--Single Overlapping Issue Requires Stay Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4. A single overlapping issue is sufficient to require imposition of a stay under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.4. The court has no discretion in the matter [Heritage Provider Network, Inc. v. Superior Court (Eastland Medical Group) (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1152-1153]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, §§ 32.31[2][a], 32.97[2].

Private Arbitration--Spousal Relationship Is Not Enough to Confer Agency. The Fourth Appellate District, Division Three has agreed with the Fourth District, Division One in holding that the spousal relationship alone is not sufficient to empower one spouse, as agent, to bind the other spouse to an arbitration agreement. The case involved elder abuse and other claims against a residential care facility for the elderly. The court was careful to distinguish medical malpractice cases in which the patient can bind the other spouse to arbitrate [Warfield v. Summerville Senior Living, Inc. (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 443, 447-449]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][b].

Private Arbitration--Award of Attorney's Fees May Be Proper on Denial of Petition to Compel Arbitration. When an action is brought solely to compel arbitration of contractual disputes between the parties and the merits of the claims sought to be arbitrated are not at issue in the proceedings to compel arbitration, respondent, if successful in obtaining an order denying the petition to compel arbitration and the contract provides for them, will be entitled to its attorney's fees incurred in responding to the petition [Otay River Constructors v. San Diego Expressway (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 796, 799, 805-808]. Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.94[3][vi].

Private Arbitration--Nonsignatory Officer Alleged to Be Alter Ego Can Compel Arbitration. In a case of first impression, the Court of Appeal has held that nonsignatory officers alleged to be alter egos of a corporate defendant can compel signatories to arbitrate under an agreement signed by the corporation [Rowe v. Exline (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1276]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[5][c], [g].

Private Arbitration--Deception During Settlement Negotiations Causes Forfeiture of Right to Compel Arbitration. In a case involving interstate commerce, and thus, governed by federal law, the Court of Appeal held that although settlement efforts are not interpreted as waiving the right to arbitrate if the settlement is not finalized, a party that attempts to obtain settlement by misleading the court and proposed class members about the benefits of the proposed settlement forfeits its right to arbitrate [Aviation Data, Inc. v. American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1522]. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.25[1][d][i].

[3] Judicial Review

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Excusing Futile Condition. The California Supreme Court has held that an arbitrator has the power to excuse a performance that would have been futile unless the arbitration agreement explicitly and unambiguously bars the arbitrator from modifying the contract or excusing any performance [Gueyffier v. Ann Summers, Ltd. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 1179 (excused notice of breach finding it was not curable)]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][e].

Private Arbitration--Cannot Waive Right to Vacate Award Based on Arbitrator's Failure to Make Required Disclosure. The right to seek to vacate an award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) is available even if the party did not seek disqualification in a timely fashion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c). Further, this right cannot be waived by agreeing to arbitrate under rules that state the arbitration provider's determinations regarding disqualification will be conclusive. The statutes were passed to advance a public purpose of crucial importance over which the state retained ultimate control [Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 820-823, 72 Cal. Rptr.3d 935 (AAA Rule 17)]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][a], [d].

Private Arbitration--Arbitrator Can't Be Disqualified for Matter Not Required to Be Disclosed. An arbitrator was not required to disclose that one of party's counsel and a proposed expert witness (later stricken from witness list) were attorneys with whom he sat on 36-member board of the Business Trial Lawyers Association; the fact that the arbitrator disclosed that out of an excess of caution did not give a party the right to disqualify him. Of course, the award could not be vacated because of that disclosure [Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][d].

Private Arbitration--Parties Can Agree to Judicial Review for Errors of Law. Without deciding whether one or the other of the clauses involved or some different formulation would be sufficient to confer an expanded scope of review, the California Supreme Court overruled several court of appeal cases to hold that parties may provide for expanded judicial review of arbitration awards to include review for errors of law [Cable Connection, Inc. v. DirecTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.10[2].

Private Mediation--No Exceptions to Confidentiality Based on Waiver or Estoppel. The California Supreme Court has held that there are no exceptions to strict compliance with the statutes providing for enforcement of settlement agreements reached in mediation based on equitable principles such as estoppel or waiver. A party who voluntarily submits evidence of events that occurred during mediation and does not object to similar evidence submitted by the opposing party can later invoke the privilege to render that evidence inadmissible [Simmons v. Ghaderi (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 570 (action to enforce oral settlement agreement that did not meet requirements of Evid. Code §§ 1118, 1122, 1124 for making agreement admissible)]. See Ch. 31, Mediation, §§ 31.13[4][a]; 31.14[1], [3].

Mediation--Person Cannot Conduct Settlement Conference and Mediation Simultaneously. The Judicial Council has adopted a new subdivision (d) to Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 3.1380, effective January 1, 2008, that prohibits a court from appointing a person to conduct a settlement conference under Rule 3.1380 at the same time as that person is serving as a mediator in the same action [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380(d)(1)], nor may the court appoint a person to conduct a mediation under Rule 3.1380 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380(d)(2)]. The new provision was added to address problems involving the blurring of distinctions between different ADR processes [see e.g., Jeld-Wen. v. Superior Court (Marlborough) (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 536, 543, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115 ; Advisory Committee Comment to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380(d)]. See discussion in Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13[6].

§ 1.152 Appeals

Revised Rules of Court and Forms for Limited Civil Cases Appealed to the Superior Court Appellate Division. Effective January 1, 2009, all Rules of Court relating to the Superior Court Appellate Division are being repealed and replaced with new rules and Judicial Council forms for limited civil, misdemeanor, and infraction cases, as well as entirely new rules for writ proceedings [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rules 8.800 et seq., 10.110 et seq.]. The new rules use similar language recently adopted for Court of Appeal rules, reflect current practices, fill in gaps, improve the record preparation process, create a more logical structure, and provide more forms. This update includes a complete review of these rules and forms for limited civil cases to prepare you for this important development. See Ch. 345A, Limited Civil Cases .

When Court Clerk and Party Fail to Serve Notice of Entry of Judgment, Sole Consequence Is That Longer Statutory Period for Filing Notice of Appeal Applies. In Kimball Avenue v. Franco (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1224, 1228-1229 , the court of appeal held that noncompliance with the statutory notice requirements for entry of judgment does not render the judgment void; instead, the 180-day deadline in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(3) for filing a notice of appeal applies. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[1].

Certain Collateral Orders Such as Sealing Court Records Are Appealable. In Mercury Interactive Corporation v. Klein (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 60, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 , the court of appeal held that orders concerning the sealing of court records are an exception to the one final judgment rule and are appealable. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.12[1][a].

Notice of Entry of Judgment and Time for Appeal. In Adaimy v. Ruhl (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 583 , the court of appeal held that notice of entry of judgment sent to only one of a party's two attorneys constitutes legal notice and starts the time running to file a notice of appeal. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

Reference to the Record. In Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728 , the court of appeal held a failure to present a full and fair summary of the evidence supporting a judgment effects a waiver of any challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[1][c].

Reasonableness of Costs Reviewed Under Abuse of Discretion Standard. In Peterson v. John Crane, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 498, 513, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185 , the court of appeal held that an award of expert witness fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 must be for no more than a reasonable sum covering the defendant's costs of the services of expert witnesses, actually incurred, and reasonably necessary in trial or preparation for trial. A determination that the cost award is reasonable is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.12[3][e].

Alternative Writ Not Necessarily Binding on Court of Appeal. In Cerna v. City of Oakland (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1340, 1354-1355, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 , the court of appeal held that absent a written opinion following issuance of an alternative writ, the appellate court's reasoning in issuing the alternative writ is not the law of the case binding on appeal. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.30[2].

Frivolous Appeals. In Gong v. Kwong (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 510, 520-521 , the court of appeal held that counsel has a professional responsibility not to pursue an appeal that is frivolous or taken for the purpose of delay, just because the client instructs him or her to do so. See Ch. 49, Appeal: Sanctions, § 49.11[2].

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART V. 2008 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.153 Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations

Violation of First Amendment to Arrest Plaintiff for Political Messages Painted on Van. In Fogel v. Collins (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 824 , the Ninth Circuit found that police officers violated plaintiff's First Amendment rights by arresting him for political messages painted on his van, because a reasonable person would expect that an observer of the van would have seen an old Volkswagen van covered with artwork, an American flag, and obviously satiric or hyperbolic political messages as political speech and not as a threat. The actions of the first officers who actually saw the van and its message made clear that reasonable people would not have understood and did not understand the speech as a true threat. Further, there was virtually no evidence plaintiff subjectively intended the speech as a true threat of serious harm. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

City's Pursuit of Preliminary Injunction and Stay Under Unconstitutional Ordinance Would Not Provide Basis for Damages Under § 1983. In Manta Management Corp. v. City of San Bernardino (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 400, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 353, 181 P.3d 159 , a city's seeking a preliminary injunction and a stay in violation of the First Amendment would not provide the basis for liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 even though the ordinance on which the injunction and stay are based was found unconstitutional and the city's acts caused injury to the party against whom the preliminary injunction and stay were sought, in the absence of evidence that the city materially misled or pressured the judge who issued the injunction and/or the stay. The exercise of independent judgment by the judges in granting the injunction and stay broke the chain of causation for purposes of § 1983 liability. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

First Amendment* Right of Access. In United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022 , the Ninth Circuit held that the public had a qualified First Amendment right of access to documents in a criminal prosecution, including a cooperation addendum to a plea agreement; the government's motion and memoranda filed in support of it to seal the plea agreement; and the district court's orders granting the government's motion, which could be overcome if the government could show that closure serves a compelling interest, there is a substantial probability that, in the absence of closure, the compelling interest would be harmed, and there are no alternatives to closure that would adequately protect the compelling interest. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Special License Plate Program Created Limited Public Forum. In Ariz. Life Coalition, Inc. v. Stanton (9th Cir.

2008) 515 F.3d 956 , an action by a nonprofit coalition of pro-life organizations alleging violation of First Amendment rights by a state license plate commission's denial of an application for a special organization license plate that would portray its message, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the license plate commission on the grounds that it was state-adopted speech which the state was free to regulate without First Amendment constraint. By allowing organizations to obtain speciality license plates with their logo and motto, the state provided a forum in which philanthropic organizations could exercise their First Amendment rights in the hopes of raising money to support their cause, supporting a finding of private speech, not government speech. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Anonymous Speech on Internet Has First Amendment Protection. In Krinsky v. Doe 6 (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 231 , an action for defamation based on anonymous postings on a financial bulletin board on the Internet, plaintiff's ability to discover the identity of an anonymous poster through a subpoena to the message board host had to be weighed against the poster's long-recognized First Amendment right to speak anonymously. The applicability of the First Amendment to speech on the message board also foreclosed a cause of action for interference with business relationships. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Mall's Prohibition of Urging Boycotting of Store Unconstitutional. In Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850 , the California Supreme Court held that under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2, a shopping mall could not enforce a rule prohibiting a union from urging customers to boycott a store in the mall. The mall was a public forum in which persons could reasonably exercise their right to free speech guaranteed by Cal. Const., art. I, § 2. Although the mall could enact and enforce reasonable regulations of the time, place, and manner of free expression to assure these activities did not interfere with the normal business operations of the mall, it could not prohibit certain types of speech based upon content, such as prohibiting speech urging a boycott of one or more of stores in the mall. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations, § 59.14[2][b].

Payrolls of Local Government Employers Not Public Fora. In Pocatello Educ. Ass'n v. Heideman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 1053 , a state statute prohibiting payroll deductions for political activities was constitutional as applied to the state government itself, but violated the First Amendment as applied to local government employers. It was a content-based law for which there was no compelling justification. Further, state officials failed to demonstrate that the statute should be reviewed under the more relaxed standard applicable to speech restrictions in nonpublic fora. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations, § 59.13[1].

Artists Have First Amendment Protection in the Sale of Their Owner Artwork. In White v. City of Sparks (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 953 , the Ninth Circuit held that the First Amendment protects an artist's sale of the artist's original artwork, and a city applied the wrong First Amendment standard in its First Amendment exception to its vendor-permitting policy, which only allowed an exception for the sale of merchandise carrying or constituting a political, religious, philosophical or ideological message. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Vote Swapping and Vote Exchange Websites Have First Amendment Protection. In Porter v. Bowen (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1009 , the Ninth Circuit held that the threatened criminal prosecution of the owners of websites offering voters mechanisms for vote swapping and vote exchange violated their First Amendment rights. The owners had a First Amendment interest the vote-swapping mechanisms and communication and the vote swaps that the mechanisms enabled, and the state's legitimate interests of preventing corruption, preventing fraud and preventing subversion of the Electoral College did not support the threatened criminal prosecution. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

No Protected Expressive Activity Around Individual Store in Shopping Center. In Van v. Target Corp. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 497 , the Court of Appeal held that the California Constitution did not protect expressive conduct in an area immediately surrounding the entrance of an individual retail store that, although located in a shopping center, did not itself possess the characteristics of a public forum. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Unlicensed Contractors. In Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845 , the court of appeal held that a claim brought under the Contractors' State License Law against an unlicensed contractor may form the basis for a right to attach order since an agreement for the performance of services lies at the heart of such a claim. See Ch. 62, Attachment, § 62.11[1].

Attorney May Not Disclose Client Confidences if He or She Is Not Involved in Malpractice Action or Fee Dispute. In Styles v. Mumbert (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1163 , the court held that no disclosure of client confidences was permitted when the attorney represented the client and the attorney sought to step into the action as the client's adversary. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.33[6][j].

Consent to Conflict of Interest in Class Action. In Sharp v. Next Entertainment, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 427-430 , the court held that obtaining consent to a potential conflict of interest from all absent class members prior to certification was not required under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)(1). See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.111[2][d].

Contingent Fee Contracts by Public Entities. In County of Santa Clara v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1140, 1148-1155 , the court held that public entities may engage private counsel under a contingent fee arrangement to assist in public nuisance abatement litigation, as long as the public entities' in-house counsel retain control over all decision making. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.196[7][f].

Statute of Limitations in Criminal Defense Attorney Malpractice Action Runs Despite Lack of Postconviction Relief; Proposition 51 Applicable to Legal Malpractice Action Seeking Primarily Noneconomic Damages. In Ovando v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 42 , the court of appeal in an attorney malpractice action brought against a criminal defense attorney held that the lack of postconviction relief for the criminal defendant does not stay the running of the statute of limitations. In addition, the court held that Proposition 51, as codified in Civ. Code § 1431.2, can be applied to an action that seeks primarily noneconomic damages, such as damages for emotional distress caused when a criminal defense attorney's malpractice resulted in his client's criminal conviction. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.10[2], 76.70, 76.92[1]; Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][d].

Contingency Fee Agreements. In Stroud v. Tunzi (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 377, 382-383 , the court held that modifications to a valid contingency fee agreement must comply with Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice, § 72.196[2].

Court May Revoke Pro Hac Vice Status. In Sheller v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1697, 1716 , the court held that a trial court's inherent powers include the authority to revoke an attorney's pro hac vice status when that attorney has engaged in conduct that would be sufficient to disqualify a California attorney. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice, § 72.223[4].

Substitution of Attorney Form May Not Establish That Continued Representation Has Ended. In Nielsen v. Beck (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1041 , the court of appeal held that execution of a substitution of attorney form does not necessarily dictate a finding that the attorney's representation of the client has ceased for purposes of ending the tolling period on the statute of limitations in an attorney malpractice action, at least if there is contrary evidence from which the trier of fact could conclude that the representation continued beyond that date. The court then held that a triable issue of fact existed when the attorney provided, and billed for, phone advice solicited by the client after the substitution of attorney form was executed. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[2][c].

Attorneys--No Conflict of Interest When No Confidential Information Disclosed. In Med-Trans Corp. v. City of California City (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 666-669 , the court held that no attorney-client relationship existed when there was no evidence that the client ever considered the attorney to be its lawyer or potential lawyer or that any confidential matters were disclosed. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.113[5][b].

Tolling of Limitations Period for Continued Representation in Attorney Malpractice Action Ends if Client No Longer Represented by Attorney Still With Firm. In Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503 , the California Supreme Court held that if an attorney leaves a law firm and takes the representation of a particular client with him or her, the statute of limitations does not continue to toll under the continued representation exception on a malpractice action that the client may have against the attorney's former law firm or any of the other attorneys in that firm. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[2][c].

Drivers' License Suspension. I n Cinquegrani v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 741, 750 , the court of appeal held that a driver's license cannot be suspended without due process of law. Once a license issues, an administrative decision to suspend or revoke it affects a fundamental right. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.12[3].

Judgment Based on Appraisal in Insurance Case Must Conform to Appraisal Award. The court of appeal in Devonwood Condominium Owners Assn. v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1498 , held that a judgment that is not in conformity with the appraisal award made pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071, on which it is based, violates Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.151[2].

Arbitrability of Uninsured Motorist Claim. In Bouton v. USAA Casualty Ins. Co. (2008), 43 Cal. 4th 1190 , the California Supreme Court held that Ins. Code § 11580.2(f) requires arbitration of whether a default judgment obtained against the underinsured tortfeasor by the insured is binding on the insurer, but does not require arbitration of whether a claimant is an insured under a particular policy. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][c], [e].

Insurer's Denial of Underinsured Motorist Benefits Based Upon Insufficient Investigation of Insured's Alleged Injuries Raises Triable Issue of Fact With Regard to Bad Faith Claim. In Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 713, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 13314 , a first-party insurance bad faith case, the California Supreme Court reversed summary judgment in favor of an insurer that failed to pay underinsured motorist benefits to its insured, because it failed to investigate properly the insured's claim of injuries resulting from an automobile accident, and it asserted without supporting evidence that the insured's condition consisted of "soft tissue" injuries related to a preexisting condition. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.25[1]; Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[1].

§ 1.155A Business Entities

Alter-Ego Liability--Enforcing Corporation's or LLC's Arbitration Agreement. In the first California case to address the issue, a court of appeal has held that when a person is sued on the theory that a corporation is the person's alter ego, that person has standing to enforce the corporation's agreement to arbitrate the underlying dispute, even though that person was not a party to the agreement [Rowe v. Exline (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1276]. See Ch. 161, Corporations: Alter Ego Liability, § 161.14[5]. The holding probably would apply also in a case involving a limited liability company's arbitration agreement, since the alter-ego theory can be applied in a case involving an LLC. See Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies, § 346.14[14][b][i].

Nonprofit Corporations--Liability of Officers/Directors. Corp. Code § 5047.5(h) has been amended to provide that the limitation on liability of volunteer officers and directors in nonprofit corporations does not apply if the corporation discriminates on the basis of any characteristic listed in the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Stats. 2007, ch. 568, § 17]. See Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations, § 388.17[5].

Securities Regulation-- Certification of NASDAQ Global Market. Commissioner of Corporations Release No. 87-C (revised Aug. 9, 2007) certifies the NASDAQ Global Market of the NASDAQ Stock Market LLC in accordance with Corp. Code § 25100(o). See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, § 515.11[4].

Securities Regulation-- Liability for Untrue Statements. Corp. Code § 25404(b) now provides that it is unlawful for any person to knowingly make an untrue statement during the course of licensing, investigation, or examination, with the intent to impede, obstruct, or influence the administration or enforcement of any provision of the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 [Stats. 2007, ch. 101, § 5]. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, § 515.11[4].

Franchise Regulation--California Fair Dealership Law. The prohibitions on discrimination in Civ. Code § 82 have been broadened to include discrimination based on any characteristic listed in the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Stats. 2007, ch. 568, § 10]. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, §§ 515.161, 515.540.

PART V. 2008 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.156 Civil Procedure

[1] Amended and Supplemental Pleadings

Amended Complaints. Where plaintiffs presented factual assertions in their original Government Code claim to defendant city that fences erected on city property prevent access to the sidewalk area, and block the sight lines upon entering and exiting their garage, these assertions support both a public nuisance per se and specific injury, and plaintiffs are entitled to amend their complaint to allege a valid cause of action for public nuisance [Kempton v. Los Angeles (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1344]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.43.

Amendment of Complaint--Effect. One defendant's filing of an answer does not divest a plaintiff of the right to amend the complaint with respect to causes of action brought against other demurring defendants [Barton v. Khan (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 238]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.12.

Amendment of Complaint--Delay. Leave to amend a complaint may be denied for undue delay when a plaintiff asserts the right to amendment five weeks after the trial court granted summary judgment and the plaintiff cannot justify the long delay [O'Brien v. Camisasca Automotive Manufacturing, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.13.

Answers--Affirmative Defenses. This chapter's Table of Affirmative Defense Forms, which cross references the various affirmative defense forms throughout the publication, is enhanced with primary law citations to statutes, cases, and rules of court for each subject included in the table. The table works as a check for making sure an applicable affirmative defense is not overlooked when preparing an answer, and provides the primary law citation for further research. See Ch. 26, Answers, § 26.150 et seq.

[1B] Anti-SLAPP Motions

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Protected Activity. Defendant's alleged breach of a settlement agreement reached with plaintiff in a prior lawsuit did not constitute protected activity under the anti-SLAPP statute simply because the breach of contract pertained to a settlement agreement [Applied Business Software, Inc. v. Pacific Mort. Exchange, Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1108]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[7].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Time to File Motion. A court of appeals abused its discretion in allowing defendant to file anti-SLAPP motion more than two years after the filing of the complaint [Platypus Wear, Inc. v. Goldberg (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 772]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.16[3].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Qualifying Pleading. A mere request for a subpoena, unaccompanied by any actual pleading, is not subject to an anti-SLAPP motion. The qualifying pleading must contain one of more causes of action [Tendler v. www.jewishsurvivors.blogspot.com (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 802]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.13[2].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Statutory Exceptions. The plaintiff, as the party claiming the exemption to the anti-SLAPP statute provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17, has the burden of proving the exception is applicable [Simpson Strong-Tie Co., Inc. v. Gore (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 737, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 292]. This is contrary to the court's holding in Brill Media Co. v. TCW Group, Inc. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 324, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371 , and therefore there exists a split of authority in the courts of appeal regarding the burden of proof on statutory exceptions to the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.16[3].

AntiSLAPP Motion--Attorney Fees. The party appealing an award of attorney fees under the anti-SLAPP statute must point to the specific items on the bill they are challenging and provide sufficient argument. General claims that the fees are duplicative or excessive will not suffice [Premier Medical Management Systems, Inc. v. California Ins. Guarantee (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 550, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 695]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[6].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Issue of Public Interest. One court of appeal has adopted a much more expansive interpretation of the phrase "issue of public interest" as "any issue in which the public is interested," and that the issue need not be significant as long as the public has taken an interest [Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210]. The court found an employer's defamation action against a former employee based on an interview the employee gave to a magazine, fell within the statute because there was extensive interest in the plaintiff among the Finnish public. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[3][c].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Definition of Public Forum. There is a split of authority regarding whether a newspaper or magazine is a public forum within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3). One line of cases holds newspapers are not public fora because members of the public cannot freely publish their opinions in them [see Lafayette Morehouse, Inc. v. Chronicle Publishing Co. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 855, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46]. The other line of cases holds that newspapers and magazines are public forma because the opinions expressed in them are open to the public and their contents contribute to the public debate [see Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2007) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210 ; Damon v. Ocean Hills Journalism Club (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 468, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[3][d].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Statutory Exceptions. The legislature intended to exempt purely commercial disputes under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17, and a cause of action arising from lawyer's advise to prospective clients regarding pending litigation does not fall within the statutory exemptions to anti-SLAPP statute [Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 491, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.16[3].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Protected Activity. This chapter is updated with City of Riverside v. Stansbury (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1582, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 862 , which holds a city's declaratory relief action requesting court's input on constitutionality of proposed initiative was not subject to a special motion to strike; although the action followed the initiative proponents' constitutionally protected activity, the action did not arise out of that activity. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.20[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Abuse of Process. This chapter is updated with Booker v. Rountree (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1366, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 733 , which holds a defendant and cross-complainant's cause of action for abuse of process fell squarely within protection of anti-SLAPP statute; indeed, the court stated it was difficult to imagine an abuse of process claim that would not fall within the protection of the statute. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[1][a].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Nonjudicial Foreclosure. This chapter is updated with Garretson v. Post (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1508, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 230 , which holds a defendant's act of noticing and initiating a nonjudicial foreclosure sale after plaintiff defaulted on loan was not subject to anti-SLAPP protection; nonjudicial foreclosure is a private, contractual proceeding, not a proceeding that is closely linked to any governmental, administrative, or judicial proceedings or regulation. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

[1C] Change of Name

Election to Change Name on Entering Marriage or Domestic Partnership. The Name Equality Act of 2007 [2007 Stats., ch. 567] allows persons entering into a marriage or a domestic partnership to change their middle or last names by making an appropriate election in the marriage license application or Declaration of Domestic Partnership form, without the need to petition the superior court for a change of name [Fam. Code §§ 298.6, 306.5]. See Ch. 377, Name, Change of, § 377.31.

[2] Complaints and Cross-Complaints

Complaints--Essential Facts and Specificity. Where plaintiff's complaint requested, in its prayer for relief, double damages under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, but failed to allege, or even try to allege, a prima facie case for misappropriation of a trade secret, the lawsuit failed to constitute a claim for misappropriation of trade secrets [CytoDyn of New Mexico, Inc. v. Amerimmune Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 288, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 600]. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross-Complaints, § 123.53.

Amendment of Complaint--Effect. One defendant's filing of an answer does not divest a plaintiff of the right to amend the complaint with respect to causes of action brought against other demurring defendants [Barton v. Khan (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1216, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 238]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.12.

Amendment of Complaint--Delay. Leave to amend a complaint may be denied for undue delay when a plaintiff asserts the right to amendment five weeks after the trial court granted summary judgment and the plaintiff cannot justify the long delay [O'Brien v. Camisasca Automotive Manufacturing, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.13.

Privacy Protections--Social Security and Financial Account Numbers. New Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b) provides for privacy protections by requiring parties or their attorneys to redact social security and financial account numbers in documents filed with the court. The responsibility for excluding or redacting these numbers from all documents filed with the court rests solely with the parties and their attorneys, and the court clerk will not review each pleading or other paper for compliance with this provision. A party filing a document containing these numbers may file a reference list, along with the redacted document that will be placed in the public file. The reference list is confidential, and a new mandatory Judicial Council Form MC-120, Confidential Reference List of Identifiers is included. See Ch. 26, Answers, § 26.17[1][d]; Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross-Complaints, §§ 123.19[5], 123.69.

[2A] Defaults

Default--Entry Proper. Trial court properly granted landlords' motion for summary adjudication following the tenants' failure to appear at trial, resulting in a default judgment, in the landlords' action for breach of contract, declaratory relief, ejectment, and quiet title. Tenants failed to file the separate statement of facts in opposition required pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(3), and the tenants' attempt to shift the blame for their failure to comply to the trial court, without any case authority demonstrating that the trial court abused its discretion, was incorrect and misplaced. The tenants had taken the time to file a sur-reply to the landlords' reply brief, and could have used that opportunity to remedy their deficiency, but did not do so [Whitehead v. Habig (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 896, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 679]. See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.64.

[2B] Dismissal

Dismissal--Discretionary Dismissal for Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility. This chapter is updated with a new discussion on discretionary dismissal of an action and reasonable excuses for plaintiff's delay due to impossibility, impracticability, or futility, and analyzes the three-way split of authority between different districts in the California Courts of Appeal in light of the 1984 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340. See Ch. 212, Dismissal, § 212.154[4].

[3] Fax Filing

Fax Service--Service Lists. Amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.306(b)(1) now provides that in a case in which the parties have agreed to service by fax, the plaintiff or petitioner named first in the complaint or petition must maintain a current list of the parties that includes their fax numbers for service of notice on each party and furnish a copy of the list on request to any party or the court. Additionally, in a case in which the parties have agreed to service by fax, each party must furnish the first-named plaintiff or petitioner with the party's current fax number for service of notice when it first appears in the action; and the party serves an order, notice, or pleading on a party that has not yet appeared in the action, that party must serve a copy of the service list at the same time that the order, notice, or pleading is served. See Ch. 264, Fax Filing, § 264.41[3].

[4] Guardian Ad Litem

Guardians Ad Litem--Appointment. In probate proceedings, a guardian ad litem may be appointed by the court at any stage of a proceeding to represent the interest of a minor, if the court determines that representation of the interest otherwise would be inadequate. The guardian or guardian ad litem is not a party to the action; instead, he or she is a representative of record of a party who lacks capacity to sue. The guardian ad litem's powers include the right to compromise or settle the action, to control the procedural steps incident to the conduct of the litigation, and, with the approval of the court, to make stipulations or concessions that are binding on the minor, provided they are not prejudicial to the latter's interests [Safai v. Safai (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 233, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d. 759]. See Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem, § 291.33.

Guardians Ad Litem--Appointment. In a parental rights termination case, a juvenile court's failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor mother was not harmless error where the mother's rights were compromised at key hearings as a result of the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem [In re M.F. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 673, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 383]. See Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem, § 291.33.

Guardian Ad Litem--Appointment. This chapter is updated with revised Judicial Council Forms CIV-010, Application and Order for Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem, and revised Judicial Council Form DE-350, GC-100, Petition for Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem--Probate. See Ch. 291, Guardian Ad Litem, §§ 291.50, 291.51.

[4A] Judicial Notice

Judicial Notice--Websites. Courts may take judicial notice of the existence of a particular website but not of the factual content found on the website [Searles Valley Minerals Operations, Inc. v. State Bd. of Equalization (2008) 160

Cal. App. 4th 514, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 857]. See Ch. 321, Judicial Notice, § 321.17[12].

Judges--Peremptory Challenge. A ruling under Civ. Code § 3295(c) that a plaintiff has demonstrated a substantial probability that he or she will prevail on a claim for punitive damages is not a "determination of contested fact issues relating to the merits" for purposes of asserting a peremptory challenge to a judge pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6(a)(2) [Guardado v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 91, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 149]. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.122.

Judges--Disqualification for Cause. This chapter is updated with Rossco Holdings, Inc. v Bank of America (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 141 , which holds disqualification occurs when the facts creating disqualification arise, not when the disqualification is established, and a disqualified judge's orders are void, regardless of whether they happen to have been legally correct. Additionally, grounds for disqualification under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(8)(A) (prospective employment as dispute resolution professional) apply when they both arise and are learned of, not when the judge understands their legal significance. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.44A.

Judges--Peremptory Disqualification. This chapter is updated with Bravo v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 910 , which holds if a Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 motion is timely filed in proper form, the court must accept it without further inquiry, the disqualification is effective immediately, and as a remedial statute the statute is liberally construed in favor of the allowing the peremptory challenge and a challenge should be denied only if the statute absolutely forbids it. Additionally, although two cases may involve the same parties (e.g., same employee and the same employer), if the second action arises out of later events distinct from those in the previous action, the second action does not constitute a continuation of the previous action and a party's peremptory challenge may be timely. See Ch. 317, Judges, §§ 317.71, 317.77[6][d].

Judges--Judicial Minimum Educational Requirements. This chapter is updated with new Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.452 et seq. which set forth minimum education requirements, expectations, and recommendations for justices, judges, subordinate judicial officers, and court personnel. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.84[3].

[6] Personal Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction--Renewal of Judgment. There is nothing unreasonable about subjecting a defendant to the jurisdiction of California courts in an independent action to renew a 1992 judgment. Defendant had entered into a contract in California (a promissory note), that was to be performed in California (i.e., payment of the debt), which he breached when he failed to repay the debt. An action on the note was filed in California and defendant submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the California court when he appeared in the action. A money judgment was entered against defendant in California, and he has failed to pay his obligations. The passage of time between the original California litigation and the revival action, during which defendant has had no additional contacts with California, does not defeat personal jurisdiction as concerns the enforcement of the 1992 judgment. Such a conclusion could encourage judgment debtors to evade legal obligations imposed by a judgment of this state's courts by simply packing up their assets and leaving the jurisdiction [The Cadle Co. II v. Fiscus (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 238]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal, § 323.86.

Jurisdiction--Purposeful Availment. Where the only contact a Virginia university had with California was the university's recruiting coordinator visit to plaintiff in California to recruit him to play football for the university, and the execution of a scholarship agreement by plaintiff in California, the court found that the university had not purposely availed itself of the benefits of doing business in California such that it could expect to be subject to the jurisdiction of California courts. The nexus between the university's activities in California and the injury plaintiff suffered in Virginia was so attenuated as to be virtually nonexistent [Roman v. Liberty University, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 670, 75

Cal. Rptr. 3d 828]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal, § 323.86.

Jurisdiction--Forum Non Conveniens. In challenging the trial court's granting of a motion based on forum non conveniens, plaintiff argued that no suitable alternative forum is available because Virginia applies contributory, rather than comparative, negligence principles, and plaintiff's own negligence or assumption of the risk would completely bar his recovery under Virginia law. As a general rule, comparative law questions are irrelevant to a forum non conveniens analysis, except when the alternate forum provides no remedy at all. Accordingly, the court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff has identified no bar to filing a negligence action in Virginia. If he proves his case, and proves that he was not contributorily negligent, he will be entitled to recover damages under Virginia law; a forum is suitable where an action can be brought, although not necessarily won [Roman v. Liberty University, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 670, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal, § 323.102.

Personal Jurisdiction--Activities in Forum State. The proper jurisdictional question is not whether a defendant can be liable for the acts of another person or entity under state substantive law, but whether the defendant has purposefully directed its activities at the forum state by causing a separate person or entity to engage in forum contacts. That constitutional question does not turn on the specific state law requirements of alter ego or agency, although the inquiry may be similar in some circumstances [Anglo Irish Bank Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 969]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.86.

Jurisdiction--Subsequent Events. Once acquired, jurisdiction is not defeated by subsequent events that might have prevented jurisdiction had they occurred before personal service of the action was made [Goldman v. Simpson (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 255, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.13.

Forum Non Conveniens--Timing of Motion. This chapter is updated with Britton v. Dallas Airmotive, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 127, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 487 , which holds the defendant may make a forum non conveniens motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.30 at any time, not only on or before the last day to plead; however, unreasonable delay in bringing a forum non conveniens motion may be grounds to deny the motion, and any delay would be relevant to whether the motion should be granted. Also, the failure to make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issue of, among others, inconvenient forum. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.34[4].

[7] Subject Matter Jurisdiction

Subject Matter Jurisdiction--Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA). This chapter is updated with a new analysis of the Indian Child Welfare Act [25 U.S.C. § 1901 et seq.] and its effect on jurisdiction in California, federal, and tribal courts. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.24[1A].

Subject Matter Jurisdiction--Tribal Sovereignty. This chapter is updated with San Manuel Indian Bingo and Casino v. N.L.R.B. (D.C. Cir. 2007) 475 F.3d 1306 , which holds that principles of tribal sovereign immunity did not preclude the enforcement of the National Labor Relations Act's provisions relating to employment activities at a tribal casino. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.24[2].

Subject Matter Jurisdiction--Appellate Jurisdiction. This chapter is updated with amended Code Civ. Proc. § 904.3, which provides an appeal cannot be taken from a judgment of the appellate division of a superior court granting or denying a petition for issuance of a writ of mandamus or prohibition directed to the superior court, or a judge thereof, in a limited civil case or a misdemeanor or infraction case; and an appellate court may, in its discretion, upon petition for extraordinary writ, review the judgment. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.46[1].

[8] Limitation of Actions

Limitation of Actions--Absent Defendants. The tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 351 have been applied to nonresident defendants who have never entered the state and to resident defendants who are temporarily absent from the state. Whether section 351 applies to resident defendants who are permanently absent from California, i.e., those who move out of state, was considered by the court in Heritage Marketing & Ins. Services, Inc. v. Chrustawka (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 754, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 126 , which concluded that section 351 penalizes people who move out of state by imposing a longer statute of limitations on them than on those who remain in the state, and that the commerce clause protects persons from such restraints on their movements across state lines. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, §§ 345.20, 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Intentional Acts by Physicians. Where plaintiffs' claim is based on defendant doctors' intentional acts of egregious abuse, MICRA's statute of limitations, which pertains to medical malpractice actions, would not apply [Unruh-Haxton v. Regents of University of California (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 343, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53 and Ch. 345APP, Table of Limitations Periods, § 345APP.227.

Limitation of Actions--Conduct by Defendant. A defendant will be estopped to invoke the statute of limitations where there has been some conduct by the defendant, relied on by the plaintiff, which induces the belated filing of the action. It is not necessary that the defendant acted in bad faith or intended to mislead the plaintiff. It is sufficient that the defendant's conduct in fact induced the plaintiff to refrain from instituting legal proceedings. Whether an estoppel exists--whether the acts, representations or conduct lulled a party into a sense of security preventing him from instituting proceedings before the running of the statute, and whether the party relied thereon to his prejudice--is a question of fact and not of law [Holdgrafer v. Unocal Corp. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 907, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Discovery Regarding Absence From State. The tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 351 applies to the one-year limitation in medical malpractice cases. Harm resulted from the trial court's denial of plaintiff's discovery motions because his notice of intent to sue was six days late, and at trial the surgeon testified that he was outside California for three days. An absence for three more days--merely a long weekend perhaps--would have made a world of difference to the timeliness of the complaint. Thus, denying discovery prevented the patient from gathering evidence on a dispositive issue. The patient did not have to accept the surgeon's testimony as the final word [Kaplan v. Mamelak (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 637, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Agent's Knowledge of Facts. In determining whether an agent's knowledge of certain facts is imputed to the principal for purposes of establishing the principal's notice of those facts, for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1(b)(2), (c), the court of appeal held that so long as the agent was under a duty to disclose certain information, the principal is bound by the agent's knowledge of that information whether or not the agent communicated it to the principal. For this purpose, there is no difference between constructive and actual notice [Santillan v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 4, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Additional Damage After Date of Accrual of Cause of Action. Even though a prior discriminatory evaluation and pay adjustment continue to have negative effects on an employee's pay throughout her employment, the cause of action accrues at the time the evaluation and pay adjustment are made, when the employer acted in a discriminatory manner with adverse consequences for the employee. Once the damage is such that the cause of action accrues, additional damage from the same wrong does not alter the accrual of the cause of action or otherwise extend the limitations period [Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Suspicion of Wrongdoing. Where someone steals a trade secret and then sells it to a third party, with respect to the element of knowledge, the statute of limitations on a cause of action for misappropriation begins to run when the plaintiff has any reason to suspect that the third party knows or reasonably should know that the information is a trade secret. The third party's actual state of mind does not affect the running of the statute [Cypress Semiconductor Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 575, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3rd 685]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Suspicion of Wrongdoing. Public awareness of a problem through media coverage alone does not create constructive suspicion for purposes of discovery. The statute of limitations does not begin to run when some members of the public have a suspicion of wrongdoing, but only once the plaintiff has a suspicion of wrongdoing [Unruh-Haxton v. Regents of University of California (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 343, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Identification for Credit Card Usage. The statute of limitations for an action under Civ. Code § 1747.08 (business requiring identification information as condition of acceptance of credit card) is one year [Code Civ. Proc. § 340; see The TJX Companies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 80, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 114]. See Ch. 345APP, Table of Limitations Periods, § 345.183.

Limitation of Actions--Recorded and Unrecorded Restrictions. The statute of limitations on actions arising from recorded restrictions and unrecorded restrictions is five years [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 336(b), 784; see Pacific Hills Homeowners Assn. v. Prun (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1557, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 653]. See Ch. 345APP, Table of Limitations Periods, § 345.318.

Limitation of Actions--Contractual Stipulations. A contractual stipulation to limit a statute of limitations must be clear and explicit, and is to be strictly construed against the party invoking the provision [Western Filter Corp. v. Argan, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 540 F.3d 947]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, §§ 345.28, 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Estoppel. Defendants who induce plaintiffs not to sue pending settlement may not assert a statute of limitations defense where their conduct caused the untimely filing of the action [Union Oil Co. of California v. Greka Energy Corp. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 129]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53.

Limitation of Actions--Criminal Conviction of Licensee. With respect to a licensee who has been convicted of a crime and, as a result of that conviction is subject to discipline under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7123, the disciplinary action must be filed within two years after the discovery of the conviction by the registrar or by the board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7091(d)]. See Ch. 345APP, Table of Limitation Periods, § 345.185.

Limitation of Actions--Land Use Authority. In an action governed by Gov. Code § 65009(d), a party has 90 days from the date a legislative action is taken or approval is given to notify the local land use authority of any claimed deficiencies in such an action or approval [Urban Habitat Program v. City of Pleasanton (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1561]. See Ch. 345APP, Table of Limitation Periods, § 345.329.

Limitation of Actions--Single Publication Rule. In a defamation action, for example, the single-publication rule provides that, for any single edition of a newspaper or book, there is but a single potential action for a defamatory statement contained in the newspaper or book, no matter how many copies of the newspaper or the book were distributed; and the accrual of the cause of action in that case is not delayed by the discovery rule when the defamation occurred by means of a book, magazine, or newspaper that was distributed to the public. The single publication rule applies to all publications, including those that receive only limited circulation and, thus, are not generally distributed to the public [Hebrew Academy of San Francisco v. Goldman (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 883, 890, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178, 173 P.3d 1004]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.19[3][a].

Limitation of Actions--Table of Limitation Periods. This chapter's Table of Limitation Periods, which provides the various periods of limitation organized by types of action, is updated with additional entries and cross references. The table may be used as a quick reference for researching the limitation period governing a given action or proceeding. Included in the table are convenient cross references, when applicable, to other chapters in this publication that contain related forms, further discussion, or both. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.150 et seq.

Limitation of Actions--Delayed Discovery. This chapter is updated with E-Fab, Inc. v. Accountants, Inc. Services (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9 , which holds if a plaintiff's reasonable and diligent investigation discloses only one kind of wrongdoing when the injury was actually caused by tortious conduct of a wholly different sort, the discovery rule postpones accrual of the statute of limitations on the newly discovered claim. In such cases, the key issue is whether a reasonable investigation at that time would have revealed a factual basis for that particular cause of action. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.19[3][d].

Limitation of Actions--Time From Judgment. This chapter is updated with Archdale v. American Internat. Specialty Lines Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 449, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632 , which holds an insured's cause of action for breach of the implied covenant may accrue on the entry of the trial court's judgment, but the limitations period should not commence to run until that judgment becomes final. Until such judgment is final, the insured has either not been harmed or the amount of that harm cannot be determined. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.21[1][f].

Limitation of Actions--Time From Judgment. This chapter is updated with Sahadi v. Scheaffer (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 704, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 , which holds the two-year statute of limitations prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) applies to actions for accounting malpractice, and where the gravamen of the case is accounting negligence, the two-year statute is applicable, notwithstanding the existence of other claims against the professionals, such as misrepresentation, for which a different statute of limitations might otherwise apply. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[10][a].

Limitation of Actions--Action Against Attorney. This chapter is updated with Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666 , which holds an action against an individual attorney is tolled so long as that attorney continues representation. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.168.

[9] Minors

Minors--Disaffirmation of Judgment. This chapter is updated with Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140 , which holds unless a minor is duly represented as provided by law at the time a judgment is entered against him, his right to disaffirm such judgment continues until barred by laches after the minor has attained the age of majority, such a judgment is voidable and may be disaffirmed, the right of disaffirmance by a minor of a judgment rendered voidable by the fact that he was not represented by a guardian in the action is absolute, and such right continues throughout his minority. See Ch. 367, Minors: Judgments, § 367.10.

[9A] Motions to Strike

Motions to Strike--Pleadings. A motion to strike filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b) must identify law, court rule, or court order violated rather than merely generically asserting that the objected-to pleading was "illegally filed without leave of court" [Ferraro v. Camarlinghi (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 509, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19]. See Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings, § 375.44[3][b].

[10] Motions and Orders

Conferences, Motions, and Hearings--Telephone Appearances. This chapter is updated with new Code Civ. Proc. § 367.5, enacted to promote uniformity in the procedures and practices relating to telephone appearances. In all general civil cases, as defined in California Rules of Ct., Rule 1.6(4), a party that has provided notice may appear by telephone at the following conferences, hearings, and proceedings: (1) a case management conferences, provided the party has made a good faith effort to meet and confer before the conference as required by law and has timely served and filed a case management statement; (2) a trial setting conference; (3) a hearing on law and motion, except motions in limine; (4) a hearing on a discovery motion; (5) a conference to review the status of an arbitration or mediation; (6) a hearing to review the dismissal of an action; and (7) any other hearing, conference, or proceeding if the court determines that a telephone appearance is appropriate. The statute provides for procedures, notice, retractions, exceptions, and required personal appearance. See Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.21[16]; Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.35.

Documents--Electronic Judicial Signatures. This chapter is updated with amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.257(e), which provides if a document requires a signature by a court or a judicial officer, the document may be electronically signed in any manner permitted by law. See Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.21[24]; Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.45[4][e].

[10A] Relief From Judgment

No Mandatory Relief for Attorney Acting In Pro Per. In Esther B. v. City of Los Angeles (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 596 , the Court of Appeal held that an attorney who brought an action both on the attorney's own behalf in pro per and on behalf of others as a taxpayer in a representative capacity was not entitled to mandatory relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). The mandatory relief provision of § 473(b) only applied in the case of an attorney representing a client, and, as to aspect of bringing the action on behalf of other taxpayers, if the attorney bound other taxpayers by the action, the attorney did so as a fellow taxpayer, not as an attorney for the taxpayers. See Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[10B] Res Judicata

Res Judicata--Same Cause of Action. Plaintiff's wrongful death action seeking damages for noneconomic loss arising out of her spouse's tobacco-related death involved the same primary right as her previously litigated and adjudicated loss of consortium action; the court therefore held the action was barred by res judicata [Boeken v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1391, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 454]. See Ch. 491, Res Judicata, § 491.23[3][d].

[11] Service of Summons and Papers

Documents--Electronic Judicial Signatures. This chapter is updated with amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.257(e), which provides if a document requires a signature by a court or a judicial officer, the document may be electronically signed in any manner permitted by law. See Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.21[24]; Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.45[4][e].

Electronic Filing and Service. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.253 providing for electronic filing and service in special cases. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.43.

[12] Shortening and Extending Time

Extending Time. This chapter is updated with the revised Judicial Council Form CM-020, Ex Parte Application for Extension of Time to Serve Pleadings and Orders. See Ch. 524, Shortening and Extending Time, § 524.53A.

[13] Summary Judgment and Adjudication

Summary Judgment--Supporting Evidence. A party responding to interrogatories may not use those responses in support of its own motion or opposition to a motion for summary judgment [Great American Ins. Companies v. Gordon Trucking, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 445]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.24[3].

Summary Judgment--Issues Framed by Pleadings. A plaintiff may not raise, for the first time, a new theory of liability in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment unless the controlling pleading, construed broadly, encompasses that theory. Rather, plaintiff should seek to amend his or her complaint prior to the hearing on the motion for summary judgment [Laabs v. City of Victorville (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 372]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.21[2].

Summary Judgment--Failure to File Separate Statement. The court of appeals upheld summary judgment for plaintiff landlord based solely on opposing tenant's failure to file an opposing separate statement. Tenants filed a document entitled "Objections to Separate Statement of Undisputed Facts," which was insufficient to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(3) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1350(e). [Whitehead v. Habig (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 896, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 679]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.25[2].

Summary Judgment--Statement of Undisputed Material Fact. An expert doctor's opinion based solely on his review of medical records had no evidentiary value where records were not authenticated and placed before the court and no foundation for a business record exception to the hearsay rule was established; as a result, defendant's summary judgment motion had no evidentiary basis and was reversed [Garibay v. Hemmatt (2008) (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 735, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.24[1][b], [c], 537.25[3][b].

Summary Judgment--Statement of Undisputed Material Fact. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rule of Ct., Rule 3.1350(d), which still requires a two-column format for a statement of undisputed material fact, but now requires the moving party to state in numerical sequence the undisputed material facts in the first column followed by the evidence that establishes those undisputed facts in that same column. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.74.

[14] Vexatious Litigants

Vexatious Litigants--Prefiling Order. An appellate court may not require a defendant who has previously been declared a vexatious litigant to obtain leave of court to appeal a judgment against him or her; the defendant is entitled to appeal an adverse ruling regardless of vexatious litigant status [Mahdavi v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 32]. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.31.

Vexatious Litigants--Lifting Prefiling Requirement. A prefiling order is an injunction, and the order may be modified as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 533 based on a change in the facts, a change in the law, or when a change would serve the ends of justice. The factors for lifting the order include: 1) the litigant must show honesty in the presentation of relevant facts in his or her application for the lifting of the prefiling order, 2) the litigant must show genuine remorse for the costs of litigation inflicted on defendants in prior lawsuits, 3) the litigant must attempt restitution toward the targets of prior litigation, especially payment of cost orders made by the court, 4) the litigant must give up the "habit of suing people as a way of life," and 5) the vexatious litigant must file an application to lift a prefiling order in the same forum that originally entered the order [Luckett v. Panos (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 77, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 745]. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.14.

Vexatious Litigants--Statutory Requirements. This chapter is updated with Morton v. Wagner (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 963, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 , which holds where the plaintiff does not have five adverse litigations and the motions are not unmeritorious or frivolous, a finding of the plaintiff as a vexatious litigant under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(3) will not be upheld on appeal; however, repeated motions on the same issue may form the basis for a vexatious litigant finding. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.13[3][a].

Vexatious Litigants--Request to File New Litigation by Vexatious Litigant. This chapter is updated with the new Judicial Council Form MC-701, Request and Order to File New Litigation by Vexatious Litigant. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.43.

§ 1.157 Civil Rights

[1] Discrimination in Business Establishments

Plaintiff Had Standing Under ADA but Summary Judgment Was Proper. In Doran v. 7-Eleven, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 1191 , the Ninth Circuit held that a plaintiff who suffered an injury in fact that was concrete, particularized, actual, and imminent had constitutional standing under U.S. Const. Art. III to bring a suit against a store challenging accessibility barriers under Title III of Americans with Disabilities Act and could, in one suit, permissibly challenge all barriers in the public accommodation related to his specific disability. However, the district court did not err in granting summary judgment to the store on the issues of whether the store's aisle width and the refusal to allow him to access an employees-only restroom were ADA violations. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.52[1].

Plaintiff Pled Injuries to Allow Suit Under ADA and Was Entitled to Attorney's Fees and Costs. In Skaff v. Meridien North America Beverly Hills (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 832 , a hotel's initial mistake in assigning a room with a bathtub rather than a roll-in shower caused no cognizable damage under the ADA, because it was immediately corrected by reassignment to a room with a roll-in shower as plaintiff had requested. Similarly, the initial absence of a shower chair was promptly corrected, and plaintiff had a chair he could use in the roll-in shower by the next morning, so he suffered no cognizable injury concerning the shower. However, plaintiff pled injuries that gave him standing to pursue the case by alleging encounters with accessibility barriers, other than the barrier of the inaccessible showers, at the hotel. Finally, because the ADA did not require plaintiff to give the hotel pre-suit notice that he intended to sue or give the hotel the opportunity to cure the alleged violations as a prerequisite to recovering attorney's fees, the district court erred when it denied plaintiff's motion for attorney's fees and costs. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.52[1].

No Standing If Regulations Not Intended to Prevent Type of Injury Suffered. In Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 254, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 838 , although disabled, plaintiff had no standing under Civ. Code § 54.1 based on defendant's violation of disabled access regulations governing the slope of parking spaces. The regulations were not intended to prevent the type of accident plaintiff suffered by falling; the failure of the access aisle to comply with the applicable regulations did not deny her equal access to the store, because there was no reason to believe plaintiff would have been unable to reach the store entrance had she taken the prescribed route. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Reasonable to Exclude Blind Passenger From Area Excluding Animals Based on Another Passenger's Allergy. In Lockett v. Catalina Channel Express, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1061 , a single decision by the ticket seller of a ferry operator to ask a blind passenger to ride in the general passenger area with her guide dog, rather than in the more expensive lounge area, was a reasonable judgment under 28 C.F.R. § 36.208. The ferry operator had adopted the policy excluding animals from the lounge based on another passenger's alleged allergy. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

[1A] Employment Discrimination

Employee Suing Under FEHA Need Not Exhaust Certain Administrative Remedies. California courts of appeal have held that an employee suing under the Fair Employment and Housing Act need not exhaust the employer's internal remediation procedures if the procedures do not include a quasi-judicial hearing with sufficient due process to generate a legally binding result or if the internal procedures are provided by a collective bargaining agreement rather than a statute [Ahmadi-Kashani v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 449 , and Ortega v. Contra Costa Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1073]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1][a], [g].

42 U.S.C. § Prohibits Retaliation on Basis of Race. The United States Supreme Court has held that 42 U.S.C. § 1981 prohibits retaliation on the basis of race, including retaliation against a person for complaining about the violation of another person's rights under § 1981 [CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 170 L. Ed. 2d 864]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.21[4], 115.22[2], 115.37[1][a], and Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, § 531.62.

Supreme Court Adopts EEOC's Interpretation of "Charge" Under Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The United States Supreme Court has held that, to constitute a "charge" that starts the waiting period before an employee may file suit under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the employee's filing with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission must include a request that the EEOC take remedial action [see 29 U.S.C. § 626(d)]. In so holding, the Supreme Court applied a "measure of respect" for the statutory interpretation embodied in the EEOC's compliance manual and internal directives [Federal Express Corp. v. Holowecki (2008) 170 L. Ed. 2d 10]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[2][a]; Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, § 531.67[1], [2].

California Family Rights Act Dispute Resolution Procedure Is Not Mandatory. The California Supreme Court, in Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cent. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201 ,has held that the statutory procedure under California's Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act to determine whether an employee has a serious health condition entitling him or her to a medical leave of absence [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)] is not mandatory, and an employer's failure to use that procedure does not bar the employer from contending in subsequent litigation that the employee did not have a serious health condition that made him or her unable to perform the job. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][b].

ADA Considerations in Prisons and Jails Must Include Administration Needs. In Pierce v. County of Orange (9th Cir. 2008) 519 F.3d 985 , the Ninth Circuit found that the trial court erred by terminating an order in a class action regarding mobility- and dexterity-impaired pretrial detainees in a county jail, because the county's failure to accommodate their disabilities prevented them from enjoying a number of the county's services, programs, and activities, and the county did not reasonably address various structural barriers, the county maintained unreasonable policies and practices in violation of the ADA, and the county did not posit any legitimate rationale for maintaining inaccessible bathrooms, sinks, showers, and other fixtures in the housing areas and common spaces assigned to mobility- and dexterity-impaired detainees or offer an explanation or justification for significant differences between the vocational and recreational activities available to able and disabled detainees. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

[2] Housing Discrimination

Conclusion of Design and Construction Phase Triggers Statute of Limitations Under FHA. In Garcia v. Brockway (9th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 1092 , private civil actions based on design-and-construction claims under the Fair Housing Act, the two-year statute of limitations began to run at the conclusion of the design-and-construction phase, which occurred on the date the last certificate of occupancy was issued, which occurred long before plaintiffs filed suit. See Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

[3] Interference With Civil Rights

No Qualified Immunity Under Civ. Code § 52.1. In Venegas v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1230, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 741 , the Court of Appeal held that the doctrine of qualified immunity, which applies to federal civil rights actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, does not apply to California civil rights actions under Civ. Code § 52.1. See Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

[4] Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

Heck* Decision Not an Exclusionary Rule. In Simpson v. Thomas (9th Cir. 2008) 528 F.3d 685 , the Ninth Circuit found that Heck v. Humphrey did not create a rule of evidence exclusion and could not be used to bar evidence in a § 1983 claim by a prisoner for excessive force by a guard, even if the district court determined that the prisoner could not file a § 1983 lawsuit relating to any injuries stemming from the guard's alleged punch based on a disciplinary proceeding against the prisoner related to the incident. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Prisoner Had Right to Reasonable Post-Conviction Access to Evidence Used to Convict Him. In Osborne v. District Attorney's Office (9th Cir. 2008) 521 F.3d 1118 , the Ninth Circuit held that under the special circumstances of the case, the right to due process of law prohibited a state from denying a prisoner reasonable post-conviction access to biological evidence for the purpose of further DNA testing. The biological evidence was used to secure his conviction of kidnapping and sexual assault, the testing was to be conducted using methods unavailable at the time of trial and far more precise than the methods that were then available, and the new methods were capable of conclusively determining whether the prisoner was the source of the genetic material, the testing could be conducted without cost or prejudice to the state, and the evidence was material to available forms of post-conviction relief. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Due Process Right to Notice Before Car Towed. In Clement v. City of Glendale (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1090 , because there was very little by way of a legitimate government interest in ordering a tow without notice to the owner of an inoperable car parked in a parking lot in violation of a valid planned non-operation certificate, rather than giving the owner notice and the opportunity to avoid the cost and hassle of having to deal with the towed vehicle, the police officer violated the owner's due process rights by ordering of the towing of the car without attempting to notify the owner before the government could tow and impound it. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

No Absolute Immunity for Social Workers. In Beltran v. Santa Clara County (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 906 , the Ninth Circuit held that a social worker who investigated whether a mother was abusing her son and her supervisor who filed a child dependency petition were not entitled to absolute immunity in the mother's action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 after the dependency petition was denied, claiming that much of the information in the three-page statement of facts included in the petition was false. Social workers conducting investigations have no absolute immunity, and, although social workers have absolute immunity when they make discretionary, quasi-prosecutorial decisions to institute court dependency proceedings to take custody away from parents, they are not entitled to absolute immunity from claims that they fabricated evidence during the investigation or made false statements in the dependency petition affidavit they signed under penalty of perjury, because those actions are not similar to discretionary decisions about whether to prosecute. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Police Officers in High-Speed Chases Qualifiedly Immune Unless They Intend to Harm. In Bingue v. Prunchak (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1169 , the Ninth Circuit found that a police officer involved in a high-speed chase was qualifiedly immune in a § 1983 action by the driver of a car sideswiped by the officer in the course of the chase. The intent to harm standard applies to all high-speed police chases, and the officer did not act with the requisite intent, even though his decision to join the pursuit may have been ill-advised as well as his execution, because poor judgment alone in a high-speed chase did not violate the Fourteenth Amendment. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Private Entity Not Entitled to Sovereign Immunity. In Del Campo v. Kennedy (9th Cir. 2008) 517 F.3d 1070 , an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 based on the behavior of a private corporation contracted with the district attorney to run a bad check diversion program, the Ninth Circuit held that the corporation, as a private entity, was not entitled to sovereign immunity. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

No Claim Under § 1981 Against Arm of State. In Pittman v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1065 , the Ninth Circuit held that a federal district court properly dismissed an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 alleging employment discrimination on the basis of race against a state employment department, because § 1981 does not contain a cause of action against states or arms of states. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.11[1][c].

Notice to Appeal on Misdemeanor Charges Tolled Statute of Limitations Until Charges Dismissed. In Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728 , a notice to appear on specified misdemeanor charges inferentially served on a criminal defendant at the time of his release commenced tolling of a civil rights action against law enforcement officers based on alleged use of excessive force during his arrest under Gov. Code § 945.3. A criminal complaint was timely filed after service of the notice to appear so that the tolling period continued through final disposition of charges by dismissal by the prosecutor. Thus, a civil rights complaint under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 filed within one year under the then-applicable statute of limitations was timely. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14[9][b].

[5] Prisoner Rights

RLUIPA Claim Not Barred Because Not Specifically Pleaded by Prisoner. In Alvarez v. Hill (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1152 , the Ninth Circuit held that because federal complaints plead claims, not causes of action or statutes or legal theories, a prisoner's failure to specifically plead in the complaint a violation of RLUIPA did not bar the argument that the district court erred in not analyzing religious exercise claims under RLUIPA, which establishes a more protective standard than the First Amendment. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

No Fair Notice of Summary Judgment Procedure Given to Jail Inmate. In Solis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 946 , a jail inmate's civil rights action against a city, the sheriff and deputy sheriffs resulting from his placement in the jail's "gang module," the district court erred in granting summary to defendants because neither the court nor defendants provided the inmate with the required fair notice of summary judgment procedure. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Maximum Security Prisoners Entitled to Group Worship. In Greene v. Solano County Jail (9th Cir. 2008) 513

F.3d 982 , the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a sheriff in a civil rights action by a maximum security jail prisoner alleging that the jail's policy of prohibiting maximum security prisoners from participating in group worship was a violation of his rights under the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act. The policy substantially burdened his ability to exercise his religion, and there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether a total ban on group religious worship by maximum security prisoners at the jail was the least restrictive means of maintaining jail security. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Prisoner Should Have Been Allowed to Proceed In Forma Pauperis on Complaint Alleging Imminent Danger of Serious Physical Injury. In Andrews v. Cervantes (9th Cir. 2007) 493 F.3d 1047 , an action by a prisoner alleging a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for cruel and unusual punishment premised on the danger of contracting various communicable diseases, based on the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation's alleged ongoing policy of not screening inmates for communicable diseases and housing contagious inmates with others without regard to the risk they posed, the district court erred in finding that the three-strikes rule under the PLRA applied to prisoner, refusing his request to proceed in forma pauperis, and ordering the case closed. The prisoner sufficiently alleged imminent danger of serious physical injury, even though at the time he filed the complaint he already had contracted hepatitis and did not allege that he was presently confined with a prisoner with another contagious disease. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Exhaustion of Remedies Required for ADA and Rehabilitation Act Action. In O'Guinn v. Lovelock Correctional Center (9th Cir. 2007) 502 F.3d 1056 , the Ninth Circuit held that the Prison Litigation Reform Act requires prisoners to exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing claims under the Americans With Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act. A prisoner did not exhaust remedies by repeated requests to move to a bottom bunk due to poor balance resulting from a previous brain injury, because the lower bunk claims were not equivalent to claims of denial of mental health treatment in violation of the ADA and Rehabilitation Act. A complaint filed with the DOJ alleging denial of mental health treatment did not exhaust the prison's internal grievance process. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

§ 1.158 Class Actions

"Coupon" Settlement of Class Action Not Inherently Suspect. A California court of appeal has held that a "coupon" settlement (in which class members would receive a coupon, voucher, or discount that would partly defray the cost of making a new purchase of goods or services from the defendant) is not inherently suspect or improper [Chavez v. Netflix, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 43]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.21[1], 120.21[2][b] **.

Equitable Defenses Not Relevant to Liability Do Not Preclude Class Certification. A California court of appeal has held that even though equitable defenses such as fraud and unclean hands may be relevant in fashioning each class member's individual remedy, those defenses do not preclude class certification if under applicable substantive law they are not relevant on the question of the defendant's liability [Ticconi v. Blue Shield of Cal. Life & Health Ins. Co. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 528]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.12[2][b], 120.15[1].

Court May Allow Precertification Discovery to Find Suitable Class Representative. A California court of appeal has held that a trial court may authorize precertification discovery designed to ascertain a suitable class representative even if the original named plaintiffs lack standing to prosecute the action [CashCall, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 273]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.15[5].

Local Law May Disallow Use of Class Actions. In Batt v. City & County of San Francisco (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 65 , the court has enforced a local ordinance disallowing the use of class actions to claim refunds of local taxes. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.10[1].

Class Representative May Recover Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Statute Even if Primarily Motivated by Own Financial Interests. A California Court of Appeal has held that a class representative may recover fees under the "private attorney general statute" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], even if he or she was primarily motivated by his or her own financial interests. Such personal motivation does not preclude a fee award so long as the class action affected the public interest and resulted in a significant benefit to a large class of persons. See Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1 , now covered in Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.24[3].

§ 1.158A Constitutional Law

Amendment Versus Revision. The question of whether an initiative constitutes an amendment or a revision requires analysis of the statute on its face [Rippon v. Bowen (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1319, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 421]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.13[3].

Separation of Powers. A court is without power to interfere with purely legislative action, and when the Legislature has committed to a municipal body the power to legislate on a given subject, the court has no power to command or prohibit the exercise of the legislative function [County of Orange v. Barratt American, Inc. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 420, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 542]. Additionally, the principle of constitutional separation of power underlies the mental processes principle, which precludes any judicial inquiry into the subjective motives or mental processes of legislators [Sutter's Place v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1370]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.21[4][a].

Federal Preemption. Where the federal law does not expressly preempt or impliedly occupy the field, states may establish their own requirements, including a state-law cause of action, pertaining to the subject of the federal statute so long as the state requirements are identical to those contained in the federal statute [Farm Raised Salmon Cases (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1077, 1086, 1096, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112, 175 P.3d 1170 (labeling of artificially colored food under Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. § 343(k))]. Additionally, while there is a strong presumption against federal preemption of state law governing historic police powers, the United States Supreme Court has held that the presumption does not apply when a state regulates in an area where there has been a history of significant federal presence [*Silvas v. E*Trade Mortg. Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 514 F.3d 1001, 1004* (banking)]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, §§ 126A.23[3][a], 126A.23[5].

Police Powers. Among other things, the police power empowers cities to control and organize development within their boundaries as a means of serving the general welfare [Hernandez v. City of Hanford (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 279, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442, 159 P.3d 33]. Accordingly, a governmental entity may not contract away its right to exercise the police power in the future, and a contract that purports to do so is invalid as against public policy [Cotta v. City and County of San Francisco (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 1558, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 612]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.31[2], [4].

Regulatory Fees. Regulatory fees, unlike other types of user fees, often are not easily correlated to a specific, ascertainable cost. This may be due to the complexity of the regulatory scheme and the multifaceted responsibilities of the department or agency charged with implementing or enforcing the applicable regulations, the multifaceted responsibilities of each of the employees who are charged with implementing or enforcing the regulations, the intermingled functions of various departments as well as intermingled funding sources, and expansive accounting systems thast are not designed to track specific tasks. A municipality may, under its police powers, spend regulatory fee revenues for the purpose of legitimate regulation so long as those revenues do not exceed the reasonably necessary expense of the regulatory effort [Collier v. City and County of San Francisco (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1326, 1339, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 698]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.31[6].

Privacy Rights of Public Employees. California's right to privacy does prevent the release of names and salaries of public employees earning $100,000 or more per year, including peace officers [International Fed. of Prof. and Tech. Engineers, Local 21, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 319, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 165 P.3d 488]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.42[3][b].

§ 1.159 Contracts and Commercial Law

Assignments--Standing of Assignee for Collection to Sue. State law has long recognized that a creditor's assignee for collection has standing to sue the debtor, even though the assignee's only interest in suing is to obtain funds that will be turned over to the creditor (less a fee for the assignee's services). Federal courts have not all been in accord with that view when an assignee for collection has tried to sue in a federal court. Now the U.S. Supreme Court has held, in a 5-to-4 decision, that an assignee of a legal claim for money owed has standing to pursue that claim in a federal court, even when the assignee has promised to remit the proceeds of the litigation to the assignor [Sprint Communs. Co. v. APCC Servs. (2008) 171 L. Ed. 2d 424]. See Ch. 60, Assignments, § 60.19[4].

Fraudulent Conveyances--Recovery From Investors in "Ponzi" Scheme. The Ninth Circuit has applied California's Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Civ. Code § 3439 et seq.] to allow recovery from investors in a Ponzi scheme, describing theories of liability on which a receiver may proceed and describing a two-step process for determining the existence of liability and the amount of the recovery [Donell v. Kowell (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 762]. See Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances, § 270.48[1].

Breach of Contract Action--Attorney's Fees for Defendant After Successful Motion to Quash Service. The court of appeal in Profit Concepts Management, Inc. v. Griffith (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 950 held that in an action for breach of contract, if the contract provides that in any litigation involving the contract, the prevailing party will be entitled to recover attorney's fees and costs, and if the trial court grants the defendant's motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, then the defendant is the party prevailing on the contract under Civ. Code § 1717 and therefore is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees as costs, because the complaint is necessarily dismissed in its entirety and thus the plaintiff obtains nothing. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.83[2].

Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act--Report Containing Unlawful Detainer Information. In a case of first impression in California, a court of appeal has held that the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1786 et seq.] is unconstitutionally vague as applied to an investigative consumer report containing information about whether any unlawful detainer actions were filed against the subject of the report, because reasonable persons cannot readily determine whether the unlawful detainer information constitutes "character" information--in which case, the agency must comply with requirements prescribed in that Act--or constitutes "creditworthiness" information governed by the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [§ 1785.1 et seq.], which imposes somewhat different requirements on the agency [Ortiz v. Lyon Management Group, Inc . (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 604 (statutory scheme embodied in those two Acts "presents a false dichotomy between creditworthiness and character")]. See Ch. 129, Consumer Credit Reporting, § 129.12.

Contracts--Application of Government Claims Act. In City of Stockton v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 730 , the California Supreme Court has settled a difference of opinion between courts of appeal by holding that Gov. Code § 810 et seq., commonly known as the Government Claims Act, applies to a claim for damages based on breach of a contract by the state or a local public entity. In addition, the court took the opportunity to state that henceforth Gov. Code § 810 et seq., traditionally called the Tort Claims Act, should be referred to more appropriately as the Government Claims Act. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.55[5].

Suretyship/Usury--Guarantor's Contract Cannot Waive Usury Defense to Creditor's Claim Against Debtor-Principal. A court of appeal, resolving an issue not previously addressed by California appellate courts, has held that insofar as a guaranteed debt for interest is unenforceable on the ground of usury, the guarantor's contract cannot be construed or enforced so as to waive the guarantor's right to raise that defense, since a promise to pay usurious interest is illegal and therefore cannot be enforced on any theory [WRI Opportunity Loans II, LLC v. Cooper (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 525]. See Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.17[4]; Ch. 568, Usury, § 568.32[5].

Contracts--Procedural Unconscionability in Consumer Contract. A California appellate court has held that, except in unusual circumstances--such as when the consumer is highly sophisticated and the challenged provision does not undermine important public policies--the use of a contract of adhesion establishes a minimal degree of procedural unconscionability notwithstanding the availability of market alternatives [Gatton v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 571, 583-585]. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.25[2][b].

§ 1.159A Corporations

Derivative Actions. The California Supreme Court in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100 has elected to follow the majority rule and, applying the basic principles that govern corporation law and shareholder litigation, and has held that Corp. Code § 800(b) is properly construed as containing a continuous ownership requirement in shareholder's derivative actions. That is, California law generally requires a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative action to maintain continuous stock ownership throughout the pendency of the litigation. Consequently, when the shareholder relationship is terminated, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, the derivative-action plaintiff loses standing. For discussion, as well as new forms for notice of motion for dismissal of a derivative action, and judgment of dismissal, based on the plaintiff's loss of shareholder status, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions, § 168.74, 168.75.

§ 1.160 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Demanding Release of "All Claims" Not Effective to Shift Costs. In Chen v. Interinsurance Exchange of the Automobile Club (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 117 , the Court of Appeal held that an insurer's demand for a release of "all claims" as part of its Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer was ambiguous and did not operate to shift post-offer costs under § 998, because the insureds had a claim against the insurer other than the claims being litigated in that litigation, and the offer did not make clear whether it applied to that claim as well. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Shifts Cost if Plaintiff Receives Verdict Better Than Defendant's Offer Notwithstanding Later Settlement With Other Parties. In Guerrero v. Rodan Termite Control, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1435 , an action by a home buyer against several defendants based on defects discovered after the close of escrow, pretrial settlements with parties other than the pest control company, which offset the buyer's recovery at trial against the pest control company to zero, could not be taken into account to determine whether the buyer recovered more than the pest control company's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer, which the buyer had rejected, in order to determine whether to award the buyer his post-offer costs against the pest control company. The buyer recovered more than the pest control company's § 998 offer at trial before the offset, and the settlements with the other parties had not yet been reached at the time of the pest control company's § 998 offer to the buyer, so that the buyer did not fail to obtain a judgment or award more favorable than he would have received, at the time the pest control company's offer was outstanding, if he had accepted the offer. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Defendants Entitled to Attorney's Fees When Case Ended Against Them. In Pueblo Radiology Medical Group, Inc. v. Gerlach (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 826, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 , an action under a contract, in which plaintiff sued individuals alleging they were alter egos of the corporate defendant, and the trial court found they were not and entered judgment accordingly, the court properly awarded attorney's fees under the contract to the individuals after the entry of judgment. The award was not premature because the trial court's determination they were not alter egos of the corporation effectively ended the case as to them. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Granting of Motion to Quash Entitled Defendant to Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717. In Profit Concepts Management, Inc. v. Griffith (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 950, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 396 , the court of appeal held that the granting of a motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction entitled a former employee sued by his employer to attorney's fees in an action on a contract under Civ. Code § 1717 as the prevailing party. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Under Private Attorney General Statute, Change Must Be Relief Sought. In Marine Forests Society v. Cal. Coastal Commission (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 867, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32 , the court found that for the catalyst theory to apply under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the lawsuit must have caused the defendant to change its behavior, resulting in a significant benefit to the general public. If another body changes defendant's behavior, the catalyst theory will not entitle the plaintiff to an attorney's fees award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Successful Opposition to Petition to Compel Arbitration Entitled Party to Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717. In Otay River Constructors v. San Diego Expressway (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 796, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 , a party that obtained an order denying arbitration in a dispute between parties to several highway project contracts was the prevailing party for purposes of Civ. Code § 1717, even though the merits of the underlying contractual disputes were not resolved. The petition to compel arbitration under the agreement that coordinated the other agreements and provided for the recovery of attorney's fees was an action on that contract for purposes of § 1717, and the decision on the petition to compel arbitration was final and on the merits of the only contractual issue before the trial court. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Private Attorney General Statute Does Not Allow for Expert Witness Fees. In Olson v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1142 , the California Supreme Court held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a prevailing plaintiff who is awarded attorney's fees is not entitled to recover expert witness fees as well. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Attorney's Fees Under § 1021.5 Awardable Based on Necessity and Burden of Litigation Against Real Party in Interest. In Mejia v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 151 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff's substantial personal interest as a homeowner and resident in opposing a proposed development based on inadequate environmental review did not preclude a finding that the financial burden of the litigation was out of proportion to her personal stake in the matter. Further, the developer who opposed, as the real party in interest, the homeowner's petition seeking invalidation of a mitigated negative declaration and the preparation of an environmental impact report under CEQA prior to the city's approval of the development was an opposing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and its purported absence of fault or misconduct did not relieve it of liability for attorney's fees. Finally, the court found that an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 against a party that is without fault does not impermissibly infringe that party's First Amendment right to petition the government for a redress of grievances. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

No Private Attorney General Attorney's Fee Award Against Party Who Only Defended Private Interest. In Adoption of Joshua S. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 945 , the California Supreme Court held that the trial court erred in awarding attorney's fees against a mother who litigated the validity of second-parent adoption by her former partner and lost. Although there was no question the litigation yielded substantial and widespread public benefit, even if the trial court was within its discretion in holding that the costs of the litigation transcended the partner's personal interests, the mother was not the type of party on whom private attorney general fees were intended to be imposed. She only engaged in the litigation to adjudicate private rights from which important appellate precedent happened to emerge, but otherwise did nothing to compromise the rights of the public or a significant class of people, and she was a private litigant with no institutional interest in the litigation, and the judgment she sought would have settled only her private rights and those of her children and her partner. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

No Reduction in Fee Award for Pursuit of Related Unsuccessful Claims. In Hogar Dulce Hogar v. Community Development Com. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250 , in which plaintiff sued under the Community Redevelopment Law [Health & Saf. Code § 33000 et seq.], challenging the manner in which defendant calculated its required payments to the Low and Moderate Income Housing Fund, given the long-term impact of defendant's amendment to a tax-sharing agreement with the county and the significant amount of reimbursement plaintiff obtained, the trial court did not abuse discretion in not reducing plaintiff's attorney's fee award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 based on plaintiff's pursuit of unsuccessful claims as well as successful ones. The trial court could reasonably have found plaintiff had achieved excellent results, and, because all of plaintiff's claims were related to its contention that the housing fund had not been properly reimbursed, it had standing to assert those claims, and the statute of limitations had not expired, so that trial court was not required to segregate the claims between those upon which plaintiff was successful and those on which defendant prevailed. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Unlawful Detainer for Breach of Lease Was Action on Contract. In Mitchell Land & Improvement Co. v. Ristorante Ferrantelli, Inc. (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 479 , an attorney's fees award under Civ. Code § 1717 after the landlord's voluntary dismissal of an unlawful detainer action against the lessee based on alleged violations of a lease provision requiring the premises only be used for lawful purposes was improper, because the unlawful detainer was an action based upon an alleged breach of contract so that Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), prohibiting attorney's fees awards after voluntarily dismissal of an action based on a contract, applied. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Cross-Defendant Entitled to Costs After Dismissal of Cross-Complaint. In City of Long Beach v. Stevedoring Services of America (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 672 , the court of appeal held that when a trial court dismissed a cross-complaint for equitable indemnity as moot, the cross-defendant was one in whose favor the cross-complaint was dismissed and therefore a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, entitled to costs as a matter of right. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Award of Attorney's Fees--Proper to Depart From Local Rule Guidelines on Award of Attorney's Fees--Attorney's Fees in Contract Cases. In Cruz v. Ayromloo (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1270 , landlord-tenant litigation involving a written lease with attorney's fees provision, the court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the tenants higher attorney's fees than allowed for in guidelines for contested contract cases under Los Angeles Superior Court Rule 3.2, because the rule allowed the trial court to exercise its discretion to depart from the rule to award higher fees. Further, broad language of the attorney's fee clause in the lease agreements covered all fees in any civil action stemming from the lease, not just security deposit recovery litigation, and allocation of fees incurred in representing multiple tenants, some of whom had a written lease with the attorney's fees provision and some of whom did not, was not necessary. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Award of Attorney's Fees--No Fees for Prevailing Championing Contract Without Attorney's Fees Provision. In Brittalia Ventures v. Stuke Nursery Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 17 , the court held in consolidated breach of contract actions that the prevailing party could not obtain attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 because the contract it championed did not contain an attorney fee provision, notwithstanding that the losing party defended the matter by championing a different contract that did contain an attorney's fee provision. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Award of Attorney's Fees--Third Party Beneficiary Entitled to Attorney's Fees. In Loduca v. Polyzos (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 334 , the court held that a third party beneficiary who prevails in litigation under the contract may recover attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 if the contract contains an attorney's fees provision. Thus, a property owner who successfully sued a subcontractor as an express third party beneficiary to a contract between the subcontractor and the general contractor was entitled to an award of attorney's fees. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Award of Attorney's Fees--Municipal Resolution Was Basis for Award of Attorney's Fees. In Torres v. City of San Diego (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 214 , the court held that a municipal resolution could serve as the basis for an award of attorney's fees. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART V. 2008 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.161 Discovery

Electronic Discovery Legislation Vetoed. Citing time constraints resulting from the California budget stalemate, the Governor has vetoed AB926, which would have established new rules governing the discovery of electronically stored evidence (ESI) or "e-discovery." Passage of the measure, which was co-sponsored by the California Judicial Council and organizations representing both plaintiff and defense bar, had been widely predicted, and most observers had expected the legislation and the conforming rules of court to take effect January 1, 2009. As a result of the veto, California e-discovery issues will continue to be decided under existing law for the time being. Given the circumstances surrounding the veto, it is likely that the legislation will be re-introduced in 2009. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.24[4].

Review of Arbitrator's Discovery Order. In Berglund v. Arthroscopic & Laser Surgery Ct. of San Diego (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 528 , the California Supreme Court held that an arbitrator's discovery order against a nonparty is subject to full judicial review. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.11[3][b].

Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege. In Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 672 , the court of appeal held that corporations' production of documents to the government did not waive the attorney-client privilege and work product protection when production was coerced by the threat of indictment if the corporations failed to cooperate. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.15[6].

Mediation Confidentiality. In Simmons v. Ghaderi (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 570 , the California Supreme Court held that a party cannot impliedly waive mediation confidentiality through litigation conduct, and that estoppel could not be applied to prevent defendant from tardily claiming mediation confidentiality, because estoppel is not an express statutory exception to mediation confidentiality. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.125.

E-Discovery. Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, and Timing, has been updated to include coverage of the latest cases and statutes addressing electronic discovery. The chapter includes discussion of the new Federal Rules of Civil Procedure governing electronically stored evidence and the proposed California legislation and rules. Also included is discussion of the particular issues presented by e-discovery with respect to preservation and production or spoliation of evidence, privacy and privilege, and inadvertent disclosure. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.24.

Deliberative Process Privilege. In San Joaquin Cty. Local Agency Formation Comm'n v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 159 , an action brought by real party in interest irrigation district to challenge a local agency formation commission's denial of the district's application to provide retail electric service, the deliberative process privilege protected from discovery the commissioners' reasoning process and the evidence they relied on in rejecting district's application. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.153[4][i].

Mental Processes Privilege. In Sutter's Place Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1370 , documents relating to legislators' mental processes or reasons for enacting ordinance that imposed limits on operation of card rooms were irrelevant, and even if relevant, were not discoverable under the "mental processes" privilege. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.153[4][i].

Fees to Nonnoticing Party for Deposition Transcript. In Serrano v. Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1014 , the court of appeal ruled that the trial court in a pending action has the authority to require a deposition reporter to provide a copy of a transcript to a nonnoticing party for a reasonable fee; and in the event of a dispute, the trial court may determine the amount of the reasonable fee. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, §§ 193.70, 193.76.

SVPA Proceeding. In People v. Dixon (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 414 , the court of appeal held that a civil commitment proceeding under the Sexually Violent Predators Act (SVPA) requires application of civil discovery rules [People v. Dixon (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 414, 443, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33]. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.11[3][c].

Opt-in Notice. In Puerto v. Superior Court (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1242 , the opt-in notice, requiring class action petitioners to obtain non-party potential witnesses' affirmative consent to disclosure of their addresses and phone numbers, exceeded the protections necessary to safeguard the witnesses' privacy interests. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.120[3].

Precertification Discovery of Identity of Class Members. In Cashcall, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 273 , the court, addressing an issue of first impression, held that an original plaintiff who lacked standing in a Code Civ. Proc. § 382 class action should be allowed to obtain precertification discovery of the identities of potential plaintiffs with standing, subject to a balancing test weighing the danger of potential abuses against the rights of the parties. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.153[15].

Sealed Records. In Mercury Interactive Corp. v. Klein (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 60 , the court held that the presumed right of pubic access discussed in NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-TV), Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1178 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.550-2.551 does not apply to discovery materials that are not used at trial or submitted as a basis for adjudication. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.37.

Corporate Attorney-Client Privilege. In Zurich Am. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1485 , the court held that the corporate attorney-client privilege could extend to confidential communications among the client's employees regarding legal advice and strategy, even though the corporation's attorneys are not directly involved and the communications did not include excerpts of direct communications from the attorneys, provided that the employees involved were third persons to whom disclosure was reasonably necessary to further the purpose of the legal consultation. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.40[3].

Terminating Sanctions. In Stephen Slesinger, Inc. v. The Walt Disney Co. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 736 , the court held that a trial court may, when faced with pervasive, deliberate, and egregious misconduct--abuse that makes lesser sanctions inadequate to ensure a fair trial--use its inherent judicial power to dismiss the action. See Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.13[3][a][iii].

Filing Motion to Compel Production of Business Records. In Unzipped Apparel, LLC v. Bader (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th, the court held that the 60-day period for filing a motion to compel under Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.480(b) applies to subpoenas for business records, as well as to subpoenas for oral or written depositions. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, § 193.156[1][i].

New Judicial Council Form for Commission to Take Deposition Outside California. An illustration of the new Judicial Council Form DISC-030, Commission to Take Deposition Outside California, approved by the Judicial Council for optional use, is reproduced in Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, § 193.272.

Revised Judicial Council Forms. Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories, § 194.83[1], includes revised Judicial Council Form DISC-001, Form Interrogatories--General. Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions, § 196.61[1], includes revised Judicial Council Form DISC-020, Requests for Admissions. Ch. 535, Discovery: Subpoena, § 535.69[1], includes revised Judicial Council Form SUBP-025 Notice to Consumer or Employee and Objection.

§ 1.161A Elections

Referendum Petition--Disqualification of Assisted Signatures. In a case of first impression, a court of appeal has held that when a voter signs a referendum petition with assistance as permitted by Elec. Code § 100.5, which requires the assisting person also to sign, the signature of the assisting person must be near the voter's mark or signature. Noncompliance with the requirements cannot be cured by construing Elec. Code § 100.5 in such a way that the voter's assisted signature could be deemed validated by the required declaration of the petition circulator [see Elec. Code § 104] on each sheet of signatures [Friends of Bay Meadows v. City of San Mateo (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1175]. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.45[4][c].

PART V. 2008 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.162 Employment

Limited Whistleblower Protection for University of California Employees. Construing Gov. Code § 8547.10(c), the California Supreme Court in Miklosy v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876 has held that a University of California employee who claims to be the victim of retaliation for whistleblowing activity may bring an action for damages only if the university's administrative remedy fails to result in a timely decision; if the university reaches a timely decision--even one in its own favor--the employee has no cause of action for damages. See Ch. 118, Civil Service, §§ 118.58, 118.147[2], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.12[1], 249.16[1], 249.22[5], 249.50[3].

Employee Noncompetition Agreements Generally Unenforceable. The California Supreme Court in Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937 has held that an employee's noncompetition agreement is invalid under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, even if narrowly drawn, unless it falls within one of the statutory exceptions provided by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16601, 16602, and 16602.5. See Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.12[1], 249.33, and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.21[1].

Public Entity Can Be Liable Under Gov. Code § 815.4 for Injury to Employee of Independent Contractor. In McCarty v. Department of Transportation (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 955 , the court of appeal held that Gov. Code § 815.4 can provide a statutory basis for imposing liability on a public entity hirer of an independent contractor based on retention of control over safety at the worksite when negligent exercise of that retained control affirmatively contributes to an injury to an employee of the independent contractor. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][b][iv].

42 U.S.C. § Prohibits Retaliation on Basis of Race. The United States Supreme Court has held that 42 U.S.C. § 1981 prohibits retaliation on the basis of race, including retaliation against a person for complaining about the violation of another person's rights under § 1981 [CBOCS W., Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 170 L. Ed. 2d 864]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.21[4], 115.22[2], 115.37[1][a], and Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, § 531.62.

have held that an employee suing under the Fair Employment and Housing Act need not exhaust the employer's internal remediation procedures if the procedures do not include a quasi-judicial hearing with sufficient due process to generate a legally binding result or if the internal procedures are provided by a collective bargaining agreement rather than a statute [Ahmadi-Kashani v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 449 ; Ortega v. Contra Costa Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1073]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1][a], [g].

Individual Employee Is Not Liable Under FEHA for Retaliation Against Fellow Employee. The California Supreme Court has held in Jones v. Lodge at Torrey Pines P'ship (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1158 that a nonemployer individual is not personally liable for his or her participation in retaliation prohibited by the Fair Employment and Housing Act. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.20[4][a], [b], [1][a]; Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[3][f].

California Family Rights Act Dispute Resolution Procedure Is Not Mandatory. The California Supreme Court, in Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cent. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201 , has held that the statutory procedure under California's Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act to determine whether an employee has a serious health condition entitling him or her to a medical leave of absence [see Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)] is not mandatory, and an employer's failure to use that procedure does not bar the employer from contending in subsequent litigation that the employee did not have a serious health condition that made him or her unable to perform the job. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][b].

Notice of Disciplinary Action Against Peace Officer Need Not Identify Specific Punishment. The California Supreme Court, in Mays v. City of Los Angeles (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 313 , has held that to satisfy the one-year limitation period for imposing discipline on a peace officer under the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act [see Gov. Code § 3304(d)], an employer's notice of disciplinary action need not identify the specific proposed punishment. Rather, the notice is sufficient if it states that the employing agency, having completed its investigation into the alleged misconduct within the statutory period, has decided that it may take disciplinary action against the officer for specified misconduct. See Ch. 118, Civil Service, § 118.72.

Employer Not Required to Accommodate Employee's Medical Use of Marijuana. The California Supreme Court has held in Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920 that the Compassionate Use Act of 1996 (Proposition 215) does not require an employer to accommodate an employee's medical use of marijuana by waiving the employer's policy requiring negative drug tests for employees. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.35[1][a], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12[3][b][i].

National Bank's Power to Terminate Employees "At Pleasure" Applies Only to Bona Fide Officers. In Ramanathan v. Bank of America (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1017 , the court has held that the federal statute provision authorizing a national bank to discharge its officers "at pleasure" [12 U.S.C. § 24 P 5] applies only if the terminated employee meets all of the elements of the definition of "officer" articulated by the California Supreme Court in Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082 . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.20[2][f], and Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.21[6], 249.69[2].

Firefighters Procedural Bill of Rights Act. To provide firefighters with procedural protections similar to those afforded public safety officers, the Legislature has enacted the Firefighters Procedural Bill of Rights Act. See Gov. Code § 3250 et seq., now covered in Ch. 118, Civil Service, §§ 118.90 -118.94.

Employer May Reimburse Employees for Business Expenses by Paying Enhanced Compensation. The California Supreme Court has held that an employer may satisfy its statutory obligation to reimburse employees for business expenses by paying employees enhanced compensation in the form of increases in base salary or commissions, provided that (1) the amount paid is sufficient to provide full reimbursement for actual expenses necessarily incurred, and (2) the employer provides a method or formula to identify what part of the combined compensation is intended to provide expense reimbursement. See Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554 , now covered in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.21.

§ 1.162A Equity

Equitable and Promissory Estoppel. This chapter is updated with a new analysis of equitable and promissory estoppel, including the elements for each claim and the effect of estoppel on government entities. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.94.

Terminating Sanction as Equitable Defense. This chapter is updated with a new analysis of a terminating sanction as an equitable defense. The decision whether to exercise the inherent power to dismiss as an equitable defense to plaintiff's misconduct requires consideration of all relevant circumstances, including the nature of the misconduct, the strong preference for adjudicating claims on the merits, the integrity of the court as an institution of justice, the effect of the misconduct on a fair resolution of the case, and the availability of other sanctions to cure the harm [Stephen Slesinger, Inc. v. The Walt Disney Co. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 736, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268]. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.153.

No Jury Trial for Legal Defense to Equitable Action. Given that the right to trial pertains to an action at law, there is no right to trial by jury on an affirmative defense at law to an equitable action that can be tried separately and first, because the defense does not constitute an action [DiPirro v. Bondo Corporation (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 150, 186, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 722 (affirmative defense of warning exemption under Health & Saf. Code § 25249.10(c) not subject to jury trial of right)]. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.162C

§ 1.162C Federal Courts

Diversity Jurisdiction. The amount-in-controversy requirement for diversity jurisdiction excludes only "interest and costs" and therefore includes attorneys' fees as well as any other sums that would be paid to a party as a result of judgment [Guglielmino v. McKee Foods Corp. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 696, 700-701]. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 265.15[1].

Prudential Standing Doctrine. When a plaintiff states an overbreadth claim under the First Amendment, the court suspends the prudential standing doctrine because of the special nature of the risk to expressive rights. While the prudential standing doctrine typically prevents the court from hearing lawsuits on the basis of injuries to non-parties, the overbreadth doctrine operates as a narrow exception permitting the lawsuit to proceed on the basis of a judicial prediction or assumption that the statute's very existence may cause others not before the court to refrain from constitutionally protected speech or expression [Get Outdoors II, LLC v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 886, 891]. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 265.16[2].

Removal. Where a plaintiff moves to remand and it is unclear or ambiguous from the face of a state-court complaint whether the requisite amount in controversy is pled, the removing defendant bears the burden of establishing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional amount. Under this burden, the defendant must provide evidence establishing that it is more likely than not that the amount in controversy exceeds that amount [Guglielmino v. McKee Foods Corp. (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 696, 701]. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts, § 265.40[2].

§ 1.163 Guardianships and Conservatorships

Conservators, Guardians, and Trustees--Important New Licensing Requirements for Professional Fiduciaries. This release incorporates detailed discussion of the new Professional Fiduciaries Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.], which imposes new licensing requirements on all persons coming within the statutory definition of professional fiduciaries [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f)]. As of July 1, 2008, courts cannot appoint a professional fiduciary in a guardianship or conservatorship matter unless the fiduciary is licensed under the Act, and all professional fiduciaries must be licensed under the Act by January 1, 2009, in order to act in that capacity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530(a), Prob. Code §§ 60.1, 2340]. For detailed discussion of the Act, see Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators, § 281.66, and Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.74. Conforming references have been made throughout the guardianship, conservatorship, and trust materials. In addition, an allegation for removal of a guardian or conservator for failure to comply with the Act's registration requirements has been added. See Ch. 290G, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Removal or Resignation of Guardians and Conservators, § 290G.37A.

Certification to Qualify as Appointed Counsel. Every attorney appointed or eligible for appointment by a court under Prob. Code §§ 1470 and 1471 now must certify that he or she is qualified before becoming eligible for an appointment; and, beginning January 1, 2009, each appointed counsel must certify to the court before the end of March of each year that he or she has completed the continuing education required for the preceding calendar year [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 7.1101]. The Judicial Council has issued a new mandatory form for this certification, Form GC-010, which is now illustrated in Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.118. For discussion of the new form, Prob. Code §§ 1470 and 1471, and the relevant Rules of Court, see Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.118, and Ch. 281, Guardianships and Conservatorships: Appointment of Conservators, § 281.32[5].

Conservatorships and Guardianships--New and Revised Judicial Council Forms; Revised Accounting Requirements. Prob. Code § 2620(a) requires that as of January 1, 2008, all accounts must be submitted on Judicial Council forms [Prob. Code § 2620(a); see Prob. Code §§ 1060-1064]. The California Judicial Council, implementing Prob. Code § 2620(a) has promulgated a series of mandatory and optional forms for accounts. If specified criteria are met, an option now exists to file a simplified account instead of a standard account [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 7.575]. All accounts must use the new standard Judicial Council Summary of Account form [Cal. Judicial Council Form

GC-400(SUM)/GC-405(SUM); see Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts, § 290E.71A], and simplified accounts also must use the Judicial Council schedules for receipts and disbursements [Cal. Judicial Council Forms GC-405(A) and GC-405(C), see Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts, § 290E.71B]. For standard accounts, the Judicial Council has promulgated an extensive series of optional forms for the schedules that must be used to report types of charges and credits [see Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts, § 290E.71C]. For more detailed discussion of the use of the summary and schedules, see discussion in Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts, §§ 290E.31, 20.32. New Judicial Council form GC-42, Notice of Filing of Inventory and Appraisal and How to Object to the Inventory or the Appraised Value of Property, has been added to Ch. 286, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Inventory and Appraisal, § 286.45A. Other revised Judicial Council forms have also been incorporated into Ch. 280 through Ch. 285 in the guardianship and conservatorship materials in this publication.

§ 1.164 Homesteads

Homestead Exemption When Separated or Former Spouse Resides in Homestead. Effective January 1, 2008, the Legislature has amended Code Civ. Proc. § 704.720 to provide that if a judgment debtor is not currently residing in the homestead, but his or her separated or former spouse continues to reside in or exercise control over possession of the homestead, the judgment debtor continues to be entitled to an exemption until entry of judgment or other legally enforceable agreement dividing the community property between the judgment debtor and the separated or former spouse, or until a later time period as specified by court order. However, the judgment debtor is not entitled to more than one exempt homestead. See Ch. 294, Homesteads .

§ 1.164A Injunctions

Standard of Reviewing Injunction. In Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1166, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 , the court of appeal held that to the extent review of an injunction depends on its constitutionality, the court of appeals independently reviews whether the trial court correctly interpreted and applied the applicable constitutional principles; facts relevant to the constitutional analysis are reviewed de novo, independent of the trial court's findings. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.86[2].

Severity of Harm. The likelihood of a plaintiff's ultimate success on the merits affects the showing necessary to a balancing-of-hardships analysis. That is, the more likely it is that the plaintiff will ultimately prevail, the less severe must be the harm that they allege will occur if the injunction does not issue. It is the mix of these factors that guides the trial court in its exercise of discretion [Right Site Coalition v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 336, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 678]. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.104[15][f].

Indemnitor's Duty to Defend Indemnitee Not Contingent on Whether Indemnity Is Owed. In Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg. Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541 , the California Supreme Court held that unless an indemnity agreement provides otherwise, Civ. Code § 2778(4) effectively places in every indemnity contract a duty on the part of the indemnitor to assume the indemnitee's defense, if tendered, against all claims embraced by the indemnity agreement, and this duty arises immediately upon a proper tender of defense by the indemnitee and does not first require a determination of whether indemnity is actually owed. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.36.

Judgment Based on Appraisal in Insurance Case Must Conform to Appraisal Award. The court of appeal in Devonwood Condominium Owners Assn. v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1498 , held that a judgment that is not in conformity with the appraisal award made pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071, on which it is based, violates Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.151[2].

Arbitrability of Uninsured Motorist Claim. In Bouton v. USAA Casualty Ins. Co. (2008), 43 Cal. 4th 1190 , the California Supreme Court held that Ins. Code § 11580.2(f) requires arbitration of whether a default judgment obtained against the underinsured tortfeasor by the insured is binding on the insurer; but does not require arbitration of whether a claimant is an insured under a particular policy. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][c], [e].

Settlement Credit Applied After Offset for Damage Awards to Both Plaintiff and Nonsettling Defendant. In Brawley v. J.C. Interiors, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1126 , the court of appeal held that, after a plaintiff's settlement with some defendants, when a nonsettling defendant countersued the plaintiff and both parties were found liable and awarded damages to each other for breach of contract, the proper procedure is for the court to offset the jury's damage awards against each other, just as if there had been no settlement, and then to apply the settlement credit toward any amount that the nonsettling defendant might still owe. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][a].

Statute of Limitations in Criminal Defense Attorney Malpractice Action Runs Despite Lack of Postconviction Relief; Proposition 51 Applicable to Legal Malpractice Action Seeking Primarily Noneconomic Damages. In Ovando v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 42 , the court of appeal in an attorney malpractice action brought against a criminal defense attorney held that the lack of postconviction relief for the criminal defendant does not stay the running of the statute of limitations. In addition, the court held that Proposition 51, as codified in Civ. Code § 1431.2, can be applied to an action that seeks primarily noneconomic damages, such as damages for emotional distress caused when a criminal defense attorney's malpractice resulted in his client's criminal conviction. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.10[2], 76.70, 76.92[1]; Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][d].

Liability for Noneconomic Damages May Be Reduced by Fault of Subsequent Negligent Health Care Provider. In Henry v. Superior Court (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 440 , the court of appeal held that a defendant being sued for a personal injury under a theory of premises liability must be allowed to introduce evidence of subsequent negligence by a treating doctor that allegedly exacerbated the injury, in order to limit the defendant's liability for noneconomic damages to that percentage caused by the fault of the premises owner. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][d].

Insurer's Denial of Underinsured Motorist Benefits Based Upon Insufficient Investigation of Insured's Alleged Injuries Raises Triable Issue of Fact With Regard to Bad Faith Claim. In Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 713, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 13314 , a first-party insurance bad faith case, the California Supreme Court reversed summary judgment in favor of an insurer that failed to pay underinsured motorist benefits to its insured, because it failed to investigate properly the insured's claim of injuries resulting from an automobile accident, and it asserted without supporting evidence that the insured's condition consisted of "soft tissue" injuries related to a preexisting condition. See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.25[1]; Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[1].

Bad Faith Brandt Fees Are Recoverable on Appeal. In Baron v. Fire Ins. Exchange (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1184 , the Court of Appeal held that Brandt attorneys' fees incurred in responding to an appeal brought by the insurer in a bad faith action are recoverable, just as attorneys' fees the insurer incurs in bringing the action at the trial court level are recoverable. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[6].

First Degree Murder Conviction Meets Burden of Proof Under Prob. Code § 254(b). In Principal Life Ins. Co. v. Peterson (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 676 , an appellate court held that the burden of proof under Prob. Code § 254(b) that a life insurance beneficiary feloniously and intentionally killed the decedent is met by evidence of a criminal conviction for the decedent's first-degree murder although the conviction is on appeal, when there is no rebuttal evidence that the beneficiary did not commit that act. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.45.

Damage Allocation When Determining Good Faith of Settlement May Be Altered Upon Proof at Trial. In El Escorial Owners' Assn. v. DLC Plastering, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1337 , the court of appeal held that in a complex multiparty case, a trial court may make an initial allocation between types of damages when making the determination that a pre-trial settlement is made in good faith, although if the evidence produced at trial against non-settling defendants shows that the defendants should not be held liable for one claimed category of damage, settlement amounts initially allocated to compensate for that type of damage may be allocated by the trial court to other categories of damage. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][c].

Damages Offset for Settlement Requires Actual Payment to Plaintiff of Settlement Amounts. In Garcia v. Duro Dyne Corp. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 92 , the court of appeal held that when calculating the amount of a damages offset at trial when some defendants have entered into pre-trial settlements, an offset credit may be applied only for settlement money actually paid to plaintiff by settling defendants and should not be applied for settlement amounts plaintiff has not yet received and may never receive. However, under those circumstances, the trial court should reserve jurisdiction to calculate and award offsets in the event that plaintiff is paid additional settlement amounts in the future. The court of appeal also held that an offset credit may be applied for waiver of litigation costs by settling defendants even if it is undisputed that those settling defendants would have prevailed had they proceeded to trial. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][a], [b].

§ 1.165A Intellectual Property

Trademarks--Action Under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1) Based on Unfair Competition. The Ninth Circuit, in Fisher Tool Co. v. Gillet Outillage (9th Cir. 2008) 530 F.3d 1063 has adopted the Federal Circuit's position in holding that in a complaint under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1) based on the defendant's representation that someone (such as the plaintiff) infringed the defendant's patent, the plaintiff must show, in addition to the circumstances contemplated by the statute, that the defendant's representation was made in bad faith. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.26[1][a].

Copyright Infringement--Displaying Images on Websites. The Ninth Circuit, for the first time, has addressed the question of when a computer "displays" a copyrighted work, specifically a photograph, for purposes of 17 U.S.C. § 106, which provides that a copyright owner has the exclusive right "to display the copyrighted work publicly." The court accepted the validity of a so-called server test, which the trial court devised, to determine whose computer "displays" a photograph (thus to identify who, if anyone, is chargeable with infringement) when a person using Internet browser software on the person's own computer makes the photograph viewable on that computer by means of a connection, over the Internet, to another computer [Perfect 10, Inc. v. Amazon.com, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 508 F.3d 1146] . See Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.27[4][d].

Trademarks--Enactment of Model State Trademark Law. The Legislature repealed the California Trademark Law [former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 14200-14342] in 2007 and enacted in its place the Model State Trademark Law, which is based on a model act proposed by the International Trademark Association. This enactment brings California law into alignment with the laws of 30 other states that have enacted a version of that model act. The new law preserves unique features of California's trademark law while providing a system of state trademark registration and protection that is substantially consistent with the federal system of trademark registration and protection. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names , which has been extensively revised to incorporate the provisions of the new law.

Insufficient Contacts Not Defense on Renewal of Judgment. In Goldman v. Simpson (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 255, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 , the court of appeal held that the defense of insufficient contacts with California to confer personal jurisdiction at the time of renewal of a judgment is unavailable under the statutory renewal of judgment procedure as long as there was personal jurisdiction at the time of the judgment. The court has continuing jurisdiction, derived from its jurisdiction at the time of the original judgment, to enter the renewal. See Ch. 318, Judgments .

No Mandatory Relief for Attorney's Failure to File Opposition to Motion to Enforce Settlement and Own Motion to Enforce. In Hossain v. Hossain (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 454 , a dispute over the termination of a partnership for the operation of a hotel, the trial court properly denied plaintiff relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) based on his attorney's failure to file timely opposition to the defendant's motion to enforce a settlement agreement, and the plaintiff's tardiness in filing his own motion to enforce, which the trial court declined to consider. The attorney fault provision in Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) did not apply to the attorney's failure to timely file opposition and a cross-motion to motion to enforce the settlement. See Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

Uniform Foreign Money Judgments Recognition Act Replaced. Effective January 1, 2008, and applicable to all actions filed on or after January 1, 2008, in which the issue of recognition of a foreign country judgment is raised, the Uniform Foreign Money Judgments Recognition Act has been replaced by the Uniform Foreign-Country Money Judgments Recognition Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1713 et seq.]. The Uniform Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act continues to apply to actions filed before January 1, 2008, in which the issue of recognition of a foreign-country judgment is raised. § 1.166A Juvenile Law

Referee Findings. Some decisions have suggested the referee's findings and orders become null and void on the granting of a rehearing, but the better rule is that they are entitled to full force and effect until the matter is actually reheard [Ricardo V. v. Superior Court (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 419, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223]. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procdures .

Records and Copies of Court Juvenile Files. Prior to January 1, 2008, the language of the statute authorizing juvenile case files to be "inspected" by certain persons did not include that such documents could be "copied" [In re Gina S. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1082-1084, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 , citing Opinion No. 02-103, 85 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 194 (Sept. 10, 2002)]. Effective January 1, 2008, however, some of the persons entitled to inspect juvenile case files under Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(1) may also receive copies of the documents [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(5)]. Also effective January 1, 2008, it is clear that when considering a request for records concerning a deceased child, "no weighing or balancing of the interests of those other than a child is permitted" [Welf. & Inst. Code § 827(a)(2)(C)]. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction and General Procdures .

Guardian Ad Litem for Minor Parent. This chapter is updated with a review of case authority on the issue of whether the juvenile dependency court must automatically appoint a guardian ad litem for a parent who is a minor, with recommendations for more effective procedures. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

Relative Guardianship Versus Adoption. Effective January 1, 2008, a relative caregiver's preference for legal guardianship over adoption shall not constitute the sole basis for recommending removal of the child from the relative caregiver for purposes of adoptive placement, if the preference is due to circumstances that do not include an unwillingness to accept legal or financial responsibility for the child [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(g)(2)(A)]. Moreover, a relative caregiver is to be given information regarding the alternative permanency options of guardianship and adoption, including the long-term benefits and consequences of each option, prior to establishing legal guardianship or pursuing adoption [Welf. & Inst. Code § 361.5(g)(2)(B)]. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

Revised Writ Analysis. This chapter is updated with a revised analysis of writ practice for dependency actions, including writs in general, writs of supersedeas, writs of mandamus, writs of prohibition, and writs of habeas corpus.

See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings .

Court Security for Delinquency Proceedings. This chapter is updated with a new analysis on court security and that unwarranted shackling of juveniles at jurisdictional hearings apply the same standard used for adult defendants in preliminary hearings, specifically that some showing of necessity is required and the finding stated on the record [In re DeShaun M. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 1387, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 627]. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

Continuing Conduct and Conspiracies Committed Before and After the Age of 18. A hearing pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 604(a) is not required when criminal conduct is committed before an individual reaches the age of 18 and continues after they become an adult. When a jury can find that a defendant continues to participate in a criminal conspiracy or criminal conduct after his or her 18th birthday, the trial court may deny a motion to suspend the proceedings and conduct an examination for the purpose of certification to Juvenile Court [People v. Quiroz (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1420, 1427-1431, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 767]. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

Mental Incompetence v. Developmental Incompetence. Under Penal Code § 1367, an adult's incompetence to stand trial arises from a mental disorder or developmental disability that limits his or her ability to understand the nature of the proceedings and to assist counsel [Penal Code § 1367(a)]. Recent case law suggests that this is not the sole standard to be applied in delinquency cases and, in fact, prior case law requires that the court make an inquiry to determine developmental disability, including a minor's age, to assess cognitive, psychological, social, and moral development [Timothy J. v. Superior Court and Dante H. v. Superior Court (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 847, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 746]. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

Education and Mental Health. This chapter is updated with a new section on education and mental health and the interpretation of the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and the comparable state statutes. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings .

Rptr. 3d 456* , the court of appeal held that although writ review of discovery rulings is generally disfavored, interlocutory review by writ is the only adequate remedy when a court compels the disclosure of documents or information that may be subject to a privilege, because once privileged matter has been disclosed there is no way to undo the harm that consists in the very disclosure. § 1.167A Partnerships

Partnerships--Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008. This release contains a major revision of the publication's partnership coverage that adds detailed coverage of the California Uniform Limited Partnership Act of 2008 [Corp. Code §§ 15900-15912.07]. The new Act governs all California limited partnerships formed after 2007. After 2009, it will govern all California limited partnerships, except that a few provisions will not apply to pre-2008 partnerships unless specifically elected [Cal. Corp. Code § 15912.06]. It also governs foreign limited partnerships transacting intrastate business in California [Cal. Corp. Code § 15909.0108]. The 2008 Act is a major revision of limited partnership law that is designed, among other purposes, to be a stand-alone law that does not rely on California's General Partnership Act or other sources for its provisions. Ch. 404, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners and Partnerships, and Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties, are completely revised and replaced, as well as significant portions of Ch. 400, Partnerships: Governing Statutes, and Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution. As revised, the foregoing chapters now cover both the 2008 law and the former law, since the former law will have continuing application in pending actions for a number of years to come. Conforming changes are being made to numerous other chapters throughout the publication as well.

§ 1.167B Physicians and Other Medical Personnel

Specific Jury Finding of No Consent Required When Using Special Verdict Form in Medical Battery Action. In Saxena v. Goffney (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 316 , the court of appeal held that because performing a medical procedure without informed consent is not the same thing as performing that procedure with no consent at all, and the latter forms the basis for an action for battery, a party seeking to hold a physician liable for battery must obtain a specific jury finding that no consent was given if a special verdict form is used at trial. A finding that no informed consent was given is insufficient, as such a finding does not preclude the conclusion that uninformed consent was given. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.20.

No Wrongful Life Liability for Failing to Advise on Abortion When No Warning of Possible Birth Defects Existed. In Barragan v. Lopez (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 997 , the court of appeal held that liability cannot be imposed for wrongful life just because the physician fails to advise the mother of the right to terminate a pregnancy, if the physician provides proper care and testing and, up to the time at which the fetus is considered viable, nothing indicates that the fetus is in danger of being born with a birth defect. See Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions, § 367A.11[3][c].

Doctor's Communications With Patient's Insurer Covered by Arbitration Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295. In Titolo v. Cano (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 310 , the court of appeal held that a doctor's communications with a patient's insurer about the patient's medical records, done at the request of the patient, comes within the provision of medical services for purposes of the arbitration provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295, and disputes about the propriety and scope of the communications are covered by an arbitration agreement meeting the requirements of that statute. § 1.167C Privacy

Statutory Immunity Precluded Constitutional Invasion of Privacy Action. In Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (SIPE) (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 176 , the court of appeal did not need to resolve whether plaintiff stated a cause of action under the California constitutional right of privacy for damages based on a workers' compensation investigation into her private life, because the alleged conduct was within the scope of the immunity provided by Gov. Code § 821.6, and the constitutional right to privacy did not limit the scope of a preexisting statutory immunity. See Ch. 429, Privacy .

Government Tort Immunities Applicable to Privacy Action Based on California Constitution. In Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (SIPE) (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056 , the court of appeal held that although the constitutional right to privacy was designed to protect against some forms of governmental intrusion, this right to privacy does not limit the scope of statutory immunities that existed under the California Tort Claims Act when the right to privacy was added in 1972. The court specifically held that Gov. Code § 821.6, which immunizes a governmental employee for injury caused by instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his or her employment, regardless of malice or lack of probable cause, extends to investigatory activities and may be used to defeat a claim for damages for violation of the constitutional right to privacy. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[20].

§ 1.167D Probate

Conservators, Guardians, and Trustees--Important New Licensing Requirements for Professional Fiduciaries. This release incorporates detailed discussion of the new Professional Fiduciaries Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6500 et seq.], which imposes new licensing requirements on all persons coming within the statutory definition of professional fiduciaries [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6501(f)]. As of July 1, 2008, courts cannot appoint a professional fiduciary in a guardianship or conservatorship matter unless the fiduciary is licensed under the Act, and all professional fiduciaries must be licensed under the Act by January 1, 2009, in order to act in that capacity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6530(a), Prob. Code §§ 60.1, 2340]. For detailed discussion of the Act, see Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators, § 281.66, and Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.74. Conforming references have been made throughout the guardianship, conservatorship, and trust materials. In addition, an allegation for removal of a guardian or conservator for failure to comply with the Act's registration requirements has been added. See Ch. 290G, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Removal or Resignation of Guardians and Conservators, § 290G.37A.

Wills & Trusts--No-Contest Provision Was Not Incorporated Into Decree of Distribution. In Meyer v. Meyer (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 983, 998 , a Prob. Code § 21320 proceeding seeking a declaration that a proposed action against a trustee would not amount to a will contest, the court held that the no-contest clause, which contained no reference to the testamentary trust, was not incorporated by reference into the trust provisions of the decree of distribution. The court noted that Prob. Code § 21304 requires that a no-contest clause be strictly construed and even though the decrees of distribution contained some language in the recitals that referred to the will, the clear statement in the distributing clause that the trust was completely set forth in the decree established that no trust provisions were omitted and that there was no room to supplement trust provisions by incorporating provisions contained in the will. Furthermore, the no-contest clause in the will did not refer to contests regarding the trust. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, §§ 444.14, 444.33[9], and Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.362[2].

Wills and Trusts--Beneficiary Whose Will Contest Triggered No-Contest Clause Also Lacked Standing to Contest Trust. In Montegani v. Johnson (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1231, 1239 , the trial court acted properly after an appellate decision that a settlor's daughter had triggered the no-contest clause contained in an irrevocable trust when it reconsidered on its own motion a grant of Prob. Code §§ 21320 relief and held that the daughter lacked standing because she was no longer a beneficiary, and since the irrevocable trust contained the same no-contest language as a revocable trust, the trial court did not err in ruling that the daughter lacked standing as to both trusts. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.33[9], and Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.362[2].

Wills--Former Wife Not Entitled to Inherit. In Estate of McDaniel (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 458, 463 , a decedent's former wife was not entitled to inherit from decedent's estate inasmuch as she was a party to a valid dissolution proceeding that concluded in an order terminating all marital property rights; therefore, she was not a "surviving spouse" under Prob. Code §§ 78(d) at the time of decedent's death. See Ch. 458, Probate: Determination of Heirship, § 458.42[1][m], and Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation, §§ 458D.72[2][c], 458D.155[4][e].

Trusts--Settlor Could Petition for Reformation of Irrevocable Trust. In Bilafer v. Bilafer (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 363, 370 , the settlor of two irrevocable trusts had standing to petition for reformation under the court's common law equitable power, even though he was not a beneficiary and did not have a pecuniary interest, on the grounds that drafting errors defeated his dispositive intent. The court reasoned that had the trusts not been reformed, the trustor would have suffered a real and substantial injury because his estate would pass to his children and grandchildren in a manner contrary to his wishes. See Ch. 560, Trusts, §§ 560.113[2], 560.401.

Wills & Trusts--Law Firm Barred From Fee Recovery Against Estate Could Make Quantum Meruit Claim Against Client for Services Rendered to Client Personally. In Miller v. Campbell (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1331 , the court held that a law firm was not barred by a final probate judgment finding disputed fees were not expenses of the estate from making quantum meruit claim to recover fees for services rendered to a client personally and not as the executor of the estate. The firm's evidence was sufficient to raise a factual question as to whether the firm reasonably expected to be paid by the client personally. See Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation, § 458D.155[2][c].

New Probate Petition Form. The Judicial Council has issued a new version of Form DE-111, Petition for Probate, effective March 1, 2008. For an illustration of the new form, and revised commentary, see Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.140.

Decedent's Estates--Filing Fees. Gov. Code § 70650 has been amended to require the full uniform filing fee for a petition for letters in a decedent's estate or the first account of a trustee to be determined on the final appraisal value of the estate without reference to encumbrances or other obligations on estate property, or the value of the trust shown in the first account. The petitioner for letters must pay $320 at the time of filing the petition. In a decedent's estate, the balance of the uniform fee, if any, must be paid by the general personal representative no later than the date the general personal representative files its final account or report and petition for settlement or for final distribution. The filing fee for a trust must be paid when the first account is filed. See Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration .

Wills and Trusts--No-Contest Clauses. In Betts v. City Nat'l Bank (2007) 156 Cal App 4th 222 , the court held that beneficiary's filing of a second proposed petition did not violate a trust's no-contest clause because it sought to impose liability on the trustees for alleged breach of fiduciary duty for improper disbursements and did not seek an accounting nor seek to void, nullify, or set aside the portion of the trust limiting liability of successor trustees, and that the doctrine of conclusiveness of pleadings applies to filed pleadings but has no application to pleadings proposed to be filed under Prob. Code § 21320. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, §§ 444.14.

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART V. 2008 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.168 Public Administration

Delegation--Separation of Powers Academic Decisions. This chapter is updated with Coastside Fishing Club v. California Resources Agency (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1203-1205, 1211, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 87 , which holds that provisions of the Marine Life Protection Act [Fish & Game Code §§ 2853, 2855, 2856, 2857] that authorized the Department of Fish & Game and other state agencies to enter into a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with a private foundation (the Resources Legacy Fund Foundation) to obtain private funds to cover the costs of implementing the provisions of the MLPA by the Department did not improperly delegate legislative powers to an executive branch agency in violation of the doctrine of separation of powers. This is because the statute provided adequate safeguards so that the agency was not making fundamental policy choices but was rather carrying out the legislative policy choices provided by the statute (MLPA). See Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law, § 470.12 [6][a].

Rulemaking Procedures--Rulemaking Review. This chapter is updated with California Forestry Association v. California Fish & Game Commission (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1535, 1554-1555, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 391 , which holds that regulations that listed endangered species of Coho salmon satisfied the non-duplication standard of the California APA because the focus of the regulation was narrower in protecting species from extinction in California, and thus the regulation did not duplicate parallel regulations issued under federal statutes (FESA). The case also holds that the regulation that listed endangered species of Coho salmon satisfied the necessity standard of the California APA because the underlying statute (CESA) was not self-implementing. See Ch. 472A, Agency Rulemaking Procedures, § 472A.16 [3][b], [g].

Timing of Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with Schutte & Koerting, Inc. v. Regional Water Quality Control Board, San Diego Region (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1385-1387, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54 , which holds that a party challenging the order of a regional water quality control board is not required to request a hearing before that regional board under Water Code § 13330 (b) so long as that party petitions the state water quality control board for review under the provisions of Water Code § 13320(a). See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.11 [2][b].

Driver's License Suspension. I n Cinquegrani v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 741, 750 , the court of appeal held that a driver's license cannot be suspended without due process of law. Once a license issues, an administrative decision to suspend or revoke it affects a fundamental right. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.12[3].

Social Services. In In re Darlene T. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 929, 939, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 841 , the court of appeal held that an applicant for or recipient of public social services who has filed a request for a state hearing with the state department that administers the service must be accorded an opportunity for that hearing. See Ch. 527, Social Services, § 527.11.

Due Process--Academic Decisions. This chapter is updated with Lachtman v. Regents of the University of California (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 187 , which holds that a graduate student in the department of history at the University of California at Irvine was not denied due process of law when he was denied advancement into the department's Ph.D. program and graduated with a master's degree. The department provided sufficient due process procedures because it informed the student that there were deficiencies with the student's academic performance, it explained to the student the consequences of deficient academic performance, and it made a careful and deliberate decision regarding the student's academic progress. The student did not have a right to a formal hearing to challenge the denial of advancement. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.32[1].

Public Records--Peace Officers. This chapter is updated with Chambers v. Appellate Division of the Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 673 , which holds that derivative information developed as a result of disclosures under a Pitchess motion procedure can be disclosed and used only in the proceeding in which the disclosure is ordered. Otherwise, the protective order authorized under Evid. Code § 1045(e) prohibits disclosure of that information in any other judicial proceeding. Thus, if counsel obtains complainant information in one case through the granting of a Pitchess motion, that leads to the discovery of derivative information (information other than the name, address, and telephone number of a complaining party, and other witnesses identity), that derivative information may only be used in that judicial proceeding and it subject to a protective order. However, if the same lawyer files a Pitchess motion in another case representing another party, and that lawyer obtains the same complainant information as in the prior motion, they are permitted to use the same derivative information in the new proceeding and that does not violate the protective order rules. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Public Records--Judges. This chapter is updated with Commission on Judicial Performance v. Superior Court (2007) 156 Cal. App.4th 617 , which holds that confidential records maintained by the Commission on Judicial Performance related to complaints against judges are official records that are protected by the official records privilege under Evid. Code § 1040. These records can not be disclosed using the Pitchess motion procedure, and an in camera review of these judicial records is improper. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Adjudication--Equitable Estoppel. This chapter is updated with Cotta v. City and County of San Francisco (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1550 , which holds that equitable estoppel cannot be applied against a city and county and its airport commission that had reduced incentives to taxicab drivers operating clean-air taxicabs serving San Francisco Airport. The court of appeal rejected the estoppel defense because the taxicab drivers could not have reasonably relied upon the city incentives resolution as binding the city to make no further changes in the incentives contained in the resolution. The drivers sued the city for breach of contract when incentives for CNG cabs were reduced by action of the city and county. The drivers argued that equitable estoppel should be applied to estop the city from denying liability for breach of contract. The court of appeal rejected the defense because of a lack of reasonable reliance by the drivers, and because the court did not want to limit the city's exercise of the police power through the recognition of equitable estoppel. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.54[1][b].

Adjudication--Equitable Estoppel. This chapter is updated with Holland v. Union Pacific Railroad Company (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 940 , which holds that equitable estoppel can be applied to excuse the filing of an untimely administrative complaint before the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and to excuse the failure to exhaust administrative remedies by an employee who brought an employment discrimination action against an employer.

Equitable estoppel applied because the employee diligently pursued the administrative remedy and reasonably relied on the conduct of department officials that the limitations period was not something to be concerned about. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.54[1][b].

Adjudication--Attorneys Fees. This chapter is updated with Hogar v. Community Development Commission of the City of Escondido (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1358 , which affirmed an award of attorney's fees under the private attorney general statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5] against the Community Development Commission of the City of Escondido based upon the application of the catalyst theory adopted by the California Supreme Court in Graham v. Daimler Chrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553 to the challenger (Hogar). The court of appeal held that the challenger was a prevailing party under the private attorney general statute because the challenger's lawsuit was the catalyst for the commission to change its position and provide 20 percent of gross tax receipts to a low-cost housing fund. The court of appeal also held that the challenger was entitled to a fully compensatory lodestar fee even though the challenger did not prevail on all claims. The court rejected a negative lodestar reduction for partial success by the challenger because of substantial success, long-term impact, and related claims. The court of appeal also held that the challenger could recover attorney's fees for work done prior to the filing of the complaint, and for work done in prosecuting the motion for attorneys fees, but the court upheld the trial court's rejection of a multiplier to the lodestar (reasonable hours times a reasonable hourly rate) fee amount. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Adjudication--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Plumbers and Steamfitters, Local 290 v. Duncan (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1083 , which upholds an award of $55,010 in attorney's fees under the private attorney general statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5] against the director of the Department of Industrial Relations brought by a union enforcing the prevailing wage law for public works projects. The court held that the department was an opposing party against whom an award of fees could be enforced because the department was responsible for making the policy decision that was the subject of the lawsuit. The court also upheld the award on statutory grounds, that the litigation enforced important rights affecting the public interest. This was because the department's policy decision that limited the scope of prevailing wage laws was designated as a precedential decision that would have been likely to impact other public works projects and other unions in the future. Finally, the court upheld the recovery of attorney's fees for charges incurred by the union for computerized legal research. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Adjudication--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Mejia v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 151 , which upholds an award of $50,000 in attorney's fees, split equally between the city of Los Angeles, and the project developer under the private attorney general statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5] to a challenger based upon a successful challenge to the environmental review process under the California Environmental Quality Act undertaken by the city in approving a residential development project. The court upheld a $25,000 award against the developer and concluded that the developer was an opposing party under the statute against whom attorney's fees could be awarded, even though the city was responsible for the approval and review decisions. The court also held that the challenger satisfied the requirements for a statutory private attorney general award in that the financial burden of the litigation was out of proportion to the personal stake of the plaintiff challenger who was a real property owner and resident next to the proposed development. Finally, the court held that the fee award did not improperly infringe on the developer's first amendment right to petition the government for redress of grievances, including the right of access to the courts. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with Mokler v. County of Orange (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 121 , which holds that the exhaustion of administrative remedies defense was waived by the county in a retaliatory termination lawsuit brought by a former employee of the county because the county failed to assert the defense in the proceeding before the superior court. The court of appeal rejected the jurisdiction rationale, and held that exhaustion of administrative remedies is a judicially created rule of procedure that can be waived on appeal if not asserted before the superior court. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[1].

Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with Ortega v. Contra Costa Community College District (2007)156 Cal. App. 4th 1073 , which holds that a former employee of a community college district did not have to exhaust administrative remedies that included an internal grievance procedure before challenging his demotion and termination based on claims of discrimination under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA). Exhaustion was not required because the internal grievance procedures were established by collective bargaining agreement, not by statute, and arbitration, not judicial review by mandamus, was the enforcement and review mechanism. Also, the employee did not have to exhaust administrative remedies for his non-statutory claims. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[3][a].

Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with Porterville Citizens for Responsible Hillside Development v. City of Porterville (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 885 , which holds that a local citizens group that challenged the approval by a city of a subdivision development failed to exhaust administrative remedies as to issues related to CEQA violations under state CEQA guidelines, and also as to issues related to General Plan consistency. The citizens group did not raise these issues before the city council, and therefore the city council did not have an opportunity to consider these issues. Because they failed to raise these issues before the city council, the challengers could not raise these issues on judicial review. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[3][b].

Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with American Employers Group, Inc. v. Employment Development Department (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 836 , which holds that an employers' group that challenged an assessment for unemployment insurance contributions failed to exhaust administrative remedies because it failed to complete the administrative proceeding it started by filing the petition for reassessment. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[3][b].

Judicial Review--Substantial Evidence Test. This chapter is updated with Porterville Citizens for Responsible Hillside Development v. City of Porterville (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 885 , which holds that the substantial evidence fair argument test (that a project may have adverse environmental effects) was not satisfied in a mandamus proceeding challenging a mitigated negative declaration related to a subdivision development approved by a city council. This was because the record before the city council did not support the fair argument test, and extra-record evidence may not be considered by the courts to support the fair argument test. See Ch. 474B, Standards in Reviewing Agency Decisions, § 474B.16[5][a].

Judicial Review--Parties. This chapter is updated with TG Oceanside v. City of Oceanside (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1355 , which holds that a hearing officer who heard an administrative appeal that affirmed a denial of a rent increase was not an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 in an administrative mandate proceeding brought by a mobilehome park owner against a city and a city manufactured homes fair practices commission. The court reasoned that the hearing officer was an agent of the city and commission, the city and commission would defend the hearing officer's decision on judicial review, the commission could set aside the hearing officer's decision and require that a new hearing be held, and the ordinance does not require the hearing officer to be named as a respondent in the administrative mandate proceeding. See Ch. 474C, Reviewing Procedures, § 474C.13[2].

Certificate of Interested Entities of Persons. If a party files a motion, application, or opposition to a motion or application in the Court of Appeal before filing its principal brief, the party must serve and file its Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons at the time it files the first such motion, application, or opposition and must include a copy of this certificate in the party's principal brief. If no motion, application, or opposition to a motion or application is filed before the parties file their principal briefs, each party must include its certificate in its principal brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(d)(1)]. If the identity of any party has not been publicly disclosed in the proceedings, the party may serve and file an application for permission to file its certificate under seal separately from its principal brief, motion, application, or opposition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(d)(1)]. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses, § 18.70[7a]; Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.144[3a].

Federal Preemption. This chapter is updated with Viva! International Voice for Animals v. Adidas Promotional Retail Operations, Inc., (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 929, 935, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 50, 162 P.3d 569 , where the court holds the provisions of the Endangered Species Act (ESA) [16 U. S. C. § 1530 et seq.] do not preempt claims brought against shoe manufacturers under the California Unfair Competition Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et. seq.] for selling athletic shoes made from kangaroo hides in violation of the provisions of Penal Code § 308, prohibiting the importation into or sale within California of products made from kangaroo. See Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law, § 470.16[1][a].

Due Process--Property Interests. This chapter is updated with Savient Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. Department of Health Services (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 689 , which holds the drug formulary maintained by the Department of Health Services for the AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP) under the statutory authority of Health & Safety Code § 120955(a)(2) is a rule of general application that is within the APA definition of a regulation. Thus, the decision to partially delist the drug Oxandin from the drug formulary must comply with APA rulemaking procedure requirements. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.21[5].

Due Process--Notice. This chapter is updated with Valenzuela v. California State Personnel Board (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 529 , which holds a correction officer dismissed from his job by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation for failing a drug test did not receive adequate notice that a foreign prescription, a Mexican diet medication, legally obtained in Mexico, that he took could result in a positive drug test for amphetamines. Without that adequate notice, dismissal as a penalty for failing a drug test was an abuse of discretion, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the superior court vacating the decision of the State Personnel Board, upholding the termination. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.43[2].

Public Records--Peace Officers. This chapter is updated with Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 278, 287-289, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 661, 165 P.3d 462 , which holds information relating to California peace officers that is maintained in an electronic database by the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training was a "public record" within the meaning of the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code § 6252(e), (g)]. The Court also held that these records were not exempt from disclosure under Penal Code §§ 832.7, 832.8, peace officer personnel records, and that no other statutory exemption in the California Public Records Act applied to exempt disclosure of these records. The California Supreme Court rejected the argument that the records kept by the Commission were categorically exempt under Gov. Code § 6254(c) because the privacy and safety interest of the peace officers as a group did not outweigh the public interest in disclosure of the information. However, The California Supreme Court also held that the Commission could seek to justify exclusion from the disclosed records of information about specific officers because disclosure of that information would jeopardize the safety or efficacy of the peace officers. The exclusion would be based on a showing under the personnel and medical records exemption [Gov. Code § 6254(c)], and under the public interest exemption [Gov. Code § 6255]. The California Supreme Court remanded the case back to the superior court to allow the Commission to make such a showing. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, §§ 470C.11[1], 470C.13[6], 470C.14[9].

Public Records--Interagency Disclosure. This chapter is updated with Los Angeles Unified School District v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 759, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 445 , which holds the City of Long Beach, and its city attorney, were authorized to seek disclosure of public records held by another public agency, the Los Angeles Unified School District (LAUSD), relating to a school construction project undertaken by LAUSD. The Court of Appeal held that the city was a person within the meaning of the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code §§ 6252(c), 6253]. The Court of Appeal also held that the city attorney was a person within the meaning of the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code § 6252(c)] and as an elected official had the right to request these records under the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code § 6252.5]. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.11[3].

Public Records--Salaries. This chapter is updated with International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers, Local 21, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 319, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 165 P.3d 488 , which held salary information for specific public employees of the City of Oakland earning $100,000 or more per year was a disclosable "public record" within the meaning of the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code §§ 6252(d), 6253(a)]. The Court held that the salary information was not exempt form disclosure under the personnel and medical records exemption [Gov. Code § 6254(c)] because disclosure of this information did not constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, §§ 470C.13[4], 470C.14[9].

Investigations--Subpoenas. This chapter is updated with City of Santa Cruz v. Patel (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 234, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 824 , which upheld the enforcement of a subpoena duces tecum authorized by the City of Santa Cruz under the statutory authority of Gov. Code § 37104 for the purposes of conducting a tax compliance audit of a hotel operator's records to determine compliance with a city-imposed transient occupancy tax that must be collected from guests by the hotel and then remitted to the city. The court also held that the superior court orders compelling compliance with the subpoena duces tecum issued under the statutory authority of Gov. Code § 37104 are final judgments that are appealable under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1. See Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies, §§ 471.30[1], [4], 471.31[3], 471.32[2].

Adjudication--Hearings. This chapter is updated with Corrales v. Bradstreet (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 33, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 , which holds Lab. Code § 98 hearings conducted by the Labor commissioner are not subject to the provisions of Chapter 4.5 of the California Administrative Procedures Act because those hearings are discretionary and not required by Section 98. Chapter 4.5 applies to agency decisions in which a hearing is required by statute or constitutional provision, and it does not apply when a hearing is not required by statute [Gov. Code § 11410.10]. The court also held that an evidentiary hearing is not required by the constitution (due process of law) because an employer has the right to obtain a trial de novo in the superior court following an adverse decision from a Section 98 hearing. See Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, §§ 473.15[1][b], 473.27.

Adjudication--Ex Parte Communications. This chapter is updated with Rondon v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 1274, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295 , which holds the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control violated provisions of the California Administrative Procedures Act [Gov. Code § 11430.10] because the Department allowed its decision-makers to have access to prosecuting attorneys reports of hearings prior to the time the decision-maker decided whether or not to adopt the proposed decision of the administrative law judge. These hearing reports were not part of the administrative record in the case, and allowing the decision-maker access to the reports resulted in extra-record information being considered by the decision-maker, in violation of the administrative law principle that the agency record provides the exclusive basis for the decision. See Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, § 473.28[1].

Adjudication--Exclusionary Rule. This chapter is updated with Park v. Valverde (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 877, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895 , where the court refused to apply the exclusionary rule to exclude evidence that a driver was driving while intoxicated in a DMV administrative hearing. Any additional deterrent value (deterring police misconduct) of applying the rule to DMV proceedings was offset by the danger to both the motorist and the public from drunk driving, given the DMV's primary responsibility to protect the public from drunk drivers by getting those drivers off the roads. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.34[2][a].

Adjudication--Exclusionary Rule. This chapter is updated with Tennison v. California Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1164, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 , which holds collateral estoppel did not apply in a proceeding (application for compensation benefits) before the victim compensation and government claims board under Penal Code § 4900 to give preclusive effect to a determination of factual innocence made in a judicial proceeding under Penal Code § 851.8. Even though the issues were the same, and even though there was a privity relationship between the district attorney in the Penal Code § 851.8 proceeding, and the attorney general in the Penal Code § 4900 claims board proceedings, the factual innocence issue was not actually litigated in the Penal Code § 851.8 proceeding because there was a stipulation as to that issue. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.41[3].

Judicial Review--Equitable Excuse. This chapter is updated with Holland v. Union Pacific Railroad Company (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 940, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 145 , which holds that an employee's discrimination lawsuit against the employer was not barred by failure to exhaust administrative remedies because the court recognized that the employees' failure to file a timely complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing was equitably excused. Circumstance justifying equitable excuse included facts that the employee relied on the DFEH representative's assurances that he would meet the required deadline, the employee was diligent in pursuing the administrative complaint, the employee raised the timeliness issue with the DFEH, and he was only slightly late in filing the agency complaint. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions, § 474A.11[3][a].

Judicial Review--Substantial Evidence Test. This chapter is updated with Chrisman v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 29, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 701 , where the court reversed and remanded the denial of a petition for a writ of mandate brought by a police officer terminated by the Los Angeles Police Department for on the job misuse of police department computers. The officer sought reinstatement. The Court of Appeal concluded that it was an abuse of discretion (specifically, a misapprehension of the law) for the police department to base termination in part on misconduct of the police officer that occurred more than two years before the department filed an administrative complaint against the officer. The Court of Appeal remanded the matter to the police department to reconsider the appropriate punishment for misconduct within the two year time period. See Ch. 474B, Standards in Reviewing Agency Decisions, § 474B.16[4].

§ 1.169 Real Estate

Building Contracts--Subcontractor's Duty to Defend. The California Supreme Court held, in Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg. Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541 , that for contracts entered into before 2006, a provision in a subcontract setting forth the subcontractor's duty "to defend" the general contractor against claims "founded upon" damage or loss caused by the subcontractor's negligent performance of its work imposes a duty to defend on the subcontractor as soon as a suit is filed against the general contractor asserting such claims, regardless of whether it is ultimately determined that the subcontractor was actually negligent. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts, § 104.13.

State Housing Law--Appointment of Receiver. In City of Santa Monica v. Gonzalez (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 905 , the California Supreme Court addressed the requirements applicable to appointment of a receiver in cases of substandard housing. The Court upheld the trial court's approval of the receiver's application to demolish the substandard building at issue in that case, despite the owner's desire to have the building repaired. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.141.

Unlicensed Contractors. In Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845 , the court of appeal held that a claim brought under the Contractors' State License Law against an unlicensed contractor may form the basis for a right to attach order since an agreement for the performance of services lies at the heart of such a claim. See Ch. 62, Attachment, § 62.11[1].

Eminent Domain--Residential Property. In June 2008, Cal. Const., art. I, § 19 was amended through the initiative process [Proposition 99 (eff. June 4, 2008)] to expressly prohibit governmental agencies from using eminent domain to take an owner-occupied home to transfer it to another private owner or developer. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, § 247.12.

Nonjudicial Foreclosure--Foreclosure Prevention. In SB 1137 [Stats 2008, Ch. 69, effective July 8, 2008] the legislature declared its intent to ameliorate the deleterious effects on the state economy and local economies and the California housing market that will result from the continued foreclosures of residential properties in unprecedented numbers, by modifying the foreclosure process to require mortgagees, beneficiaries, or authorized agents to contact borrowers and explore options that could avoid foreclosure. The legislature declared that these changes in accessing the state's foreclosure process are essential to ensure that the process does not exacerbate the current crisis by adding more foreclosures to the glut of foreclosed properties already on the market when a foreclosure could have been avoided. See Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.51A.

Date of Valuation. On remand from the California Supreme Court, the court of appeal in San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Board v. RV Communities (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 313 , a "quick take" eminent domain proceeding, reaffirmed that the trial court did not err in changing the date of valuation of the condemned property from the date of deposit of probable compensation to the date of trial, because it was undisputed that the deposit was substantially less than the probable amount of just compensation under Cal. Const., art. I, § 19. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain and Inverse Condemnation, § 247.137[7].

Inverse Condemnation Damages. In San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Board v. RV Communities (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 313 , the court of appeal clarified that inverse condemnation damages may be sought by cross-complaint in an eminent domain proceeding, and are not required to be claimed in the answer to the eminent domain complaint. See Ch. 247, Eminent Domain and Inverse Condemnation, § 247.197[3], [4].

Real Property Transfer Disclosures--Private Transfer-Fee Requirement. If property being transferred after 2007 is subject to a private transfer fee, the transferor must provide, at the time the transfer disclosure statement required pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6 is provided, an additional disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1102.6e]. In addition, the recipient of any such fee imposed before 2008, or the person or entity imposing any such fee after 2007, must record a document in which pertinent facts about the fee-payment requirement are disclosed [Civ. Code § 1098.5]. See Ch. 103, Brokers, § 103.31[14][e].

Condominium Conversions. Gov. Code § 66427.1 has been amended to improve the process for giving tenants notice that the rental property in which they are tenants is to be converted to condominiums and giving them a right of first refusal to purchase their units [Stats. 2007, ch. 612]. The former notice provisions have been replaced by provisions that separate all of the notice requirements into individual subsections and clarify what the various notices are to contain and when they are to be sent. For coverage of the notice requirements, see Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments, § 124.19.

Rptr. 3d 483, 182 P.3d 1027* , the California Supreme Court held that as an officer of the court, a receiver is not an agent of any particular party to the action, but represents all persons interested in the property. § 1.170 Sanctions

Dismissal as Sanction--No Abuse of Discretion to Dismiss Complaint Based on Plaintiff's Egregious Conduct. In Stephen Slesinger, Inc. v. Walt Disney Co. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 736 , the trial court did not abuse its inherent discretion in dismissing plaintiff's complaint as a terminating sanction for deliberate and egregious misconduct. Plaintiff employed an investigator who improperly entered areas of defendant's properties not accessible to the public and trespassed onto a document destruction firm's secure facility and, at those locations, improperly took documents defendant had not abandoned. Plaintiff knew of the investigator's illegal conduct, or at least acted with deliberate indifference to whether his conduct was legal. Plaintiff also altered stolen documents with the intent to mislead to create a false impression documents were not confidential or that defendant had created confidential and nonconfidential sets of documents. Lesser sanctions were inadequate to ensure fair trial. See Ch. 510, Sanctions .

§ 1.171 Schools

Possible Cause of Action Under § 504 of Rehabilitation Act Regulations. In Mark H. v. Lemahieu (9th Cir. 2008) 513 F.3d 922 , an action by parents individually and as guardians ad litem for their autistic daughters against a state education department for alleged violations of the IDEA and § 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Ninth Circuit would not decide whether the plaintiffs alleged a privately enforceable cause of action for damages. Although injunctive relief was available under the IDEA, monetary damages were not. Although the FAPE requirements in the IDEA and in the § 504 regulations requiring a FAPE were overlapping but different, the availability of relief under the IDEA did not limit the availability of a damages remedy under § 504 FAPE regulations. However, the parents did not specify which § 504 regulations they believed were violated and which supported a privately enforceable cause of action. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Mother Lacked Standing to Sue Under IDEA Because She Did Not Suffer Injury. In Levina v. San Luis Coastal Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 2007) 514 F.3d 866 , after a school district filed an administrative complaint against a mother when she refused to consent to an Individualized Education Plan for her son, and the administrative hearing officer dismissed the complaint without prejudice, the mother lacked standing to pursue an action in federal district court under the IDEA claiming that the hearing officer erred in failing to dismiss with prejudice and in failing to identify her as a prevailing party. The mother did not suffer an injury in fact because her injuries were speculative, and she did not affirmatively request relief because the school district had filed the administrative complaint and when the hearing officer dismissed the matter without prejudice, it merely restored the status quo. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Mother Not Entitled to Damages Under IDEA. In Blanchard v. Morton Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 771 , the Ninth Circuit found that a mother was not entitled to damages to compensate her for lost income and the emotional distress she experienced during her ultimately successful efforts to obtain benefits for her son under the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act, because 42 U.S.C. § 1983 did not create a cause of action for money damages under the IDEA for lost earnings and the suffering of a parent pursuing IDEA relief. Further, because the mother was not a qualified individual with disability, her claim was not cognizable under either Title II of the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 or § 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.33[5][h].

Dismissal of Action Based on Conflicts Over Student's IEP for Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies. In Kutasi v. Las Virgenes Unified Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 2007) 494 F.3d 1162 , an action by parents and an autistic student brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and § 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, based on conflicts between the plaintiffs and the school district over the student's IEP, was properly dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Plaintiffs alleged injuries could be redressed to some degree by the IDEA's administrative procedures and remedies. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Securities Act of 1933--State Court Class Action Not Removable. Per Luther v. Countrywide Home Loans Serv'g LP (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1031 , a suit commenced in a state court under the Securities Act of 1933 may not be removed to federal court, pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 77v(a). The Ninth Circuit has held that the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005, which permits in general the removal to federal court of high-dollar class actions involving diverse parties, does not supersede that specific bar against removal. § 1.172 Settlement and Release Settlement Applied to Offset Judgment in Favor of Nonsettling Defendant. In Brawley v. J.C. Interiors, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 832 , the court found that when each party sues the other for breach of contract, and each party is found by the jury to have breached the contract, the proper procedure for the court is to offset the jury's damages award findings against each other, just as the court would do if there had been no settlement, and to then apply the settlement credit to any net amount of damages for which the nonsettling defendant would have been liable if there had been no settlement. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

No Requirement That Release Waive Civ. Code § 1542. In Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953 , an employment severance agreement could be enforced despite the lack of a waiver of Civ. Code § 1542, providing that a general release does not extend to claims the creditor does not know or suspect to exist in his or her favor at the time of executing the release, which if known by him or her must have materially affected his or her settlement with the debtor. The agreement stated that the plaintiff waived all claims existing as of the date he signed the agreement arising from or relating to his employment or termination of his employment and plaintiff understood he was releasing claims arising under all the statutes the agreement referred to, even those he did not understand. Further, nothing in Civ. Code § 1542 required that it be designated in the release or that a party specifically waive its provisions. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

Judicial Council Form for Section 998 Offer to Compromise. The Judicial Council has promulgated a form for optional use by a single plaintiff in an action for money damages involving a single defendant to make an offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. The form also contains a form by acceptance by the defendant. See Ch. 520, Settlement & Release .

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Knowledge of Agent With Duty to Report May Be Imputed to Principal Under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1(b)(2). In Santillan v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 4 , the court of appeal held that for purposes of applying the revival statute of limitations for child abuse actions against non-perpetrator defendants who had notice of abuse but failed to take protective measures, when establishing the requisite knowledge on the part of a principal, knowledge on the part of an agent may be imputed to the principal if the agent had a duty to report that information to the principal. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Constructive Notice Under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1(b)(2) Requires Actual Notice of Relevant Facts; Principal May Be Liable for Acts of Ostensible Agent. In Deutsch v. Masonic Homes of California, Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 748 , the court of appeal held that for purposes of applying the revival statute of limitations for child abuse actions against non-perpetrator defendants who had notice of abuse but failed to take protective measures, constructive notice cannot be based on what the defendant should have noticed, but did not, even if plaintiff argues that the conduct was so pervasive and obvious that a reasonably attentive person would have noticed. The court also held that a principal may be liable when the principal intentionally or through the lack of ordinary care causes a third person to believe another person is an agent even though that person is not actually employed by the principal. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

All Elements Under Elder Abuse Statute Must Be Proven by Clear and Convincing Evidence. In Perlin v. Fountain View Management, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 657 , the court of appeal held that because liability for the requisite abuse or neglect under the elder abuse statute must be shown by clear and convincing evidence, rather than the preponderance of the evidence standard generally applicable in civil cases, all elements of the abuse or neglect, including causation, are subject to that heightened burden of proof in order to establish eligibility for the heightened remedies available under the statute. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.13* Applicable to Elder Abuse Actions Against Religious Corporations. In Little Co. of Mary Hospital v. Superior Court (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court of appeal held that although the procedural requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.13 do not apply to an action brought under the Elder Abuse Act, the similar procedural requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.14 when a plaintiff seeks to recover punitive damages from a religious corporation do apply to a cause of action brought under the Elder Abuse Act. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Pleading Standard for Childhood Sexual Abuse Action Against Nonperpetrator Entity Clarified. In Doe v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 531 , the California Supreme Court held that the plaintiff bringing an action for childhood sexual abuse against a nonperpetrator entity must establish that the nonperpetrator defendant had actual knowledge, constructive knowledge, or was otherwise on notice that the perpetrator had engaged in past unlawful sexual conduct with a minor and, despite this knowledge or notice, failed to take reasonable preventative steps or implement reasonable safeguards to avoid acts of future sexual conduct by the perpetrator, and for these purposes, constructive knowledge exists if, after examining the facts in the nonperpetrator defendant's possession, a reasonable person of ordinary intelligence--or, in the particular circumstance, a person of superior intelligence--would have inferred that the perpetrator had had prior unlawful sexual conduct with a minor or regarded it as so highly probable as to take action under the assumption that the perpetrator had done so. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Tort Claims Act Compliance Required for Sexual Abuse Actions Against Non-Abusing Entities Under 2003 Revival Period. In Shirk v. Vista Unified School Dist. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 201 , the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff seeking to take advantage of the 2003 statute of limitations revival period in a childhood sexual abuse action against a negligent public entity must have complied with the claims presentation requirement of the California Tort Claims Act at the time the cause of action initially accrued. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Standard of Review of Protective Order Issued Under Elder Abuse Statute Clarified. In Bookout v. Nielsen (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1131 , the Court of Appeal held that a trial court's issuance of a protective order under Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.03 may be reviewed for abuse of discretion, and the factual findings necessary to support a protective order need only be supported by a preponderance of the evidence and are reviewed under the substantial evidence test. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.74[2].

[1A] Assault and Battery

Action Against Police for Unreasonable Use of Deadly Force Not Barred by Conviction for Resisting Police in Performance of Duties. In Yount v. City of Sacramento (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 885 , the California Supreme Court held that although an admission by a convicted criminal defendant that he or she resisted officers in the performance of their duties, and that those officers had the right to respond with reasonable force, may bar a civil action based on the use of reasonable force, an action for battery alleging the unreasonable use of deadly force is not barred if that civil action would not call into question the validity of the arrest and conviction. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.22[2].

[1B] Conspiracy

Private Parties Not Liable for Conspiracy to Violate Statute Governing Only Public Officials. In Klistoff v. Superior Court (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 469 , the court of appeal held that private parties could not be liable for conspiracy to violate Gov. Code § 1090, which only prohibits public officials from holding financial interests in public contracts and does not place any duty on private parties. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy, § 126.11[3][b].

No Conspiracy Liability for Attorneys Communicating With Commercial Tenants on Behalf of Landlord. In Panoutsopoulos v. Chambliss (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 297 , the court of appeal held that, for purposes of pleading an alleged conspiracy between attorney and client, attorneys representing a landowner owed no actionable independent duty to the landowner's commercial tenants when communicating with the commercial tenants about their possible lease violations in furtherance of their client's interests. See Ch. 126, Conspiracy, § 126.14[2][c][i].

[2] Damages

Evidence of Dissimilar Misconduct Inadmissible to Prove Right to Punitive Damages. In Holdgrafer v. Unocal Corp. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 907 , the court of appeal held that, because evidence of other misconduct by the defendant is inadmissible to prove either a right to or amount of punitive damages if that other misconduct is not sufficiently similar to the misconduct that allegedly damaged the plaintiff, an oil company's denials and concealments in relation to other oil spills and contaminations was inadmissible in a suit involving the amount of damage from subsurface contamination that was not denied or concealed. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[5][a], [14].

Testimony on Deceitful Concealing of Wealth Can Support Imposition of Higher Amount of Punitive Damages. In County of San Bernardino v. Walsh (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 533 , the court of appeal held that evidence that a defendant has systematically and deceitfully manipulated and concealed assets and net worth and provided evasive or knowingly false testimony on the issue at trial provides a fact-finder or trial court with wide latitude to make inferences unfavorable to the defendant when setting an amount of punitive damages. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[16].

Standard for Proving Liability to Pay Third Party as Element of Damages Clarified. In Green Wood Industrial Co. v. Forceman Internat. Development Group, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 766 , the court of appeal held that if a plaintiff seeks damages to compensate for a liability owed to a third party caused by defendant's actionable conduct, but plaintiff has not yet paid that third-party liability, plaintiff must provide more than just evidence of an obligation to pay, but must prove to a reasonable certainty that plaintiff could and would pay the liability. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.46[1].

Medi-Cal Lien Statutes Amended. Under amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.76, when a Medi-Cal lien has been filed in a suit, all reasonable efforts are to be made to support Medi-Cal's advance agreement as to what portion of a settlement, judgment, or award represents payment for medical expenses; however, absent such advance agreement, the matter must be submitted to the court for decision. Amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.78 and new Welf. & Inst. Code § 14124.785 also place certain limits on the amount that may be recovered under a Medi-Cal lien. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[1].

Federal Instrumentality Such as Federal Credit Union Not Generally Immune From Punitive Damages. In McGee v. Tucoemas Federal Credit Union (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1351 , the court of appeal held that a federal instrumentality, such as a federal credit union, is not generally entitled to immunity from punitive damages merely by virtue of its status as a federal instrumentality, noting that if Congress has provided that the instrumentality may sue and be sued, immunity from punitive damages is generally deemed to have been waived as an incident of suit. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[9].

Court Reduction in Compensatory Damages Does Not Mandate Corresponding Reduction in Punitive Damages. In McGee v. Tucoemas Federal Credit Union (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1351 , the Court of Appeal held that a reduction in compensatory damages will not necessarily mandate a corresponding reduction in punitive damages, and a trial court may issue a remittitur as to compensatory damages, but refuse to grant a reduction in punitive damages, so long as the punitive damage award still bears a reasonable relation to the reduced compensatory damage award and the award is not otherwise excessive. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[15].

[3] Death and Survival Actions

Putative Spouse Doctrine Applied to Domestic Partnership. In In re Domestic Partnership of Ellis & Arriaga (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1000 , the court of appeal held that domestic partners who have failed to comply with the domestic partnership registration requirements, but who held a reasonable, good-faith belief that they had registered with the Secretary of State, are entitled under the putative spouse doctrine to the same rights granted to domestic partners who have properly registered. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.14[2].

Omitted Heir Named But Not Served in Wrongful Death Action May Maintain Subsequent Action. In Romero v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 211 , the court of appeal held that if an actual plaintiff to a wrongful death action joins a potential plaintiff as a nominal defendant, but fails to serve that nominal party with a summons and complaint, that nominal defendant is not a party to the action and he or she is not barred from bringing a separate wrongful death action if the initial action is settled. The court also held that the actual defendant has the burden of determining whether an heir has been served. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.12[8].

Wrongful Death Action Not Barred by Failure to Bring Decedent's Original Action to Trial Within Five Years. In Brumley v. FDCC California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 312 , the Court of Appeal held that wrongful death and loss of consortium claims did not relate back to personal injury claims brought by a decedent before his or her death, and therefore the five-year time limit for bringing a case to trial applicable to the original personal injury action did not apply to the subsequent wrongful death and loss of consortium claims. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.23[1].

[3A] Elevators and Escalators

Admissibility of Safety Regulations in Action by Subcontractor's Employee Clarified. In Millard v. Biosources, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1338 , the court of appeal held that under Lab. Code § 6304.5, safety regulations may be admissible in actions brought by employees of subcontractors against general contractors that retain control of safety conditions only if the general contractor affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries. See Ch. 244, Elevators and Escalators, § 244.10[2].

[3B] Emergency Vehicles

MICRA Applicable to EMT Negligence. In Canister v. Emergency Ambulance Service, Inc. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 388 , the court of appeal held that the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act of 1975 (MICRA) applies to actions against paramedics and other emergency medical technicians licensed under Health & Safety Code § 1797 et seq. if the cause of action is based on professional negligence; and for these purposes, negligence in the operation of an ambulance when transporting a patient to or from a medical facility is included under the term "professional negligence." See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, § 246.16.

[3C] Fires

Public Entity's Recovery of Firefighting Costs Not Affected by Entity's Own Negligence. In People ex rel. Grijalva v. Superior Court (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1072 , the court of appeal held that a public entity's own negligence in fighting a fire or in failing to minimize its firefighting costs cannot be used to reduce the entity's recovery of firefighting costs under Health & Safety Code § 13009. See Ch. 267, Fires, § 267.18[2].

[4] Fraud and Deceit

Reliance on Falsity of Advertising When Purchasing Product in Order to Sue Does Not Constitute Justifiable Reliance. In Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798 , the Court of Appeal held that a consumer who purchases a product with the belief that the manufacturer has falsely represented the product in its advertising cannot show actual reliance to support a fraudulent misrepresentation action. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.16[2].

[5] Games, Sports, and Athletics

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Errant Golf Shot. In Shin v. Ahn (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 482 , the California Supreme Court held that a golfer who injures another golfer with an an errant golf shot may defend against liability on the basis of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, so long as the defendant golfer did not intend to injure the other golfer or engage in conduct so reckless as to be totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport. While a golfer cannot just ignore other players when making a shot, once having checked to see if others are reasonably likely to be struck and having concluded that it is safe to hit, a golfer who then concentrates on the ball in order to make the shot is not required to break his or her concentration in order to check the field again. In addition, the violation of a golfing rule of etiquette by the defendant does not in and of itself establish a basis for liability. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[7][a]; Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][vii].

[6] Libel and Slander

Media Defendant Not Liable for Publishing One-Sided Report; Discovery Requirements Under Anti-SLAPP Statute Clarified. In Paterno v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1342 , the court of appeal held that a media defendant is not liable in defamation for publishing a factual account that provides only one perspective on a story, but fails to include additional facts that might give the reader or listener a different impression of the events discussed. The court also held that a plaintiff opposing a motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 who must demonstrate actual malice to prevail on a defamation claim does not have good cause to seek discovery on the issue of malice without first making a prima facie demonstration that the allegedly defamatory statements are provably false factual assertions. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.55[3].

No Third-Party Publication Found When Defamatory Material Faxed to Number Provided by Plaintiff. In Martinelli v. International House USA (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1332 , the court of appeal held that allegedly defamatory allegations contained in a letter to plaintiff faxed to a number provided by plaintiff did not constitute publication to a third party, even though plaintiff's daughter read the fax after it came out of the machine. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.17[1].

Single Publication Rule Applicable, Discovery Rule Inapplicable to Defamation Action When Publication Is Not Widely Disseminated to Public. In Hebrew Academy of San Francisco v. Goldman (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 883 , the California Supreme Court held that in a defamation action, the single publication rule is applicable to a publication available to the public even if the publication is not widely disseminated or mass marketed, although the discovery rule is inapplicable to such a publication when applying the statute of limitations. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.28, 340.30[2].

Plaintiff Seeking Identity of Anonymous Internet Poster Must Make Prima Facie Showing of Libel in Order to Defeat Motion to Quash Subpoena. In Krinsky v. Doe 6 (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1154 , the court of appeal held that if a defendant being sued for defamation because of the content of an anonymous internet posting has been notified that a plaintiff seeks his or her identity, and the defendant seeks to quash a subpoena issued to the site host or service provider, the plaintiff must make a prima facie showing of the elements of libel in order to defeat the motion to quash. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.76.

Alleged Victim of Child Abuse Cannot Be Held Liable Under Penal Code § 11172 for Making False Report. In Chabak v. Monroy (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1502 , the Court of Appeal held that an alleged victim of child abuse cannot be held liable under Penal Code § 11172(a) for making a false report of the abuse to police, and the litigation privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) otherwise immunizes the alleged victim from liability for making statements about the alleged abuse to parents or others in anticipation of litigation. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.73[2].

[7] Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process

Fraud Exception to Interim Adverse Judgment Rule Cannot Be Relitigated in Malicious Prosecution Action. In Plumley v. Mockett (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1031 , the court of appeal held that, although there is a fraud exception to the general rule that a trial court judgment in the underlying action in favor of the malicious prosecution defendant will establish probable cause for bringing the action even if that decision is subsequently reversed on appeal, if the claims of fraud or perjury are litigated and rejected by the fact finder in the underlying action, a malicious prosecution plaintiff cannot rely on those same claims of fraud or perjury to establish the absence of probable cause in the malicious prosecution action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.23[4].

Co-counsel Joining After Suit Is Filed May Be Liable for Malicious Prosecution When Failing to Take Corrective Steps. In Sycamore Ridge Apartments LLC v. Naumann (2008) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1385 , the court of appeal held that an attorney joining in as co-counsel for a plaintiff in a case that has already been filed may be held liable for malicious prosecution if failing to take corrective steps immediately after associating in as co-counsel to cease prosecution of claims that lack probable cause and have been brought maliciously. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.16[1].

Delaying Service of Process in One Lawsuit to Achieve Larger Settlement in Another Lawsuit Against Same Defendant Can Constitute Abuse of Process. In Booker v. Rountree (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1366 , the court of appeal held that delaying service of process in one lawsuit with knowledge that another identical complaint has already been filed and served by a different plaintiff, with the ulterior motive of obtaining a larger settlement than would be obtained had defendant known of the second claim when settling the first, can support a finding of abuse of process, and such conduct is not protected by the litigation privilege. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, §§ 357.52, 357.56[1].

[8] Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

Facts Sufficient to State Emotional Distress Claim Against Health Insurer. In Hailey v. California Physicians' Service (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 452 , the court of appeal held that plaintiffs had adequately stated a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress against their health insurer after the insurer sought to rescind their policy after one of the plaintiffs suffered severe injuries in an automobile accident, although the insurer learned of alleged misrepresentations in the original insurance application justifying the rescision a month before the accident. See Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.10[3][b].

To Recover for Emotional Distress as Bystander, Contemporaneous Awareness of Injury Requires More Than Belief That Injury Was More Likely Than Not. In Ra v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 142 , the Court of Appeal held that a wife was not entitled to recover for negligent infliction of emotional distress as a bystander when she heard a loud crash emanating from a nearby area of a store and believed more likely than not that her husband had been injured, but she did not otherwise observe or contemporaneously perceive an injury to her husband as it actually occurred. See Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11[6][c][iv].

[9] Negligence

Negligent or Wrongful Conduct Required in Action for Dangerous Condition of Public Property. In Metcalf v. County of San Joaquin (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1121 , the California Supreme Court held that, under the plain language of Gov. Code § 835, it is not enough that a plaintiff suing a public entity for injury caused by a dangerous condition on public property plead and prove that a dangerous condition existed and that it caused injury to plaintiff, but plaintiff must also plead and prove that the dangerous condition was created through the negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the public entity, or that the public entity had notice of the dangerous condition a sufficient time prior to the injury to take remedial steps. The Court noted that while the fact that a dangerous condition was created by a public entity employee, even created deliberately, may be used to support a finding that the dangerous condition was created negligently, such facts do not necessitate a factual finding that the dangerous condition was created negligently or wrongfully. The Court also affirmed that the negligence standard applicable to a finding of liability under this statute is the common-law ordinary negligence standard, which measures the reasonableness of a defendant's conduct in light of the foreseeable risk of harm. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.81[1],

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Injury Suit Stemming From Skateboard "Product Toss" at Promotional Event. In McGarry v. Sax (2008) 158 Cal. Ap. 4th 983, the court of appeal held that primary assumption of risk was a defense when plaintiff was injured by co-participants in a "product toss" at a skateboarding competition sponsored by a skateboard store. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][c].

Primary Assumption of Risk Applied to Injury Sustained by Passenger on Personal Watercraft. In Truong v. Nguyen (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 865 , the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine applies to the activity of riding a personal watercraft, even if the rider is merely a passenger on the watercraft and the watercraft is being operated at a modest rate of speed. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.30[6], and Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][ii].

No Wrongful Life Liability for Failing to Advise on Abortion When No Warning of Possible Birth Defects Existed. In Barragan v. Lopez (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 997 , the court of appeal held that liability cannot be imposed for wrongful life just because the physician fails to advise the mother of the right to terminate a pregnancy, if the physician provides proper care and testing and, up to the time at which the fetus is considered viable, nothing indicates that the fetus is in danger of being born with a birth defect. See Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions, § 367A.11[3][c].

Residential Substance Abuse Treatment Facility Owed No Duty to Neighborhood Residents for Harm Caused by Escapees. In Rice v. Center Point, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 949 , the Court of Appeal held that a residential substance abuse treatment facility housing inmates from the Department of Corrections owes no legal duty to neighborhood residents who are injured by escaped inmates, even if the treatment facility is negligent in allowing inmates to escape with a kitchen knife stolen from the facility. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][b][i].

Duty to Students of Adult Education Classes Similar to Duty Owed to College Students. In Patterson v. Sacramento City Unified School Dist. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 821 , the Court of Appeal held that the same considerations that apply when determining the duty owed by colleges to their students should apply to school districts that offer adult education classes. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][vi].

[10] Physicians

MICRA Statute of Limitations Inapplicable to Intentional Torts. In Unruh-Haxton v. Regents of University of California (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 343 , the court of appeal held that the statute of limitations provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5, enacted as part of MICRA, did not apply to plaintiffs' causes of action for the intentional torts of fraud, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and conversion, based on allegations that doctors in a fertility clinic stole human genetic materials from plaintiffs, such as eggs that had been frozen for future use, and sold the materials without authorization. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.13[2], and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.47[1].

Registered Social Worker Working Toward Licensure Is Covered by MICRA. In Prince v. Sutter Health Central (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 971 , the court of appeal held that an unlicensed social worker who is registered with the appropriate agency and working toward licensure is a health care provider under MICRA. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.10.

Specific Jury Finding of No Consent Required When Using Special Verdict Form in Medical Battery Action. In Saxena v. Goffney (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 316 , the court of appeal held that because performing a medical procedure without informed consent is not the same thing as performing that procedure with no consent at all, and the latter forms the basis for an action for battery, a party seeking to hold a physician liable for battery must obtain a specific jury finding that no consent was given if a special verdict form is used at trial. A finding that no informed consent was given is insufficient, as such a finding does not preclude the conclusion that uninformed consent was given. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.20.

No Wrongful Life Liability for Failing to Advise on Abortion When No Warning of Possible Birth Defects Existed. In Barragan v. Lopez (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 997 , the court of appeal held that liability cannot be imposed for wrongful life just because the physician fails to advise the mother of the right to terminate a pregnancy, if the physician provides proper care and testing and, up to the time at which the fetus is considered viable, nothing indicates that the fetus is in danger of being born with a birth defect. See Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions, § 367A.11[3][c].

Doctor's Communications With Patient's Insurer Covered by Arbitration Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295. In Titolo v. Cano (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 310 , the court of appeal held that a doctor's communications with a patient's insurer about the patient's medical records, done at the request of the patient, comes within the provision of medical services for purposes of the arbitration provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295, and disputes about the propriety and scope of the communications are covered by an arbitration agreement meeting the requirements of that statute. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.51.

Medical Students and Other Medical Professionals Exempt From Licensing Are Health Care Providers Under MICRA. In Chosak v. Alameda County Medical Center (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 549 , the Court of Appeal held that medical students and other medical professionals who are authorized to practice in California, but who are specifically exempt from license or certificate requirements, are considered health care providers subject to MICRA. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.10.

[11] Premises Liability

Landowner Owed No Duty to Post Warning Sign at Intersection of Private Farm Road and Public Road. In Garcia v. Paramount Citrus Assn., Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1448 , the court of appeal held that the owner of agricultural land used for orchards owed no duty to post a warning sign at the spot that a private farm road intersected a public road just because an unauthorized driver who was using the farm road failed to recognize the transition to the public road, drove from the farm road to the public road at an excessive rate of speed, and caused a collision with another vehicle on the public road. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[2][d].

Apartment Owners Owed Duty to Extend Gate Around Leasing Office. In Tan v. Arnel Management Co. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 621 , the court of appeal held that owners of a 20-acre apartment complex had a duty of care owed to a tenant who was the victim of a carjacking to either move existing security gates so that they provided protection around the leasing office and its adjacent parking lot, or otherwise install a very similar gate around that area, which according to the existing evidence would require a minor gate extension over a small area. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[2][b].

Causation Evidence Sufficient to Support Tenant Action Against Landlord. In Raven H. v. Gamette (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1017 , the court of appeal held that, while the plaintiff did not know exactly how her assailant gained access to her apartment complex, the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that the landlord's failure to provide bars or locks on her first-story windows, which were provided to other tenants, and the landlord's failure to control vegetation growth around her windows, allowing the intruder to enter through a window shrouded in darkness, were a cause of plaintiff's injury. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[3].

Premises Liability Plaintiff Must Plead and Prove Lack of Triviality of Premises Defect. In Kasparian v. AvalonBay Communities, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 11 , the Court of Appeal held that lack of triviality of a premises defect is an element of a premises liability cause of action to be pleaded and proved by the plaintiff. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.14[3].

Landlord Generally Owes No Duty to Tenants Not to Rent to Suspected Gang Members. In Castaneda v. Olsher

(2007) 41 Cal. 4th 1205 , the California Supreme Court held that absent circumstances showing extraordinary foreseeability, a landlord owes no duty to existing tenants not to rent to suspected gang members, nor to screen the criminal records of suspected gang members before renting, although once having rented, a landlord may have a duty to evict if a threat of violence is highly foreseeable. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[2][c].

[12] Privacy

Government Tort Immunities Applicable to Privacy Action Based on California Constitution. In Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (SIPE) (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056 , the court of appeal held that although the constitutional right to privacy was designed to protect against some forms of governmental intrusion, this right to privacy does not limit the scope of statutory immunities that existed under the California Tort Claims Act when the right to privacy was added in 1972. The court specifically held that Gov. Code § 821.6, which immunizes a governmental employee for injury caused by instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his or her employment, regardless of malice or lack of probable cause, extends to investigatory activities and may be used to defeat a claim for damages for violation of the constitutional right to privacy. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[20].

Prosecutorial Immunity Provides Complete Defense to Statutory Intrusion Claim. In Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (SIPE) (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056 , the court of appeal held that Civ. Code § 1708.8, the so-called anti-paparazzi statute, cannot be used to impose liability on a public entity, or employee acting within the scope of his or her employment with a public entity, when a public employee is immune from liability for injury caused by instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his or her employment pursuant to Gov. Code § 821.6. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.34A[1].

Doctor's Communications With Patient's Insurer Covered by Arbitration Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295. In Titolo v. Cano (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 310 , the court of appeal held that a doctor's communications with a patient's insurer about the patient's medical records, done at the request of the patient, comes within the provision of medical services for purposes of the arbitration provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295, and disputes about the propriety and scope of the communications are covered by an arbitration agreement meeting the requirements of that statute. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.51.

Rules for Transfer of Publicity Rights for Deceased Personalities Amended. Civ. Code § 3344.1 has been amended to alter the rules governing the vesting and transfer of the right to enforce the right of publicity of a deceased personality. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36[8].

Statute Specifies Psychotherapist's Right to Disclose Medical Information to Prevent Harm to Identifiable Victim. Civ. Code § 56.10 has been amended to specify the circumstances under which a psychotherapist may disclose medical information when the psychotherapist believes disclosure is necessary to prevent a serious and imminent threat to a reasonably foreseeable victim. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[5].

Disclosure of Medical Information of Minors Under County Control Authorized for Medical Treatment Coordination. New Civ. Code § 56.103 provides that a health care provider may disclose medical information to a county social worker, a probation officer, or any other person legally authorized to have custody or care of a minor for the purpose of coordinating the health care services and medical treatment provided to the minor, if the minor has been taken into temporary custody, is the subject of a court petition, or has been adjudged to be a dependent child or ward of the juvenile court. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[5].

New Notice Requirements Prior to Testing for HIV. Health & Safety Code § 120990 has been amended to alter the requirements for obtaining informed consent prior to testing for HIV. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.256[1], [3].

Multiple Actions Taken in Furtherance of One Common Plan of Appropriation Limited to One Payment of Statutory Penalty. In Miller v. Collectors Universe, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1047 , the Court of Appeal held that 14,060 separate certificates of authenticity issued to customers over several months by a celebrity autograph authentication business using the plaintiff's name without consent gave rise to only a single cause of action for appropriation under Civ. Code § 3344 and supported only a single payment of $750 for statutory damages, as these acts were taken with a common purpose and as part of a common plan. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.474[4].

[12A] Products Liability

Punitive Damages Award Based in Part Upon Harm Defendant Caused Non-Parties Is Unconstitutional. The U.S. Supreme Court issued yet another pronouncement on the constitutionality of punitive damages. The Court struck down a $79.5 million punitive damage against a cigarette manufacturer, holding that an award based in part upon the jury's desire to punish the defendant for harming persons not before the court would amount to a taking of "property" without due process. Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007)549U.S.346, 127 S. Ct. 1057, 1063, 166 L. Ed. 2d 940, 949 . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.104[15][b].

Supreme Court Holds Medical Devices Act Preempts State Common Law Claims. In Riegel v. Medtronic, Inc., 2008 U.S. LEXIS 2013 , the U.S. Supreme Court held that 21 U.S.C.S. § 360k(a), the MDA's express preemption clause, bars common law claims challenging the safety or effectiveness of a medical device given FDA premarket approval. The high Court also granted a drug manufacturer's petition for writ of certiorari and agreed to hear its first case on the issue of federal preemption of drug liability claims. The Court will determine whether conflict preemption preempts state law claims involving fraud-on-the-FDA, and whether such claims are barred by Michigan's drug shield law. Warner-Lambert Co. v. Kent (2007) 551 U.S. 1190, 128 S. Ct. 31, 168 L. Ed. 2d 807 . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.52[2][a], [b].

No Special Presumption That Smoking Is Addictive or Harmful for Statute of Limitation Purposes. In responding to certified questions regarding the application of the statute of limitations, the Supreme Court of California in Grisham v. Philip Morris U.S.A., Inc. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 623 held that there is no special presumption based on common knowledge that plaintiffs are aware that smoking is addictive or harmful. However, there is a general, rebuttable presumption that plaintiffs have knowledge of the wrongful cause of their injuries. The Court also held that the fact that an unfair competition claim based on economic injury from addiction might be time-barred did not mean that plaintiff's other claims based on physical injury were also barred. See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.31[2][i].

Federal Law Preempts Section 17200 Unfair Competition Claims Against Tobacco Manufacturers. The Supreme Court of California in In re Tobacco Cases II (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 1257 , overruling Mangini v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1057 , ruled that claims based on the state's unfair competition law and the penal code section prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors and possession of tobacco by minors were preempted by the federal Labeling Act. See Ch. 460, Products Liability , §§ 460. 52[2][i], 460.104[39].

Appellate Courts Hold MDA Preempts Negligence and Strict Liability Claims. Two appellate courts issued opinions addressing federal preemption of medical devices. Division Three of the Fourth Appellate Department determined that the federal Medical Device Amendments (MDA) preempted negligence and strict liability claims regarding a heart valve [Blanco v. Baxter Healthcare Corp. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1039] . Division Seven of the Second Appellate Department then ruled that the MDA preempted claims alleging that a testicular prosthesis was defective because it lacked a warning on the outer packaging that the device had to be filled with saline prior to implantation [*Jessen v. Mentor Corp., 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 61, at *17-23] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.52[2][b].

Federal Law Preempts Railroad Employee's Design Defect Claims. In Frastaci v. Vapor Corp. (2007) 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 2147 , a locomotive repairman died of mesothelioma. The federal Boiler Inspection Act (BIA) foreclosed the plaintiffs' design defect claims against the locomotive manufacturer, regardless of whether the locomotive was "in use" or off line when the injury occurred. See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.52[2][f].

[13] Railroads

Negligence Action Against Commuter Railroad Preempted by Federal Law. In Southern California Regional Rail Authority v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 712 , the court of appeal held that a negligence claim brought against a commuter railroad for an accident that occurred when defendant ran a train in push mode with a cab car in the lead position was preempted by federal law, because federal regulations addressed safety concerns over the use of cab cars in the lead position. See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.60A.

Scope of Federal Preemption in Railroad Cases Clarified. Under amended 49 U.S.C.S. § 20106, a state law cause of action seeking damages for personal injury, death, or property damage is not preempted by federal law if the cause of action alleges that a party has (1) failed to comply with the federal standard of care established by a regulation or order on railroad safety issued by the Secretary of Transportation, or a regulation or order on railroad security issued by the Secretary of Homeland Security, covering the subject matter as provided in 49 U.S.C.S. § 20106(a); (2) failed to comply with its own plan, rule, or standard created pursuant to a regulation or order issued by either of the federal Secretaries; or (3) failed to comply with a state law, regulation, or order that is not incompatible with 49 U.S.C.S. § 20106(a)(2). See Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.60A.

[14] Ships and Shipping

Commuter Seaman Not in Service of Ship When Bitten by Mosquito After Work Hours. In Price v. Connolly-Pacific Co. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1210 , the court of appeal held that a seaman with permission to live in his own camper parked on company property was not in service of his ship when contracting a disease from a mosquito bite likely sustained after duty hours. See Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping, § 522.33[3].

[15] Tort Claims Act

Lack of Signal or Crossing Guard at Crosswalk Near School Not Dangerous Condition of Public Property. In Cerna v. City of Oakland (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1340 , the court of appeal held that the lack of a traffic signal or crossing guard at a crosswalk near which a school has opened does not constitute a dangerous condition of public property. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.83[4].

No Suit Under False Claims Act Against Public Employee Acting in Scope of Employment. In State of California ex rel. Dockstader v. Hamby (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 480 , the court of appeal held that because a public agency is required to defend and indemnify a public employee against claims arising out of an act or omission occurring within the scope of his or her employment, a public employee may not be sued under the False Claims Act for conduct taken within the scope of employment, as such a suit would be the equivalent of suing the public entity itself. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, § 468.21[2].

Negligent or Wrongful Conduct Required in Action for Dangerous Condition of Public Property. In Metcalf v. County of San Joaquin (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1121 , the California Supreme Court held that, under the plain language of Gov. Code § 835, it is not enough that a plaintiff suing a public entity for injury caused by a dangerous condition on public property plead and prove that a dangerous condition existed and that it caused injury to plaintiff, but plaintiff must also plead and prove that the dangerous condition was created through the negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the public entity, or that the public entity had notice of the dangerous condition a sufficient time prior to the injury to take remedial steps. The Court noted that while the fact that a dangerous condition was created by a public entity employee, even created deliberately, may be used to support a finding that the dangerous condition was created negligently, such facts do not necessitate a factual finding that the dangerous condition was created negligently or wrongfully. The Court also affirmed that the negligence standard applicable to a finding of liability under this statute is the common law ordinary negligence standard, which measures the reasonableness of a defendant's conduct in light of the foreseeable risk of harm. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.81[1], [4][a].

Notice to Appear Is "Accusatory Pleading" for Purposes of Gov. Code § 945.3. In Schmidlin v. City of Palo Alto (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 728 , the court of appeal held that a notice to appear served on a civil plaintiff for alleged criminal conduct constitutes an "accusatory pleading" for purposes of the limitations tolling provisions of Gov. Code § 945.3, regardless of whether that notice was ever filed with a court. The court also held that "charges pending before a court" includes any charges embodied in a notice to appear, as long as the charges have not yet been disposed of or defeated through prosecutorial inaction. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.42[4][a].

County Not Liable for Death Caused When Wife Murdered Husband With Drugs Stolen From County. In de Villers v. County of San Diego (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 238 , the Court of Appeal, in determining that a county could not be held liable for a murder committed by an employee with drugs stolen from the medical examiners office, held that a public entity cannot be held liable under general tort principles for alleged negligence in hiring and supervising its employees, as there is no statutory basis for imposing such liability. The court also held that regulatory language in 21 C.F.R. § 1301.71 requiring licensed labs to "guard against" the theft of drugs with "effective controls and procedures" did not impose a mandatory duty on a licensed county facility to take any particular steps, thereby precluding liability for failing to perform a mandatory duty. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[1], [4].

Prisoner-Release Immunity Does Not Extend to Ministerial Act. In Perez-Torres v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 136 , the California Supreme Court held that ministerial acts undertaken in the performance of correctional policy decisions are not covered by the prisoner-release immunity of Gov. Code § 845.8(a), and while the State's decision to revoke a prisoner's parole, even if based on erroneous information about the person's identity, is a policy decision covered by immunity, the failure of State personnel to release the prisoner after they knew or should have known that they were detaining the wrong person is a ministerial act not protected by immunity. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.103[6].

Violation of General Guideline Insufficient to Impose Liability on Public Entity Under Gov. Code § 855. In Lockhart v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 289 , the Court of Appeal held that if a plaintiff seeks to impose public entity liability under Gov. Code § 855 for violation of a regulation prescribing minimum standards for public or mental health equipment, personnel, or facilities, that regulation must have been promulgated by one of the four state departments specified by Gov. Code § 855, and regardless of whether liability is predicated on a statute or regulation, the relevant statute or regulation must prescribe a specific minimum standard that has been violated, rather than merely provide general guidelines. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.105[1][a].

Oil Extraction Wastewater Can Constitute Continuing Trespass. In Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583 , the Court of Appeal held that wastewater produced through use of unlined percolation ponds during oil extraction can constitute a continuing trespass if it seeps into the groundwater of an adjacent landowner. See Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.17.

Statutory Damages for Trespass Clarified. In Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 583 , the Court of Appeal held that restoration costs may be recovered under Civ. Code § 3334 for trespass only if restoration is possible and economically feasible in light of all the competing interests. The court also held that profits obtained by the trespasser by virtue of the decision to trespass may be recovered as a "benefit obtained" under

Civ. Code § 3334, although the plaintiff must provide evidence specifically linking the profits to the decision to trespass. In Bailey v. Outdoor Media Group (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 778 , the Court of Appeal held that if the defendant presents credible evidence of the expenses incurred, the trial court may offset those amounts against the gross income generated to determine gross profits. However, if the defendant does not present evidence of appropriate expenses, the trial court may award damages based on gross revenue as the benefit obtained by the trespass. See Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.21[1].

Skepticism About Criminal Justice System Is Not Proxy for Race. In People v. Calvin (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1377, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 300 , the court of appeal found that challenged jurors had skeptical attitudes toward the criminal justice system, and skepticism toward the criminal justice system could not be seen to be so prevalent among African-Americans that it could be considered a proxy for race and, as a result, peremptory challenges based on such an attitude could not be deemed discriminatory. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

Court Had Jurisdiction to Grant Partial New Trial Even Though Judge Not in California. In Dell'Oca v. The Bank of New York Trust Co., N.A. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 531, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 737 , a judge other than the judge who presided at trial and heard arguments on a new trial motion telephonically while out of state pursuant to the agreement of the parties could appoint another judge to sign the order conditionally granting a new trial. The superior court had territorial and subject matter jurisdiction over posttrial motions irrespective of the original judge's location, and appointing another judge to sign for the presiding judge in her absence was a proper exercise of the presiding judge's authority. See Ch. 371, Motions After Trial .

§ 1.174 Unfair Competition

Separate Limitations Period Runs Against Third Party Who Obtains Misappropriated Trade Secret From Original Misappropriator. In Cypress Semiconductor Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 575 , the court of appeal held that if a third party subsequently obtains misappropriated trade secrets from the original misappropriating party, a plaintiff's claim against that third party accrues only when the plaintiff discovers that third party's misappropriation; as to that third party, consistent with the single-claim rule, any continuing misappropriation constitutes a single claim. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[5].

Unpaid Wages Not Generally Recoverable Under Unfair Competition Statute From Owners, Officers, or Managers of Employer. In Bradstreet v. Wong (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1440 , the court of appeal held that while unpaid wages may be recovered from an employer under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., wages may not be recovered as restitution from the employer's owners, officers, or managers, unless the labor was performed for such persons personally or those persons appropriated funds from the employer that would otherwise have been used to pay the unpaid wages. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.34[3][b].

Trademarks--Action Under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1) Based on Unfair Competition. The Ninth Circuit in Fisher Tool Co. v. Gillet Outillage (9th Cir. 2008) 530 F.3d 1063 has adopted the Federal Circuit's position in holding that in a complaint under 15 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1) based on the defendant's representation that someone (such as the plaintiff) infringed the defendant's patent, the plaintiff must show, in addition to the circumstances contemplated by the statute, that the defendant's representation was made in bad faith. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.26[1][a].

Covenant Not to Solicit Customers Enforceable as Part of Employment Agreement. In Alliant Ins. Services, Inc. v. Gaddy (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1292 , the court of appeal held that if the seller of a business goes to work for the buyer as an employee after selling the company, a covenant prohibiting that employee from soliciting the buying company's customers in the event of termination of employment may be enforceable if necessary to protect the buyer's trade secrets, which may include confidential client information. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.73[2].

Claim for Misappropriation of Patents and Trademarks Does Not Support Award of Attorney's Fees Under UTSA. In CytoDyn of New Mexico, Inc. v. Amerimmune Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 288 , the court of appeal held that an award of attorney's fees was not authorized under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act because the complaint alleged only misappropriation of patents and trademarks, which, by their very nature, are not trade secrets. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[7][d].

Revenue From Product Sale May Be Recovered as Restitution Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Shersher v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1491 , the Court of Appeal held that a plaintiff who purchases a product because of false or misleading advertisements or product packaging statements is entitled to recover the revenue obtained from the sale of the product from the product manufacturer as restitution under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., even if the plaintiff purchased the product from a retailer rather than directly from the manufacturer. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.34[2][a].

Litigation Expenses Not "Injury in Fact" for Purposes of Standing to Sue Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798 , the Court of Appeal held that a plaintiff may not effectively avoid the changes made to the unfair competition statute by Proposition 64 by claiming as "injury in fact" the expenses incurred in pursuing litigation against the defendant, nor may an individual consumer create the requisite injury by purchasing a defendant's product if the purchase was made solely to facilitate a subsequent lawsuit. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

No Interference With Contract Found. In PM Group, Inc. v. Stewart (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 55 , the Court of Appeal held that neither a party to a contract nor agents of that party may be liable for interference with related subcontracts that would require the performance of the party to the primary contract. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.137[2][a].

§ 1.175 Workers' Compensation

Preferred Provider Networks; Common-Law Doctrine of Fair Procedure. The court of appeal in Palm Medical Group, Inc. v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 206 , has held that the defendant, State Compensation Insurance Fund, had denied the plaintiff, Palm Medical Group, admission into its preferred provider network in violation of the common-law fair procedure doctrine. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][d].

Temporary Disability; Industrial Disability Leave; Two-Year Limitation on Temporary Disability Indemnity. The court of appeal in Brooks v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1522 , has held that the one year of industrial disability leave payable to state employees under Gov. Code §§ 19869-19877.1 falls within the ambit of the two-year limitation on aggregate temporary disability payments in Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[3][b].

Temporary Disability; Multiple Injuries; Time Limits on Payments. The court of appeal in Foster v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1505 , has held that, when independent injuries result in concurrent periods of temporary disability, the 104-week, two-year limitation of Lab. Code § 4656(c)(1) likewise runs concurrently. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[3][b].

Injury AOE/COE; Off-Duty Athletic Activities. The court of appeal in Tomlin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1423 , has held that a police officer's physical training injury, even though occurring while he was on vacation, was a compensable injury because his training was, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9), "a reasonable expectancy of ... the employment." See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[4].

Employment Relationships; Newspaper Carriers. The court of appeal in Antelope Valley Press v. Steve Poizner as Insurance Commissioner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839 , has held that the administrative record supported the conclusion that newspaper carriers were employees for purposes of the workers' compensation law, not independent contractors. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[3][c].

Permanent Disability; Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The court of appeal in Tanimura & Antle v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1489 has followed Costco

Wholesale Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 148 , Vera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 996 , Chang v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 750 , Energetic Painting & Drywall, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 633 , and Zenith Insurance Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 461 , to hold that an employer's duty to provide the notice required by Lab. Code § 4061 is not triggered simply by commencement of temporary disability benefits, but only by the last payment of those benefits, and that the employer here was not required to provide the employee with that notice until 2006, so that no exception listed in Lab. Code § 4660(d) justified use of the 1997 Schedule for Rating Permanent Disabilities, and that the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule applied instead. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability; Apportionment; Wilkinson Rule. The Appeals Board in Benson v. Permanente Medical Group (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 1620 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has held en banc that the rule established by Wilkinson v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 491 , which provided that an injured worker who, while employed by the same employer, sustained two separate injuries to the same part of the body, which became permanent and stationary at the same time, was entitled to receive a combined award of permanent disability, is no longer generally applicable because inconsistent with the post-SB 899 requirement that apportionment be based on causation. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Psychiatric Injuries; Actual Events of Employment. The court of appeal in Verga v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 174 has held that an employee did not suffer psychiatric injury AOE/COE as a result of actual events of employment that were predominant as to all causes combined, when it found that substantial evidence supported the Appeals Board's factual findings that the employee's supervisor and coworkers did not persecute or harass her and that it was the employee who caused a stressful work environment by being rude, inflexible, easily upset, and demeaning toward other employees. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][d][i].

Permanent Disability; Permanent and Stationary Status; Application of 1997 Schedule for Rating Permanent Disabilities. The court of appeal in Genlyte Group v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 705 , and in Zenith Insurance Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 483 , has held that a pre-2005 comprehensive medical-legal report must indicate the existence of permanent disability to satisfy the Lab. Code § 4660(d) exception to application of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule and, rejecting another court of appeal's decision in Vera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 996 , that the employee's condition need not be permanent and stationary for a treating physician's report or a comprehensive medical-legal report to indicate the existence of permanent disability. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Injury AOE/COE; Bunkhouse Rule. The court of appeal in Vaught v. State of California, Department of Parks and Recreation (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538 has held that the exclusive remedy rule of Lab. Code § 3602(a) barred the plaintiffs' civil action against the defendant for negligence and failure to make a house habitable for human occupation, when the court found that the plaintiffs, a husband and wife, lived in a ranch house owned by the defendant as an "employment benefit" of the husband's job as a park ranger employed by defendant and that the husband was injured while in the house. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[7].

Fair Employment and Housing Act--Discrimination--Burden of Proof. The California Supreme Court in Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254 has held that FEHA requires an employee to prove that he or she is a "qualified individual" when alleging discrimination on grounds of disability, meaning that a plaintiff's burden of proving an actionable discrimination on the basis of disability includes proof that he or she has the ability to perform the essential duties of the position with reasonable accommodation. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.315[2][b][iii].

Attorney's Fees--Effect of SB 899. The Court of Appeal in Vierra v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1142 , has held that a written attorney's fee agreement between an employee and his attorney was not binding to the extent that it purported to "draft around" Lab. Code § 4906 by depriving the Appeals Board of its statutory authority to fix attorney fees, making it in conflict with state law and unenforceable. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.41[3].

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Court of Appeal in Energetic Painting and Drywall, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. (Reyes Ramirez) (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 633 has held that an employer, who paid an injured employee temporary disability benefits through March 2005, was, following Pendergrass v. Duggan Plumbing (2007) 72 Cal. Comp. Cases 456 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , not required to provide the employee with Lab. Code § 4061 notice until that date, that, therefore, no exception in Lab. Code § 4660(d) justified use of the 1997 Schedule for Rating Permanent Disabilities in rating the employee's permanent disability, and that the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule was to be used instead. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Retroactive Application of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Court of Appeal in Vera v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 996 has held that a treating physician's report dated April 26, 2004, which stated that the employee had the existence of permanent disability but that the employee had not reached permanent and stationary status, was not a pre-2005 treating physician report indicating the existence of permanent disability, because a disability is not ratable if it has not reached permanent and stationary status. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Guardian ad Litem--Conservator--Payment for Services. The Court of Appeal in Hodgman v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 44 has held that the Appeals Board had no basis for restricting the compensation of a guardian ad litem and conservator of an incompetent injured worker to nonduplicative care and that the employer, not the estate of the injured worker, should bear the expense. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.81.

Workers' Compensation Judges--Summary of Evidence. The Court of Appeal in Sharareh v. W.C.A.B. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 189 , has held that it was mandatory for a WCJ to provide a summary of the trial evidence under Lab. Code § 5313 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10566 and that a failure to submit such a summary mandated that the matter be returned to the WCJ to prepare and submit one. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.191[2].

Injury AOE/COE--Death Benefits. The Court of Appeal in City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78 has held that an employee's death was not the result of an industrial injury, when the court found that the decedent, an accountant with a CPA license, died from injuries received from a fall while attending a CPA convention in Atlantic City, New Jersey, when the employer did not require the decedent to have a CPA license, and traveling to attend the convention for CPA credit was not expressly or impliedly authorized by the decedent's employment contract. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[1].

[1] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Attorney's Fees and Costs. Where a contract containing an arbitration clause allows for court actions under the contract and provides for attorney fees and costs to the prevailing party in an action on the contract, the prevailing party in an action based on an independent complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief that addresses only the issue of whether an arbitration must proceed may be entitled to an award of fees and costs under the applicable standards, regardless of who might become the prevailing party in any subsequent arbitration [Turner v. Schultz (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 974]. See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings, § 33.22.

Private Arbitration--Failure to Disclose All Specific Details of Prior Arbitrations by Neutral Arbitrators Does Not Necessarily Lead to Vacation of Arbitration Award. The neutral arbitrator acknowledged a prior relationship with both the health care provider and its counsel, and he disclosed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9, that he had served as an arbitrator in a number of prior arbitrations involving them. He did not provide dates and other details of those prior arbitrations. The Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying patient's petition to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the patient, by consenting to proceed with arbitration despite being aware of deficiencies in the arbitrator's disclosure, waived her right to disqualify the arbitrator, and could not later challenge the arbitration award on the ground of inadequate disclosure [Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings, § 33.14.

Private Arbitration--No Duty to Disclose Arbitrator's Law Firm's Past Representation of Third Party Who Had Adversarial Relationship With a Party. The court of appeal held that the applicable rule of law was the general requirement of Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9(a) that a proposed neutral arbitrator shall disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial. Based on the entirety of the facts, the court of appeal found that there was adequate support for the trial court's finding that an objective person would not reasonably doubt the arbitrator's ability to be impartial. Thus, the arbitrator's law firm's prior representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff was not required to be disclosed [Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings, § 33.14.

Private Arbitration--Insured's Complaint of Insurer's Bad Faith and Unreasonable Conduct Following Arbitration Award for Insured's Policy Limit. The insured was injured in an automobile accident caused by an underinsured motorist. After the parties failed to agree on the amount to be paid under the policy, an arbitration was scheduled. The insured received an arbitration award for the policy limit. Thereafter, the insured filed a complaint alleging that the insurer had unreasonably failed to make a good faith effort to resolve the claim. The court held that the insured's allegations of intentional misconduct and bad faith were sufficient, noting that a genuine dispute existed only where an insurer's position was maintained in good faith and on reasonable grounds [Brehm v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1225] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.29 . See also Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.18.

[2] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Lis Pendens. Arbitration is not an "action" under Code Civ. Proc. § 405.5 governing the filing of a notice of lis pendens; however, a party to arbitration may simultaneously file and stay a court action pending the arbitration of a dispute that is claimed to be arbitrable and relevant to the action, giving grounds for filing a lis pendens and not itself waiving arbitration, so long as other steps are not taken in the litigation that have the effect of waiving arbitration [Manhattan Loft, LLC v. Mercury Liquors, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1040]. See Ch. 30, Using Alternative Dispute Resolution, § 30.11[5][b].

Existence of Contract for Arbitration. Analysis of the existence of a contract that is subject to contractual arbitration is reorganized, and a new subsection on the signature and effect of provisions requiring signature of all parties is added in light of Fagelbaum & Heller LLP v. Smylie (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1351 , which holds, as with the general rule, the signatory resisting enforcement of the contract or clause cannot escape liability without affirmatively establishing that the signatures of all parties were contemplated as being a condition precedent to the validity of the contract. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][b].

Unconscionable Arbitration Agreements. This chapter is updated with Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154 , which holds under California law the question whether grounds exist for the revocation of an arbitration agreement based on grounds as exist for the revocation of any contract is for the courts to decide, not an arbitrator. This includes the determination of whether arbitration agreements or portions thereof are deemed to be unconscionable or contrary to public policy. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c].

Illegal Terms. This chapter is updated with Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462 , which holds in determining whether to sever or restrict illegal terms rather than voiding the entire contract, the overarching inquiry is whether the interests of justice would be furthered by severance; and in making this determination, the strong legislative and judicial preference is to sever the offending term and enforce the balance of the agreement. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[3][f].

Private Arbitration-- Uninsured Motorist Arbitration. The California Supreme Court in Bouton v USAA Casualty Insurance Company (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 412, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 152 clarified issues required to be arbitrated under mandatory uninsured and underinsured motorist coverage: (1) Coverage questions, i.e., whether the claimant is an "insured" within the policy definition is not a matter for arbitration and must be decided by the court. The California Supreme Court reversed and remanded this issue to the court of appeal, which ultimately held that coverage questions are not arbitrable. The court of appeal reversed regarding coverage questions and remanded with directions to the trial court to conduct further proceedings to determine whether claimant was an insured under the policy. (2) The second issue, whether the insurer is bound by a default judgment against the driver who was at fault is to be arbitrated because it falls squarely within the questions of liability and damages statutorily subject to arbitration. The California Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal in the case in which the default judgment was found to be an arbitrable issue. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.92.

Private Arbitration--Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions Not Sufficient to Waive Trial by Jury. Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions (CCRs) cannot be construed as a contract that is sufficient to waive the constitutional right to trial by jury pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 638, although it may be reasonable to bind owners and the homeowners association concerning the governance of the community and the placement of restrictions on the use of property. A provision of the homeowners association's CCRs required that all disputes between the association and the developer be decided by a general judicial reference. When the legislature stated in Code Civ. Proc. § 638 that the right to jury trial could be waived by written contract, it did not mean to include equitable servitudes created by the CCRs of common interest communities. Treating CCRs as a contract such that they were sufficient to waive the right to trial by jury did not comport with the importance of the right waived [Treo v. Kettner Homeowners Assn. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1055] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21.

Private Arbitration--Trial Court Must Determine Whether Constructive Fraud Existed in Execution of Arbitration Agreement Between Elderly Client and Financial Institution. In Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 938 , plaintiffs are elderly Wells Fargo customers with substantial assets. Wells Fargo assigned a "relationship manager" to plaintiffs in order to ensure that the bank handled all of plaintiff's assets. The trial court concluded that Wells Fargo had established a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiffs, and that this relationship may have given rise to a fiduciary duty on the part of Wells Fargo to make certain that the plaintiffs understood the material terms of the contract they were signing. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court but found that the trial court failed to consider and rule on whether there was fraud in the execution of the brokerage account agreement, which conclusion would necessarily preclude enforcement of any part of that agreement, including the arbitration clause. Therefore, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's order and remanded for further proceedings during which the trial court should determine whether there was fraud in the execution of the agreement. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21.

Private Arbitration--Preliminary Injunction Granted to Prevent Further Economic Harm. In a dispute concerning the termination of a franchise agreement, a preliminary injunction was granted to prohibit the franchisees from continuing to represent themselves as franchisees and from using franchise trademarks. The franchise agreement contained an arbitration provision that excluded disputes in which injunctive relief was sought. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of the injunction, concluding that the franchisors established the likelihood of prevailing on the merits by presenting evidence that the franchisees had failed to make royalty payments and to pay advertising fees [Jay Bharat Developers, Inc. v. Minidis (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 437] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.42.

Private Arbitration--No Jurisdiction to Compel or Dismiss Arbitration After Plaintiff's Voluntary Dismissal of Action. There is nothing to preclude a plaintiff's dismissal of a complaint after a case has been ordered into arbitration, but before an arbitration has commenced. The court of appeal declined to exercise its discretion to review the trial court's order compelling arbitration and stated that an order compelling arbitration is nonappealable; however, the court also stated that after plaintiff's dismissal, the trial court no longer has jurisdiction to order the parties to complete the arbitration. To preclude a plaintiff from voluntarily dismissing a case ordered to arbitration before the arbitration had commenced would be at odds with the right of a plaintiff to dismiss a case voluntarily and without prejudice set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1) and (c) [Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541] . See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.43.

[3] Judicial Review

Correction of Award. Correction of an arbitration award to provide for prejudgment interest not previously awarded or compensation for additional fees and costs not previously awarded is outside the scope of a statutorily permitted correction [Law Offices of David S. Karton v. Segreto (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1]. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.20.

Partial Vacatur of Arbitration Award. This chapter is updated with Sunnyvale Unified Sch. Dist. v. Jacobs (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 168 , which holds an order partially vacating an arbitration award is not authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1286. An appellate court reviewing such an order may treat it as a vacation of the entire arbitration award. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[2][a1].

Private Arbitration--Insured's Complaint of Insurer's Bad Faith and Unreasonable Conduct Following Arbitration Award for Insured's Policy Limit. The insured was injured in an automobile accident caused by an underinsured motorist. After the parties failed to agree on the amount to be paid under the policy, an arbitration was scheduled. The insured received an arbitration award for the policy limit. Thereafter, the insured filed a complaint alleging that the insurer had unreasonably failed to make a good faith effort to resolve the claim. The court held that the insured's allegations of intentional misconduct and bad faith were sufficient, noting that a genuine dispute existed only where an insurer's position was maintained in good faith and on reasonable grounds [Brehm v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1225] . See Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding, § 33.29 . See also Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.18.

Private Arbitration--Courts May Correct an Arbitration Award by Awarding a Settlement Credit for Pre-Arbitration Settlement. In Wade v. Schrader (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1039 , a court has the authority to correct and offset an arbitration award by awarding a settlement credit for a pre-arbitration settlement. Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877, the court can reduce an arbitration award against a nonsettling defendant by awarding a settlement credit of the amount paid to plaintiff by other defendants in prior settlements on the same issue. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, §§ 34.20, 34.31.

[4] Mediation

Mediation--No Waiver of Confidentiality Unless All Parties Sign Mediation Agreement. There is no waiver of confidentiality if all parties did not sign a mediation agreement, and there was an understanding at the time of execution that the mediation agreement would not become operative until all parties signed it. Thus, the agreement would be inadmissible pursuant to Evid. Code § 1119(b) [Rael v. Davis (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1608] . See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.31.

Mediation--Order That Erroneously Failed to Set Forth All of the Material Settlement Terms Was Unenforceable and Must Be Modified. In Hines v. Lukes (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1174 , after participating in a mandatory settlement conference, the parties entered into a settlement that was intended to resolve a dispute concerning the scope of plaintiff's easement on defendant's property. On plaintiff's motion, the court entered an order for entry of judgment pursuant to the settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal held that the order erroneously failed to set forth all of the material settlement terms relating to the easement. Although plaintiff did not argue in her opening brief that the order was incomplete, the court found that the failure to enter a judgment reflecting all of the material terms of settlement that had yet to be fully performed could defeat the purposes of the settlement and spawn further litigation. By omitting material terms of the settlement, the order failed to accurately reflect the parties' agreement and therefore failed to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6. See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.31.

Mediation--Trial Courts Must Determine That Terms of Written Settlement Agreements Are Fair, Adequate, and Reasonable Before Entering Judgment. In Kullar v. Foot Locker Retail, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 116 , the trial court erred in finding the terms of the settlement to be fair, reasonable, and adequate without any evidence of the amount to which class members would be entitled if they prevailed in the litigation, and without any basis to evaluate the reasonableness of the agreed recovery. The court bears the ultimate responsibility to ensure the reasonableness of the settlement terms and must also receive and consider enough information about the nature and magnitude of the claims being settled, as well as the impediments to recovery, to make an independent assessment of the reasonableness of the terms to which the parties have agreed. See Ch. 31, Mediation, §§ 31.14, 31.31.

[1] Amicus Curiae

Amicus Curiae and Attorney's Fees. In Ramon v. County of Santa Clara (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 915 , the court of appeal held that when a party is an amicus curiae in one case and a party defending the same issue in another case, it may be liable for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to a plaintiff under the private attorney general theory. See Ch. 22, Amicus Curiae, § 22.17.

Amicus Briefs--Monetary Contributions. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.200 is amended to require an application for an appellate amicus brief must identify any party or any counsel for a party in the pending appeal who authored the proposed amicus brief in whole or in part, or made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of the brief. It must also identify every person or entity who made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of the brief, other than the amicus curiae, its members, or its counsel in the pending appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.200(c)(3)]. See Ch. 22, Amicus Curiae, §§ 22.16[3], 22.40.

Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons--Confidential Information. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208 is amended to provide if the identity of any party or any entity or person subject to disclosure has not been publicly disclosed in the proceedings and a party wants to keep that identity confidential, the party may serve and file an application for permission to file its certificate under seal separately from its principal brief, motion, application, or opposition. If the application is granted, the party must file the certificate under seal and without service within 10 days of the court's order granting the application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.208(d)(2)]. This chapter is also updated with the revised Judicial Council Form, APP-008, Certificate of Interested Entities or Persons. See Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.12[1][d], 50.83.

Reply Briefs--Increased Size. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40 is amended to provide if produced on a computer, the reply brief must not exceed 8,400 words (previously 4,200 words). The brief must include a certificate by counsel stating the number of words in the brief. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(1)]. If typewritten, the reply brief on the merits must not exceed 30 pages (previously 15 pages) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(2)]. See Ch. 54, Appeal: Supreme Court Review, § 54.34.

[3] Limited Civil Cases

Revised Rules of Court and Forms for Limited Civil Cases Appealed to the Superior Court Appellate Division. Effective January 1, 2009, all Rules of Court relating to the Superior Court Appellate Division are being repealed and replaced with new rules and Judicial Council forms for limited civil, misdemeanor, and infraction cases, as well as entirely new rules for writ proceedings [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rules 8.800 et seq., 10.110 et seq.]. The new rules use similar language recently adopted for Court of Appeal rules, reflect current practices, fill in gaps, improve the record preparation process, create a more logical structure, and provide more forms. See Ch. 345A, Limited Civil Cases .

[3A] Notice of Appeal

Time to File Notice of Appeal. In Bi-Coastal Payroll Services, Inc. v. California Insurance Guarantee Association (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 579 , the court of appeal held that a minute order that was not entitled "Notice of Entry" of judgment or order did not trigger the 60-day period to file a notice of appeal. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

"Mails" in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(1), Does Not Mean "E-mails." However, "Serves" in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(2), Includes "E-mail." In Insyst, Ltd. v. Applied Materials, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1129 , the court of appeal held that the clerk must mail the notice of entry to trigger the time to appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(1), whereas a party may e-mail the notice of entry to trigger the time to appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(2). See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

U.S. Mailing of Judgment Required to Trigger Deadline to Appeal. In Citizens for Civic Accountability v. Town of Danville (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1158 , the court of appeal held that the clerk's e-mailing the judgment to the parties failed to trigger the 60-day appeal deadline under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104(a)(1). See Ch. 42, Appeal; Notice of Appeal, § 42.13[2][a].

[4] Overview

Vexatious Litigants. In Mahdavi v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 32, 36 , the court of appeal held that a court may not require a person who has been determined under Code Civ. Proc. § 391.7 to be a vexatious litigant in prior litigation to seek leave of the court before he or she may file an appeal in a case in which he or she is the defendant. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[1][b].

Fee Waivers on Appeal. This release sets forth the new law regarding governing applications for fee waivers on appeal based on financial condition (in forma pauperis), which went into effect July 1, 2009. The legislature has repealed Gov. Code § 68511.3, and enacted Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641 in its stead. This release also includes the corresponding amended California Rules of Court, Rule 3.50 et seq. and new forms. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[3], and see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.110 et seq.

[4A] Record on Appeal

Appendix on Appeal. In Doppes v. Bentley Motors, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 967 , the court of appeal held that conformed copies are preferred, but not required, for documents included in an appendix on appeal. See Ch. 44, Appeal: Preparing and Filing the Record, § 44.33[4][a].

[4B] Review Standards

Party May Raise New Theories for First Time on Appeal, So Long as It Is a Question of Law That Is Only

Applied to Undisputed Facts in the Record. In Larner v. Los Angeles Doctors Hospital Associates, LP (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1291 , the court of appeal held that to determine the appeal of a summary judgment motion, the appellate court may consider issues not raised in trial court. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.10[4][b].

[5] Supreme Court Review

Reply Briefs--Increased Size. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40 is amended to provide if produced on a computer, the reply brief must not exceed 8,400 words (previously 4,200 words). The brief must include a certificate by counsel stating the number of words in the brief. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(1)]. If typewritten, the reply brief on the merits must not exceed 30 pages (previously 15 pages) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(2)]. See Ch. 54, Appeal: Supreme Court Review, § 54.34.

Writs--Revised Rules and New Form. This chapter is revised throughout with amended and new and amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.485 et seq. governing petitions for writs of mandate, certiorari, or prohibition, or other writs within the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court and appellate courts. This chapter also includes the new Judicial Council Form APP-151, Petition for Writ (Misdemeanor, Infraction, or Limited Civil Case). See Ch. 54, Appeal: Supreme Court Review, § 358.130A.

[1] Practice and Ethics

Attorneys--Anti-SLAPP Statute Does Not Protect Attorney Conflict of Interest. In United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1617 , the court held that it is not a defense to a claim under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3 310(E) that the attorney's actions were protected activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation (anti-SLAPP) statute. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.134.

Attorneys--Client Consent to Division of Fees. In Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302 , the court held that Cal. Rule Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 requires that the client's consent to a division of fees be given prior to the actual division of the fees; it does not require client consent prior to the commencement of work by the associated attorney. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.199[1].

Attorneys--Ethical Walls Permitted for Nonprofit Law Firms. In In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 145, 165 , the California Supreme Court held that a nonprofit law firm does not have the same financial incentives as a private firm insofar as the clients do not pay for services; therefore no single client becomes more important than others, and ethical walls are more effective. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.113[6][c][ii].

Attorneys--California Arbitration Act Does Not Trump MFAA. In Schatz v. Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 557 , the California Supreme Court held that the MFAA does not limit the ability of attorneys and clients to enter into binding contractual arbitration. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.470[5].

Attorneys--Arbitration Awards. In Perez v. Grajales (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 596-603 , the court held that if a party rejects an arbitration award by filing a request for a trial de novo, the party effectively repudiates that rejection by causing or permitting the action to be dismissed. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.478[3].

Attorneys--Attorney Acting in Pro Per May Not Recover Sanctions. In Musaelian v. Adams (2009) 2009 Cal. LEXIS 115 , 5-16, the California Supreme Court held that an attorney may not recover sanctions under Code Civ.

Proc. § 128.7 if the attorney represents himself or herself in the action and does not pay or "incur" any liability for attorney's fees. See Ch. 510, Sanctions, § 510.12[12A].

Fee-Splitting-- Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 Applies to Approval of Class Action Settlement. In Mark v. Spencer (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 219 , the court held that the attorneys' failure to fully disclose their fee-splitting agreement to the court when they petitioned for approval of a class action settlement barred enforcement of the agreement. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.199[1].

Action Against Another Attorney Under Quantum Meruit. In Strong v. Beydoun (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1398 , the court held that attorneys who violate Cal. Rules of Conduct, Rule 2-200 may recover against another attorney under quantum meruit, but not from the client. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.199[1].

[2] Professional Liability

Attorney Not Liable to Beneficiary for Failing to Modify Trust Before Decedent's Death. In Chang v. Lederman (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 67 , the court of appeal held that an estate trust beneficiary could not state a claim against the testator's attorney based on the attorney's failure to modify the trust to increase the beneficiary's bequest, allegedly in accordance with the decedent's wishes, as the requested change was not memorialized in a written document. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.200[3][b][ii].

Factual Innocence Requirement in Criminal Defense Malpractice Cases Extends to All Transactionally Related Offenses. In Wilkinson v. Zelen (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 37 , the court of appeal held that the requirement of factual innocence and exoneration applicable when suing a criminal defense attorney for malpractice applies to transactionally related offenses stemming from the same criminal event that do not necessarily qualify as lesser-included offenses. See Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability, §§ 76.10[2], 76.70.

Interest Under Civ. Code § 3291 Imposed Only Once Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. In Cadlo v. Metalclad Insulation Corp. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1040 , the court of appeal held that when multiple defendants are found liable at trial and each rejected a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer that was less than the judgment ultimately imposed against him or her, the 10 percent prejudgment interest award is imposed only once on the entire judgment under Civ. Code § 3291 and is not imposed separately against each defendant on the full amount of the total judgment. See Ch. 86, Automobiles: Pretrial Motions and Settlement Negotiations, § 86.12[2][b].

Unknowing Community Property Interest in Vehicle Insufficient to Confer Owner Status Under Civ. Code § 3333.4. In Ieremia v. Hilmar Unified School Dist. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 324 , the court of appeal held that despite the fact that a vehicle was purchased with community funds, a spouse's unknowing community property interest was not sufficient to find her an owner of the vehicle for purposes of Civ. Code § 3333.4. See Ch. 82A, Automobiles: Damages, § 82A.15[1][d][ix].

Uninsured Motorist Coverage--Arbitration. In a case originally concerning the attempt of the sister of the automobile policyholder to compel arbitration under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f), on remand from the California Supreme Court, an appellate court held that the question whether a party is an insured with standing to enforce an arbitration provision can be decided by a trial court either in the proceedings on a petition to compel arbitration or in a separate action for declaratory relief [Bouton v. USAA Casualty Ins. Co. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 412] . See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][e][iv].

Uninsured Motorist Coverage--Bad Faith. Ins. Code § 11580.26(b), which prohibits a cause of action against either the insured or insurer for exercising the right to request arbitration of an uninsured motorist claim, does not create a broad immunity from a bad-faith claim based on the insurer's pre-arbitration conduct regarding an uninsured motorist claim [Brehm v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1225] . See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.24[1].

Nondischargeability of Debts Arising From False Statements of Financial Condition. In Boyajian v. New Falls Corp. (In re Boyajian) (9th Cir. 2009) 564 F.3d 1088 , the court construed one of the tests, in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B), for nondischargeability of any debt for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent that it was obtained by use of a false statement as to the debtor's financial condition. The test requires that "the creditor to whom the debtor is liable for the money, property, services, or credit" must have reasonably relied on the false statement. The Ninth Circuit concluded that the reliance requirement should not be construed as meaning that, in the case of a subsequent assignment of the creditor's claim, there must also be proof of reliance by the assignee holding the claim at the time of the bankruptcy. Reliance by the assignee is not required, if the original creditor reasonably relied on the false representation: The assignee can stand in the shoes of the original creditor and assert nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B). For discussion, see Ch. 94, Bankruptcy, § 94.55[4][c].

Scholarship Tax Credit Program Violated Establishment Clause. In Winn v. Arizona Christian School Tuition Organization (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 1002 , the Ninth Circuit held that a state scholarship tax credit program, granting income tax credits to taxpayers who made contributions to nonprofit organizations awarding private school scholarships to children, some of which restricted the availability of scholarships to religious schools, violated the Establishment Clause even though the state did not directly decide whether particular sectarian organizations would receive program aid. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations .

Resolution by Board of Supervisors Urging Cardinal to Withdraw Directive Instructing Against Same-Sex Couple Adoption of Children Did Not Violate Establishment Clause. In Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 595 , the adoption by a city board of supervisors of a non-binding resolution in response to a directive from a Catholic cardinal instructing the city's archdiocese that Catholic social services agencies should not place children in need of adoption with gay or lesbian couples, urging the cardinal, in his capacity as the head of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith at the Vatican, to withdraw the directive did not violate the Establishment Clause by expressing disapproval of and hostility toward the Catholic religion. See Ch. 110, Churches and Other Religious Organizations .

§ 1.205 Civil Procedure

[1] Amended Pleadings

Amended Pleadings--Doe Defendants. Where counsel does not state the dates upon which he or she learned the names of the Doe defendants and does not explain why their identities could not have been discovered sooner, and where the record indicates that counsel had access to the information sooner, and Doe defendants are brought into the case less than one month before the case was set to begin trial, a two-year delay to amend the pleadings is unreasonable and prejudicial [A.N. v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1058]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.14[2].

Inconsistent or Sham Pleadings. Although a trial court has good reason to be hesitant to accept new factual allegations from the plaintiff, at least to the extent they are inconsistent with prior allegations, the court may not demand the production of admissible evidence, specifically excluding plaintiff's own testimony, to support the proposed amendment to the complaint while at the same time preventing plaintiff from conducting any discovery. Although a trial court has powerful tools to shield parties and nonparties from abusive litigation tactics, it does not have the power to demand, as the condition for leave to amend, that a party present admissible evidence sufficient to withstand summary judgment [Sanai v. Saltz (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 746]. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.22.

Answers--General Denial. This chapter is updated with the revised Judicial Council Form PLD-050, General Denial. See Ch. 26, Answers, § 26.90.

[2] Anti-SLAPP Motions

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Protected Activity. This chapter is updated with McConnell v. Innovative Artists Talent and Literary Agency, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 169 , which holds a talent agents' retaliation and wrongful termination claims arose out of defendant's conduct in preventing plaintiffs from performing their job duties, which was not protected activity; the mere fact that defendant's conduct occurred after plaintiffs filed their original complaint seeking a declaration that their employment contracts with defendant were illegal did not transform unprotected activity to protected activity within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP statute. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Illegal Activity. Activity amounting to extortion is not protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 [Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.15[3].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Official Proceeding Authorized by Law. A demand for private, contractual arbitration is not a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1) and thus does not trigger anti-SLAPP protections [Century 21 Chamberlain & Associates v. Haberman (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.14[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Protected Individuals. The protections of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 extend to statements and writings of governmental entities and public officials on matters of public interest [Vargas v. City of Salinas (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.15[2].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Statutory Exceptions. Public interest exception found in Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) does not apply to an action that seeks any advantage, no matter how narrow, for a particular plaintiff [Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal.4th 309]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.16[2].

Motions to Strike--Anti-SLAPP. This chapter is updated with Club Members for an Honest Election v. Sierra Club (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 309 , which holds the exception of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b) to remove an action from the protections of the anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16] applies only to actions brought "solely" in the public interest or on behalf of the general public; use of the term "solely" expressly conveys the Legislative intent that section 425.17(b) not apply to an action that seeks a more narrow advantage for a particular plaintiff. Such an action would not be brought "solely" in the public's interest. The statutory language of 425.17(b) is unambiguous and bars a litigant seeking "any" personal relief from relying on the section 425.17(b) exception. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.16[2].

Motions to Strike--Anti-SLAPP. Communications forming the "principle thrust" or "gravamen" of plaintiff's complaint for interference with contract and prospective economic advantage were not within the litigation privilege of the anti-SLAPP special motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16]; the tone of communications was cooperative and not in "serious consideration" of litigation [Haneline Pacific Properties, LLC v. May (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 311] . See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.43[2].

[3] Change of Name

Change of Name--Confidentiality. Code Civ. Proc. § 1277 has been amended to require that when a participant in the address confidentiality program [see Gov. Code § 6205 et seq.] petitions for a change of name to avoid domestic violence, stalking, or sexual assault, the court must keep confidential the petitioner's current name as well as his or her proposed name. See Ch. 377, Change of Name, §§ 377.14[2] -[4], 377.60[1][c], [f].

[4] Complaints and Cross Complaints

Cross Complaint--Willful Misconduct. A willful misconduct claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f) may be made in a cross-complaint by way of incorporating by reference allegations contained in the complaint [Pine Terrace Apartments, LP v. Windscape, LLC (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 630]. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.15.

Cross Complaints--Summons. This chapter is updated with reference to the new and mandatory Judicial Council Form SUM-110, Summons--Cross-Complaint. See Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.33.

[5] Continuances

Continuance--Summary Judgment. A party opposing summary judgment does not have an automatic right for a second chance to prepare a responsive separate statement or present evidence; instead, the party must demonstrate a reason for the trial court to exercise its discretion, by offering a good faith showing by affidavit that a continuance is needed to obtain facts essential to justify opposition to the motion. Where no such affidavit is filed, and where defendants do not contend they needed a continuance to obtain essential facts, a trial court does not abuse its discretion by declining to grant a continuance [Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554]. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.19[1].

Continuance--ADA. This chapter is updated with In re Marriage of James & Christine C. (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1261 , which holds Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.100 provides a party who is a "person with disabilities" within the meaning of the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA), the California related statutes of Civ. Code § 51 et seq., or other applicable state and federal laws, may seek an "accommodation" that may include making reasonable modifications in policies, practices, and procedures of the court, and may include a continuance of a trial date for an absent party. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.20[3].

[6] Defaults

Defaults--Notice. Although a plaintiff's attorney is not legally required to warn a defendant's attorney before taking a default, if plaintiff's counsel knows the identity of the lawyer representing a defendant, such warning is at the least an ethical obligation of counsel [Fasuyi v. Permatex, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 681] . See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.64[4].

[7] Guardians Ad Litem

Guardians Ad Litem--Minor Is a Parent. Notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a), a minor may appear in court without a guardian ad litem if the minor is a parent of the child who is the subject of Family Court proceedings pursuant to Fam. Code § 7600 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(a)]; dependency proceedings pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 200 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(b)]; guardianship proceedings for a minor child pursuant to Prob. Code § 1500 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(c)]; or any other proceedings concerning child custody, visitation, or support [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(1)(d)]. If the court finds that the minor parent is unable to understand the nature of the proceedings or to assist counsel in preparing the case, the court must, upon its own motion or upon a motion by the minor parent or the minor parent's counsel, appoint a guardian ad litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(c)(2)]. See Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem, § 291.11[3][e]

Interpleader--No Jury Right in Interpleader Action, Even if Apportionment of Competing Claims Requires Resolution of Some Legal Issues. A California Court of Appeal has held that because the gist of an interpleader action is the equitable apportionment of competing claimants' rights to deposited funds or property, there is no right to a jury trial of such an action, even if the equitable issue of apportionment is partially dependent on the resolution of legal issues [Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1489] . See Ch. 314, Interpleader, §§ 314.10[2], 314.60[2][d].

[8] Judges

Judges--Peremptory Challenge. Trial court erred when it struck a peremptory challenge filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 on the ground that it had previously made a determination of contested fact issues relating to the merits, when the trial court's only factual determinations were made in connection with discovery motions and did not relate to the merits of the case. The mere fact that a judge considering discovery motions and sanctions may draw upon his or her knowledge regarding the parties' past conduct in the case is insufficient to broaden the category of cases in which a peremptory challenge is considered untimely [Swift v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 878]. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.77[6][c].

Judges--Education and Training. Commencing five years after last serving in a judicial position either as a full-time judicial officer or as an assigned judge, a retired judicial officer serving as a temporary judge must satisfy all the education and training requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.812(d). However, a retired judicial officer serving as a temporary judge in a small claims case must satisfy all the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 116.240(b) and the rules in Ch. 1, Div. 6, Tit. 2 of the Cal. Rules of Ct. before serving in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.812(d)]. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.21[3].

Judges--Disqualification. Disqualification claim was untimely where party waited seven months before asserting the alleged ground for disqualification, even where appellate court stay of trial court proceedings was in effect for part of that time [Tri Counties Bank v. Superior Court (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1332] . See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.56[2].

Judges--Disqualification. Disqualification was not available where appellate court order to juvenile court was clearly for the performance of ministerial acts, i.e., entering an order denying reunification services and setting a permanent plan selection hearing [C.C. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1019] . See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.77[6][e].

Judges--ADR Neutrals. Inclusion on a court list of ADR neutrals and eligibility to be recommended, appointed, or compensated by the court to serve as a neutral are privileges that are revocable and confer no vested right on the neutral. A court has absolute discretion to determine who may be included on a court list of ADR neutrals or is eligible to be recommended, selected, appointed, or compensated by the court to serve as a neutral (except as otherwise expressly provided by statute or rule of court) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.781(c)]. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.84[5][f][ii].

Judges--Refusal to Reassign Case Subsequent to Peremptory Disqualification Challenge. If a petition for writ of mandate to reassign a case subsequent to a peremptory disqualification challenge requests a temporary stay, it must comply with the following or the reviewing court may decline to consider the request for a temporary stay: it must explain the urgency [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(7)(A)], the cover of the petition must prominently display the notice "STAY REQUESTED" and identify the nature and date of the proceeding or act sought to be stayed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(7)(B)], and the trial court and department involved and the name and telephone number of the trial judge whose order the request seeks to stay must appear either on the cover or at the beginning of the text [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(7)(C)]. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.214[8].

[8A] Judgments

California Does Not Recognize Non-Final Foreign Judgment. In Manco Contracting Company v. Bezdikian (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 192 , the California Supreme Court held that when a foreign judgment is appealed, and the foreign nation's law provides that a judgment on appeal is not final, former Code Civ. Proc. § 1713.2 does not permit a California court to recognize the judgment. See Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.183[2].

Judgments--Void Versus Voidable Judgments. In Lee v. An (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 558, 565 , the court held that if a court lacks fundamental authority, any judgment it renders is void. If a court acts in excess of it jurisdiction or defined power, any judgment it renders is voidable. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgment, § 489.130.

Enforcement of Judgments--Homestead Exemption. In California Coastal Commission v. Allen (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 322 , the court held that the continuous residence requirement for a principal dwelling homestead exemption was not met when the defendant resided elsewhere while retaining the right to be temporarily present in a room on the subject property. See Ch. 294, Homesteads, § 294.50[3].

[8B] Judicial Notice

Judicial Notice--Grant Deeds. In Lockhart v. MVM, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1452 , the court held that grant deeds are judicially noticeable under Evid. Code § 452(c). See Ch. 321, Judicial Notice, § 321.43[11][g].

Judicial Notice--Matters Not Before Trial Court. Court of appeals will not take judicial notice of documents not provided to the trial court [Termo Co. v. Luther (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 394]. See Ch. 321, Judicial Notice, § 321.24.

[9] Jurisdiction: Personal

Jurisdiction--Personal Jurisdiction. While it is true that once a motion to quash is granted, the court may not review the merits of the underlying action, at least as far as they pertain to the defendant that prevailed on the motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction, it does not necessarily follow that the lack of power to rule on the merits of the lawsuit deprives the trial court of jurisdiction to rule upon a collateral motion for attorney fees. A defendant does not forfeit a collateral right to attorney fees by choosing to assert the right to challenge the court's in personam jurisdiction [Shisler v. Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1] (noting that it would be unfair to allow a plaintiff to sue an out-of-state defendant in California, force that defendant to the expense required to quash service, then preclude that defendant from collecting attorney fees that would be available had the defendant prevailed on the merits of the case]. See Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.54.

[10] Jurisdiction: Subject Matter

Jurisdiction--Subject Matter. No appeal or petition filed in the superior court shall be dismissed solely because the appeal or petition was not filed in the proper state court [Code Civ. Proc. § 396(a)]. If the superior court lacks jurisdiction of an appeal or petition, and a court of appeal or the Supreme Court would have jurisdiction, the appeal or petition shall be transferred to the court having jurisdiction upon terms as to costs or otherwise as may be just, and proceeded with as if regularly filed in the court having jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 396(b)]. See Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.43[1].

[11] Limitation of Actions

Limitation of Actions--Death of Defendant. This chapter is updated with Farb v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 678 , which holds in an action arising from a surrogacy contract between a decedent and his former wife and a surrogate mother, it was undisputed that the complaint was filed more than one year after the decedent's death and that none of the enumerated exceptions in Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 applied. In accordance with the plain language of Section 366.2, the one-year limitations period was not tolled during the minority of the children. Moreover, the one-year limitations period in Section 366.2 applied to an action on the liability of a deceased person, without regard to the location of the decedent's personal representative or estate. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.20[8].

Limitation of Actions--Medical Negligence Against Public Entity. This chapter is updated with Roberts v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 474 , which holds in action for medical negligence against public entities, plaintiffs must comply with both the six-month statute of limitations in the Government Claims Act (Gov. Code § 945.6) and the three-year statute in the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act (MICRA) (Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5), and the latter statute establishes the outside date by which actions against health care providers, including public entities, must be brought. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[10][b][vi].

Limitation of Actions--Holocaust Art. This chapter is updated with a warning that a Ninth Circuit panel in August 2009 has held the limitation-period extension in Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(c) for recovery of Holocaust-era artwork is invalid under the field-preemption doctrine because it "intrudes on the power to make and resolve war, a power reserved exclusively to the federal government by the Constitution" [Saher v. Norton Simon Museum of Art at Pasadena (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1016, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 18604]. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, §§ 345.164, 345.187.

Limitation of Actions--Exhausting Administrative Remedies. Internal administrative remedies for resolving employment grievances are optional and need not be exhausted before filing an action under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., but if an aggrieved party voluntarily elects to pursue such an administrative remedy, it does not follow from this that the voluntariness of that election renders equitable tolling unavailable [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Community College Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88] . See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.21[2].

Limitations--Actions Upon Foreign Judgments. The 10-year statute of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.5, applicable to actions upon sister state judgments, also applies to actions upon foreign judgments, regardless of whether the action is styled as a claim for "recognition" or "enforcement" or "domestication" [Manco Contracting Co. (WLL) v. Bezdikian (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 192] . See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[26].

[12] Pretrial Proceedings

Pretrial Proceedings--Motion For Preference. Code Civ. Proc. § 36 is amended to provide that unless the court orders otherwise, a party may file and serve a motion for preference supported by a declaration of the moving party that all essential parties have been served with process or have appeared [Code Civ. Proc. § 36(c)(1)]; and at any time during the pendency of the action, a party who reaches 70 years of age may file and serve a motion for preference [Code Civ. Proc. § 36(c)(2)]. See Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.73[6].

Pretrial Proceedings--Case Management. This chapter is updated with the revised Judicial Council Form CM-110, Case Management Conference Statement. See Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.131.

[12A] Sanctions

Juvenile Court May Not Use Contempt Power to Incarcerate Parent for Failure to Satisfy Condition of Reunification Plan in Dependency Proceeding. The California Supreme Court, in In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217 , has held that because of the unique nature of reunification orders issued in juvenile dependency proceedings, a juvenile court may not use its contempt power to incarcerate a parent solely for the failure to satisfy a condition of a voluntary reunification plan. See Ch. 135, Contempt, § 135.14[5][a].

Attorney Acting in Pro Per May Not Recover Sanctions. In Musaelian v. Adams (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 512 , the California Supreme Court held that an attorney may not recover sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 if the attorney represents himself or herself in the action and does not pay or "incur" any liability for attorney's fees. See Ch. 510, Sanctions, § 510.12[12A].

[13] Service of Summons and Papers

Summons--Cross Complaints. This chapter is updated with the new and mandatory Judicial Council Form SUM-110, Summons--Cross-Complaint. See Ch. 425, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.70A.

Service of Papers--Proof of Service. This chapter is updated with the revised Judicial Council Form POS-040, Proof of Service--Civil, and Judicial Council Form POS-040, Attachment to Proof of Service--Civil (Persons Served). See Ch. 425, Service of Summons and Papers, § 518.92.

[14] Summary Judgment

Summary Judgment--Complex Litigation. This chapter is updated with Magana Cathcart McCarthy v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 106 , which holds parties must comply with the summary judgment procedures mandated by statute and court rules and it is improper for parties to enter into a stipulated judgment that the trial court would have granted summary judgment in a matter for purposes of expediting an appeal; it is not the place of the parties, even if assigned to the complex litigation court, to rewrite the Code of Civil Procedure for their own convenience and economic interests. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.12.

Summary Judgment--Moving Plaintiff's Burden. A plaintiff moving for summary judgment need not disprove any affirmative defenses asserted by defendant; plaintiff's only burden is to prove each element of his own cause of action [Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.33[2][d].

Summary Judgment--Continuance. A party opposing summary judgment does not have an automatic right for a second chance to prepare a responsive separate statement or present evidence; instead, the party must demonstrate a reason for the trial court to exercise its discretion, by offering a good faith showing by affidavit that a continuance is needed to obtain facts essential to justify opposition to the motion. Where no such affidavit is filed, and where defendants do not contend they needed a continuance to obtain essential facts, a trial court does not abuse its discretion by declining to grant a continuance [Oldcastle Precast, Inc. v. Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 554]. See Ch. 136, Continuances, § 136.19[1].

Summary Judgment--Unlawful Detainer. This chapter is updated with new Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1351, which provides (1) notice of a motion for summary judgment in an unlawful detainer case must be given in compliance with Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1013 and 1170.7, and (2) opposition to the motion and any reply to that opposition may be made orally at the time of the hearing. Alternatively, if a party seeks to have a written opposition considered in advance of the hearing, the written opposition must be filed and served on or before the court day before the hearing and must be by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means consistent with Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010, 1011, 1012, and 1013, and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the other party or parties no later than the close of business on the court day before the hearing. The court, in its discretion, may consider written opposition filed later [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1351(b), (c)]. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.18[1].

Summary Judgment--Evidence on Appeal. This chapter is updated with Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686 , which holds in reviewing summary judgment, as in any other appeal, if a party's position depends on patently inadmissible evidence admitted over a proper objection, a reviewing court is empowered, and indeed obliged, to acknowledge the error and disregard the evidence [Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686] . See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.43[3][c].

Summary Judgment--Judicial Notice on Appeal. This chapter is updated with City of Oakland v. Hassey (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1477 , which holds an appellate court may properly decline to take judicial notice under Evid. Code §§ 452 and 459 of a matter that should have been presented to the trial court for its consideration in the first instance. See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.43[3][c].

[15] Vexatious Litigants

Vexatious Litigants--Identity. This chapter is updated with Kobayashi v. Superior Court (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 536 , which holds the Judicial Council is required to keep a list of persons declared by courts to be vexatious litigants subject to prefiling orders, but it is not required to make the list public. In this case, the plaintiff falsely claimed he was not the same person as the one on the vexatious litigant list. Should this issue arise, consult Kobayashi for a list of suggestions for determining if the plaintiff is on the Judicial Council list and for suggestions of improving the verification process. Note: Plaintiff in this case was referred to the county district attorney's office for possible criminal prosecution for perjury. See Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants, § 573.14.

Vexatious Litigants--Appeal. In Mahdavi v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 32 , the court of appeal held that a court may not require a person who has been determined under Code Civ. Proc. § 391.7 to be a vexatious litigant in prior litigation to seek leave of the court before he or she may file an appeal in a case in which he or she is the defendant. See Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[1][b].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.206

§ 1.206 Civil Rights

[1] Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations

City's Rejection of Monument Not Subject to Free Speech Clause. In Pleasant Grove City, Utah v. Summum (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1125 , the United States Supreme Court held that although a public park is a traditional public forum for speeches and other transitory expressive acts, the display of a permanent monument in a public park is not a form of expression to which the forum analysis applies. Thus, a city's decision not to accept a privately donated monument for permanent placement in a public park was best viewed as a form of government speech and therefore not subject to scrutiny under the Free Speech Clause. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings and Demonstrations .

Ordinance Gave Official Unduly Broad Discretion. In Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788 , the Ninth Circuit held that the open-ended standard in a city's parade ordinance, combined with the absence of a requirement that officials articulate their reasons or an administrative-judicial review process, vested the chief of police with sweeping authority to determine whether a parade could utilize the forum of the streets to broadcast its message, which was prohibited by the First Amendment as placing unfettered discretion in the hands of the licensing officials and rendered the parade ordinance constitutionally defective on its face. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings and Demonstrations .

[1A] Discrimination in Business Establishments and Housing

Intentional Discrimination Need Not Be Shown for Disability Discrimination Under Unruh Act. In Munson v. Del Taco, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 661 , pursuant to the request of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff who establishes a violation of the Americans With Disabilities Act need not prove intentional discrimination in order to obtain damages for disability discrimination under the Unruh Act in violation of Civil Code § 51(f), disapproving two California Court of Appeal cases insofar as they held to the contrary. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Trustee's Comments to Mother of Trust Beneficiary Not Sexual Harassment Violating Civ. Code § 51.9. In Hughes v. Pair (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1035 , alleged comments made by a trustee to the mother of the trust beneficiary during a single telephone conversation and a brief statement to the mother in person later the same day during a social event at a museum failed to establish "severe" or "pervasive" conduct necessary to pursue a claim of hostile environment sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9, as those terms are interpreted under Title VII and FEHA in decisions pertaining to sexual harassment in the workplace. The mother also failed to allege facts establishing a violation of Civ. Code § 51.9 based on the quid pro quo form of sexual harassment. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Private Marina Was Subject to Americans With Disabilities Act. In Nicholls v. Holiday Panay Marina, L.P. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 966 , an action under the ADA by a paraplegic plaintiff who leased a slip at a marina and sued the marina for lack of wheelchair access, the trial court erred in finding that the private marina was not a public accommodation subject to the ADA. The marina was on its face rental establishment subject to the ADA, the fact that the marina did not allow within the marina any functions open to the general public was not dispositive, and the trial court erroneously miscast the marina as a permanent lodging exempt from the ADA, because there was no evidence any marina tenants lived at the marina or regularly slept overnight on their boats. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Business May Be Liable for Sexual Harassment By Ratification. In C.R. v. Tenet Healthcare Corp. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1094 , the court held that Civ. Code § 51.9 does not require that the defendant have a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff, and that principles of ratification apply to a Section 51.9 cause of action, so that a business can be liable for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9 based its ratification of the actions of its employees. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Error to Dismiss FHA Action Claiming Discrimination in Underwriting Homeowners' Insurance Policies. In Ojo v. Farmers Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 565 F.3d 1175 , a district court erred in dismissing a class action by an African-American homeowner's insurance policy owner against the homeowner's insurance company, alleging that he and other minorities received less favorable pricing than Caucasians as a result of a discriminatory credit evaluative and scoring system developed and administered by the insurer in violation of FHA. The court read the complaint as challenging credit scoring per se, when in fact it challenged only the use of undisclosed factors in credit scoring and the disparate impact that resulted and did not "impair" state law by challenging credit scoring per se. The court also erred in interpreting the state's credit scoring law as permitting disparate impact race discrimination despite evidence the state legislature intended to prohibit insurers from engaging in unfair discrimination, so that the federal FHA claim was not reverse-preempted by McCarran-Ferguson. See Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

No Standing Under Unruh Civil Rights Act or Gender Tax Repeal Act. In Surrey v. TrueBeginnings (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 414 , the Court of Appeal held that a person must tender the purchase price for a business's services or products to have standing to sue it for alleged discriminatory practices relating to it under either the Unruh Civil Rights Act or the Gender Tax Repeal Act. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

Constitutional Guarantees of Freedom of Religion and Speech Did Not Allow Physicians to Discriminate in Violation of Unruh Act. In North Coast Women's Care Medical Group, Inc. v. Benitez (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1145, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 708 , the California Supreme Court held that the rights of religious freedom and free speech, as guaranteed in both the federal and the California Constitutions, do not exempt a medical clinic's physicians from complying with the Unruh Civil Rights Act's prohibition against discrimination based on a person's sexual orientation. Thus, physicians employed by a clinic could not refuse fertility treatments to a lesbian on the basis of the physicians' religious beliefs regarding the particular type of treatment. To avoid a conflict between their religious beliefs and the Unruh Act's antidiscrimination provisions, the physicians could simply refuse to perform the medical procedure at issue for any patient of the clinic or, because they would incur liability under the Act if they infringed on the right to full and equal services of the clinic's medical practice, they could avoid the conflict by ensuring that every patient requiring the procedure received full and equal access to the procedure through a clinic physician lacking their religious objections. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.11[c].

Prevailing Defendant Entitled to Attorneys' Fees Under Civ. Code § 55. In Molski v. Arciero Wine Group (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 786 , an action under Civ. Code § 55, the trial court acted within its discretion when it determined the defendant was the prevailing party and awarded attorneys' fees. Plaintiff obtained none of the relief he sought and defendant obtained a judgment in its favor on every cause of action. Further, there was no requirement that a prevailing defendant be awarded fees only if plaintiff's claim was frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless; any violations were remediated by defendant before the action was filed, and plaintiff did not voluntarily dismiss his groundless claim for injunctive relief. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.36[4][b].

ADA Preempts California Disabled Persons Act as to Attorneys' Fees. In Hubbard v. SoBreck, LLC (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 983 , an action under the ADA and the California Disabled Persons Act, an award of attorneys' fees to prevailing defendants was preempted by the ADA, even though the CAPA authorized fees to the "prevailing party." The trial court found plaintiffs' claims were not frivolous and fees were not warranted under the ADA, and a violation of the federal ADA constituted a violation of the CAPA so that to the extent Civ. Code § 55 mandated imposition of fees on a losing plaintiff who brought both a nonfrivolous ADA action and a parallel action under the CAPA, the fee award under the CAPA would be inconsistent with the ADA. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.36[4][b].

New Requirements for Construction-Related Accessibility Claims. The Legislature has enacted the Construction-Related Accessibility Claims Act [Civ. Code § 55.51 et seq.], with new requirements for those claims. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments, § 116.36[6][e].

[2] Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

No Bivens Claim Stated Against Former Attorney General or Former FBI Director by Detainee. In Ashcroft v. Iqbal (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1937 , a Bivens action by a citizen of Pakistan who was arrested on criminal charges in the United States in the wake of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks and detained by federal officials, the former Attorney General and the former Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were entitled to qualified immunity as to allegations they adopted an unconstitutional policy subjecting him to harsh conditions of confinement on account of his race, religion, or national origin. The complaint did not plead factual matter that, if taken as true, stated a claim that defendants deprived him of his clearly established constitutional rights by failing to plead sufficient facts to state a claim for purposeful and unlawful discrimination. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

School Officials Entitled to Qualified Immunity for Violation of Student's Rights Through Search. In Safford Unified School Dist. v. Redding (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2633 , the United States Supreme Court held that, although a 13-year-old student's Fourth Amendment right was violated when she was subjected to a search of her bra and underpants by school officials acting on a reasonable suspicion she had brought forbidden prescription and over-the-counter drugs to school because there were no reasons to suspect the drugs presented a danger or were concealed in her underwear, the school officials who ordered and conducted the unconstitutional search were entitled to qualified immunity from liability, because there was reason to question the clarity with which the right was established. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post Civil-War Civil Rights Statutes , and see Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Absolutely Immunity for Parole Decisions. In Brown v. Cal. Dep't of Corrections (9th Cir. 2009) 554 F.3d 747 , the Ninth Circuit held that state prosecutors and state parole board officials have absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for parole recommendations, because parole decisions are a continuation of the sentencing process. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Saucier* Not Inflexible Mandate and Officers Entitle to Qualified Immunity. In Pearson v. Callahan (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 808 , the Supreme Court held that the Saucier procedure for determining qualified immunity should not be regarded as mandatory, and courts may exercise their discretion in determining qualified immunity. Further, the police officers who arrested plaintiff without a warrant and without exigent circumstances were entitled to qualified immunity because their entry into his home did not violate clearly established law. When the entry occurred, the "consent-once-removed" doctrine had gained acceptance in the lower courts and the officers were entitled to rely on those cases, even though their own Federal Circuit had not yet ruled on "consent-once-remove" entries, so that the unlawfulness of officers' conduct was not clearly established. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Title IX Does Not Preclude Action Under § 1983. In Fitzgerald v. Barnstable School Committee (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 788, 172 L. Ed. 2d582, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 592 , an action by parents alleging unconstitutional gender discrimination in a school based on alleged peer-to-peer sexual harassment, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 did not preclude an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because Congress did not intend Title IX to preclude § 1983 constitutional suits. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Prosecutors Entitled to Absolute Immunity. In Van De Kamp v. Goldstein (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 855, 172 L. Ed. 2d 706, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 1003 , the Supreme Court held that prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity from a claim of failure to provide potential impeachment information about a jailhouse informant who testified against plaintiff at his murder trial that the informant had previously received reduced sentences for providing prosecutors with favorable testimony in other cases, at least some prosecutors in the district attorney's office knew about the favorable treatment, the office had not provided plaintiff's attorney with that information, and the prosecution's failure to provide the attorney with the potential impeachment information had led to his erroneous conviction. Absolute immunity extended to claims the prosecution failed to disclose impeachment material due to a failure properly to train prosecutors, a failure properly to supervise prosecutors, or a failure to establish an information system containing potential impeachment material about informants. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Bivens* Relief Not Precluded for Public Health Service Employees. In Castaneda v. United States (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 682 , the Ninth Circuit held that 42 U.S.C. § 233(a), providing that the remedy against the United States provided by the Federal Tort Claims Act ("FTCA") for damage for personal injury, including death, resulting from the performance of medical, surgical, dental, or related functions by any commissioned officer or employee of the Public Health Service while acting within the scope of office or employment, is exclusive of any other civil action or proceeding by reason of the same subject matter against the officer or employee whose act or omission gave rise to the claim, did not establish the Federal Tort Claims Act as the exclusive remedy for constitutional violations committed by officers and employees of the Public Health Service in failing to provide plaintiff's decedent adequate medical attention while in their custody, resulting in his death, and did not preclude a Bivens cause of action against them. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Standard for Police Officer's Behavior Was Whether He Acted With Purpose to Harm. In Porter v. Osborn (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 1131 , an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by parents for violation of their Fourteenth Amendment due process right to associate with their son, who was killed by defendant police officer, the appropriate standard of culpability to apply to the conduct of the police officer was whether the officer's behavior shocks the conscience, which would be met by a showing that he acted with a purpose to harm plaintiffs' decedent for reasons unrelated to legitimate law enforcement objectives. Because that standard was clearly established at the time of the shooting, facts suggesting that the officer's own conduct created and agitated the escalating situation and his reactions were disproportionate to the situation he faced were more relevant to the district court's determination on remand whether the officer was entitled to qualified immunity or whether the plaintiffs could show the officer's purpose was to harm plaintiffs' decedent for reasons unrelated to legitimate law enforcement objectives. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

[3] Prisoner Rights

Prison-Delivery Rule Applies to Criminal and Civil Appeals. In Silverbrand v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 46

Cal. 4th 106 , the California Supreme Court held that under the prison-delivery rule, which had previously only been applied to criminal appeals by self-represented prison inmates, the court of appeal erred in dismissing as untimely a notice of appeal by a state prison inmate of a trial court's dismissal of his medical malpractice lawsuit as barred by the statute of limitations. The inmate properly delivered the notice of appeal to prison authorities before the expiration of the 60-day deadline for appealing the judgment, even though the notice was not received by the superior court clerk until two days after the last day to file the notice of appeal had passed. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Error to Dismiss Complaint for Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Without Findings Prisoner Was Able to Exhaust Them. In Marella v. Terhune (9th Cir. 2009) 562 F.3d 983 , a magistrate judge (and the district court by adopting the magistrate judge's recommendations and report) erred in concluding that, as a matter of law, although a prison's regulations explicitly created an exception to the timely filing requirement for an administrative grievance if an inmate did not have the opportunity to file the grievance during the filing period, an inmate's purported inability to file an administrative grievance due to his time in the prison hospital and in administrative segregation following a knife attack by fellow inmates of which he was complaining was not an exception to the timely filing requirement, because the magistrate judge did not make factual findings as to whether the inmate had access to the necessary forms and the ability to file during his stay in the hospital and prison infirmary or during administrative lockdown. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Harmless Error to Order Involuntary Administration of Psychotropic Medication Mentally Disordered Defendant Absent From Hearing. In People v. Fisher (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1006 , the constitutional right of a mentally disordered offender to a fair hearing was violated by an order authorizing the state hospital to forcibly administer psychotropic medication, issued at a hearing at which he was absent for one day. He did not personally waive his right to be present and was not unable to attend the hearing. But the deprivation of his right to be present was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, because his counsel thoroughly cross-examined the witness whose testimony was compelling, and the offender, who was thereafter present, was given a full and fair opportunity to rebut the testimony but did not do so. The offender was not denied the right to a jury trial, because there is no federal or state constitutional or state statutory right to a jury trial, and substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that he was a danger to others within the meaning of Welf & Inst. Code § 5300. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Failure to Specifically Grieve Deliberate Indifference Did Not Invalidate Exhaustion of Remedies. In Griffin v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2009) 557 F.3d 1117 , the Ninth Circuit held that an inmate's failure to specifically grieve deliberate indifference to his medical needs as an Eighth Amendment violation did not invalidate his exhaustion attempt concerning his unsatisfactory bunking situation. However, he failed to exhaust administrative remedies properly because he did not provide notice of prison staff's alleged disregard of his lower bunk assignments, and his grievance did not provide enough information to allow prison officials to take appropriate responsive measures. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

No Private Right of Action for Damages for Cruel and Unusual Punishment. In Giraldo v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231 , the Court of Appeal held that there is no private right of action for damages for violation of the cruel or unusual punishment clause of Cal. Const., art. I, § 17. Thus, the trial court properly dismissed the claim of a male-to-female transgender inmate based on defendants' alleged failure to take action on plaintiff's repeated complaints that she was being beaten and raped by her cellmate at a state prison. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Blanket Strip Search Policy of Pre-Arraignment Detainees Unconstitutional. In Bull v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2008) 539 F.3d 1193 , the Ninth Circuit held that blanket strip searches of pre-arraignment detainees regardless of severity of charge and without reasonable suspicion are unconstitutional as violating the detainees' Fourth Amendment rights, and that a policy of strip searching arrestees solely because they are classified for housing in the general population, in the absence of any reasonable suspicion, violates the arrestees' constitutional rights. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.14B.

Prisoner Properly Barred From Filing Complaint After Three "Strikes" Under PLRA. In O'Neal v. Price (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 1146 , the trial court properly declined to allow a prisoner to proceed in forma pauperis after determining that three prior actions brought by the prisoner constituted strikes for the purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g) as having been brought and dismissed within meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). The district court disposed of two actions in forma pauperis complaints during the screening process mandated by 28 U.S.C. §§ 1915A, 1915(e)(2), and 42 U.S.C. § 1997e(c), and in order to determine the actions did not qualify for in forma pauperis status, the district court necessarily reviewed the complaints and assessed their merits, even though the district court did not use the word "dismiss" in its disposition of the actions. The district court dismissed the complaint in the third action both for failure to exhaust and for failure to state a substantive claim for alleged deprivation of his medicine, so that it was clear from the magistrate judge's reasoning, adopted by the district court, that he considered the prisoner's failure to state a claim to be a fully sufficient condition for his recommendation for dismissal with prejudice. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights, § 114.28[7].

PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.207 Class Actions

Labor Union Lacks Standing to Bring Action on Behalf of Its Members Under Unfair Competition Law or Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act. The California Supreme Court has held that a labor union lacks standing to sue as an assignee or association of its members under the Unfair Competition Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.] or the Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 [see Lab. Code § 2698 et seq.]. The Court also held that an employee's representative action under the Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act need not satisfy class-action requirements [Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993 , and Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.11[2], 120.15[1], [4].

Proposition 64's Standing Requirements Apply Only to Class Representative. The California Supreme Court has held that the standing requirements imposed by Proposition 64 for a private action under the unfair competition law--a representative plaintiff must have suffered injury in fact and must have lost money or property as a result of the alleged unfair business practice of the defendant [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204]--apply only to the class representative, and unnamed class members need not show injury in fact or actual loss of money or property. The Court also held that in the context of an alleged fraudulent business practice, the class representative must demonstrate actual reliance on the allegedly deceptive or misleading statements of the defendant, in accordance with settled principles regarding the element of reliance in ordinary fraud actions. Thus, the representative plaintiff need not plead or prove with an unrealistic degree of specificity that the plaintiff relied on particular misrepresentations or false statements when the alleged unfair practice is an extensive and long-term advertising campaign [In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.15[1].

Plaintiff Who Voluntarily Settles Lacks Standing to Pursue Class Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that a named plaintiff who voluntarily settles his or her individual claim lacks standing to proceed as a class representative, even if the settlement purports to reserve a right to pursue a "class claim" [Watkins v. Wachovia Corp. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1576]. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.15[1].

Violation of Consumers Legal Remedies Act Does Not Confer Standing to Sue Unless Consumer Suffers Some "Damage." The California Supreme Court in Meyer v. Sprint Spectrum L.P. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 634 has held that a representative plaintiff who has not suffered pecuniary damages may nevertheless have standing to sue under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act if he or she has incurred some damage, such as transaction costs or opportunity costs, as a result of an alleged violation of the Act. However, the existence of a violation of the Act is not itself a form of "damage" and will not, by itself, confer standing on a consumer exposed to the violation (such as a consumer who enters into a contract that includes an unconscionable term that is never enforced). See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.15[1].

Denial of Class Certification Does Not Have Issue-Preclusive Effect in Subsequent Action That Does Not Present Identical Class-Certification Issues. The court, in Johnson v. GlaxoSmithKline, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1497 , has held that a judgment denying class certification in one action will not preclude litigation of the class-certification issue in a subsequent action in which the class-certification issues are not identical to those presented in the earlier action. See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.23[2].

Private Attorney General Awards in Class Action Suits. In Grodensky v. Artichoke Joe's Casino (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1399 , the court of appeal held that when assessing the disproportionate financial burden under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 in a class action, the trial court should look at the expected (not actual) value for the entire class and then discount this benefit by an estimate of the probability of success at the time vital litigation decisions were made. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56.

"Death Knell" Doctrine Does Not Authorize Appeal From Order Denying Class Certification if Order Grants Leave to Amend. A California Court of Appeal has held that the "death knell" doctrine, under which an order denying class certification is immediately appealable if it effectively dismisses all class members except the named plaintiff, does not extend to allow an appeal from an order granting a demurrer with leave to amend. Such an order does not sound the "death knell" of the class action, since the complaint can be amended in a way that would permit class certification [Farwell v. Sunset Mesa Property Owners Assn., Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1545] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.18[5][a].

Prelitigation Settlement Efforts Not Required for Fee Award Under "Private Attorney General" Statute. The California Supreme Court has held that a prelitigation settlement demand is not a prerequisite to an award of attorney's fees under the private attorney general statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, unless the award is made pursuant to the catalyst theory in a case in which does not result in a judicial resolution or a judicially recognized change in the parties' legal relationship [Vasquez v. State (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, § 120.24[3].

PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.207A Constitutional Law

Constitutional Amendment Versus Revision. This chapter is updated with Strauss v. Horton (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 364 , which holds that Proposition 8, which prohibits same-sex marriage after November 2009, is an amendment to the California Constitution, and that the distinction drawn by the California Constitution between an amendment and a revision does not turn on the relative importance of the measure, but rather upon the measure's scope. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.13[3].

Same-Sex Marriages and Proposition 8. This chapter is updated with Strauss v. Horton (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 364 , which holds Proposition 8 is a permissible constitutional amendment to limit the rights of people of the same sex to marry, is not an impermissible constitutional revision, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine and is not invalid under an "inalienable rights" theory, and applies both to marriages performed in California and to those performed in other jurisdictions. The Court observed that if there is to be a change to the state constitutional rule embodied in that measure, it must "find its expression at the ballot box." The Court also concluded that Proposition 8 does not apply retroactively. Therefore, the approximately 18,000 marriages of same-sex couples that were performed between the time of the Court's decision in In re Marriage Cases and the effective date of Proposition 8 (November 5, 2008) remain valid in all respects and must continue to be recognized in this state. The Court noted that Proposition 8 did not entirely repeal or abrogate a same-sex couple's state constitutional rights of privacy, due process, and equal protection that the Court had previously recognized in In re Marriage Cases [In re Marriage Cases (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 757]. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.42[3][b].

Equal Protection and Proposition 8. The California Supreme Court has ruled that sexual orientation is a suspect classification for purposes of the California Constitution's Equal Protection Clause. Therefore, statutes that treat persons differently because of their sexual orientation are subject to strict scrutiny [see In re Marriage Cases (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 757]. The ratification by the voters of Proposition 8, which added Cal. Const., art. I, § 7.5 to the state constitution effective November 5, 2008, limits the scope of equal protection in respect to marriage on the basis of sexual orientation by defining a valid marriage as being between a man and a woman. Per Strauss v. Horton (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 364 , upholding the constitutionality of Proposition 8 "[w]ith respect to the specific subject of the designation of the word 'marriage,' Proposition 8 does change the rule, set forth in the majority opinion in the Marriage Cases, that limiting access to this designation to opposite-sex couples constitutes an impermissible violation of the state equal protection clause. ... By incorporating into the California Constitution a specific provision that expressly restricts the designation of 'marriage' to the union of a man and a woman, Proposition 8 must be understood as creating a limited exception to the state equal protection clause as interpreted in the majority opinion in the Marriage Cases. ... This exception--although constituting the governing state constitutional rule with regard to the specific matter it addresses--does not alter the general equal protection principles set forth in the Marriage Cases and in other California decisions interpreting and applying the state constitutional equal protection clause. Those principles continue to apply in all other contexts." See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.63A.

Legislative Powers. This chapter is updated with The Zumbrun Law Firm v. California Legislature (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1603 , which holds under Cal. Const., art. IV, § 7, the Legislature retains powers necessary to its lawmaking functions, including the power to protect the safety and security of the Legislature, its members, and any buildings and grounds used by the Legislature. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.21[3][b].

Separation of Powers and Expenditure of Funds. This chapter is updated with County of San Diego v. California (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 580 , which holds while a court cannot compel the Legislature either to appropriate funds or to pay funds not yet appropriated, no violation of the separation of powers doctrine occurs when a court orders appropriate expenditures from already existing funds. The test is whether such funds are reasonably available for the expenditures in question. Funds are reasonably available for reimbursement when the purposes for which those funds were appropriated are generally related to the nature of costs incurred. There is no requirement that the appropriation specifically refer to the particular expenditure, nor that past administrative practice must sanction coverage from a particular fund. Still, funds appropriated for one specific educational purpose may not be judicially diverted to another. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.21[4][a].

Local Regulation and Preemption. This chapter is updated with Rental Housing Ass'n of N. Alameda Cty. v. City of Oakland (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 741 , which holds absent a clear indication of preemptive intent from the Legislature, the court presumes that local regulation in an area over which the local government traditionally has exercised control is not preempted by state law. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.24[1].

California Takings Clause Broader Than Federal. This chapter is updated with Monks v. City of Rancho Palos Verdes (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 263 , which holds California's Takings Clause, Cal. Const., art. I, § 19, requires compensation for damage as well as a taking, which the Federal Takings Clause, U.S. Const., amend. V does not. Therefore, the California Takings Clause protects a somewhat broader range of property values than does the corresponding federal provision. Aside from that difference, California courts have construed the clauses congruently. Thus, courts have analyzed takings claims under decisions of both the California and United States Supreme Courts. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.32[3][d].

Economic Regulation. This chapter is updated with Amaral v. Cintas Corp. No. 2 (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1157 , which holds economic regulation is subject to a less strict vagueness test because its subject matter is often more narrow, and because businesses, which face economic demands to plan behavior carefully, can be expected to consult relevant legislation in advance of action. Indeed, the regulated enterprise may have the ability to clarify the meaning of the regulation by its own inquiry, or by resort to an administrative process. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.52.

Reformation of Laws. This chapter is updated with Am. Bankers Ass'n v. Lockyer (9th Cir. 2008) 541 F.3d 1214 , which holds if the Legislature's intent clearly would be furthered by application of the revised version rather than by the alternative of invalidation of the entire statute, then the court is to sever the invalid portion of the statute; and under California law, when faced with a question of whether to reform a state statute, the function of a federal court is to divine, to the best of its ability, how the state's highest court would resolve that state law issue. See Ch. 126A, Constitutional Law, § 126A.77.

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.208

§ 1.208 Contracts and Commercial Law

Advertising--Standing to Sue for CAN-SPAM Act Violations. In Gordon v. Virtumundo, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 1040, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 17518 , the court discussed how to resolve a threshold issue in any private action based on a violation of the federal CAN SPAM Act [15 U.S.C. § 7701 et seq.], which is whether the plaintiff meets the statutory standing requirements. That is, was the plaintiff an "Internet access" service provider, and was the plaintiff "adversely affected by" actionable statutory violations? See Ch. 14, Advertising, § 14.15[3][f][i].

Banks--Right of Setoff Extends to Recouping Overdraft and Charging Fee. In Miller v. Bank of Am. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 630 , the California Supreme Court held that a bank's practice of recouping overdrafts and extracting insufficient funds fees from the customer's overdrawn account is permissible in light of the unequivocal statement in Fin. Code § 864(a)(2) that overdrafts and bank charges are not debts, meaning that they are not subject to the statute's limitations on a bank's right of setoff. See Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks, § 95.294.

Negotiable Instruments--Claiming Statutory Damages Precludes Claim for Prejudgment Interest on Dishonored Check. In Imperial Merchant Servs., Inc. v. Hunt (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 381, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 8030 , the California Supreme Court answered the question, certified to it by the Ninth Circuit, whether a debt collector recovering on a dishonored check may recover both a service charge under Civ. Code § 1719(a)(1) and prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. The court held that the statutory damages prescribed in Civ. Code § 1719 are exclusive; therefore, a payee who recovers a service charge pursuant to Civ. Code § 1719 may not also recover prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. The case is discussed in comments to forms in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments, §§ 385.119[4], 385.120[4][a].

Usury--Structured Settlement Transfer Act. This chapter is updated with 321 Henderson Receivables Origination LLC v. Sioteco (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1059 , which holds the transfer of structured settlement payments under the Structured Settlement Transfer Act [Ins. Code § 10136 et seq.] does not implicate the prohibition against usury in Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 because a structured settlement transfer is not a loan or forbearance but is instead a sale, as indicated in Ins. Code § 10136(b). See Ch. 568, Usury, § 568.12[1].

Credit Card Transactions--Prohibition Against Recording Personal Identification Information. In Party City Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 497 , the court held that the prohibition in Civ. Code § 1747.08(c) against requesting a cardholder's "personal identification information" in connection with a credit card transaction does not encompass the cardholder's five-digit ZIP code, which is not personal identification information" as defined in the statute. See Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans , § 127.8[17][a].

Contracts--Fraud in Inducement, Fraud in Execution, and Arbitration Clause. In Brown v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 938 , the court clarified that when a party to a contract containing an arbitration clause elects to resist arbitration and asserts fraud in the inducement or fraud in the execution, special procedural rules apply because an arbitration clause is considered to be separable from the contract. The court explained when the fraud issue is decided by the arbitrator, and when the court decides it. See Ch. 140, Contracts, § 140.22[1].

Sales --Implied Warranties-- Requirement for Privity Between Seller and Buyer. In Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 116 , the court concluded that if the manufacturer or supplier of goods affirmatively engages in conduct directly with the ultimate buyer, so that functionally the manufacturer or supplier is in the position of the direct seller, it is fair and appropriate to hold that manufacturer or supplier to an implied warranty that the goods will be fit for the buyer's purposes, if all other elements of the buyer's claim have been established. In that case, the lack of actual privity between those parties can be disregarded. See Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties, § 502.24[7].

Damages--Setoff Against Awarded Damages When Each Party Has Claim Against Other on Same Contract. In Great W. Drywall, Inc. v. Roel Constr. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 761 , the court held that in an action for breach of contract, if the defendant pleads a claim against the plaintiff based on defective performance of the same contract, and damages are awarded to both parties on their claims against each other, then each party is entitled to have the two awards set off against each other, regardless of whether the defendant pleaded a tort claim (such as negligent performance) or a contract claim against the plaintiff. For discussion of setoffs against damages awarded in contract actions, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.81.

Consumers Legal Remedies Act--Meaning of "Any Damage" as Standing Requirement. In Meyer v. Sprint Spectrum L.P. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 634 , the California Supreme Court clarified that in order to bring an action under the Consumers Legal Remedies Act [Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.], not only must a consumer be exposed to an unlawful practice, but there must also be some kind of resulting damage. The Court disapproved its dictum in an earlier case, to the effect that the standing requirement of suffering "any damage" [Civ. Code § 1780(a)] means suffering the infringement of any legal right as defined by Civ. Code § 1770 [see Kagan v. Gibraltar Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 582, 593] . The Court concluded that a consumer has not suffered any damage as a result of an unlawful practice if unconscionable terms in a consumer contract have not yet actually been enforced so as to impose "some kind of tangible increased cost or burden" on the consumer. In that situation, the consumer has no standing under Civ. Code § 1780(a) to sue for injunctive relief aimed at precluding the future use of an unlawful practice. See Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act, § 504.13[1].

Sales of Goods--Merchant's Implied Warranty of Title. In Pacific Sunwear of Cal., Inc. v. Olaes Enters., Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 466 , the court held, on a question of first impression in California, that a merchant's implied warranty that the goods are "free of the rightful claim of any third person by way of infringement or the like" [Com. Code § 2312(3)] protects the buyer against a nonfrivolous claim of infringement that has any significant and adverse effect on the buyer's ability to make use of the goods, without regard to whether the claim ultimately might prove successful in litigation. See Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties, § 502.22.

Contracts--Specific Performance. A California appellate court has confirmed that specific performance can be appropriately decreed even in the case of a commercial contract (when, usually, damages would presumably be an adequate remedy) and even though that relief would entail protracted supervision or direction by the court and the exercise of special knowledge, skill, and judgment by the party ordered to perform. In this case, the trial court properly ordered the defendant to plan and undertake the plugging of abandoned oil wells on property that the defendant had purchased from the plaintiff [Union Oil Co. v. Greka Energy Corp. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 129] . See Ch. 528,

Specific Performance, § 528.44.

Truth in Lending Act--Private Education Loans. Congress has extended the reach of the Truth in Lending Act to private lenders that make education loans, as defined. Although unsecured consumer loans exceeding $25,000 are generally exempt from TILA regulation, that exemption does not cover private education loans subject to the new legislation [see Pub. L. 110-315, § 1001 et seq.]. See Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans, § 127.34.

PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.209 Corporations and Business Entities

Director's Right to Inspect Records. In Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385 , the court held that a corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation. See Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.19[3].

Derivative Actions--Defense by Corporation. In Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995 , a case of first impression, the court addressed the question of whether a corporation can file a demurrer opposing a shareholder's derivative action complaint, and, if so, on what grounds. The court held that the corporation has no ground to challenge the merits of a derivative claim by demurrer because the claim is filed on the corporation's behalf, from which the corporation stands to benefit, but may demur to the complaint on the ground that the plaintiff lacks standing to sue derivatively. The court noted that the corporation also may assert the "special litigation committee" defense, to the effect that the corporation legitimately does not want to pursue the litigation. See Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions, § 168.15[3].

Corporations--"Outside Reverse Piercing" Doctrine. In a case of first impression, a California appellate court has concluded that the theory of outside reverse piercing (or third-party piercing) of the corporate veil, by which the corporate veil is pierced to permit a third-party judgment creditor to reach corporate assets to satisfy claims against a shareholder, is not recognized in California [Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Kaswa Corp. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1510] . See Ch. 161, Corporations: Alter Ego Liability, § 161.11[2].

Corporations--Annual Report to Shareholders. Corp. Code § 1501(a) has been amended [Stats. 2008, ch. 177, § 1] to provide that a corporation with an outstanding class of securities registered under § 12 of the federal Exchange Act will satisfy California's annual report requirement by complying with federal regulations relating to internet availability of the annual report. See Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, §§ 165.25[2], 165.73.

Securities--Broker-Dealer Licensure of Directors and Officers. Dept. of Corporations Release No. 119-C (Oct. 22, 2008) clarifies licensure requirements for directors and officers of issuers who do not receive commissions for effecting securities transactions. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, §§ 515.13[5], 515.15.

Franchise Regulation--Recreational Vehicle Dealers. Legislation effective January 1, 2009, expands franchise regulation to include the business relationships between recreational vehicle manufacturers and dealers (except those who deal exclusively in truck campers) [see Stats. 2008, ch. 743]. The legislation expands franchise regulation to include the business relationships between recreational vehicle manufacturers and dealers (except those who deal exclusively in truck campers) [see Stats 2008 ch. 743]. See Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation, §§ 515.131[1], 515.150.

§ 1.210 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Including General Release in Settlement Offer Acceptable Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. In Linthicum v. Butterfield (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 259 , the court of appeal held that including a general release as part of a settlement offer does not defeat an award of costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.17[2].

Party May Recover Attorney's Fees for Work Done in Related Case. In Ramon v. County of Santa Clara (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 915 , the court of appeal held that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a party may recover attorney's fees for work performed by counsel in opposing an amicus curiae brief in a related lawsuit that resolved an issue in a present case. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56[1].

Statute Regarding Fee Waivers Amended. This release sets forth the new law regarding governing applications for fee waivers during trial based on financial condition (in forma pauperis), which went into effect July 1, 2009. The legislature has repealed Gov. Code § 68511.3 and enacted Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641 in its stead. This release also includes the corresponding amended California Rules of Court, Rule 3.50 et seq. and new forms. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.110 et seq.

Private Attorney General Awards in Class Action Suits. In Grodensky v. Artichoke Joe's Casino (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1399 , the court of appeal held that when assessing the disproportionate financial burden under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 in a class action, the trial court should look at the expected (not actual) value for the entire class and then discount this benefit by an estimate of the probability of success at the time vital litigation decisions were made. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56.

Fees Recoverable to Enforce Judgment in Companion Case. In Globalist Internet Technologies, Inc. v. Reda (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1267 , the court of appeal held that attorney's fees incurred in defending a companion action were incurred in enforcing a judgment and were therefore recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 685.040. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.33[1].

Plaintiff Need Not Have Tried to Enforce Right Without Litigation to Recover Under Private Attorney General

Theory. In a major change from prior law, in Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243 , the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff need not first attempt to settle a dispute short of litigation to recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56[7].

15-Day Time Limit in Rule 3.1700 Not Applicable to Expert Witness Fees. In Anthony v. City of Los Angeles (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1011 , the court of appeals held that the time limits prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700 apply only to the items allowable as costs listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a), i.e., cost items to which a party is entitled as a matter of right. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.28[2][c].

Settlement Proceeds Not Included in Determining Prevailing Party. In Chinn v. KMR Property Management (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 175 , the court of appeal held that net monetary recovery for purposes of determining a prevailing party does not include settlement proceeds plaintiff received in exchange for dismissing defendant. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.15[1][d].

New Fee Waiver Statute. Effective July 1, 2009, Gov. Code § 68511.3 is repealed and replaced by new, broader fee waiver statutes, contained in Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641. The new statutes provide that the court may grant an initial fee waiver at any stage of the proceedings, trial or appellate. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.130.

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.211

§ 1.211 Declaratory Relief

Declaratory Relief Regarding Liability Insurance Coverage Is Generally Unavailable to Injured Party Until Liability of Insured Is Settled. A California Court of Appeal has held that an injured party generally may not obtain declaratory relief against an insurer to establish that the injury is covered under the alleged tortfeasor's liability insurance policy, if the injured party's suit against the tortfeasor is still pending. Declaratory relief is unavailable because until the tortfeasor's liability is settled, a court cannot be certain that a controversy will arise between the injured party and the insurer [Otay Land Co. v. Royal Indem. Co. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 556]. See Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief, § 182.14[3].

Court Has Discretion to Deny Declaratory Relief if It Would Have No Practical Effect. The California Supreme Court has held that a trial court has considerable discretion to deny declaratory relief if the parties' controversy is primarily over the enforceability of certain contractual remedies should a future dispute over substantive rights arise, no substantive dispute has arisen, and declaratory relief would have little practical effect in terms of altering parties' behavior [Meyer v. Sprint Spectrum L.P. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 634] . See Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief, §§ 182.20[1], 182.60[3][b][iii].

Juvenile Court May Grant Declaratory Relief in Juvenile Dependency Case. A California court of appeal has held that although juvenile dependency proceedings are governed generally by Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 et seq., the juvenile court may under appropriate circumstances grant declaratory relief in a juvenile dependency case, such as when it is alleged that a county department of social services has a policy of ignoring statutory deadlines in dependency proceedings [Imperial County Dep't of Soc. Servs. v. J.E. (In re Claudia E.) (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 627] . See Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief, §§ 182.13[4], 182.20[2].

§ 1.212 Discovery

Important New Chapter on E-Discovery. New Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronically Stored Evidence (E-Discovery) discusses the discovery of electronically stored information (ESI), generally known as e-discovery. ESI is pervasive in today's civilization and e-discovery is rapidly becoming the rule rather than the exception in litigation. The Electronic Discovery Act, passed by the Legislature in 2009 as an urgency measure and effective immediately, refines the Civil Discovery Act in the area of e-discovery by covering, among other things:

- The availability of e-discovery in California state courts.
- The requirement that the parties meet and confer regarding e-discovery issues.
- The form and manner in which ESI must be produced.
- The extent of e-discovery and the court's power to regulate and limit its use.
- Protective orders and motions to compel.
- Allocation of e-discovery costs.
- Discovery of ESI in the possession of third parties.
- The recovery of privileged information that was inadvertently disclosed to the other party.

The chapter was reviewed by Michael F. Kelleher, the e-discovery expert at the San Francisco office of Folger Levin & Kahn LLP. In addition to the discussion of the Electronic Discovery Act, it contains procedural checklists and forms for e-discovery under the new law. See Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronically Stored Evidence (E-Discovery).

Discovery--California Statutes Governing E-Discovery. Chapters 190 through 200 (Discovery), and Ch. 535, Subpoena, have been updated throughout to conform to the legislative changes enacted by the California Electronic Discovery Act [Stats. 200, ch. 5], effective June 29, 2009. The Act addresses the problems created by application of the general Discovery Act rules to the specific issues that typically arise in e-discovery. Also included are the very recent changes to Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724, adopted by the Judicial Council. These changes, adopted effective August 14, 2009, include some last-minute changes to the proposed rules as previously discussed in Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronic Evidence (E-Discovery). Specifically, the period during which the "meet and confer" conference on e-discovery must be conducted, which was at least 45 days prior to the initial case management conference under the proposed rule, was changed to not less than 30 days before the initial conference in the version adopted by the Judicial Council. Thus, the e-discovery meet-and-confer requirement is subject to the same time frame as the general meet-and-confer provision under Rule 3.724. In addition, the version adopted by the Judicial Council eliminated language in the proposed version stating that the e-discovery meet-and-confer obligation was triggered by written notice that e-discovery was likely to be conducted in the case. In the final version, discussion of e-discovery issues is simply mandatory in all cases; no written notice is required. Last, proposed conforming changes to Rule 3.728 were eliminated as unnecessary and redundant. All of these changes have been integrated into Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronic Evidence (E-Discovery).

Discovery--Sanctions. Ch. 192, Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, has been updated with discussion of Doppes v. Bentley Motors, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 967 , a case presenting "the rare occasion" when the trial court abused its discretion by not imposing a terminating sanction for defendant's discovery misconduct. See Ch. 192, SSanctions for Discovery Misuse, §192.13[3][b][iii].

Discovery--Subpoena Duces Tecum. Ch. 535, Subpoena has been updated with discussion of Terry v. SLICO (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 352 , in which the court held that service of the deposition subpoena on nonparty witness was effective despite absence of a supporting affidavit or declaration. Code Civ. Proc. § 2020.510(b), providing that a deposition subpoena need not be accompanied by an affidavit or declaration showing good cause for the production of the documents and things designated, controlled, prevailing over Code Civ. Proc. § 1987.5, which provides that service of subpoena duces tecum issued before trial without copy of affidavit is invalid. See Ch. 535, Subpoena, § 535.17[3].

Discovery--Revised Judicial Council Form SUPB-200. Ch. 535, Subpoena, has been updated with revised Judicial Council Form SUPB-002, Civil Subpoena for Personal Appearance and Production of Documents and Things at Trial or Hearing and Declaration. See Ch. 535, Subpoena, § 535.61[1].

Trade Secret Protection. This chapter has been updated with discussion of two recent trade secret cases. In Brescia v. Angelin (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 133 , the court addressed when plaintiff is required to particularize how the alleged trade secret differs from matters already known to skilled persons in the field in order to describe the trade secret with the required "reasonable particularity" sufficient to permit discovery to begin. In Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court analyzed whether the identity of defendant's suppliers was a protectable trade secret. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.82[1] and [2], respectively.

Discovery in Actions Pending Outside California. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1025, effective March 13, 2009, fills the gap left by the unintended early repeal of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2029.010. This rule incorporates the text of the former statute, and is slated for repeal January 1, 2009, when new statutes take effect. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, § 193.130.

Appealability of Denial of Motion for Sanctions. This chapter has been updated with expanded discussion regarding when denial of a motion for sanctions is appealable, including coverage of Muller v. Fresno Community Hospital & Medical Ct. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 887 , which purports to reconcile apparent inconsistencies in the California Supreme Court's opinions on this issue. See Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders, § 200.11[4].

Privacy--Right to Privacy in Relatively Nonsensitive Contact Information. Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and

Other Discovery Limitations, has been updated with expanded coverage of the tension between privacy interests and access to relevant information necessary to pursue the litigation in employment law cases. In Puerto v. Superior Court (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1242 , a case alleging wage and hour violations, a California court held that an order restricting the disclosure of potential witnesses' contact information through the use of an opt-in letter exceeded the protections necessary to safeguard the legitimate privacy interests in the addresses and telephone numbers of the witnesses, and as such was an abuse of discretion. In Lee v. Dynamex, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1325 , a California court found reversible error in denying a motion to compel disclosure of independent contractor names and addresses using an opt-out procedure in a class action lawsuit alleging improper reclassification of class members from employees to independent contractors. In Crab Addison, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 958 , involving a pending class action to enforce employees' statutory wage and overtime rights, the violation of the employees' right to privacy did not outweigh plaintiffs' right to discover the class members' names, addresses, and telephone numbers, subject to an opt-out notice. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, §§ 191.120[3].

Sanctions--Limitations on Court's Inherent Power to Award Sanctions. In New Albertsons, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1403 , a California court held that sanctions based on court's inherent power are reserved for egregious violations of discovery process. Accordingly, imposition of evidence and issue sanctions based on the court's inherent power to control the litigation, absent defendant's failure to obey an order compelling discovery, was an abuse of discretion. See Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, §§ 195.13[3][b][i].

Admissions--Ruling on Motion to Withdraw or Amend Admission Under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.300. In New Albertsons, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1403 , a California court held that any doubts in ruling on a motion to withdraw or amend an admission must be resolved in favor of the moving party. See Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions, §§ 196.16[6].

Discovery--Amendments to California Rules of Court. Chapters 190-200 regarding discovery have been updated throughout to reflect the renumbering of (former) California Rules of Court 3.1020, 3.1025, and 3.1030 and the addition of Rule 3.1347, governing discovery motions in summary proceedings involving real property. Rules 3.1020, 3.1025, and 3.1030, governing the format of discovery motions, the service of motion papers on a nonparty deponent, and sanctions for failure to provide discovery, have been renumbered to 3.1345, 3.1346 and 3.1348, respectively.

Discovery--Motion to Compel. This chapter has been updated to include discussion of Pelton-Shepherd Industries, Inc. v. Delta Packaging Products, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1568 , in which the court concluded that the trial court erred by granting defendant's motion to compel discovery filed after the discovery motion cutoff date, because defendant failed to file a motion to reopen discovery under Code Civ. Proc. § 2024.050 before or simultaneously with, filing its motion to compel. See Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 190.51[1].

Discovery--Balancing Privacy and Litigants' Need for Discovery in Class Action. This chapter has been updated to include discussion of Alch v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1412 , a consolidated class action by television writers asserting an industry-wide pattern and practice of age discrimination, in which the appellate court held that the trial court erred by denying access to all requested information from third-party objectors on privacy grounds, without considering whether "a more nuanced approach" to different categories of data would satisfy the balance between privacy interests and the litigants' need for discovery. See Ch. 191, Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.120[6][a].

Discovery--Terminating Sanctions. This chapter has been updated to include discussion of Williams v. Russ (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1215 , in which the court of appeal affirmed that a terminating sanction was merited under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.010(d) and 2023.030(d) when plaintiff had intentionally allowed material unfavorable to his legal malpractice claims to be destroyed. See Ch. 192, Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 192.13[3][b].

Discovery--Revised Judicial Council Subpoena Forms. Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, has been updated to include revised Judicial Council Form SUBP-015, Deposition Subpoena for Personal Appearance, and Form SUBP-020, Deposition Subpoena for Personal Appearance and Production of Documents and Things. See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, §§ 193.226[1], 193.227[1]. Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions, now includes revised Judicial Council Form DISC-002, Form Interrogatories--Employment Law. See Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions, § 196.61[1]. Ch. 535, Subpoena, has been updated with revised Judicial Council Form SUPB-002, Civil Subpoena for Personal Appearance and Production of Documents and Things at Trial or Hearing and Declaration. See Ch. 535, Subpoena, § 535.61[1].

Discovery--Subpoenas. This chapter has been updated throughout to reflect the amendments to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1987.1 and 1987.2. Code Civ. Proc. § 1987.1 expands the rights and protections available to specified persons whose records are subject to a subpoena to include a person whose personally identifying information is sought in connection with an underlying action involving that person's free speech rights. Code Civ. Proc. § 1987.2 provides for a mandatory award of reasonable expenses incurred in making the motion for an order to quash or modify a subpoena for personally identifying information if specified requirements are met. See Ch. 535, Subpoena .

§ 1.213 Employment

Workplace Privacy. In Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272 , the California Supreme Court held that an employer's clandestine videotaping of a computer workstation during non-business hours to determine the identity of a person who was using the computer to access pornographic websites during non-business hours was not considered so highly offensive that it would support causes of action for intrusion based upon state common law and Cal. Const., art. 1, § 1. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.39.

Age Discrimination in Employment Act Does Not Authorize Mixed-Motive Age-Discrimination Claims. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the ADEA does not authorize mixed-motive age-discrimination claims. Rather, a plaintiff claiming disparate treatment must prove by a preponderance of the evidence (which may be direct or circumstantial) that age was the "but-for" cause of the employer's adverse action [29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1)]. Therefore, in an ADEA case the burden of proof never shifts to the employer to show that it would have taken the adverse action regardless of age [Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs., Inc. (2009) 174 L. Ed. 2d 119]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[2][a], [b].

Employer Can Discard Test Results to Avoid Disparate Impact Only if There Is Strong Basis in Evidence to Believe Use of Test Results Will Result in Disparate-Impact Liability. The United States Supreme Court has held that under Title VII, before an employer can discard test results to avoid a disparate impact on minority candidates--an act that would itself constitute intentional race-based discrimination against those who did well on the test--the employer must have a strong basis in evidence to believe it will be subject to disparate-impact liability if it fails to take the race-conscious, discriminatory action of discarding the test results [Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 174 L. Ed. 2d 490] . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.30[4][c].

Plaintiff Under Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act Must Have Suffered Injury. The California Supreme Court has held that an employee has standing to sue an employer to collect civil penalties under the Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 [see Lab. Code § 2698 et seq.] only if the employee suffered injury from the employer's unlawful action; a labor union, therefore, lacks standing to sue as an assignee or association of injured members. The Court also held that an employee's representative action under the Act need not satisfy class-action requirements [Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993 , and Arias v. Superior Court (2009)

Employment Discrimination--Broader Protection Under Americans With Disabilities Act. In the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, effective January 1, 2009, Congress clarified that the ADA's definition of "disability" is to be construed in favor of broad coverage of individuals "to the maximum extent permitted by the terms of" the ADA. Congress also expressly rejected the reasoning and standards enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184 and Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471 as incorrectly narrowing the broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by ADA [Pub. L. No. 110-325, 122 Stat. 3553]. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22[8][b][ii], [c][ii], [d], 115.35[1][a].

Employment Discrimination-- Collective Bargaining Agreement May Require Arbitration of Statutory Claims. The United States Supreme Court in 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett (2009) 173 L. Ed. 2d 398 has held that a collective bargaining agreement provision that clearly and unmistakably requires union members to arbitrate statutory antidiscrimination claims is enforceable. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.55[2], 115.37[1][a], and see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21[16].

Civil Service-- Privilege Against Self-Incrimination Does Not Prevent Employer From Requiring Public Employee to Answer Job-Related Questions. The California Supreme Court, in Spielbauer v. County of Santa Clara (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 704 , has held that a public employer may discipline and even dismiss a public employee for refusing, on grounds of the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination, to answer the employer's job-related questions as long as the employee is not required, as a condition of remaining in the job, to waive or surrender his or her constitutional protection against criminal use of the statements thus obtained, at least when the employee is specifically advised that he or she retains that protection. See Ch. 118, Civil Service, §§ 118.62, 118.73[5].

Wage Discrimination Claims--Statute of Limitations. The Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act of 2009, Pub. L. No. 111-2, provides that for purposes of triggering the limitations period for a wage-discrimination claim, a discriminatory act occurs (1) when the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice is adopted; (2) when the employee becomes subject to the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice; and (3) when the employee is affected by application of the discriminatory compensation decision or other practice, including each time wages, benefits, or other compensation is paid, resulting in whole or in part from that decision or other practice. The Act thus overrules Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618 , which had held that the limitations period was triggered only by the discriminatory pay raise decision and that an employee's claim of discrimination in compensation could not be based on the fact that paychecks issued within the limitations period entailed adverse effects resulting from past discriminatory pay raise decisions. The Act is effective as if enacted on May 28, 2007, and applies to all discriminatory compensation claims pending on or after that date under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans With Disabilities Act, and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.21[1], 115.51[2][a], 115.56[5].

Employment Law--Anti-Retaliation Provisions. The United States Supreme Court has held that the anti-retaliation provision of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-3(a), protects an employee who opposes unlawful discrimination by speaking out about it in answering questions during an employer's internal investigation, even if that employee did not report the discrimination on his or her own initiative [Crawford v. Metropolitan Gov't (2009) 129 S. Ct. 846] . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.21[1], 115.37[1][a].

FEHA Limitations Period Subject to Equitable Tolling. The California Supreme Court has held that the one-year statute of limitations for claims under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), Gov. Code § 12960(d), is subject to equitable tolling while the aggrieved employee voluntarily pursues the employer's internal administrative remedy, even though the internal remedy is optional and need not be exhausted before filing a FEHA action, and even if employee voluntarily terminates the internal proceeding before an administrative decision is rendered [McDonald v. Antelope Valley Cmty. Coll. Dist. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 88] . See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §

115.51[1][a], [c], [g].

Employee's Right to Indemnity Under Lab. Code § 2802 Is Nonwaivable. In Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937 , the California Supreme Court held that an employee's right to indemnity from an employer provided by Lab. Code § 2802 is nonwaivable and any contract that purports to waive this right is unlawful to that extent. The Court also held that a contract provision releasing "any and all" claims generally does not encompass the nonwaivable statutory protections afforded by Lab. Code § 2802 and does not implicitly apply to an employee's right to indemnification from an employer. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.20[2].

Use of Safety Regulations Limited in Actions Brought by Subcontractor's Employee Against General Contractor. In Padilla v. Pomona College (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 661 , the court of appeal held that safety regulations are only admissible in actions by employees of subcontractors brought against a general contractor if the evidence establishes that the general contractor affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries. The court also held that the Cal-OSHA regulation found at 8 Cal. Code Regs. § 1735(a) did not impose a nondelegable duty on any particular party. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.22[2][b][iv], [c].

§ 1.213A Equity

Modification of Equitable Decree. This chapter is updated with Union Oil Co. of Cal. v. Greka Energy Corp. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 129 , which holds changed circumstances occurring after judgment may justify modifying an equitable decree, and a trial court has discretion to consider whether changed circumstances following its judgment require modification of its order on specific performance. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.37[1][b].

Estoppel Versus Waiver. This chapter is updated with City of Hollister v. Monterey Ins. Co. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 455 and Oakland Raiders v. Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1175 , which hold estoppel effects a forfeiture, i.e., the loss of an otherwise viable right. It is akin to the doctrine of waiver, often invoked in the same breath, and sometimes confused with it. The essence of waiver, however, is the voluntary relinquishment of a known right that may be effective as a matter of law without any demonstration that the other party was caused by the waiver to expose himself or herself to any harm. That causation is essential to estoppel, and where it is present the estoppel may arise involuntarily, and may effect the loss of rights the actor did not know he or she possessed. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.94[1][a].

Equitable Estoppel. This chapter is updated with Estate of Bonanno (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 7 , which holds equitable estoppel is generally a question of fact. However, if the facts are undisputed and only one reasonable conclusion can be drawn from them, whether estoppel applies is a question of law. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.94[1][c].

Unjust Enrichment. This chapter is updated with Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dintino (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 333 , which holds whether termed unjust enrichment, quasi-contract, or quantum meruit, the equitable remedy of restitution when unjust enrichment has occurred is an obligation (and not a true contract) created by the law without regard to the intention of the parties, and is designed to restore the aggrieved party to his or her former position by return of the thing or its equivalent in money. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.110.

Trial y Jury. This chapter is updated with Jogani v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 901 , which holds the right to trial by jury guaranteed by the Constitution is the right as it existed at common law at the time the state Constitution was adopted in 1850. In determining whether a common law court before 1850 could have entertained a plaintiff's action and granted the requested relief, a court must look past the form or label attached to the plaintiff's claim and discern its substance, i.e., gist. If the claim is, in substance, one that was cognizable at law before 1850 and seeks relief that could have been obtained at law before 1850, then the action is legal and the right to jury trial attaches, regardless of the extent to which the claim requires the application of equitable doctrines. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.222[1].

§ 1.213B Family Law

Same-Sex Marriages. This chapter is updated with Strauss v. Horton (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 364 , which holds Proposition 8 is a permissible constitutional amendment to limit the rights of people of the same sex to marry, is not an impermissible constitutional revision, and does not violate the separation of powers doctrine and is not invalid under an "inalienable rights" theory, and applies both to marriages performed in California and to those performed in other jurisdictions. The Court observed that if there is to be a change to the state constitutional rule embodied in that measure, it must "find its expression at the ballot box." The Court also concluded that Proposition 8 does not apply retroactively. Therefore, the approximately 18,000 marriages of same-sex couples that were performed between the time of the Court's decision in In re Marriage Cases and the effective date of Proposition 8 (November 5, 2008) remain valid in all respects and must continue to be recognized in this state. The Court noted that Proposition 8 did not entirely repeal or abrogate a same-sex couple's state constitutional rights of privacy, due process, and equal protection that the Court had previously recognized in In re Marriage Cases [In re Marriage Cases (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 757]. See Ch. 359, Marriage, § 359.13[4], and see Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.161 2[c].

Putative Domestic Partners. The court of appeal in In re Domestic Partnership of Ellis & Arriaga (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1000 , applied the putative spouse doctrine to domestic partners and held that a person's reasonable, good faith belief that his or her domestic partnership was validly registered with the Secretary of State entitles that person to the rights and responsibilities of a registered domestic partner even if the registration never occurred. See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation, § 387.11[3].

Community Property--Transmutation. The court of appeal in In re Marriage of Holtemann (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1166 concluded that husband intended and did transmute certain separate property to community property, was fully informed of the legal consequences of his actions and, rejecting his contention that a transmutation can be rendered conditional or temporary, held that once the character of the property has been changed a "retransmutation" can only be effected by an express agreement to that effect that independently satisfies the requirements of Fam. Code § 852(a). See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.34.

Younger* Abstention. This chapter is updated with San Jose Silicon Valley Chamber of Commerce Political Action Com. v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 1087 , which holds that in addressing Younger abstention issues, federal district courts must exercise jurisdiction except when specific legal standards are met, and may not exercise jurisdiction when those standards are met. There is no discretion vested in the district courts to do otherwise. Accordingly, the limited circumstances in which abstention by federal courts is appropriate remain the exception rather than the rule. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal, § 265.14[3].

Dismissal Before Considering the Existence of Federal Subject Matter Jurisdiction. This chapter is updated with Potter v. Hughes (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 1051 , which holds there are non-constitutional grounds on which the federal district court may dismiss a suit before considering the existence of federal subject matter jurisdiction. These include jurisdictional grounds that are discretionary, such as pendent jurisdiction or Younger abstention, grounds of prudential standing, such as statutory standing, and grounds that are "logically antecedent to the existence of any Article III issues," such as class certification under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 23, and the demand pleading requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 23.1 for derivative actions. See Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

§ 1.214 Guardianships and Conservatorships

Guardianships and Conservatorships--Prob. Code § 1516.5 Does Not Violate Due Process and Is Facially Constitutional. In Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1118 , the California Supreme Court upheld Prob. Code § 1516.5 as facially constitutional and consistent with due process. The Court held that a showing of current unfitness is not always necessary when a court terminates parental rights, and that the trial court properly granted a petition filed by the guardians of a minor child under Prob. Code § 1516.5 to terminate the parental rights of the child's mother when it found by clear and convincing evidence that adoption by the guardians would be in the child's best interest. In a companion case, In re Charlotte D. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1140 , the Court followed its holding in Guardianship of Ann S., holding that Prob. Code § 1516.5 does not violate due process and is facially constitutional, and that parental rights may be terminated based on the child's best interest, but that parents may challenge the constitutionality of the statute as applied to them individually. See Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.73, 280.84.

Guardianships & Conservatorships--Sua Sponte Duty to Instruct Not Applicable in LPS Act Conservatorships. In Conservatorship of George H. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 157 , court held that because Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5500 et seq.] conservatorship proceeds are not criminal proceedings, the sua sponte duty to instruct that applies to jury trials in criminal cases does not apply to jury trials under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5350. Thus, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury that if a proposed conservatee was able to accept voluntary treatment, there was no need for a conservatorship. Additionally, the trial court in this case properly specified each of the powers and disabilities it imposed, and the evidence warranted the trial court's findings. See Ch. 304, Insane Persons, § 304.144[6][a].

Guardianship and Conservatorship--New and Revised Judicial Council Forms. The California Judicial Council has revised a significant number of official Judicial Council forms, and issued several new forms, effective January 1, 2009. Existing forms have been revised in the guardianship and conservatorship materials in this release, new forms added, and relevant discussion changed as necessary. For forms, see Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians ; Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators ; Ch 282, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Temporary Guardians and Conservators ; Ch. 286, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Inventory and Appraisal .

Guardianship and Conservatorship--Fraud and Unfluence--Collateral Estoppel. In Murphy v. Murphy (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 376 , the court held that collateral estoppel prevented a beneficiary from bringing an action for fraud and undue influence relating to certain trust and testamentary instruments when the issues of fraud and undue influence were necessarily adjudicated and decided in a prior substituted judgment proceeding. See Ch. 290B, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Substituted Judgment, § 290B.32.

Conservatorship--Due Process Rights. In Conservatorship of David L. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 701 , the court held that a prospective conservatee who requests substitute appointed counsel must be given a full opportunity to state the reasons for his or her requests, as in a criminal case. The trial court's failure to afford a prospective conservatee a full opportunity to state his reasons for requesting substitute counsel violated his right to due process of law when he was not at the hearing and there was no evidence to support a finding that he voluntarily failed to appear. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.42.

§ 1.214A Initiatives

Initiative as Constitutional Amendment Versus Revision. This chapter is updated with Strauss v. Horton (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 364 , which holds an initiative that makes very significant changes constitutes only an amendment to the state constitution if its changes nonetheless operate functionally within a relatively narrow range of subject matter, and with Rippon v. Bowen (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1308 , which holds the question of whether an initiative constitutes an amendment or a revision requires analysis of the statute on its face. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.12[7].

§ 1.215 Insurance

Utility's Statutory Immunity Barred Homeowner From Recovering Implied Contractual Immunity. In Prince v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1151 , the California Supreme Court held that a utility's immunity from liability to a tort victim under the recreational-use immunity of Civ. Code § 846 prevented a landowner from obtaining implied contractual indemnity from the utility for the landowner's own liability to the victim. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, §§ 300.61[5], 300.63[1].

Prop. 51 Does Not Defeat Liability Based on Nondelegable Duty. In Koepnick v. Kashiwa Fudosan America, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 32 , the court of appeal held that Proposition 51 does not limit the vicarious liability of the hirer of an independent contractor when the hirer's liability is based on the nondelegable duty doctrine. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.63[3][f].

Insurer's Service Charge for Monthly Policy Payments Constitutes a Premium. The statutory requirement that an insurance policy include either a statement of the premium or a statement of the basis and rates on which the final premium is determined includes within the definition of "premium" a service charge imposed for payment in full of the stated insurance premium for a one-month term policy [Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1305]. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.16.

Appellate Court Upholds Emotional Distress and Punitive Damages Award in Excess of $1 Million Against Insurer in Bad Faith Action. In an action against an insurer under a homeowners' policy, the appellate court upheld awards of $31,000 in economic damages for breach of contract, $450,000 for emotional distress, $646,500 in punitive damages for bad faith, and Brandt fees [Major v. Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1197]. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[5].

Dispute Between Insured and Insurer Over Amount of Cumis Fees Is Subjection to Mandatory Arbitration. Notwithstanding the inclusion of nonarbitrable issues in a complaint by the insured against its liability insurer, any contested issues concerning the amount of Cumis fees allegedly owed by the insurer are subject to mandatory arbitration under Civ. Code § 2860(c) [Compulink Mgmt. Ctr., Inc. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 289]. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.118[2].

Willful-Misconduct Exception to 10-Year Statute of Repose in Latent Construction Defect Case Applies to Indemnity Cross-Complaints. In Pine Terrace Apartments, L.P. v. Windscape, LLC (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal held that the willful-misconduct exemption to the 10-year limitations period applicable in latent construction defect cases may be applied to cross-complaints for indemnity, and a cross-complainant may incorporate by reference the allegations of willful misconduct found in the complaint without specifically repeating those allegations in the cross-complaint. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.70[3].

Post-Arbitration Procedures for Settlement Credits Under Code Civ. Proc. § 877 Clarified. In Wade v. Schrader (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1039 , the court of appeal held that if the fact and amount of a settlement credit under Code Civ. Proc. § 877 are undisputed and the action against a nonsettling defendant is adjudicated by an arbitrator, the credit need not be applied by the arbitrator and may be applied by a trial court when rendering judgment. Moreover, if the offset is greater than the amount of the arbitrator's award and the defendant has not previously brought the credit to the attention of the trial court, the nonsettling defendant may use a motion to compel acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 724.050(d) to effectively achieve the offset. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][a].

State Bar May Pursue Subrogation Claim Against Attorney. An appellate court has held that the State Bar has statutory subrogation rights under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6140.5(b) (Client Security Fund or CSF) against an attorney who settled with claimants to whom the CSF paid some claims, when the parties to the settlement agreed that the plaintiffs could seek full reimbursement from the CSF, and the attorney would not object to the notice of intent to pay issued by the CSF [State Bar of Cal. v. Statile (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 650] . See Ch. 536, Subrogation, § 536.14[2].

Uninsured Motorist Coverage--Arbitration. In a case originally concerning the attempt of the sister of the automobile policyholder to compel arbitration under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f), on remand from the California Supreme Court, an appellate court held that the question whether a party is an insured with standing to enforce an arbitration provision can be decided by a trial court either in the proceedings on a petition to compel arbitration or in a separate action for declaratory relief [Bouton v. USAA Casualty Ins. Co. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 412] . See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.19[3][e][iv].

Uninsured Motorist Coverage--Bad Faith. Ins. Code § 11580.26(b), which prohibits a cause of action against either the insured or insurer for exercising the right to request arbitration of an uninsured motorist claim, does not create a broad immunity from a bad-faith claim based on the insurer's pre-arbitration conduct regarding an uninsured motorist claim [Brehm v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1225] . See Ch. 88A, Automobiles: Uninsured Motorist Claims, § 88A.24[1].

Indemnity Rules for Residential Construction Contracts Amended. Under amended Civ. Code § 2782, the indemnity rules for residential construction contracts provided by that statute have been expanded to apply to agreements that purport to insure or indemnify the builder or a general contractor or other contractor not affiliated with the builder, and provide that a subcontractor owes no defense or indemnity for a construction defect claim unless and until the builder or contractor provides a written tender of the claim to the subcontractor, which has the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of a legal proceeding. The statute also now provides for subcontractor options upon tender of a written claim, and specifies consequences for a failure to meet defense obligations. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.34[2].

Trademark Infringement--Criteria for Ordering Product Recall. In Marlyn Nutraceuticals v. Mucos Pharma GmbH & Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 873 , the Ninth Circuit adopted criteria developed by the Third Circuit for use by a district court in determining whether to require a product recall in a trademark infringement case. After considering those criteria, if the court finds that leaving the infringing product in the hands of resellers and end-users will cause a substantial risk of danger to the public, the court should order a recall. See Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names, § 549.91[5].

Judgment Debtor's Property May Be Turned Over to Levying Officer or Receiver, Not to Judgment Creditor. In Palacio Del Mar Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. McMahon (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1386 , the court of appeal held that pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.205(a), after an examination regarding a judgment debtor's interest in property in the possession or under the control of the judgment debtor or a third person to be applied toward the satisfaction of a money judgment, property may be ordered turned over to a levying officer or a receiver, but not to the judgment creditor directly. See Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments, § 254.227.

Nunc Pro Tunc Permitted Only to Avoid Injustice to Preserve Litigants' Rights. In In re Marriage of Padgett (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 830 , the court of appeal held that the trial court exceeded its power to issue a nunc pro tunc order by creating an interest in a retirement plan. See Ch. 318, Judgments, § 318.70.

Juvenile Court May Not Use Contempt Power to Incarcerate Parent for Failure to Satisfy Condition of Reunification Plan in Dependency Proceeding. The California Supreme Court, in In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217 , held that because of the unique nature of reunification orders issued in juvenile dependency proceedings, a juvenile court may not use its contempt power to incarcerate a parent solely for the failure to satisfy a condition of a voluntary reunification plan. See Ch. 135, Contempt, § 135.14[5][a].

Emancipation of Minors--Medical Emancipation. This chapter is updated with a new section reviewing California's variety of "limited medical emancipation" statutes. See Ch. 245, Emancipation of Minors, § 245.14[5].

Interstate Compact on Juveniles. Welf. & Inst. Code § 1300 prohibits California from exercising ICJ supervision powers under standards different from those they apply to their own delinquent juveniles released on probation. The court of appeal in In re Lee Dale Crockett (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 751 , has determined that this prohibition applies in cases requiring registration, such as sex offender registration--even if the minor agreed to register pursuant to ICJ transfer conditions. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.124.

Education for Children in Dependency. Children who are abused or neglected and separated from their family face enormous disadvantages in their education. Placement changes from one school to another can create stress and behavioral problems. These students can be given meaningful access to educational programs and supplemental services by identifying the holder of the child's educational rights, pursuing the significant rights available under both federal and California law and considering special education for the 30 percent to 40 percent of foster children so classified. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Dependency Proceedings, § 328.62[6].

Specific Intent Required to Impose Battery Liability on Doctor Who Fails to Abide by Condition. In Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540 , the court of appeal held that to be liable for performing a medical procedure while failing to abide by a known condition imposed by the patient, the doctor must have intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition and a negligent failure to abide by the condition is an insufficient basis for liability for battery. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.14[5], and see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.20.

Lump Sum Present Value Used to Calculate Undertaking Required Pending Appeal. In Leung v. Verdugo Hills Hospital (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 205 , the court of appeal held that if a defendant against whom a judgment has been rendered must post an undertaking to stay the judgment pending appeal under Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1, the amount of the undertaking is calculated under that statute using the lump sum present value of the entire judgment, not using some lesser amount based on the payments that might otherwise actually be payable during the appeal under a periodic payment schedule created under Code Civ. Proc. § 667.7. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.49[4].

Vital Records--Out-of-State Residency Does Not Bar Obtaining Change of Gender on California Birth Certificate. In Somers v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1407 , the court held that out-of-state residency did not bar the out of state resident from obtaining a change of gender on a California birth certificate under Health & Safety Code § 103425. See Ch. 99, Birth & Death, §§ 99.13, 99.22, 99.35.

No Contest Clauses--Trust Reformation in Accordance with Grantors' Intent Would Not Violate No Contest Clause. In Giammarrusco v. Simon (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1586 , the court found that language in trust documents establishing three methods of exercising a limited power of appointment was ambiguous and that reformation in accordance with the grantors' intent did not violate a no contest clause. The court explained that the mere name of the remedy sought, i.e., modification, reformation or interpretation, did not dictate whether a no contest clause would be violated because substance, the effect of the proposed action, and not form, controlled. See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.14, and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, § 560.16.

No Contest Clauses--Petition Challenging Exercise of Fiduciary Power Did Not Violate No Contest Clause. In Bradley v. Gilbert (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1058 , the court held that a proposed petition by a decedent's son as a successor trustee of two trusts would not constitute a contest of a third trust and would not violate a no contest clause as a matter of public policy, because the petition was a pleading challenging the exercise of a fiduciary power within the means of Prob. Code § 21305(b)(6). See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.14, and see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, § 560.16.

Probate--Prob. Code § 8226(c)* Applies Only to Those Who Receive Notice. In Estate of Kelly (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1367 , the court held that the time limits in Prob. Code § 8226(c) did not apply to bar as untimely a petition for probate of a holographic will when the will proponent never received notice of the petition for letters of administration, as required to trigger the statute. The court concluded that Prob. Code § 8226(c) applies only to those who have received notice of a petition for letters of administration pursuant to the notice provisions of the California Probate Code. See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.16.

Probate--Time Limits of Prob. Code § 8226(c) Bar Petition to Admit Untimely Holographic Will. In Estate of Earley (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 369 , the court held that the trial court properly found that a petition to admit a holographic will to probate was untimely under Prob. Code § 8226(c) when the petition was filed more than five months after the determination of intestacy and more than three months after administrator discovered will. See Ch. 444, Will Contests , § 3.

Wills & Trusts--Natural Parent Entitled to Inherit From Child. In Estate of Shellenbarger (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 894 , the court held that a probate court may not, on principles of equity, disinherit a natural parent who abandons a child who later dies intestate. The court further held that under Prob. Code § 6402, the father was entitled to inherit through the decedent, reasoning the father's alleged failure to pay child support or the lack of a meaningful parent-child relationship did not affect the father's rights as an intestate heir. The court noted that had the decedent been born out of wedlock, the father's alleged failure to pay support would have been relevant, but in this instance the decedent was conceived during his parents' marriage and the father acknowledged paternity. See Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation, §§ 458D.78[4][a], 458D.155[4][e].

Wills & Trusts--Anti-lapse Statute Allows Bequest to Pass by Right of Representation. In Estate of Mooney (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 654 , the court held that California's anti-lapse statute consistently provides that when a bequest to a protected transferee would otherwise lapse due to the transferee's death, that bequest passes by right of representation to his or her descendants. The probate court erred by determining that "the nearest generation of issue then living" for purposes of applying Prob. Code § 240 in this context was determined with respect to the decedent rather than her sisters, the deceased transferees. See Ch. 458D, Probate: Accounts, Final Distribution, and Compensation, §§ 458D.80[7], 458D.155[4][e], 458.200[4].

Trusts--No Contest Clause Not Applicable to Trust Amendment. In Townsend v. Townsend (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 389 , the court held that a beneficiary's proposed challenge to a trust amendment would not violate the trust's no contest clause. The court reiterated that for trusts executed on or after January 1, 2001, a trust's no contest clause may not be applied to an amendment of the trust unless there is a specific reference to amendment to the trust in the no contest clause. Furthermore, the ratification language contained in the trust amendment did not render the no contest clause in the trust applicable to the beneficiary's challenge to the amendment because the trust was executed after Prob. Code § 21305(a)(3) was enacted, yet made no mention of amendments. The trust's no contest clause did not permit the court to conclude that the settlors unequivocally expressed an intent that a beneficiary could challenge any future amendments to their estate plan only on pain of forfeiture. See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.14, and see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.16.

Will and Trust Contests--What Constitutes a "Contest." In Schwartz v. Schwartz (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 733 , the court concluded that when a beneficiary knowingly filed a petition, which took him outside the safe harbor provisions of Prob. Code §§ 21320, and his clear purpose was to defeat the surviving settlor's testamentary and donative intent, the action was a contest, under the will's no contest clause. The court further noted that the beneficiary used the mechanisms of the trial court in attempting to achieve his goal of redistributing the trust estate. See Ch. 444, Will Contests, §§ 444.14, 444.30, and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, §§ 560.16, 560.362.

Probate--Damages When Purchaser of Real Property Dafaults. In Estate of Felder (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 518 , it was held that the probate court was authorized under Prob. Code §§ 10350(e)(1) to award an estate damages in an amount equal to the difference between the price at which the first would-be purchaser defaulted and the eventual purchase price actual paid for the property when it was resold at a lower price. The court further noted that the estate was entitled to retain the defaulting buyer's deposit; it made no legal difference that the deposit amount reflected both the estate's interest in property and that of a co-owner, since Prob. Code §§ 10350(e)(1) does not authorize damaged to be pro-rated based on the sellers' respective interests in the property. See Ch. 455, Sale of Estate Property, §§ 445.25, 455.52[6].

Trusts--Irrevocable Trust Binding on Settlors. In Aguilar v. Aguilar (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 35, 40 , the court concluded that a wife breached the terms of a joint inter vivos trust by executing a deed purporting to withdraw property from the trust after her husband's death. Even though the property she sought to withdraw was her share of the community property, it was too late for her to withdraw it, as the trust had become irrevocable in its entirety on the death of her husband. Any change to the trust after the husband's death would have required consent from the other beneficiaries of the joint trust, which the wife did not have. See Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, §§ 560.112, 560.401, 560.584.

Trusts--General Church Can Impress a Trust in Governing Documents. In Episcopal Church Cases (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 467 , the California Supreme Court held that Corp. Code §§ 9142(c)(2) gives a general church the authority to impress a trust on a local church if the local church agrees to be subject to the governing instruments of the general church and the governing instruments provide that any property held by the local church is held in trust for the general church. Thus, the local church did not have the right to take church property with it when it disaffiliated from the general church, even though the deeds to the property had long been in the name of the local church. See Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, §§ 560.11, 560.483[6].

Probate--Survivor's Rights. In Estate of Bonanno (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 7, 23 , the court held that the decedent's estranged wife was equitably estopped under Evid. Code § 623 from asserting her statutory right as surviving spouse to have her share of decedent's property pass without administration under Prob. Code § 13500, when the wife, daughter, and decedent's girlfriend had all entered into a written settlement agreement and the spouse implicitly acknowledged that she would not ask that her share pass to her outside of probate. Ch. 441, Probate: Disposition Without Administration, § 441.171.

Probate--Filing Fees. As of January 1, 2009, the sliding scale of fees that grew progressively larger with the size of the estate was eliminated and replaced with a flat filing fee [Gov. Code § 70650(a)]. The uniform filing fee for the first petition for letters of administration or letters testamentary, or the first petition for special letters of administration with the power of a general personal representative is $350 [Gov. Code § 70650(a)]. The uniform filing fee for the first objections to the probate of any will of codicil under Prob. Code § 8250, or the first petition for revocation of probate of any will or codicil under Prob. Code § 8270, also is $350 [Gov. Code § 70650(b)]. The uniform filing fee for the first petition for special letters of administration without the powers of a general personal representative is provided in Gov. Code § 70657.5 [Gov. Code § 70650(b)]. A fee of $350 also will be charged for the filing of each subsequent petition or objection in the same proceeding by a person other than the original petitioner or contestant [Gov. Code § 70650(c)]. If a petition for special administration is filed together with a petition for letters of administration or letters testamentary by the same person, the person filing the petitions will be charged the applicable filing fees for both petitions [Gov. Code § 70650(d)]. See Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.14.

Wills and Trusts--Witness Requirements. A revised Prob. Code § 6110 codifies the California Supreme Court's holding in Estate of Saueressig (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1045 , requiring that a will be witnessed by being signed during the testator's lifetime [Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1)]. Prob. Code § 6110 (c)(2) further provides that if a will was not executed in compliance with Prob. Code § 6110(c)(1), the will must be treated as if it was executed in compliance if the proponent of the will establishes by clear and convincing evidence that, at the time the testator signed the will, the testator intended the will to constitute the testator's will. See Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.147[2].

Wills and Trusts--Gifts to Will Drafter. In Estate of Clementi (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 375 , the court held that since the testator was a nonresident of California when he signed his will in Pennsylvania, Prob. Code § 21351(i), exempted his will from the prohibition in Prob. Code § 21350 against donative transfers to the drafters of wills, even though the testator was a resident of California at the time of his death. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.13; and see Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.14[4].

Wills and Trusts --No Contest Clauses-- New Prob. Code §§ 21230-21235 Operative January 1, 2010. As of January 1, 2010, new Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315 will substantially revise existing law relating to no contest clauses in wills and trusts. The new provisions will apply to any instrument, whenever executed, that became irrevocable on or after January 1, 2001 [Prob. Code § 21315(a)]. These new provisions limit the enforceability of a no contest clause to specific contests, redefine what a direct contest is, and provide that a no contest clause may be enforced against a direct contest only when it is brought without probable cause. The new statutes also will repeal all provisions allowing a beneficiary to apply for declaratory relief for a determination of whether or not a proposed contest would violate a no contest clause. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14[1]; Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.16[1].

Wills and Trusts--No Contest Clauses. In Perrin v. Lee (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1239 , the court held that a proposed challenge to two trust amendments would not trigger the no contest clause in a trust because the clause did not specifically state that it applied to trust amendments and the amendments did not contain no contest clause as required by Prob. Code § 21305(a)(3). Additionally, the language of the amendments did not demonstrate an intent on the part of the settlor to accomplish the incorporation by reference of the no contest clause. See Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests, § 444.14; and see Ch. 560, Trusts, § 560.16.

§ 1.218 Public Administration

Due Process--Timing of Hearing. This chapter is updated with Kolter v. Commission on Professional Competence of the Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2nd 2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1346 , which holds that the governing board of the Los Angeles Unified School District properly met in closed session consistent with Gov. Code § 54957 to begin the process to dismiss a permanent certificated teacher without giving the teacher the 24-hour notice otherwise required by Gov. Code § 54957. This was because the 24-hour notice requirement did not apply when the public employee had the right to an evidentiary hearing under Educ. Code § 44934 subsequent to the closed session. Furthermore, the teacher did not have a due process right to notice and opportunity to be heard before the governing board began the dismissal proceedings. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.42[1].

Public Agency Meetings--Personnel Exemption. This chapter is updated with Kolter v. Commission on Professional Competence of the Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1346 , which holds that the governing board of the Los Angeles Unified School District properly met in closed session consistent with Gov. Code § 54957 to begin the process to dismiss a permanent certificated teacher without giving the teacher the 24-hour notice otherwise required by Gov. Code § 54957. This was because the 24-hour notice requirement did not apply when the public employee had the right to an evidentiary hearing under Educ. Code § 44934 subsequent to the closed session. Furthermore, the teacher did not have a due process right to notice and opportunity to be heard before the governing board began the dismissal proceedings. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.13[2].

Public Agency Meetings--Personnel Exemption. This chapter is updated with Hofman Ranch v. Yuba County Local Agency Formation Commission (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 805 , which holds that a local agency formation commission properly conducted a closed session personnel evaluation of the executive officer of the agency under Gov. Code § 54957 because that officer was considered to be an employee of the agency for purposes of Gov. Code § 54957 even though he was a contractor hired to provide executive officer services. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.13[2].

Public Records Act--Law Enforcement Records. This chapter is updated with Dixon v. Superior Court (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1271 , which holds that coroner and autopsy reports that constitute investigations of a suspected homicide death are exempt from disclosure under the law enforcement records exemption [Gov. Code § 6254(f)] when the prospect of criminal law enforcement proceedings is concrete and definite. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[9].

Public Records Act--Records Exempt Under Other Laws. This chapter is updated with People v. Gaines (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 172 , which holds that when a trial court improperly failed to review a peace officer's personnel records in camera under the provisions of Penal Code § 832.7 and Evid. Code § 1043(b), the proper remedy was to remand the matter to the trial court with an order to review the records. The Supreme Court also held that if relevant information in confidential personnel records was not disclosed, then the judgment is reversible only if there is a reasonable probability that a different result would have occurred if the information had been disclosed. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Public Records Act--Records Exempt Under Other Laws. This chapter is updated with McMahon v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1324 , which holds that a police officer did not have the right under the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights act (POBRA) provisions [Gov. Code §§ 3305, 3306.5] to review all investigative materials maintained by the police department related to complaints against the officer, but only those materials that contained complaints or adverse comments against the officer so that the officer had the opportunity to respond to the complaints or adverse comments. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Public Records Act--Public Interest Exemption. This chapter is updated with County of Santa Clara v. Superior Court (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1301 , which holds that by the County of Santa Clara is required to disclose geographic information system (GIS) base maps prepared by the county because the public interest exemption [Gov. Code § 6255] did not prohibit disclosure because the public interest in disclosure outweighed the public interest in nondisclosure. The court of appeal weighed disclosure interests (public scrutiny of public records) against nondisclosure interests (financial and security interests), and found that the balance between those two interests justified disclosure of the information. Furthermore, the court held that the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code § 6254.9] did not provide for copyright protection of public records maintained by the county, and that the county could not insist on an end user agreement as a condition of disclosure to protect any copyright interest. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[55].

Public Records Act--Judicial Enforcement of Rights. This chapter is updated with County of Santa Clara v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 119 , which holds that taxpayers could properly bring a declaratory and injunctive relief action against local and state government bodies (including cities, counties, and the state of California, among others) under Code Civ. Proc. § 526a to challenge the illegal expenditure of public funds by those bodies related to public records. Litigation related to public records is not limited to challenges under the California Public Records Act. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.17[1].

Public Administrative Law Judges--Multiple Roles of Agencies. This chapter is updated with Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. State Water Resources Control Board (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 731 , which holds that due process of law was not violated when an attorney for the State Water Resources Control Board was the agency prosecutor in a specific administrative proceeding and that same agency attorney advised the Board in an unrelated administrative proceeding. In so holding, the California Supreme Court concluded that neither due process of law nor the California APA are violated by combining advocacy and advising functions within the same agency so long as there is separation of functions internally on a case by case basis. Thus, the same agency employee could not perform conflicting functions (advocacy versus advising) in the same case. To establish that the tribunal is biased in the due process manner requires a showing of actual bias when separation of function issues are the bases for showing bias. The probability of bias standard was rejected by the court in this setting, and that standard only applies when there are disqualifying financial interests. In so holding, the Supreme Court disapproved of the California Court of Appeal decision in Quintero v. City of Santa Ana (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 810 (an agency attorney who performs conflicting roles of advocacy and advising agency in unrelated cases violates due process of law). See Ch. 473E, Public Administrative Law Judges , § 473E.8[a].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Administrative Hearsay. This chapter is updated with Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009). 172 Cal. App. 4th 974 , which holds that forensic lab blood test results were not admissible in evidence in DMV administrative hearing because the Department of Justice lab report containing the test results was not prepared at or near the time of the recorded event, as required for the public employee records exception [Evid. Code § 1280(b)] to the hearsay rule. Thus, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to exclude the lab report of the blood test results from admission into evidence. Preparation of the report one week after the analysis was completed was not sufficient in the absence of any information as to when the test results were entered into the lab database. Also, Veh. Code § 23612(g)(2) permits the DMV to receive or retrieve electronically evidence of a licensee's blood alcohol results directly from a government forensic database and provides that the electronic information is the best available evidence of the test results, but Veh. Code § 23612(g)(2) is not an exception to the hearsay rule. Thus, the lab report could be challenged on hearsay grounds notwithstanding compliance with the requirements of Veh. Code § 23612(g)(2). Furthermore, the PAS test results were not admissible because of inadequate foundation since there was insufficient evidence that the test results met the foundations requirements of the DMV regulations (Tit. 17 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 1215-1222.2). The evidence related to PAS test results also did not meet the foundational requirements of properly functioning equipment, a properly administered test, and a qualified operator. Finally the DMV cannot rely upon the presumption of official duty codified in Evid. Code § 664 to establish the foundation for admissibility of the PAS test results. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.32[1].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Administrative Hearsay. This chapter is updated with Bledsoe v. Biggs Unified School District (2009)170 Cal. App. 4th 127 , which holds that the admission into evidence of a prior administrative law judge decision was permissible under Gov. Code § 11513(c) because the ALJ decision was reliable evidence. That decision, which was hearsay, properly supplemented other evidence under Gov. Code § 11513(d), and did not consume an undue amount of time under Gov. Code § 11513(f). The prior judge's decision assisted in proving that two teachers had special training and experience for teaching community day school, and therefore the school district was justified in laying off more senior teachers and retaining these two teachers consistent with the requirements of Educ. Code § 44955(d). The prior ALJ decision addressed a prior reduction in force by the same school district, and the qualifications of the same two teachers were discussed in that prior decision. See Ch.473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.32[1].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Privilege Against Self-Incrimination. This chapter is updated with Spielbauer v. County of Santa Clara (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 704 , which holds that a county could terminate a county employee for insubordination based on the employee's assertion of the privilege against self-incrimination as grounds for refusal to answer questions in a county internal investigation of the employee's conduct without the county granting the employee immunity from criminal prosecution based upon answers to those questions The Supreme Court explained that a public employee can be compelled by threat of job discipline to answer employer's questions so long as the employee is not required to waive the constitutional protection against criminal use of the answers. The public employer is not required to seek and obtain a formal grant of immunity as a condition of requiring answers to questions. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.33[2][b].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel. This chapter is updated with State Board of Chiropractic Examiners v. Superior Court (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 963 , which holds that a state employee pursuing a whistleblower retaliation complaint under Gov. Code § 8547.8 against agency officials where the state employee worked was only required to pursue a complaint with the State Personnel Board under Gov. Code § 19683. The employee was not required to request a hearing before an ALJ working for the State Personnel Board (SPB), nor was the employee required to seek judicial review under administrative mandamus before filing a civil action for damages based on whistleblower retaliation. The employee was only required to receive the findings of the executive officer of the SPB based on review of the complaint. The employee was not required to exhaust administrative or judicial remedies to challenge those findings before filing a civil lawsuit. Furthermore, the executive officer's findings (which were adverse to the employee) were not binding on the employee as a matter of issue preclusion because the executive officer's findings were not a final judgment following an administrative hearing. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication

Hearings, § 473F.41[1].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Consequences of Agency Decisions. This chapter is updated with County of Santa Cruz v. Civil Service Commission of Santa Cruz (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1577 , which holds that a county civil service commissions' decision to reduce the penalty awarded (from demotion in rank to a 30-day suspension without back pay) against a sergeant who allegedly made false statements and was found to have acted with insubordination and willful disobedience during the investigation of a gender harassment claim against him brought by a female deputy was an abuse of discretion given the seriousness of the employee misconduct by the sergeant. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[2].

Timing of Judicial Review--Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. This chapter is updated with Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320 , which holds that a former county employee who filed a whistleblower retaliation complaint against his former employer did not have to exhaust either an internal administrative remedy or the remedy provided by Lab. Code § 98.7 (filing a complaint with the Labor Commissioner) before filing his lawsuit in superior court. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.11[3][a].

Timing of Judicial Review--Commencement and Running of Limitation Period. This chapter is updated with Tarkington v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494 , which holds that equitable tolling of the applicable statute of limitations [Unemp. Ins. Code § 410] for challenging denial of unemployment insurance benefits by filing a petition for a writ of administrative mandate applied and continued after the superior court denied reconsideration of an order sustaining demurrer for misjoinder of parties until filing of new petition for writ of administrative mandate correcting that error. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.20[3].

Timing of Judicial Review--Expedited Judicial Review of First Amendment Claims. This chapter is updated with Stearn v. County of San Bernadino (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 434 , which holds that the 21-day statute of limitations codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 (d) for actions seeking to review issuance of permits that affect expressive conduct did not apply to a challenge by a third-party resident of a county to a decision of the county board of supervisors to approve 14 conditional use permits requested by a billboard advertiser for billboards to be placed in the desert. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.20[4].

Cable Television Access and Fees. This chapter is updated with a new section on the access of cable television operators to a real property, and a revised analysis of permissible fees for delinquent payment of cable television fees. See Ch. 484, Radio and Television, §§ 484.17[2][a1], [e].

Sanitation Districts. This chapter is updated with several new sections on sanitary districts covering such topics as formation, powers, construction contracts, and liability for damages. See Ch. 511, Sanitation and Sewerage Districts, § 511.15.

Blood Alcohol Tests. This chapter is updated with Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974 , where the court of appeal held that while Vehicle Code § 23612(g)(2) provides the DMV may receive or retrieve evidence of a licensee's blood alcohol test results directly from a government forensic lab database and that such evidence is the best available evidence of the test results, the opponent of the evidence may challenge the document or other record on other exclusionary grounds, including hearsay. See Ch. 92, Automobiles: Drivers' Licenses, § 92.107[4][c].

Due Process--Liberty Interest. This chapter is updated with Katzberg v. Regents of the University of California (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 300 , which holds that an at-will public employee who can be terminated without cause (and therefore has no due process property interest in continued employment) does have a liberty interest that is deprived when the termination includes charges that could negatively affect the employee's standing or associations in the community or that could negatively affect the employee's job-related reputation. In that setting, the employee has the right to a name-clearing hearing. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.22[4].

Due Process--Liberty Interest. This chapter is updated with Kreutzer v. City and County of San Francisco (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 306 , which holds that a physician who was released for non-disciplinary reasons from an exempt position with the City and County of San Francisco did not have a liberty interest that was deprived because no reasons for the release from employment with the city were publicly disclosed. Public disclosure of reason is required to establish stigma. Since there was no public disclosure of reasons, the physician's employment related reputation was not stigmatized. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.22[4].

Due Process Hearing Procedures--Cross-Examination. This chapter is updated with Manufactured Home Communities, Inc. v. County of San Luis Obispo (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 705 , which holds that mobilehome park owners' due process of law rights were violated when a county rent review board denied the owners the right to cross examine opposing witnesses--tenants in the mobilehome park--at a hearing before the Board to determine whether or not rent increases proposed by the owners violated the county rent control ordinance. The court also held that it violated due process of law to make fact findings against the owner based upon tenant testimony without cross-examination of those tenant witnesses. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.46[3].

Due Process Hearing Procedures--Hearing Costs. This chapter is updated with Soto v. County of Riverside (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 492 , which holds that a provision in a memorandum of understanding (between a city and a public employee association) that required a disciplined city employee to pay one-half of the hearing costs for an administrative appeal (binding arbitration) if the employee brought the appeal through a privately retained attorney rather than through the union violated due process of law. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.48.

Public Agency Meetings--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Galbiso v. Orosi Public Utility Dist. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1063 , which holds that the denial of attorney's fees under Brown Act was an abuse of discretion because the district violated the Brown Act in not allowing a landowner to make public comments related to an action to foreclose her land and because the district improperly went into a closed session without making required public disclosures. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.15[3].

Public Agency Meetings--Civil Enforcement. This chapter is updated with North Pacifica LLC v. California Coastal Commission (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1416 , which holds that the California Coastal Commission's failure to give 10 days notice of a public hearing to a developer (who received actual notice six days before hearing) substantially complied [Gov. Code § 11130.3(b)(3)] with the obligations of the Bagley Keene Open Meetings Act statute because the commission staff made a good-faith effort to notify interested persons and the public about the date and time of the hearing. Furthermore, the developer failed to show prejudice from the commission's failure to provide timely notice of the public hearing. Therefore, the commission's actions taken at the public hearing were not invalid or nullified for failure to comply with the requirements of the Bagley Keene Open Meetings Act. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.25[2][b].

Public Records Act--Information Practices Act. This chapter is updated with Moghadam v. Regents of University of California (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 466 , which holds that the Regents of the University of California did not violate the Information Practices Act (IPA) [Civ. Code §§ 1798-1798.78] when they did not retain and return midterm and final exams taken by a student who filed a lawsuit that challenged the failure to maintain and return those exams. The IPA was not violated by the Regents because student exams are not "records" within the meaning of the IPA. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.10[5][b].

Public Records Act--Legislative Open Records Act. This chapter is updated with Zumbrun Law Firm v. California Legislature (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1603 , which holds that the California legislature did not violate the Legislative Open Records Act [Gov. Code §§ 9070 to 9080] in not disclosing records related to the Capital Park Safety and Security Improvements Project because those records were exempt under Gov. Code § 9075(h): "Correspondence of and to individual Members of the Legislature and their staff; and (i) Records the disclosure of which is exempted or prohibited pursuant to provisions of federal or state law, including, but not limited to, provisions of the Evidence Code relating to privilege." Furthermore, the legislature was not required to provide a privilege log to justify the applicability of particular exemptions to specific documents, and it would be sufficient to describe the documents in general and how specific exemptions applied to those documents in general. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.10[5][c].

Public Records Act--Records Exempt Under Other Laws. This chapter is updated with Berkeley Police Association v. City of Berkeley (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 385 , which holds that the City of Berkeley's Police Review Commission (PRC) violated the confidentiality of peace officer personnel records under Penal Code § 832.7, as interpreted in the Copley Press decision, because the PRC hearings into complaints of police misconduct were public hearings and members of the public had access to PRC reports, investigations, and findings. The Court of Appeal affirmed the mandate order requiring the City of Berkeley and the PRC to maintain the confidentiality of police officer records, prohibit members of the public from attending PRC complaint hearings, and prohibit public access to PRC reports, investigations, or findings. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Public Records Act--Records Exempt Under Other Laws. This chapter is updated with Sutter's Place Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1370 , which holds that the records exempt under other laws statutory exemption [Gov. Code § 6254(k)] applied to legislative process records because of the common law principle that the mental processes of legislators could not be probed through the judicially ordered discovery process includes public records related to legislative processes that may reveal legislators' motives for passing specific laws. These records are protected from disclosure under this statutory exemption [Gov. Code § 6254(k)]. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.13[14].

Public Records Act--Judicial Review. This chapter is updated with Tracy Press, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1290 , which holds that failure to name the city council member in a mandate action brought by a newspaper in the superior court to obtain e-mails exchanged between a member of a city council and the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory provided grounds for dismissal of the action. The newspaper sought the e-mails claiming that they were public records that had to be disclosed under the California Public Records Act. The dismissal by the court of appeal was based on the newspaper's failure to name the city council member as a real party in interest in the appellate original proceeding after having named the city council member as a party in the superior court proceeding. The city council member was held to be an indispensable party under Code Civ. Proc. § 389, thereby justifying dismissal of the proceeding in the court of appeal. The city council member had unique interests related to whether her e-mails sent from home on a private e-mail account that discussed city business were public records. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.17[3].

Public Records Act--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Bernardi v. County of Monterey (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1379 , which holds that an award of attorney's fees in the amount of $244,287.50 under Gov. Code § 6259 to litigants who were successful in receiving a court order requiring production of documents (related to a pending subdivision proposal) under the Public Records Act was proper. The court of appeal held that the hours charged were reasonable, that no reduction of hours based upon degree of success was required, and that the application of a 1.25 multiplier to the lodestar amount was valid. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.17[4].

Public Records Act--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Galbiso v. Orosi Public Utility Dist. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1063 , which holds that a party was successful in obtaining access to records under the Public Records Act, and thus was a prevailing party entitled to recover attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 6259 even though the landowner was denied access to all records because she was denied access to the premises of the district to inspect documents. The landowner prevailed on that claim and that was sufficient to satisfy the prevailing party requirement for recovery of attorney's fees. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.17[4].

Agency Investigations--Statutory Authority for Agency Subpoenas. This chapter is updated with DuFauchard v. U.S. Financial Management, Inc. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1502 , which holds that an investigative subpoena that sought records related to non-California residents business activities with a California company was proper and valid because the agency had proper investigative authority under Gov. Code § 11180, and Fin. Code § 12106. See Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies, § 471.30[4][a].

Agency Investigations--Statutory Authority for Agency Subpoenas. This chapter is updated with State ex rel. Dept. of Pesticide Regulation v. Pet Food Exp. Ltd. (3rd Dist. 2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 841 , which holds that an order compelling compliance with an investigative subpoena was valid because the records sought were reasonably relevant and production of the documents under subpoena did not violate fourth amendment protections against unreasonable searches and seizures. See Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies, § 471.30[4][a].

Agency Investigations--Appellate Review of Subpoena Order. This chapter is updated with State ex rel. Dept. of Pesticide Regulation v. Pet Food Exp. Ltd. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 841 and People ex rel. DuFauchard v. U.S. Financial Management, Inc. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1502 , which hold that an order compelling compliance with an administrative subpoena is appealable as a final judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(1). See Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies, § 471.31[5].

Public Agency Rules--Exemptions From Rulemaking. This chapter is updated with Morales v. California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 729 , which holds that the lethal injection protocol adopted by the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation was a regulation subject to the APA requirements because it implemented a statutory directive and it satisfied the rule of general application requirement even though only a small number of persons were subject to the protocol. See Ch. 472, Public Agency Rules, § 472.21[1][e].

Prehearing Procedures in Agency Adjudications--Hearing Continuances. This chapter is updated with Bussard v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 858 , which holds that a DMV hearing officer had good cause to grant a continuance of a DMV hearing so that a police office could testify that he was on duty when he observed the motorist drive his car. The testimony would provide proper foundation for the admission of police reports related to the stop of a driver for a DUI violation. The motorist objected to admission of police reports because of lack of foundation. Also, the motorist was not prejudiced by the delay in the hearing. See Ch. 473C, Prehearing Procedures in Agency Adjudications, § 473C.15[41[a].

Public Administrative Law Judges--Separation of Functions. This chapter is updated with Witt Home Ranch, Inc. v. County of Sonoma (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 543 , which holds that a property owner was not denied due process of law because of dual incompatible roles of an agency attorney because the attorney acted only in a legal advisory role for the agency at the administrative hearing level and did not act as an advocate at that level. See Ch. 473E, Public Administrative Law Judges, § 473E.21[8[a].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Collateral Estoppel. This chapter is updated with Noble v. Draper (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1 , which holds that a former state employee's civil lawsuit for retaliation by a supervisor against the Public Employees Retirement System based on Gov. Code § 8547.8 was properly dismissed based upon the application of collateral estoppel principles. The court of appeal held that the employee was given a quasi-judicial hearing before the SPB that was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Code Civ. Proc.§ 1094.5, and that the plaintiff was collaterally estopped from relitigating fact findings that were actually litigated in the administrative proceeding before the SPB. Those fact findings could only be challenged in a writ of mandate proceeding under Code Civ. Proc.§ 1094.5. A failure to challenge the decision and findings in a mandate proceeding means that the decision and findings are final and binding on the plaintiff, and cannot be relitigated in the civil lawsuit. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.41[1].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Collateral Estoppel. This chapter is updated with California Logistics, Inc. v. State of California (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 242 , which holds that the provisions of Cal. Const. art. 13, § 32, which is also known as the "pay first, litigate later" rule takes precedence over principles of collateral estoppel. Thus, a company's declaratory and injunctive relief action against the State of California was properly dismissed. The court of appeal held that the Section 32 principle takes precedence over collateral estoppel. The State was not precluded form relitigating the employment status issue against the company, and from collecting the tax. The company's challenge to the employment tax liability would have to be litigated after the company paid the tax. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.41[2].

Agency Adjudication Hearings--Collateral Estoppel. This chapter is updated with California Physicians' Service v. Aoki Diabetes Research Institute (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1506 , which holds that a health care plan was collaterally estopped from relitigating the coverage issue of whether or not a health care provider's diabetes-related treatment was experimental (and therefore not covered by the plan) because the same coverage issue had previously been litigated by the California Public Employees Retirement System (CalPERS) and the health care plan was in privity with CalPERS, and therefore bound by the prior determination under collateral estoppel principles. See Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings, § 473F.41[3].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with State Water Resources Control Board Cases (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 304 , which holds that it was improper to deny an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to a nonprofit organization. The superior court had denied the fee award based on the necessity for private enforcement criteria, that the nonprofit organization's efforts were unnecessary because a public entity had achieved the same success in the underlying litigation as a private attorney general. The court of appeal held that the necessity criteria were met, and that the nonprofit organization was entitled to attorney's fees. The court noted that it was irrational to provide a fee award to the public entity under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and to deny a fee award to the nonprofit organization when both had contributed to the same successful result. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with The Utility Reform Network v. Public Utilities Commission (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 522 , which holds that an order of the California Public Utilities Commission that a non-profit consumer advocacy organization could not recover attorney's fees under Pub. Util. § 1802 for a court challenge to a settlement of a lawsuit between a regulated electric utility (Southern California Edison) and the California Public Utilities Commission (PUC) was proper. The PUC concluded that the challenge was not successful and did not make a substantial contribution to the PUC proceedings. The court also affirmed an order that TURN was not entitled to a multiplier to increase the amounts of the fees awarded for participating in lawsuits related to electrical deregulation. However, the court reversed the order of the PUC requiring payment of outside counsel's compensation at the same rate as inside counsel. The court held that was an abuse of discretion. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Marine Forests Society v. California Coastal Commission (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 867 , which holds that a nonprofit corporation, the Marine Forests Society, could not recover appellate attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 because it was not a prevailing party as to the claims for which it sought attorney's fees. The corporation sought injunctive relief against the California Coastal Commission to prohibit the commission from commencing cease and desist proceedings against the corporation's experimental manmade reef on the ocean floor. The corporation was successful in challenging the legislative appointment authority for the commissioners of the California Coastal Commission. However, its successful litigation related to appointment did not change the behavior of the commission, only the Legislature's behavior, and thus neither the judicially sanctioned relief nor the catalyst theory are applicable (citing the Graham decision), and the corporation was not a prevailing party (successful litigant) under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Vasquez v. State of California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243 , which holds that the catalyst theory requirement that the party seeking attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 make a reasonable attempt to settle the dispute with defendant prior to litigation did not apply to recovery of fees in cases that did not rely on the catalyst theory. In non-catalyst theory cases, the reasonable attempt factor would be considered as part of the court's equitable discretion in determining whether the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement requirement for fee recovery under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 was satisfied, but it would not be a requirement for fee recovery. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Agency Adjudication Decisions--Attorney's Fees. This chapter is updated with Villanueva v. City of Colton (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1188 , which upheld an award of $39,472.30 in trial-related attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 12965 in favor of a city and against a former city employee who bought a frivolous lawsuit claiming racial discrimination under the FEHA statute. The court held that while the trial court that ordered the fee award has the responsibility to consider the losing parties financial status, the losing party in this case did not offer any evidence of financial or income information that would support a lowered fee award. Therefore, the fee order was not an abuse of discretion. The court of appeal denied the city appellate attorneys fees under Gov. Code § 12965 because the former employees appeal was not frivolous as to the issue of whether the fee awarding court has to consider the losing parties ability to pay. See Ch. 473G, Agency Adjudication Decisions, § 473G.35[9].

Availability of Judicial Review--Ordinary Mandate. This chapter is updated with Environmental Protection & Information Center v. California Dept. of Forestry & Fire Protection (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 459 , which holds that regulatory approvals related to a streambed alteration agreement did not require findings, and agreement was not invalid without findings, because statutory approval process did not require that a hearing be held by law. Agreement was reviewable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 (ordinary mandate). Also, the steelworkers union had standing (was beneficially interested) under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 as a citizen litigant to challenge regulatory approvals related to a streambed alteration agreement. See Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review, § 474.11[3][a].

Availability of Judicial Review--Standing. This chapter is updated with County of San Diego v. San Diego NORML (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 798 , which holds that counties had standing to challenge the constitutionality of state laws that imposed direct obligation on counties, but counties did not have standing challenge the constitutionality of state laws that did not impose obligations of counties. See Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review, § 474.11[3][a].

Availability of Judicial Review--Standing. This chapter is updated with Mission Hospital Regional Medical Center v. Shewry (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 460 , which holds that hospitals have standing to challenge a freeze on Medicaid reimbursement rates enacted by the state legislature. Hospitals are beneficially interested under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 because they have an interest in the proper administration of the Medicaid laws that is distinct from the interest of the public at large in that they are adversely affected by the reimbursement rate freeze. See Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review, § 474.11[3][a].

Standards of Judicial Review--Fundamental Vested Rights. This chapter is updated Termo Company v. Luther (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 394 , which holds that the independent judgment standard of review applied to an appeal by two oil companies that challenged the decision of the director of conservation affirming the decision of the state oil and gas supervisor directing the plugging and abandoning of 28 oil wells owned by the companies that were still in operation. The court held that the right to continue to operate oil wells was a fundamental right "of particular importance in the current economic climate." The right to operate oil wells was also vested because these oil wells had been either in operation or in idle status for many years. The order to plug and abandon the wells terminated the right to extract oil, and that impacted the fundamental vested right. When fundamental vested rights are affected, the independent judgment standard of review must be applied by the reviewing court. The statutory exception permitting the substantial evidence standard of review to be applied when the Legislature mandates that standard of review does not apply here, because the governing statute, Pub. Res. Code § 3355, does not clearly express a substantial evidence standard of review, and does not contain required due process procedural safeguards. Section 3355 did not expressly state that the substantial evidence standard of review applied to decisions of the director. The statutory procedures contained in Sections 3350 to 3359 lacked some fundamentals of due process of law, including no separation of prosecutorial and adjudicatory functions, inadequate notice because no written notice of charges is required, no right to file an answer, no specification of burden of proof, and no right to have a hearing conducted consistent with the evidence code. Because of the lack of procedural due process safeguards, the independent judgment standard of review must be applied to challenges of the decision of that director. Finally, the statement of decision requested by the appealing parties must be prepared on remand when the reviewing court applies the independent judgment standard of review. See Ch. 474B, Standards of Judicial Review, § 474B.16[9][a].

Review of Agency Decision--Parties. This case is updated with Center for Biological Diversity v. FPL Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1349 , which holds that members of the public have standing under the public trust doctrine to challenge harm to the public trust related to wildlife including raptors and other birds allegedly harmed by wind turbines However, members of the public seeking to challenge harm to the public trust must file a lawsuit against the responsible public agencies, the County of Alameda, and the California Department of Fish and Game, which are charged with enforcing the public trust. They may not file a lawsuit against the operators of the wind turbines that have allegedly caused the harm. Failure to join the County of Alameda under Code Civ. Proc. § 389 is grounds for dismissing the action. The county is a necessary party because it issued the wind turbine permits being challenged. Because the limitations period for challenging the issuance of the permits has expired, the county cannot be joined to the lawsuit and the county is considered to be an indispensable party. See Ch. 474C, Review of Agency Decision, § 474C.13[2].

Due Process--Hearing Procedures. This chapter is updated with *California Consumer Health Care Council, Inc. v. California Department of Managed Health Care (*2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 684 , which holds that asymmetrical hearing procedures did not violate due process of law when enrollees in health plans did not have the opportunity to see or rebut the filings of a health care plan, even thought the plan had the opportunity to see and rebut the filings of enrollees. See Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies, § 470A.41[3].

Public Agency Meetings--Personnel Exception. This chapter is updated with Travis v. Board of Trustees of The California State University (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 335 , which holds that the personnel exception was properly invoked by a board of trustees to discuss the return of a former chancellor to employment with the university. The personnel exception properly included a closed session meeting of the trustees to discuss a decision by a former chancellor to return from an extended leave of absence and assume a teaching job. The trustees did not violate the Bagley Keene Act in holding a closed session for this purpose. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.23[2].

Public Agency Adjudication--Local Agencies. This chapter is updated with Patterson Flying Service v. California Department of Pesticide Regulation (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 411 , which holds that the provisions of Chapter 4.5 apply to hearings conducted under the authority of the county agricultural commissioner, because the office of county agricultural commissioner is a local agency created or appointed by concerted action of the state and one or more local agencies. The flying service had the opportunity at the hearing to contest a fine imposed on them for not properly following the label directions for the application of pesticides. See Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, § 473.15[1][d].

Timing of Judicial Review--Issue Exhaustion. This chapter is updated with Niles Freeman Equipment v. Joseph (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 765 , which holds that the failure of a party to raise a due process issue before the ALJ at an administrative hearing meant that this issue could not be brought on appeal. The party waived the right to raise the claim that the agency failure to follow APA procedures violated due process of law. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.11[3][b].

Timing of Judicial Review--Statute of Limitations. This chapter is updated with Capitol Racing v. California Horse Racing Board (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 892 , which holds that the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 19463 (30-day time limit) for filing a petition for administrative mandate was controlling not the provisions of Gov. Code § 11523 (30-day time limit). The challenge of Capitol Racing to the decision of the board was held to be untimely because it was filed more than 30 days after the date that the decision was issued by the Board. See Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review, § 474A.20[2][a].

Alcoholic Beverage Licenses--Writs. This chapter is revised throughout with amended and new and amended Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.485 et seq. governing writs of mandate. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses .

Public Utilities--Compensation. In The Utility Reform Network v. Public Utilities Commission (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 522 , the court of appeal held that substantial contribution to a PUC decision by an intervener does not automatically entitle the intervener to compensation for all ensuing judicial proceedings without regard to changed circumstances or results achieved. See Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.26[2].

Public Utilities--Determination Regarding Ability to Pay Penalties or Fines. This chapter is updated with a new section in light of the amendment of Pub. Util. Code § 1701.2. The PUC may determine that a respondent lacks, or may lack, the ability to pay potential penalties or fines or to pay restitution that may be ordered by the PUC [Pub. Util. Code § 1701.2(e)(1)]. If so, the PUC may order the respondent to demonstrate, to the PUC's satisfaction, sufficient ability to pay. The respondent must demonstrate the ability to pay, or make other financial arrangements satisfactory to the PUC, within seven days of the PUC commencing an adjudication case. The PUC may delegate to the attorney to the PUC the determination of whether a sufficient showing has been made by the respondent of an ability to pay [Pub. Util. Code § 1701.2(e)(2)]. The amended code section also provides for administrative law judge review [Pub. Util. Code § 1701.2(e)(3)]; and a respondent that is a public utility regulated under a rate-of-return or rate-of-margin regulatory structure or that has gross annual revenues of more than $100,000,000 generated within California is presumed to be able to pay potential penalties or fines or to pay restitution that may be ordered by the PUC [Pub. Util. Code § 1701.2(e)(4)]. See Ch. 480, Public Utilities, § 480.67.

PART VI. 2009 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.219 Real Estate

Boundaries--Validating Acts. This chapter is updated with a new section on Validating Acts, which according to nonbinding legislative history materials, for nearly 70 years the Legislature's annual Validating Acts have boosted the stability and credit ratings of state and local bonds. The Validating Acts cure public officials' mistakes that might otherwise invalidate boundary changes. However, the Acts do not protect against fraud, corruption, or unconstitutional actions. See Ch. 101, Boundaries, § 101.16[4].

Lis Pendens. Arbitration is not an "action" under Code Civ. Proc. § 405.5 governing the filing of a notice of lis pendens; however, a party to arbitration may simultaneously file and stay a court action pending the arbitration of a dispute that is claimed to be arbitrable and relevant to the action, giving grounds for filing a lis pendens and not itself waiving arbitration, so long as other steps are not taken in the litigation that have the effect of waiving arbitration [Manhattan Loft, LLC v. Mercury Liquors, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1040]. See Ch. 30, Using Alternative Dispute Resolution, § 30.11[5][b].

Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments. The Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act sets forth requirements that must be met before a homeowners' association may file a complaint for damages against the builder, developer, or general contractor based upon a claim for defects in the design or construction of the development. The expiration date of those provisions has been extended from July 1, 2010, to July 1, 2017. See Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments, § 124.26.

Easement by Necessity. In Murphy v. Burch (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 157 , the California Supreme Court held that when the claimant of an easement by necessity traces common ownership back to the federal government and seeks to establish an implied reservation of an access right-of-way, the claimant bears the burden of producing evidence on the issues regarding the government's intent to reserve an easement and the government's lack of power to condemn; an easement is not a matter of necessity when the federal government had the power of eminent domain to gain access to its property and strict necessity may be extinguished when a sovereign owner failed to exercise that power. See Ch. 240, Easements, § 240.13.

Homesteads and Bankruptcy Actions. This chapter is updated with a new section on the use of the homestead exemption in forced and unforced sales of real property in bankruptcy proceedings. See Ch. 294, Homesteads, § 294.13.

Lost Papers--Evidentiary Proof. This chapter is updated with a new section on proving the content of a lost writing with other evidence under the secondary evidence rules and the use of oral testimony. See Ch. 356, Lost Papers, § 356.27.

Mechanics' Liens--Demolition and Removal. This chapter is updated with United Rentals Northwest, Inc. v. Snider Lumber Products, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1479 , which holds since "work of improvement" is defined to include demolition and removal of buildings, the entirety of a work of improvement can consist of the demolition or removal of a building. There is no basis for the view that removal of a building--or anything else included in the definition--only counts if something else is done to the land in addition. See Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens, § 361.11[3][a].

Mechanics' Liens--Unlicensed Contractor. This chapter is updated with Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845 , which holds Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 represents legislative determination that the importance of deterring unlicensed persons from engaging in the contracting business outweighs any harshness between the parties, and applies even when a person for whom work was performed knew the contractor was unlicensed. This chapter is also updated with Great West Construction, Inc. v. WSS Industrial Construction, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 581 , which holds a subcontractor who is unlicensed cannot maintain an action against a general contractor for work performed under a construction service agreement. See Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens, § 361.152[4].

Foreclosure Protection for Federally Related Mortgage Loan. In 2009, Congress established a 90-day notice to vacate requirement in the Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act [P.L. 111-22, S. 896]. This requirement applies to any foreclosure on a federally related mortgage loan or on any dwelling or residential real property after May 20, 2009 [P.L. 111-22, sec. 702, 123 Stats. 1660-1661]. As of August 2009, the California Legislature was in the process of amending Code Civ. Proc. § 1161b to extend the notice period from 60 to 90 days if required by any other provision of state or federal law [SB 483, Corbett]. See Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.51A[6].

Foreclosure Protection for Tenants. In 2009, Congress established a 90-day notice to vacate requirement in the Protecting Tenants at Foreclosure Act [P.L. 111-22, S. 896]. This requirement applies to any foreclosure on a federally related mortgage loan or on any dwelling or residential real property after May 20, 2009 [P.L. 111-22, sec. 702, 123 Stats. 1660-1661]. As of August 2009, the California Legislature was in the process of amending Code Civ. Proc. § 1161b to extend the notice period from 60 to 90 days if required by any other provision of state or federal law [SB 483, Corbett]. See Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy, § 332.20[5].

Timber--Wrongful Removal and Delivery. This chapter is updated with several new sections on the wrongful removal of timber, specifically addressing the issues of measure of damages, evidentiary issues, punitive damages, and post-trial challenges to the method of valuation. Another new section addresses the failure to deliver timber with the land conveyed. See Ch. 350, Logs and Timber, §§ 350.12, 350.14A.

Subdivision Map Act. In 2009 Stats., Ch. 18, the Legislature amended the Subdivision Map Act to provide that the expiration date of any tentative or vesting tentative map, or parcel map for which a tentative or vesting tentative map has been approved, that was in existence on July 15, 2009, and will not expire before January 1, 2012, has been extended by 24 months, as has any legislative, administrative, or other state agency approval pertaining to a development project included in the map [Gov. Code § 66452.22(a), (c)]. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.267[9].

Recovering Economic Damages. A court of appeals has held that a home builder may recover from a product manufacturer for economic losses caused by the manufacturer's violation of the standards set forth in the Right to Repair Act [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.] through a derivative equitable indemnity action, even though a builder may not recover for those losses through a direct negligence claim against the manufacturer [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc.

No Exempting Property From Rent Control. A court of appeals has held that a landlord and tenant may not agree to exempt rented property from rent control [Gombiner v. Swartz (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1365] . See Ch. 335, Landlord and Tenant: Rent Control, § 335.12[1].

No Recording Pending Litigation Notice From Other State. A court of appeals has held that the California lis pendens statutes do not authorize the recording in California of a notice of litigation pending in the court of another state [The Formula Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1455] . See Ch. 348, Lis Pendens, § 348.14.

New Form of Zoning Summons. A new Judicial Council form of summons to enforce the state housing law has been added to added [Health & Safety Code § 17990; JC Form SUM-145]. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.374.

Construction Contracts--Indemnification By Subcontractor in Specified Residential Construction Defect Situations. Civ. Code § 2782 has been amended [see Stats. 2008, ch. 467, § 1] to provide that for all contracts, and amendments to such contracts, entered into after January 1, 2009, for residential construction that purport to insure or indemnify the builder, general contractor, or any contractor not affiliated with the builder, by a subcontractor against liability for construction defect claims are unenforceable to the extent the claims either arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder or contractor or the builder's or contractor's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder; are for defects in design furnished by those persons; or do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties. See Ch. 104, Building Contracts, § 104.41[7].

Real Estate Broker or Salesperson Liability--Recovery Account. The coverage limits for the Recovery Account administered by the Department of Real Estate have been raised, for causes of action occurring on or after January 1, 2009. Persons having qualified claims against licensees may now apply for compensation from the Recovery Account, up to $50,000 for any one transaction and $250,000 for any one licensee [Stats. 2008, ch. 279]. For discussion, see Ch. 103, Brokers, § 103.41[4].

Condominiums--Remedy for Separate Interest Owner's Dispute With Association. Civ. Code § 1367.6 has been added [see Stats. 2008, ch. 502, § 2] to provide that, in addition to pursuing the formal alternative dispute resolution procedure, the owner of a separate interest who is disputing any charge or sum levied by the association, when the disputed amount does not exceed the jurisdictional limits of small claims court, may pay under protest the disputed amount and commence an action in small claims court. For discussion, see Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments, § 124.17[1][d].

Personal Property Left in Commercial Property. The Legislature adopted Civ. Code § 1993 et seq. [Stats. 2008, ch. 440], which establishes an optional procedure for disposing of personal property left behind in commercial property after termination of occupancy. This procedure parallels the existing procedure set forth in Civ. Code § 1980 et seq., now applicable to personal property left behind in residential property. Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy, § 332.26, has been updated to reflect these changes.

Termination of Tenancy--Domestic Violence, Sexual Assault, or Stalking. 2008 legislation [Stats. 2008, ch. 440] provides that a tenant may notify his or her landlord that he or she or a household member was a victim of an act that constitutes an act of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking and that the tenant intends to terminate the tenancy. A tenant who provides a notice of termination is responsible for payment of rent for 30 days following the giving of the notice, and thereafter is released from any rent payment obligation under the rental agreement without penalty. See Ch. 332, Landlord and Tenant: The Tenancy, § 332.27.

Disabled Access to Mobilehomes. New Civ. Code §§ 798.29.6, 799.11 [Stats. 2008, ch. 170] provide that mobilehome park management cannot prevent a mobilehome resident or owner from adding disabled access and accommodations to the home or lot. For discussion, see Ch. 369, Mobilehomes and Mobilehome Parks, § 369.39[4].

Statute of Frauds Unsigned Forbearance Agreement--Within Statute of Frauds. In Secrest v. Security National Mortgage Loan Trust 2002-2 (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 544 , the court of appeal held that an unsigned agreement by which a lender agreed to forbear from exercising the right of foreclosure under a deed of trust securing an interest in real property came within the statute of frauds. Although the forbearance agreement did not create, renew, or extend the note and deed of trust, it did modify them, and an agreement to modify a contract that is subject to the statute of frauds is also subject to the statute of frauds. See Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds, § 530.12[6].

Homeowners' Association--Request for Trustee's Deed After Sale of Separate Interest. With respect to separate interests governed by a homeowners' association, the association may cause to be filed in the recorder's office in the county in which the separate interests are situated, a request that a mortgagee, trustee, or other person authorized to record a notice of default regarding any of those separate interests, mail to the association a copy of any trustee's deed on a sale concerning a separate interest [2008 Stats., ch. 527]. For discussion and a form for use by the association, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.141A.

Zoning and Planning Subdivision Map Act--Antiquated Subdivision Maps. In Witt Home Ranch., Inc. v. County of Sonoma (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 543 , the court of appeal held that the Subdivision Map Act's grandfather provisions do not validate subdivision maps approved under the statutes in effect from 1893 (the date of the state's first regulation of private subdivision maps) through 1915. See Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning, § 579.279[4].

Foreseeability of Injury to Special Needs Student Inflicted in Hidden Area of Campus Need Not Require Prior Incidents. In Jennifer C. v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1320 , the court of appeal held that if a school district allows a hidden area to be maintained on campus without taking adequate steps to prevent access by students, the foreseeability of that area being used to inflict injury on a special-needs student may be imputed to the district even without proof of prior incidents of victimization taking place in that hidden area. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][vi], and see Ch. 514, Schools: Injuries to Students, § 514.12[2].

Education Code Recognizes Claim for Peer Sexual Orientation Harassment. In Donovan v. Poway Unif. School Dist. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 567 , the court of appeal found that high school students suffered severe, pervasive, and offensive harassment under Educ. Code § 220, prohibiting discrimination based on disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or any other characteristic contained in the definition of hate crimes in Pen. Code § 422.55 in any program or activity conducted by an educational institution that receives, or benefits from, state financial assistance or enrolls pupils who receive state student financial aid and were properly awarded money damages. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

Home Schooling in California Is Protected, but Can Be Overridden for Child's Safety. In Jonathan L. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1074 , the court of appeal held that California statutes permit home schooling as a species of private school education, which is exempted from compulsory education laws, but the statutory permission to home school may constitutionally be overridden in order to protect the safety of a child who has been declared dependent. Thus, for a family with a history of dependency court proceedings involving charges of physical abuse, neglect, and failure to prevent sexual abuse, the dependency court erred in declining to issue an order that the two youngest children be sent to a private or public school after they were declared dependent due to the abuse and neglect of their siblings. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.13[4].

Bullying Added to Grounds for Suspension. The Legislature has added bullying, including by electronic means, to the grounds for which a student may be suspended from school [see Educ. Code § 32261(f), (g)]. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities, § 513.38[3].

§ 1.221 Tax

Taxpayers Rights Advocates-- Power to Grant Relief. Until January 1, 2012, the taxpayers' rights advocate appointed by the Franchise Tax Board is empowered to review and grant an application for relief from any penalty, fee, addition to tax, or interest assessed on a taxpayer because of specified errors. The advocate may act on any application for relief received by the advocate after 2008, regardless of the tax year involved [see Stats 2008, ch. 305]. § 1.222 Torts

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Accrual Rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 May Be Applied to Action Against Public Entity. In K.J. v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1229 , the court of appeal held that although the childhood sexual abuse limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 does not apply to actions against public entities, the language in that statute suggesting that in delayed discovery cases the cause of action accrues on the date that the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should have discovered that psychological injury or illness occurring after plaintiff reached the age of majority was caused by childhood sexual abuse, can be used to determine the accrual date in an action against a public entity defendant when application of a delayed discovery rule is appropriate. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Limitations in Sex Abuse Case Against Third-Party Nonperpetrator Clarified. In Quarry v. Doe 1 (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1574 , the court of appeal held that, in a suit for childhood sexual abuse brought by a person over the age of 26 against a third-party nonperpetrator, a cause of action alleging post-2003 discovery of the cause of the plaintiff's psychological problems may be brought within three years of that discovery, even if the complaint may have been barred under an earlier version of the statute of limitations. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Plaintiff in Child Sex Abuse Case Not Required to Comply With Government Claims Act. Under amended Gov. Code § 905, a plaintiff seeking to file suit for damages for childhood sexual abuse pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 against a local public entity arising from conduct occurring on or after January 1, 2009, is not required to first file a claim with the local public entity within six months after accrual of the claim, as would generally be the case under the Government Claims Act. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Definition of "Financial Abuse" Under Elder Abuse Statute Amended. The Legislature has amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 15610.30 to change the definition of "financial abuse" under the elder or dependent adult abuse statute. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.33[4].

Civ. Code § 3294* Only Applies to Punitive Damages in Financial Abuse Cases. Under amended Welf. & Inst. Code

§ 15657.5, the standards of Civ. Code § 3294(b), regarding the imposition of punitive damages on an employer for the acts of an employee, apply in financial abuse cases only for the imposition of punitive damages and do not apply to the recovery of compensatory damages or attorney's fees or costs. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Remedy for Return of Property Under Elder Abuse Statute Added. Under new Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.6, a person or entity that takes, secretes, appropriates, obtains, or retains, or assists in taking, secreting, appropriating, obtaining, or retaining the real or personal property of an elder or dependent adult when the elder or dependent adult lacks capacity pursuant to Prob. Code § 812, or is of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, pursuant to Civ. Code § 39, must, upon demand by the elder or dependent adult or a representative of the elder or dependent adult, return the property. If that person or entity fails to return the property, the elder or dependent adult is entitled to the remedies provided for financial abuse pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.5, including attorney's fees and costs. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.35.

Limitations Period for Financial Abuse Added. Under new Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.7, unlike an action for physical abuse or neglect, an action for damages for financial abuse of an elder or dependent adult must be commenced within four years after the plaintiff discovers or, through the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have discovered, the facts constituting the financial abuse. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.36A.

[2] Animal Liability

Animal Liability. This chapter is updated with McMahon v. Craig (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 222 , which holds a pet owner may not recover for loss of the companionship of a pet, nor for negligent or intentional infliction of emotional distress based on veterinary malpractice that is not outrageous. See Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability, § 23.15[2].

[3] Assault and Battery

Specific Intent Required to Impose Battery Liability on Doctor Who Fails to Abide by Condition. In Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540 , the court of appeal held that to be liable for performing a medical procedure while failing to abide by a known condition imposed by the patient, the doctor must have intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition and a negligent failure to abide by the condition is an insufficient basis for liability for battery. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.14[5], and see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.20.

Police Not Liable When Ricochet Strikes Innocent Bystander. In Brown v. Ransweiler (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 516 , the court of appeal held that police acted reasonably as a matter of law in shooting at a murder suspect who, while attempting to flee in a vehicle being driven on a curb at a strip mall, was headed straight for another police officer, and as the suspect, who was shot and killed, could not have sued for battery; police also had a defense from liability for battery to a bystander in one of the mall offices who was hit by a deflected bullet fragment. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.22[1].

[4] Conversion

Triable Issue on Liability of Steward for Preventing Removal of Plaintiff's Horse From Track. In Jamgotchian v. Slender (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1384 , the court of appeal held that a triable issue of fact existed as to whether conduct by a steward of the California Horse Racing Board to prevent the owner of a horse from removing the horse from the race grounds before a race constituted intentional interference with the owner's possession of the horse sufficient to support a cause of action for trespass to chattels. See Ch. 150, Conversion, § 150.18[3].

Interpleader Action Insufficient Basis for Conversion Claim. In Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1489 , the court of appeal held that a person such as an attorney who, acting as a mere custodian, intermediary, or conduit, files a complaint in interpleader when faced with conflicting claims against litigation proceeds, does not exercise dominion over those funds sufficient to support an action for conversion. See Ch. 150, Conversion, § 150.15.

[5] Damages

Hospital Lien Act Ineffective to Create Lien Against Recovery From Victim's Own Insurer. In Weston Reid, LLC v. American Ins. Group, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 940 , the court of appeal held that the Hospital Lien Act, Civ. Code § 3045.1 et seq., does not provide for creation of a lien against recovery from the victim's own first-party insurer, even if the victim's recovery from his or her own insurer is under an uninsured motorist coverage that substitutes for recovery from a third-party tortfeasor who does not carry appropriate insurance coverage. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[3].

Homebuilder May Recover Equitable Indemnity From Product Manufacturer Under Right to Repair Act. In Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194 , the court of appeal held that a homebuilder liable for construction defects under the Right to Repair Act, Civ. Code § 895 et seq., may in turn recover for economic loss from a product manufacturer through an action for equitable indemnity, if the manufacturer's negligence or breach of contract caused a violation of the standards provided by the Act. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.47[1].

[6] Death and Survival Actions

Application of Statute of Limitations in Action Against Decedent Clarified. In Farb v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 678 , the court of appeal held that the limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2, which governs claims against a decedent's estate, applies to a claim filed in California even if the decedent's personal representative resides outside of California or the estate is in probate in another state. The court also held that the limitations period is not tolled while the plaintiff is a minor. See Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions, § 181.44[2].

[7] Drugs and Pharmacists

Failure-to-Warn Claim Against Drug Manufacturer Not Preempted. In McKenney v. Purepac Pharmaceutical Co. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 72 , the court of appeal held that a failure-to-warn strict liability claim against a generic drug manufacturer is not necessarily preempted by federal approval of the label if the FDA did not expressly preclude the warning requested by the plaintiff. See Ch. 214, Drugs and Pharmacists, § 214.62[2][a].

[8] Emergency Vehicles

Scope of Pursuit. Under Veh. Code § 17001, it is not sufficient that a motor vehicle somehow be involved in the series of events that results in the injury; instead, the vehicle must be in a state of being at work or in the exercise of some specific function by performing work or producing effects at the time and place the injury is inflicted. Accordingly, where police shot and killed a suspect well after a police vehicular pursuit concluded (after the police stopped and exited their cars and chased the suspect on foot), neither the individual officers nor the public entity may be held civilly liable for the suspect's actions based on the manner in which the officers conducted the vehicular pursuit [Hernandez v. City of Pomona (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 501]. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, § 246.12[1].

Immunity for Training of Emergency Services Personnel Volunteered During Emergencies. Under new Health & Safety Code § 1799.100, the Legislature has provided civil immunity from liability for improper training for local agencies, state or local government entities, and private businesses or nonprofit organizations included on the statewide emergency services registry established under Gov. Code § 8588.2 that voluntarily and without expectation and receipt of compensation donate services, goods, labor, equipment, resources, or dispensaries or other facilities in compliance with Gov. Code § 8588.2. See Ch. 246, Emergency Vehicles, §§ 246.12[3][b], 246.14[2].

[9] Employer Liability

Injury Caused by Former Employer After Termination Not Attributable to Employer. In Phillips v. TLC Plumbing, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1133 , the court of appeal held that because the employer-employee relationship ends on the termination of employment, an employer cannot be held liable for the negligent hiring and retention of an unfit employee for harm inflicted by the employee after his or her employment has been terminated, even if the former employee initially met the plaintiff while working for the employer. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.12[2].

[10] Fires

Fire Protection Services. In a case in which the Department of Forestry and Fire Protection sought to recover its costs in fighting a brush fire from real parties in interest, the affirmative defenses of comparative negligence or failure to mitigate damages were not to available to real parties; real parties were not allowed to challenge the reasonableness of the methods the department used (or did not use) to fight the fire [People ex rel. Grijalva v. Superior Court (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1072]. See Ch. 267, Fires, § 267.16[4].

[11] Fraud and Deceit

Property Seller's Duty to Disclose Can Extend to Past Lawsuits. In Calemine v. Samuelson (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 153 , the court of appeal held that a real estate seller's duty to disclose can extend to a duty to disclose lawsuits affecting the property's value or desirability, even lawsuits that are past and settled, and the issue of whether an undisclosed matter is of sufficient materiality to have affected the value or desirability of the property is a question of fact. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.14[3].

[12] Games, Sports, and Athletics

Jury to Determine Whether Defendant Increased Risks Inherent in Volleyball Game. In Luna v. Vela (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court of appeal held that it was for the jury to determine whether a homeowner increased the risks inherent in volleyball when failing to mark net tie-down lines in order to prevent persons from tripping over the lines. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.12[3].

[13] Garages and Gas Stations

No Tort Liability for Remounting Bald Tire on Vehicle. In Alcala v. Vazmar Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 747 , the court of appeal held that a violation of Veh. Code § 27465(a), which generally prohibits a dealer or person holding a retailer's permit from selling, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or installing on a vehicle axle for use on a highway any pneumatic tire having less than a specified amount of tread depth, does not support the imposition of tort liability when a tire already mounted on a vehicle is removed and remounted on that same vehicle by a dealer or retail seller. See Ch. 274, Garages and Gas Stations, § 274.11[1].

[14] Indemnity and Contribution

Post-Arbitration Procedures for Settlement Credits Under Code Civ. Proc. § 877 Clarified. In Wade v. Schrader (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1039 , the court of appeal held that if the fact and amount of a settlement credit under Code Civ. Proc. § 877 are undisputed and the action against a nonsettling defendant is adjudicated by an arbitrator, the credit need not be applied by the arbitrator and may be applied by a trial court when rendering judgment. Moreover, if the offset is greater than the amount of the arbitrator's award and the defendant has not previously brought the credit to the attention of the trial court, the nonsettling defendant may use a motion to compel acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 724.050(d) to effectively achieve the offset. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[3][a].

[15] Insane and Other Incompetent Persons

Psychiatrist Not Liable for Patient's Murder of His Neighbors. In Greenberg v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1339 , the court of appeal held that a psychiatrist owed no duty of care to the neighbors of a patient when the patient shot and killed two of the neighbors' family members, despite plaintiffs' contentions that the psychiatrist's negligent prescription of drugs to the patient caused him to become violent and caused the shooting. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, § 304.93[2].

[16] Libel and Slander

Actual Republication Required to Impose Liability on Original Publisher of Defamatory Content for Forced Republication by Defamed Person. In Dible v. Haight Ashbury Free Clinics, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 843 , the court of appeal held that imposing liability on the original publisher for forced republication by a defamed person requires an actual republication of the defamatory comments, and mere foreseeability that the defamed person might have to repeat the defamatory comments at some point in the future is an insufficient basis for imposing liability. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.21[2].

Retraction Demand Only Effective as to Listed Plaintiffs. In Anschutz Entertainment Group, Inc. v. Snepp (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 598 , the court of appeal held that a demand for retraction of defamatory material is only effective as to the plaintiffs listed or so described in the demand such that the defendant fairly knows who is objecting to the challenged publication, and merely stating that a business entity is seeking a retraction does not preserve the rights of that entity's parent corporation to seek general or punitive damages. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.53[4], 340.232[2].

Ministerial Exception Applied to Post-Termination Statements Made to Congregation. In Gunn v. Mariners Church, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 206 , the court of appeal held that because evaluating the truth or falsity of those statements would necessarily require an inquiry into the truth or falsity of the doctrinal beliefs of the church, a gay worship director could not sue his former church employer for post-termination statements to the congregation suggesting that plaintiff had been "caught in a sin," had admitted to "moral and sexual actions that are sin," had suffered a "breakdown in character," and was a "broken man." See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.16[2].

[17] Medical Malpractice

Specific Intent Required to Impose Battery Liability on Doctor Who Fails to Abide by Condition. In Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540 , the court of appeal held that to be liable for performing a medical procedure while failing to abide by a known condition imposed by the patient, the doctor must have intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition and a negligent failure to abide by the condition is an insufficient basis for liability for battery. See Ch. 58, Assault and Battery, § 58.14[5], and see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.20.

Lump Sum Present Value Used to Calculate Undertaking Required Pending Appeal. In Leung v. Verdugo Hills Hospital (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 205 , the court of appeal held that if a defendant against whom a judgment has been rendered must post an undertaking to stay the judgment pending appeal under Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1, the amount of the undertaking is calculated under that statute using the lump sum present value of the entire judgment, not using some lesser amount based on the payments that might otherwise actually be payable during the appeal under a periodic payment schedule created under Code Civ. Proc. § 667.7. See Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.49[4].

[18] Mental Suffering

Willed-Body Program Not Liable for Mishandling of Corpse Based Merely on General Pattern of Mishandling

Corpses. In Conroy v. Regents of University of California (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1244 , the California Supreme Court held that evidence of a general pattern of mishandling of donated bodies by a willed-body program will not support liability for negligence absent evidence demonstrating to a "well-founded substantial certainty" that the body of plaintiff's decedent was actually mishandled. See Ch. 180, Dead Bodies and Cemeteries, § 180.14[4], and Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11[4].

[19] Negligence

Third-Party Administrator Owes Duty to Health Plan Members When Administering Claims. In Mintz v. Blue Cross of California (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1594 , the court of appeal held that a corporation under contract to a health plan to administer claims owes a duty to health plan members to exercise due care to protect those members from physical injury caused by negligence in denying benefits under the plan. The court also held that only a "stranger to the contract" may be liable for interference with that contract, and an agent for a contracting principal, including a corporate agent or employee, cannot be liable for interfering with the principal's contract with the plaintiff if the alleged interference was committed when the agent was acting in the scope of the agency. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.31[3], and see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133[2][a].

Third-Party Workers' Compensation Claims Administrator Owed Duty of Care to Client's Excess Insurer. In National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, PA v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 35 , the court of appeal held that a workers' compensation claims administrator hired to provide claim services for a self-insured employer owes a duty of care when handling claims to the employer's excess insurer liable for paying claims that exceed a specified amount. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.31[3].

Statutory Immunity for Providing Emergency Care Applies Only to Emergency Medical Care. In Van Horn v. Watson (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 322 , the California Supreme Court held that the immunity provided by Health & Safety Code § 1799.102 does not apply to all emergency care, but applies only to the rendition of emergency medical care at the scene of a medical emergency, and pulling an injured friend from a car involved in an accident out of fear that the car might explode was not emergency medical care covered by the statute. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[2][d].

Jailer Owes Special Relationship to Prisoner; No Private Right of Action for Violating Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause of State Constitution. In Giraldo v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231 , the court of appeal held that because a prisoner is dependent and vulnerable, there is a special relationship between a jailer and a prisoner such that the jailer owes a duty of care to the prisoner to take steps to protect the prisoner from foreseeable harm. The court also held that there is no private right of action for violation of the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment contained in Section 17 of Article I of the California Constitution. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][x], and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.103[1].

Primary Assumption of Risk Inapplicable to Injury to Boat Passenger. In Kindrich v. Long Beach Yacht Club (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1252 , the court of appeal held that primary assumption of risk was not a defense in an action brought against a yacht club by a passenger on a boat who broke his leg when he jumped off of the boat in an attempt to help in tying off the boat as it was returning to the dock. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][a][ii].

[20] Nuisance

Nuisance Claim Permitted Against Apartment Owner for Secondhand Cigarette Smoke. In Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1540 , the court of appeal held that, because both private and public nuisances were alleged, an apartment tenant could bring suit against the apartment owner for harm caused by secondhand cigarette smoke permitted in outdoor common areas without a showing that the tenant suffered damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public, so long as plaintiff alleged that the presence of the secondhand smoke interfered with plaintiff's use and enjoyment of the outdoor facilities. See Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.14.

Continuing Nuisance Damages Denied for Contamination That Impaired Ability to Refinance. In Gehr v. Baker Hughes Oil Field Operations, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 660 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff who was unable to obtain refinancing on real property due to soil contamination caused by the previous owner could not recover damages for a continuing nuisance based on the difference in interest paid under the original loan and what would have been paid had plaintiff been able to obtain refinancing at a lower rate. See Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.26.

[21] Premises Liability

Power Company Not Liable for Electrocution. In Manuel v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 927 , the court of appeal held that an electric utility company that placed anti-climbing guards on an electric tower, even if they were installed incorrectly, did not engage in willful misconduct such that the company could be liable when a teenager was electrocuted when she climbed the tower. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.23[3].

Apartment Owners Owed Duty to Extend Gate Around Leasing Office. In Tan v. Arnel Management Co. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1087 , the court of appeal held that owners of a 20-acre apartment complex owed a duty of care to a tenant who was the victim of a carjacking to either move existing security gates so that they provided protection around the leasing office and its adjacent parking lot, or otherwise install a very similar gate around that area, which according to the existing evidence would require a minor gate extension over a small area. See Ch. 421, Premises Liability, § 421.15[2][b].

Republication of Material Plaintiff Posted on Internet Not Actionable as Public Disclosure of Private Facts. In Moreno v. Hanford Sentinel, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1125 , the court of appeal held that the unauthorized republication in a newspaper of an article plaintiff had written and posted on the highly popular Internet site MySpace.com was not an actionable public disclosure of private facts, as plaintiff herself made the information available to any person with a computer. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.37[1].

Workplace Privacy. In Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272 , the California Supreme Court held that an employer's clandestine videotaping of a computer workstation during non-business hours to determine the identity of a person who was using the computer to access pornographic websites during non-business hours was not considered so highly offensive that it would support causes of action for intrusion based upon state common law and Cal. Const., art. 1, § 1. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.39.

Privacy Claim Stemming From Pat-Down Searches at NFL Games Reversed for Further Proceedings. In Sheehan v. San Francisco 49ers, Ltd. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 992 , the California Supreme Court reversed the sustaining of defendant's demurrer after plaintiffs had alleged that having to submit to full-body pat-down searches as a condition for entering a stadium to watch a professional football game infringed their privacy rights. Assuming that plaintiffs had alleged a serious invasion of their privacy rights, the Court noted that the case could not be decided on demurrer as defendant had not yet offered into the record any explanation or reasoned justification for the searches. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16[8].

Student Exams Not Covered by Information Practices Act. In Moghadam v. Regents of University of California (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 466 , the court of appeal held that the Information Practices Act applies only to institutional records that are preserved in the ordinary course of business by a single, central custodian, and in the university context, registration forms and transcripts would be examples of such records, while student exams not stored or maintained by the university in a central location would not. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.100[2].

Privacy--Right to Privacy in Relatively Nonsensitive Contact Information. Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, has been updated with expanded coverage of the tension between privacy interests and access to relevant information necessary to pursue the litigation in employment law cases. In Puerto v. Superior Court (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1242 , a case alleging wage and hour violations, a California court held that an order restricting the disclosure of potential witnesses' contact information through the use of an opt-in letter exceeded the protections necessary to safeguard the legitimate privacy interests in the addresses and telephone numbers of the witnesses, and as such was an abuse of discretion. In Lee v. Dynamex, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1325 , a California court found reversible error in denying a motion to compel disclosure of independent contractor names and addresses using an opt-out procedure in a class action lawsuit alleging improper reclassification of class members from employees to independent contractors. In Crab Addison, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 958 , involving a pending class action to enforce employees' statutory wage and overtime rights, the violation of the employees' right to privacy did not outweigh plaintiffs' right to discover the class members' names, addresses, and telephone numbers, subject to an opt-out notice. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, §§ 191.120[3].

Testing of Arrestee's Blood May Be Required. Under amended Health & Safety Code § 121060, if a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel, while acting within the scope of his or her duties, is exposed to an arrestee's blood or bodily fluids, the arrestee may be required through a court order to submit to blood testing for HIV, hepatitis B, and hepatitis C, although a licensed health care provider must first make a good-faith effort to secure the arrestee's consent. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.60[3], [4].

U.S. Supreme Court Sets Punitive Damages Award Ratio for Maritime Cases. A divided U.S. Supreme Court vacated the already remitted $2.5 billion punitive damages award arising out of the Exxon Valdez oil spill. Exercising its "federal maritime common law authority," the Court held that a one-to-one ratio between compensatory and punitive damages was the maximum upper limit in that type of maritime case [Exxon Shipping Co. v. Baker (2008) -- U.S. --, 128 S. Ct. 2605] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.33[2].

U.S. Supreme Court Grants Certiorari in Philip Morris Punitive Damages Case. The high Court also granted Philip Morris' petition for certiorari after the Oregon Supreme Court reinstated a $79.5 million punitive damages award. Limiting its review to a procedural question, the Court declined to consider the second question of whether a punitive damages award that is 97 times the compensatory damages may be upheld [Philip Morris USA Inc. v. Williams (2008) -- U.S. --, 128 S. Ct. 2904] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability , § 460.104[15][b].

Federal Cigarette Labeling Act Does Not Preempt State Law Advertising Fraud Claim. In a 5-4 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the federal cigarette Labeling Act did not preempt a state law fraud claim alleging that advertisements regarding "light" cigarettes violated Maine's Unfair Trade Practices Act [Altria Group, Inc. v. Good (2008) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 538] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.52[2][i].

California Supreme Court Adopts Sophisticated User Doctrine. In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court of California adopted the sophisticated user doctrine [Johnson v. American Standard, Inc. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 56] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[10][b][vii].

Fitness Club's Provision Of Exercise Machines to Patrons Constitutes A Service. A fitness club provided a service, not a product, and could not be held strictly liable for a customer's injuries on an exercise machine [Ontiveros v. 24 Hour Fitness USA, Inc. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 424] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[6][d].

Finance Lessor Not Subject To Strict Products Liability. In a case of first impression involving a glue press, the court held that a finance lessor was not subject to strict products liability [Citicapital Commercial Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1527] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[6][j], [k].

Right to Repair Act Does Not Bar Home Builder's Equitable Indemnity Claim Against Building Materials Manufacturer. Under the Right to Repair Act, Civ. Code § 895 et seq., a builder could recover from a plumbing fittings manufacturer for economic losses caused by the manufacturer's violations of the Act's standards through an equitable indemnity action. However, it could not recover for economic losses through a direct negligence claim based on the manufacturer's violations of the standards [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[4].

Strict Products Liability Applies To Raw Asbestos Suppliers. The First District Court of Appeal declined to find that Arena v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1178, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 580 , which held that strict liability can apply to suppliers of raw asbestos, was wrongly decided [Garza v. Asbestos Corp. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 651] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[5].

Refusal To Instruct Jury That Cigarette Manufacturer Cannot Be Punished for Harm Suffered by Nonparties Warrants Reversal of $28 Billion Punitive Damages Award. A trial court's refusal to give the cigarette manufacturer's proposed punitive damages instruction not to impose punishment for harm caused to nonparties constituted prejudicial error. Consequently, the Second District Court of Appeal ordered a new trial to determine the amount of punitive damages [Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 655] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.33[2].

Plaintiffs May Use Reasonable Inferences to Prove Food Poisoning. Food poisoning cases are governed by same rules as other personal injury actions, and reasonable inferences are available to show causation. The Fourth District Court of Appeals declined to follow Minder v. Cielito Lindo Rest. (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1003 , to the extent that it requires a plaintiff in food poisoning cases to exclude other possible causes of his or her illness [Sarti v. Salt Creek Ltd. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1187] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[9][b][iv][C].

Drug Manufacturer May Be Held Liable for Misrepresentation Even Though Plaintiff Sustains Injuries From Using Drug's Generic Equivalent. A plaintiff who took the generic form of Reglan sustained permanent injuries. The name-brand manufacturer was improperly granted summary judgment on her misrepresentation claim. Its duty to use due care when providing product warnings extended to consumers whose physicians foreseeably relied on its product information when prescribing a medication, even if the prescription was filled with a generic equivalent [Conte v. Wyeth, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 89] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.11[10][n][iii].

Failure-To-Warn Claim Not Barred by Preemption in Prescription Drug Case. In another case claiming injuries from use of the generic from of Reglan, the plaintiff's failure-to-warn claim against the generic drug manufacturer was not barred by conflict preemption [McKenney v. Purepac Pharm. Co. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 72 , time for granting or denying review extended, 2008 Cal. LEXIS 14899] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, § 460.52[2][c].

[24] Subrogation

State Bar May Pursue Subrogation Claim Against Attorney. An appellate court has held that the State Bar has statutory subrogation rights under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6140.5(b) (Client Security Fund or CSF) against an attorney who settled with claimants to whom the CSF paid some claims, when the parties to the settlement agreed that the plaintiffs could seek full reimbursement from the CSF, and the attorney would not object to the notice of intent to pay issued by the CSF [State Bar of Cal. v. Statile (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 650] . See Ch. 536, Subrogation, § 536.14[2].

[25] Tort Claims Act

Public Entity Employer May Be Directly Liable for Discrimination Prohibited by Fair Employment and Housing Act. In DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533 , the court of appeal held that the Fair Employment and Housing Act applies to public entity employers, making such employers susceptible to direct liability for prohibited discrimination. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[1].

Jailer Owes Special Relationship to Prisoner; No Private Right of Action for Violating Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause of State Constitution. In Giraldo v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 231 , the court of appeal held that because a prisoner is dependent and vulnerable, there is a special relationship between a jailer and a prisoner such that the jailer owes a duty of care to the prisoner to take steps to protect the prisoner from foreseeable harm. The court also held that there is no private right of action for violation of the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment contained in Section 17 of Article I of the California Constitution. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[3][c][x], and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.103[1].

Statutory Government Claims Procedures Not Applicable When Contractual Claims Procedures Are Provided. In Arntz Builders v. City of Berkeley (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 276 , the court of appeal held that, except as required by statute, a claim subject to contractual claims procedures written into a public contract is not subject to the statutory claims presentation requirements of Gov. Code §§ 905 and 910 et seq., unless such a requirement is written into the agreement. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.22[3].

City Not Liable for Injury to Pedestrian at Bulb-Out Intersection. In Sun v. City of Oakland (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1177 , the court of appeal held that the installation of "bulb out" sidewalk extensions did not make an intersection a dangerous condition of public property, even when preexisting crosswalk markings were removed in the process. The court also held that a city's failure to comply with the public notice requirements of Veh. Code § 21950.5 prior to removing crosswalk markings did not render the city liable for an injury to a pedestrian caused by a motorist who failed to yield the right of way. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.22[3].

Los Angeles County Flood Control Agency Immunity Amended. Under amended Gov. Code § 831.8, Los Angeles County flood control agencies and water conservation facilities and their employees are immune from liability for injury to children 16 years old or younger caused by the condition or use of unlined flood control channels or adjacent groundwater recharge spreading grounds if, at the time of injury, the person injured was using the property for any purpose other than that for which the public entity intended it to be used. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[9].

§ 1.223 Trial

Juror's Silence During Polling Does Not Constitute Disagreement. In Keener v. Jeld-Wen, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 247 , the California Supreme Court held that a juror's silence at polling, due to the trial court's failure to poll the juror on one of multiple special verdict questions, does not constitute an expressed disagreement with the verdict under Code Civ. Proc. § 618. See Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts, § 326A.14[3].

Jury to Determine Whether Defendant Increased Risks Inherent in Volleyball Game. In Luna v. Vela (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court of appeal held that it was for the jury to determine whether a homeowner increased the risks inherent in volleyball when failing to mark net tie-down lines in order to prevent persons from tripping over the lines. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.12[3].

Guardianships & Conservatorships--Sua Sponte Duty to Instruct Not Applicable in LPS Act Conservatorships. In Conservatorship of George H (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 157, 165 , court held that because Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5500 et seq.] conservatorship proceeds are not criminal proceedings, the sua sponte duty to instruct that applies to jury trials in criminal cases does not apply to jury trials under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5350. Thus, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury that if a proposed conservatee was able to accept voluntary treatment, there was no need for a conservatorship. Additionally, the trial court in this case properly specified each of the powers and disabilities it imposed, and the evidence warranted the trial court's findings. See Ch. 304, Insane Persons, § 304.144[6][a].

Trial by Jury. This chapter is updated with Jogani v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 901 , which holds the right to trial by jury guaranteed by the Constitution is the right as it existed at common law at the time the state Constitution was adopted in 1850. In determining whether a common law court before 1850 could have entertained a plaintiff's action and granted the requested relief, a court must look past the form or label attached to the plaintiff's claim and discern its substance, i.e., gist. If the claim is, in substance, one that was cognizable at law before 1850 and seeks relief that could have been obtained at law before 1850, then the action is legal and the right to jury trial attaches, regardless of the extent to which the claim requires the application of equitable doctrines. See Ch. 251, Equity, § 251.222[1].

Interpleader--No Jury Right in Interpleader Action, Even if Apportionment of Competing Claims Requires Resolution of Some Legal Issues. A California Court of Appeal has held that because the gist of an interpleader action is the equitable apportionment of competing claimants' rights to deposited funds or property, there is no right to a jury trial of such an action, even if the equitable issue of apportionment is partially dependent on the resolution of legal issues [Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1489] . See Ch. 314, Interpleader, §§ 314.10[2], 314.60[2][d].

Substance of Claim, Not Label, Determines Entitlement to Jury Trial. In Jogani v. Superior Court (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 901 , the court of appeal held that to classify an action as legal or equitable for purposes of determining whether a jury trial is allowed, the court looks to its substance, i.e., the nature of the rights at issue and the remedy sought. The label attached to a complaint or cause of action does not control. See Ch. 322, Juries, § 322.13[1][b][i].

Felony Conviction Admissible to Show Bias. In Piscitelli v. Salesian Society (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal held that evidence that a witness has been convicted of a felony is admissible to show bias under Evid. Code § 786 without regard to the nature of the underlying crime as it relates to the character traits of honesty and truthfulness. See Ch. 551, Trial, § 551.123[5].

§ 1.224 Unfair Competition

Third-Party Administrator Owes Duty to Health Plan Members When Administering Claims. In Mintz v. Blue Cross of California (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1594 , the court of appeal held that a corporation under contract to a health plan to administer claims owes a duty to health plan members to exercise due care to protect those members from physical injury caused by negligence in denying benefits under the plan. The court also held that only a "stranger to the contract" may be liable for interference with that contract, and an agent for a contracting principal, including a corporate agent or employee, cannot be liable for interfering with the principal's contract with the plaintiff if the alleged interference was committed when the agent was acting in the scope of the agency. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.31[3], and see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133[2][a].

Requirements for Showing Standing in Unfair Competition Class Action Clarified. In In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 298 , the California Supreme Court held that when pursuing a class action under the unfair competition statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq., only the class representative plaintiffs must demonstrate that they meet the statutory requirements for standing to bring the action. The Court also held that if the unfair competition claim is based on fraud stemming from alleged false advertising and misrepresentations made to consumers, the plaintiff must plead and prove actual reliance to satisfy the standing requirement, although the plaintiff is not required to necessarily plead and prove individualized reliance on specific misrepresentations or false statements when those misrepresentations and false statements were part of an extensive and long-term advertising campaign. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Precertification Discovery May Be Allowed in Unfair Competition Class Action. In Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Superior Court (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 814 , the court of appeal held that when a class action is brought under the unfair competition statute, a plaintiff who is not a class member or is otherwise unqualified to serve as a class representative may, in appropriate cases, move for precertification discovery for the purposes of identifying a proper class representative, although the absence of a reasonable, good-faith belief that the plaintiff had standing under the law in effect at the time the plaintiff was first named as a plaintiff will ordinarily compel denial of a motion for precertification discovery. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Pudding Manufacturer Adequately Described Alleged Trade Secrets. In Brescia v. Angelin (2009) 172 Cal. App.

4th 133 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff alleging misappropriation of an allegedly distinct high-protein pudding formula and manufacturing process sufficiently described the claimed trade secret when listing the specific ingredients by common name, as well as by their supplier and brand name, and listing the percentage of the total formala each ingredient constituted. Plaintiff also particularly described each step in the mixing, testing, and code marking of the pudding. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[8].

Cause of Action for Negligent Interference With Existing Contract Rejected. In Davis v. Nadrich (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal held that because the California Supreme Court case holding that there is no cause of action for negligent interference with a contract has never been overruled, they were bound to conclude that the cause of action still does not exist in California. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.135[2].

Failure to Comply With Talent Agencies Act Barred Unfair Competition Claim. In Blanks v. Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 336 , the court of appeal held that the Talent Agencies Act vests exclusive original jurisdiction in the Labor Commissioner for all claims arguably coming under its provisions, and failure to meet this jurisdictional hurdle will bar an action under the unfair competition statute for violation of the Act. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.31[4][a].

Restitution May Be Based on Money Paid to Defendant's Agent. In Troyk v. Farmers Group, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1337 , the court of appeal held that in an action for statutory unfair competition, a defendant may be ordered to pay restitution even if plaintiff did not pay the money directly to that defendant, as for example, when the money was paid to an agent for the defendant or otherwise was paid to an enterprise of which defendant was an integral part and defendant directly benefited financially from the payments. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.34[2][a].

Damage to Goodwill of Business Insufficient to Confer Standing to Sue for Unfair Competition. In Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1 , the court of appeal held that alleged damage to the goodwill of a business, for which no restitution could be recovered under the unfair competition statute, is not a loss of "money or property" sufficient to confer standing to sue under that statute. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

No Standing to Bring Unfair Competition Claim for Falsely Representing That Non-Defective Locks Were "Made in America." In Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 645 , the court of appeal held that consumers had no standing to sue a padlock manufacturer under the unfair competition statute for falsely representing that locks were made in America, as no restitution would be available for the purchase of non-defective locks. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Discovery Rule Applied to Unfair Competition Action. In Broberg v. The Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 912 , the court of appeal held that the delayed discovery rule applied to a complaint alleging deceptive insurance marketing and sales practices. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[4].

Sanctions Imposed for Failing to Protect Alleged Trade Secrets Revealed in Court File. In Wallis v. PHL Associates, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 882 , the court of appeal upheld the imposition of sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 when an attorney and client failed to protect an opposing party's alleged trade secrets that were contained in confidential documents that were apparently inadvertently included in the court file made available to the public. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[9].

Collateral Estoppel Did Not Bar Class Certification in Unfair Competition Action. In Johnson v. GlaxoSmithKline, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1497 , the court of appeal held that collateral estoppel did not bar an unfair competition action seeking class certification under California law just because a court in a previous action alleging the same actionable conduct denied class certification, as the class certification in the previous action was denied because the proposed class included all plaintiffs eligible to bring suit under the more liberal pre-Proposition 64 standing requirements and class certification in the subsequent action was limited to only those plaintiffs who could meet the more stringent standing requirements imposed by Proposition 64. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.35[1].

Narrow-Restraint Exception to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 Rejected. In Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937 , the California Supreme Court rejected a "narrow-restraint" exception to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, finding that statute to be unambiguous in invalidating all restraints of trade that do not fall under a specific statutory exception. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.71[2][c].

§ 1.225 Workers' Compensation

Qualified Medical Evaluators. In amending 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 30-49.9, the Administrative Director has updated the regulations governing qualified medical evaluators. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.46[3][a] -[p].

Employment Relationships--Independent Contractors. The court of appeal, in Cristler v. Express Messenger Systems (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 72 , has held that the plaintiffs, representatives of a class of parcel and message drivers/deliverers, were independent contractors, not the defendant's employees, and that the trial court's jury instructions properly placed the burden on the defendant of rebutting the Lab. Code § 3357 presumption that the plaintiffs were the defendant's employees. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[3][c].

Permanent Disability; AMA Guides; 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Appeals Board en banc in Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 201 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has held that the AMA Guides portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, and that it is rebutted by showing that an impairment rating based on the Guides would result in a permanent disability award that would be inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability. Subsequently, the Board granted reconsideration in these joint cases. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--2005 Permanent Disability Rating ScheduleM--Diminished Future Earning Capacity. The Appeals Board en banc, in Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 248 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , held that the diminished future earning capacity portion of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule is rebuttable, since Lab. Code § 4660(c) provides that the 2005 Schedule is merely "prima facie evidence of the percentage of permanent disability to be attributed to each injury." Subsequently, the Board granted reconsideration in this case. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--Offers of Modified of Alternative Work. The court of appeal, in Bontempo v. W.C.A.B. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th, has held that in the pretrial conference statement the parties stipulated that the permanent disability benefits that the employer was already paying to the employee included a 15 percent increase pursuant to Lab. Code § 4658(d), and that, by checking the boxes on the pretrial conference form labeled "Permanent Disability" and "Apportionment," the parties conveyed their intention that the WCJ calculate the award for permanent disability benefits under the applicable formula and the facts presented, including Lab. Code § 4658(d). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[4][a].

Vocational Rehabilitation--Sunsetting. The Appeals Board en banc has held in Weiner v. Ralphs Co. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 736 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) that: (1) repeal of Lab. Code § 139.5 terminated any rights to vocational rehabilitation benefits or services pursuant to orders or awards that were not final before January 1, 2009; (2) no saving clause was adopted to protect vocational rehabilitation rights in cases still pending on or after January 1, 2009; (3) vocational rehabilitation statutes that were repealed in 2003 do not continue to function as "ghost statutes" on or after January 1, 2009; (4) effective January 1, 2009, the WCAB lost jurisdiction over non-vested and inchoate vocational rehabilitation claims, but the WCAB continues to have jurisdiction under Lab. Code §§ 5502(b)(3) and 5803 to enforce or terminate vested rights; and (5) subject matter jurisdiction over non-vested and inchoate vocational rehabilitation claims cannot be conferred by waiver, estoppel, stipulation, or consent. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[2].

Third-Party Workers' Compensation Claims Administrator Owed Duty of Care to Client's Excess Insurer. In National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, PA v. Cambridge Integrated Services Group, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 35 , the court of appeal held that a workers' compensation claims administrator hired to provide claim services for a self-insured employer owes a duty of care when handling claims to the employer's excess insurer liable for paying claims that exceed a specified amount. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.31[3].

Workers' Compensation Judges--Ethical Standards. In amending 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9720.1-9723, the Administrative Director has updated the regulations governing the ethical standards to which Workers' Compensation Judges must adhere. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.12[1].

Rules of Court Administrator. In promulgating 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10210-10297, the Administrative Director and Court Administrator have specified various procedures, including those for EAMS, the Electronic Adjudication Management System, being implemented by the Division of Workers' Compensation. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.12A, 577.84[1] -[9].

Disability Evaluation Unit Regulations. In promulgating new regulations and amending existing regulations, the Administrative Director has conformed the Disability Evaluation Unit regulations, 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10150-10167, to the requirements of document filing with the Electronic Adjudication Management System (EAMS). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[4][a] -[e].

Retraining and Return to Work Regulations. In promulgating new regulations and amending existing regulations, the Administrative Director has conformed the retraining and return to work regulations, 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10116-10133.58, to the requirements of document filing with the Electronic Adjudication Management System (EAMS) and enabled the same definitions to apply to both the return to work and the supplemental job displacement regulations. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[5][a] -[e].

Employment Relationships--Independent Contractors. The court of appeal in Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994 has held that Lab. Code § 2750.5, which creates a rebuttable presumption that an unlicensed person who performs work requiring a license is an employee, not an independent contractor, was irrelevant because the statute's presumption of employee status may be rebutted only as to persons who hold a valid contractor's license, which plaintiff did not at the time of his injury. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Permanent Disability--Rating. The court of appeal in Hertz Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Aguilar) (2008)

169 Cal. App. 4th 232 has held that the employer was not liable for the portion of the employee's permanent disability caused by pre-existing factors consisting of his inability to read and write English that rendered him non-feasible for vocational rehabilitation. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.14[3][e].

Permanent Disability --Rating-- Application of 1997 Schedule for Rating Permanent Disabilities. The court of appeal in Lewis v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 696 has followed line of cases holding that a comprehensive medical-legal report or a treating physician's report need not state that an injured worker's condition has reached permanent and stationary status to indicate the existence of permanent disability within the meaning of Lab. Code § 4660(d). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01, Important Note.

FORMS. Optical Character Recognition (OCR) forms, developed by DWC for mandatory use have been included. These are:

- § 577.490 Declaration of Readiness to Proceed to Expedited Hearing (Trial)
- § 577.491 Pre-Trial Conference Statement

- § 577.492 Pre-Trial Conference Statement--Multiple Parties

Costs; Vocational Rehabilitation Experts. The court of appeal in Barr v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 173 , has held that the Appeals Board has discretion to award costs, pursuant to Lab. Code § 5811, for a vocational rehabilitation expert's report, regardless of whether the report is admissible. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.193.

Statute of Limitations --Tolling-- Estoppel. The court of appeal in California Ins. Guarantee Assn. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 853 has held that CIGA failed to meet its burden to prove that an employee gained actual knowledge of his potential eligibility for workers' compensation benefits for a 1997 injury more than one year prior to filing his claim. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.42[2][d].

Medical Treatment--Utilization Review; Objections to Medical Determination. The California Supreme Court in State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 230 , has held that, when deciding whether to approve or deny an injured employee's request for medical treatment, the employer must conduct utilization review pursuant to Lab. Code § 4610 and that the employer may not, as an alternative to utilization review, elect to dispute the request for medical treatment pursuant to Lab. Code § 4062. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.45[1][c], 577.46[4].

Medical Treatment--Chiropractic Treatment Limits--Constitutionality. The court of appeal in Facundo-Guerrero v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 640 has upheld the constitutionality of Lab. Code § 4604.5(d)'s limitation to 24 chiropractic treatment visits per industrial injury occurring on or after January 1, 2004. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][c].

Wrongful Termination--Retaliation. The court of appeal in Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327 has held that an employee's claim alleging wrongful termination in retaliation for filing a workers' compensation claim failed because the employer terminated the employee's employment for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason, i.e., management's loss of confidence in the employee. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.18[1].

Permanent Disability--Validity of 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Appeals Board en banc in Boughner v. Comp USA (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 854 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has held that an employee did not carry his burden of demonstrating that adoption of the 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule by the Administrative Director was arbitrary and capricious or inconsistent with Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund--Sanctions. The court of appeal in Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 294 , has held that the limitation of liability specified by Lab. Code § 3716.2 precludes imposition of a sanction against the UEBTF pursuant to Lab. Code § 5813 for bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or intended solely to cause unnecessary delay. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.13[4][b], 577.194[2].

Temporary Disability--Two-Year Limitation on Temporary Disability Indemnity-- Education Code § 44043 Payments. The court of appeal in Mt. Diablo Unified School Dist. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1154 , has held that, for purposes of determining the two-year limitation period on temporary disability indemnity, temporary disability payments commenced when a school district paid its injured employee her normal wages under Educ. Code § 44043. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[3][b].

Negligence; Duty of Care --Negligence Per Se-- Moving or Operating Equipment Near Power Lines. The Supreme Court in Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908 has held that homeowners neither had nor breached any statutory duty of care owed to a deceased worker under Pen. Code § 385(b), which provides that "[a]ny person who either personally or through an employee or agent, or as an employee or agent of another, operates ... or moves any tools ... [or] equipment ... within six feet of a high voltage overhead conductor is guilty of a misdemeanor." See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.22[4][b][ii].

Discrimination; Lab. Code § 4850-- Lab. Code § 132a. The court of appeal in Los Angeles County Professional Peace Officers' Association v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 63 has held that an employer's policy regarding "cash out" payments of excess accumulated vacation hours to sheriff's deputies who were not on Lab. Code § 4850 leave as a result of industrial injuries, as opposed to its policy regarding such payments to deputies who were on such leave, discriminated against the latter group in violation of Lab. Code §§ 4850 and 132a. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.18[1].

Penalties--Unreasonable Delay in Payment of Benefits--Amount of Penalty. The Appeals Board en banc has held in Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) that the overriding consideration in determining what penalty amount to assess should be whether the penalty imposed would serve the purposes sought to be accomplished by Lab. Code § 5814, which are both penal and remedial. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][a].

Penalties--Unreasonable Delay in Payment of Benefits--Successive Penalty. The Appeals Board en banc has held in Ramirez v. Drive Financial Services (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1324 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) that, although, under Lab. Code § 5814(a), a successive penalty may be awarded for an unreasonable delay in making a prior penalty payment, it should not be awarded when the employer had genuine doubt as to its liability or when there has been no legally significant intervening event. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.243[4][d].

Medical Liens; Proof of Claim; Evidence. The Appeals Board en banc has held in Tapia v. Skill Master Staffing (2008) 73 Cal. Comp. Cases 1338 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) that, pursuant to Kunz v. Patterson Floor Coverings, Inc., an outpatient surgery center lien claimant (or any medical lien claimant) has the burden of proving that its charges are reasonable, and that the outpatient surgery center lien claimant's billing, by itself, does not establish that the claimed fee is reasonable, so that, even in the absence of rebuttal evidence, a lien need not be allowed in full if unreasonable on its face. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][b].

§ 1.250 Alternative Dispute Resolution

[1] Agreements and Compelling Arbitration

Contractual Arbitration--Attorney's Authority to Bind Party. This chapter is updated with Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208 , which holds an attorney at law, merely by virtue of his or her employment as such, has no apparent authority to bind a client to an agreement for arbitration. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][b][v].

Contractual Arbitration--Unconscionable Terms. This chapter is updated with Jackson v. Rent-A-Center West, Inc. (2009) 581 F.3d 912 , which holds where a party challenges an arbitration provision as unconscionable, and thus asserts that he or she could not meaningfully assent to the agreement, the threshold question of unconscionability is for the court, even if the agreement specifically says otherwise. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[1][c][ii].

Contractual Arbitration--Unconscionable Terms. This chapter is updated with Parada v. Superior Ct. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1554 , which holds an arbitration agreement containing a clause that "Any deletions from, additions to or cutting or mutilation of any portion of this Agreement will render the Agreement unacceptable" controverted the broker's claim that the petitioners were given reasonable notice of the opportunity to negotiate or reject the terms of a contract, and an actual, meaningful, and reasonable choice to exercise that discretion. See Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.21[3][a].

Contractual Arbitration--International Disputes. This chapter is updated with Balen v. Holland America Line Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 647 , which holds the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards contemplates very limited inquiry by the courts when considering a motion to compel arbitration. Generally, four factors to determine whether to enforce an arbitration agreement under the Convention, which require that 1) there is an agreement in writing within the meaning of the Convention, 2) the agreement provides for arbitration in the territory of a signatory of the Convention, 3) the agreement arises out of a legal relationship, whether contractual or not, which is considered commercial, and 4) a party to the agreement is not a U.S. citizen, or the commercial relationship has some reasonable relation with one or more foreign states. See Ch. 35, Arbitration and Conciliation of International Commercial Disputes, § 35.21[3].

[2] Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings

Contractual Arbitration--Expenses, Costs, and Fees. This chapter is updated with an extensive rewrite of the analysis of expenses, costs, and fees other than for attorney's fees. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceedings, § 33.29[1].

[3] Judicial Review

Contractual Arbitration--Vacating Award. This chapter is updated with Burlage v. Superior Ct. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 524 , which holds an arbitrator's refusal to admit evidence that directly affects the issue of damages substantially prejudices the proffering party's ability to dispute the amount of damage and constitutes grounds for vacating an award. See Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review, § 34.19[1][f][ii].

[4] Mediation

Complaint About Mediator. A party who contends that a court-program mediator may have violated a provision of the rules of conduct for court-program mediators may submit a written complaint to the court's complaint coordinator, and rules provide a framework for what action the court may take [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.865-3.872]. See Ch. 37, Mandated Mediation, § 37.35, and Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.42.

Mediation Confidentiality. In Cassel v. Superior Court(2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 152 , the court of appeal concluded that communications between client and his law firm, two weeks before trial, were for trial strategy preparation, not just for mediation of underlying lawsuit, and therefore were not protected by Evid. Code § 1119(a), (b), or (c). See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.125.

Mediation--Communications Neither Materially Related to, Nor Fostering, Mediation. This chapter is updated with Cassel v. Superior Ct. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 152 , which holds the moving party has the burden to show that the conversation is protected by mediation confidentiality; the timing, context, and content of the communication all bear on the question. Mediation confidentiality applies only to writings or statements that exist solely because of a mediation communication, negotiation, or settlement discussion. The timing of a conversation in relation to a scheduled mediation session is not determinative of whether the conversation was protected by mediation confidentiality. See Ch. 31, Mediation, § 31.13[4][d].

[5] Reference

Motion to Seal Records. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.932(a), which provides a party's motion to seal records in a cause before a referee must be filed with and heard by the judge to whom the case is assigned, or the presiding judge or his or her designee, and the motion must be served on the referee and all parties who have appeared in the case. See Ch. 25, Reference, § 25.05[3].

Information Statement. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.931(b)(2), which provides in each case in which he or she is appointed referee, a referee must file a statement that provides the name, telephone number, and mailing address of a person who may be contacted to obtain information about the date, time, location, and general nature of all hearings scheduled in matters pending before the referee that would be open to the public if held before a judge. The referee may also provide the address of a website containing the information and must file his or her statement of contact information at the same time that he or she files the referee certification. See Ch. 38, Reference, § 8.14[3][d].

Hearing Location and Public Proceedings. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.931, which provides if a court staff mediator or evaluator is required to attend a hearing before a referee, unless otherwise ordered by the presiding judge or his or her designee, the location selected for the hearing must be no more than 15 minutes' travel time from the mediator's or evaluator's work site [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.931(c)(2)]. All proceedings before a referee that would be open to the public if held before a judge must be open to the public [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.931(a)]. This chapter also is updated with a motion for a hearing site and a motion to stay a hearing, as well as the accompanying court orders. See Ch. 38, Reference, §§ 38.17[3], [4]; 38.81 -38.84.

Documents to Referee and Court. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.400, which provides that in a case pending before a referee, all original documents are to be filed with the clerk in the same manner as would be required if the case were being heard by a judge, including paying any required fees. The filing party must provide to the referee a file-stamped copy of each document relevant to the issues before the referee, and a party who has submitted a document to a temporary judge or referee must immediately notify the temporary judge or referee if the document is not accepted for filing by the court or if the filing is subsequently canceled. Documents and exhibits in the possession of a temporary judge or referee that would be open to the public if filed or lodged with the court must be made available during business hours for inspection by any person within a reasonable time after request and under reasonable conditions. See Ch. 38, Reference, § 38.19.

§ 1.251 Appeals

[1] Notice of Appeal

Invalid Motion for Reconsideration Does Not Extend Time to File Notice of Appeal. In Branner v. Regents of University of California (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1043 , the court of appeal held that to extend the time to file a notice of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.104, a motion for reconsideration must comply with all procedural requirements. See Ch. 42, Appeal: Notice of Appeal, § 42.14[3].

[2] Overview

Issues Not Raised in Trial Court Cannot Be Raised for First Time on Appeal. In Johnson v. Greenelsh (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 598 , the California Supreme Court held that a party to an action may not, for the first time on appeal, change the theory of the cause of action. See Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.10[4][a].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.252

§ 1.252 Attorneys

[1] Practice and Ethics

Liens--Attorney's Lien Has Priority Over Medical Lien. In Gilman v. Dalby (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 606 , the court resolved an issue that no prior case had directly decided: Does a contractual medical lien have priority over a personal-injury attorney's lien for fees and costs of litigation? The court concluded that public policy and equity favor always giving the attorney's lien for fees and costs priority over any medical lien, regardless of which lien was first in time. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.198[2].

Attorneys--Authority. In Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208 , the court held that an attorney lacks apparent authority to sign an arbitration contract on the client's behalf. Therefore, the lawyer's signature alone was not sufficient evidence the client consented to arbitration. See Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.220[3][c].

Attorneys--Negotiation of Mortgage Loan Relief. An attorney may be subject to discipline for negotiating, arranging, or otherwise offering to perform a mortgage loan modification or other form of mortgage loan forbearance for a fee or other compensation paid by the borrower without certain required notices to the borrower [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.3; Civ. Code § 2944.6]. In addition, an attorney who negotiates, arranges, or otherwise offers to perform a mortgage loan modification or other form of mortgage loan forbearance for a fee may only claim, demand, charge, collect, or receive any compensation after fully performing each and every service the attorney contracted to perform or represented that he or she would perform [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.3; Civ. Code § 2944.7]. See Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline, § 71.30[1].

[2] Professional Liability

Relief From Judgment--Attorney Neglect. In Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868 , the court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is mandatory and requires the court to grant relief whether the attorney's neglect is excusable or not. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgment, § 489.37.

Limitation of Actions--Attorney Malpractice. In Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court holds that in a legal malpractice action, plaintiffs first sustained actual injury when they were required to obtain and pay new counsel to file a lawsuit seeking to escape the consequences of their signing lease documents that were among the actual damages plaintiffs suffered as a result of the attorney's alleged malpractice. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[2][a].

Specific Limitations Period for Attorney Malpractice Claims Against Criminal Defense Attorneys Added. Under amended Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, if a plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her malpractice claim against a criminal defense attorney, the action must be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case. See Ch. 7, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[1].

Class Attorneys Not Liable for Utilizing Class Settlement Notice Procedures Approved by Court. In Martorana v. Marlin & Saltzman (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 685 , the court of appeal held that a member of a plaintiff class in a class action cannot sue class counsel for negligence on the grounds that counsel should have negotiated a different settlement notice procedure, at least when the trial court approved the final settlement and notice procedures after providing class members an opportunity to object. The court also held that class attorneys utilizing an approved procedure for providing mass notification of settlement claims procedures to class members have no additional duty to follow up with individual class members who do not respond before the deadline for doing so. See Ch. 7, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.135.

§ 1.253 Automobiles

Automobiles--Insurer's Requirement for Vehicle to Be Repaired at Specified Dealer. In Maystruk v. Infinity Ins. Co. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 881 , the court construed Ins. Code § 758.5(d), which provides that if the owner of an insured vehicle elects to have the vehicle repaired at the shop of his or her choice, the insurer must not limit or discount the reasonable repair costs based on charges that would have been incurred had the vehicle been repaired by the insurer's chosen shop. The court concluded that this does not prevent an insurance policy from providing two tiers of coverage, such as 100 percent coverage for reasonable costs at a shop selected by the insurer, but only 80 percent coverage for reasonable costs at a shop selected by the insured. See Ch. 91, Automobiles: Actions Involving Defects and Repairs, § 91.33[2].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.254

§ 1.254 Churches and Religious Organizations

Court May Determine Whether Local Church Was Successfully Disaffiliated From Hierarchical Organization. In Classis of Cent. Calif. v. Miraloma Cmty. Church (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 750 , the court held that a trial court could render a declaratory judgment on whether a local church was successfully disaffiliated from the hierarchical organization in which it was a member, in a case not involving conflicting claims to the local church's property. The trial court can apply neutral principles of law to determine that an attempt at disaffiliation by the local church was procedurally ineffective, based on the documents defining the parties' relationship and pertinent provisions of the Corporations Code. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations, § 110.14[2][e].

No Free Expression Violation to Require Pharmacies to Deliver Lawfully Prescribed Medications and Not to Discriminate. In Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 1109 , the Ninth Circuit held a pharmacy had standing to bring an action alleging the violation of Free Expression rights of its owners. However, rules promulgated by a state Board of Pharmacy requiring pharmacies to deliver lawfully prescribed Federal Drug Administration-approved medications and prohibiting discrimination against patients did not violate the Free Exercise rights of a pharmacy and of individual pharmacists by requiring delivery of a contraceptive that the pharmacy owners and pharmacists claimed was against their religious beliefs. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations .

Religious Organizations--Voluntary Dissolution. Corp. Code § 9680(b)(3) has been added [Stats. 2009, ch. 631, § 35] to set forth voluntary dissolution procedures for bankrupt or inactive religious corporations when the number of directors is less than a quorum. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations, § 110.22.

Churches--Property Disputes Resolved by Applying Neutral Principles of Law. In Iglesia Evangelica Latina, Inc. v. Southern Pac. Latin Am. Dist. of Assemblies of God (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 420 , the court provided an example, with extended discussion of the method, of applying neutral principles of law to resolve disputes about church property, in the face of some parties' contention, with evidence supporting the contention, that they had acted strictly within the ambit of ecclesiastical rights under the protection of the First Amendment. See Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations, § 110.14[2][a].

PART VII. 2010 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.255

§ 1.255 Civil Procedure

[1] Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations

Declarations--Subscribed Under California Law. This chapter is updated with Hearn v. Howard (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1193, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 , which holds a declaration that is not subscribed in compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 may be deemed harmless error if another properly subscribed declaration is concurrently filed with the defective declaration. See Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, § 15.11.

[2] Amended Pleadings

Amended Pleadings--Conforming to Proof at Trial. This chapter is updated with Garcia v. Roberts (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 900 , which holds amendments to conform to proof should not be granted at trial if by permitting the amendment new and substantially different issues are introduced in the case or the rights of the adverse party prejudiced; amendments of pleadings to conform to the proofs should not be allowed when they raise new issues not included in the original pleadings and upon which the adverse party had no opportunity to defend. See Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings, § 21.25.

[3] Anti-SLAPP Motions

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Prevailing Defendant's Recovery of Fees. Effective January 1, 2010, defendants prevailing on an anti-SLAPP motion are not entitled to an award of attorney's fees and costs if plaintiff's cause of action is brought pursuant to certain Gov. Code sections relating to the improper withholding of public records and certain meetings and actions of legislative bodies [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(c)]. See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.22[1][b].

Anti-SLAPP Motion--Dismissal Before Ruling on Motion. Trial court has no jurisdiction to rule on anti-SLAPP motion when plaintiff dismisses complaint, without prejudice, one day prior to scheduled hearing [Law Offices of Andrew L. Ellis v. Yang (2009) 178 Cal. App.4th 869] . See Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti -SLAPP, § 376.22[1][c].

[4] Change of Name

Change of Name--New Court Rules and Forms for Confidential Name Changes Under "Safe at Home" Program. The California Judicial Council has adopted rules [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 2.575-2.577] and prescribed forms [Judicial Council Forms NC-400-INFO, NC-400, NC-410, NC-420, NC-425] for proceedings for confidential name changes for participants in the "Safe at Home" address confidentiality program for victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking [see Gov. Code § 6205 et seq.]. See Ch. 377, Change of Name , §§ 377, 377.80-377.84.

[4A] Defaults and Default Judgments

Defaults--Notice of Damages. In Stein v. York (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 320 , the court holds under Code Civ. Proc. § 580, actual notice of the damages sought in a default action is not sufficient. Due process requires formal notice, and constructive notice of potential liability does not satisfy Code Civ. Proc. § 580. Where the dollar amount demanded on plaintiff's request for entry of default was "0.00," the appellate court found that it could not support a default judgment in any amount ($2.65 million judgment declared void). See Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, § 205.23[1].

[5] Judges

Judges--Temporary Judges. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.834, which now provides 1) temporary judges must provide contact information to the parties at the same time the judge's certificate is filed, 2) a party who has elected to use the services of a temporary judge requested by the parties is deemed to have elected to proceed outside court facilities, and 3) procedures for requesting use of court facilities. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.22[8].

Judges--Judicial Adminstration. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 10.1, 10.11-10.14, which outline the judicial branch's goals in its strategic and operational plans. See Ch. 317, Judges, § 317.83.

[5A] Jurisdiction

General Appearance. In State Farm General Ins. Co. v. JT's Frames, Inc. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 429 , the court holds Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e) does not change the essential rule that a defendant submits to the court's jurisdiction by making a general appearance in an action by participating in the action in a manner that recognizes the court's jurisdiction. It merely delays the effect of such actions until the motion to quash is denied or, if the defendant seeks writ review, until proceedings on the writ have concluded. Once the motion is denied or writ proceedings have concluded, the actions undertaken by the defendant while the motion or writ was pending that recognized the trial court's jurisdiction will be deemed to constitute a general appearance, and no further objection to jurisdiction will be permitted. See Ch 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances, § 323.50[1].

[6] Limitation of Actions

Limitation of Actions--Attorney Malpractice. In Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102 , the court holds that in a legal malpractice action, plaintiffs first sustained actual injury when they were required to obtain and pay new counsel to file a lawsuit seeking to escape the consequences of their signing lease documents that were among the actual damages plaintiffs suffered as a result of the attorney's alleged malpractice. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.53[2][a].

Limitation of Actions--Trusts. This chapter is updated with Stoltenberg v. Newman (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 287 , which holds fraud claims based on statements of the decedent on behalf of a trust of which he was trustor and trustee is subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 period of limitations, even if the action is against the successor trustee. See Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.194.

[7] Motions and Orders

Motions and Orders--New Form for Telephonic Appearance. The Judicial Council has a created a form for notice of intent to appear telephonically at a hearing, conference, or proceeding. The form is approved for optional use, effective July 1, 2010 [Judicial Council Form CIV-020]. See Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 372.63.

[8] Parties

Parties--Intervention. This chapter is updated with Hinton v. Beck (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1377 , which holds an insurer who denies coverage and refuses to defend does not have a direct interest in litigation between the plaintiff and its insured to justify intervention. See Ch. 395, Parties, § 395.34[3].

[9] Pretrial Proceedings

Pretrial Proceedings--Case Management Statement. This chapter is updated with revised Cal. Rule of Ct., Rule 3.724, which now requires the case management statement to include 1) identifying the dates on which all parties and their attorneys are available or not available for trial, including the reasons for unavailability, and 2) any issues relating to the discovery of electronically stored information. See Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.34[4].

[10] Sanctions

Sanctions --If Less Than 21 Days Before Hearing on Challenged Motion, Party Seeking Sanctions Under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 Must Move to Continue Challenged Motion or Shorten Safe Harbor Period. In Li v. Majestic Industrial Hills LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 585 , the court of appeal held that a ruling on a challenged motion during the 21-day safe harbor period precludes recovery of sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7. See Ch. 510, Sanctions, § 510.12[8].

[11] Service of Summons and Papers

Summons--Service on Fictitiously Named Defendant. In Carol Gilbert, Inc. v. Haller (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 852 , the court holds that to satisfy the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 474, a summons must notify the recipient that he or she was sued as a fictitiously named defendant. To support a finding of substantial compliance with the statutory requirements for service of process requires three preconditions. First, there must have been some degree of compliance with the offended statutory requirements. Second, the objective nature and circumstances of the attempted service must have made it highly probable that it would impart the same notice as full compliance. Finally, it must in fact have imparted such notice, or at least sufficient notice to put the defendant on his or her defense. In this regard, it is not enough that the process inform the defendant of the fact of a lawsuit, or even of a lawsuit in which his or her name appears; due process requires notice of the duty to defend. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, §§ 518.20[3][a].

Service--Electronic Service. This chapter is updated with three optional Judicial Council Forms for facilitation electronic service between the parties and the courts: Consent to Electronic Service and Notice of Electronic Notification Address [Judicial Council Form EFS-005]; Notice of Change of Electronic Notification Address [Judicial Council Form EFS-010]; Proof of Electronic Service [Judicial Council Form POS-050/EFS-050], as well as addendums for extra parties and documents served. See Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, §§ 518.94 -518.96.

[11A] Settlement and Release

Withdrawn Section 998 Offer. In One Star, Inc. v. Staar Surgical Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1082 , the court of appeal held that if a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer is withdrawn by a party prior to its statutory expiration, then the withdrawing party's right to cost shifting under Section 998 is determined by the last rejected Section 998 offer. See Ch. 520, Settlement and Release, § 520.14[5].

[12] Summary Judgment

Summary Judgment--Ruling on Objections. Trial court abused its discretion in merely sustaining, without further comment, all except one of defendant's 764 objections [Nazir v. United Airlines (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 243] . See Ch. 537, Summary Judgment, § 537.43[2][a].

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART VII. 2010 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.256

§ 1.256 Civil Rights

[1] Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations

Sign Ordinance Did Not Violate First Amendment. In Reed v. Town of Gilbert (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 966 , a provision of a town's sign ordinance prohibiting all signs without a permit, subject to 19 enumerated exemptions, did not violate the First Amendment rights of a church by regulating its deployment of temporary directional signs. However, although ideological signs, political signs, and qualifying event signs were all exempted from the permit requirement and treated favorably in that respect, each category faced different restrictions and requirements, and the district court did not address whether the church was likely to succeed on its claim that the ordinance impermissibly discriminated among certain forms of noncommercial speech, requiring remand. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Prohibition of Leafleting Unoccupied Parked Vehicles Unconstitutional. In Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196 , a city ordinance prohibiting leafleting of unoccupied vehicles parked on city streets violated the First Amendment as not narrowly tailored to serve significant government interests. The city failed to provide any evidence that placing leaflets on parked cars resulted in any litter, much less more-than-minimal amount of additional litter; and protection of private property was not a sufficiently substantial government interest to justify an across-the-board ban. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Some Qualified Immunity for Removal of Child From Home. In Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725 , a sheriff's officer who removed a child from her home without a warrant and placed her in protective custody based on an interview with her after she had returned home after running away was entitled to summary judgment on the claim that he violated the mother's and stepfather's familial association rights, because his reliance on the child's statements was reasonable and, under the totality of circumstances, he had reasonable cause to believe she was in imminent danger of physical harm. As to the mother, removing the child from her because she lived with the allegedly abusive stepfather was reasonable. However, as to the non-custodial father, who was never personally accused of violence, the scope of the intrusion on his associational rights was for the jury to decide, because the officers made no attempt to contact him and did not explore possibility of putting the child in his care rather than in government custody, and he was not informed of the removal for two days. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

Rules Regulating Street Performers in City Park Violated First Amendment. In Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029 , the Ninth Circuit held that a city's rule requiring street performers at a public park and entertainment complex to obtain permits before performing and to wear a badge displaying the permit while performing was not a valid time, place, and manner regulation. There was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the city met its burden of justifying a rule setting out specified locations for street performances and establishing a first-come, first-served rule for using the locations. A rule allowing only passive solicitation of funds by street performers was a content-based regulation that did not satisfy the exacting standard for a valid content-based regulation. A rule prohibiting any communication, by street performers or anyone else, within 30 feet of visitors to the complex waiting in line, attending an event, or sitting in a spot available for eating or drinking was an unconstitutional "captive audience" regulation. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

[2] Discrimination in Business Establishments

Plaintiff Had No Standing to Sue Mobilehome Park Under Disabled Persons Act. In Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1211 , although a mobilehome park was a place of public accommodation under the California Disabled Persons Act, the trial court properly held that plaintiff did not have standing to sue for monetary damages under Civ. Code § 54.3 based on the noncompliance of the park's swimming pool with the American With Disabilities Act Accessibility guidelines, because she was unable to show she actually presented herself to the business, as any other customer or guest would do, with the intent of paying the guest fee to gain admittance to the park or to use the swimming pool. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

No Standing Under ADA Based on Unencountered Barriers. In Chapman v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.) Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 853 , plaintiff did not have standing to pursue claims of violation of ADA, because he could not show that he suffered an injury in fact as to unencountered barriers, and he could not show a deterrent effect, given that he admitted that the encountered alleged barriers did not deter him from visiting the store or using the restroom. See Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments .

[3] Government Funded Programs

Paratransit System Not Required to Provide Sedan or Taxi Rides in Lieu of Buses. In Boose v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District of Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 997 , an action by a paratransit rider under the Americans With Disabilities Act seeking accommodation by rides provided in sedans and taxis rather than buses, the Ninth Circuit held that a Department of Justice regulation requiring public entities to make reasonable modifications in policies, practices, or procedures when necessary to avoid discrimination did not apply to public transportation systems governed by a different part of the ADA of its own independent force and was not incorporated by reference in the Department of Transportation's regulations implementing the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act. The Secretary of Transportation had sole authority to determine the level of services paratransit systems had to provide to be considered "comparable" under the ADA; although the Secretary had apparently decided paratransit systems should make reasonable modifications to be considered comparable, the Secretary had yet to issue final rules to impose that requirement. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

Regulation Requiring Public Entities to Develop Transition Plans for Achieving ADA's Accessibility Requirements Not Enforceable Through Private Right of Action. In Lonberg v. City of Riverside (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 846 , the Ninth Circuit held that 28 C.F.R. § 35.150(d), requiring public entities to develop a transition plan for achieving the ADA's accessibility requirements, is not enforceable through a private right of action under the ADA. See Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

[3A] Housing Discrimination

Federal Fair Housing Act Applies to Post-Acquisition Discrimination. In Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690 , the Ninth Circuit held that the federal Fair Housing Act applied to post-acquisition discrimination, and the district court erred in dismissing in its entirety a claim under the FHA against a city alleging discrimination in the provision of services to existing homeowners and renters in specific neighborhoods on the basis of race or ethnicity. However, to the extent the complaint alleged violations related to certain municipal services, plaintiffs were bound by an agreement limiting their claims regarding services to areas of sewer access, police services, and bilingual assistance, and plaintiffs failed to put forth evidence of disparate impact with regard to the provision of sewer services or infrastructure. See Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

[4] Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes

Alleged Discrimination Against Latino Neighborhoods Not Continuing Violation and Some Claims Adequately Shown by Statistical Evidence. In Committee Concerning Community Improvement v. City of Modesto (9th Cir. 2009) 583 F.3d 690 , an action alleging discrimination against predominantly Latino neighborhoods based on ethnicity or race by a city's failure to provide adequate municipal services and to bring neighborhoods into the city, the Ninth Circuit held that with regard to the continuing violation doctrine, the district court correctly concluded plaintiffs had not shown the existence of a pattern or practice of discrimination but rather ongoing harm resulting from earlier discrete decisions. However, reenactment of a master tax sharing agreement within the limitations period preserved the claim that exclusion chilled the plaintiff's annexation attempts and the district court erred in dismissing the agreement as merely an automatic renewal of past action. Further, plaintiffs presented evidence of discriminatory impact through statistical and other evidence, which, in turn, created sufficient inference of discriminatory intent to permit them to present their claim of intentional discrimination in the exclusion of the neighborhoods from the master tax sharing agreement to a factfinder, but, given the lack of disparity in actual access to sewer services, plaintiffs' statistical evidence was insufficient to give rise to an inference of discriminatory intent on the claim that an infrastructure condition, requiring the county to install all infrastructure in a neighborhood up to the city standards before the city would permit city voters to consider extending sewer services to a neighborhood, was applied in a discriminatory way. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

No Qualified Immunity for Police Officers for Failure to Provide Prosecution With Exculpatory Evidence. In Tennison v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1078 , an action by two men who served nearly 13 years in state prison for a murder of which both were declared factually innocent by the courts, alleging that police officers withheld exculpatory evidence and manufactured and presented perjured testimony during the investigation and prosecution of plaintiffs, the Ninth Circuit held that police inspectors were not entitled to absolute or qualified immunity with respect to their failure to provide the prosecution with a confession by another man to the murder with which plaintiffs were charged. Brady imposed a duty on the officers as well as the prosecutors to disclose exculpatory evidence, and the officers acted with reckless indifference to plaintiffs' due process rights. Issues of fact precluded summary judgment on issue of whether they were entitled to qualified immunity with respect to their request for a reward from the Secret Witness Program to encourage witnesses to come forward with information about the murder, about which they never notified the district attorney or the defense. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Indian Officers Not Entitled to Tribal Immunity, But Were Entitled to Qualified Immunity. In Bressi v. Ford (9th Cir. 2009) 575 F.3d 891 , a § 1983 action by a non-Indian challenging a roadblock set up and maintained by tribal officers on a state highway crossing the reservation, the district court erred in dismissing claims based on tribal immunity, because the officers were acting under color of state law once they departed from, or went beyond, the inquiry to establish that plaintiff was not Indian. However, the Indian tribal officers were entitled to qualified immunity based on their actions in arresting and citing plaintiff for state law violations at the roadblock, because probable cause supported the arrest and citation of plaintiff, and even if the roadblock were to be determined unconstitutional and the stop was determined to be unlawful and to taint probable cause for the arrest, this principle was not clearly established law at the time of the arrest. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

Former United States Attorney General Not Entitled to Immunity From Action Based on Detention Under Material Witness Statute. In al- Kidd v. Ashcroft (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 949 , a Bivens action based on plaintiff's arrest and detention under a federal material witness warrant against a former United States Attorney General, alleging the Attorney General unlawfully used the federal material witness statute to investigate or preemptively detain him by promulgating a policy by which the FBI and the DOJ would use the federal material witness statute as a pretext to arrest and detain terrorism suspects about whom they did not have sufficient evidence to arrest on criminal charges but wished to hold preventatively or to investigate further, the Attorney General was not entitled to absolute immunity, because when a prosecutor seeks a material witness warrant to investigate or preemptively detain suspect, rather than to secure his testimony at another's trial, the prosecutor is entitled at most to qualified, rather than absolute, immunity. However, the Attorney General was not entitled to qualified immunity, because Fourth Amendment rights were violated as the material witness statute was not used for its intended purpose, and plaintiff's right not to be arrested as a material witness in order to be investigated or preemptively detained was clearly established. See Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

[5] Prisoners' Rights

Inmate Presented Genuine Issue of Material Fact on Claim of Retaliation for Exercise of First Amendment Rights. In Brodheim v. Cry (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1262 , an appeals officer's handwritten statement warning an inmate to be careful what he writes on grievance forms was sufficient to establish a genuine issue of material fact as to whether it constituted an adverse action in a claim for retaliation for the exercise of the First Amendment right of filing grievances. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Trial Court Should Make Sure Inmate Can Participate by Phone. In Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672 , an action by an indigent prison inmate against a physician for allegedly negligent medical care at a correctional facility, the court of appeal found that the trial court abused its discretion by choosing the drastic measure of dismissal based on the ground that the prisoner did not appear telephonically at a case management conference and a subsequent hearing on an order to show cause as to whether the case should be dismissed, without first determining that the prisoner had been afforded meaningful access to the courts and his failure to appear at the required hearings was willful. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Jury Instruction on Denial of Outdoor Exercise Error and Prison Officials Entitled to Qualified Immunity. In Norwood v. Vance (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 626 , an inmate's action alleging denial of outdoor exercise during lockdown periods, which were based on inmate violence toward guards, staff, and other inmates, the jury instruction correctly stated the deliberate indifference standard, but the failure to give additional guidance on the deference the jury was required to give to the expert judgment of the prison officials rendered the instruction incomplete and misleading, which was prejudicial. Further, prison officials were entitled to qualified immunity, because the inmate's constitutional right to outdoor exercise was not absolute and indefeasible and did not trump all other considerations, and the officials had substantial reasons for imposing lockdowns in attempting to restore order during a series of brutal attacks. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

City and Police Officers Could Be Liable to Children of Arrestee Who Committed Suicide in Custody. In Conn v. City of Reno (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 1047 , the district court erred in granting summary judgment and police officers could be liable to the children of an arrestee who committed suicide while in their custody based on sufficient objective evidence of their mother's objective, serious medical need for a reasonable jury to find in their favor, and the officers were not entitled to qualified immunity, because it was clearly established that the Eighth Amendment protected against deliberate indifference to a detainee's serious risk of suicide. With regard to the liability of the city, the children established a genuine issue of fact on the question of the city's failure to train its officers in suicide prevention and identification of suicide risks, the failure to train officers produced the highly predictable consequence that police officers would fail to respond to serious risks of suicide and constitutional violations will ensue, and that had the city trained its officers, violation of the arrestee's constitutional rights could have been avoided. However, there was no evidence the city should have known or did know that one officer would have been likely to show deliberate indifference in these circumstances; further, failure to discipline officers was not a separate ground for establishing municipal liability, but, rather, was evidence tending to establish the absence of or failure to enforce a policy on suicide prevention. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Juvenile Probationer Could Be Required to Continue to Take Medications as Condition of Probation. In In re Luis F. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 176 , a medical condition of a juvenile's probation that he continue to take medications prescribed by a physician was not overbroad, because the trial court intended the condition to have a narrow scope and the condition had to be construed as only requiring him to continue taking medications prescribed by his doctors for depression and social anxiety disorder. The condition also did not violate his constitutional privacy or liberty rights. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

§ 1.257 Class Actions

Collective Action Under Federal Fair Labor Standards Act to Recover Unpaid Wages Is Not Class Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that because a collective action to recover wages under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act is predicated on additional plaintiffs opting in [see 29 U.S.C. § 216(b)], it is not a class action and, if brought in a California court, is not governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 382 or Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.760 et seq., which govern class actions [Haro v. City of Rosemead (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1067] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.18[5][a], 120.19[3], and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.15[4].

PART VII. 2010 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.258 Contracts and Commercial Law

Advertising--Credit Cards and Consumer Accounts--Automatic Purchase Renewals. Through the addition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17600 et seq. [2009 Stats., ch. 350], operative December 1, 2010, the Legislature intends to end the practice of ongoing charging of consumer credit or debit cards or third-party payment accounts without the consumers' explicit consent for ongoing shipments of a product or ongoing deliveries of service. See Ch. 14, Advertising, § 14.13[20].

UCC Secured Transactions--Priority of Security Interests. In Fariba v. Dealer Servs. Corp. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 156 , the court held, on an issue of first impression, that when a secured creditor of a business has actual knowledge that the business is substantially engaged in making consignment sales, the rights of the consignors with respect to the consigned goods are superior to the rights of the secured creditor. In other words, a creditor's actual knowledge that the business was substantially engaged in selling goods of others on a consignment basis can defeat the right of that creditor in the consigned goods, even when the creditor has a perfected security interest in the inventory of a business. See Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions, § 503.46[6].

Automobiles--Insurer's Requirement for Vehicle to Be Repaired at Specified Dealer. In Maystruk v. Infinity Ins. Co. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 881 , the court construed Ins. Code § 758.5(d), which provides that if the owner of an insured vehicle elects to have the vehicle repaired at the shop of his or her choice, the insurer must not limit or discount the reasonable repair costs based on charges that would have been incurred had the vehicle been repaired by the insurer's chosen shop. The court concluded that this does not prevent an insurance policy from providing two tiers of coverage, such as 100 percent coverage for reasonable costs at a shop selected by the insurer, but only 80 percent coverage for reasonable costs at a shop selected by the insured. See Ch. 91, Automobiles: Actions Involving Defects and Repairs, § 91.33[2].

Bailments--Car Rental Charges. Civil Code § 1936.015 [2009 Stats., ch. 8] allows a car rental company, from May 19, 2009, forward, to impose a separate charge covering the company's payments to meet a temporary increase in the vehicle license fee. This statute will remain operative for an indefinite period (as long as the vehicle license fee exceeds 0.65 percent of the fair market value of the vehicle). For discussion, see Ch. 93, Bailments, § 93.106[5].

Consumer Contracts--Venue Exception in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) Applies Whether Consumer Is Plaintiff or Defendant. In Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830 , the court concluded that nothing in the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)(creating a venue exception for actions arising from certain consumer transactions) limits its application to actions brought against a consumer defendant. Therefore, whether the action is brought against a consumer defendant or by a consumer plaintiff, the venue provisions of that statute apply as long as the action arises from a consumer transaction specified in the statute. See Ch. 140, Contracts, §§ 140.100[3][d], 140.107.

Liens--Priority Between Personal Injury Attorney's Lien and Medical Lien. In Gilman v. Dalby (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 606 , the court resolved an issue that no prior case had directly decided: Does a contractual medical lien have priority over a personal injury attorney's lien for fees and costs of litigation? The court concluded that public policy and equity favor always giving the attorney's lien for fees and costs priority over any medical lien, regardless of which lien was first in time. For discussion, see Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences, § 342.22[2].

Residential Care Facilities for Elderly--Eviction Notice. Health & Safety Code § 1569.683 [2009 Stats., ch. 617] adds specific requirements to be met by a licensee of a residential care facility for the elderly who sends a notice of eviction to a resident. See Ch. 351, Long Term Health and Residential Care, § 351.45[7].

Continuing Care Retirement Community Facility--Permanent Closure. Under Health & Safety Code § 1793.80 et seq. [2009 Stats., ch. 442], a regulated provider of a continuing care retirement community facility, when undertaking the permanent closure of that facility, must meet specific requirements for the safe and appropriate relocation of the displaced residents. See Ch. 351, Long Term Health and Residential Care, § 351.85.

Negotiable Instruments--Effect of Alteration or Forged Signature Resulting From Party's Lack of Care. In Burns v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 479 , the court clarified the meaning of Com. Code § 3406, which states rules concerning the effect of alteration of a negotiable instrument or forgery of a signature on an instrument, when the alteration or forgery resulted from a lack of care by a party to the instrument. For discussion, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments , § 385.4.

Song Beverly Consumer Warranty Act--Recovery of Prejudgment Interest. In Doppes v. Bentley Motors, Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1004 , the court concluded that nothing in the Song Beverly Consumer Warranty Act bars recovery of prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287. See Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties .

§ 1.259 Corporations and Business Entities

Corporations--Directors' Duty to Creditors When Corporation Is Insolvent. In Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020 , the court held that the directors of an insolvent corporation owe no fiduciary duty of due care or loyalty to the corporation's creditors solely because the corporation is insolvent. The scope of any noncontractual duty owed by corporate directors to the insolvent corporation's creditors is limited to the avoidance of acts that divert, dissipate, or unduly risk corporate assets that might otherwise be used to pay creditors' claims. See Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management, § 167.61.

Selection of Directors--Listed Corporations. Corp. Code § 301.5(d) has been amended [Stats. 2009, ch. 131, § 1] to provide that a "listed corporation," for purposes of dividing the board into classes or eliminating cumulative voting, means a corporation with outstanding shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market. See Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management, § 167.12[3].

Nonprofit Corporations--Board Meetings. Corp. Code §§ 5211(c) and 7211(c) have been amended [Stats. 2009, ch. 631, §§ 9, 19] to specify that each director present and voting at a meeting has one vote on each matter presented to the board for action, and that no director may vote at a meeting by proxy. See Ch. 388, Nonprofit Corporations, § 388.90.

§ 1.260 Costs and Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a)* Gives Trial Court Discretion Regarding Fees in FEHA Action. In Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970 , the California Supreme Court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) gives a trial court discretion to deny attorney's fees to a plaintiff who prevails on an FEHA claim but recovers an amount that could have been recovered in a limited civil case. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.15[2][b][i].

Substantial Benefit Theory Requires More Than Ephemeral or Peripheral Change. In Pipefitters Local No. 636 Defined Benefit Plan v. Oakley, Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1542 , the court of appeal held that to recover fees under the substantial benefit theory, there must be actual and concrete benefits to the plaintiffs. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.55[2].

Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Davis v. Ford Motor Credit Co. LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 581 , the court of appeal held that attorney's fees may not be recovered under the unfair competition statute even if the violation of another statute serves as a predicate for the unfair competition action and that underlying statute has a provision for the recovery of attorney's fees, at least when the plaintiff brings the action solely under the unfair competition statute rather than directly under the underlying statute. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.34[5].

Prevailing Party on Appeal Not Entitled to Attorney's Fees if Appeal Does Not Decide Who Wins the Lawsuit but Contemplates Further Trial Court Proceedings. In Wood v. Santa Monica Escrow Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 802 , the court of appeal held that Civ. Code § 1717 does not support an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party on appeal, but only to the prevailing party in the lawsuit. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.54[4].

Court Not Required to Explain Basis of Attorney's Fees Decision. In Gorman v. Tassajara Development Corp. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 44 , the court of appeal held that a court is not required to explain its reasons for awarding a certain amount of fees. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.54[14][a].

Self-Representation. In Gorman v. Tassajara Development Corp. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 44, 93-97, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 152 , the court of appeal held that an attorney may not recover fees for self-representation even if his or her law firm is incorporated. See Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.54[3].

Declaratory Relief Need Not Resolve Cause of Action for Coercive Remedy. A California Court of Appeal has held that a court may issue declaratory relief to resolve an actual controversy over the parties' obligations under their contract, even if the declaration judgment does not resolve any particular cause of action for coercive relief [*Supervalu, Inc. v. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.262

§ 1.262 Discovery

Discovery--Trade Secret Protection. In Perlan Therapeutics, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1333 , the court of appeal held that while trade secret identification does not require "every minute detail" or the "greatest degree of particularity possible[,]" in this case, the trade secret claimant's Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210 statement was insufficient, in light of its broad language, surplusage, and voluminous attachments. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.82[2].

Discovery--Mediation Confidentiality. In Cassel v. Superior Court (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 152 , the court of appeal concluded that communications between client and his law firm, two weeks before trial, were for trial strategy preparation, not just for mediation of underlying lawsuit, and therefore were not protected by Evid. Code § 1119(a), (b), or (c). See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.125.

Discovery-- Attorney-Client Privilege. The California Supreme Court, in Costco Wholesale Corp. v. Superior Court (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 725 , holds that the attorney-client privilege attaches to a confidential communication between the attorney and the client and bars discovery of the communication irrespective of whether it includes unprivileged material. See Ch. 191,Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, §§ 191.40[3], 191.41[1].

Depositions--International Depositions and Discovery Act. Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, has been expanded to include detailed coverage of the Interstate and International Depositions and Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 2029.100 et seq.), governing depositions in California for actions pending outside California, including the procedure for obtaining a subpoena under the Act, and the resolution of disputes arising under the Act relating to discovery. Also reproduced and discussed are three new Judicial Council Forms:

- Application for Discovery Subpoena in Action Pending Outside California [Cal. Judicial Council Form SUBP-030].

- Deposition Subpoena for Personal Appearance in Action Pending Outside California [Cal. Judicial Council Form SUBP-040].

- Deposition Subpoena for Personal Appearance and Production of Documents and Things in Action Pending Outside California [Cal. Judicial Council Form SUBP-045].

See Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions, §§ 193.130 et seq. and §§ 193.280 -193.282.

Interrogatories. Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories, has been updated with discussion of Clement v. Alegre (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1277 , in which the court considered whether an interrogatory failed to comply with the statutory requirement that each be "full and complete in and of itself," as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.060(d), when it referred to a previous interrogatory, and whether it violated the prohibition of Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.060(f) against compound, conjunctive, or disjunctive questions. See Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories, § 84.20[4][a].

Inspection of Tangible Evidence. Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence, has been updated to include discussion of discovery subpoenas for the inspection of premises in California, and for any testing, sampling, or other activity to take place during the inspection, in an action pending outside California, including the new Judicial Council form of Subpoena for Inspection of Premises in Action Pending Outside California [Cal. Judicial Council Form SUBP-050]. See Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence, § 195.70.

Subpoena Duces Tecum. Ch. 535, Subpoena, has been updated with discussion of Lee v. Superior Court (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1108 , addressing the sufficiency of the affidavits accompanying subpoenas in proceedings under California's Sexually Violent Predator Act (SVPA). See Ch. 535, Subpoena, §§ 535.16[2], 535.43[6], and 535.61[6].

Subpoenas in Actions Pending Outside California--Revised Judicial Council Form SUBP-035. Ch. 535, Subpoena, has been updated with detailed coverage of the Interstate and International Depositions and Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 2029.100 et seq.), governing subpoenas in California for actions pending outside California, including new Judicial Council Form of Subpoena for Production of Business Records in Action Pending Outside California [Cal. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.262A

§ 1.262A Elections

State Initiative and Referendum Petitions. Stats. 2009, ch. 373, amends Elections Code provisions governing state initiative petitions, specifically as to requesting and preparing a title, now called a circulating title, and summary for the initiative petition, compelling preparation of the circulating title and summary, obtaining a fiscal estimate or opinion by the Department of Finance and the Joint Legislative Budget Committee, sending a copy of the title and summary to the Secretary of State, amending the proposed measure, and formatting, circulating, and filing the petition. Similar amendments affect provisions governing state referendum petitions, except that no fiscal estimate is required for a referendum petition. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, §§ 302.21[2] -[4], 302.42[2] -[4].

City Initiative Measures. In Vargas v. City of Salinas (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 1 , the California Supreme Court explained the circumstances in which a municipal entity may expend public funds on activities connected with a city initiative measure and how a court can make the distinction between campaign activities (generally not eligible for public-funds support) and informational activities (which may be supported by public funds). See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.24[8].

City Referendum Petitions. In Lin v. City of Pleasanton (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 408 , and Defend Bayview Hunters Point Com. v. City and County of San Francisco (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 846 , the courts explained the scope of the requirement in Elec. Code § 9238(b) that a city referendum petition must include the "text" of the challenged ordinance. See Ch. 302, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, § 302.45[4][a].

§ 1.263 Employment

Court May Deny Fees to FEHA Plaintiff Whose Recovery Could Have Been Had in Limited Civil Case. In Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970 , the California Supreme Court has held that if an action under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) is not brought as limited civil case, and the plaintiff recovers an amount that could have been awarded in limited civil case, the trial court has discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) to deny the plaintiff's request for attorney's fees. However, in exercising that discretion, the court must give due consideration to the policies and objectives of FEHA in general and of its fee-shifting provision, Gov. Code § 12965(b), in particular. See Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.56[8].

School District Dismissing Probationary Teacher for Unsatisfactory Performance Must Provide 90-Day Written Notice Specifying Nature of Unsatisfactory Performance. In Achene v. Pierce Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 757 , the court has held that a school district dismissing a probationary teacher for unsatisfactory performance must comply with the notice requirements that apply to the dismissal of a permanent employee for unsatisfactory performance. Accordingly, the district must give the teacher at least 90 calendar days before the notice of dismissal, a written notice specifying the nature of the unsatisfactory performance, with such specific instances of behavior and with such particularity as to furnish the employee an opportunity to correct his or her faults and overcome the grounds for the charge [Educ. Code §§ 44932(a)(4), 44938(b), 44948.3(a)]. See Ch. 512, Schools: Certification, Dismissal, and Related Employment Issues, §§ 512.29[2], 512.120.

Collective Action Under Federal Fair Labor Standards Act to Recover Unpaid Wages Is Not Class Action. A California Court of Appeal has held that because a collective action to recover wages under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act is predicated on additional plaintiffs opting in [see 29 U.S.C. § 216(b)], it is not a class action and, if brought in a California court, is not governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 382 or Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.760 et seq., which govern class actions [Haro v. City of Rosemead (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1067] . See Ch. 120, Class Actions, §§ 120.18[5][a], 120.19[3], and Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.15[4].

Out-of-Town Business Conference Constituted Special Errand for Employer. In Jeewarat v. Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427 , the court of appeal held that an employee attending an out-of-town business conference authorized and paid for by the employer is on a special errand for the employer until the trip is completed, and if the employee intends to drive from the airport to his or her residence at the end of the trip, in the absence of any intervening personal deviations, the special errand continues until the employee arrives at home. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[4][b].

City Not Liable for Sexual Assault Committed by Firefighters. In M.P. v. City of Sacramento (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 121 , the court of appeal held that an employer was not liable for a sexual assault committed by firefighters, even if the firefighters were on duty at the time of the assault, noting that the firefighters had no coercive authority over the victim and did not purport to detain the victim in the course of any investigation or even while performing any official duties. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.17[2].

PART VII. 2010 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.263A

§ 1.263A Family Law

Termination of Parental Rights in Guardianship Proceeding. The California Supreme Court has held that Prob. Code § 1516.5, which provides for termination of parental rights in a guardianship proceeding, is constitutional [Guardianship of Ann S. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1110] . See Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights, § 12A.61A.

Form-of-Title Presumption. The act of taking title to property in the name of one spouse during marriage with the other spouse's consent effectively removes that property from the general community property presumption, and the property is presumably the separate property of the spouse in whose name title is taken [In re Marriage of Brooks & Robinson (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 176] . See Ch. 122, Community Property, § 122.33[2][a].

Setting Aside Judgment Dissolving Marriage. A court must set aside a judgment that is entered when the parties have failed to comply with all of the disclosure requirements of Fam. Code § 2100 et seq., because a failure to comply with these requirements does not constitute harmless error [Fam. Code § 2107(d)]. See Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage, § 221.15[3][c].

Complaint About Mediator. A party who contends that a court-program mediator may have violated a provision of the rules of conduct for court-program mediators may submit a written complaint to the court's complaint coordinator [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.865-3.872]. See Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure, § 221.42.

Agreement to Divide Community Property. A parties' oral agreement to divide their community property is void and unenforceable when the agreement is not reduced to writing and the parties do not enter into an in-court stipulation to divide their property in accordance with the oral agreement [In re Marriage of Dellaria & Blickman-Dellaria (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 196] . See Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.54[1].

Characterization of Disability Benefits. Private disability benefits paid to a spouse during marriage are that spouse's separate property when the spouse acquired the right to those benefits before marriage without any contribution from the community [In re Marriage of Rossin (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 725] . See Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.180[3][b].

Reservation of Jurisdiction to Supervise Payment of Retirement Benefits. Entry of a nunc pro tunc order following the retirement or preretirement death of the spouse who is the plan participant to facilitate qualification of a domestic relations order as a QDRO when that order was obtained before the benefit-triggering event is proper in circumstances in which the record indicates that the parties or the court intended the order to create an interest in surviving spouse benefits in the former spouse [In re Marriage of Padgett (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 830] . See Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation, § 222.201[2][d].

Sanctions for False Accusations of Child Abuse. A party who has been falsely accused of child abuse or neglect in a child custody proceeding may move for sanctions under Fam. Code § 3027.1 against the person or persons who made the allegations, as long as the motion is filed on or before the earlier of 60 days after the judgment or order exonerating the moving party is served or 180 days from the entry of the judgment or order [Robert J. v. Catherine D. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1500] . See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.12[6].

Award of Custody to Nonparent. Custody may be awarded to a nonparent without a finding of parental unfitness [H.S. v. N.S. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1131] . See Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody, § 223.17[2].

Parent's Gross Income for Purposes of Child Support Determination. A court may consider monies a parent receives that are not required to be included as income under federal tax law. For example, a court may consider gifts to a parent to be income for purposes of child support, as long as they bear a reasonable relationship to the traditional meaning of income as a recurrent monetary benefit [In re Marriage of Alter (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 718] . See Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, § 224.105[1].

Subsequent Spouse's Income Used to Pay Child Support. While the obligor parent's community interest in the subsequent spouse's income may be looked to in discharge of his or her child support obligation, a court may not consider the subsequent spouse's community income in calculating the child support obligation [In re Marriage of Knowles (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 35] . See Ch. 224, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Support, § 224.105[6].

Levy by Local Child Support Agency. A support obligor's bank account is exempt from levy by a local child support agency under Fam. Code § 17450(c)(2), when the obligor's sole income is from Social Security disability insurance benefits [In re Marriage of Hopkins (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 281] . See Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.156[2].

"Seek Work" Order. A court has the discretion to impose an employment efforts order on the support obligee, as well as on the support obligor who is in default [Barron v. Superior Court (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 293] . See Ch. 259, Family Law Enforcement: Special Remedies for Support Enforcement, § 259.156[4].

Attorney's Fees in Proceeding for Injunction Under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. A court may award attorney's fees to a prevailing defendant even if the action was not frivolous or brought in bad faith [Krug v. Maschmeier (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 796] . See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.17[8].

Abuse for Purposes of Domestic Violence Restraining Order. Nonviolent conduct, such as contacting the applicant and disturbing the applicant's peace, can constitute abuse, which can include accessing, reading, and publicly disclosing the applicant's confidential e-mails [In re Marriage of Nadkami (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1483] . See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.51.

Custody Determination in Domestic Violence Proceeding. A domestic violence order is not a permanent custody determination. Although a finding of domestic violence changes the burden of persuasion as to the best interest test, it does not eliminate the best interest requirement [Keith R. v. Superior Court (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1047] . See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.52[1][b].

Termination of Domestic Violence Restraining Order. A court has the discretion to determine that the changed circumstances alleged by the restrained party are not material and, therefore, do not present a reason for terminating the order, and it may award attorney's fees and costs to the party who prevails in defeating an application to terminate the order [Loeffler v. Medina (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1495] . See Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, § 293.55[2].

Presumed Parent. A petitioner is not required to receive the child in his or her home for a "significant period of time" in order to be considered a presumed parent under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [Charisma R. v. Kristina S. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 361] . See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation, § 387.11[5][c].

De Facto Mother. A woman who cohabited with the father of minor children may not seek custody and visitation rights with respect to the children as a presumed or de facto mother, when the parental rights of the natural mother have not been terminated [Scott v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 540] . See Ch. 387, Nonmarital Cohabitation, § 387.12.

Effect of Declaration of Paternity. A valid declaration of paternity signed and filed by the biological father has the force of a judgment, which trumps another man's presumed father status under Fam. Code § 7611(d) [Kevin Q. v. Lauren W. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1119] . See Ch. 394, Parent and Child, § 394.14.

Custody Proceeding by Nonparent. A guardianship petition under the Probate Code is the only judicial means for a nonparent to obtain custody when the parents have not initiated a custody proceeding [Scott v. Superior Court (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 540] . See Ch. 394, Parent and Child, § 394.73[2][a].

International Custody Dispute. California properly assumed initial jurisdiction over a child custody dispute as the child's home state, even though the mother had taken the child to Pakistan when he was five months old and he was in Pakistan on the date he turned six months of age. Because the trip began as a "temporary absence," the time the child spent in Pakistan before the mother informed the father that she would not return to California was properly considered part of the child's period of residence in California [In re Marriage of Nurie (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 478] . See Ch. 394, Parent and Child, § 394.107[2][c].

Correction of Birth Certificate After Adoption. Even though a child has been adopted, a court still has the authority to adjudicate facts concerning a possible biological relationship between the birth mother and the child, in an action to adjudicate the child's parentage for purposes of correcting the child's original birth certificate to state the actual names of the birth parents in place of the fictitious names the birth mother used when the original certificate was prepared [Wynn v. Superior Court (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 346] . See Ch. 412, Paternity, § 412.13[1].

Some Qualified Immunity for Removal of Child From Home. In Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725 , a sheriff's officer who removed a child from her home without a warrant and placed her in protective custody based on an interview with her after she had returned home after running away was entitled to summary judgment on the claim that he violated the mother's and stepfather's familial association rights, because his reliance on the child's statements was reasonable and, under the totality of circumstances, he had reasonable cause to believe she was in imminent danger of physical harm. As to the mother, removing the child from her because she lived with the allegedly abusive stepfather was reasonable. However, as to the non-custodial father, who was never personally accused of violence, the scope of the intrusion on his associational rights was for the jury to decide, because the officers made no attempt to contact him and did not explore possibility of putting the child in his care rather than in government custody, and he was not informed of the removal for two days. See Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations .

§ 1.264 Guardianships and Conservatorships

Guardianships and Conservatorships--Conservatee May File Initial Petition for Rehearing at Any Time. In Conservatorship of Amanda B. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1384 , the court held that once a conservatorship has been established, a conservatee may file an initial petition for rehearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5364 to challenge his or her status as a conservatee at any time. The court further held that once a conservatee has filed an initial petition for rehearing, he or she must wait six months before filing another petition for rehearing concerning his or her status as conservatee. Irreparable Harm Occurs When Inability to Ascertain Damage. In DVD Copy Control Assn., Inc. v. Kaleidescape, Inc. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 697 , the court of appeal held that, for purposes of imposing an injunction, irreparable harm may be established where there is an injury, but an inability to ascertain the amount of damage, i.e., pecuniary compensation, would not afford adequate relief or that it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount that would afford adequate relief. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.40[2].

Burden on Restrained Party to Terminate Restraining Order. In Loeffler v. Medina (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1495 , the court of appeal held that the burden is on the restrained party to show by a preponderance of the evidence that one of the circumstances set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 533 is present and justifies terminating the restraining order. See Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.138[2].

Statutory Unfair Competition Cause of Action Against Insurer Survives Demurrer. In Zhang v. Superior Court (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1081 , an appellate court ordered the trial court to overrule the insurer's demurrer with respect to a cause of action under the Unfair Competition Law for false advertising, in an action brought by the insured based on the insurer's improper handling of a first-party claim. See Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.25[2].

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877* and 877.6 Inapplicable to Settlements Reached After Judgment. In Jhaveri v. Teitelbaum (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 740 , the court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6 apply only to settlements entered into before a verdict or judgment has been reached in the case, and the statutes have no application to a settlement or compromise reached after a judgment has been entered. However, the court also noted that even without application of these statutes, through application of equitable principles, if one joint tortfeasor satisfies a judgment in full or in part, the judgment creditor cannot obtain a double recovery by collecting the same amounts from another of the joint tortfeasors. See Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[2].

§ 1.267 Intellectual Property

Discovery--Trade Secret Protection. In Perlan Therapeutics, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1333 , the court of appeal held that while trade secret identification does not require "every minute detail" or the "greatest degree of particularity possible[,]" in this case, the trade secret claimant's Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210 statement was insufficient, in light of its broad language, surplusage, and voluminous attachments. See Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 191.82[2].

Entertainment Industry--Talent Services for Entertainment Artists. Stats. 2009, ch. 286, added Lab. Code § 1701 et seq. to regulate persons providing "talent services" to entertainment industry artists (such as actors, models, extras, radio artists, musical artists, musical organizations, directors, musical directors, writers, cinematographers, composers, lyricists, arrangers). These provisions supersede the former regulatory scheme that concerned "advance-fee talent services" (which are declared to be unlawful in the 2009 legislation). Relief From Judgment--Attorney Neglect. In Standard Microsystems Corp. v. Winbond Electronics Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 868 , the court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is mandatory and requires the court to grant relief whether the attorney's neglect is excusable or not. See Ch. 489, Relief from Judgment, § 489.37.

Judgments--Perjured Testimony Not Ground for Reversing Judgment. In *Buesa v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 177 Cal. 1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.268A

§ 1.268A Juvenile Law

Enforcement of Juvenile Court Orders. A revised section on incarceration and other sanctions is updated with In re Nolan W. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1217 and the distinction between criminal and civil contempt and that in civil contempt it is sometimes said the person in contempt holds the key to their release by complying with the court order. This statement, however, is more applicable to orders that can be complied with by a single action. In juvenile proceedings, particularly juvenile dependency proceedings, orders for the protection and welfare of minors are often of a more continuing nature, requiring an ongoing course of conduct rather than a single, specific action [see, e.g., Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 245.5, 361.5(a), 362(c)]. In such cases, the line between civil and criminal contempt can become blurred, mandating the court take steps to make a clear record of the reasons for and purpose of any contempt judgment. See Ch. 327, Juvenile Courts: Jurisdiction, and General Procedures, § 327.14[1].

Dependency Proceedings--Summaries of Proceedings. This update reorganizes this chapter with quick summaries of the various proceedings in dependency actions for a quick overview of the process, followed by more in-depth coverage later in the chapter for more efficient and effective research. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.13 -328.20.

Dependency Proceedings--Initial or Detention Hearing. This update reorganizes this chapter with a thoroughly revised part on the initial or detention hearing, along with the latest 2009 cases in this area and many new practice tips. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.40 -328.48.

Dependency Proceedings--Parentage in Sex Same Cases. This update adds a new section on parentage in same sex cases. The rights and obligations of registered domestic partners with respect to a child of either of them are the same as those of spouses [Fam. Code § 297.5(d)]. Consequently, registered domestic partners who have a child born after the effective date of this statute, January 1, 2005, have rights and responsibilities regardless of their biological connection to the child [Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108] . See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.60[2][e].

Dependency Proceedings--Declarations of Paternity. This update adds a new section with practice tips on declarations on paternity, including analysis on the declarations requirements, effects of a voluntary declaration, and challenging a voluntary declaration. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.60[5].

Dependency Proceedings--School Discipline. This update adds a new section with practice tips on school discipline of dependents, including analysis on the school discipline for children eligible for services under the IDEA and school discipline for children under the Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.62[6][e].

Dependency Proceedings--Subject Matter and Dependency Jurisdiction. This update adds a thoroughly revised part with new practice tips on subject matter and dependency jurisdiction. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, §§ 328.80 -328.84.

Dependency Proceedings--Indian Children and ICWA. This update adds a thoroughly revised section with new practice tips on Indian children and the Indian Child Welfare Act, addressing required notices, tribal jurisdiction, intervention, transfer, custody, placement preferences, waiver of rights, postadoption contact for tribes, and tribal customary adoptions. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.125.

Dependency Proceedings--Appeals and Extraordinary Writs. This update adds a new section on standing requirements for appeals and extraordinary writs, including first party standing, standing to appeal dismissal of a dependency proceeding, and standing in de facto parent cases. See Ch. 328, Juvenile Courts: Dependency Proceedings, § 328.125.

Delinquency Proceedings--Jurisdiction. This update adds a new section on dual status of jurisdiction of delinquency and dependency courts, including analyses and practice tips on procedures for recommending single status, what to do if two counties are involved, procedures with dual status is available, notice and decision making, and jurisdiction over matters incidental to the proceedings. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.27.

Delinquency Proceedings--Multiple Prosections. This update adds a new section on the proscriptions against multiple prosecutions as applied to delinquency proceedings. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.74[4].

Delinquency Proceedings--Conditions of Probation. This update adds new sections on conditions of probation, including conditions related to home supervision and gang and weapons orders. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.94[10], [14].

Delinquency Proceedings--Mandatory Parole Releases. This update adds a new section on mandatory parole releases and how they relate to orders limiting control of a minor by a parent or guardian. See Ch. 329, Juvenile Courts: Delinquency Proceedings, § 329.96[6][e][iii].

§ 1.268B Mandate and Prohibition

Appellate Court May Issue Suggestive Palma Notice; Trial Court Must Provide Opportunity to Be Heard. In Brown, Winfield & Canzoneri, Inc. v. Superior Court (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1233 , the California Supreme Court held that if a trial court decides on its own motion to revisit its interim ruling in response to a suggestive Palma notice, that court must inform the parties of its intent to do so, and provide them with an opportunity to be heard. See Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition, § 358.16[3].

Extra-Record Evidence May Be Admitted in Mandamus Actions. In Golden Drugs Co. v. Maxwell-Jolly (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1455 , the court of appeal held that extra-record evidence is generally inadmissible in traditional mandamus actions challenging quasi-legislative administrative decisions, though extra-record evidence may be admitted in traditional mandamus actions challenging ministerial or informal administrative actions. PART VII. 2010 NEW DEVELOPMENTS

§ 1.270 Probate

Wills and Trusts--No Contest Clauses. Effective January 1, 2010, existing statutes governing no contest clauses become inoperative, and a revised Prob. Code §§ 21310-21315 become operative. The new provisions apply to any instrument, whenever executed, that became irrevocable on or after January 1, 2001 [Prob. Code § 21315(a)]. Instruments that became irrevocable before January 1, 2001, are governed by common law [Prob. Code § 21315(b)]. These new provisions limit the enforceability of a no contest clause to specific contests, redefine what constitutes a direct contest, and provide that a no contest clause may be enforced against a direct contest only when it is brought without probable cause. Additionally, the new provisions repeal all provisions allowing a beneficiary to apply for declaratory relief for a determination whether or not a contest would violate a no contest clause. See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.14, and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, § 560.16. In Salter v. Lerner (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1184 , the court held that a petition by contingent remainder beneficiaries, seeking information with regard to how the trustee, who was also the income beneficiary, was spending trust funds, would not violate the trust's no contest clause. The court reasoned that the proposed petition sought only information that was necessary to enable the beneficiaries to enforce their rights under the trust pursuant to Prob. Code § 16060. Therefore, the proposed petition was not a contest within the meaning of the no contest clause. In Cory v. Toscano (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1039 , a beneficiary's challenge to the validity of handwritten notations made by a settlor on his trust after it was executed, qualified as an instrument other than the instrument containing the no contest clause, and was determined to not a contest under Prob. Code § 21305(a)(3). See Ch. 444, Will Contests, § 444.14, and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, § 560.16.

Birth and Death--Court Has Authority to Adjudicate Facts Concerning Biological Relationship. In Wynn v. Superior Court (2009)176 Cal. App. 4th 346 , the court held that when a plaintiff has filed a petition seeking an order to correct her original birth certificate so it would state the actual names of her birth parents, rather than the fictitious names her mother used when the original certificate was prepared, the trial court has the authority to adjudicate the facts concerning a possible biological relationship. The court held that if a court determines a plaintiff's original birth certificate is not accurate, the court is obligated to order the issuance of a new birth certificate. See Ch. 99, Birth and Death, §§ 99.12[1], 99.22.

Escheat--Statutory Changes. Several changes have been made to the escheat statutes in Code of Civ. Pro. §§ 1513-1520. A deposit or account will not escheat to the state if the owner has owned an individual retirement account or funds held by the banking organization under a retirement plan for self-employed individuals or a similar account or plan [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1513]. Additionally, electronic notice is allowed, provided the owner has consented [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1513.5(a)]. Additional requirements for notices have been specified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1315.5, 1516(d), and 1520(b). See Ch. 252, Escheat (Unclaimed Property).

Guardianships and Conservatorships--Conservatee May File Initial Petition for Rehearing at Any Time. In Conservatorship of Amanda B. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 1380 , the court held that once a conservatorship has been established, a conservatee may file an initial petition for rehearing under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5364 to challenge his or her status as a conservatee at any time. The court further held that once a conservatee has filed an initial petition for rehearing, he or she must wait six months before filing another petition for rehearing concerning his or her status as conservatee. See Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons, §§ 304.42[14][a], 304.144[6][d], 304.283[7].

Wills, Trusts, and Intestate Succession--New Statute Clarifies Degrees of Consanguinity. New Prob. Code § 13 provides that the degree of kinship or consanguinity between two persons is determined by counting the number of generations separating those persons as defined in that section. It specifies how degrees of consanguinity are to be calculated and provides examples with respect to certain classes of related persons. See Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration, § 442.120.

Intestate Succession--Probate Code § 50 Includes All Lineal Descendants. In Estate of Beckel (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 34 , the court reversed a trial court decision which allowed an administrator to limit the distribution of an intestate decedent's estate to surviving first cousins and the children of predeceased first cousins. In reversing, the court held that distribution of an intestate decedent's estate could not be limited to the surviving first cousins and the children of predeceased first cousins while excluding grandchildren of predeceased first cousins. The court noted that governing statutes, Prob. Code §§ 50, 240, 6402(d), do not limit the surviving issue of a predeceased heir entitled to inherit to the first generation; rather, surviving issue includes all lineal descendents of all generations. The court concluded that decedent's estate must be divided into as many shares as there were first cousins who survived decedent and the first cousins who predeceased the decedent but left surviving issue of any generation. See Ch. 458D, Accounts, §§ 458D.78[14], 458D.155[4][e].

Probate--Filing Fees. The uniform filing fee for the first petition for letters of administration or letters testamentary, or the first petition for special letters of administration with the power of a general personal representative, is $355 [Gov. Code § 70650(a)]. The uniform filing fee for the first objections to the probate of any will of codicil under Prob. Code § 8250, or the first petition for revocation of probate of any will or codicil under Prob. Code § 8270, also is $355 [Gov. Code § 70650 (b)]. A fee of $355 also will be charged for filing each subsequent petition or objection in the same proceeding by a person other than the original petitioner or contestant [Gov. Code § 70650(c)]. See Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration .

Trusts--Modification of Irrevocable Trusts. In Boys and Girls Club of Petaluma v. Walsh (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1049 , the court upheld a trial court decision allowing the trust beneficiaries to modify a charitable trust without first ascertaining the beneficiaries. The trust gave discretion to the trustees to add charitable organizations, and the beneficiaries entered into a settlement agreement that defined the additional beneficiaries and provided for the trust modification. See Ch. 560, Express Trusts, §§ 560.114, 560.401.

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.271

§ 1.271 Public Administration

2010 Statutory Updating. Volumes 41 and 41A, Public Administrative Law, are updated throughout with the legislative additions, amendments, and repeals effective January 1, 2010.

California Agencies. This release updates the Appendix with latest changes to the list of agencies, their statutory authority, and where further, specific information may be found on these agencies throughout this publication. See Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law, § 470.50 et seq.

Public Agency Meetings. Amended Gov. Code § 11122.5 now provides a majority of the members of a state body shall not, outside of a meeting authorized by this chapter, use a series of communications of any kind, directly or through intermediaries, to discuss, deliberate, or take action on any item of business that is within the subject matter of the state body [Gov. Code § 11122.5(b)(1)]. Additionally, subsection (1) shall not be construed to prevent an employee or official of a state agency from engaging in separate conversations or communications outside of a meeting authorized by this law with members of a legislative body in order to answer questions or provide information regarding a matter that is within the subject matter jurisdiction of the state agency, if that person does not communicate to members of the legislative body the comments or position of any other member or members of the legislative body. See Ch. 470B, Public Agency Meetings, § 470B.21[2].

Public Records Act Exemptions. The list of Exempt Record Statutes is revised throughout with the latest statutes, arranged by topic, that exempt specified records from the Public Records Act. See Ch. 470C, Public Records Act, § 470C.15.

Alcoholic Beverage License. Bus. & Prof. Code § 24013 is amended to provide a person may file a protest against issuance of a license at any office of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control within 30 days from the first date of posting the notice of intention to engage in the sale of alcoholic beverages at the premises, within 30 days of the mailing of the notification pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 23985.5, or within 30 days of the mailing of the notices of the Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to public officials as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 23987, whichever is later. The time within which a local law enforcement agency may file a protest may be extended by the period prescribed in section Bus. & Prof. Code § 23987, pursuant to a request made under that section. See Ch. 18, Alcoholic Beverage Licenses, § 18.13[1].

California Environmental Quality Act--Projects. In Sunset Sky Ranch Pilots Assn. v. County of Sacramento (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 902 , the California Supreme Court held that a county's decision not to renew a conditional use permit for a privately owned airport was not a public project subject to CEQA, because the county did not "directly undertake" to close the airport but rather decided not to reauthorize a private activity that required the issuance of a permit. See Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters, § 418.32[2].

Nonjudicial Foreclosure--Trustee's Duties. In Banc of America Leasing & Capital LLC v. 3 Arch Trustee Services Inc. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1090 , the court of appeal held that a trustee conducting a nonjudicial foreclosure sale that results in excess sale proceeds does not have a duty to search for, verify, prioritize, and distribute the surplus funds to a junior lien holder who has not recorded a request to receive notice of default and sale. See Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.60[2][a].

Homesteads--Attachment of Judgment Liens. In Fidelity National Title Insurance Co. v. Schroeder (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 834 , the court held that a judgment lien attaches to a declared homestead in the amount of any surplus equity. See Ch. 294, Homesteads, § 294.51[1].

Landlord-Tenant--Rent Deduction for Nonpayment of Utilities. A tenant who has paid for utilities on behalf of the landlord may deduct that payment from rent as provided in certain Public Utility Code sections [Civ. Code § 1942.2]. For discussion and a form of affirmative defense, see Ch. 334, Landlord and Tenant: Claims for Damages, §§ 334.17[2], 334.118.

Residential Mortgage Loans. Legislation in 2009 added numerous provisions concerning residential mortgage loans and lenders' practices:

- Stats. 2009, ch. 629, added Fin. Code § 4995 et seq., imposing restrictions on higher-priced mortgage loans, and added Civ. Code § 2923.1, specifying fiduciary duties of mortgage brokers. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, §§ 555.21C and 555.21D.

- Stats. 2009, ch. 43, amended Civ. Code §§ 2923.5, 2923.6, and 2924.8, to enhance protections for homeowners whose homes are subject to mortgages and deeds of trust recorded from January 1, 2003, to December 31, 2007, inclusive. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.51A[2] -[4].

- Stats. 2009, ch. 43, amended Civ. Code § 2943 to enable escrow agents to obtain valid payoff statements in short-sale transactions, which can occur often when deeds of trust or mortgages have to be foreclosed in a distressed real estate market. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.53[4].

- Stats. 2009, 2d Ex. Sess., ch. 5, added Civ. Code §§ 2923.52-2923.55, tacking a temporary 90-day extension onto the normal three-month period after a default under a mortgage or deed of trust (that was recorded from January 1, 2003, to January 1, 2008, inclusive), in which a homeowner can attempt to cure the default. The purpose of the extension is to allow the parties to pursue a loan modification so as to prevent the impending foreclosure. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.54[1][f].

- Stats. 2009, ch. 264, added Civ. Code § 1103.20 et seq., titled the Buyer's Choice Act, to provide that a mortgagee or trust deed beneficiary, after acquiring title to residential property at a foreclosure sale, may not require, directly or indirectly, as a condition of selling the property to another purchaser, that title insurance or escrow services must be obtained by the purchaser from a particular title insurer or escrow agent. For discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages, § 555.62[4].

Sales of Real Property--No Requirement to Buy Particular Title Insurance. Under the Buyer's Choice Act, a seller of residential property may not require that title insurance covering the property or escrow service provided in connection with the sale be purchased by the buyer from a particular title insurer or escrow agent [Civ. Code § 1103.22(a)]. For discussion, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser, § 569.16A.

Sales of Real Property--Noncompliant Plumbing Fixtures. Stats. 2009, ch. 587, added Civ. Code §§ 1101.2-1101.4 and 1102.155, mandating that single-family residences, if built and available for use before January 1, 1994, must be equipped with water-conserving plumbing fixtures on or before January 1, 2017, and after that date, the seller of such a property must disclose whether the property includes any noncompliant plumbing fixtures. For discussion, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser, § 569.13[7].

§ 1.272A Schools

School District Dismissing Probationary Teacher for Unsatisfactory Performance Must Provide 90-Day Written Notice Specifying Nature of Unsatisfactory Performance. In Achene v. Pierce Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 757 , the court held that a school district dismissing a probationary teacher for unsatisfactory performance must comply with the notice requirements that apply to the dismissal of a permanent employee for unsatisfactory performance. Accordingly, the district must give the teacher, at least 90 calendar days before the notice of dismissal, a written notice specifying the nature of the unsatisfactory performance, with such specific instances of behavior and with such particularity as to furnish the employee an opportunity to correct his or her faults and overcome the grounds for the charge [Educ. Code §§ 44932(a)(4), 44938(b), 44948.3(a)]. See Ch. 512, Schools: Certification, Dismissal, and Related Employment Issues, §§ 512.29[2], 512.120.

Seizure of Student and Interrogation at School Violated Fourth Amendment Rights. In Greene v. Camreta (9th Cir. 2009) 588 F.3d 1011 , the Ninth Circuit held that a child protective services officer's decision to seize and interrogate a suspected child abuse victim at school with a law enforcement officer present, in the absence of a warrant, a court order, exigent circumstances, or parental consent, violated the child's Fourth Amendment rights. The general law of search warrants applied to child abuse investigations, and with the direct involvement of law enforcement in the in-school seizure and interrogation, the child was not seized for some special need beyond the normal need for law enforcement. However, the child protective services officer and the law enforcement officer were entitled to qualified immunity, because child protective services officer and a law enforcement officer involved in an in-school seizure and interrogation were entitled to qualified immunity, because Ninth Circuit precedent did not clearly establish that an in-school seizure of a student suspected of being a victim of child sexual abuse could be subject to traditional Fourth Amendment protections. See Ch. 513, Schools: Student Rights and Responsibilities .

§ 1.272B Statutory Interpretation

Proposition 83 Residence Restrictions Apply to Registered Sex Offenders Convicted Before Proposition's Effective Date. The California Supreme Court has held that Penal Code § 3003.5(b), as amended by Proposition 83 (Jessica's Law) to restrict where paroled sex offenders subject to lifetime registration may reside, applies to a person who was convicted of a registrable offense before the effective date of Proposition 83 (Nov. 8, 2006) but was paroled--and sought housing--after that date. Applying the amended statute to such a person is not an impermissible retroactive application of the statute, because the last act or event that must occur before the mandatory residency restrictions come into play--the registered sex offender's securing of a residence on his or her release from custody on parole--occurs after the effective date of the statutory amendment [In re E.J. (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1258] . See Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances, § 531.71[1].

§ 1.273 Taxes

Property Tax--Transfer of Base Year Value to Replacement Dwelling. In Wunderlich v. County of Santa Cruz (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 680 , the court held, on an issue of first impression, that under Rev. & Tax. Code § 69.5, if a taxpayer applies to have the base-year value of an existing dwelling transferred to a replacement dwelling that consists of a newly built structure on land that the taxpayer purchased many years earlier (land that, therefore, has an artificially low base-year value because of Proposition 13), then for the purpose of determining whether the replacement dwelling meets the "equal or lesser value" test of the statute, both the land and the new structure must be valued together, as a unit, as of the date construction was completed. See Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments, § 540.53[5][d].

Taxes--Attorney-Client Privilege Extends to Taxpayer-Practitioner Communications. Rev. & Tax Code §§ 7099.1 and 21028 [2009 Stats., ch. 411] extend the same statutory protections of confidentiality that apply to a communication between a taxpayer and an attorney [see Evid. Code § 950 et seq.] to a communication between a taxpayer and a federally authorized tax practitioner with respect to tax advice, to the extent that the communication would be considered a privileged communication if it were between a client and an attorney. The privilege is effective with regard to communications made on or after January 16, 2009, and, under previously enacted temporary versions of the governing code sections, also with regard to communications made from September 13, 2000, until January 16, 2009. See Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments, § 540.408.

§ 1.274 Torts

[1] Abuse of Minors and Elderly

Sexual Abuse Action Against Babysitter for Conduct of Husband Untimely Absent Allegations of Control. In Joseph v. Johnson (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1404 , the court of appeal held that a childhood sexual abuse action against a non-perpetrator spouse was not subject to the extended limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 34.1(b)(2) to the extent that the action was based on allegations that the defendant, while babysitting plaintiffs, left them alone with her husband, who committed the abuse, as plaintiffs had not alleged that the non-perpetrator spouse exercised the requisite control over her husband's actions. However, the court did allow plaintiffs to proceed based on allegations that the wife intentionally made plaintiffs available to her husband for lewd and lascivious purposes, allegations which, if proven, would support a finding that the wife had committed sexual abuse because she violated Penal Code § 266j. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.13.

Attorney's Litigation Conduct Did Not Support Finding of Elder Abuse. In Gdowski v. Gdowski (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 128 , the court of appeal held that, under the Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Statute, a finding of past abuse may not be predicated on the manner in which the elder or dependent adult is questioned by defendant's counsel during legal proceedings to ascertain whether defendant abused the adult in the past, even if counsel's conduct is rude or loud and the client does not take steps to prevent his or her attorney from utilizing such tactics. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.33[1].

Elder Abuse Protective Order May Extend to Other Family Members. Under amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 15657.03, family or household members other than petitioner, or a conservator of the petitioner, may also be protected by an order under the Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Statute, at the discretion of the court and on a showing of good cause. See Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly, § 5.71[2].

[2] Attorney Professional Liability

Specific Limitations Period for Attorney Malpractice Claims Against Criminal Defense Attorneys Added. Under amended Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, if a plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her malpractice claim against a criminal defense attorney, the action must be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case. See Ch. 7, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.170[1].

Class Attorneys Not Liable for Utilizing Class Settlement Notice Procedures Approved by Court. In Martorana v. Marlin & Saltzman (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 685 , the court of appeal held that a member of a plaintiff class in a class action cannot sue class counsel for negligence on the grounds that counsel should have negotiated a different settlement notice procedure, at least when the trial court approved the final settlement and notice procedures after providing class members an opportunity to object. The court also held that class attorneys utilizing an approved procedure for providing mass notification of settlement claims procedures to class members have no additional duty to follow up with individual class members who do not respond before the deadline for doing so. See Ch. 7, Attorney Professional Liability, § 76.135.

[3] Automobiles

Contract Action Permitted Against Insurer for Failing to Preserve Evidence. In Cooper v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 876 , the court of appeal held that an insurance company had explicitly agreed to preserve an allegedly defective automobile tire after plaintiff had informed the company that the tire would be needed in a lawsuit against the manufacturer, and because plaintiff relied on the insurer's promise to preserve the tire, plaintiff had a cause of action based in contract against the insurance company when that company failed to preserve the tire. See Ch. 81A, Automobiles: Investigation, § 81A.14.

[4] Damages

Collateral Source Rule Applied to Preclude Reduction in Medical Expense Damages. In Howell v. Hamilton Meats & Provisions, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 686 , the court of appeal, applying the collateral source rule, held that when a plaintiff was contractually liable for the full amount that would normally have been charged for the health care services provided, the fact that the plaintiff's private health care insurer negotiated a lesser amount as payment in full for those services did not reduce a tortfeasor's liability for the full, reasonable value of the services. See Ch. 177, Damages, §§ 177.45[3][b], 177.50[2][a].

Restoration Damages for Real Property Destruction Exceeded Property's Market Value; Double Damages Mandated for Negligence That Causes Fire That Damages Trees. In Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 442 , the court of appeal held that even though the pre-damage value of plaintiff's real property was estimated at no more than $1.8 million, restoration costs of almost $3 million were appropriate when that was the amount that would be required to allow plaintiff to make the property safe and habitable by his family, and the property was unmarketable in its current condition due to damage caused by the defendant. The court also held that the double damages provision of Civ. Code § 3346 is applicable when damage to trees is caused by a fire that was the result of the defendant's negligent act, and that a person who was merely storing personal property on the premises is not entitled to damages for annoyance and discomfort. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.47[5], and Ch. 550, Trespass, §§ 550.21[3][c], [h].

Punitive Damages Award Reduced. In Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686 , the California Supreme Court held that a 1-to-1 ratio between punitive and compensatory damages was the appropriate maximum in an employment harassment and termination case in which most of the actionable conduct was committed by a low-level supervisor and the conduct of the corporate employer in not responding to a single complaint brought by the employee was not very reprehensible. The Court also held that an employee who supervised four employees in a company that employed over 20,000 was not a managing agent for purposes of establishing a claim to punitive damages against the company. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.51[10], [15].

Court Upholds Reduction in Medi-Cal Lien Amount. In Lopez v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th

1373 , the court of appeal upheld a reduction in the State's Medi-Cal lien amount when, after the State and the plaintiff could not agree on what portion of plaintiff's settlement amount should be allocated to past medical expenses, the trial court made an allocation based on the evidence provided by the plaintiff because the State failed to provide any evidence of its own in support of a different allocation. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[1].

Attorney Lien Given Priority Over Medical Lien. In Gilman v. Dalby (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 606 , the court of appeal held that, when both a medical lien and an attorney lien for fees and costs exist, in the event a recovery is insufficient to cover the liens, the attorney lien has priority over the medical lien regardless of which lien was created first. See Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.54[5].

[5] Employer Liability

Homeowners Not Required to Comply With OSHA Safety Regulations During Home Remodeling Project. In Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261 , the court of appeal held that work on a home remodeling project that was undertaken by homeowners to enhance enjoyment of their own residence constituted "household domestic service" within the meaning of a statutory OSHA provision, thus excluding application of OSHA safety regulations. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.15[1].

Out-of-Town Business Conference Constituted Special Errand for Employer. In Jeewarat v. Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427 , the court of appeal held that an employee attending an out-of-town business conference authorized and paid for by the employer is on a special errand for the employer until the trip is completed, and if the employee intends to drive from the airport to his or her residence at the end of the trip, in the absence of any intervening personal deviations, the special errand continues until the employee arrives at home. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.16[4][b].

City Not Liable for Sexual Assault Committed by Firefighters. In M.P. v. City of Sacramento (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 121 , the court of appeal held that an employer was not liable for a sexual assault committed by firefighters, even if the firefighters were on duty at the time of the assault, noting that the firefighters had no coercive authority over the victim and did not purport to detain the victim in the course of any investigation or even while performing any official duties. See Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts, § 248.17[2].

[6] Fraud and Deceit

Fraud Allegations Based on Misleading Advertising Campaign Need Not Include Allegations of Reliance on Specific Advertisements. In Morgan v. AT&T Wireless Services, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1235 , the court of appeal held that if a fraud claim is based on a series of numerous misrepresentations, such as an advertising campaign that is alleged to be misleading, plaintiffs need not allege the specific advertisements the individual plaintiffs relied upon, and it is sufficient for the plaintiff to provide a representative selection of the advertisements or other statements to indicate the language upon which the claim is based. See Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.91[4].

[7] Games, Sports, and Athletics

Ranch Owners Not Liable to Social Guest Injured While Riding Horse. In Levinson v. Owens (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1534 , the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine provided a complete defense to the owners of a cattle ranch who had invited friends to their ranch for a barbecue and one guest who asked to ride one of their horses and assured the owners that she knew how to ride was injured when thrown by the horse, who had no history of problems with riders. See Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics, § 273.33[4][b].

[8] Libel and Slander

Judicial Privilege May Be Unavailable When Application of Privilege Would Defeat Other Statutory Interests.

The judicial privilege of Civ. Code § 47(b) may not apply when another statute specifically prohibits the conduct alleged to be protected by the privilege, at least when applying the privilege would defeat the purposes of the other statute. In Cabral v. Martins (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 471 , the court of appeal held that application of the litigation privilege to attorneys' conduct in representing clients in probate proceedings would not defeat the purposes of the child support evasion statutes, Civ. Code §§ 1714.4, 1714.41. By contrast, in Komarova v. National Credit Acceptance, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 324 , the court of appeal held that the judicial privilege did not apply to conduct in violation of the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Civ. Code § 1788 et seq., as application of the privilege would seriously undermine the protections afforded by that Act. See Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.60[1].

[9] Malicious Prosecution

Malicious Prosecution Damages Cannot Include Attorney Fees Previously Awarded Under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 in Underlying Lawsuit. In Jackson v. Yarbray (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 75 , the court of appeal held that if a defendant in an underlying lawsuit was successful in whole or in part on a special motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, and recovered attorney's fees and costs under that statute, that party may not recover as damages in a subsequent malicious prosecution action any attorney's fees and costs that were awarded and actually paid to him or her under the motion to strike for defending against the underlying action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.18[1].

Dismissal of Malicious Prosecution Action After Adverse Appellate Result in Underlying Action Is Not Termination on Merits of Malicious Prosecution Action. In Drummond v. Desmarais (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 439 , the court of appeal held that if a malicious prosecution action is stayed on the grounds that an appeal from the underlying judgment is pending, and the underlying appeal is then resolved adversely to the malicious prosecution plaintiff, a voluntary dismissal of the malicious prosecution action by that plaintiff in response to losing the underlying appeal is considered a technical disposition and not a termination on the merits for purposes of any subsequent malicious prosecution action that might be brought by the defendant in the first malicious prosecution action. See Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process, § 357.14[3].

[10] Medical Malpractice

Arbitration Agreement With Hospital Unenforceable When Patient Dies Within 30 Days of Signing. In Rodriguez v. Superior Court (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1461 , the court of appeal held that in the context of an arbitration agreement between a patient and a hospital, if the patient dies within the 30-day period provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(c) during which the patient has the right to rescind the agreement, the agreement to arbitrate will generally be unenforceable as the person signing the agreement did not have the full statutory period to reconsider whether to rescind. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.14[9], and see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.51.

[11] Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress

Veterinarian Not Liable for Pet Owner's Emotional Distress. In McMahon v. Craig (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1502 , the court of appeal held that although a pet owner may be emotionally involved in the pet's health and especially susceptible to emotional distress should the pet die, a veterinarian's medical care is directed solely at the pet and malpractice by a veterinarian will not support recovery by the pet owner for negligent or intentional infliction of emotional distress. See Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, §§ 362.10[3][c], 362.11[6][d][iii].

[12] Negligence

Good Samaritan Statute Amended. Under amended Health & Safety Code § 1799.102, medical, law enforcement, and emergency personnel providing emergency medical or nonmedical care in good faith and not for compensation at the scene of an emergency are not liable for any civil damages resulting from any act or omission. Persons other than medical, law enforcement, and emergency personnel who render emergency medical or nonmedical care or assistance at the scene of an emergency are not to be held liable for civil damages for any act or omission other than an act or omission that constitutes gross negligence or willful or wanton misconduct. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[2][d].

Determination of Liability Unresolved When Fact Issue Remained on Power Company's Control Over Placement of Light Pole. In Laabs v. Southern California Edison Co. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1260 , the court of appeal, recognizing that a utility company can be held liable for the negligent placement of utility poles along a roadway, concluded that there was an unresolved issue of fact as to whether the defendant power company exercised sufficient control over the placement of the light pole hit by plaintiff's vehicle to impose a duty on the power company to place the pole in such a way as to minimize the risk of injury caused by collisions. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.30[4][c].

MySpace.com Not Liable for Failing to Control Sexual Predators. In Doe II v. MySpace Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 561 , the court of appeal held that, because of the broad immunity provided to website operators under the federal Communications Decency Act of 1996, the Internet social networking site MySpace.com could not be held liable in negligence, gross negligence, or products liability for failing to implement controls on its site to prevent sexual predators from communicating with minors. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.32[4].

"Burning Man" Burn Victim Assumed Risk of Injury. In Beninati v. Black Rock City, LLC (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 650 , the court of appeal held that the primary assumption of risk doctrine provided a complete defense to the possessors of land upon which a "Burning Man" festival was held when an experienced participant tripped and fell after voluntarily entering the aftermath of a large, man-shaped bonfire. See Ch. 380, Negligence, § 380.172[4][c].

[13] Nuisance

Medical Marijuana Dispensary in Violation of Zoning Laws Was Nuisance Per Se. In City of Claremont v. Kruse (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 1153 , the court of appeal upheld an injunction against a medical marijuana dispensary under the nuisance per se doctrine because operation of the dispensary violated the city's local zoning laws and the dispensary was being operated without a business license. See Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.18.

[14] Privacy

Physical Invasion of Privacy Statute Amended. Under amended Civ. Code § 1708.8, the physical invasion of privacy statute, the Legislature has imposed new requirements for liability under the statute based on the transmission, publication, broadcast, sale, offer for sale, or other use of a visual image, sound recording, or other physical impression that was taken or captured in violation of the statute. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.34A[1], [2].

Medical Information May Be Disclosed to Employee Welfare Benefit Plan. Under amended Civ. Code § 56.10, medical information may be disclosed under specified conditions to an employee welfare benefit plan to the extent that the plan provides medical care, and may also be disclosed to an entity contracting with the employee welfare benefit plan for billing, claims management, medical data processing, or other administrative services related to the provision of medical care. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.200[4].

Single-Publication Rule Applies to Appropriation Tort. In Christoff v. Nestle USA, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 468 , the California Supreme Court held that the single-publication rule developed in the context of defamation actions and as codified in Civ. Code § 3425.3 applies to a cause of action for unauthorized commercial use of likeness. The Court also held that, in determining whether a cause of action has been filed within the limitations period, the delayed-discovery rule does not apply to publications widely disseminated to the general public, such as in books, magazines, and newspapers. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.35[1].

Employer Not Liable for Placing Hidden Camera in Office to Capture Evidence of After-Hours Misconduct. In

Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272 , the California Supreme Court held that while two women employed at a facility for neglected and abused children had shown an intrusion into their shared office space, a place in which they had a reasonable expectation of privacy, by showing that the facility director had placed a hidden camera and motion sensor in their office in order to capture video evidence of which employee had been using one of the computers in that office late at night to view Internet pornography, they could not demonstrate under the circumstances that the intrusion would be considered utterly unjustified and highly offensive to a reasonable person. See Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.39.

[14A] Products Liability

FDCA Did Not Preempt Warning Claim Against Pharmaceutical Manufacturer. The U.S. Supreme Court held in its 6-3 opinion that FDA approval of a drug's label does not provide a complete defense to failure-to-warn claims [Wyeth v. Levine (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1187] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.52[2], 460.104[39].

Instruction on Standard for Fear-of-Cancer Damages Is Required in FELA Cases. The U.S. Supreme Court found reversible error in the failure to instruct a FELA jury on the legal standard for fear of cancer damages [CSX Transp., Inc. v. Hensley (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2139] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.33[1], 460.104[15].

Government Contractor Defense Applies to Non-Military Products. In an asbestos case, the Court of Appeal, First Appellate District ruled that the government contractor defense applies to non-military products, but does not necessarily immunize manufacturers from liability for failure-to-warn claims. Moreover, a finding of negligent failure to warn could not be reconciled with the jury's finding that boilers were not defective with respect to their warnings [Oxford v. Foster Wheeler LLC (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 700] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[10], 460.104[4], [23], 460.187[3].

Ninth Circuit Asks California Supreme Court to Revisit Discovery Rule. The Ninth Circuit certified questions asking whether (1) two separate physical injuries arising out of the same wrongdoing may be conceived of as invading two different primary rights, and (2) whether two separate physical injuries--both caused by a plaintiff's use of tobacco--may be considered "qualitatively different" for purpose of determining when the statute of limitations begins to run [Pooshs v. Phillip Morris USA, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 561 F.3d 964] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.31[2], 460.104[1].

Component Part Manufacturers Had No Duty to Warn Regarding Other Manufacturers' Products. Two appellate courts have ruled that manufacturers of ship engine components were not liable for failure to warn because they did not supply the asbestos-containing materials used in its products [Merrill v. Leslie Controls, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 262 ; Taylor v. Elliott Turbomachinery Co. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 564] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[2], [6], 460.11[10], 460.104[6], [16].

Court Sheds Light on Sophisticated User Defense. Following remand by the California Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal ruled that the sophisticated user defense applies to a negligent failure-to-warn cause of action on a negligence per se theory, but not to a strict liability, design defect cause of action [Johnson v. Honeywell Int'l Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 549] . See Ch. 460, Products Liability, §§ 460.11[8], [9], [10], 460.104[16].

[15] Public Entities and Officers

County Not Liable for Failing to Direct Water System Operator to Notify of Unsafe Water. In Guzman v. County of Monterey (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 887 , the California Supreme Court held that the Safe Drinking Water Act and implementing regulations did not explicitly mandate that a county direct the operator of a water system to notify the public that its drinking water had impermissibly high levels of fluoride, and as such, the county could not be liable for failing to discharge a mandatory duty. On remand, however, the court of appeal held that the county had a mandatory duty under 22 C.C.R. § 64256(e) to read the water quality reports submitted by the water system operator. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[4].

County Immune for Design of Landslide Retaining Wall. In Alvis v. County of Ventura (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 536 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff suing a public entity cannot avoid the design immunity provided by Gov. Code § 830.6 by arguing that the public entity was negligent in its maintenance of a public project if the "maintenance" proposed by the plaintiff is actually a change in the original design of the project. The court also held that design immunity applies even if the decision-maker who approved the design was not informed before the approval was made of every negative comment or concern expressed by every consultant or expert who reviewed the proposed plan, so long as evidence supports the reasonableness of the plan or design. Finally, the court held that when a county's approval of a landslide retaining wall considered and made allowances for drainage through the wall, plaintiff's change of condition argument failed when it was based on alleged inadequate drainage. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.85[2][a], [b].

Rules for Indemnification for Erroneous Criminal Conviction Amended. Under amended Pen. Code §§ 4901 and 4903, a person filing a claim seeking indemnification for a false criminal conviction must file the claim within two years after discharge, pardon, or release, and when determining whether the claimant intentionally contributed to the bringing about of his or her arrest or conviction, the fact finder is not to consider statements obtained from an involuntary false confession or involuntary plea. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: Civil Claims Arising From Criminal Acts, §§ 465.62[2], 465.63[2][a].

Amendments Made to False Claims Act. The Legislature has amended the False Claims Act to make various changes, including adding additional definitions, expanding the definition of a claim, and mandating that a civil penalty be imposed on a person found liable for a violation. See Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions, §§ 468.21[2], [3], [4][i], [5], 468.22[2].

Seaman May Recover Punitive Damages for Failure to Pay Maintenance and Cure. In Atlantic Sounding Co., Inc. v. Townsend (2009) 174 L. Ed. 2d 382 , the United States Supreme Court held that a seaman may recover punitive damages under general maritime law for a ship owner's willful and wanton failure to pay maintenance and cure, even if such damages might not be available in an action brought solely under the Jones Act. See Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping, § 522.33[1].

[17] Tort Claims Act

Medical Malpractice Claim Against Public Entity Hospital Must Meet Three-Year Limitations Period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5. In Roberts v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 474 , the court of appeal held that a plaintiff suing a public entity hospital for malpractice must meet the three-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5, and failure to do so will provide a limitations defense for the defendant even if the plaintiff's action is otherwise timely under the Government Claims Act. See Ch. 295, Hospitals, § 295.14[4][c], [7]; see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice, § 415.47[1]; and see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.42[1][a].

County Not Liable for Failing to Direct Water System Operator to Notify of Unsafe Water. In Guzman v. County of Monterey (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 887 , the California Supreme Court held that the Safe Drinking Water Act and implementing regulations did not explicitly mandate that a county direct the operator of a water system to notify the public that its drinking water had impermissibly high levels of fluoride, and as such, the county could not be liable for failing to discharge a mandatory duty. See Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act, § 464.61[4].

Length of Juror Service. Coverage of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1002, and Gov. Code § 68550, governing court systems implementation of restrictions on length of juror service, has been added in this release. See Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection, § 322.34[2].

Trial Court Should Make Sure Inmate Can Participate by Phone. In Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672 , an action by an indigent prison inmate against a physician for allegedly negligent medical care at a correctional facility, the court of appeal found that the trial court abused its discretion by choosing the drastic measure of dismissal based on the ground that the prisoner did not appear telephonically at a case management conference and a subsequent hearing on an order to show cause as to whether the case should be dismissed, without first determining that the prisoner had been afforded meaningful access to the courts and his failure to appear at the required hearings was willful. See Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights .

Amended Pleadings--Conforming to Proof at Trial. This chapter is updated with Garcia v. Roberts (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 900 , which holds amendments to conform to proof should not be granted at trial if by permitting the amendment new and substantially different issues are introduced in the case or the rights of the adverse party prejudiced; amendments of pleadings to conform to the proofs should not be allowed when they raise new issues not included in the original pleadings and upon which the adverse party had no opportunity to defend. § 1.276 Unfair Competition

Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable Under Unfair Competition Statute. In Davis v. Ford Motor Credit Co. LLC (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 581 , the court of appeal held that attorney's fees may not be recovered under the unfair competition statute even if the violation of another statute serves as a predicate for the unfair competition action and that underlying statute has a provision for the recovery of attorney's fees, at least when the plaintiff brings the action solely under the unfair competition statute rather than directly under the underlying statute. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.34[5].

Pre-Discovery Trade Secret Statement Must Clearly Describe Trade Secrets Without Extensive Extraneous Material. In Perlan Therapeutics, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1333 , the court of appeal held that a trial court has the authority to reject a plaintiff's pre-discovery trade secret statement if the statement does not clearly identify all of the trade secrets at issue, or if it includes broad, catch-all language, extensive extraneous material, or voluminous attachments as a tactic to preserve an unrestricted, unilateral right to subsequently amend the statement to include trade secrets that were not envisioned when the initial statement was filed, although a plaintiff cannot be required at the pre-discovery stage to convince the trial court that the purported trade secrets are actually secret. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[8].

Standing to Sue Under Unfair Competition Statute Not Transferable. In Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993 , the California Supreme Court held that an injured party who would have standing cannot assign the right to sue under the unfair competition statute to another party who does not otherwise meet the requirements for standing to sue. The Court also held that an association, such as a labor union, does not have standing to sue on behalf of its individual members when the association itself cannot meet the requirements for standing. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, §§ 565.35[1], 565.231[4].

Employer May Not Prohibit Former Employees From Soliciting Customers Without Resort to Employer's Protected Customer Lists. In The Retirement Group v. Galante (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1226 , the court of appeal held that only the use of confidential trade secrets may be enjoined under the trade-secret exception to Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, and an employer may not prohibit former employees from soliciting its customers through use of information obtained independently of the employer's protected customer lists. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, §

565.71[2][c].

Evidence That Will Support Finding of Bad-Faith Prosecution of Claim for Misappropriation of Trade Secret Clarified. In FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270 , the court of appeal held that evidence that plaintiffs had an anticompetitive motive in filing a lawsuit for trade secret misappropriation will support a finding that the lawsuit was objectively specious, at least when there is no evidence of actual damages, misappropriation or threatened misappropriation, and no threat of imminent harm. The court also held that the denial of a defendant's motion for summary judgment will not preclude a later finding that the plaintiff's action was brought or maintained in bad faith. See Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.103[7][c].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.277

§ 1.277 Workers' Compensation

Compensable Injuries--Employee's Race, Etc. The legislature has amended Lab. Code § 3600 to provide that no personal relationship or personal connection will be deemed to exist between an employee and a third party based only on a determination that the third party injured or killed the employee solely because of the third party's personal beliefs relating to his or her perception of the employee's race, religious creed, color, national origin, age, gender, disability, sex, or sexual orientation. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[4].

Personal Physician--Employee's Predesignation. The legislature has amended Lab. Code § 4600 to delete the December 31, 2009, repeal date for those provisions pertaining to an employee's predesignation of a personal physician. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[1][a].

Medical Treatment; Authorization. The legislature has enacted Lab. Code § 4610.3 to provide that an employer that authorizes medical treatment may not rescind or modify that authorization after the medical treatment has been provided for any reason, including, but not limited to, the employer's subsequent determination that the physician who provided the treatment was not eligible to treat that injured employee. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation § 577.45[1][c].

Temporary Disability --Credits-- Time to Claim. The court of appeal, in J.C. Penney Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 818 , has held that the employer's claim of credit against permanent disability payments was allowable only for temporary disability payments made after June 2006, which was the last date for which the employee's treating physician reported that he was temporarily disabled, so that any claim of credit for temporary disability payments made prior to that date was foreclosed by Lab. Code § 4062(a). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.46[4].

Employment Relationships--Unemployment Insurance. The court of appeal, in Messenger Courier Association of the Americas v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1074 , has held that California courts and administrative agencies are all authorized to apply the comprehensive and overlapping tests regarding employment status stated in S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations and that the reasoning of Borello, which arose in a workers' compensation context, applied equally to analysis of tax-related issues, such as employer contributions, requiring an employment determination. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §

577.22[3][c].

Third Party Actions--Settlements; Credit; California Insurance Guarantee Association. The court of appeal, in Baur v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1260 , has held that, pursuant to Lab. Code § 3861, an employer was entitled to credit against future workers' compensation benefits to be paid to an employee in the amount of the net settlement of the employee's action against a third-party tortfeasor, paid to the employee by CIGA. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.335[4][a].

Third Party Actions --Insurance-- Medical Payments; Reimbursement-- Attorney's Fees. The Supreme Court, in 21st Century Insurance Co. v. Superior Court of San Diego County; Silvia Quintana, Real Party in Interest (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 511 , has held that, although the made-whole rule applies in the medical payments insurance context, and the insured must be made whole as to all damages proximately caused by the injury, liability for attorney's fees is not included under the made-whole rule, but is instead subject to the equitable apportionment rule. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.335[3][b][ii].

Vocational Rehabilitation--Sunsetting. The Appeals Board en banc in Weiner v. Ralphs Co. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 958 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has held that, even if the Board assumed that some vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance was indisputably due to the employee prior to January 1, 2009, this does not mean that the employee's right to this vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance had vested. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[2].

Vocational Rehabilitation--Sunsetting. The court of appeal, in Beverly Hilton Hotel v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1597 , has held that an October 2008 WCAB decision that affirmed the WCJ's January 2008 award of vocational rehabilitation benefits to an employee was not a "final" decision, so that the employee lost all rights to vocational rehabilitation benefits as of the January 1, 2009, repeal of Lab. Code § 139.5. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.45[2].

Injury AOE/COE--Going and Coming Rule--Special Mission Exception. The court of appeal, in Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427 , has held that the fact that an employee coincidentally passed his office on his return route home from attendance at an out-of-town business conference that constituted a special mission did not mean that the special mission had terminated, since the employee did not stop at the office and intended to return home from the airport. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[6][b][ii].

Injury AOE/COE--Compensable Consequence Injuries--Medical Treatment. The court of appeal in Esquivel v. W.C.A.B. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 330 , has held that an employee who, upon leaving her mother's home where she had gone to visit, was injured while driving 136 miles to keep a medical appointment for treatment of her industrial injuries, had not suffered new compensable injuries because those injuries were sustained outside the reasonable geographic area of her employer's risk for incurring compensability liability for such injuries. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.24[6][a].

Permanent Disability--AMA Guides; 2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule. The Appeals Board en banc, in Almaraz v. Environmental Recovery Services; Guzman v. Milpitas Unified School District (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1084 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed sub nom. Milpitas Unified School District v. W.C.A.B. (Guzman) 10/16/2009, has specifically rejected the "inequitable, disproportionate, and not a fair and accurate measure of the employee's permanent disability" standard set forth in its previous en banc opinion. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Permanent Disability--2005 Permanent Disability Rating Schedule--Diminished Future Earning Capacity. The Appeals Board en banc, in Ogilvie v. City and County of San Francisco (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1127 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) , pet. for writ of rev. filed 10/7/2009, has held that any individualized diminished future earning capacity adjustment factor must be consistent with Lab. Code § 4660(b)(2), the RAND data to which it refers, and the numeric formula adopted by the Administrative Director in the 2005 Schedule. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.01.

Death Benefits--Decedent's Estate. The court of appeal, in City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 134 , has held that, because the employer had paid a deceased employee's mother/heir death benefits pursuant to Lab. Code § 4702(a)(6)(B), before ceasing such payments following the decision in Six Flags, Inc. v. W.C.A.B. that declared that statute unconstitutional, the Death Without Dependents Unit was not entitled to be paid any death benefit. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.13[2][b].

Discrimination--Labor Code § 132a. The court of appeal, in Gelson's Markets v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 201 , has held that an employee did not make a prima facie showing of discrimination in violation of Lab. Code § 132a when the reports and releases to return to work from the treating physician and the agreed medical evaluator received by the employer were unclear and ambiguous regarding the employee's ability to return to his usual and customary duties. See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.18[1].

Medical Treatment--Utilization Review--Spinal Surgery. The Appeals Board en banc in Cervantes v. El Aguila Food Products, Inc. (2009) 74 Cal. Comp. Cases 1336 (Appeals Board en banc opinion) has elucidated the procedures and timelines governing objections to a treating physician's recommendation for spinal surgery contained in Lab. Code §§ 4610 and 4062 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 9788.1, 9788.11, and 9792.6(o). See Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.46[4].

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.300

§ 1.300 Electronic Discovery

[1] Importance of Electronic Evidence in Modern Law Practice

The explosion of data in the Information Age has changed the face of litigation. In the past, cases were often built on eyewitness accounts, personal recollection, and credibility. Documents always have been important, but "smoking gun" evidence was difficult to locate manually (among mountains of paper files)--or simply wasn't written down.

Litigation is different today. Juries are now conditioned to expect "smoking gun" evidence. This evidence is often found in the growing mass of e-mail, video, text messages, online commentary, instant messages, and presentations, electronically recorded and stored--somewhere. Electronic information often takes center stage when a dispute arises. "A picture is worth a thousand words." So is an incriminatory e-mail.

Electronically stored information ("ESI") is at issue in almost every case. Information stored on such devices as cell phones, blackberries, computers, computer networks, and voicemail systems is prevalent. It is difficult to imagine a case in which, at a minimum, early discussions to ascertain whether ESI is at issue would not be appropriate--and these discussions must take place at the earliest possible time to insure that ESI is not lost due to the normal functioning of the devices described above. All practitioners should make it a routine practice to identify these issues at the outset of discovery. In the rare case in which ESI is not at issue, nothing will be lost aside from a short letter and a brief amount of time spent confirming that ESI is not at issue. Such cases, however, will be the exception; the rule is that ESI will almost always be at issue, and a practitioner who ignores this reality does so at her own peril, both in terms of seeking information from an adversary and in insuring that she has taken appropriate steps in relation to her own client.

[2] Need for Regulation of Electronic Discovery

In the past few years a pressing need has arisen to manage the discovery demands created by all this electronic data. Counsel need a common set of rules. Judges need uniform guidelines for resolving electronic discovery issues that now appear regularly in their courtrooms.

The general federal and state discovery rules simply were not specific enough to provide detailed guidance on the handling of ESI discovery matters, and did not deal effectively with some of the unique issues that typically arise in e-discovery. Until 2006, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure did not address issues relating to ESI, and the law governing such matters was developed through case law. Similarly, until 2009, California had virtually no statutes or rules addressing ESI.

In 2006, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure were amended to explicitly deal with issues relating to ESI. These changes were made due to a recognition that while existing rules provided a rough framework to deal with the issues presented by ESI, that was all that was provided. There was little uniformity in the application of these rules, and both courts and litigants demanded that the system provide clearer guidance--especially given the draconian consequences which could follow from the failure to preserve data in anticipation of, or during litigation. The amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure were made with these concerns in mind.

Over the last few years, a number of states also amended their rules of procedure to address issues concerning ESI. In addition, the Uniform Law Commission established model e-discovery rules. Many states followed the approach of the Federal Rules, others were more consistent with the Uniform Law Commission's model rules, while others blended the two.

California, however--the home of Silicon Valley and the seventh largest economy in the world, with some of the world's most active courts both in the state and federal system--took no action. For that reason, courts and litigants tried, with results that varied throughout the state, to apply the general principles governing discovery as set forth in the Discovery Act to ESI issues. There was little consistency, as decisions were often made based upon the familiarity (or lack thereof) of a particular judicial officer with ESI issues. The same lack of uniformity which prompted the amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure exists in California, and courts and litigants had no ability to conform their conduct with a clear set of rules because there was none.

[3] The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

The 2006 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which became effective December 1, 2006, address ESI in the following ways:

- Issues relating to electronic document maintenance, preservation, and production are to be discussed at the conference of parties [Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 26(f)(3)(C)].

- A party serving a request to produce documents or information "may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information is to be produced" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 34(b)(1)(C)].

- A party responding to such a request may "state an objection to a requested form for producing electronically stored information," and if the responding party objects to the requested form or if no form was specified in the request, "the [responding] party must state the form or forms it intends to use" [Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 34(b)(2)(D)].

- The foregoing provisions must be read in conjunction with Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 34(b)(2)(E)(ii) and (iii), which provide that if the request does not specify the form of production, a party "must produce it in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a reasonably usable form or forms (34(b)(2)(E)(ii)) and that a "party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form" [Fed R. Civ. Proc. 34(b)(2)(E)(iii)].

- A "safe harbor" is created which provides that absent exceptional circumstances, a court may not impose sanctions on a party for evidence lost due to routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system [Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 37(f)]. The Advisory Committee Note to this Rule explains that the rule is intended to prevent a party from permitting electronic systems to destroy evidence after a party knows of actual or potential litigation.

The Federal Rules also provide a "claw back" provision that protects a party against claims of waiver when privileged materials are unintentionally produced as part of an electronic production [Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. Rule 26(b)(5)]. This is a reasonable response to the fact that extraordinarily large productions of electronic information make it difficult to perform a traditional privilege review before production without unduly delaying production. This change was incorporated into prior amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and is also reflected in newly amended Fed. R. Evid. 502.

The relevant Federal Rules are reproduced in Appendix F, below.

§ 1.302 California Law Governing Electronic Discovery

[1] Prior Law

The general law concerning discovery in California primarily resides in the provisions of the Civil Discovery Act of 1986, presently codified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016 et seq. These provisions provide general rules and principles governing discovery in civil cases in California, but for the most part do not explicitly address issues relating to ESI. One of the few exceptions to this is Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2017.710-2017.740 (Chapter 3, relating to "Use of Technology in Conducting Discovery in a Complex Case"), which was added to the Discovery Act in 2004.

Cases which addressed issues of ESI under California law may be viewed as simply applying the general principles of California discovery law rather than creating new rules unique to ESI. For example, in Electronic Funds Solutions v. Murphy (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 , terminating discovery sanctions were affirmed after a party had "wiped" computer hard drives after production of the computer had drives had been ordered. The result is not substantively different from what would have resulted had paper documents been destroyed after an order to produce the files had been issued.

[2] Development of Judicial Council Proposal

The California Judicial Council Rules and Projects Committee on Electronic Discovery (the "Committee") first circulated a proposal for electronic discovery in spring, 2006. Those proposed changes would have only amended Rule 212 of the California Rules of Court (on civil case management). However, the Committee withdrew the 2006 proposal out of concern that more comprehensive changes were needed to the framework of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[3] Passage of the 2009 Electronic Discovery Act

The Committee developed a new proposal after working with members of attorney organizations. The new proposal involved various amendments to the Civil Discovery Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.010 et seq.], along with supporting changes in civil case management rules in the California Rules of Court.

In January, 2008 the Judicial Council Rules and Projects Committee on Electronic Discovery circulated the first version of the new proposal for public comment. Thereafter, the Committee evaluated those comments and made final changes. The proposal was unanimously approved by the Judicial Council on April 25, 2008. The legislative changes were introduced in the California Legislature shortly thereafter as AB 926, with the Judicial Council as co-sponsor of the bill along with the Consumer Attorneys of California and the California Defense Counsel. AB 926 was approved unanimously by both houses of the legislature and sent to enrollment. It was expected that the bill would be signed prior to expiration of the legislative session, with the changes going into effect on January 1, 2009. Governor Schwarzenegger, however, vetoed this bill on September 27, 2008, along with many others, as part of the fallout from the protracted budget crisis which took up much of the summer and fall of 2008.

The bill was reintroduced in 2009 as AB 5, in essentially identical form. Due to the importance of the topic and the immediate need for statewide rules in the area [see § 1, above], the 2009 version was designated as an urgency measure. The bill again passed both houses of the legislature unanimously, and this time was signed by Governor Schwarzenegger [Stats. 2009 ch. 5]. The legislation, known as the Electronic Discovery Act [Stats. 2009 ch. 5, § 1], became effective on June 29, 2009, as an urgency measure, "[i]n order to eliminate uncertainty and confusion regarding the discovery of electronically stored information, and thereby minimize unnecessary and costly litigation that adversely impacts access to the courts" [Stats. 2009 ch. 5, § 23].

Conforming amendments to Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724, establishing the duty of the parties to meet and confer regarding issues relating to the discovery of electronically stored information, were adopted by the California Judicial Council, effective August 14, 2009 [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724(8), discussed in § 5, below].

[4] Basic Features of New Statutes and Rules

Production of electronic documents involves important considerations of subject matter, accessibility, and cost-benefit analysis. The obligation to identify and produce certain electronic documents is spelled out with particularity in the new electronic discovery rules, as well as in the broader Civil Discovery Act itself.

The new California Electronic Discovery Act and its conforming rules (referred to collectively in this analysis as the "California rules") are largely based on the Uniform Rules Relating to Discovery of Electronically Stored Information ("Uniform Rules") issued by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws ("NCCUSL").

The new California rules were carefully developed by the Judicial Council to operate within the basic framework of existing California civil discovery law. Because California civil discovery law is organically different from federal law, there are differences between the California rules and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure [see § 2[5], below]. However, there are also many similarities, as will be discussed below.

This commentary primarily addresses core subjects of the proposed California Rules for electronic discovery:

- The scope and frequency of production [see § 3, below].
- Document preservation [see § 4, below].
- The form of production [see § 6, below].
- Maintaining privilege [see § 7, below].

These are perhaps the most important substantive areas of electronic discovery.

This commentary also addresses the new "meet and confer" rules that are important to the smooth functioning of electronic discovery rules in practice [see § 5, below].

Businesses and consumer advocates need to know about these changes and be ready to implement them when e-discovery situations arise in their practices.

[5] Comparison Between California Law and Federal Rules

California ESI law is similar to Federal law in many respects. The key differences are:

- California law defines ESI as stored information having "electrical, digital, magnetic, wireless, optical, electromagnetic, or similar capabilities." The Federal rules refer to information "stored in any medium" which can be "retrieved and examined."

- The Federal rules permit discovery of ESI that is "reasonably accessible," which some suggest is intended to preclude discovery of information which is not reasonably accessible due to burden. The California rules, in contrast, do not create a presumption that information which is not "reasonably accessible" is not subject to discovery, but instead provide for case-by-case examination of whether ESI which is not reasonably accessible should be produced in a particular case.

PART VIII. California E-Discovery: Analysis of the 2009 Legislation and Rules

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.303

§ 1.303 Scope and Frequency of Allowable Discovery

[1] Discovery Allowed if Relevant to Subject Matter of Action

The scope of allowable discovery under the Civil Discovery Act is as follows:

> § 2017.010. Unless otherwise limited by order of the court in accordance with this title, any party may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action or to the determination of any motion made in that action, if the matter either is itself admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Discovery is allowed if relevant to the subject matter of the pending action and the matter either is itself admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. This section is not amended by the Electronic Discovery Act, and remains in effect.

Federal court practitioners will recognize the foregoing rule as the broader standard of discovery used in federal court prior to 2000. However, changes to FRCP Rule 26(b)(1) in the 2000 amendments changed the subject matter of federal discovery from information relevant to the "subject matter involved" to information relevant to the "claims and defenses of the parties." The Federal Advisory Committee Notes state that the 2000 amendment "signals to the parties that they have no entitlement to discovery to develop new claims or defenses that are not already identified in the pleadings" [192 F.R.D. at 389 (2000)].

This is an important difference in discovery practice in California state court, irrespective of electronic discovery. California Superior Court practitioners may seek discovery of matter relevant to the subject matter of the action, so long as it is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

Due consideration should be given to identification, preservation, collection and production of electronic documents in California state courts that are relevant to the subject matter involved, not just to the claims and defenses of the parties.

[2] Preservation Request and Litigation Holds

Conducting discovery of ESI should begin well before a request for production is served. Practitioners should contemplate sending a preservation letter to the opposing party along with the first documents served in a case. At the same, time, a letter setting forth preservation responsibilities should be sent to one's own client.

For plaintiffs, the preservation letter may be served with the summons and complaint or in some instances before an action is commenced. Defendants should send a preservation letter at an early point as well. While there may be some variations among practitioners, a preservation letter should advise an adversary of the general nature of the claims at issue in the case and advise of the duty to maintain and preserve documents and information relating to such claims, whether they be in hard copy or electronic form. Reference may be made to data having "electrical, digital, magnetic, wireless, optical, electromagnetic, or similar capabilities," and reference should also be made to devices including cell phones, blackberries, computers, laptop computers, servers, networks, backup tapes, and digital cameras. The letter should specifically advise an adversary that routine backup procedures should be suspended to the extent necessary to avoid deletion of material which may be subject to discovery.

See Appendix A for an example of a preservation letter.

[3] Conference of Counsel

Prior to the first case management conference, counsel must meet and confer to discuss whether there are particular ESI issues at issue in the case [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724; see § 5, below]. If so, the parties should discuss how they propose to handle such issues including such key topics as preservation, form of production, the extent to which discoverable ESI is not "reasonably accessible," and whether there is ESI which a party will not search for potentially discoverable information.

Assertions that ESI is not "reasonably accessible" due to burden or for other reasons should be tested by seeking specifics as to how data is maintained and what steps are necessary to make such data accessible, given that the disputes over such matters are to be resolved by weighing the need for the information against the burdens posed by searching and producing the information.

[4] Requests for Production

Under the Electronic Discovery Act, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010(a) has been amended to state:

> § 2031.010(a). Any party may obtain discovery within the scope delimited [by Chapters 2 and 3] by inspecting, copying, testing or sampling...electronically stored information in the possession, custody, or control of any other party to the action.

This amendment clarifies that electronically stored information may be sought in discovery.

In serving discovery requests, the practitioner should specify the form of production which is desired. Those who use litigation database programs such as Summation or Concordance typically ask that electronic documents be produced as ".tiff files with load files." See Appendix B for a sample set of comprehensive instructions setting forth the manner in which ESI should be produced.

When the parties recognize that issues concerning ESI are present, it is often helpful to negotiate an ESI protocol. See Appendix C for a sample ESI protocol. If agreement cannot be reached, the parties may present the issue to the court for resolution.

[5] Testing and Sampling

The amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010(a) also expands the methods of discovery beyond "inspecting" to also include "copying, testing or sampling." Sampling has become a very useful tool in federal court electronic discovery, and is often used to determine whether broader discovery should be sought or allowed from backup tapes and other legacy information. Through sampling, a requesting party is allowed to review production from a certain number of backup tapes for relevant information and, based on the result, may be allowed broader access to backup tapes and other information otherwise deemed "not reasonably accessible." This option will be available under the new California rules.

The Electronic Discovery Act has not incorporated a limitation that exists under the Federal rules. Specifically, the Advisory Committee Note to FRCP Rule 34(a) contains a limiting clarification on the scope of sampling which states:

> The addition of testing and sampling to federal rule 34(a) with regard to documents and electronically stored information is not meant to create a routine right of direct access to a party's electronic information system, although such access might be justified in some circumstances. Courts should guard against undue intrusiveness resulting from inspecting or testing such systems.

A similar provision apparently was considered by the Committee but is not contained in the California statute.

[6] Protective Orders

Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(a), relating to protective orders, has been amended to clarify that:

> § 2031.060(a). When an inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of documents...or electronically stored information has been demanded, the party to whom the demand has been directed, and any other party of affected person or organization, may promptly move for a protective order.

The amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(a) add the words "inspection, copying, testing or sampling" and add the words "electronically stored information." Otherwise, the code provision relating to protective orders remains as before--a party resisting discovery may move for a protective order in lieu of production.

The Electronic Discovery Act also added a new Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(b), which provides as follows:

> § 2031.060(b). The party or affected person or organization seeking a protective order regarding the production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of electronically stored information on the basis that such information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense bears the burden of so demonstrating.

This new subsection clarifies that the party seeking a protective order on the grounds that the information sought is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense bears the burden of proof.

The burden is similarly placed under the Federal Rules, once the discovery dispute is before the court. However, the way a discovery dispute is brought to attention of the court is different under the Federal Rules. In both systems, the party is required to respond to the discovery request fully and completely unless the responding party believes an objection is appropriate. If the responding party chooses to object rather than respond, the propounding party will have the obligation to bring a motion to compel, however, the burden remains with the responding party to establish the appropriateness of the objection.

Thus, under the Federal Rules a producing party "need not provide" information "it identifies" as being not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense. If a requesting party disagrees, it must bring a motion to compel. Alternatively, the responding party may move for a protective order in response to a discovery request [Fed. Rules Civ. Proc., Rule 26(c)]. Similarly, under the California Civil Discovery Act, a responding party may either object to the production, requiring the propounding party to move to compel, or may file a motion for a protective order [Code Civ.

Proc. § 2031.060(a)].

The California approach is an extension of the existing framework of the Civil Discovery Act. Moreover, the burden of production is consistent with Rule 6 of the Uniform Rules of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, which provides:

> A party on which a request to produce electronically stored information has been served shall, in a timely manner, serve a response on the requesting party. The response must state, with respect to each item or category in the request that inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of the information will be permitted as requested; or any objection to the request and the reasons for the objection.

With its consensus view that any new e-discovery legislation needs to operate within the basic framework of California civil discovery law, and with the Uniform Rules as an overall guide, the Committee determined that production of electronic information should be based on the same standard as production of other documents and things.

[7] Production of Documents "Not Reasonably Accessible"

The amended protective order statute requires production of electronically stored information found by the court to be "not reasonably accessible" under some circumstances. New Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(d), which is similar to the Federal Rules, provides:

> § 2031.060(d). If the party or affected person or organization from whom discovery of electronically stored information is sought establishes that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense, the court may nonetheless order discovery if the requesting party shows cause.

The Committee note states that this provision is based on the NCCUSL Uniform Rules, Rule 8, subdivision (c); however, the Uniform Rules contain a specific balancing test rather than a good cause standard. The Uniform Rules test provides that the court may order the discovery of electronically stored information from sources deemed "not reasonably accessible" because of undue burden or expense if the party requesting discovery shows that the likely benefit of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely burden or expense, taking into account the following:

- Amount in controversy.
- Resources of the parties.
- Importance of the issues.
- Importance of the requested discovery in resolving the issues.

After seeking comments from the public as to whether a good cause standard or a version of the NCCUSL balancing test should be used in new Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(d), the present proposal provides that "the court may ... order discovery if the demanding party shows good cause[.]"

Under the Electronic Discovery Act, new subsection Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(e) provides that if the court finds good cause for production of electronically stored information that is not reasonably accessible, it may set conditions for the discovery of the information, including allocation of the expense of discovery. A similar provision is found in the Federal Rules.

Another new subsection, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.210(d), provides that if a party objects to the discovery of electronically stored information on the ground that it is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense and that the responding party will not search the source in the absence of an agreement with the demanding party or a court order, the responding party must identify in its response the types or categories of sources of electronically stored information that it asserts are not reasonably accessible. By so doing, the responding party preserves any objections it may have relating to that electronically stored information which it asserts is not readily accessible.

The purpose of this latter provision is to provide notice to a propounding party of what types of sources and locations are not being searched for responsive documents. This will permit the parties to meet and confer productively to either resolve the issue or present it to the court for resolution in a more productive manner. In the absence of this provision, it was feared that a party could hide the ball by objecting to discovery on the ground of undue burden; a propounding party would have no way of knowing what the contours of this objection were. For example, a party may object to searching ESI at all on the ground of burden. Such an objection ordinarily would not be reasonable; the burdens of searching various categories of ESI differ and a party should provide some specificity. Taken to its extreme, ESI resident on a computer without a power source might be called "not reasonably accessible." Of course, once power is supplied, the ESI would become reasonably accessible. On the other hand, a party which objects to searching archived backup tapes relating to computer systems which were replaced by the responding party years ago, and for which even putting the backup tapes in a searchable format would be expensive and burdensome, has stated a much more appropriate objection. Providing this type of identification of a category of ESI which will not be searched permits the propounding party to determine quickly which areas are worth pursuing and which are not. Particular objections are preserved for a simple reason: until such time as a responding party actually searches such a source for responsive information, there is typically no feasible way for the responding party to determine whether privileged material is implicated and to determine what, if any, privileges need be asserted.

[8] Frequency of Discovery

Another new subsection, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(f), allows the court to limit the frequency or extent of discovery of electronically stored information, even from a source that is reasonably accessible, if the court determines that one or more of the following conditions exist:

- It is possible to obtain the information from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive;
- The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative;
- The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought; or
- The likely burden or expense outweighs the likely benefit, considering the amount in controversy, resources of the parties, importance of the issues and importance of the requested discovery in resolving the issues.

The Federal Rules contain a similar provision. This is a potentially challenging provision for attorneys unfamiliar with electronic discovery. A disciplined approach to discovery is typically required with electronic information. Some attorneys do not seriously focus on documents until later in the case, as trial approaches. Delay in pursuing documents creates the risk that a court may determine that ample opportunity to pursue discovery existed but was not sought, and that belated efforts therefore will not be permitted.

[9] Subpoenas to Nonparties

An area that is always of significant concern to businesses and individuals is subpoenas. People often have information relevant to cases in which they are not directly involved. Searching for, and producing, this information raises concerns of cost and disruption, as well as confidentiality. Courts are much more likely to be solicitous of claims of burden asserted by non-parties than they might be when a party asserts burden.

The Electronic Discovery Act addresses this issue in the context of electronic discovery by adding a new section to the Civil Discovery Act, Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.8, which is similar in many ways to the section governing production of electronic documents by a party to the litigation.

The parts of Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.8 governing subpoenas that are the same as production rules for parties are as follows:

- A party serving a subpoena requiring production of electronically stored information must specify the form in which each type of information is to be produced.

- If a party responding to a subpoena objects to a specified form for producing electronic information, or if no form is specified, the responding party shall state in its response the form in which it intends to produce each type of information.

- Unless the parties otherwise agree or the court otherwise orders, if a subpoena does not specify form of electronic production, the subpoenaed party must produce the information in a form in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form that is reasonably usable.

- The subpoenaed party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

The parts of Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.8 governing subpoenas that differ from production rules for parties are as follows:

- If necessary, the responding party at the reasonable expense of the requesting party must translate any data compilations included in the demand into reasonably usable form.

- A party serving a subpoena requiring production of electronically stored information must take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena.

- An order of the court requiring compliance with a subpoena must protect a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer from undue burden or expense resulting from compliance.

- If a subpoenaed person notifies the subpoenaing party that electronically stored information produced pursuant to a subpoena is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as attorney work product, the special "claw back" provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.285, discussed in § 7[2], below, are applicable.

These last three rules implement the common sense notion that parties involved in litigation should bear the expense of translating data compilations and should otherwise take reasonable steps to avoid imposing an undue burden on third parties.

Chapter 1 NEW DEVELOPMENTS
PART VIII. California E-Discovery: Analysis of the 2009 Legislation and Rules

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.304

§ 1.304 Document Preservation Obligations

[1] Importance

Document preservation goes to the heart of electronic discovery. If documents are modified, overwritten, deleted, or destroyed, important evidence may be lost and the goals of discovery undermined. However, businesses need latitude to periodically destroy documents not part of reasonably anticipated or active litigation, and not otherwise subject to retention under Sarbanes-Oxley, HIPPA, etc. For example, most businesses maintain backup tapes of their computer systems for the purpose of disaster recovery. These backup tapes are usually overwritten on a regular basis, e.g., every 30 to 45 days. Voicemail systems, both traditional and cellular, tend to overwrite messages unless special steps to preserve messages are taken. Suspending these processes can cause disruption and expense.

[2] Client Notification

The practice of immediately notifying clients to preserve electronic information is already widespread in federal court as a matter of common law. The initial notification to clients about document preservation is no small matter and should be considered carefully by the practitioner. For example, if a client has a routine document destruction policy in place, how much of that policy must be suspended upon notice of a suit or claim? How early should potential document custodians and document collection categories be identified so that routine destruction of these documents is stopped?

Federal common law requires a party to cease destruction of "relevant" information upon knowledge that a claim or case is likely. In many cases this is prior to litigation actually being filed. Importantly, the party's legal counsel is also required to inform his or her client of this duty. Failure by counsel to do so has resulted in sanctions.

It remains to be seen how notification to clients of the duty to preserve documents will develop under California law. Even if the Civil Discovery Act required counsel to immediately notify clients of the duty to preserve, the question of what should be in the notification letter still remains. The full scope of preservation duties will likely develop under California as a matter of common law, as has occurred under federal law. However, it would be wise for practitioners to take appropriate steps when litigation is anticipated or initiated to insure that information likely to become the subject of discovery is not inadvertently lost or modified through routine business operations. As seen in the sample preservation letter in Appendix A, such obligations may appear onerous. Failure to take reasonable steps to preserve evidence, on the other hand, may lead to severe consequences in proving or defending a case.

[3] Development of Common Law Preservation Obligations

Widely-followed case law defining a range of preservation obligations in federal courts is found in four published opinions from the Southern District of New York in Zubulake v. USB Warburg. The principal opinion on affirmative obligations is Zubulake v. UBS Warburg LLC (S.D.N.Y 2003) 220 F.R.D. 212 . Zubulake has been followed by the Southern District of California in Qualcomm Inc. v. Broadcom Corp. (S.D. Cal. 2008) 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 911 , and by the Central District of California in Hous. Rights Ctr. v. Sterling (C.D. Cal. 2005) 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31872 .

Practitioners in California state courts are justifiably hesitant to cite federal sources in support of a California common law argument. California tends to finds its own way in legislation and judicial decisions, and cannot be expected to follow federal common law without good reason. Nevertheless, given the widespread acceptance of the Zubulake decisions, it seems likely that California common law regarding the document preservation duty may develop along similar lines.

The starting point in an analysis of California law is probably Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1 , in which the California Supreme Court declined to adopt a tort remedy for spoliation of evidence, deferring instead to the "potent" sanctions rules governing discovery under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2023 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 et seq.]. The California Supreme Court explained:

> [O]ur discovery laws provide a broad range of sanctions for conduct that amounts to a "misuse of the discovery process."
> Section 2023 of the Code of Civil Procedure gives examples of misuses of discovery... Destroying evidence in response to a discovery request after litigation has commenced would surely be a misuse of discovery within the meaning of section 2023.

See also Electronic Funds Solutions, LLC v. Murphy (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 , in which a California Court of Appeal affirmed a discovery sanction striking a defendant's answer for destruction of electronic evidence.

While neither of these California cases addresses the broader scope of the affirmative duty to preserve, the underlying principles are grounded in similar goals of substantive and procedural fairness. Ambiguity arises, however, from the fact that Cedars-Sinai and Electronic Funds Solutions arise from loss of evidence after litigation has been initiated and discovery served. Less clear is the obligation to preserve discoverable information prior to the commencement of litigation and service of discovery requests.

Given the increasing practice of counsel sending letters to opponents at the outset of litigation demanding document preservation, it seems inevitable that document preservation practices will receive increasing scrutiny in California state courts just as has occurred in federal courts. And given the broad range of sanctionable conduct, as suggested by the California Supreme Court in Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Superior Court, above, document preservation duties may generate the kind of scrutiny no lawyer wants to be on the wrong side of.

[4] Safe Harbor for Inadvertent Destruction of ESI

Federal practitioners are familiar with the idea of a "safe harbor" provision, prohibiting sanctions in the event of inadvertent, good faith destruction of documents during the course of litigation. The Electronic Discovery Act contains a similar provision. Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(i) provides a safe harbor to parties and counsel for failure to provide electronically stored information that is "lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as the result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system."

California state practitioners therefore can assume that good faith mistakes will not be deemed sanctionable conduct. However, the safe harbor defense will likely require a careful explanation of the mistake and why it was in "good faith." Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060(i) states that "[t]his subdivision shall not be construed to alter any existing obligation to preserve discoverable information."

The "safe harbor" provision is developing in federal common law in a way that does not excuse negligence or material oversight [see, e.g., Hous. Rights Ctr. v. Sterling (C.D. Cal. 2005) 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31872] . Prudence suggests cautious expectations about relying too heavily on safe harbor protections.

[5] Duty to Preserve May Be Broader Than Duty to Produce

Finally, it is noteworthy that under federal common law the duty to preserve electronic information is broader than the duty to produce. Advisory Committee Notes to FRCP Rule 26 provide: "A party's identification of sources of electronically stored information as not reasonably accessible does not relieve the party of its common-law or statutory duties to preserve evidence."

This specific issue is not addressed in the new California rules or Judicial Council commentary. Again, prudence dictates caution about the scope of document preservation under California law. It seems likely that the duty to preserve will be interpreted to be broader than the duty to produce. For that reason, a preservation letter should be sent when litigation is anticipated or has commenced. This letter not only serves to advise the client of what steps are necessary in relation to discovery obligations, but may also become important if claims of loss of evidence or spoliation arise later in the case. In recent years, focus on document preservation issues has become a routine area of discovery, and parties seek to score points by establishing that their adversary took no steps to preserve important evidence--even when the party cannot point to any particular evidence which has been lost. A letter or memo to the client putting them on notice of their obligation to preserve ESI will not only serve to avoid this problem, but may also provide the attorney with protection should the client claim that they were not told of their obligations. No one wants these issues to arise for the first time at their client's deposition.

PART VIII. California E-Discovery: Analysis of the 2009 Legislation and Rules

§ 1.305 Meet and Confer Obligations

In addition to the Electronic Discovery Act itself, California Rules of Court, Rule 3.724 has been amended to highlight important obligations of counsel to meet and confer regarding electronic discovery. Rule 3.724 generally requires the parties to meet and confer, in person or by telephone, no later than 30 calendar days before the date set for the initial case management conference (unless the court orders another time period), to consider specified issues [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724]. The amended version of the rule, effective August 14, 2009, specifically requires that the parties consider the following issues relating to e-discovery as part of their obligation to meet and confer [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.724(8) (note that the proposed version of the amendment would have established a separate 45-day meet-and-confer rule for e-discovery, but that period was changed to 30 days in the final version to conform to the general meet-and-confer rule)]:

- Any issue relating to the preservation of discoverable electronically stored information.
- The form or forms in which information will be produced.
- The time within which the information will be produced.
- The scope of discovery of the information.
- The method for asserting or preserving claims of privilege or attorney work product, including whether such claims may be asserted after production.
- The method for asserting or preserving the confidentiality, privacy, trade secrets, or proprietary status of information relating to a party or persons not a party to the civil proceedings.
- How the cost of production of electronically stored information is to be allocated among the parties.
- Any other issues relating to the discovery of electronically stored information, including developing a proposed plan relating to the discovery of the information.

Meet and confer conferences smooth the issues of electronic discovery immensely. Many questions that counsel ask in the abstract about electronic discovery can, and typically are, dealt with successfully in conference.

While the outer boundaries of discovery need to be explored at times, most discovery of electronic information is focused on active data, readily accessible to most producing parties. Both parties can assist the process immensely by disclosing basic information about computer networks and storage that allow the other party to focus requests more intelligently.

Conversely, counsel who wait until the proverbial "last minute" to seriously address discovery may find themselves short on electronic documents and inadequately prepared for depositions, motions and trial.

Cal Rules of Court, Rule 3.728(13) provides that the court's case management order may contain "any additional orders that may be appropriate, including orders on matters listed in rules 3.724 and 3.727." This section provides authority for the court to include provisions relating to e-discovery in its case management order.

As experience in federal courts has shown, strong case management orders are of great value in facilitating electronic discovery. Proper focus on electronic discovery at the early phases of a case pays dividends as the case proceeds.

PART VIII. California E-Discovery: Analysis of the 2009 Legislation and Rules

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.306

§ 1.306 Form in Which Electronic Evidence Must Be Produced

[1] Production Obligations Under California Rules

The Electronic Discovery Act contains somewhat competing provisions governing the form of production. One sees this by comparing the rules for specifying the form of production in a request against the rules for objecting to the form of production in a response.

Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.030(a) has been amended to allow the requesting party to "specify the form in which each type of electronically stored information is to be produced." This provision suggests that the requesting party controls the form of production.

However, a new subsection, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.280(b), allows the responding party to object to a specified form for production and "state in its response the form in which it intends to produce each type of the information." This suggests that the responding party ultimately may control the form of production because if it does not agree with the form specified by the requesting party, it can simply object and specify the form in which it agrees to produce.

Another new subsection, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.280(c), provides that unless the parties agree or the court otherwise orders:

- The responding party must produce the information in a form in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form that is reasonably usable if no production format is specified in the request, and

- A party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

No default form of production is specified in the new rules.

If a dispute develops between the parties as to the form of production--if, for example, the responding party chooses to make a production in a format different from that which was requested and the propounding party is not pleased with the chosen form of production--it is in all parties' interest to promptly present the matter to the court before production is made. Choosing the wrong format could entail great expense if the court orders a subsequent, alternative form of production. It is also possible that a court will refuse to order a new production due to cost concerns even if the court concludes that the responding party was wrong in refusing to produce in the format which was requested by the propounding party. As with many other areas of ESI, it is critical that the parties identify disputes, address them, and present them to the court for resolution where necessary before great expense is incurred.

[2] Native Form Versus "Reasonably Usable" Form

Whether or not a default production form is specified, we expect that debates over the form of production will reduce, in practice, to whether documents are produced in "native format" (including all metadata) or a "reasonably usable form" (not including metadata). Requesting counsel should always consider requesting documents in native format, and should always seek metadata. Because this is likely to be a disputed issue, it is once again imperative for counsel to address it at an early point of the case so that court intervention may be sought if necessary.

Metadata is the hidden information about a document that reveals many things that may be important to litigation, including: file and document history, date of creation, author, editors, dates of access, dates of modification and revision history.

Production in "native" format is almost always cheaper than production in other formats. However, because responding counsel resist producing metadata, the more common current practice is not to produce documents in native format, and instead to incur the additional expense to produce in some other form. In some cases, issues concerning metadata may be minor because of the nature of the case or the value of the case. In other cases, parties will pursue metadata because, for example, it may be critical to determine who accessed and read critical documents. Counsel should note that metadata will not be produced unless affirmative efforts are made to require its production. Attention must be paid to this issue at the earliest point of the discovery process, as metadata may be lost or altered in the absence of preservation, and metadata will not typically be produced unless specifically sought.

A form currently in vogue in federal and state court is to produce electronic documents in "TIFF" format, together with extracted text and a "load file" (computer instructions for loading the data), which can all be matched up and loaded into a litigation software package (such as Concordance or Summation) for review. Parties then agree to retain the original native documents, including metadata, for further possible review.

It is common practice to produce databases in native format. Because databases are constructed in "bits and pieces" of information, it is usually not feasible to print out a database in image format. Most databases can only be meaningfully accessed in native format using search commands such as SQL (search query language). This sometimes requires a reviewing party to obtain a software license from a third party vendor for viewing the database data.

It remains to be seen whether electronic images (TIFF or PDF) will continue to be the accepted standard for production of e-mails and other documents, or whether courts will require production in native format. This is a debate taking place in state and federal courts across the country and will likely continue in California state courts, as well, after adoption of the Electronic Discovery Act.

PART VIII. California E-Discovery: Analysis of the 2009 Legislation and Rules

1-1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 1.307

§ 1.307 Inadvertent Production of Privileged Information

[1] Nature of the Problem

Inadvertent productions of privileged documents are not uncommon in the era of electronic discovery. When a party and reviewing counsel are producing hundreds of thousands of electronic files in one production, it is possible for privileged documents to slip through from time to time. Because of the volume of material which is produced, it is frequently impossible to perform a complete privilege review while still producing documents in a timely manner. The Federal Rules, and the new California law, both provide for a "claw back" as the only practical means of protecting privilege while permitting production of information in litigation [see Fed. R. Civ. Proc., Rule 26(b)(5); Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.285].

It is not unusual for a document which is either marked "attorney-client privileged" on its face to be produced, or for an e-mail, memo, or letter to or from counsel, to be produced as part of a large production. It is vital that counsel for the requesting party be aware of the rules, and advise all paralegals or other staff of how to recognize such documents. Any such documents should immediately be segregated and notice provided to the responding party, so that the responding party can determine whether the production was intentional or inadvertent. No use of such documents should be made until the responding party has had a chance to express its position on the issue and the issue has been resolved between the parties or by the court.

[2] California "Claw Back" Rule

The Electronic Discovery Act deals with this problem by adding an entirely new section to the Civil Discovery Act, Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.285, which works like this:

- If privileged (or attorney work product protected) electronically stored information is discovered to have been produced, the party making the claim may give notice of the privilege claim and the basis for the claim.

- After being notified, the receiving party must "immediately sequester" the information and either return the information (and any copies) or, within 30 days present the information to the court conditionally under seal for a determination of the claim. Until resolution, the receiving party is required to preserve the information and keep it confidential.

- Any receiving party is precluded from using or disclosing the specified information until the claim of privilege is resolved.

This is known as a "claw back" provision, since a party who inadvertently produces an electronic document can simply "claw" or take it back after production without regard to waiver issues.

[3] 30-Day Limitation

It is important that the receiving party move the court to address the privilege question within 30 days, or it will lose the ability to use that document [Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.285(d)(1)]. This is not a lot of time. And since document "claw backs" often occur during depositions, it is critical that deposing counsel not lose track of the 30-day filing period after the deposition is over.

[4] Obligations of Party Receiving Privileged Information

The new California provision discussed above will control inadvertent production insofar as electronically stored information is concerned. However it does not address inadvertent production of other documents and things and does not address any possible affirmative obligations a receiving party's counsel may have if he or she received inadvertently produced information that is obviously privileged.

In Rico v. Mitsubishi Motors Corp. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 807, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 758, 171 P.3d 1092 , the California Supreme Court addressed the affirmative duty of counsel who receive inadvertent productions that are obviously identifiable as confidential or privileged:

> When a lawyer who receives materials that obviously appear to be subject to an attorney-client privilege or otherwise clearly appear to be confidential and privileged and where it is reasonably apparent that the materials were provided or made available through inadvertence, the lawyer receiving such materials should refrain from examining the materials any more than is essential to ascertain if the materials are privileged, and shall immediately notify the sender that he or she possesses material that appears to be privileged. The parties may then proceed to resolve the situation by agreement or may resort to the court for guidance with the benefit of protective orders and other judicial intervention as may be justified.

The new California rules for electronic discovery should be read in context of this duty spelled out by the California Supreme Court. It is not always the case that inadvertent productions are obvious. In fact, some companies seem to have an unspoken policy to include an attorney on many e-mails that are sensitive, but not necessarily privileged.

A good way to deal with the potential conflict in this issue will be to agree among counsel as part of the initial meet and confer conference precisely how all forms of privileged and confidential documents will be dealt with in discovery. Proposed new additions to California Rules of Court, Rule 3.724 (discussed in § 5, above) require this.

Appendix A Sample Preservation Letter

1-A California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Appendix A

Scope

The following form is a sample preservation letter directing an opposing party to preserve electronic evidence. For discussion of preservation letters, see § 3[1], above. A preservation letter should contain the provisions included in this sample.

SAMPLE:

You are hereby given notice to immediately take all steps necessary to prevent the destruction, loss, concealment, or alteration of any paper, document, or electronically stored information ("ESI") and other data or information generated by and/or stored on your computers and storage media (e.g., hard disks, floppy disks, backup tapes, etc.), and e-mail related to (1) _____ [subject matter of lawsuit]; (2) the events and causes of action described in Plaintiffs' Complaint; and (3) ESI and documents you may use to support any defenses you may claim to have in this action.

You should anticipate that much of the information subject to disclosure and responsive to discovery in this action is stored on your current or former computer systems and other media and devices (including personal digital or data assistants, voice-messaging or voice-mail systems, online repositories, and cell phones).

ESI should be afforded the broadest possible definition and includes, but is not limited to, all digital communications (e.g., e-mail, voice mail, instant messaging), word processed documents (e.g. Word and WordPerfect documents and drafts), spreadsheets and tables (e.g. Excel and Lotus 123 worksheets), accounting application data (such as QuickBooks, Money, or Peachtree), image and facsimile files (including PDF, TIFF, JPG, and GIF images), sound recordings (including WAV and MP3 files), video recordings, all databases, all contact and relationship management data, calendar and diary application data, online access data (including temporary, internet files, History, and Cookies), all presentations (including PowerPoint and Corel), all network access and server activity logs, all data created with the use of any Personal Data Assistant (PDA) such as Palm Pilot, HP Jornada, Cassiopeia, or other Windows-based or Pocket PC devices, all CAD files, and all back-up and archival files.

Adequate preservation of ESI requires more than simply refraining from efforts to destroy or dispose of such evidence. You must also intervene to prevent loss due to routine operations and employ proper techniques to safeguard all such evidence.

Because hard copies do not preserve electronic searchability or metadata, they are not an adequate substitute for ESI. If information exists in both electronic and paper form, you should preserve them both.

LITIGATION HOLD

You are requested to immediately initiate a litigation hold for potentially relevant ESI, documents, and tangible things, and to act diligently and in good faith to secure and audit compliance with that litigation hold. You are also requested to preserve and not destroy all passwords, decryption procedures (including, if necessary, the software to decrypt the files), network access codes, ID names, manuals, tutorials, written instructions, decompression or reconstruction software, and any and all other information and things necessary to access, view, and (if necessary) reconstruct any ESI. You should not pack, compress, purge, or dispose of any file or any part thereof.

You are further requested to immediately identify and modify or suspend features of your operations, information systems, and devices that, in routine operations, operate to cause the loss of documents, tangible items, or ESI. Examples of such features and operations include, but are not limited to, purging the contents of e-mail repositories by age, capacity, or other criteria; using data or media wiping, disposal, erasure, or encryption utilities or devices; overwriting, erasing, destroying, or discarding back-up media; re-assigning, re-imaging or disposing of systems, servers, devices, or media; running antivirus or other programs that alter metadata; using metadata stripper utilities; and destroying documents or any ESI by age or other criteria.

SERVERS

With respect to servers like those used to manage electronic mail and network storage, the entire contents of each user's network share and e-mail account should be preserved and not modified.

STORAGE

With respect to on-line storage and/or direct access storage devices attached to your mainframe computers and/or minicomputers, in addition to the above, you are not to modify or delete any ESI, "deleted" files, and/or file fragments existing on the date of this letter's delivery that contain potentially relevant information.

With regard to all electronic media used for off-line storage, including magnetic tapes and cartridges, optical media, electronic media, and other media or combinations of media containing potentially relevant information, you are requested to stop any activity which may result in the loss of any ESI, including rotation, destruction, overwriting and erasure in whole or in part. This request is intended to cover all media used for data or information storage in connection with your computer systems, including magnetic tapes and cartridges, magneto-optical disks, floppy diskettes, and all other media, whether used with personal computers, minicomputers, mainframes or other computers, and whether containing backup and/or archival ESI.

PERSONAL COMPUTERS

You should take immediate steps to preserve all ESI on all personal computers used by your officers, directors and employees, including all secretaries and assistants, that in any way relate to the [subject matter of action], and the events and causes of action described in the Complaint. As to fixed devices, (1) a true and correct copy is to be made of all such ESI, including all active files and completely restored versions of all deleted electronic files and file fragments; (2) full directory listings (including hidden files) for all directories and subdirectories (including hidden directories) on such fixed devices should be written; and (3) all such copies and listings are to be preserved until this litigation is ended. As to floppy diskettes, CDs, tapes, and other non-fixed media relating to this matter, they are to be collected and stored pending resolution of this litigation.

PORTABLE SYSTEMS

In addition to your immediate preservation of ESI, documents and tangible items in your business, on servers and workstations, you should also determine if any home or portable systems may contain potentially relevant data or information. To the extent that officers, board members, or employees have sent or received potentially relevant e-mails or created or reviewed potentially relevant documents away from the office, you must preserve the contents of systems, devices, and media used for these purposes (including not only potentially relevant data from portable and home computers, but also from portable thumb drives, CD-R discs, PDAs, smart phones, voice mailboxes, or other forms of ESI storage). Additionally, if any employees, officers, or directors used online or browser-based e-mail accounts or services to send or receive potentially relevant messages and attachments, the contents of these account mailboxes should be preserved.

EVIDENCE CREATED OR ACQUIRED IN THE FUTURE

With regard to documents, tangible things, and ESI that are created or come into your custody, possession, or control subsequent to the date of delivery of this letter, potentially relevant evidence is to be preserved. You should take all appropriate action to avoid destruction of potentially relevant evidence.

Please forward a copy of this letter to all persons and entities possessing or controlling potentially relevant evidence. Your obligation to preserve potentially relevant evidence is required by law.

Appendix B Comprehensive Instructions for Manner of Production of ESI

1-B California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Appendix B

Scope

The following form is a sample set of instructions setting forth the manner in which ESI should be preserved in connection with requests for production. For discussion of the use of these instructions, see § 3[4], above.

SAMPLE:

When a request specifically seeks DOCUMENTS in electronic form, such DOCUMENTS shall be produced (i) with a load file suitable for loading the data into a litigation database that defines document breaks, attachments, metadata, and other information (identified below) and (ii) with a cross-reference file that facilitates the linking of the produced TIFF or native file with a litigation database; specifically, production to be as follows:

(a) Spreadsheets -- To be produced (i) as a native file, and (ii) with a load file suitable for linking it to a litigation support database that (for authentication) identifies the MD-5 hash value of each file.

(b) Standard Office File Forms (e.g. E-mails, Word Processing Documents, Presentations) -- To be produced (i) in TIFF format, and (ii) with metadata and text searchable information extracted from the native file and produced as fielded metadata. Family relationships among e-mail and attachments are to be maintained.

When any such DOCUMENTS cannot be provided in one of the above manners, as in the case of certain scheduling, accounting, contact management, and database programs (e.g. Primavera, MS Access, Oracle, Microsoft SQL Server), or if Plaintiffs and each Defendant otherwise agree, Plaintiffs and each Defendant will determine another acceptable electronic form for production.

Appendix C Sample ESI Production Protocol

1-C California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated Appendix C

Scope

The following form is a sample ESI protocol. In cases when the parties recognize that issues concerning ESI are present, it is often helpful to negotiate such a protocol. For discussion of the use of such a protocol, see § 3[4], above.

SAMPLE: ESI PRODUCTION PROTOCOL

1. Obligation to Produce Electronically Stored Information. The parties acknowledge and agree that to the extent they possess electronically stored information ("ESI") responsive to a document request, that ESI is within the scope of matters subject to discovery in this case.

2. Load Files. Except for ESI described in sections 3(b) and (c) below, ESI will be produced in electronic format, with files suitable for loading into a litigation support database. The load files will define document breaks, attachments and other information identified below.

(a) Document Cross-Reference File. The producing party will provide a cross-reference file that identifies the start and end of the document, its attachments and its corresponding metadata.

(b) Cross-Reference or Linking File. The producing party will also provide a cross-reference file that facilitates the linking of the produced image or native file with the litigation database. This cross-reference file will contain fields such as the unique document ID (i.e., BegBates) and the file path of the corresponding image or native file. The producing party may provide this information either in a litigation database format or as a standard delimited ASCII text file.

3. Categories of Production of ESI. ESI will be produced as follows, depending on its classification.

(a) Production of ESI as TIFF Images With Metadata and Extracted Text. Documents created in standard office automation file formats (including but not limited to Microsoft Word or WordPerfect documents) and ESI that can practicably be converted into TIFF format will be produced as single-page TIFF Group IV images, with any available fielded metadata and text searchable information extracted from the native documents.

(i) Bates Numbering. The producing party will brand all TIFF images in the lower right-hand corner with its corresponding bates number, using a consistent font type and size. The Bates number must not obscure any part of the underlying image.

(ii) File Names. Image file names will be identical to the corresponding bates numbered images, with a ".tif" file extension.

(iii) Confidentiality Endorsements. The producing party will brand any confidentiality or similar endorsements in a corner of the TIFF image. Those endorsements must be in a consistent font type and size, and must not obscure any part of the underlying image or Bates number.

(iv) Production of Extracted Full Text. The producing party will provide extracted full text (i.e., text extracted from ESI) for all material originating as ESI in a text file corresponding to a single page of a document. The full text file name will be composed of the Bates number of the associated document, with a ".txt" file extension. When a party is unable to produce extracted full text, it will provide an explanation of that inability with its document production.

(v) Production of Metadata. The producing party will provide the following metadata, as applicable, for all ESI: start bates, end bates, start attachment, end attachment, custodian or source, original file path, original file name, file type/file extension, MD-5 hash value, title, creation date, creation time, page count, last modification date, last modification time, and last saved by name.

(vi) Metadata for E-Mail. In addition to the metadata to be produced for all ESI, for all e-mail, the producing party will also produce the following as fielded metadata: subject, author, recipients, from, to, copyees, blind copyees, date sent, time sent, date received, time received, MD-5 hash value, attachment file name, begin attachment, and end attachment. Family relationships among e-mail and attachments will be maintained by ensuring that attachments immediately follow their parent e-mail, and setting the "begin attachment" and "end attachment" metadata fields appropriately.

(vii) Explanation of Inability to Produce Metadata. When a party is unable to produce metadata for a particular field, it will provide an explanation of that inability with its document production.

(viii) Redaction. If a file that originates in ESI needs to be redacted before production, the file will be rendered in TIFF, and the TIFF will be redacted and produced. However, to the extent that the text is searchable in the native format, the producing party will still provide searchable text for those portions of the document that have not been redacted.

(b) Production of Native Format Documents That Are Impractical to Convert to TIFF. ESI that is not practical to convert to TIFF may be produced using one of the two following methods, which method will be subject to meet and confer between the parties.

(i) Spreadsheets that are Impractical to Convert to TIFF. ESI that is not practical to convert to TIFF (for example, spreadsheets) may be produced in electronic format suitable for loading to a litigation support database with links to the native files.

(A) Identification. ESI produced in native file format will be assigned a unique DocID number within the litigation database.

(B) File Names. File names will be identical to the DocID number, followed by the original file name and file extension.

(C) Authentication. The producing party will provide a litigation database load file with separately fielded data, which will contain, as one of the fields, the MD-5 hash value of each file produced in native format.

(ii) ESI That is Impractical to Produce with Links to a Database. The parties understand and acknowledge that certain categories of ESI are structurally complex and do not lend themselves to production as native format documents with links to a litigation database. For example, in some instances renaming and/or linking a native document comprised of subparts will render the document unusable. After meet and confer, the parties may agree to produce these types of documents in native form, accompanied with a bates number and MD-5 hash value, but separate from a litigation support database. In those instances, if a propounding party or its experts lack access to proprietary software needed to review the producing party's ESI in native format, the parties will meet and confer to obtain a resolution which allows that party to view the affected documents.

(iii) Encrypted or Password-Protected ESI. For any ESI that exists in encrypted format or is password-protected, the producing party will provide the propounding party a means to gain access to those native files (for example, by supplying passwords).

(c) Reports in Lieu of Native Production. If a party believes that it would be impractical to produce ESI in native format because of complexities associated with certain scheduling programs (such as Primavera), accounting systems, mapping systems, and/or other databases (such as MS Access, Oracle, and Microsoft SQL Server), it will so notify the propounding party and will inform the propounding party whether it has generated reports in the normal course of business using those programs or systems. In any such instance, the parties will meet and confer concerning the manner of production of those reports.

(d) Production of Pictures/Images. Any photographic images created and/or maintained in electronic format will be produced in that format.

4. Production Media. The producing party will use the appropriate electronic media (CD, DVD or hard drive) for its ESI production, and will cooperate in good faith to use the highest-capacity available media to minimize associated overhead. The producing party will label the physical media with the producing party, production date, media volume name, and document number range.

5. Avoidance of Duplicate Production. Each producing party will take all reasonable steps to reduce duplication of ESI. De-duplication will be performed within a custodian. The producing party will maintain references to all removed duplicate files.

Appendix D contains the text of the principal California statutes relevant to the discovery of electronically stored information. It incorporates all codified legislative changes enacted in 2009 as part of the California Electronic Discovery Act [Stats. 2009 ch. 5], and includes relevant code sections that are discussed in this pamphlet even though they are unaffected by the 2009 legislation. The headings appearing in boldface type at the beginning of each code section are prepared by the publisher for convenience of the reader and do not form a part of the actual text of the section as enacted or amended by the legislature.

Immediately following each code section, after the designation Leg.H., is a chronological list of all statutes affecting the section since its enactment. Language deleted by the 2009 legislative amendments is indicated by bracketed numbers (e.g., "[1]") in the section at the point where the deletion was made, with the deleted language appearing in small type following the section. Language added by the 2009 legislation is indicated in boldface type.

Miscellaneous Provisions

TITLE 3
OF THE PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE

CHAPTER 2
MEANS OF PRODUCTION

§ 1985.8. Subpoena--Electronically Stored Information; Access to Information by Party Serving Subpoena.

(a) (1) A subpoena in a civil proceeding may require that electronically stored information, as defined in Section 2016.020, be produced and that the party serving the subpoena, or someone acting on the party's request, be permitted to inspect, copy, test, or sample the information.

(2) Any subpoena seeking electronically stored information shall comply with the requirements of this chapter.

(b) A party serving a subpoena requiring production of electronically stored information may specify the form or forms in which each type of information is to be produced.

(c) Unless the subpoenaing party and the subpoenaed party otherwise agree or the court otherwise orders, the following shall apply:

(1) If a subpoena requiring production of electronically stored information does not specify a form or forms for producing a type of electronically stored information, the person subpoenaed shall produce the information in the form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form that is reasonably usable.

(2) A subpoenaed person need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

(d) The subpoenaed person opposing the production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of electronically stored information on the basis that information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense shall bear the burden of demonstrating that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense.

(e) If the person from whom discovery of electronically stored information is subpoenaed establishes that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense, the court may nonetheless order discovery if the subpoenaing party shows good cause, subject to any limitations imposed under subdivision (h).

(f) If the court finds good cause for the production of electronically stored information from a source that is not reasonably accessible, the court may set conditions for the discovery of the electronically stored information, including allocation of the expense of discovery.

(g) If necessary, the subpoenaed person, at the reasonable expense of the subpoenaing party, shall, through detection devices, translate any data compilations included in the subpoena into a reasonably usable form.

(h) The court shall limit the frequency or extent of discovery of electronically stored information, even from a source that is reasonably accessible, if the court determines that any of the following conditions exists:

(1) It is possible to obtain the information from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive.

(2) The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative.

(3) The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought.

(4) The likely burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs the likely benefit, taking into account the amount in controversy, the resources of the parties, the importance of the issues in the litigation, and the importance of the requested discovery in resolving the issues.

(i) If a subpoenaed person notifies the subpoenaing party that electronically stored information produced pursuant to a subpoena is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as attorney work product, as described in Section 2031.285, the provisions of Section 2031.285 shall apply.

(j) A party serving a subpoena requiring the production of electronically stored information shall take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena.

(k) An order of the court requiring compliance with a subpoena issued under this section shall protect a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer from undue burden or expense resulting from compliance.

(l) (1) Absent exceptional circumstances, the court shall not impose sanctions on a subpoenaed person or any attorney of a subpoenaed person for failure to provide electronically stored information that has been lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as the result of the routine, good faith operation of an electronic information system.

(2) This subdivision shall not be construed to alter any obligation to preserve discoverable information. Leg.H. 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 2, effective June 29, 2009.

TITLE 4
CIVIL DISCOVERY ACT

CHAPTER 1
GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 2016.020. Definitions.

As used in this title:

(a) "Action" includes a civil action and a special proceeding of a civil nature.

(b) "Court" means the trial court in which the action is pending, unless otherwise specified.

(c) "Document" and "writing" mean a writing, as defined in Section 250 of the Evidence Code.

(d) "Electronic" means relating to technology having electrical, digital, magnetic, wireless, optical, electromagnetic, or similar capabilities.

(e) "Electronically stored information" means information that is stored in an electronic medium. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 3, effective June 29, 2009.

CHAPTER 2
SCOPE OF DISCOVERY

ARTICLE 1
General Provisions

§ 2017.010. What Matters May Be Subject to Discovery.

Unless otherwise limited by order of the court in accordance with this title, any party may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action or to the determination of any motion made in that action, if the matter either is itself admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Discovery may relate to the claim or defense of the party seeking discovery or of any other party to the action. Discovery may be obtained of the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter, as well as of the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any document, tangible thing, or land or other property. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005.

§ 2017.020. When Court May Limit Scope of Discovery; Motion for Protective Order; Monetary Sanction.

(a) The court shall limit the scope of discovery if it determines that the burden, expense, or intrusiveness of that discovery clearly outweighs the likelihood that the information sought will lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The court may make this determination pursuant to a motion for protective order by a party or other affected person. This motion shall be accompanied by a meet and confer declaration under Section 2016.040.

(b) The court shall impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010) against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully makes or opposes a motion for a protective order, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005.

CHAPTER 14
INSPECTION AND PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS, TANGIBLE THINGS, LAND, AND OTHER PROPERTY

ARTICLE 1
Inspection Demand

§ 2031.010. Right to Discovery by Inspecting, Copying, Testing, or Sampling Documents, Tangible Things, Land or Other Property, and Electronically Stored Information.

(a) Any party may obtain discovery within the scope delimited by Chapters 2 (commencing with Section 2017.010) and 3 (commencing with Section 2017.710), and subject to the restrictions set forth in Chapter 5 (commencing with Section 2019.010), by inspecting, copying, testing, or sampling documents, tangible things, [1] land or other property [2], and electronically stored information in the possession, custody, or control of any other party to the action.

(b) A party may demand that any other party produce and permit the party making the demand, or someone acting on that party's behalf, to inspect and to copy a document that is in the possession, custody, or control of the party on whom the demand is made.

(c) A party may demand that any other party produce and permit the party making the demand, or someone acting on that party's behalf, to inspect and to photograph, test, or sample any tangible things that are in the possession, custody, or control of the party on whom the demand is made.

(d) A party may demand that any other party allow the party making the demand, or someone acting on that party's behalf, to enter on any land or other property that is in the possession, custody, or control of the party on whom the demand is made, and to inspect and to measure, survey, photograph, test, or sample the land or other property, or any designated object or operation on it.

(e) A party may demand that any other party produce and permit the party making the demand, or someone acting on that party's behalf, to inspect, copy, test, or sample electronically stored information in the possession, custody, or control of the party on whom demand is made. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 4, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.020. Demand for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling by Defendant Authorized at Any Time;

When Plaintiff May Make Demand for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling.

(a) A defendant may make a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling without leave of court at any time.

(b) A plaintiff may make a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling without leave of court at any time that is 10 days after the service of the summons on, or appearance by, the party to whom the demand is directed, whichever occurs first.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivision (b), in an unlawful detainer action or other proceeding under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 1159) of Title 3 of Part 3, a plaintiff may make a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling without leave of court at any time that is five days after service of the summons on, or appearance by, the party to whom the demand is directed, whichever occurs first.

(d) Notwithstanding subdivisions (b) and (c), on motion with or without notice, the court, for good cause shown, may grant leave to a plaintiff to make [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling at an earlier time. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 113 (AB 1126) § 9, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 5, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.020. 2009 Deletes. [1] an inspection

§ 2031.030. Format and Requirements for Demands for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling.

(a) (1) A party demanding [1] inspection, copying, testing, or sampling shall number each set of demands consecutively.

(2) A party demanding inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of electronically stored information may specify the form or forms in which each type of electronically stored information is to be produced.

(b) In the first paragraph immediately below the title of the case, there shall appear the identity of the demanding party, the set number, and the identity of the responding party.

(c) Each demand in a set shall be separately set forth, identified by number or letter, and shall do all of the following:

(1) Designate the documents, tangible things, [2] land or other property, or electronically stored information to be inspected, copied, tested, or sampled either by specifically describing each individual item or by reasonably particularizing each category of item.

(2) Specify a reasonable time for the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling that is at least 30 days after service of the demand, unless the court for good cause shown has granted leave to specify an earlier date. In an unlawful detainer action or other proceeding under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 1159) of Title 3 of Part 3, the demand shall specify a reasonable time for the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling that is at least five days after service of the demand, unless the court, for good cause shown, has granted leave to specify an earlier date.

(3) Specify a reasonable place for making the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, and performing any related activity.

(4) Specify any inspection, copying, testing, sampling, or related activity that is being demanded [3], as well as the manner in which that [4] activity will be performed, and whether that activity will permanently alter or destroy the item involved. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 113 (AB 1126) § 10, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 6, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.050. When Supplemental Demand May Be Propounded.

(a) In addition to the [1] demands for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling permitted by this chapter, a party may propound a supplemental demand to inspect, copy, test, or sample any later acquired or discovered documents, tangible things, [2] land or other property [3], or electronically stored information in the possession, custody, or control of the party on whom the demand is made.

(b) A party may propound a supplemental [4] demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling twice before the initial setting of a trial date, and, subject to the time limits on discovery proceedings and motions provided in Chapter 8 (commencing with Section 2024.010), once after the initial setting of a trial date.

(c) Notwithstanding subdivisions (a) and (b), on motion, for good cause shown, the court may grant leave to a party to propound an additional number of supplemental demands for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 8, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.060. Motion for Protective Order; What Protective Order May Provide; Denial of Protective Order; Monetary Sanction.

(a) When an inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of documents, tangible things [1], places, or electronically stored information has been demanded, the party to whom the demand has been directed, and any other party or affected person [2], may promptly move for a protective order. This motion shall be accompanied by a meet and confer declaration under Section 2016.040.

(b) The court, for good cause shown, may make any order that justice requires to protect any party or other [3] person from unwarranted annoyance, embarrassment, or oppression, or undue burden and expense. This protective order may include, but is not limited to, one or more of the following directions:

(1) That all or some of the items or categories of items in the [4] demand need not be produced or made available at all.

(2) That the time specified in Section 2030.260 to respond to the set of [5] demands, or to a particular item or category in the set, be extended.

(3) That the place of production be other than that specified in the [6] demand.

(4) That the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling be made only on specified terms and conditions.

(5) That a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be disclosed, or be disclosed only to specified persons or only in a specified way.

(6) That the items produced be sealed and thereafter opened only on order of the court.

(c) The party or affected person who seeks a protective order regarding the production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of electronically stored information on the basis that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense shall bear the burden of demonstrating that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense.

(d) If the party or affected person from whom discovery of electronically stored information is sought establishes that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense, the court may nonetheless order discovery if the demanding party shows good cause, subject to any limitations imposed under subdivision (f).

(e) If the court finds good cause for the production of electronically stored information from a source that is not reasonably accessible, the court may set conditions for the discovery of the electronically stored information, including allocation of the expense of discovery.

(f) The court shall limit the frequency or extent of discovery of electronically stored information, even from a source that is reasonably accessible, if the court determines that any of the following conditions exist:

(1) It is possible to obtain the information from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive.

(2) The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative.

(3) The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought.

(4) The likely burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs the likely benefit, taking into account the amount in controversy, the resources of the parties, the importance of the issues in the litigation, and the importance of the requested discovery in resolving the issues.

(g) If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the court may order that the party to whom the demand was directed provide or permit the discovery against which protection was sought on terms and conditions that are just.

[7] (h) Except as provided in subdivision (i), the court shall impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010) against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully makes or opposes a motion for a protective order, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust.

(i) (1) Notwithstanding subdivision (h), absent exceptional circumstances, the court shall not impose sanctions on a party or any attorney of a party for failure to provide electronically stored information that has been lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as the result of the routine, good faith operation of an electronic information system.

(2) This subdivision shall not be construed to alter any obligation to preserve discoverable information. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 9, effective June 29, 2009.

ARTICLE 2
Response to Inspection Demand

§ 2031.210. Nature and Format of Response to Demand for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling.

(a) The party to whom [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling has been directed shall respond separately to each item or category of item by any of the following:

(1) A statement that the party will comply with the particular demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling by the date set for the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling pursuant to paragraph (2) of subdivision (c) of Section 2031.030 and any related activities.

(2) A representation that the party lacks the ability to comply with the demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of a particular item or category of item.

(3) An objection to the particular demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling.

(b) In the first paragraph of the response immediately below the title of the case, there shall appear the identity of the responding party, the set number, and the identity of the demanding party.

(c) Each statement of compliance, each representation, and each objection in the response shall bear the same number and be in the same sequence as the corresponding item or category in the demand, but the text of that item or category need not be repeated.

(d) If a party objects to the discovery of electronically stored information on the grounds that it is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense and that the responding party will not search the source in the absence of an agreement with the demanding party or court order, the responding party shall identify in its response the types or categories of sources of electronically stored information that it asserts are not reasonably accessible. By objecting and identifying information of a type or category of source or sources that are not reasonably accessible, the responding party preserves any objections it may have relating to that electronically stored information. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 738 (AB 1248) § 7, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 10, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.210. 2009 Deletes. [1] an inspection

§ 2031.220. Statement Regarding Compliance in Whole or in Part.

A statement that the party to whom [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling has been directed will comply with the particular demand shall state that the production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, and related activity demanded, will be allowed either in whole or in part, and that all documents or things in the demanded category that are in the possession, custody, or control of that party and to which no objection is being made will be included in the production. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 11, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.220. 2009 Deletes. [1] an inspection

§ 2031.230. Representation of Inability to Comply.

A representation of inability to comply with the particular demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling shall affirm that a diligent search and a reasonable inquiry has been made in an effort to comply with that demand. This statement shall also specify whether the inability to comply is because the particular item or category has never existed, has been destroyed, has been lost, misplaced, or stolen, or has never been, or is no longer, in the possession, custody, or control of the responding party. The statement shall set forth the name and address of any natural person or organization known or believed by that party to have possession, custody, or control of that item or category of item. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 12, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.240. Statements Regarding Demand That Is Objectionable in Whole or in Part.

(a) If only part of an item or category of item in [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling is objectionable, the response shall contain a statement of compliance, or a representation of inability to comply with respect to the remainder of that item or category.

(b) If the responding party objects to the demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of an item or category of item, the response shall do both of the following:

(1) Identify with particularity any document, tangible thing, [2] land, or electronically stored information falling within any category of item in the demand to which an objection is being made.

(2) Set forth clearly the extent of, and the specific ground for, the objection. If an objection is based on a claim of privilege, the particular privilege invoked shall be stated. If an objection is based on a claim that the information sought is protected work product under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 2018.010), that claim shall be expressly asserted. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 13, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.240. 2009 Deletes. [1] an inspection [2] or § 2031.250. Signing of Response to Demand.

(a) The party to whom the demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling is directed shall sign the response under oath unless the response contains only objections.

(b) If that party is a public or private corporation or a partnership or association or governmental agency, one of its officers or agents shall sign the response under oath on behalf of that party. If the officer or agent signing the response on behalf of that party is an attorney acting in that capacity for a party, that party waives any lawyer-client privilege and any protection for work product under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 2018.010) during any subsequent discovery from that attorney concerning the identity of the sources of the information contained in the response.

(c) The attorney for the responding party shall sign any responses that contain an objection. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 14, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.260. Time for Service of Response; Unlawful Detainer Action.

(a) Within 30 days after service of [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, the party to whom the demand is directed shall serve the original of the response to it on the party making the demand, and a copy of the response on all other parties who have appeared in the action, unless on motion of the party making the demand, the court has shortened the time for response, or unless on motion of the party to whom the demand has been directed, the court has extended the time for response.

(b) Notwithstanding subdivision (a), in an unlawful detainer action or other proceeding under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 1159) of Title 3 of Part 3, the party to whom [2] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling is directed shall have at least five days from the date of service of the demand to respond, unless on motion of the party making the demand, the court has shortened the time for the response, or unless on motion of the party to whom the demand has been directed, the court has extended the time for response. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 113 (AB 1126) § 11, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 15, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.270. Extension of Date for Inspection or Time for Service of Response; Written Confirmation of Agreement.

(a) The party demanding [1] inspection, copying, testing, or sampling and the responding party may agree to extend the date for the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling or the time for service of a response to a set of [2] demands, or to particular items or categories of items in a set, to a date or dates beyond those provided in Sections 2031.030, 2031.210, 2031.260, and 2031.280.

(b) This agreement may be informal, but it shall be confirmed in a writing that specifies the extended date for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, or for the service of a response.

(c) Unless this agreement expressly states otherwise, it is effective to preserve to the responding party the right to respond to any item or category of item in the demand to which the agreement applies in any manner specified in Sections 2031.210, 2031.220, 2031.230, 2031.240, and 2031.280. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 738 (AB 1248) § 8, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 16, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.280. Production of Documents--Form; Date Specified; Production of Electronically Stored Information; Translation; Expense.

(a) Any documents produced in response to [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling shall either be produced as they are kept in the usual course of business, or be organized and labeled to correspond with the categories in the demand.

(b) The documents shall be produced on the date specified in the [2] demand pursuant to paragraph (2) of subdivision (c) of Section 2031.030, unless an objection has been made to that date. If the date for inspection has been extended pursuant to Section 2031.270, the documents shall be produced on the date agreed to pursuant to that section.

(c) If a party responding to a demand for production of electronically stored information objects to a specified form for producing the information, or if no form is specified in the demand, the responding party shall state in its response the form in which it intends to produce each type of information.

(d) Unless the parties otherwise agree or the court otherwise orders, the following shall apply:

(1) If a demand for production does not specify a form or forms for producing a type of electronically stored information, the responding party shall produce the information in the form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a form that is reasonably usable.

(2) A party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

(e) If necessary, the responding party at the reasonable expense of the demanding party shall, through detection devices, translate any data compilations included in the demand into reasonably usable form. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2007 ch. 738 (AB 1248) § 9, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 17, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.285. Production of Electronically Stored Information--Claim of Privilege or of Protection as Attorney Work Product; Notification to Receiving Party; Receiving Party's Responsibilities; Preclusion From Using or Disclosing Specified Information; Resolution.

(a) If electronically stored information produced in discovery is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as attorney work product, the party making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for the claim.

(b) After being notified of a claim of privilege or of protection under subdivision (a), a party that received the information shall immediately sequester the information and either return the specified information and any copies that may exist or present the information to the court conditionally under seal for a determination of the claim.

(c) (1) Prior to the resolution of the motion brought under subdivision (d), a party shall be precluded from using or disclosing the specified information until the claim of privilege is resolved.

(2) A party who received and disclosed the information before being notified of a claim of privilege or of protection under subdivision (a) shall, after that notification, immediately take reasonable steps to retrieve the information.

(d) (1) If the receiving party contests the legitimacy of a claim of privilege or protection, he or she may seek a determination of the claim from the court by making a motion within 30 days of receiving the claim and presenting the information to the court conditionally under seal.

(2) Until the legitimacy of the claim of privilege or protection is resolved, the receiving party shall preserve the information and keep it confidential and shall be precluded from using the information in any manner. Leg.H. 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 18, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.290. Retention of Demand for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling, Proof of Service, and Response by Demanding Party.

(a) The [1] demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, and the response to it, shall not be filed with the court.

(b) The party demanding an inspection, copying, testing, or sampling shall retain both the original of the [2] demand, with the original proof of service affixed to it, and the original of the sworn response until six months after final disposition of the action. At that time, both originals may be destroyed, unless the court, on motion of any party and for good cause shown, orders that the originals be preserved for a longer period. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 19, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.300. Effect of Failure to Serve Timely Response to Demand for Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling; Motion for Order; Monetary and Other Sanctions.

If a party to whom [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling is directed fails to serve a timely response to it, the following rules shall apply:

(a) The party to whom the [2] demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling is directed waives any objection to the demand, including one based on privilege or on the protection for work product under Chapter 4 (commencing with Section 2018.010). The court, on motion, may relieve that party from this waiver on its determination that both of the following conditions are satisfied:

(1) The party has subsequently served a response that is in substantial compliance with Sections 2031.210, 2031.220, 2031.230, 2031.240, and 2031.280.

(2) The party's failure to serve a timely response was the result of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect.

(b) The party making the demand may move for an order compelling response to the [3] demand.

(c) Except as provided in subdivision (d), the court shall impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010) against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully makes or opposes a motion to compel a response to [4] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust. If a party then fails to obey the order compelling a response, the court may make those orders that are just, including the imposition of an issue sanction, an evidence sanction, or a terminating sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010). In lieu of or in addition to this sanction, the court may impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010).

(d) (1) Notwithstanding subdivision (c), absent exceptional circumstances, the court shall not impose sanctions on a party or any attorney of a party for failure to provide electronically stored information that has been lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as a result of the routine, good faith operation of an electronic information system.

(2) This subdivision shall not be construed to alter any obligation to preserve discoverable information. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2005 ch. 22 (SB 1108) § 23, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 20, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.300. 2009 Deletes. [1] an inspection [2] inspection [3] inspection [4] an inspection

§ 2031.310. Motion for Order Compelling Further Response; Grounds; Notice; Waiver; Monetary and Other Sanctions.

(a) On receipt of a response to [1] a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, the demanding party [2] may move for an order compelling further response to the demand if the demanding party deems that any of the following apply:

(1) A statement of compliance with the demand is incomplete.

(2) A representation of inability to comply is inadequate, incomplete, or evasive.

(3) An objection in the response is without merit or too general.

(b) A motion under subdivision (a) shall comply with both of the following:

(1) The motion shall set forth specific facts showing good cause justifying the discovery sought by the [3] demand.

(2) The motion shall be accompanied by a meet and confer declaration under Section 2016.040.

(c) Unless notice of this motion is given within 45 days of the service of the response, or any supplemental response, or on or before any specific later date to which the demanding party and the responding party have agreed in writing, the demanding party waives any right to compel a further response to the [4] demand.

(d) In a motion under subdivision (a) relating to the production of electronically stored information, the party or affected person objecting to or opposing the production, inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of electronically stored information on the basis that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of the undue burden or expense shall bear the burden of demonstrating that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense.

(e) If the party or affected person from whom discovery of electronically stored information is sought establishes that the information is from a source that is not reasonably accessible because of the undue burden or expense, the court may nonetheless order discovery if the demanding party shows good cause, subject to any limitations imposed under subdivision (g).

(f) If the court finds good cause for the production of electronically stored information from a source that is not reasonably accessible, the court may set conditions for the discovery of the electronically stored information, including allocation of the expense of discovery.

(g) The court shall limit the frequency or extent of discovery of electronically stored information, even from a source that is reasonably accessible, if the court determines that any of the following conditions exists:

(1) It is possible to obtain the information from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive.

(2) The discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative.

(3) The party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity by discovery in the action to obtain the information sought.

(4) The likely burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs the likely benefit, taking into account the amount in controversy, the resources of the parties, the importance of the issues in the litigation, and the importance of the requested discovery in resolving the issues.

(h) Except as provided in subdivision (j), the court shall impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010) against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully makes or opposes a motion to compel further response to [5] a demand, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust.

[6] (i) Except as provided in subdivision (j), if a party fails to obey an order compelling further response, the court may make those orders that are just, including the imposition of an issue sanction, an evidence sanction, or a terminating sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010). In lieu of or in addition to that sanction, the court may impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010).

(j) (1) Notwithstanding subdivisions (h) and (i), absent exceptional circumstances, the court shall not impose sanctions on a party or any attorney of a party for failure to provide electronically stored information that has been lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as the result of the routine, good faith operation of an electronic information system.

(2) This subdivision shall not be construed to alter any obligation to preserve discoverable information. Leg.H. 2004 ch. 182 (AB 3081), operative July 1, 2005, 2009 ch. 5 (AB 5) § 21, effective June 29, 2009.

§ 2031.320. Motion for Order Compelling Compliance on Failure to Permit Inspection, Copying, Testing, or Sampling in Accordance With Response; Monetary and Other Sanctions.

(a) If a party filing a response to a demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling under [1] Sections 2031.210, 2031.220, 2031.230, 2031.240, and 2031.280 thereafter fails to permit the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling in accordance with that party's statement of compliance, the demanding party [2] may move for an order compelling compliance.

(b) Except as provided in subdivision (d), the court shall impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010) against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully makes or opposes a motion to compel compliance with [3] a demand, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust.

(c) Except as provided in subdivision (d), if a party then fails to obey an order compelling inspection, copying, testing, or sampling, the court may make those orders that are just, including the imposition of an issue sanction, an evidence sanction, or a terminating sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010). In lieu of or in addition to that sanction, the court may impose a monetary sanction under Chapter 7 (commencing with Section 2023.010).

(d) (1) Notwithstanding subdivisions (b) and (c), absent exceptional circumstances, the court shall not impose sanctions on a party or any attorney of a party for failure to provide electronically stored information that has been lost, damaged, altered, or overwritten as the result of the routine, good faith operation of an electronic information system.

(2) This subdivision shall not be construed to alter any obligation to preserve discoverable information. Leg.H.

Case Management

Rule 3.724. Duty to meet and confer

Unless the court orders another time period, no later than 30 calendar days before the date set for the initial case management conference, the parties must meet and confer, in person or by telephone, to consider each of the issues identified in rule 3.727 and, in addition, to consider the following:

(1) Resolving any discovery disputes and setting a discovery schedule;

(2) Identifying and, if possible, informally resolving any anticipated motions;

(3) Identifying the facts and issues in the case that are uncontested and may be the subject of stipulation;

(4) Identifying the facts and issues in the case that are in dispute;

(5) Determining whether the issues in the case can be narrowed by eliminating any claims or defenses by means of a motion or otherwise;

(6) Determining whether settlement is possible;

(7) Identifying the dates on which all parties and their attorneys are available or not available for trial, including the reasons for unavailability; [1]

(8) Any issues relating to the discovery of electronically stored information, including:

(A) Any issues relating to the preservation of discoverable electronically stored information;

(B) The form or forms in which information will be produced;

(C) The time within which the information will be produced;

(D) The scope of discovery of the information;

(E) The method for asserting or preserving claims of privilege or attorney work product, including whether such claims may be asserted after production;

(F) The method for asserting or preserving the confidentiality, privacy, trade secrets, or proprietary status of information relating to a party or person not a party to the civil proceedings;

(G) How the cost of production of electronically stored information is to be allocated among the parties; and

(H) Any other issues relating to the discovery of electronically stored information, including developing a proposed plan relating to the discovery of the information; and

[2] (9) Other relevant matters. 16

Rule 3.724. 2009 Deletes. [1] and [2] (8)

Rule 3.728. Case management order

The case management conference must be conducted in the manner provided by local rule. The court must enter a case management order setting a schedule for subsequent proceedings and otherwise providing for the management of the case. The order may include appropriate provisions, such as:

(1) Referral of the case to judicial arbitration or other alternative dispute resolution process;

(2) A date for completion of the judicial arbitration process or other alternative dispute resolution process if the case has been referred to such a process;

(3) In the event that a trial date has not previously been set, a date certain for trial if the case is ready to be set for trial;

(4) Whether the trial will be a jury trial or a nonjury trial;

(5) The identity of each party demanding a jury trial;

(6) The estimated length of trial;

(7) Whether all parties necessary to the disposition of the case have been served or have appeared;

(8) The dismissal or severance of unserved or not-appearing defendants from the action;

(9) The names and addresses of the attorneys who will try the case;

(10) The date, time, and place for a mandatory settlement conference as provided in rule 3.1380;

(11) The date, time, and place for the final case management conference before trial if such a conference is required by the court or the judge assigned to the case;

(12) The date, time, and place of any further case management conferences or review; and

(13) Any additional orders that may be appropriate, including orders on matters listed in rules 3.724 and 3.727.

Rule 3.728 adopted effective January 1, 2007.

TITLE I
Scope of Rules; Form of Action

Rule 1. Scope and Purpose

These rules govern the procedure in all civil actions and proceedings in the United States district courts, except as stated in Rule 81. They should be construed and administered to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding. [Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Dec. 29, 1948, effective Oct. 20, 1949; Feb. 28, 1966, effective July 1, 1966; Apr. 22, 1993, effective Dec. 1, 1993; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 1

The language of Rule 1 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

The merger of law, equity, and admiralty practice is complete. There is no need to carry forward the phrases that initially accomplished the merger.

The former reference to "suits of a civil nature" is changed to the more modern "actions and proceedings." This change does not affect such questions as whether the Civil Rules apply to summary proceedings created by statute. See SEC v. McCarthy, 322 F.3d 650 (9th Cir. 2003) ; see also New Hampshire Fire Ins. Co. v. Scanlon, 362 U.S. 404 (1960) .

TITLE III
Pleadings and Motions

Rule 16. Pretrial Conferences; Scheduling; Management

(a) Purposes of a Pretrial Conference. In any action, the court may order the attorneys and any unrepresented parties to appear for one or more pretrial conferences for such purposes as:

(1) expediting disposition of the action;

(2) establishing early and continuing control so that the case will not be protracted because of lack of management;

(3) discouraging wasteful pretrial activities;

(4) improving the quality of the trial through more thorough preparation; and

(5) facilitating settlement.

(b) Scheduling.

(1) Scheduling Order. Except in categories of actions exempted by local rule, the district judge--or a magistrate judge when authorized by local rule--must issue a scheduling order:

(A) after receiving the parties' report under Rule 26(f); or

(B) after consulting with the parties' attorneys and any unrepresented parties at a scheduling conference or by telephone, mail, or other means.

(2) Time to Issue. The judge must issue the scheduling order as soon as practicable, but in any event within the earlier of 120 days after any defendant has been served with the complaint or 90 days after any defendant has appeared.

(3) Contents of the Order.

(A) Required Contents. The scheduling order must limit the time to join other parties, amend the pleadings, complete discovery, and file motions.

(B) Permitted Contents. The scheduling order may:

(i) modify the timing of disclosures under Rules 26(a) and 26(e)(1);

(ii) modify the extent of discovery;

(iii) provide for disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information;

(iv) include any agreements the parties reach for asserting claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material after information is produced;

(v) set dates for pretrial conferences and for trial; and

(vi) include other appropriate matters.

(4) Modifying a Schedule. A schedule may be modified only for good cause and with the judge's consent.

(c) Attendance and Matters for Consideration at a Pretrial Conference.

(1) Attendance. A represented party must authorize at least one of its attorneys to make stipulations and admissions about all matters that can reasonably be anticipated for discussion at a pretrial conference. If appropriate, the court may require that a party or its representative be present or reasonably available by other means to consider possible settlement.

(2) Matters for Consideration. At any pretrial conference, the court may consider and take appropriate action on the following matters:

(A) formulating and simplifying the issues, and eliminating frivolous claims or defenses;

(B) amending the pleadings if necessary or desirable;

(C) obtaining admissions and stipulations about facts and documents to avoid unnecessary proof, and ruling in advance on the admissibility of evidence;

(D) avoiding unnecessary proof and cumulative evidence, and limiting the use of testimony under Federal Rule of Evidence 702;

(E) determining the appropriateness and timing of summary adjudication under Rule 56;

(F) controlling and scheduling discovery, including orders affecting disclosures and discovery under Rule 26 and Rules 29 through 37;

(G) identifying witnesses and documents, scheduling the filing and exchange of any pretrial briefs, and setting dates for further conferences and for trial;

(H) referring matters to a magistrate judge or a master;

(I) settling the case and using special procedures to assist in resolving the dispute when authorized by statute or local rule;

(J) determining the form and content of the pretrial order;

(K) disposing of pending motions;

(L) adopting special procedures for managing potentially difficult or protracted actions that may involve complex issues, multiple parties, difficult legal questions, or unusual proof problems;

(M) ordering a separate trial under Rule 42(b) of a claim, counterclaim, crossclaim, third-party claim, or particular issue;

(N) ordering the presentation of evidence early in the trial on a manageable issue that might, on the evidence, be the basis for a judgment as a matter of law under Rule 50(a) or a judgment on partial findings under Rule 52(c);

(O) establishing a reasonable limit on the time allowed to present evidence; and

(P) facilitating in other ways the just, speedy, and inexpensive disposition of the action.

(d) Pretrial Orders. After any conference under this rule, the court should issue an order reciting the action taken. This order controls the course of the action unless the court modifies it.

(e) Final Pretrial Conference and Orders. The court may hold a final pretrial conference to formulate a trial plan, including a plan to facilitate the admission of evidence. The conference must be held as close to the start of trial as is reasonable, and must be attended by at least one attorney who will conduct the trial for each party and by any unrepresented party. The court may modify an order issued after a final pretrial conference only to prevent manifest injustice.

(f) Sanctions.

(1) In General. On motion or on its own, the court may issue any just orders, including those authorized by Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(ii)-(vii), if a party or its attorney:

(A) fails to appear at a scheduling or other pretrial conference;

(B) is substantially unprepared to participate--or does not participate in good faith--in the conference; or

(C) fails to obey a scheduling or other pretrial order.

(2) Imposing Fees and Costs. Instead of or in addition to any other sanction, the court must order the party, its attorney, or both to pay the reasonable expenses--including attorney's fees--incurred because of any noncompliance with this rule, unless the noncompliance was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.
[Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Apr. 28, 1983, effective Aug. 1, 1983; Mar. 2, 1987, effective Aug. 1, 1987; Apr. 22, 1993, effective Dec. 1, 1993; Apr. 12, 2006, effective Dec. 1, 2006; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 16 (style revision)

The language of Rule 16 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 16 (style-substance revision)

When a party or its representative is not present, it is enough to be reasonably available by any suitable means, whether telephone or other communication device.

TITLE V
Disclosures and Discovery

Rule 26. Duty to Disclose; General Provisions Governing Discovery

(a) Required Disclosures.

(1) Initial Disclosure.

(A) In General. Except as exempted by Rule 26(a)(1)(B) or as otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, a party must, without awaiting a discovery request, provide to the other parties:

(i) the name and, if known, the address and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information--along with the subjects of that information--that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses, unless the use would be solely for impeachment;

(ii) a copy--or a description by category and location--of all documents, electrically stored information, and tangible things that the disclosing party has in its possession, custody, or control and may use to support its claims or defenses, unless the use would be solely for impeachment;

(iii) a computation of each category of damages claimed by the disclosing party--who must also make available for inspection and copying as under Rule 34 the documents or other evidentiary material, unless privileged or protected from disclosure, on which each computation is based, including materials bearing on the nature and extent of injuries suffered; and

(iv) for inspection and copying as under Rule 34, any insurance agreement under which an insurance business may be liable to satisfy all or part of a possible judgment in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment.

(B) Proceedings Exempt from Initial Disclosure. The following proceedings are exempt from initial disclosure:

(i) an action for review on an administrative record;

(ii) a forfeiture action in rem arising from a federal statute;

(iii) a petition for habeas corpus or any other proceeding to challenge a criminal conviction or sentence;

(iv) an action brought without an attorney by a person in the custody of the United States, a state, or a state subdivision;

(v) an action to enforce or quash an administrative summons or subpoena;

(vi) an action by the United States to recover benefit payments;

(vii) an action by the United States to collect on a student loan guaranteed by the United States;

(viii) a proceeding ancillary to a proceeding in another court; and

(ix) an action to enforce an arbitration award.

(C) Time for Initial Disclosures--In General. A party must make the initial disclosures at or within 14 days after the parties' Rule 26(f) conference unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order, or unless a party objects during the conference that initial disclosures are not appropriate in this action and states the objection in the proposed discovery plan. In ruling on the objection, the court must determine what disclosures, if any, are to be made and must set the time for disclosure.

(D) Time for Initial Disclosures--For Parties Served or Joined Later. A party that is first served or otherwise joined after the Rule 26(f) conference must make the initial disclosures within 30 days after being served or joined, unless a different time is set by stipulation or court order.

(E) Basis for Initial Disclosure; Unacceptable Excuses. A party must make its initial disclosures based on the information then reasonably available to it. A party is not excused from making its disclosures because it has not fully investigated the case or because it challenges the sufficiency of another party's disclosures or because another party has not made its disclosures.

(2) Disclosure of Expert Testimony.

(A) In General. In addition to the disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1), a party must disclose to the other parties the identity of any witness it may use at trial to present evidence under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, 703, or 705.

(B) Written Report. Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, this disclosure must be accompanied by a written report--prepared and signed by the witness--if the witness is one retained or specially employed to provide expert testimony in the case or one whose duties as the party's employee regularly involve giving expert testimony. The report must contain:

(i) a complete statement of all opinions the witness will express and the basis and reasons for them;

(ii) the data or other information considered by the witness in forming them;

(iii) any exhibits that will be used to summarize or support them;

(iv) the witness's qualifications, including a list of all publications authored in the previous ten years;

(v) a list of all other cases in which, during the previous four years, the witness testified as an expert at trial or by deposition; and

(vi) a statement of the compensation to be paid for the study and testimony in the case.

(C) Time to Disclose Expert Testimony. A party must make these disclosures at the times and in the sequence that the court orders. Absent a stipulation or a court order, the disclosures must be made:

(i) at least 90 days before the date set for trial or for the case to be ready for trial; or

(ii) if the evidence is intended solely to contradict or rebut evidence on the same subject matter identified by another party under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), within 30 days after the other party's disclosure.

(D) Supplementing the Disclosure. The parties must supplement these disclosures when required under Rule 26(e).

(3) Pretrial Disclosures.

(A) In General. In addition to the disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1) and (2), a party must provide to the other parties and promptly file the following information about the evidence that it may present at trial other than solely for impeachment:

(i) the name and, if not previously provided, the address and telephone number of each witness--separately identifying those the party expects to present and those it may call if the need arises;

(ii) the designation of those witnesses whose testimony the party expects to present by deposition and, if not taken stenographically, a transcript of the pertinent parts of the deposition; and

(iii) an identification of each document or other exhibit, including summaries of other evidence--separately identifying those items the party expects to offer and those it may offer if the need arises.

(B) Time for Pretrial Disclosures; Objections. Unless the court orders otherwise, these disclosures must be made at least 30 days before trial. Within 14 days after they are made, unless the court sets a different time, a party may serve and promptly file a list of the following objections: any objections to the use under Rule 32(a) of a deposition designated by another party under Rule 26(a)(3)(A)(ii); and any objection, together with the grounds for it, that may be made to the admissibility of materials identified under Rule 26(a)(3)(A)(iii). An objection not so made--except for one under Federal Rule of Evidence 402 or 403--is waived unless excused by the court for good cause.

(4) Form of Disclosures. Unless the court orders otherwise, all disclosures under Rule 26(a) must be in writing, signed, and served.

(b) Discovery Scope and Limits.

(1) Scope in General. Unless otherwise limited by court order, the scope of discovery is as follows: Parties may obtain discovery regarding any nonprivileged matter that is relevant to any party's claim or defense--including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any documents or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons who know of any discoverable matter. For good cause, the court may order discovery of any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the action. Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. All discovery is subject to the limitations imposed by Rule 26(b)(2)(C).

(2) Limitations on Frequency and Extent.

(A) When Permitted. By order, the court may alter the limits in these rules on the number of depositions and interrogatories or on the length of depositions under Rule 30. By order or local rule, the court may also limit the number of requests under Rule 36.

(B) Specific Limitations on Electronically Stored Information. A party need not provide discovery of electronically stored information from sources that the party identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or for a protective order, the party from whom discovery is sought must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nonetheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C). The court may specify conditions for the discovery.

(C) When Required. On motion or on its own, the court must limit the frequency or extent of discovery otherwise allowed by these rules or by local rule if it determines that:

(i) the discovery sought is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative, or can be obtained from some other source that is more convenient, less burdensome, or less expensive;

(ii) the party seeking discovery has had ample opportunity to obtain the information by discovery in the action; or

(iii) the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit, considering the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, the parties' resources, the importance of the issues at stake in the action, and the importance of the discovery in resolving the issues.

(3) Trial Preparation: Materials.

(A) Documents and Tangible Things. Ordinarily, a party may not discover documents and tangible things that are prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial by or for another party or its representative (including the other party's attorney, consultant, surety, indemnitor, insurer, or agent). But, subject to Rule 26(b)(4), those materials may be discovered if:

(i) they are otherwise discoverable under Rule 26(b)(1); and

(ii) the party shows that it has substantial need for the materials to prepare its case and cannot, without undue hardship, obtain their substantial equivalent by other means.

(B) Protection Against Disclosure. If the court orders discovery of those materials, it must protect against disclosure of the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of a party's attorney or other representative concerning the litigation.

(C) Previous Statement. Any party or other person may, on request and without the required showing, obtain the person's own previous statement about the action or its subject matter. If the request is refused, the person may move for a court order, and Rule 37(a)(5) applies to the award of expenses. A previous statement is either:

(i) a written statement that the person has signed or otherwise adopted or approved; or

(ii) a contemporaneous stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording--or a transcription of it--that recites substantially verbatim the person's oral statement.

(4) Trial Preparation: Experts.

(A) Expert Who May Testify. A party may depose any person who has been identified as an expert whose opinions may be presented at trial. If Rule 26(a)(2)(B) requires a report from the expert, the deposition may be conducted only after the report is provided.

(B) Expert Employed Only for Trial Preparation. Ordinarily, a party may not, by interrogatories or deposition, discover facts known or opinions held by an expert who has been retained or specially employed by another party in anticipation of litigation or to prepare for trial and who is not expected to be called as a witness at trial. But a party may do so only:

(i) as provided in Rule 35(b); or

(ii) on showing exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means.

(C) Payment. Unless manifest injustice would result, the court must require that the party seeking discovery:

(i) pay the expert a reasonable fee for time spent in responding to discovery under Rule 26(b)(4)(A) or (B); and

(ii) for discovery under (B), also pay the other party a fair portion of the fees and expenses it reasonably incurred in obtaining the expert's facts and opinions.

(5) Claiming Privilege or Protecting Trial-Preparation Materials.

(A) Information Withheld. When a party withholds information otherwise discoverable by claiming that the information is privileged or subject to protection as trial-preparation material, the party must:

(i) expressly make the claim; and

(ii) describe the nature of the documents, communications, or tangible things not produced or disclosed--and do so in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable other parties to assess the claim.

(B) Information Produced. If information produced in discovery is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the party making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has; must not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved; must take reasonable steps to retrieve the information if the party disclosed it before being notified; and may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. The producing party must preserve the information until the claim is resolved.

(c) Protective Orders.

(1) In General. A party or any person from whom discovery is sought may move for a protective order in the court where the action is pending--or as an alternative on matters relating to a deposition, in the court for the district where the deposition will be taken. The motion must include a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with other affected parties in an effort to resolve the dispute without court action. The court may, for good cause, issue an order to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including one or more of the following:

(A) forbidding the disclosure or discovery;

(B) specifying terms, including time and place, for the disclosure or discovery;

(C) prescribing a discovery method other than the one selected by the party seeking discovery;

(D) forbidding inquiry into certain matters, or limiting the scope of disclosure or discovery to certain matters;

(E) designating the persons who may be present while the discovery is conducted;

(F) requiring that a deposition be sealed and opened only on court order;

(G) requiring that a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information not be revealed or be revealed only in a specified way; and

(H) requiring that the parties simultaneously file specified documents or information in sealed envelopes, to be opened as the court directs.

(2) Ordering Discovery. If a motion for a protective order is wholly or partly denied, the court may, on just terms, order that any party or person provide or permit discovery.

(3) Awarding Expenses. Rule 37(a)(5) applies to the award of expenses.

(d) Timing and Sequence of Discovery.

(1) Timing. A party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f), except in a proceeding exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1)(B), or when authorized by these rules, by stipulation, or by court order.

(2) Sequence. Unless, on motion, the court orders otherwise for the parties' and witnesses' convenience and in the interests of justice:

(A) methods of discovery may be used in any sequence; and

(B) discovery by one party does not require any other party to delay its discovery.

(e) Supplementing Disclosures and Responses.

(1) In General. A party who has made a disclosure under Rule 26(a)--or who has responded to an interrogatory, request for production, or request for admission--must supplement or correct its disclosure or response:

(A) in a timely manner if the party learns that in some material respect the disclosure or response is incomplete or incorrect, and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known to the other parties during the discovery process or in writing; or

(B) as ordered by the court.

(2) Expert Witness. For an expert whose report must be disclosed under Rule 26(a)(2)(B), the party's duty to supplement extends both to information included in the report and to information given during the expert's deposition. Any additions or changes to this information must be disclosed by the time the party's pretrial disclosures under Rule 26(a)(3) are due.

(f) Conference of the Parties; Planning for Discovery.

(1) Conference Timing. Except in a proceeding exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1)(B) or when the court orders otherwise, the parties must confer as soon as practicable--and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b).

(2) Conference Content; Parties' Responsibilities. In conferring, the parties must consider the nature and basis of their claims and defenses and the possibilities for promptly settling or resolving the case; make or arrange for the disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1); discuss any issues about preserving discoverable information; and develop a proposed discovery plan. The attorneys of record and all unrepresented parties that have appeared in the case are jointly responsible for arranging the conference, for attempting in good faith to agree on the proposed discovery plan, and for submitting to the court within 14 days after the conference a written report outlining the plan. The court may order the parties or attorneys to attend the conference in person.

(3) Discovery Plan. A discovery plan must state the parties' views and proposals on:

(A) what changes should be made in the timing, form, or requirement for disclosures under Rule 26(a), including a statement of when initial disclosures were made or will be made;

(B) the subjects on which discovery may be needed, when discovery should be completed, and whether discovery should be conducted in phases or be limited to or focused on particular issues;

(C) any issues about disclosure or discovery of electronically stored information, including the form or forms in which it should be produced;

(D) any issues about claims of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation materials, including--if the parties agree on a procedure to assert these claims after production--whether to ask the court to include their agreement in an order;

(E) what changes should be made in the limitations on discovery imposed under these rules or by local rule, and what other limitations should be imposed; and

(F) any other orders that the court should issue under Rule 26(c) or under Rule 16(b) and (c).

(4) Expedited Schedule. If necessary to comply with its expedited schedule for Rule 16(b) conferences, a court may by local rule:

(A) require the parties' conference to occur less than 21 days before the scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b); and

(B) require the written report outlining the discovery plan to be filed less than 14 days after the parties' conference, or excuse the parties from submitting a written report and permit them to report orally on their discovery plan at the Rule 16(b) conference.

(g) Signing Disclosures and Discovery Requests, Responses, and Objections.

(1) Signature Required; Effect of Signature. Every disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1) or (a)(3) and every discovery request, response, or objection must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's own name--or by the party personally, if unrepresented--and must state the signer's address, e-mail address, and telephone number. By signing, an attorney or party certifies that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief formed after a reasonable inquiry:

(A) with respect to a disclosure, it is complete and correct as of the time it is made; and

(B) with respect to a discovery request, response, or objection, it is:

(i) consistent with these rules and warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law, or for establishing new law;

(ii) not interposed for any improper purpose, such as to harass, cause unnecessary delay, or needlessly increase the cost of litigation; and

(iii) neither unreasonable nor unduly burdensome or expensive, considering the needs of the case, prior discovery in the case, the amount in controversy, and the importance of the issues at stake in the action.

(2) Failure to Sign. Other parties have no duty to act on an unsigned disclosure, request, response, or objection until it is signed, and the court must strike it unless a signature is promptly supplied after the omission is called to the attorney's or party's attention.

(3) Sanction for Improper Certification. If a certification violates this rule without substantial justification, the court, on motion or on its own, must impose an appropriate sanction on the signer, the party on whose behalf the signer was acting, or both. The sanction may include an order to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the violation. [Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Dec. 27, 1946, effective Mar. 19, 1948; Jan. 21, 1963, effective July 1, 1963; Feb. 28, 1966, effective July 1, 1966; Mar. 30, 1970, effective July 1, 1970; Apr. 29, 1980, effective Aug. 1, 1980; Apr. 28, 1983, effective Aug. 1, 1983; Mar. 2, 1987, effective Aug. 1, 1987; Apr. 22, 1993, effective Dec. 1, 1993; Apr. 17, 2000, effective Dec. 1, 2000; Apr. 12, 2006, effective Dec. 1, 2006; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 26 (style revision)

The language of Rule 26 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

Former Rule 26(a)(5) served as an index of the discovery methods provided by later rules. It was deleted as redundant. Deletion does not affect the right to pursue discovery in addition to disclosure.

Former Rule 26(b)(1) began with a general statement of the scope of discovery that appeared to function as a preface to each of the five numbered paragraphs that followed. This preface has been shifted to the text of paragraph (1) because it does not accurately reflect the limits embodied in paragraphs (2), (3), or (4), and because paragraph (5) does not address the scope of discovery.

The reference to discovery of "books" in former Rule 26(b)(1) was deleted to achieve consistent expression throughout the discovery rules. Books remain a proper subject of discovery.

Amended Rule 26(b)(3) states that a party may obtain a copy of the party's own previous statement "on request." Former Rule 26(b)(3) expressly made the request procedure available to a nonparty witness, but did not describe the procedure to be used by a party. This apparent gap is closed by adopting the request procedure, which ensures that a party need not invoke Rule 34 to obtain a copy of the party's own statement.

Rule 26(e) stated the duty to supplement or correct a disclosure or discovery response "to include information thereafter acquired." This apparent limit is not reflected in practice; parties recognize the duty to supplement or correct by providing information that was not originally provided although it was available at the time of the initial disclosure or response. These words are deleted to reflect the actual meaning of the present rule.

Former Rule 26(e) used different phrases to describe the time to supplement or correct a disclosure or discovery response. Disclosures were to be supplemented "at appropriate intervals." A prior discovery response must be "seasonably * * * amend[ed]." The fine distinction between these phrases has not been observed in practice. Amended Rule 26(e)(1)(A) uses the same phrase for disclosures and discovery responses. The party must supplement or correct "in a timely manner."

Former Rule 26(g)(1) did not call for striking an unsigned disclosure. The omission was an obvious drafting oversight. Amended Rule 26(g)(2) includes disclosures in the list of matters that the court must strike unless a signature is provided "promptly * * * after being called to the attorney's or party's attention."

Former Rule 26(b)(2)(A) referred to a "good faith" argument to extend existing law. Amended Rule 26(b)(1)(B)(i) changes this reference to a "nonfrivolous" argument to achieve consistency with Rule 11(b)(2).

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 26 (style-substance revision)

As with the Rule 11 signature on a pleading, written motion, or other paper, disclosure and discovery signatures should include not only a postal address but also a telephone number and electronic-mail address. A signer who lacks one or more of those addresses need not supply a nonexistent item.

Rule 11(b)(2) recognizes that it is legitimate to argue for establishing new law. An argument to establish new law is equally legitimate in conducting discovery.

Rule 33. Interrogatories to Parties

(a) In General.

(1) Number. Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, a party may serve on any other party no more than 25 written interrogatories, including all discrete subparts. Leave to serve additional interrogatories may be granted to the extent consistent with Rule 26(b)(2).

(2) Scope. An interrogatory may relate to any matter that may be inquired into under Rule 26(b). An interrogatory is not objectionable merely because it asks for an opinion or contention that relates to fact or the application of law to fact, but the court may order that the interrogatory need not be answered until designated discovery is complete, or until a pretrial conference or some other time.

(b) Answers and Objections.

(1) Responding Party. The interrogatories must be answered:

(A) by the party to whom they are directed; or

(B) if that party is a public or private corporation, a partnership, an association, or a governmental agency, by any officer or agent, who must furnish the information available to the party.

(2) Time to Respond. The responding party must serve its answers and any objections within 30 days after being served with the interrogatories. A shorter or longer time may be stipulated to under Rule 29 or be ordered by the court.

(3) Answering Each Interrogatory. Each interrogatory must, to the extent it is not objected to, be answered separately and fully in writing under oath.

(4) Objections. The grounds for objecting to an interrogatory must be stated with specificity. Any ground not stated in a timely objection is waived unless the court, for good cause, excuses the failure.

(5) Signature. The person who makes the answers must sign them, and the attorney who objects must sign any objections.

(c) Use. An answer to an interrogatory may be used to the extent allowed by the Federal Rules of Evidence.

(d) Option to Produce Business Records. If the answer to an interrogatory may be determined by examining, auditing, compiling, abstracting, or summarizing a party's business records (including electronically stored information), and if the burden of deriving or ascertaining the answer will be substantially the same for either party, the responding party may answer by:

(1) specifying the records that must be reviewed, in sufficient detail to enable the interrogating party to locate and identify them as readily as the responding party could; and

(2) giving the interrogating party a reasonable opportunity to examine and audit the records and to make copies, compilations, abstracts, or summaries. [Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Dec. 27, 1946, effective Mar. 19, 1948; Mar. 30, 1970, effective July 1, 1970; Apr. 29, 1980, effective Aug. 1, 1980; Apr. 22, 1993, effective Dec. 1, 1993; Apr. 12, 2006, effective Dec. 1, 2006; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 33

The language of Rule 33 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

The final sentence of former Rule 33(a) was a redundant cross-reference to the discovery moratorium provisions of Rule 26(d). Rule 26(d) is now familiar, obviating any need to carry forward the redundant cross-reference.

Former Rule 33(b)(5) was a redundant reminder of Rule 37(a) procedure that is omitted as no longer useful.

Former Rule 33(c) stated that an interrogatory "is not necessarily objectionable merely because an answer * * * involves an opinion or contention * * *." "[I]s not necessarily" seemed to imply that the interrogatory might be objectionable merely for this reason. This implication has been ignored in practice. Opinion and contention interrogatories are used routinely. Amended Rule 33(a)(2) embodies the current meaning of Rule 33 by omitting "necessarily."

Rule 34. Producing Documents, Electronically Stored Information, and Tangible Things, or Entering onto Land, for Inspection and Other Purposes

(a) In General. A party may serve on any other party a request within the scope of Rule 26(b):

(1) to produce and permit the requesting party or its representative to inspect, copy, test, or sample the following items in the responding party's possession, custody, or control:

(A) any designated documents or electronically stored information--including writings, drawings, graphs, charts, photographs, sound recordings, images, and other data or data compilations--stored in any medium from which information can be obtained either directly or, if necessary, after translation by the responding party into a reasonably usable form; or

(B) any designated tangible things; or

(2) to permit entry onto designated land or other property possessed or controlled by the responding party, so that the requesting party may inspect, measure, survey, photograph, test, or sample the property or any designated object or operation on it.

(b) Procedure.

(1) Contents of the Request. The request:

(A) must describe with reasonable particularity each item or category of items to be inspected;

(B) must specify a reasonable time, place, and manner for the inspection and for performing the related acts; and

(C) may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information is to be produced.

(2) Responses and Objections.

(A) Time to Respond. The party to whom the request is directed must respond in writing within 30 days after being served. A shorter or longer time may be stipulated to under Rule 29 or be ordered by the court.

(B) Responding to Each Item. For each item or category, the response must either state that inspection and related activities will be permitted as requested or state an objection to the request, including the reasons.

(C) Objections. An objection to part of a request must specify the part and permit inspection of the rest.

(D) Responding to a Request for Production of Electronically Stored Information. The response may state an objection to a requested form for producing electronically stored information. If the responding party objects to a requested form--or if no form was specified in the request--the party must state the form or forms it intends to use.

(E) Producing the Documents or Electronically Stored Information. Unless otherwise stipulated or ordered by the court, these procedures apply to producing documents or electronically stored information:

(i) A party must produce documents as they are kept in the usual course of business or must organize and label them to correspond to the categories in the request;

(ii) If a request does not specify a form for producing electronically stored information, a party must produce it in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a reasonably usable form or forms; and

(iii) A party need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

(c) Nonparties. As provided in Rule 45, a nonparty may be compelled to produce documents and tangible things or to permit an inspection. [Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Dec. 27, 1946, effective Mar. 19, 1948; Mar. 30, 1970, effective July 1, 1970; Apr. 29, 1980, effective Aug. 1, 1980; Mar. 2, 1987, effective Aug. 1, 1987; Apr. 30, 1991, effective Dec. 1, 1991; Apr. 22, 1993, effective Dec. 1, 1993; Apr. 12, 2006, effective Dec. 1, 2006; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 34

The language of Rule 34 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

The final sentence in the first paragraph of former Rule 34(b) was a redundant cross-reference to the discovery moratorium provisions of Rule 26(d). Rule 26(d) is now familiar, obviating any need to carry forward the redundant cross-reference.

The redundant reminder of Rule 37(a) procedure in the second paragraph of former Rule 34(b) is omitted as no longer useful.

Rule 37. Failure to Make Disclosures or to Cooperate in Discovery; Sanctions

(a) Motion for an Order Compelling Disclosure or Discovery.

(1) In General. On notice to other parties and all affected persons, a party may move for an order compelling disclosure or discovery. The motion must include a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the person or party failing to make disclosure or discovery in an effort to obtain it without court action.

(2) Appropriate Court. A motion for an order to a party must be made in the court where the action is pending. A motion for an order to a nonparty must be made in the court where the discovery is or will be taken.

(3) Specific Motions.

(A) To Compel Disclosure. If a party fails to make a disclosure required by Rule 26(a), any other party may move to compel disclosure and for appropriate sanctions.

(B) To Compel a Discovery Response. A party seeking discovery may move for an order compelling an answer, designation, production, or inspection. This motion may be made if:

(i) a deponent fails to answer a question asked under Rule 30 or 31;

(ii) a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a)(4);

(iii) a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted under Rule 33; or

(iv) a party fails to respond that inspection will be permitted--or fails to permit inspection--as requested under Rule 34.

(C) Related to a Deposition. When taking an oral deposition, the party asking a question may complete or adjourn the examination before moving for an order.

(4) Evasive or Incomplete Disclosure, Answer, or Response. For purposes of this subdivision (a), an evasive or incomplete disclosure, answer, or response must be treated as a failure to disclose, answer, or respond.

(5) Payment of Expenses; Protective Orders.

(A) If the Motion Is Granted (or Disclosure or Discovery Is Provided After Filing). If the motion is granted--or if the disclosure or requested discovery is provided after the motion was filed--the court must, after giving an opportunity to be heard, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion, the party or attorney advising that conduct, or both to pay the movant's reasonable expenses incurred in making the motion, including attorney's fees. But the court must not order this payment if:

(i) the movant filed the motion before attempting in good faith to obtain the disclosure or discovery without court action;

(ii) the opposing party's nondisclosure, response, or objection was substantially justified; or

(iii) other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(B) If the Motion Is Denied. If the motion is denied, the court may issue any protective order authorized under Rule 26(c) and must, after giving an opportunity to be heard, require the movant, the attorney filing the motion, or both to pay the party or deponent who opposed the motion its reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees. But the court must not order this payment if the motion was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(C) If the Motion Is Granted in Part and Denied in Part. If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may issue any protective order authorized under Rule 26(c) and may, after giving an opportunity to be heard, apportion the reasonable expenses for the motion.

(b) Failure to Comply with a Court Order.

(1) Sanctions in the District Where the Deposition Is Taken. If the court where the discovery is taken orders a deponent to be sworn or to answer a question and the deponent fails to obey, the failure may be treated as contempt of court.

(2) Sanctions in the District Where the Action Is Pending.

(A) For Not Obeying a Discovery Order. If a party or a party's officer, director, or managing agent--or a witness designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a)(4)--fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order under Rule 26(f), 35, or 37(a), the court where the action is pending may issue further just orders. They may include the following:

(i) directing that the matters embraced in the order or other designated facts be taken as established for purposes of the action, as the prevailing party claims;

(ii) prohibiting the disobedient party from supporting or opposing designated claims or defenses, or from introducing designated matters in evidence;

(iii) striking pleadings in whole or in part;

(iv) staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed;

(v) dismissing the action or proceeding in whole or in part;

(vi) rendering a default judgment against the disobedient party; or

(vii) treating as contempt of court the failure to obey any order except an order to submit to a physical or mental examination.

(B) For Not Producing a Person for Examination. If a party fails to comply with an order under Rule 35(a) requiring it to produce another person for examination, the court may issue any of the orders listed in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi), unless the disobedient party shows that it cannot produce the other person.

(C) Payment of Expenses. Instead of or in addition to the orders above, the court must order the disobedient party, the attorney advising that party, or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the failure was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(c) Failure to Disclose, to Supplement an Earlier Response, or to Admit.

(1) Failure to Disclose or Supplement. If a party fails to provide information or identify a witness as required by Rule 26(a) or (e), the party is not allowed to use that information or witness to supply evidence on a motion, at a hearing, or at a trial, unless the failure was substantially justified or is harmless. In addition to or instead of this sanction, the court, on motion and after giving an opportunity to be heard:

(A) may order payment of the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure;

(B) may inform the jury of the party's failure; and

(C) may impose other appropriate sanctions, including any of the orders listed in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi).

(2) Failure to Admit. If a party fails to admit what is requested under Rule 36 and if the requesting party later proves a document to be genuine or the matter true, the requesting party may move that the party who failed to admit pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred in making that proof. The court must so order unless:

(A) the request was held objectionable under Rule 36(a);

(B) the admission sought was of no substantial importance;

(C) the party failing to admit had a reasonable ground to believe that it might prevail on the matter; or

(D) there was other good reason for the failure to admit.

(d) Party's Failure to Attend Its Own Deposition, Serve Answers to Interrogatories, or Respond to a Request for Inspection.

(1) In General.

(A) Motion; Grounds for Sanctions. The court where the action is pending may, on motion, order sanctions if:

(i) a party or a party's officer, director, or managing agent--or a person designated under Rule 30(b)(6) or 31(a)(4)--fails, after being served with proper notice, to appear for that person's deposition; or

(ii) a party, after being properly served with interrogatories under Rule 33 or a request for inspection under Rule 34, fails to serve its answers, objections, or written response.

(B) Certification. A motion for sanctions for failing to answer or respond must include a certification that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the party failing to act in an effort to obtain the answer or response without court action.

(2) Unacceptable Excuse for Failing to Act. A failure described in Rule 37(d)(1)(A) is not excused on the ground that the discovery sought was objectionable, unless the party failing to act has a pending motion for a protective order under Rule 26(c).

(3) Types of Sanctions. Sanctions may include any of the orders listed in Rule 37(b)(2)(A)(i)-(vi). Instead of or in addition to these sanctions, the court must require the party failing to act, the attorney advising that party, or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure, unless the failure was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

(e) Failure to Provide Electronically Stored Information. Absent exceptional circumstances, a court may not impose sanctions under these rules on a party for failing to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system.

(f) Failure to Participate in Framing a Discovery Plan. If a party or its attorney fails to participate in good faith in developing and submitting a proposed discovery plan as required by Rule 26(f), the court may, after giving an opportunity to be heard, require that party or attorney to pay to any other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure. TITLE VI

Rule 45. Subpoena

(a) In General.

(1) Form and Contents.

(A) Requirements--In General. Every subpoena must:

(i) state the court from which it issued;

(ii) state the title of the action, the court in which it is pending, and its civil-action number;

(iii) command each person to whom it is directed to do the following at a specified time and place: attend and testify; produce designated documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things in that person's possession, custody, or control; or permit the inspection of premises; and

(iv) set out the text of Rule 45(c) and (d).

(B) Command to Attend a Deposition--Notice of the Recording Method. A subpoena commanding attendance at a deposition must state the method for recording the testimony.

(C) Combining or Separating a Command to Produce or to Permit Inspection; Specifying the Form for Electronically Stored Information. A command to produce documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things or to permit the inspection of premises may be included in a subpoena commanding attendance at a deposition, hearing, or trial, or may be set out in a separate subpoena. A subpoena may specify the form or forms in which electronically stored information is to be produced.

(D) Command to Produce; Included Obligations. A command in a subpoena to produce documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things requires the responding party to permit inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of the materials.

(2) Issued from Which Court. A subpoena must issue as follows:

(A) for attendance at a hearing or trial, from the court for the district where the hearing or trial is to be held;

(B) for attendance at a deposition, from the court for the district where the deposition is to be taken; and

(C) for production or inspection, if separate from a subpoena commanding a person's attendance, from the court for the district where the production or inspection is to be made.

(3) Issued by Whom. The clerk must issue a subpoena, signed but otherwise in blank, to a party who requests it. That party must complete it before service. An attorney also may issue and sign a subpoena as an officer of:

(A) a court in which the attorney is authorized to practice; or

(B) a court for a district where a deposition is to be taken or production is to be made, if the attorney is authorized to practice in the court where the action is pending.

(b) Service.

(1) By Whom; Tendering Fees; Serving a Copy of Certain Subpoenas. Any person who is at least 18 years old and not a party may serve a subpoena. Serving a subpoena requires delivering a copy to the named person and, if the subpoena requires that person's attendance, tendering the fees for 1 day's attendance and the mileage allowed by law. Fees and mileage need not be tendered when the subpoena issues on behalf of the United States or any of its officers or agencies. If the subpoena commands the production of documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things or the inspection of premises before trial, then before it is served, a notice must be served on each party.

(2) Service in the United States. Subject to Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii), a subpoena may be served at any place:

(A) within the district of the issuing court;

(B) outside that district but within 100 miles of the place specified for the deposition, hearing, trial, production, or inspection;

(C) within the state of the issuing court if a state statute or court rule allows service at that place of a subpoena issued by a state court of general jurisdiction sitting in the place specified for the deposition, hearing, trial, production, or inspection; or

(D) that the court authorizes on motion and for good cause, if a federal statute so provides.

(3) Service in a Foreign Country. 28 U.S.C. § 1783 governs issuing and serving a subpoena directed to a United States national or resident who is in a foreign country.

(4) Proof of Service. Proving service, when necessary, requires filing with the issuing court a statement showing the date and manner of service and the names of the persons served. The statement must be certified by the server.

(c) Protecting a Person Subject to a Subpoena.

(1) Avoiding Undue Burden or Expense; Sanctions. A party or attorney responsible for issuing and serving a subpoena must take reasonable steps to avoid imposing undue burden or expense on a person subject to the subpoena. The issuing court must enforce this duty and impose an appropriate sanction--which may include lost earnings and reasonable attorney's fees--on a party or attorney who fails to comply.

(2) Command to Produce Materials or Permit Inspection.

(A) Appearance Not Required. A person commanded to produce documents, electronically stored information, or tangible things, or to permit the inspection of premises, need not appear in person at the place of production or inspection unless also commanded to appear for a deposition, hearing, or trial.

(B) Objections. A person commanded to produce documents or tangible things or to permit inspection may serve on the party or attorney designated in the subpoena a written objection to inspecting, copying, testing or sampling any or all of the materials or to inspecting the premises--or to producing electronically stored information in the form or forms requested. The objection must be served before the earlier of the time specified for compliance or 14 days after the subpoena is served. If an objection is made, the following rules apply:

(i) At any time, on notice to the commanded person, the serving party may move the issuing court for an order compelling production or inspection.

(ii) These acts may be required only as directed in the order, and the order must protect a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer from significant expense resulting from compliance.

(3) Quashing or Modifying a Subpoena.

(A) When Required. On timely motion, the issuing court must quash or modify a subpoena that:

(i) fails to allow a reasonable time to comply;

(ii) requires a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer to travel more than 100 miles from where that person resides, is employed, or regularly transacts business in person--except that, subject to Rule 45(c)(3)(B)(iii), the person may be commanded to attend a trial by traveling from any such place within the state where the trial is held;

(iii) requires disclosure of privileged or other protected matter, if no exception or waiver applies; or

(iv) subjects a person to undue burden.

(B) When Permitted. To protect a person subject to or affected by a subpoena, the issuing court may, on motion, quash or modify the subpoena if it requires:

(i) disclosing a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information;

(ii) disclosing an unretained expert's opinion or information that does not describe specific occurrences in dispute and results from the expert's study that was not requested by a party; or

(iii) a person who is neither a party nor a party's officer to incur substantial expense to travel more than 100 miles to attend trial.

(C) Specifying Conditions as an Alternative. In the circumstances described in Rule 45(c)(3)(B), the court may, instead of quashing or modifying a subpoena, order appearance or production under specified conditions if the serving party:

(i) shows a substantial need for the testimony or material that cannot be otherwise met without undue hardship; and

(ii) ensures that the subpoenaed person will be reasonably compensated.

(d) Duties in Responding to a Subpoena.

(1) Producing Documents or Electronically Stored Information. These procedures apply to producing documents or electronically stored information:

(A) Documents. A person responding to a subpoena to produce documents must produce them as they are kept in the ordinary course of business or must organize and label them to correspond to the categories in the demand.

(B) Form for Producing Electronically Stored Information Not Specified. If a subpoena does not specify a form for producing electronically stored information, the person responding must produce it in a form or forms in which it is ordinarily maintained or in a reasonably usable form or forms.

(C) Electronically Stored Information Produced in Only One Form. The person responding need not produce the same electronically stored information in more than one form.

(D) Inaccessible Electronically Stored Information. The person responding need not provide discovery of electronically stored information form sources that the person identifies as not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. On motion to compel discovery or for a protective order, the person responding must show that the information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or cost. If that showing is made, the court may nonetheless order discovery from such sources if the requesting party shows good cause, considering the limitations of Rule 26(b)(2)(C). The court may specify conditions for the discovery.

(2) Claiming Privilege or Protection.

(A) Information Withheld. A person withholding subpoenaed information under a claim that it is privileged or subject to protection as trial-preparation material must:

(i) expressly make the claim; and

(ii) describe the nature of the withheld documents, communications, or tangible things in a manner that, without revealing information itself privileged or protected, will enable the parties to assess the claim.

(B) Information Produced. If information produced in response to a subpoena is subject to a claim of privilege or of protection as trial-preparation material, the person making the claim may notify any party that received the information of the claim and the basis for it. After being notified, a party must promptly return, sequester, or destroy the specified information and any copies it has; must not use or disclose the information until the claim is resolved; must take reasonable steps to retrieve the information if the party disclosed it before being notified; and may promptly present the information to the court under seal for a determination of the claim. The person who produced the information must preserve the information until the claim is resolved.

(e) Contempt. The issuing court may hold in contempt a person who, having been served, fails without adequate excuse to obey the subpoena. A nonparty's failure to obey must be excused if the subpoena purports to require the nonparty to attend or produce at a place outside the limits of Rule 45(c)(3)(A)(ii). [Adopted Dec. 20, 1937, effective Sept. 16, 1938; amended Dec. 27, 1946, effective Mar. 19, 1948; Dec. 29, 1948, effective Oct. 20, 1949; Mar. 30, 1970, effective July 1, 1970; Apr. 29, 1980, effective Aug. 1, 1980; Apr. 29, 1985, effective Aug. 1, 1985; Mar. 2, 1987, effective Aug. 1, 1987; Apr. 30, 1991, effective Dec. 1, 1991; Apr. 25, 2005, effective Dec. 1, 2005; Apr. 12, 2006, effective Dec. 1, 2006; last amended April 30, 2007, effective December 1, 2007.]

Committee Note of 2007 to Rule 45

The language of Rule 45 has been amended as part of the general restyling of the Civil Rules to make them more easily understood and to make style and terminology consistent throughout the rules. These changes are intended to be stylistic only.

The reference to discovery of "books" in former Rule 45(a)(1)(C) was deleted to achieve consistent expression throughout the discovery rules. Books remain a proper subject of discovery.

Former Rule 45(b)(1) required "prior notice" to each party of any commanded production of documents and things or inspection of premises. Courts have agreed that notice must be given "prior" to the return date, and have tended to converge on an interpretation that requires notice to the parties before the subpoena is served on the person commanded to produce or permit inspection. That interpretation is adopted in amended Rule 45(b)(1) to give clear notice of general present practice.

The language of former Rule 45(d)(2) addressing the manner of asserting privilege is replaced by adopting the wording of Rule 26(b)(5). The same meaning is better expressed in the same words.

ARTICLE V
Privileges

Rule 502. Attorney-client privilege and work product; limitations on waiver

The following provisions apply, in the circumstances set out, to disclosure of a communication or information covered by the attorney-client privilege or work-product protection.

(a) Disclosure made in a Federal proceeding or to a Federal office or agency; scope of a waiver. When the disclosure is made in a Federal proceeding or to a Federal office or agency and waives the attorney-client privilege or work-product protection, the waiver extends to an undisclosed communication or information in a Federal or State proceeding only if:

(1) the waiver is intentional;

(2) the disclosed and undisclosed communications or information concern the same subject matter; and

(3) they ought in fairness to be considered together.

(b) Inadvertent disclosure. When made in a Federal proceeding or to a Federal office or agency, the disclosure does not operate as a waiver in a Federal or State proceeding if:

(1) the disclosure is inadvertent;

(2) the holder of the privilege or protection took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure; and

(3) the holder promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error, including (if applicable) following Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(5)(B).

(c) Disclosure made in a State proceeding. When the disclosure is made in a State proceeding and is not the subject of a State-court order concerning waiver, the disclosure does not operate as a waiver in a Federal proceeding if the disclosure:

(1) would not be a waiver under this rule if it had been made in a Federal proceeding; or

(2) is not a waiver under the law of the State where the disclosure occurred.

(d) Controlling effect of a court order. A Federal court may order that the privilege or protection is not waived by disclosure connected with the litigation pending before the court--in which event the disclosure is also not a waiver in any other Federal or State proceeding.

(e) Controlling effect of a party agreement. An agreement on the effect of disclosure in a Federal proceeding is binding only on the parties to the agreement, unless it is incorporated into a court order.

(f) Controlling effect of this rule. Notwithstanding Rules 101 and 1101, this rule applies to State proceedings and to Federal court-annexed and Federal court-mandated arbitration proceedings, in the circumstances set out in the rule. And notwithstanding Rule 501, this rule applies even if State law provides the rule of decision.

(g) Definitions. In this rule:

(1) "attorney-client privilege" means the protection that applicable law provides for confidential attorney-client communications; and

(2) "work-product protection" means the protection that applicable law provides for tangible material (or its intangible equivalent) prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial. [Sept. 19, 2008, P.L. 110-322, § 1(a), 122 Stat. 3537.]

Notes

Application of rule. Act Sept. 19, 2008, P.L. 110-322, § 1(c), 122 Stat. 3538, provides: "The amendments made by this Act [adding this rule] shall apply in all proceedings commenced after the date of enactment of this Act and, insofar as is just and practicable, in all proceedings pending on such date of enactment.".

Committee note. This new rule has two major purposes:

(1) It resolves some longstanding disputes in the courts about the effect of certain disclosures of communications or information protected by the attorney-client privilege or as work product--specifically those disputes involving inadvertent disclosure and subject matter waiver.

(2) It responds to the widespread complaint that litigation costs necessary to protect against waiver of attorney-client privilege or work product have become prohibitive due to the concern that any disclosure (however innocent or minimal) will operate as a subject matter waiver of all protected communications or information. This concern is especially troubling in cases involving electronic discovery. See, e.g., Hopson v. City of Baltimore, 232 F.R.D. 228, 244 (D.Md. 2005) (electronic discovery may encompass "millions of documents" and to insist upon "record-by-record pre-production privilege review, on pain of subject matter waiver, would impose upon parties costs of production that bear no proportionality to what is at stake in the litigation").

The rule seeks to provide a predictable, uniform set of standards under which parties can determine the consequences of a disclosure of a communication or information covered by the attorney-client privilege or work product protection. Parties to litigation need to know, for example, that if they exchange privileged information pursuant to a confidentiality order, the court's order will be enforceable. Moreover, if a federal court's confidentiality order is not enforceable in a state court then the burdensome costs of privilege review and retention are unlikely to be reduced.

The rule makes no attempt to alter federal or state law on whether a communication or information is protected under the attorney-client privilege or work product immunity as an initial matter. Moreover, while establishing some exceptions to waiver, the rule does not purport to supplant applicable waiver doctrine generally.

The rule governs only certain waivers by disclosure. Other common-law waiver doctrines may result in a finding of waiver even where there is no disclosure of privileged information or work product. See, e.g., Nguyen v. Excel Corp., 197 F.3d 200 (5th Cir. 1999) (reliance on an advice of counsel defense waives the privilege with respect to attorney-client communications pertinent to that defense); Ryers [Byers] v. Burleson, 100 F.R.D. 436 (D.D.C. 1983) (allegation of lawyer malpractice constituted a waiver of confidential communications under the circumstances). The rule is not intended to displace or modify federal common law concerning waiver of privilege or work product where no disclosure has been made.

Subdivision (a). The rule provides that a voluntary disclosure in a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency, if a waiver, generally results in a waiver only of the communication or information disclosed; a subject matter waiver (of either privilege or work product) is reserved for those unusual situations in which fairness requires a further disclosure of related, protected information, in order to prevent a selective and misleading presentation of evidence to the disadvantage of the adversary. See, e.g., In re United Mine Workers of America Employee Benefit Plans Litig., 159 F.R.D. 307, 312 (D.D.C. 1994) (waiver of work product limited to materials actually disclosed, because the party did not deliberately disclose documents in an attempt to gain a tactical advantage). Thus, subject matter waiver is limited to situations in which a party intentionally puts protected information into the litigation in a selective, misleading and unfair manner. It follows that an inadvertent disclosure of protected information can never result in a subject matter waiver. claw back Rule 502(b). The rule rejects the result in In re Sealed Case, 877 F.2d 976 (D.C. Cir. 1989) , which held that inadvertent disclosure of documents during discovery automatically constituted a subject matter waiver.

The language concerning subject matter waiver--"ought in fairness"--is taken from Rule 106, because the animating principle is the same. Under both Rules, a party that makes a selective, misleading presentation that is unfair to the adversary opens itself to a more complete and accurate presentation.

To assure protection and predictability, the rules provides that if a disclosure is made at the federal level, the federal rule on subject matter waiver governs subsequent state court determinations on the scope of the waiver by that disclosure.

Subdivision (b). Courts are in conflict over whether an inadvertent disclosure of a communication or information protected as privileged or work product constitutes a waiver. A few courts find that a disclosure must be intentional to be a waiver. Most courts find a waiver only if the disclosing party acted carelessly in disclosing the communication or information protected under the attorney-client privilege or as work product constitutes a waiver without regard to the protections taken to avoid such a disclosure. See generally Hopson v. City of Baltimore, 232 F.R.D. 228 (D. Md. 2005) , for a discussion of this case law.

The rule opts for the middle ground: inadvertent disclosure of protected communications or information in connection with a federal proceeding or to a federal office or agency does not constitute a waiver if the holder took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure and also promptly took reasonable steps to rectify the error. This position is in accord with the majority view on whether inadvertent disclosure is a waiver.

Cases such as Lois Sportswear, U.S.A., Inc. v. Levi Strauss & Co., 104 F.R.D. 103, 105 (S.D.N.Y. 1985) and Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Garvey, 109 F.R.D. 323, 332 (N.D. Cal. 1985) , set out a multi-factor test for determining whether inadvertent disclosure is a waiver. The stated factors (none of which are dispositive) are the reasonableness of precautions taken, the time taken to rectify the error, the scope of discovery, the extent of disclosure and the overriding issue of fairness. The rule does not explicitly codify that test, because it is really a set of non-determinative guidelines that vary from case to case. The rule is flexible enough to accommodate any of those listed factors. Other considerations bearing on the reasonableness of a producing party's efforts include the number of documents to be reviewed and the time constraints for production. Depending on the circumstances, a party that uses advanced analytical software applications and linguistic tools in screening for privilege and work product may be found to have taken "reasonable steps" to prevent inadvertent disclosure. The implementation of an efficient system of records management before litigation may also be relevant.

The rule does not require the producing party to engage in a post-production review to determine whether any protected communication or information has been produced by mistake. But the rule does require the producing party to follow up on any obvious indications that a protected communication or information has been produced inadvertently.

The rule applies to inadvertent disclosures made to a federal office or agency, including but not limited to an office or agency that is acting in the course of its regulatory, investigative or enforcement authority. The consequences of waiver, and the concomitant costs of pre-production privilege review, can be as great with respect to disclosures to offices and agencies as they are in litigation.

Subdivision (c). Difficult questions can arise when 1) a disclosure of a communication or information protected by the attorney-client privilege or as work product is made in a state proceeding, 2) the communication or information is offered in a subsequent federal proceeding on the ground that the disclosure waived the privilege or protection, and 3) the state and federal laws are in conflict on the question of waiver. The Committee determined that the proper solution for the federal court is to apply the law that is most protective of privilege and work product. If the state law is more protective (such as where the state law is that an inadvertent disclosure can never be a waiver), the holder of the privilege or protection may well have relied on that law when making the disclosure in the state proceeding. Moreover, applying a more restrictive federal law of waiver could impair the state objective of preserving the privilege or work-product protection for disclosures made in state proceedings. On the other hand, if the federal law is more protective, applying the state law of waiver to determine admissibility in federal court is likely to undermine the federal objective of limiting the costs of production.

The rule does not address the enforceability of a state court confidentiality order in a federal proceeding, as that question is covered both by statutory law and principles of federalism and comity. See 28 U.S.C. § 1738 (providing that state judicial proceedings "shall have the same full faith and credit in every court within the United States ... as they have by law or usage in the courts of such State ... from which they are taken."). See also Tucker v. Ohtsu Tire & Rubber Co., 191 F.R.D. 495, 499 (D. Md. 2000) (noting that a federal court considering the enforceability of a state confidentiality order is "constrained by principles of comity, courtesy, and ... federalism"). Thus, a state court order finding no waiver in connection with a disclosure made in a state court proceeding is enforceable under existing law in subsequent federal proceedings.

Subdivision (d). Confidentiality orders are becoming increasingly important in limiting the costs of privilege review and retention, especially in cases involving electronic discovery. But the utility of a confidentiality order in reducing discovery costs is substantially diminished if it provides no protection outside the particular litigation in which the order is entered. Parties are unlikely to be able to reduce the costs of pre-production review for privilege and work product if the consequence of disclosure is that the communications or information could be used by non-parties to the litigation.

There is some dispute on whether a confidentiality order entered in one case is enforceable in other proceedings. See generally Hopson v. City of Baltimore, 232 F.R.D. 228 (D. Md. 2005) , for a discussion of this case law. The rule provides that when a confidentiality order governing the consequences of disclosure in that case is entered in a federal proceeding, its terms are enforceable against non-parties in any federal or state proceeding. For example, the court order may provide for return of documents without waiver irrespective of the care taken by the disclosing party; the rule contemplates enforcement of "claw-back" and "quick peek" arrangements as a way to avoid the excessive costs of pre-production review for privilege and work product. See Zubulake v. UBS Warburg LLC, 216 F.R.D. 280, 290 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (noting that parties may enter into "so-called 'claw-back' agreements that allow the parties to forego privilege review altogether in favor of an agreement to return inadvertently produced privilege documents"). The rule provides a party with a predictable protection from a court order--predictability that is needed to allow the party to plan in advance to limit the prohibitive costs of privilege and work product review and retention.

Under the rule, a confidentiality order is enforceable whether or not it memorializes an agreement among the parties to the litigation. party agreement should not be a condition of enforceability of a federal court's order.

Subdivision (e). Subdivision (e) codifies the well-established proposition that parties can enter an agreement to limit the effect of waiver by disclosure between or among them. Of course such an agreement can bind only the parties to the agreement. The rule makes clear that if parties want protection against non-parties from a finding of waiver by disclosure, the agreement must be made part of a court order.

Subdivision (f). The protections against waiver provided by Rule 502 must be applicable when protected communications or information disclosed in federal proceedings are subsequently offered in state proceedings. Otherwise, the holders of protected communications and information, and their lawyers, could not rely on the protections provided by the Rule, and the goal of limiting costs in discovery would be substantially undermined. Rule 502(g) [sic] is intended to resolve any potential tension between the provisions of Rule 502 that apply to state proceedings and the possible limitations on the applicability of the Federal Rules of Evidence otherwise provided by Rules 101 and 1101.

The rule is intended to apply in all federal court proceedings, including court-annexed and court-ordered arbitrations, without regard to any possible limitations of Rules 101 and 1101. This provision is not intended to raise an inference about the applicability of any other rule of evidence in arbitration proceedings more generally.

The costs of discovery can be equally high for state and federal causes of action, and the rule seeks to limit those costs in all federal proceedings, regardless of whether the claim arises under state or federal law. Accordingly, the rule applies to state law causes of action brought in federal court.

Subdivision (g). The rule's coverage is limited to attorney-client privilege and work product. The operation of waiver by disclosure, as applied to other evidentiary privileges, remains a question of federal common law. Nor does the rule purport to apply to the Fifth Amendment privilege against compelled self-incrimination.

The definition of work product "materials" is intended to include both tangible and intangible information. See In re Cendant Corp. Sec. Litig., 343 F.3d 658, 662 (3d Cir. 2003) ("work product protection extends to both tangible and intangible work product").

Rule 1001. Definitions

For purposes of this article the following definitions are applicable:

(1) Writings and recordings. "Writings" and "recordings" consist of letters, words, or numbers, or their equivalent, set down by handwriting, typewriting, printing, photostating, photographing, magnetic impulse, mechanical or electronic recording, or other form of data compilation.

(2) Photographs. "Photographs" include still photographs, X-ray films, video tapes, and motion pictures.

(3) Original. An "original" of a writing or recording is the writing or recording itself or any counterpart intended to have the same effect by a person executing or issuing it. An "original" of a photograph includes the negative or any print therefrom. If data are stored in a computer or similar device, any printout or other output readable by sight, shown to reflect the data accurately, is an "original".

(4) Duplicate. A "duplicate" is a counterpart produced by the same impression as the original, or from the same matrix, or by means of photography, including enlargements and miniatures, or by mechanical or electronic re-recording, or by chemical reproduction, or by other equivalent techniques which accurately reproduces the original. (Jan. 2, 1975, P.L. 93-595, § 1, 88 Stat. 1945.)

Rule 1002. Requirement of Original

To prove the content of a writing, recording, or photograph, the original writing, recording, or photograph is required, except as otherwise provided in these rules or by Act of Congress. (Jan. 2, 1975, P.L. 93-595, § 1, 88 Stat. 1946.)

Rule 1003. Admissibility of Duplicates

A duplicate is admissible to the same extent as an original unless (1) a genuine question is raised as to the authenticity of the original or (2) in the circumstances it would be unfair to admit the duplicate in lieu of the original. (Jan. 2, 1975, P.L. 93-595, § 1, 88 Stat. 1946.)

Rule 1004. Admissibility of Other Evidence of Contents

The original is not required, and other evidence of the contents of a writing, recording, or photograph is admissible if--

(1) Originals lost or destroyed. All originals are lost or have been destroyed, unless the proponent lost or destroyed them in bad faith; or

(2) Original not obtainable. No original can be obtained by any available judicial process or procedure; or

(3) Original in possession of opponent. At a time when an original was under the control of the party against whom offered, that party was put on notice, by the pleadings or otherwise, that the contents would be a subject of proof at the hearing, and that party does not produce the original at the hearing; or

(4) Collateral matters. The writing, recording, or photograph is not closely related to a controlling issue. (Jan. 2, 1975, P.L. 93-595, § 1, 88 Stat. 1946; Oct. 1, 1987.)

§ 2.01 Purpose of Guide

This procedural guide is intended as a general outline of the procedures an attorney should follow in a civil action. The guide provides an overview of pretrial procedures and trial motions for both plaintiff and defendant in a civil action, as well as posttrial procedures for the prevailing and non-prevailing parties. References are made to specific chapters for detailed procedural guides to be used for particular actions or procedures. Not every procedure set forth in this guide will be appropriate in every case.

§ 2.02 Scope of Guide; Proceedings Not Included

The scope of this guide is limited to civil actions, as distinguished from special proceedings [see discussion under Civil Actions and Special Proceedings--Distinguished, below]. It therefore does not cover the following special proceedings:

1. Mandate. For procedures in mandate proceedings, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition and Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decision through Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

2. Prohibition. For procedures to obtain a writ of prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

3. Certiorari (or review). For procedures to be followed in obtaining a writ of review or certiorari, see Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of.

4. Habeas corpus. For procedures to obtain a writ of habeas corpus, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus .

5. Dissolution of marriage. For procedures in dissolution proceedings, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

6. Legal separation. For procedures to obtain a legal separation, see Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure .

7. Annulment. For procedures to obtain an annulment, see Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights .

8. Unlawful or forcible detainer. For procedures in unlawful detainer and forcible detainer proceedings, see Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions .

9. Eminent domain. For procedures in eminent domain proceedings, see Ch. 247, Eminent Domain, § 247.10 et seq..

10. Probate or contest of a will. For procedures in probate or contest of a will, see Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests .

11. Adoption. For procedures in adoption proceedings, see Ch. 12, Adoptions: Nature and Effect , through Ch. 12E, Adoptions: Attack on Decree .

This guide does not cover small claims court actions, since generally an attorney may not represent a client in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.530]. For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to small claims courts, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

§ 2.03 Local Court Rules

The procedures set forth in this procedural guide are based on the applicable state statutes and California Rules of Court. Counsel should note, however, that many courts have local rules that may be also applicable to a particular procedure. Counsel should therefore be sure to ascertain whether or not the court in which he or she is proceeding has any such rules and, if so, to comply with those rules as well.

Failure to comply with local court rules could result in the imposition of sanctions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.30; see also Bergman v. Rifkind & Sterling, Inc. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1380, 1382-1387, 278 Cal. Rptr. 583] . For discussion of sanctions, see Ch. 510, Sanctions .

Chapter 2 PROCEDURAL GUIDE FOR CIVIL ACTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.04

§ 2.04 Trial Court Delay Reduction Rules

[1] Generally

The Trial Court Delay Reduction Act [Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.] requires all superior courts in California to eliminate delay in the progress and ultimate resolution of litigation [Gov. Code §§ 68605.5, 68607, 68620(a)]. The local court rules adopted under the Act significantly impact on the procedure the cases will follow.

Attorneys litigating actions governed by trial delay reduction programs should consult the rules directly. For further discussion of the local delay reduction rules, see Ch. 552, Trial Court Delay Reduction .

[2] Actions Governed by Rules

Trial court delay reduction programs do not apply to the following:

(1) Small claims [Gov. Code § 68620(b)].

(2) Unlawful detainer [Gov. Code § 68620(b)].

(3) Juvenile cases [Gov. Code § 68608(a)].

(4) Probate cases [Gov. Code § 68608(a)].

(5) Domestic relations cases [Gov. Code § 68608(a)].

A court's local rules may exclude from the court's delay reduction program cases that are assigned, based on subject matter, to a judge or judges for all purposes [Gov. Code § 68608(a)].

Local rules may identify additional cases or stages of cases that are not covered by that court's Trial Court Delay Reduction program. For example, Los Angeles excepts, among other things, eminent domain pretrial proceedings, pretrial proceedings in asbestos exposure cases, cases stayed by a bankruptcy, writs of mandate, uninsured motorist cases, and other cases as may be designated by the Presiding Judge or Supervising Judge of a district [see Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 7.2(b)].

[3] Service of Complaint and Proof of Service

Trial delay reduction rules significantly shorten the time in which a plaintiff is required to serve a complaint and file proof of service. Generally, a plaintiff must serve a complaint within three years of the complaint's filing, and proof of service must be filed within three years and 60 days of the filing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. In comparison, delay reduction rules generally require that service of the complaint be completed and proof of service filed with the court 60 days after the filing of the complaint [see, e.g., San Diego Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Div. II, Rule 2.5; see also Gov. Code § 68616(a), (j) (rules may not require shorter time period for service of complaint than 60 days after filing)].

Determine if county local rule requires special documents to accompany the complaint either at the time of filing or service.

[4] Pretrial Procedure

Although the rules vary from county to county, parties in delay reduction cases must be prepared to encounter accelerated pretrial procedures. For example, Los Angeles County requires the first status conference to be held not later than 180 days after the complaint is filed, and anticipates that substantial discovery will have been conducted by that time [Los Angeles Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 7.9(a) (time set to hold conference at earliest time that case can be referred to arbitration under Gov. Code § 68616(g))].

Chapter 2 PROCEDURAL GUIDE FOR CIVIL ACTIONS
PART I. SCOPE

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.05

§ 2.05 Civil Actions and Special Proceedings

[1] Distinguished

There are two separate and distinct kinds of civil judicial remedies. They are (1) civil actions, and (2) special proceedings of a civil nature [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 20, 21]. Both a civil action and a special proceeding of a civil nature are sometimes referred to as a "proceeding," although the term when applied to an action is normally preceded by the adjective "ordinary" [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 22]; hence, the term "ordinary proceeding" is synonymous with the term "civil action." Otherwise stated, a civil remedy may be either a civil action, which is an ordinary proceeding, or a special proceeding of a civil nature, sometimes shortened to "special proceeding," or simply to "proceeding" without a modifier.

A civil action is an ordinary proceeding in a court of justice by which one party prosecutes another for the declaration, enforcement, or protection of a right, or the redress or prevention of a wrong [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 22, 30]. Every other civil remedy is a special proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 23]. A civil action arises out of an obligation or an injury [Code Civ. Proc. § 25]. "Obligation" is defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 26 and "injury" in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 27-29.

[2] Provisional Remedies Distinguished

Special proceedings should not be confused with provisional remedies, which are merely remedies ancillary or incidental to a pending civil action or special proceeding. There are five provisional remedies: (1) claim and delivery [see Code Civ. Proc. § 511.010 et seq.]; (2) temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 525 et seq.]; (3) attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq.]; (4) receivership [see Code Civ. Proc. § 564 et seq.]; and (5) deposit in court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 572 et seq.].

[3] Governing Law

Civil actions are governed by the provisions of Part Two of the Code of Civil Procedure, entitled "Civil Actions," that is, by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 307-1062.10. Special proceedings of a civil nature are, on the other hand, governed by the specific statutes creating the special proceeding. Numerous such proceedings are governed by the provisions of Part III of the Code of Civil Procedure, entitled "Special Proceedings," that is, by Code Civ. Proc. §§

1063-1822.59. The most common examples of special proceedings covered are:

- Mandate, prohibition, and certiorari proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1067 et seq.].

- Proceedings in unlawful detainer, forcible detainer, and forcible entry [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1159 et seq.].

- Eminent domain proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.010 et seq.].

- Contempt proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1209 et seq.].

- Arbitration proceedings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.].

Common examples of special proceedings covered in a code other than the Code of Civil Procedure are proceedings under the Family Code [see Fam. Code § 200 et seq.]. Other common examples include proceedings in probate under the Probate Code [see Prob. Code § 7000 et seq.]. The important thing to note is that the provisions of Part Two of the Code of Civil Procedure apply only to civil actions and not to special proceedings of a civil nature, except as follows:

- A particular statute in Part Two may by its own terms apply to "civil actions" and "special proceedings of a civil nature" (in some statutes, shortened to "special proceedings" or simply to "proceedings"), in which event the statute will apply by its own force to both civil actions and special proceedings.

- The statutory provisions governing the particular special proceedings may incorporate specific statutory provisions from Part Two or may, by a blanket provision, incorporate the provisions of Part Two.

§ 2.10 Facts to Be Ascertained

Not all of the following facts will be relevant in all types of actions; this listing is only intended to be a general guide. In addition, not all of the facts will be ascertainable from the client in the initial interview. Subsequent interviews may be required or it may be necessary to ascertain the facts from another person, including the potential defendant, through discovery procedures.

1. Facts relating to plaintiff.

a. Name, address, home telephone number, sex, and age.

b. Aliases used (past or present).

c. Capacity.

d. Prior addresses.

e. Occupation.

f. Employment, including:
(1) Name, address and telephone number of present employer.

(2) Date employment commenced.

(3) Time and length of absences from work and reasons therefor.

(4) Gross and net earnings.

g. Prior employment with inclusive dates of absences, if possible, and reasons therefor.

h. Marital status. If married, name of spouse and address if different from that of plaintiff.

i. Prior marriages with reason for, and date of, termination of each.

j. Children. Identify by name, age, and sex, and, if not living with plaintiff, address.

k. If plaintiff sustained physical injury for which recovery is sought, prior illnesses and prior injuries, if any, together with names and addresses of each treating physician and hospital, a description of treatment given, and prognosis of each illness and injury.

l. Plaintiff's insurance coverage.

(1) Name and address of insurer(s) and agent(s).

(2) Type(s) and amount(s) of coverage.

(3) Whether any claim(s) were filed in connection with transaction or occurrence involved.

m. Plaintiff's prior criminal record, if any.

n. Plaintiff's military status, now and within the last 90 days [see 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 522 (discretionary stay), 526 (tolling)].

o. Plaintiff's documents and platforms: paper, electronic, other.

2. Facts relating to cause of action. For specific facts to be ascertained in a particular action, see the chapter relating to particular cause of action.

a. Date and time.

b. Place.

c. Description of transaction or occurrence.

d. Names, capacities, and addresses of all parties involved.

e. Description of what each person did so far as plaintiff can recollect.

f. Any other facts relevant to cause of action.

3. Damages sustained by plaintiff.

Chapter 2 PROCEDURAL GUIDE FOR CIVIL ACTIONS
PART II. PROCEDURAL GUIDE: PRETRIAL PROCEDURES AND TRIAL MOTIONS
A. Plaintiff's Guide

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.12

§ 2.12 Preliminary Determinations and Proceedings

1. Potential causes of action and defenses.

After ascertaining relevant facts [see § 2.10], obtaining pertinent documents [see § 2.11], and researching applicable law, determine:

a. All potential causes of action that plaintiff may have against defendant(s).

b. All potential defenses that may be asserted against plaintiff.

c. All potential cross claims that may be asserted against plaintiff.

2. Time limitation for filing action.

a. Applicable statute of limitations period.

Determine statute of limitations period applicable to each potential cause of action. For table of statutory limitation periods, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

b. Tolling of statute of limitations period.

Determine whether limitation period has been tolled by statutory provision or otherwise, including:

(1) Defendant's absence from state [see Code Civ. Proc. § 351].

(2) Plaintiff's minority [see Code Civ. Proc. § 352].

(3) Plaintiff's insanity [see Code Civ. Proc. § 352].

(4) Plaintiff's imprisonment on criminal charge or conviction for term less than life; tolling limited to two years [see Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1].

(5) Stay of commencement of action by injunction or statutory prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 356].

(6) Defendant's fraudulent concealment of plaintiff's cause of action [see Pashley v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 226, 229-232, 153 P.2d 325] .

(7) Defendant's military status, now and within the last 90 days [see 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 522 (discretionary stay), 524 (stay of execution, vacation or stay of attachments), 526 (tolling)].

(8) Plaintiff's military status, now and within the last 90 days [see 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 522 (discretionary stay), 526 (tolling)].

(9) Any other ground for tolling the running of limitation period for commencing action. For a discussion of provisions for tolling the statute of limitations, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

c. Laches period.

If plaintiff is seeking equitable relief, determine whether action may be barred at a date earlier than that set forth in applicable statute of limitations under doctrine of laches, that is, by a delay in commencing action that was prejudicial to the defendant [see Conti v. Board of Civil Service Comm'rs (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 351, 359-360, 82 Cal. Rptr. 337, 461 P.2d 617] .

3. Necessity for presentation of prior written claim.

a. Action against public entity or employee.

(1) Determine whether plaintiff's cause of action is one for which written claim must be presented to public entity before maintaining action [see Gov. Code §§ 905-905.6, 945.4]. For a discussion of when a claim must be presented, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

(2) If presentation of a claim is required but a claim has not previously been filed, prepare and file claim in manner and within the special time limits specified in Gov. Code §§ 910-915.4. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to procedure for presenting a claim and obtaining relief when a timely claim has not been filed, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

b. Action against estate of decedent.

(1) Determine whether plaintiff's cause of action is one for which a written claim must be filed with the court and a copy of the claim mailed to the personal representative [see Prob. Code § 9000 et seq. (filing of claim)]. For discussion of when claims must be filed before maintaining an action against a decedent's estate, see Ch. 454, Probate: Claims Against the Estate .

(2) If filing of claim is required but a claim has not previously been filed, prepare and file claim in manner and within time limits specified in Prob. Code § 9000 et seq. For a form of claim, see Ch. 442, Probate: Initiating Probate Administration .

4. Plaintiff's capacity and standing to sue.

a. Generally.

Determine whether person bringing action is real party in interest [see Code Civ. Proc. § 367].

b. Minor, incompetent person, or person for whom conservator has been appointed.

(1) Determine whether guardian or conservator for plaintiff's person or estate has previously been appointed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372] and if so whether he or she will appear on behalf of plaintiff in action or proceeding. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of conservators and guardians, see Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, and Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators.

(2) If plaintiff has no guardian or conservator, or if appointment of a guardian ad litem otherwise appears expedient, petition for appointment of guardian ad litem to appear on plaintiff's behalf, if one has not already been appointed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 372, 373]. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of guardians ad litem, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

c. Unborn or unascertained persons.

(1) Determine whether under terms of written instrument or otherwise person or persons of designated class, who are unascertained or who are not in being, may be or may become legally interested in any real or personal property involved in the action or proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 373.5].

(2) Request appointment of guardian ad litem to represent such persons, if appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 373.5]. For discussion and forms pertaining to appointment of a guardian ad litem in such circumstances, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.14. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of guardians ad litem in general, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

d. Estate of decedent.

Determine whether person initiating action is personal representative or, if none, the decedent's successor in interest, and therefore entitled to bring action on behalf of decedent's estate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 369; Prob. Code § 573]. For discussion and forms pertaining to actions by personal representative of decedent to recover damages based on cause of action that accrued before decedent's death, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

e. Express trust.

Determine whether person initiating action is trustee or other person authorized to bring action against third parties on behalf of beneficiaries of trust [see Code Civ. Proc. § 369].

f. Owners' association.

(1) Determine if action is for damages to commonly owned lots, parcels, or areas or individually owned lots, parcels, or areas which owners' association is obligated to maintain, preserve, or repair occasioned by acts or omissions of others [see Code Civ. Proc. § 383].

(2) If so, determine whether person initiating action is owners' association established in a project consisting of [see Code Civ. Proc. § 383]:

(a) Condominiums, as defined in Civ. Code § 783;

(b) Community apartment project, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 11004;

(c) Undivided interest subdivision project, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 11001.1; or

(d) Planned development, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.

g. Class action.

For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding class actions, see Ch. 120, Class Actions .

Determine whether person initiating action is member of class of persons and whether [see Code Civ. Proc. § 382]:

(1) There is question of common or general interest of many persons, or

(2) Parties are numerous and it is impracticable to bring them all before the court.

h. Wrongful death.

For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding wrongful death actions, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

Determine whether person who initiated action is or was either [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 et seq.]:

(1) Entitled to succeed to property of decedent according to provisions of the Probate Code relating to intestate succession;

(2) Putative spouse, children of putative spouse, stepchildren, or parents, if dependent on decedent; or

(3) Minor residing at time of decedent's death and for previous 180 days in decedent's household and dependent on decedent for one-half or more of his or her support.

5. Potential disabilities to maintaining action.

a. Person transacting business under fictitious name.

(1) Determine whether plaintiff's action is based on contract made or transaction had under fictitious business name [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

(2) If so, have plaintiff execute, file, and publish fictitious business name statement as required by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17900-17930 if he or she has not done so previously [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918; see also discussion in Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties].

b. Foreign corporation or limited liability company transacting intrastate business.

(1) If action arises out of intrastate business transacted by plaintiff corporation, ascertain whether it has qualified to transact business in California as required by Corp. Code § 2105 or is exempted pursuant to Corp. Code § 2102. In case of foreign limited liability company, ascertain whether it has registered to transact intrastate business as required by Corp. Code § 17451.

(2) If plaintiff corporation has not qualified to transact business in California but is required to qualify, obtain a certificate of qualification from Secretary of State pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2106 before commencing action [see Corp. Code § 2203(c)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms for qualifying to do business, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity . In case of foreign limited liability company, register with Secretary of State pursuant to Corp. Code § 17451 before commencing action [see Corp. Code § 17456(a)].

c. Suspension of powers of domestic corporation or domestic or foreign limited liability company registered to transact intrastate business in California.

(1) Failure by to file biennual statement.

(a) Determine if plaintiff's powers have been suspended for failure to file an annual statement as required by Corp. Code § 1502 (corporations) or Corp. Code § 17060 (limited liability company) [see Corp. Code §§ 2205(a), 17654(a)].

(b) If plaintiff's powers have been suspended, file required statement. On filing, Secretary of State will certify fact that a statement has been filed to the Franchise Tax Board and corporation or LLC may be relieved from suspension unless it is held in suspension by the FTB by reason of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 or 23301.5 [see Corp. Code §§ 2205(d), 17654(d)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding suspension of corporate powers, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

(2) Failure to pay state taxes.

(a) Determine whether plaintiff's powers have been forfeited or suspended for nonpayment of state taxes [see Rev. & Tax Code § 23301], for failure to file return [see Rev. & Tax Code § 23301.5], or for failure to file statement of exemption [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23775].

(b) If plaintiff's powers have been suspended under Rev. & Tax Code § 23301 or 23301.5, obtain certificate of revivor from Franchise Tax Board by making written application therefor and by paying all taxes, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts due [see Rev. & Tax Code § 23305; see also Rev. & Tax Code § 23305b (revivor of powers on partial payment of taxes if revivor will improve prospects for recovery of full amount due); Rev. & Tax Code § 23776 (relief from suspension)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding suspension or forfeiture of powers, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

d. Failure to obtain license.

(1) Determine whether cause of action arises out of activity requiring license. For discussion regarding when license required, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts , and Ch. 471B, Licensing by Public Agencies .

(2) Ascertain whether requirements of appropriate licensing statute have been met. For discussion regarding licensing statute requirements, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts , and Ch. 471B, Licensing by Public Agencies .

(3) If license required and licensing statute requirements have been met, obtain certificate from officer in charge of records of any agency in Department of Consumer Affairs [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 101].

(4) If license required and licensing statute requirements have not been met, determine whether object of statute requiring license is solely for revenue or for purpose of protection that would bar any action by plaintiff [see Wood v. Krepps (1914) 168 Cal. 382, 386-387, 143 P. 691 ; Mansfield v. Hyde (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 133, 139, 245 P.2d 577] . For further discussion, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts , and Ch. 471B, Licensing by Public Agencies .

e. Party in military service.

(1) If ability of party in military service to prosecute or defend action is materially affected by reason of his or her military service, a stay is mandatory; otherwise it is discretionary [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 522]. For discussion, see Ch. 136, Continuances .

(2) Default of party in military service cannot be taken without appointment of counsel and giving of bond, and may later be set aside if prejudice is shown [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 521]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments, and Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders.

(3) Attachment, garnishment, or execution of judgment or order entered against party in military service may be stayed or vacated if his or her ability to comply with judgment or order is materially affected by reason of his or her military service [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 524]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 62, Attachment , and Ch. 276, Garnishment .

(4) Enforcement of leases, installment contracts, and security agreements, including repossessions and foreclosures, other than under court order that may impose any conditions necessary to conserve interests of all parties, is misdemeanor and may be vacated [50 U.S.C. App. § 531 et seq.; see Luke v. Mercantile Acceptance Corp. (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 431, 436-437, 244 P.2d 764 (repossession in violation of these provisions amounts to conversion)]. See discussion in Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act, § 89.29; Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans , General Introduction; Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions; Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales, and Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages.

6. Venue.

a. Determine county or counties in which action may be commenced and tried.

(1) General rule.

Except as otherwise provided by law, proper county is county in which defendant, or any defendant, resides at commencement of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

(2) Action for injury to person or personal property or for wrongful death.

Proper county is either [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]:
(a) County where injury or injury causing death occurred, or

(b) County where defendant, or any defendant, resides at commencement of action.

(3) Action or proceeding against state or state department, institution, board, commission, bureau, officer, or other agency required or authorized by law to be commenced, tried, or removed to Sacramento County.

May be commenced and tried in any California city in which Attorney General has an office [see Code Civ. Proc. § 401(1)].

(4) Action or proceeding against county, city, or local agency.

(a) If brought by another county, city, or local agency, proper county is any county not a party to the action and in which city or local agency is not situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)].

(b) Otherwise, proper county is defendant county, or county in which defendant city or local agency is situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)].

(5) Certain actions against public officer or person especially appointed to execute officer's duties.

In action based on act done by public officer in virtue of his or her office, or against a person who, by officer's command or in officer's aid, did anything touching duties of officer, proper county is county in which cause of action, or some part of it, arose [see Code Civ. Proc. § 393(b)].

(6) Certain actions against personal representative, guardian, conservator, or trustee.

In action in which such person is sued in his or her official capacity on claim for payment of money or for recovery of personal property, proper county is county having jurisdiction of estate he or she represents, except as otherwise provided in Prob. Code § 17005 pertaining to trustees [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.1; see Prob. Code § 17005 (proceeding under the Trust Law, Prob. Code § 15000 et seq., generally); see also Prob. Code § 82 (definition of trust), Prob. Code §§ 17300-17302 (testamentary trust subject to continuing court jurisdiction); for discussion, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts].

(7) Action against corporation or association.

(a) Proper county is generally county where corporation's principal place of business is situated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

(b) If action based on contract, proper county also includes county [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]:

(i) Where contract was made or was to be performed,

(ii) Where obligation or liability arose, or

(iii) Where breach occurred.

(8) Action to recover or determine right to recover real property or an estate or interest in real property.

Proper county is county in which real property or some part of it is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)].

(9) Action for injury to real property.

Proper county is county in which real property or some part of it is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)].

(10) Action to foreclose lien or mortgage on real property.

Proper county is county in which real property or some part of it is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(2)].

(11) Action for partition of property.

(a) If subject of action is real property or real and personal property, proper county is that in which real property or some part of it is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.110(b)(1)].

(b) If subject of action is personal property, proper county is either [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.110(b)(2)]:

(i) County in which personal property is principally located at commencement of action, or

(ii) County in which defendants, or any of them, reside at commencement of action.

(12) Action to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute.

(a) Proper county is generally county in which cause arose [Code Civ. Proc. § 393(a)].

(b) When penalty or forfeiture imposed for an offense committed on a lake, river, or other stream of water situated in two or more counties, action may be tried in any county bordering on the lake, river, or stream opposite to the place where the offense was committed [Code Civ. Proc. § 393(a)].

(13) Action on contract.

Proper county is either [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]:

(a) County in which contract in fact was entered into,

(b) County where obligation was to be performed (county in which obligation was incurred is deemed to be county in which it was to be performed unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]), or

(c) County where defendant or any defendant, resides at commencement of action.

(14) Action Under Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.).

Proper county is that in which [Civ. Code § 1812.10]:

(a) Contract was in fact signed by buyer;

(b) Buyer resided at time contract was entered into;

(c) Buyer resides at commencement of action; or

(d) Goods purchased pursuant to the contract have been so affixed to real property as to become a part thereof.

(15) Action under Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.).

Proper county is that in which [Civ. Code § 2984.4]:

(a) Contract or purchase order was in fact signed by buyer;

(b) Buyer resided at time contract or purchase order was entered into;

(c) Buyer resides at commencement of action; or

(d) Motor vehicle purchased pursuant to contract or purchase order is permanently garaged.

(16) Action on consumer obligations specified in Civ. Code § 395(b).

In action arising from an offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use (other than an obligation described in Civ. Code § 1812.10 or 2984.4) or an action arising from a transaction consummated as a proximate result of either an unsolicited telephone call made by a seller engaged in the business of consummating transactions of that kind or a telephone call or electronic transmission made by the buyer or lessee in response to a solicitation by the seller, the proper county is that in which the buyer or lessee [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)]:

(a) In fact signed contract;

(b) Resided at the time contract was entered into; or

(c) Resides at commencement of action.

(17) Action authorized by Fam. Code § 7600 et seq. to determine a parental relation.

(a) Proper county is generally that in which child resides [Fam. Code § 7620(b); Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

(b) If father is deceased, action may be brought in county in which proceedings for probate of his estate have been or could be brought [Fam. Code § 7620(b)].

(18) Action to enforce support obligation.

In action to enforce support obligation under Fam. Code § 3900 (relating to parents' duty to support children), proper county is that in which child resides [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

(19) Defendant about to depart from state.

Action may be tried in any county where either of the parties resides or where service is made [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

(20) None of defendants resides in state.

Action may be tried in any county which plaintiff designates in complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

(21) Defendants residing in state but county in which defendants reside unknown to plaintiff.

Action may be tried in any county which plaintiff designates in complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

7. Subject matter jurisdiction. Determine the court in which action may or must be filed.

a. Unlimited civil case.

Unlimited civil cases are within jurisdiction of superior court [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85-86]. For listing of limited civil cases, see Paragraph b, below. Superior court also has jurisdiction over certain actions and proceedings under specific statutory provisions, for example:

(1) All proceedings under Family Code [Fam. Code § 200].

(2) Proceedings regarding decedents' estates [Prob. Code §§ 7050-7052].

(3) Juvenile court proceedings [Welf. & Inst. Code § 245].

b. Limited civil case.

Limited civil cases are within the jurisdiction of the superior court [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10].

The following types of civil actions and proceedings are limited civil cases:

(1) All cases at law in which demand, excluding interest, or value of property in controversy, amounts to $25,000 or less, unless case involves legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1)].

(2) Actions for dissolution of partnership when total assets of partnership do not exceed $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(2)].

(3) Actions of interpleader when amount of money or value of property involved does not exceed $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(2)].

(4) Actions to cancel or rescind contract when relief is sought in connection with action to recover money not exceeding $25,000, or recover property of a value not exceeding $25,000, paid or delivered under or in consideration of contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(3)].

(5) Actions to revise a contract when relief is sought in action on contract, if court otherwise has jurisdiction of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(3)].

(6) Actions to enforce and foreclose liens on personal property when amount of liens is $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(5)].

(7) Actions to enforce and foreclose, or petitions to release, liens of mechanics, materialmen, artisans, laborers, and of all other persons to whom liens are given under provisions of Civ. Code § 3109 et seq., or to enforce and foreclose an assessment lien on a common interest development as defined in Civ. Code § 1351, when amount of liens is $25,000 or less, unless action affects property that is also affected by a similar pending action that is not a limited civil case, or when total amount of the liens sought to be foreclosed against the same property aggregates amount in excess of $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(6)].

(8) Actions for declaratory relief when brought [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(7); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]:

(a) By way of cross complaint as to a right of indemnity with respect to the relief demanded in the complaint or a cross complaint in an action or proceeding that is otherwise a limited civil case; or

(b) To conduct a trial after a nonbinding fee arbitration between an attorney and client, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., when the amount in controversy is $25,000 or less.

(9) Proceedings to issue temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions, to take accounts, and where necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party to a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(8)].

(10) Proceedings to appoint a receiver pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 564 (appointment of receiver) in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(8)].

(11) Actions to determine title to personal property seized in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(8)].

(12) Actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 708.210 et seq. for recovery of interest in personal property or to enforce liability of the debtor of a judgment debtor when interest adversely claimed is of value not exceeding $25,000 or debt denied does not exceed $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(9)].

(13) All arbitration related petitions filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(10)]:

(a) Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1292 et seq., except for uninsured motorist arbitration proceedings in accordance with Ins. Code § 11580.2, if the petition is filed before the arbitration award becomes final and the matter to be resolved by arbitration is a limited civil case under Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(1)-(9), inclusive, or the petition is filed after the arbitration award becomes final and the amount of the award and all other rulings, pronouncements, and decisions made in the award are within Code Civ. Proc. §

86(a)(1)-(9), inclusive; or

(b) To confirm, correct, or vacate a fee arbitration award between an attorney and client that is binding or has become binding, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., when the arbitration award is $25,000 or less.

(14) Cases to try title to personal property when amount involved is not more than $25,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(1)].

(15) Cases when equity is pleaded as a defensive matter in any case that is otherwise a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(2)].

(16) Proceedings to vacate judgment or order obtained in a limited civil case through extrinsic fraud, mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 86(b)(3)].

8. Settlement value.

a. Ascertain amount that will compensate plaintiff for out-of-pocket expenses (special damages), costs of litigation, and attorney's fees.

b. Consider any subrogation and lien rights of any insurers and agencies providing benefits to plaintiff for losses caused by the accident.

c. Assess value of case as if there were no problems of law or evidence.

d. Consider any problems of law and evidence that might diminish probable recovery if case went to trial.

e. Assess minimum settlement value and negotiable settlement value.

9. Perpetuation of testimony and evidence.

If complaint cannot be filed immediately, initiate proceedings to perpetuate testimony under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. [see Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence , for procedure and forms] and obtain court order authorizing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.050]:

a. Depositions (and, if appropriate, physical, mental, or blood examinations) of any party or material witness whose testimony might be lost prior to due course of ordinary discovery, such as any person who is about to leave the state, or is in danger of death or incapacity.

b. Inspection, for copying or photographing, of any documents or property which might become lost or altered.

a. Determine whether there is an action pending in which plaintiff, as third party, has an interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 387(a)]:
(1) In matter in litigation,

(2) In success of either of parties, or

(3) Against both parties.

b. Draft complaint in intervention [Code Civ. Proc. § 387(a); for procedures for preparation of complaint, see § 2.14]:

(1) Joining plaintiff in claiming what is sought by original complaint,

(2) Uniting with defendant in resisting claims of plaintiff, or

(3) Demanding anything adversely to both plaintiff and defendant.

c. Apply for leave of court to file complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 387(a)].

d. Serve in manner provided for service of summons or in manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1010-1020 [Code Civ. Proc. § 387(a)]:

(1) On parties to action or proceeding who have not appeared in same manner as on commencement of an original action, and

(2) On attorneys of parties who have appeared or on party if he or she has appeared without an attorney.

2. Mandatory [Code Civ. Proc. § 387(b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 395, Parties .

a. If any provision of law confers unconditional right to intervene, prepare and file application to intervene [see Code Civ. Proc. § 387(b)].

b. If plaintiff is claiming interest relating to property or transaction that is subject of action and is so situated that disposition of action may as practical matter impair or impede ability to protect that interest, unless interest is adequately represented by existing parties, prepare and file application to intervene [see Code Civ. Proc. § 387(b)].

1. Contents.

a. Capacity of plaintiff [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 367-377].

b. Residence (generally optional, unless plaintiff is an entity, suing in a representative capacity, or it is necessary to establish proper venue or plaintiff's right to maintain action) [see e.g., Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-395.5].

c. Name, capacity, and residence of defendant or each defendant where more than one [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-395.5].

d. Fictitious name allegations, if appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

e. Agency allegations, if appropriate. For discussion, see Ch. 497, Principal and Agent .

f. Facts, other than residence of parties, showing proper venue, if required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

g. Facts constituting cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)].

For allegations to be included in the complaint in a particular action, see the article relating to the specific substantive cause of action.

h. Demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader claims he or she is entitled [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

i. Joinder of causes of action.

Join any other causes of action of plaintiff or of any co-plaintiffs with cause of action against defendant(s) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 427.10(a)].

j. Joinder of parties.
(1) Permissive.
(a) Plaintiffs.

If desired, include all persons who want to and may be joined as plaintiffs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a). For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 395, Parties .

(b) Defendants.

If desired, include all persons who may be joined as defendants pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a). For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 395, Parties .

(2) Compulsory.

(a) Join all persons who are required to be joined as parties pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a). For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 395, Parties .

(b) If consent of any person who should be made a plaintiff cannot be obtained, join him or her as defendant and state reasons in complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 382]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 395, Parties .

2. Drafting.

a. Comply with form, typing, paper, and style requirements of the California Rules of Court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.100 et seq.]. For discussion of form, typing, paper, and style requirements of the complaint, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions , and Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

b. Copies to be prepared.

(1) Original for filing.

(2) One or more copies for service on each defendant.

(3) Copy for office file.

(4) Copy for client, if desired.

(5) Additional copies as desired.

3. Signing.

Sign the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7]. For further discussion, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

4. Verification.

Use affidavit or declaration to verify pleading [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5] if verification required or desired. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 572, Verification .

a. Have verification prepared by [Code Civ. Proc. § 446]:

(1) Plaintiff, if an individual,

(2) Counsel, if plaintiff is out of the county in which counsel has his or her office or for some cause is unable to verify it or when facts are within attorney's knowledge, or

(3) Officer of corporation, if plaintiff is a corporation.

b. Have the verification executed (signed) by the person making it [Code Civ. Proc. § 446].

c. Make following statements in verification [Code Civ. Proc. § 446]:

(1) That the same is true of his or her own knowledge, except as to matters which are therein stated on his or her information or belief, and as to those matters that he or she believes it to be true,

(2) If pleading verified by attorney or any other person except one of parties:
(a) Reasons why it is not made by one of parties, and

(b) That he or she has read pleading and that he or she is informed and believes the matters therein to be true and on that ground alleges that the matters stated therein are true.

5. Prepare any papers required to be filed with complaint or before complaint is served, for example:

a. Cal. Judicial Council Form CM-010, Civil Case Cover Sheet, required unless the case is in small claims court or is filed under the Probate Code, Family Law Code or Welare and Institutions Code [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.220]. For discussion and an illustration of the form, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

b. Certificate of merit, which is to be filed on or before date the complaint is served on any defendant if action is for damages or indemnity arising out of professional negligence of architect, engineer, or land surveyor [see Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(a)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 56, Architects .

c. Notice of Related Case, if counsel knows of a related action or proceeding pending in any state or federal court in California [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.300 (duty applies when counsel files a case and thereafter whenever counsel learns of related action or proceeding)]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 137, Continuing Duties During Litigation .

d. Notice of Stay, if the party has requested or caused a stay of proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.650]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 137, Continuing Duties During Litigation .

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.17

§ 2.17 Provisional Remedies and Lis Pendens

1. Attachment.

If action is on claim or claims for money based on contract when total amount of claim or claims is fixed or readily ascertainable amount not less than $500 exclusive of costs, interest, and attorney's fees, and an order for right to attach and writ of attachment is desired to secure recovery on claim on which an attachment may be issued [see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010], prepare, file, and serve application for order for right to attach and for writ of attachment with court in which action brought either at time of filing the complaint or at any time thereafter [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 483.010-483.020, 484.010, 484.020, 484.030, 485.210]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 62, Attachment ; for forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 23, Attachment .

2. Claim and delivery.

If an action to recover personal property is brought, plaintiff asserts a present right to possession of the personal property, and immediate possession of the personal property is sought by plaintiff, prepare and file with court in which action is brought, at time of filing complaint or at any time thereafter, written application for writ of possession [see Code Civ. Proc. § 512.010(a)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery .

3. Temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction.

If any of the grounds for injunctive relief enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 526 exist, consider applying for temporary restraining order and/or preliminary injunction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

4. Receivership.

If any of the grounds enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(8), 564, or 565 exist, consider applying to court for appointment of receiver [see Code Civ. Proc. § 566(b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 486, Receivers .

5. Lis pendens.

If action concerns real property or title or right to possession of real property, consider filing notice of pendency of action in office of recorder in county where property is situated at the time of filing the complaint or at any time thereafter [see Code Civ. Proc. § 405.20]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 348, Lis Pendens .

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.18

§ 2.18 Issuance of Summons; Service of Summons, Complaint, and Case Questionnaire; Filing of Proof of Service; Maintenance of List of Parties

NOTE:
In actions conducted pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Gov. Code §§ 68600 et seq.), local rules may affect the procedure for service of summons and complaint and for filing proof of service. For further discussion, see § 2.04[3].

1. Issuance of summons.

Have one or more summons issued for each defendant by the clerk of the court in which the action is filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 412.10].

2. Service of summons and complaint.

Have a copy of summons served on each defendant, together with a copy of the complaint, and if the plaintiff is designating the action or proceeding as a complex case, a copy of the Civil Case Cover Sheet [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 413.10-416.70; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.220]. For procedure, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

3. Declaration of proof of service.

Prepare, or have prepared, a separate proof of service for each defendant served, have it executed, and file it with the court clerk [see Code Civ. Proc. § 417.10 et seq.]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

4. Case questionnaire.

In limited civil case, if desired, serve case questionnaires with the complaint using forms approved by Judicial Council [see Code Civ. Proc. § 93(a)].

5. List of parties.

a. If more than two parties have appeared in case and are represented by different counsel and plaintiff is named first in complaint [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.254]:

(1) Maintain a current list of the parties and the address for service of notice on each party.

(2) Furnish a copy of list on request to any party or to the court.

b. Each other party to action must [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.254]:

(1) Furnish the first-named plaintiff with his or her current address for service of notice when it first appears in the action.

(2) Furnish the first-named plaintiff with any changes in address for service of notice.

(3) Serve a copy of the list of parties at the time it serves an order, notice, or pleading on any party who has not yet appeared in the action.

§ 2.19 Default

1. Request for entry of default.

If service on defendant or cross defendant has been completed, and he or she does not answer, or otherwise appear in action as provided and within the time limits set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 585, request entry of default [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585].

a. If amount of damages was not specified in complaint [see Civ. Code § 3295(e) (no claim for exemplary damages to state amount); Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b) (amount not to be specified in actions for personal injury or wrongful death)], serve defendant with statement of damages or statement reserving the right to seek punitive damages in the same manner as service of summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11(d)(1), 425.115(g)(1)].

b. Prepare request for entry of default of defendant or cross defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 585] and request court judgment if appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585(b), (c), (e)]. Attach written request for court determination of the amount of attorney's fees, if appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a)].

c. File the application and affidavit or declaration, together with proof of service of summons, if required [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 585, 585.5(a)].

d. Request a hearing, if required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585].

2. Oppose motion to set aside.

If defendant serves and files a motion to set aside the default or default judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 585.5(b), prepare a memorandum in opposition. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.20

§ 2.20 Plaintiff's Response to Actions of Defendant

1. Response to demurrer to plaintiff's complaint.

a. Opposition to demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 et seq.].

(1) Prepare a memorandum in opposition to demurrer [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113]. For discussion and procedure, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for memoranda, see specific chapters in California Points and Authorities and, generally, California Points and Authorities, Ch. 71 Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

(2) File with judge or clerk of court in which action has been commenced, either personally or by mail, fax, or electronic filing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 465, 1005, 1010, 1010.6].

(3) Serve copy on each party at least 9 court days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 465, 1005(b), 1011-1013, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a)]. The latest a paper may be filed to be deemed timely is at the close of business of the clerk's office on the day the paper is due [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(e)]. No paper shall be rejected for filing on the ground that it was untimely submitted for filing. If the court, in its discretion, refuses to consider a late filed paper, the minutes or order is required to so indicate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(d)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

(4) Prepare, or have prepared, proof of service [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 417.10 et seq., 1013a]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

(5) Appear at hearing on demurrer [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(d)].

(6) If demurrer sustained with leave to amend, amend complaint within time allowed by court and serve copy on adverse party to avoid dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472, 472a(c), 581(f)(1)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

(7) If demurrer sustained without leave to amend or if plaintiff elects not to amend, resulting in dismissal of entire case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(c)], consider appealing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472c(a), 902-904.2; see also § 2.63].

(8) If demurrer sustained as to only part of complaint without leave to amend but not resulting in dismissal of entire case, consider applying for writ of mandate for immediate review of decision sustaining demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1067 et seq.]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

(9) If demurrer overruled, continue with action as before [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472a(b), 472b].

b. Motion to strike all or portion of demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435 et seq.].

If demurrer contains any irrelevant, false, or improper matter, or was not drawn or filed in conformity with the laws of California, court rule, or court order:

(1) Prepare, file and serve notice of motion to strike all or a portion of demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b), 436]. For discussion and procedure, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings .

(2) Attend hearing on motion and demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. 435(b)(3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322].

(3) If demurrer is stricken and no answer is filed, court must allow answer to be filed on terms that are just [Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(c)].

2. Response to motions by defendant.

a. Generally.

If defendant has served and filed any responsive motions, such as a motion to strike the complaint, a motion for summary judgment, or a motion for change of venue [see §§ 2.43, 2.47]:

(1) Prepare a memorandum in opposition to each such motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113], together with affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury, if required. For procedure, see specific articles in this set pertaining to the particular type of motion, as well as Ch. 372, Motions and Orders; for memoranda see specific chapters in California Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender).

(2) File all papers opposing noticed motion with judge or clerk of court in which action has been commenced and serve copy on each party at least 9 court days before time appointed for hearing [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 465, 1005(b), 1011-1013, 1015; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1300(a)]. For procedure, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

(3) Prepare, or have prepared, proof of service [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 417.10-417.40, 1013a]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

(4) Appear at hearing.

b. Opposition to motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication.

If defendant has moved for summary judgment or summary adjudication, if desired, serve and file opposition to motion not less than 14 days preceding noticed or continued date of hearing, unless court for good cause orders otherwise [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(2)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment .

c. Opposition to motion to strike complaint.

(1) Prepare opposition to motion as set forth in Paragraph a, above.

(2) If motion to strike whole complaint or portion thereof is granted with leave to amend, amend complaint within time allowed by court and serve copy on adverse party to avoid dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472, 472a(c), 581(f)(4)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

(3) If motion to strike whole complaint is granted without leave to amend, or if plaintiff elects not to amend, resulting in dismissal of entire case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(3)], consider appealing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 472c, 902-904.2; see also § 2.63].

3. Response to defendant's answer.

a. Demurrrer to answer.

(1) If answer contains any of the defects enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.20, demur to whole answer or any one or more of several defenses set up in answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.20, 430.30(a), 430.50(b), 430.60; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320]. If plaintiff fails to demur to answer, he or she is deemed to have waived objection unless objection is that answer does not state facts sufficient to constitute defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(b)].

(2) Serve and file demurrer within 10 days after service of answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.40(b)]. Serve and file notice of hearing with demurrer specifying hearing date in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

b. Motion to strike.

If answer contains any irrelevant, false, or improper matter, or was not drawn or filed in conformity with California laws, court rule, or order of court, move to strike all or a portion of answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b), 436] within 10 days after service of the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(1), 430.40(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 (extensions of time for response when moving papers are served by mail, overnight delivery, or fax)]. For discussion and procedure, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings ; for forms of memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender).

c. Motion to transfer to court having subject matter jurisdiction.

If answer asserts any matter beyond jurisdiction of court in which action was filed, prepare, file, and serve motion to transfer to court having subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Matthew Bender).

4. Response to cross complaint, naming plaintiff as cross defendant, filed and served by defendant.

Prepare, serve, and file one or more of following responses within 30 days after service of cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 432.10]:

a. If cross complaint is not proper, that is, if it does not meet requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10-428.70, make motion to strike all or part [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 432.10, 435, 436; see also § 2.43]. For details of procedure, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings .

b. If cross complaint is proper but does not state a cause of action within jurisdiction of court:

(1) If there is no court in California that would have jurisdiction thereof, demur on ground that court lacks subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (2), below]. If court sustains demurrer without leave to amend, it may dismiss the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(1)]. For details of procedure on demurrer, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

(2) If there is such a court, move to have action transferred to such court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (5), below]. For details of procedure and forms, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction .

c. If cross complaint contains any of other defects enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10, prepare, serve, and file demurrer to cross complaint with supporting memorandum [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(a), 430.60, 432.10; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (2), below]. For details of procedure, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

d. Prepare, file, and serve answer to cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10-428.80, 432.10; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (1), below] signed by plaintiffs (cross defendant's) attorney [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128.7, 422.10]. For discussion, procedure, and forms see Ch. 26, Answers , and Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

5. Response to request for statement of damages in superior court.

a. If defendant serves request for statement setting forth nature and amount of damages, serve responsive statement of damages within 15 days after service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 (extensions of time for response when moving papers are served by mail, overnight delivery, or fax)].

b. If no request is made for such statement, give notice to defendant of amount of special and general damages sought to be recovered either [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11]:

(1) Before default may be taken; or

(2) In the event an answer is filed, at least 60 days prior to date set for trial.

PART II. PROCEDURAL GUIDE: PRETRIAL PROCEDURES AND TRIAL MOTIONS
A. Plaintiff's Guide

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.21

§ 2.21 Pretrial Motions

Consider following pretrial motions, as appropriate:

1. Countermotion to retain venue for convenience of witnesses.

When defendant has moved to transfer action to court designated as proper court for trial of action under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-404.8 and court in which action was filed is preferred for convenience of witnesses, make countermotion to retain venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396b(d)]. For procedure and form, see Ch. 571, Venue , for further discussion, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 238, Venue (Matthew Bender).

2. Motions for summary judgment and summary adjudication.

a. Grounds and time for making motion.
(1) Summary judgment.

When there is no defense to plaintiff's action or defendant's cross complaint lacks merit, move for summary judgment any time after 60 days have elapsed since general appearance in action or proceeding of each party against whom motion is directed or at such earlier time after general appearance as court, with or without notice and on good cause shown, may direct [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a), (c); see also § 2.47, Paragraph (3), below]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 221, Summary Judgments (Matthew Bender).

(2) Summary adjudication of cause of action, affirmative defense, or issue of duty.

If it is contended that there is no defense to one or more causes of action within the action or that there is no merit to an affirmative defense as to any cause of action, or both, or that one or more defendants owed a duty to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, move for summary adjudication, alone or as an alternative to a motion for summary judgment, as to that cause of action, defense, or issue, any time after 60 days have elapsed since general appearance in action or proceeding of each party against whom motion is directed or at such earlier time after general appearance as court, with or without notice and on good cause shown, may direct [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a), (f); see also § 2.47, Paragraph (3), below]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 221, Summary Judgments (Matthew Bender).

b. Service.

Serve notice of motion and supporting papers on all other parties to action at least 75 days before time appointed for hearing (time increased by five days if mailed to address within California, 10 days if mailed to address outside California, and 20 days if mailed to address outside United States) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)]. If the notice is served by facsimile transmission, Express Mail, or another method of delivery providing for overnight delivery, the required 75-day period of notice is increased by two court days [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)].

c. Response to opposition.

If defendant has has served opposition to motion, determine if opposition was properly served (not less than 14 days preceding noticed or continued date of hearing). If opposition timely, file and serve reply to opposition not less than five days preceding noticed or continued date of hearing, unless court for good cause orders otherwise [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(2), (4)].

3. Motion to join party.

If a third person is a party required to be joined under Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a) and has not been but can be joined, move for joinder [see Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding joining parties, see Ch. 395, Parties .

4. Motion for separate trial of affirmative defense.

When answer pleads any of several special defenses, such as action is barred by statute of limitations, res judicata, another action is pending on the same cause, consider moving to proceed to trial on the special defense before trial of any other issue in case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 597, 597.5]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions and Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions (Matthew Bender).

5. Motion for severance or consolidation.

a. When multiple actions are pending that involve common questions of law or fact, consider moving to have all actions consolidated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1048(a)]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 45, Consolidation and Severance of Actions (Matthew Bender).

b. When separate trials will further convenience or avoid prejudice or will be conducive to expedition and economy, move for separate trial of any cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1048(b)]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 125, Consolidation, Severance, and Coordination of Actions ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 45, Consolidation and Severance of Actions

(Matthew Bender).

6. Motion to amend complaint or answer to cross complaint.

a. Amendment as matter of right.

If desired, amend any pleading once at any time before answer or demurrer is filed, or after demurrer and before trial of issue of law thereon. File amended pleading and serve on adverse party [Code Civ. Proc. § 472].

b. Leave to amend.

(1) If party desires to add or strike out name of any party, to correct mistake in name of party or any other mistake, or to amend pleading or proceeding in other particulars, and either pleading has been amended once by right, or answer or demurrer has been filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 472], make motion to amend complaint or answer to cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473, 576; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1324]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

(2) If a motion to amend pleadings is made after filing of case management order [see Paragraph O(1)(d), below], couple motion with motion to amend case management order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 576; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.730; see also California Points and Authorities, Ch. 180, Pretrial Proceedings (Matthew Bender)].

c. Reclassification of case by filing amended complaint.

If an amendment changes the jurisdictional classification of the case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 32.5, 85] from that previously stated in the caption, simultaneously pay any reclassification fee [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060], and the clerk will promptly reclassify the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.020].For procedure, see Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction .

d. Reclassification of case by stipulation.

The parties may stipulate to reclassification of the case within the time allowed to respond to the initial pleading; a reclassification fee pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 403.060 must be paid if the case is reclassified from limited to unlimited [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050].

7. Motion to file a supplemental complaint or answer to cross complaint.

If plaintiff wishes to allege facts material to case occurring after former complaint or answer to cross complaint, make motion to file supplemental complaint or answer to cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 464]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleading (Matthew Bender).

8. Motion for judgment on the pleadings.

If answer fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a defense, prepare, file, and serve nonstatutory motion for judgment on the pleadings to test the sufficiency of the pleadings any time before final judgment is rendered [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.20(a); MacIsaac v. Pozzo (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 809, 812-813, 161 P.2d 449 ; Shabrick v. Moore (1961) 195 Cal.

App. 2d 56, 59, 15 Cal. Rptr. 310] . For procedure and forms, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

9. Motion to dismiss cross complaint for failure to prosecute [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430].

a. Dismissal for failure to serve summons on cross complaint.

(1) Discretionary

If cross complaint has been filed by defendant, and service of cross complaint (or summons if required) has not been made within two years after filing of cross complaint (except (a) when parties have stipulated to extend time, or (b) if summons is required, party against whom service would otherwise have to be made has made general appearance in action); prepare, file, and serve motion to dismiss [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110, 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1), (b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

(2) Mandatory

If cross complaint has been filed by defendant and cross complaint (or summons if required) has not been served within three years after filing of cross complaint, or proof of service of summons has not been filed within 60 days after time the summons and complaint must be served (except (a) when parties have stipulated to extend time, or (b) if summons is required, party against whom service would otherwise have to be made has made general appearance in action); prepare, file, and serve motion to dismiss [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110, 583.210-583.250]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

b. Dismissal for failure to bring action to trial.

(1) Discretionary.

NOTE:
The court on its own motion or on motion of the defendant may dismiss an action for delay in prosecution if the action has not been brought to trial or conditionally settled within two years after the action was commenced against the defendant [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B)]. However, if the court intends to dismiss the action on its own motion, the clerk must set a hearing on the dismissal and mail notice to all parties at least 20 days before the hearing date [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340(b)]. Although the Judicial Council did not define "defendant," as used in the Rule 372, it stated that the rule was adopted under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(b) and 583.420(a)(2)(B) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340(a)]. The word "defendant" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a) is defined by statute as including a cross defendant or other person against whom an action is commenced [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(d)].

If action on cross complaint is not brought to trial or conditionally settled within two years after it was filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340]:

(a) Prepare, file, and serve motion to dismiss action for want of prosecution at least 45 days before date set for hearing of motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110, 583.420(a)(2); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1340, 3.1342]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

(b) If written opposition to motion served, within 15 days after service of written opposition, prepare, file, and serve response, supplemental memorandum, and affidavit or declaration in support of motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 373(c); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a), (c), (e) (extension of time to respond when served by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

(2) Mandatory.

If action on cross complaint is not brought to trial within five years after plaintiff filed action (unless parties have stipulated to extend time), prepare, file, and serve motion to dismiss for want of prosecution [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110, 583.310-583.360]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal .

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.22

§ 2.22 Discovery Procedure

Use those discovery procedures that are available and appropriate to the circumstances of the particular case to prepare for settlement negotiations and/or trial. For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to each type of discovery procedure, see Ch. 190-200. For discussion of requirements to preserve documents and electronic information for purposes of litigation, see Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronically Stored Information (E-Discovery) and Ch. 199: Discovery: Preservation of Evidence. For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to subpenas duces tecum, see Ch. 535, Subpoena . For points and authorities pertaining to each type of procedure, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 80-89A (Matthew Bender). The following discovery devices are available in civil proceedings:

1. Discovery available.

a. Unlimited civil case.

(1) Written interrogatories to adverse party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010 et seq.].

(2) Requests to adverse party for admissions of genuineness of documents and of matters of fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 et seq.].

(3) Deposition of party or nonparty witness [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010-2029.010].

(4) Production of writing or tangible thing by person being deposed; subpoena only required for nonparty [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1985, 2020.010 et seq., 2025.280].

(5) Demand for production, inspection, and copying of documents and things in the possession, custody, or control of any other party to the action within the scope permitted by Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.020 (scope of discovery in civil actions), and subject to the restrictions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.010 (methods for discovery) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010].

(6) Demand for entrance on land or other property in the possession, custody, or control of any other party to the action for the purpose of inspecting, measuring, surveying, photographing, or sampling within the scope permitted by Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.020 (scope of discovery in civil actions), and subject to the restrictions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.010 (methods for discovery) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010].

(7) Motion for order for mental, physical, or blood examination of party, agent, or person in custody or under legal control of party, to ascertain mental or physical condition or blood relationship that is in controversy [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq.].

(8) Demand to exchange lists of expert witnesses and their reports and writings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.].

b. Limited civil case.

(1) No more than a combination of 35 of the following [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 91, 94(a)]:
(a) Interrogatories (with no subparts) pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010 et seq.].

(b) Demands to produce documents or other tangible things pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.].

(c) Requests for admission (with no subparts) pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 et seq.].

(2) One oral or written deposition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010-2028.080, inclusive [Code Civ. Proc. § 94(b)].

(3) Subpoena duces tecum requiring person served to mail copies of pertinent documents, books, or records to serving party's counsel at a specified address, along with affidavit complying with Evid. Code § 1561 (requirements for affidavit by custodian of records) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 94(c)].

(4) Physical, mental, or blood examinations pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 94(d)].

(5) Identity of expert witnesses pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 94(e)].

(6) Request for statement identifying witnesses and evidence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 96].

(7) Authorization for additional discovery.

(a) If additional discovery is necessary or desired, seek stipulation from adverse party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 95(b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding stipulation, see Ch. 533, Stipulations .

(b) If stipulation cannot be obtained, file noticed motion for one of following:
(i) Order authorizing additional discovery, on showing that moving party will be unable to prosecute or defend action effectively without such discovery [see Code Civ.

Proc. § 95(a)].

(ii) Order removing action from provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 90-100, on showing that it is impractical to prosecute or defend the action within limitations set forth in those provisions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 91(c)].

2. Motions to compel further discovery.

a. Motion to compel response to case questionnaire (limited civil cases).

If defendant served case questionnaire with complaint [see § 2.18, Paragraph (4), above] and defendant fails to serve completed questionnaire, prepare, serve, and file motion to compel compliance with requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 93(a) and (b) in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 et seq. (misuse of discovery procedures sanctions generally) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 93(e) (limited civil cases)].

b. Motion to compel answers or further answers to interrogatories.

If a response or further responses to interrogatories are necessary, prepare, file, and serve motion for order requiring response or further response [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.300]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 194, Discovery: Interrogatories .

c. Motion for order compelling furnishing of medical reports.

(1) If adverse party or other person was examined under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. and requested copy of report of examining physician or licensed clinical phychologist, request all like reports of any examination, previously or thereafter made, of same condition from party or person examined [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.640].

(2) If party or person examined refuses to deliver such reports, prepare, file, and serve motion for order compelling furnishing of medical reports [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.240]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

d. Motion to compel answer to deposition question.

If deponent refuses or fails to answer any question propounded on examination during taking of deposition, prepare, file, and serve motion to compel answer to deposition question [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.480]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 193, Discovery: Depositions .

e. Motion to compel production of books, documents, or other tangible things.

If deponent refuses or fails to produce at deposition any books, documents, or other tangible things under his or her control pursuant to subpena duces tecum, move to compel production [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.480]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence .

f. Motion to compel further answers to requests for admission.

If written objections to request under Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 et seq. have been filed, or answer is deemed by requesting party not to be in compliance with requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 et seq.], make motion for order compelling answers or further answers to request [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 et seq.]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 196, Discovery: Requests for Admissions .

g. Motion to compel production or entry.

If adverse party refuses or fails to produce documents, papers, books, accounts, letters, photographs, objects, or tangible things or to permit inspection or entry after having been served with a request under Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq., move for order to compel compliance with request [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.310, 2031.320]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 195, Discovery: Inspection of Tangible Evidence .

h. Motion to compel production of electronically stored information (e-discovery).

If electronically stored information is not reasonably accessible because of undue burden or expense, the respondent may either object and force the requesting party to file a motion to compel [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.210(a)(3). For discussion and forms related to e-discovery, see Ch. 195A, Discovery: Discovery of Electronically Stored Information (E-Discovery).

3. Motions for sanctions.

a. Motion for monetary, issue, evidence, termination, or contempt sanction.

If a party engages in a misuse of a discovery method, the other party may make a motion for sanctions. A court may impose one or more of the following sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030: (1) monetary sanction, (2) issue sanction, (3) evidence sanction, (4) terminating sanction, and (5) contempt sanction. A court, after notice and an opportunity for hearing, may impose these sanctions against anyone engaging in conduct constituting a misuse of the discovery process. If a section governing a particular method of discovery authorizes a monetary sanction, the court must impose that sanction unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the sanction unjust [Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030]; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 (illustrative list of conduct that constitutes misuse of discovery process)]. Each discovery method contains specific provisions regarding the extent of available sanctions as listed below.

(1) Discovery from nonparty [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2020.240].

(2) Oral depositions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.410-2025.480].

(3) Deposition by written questions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2028.040, 2028.050].

(4) Interrogatories [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.090].

(5) Inspection of documents [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.060, 2031.310, 2031.320].

(6) Physical examinations [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.240, 2032.250, 2032.620].

(7) Requests for admissions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.080, 2033.280, 2033.290].

(8) Exchange of expert witness information [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.250, 2034.470

, 2034.610, 2034.710].

b. Motion to compel or limit discovery.

If a party fails to cooperate in a discovery method, the other party may make a motion to compel or to limit discovery. The motion must include a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good faith attempt at an informal resolution of any issue presented by the motion. In granting or denying the motion, the court may impose monetary sanctions in favor of anyone who prevails, if the prevailing party did in fact engage in a reasonable and good faith attempt at an informal resolution of the issues presented by the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010(i)]. Each discovery method contains specific provisions for motions specific to itself as listed below.

(1) Oral depositions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010-2025.480].

(2) Deposition by written questions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2028.040, 2028.050].

(3) Interrogatories [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.290-2030.310].

(4) Inspection of documents [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.300-2031.320].

(5) Physical examinations [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.240, 2032.250].

(6) Requests for admissions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.280, 2033.290].

(7) Exchange of expert witness information [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.250, 2034.300].

(8) Electronically stored information (e-discovery) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.210 et seq.]

1. Service of offer.

To obtain benefit of sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, serve settlement offer on defendant not less than 10 days prior to trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

2. Response to defendant's offer.

If offer is made by defendant, accept, if desired, within 30 days after offer is made or prior to trial whichever occurs first [see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(b)(1), (2)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

3. Notification of settlement. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

a. When offer to compromise is accepted, file offer with proof of acceptance with clerk or judge [Code Civ. Proc. § 998(b)].

b. If an entire case has been settled, immediately give court and any arbitrator written notice, as well as oral notice if hearing, conference, or trial is imminent [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1385; for discussion and a form of notice, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release].

4. Failure to accept.

If offer is not accepted and defendant fails to obtain a more favorable judgment, request costs of expert witnesses in addition to other recoverable costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(d)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 520, Settlement and Release .

For discussion, procedures, and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings.

a. Case management conference date.
(1) Determine date for case management conference, notice of which must be given by the court no later than 45 days before the conference, unless otherwise ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(b)].

(2) If a different case management conference date is desired, request a more convenient date [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(b)].

b. Mandatory meet-and-confer requirement before case management conference.

(1) Mandatory meet-and-confer is required by no later than 30 calendar days before the case management conference, unless court orders another time period [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.724].

(2) Prepare to consider with opposing party the following issues: discovery disputes and setting discovery schedule; identify and, if possible, resolve any anticipated motions; identify uncontested facts and issues of case subject to stipulation; facts and issues in dispute; narrowing of issues by eliminating claims or defenses; possible settlement; availability of parties and their attorneys for trial; and any other relevant matters [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.724].

c. Case management statement.

(1) Prepare, serve, and file case management statement on mandatory Cal. Judicial Council Form CM-110 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.725(c); for discussion and form, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings]. Items required in case management statement include: any related cases; complete service; additional parties or pleadings; whether a limited civil case; matter affect court's jurisdiction; alternative dispute resolution; settlement conferences; discovery issues and schedule; bifurcation; cross-complaints; statutory preference; jury trial demands; trial date; length of trial; nature of injuries; damages; relief sought; insurance coverage; any other relevant matters [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.727].

(2) Each party must file and a case management statement and serve it on all other parties in the case no later than 15 days before the case management conference or review date set by the court pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.725(a)].

(3) If any opposing parties agree, any two or more parties may file a joint case management statement [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.725(b)].

(4) If all parties agree to use of alternative dispute resolution (ADR), jointly complete and file with the court the ADR stipulation form provided by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.221 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.726].

d. Case management conference.

(1) Determine if the court has issued a case management order based on the written submissions of the parties and has excused the personal appearance of the parties at the case management conference [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(d)].

(2) Prepare for and attend case management conference and be prepared to discuss and commit to party's position on issues listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.727-3.728 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(a)].

(3) Attendance at case management conference is mandatory for counsel for each party, or if permitted, a telephonic appearance may be made under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.670(c)(2) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(c); see Ch. 372]. Check to see if personal appearance has been excused at the discretion of the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(d)]. If the action is a limited civil case, check for local rules that provide counsel and self-represented parties do not attend a case management conference, unless ordered to do so by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.722(e)].

e. Mandatory settlement conference.

(1) A mandatory settlement conference may be held in all long cause matters. If a party wishes a settlement conference or an additional settlement conference, prepare the joint request of all parties for the conference. If the parties do not all agree, but a settlement conference is desired, prepare a notice of motion for an order setting the case for a settlement conference [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

(2) Prepare a mandatory settlement conference statement containing a good faith settlement demand and an itemization of economic and noneconomic damages if representing plaintiff, or a good faith offer of settlement if representing defendant, set forth and discuss in detail all facts and law pertinent to the issues of liability and damages involved in the case as to that party and comply with any requirements imposed by local rule, submit the statement to the court and serve a copy on each party no later than five court days before the settlement conference [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380(c)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

(3) Prepare for and with the party represented and other persons with authority to settle the case, as well as any person whose consent to settle is required for any reason, personally attend the conference, unless excused by the court for good cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1380(b)]. For discussion of the effect of failure to comply with this requirement see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

2. Motions concerning trial dates.

NOTE:
In actions conducted pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.), local rules may affect the availability of motions concerning trial dates. For further discussion, see the Introduction, Trial Court Delay Reduction Rules.

a. Motion for continuance before trial [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 594a-596; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 136, Continuances and Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 48, Continuance and Advancement of Proceedings , (Matthew Bender).

(1) Ascertain necessity for continuance [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 595, 595.3-595.4; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(a)].

(2) If possible, agree in writing to postponement of trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 595.2].

(3) If agreement not possible:
(a) Make motion before trial for continuance of trial date to judge supervising the master calendar or, if there is no master calendar, to the judge in whose department the case is pending immediately on ascertaining necessity for continuance, if the case has been assigned for all purposes to a specific judge or department, make the motion before the assigned judge or in the assigned department [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)].

(b) Serve notice on all other parties of trial, proceeding, or hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 594a-596; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1332(b)].

b. Motion to advance, reset, or specially set case for trial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1335]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 48, Continuance and Advancement of Proceedings (Matthew Bender).

c. Motion for preference.

(1) Plaintiff seventy years of age.

If plaintiff has reached 70 years of age and his or her health is such that a preference is necessary to prevent prejudicing his or her interest in the litigation, serve notice of motion for preference either with memorandum to set case management statement if plaintiff is serving the memorandum, or, 10 days after such service by any other party; or thereafter during pendency of action on application of plaintiff who reaches age of 70 years [see Code Civ. Proc. § 36; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.727(12); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a), (c), (e) (extension of time to respond when served by mail, facsimile transmission, or overnight delivery)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

(2) Plaintiff felony victim.

If action is one in which plaintiff is seeking damages that were alleged to have been caused by defendant during commission of a felony offense for which defendant has been criminally convicted, serve and file notice of motion for preference [see Code Civ. Proc. § 37]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

3. Judicial arbitration or court-sponsored mediation.

NOTE:
In actions conducted pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.), local rules may affect the procedure for judicial arbitration. For further discussion, see the Introduction, under Trial Court Delay Reduction Rules.

Submission to judicial arbitration or an alternative mediation program is mandatory in many cases and may be undertaken voluntarily in any case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.11, 1141.12, 1730 et seq., 1775.3].

a. The following civil actions are subject to mandatory judicial arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.10-1141.31 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.810 et seq. [for discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 36, Judicial Arbitration]:

(1) Any action in any court, regardless of the amount of controversy, on the stipulation of the parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811(a)(4); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.12(a)].

(2) On filing of an election by plaintiff, any action in any court in which plaintiff agrees that the arbitration award shall not exceed $50,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.12(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811(a)(5)].

(3) In each superior court with 18 or more judges, all actions in which the amount in controversy does not exceed $50,000 as to any plaintiff, other than limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.11(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811(a)(1)].

(4) In a superior court with less than 18 judges, that so provides by local rule, all civil actions in which the amount in controversy does not exceed $50,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.11(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811(a)(2)].

(5) All limited civil cases in a court that so provides by local rule [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811(a)(3); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.11(c), (d)].

b. In Los Angeles County and in any other county that opts to apply Code Civ. Proc. § 1775 et seq., when a case is subject to mandatory arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq., the court may instead order it to mediation under Code Civ. Proc. § 1775 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.3; for discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation].

c. In other counties, local rule or practices establish programs to encourage alternative dispute resolution procedures [see, e.g., San Francisco Uniform Local Ct. Rules, Rule 4.2].

§ 2.25 Jury Trial

1. Demand.

a. If the action is one which may be tried by jury, determine whether to demand a jury trial. Demand is made using the mandatory Case Management Statement [Judicial Council Form CM-110], which must be filed and served on all parties no later than 15 days before the case management conference [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.725]. For discussion and a form of the Case Management Statement, see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings .

b. Waiver of jury trial by a party after making a demand in unlimited civil cases is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 631(b).

2. Deposit jury fees in court.

Deposit advance jury fees with clerk or judge [see Code Civ. Proc. § 196], 25 days prior to date set for trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 631(b)]. Failure to deposit advance jury fees may result in waiver of jury trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 631(d)(5)]. Refund of deposited jury fees may be available in the event of settlement or continuance of the case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 631.3]. For discussion, see Ch. 322, Juries and Jury Selection .

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.27

§ 2.27 Removing Judge

1. Challenges for cause.

a. If judge should be disqualified under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170-170.5, file verified written statement objecting to hearing of matter or trial at the earliest practicable opportunity after discovery of facts constituting ground of the judge's disqualification, and before commencement of hearing or trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.3(c)(1), 170.4(c)]. For discussion, procedure and forms, see Ch. 317, Judges .

b. Serve copies of written statement on each party, or his or her attorney, who has appeared in action and on judge alleged in statement to be disqualifed [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.3(c)(1)]. For discussion, procedure and forms, see Ch. 317, Judges .

c. When statement of disqualification is filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.3, and judge files verified answer admitting or denying any or all allegations in statement within 10 days, obtain agreement from all parties who have appeared in the action or proceeding, within five days after notification of judge's answer, to have question of disqualification determined by particular judge. Failure to agree on a judge will result in assignment of judge by Chairman of the Judicial Council [see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.3(c)(5)].

d. When statement of disqualification is filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.3, and judge admits his or her disqualification, files written consent to disqualification, or fails to file his or her answer within 10 days, or it is determined after hearing that judge is disqualified, obtain agreement from all parties to action or proceeding that action or proceeding shall be heard and determined by particular judge who is not disqualified. Failure to agree on a judge will result in assignment of judge by presiding judge or Chairman of the Judicial Council [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.3(c)(6), 170.8].

2. Peremptory challenges.

a. If any judge (other than a judge assigned to the case for all purposes), court commissioner, or referee of any superior of California is prejudiced against any party or attorney or interest of any party or attorney appearing in any action or proceeding involving a contested issue of law or fact, make oral or written motion without notice to remove him or her [see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6]. For discussion and forms, see Ch. 317, Judges . Make motion:

(1) At least five days before date is set for trial or hearing, where judge, court commission, or referee is known at least 10 days before date set for trial or hearing.

(2) To judge supervising master calendar not later than time cause is assigned for trial, if directed to trial of cause where there is master calendar.

(3) Before expiration of 30 days from date of moving party's first appearance in action, if court in which action is pending is authorized to have no more than one judge and motion claims that duly elected or appointed judge of that court is prejudiced.

(4) Within 10 days after notice of all-purpose assignment, or within 10 days after making an appearance if the moving party has not yet appeared in the action, if motion is directed to trial of case assigned to a judge for all purposes.

NOTE:
If a trial court's decision is reversed on appeal and the trial judge in the prior proceeding is assigned to conduct a new trial on the matter, the motion must be made within 60 days after the party or the party's attorney has been notified of the assignment [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6(a)(2)].

b. Submit supporting affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury or an oral statement under oath that judge, court commissioner, or referee is prejudiced with motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6].

NOTE:
In actions conducted pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.), local rules may affect the procedure for motions in limine. For further discussion, see § 2.04.

If limitation or exclusion of evidence or testimony is desired in anticipation of references by adverse counsel or witnesses that may be prejudicial and create a negative inference in jurors' minds, consider making motion in limine to judge outside presence of jury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128(a)(3), (8); Evid. Code §§ 350, 352; Lemer v. Boise Cascade, Inc. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9-12, 165 Cal. Rptr. 555] . 1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.29

§ 2.29 Trial Motions

1. Motion for judgment.

If after defendant has completed his or her presentation of evidence in trial by court it appears that the evidence presented would support the granting of a motion for judgment, move for a judgment. Such motion may be made without waiving plaintiff's right to offer evidence in rebuttal to defendant's evidence or in support of plaintiff's defense to cross complaint in event motion is not granted [see Code Civ. Proc. § 631.8]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motion for Judgment .

2. Motion for nonsuit.

After defendant has completed his or her opening statement regarding cross complaint, or after the presentation of his or her evidence in a trial by jury on cross complaint and it appears that evidence presented, or to be presented, supports the granting of a motion for nonsuit, make motion for judgment of nonsuit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581c]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment .

3. Motion for directed verdict.

If there is no evidence of sufficient substantiality to support a verdict in favor of defendant, make motion for directed verdict at conclusion of evidence [see Frisk v. Merrihew (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 319, 325, 116 Cal. Rptr. 781 ; De La Rosa v. City of San Bernardino (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 739, 742-743, 94 Cal. Rptr. 175 ; Rooney v. Mutual Benefit H. & A. Assn. (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 885, 891, 170 P.2d 72] . At the discretion of trial court, the motion may be made any time before case is submitted to jury [see Gibson v. Southern Pacific Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 337, 346, 290 P.2d 347] . For further discussion, see Ch. 326A, Jury Verdicts .

4. Motion for mistrial.

If prejudicial misconduct of counsel, judge, or jurors prevents party from having fair trial, or if some legal or practical reason prevents trial from proceeding to completion, make motion for mistrial [see Garden Grove School Dist. v. Hendler (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 141, 142-145, 45 Cal. Rptr. 313, 403 P.2d 721 ; Scally v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 806, 814, 100 Cal. Rptr. 501 ; Reimer v. Firpo (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 798, 801-802, 212 P.2d 23] at time when claimed damage could be forestalled by appropriate court action [see Horn v. Atchison, T. & S.F. R. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 602, 610, 39 Cal. Rptr. 721, 394 P.2d 561 , cert. denied, 380 U.S. 909 (1965)] . § 2.40 Facts to Be Ascertained

1. Facts relating to defendant.

a. Name, address, telephone number of defendant.

b. Aliases used (past and present).

c. Capacity of defendant.

d. Additional facts, as desired, relating to defendant's stability and financial solvency:
(1) Employment status.

(2) Prior residences.

(3) Assets.

(4) Credit.

(5) Bank.

(6) Personal references.

e. Marital status. If married, name of spouse and address if different from that of defendant.

f. Defendant's insurance coverage.

(1) Name and address of insurer(s) and agent(s).

(2) Type(s) and amount(s) of coverage.

(3) Whether any claim(s) were filed in connection with transaction or occurrence involved.

2. Facts required for answer.

a. Date, manner, and place of service of complaint.

b. Allegations of complaint.

Ascertain which of the facts alleged in the complaint are true, which are false, and which ones defendant does not know the truth or falsity of.

c. Facts constituting affirmative defenses.

3. Facts relating to cross complaint.

Ascertain facts, if any, which might constitute the basis of a cross complaint against plaintiff, a codefendant, or both, or some person or entity not yet a party to the action or against both the plaintiff, or a codefendant, and others. B. Defendant's Guide

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.42

§ 2.42 Preliminary Determinations and Proceedings

1. Default previously entered against defendant.

a. Preliminary determination.

Determine whether default judgment was entered against defendant.

b. Motion to set aside default.

(1) If default entered against defendant, determine whether one or more of following grounds for setting aside default and default judgment exist:

(a) Default resulted from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, or fraud [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)].

(b) Default resulted from defendant's lack of actual notice of action in time to defend [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473.5].

(c) Action was commenced in improper court under certain consumer protection statutes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585.5].

(d) Military service materially affected defendant's ability to defend action [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 521(g)(1)].

(e) Judgment was obtained through fraud of plaintiff or mistake of defendant extrinsic to proceeding or action, or judgment is void [see Olivera v. Grace (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 570, 575-576, 122 P.2d 564] .

(2) If one or more of above grounds exist, prepare, file, and serve motion for relief from default and default judgment within applicable time limits set out in particular statutes. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders ; for points and authorities relating to motions to set aside default, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

c. Motion to set aside default combined with motions to quash, to stay or dismiss for inconvenient forum, or to dismiss for delay in prosecution.

If defendant whose default has been taken wishes to challenge the court's jurisdiction over his or her person [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1), see Paragraph 2, below], to obtain a stay or dismissal based on inconvenient forum [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(2), see Paragraph 3, below], or to obtain dismissal for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3), see Paragraph 4, below], join any of those motions with the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or 473.5 motion to set aside default. Motion to set aside default will not be deemed a general appearance if joined with a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(d)]. A defendant or cross-defendant may move to quash service of summons, move to stay or dismiss the action on the grounds of inconvenient forum, or move to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint, without waiving a general appearance until entry of an order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(1)]. If the motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. Failure to make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issues of lack of personal jurisdiction, inadequacy of process, inadequacy of service of process, inconvenient forum, and delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(3)]. For discussion, procedure and forms, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , and Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances ; for discussion and forms of memoranda relating to motions to set aside default and quash service of summons, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders , and Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender).

2. Court's jurisdiction over person of defendant.

a. Determine whether court has failed to obtain jurisdiction over person of defendant for one of the following reasons [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.50(a), 418.10(a)(1); for discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances].

(1) Failure to serve summons on defendant who has not made general appearance (that is, has not entered any pleadings or sought any affirmative relief from court) in action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.50(a)].

(2) Summons defectively served [see Eagle Elec. Mfg. Co. v. Keener (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 246, 250, 55 Cal. Rptr. 444] .

(3) Defect in summons served [see Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 435, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211] .

(4) Defendant, nonresident served outside California, lacks sufficient contacts with state to justify court's exercise of in personam jurisdiction [see, e.g., International Shoe Co. v. Washington (1945) 326 U.S. 310, 316, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 ; Arnesen v. Raymond Lee Organization, Inc. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 991].

b. If court failed to obtain jurisdiction over person of defendant for any of above reasons, on or before last day on which defendant is required to plead, or within such further time as court for good cause allows, prepare, file, and serve motion to quash service of summons on ground of lack of jurisdiction of court over person of defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)]. A defendant or cross-defendant may move to quash service of summons, move to stay or dismiss the action on the grounds of inconvenient forum, or move to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint, without waiving a general appearance until entry of an order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(1)]. If the motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. Failure to make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issues of lack of personal jurisdiction, inadequacy of process, inadequacy of service of process, inconvenient forum, and delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(3)]. For discussion, procedure and forms relating to motions to quash, Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender).

c. If motion to quash service of summons is denied, do one of the following:

(1) Petition for writ of mandate.

(a) Within 10 days after service of written notice of entry of order of court denying motion, or within such further time not exceeding 20 days as trial court may for good cause allow, and before pleading, consider petitioning appropriate reviewing court for writ of mandate to require trial court to enter order quashing service of summons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c)]. If the motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms for reviewing denial of the motion by writ of mandate, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances . is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have

(b) If writ is denied, plead or respond to complaint within 10 days after service on defendant of written notice of final judgment in mandate proceeding, or within such additional time, not exceeding 20 days, as the court may for good cause allow [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(c); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.490(2) (if Supreme Court denies review of court of appeal denial of writ of mandate, defendant has 10 days to file responsive pleading after Supreme Court files its order)].

(2) Respond to complaint.

Plead or respond to complaint within 15 days after service on defendant of written notice of entry of order denying motion, or within such additional time, not exceeding 20 days, as the court may for good cause allow [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b)].

3. Inconvenient forum.

a. Determine whether a suitable alternative forum for trial exists and, if so, whether the litigants' private interests and the public interest favor retaining trial in California [Stangvik v. Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54

Cal. 3d 744, 751, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 556, 819 P.2d 14] .

b. If these factors favor litigation in another forum, prepare, file, and serve motion to stay or dismiss action on ground of inconvenient forum on or before last day of time to plead or within such further time as court may for good cause allow [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(2)]. A defendant or cross-defendant may move to quash service of summons, move to stay or dismiss the action on the grounds of inconvenient forum, or move to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint, without waiving a general appearance until entry of an order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(1)]. If the motion made under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 is denied and the defendant or cross-defendant petitions for a writ of mandate, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until the proceedings on the writ petition have finally concluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(2)]. Failure to make a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 at the time of filing a demurrer or motion to strike constitutes a waiver of the issues of lack of personal jurisdiction, inadequacy of process, inadequacy of service of process, inconvenient forum, and delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)(3)]. For discussion, procedure and forms, Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances; for memoranda, see California Points And Authorities, , Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum (Matthew Bender).

c. If the motion to stay or dismiss action is denied by trial court, the options and procedure are the same as on denial of a motion to quash service of summons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b), (c)]. See Paragraph (2)(c), above.

4. Delay in Prosecution

NOTE:
In actions conducted pursuant to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Gov. Code § 68600 et seq.), local rules affect the time limit for service of the complaint. For further discussion, see the Introduction, Trial Court Delay Reduction Rules.

a. Determine whether any of the grounds for mandatory or discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. exist:

(1) Summons not served within two years of commencement of action; discretionary dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1), (b)].

(2) Summons not served within three years of commencement of action; mandatory dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110(f), 583.210 et seq.].

(3) Action not brought to trial within two years after commencement; discretionary dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)(B), (b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340].

(4) Action not brought to trial within five years after commencement; mandatory dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310 et seq.].

b. If any of these conditions exist, on or before last day on which defendant is required to plead, or within such further time as court for good cause allows, prepare, file, and serve motion to dismiss for delay in prosecution [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to motions for dismissal, see Ch. 212, Dismissal].

c. If the motion to dismiss is denied by trial court, the options and procedure are the same as on denial of a motion to quash service of summons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b), (c)]. See Paragraph (2)(c), above.

5. Defendant's capacity to defend action.

a. Minor, incompetent person, or person for whom conservator has been appointed.

(1) Determine whether guardian or conservator for defendant's person or estate has previously been appointed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372] and if so whether he or she will appear on behalf of defendant in action. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of conservators and guardians, see Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians , and Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators .

(2) If defendant has no guardian or conservator, or if appointment of a guardian ad litem otherwise appears expedient, petition for appointment of guardian ad litem to appear on defendant's behalf [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 372, 373]. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of guardians ad litem, see Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem .

b. Unborn or unascertained persons.

(1) Determine whether, under terms of written instrument or otherwise, person or persons of designated class who are unascertained or who are not in being may be or may become legally interested in any real or personal property involved in the action or proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 373.5].

(2) Request appointment of guardian ad litem to represent such persons, if appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 373.5]. For discussion and forms pertaining to appointment of a guardian ad litem in such circumstances, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts, § 560.140.. For discussion, forms, and procedural guide relating to appointment of guardians ad litem in general, see Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem .

6. Suspension of powers prohibiting business entity from defending action [see Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 49-50, 317 P.2d 649] .

a. Failure by corporation or limited liability company to file biennual statement.

(1) Determine if defendant's corporate powers have been suspended for failure to file annual statement of general information and agent of service for process pursuant to Corp. Code § 1502 (corporations) or Corp. Code § 17060 (limited liability company) [see Corp. Code §§ 2205(a), 17654(a)].

(2) If defendant's powers have been suspended for failure to file statement required by Corp. Code § 1502, file required statement. On filing, Secretary of State will certify fact that a statement has been filed to the Franchise Tax Board and corporation or LLC may be relieved from suspension unless it is held in suspension by the FTB by reason of Rev. &

Tax. Code § 23301 or 23301.5 [see Corp. Code §§ 2205(d), 17654(d)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding suspension of corporate powers, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

b. Failure to pay state taxes.

(1) Determine whether defendant's powers have been forfeited or suspended for nonpayment of state taxes [see Rev. & Tax Code § 23301] or for failure to file return [see Rev. & Tax Code § 23301.5], or for failure to file statement of exemption [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23775].

(2) If defendant's powers have been suspended under Rev. & Tax Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775, obtain certificate of revivor from Franchise Tax Board by making written application therefor and by paying all taxes, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts due [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23305, 23776; see also Rev. & Tax Code § 23305b (revivor of powers on partial payment of taxes if revivor will improve prospects for recovery of full amount due)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms regarding suspension or forfeiture of powers, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity .

7. Propriety of venue.

a. Improper county.

If action has been filed in county other than county designated as proper county for trial of action, prepare, file, and serve motion for change of venue [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]. For listing of proper counties in which to file in particular actions, see § 2.12, Paragraph (6), above. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 571, Venue .

b. Convenience of witnesses.

If convenience of witnesses and ends of justice would be promoted by changing county of trial, prepare, file and serve motion for change of venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(c)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 571, Venue .

c. Impartial trial cannot be had.

If defendant has reason to believe that impartial trial cannot be had in county designated for trial, prepare, file and serve motion for change of venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(b)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 571, Venue .

d. No judge of court qualified to act.

When from any cause there is no judge of court of designated county qualified to act, prepare, file and serve motion for change of venue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 397(d)]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 571, Venue .

8. Defects in complaint.

Examine complaint for defects [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10] which may subject it to demurrer if they appear on face of the complaint or from matter subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)] or which may be raised by answer otherwise [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)].

a. Lack of subject matter jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(a)].

(1) Determine whether court lacks jurisdiction of subject matter of action. For listing of which court has jurisdiction over particular subject matter, see § 2.12, Paragraph (7), above.

(2) If court lacks jurisdiction of subject matter of action and there is California court that has jurisdiction, prepare, file, and serve motion to have action transferred to proper court having subject matter jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396, 430.30; for procedure of motion to transfer, see also § 2.43, Paragraph (5), below] or demur to complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(a), 430.30; for procedure for demurrer, see also § 2.43, Paragraph(2), below]. For discussion, procedure, and forms relating to motion to transfer, Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction; for discussion, procedures, and forms related to demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum , and Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

b. Failure to state cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)].

(1) Determinations.
(a) Determine whether complaint states facts sufficient to constitute cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)].

(b) Determine whether action is barred by statutes of limitation [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 312, 430.10(e); California Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Sierra Valleys Ry. Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 690, 698, 112 P. 274] . For table of periods of limitation, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

(c) Determine whether action barred by laches. For discussion and form relating to bar of laches, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

(d) Determine whether plaintiff stated cause of action but cause of action is in someone else [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e); Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 19-20, 108 P.2d 906] .

(2) Raise objection by demurrer or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below]. Laches and statute of limitation are affirmative defenses which if not pleaded or otherwise properly raised are deemed waived [see Getz v. Wallace (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 212, 213, 45 Cal. Rptr. 910 (statute of limitation); Victor Oil Co. v. Drum (1920) 184 Cal. 226, 243, 193 P. 243 (laches)].

c. Legal capacity of plaintiff.

(1) Determine whether plaintiff has the legal capacity to sue [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(b); for listing of when plaintiff has capacity to sue and of potential disabilities, see also § 2.12, Paragraph (4), above].

(2) If plaintiff does not have capacity to sue, object by demurrer (not allowed in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)]) or raise as affirmative defense in answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

d. Pleading uncertain or ambiguous and unintelligible.

(1) Determine whether pleading is certain or ambiguous and unintelligible [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(f)].

(2) If complaint uncertain or ambiguous and unintelligible, raise objections by demurrer (not allowed in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)]) or answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below].

e. Defect or misjoinder of parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)].

(1) Determine if there is if party who has not been joined but is required to be joined pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 389(a), or whether person has been joined who is not permissible plaintiff pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 378(a) or permissible defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 379(a). For discussion regarding joining parties, see Ch. 395, Parties .

(2) If there is defect or misjoinder of parties, raise objection by demurrer (not allowed in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)]) or raise as affirmative defense in answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

f. Another action pending between same parties on same cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c)].

(1) Determine if there is another action pending, that has commenced but has not reached its final determination on appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1049], between same parties on same cause of action where claim sued on in second action is such that final judgment in first one could be pleaded in bar as res judicata [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c); Lord v. Garland (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 840, 848-849, 168 P.2d 5] .

(2) Raise objection by demurrer (not allowed in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)]) or affirmative defense in answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions .

g. Oral, written, or implied contract.

(1) If action founded on contract, determine whether it can be ascertained from pleading whether contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)].

(2) If not ascertainable, raise objection by demurrer (not allowed in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)]) or affirmative defense in answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30; see also § 2.43, Paragraphs (1) and (2), below].

h. Required certificate.

(1) Determine whether certificate was filed as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35 (indicating merit to professional negligence action against architect, engineer, or land surveyor) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(h)].

(2) If certificate was not filed, raise objection by demurrer under Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10 (not allowed in limited civil case under Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c)) or motion to strike under Code Civ. Proc. § 435 [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(g)].

i. Jurisdictional classification of case.

(1) Determine whether caption of case misstates the jurisdictional classification of the case or fails to state that the case is a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 422.30(b), 403.040(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 32.5, 85, 86 (limited civil cases)].

(2) If action is incorrectly classified, move for reclassification [see Code Civ. Proc. § 403.040(a); see also § 2.43, Paragraph (6), below]. If still within the time to respond to the initial pleading and opposing party is willing to stipulate to a reclassification, file stipulation with the court and pay reclassification fee if reclassifying from limited to unlimited case [Code Civ. Proc. § 403.050].

j. Complex case designation of case.

(1) If Civil Case Cover Sheet served with the complaint designates the case as a complex case and the court has not previously declared the action to be a complex case, determine whether to counterdesignate the case as noncomplex [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.402(a)]. A noncomplex counterdesignation must be done by filing a councounter civil case cover sheet designating action as complex no later than defendant's first appearance [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.402(a)]. If no counterdesignating the case as noncomplex, determine whether to join in the complex case designation [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.402(c)].

(2) If Civil Case Cover Sheet was not served with the complaint, or was served but does not designate the case as a complex case, determine whether to counterdesignate the case as complex [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 981.2, 3.402(b)]. Complex counterrdesignation must be done by filing a counter civil case cover sheet designating action as complex no later than defendant's first appearance.

(3) For discussion of what constitutes a complex case and the court's power to designate the case as complex or noncomplex and to change that designation [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.400, 3.402, 3.403], see Ch. 425, Pretrial Proceedings, § 425.15, and for an illustration of the civil case cover sheet, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints, § 123.60.

9. Potential affirmative defenses.

a. Determine whether there are potential affirmative defenses not appearing on face of complaint, including:

(1) Action barred under doctrine of res judicata [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1908].

(2) Action barred by failure to have asserted it by compulsory cross complaint in prior action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30(a)].

(3) Substantive defenses to particular cause of action alleged. For list of affirmative defense forms in this set, see the Table of Affirmative Defense Forms in Ch. 26, Answers .

b. Raise affirmative defense in the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.30(b), 431.30(b)(2)].

10. Potential grounds for striking whole or part of complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 436; for discussion, procedure, and forms regarding motions to strike, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings ; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (3), below]. For potential grounds of striking whole complaint under the anti-SLAPP or anti-SLAPPback statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.19-425.18], see Paragraph (11), below, and see Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti-SLAPP].

a. Unlimited civil case.

(1) Determine if any part of complaint includes irrelevant, false, or improper matter [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.10(b), (c), 436(a)].

(2) Determine whether complaint was drawn or filed in conformity with laws of California, court rule, or order of court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 436(b)].

b. Limited civil case.

Determine whether damages or relief sought are supported by allegations of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(d)].

11. Potential grounds for striking whole or part of complaint under the anti-SLAPP or anti-SLAPPback special motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.19-425.18]; for discussion, procedure, and forms regarding motions to strike under the anti-SLAPP or anti-SLAPPback statutes, see Ch. 376, Motions to Strike: Anti-SLAPP ; see also § 2.43, Paragraph (4), below].

a. Complaint involves categories of protected conduct and is a meritless suit filed primarily to chill defendant's exercise of First Amendment rights subject to Anti-SLAPP provisions:

(1) Determine if complaint involves written or oral statement or writing made before official proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(1)].

(2) Determine if complaint involves written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issue under consideration or review in official proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2)].

(3) Determine if complaint involves written or oral statement made public place or forum in connection with issue of public interest law [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(3)].

(4) Determine if complaint involves any other conduct in furtherance of exercise of constitutional right of petition or free speech [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(4)].

b. Exceptions.

Determine whether exceptions to Anti-SLAPP motion apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17].

(1) Action brought solely in the public interest or on behalf of the general public [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b)].

(2) Action brought against a person primarily engaged in the business of selling or leasing goods or services [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(c)].

(3) Action brought against a person engaged in the dissemination of ideas, or brought against a person or entity based on the creation, dissemination, exhibition, advertisement, or other similar promotion of any dramatic, literary, musical, political, or artistic work [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(d)].

c. Anti-SLAPPback.

Determine whether Anti-SLAPPback statute applies because cause of action alleges malicious prosecution or abuse of process arising from the filing or maintenance of a prior cause of action that was dismissed under Anti-SLAPP statute [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.18].

12. Potential cause of action for cross complaint.

a. Compulsory.

(1) Determine whether defendant has cause of action against plaintiff related to cause of action asserted in plaintiff's complaint.

(2) Assert such action by way of cross complaint or be precluded from later asserting it in any other action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30(a); for discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints ; see also § 2.45, below].

(3) If defendant fails to plead cause of action subject to requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 426.10-426.70 through oversight, inadvertence, mistake, neglect, or other cause, apply to court, at any time during course of action, for leave to amend pleading, or to file cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 426.50].

b. Permissive.

(1) Determine whether defendant has cause of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10]:
(a) Against any of parties who filed complaint.

(b) Against any person, whether or not such person is already party to action, if:
(i) Cause of action asserted arises out of same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences as cause brought against defendant, or

(ii) Cause of action asserts a claim, right, or interest in the property or controversy that is the subject of cause brought against defendant.

(2) Assert such action by way of cross complaint, if desired [see Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints . For procedure, see § 2.45.

1-2 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 2.43

§ 2.43 Responses to Complaint

If defendant has not moved to quash service of summons, to stay or to dismiss the action for inconvenient forum, or to dismiss the action for delay in prosecution [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)-(3); see also § 2.42, Paragraphs (2)-(4), above], prepare, serve, and file one or more of the responses listed below within 30 days of service of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 412.20(a)(3), 430.40] to avoid default [Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a)-(c)]. A defendant or cross-defendant may move to quash service of summons, move to stay or dismiss the action on the grounds of inconvenient forum, or move to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10, and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint, without waiving a general appearance until entry of an order denying the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(e)]. If defendant unsuccessfully made one or more of the above motions, prepare, serve, and fileone or more of the responses listed below within the extended time to respond to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(b), (c); see also § 2.42, Paragraph (2), above] to avoid default [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(d), 585(a)-(c)]. If defendant desires to counterdesignate the case as complex or noncomplex, prepare, serve, and file a counter civil case cover sheet no later than defendant's first appearance [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.402; see § 2.42, Paragraph (8)(j), above].

NOTE:

Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3) allows any motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110-583.430 to be made within in the time for responding to the complaint to avoid default [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(3), (d)]. This would include motions for either discretionary or mandatory dismissal for failure to serve summons or for failure to bring to trial. Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a)-(c), however, only refers to motions for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve summons (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210-583.250) as forestalling default

The responses are as follows [Code Civ. Proc. § 585(a)-(c)]:

1. Answer to complaint.

a. Prepare, serve, and file answer admitting or denying allegations of complaint or alleging new matter constituting defenses to complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30; see also § 2.42, Paragraph (9), above]. For discussion, procedure, and forms, see Ch. 26, Answers ; for procedure and forms relating to service of answers, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

b. Verify the answer when:

(1) Complaint verified, except in limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446].

(2) State, any county thereof, city, school district, district, public agency, or public corporation, or any officer of the state, or of any county thereof, city, school district, district, public agency, or public corporation, in his or her official capacity, is the plaintiff unless either an admission of the truth of the complaint might subject the party to a criminal prosecution, or, a county, city, school district, district, public agency, or public corporation, or an officer of the state, or of any county thereof, city, school district, district, public agency, or public corporation, in his or her official capacity, is defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446].

c. Filing fee.

Pay filing fee, at time of delivery of answer, to clerk of court for filing [see Gov. Code §§ 70612 (unlimited civil cases), 70614 (limited civil cases)].

2. Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10, 430.30(a)].

a. If defects appear on face of complaint [see § 2.42, Paragraph (8), above], file demurrer separately, with answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(c)], or together with motion to strike [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b)]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

b. Serve and file notice of hearing with demurrer specifying hearing date in accordance with provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1005 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c)]. For procedure and forms relating to service of demurrers, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

c. Prepare, serve and file supporting memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113].

d. Appear at hearing on demurrer [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(f)].

e. Following ruling on demurrer, if demurrer is not sustained and answer has not already been filed, file answer within 10 days unless otherwise ordered [see Code Civ. Proc. § 472a(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(g)]. If time to answer is given, the time given runs from the service of the notice of the decision or order, unless that notice is waived in open court and the waiver is entered in the minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 472b].

f. If demurrer was directed to less than all of the causes of action of the complaint, move to strike, demur, or otherwise plead to remaining causes of action within 10 days after [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(j)]:

(1) Overruling of demurrer,

(2) Amendment of complaint or expiration of time to amend if demurrer is sustained with leave to amend, or

(3) Sustaining of demurrer if demurrer was sustained without leave to amend.

3. Motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437].

a. Serve and file motion to strike the whole or any part of complaint within time allowed to respond to pleading, and if demurrer isinterposed, concurrently therewith, if any of grounds enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 436 exist [see Code Civ. Proc. § 435(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1322; see also § 2.42, Paragraph (10)]. For procedure and forms, see Ch. 375, Motions to Strike: Pleadings , Ch. 372, Motions and Orders , and Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for memoranda, see California Points and Authorities, Ch. 160, Motions to Strike .
