Each appellate motion must be accompanied by a memorandum in support of the motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54].

For a general form of memorandum of points and authorities, which may be adapted for use in appellate motion proceedings, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities . For forms of points and authorities on specific issues, which may be used in civil appellate memoranda, see California Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender).

[c] Affidavits and Other Evidence

If the motion is based on matters not appearing in the record, the motion must be accompanied by appropriate declarations, affidavits, or other evidence [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54]. Such evidentiary support may berequired for any motion filed before the filing of the record on appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.57(b) (motion filed before record is filed must be accompanied by declarations or other evidence as necessary and proper to support motion)]. Failure to include such evidence may, and probably will, result in denial of the motion [see Ray v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1411, 1415, 246 Cal. Rptr. 593] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Motion Attachments Encouraged. Attachments to briefs are not encouraged. It is rarely helpful, for example, to attach a document as an exhibit (one of the rare exceptions would be when the brief makes repeated references to a document such as a map or chart). Generally, the appellate court has the time to review the record carefully and to extract those portions necessary to its review without recourse to attachments [see discussion in Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[3]].

On the other hand, attachments to the declarations that accompany motions (or petitions for extraordinary relief) are both common and helpful, so long as care is taken to assure their evidentiary sufficiency. Thus, any exhibit should be authenticated in the declaration or certified as part of the record [see, e.g., discussion of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.57(a), below]. Similarly, if judicial notice is being sought in connection with the motion, it is advisable to include a separate application that judicial notice be taken of the matter [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 2d App. Dist., Rule 5; Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 4th App. Dist., Rule 8(g) (local rules requiring separate motion for request for judicial notice as distinguished from including request in appellate brief)]. For discussion relating to declarations and affidavits generally, and forms that may be adapted for use in appellate proceedings, see Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations . For discussion relating to judicial notice and a form of request that may be adapted for use in an appellate court, see Ch. 321, Judicial Notice .

Note that nonevidentiary attachments may sometimes be necessary or desirable, particularly copies of authority cited in supporting points and authorities that are not readily available to the appellate court. When a party cites to an unpublished opinion or to an opinion available only in a computer-based source of decisional law, that party is expressly required to furnish a copy of the opinion to the court and all parties by attaching it to the document in which it is cited [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(c); for discussion of unpublished opinions and the limited circumstances under which they may be cited, see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.50[3][b]].

For discussion concerning particular evidence submitted in support of motions, see Ch. 47, Appeal: Relief From Default ; Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal ; Ch. 49, Appeal: Sanctions .

If a motion to dismiss the appeal is filed prior to the filing of the record on appeal, the motion must be accompanied by a certificate of the clerkof the superior court, or a declaration, setting forth certain information specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.57(a). For further discussion of the certificate or declaration in a dismissal proceeding under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.57(a), see Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal, § 48.13[3][a].

[d] Proof of Service on All Parties

A motion presented for filing in the reviewing court must be accompanied by proof of service on all other parties in a manner permitted by law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25]. For discussion relating to service and proof of service generally, and forms that may be adapted for use in appellate proceedings, see Ch. 518, Service and Summons of Papers .

For discussion of a variation of proof of service requirement for applications on routine matters, see § 45.15[2].

[e] Typewritten Motion Requirement

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40(a), requires that the motion be typewritten. "Typewritten" includes other methods of duplication equivalent in legibility to typewriting.

[f] Proposed Order

Counsel should check local practice to determine whether a proposed order should be submitted with the motion. Some courts prefer to draft their own orders. Others encourage or require proposed orders. In the Second Appellate District, for example, failure to submit a proposed order with an appellate motion or application may be grounds for denial of the motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 2d App. Dist., Rule 4].

[2] Opposition to Motion

[a] General Format of Opposition

Generally, an opposition to a motion should consist of an opposing memorandum of points and authorities, and any affidavits or other evidence as necessary [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54, and discussion in [1][b], [c], above]. If desired, it may include a counter-motion with a request for a different or alternative relief than that requested in the motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54, and discussion in [1][a], above].

The opposition should conform to the same format requirements as the motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54, and discussion in [1][e], above; see also discussion of general format requirements in § 45.13].

[b] Time for Service and Filing

Any opposition to a motion must be served and filed within 15 days after the motion is filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 (extension of time when service is by mail, etc.)].

The opposing papers, when filed, must include proof of service in a manner permitted by law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25]. For discussion relating to service and proof of service generally, and forms that may be adapted for use in appellate proceedings, see Ch. 518, Service and Summons of Papers .

[c] Failure to Oppose Motion

Failure to serve and file a written opposition or other response may be deemed by the appellate court to be consent to the granting of the motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54; see Sharp v. Union Pacific R. Co. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 357, 361, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 925 (no opposition to motion to augment record deemed consent to grant of motion)].

[3] Disposition of Motion

[a] Time for Disposition of Motion

The appellate court may dispose of a motion any time after opposition or other response has been filed or the time for filing opposition has expired [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54].

PRACTICE TIP:
Denial at Any Time After Filing. The court may, and sometimes will, deny a motion before any opposition is received and before the time for filing opposition has lapsed.

[b] Hearing on Motion

Motions are ordinarily decided without argument, but may be placed on the calendar for any session by order of the court or the Presiding Justice (or the Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54]. Thus, upon request of a party or upon its own motion, the appellate court may place a motion on calendar for hearing. A hearing is discretionary. The court may dispose of the motion after scheduling such a hearing, or it may dispose of the motion regardless of a request for hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54].

When a motion is placed on calendar, the clerk must mail to each party notice of the hearing, showing the date and time designated for the hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54; see UAP-Columbus JV 326132 v. Nesbitt (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1030 (placement ofmotion on calendar because motion was potentially dispositive of appeal and raised different interpretations of precedent that could be argued by the parties)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Hearing on Motion Is Rare and May Be Deferred. Most appellate courts schedule a hearing on a motion only in very unusual cases. If a motion will be dispositive of the entire appeal, hearing and decision of the motion is often deferred until oral argument, or later. One exception would be a motion that raises the issue of the court's jurisdiction to hear the appeal on the merits, for example, a motion to dismiss due to an untimely or defective notice of appeal; while these motions are dispositive, they are usually decided promptly, with or without a hearing [see Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal, § 48.13[3][d]].

[c] Order

Some courts of appeal and the Supreme Court prefer to prepare their own orders and counsel is not expected to submit a draft of the proposed order. Other courts of appeal, however, expect or require counsel to submit a draft of the order. Counsel are advised to consult local practice as to the requirements for, and contents of, an order [see [1][f], above].

§ 45.15 Procedure for Applications on Routine Matters

[1] Contents of Application

A routine application must set out facts showing the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50]:

- Good cause for granting the application.
- Any previous applications granted or denied to any party after filing of the notice of appeal.

If the application is for an extension of time, additional requirements apply [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b) (declaration stating specific facts, not conclusions, showing good cause, stating when document is due, how long an extension is needed, whether prior extensions were granted and if so, their length and whether they were stipulations or grants of applications); for further discussion and a form of application to extend time, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time, §§ 46.12, 46.40].

In the case of routine applications, it is customary to submit a proposed order as part of the application. Such orders are commonly included in printed forms of application to extend time that are provided by some courts. In the Second Appellate District, a proposed order must, by local rule, accompany any application, and failure to do so may be grounds fordenying the application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 2d App. Dist., Rule 4].

[2] Advance Service and Filing

Except as otherwise provided in the appellate rules, applications to extend time for filing records and briefs, applications to shorten time, and applications for other routine matters must be served and filed, but the presiding justice

(or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) may for good cause excuse advance service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50]. Thus, any routine application made without advance service must include a request for excuse of the service requirement, and show good cause for granting this request.

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoid Filing an Application Without Advance Notice. The presiding justice (or Chief Justice) is very unlikely to find "good cause" to excuse advance notice, as it should almost always be possible to provide such notice in the context of a routine applications. Counsel should avoid, as much as possible, filing without advance notice.

If the application is for an extension of time, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.43(b), requires service on all parties to the appellate proceeding. For other routine applications, each adverse party represented by counsel must be served [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25 (discussed in [1][d], above, defining "serve and file" generally)]. An application to extend time to accomplish a step in the preparation of the record or to file a brief must also include not only proof of service on all other parties, but also proof of prior delivery of a copy of the application, by mail or otherwise, to the client of counsel submitting the application. Delivery of copy to one client is sufficient when representing a class, and the proof of delivery need not give the client's address [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(f)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time, § 46.12.

On filing, a routine application must be accompanied by an addressed, postage prepaid envelopes for mailing the order granting or denying the motion to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

[3] Opposition to Application

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, does not expressly provide for opposition, but opposing parties may wish to submit opposition nevertheless, especially when the application is for an extension of time. Parties wishing to file opposition should follow the procedures set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54, as much as possible [see § 45.14[2]].

[4] Disposition of Application

A routine application may be granted or denied by the presiding justice (or the Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings), unless the court determines otherwise [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

Volume 5: Appeal-Chs. 40-55
Chapter 45 APPEAL: MOTION PROCEDURE
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. General Appellate Motion Requirements

5-45 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 45.16

AUTHOR: Jeffery A. Hogge Author Hon. Miriam A. Vogel, Barbara L. Sorem Editorial Consultants Mr. Hogge is a staff attorney with the Third Appellate District Court of Appeal. Justice Vogel is an Associate Justice in Division One of the Second Appellate District Court of Appeal, while Ms. Sorem is a senior staff attorney with Division Four of that Court.

§ 45.16 E-Filing Pilot Project in Second Appellate District

[1] In General

Effective July 1, 2010, the Second Appellate District is testing a pilot program to electronically file and serve documents. A "document" is [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.71(2)]:

- Any filing submitted to the reviewing court, including a brief, a petition, an appendix, or a motion.
- Any document transmitted by a trial court to the reviewing court, including a notice or a clerk's or reporter's transcript.
- Any writing prepared by the reviewing court, including an opinion, an order, or a notice.

A document that the court, a party, or a trial court files electronically has the same legal effect as a document in paper form. Filing a document electronically does not alter any filing deadline [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.72(d)].

When the court permits electronic filing it will publish, in both electronic and print formats, the court's electronic filing requirements [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.74(a)]. If the court is aware of a problem that impedes or precludes electronic filing, it must promptly take reasonable steps to provide notice of the problem [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.74(b)].

[2] Electronic Filing Service Providers

The court may contract with one or more electronic filing service providers to furnish and maintain an electronic filing system for the court. If the court contracts with an electronic filing service provider, the court may require electronic filers to transmit the documents to the provider. If there is a single provider or an in-house system, the court must accept filing from other electronic filing service providers to the extent it is compatible with them [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.75(a)].

An electronic filing service provider must promptly transmit any electronic filing and the applicable filing fee to the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.75(c)]. An electronic filing service provider must promptly send to an electronic filer its confirmation of the receipt of any document that the filer has transmitted to the provider for filing with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.75(d)(1)]. After reviewing the documents, the court must promptly transmit to the electronic filing service provider and the electronic filer the court's confirmation of filing or notice of rejection of filing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.75(d)(3)].

[3] Format of Documents to Be Filed Electronically

A document that is filed electronically with the court must be in a format specified by the court unless it cannot be created in that format [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.76(b)]. The format adopted by a court must meet the following requirements [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.76(b)]:

- The software for creating and reading documents must be in the public domain or generally available at a reasonable cost.

- The printing of documents must not result in the loss of document text, format, or appearance.

If a document is filed electronically and cannot be formatted to be consistent with a formatting rule elsewhere in the California Rules of Court, these rules prevail [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.76(b)].

[4] Signatures on Electronically Filed Documents

If a document to be filed must be signed under penalty of perjury, the document may be filed electronically provided that the original, signed verification page or pages are filed with the court within five calendar days [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(a)]. If a document does not require a signature under penalty of perjury, the document is deemed signed by the party if the document is filed electronically [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(b)].

When a document to be filed electronically, such as a stipulation, requires the signatures of opposing parties, the party filing the document must obtain the signatures of all parties on a printed form of the document. By electronically filing the document, the electronic filer indicates that all parties have signed the document and that the filer has the signed original in his or her possession [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(c)(1)]. The party filing the document must maintain the original, signed document and must make it available for inspection and copying at the request of the court or any other party [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(c)(2)]. Any time after the document is filed, any other party may serve a demand for production of the original signed document. The demand must be served on all other parties but need not be filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(c)(3)]. Within five days of service of the demand, the party on whom the demand is made must make the original signed document available for inspection and copying by all other parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(c)(4)].

A party is not required to use a digital signature on an electronically filed document [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(d)]. If a document requires a signature by a court or a judicial officer, the document may be electronically signed in any manner permitted by law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(e)].

[5] Payment of Filing Fees

The court may permit the use of credit cards, debit cards, electronic fund transfers, or debit accounts for the payment of filing fees associated with electronic filing, as provided in Gov. Code § 6159 and other applicable law. The court may also authorize other methods of payment [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.78(a)].

[6] Electronic Service of Documents

[a] In General

When a notice may be served by mail, express mail, overnight delivery, or fax transmission, electronic service of the notice is permitted when authorized [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(a)(1)]. A party indicates that the party agrees to accept electronic service by [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(a)(2)]:

- Filing and serving a notice that the party accepts electronic service. The notice must include the electronic notification address at which the party agrees to accept service.

- Electronically filing any document with the court. The act of electronic filing is evidence that the party agrees to accept service at the electronic notification address that the party has furnished to the court under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.76(a)(4).

When the court permits electronic filing in a case, it must maintain and make available electronically to the parties an electronic service list that contains the parties' current electronic notification addresses, as provided by the parties that have filed electronically in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(b)].

Parties are responsible for electronic service on all other parties in the case. A party may serve documents electronically directly, by an agent, or through a designated electronic filing service provider [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(c)(1)]. A document may not be electronically served on a nonparty unless otherwise provided by law or court order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(c)(2)].

[b] Change of Electronic Notification Address

A party whose electronic notification address changes while the appeal or original proceeding is pending must promptly file a notice of change of address electronically with the court and must serve this notice electronically on all other parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(d)].

[c] When Electronic Service Is Complete

Electronic service is complete at the time of transmission [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(e)(1)]. Service that occurs after 11:59 p.m. is deemed to have occurred on the next court day [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(e)(2)].

[d] Proof of Service

Proof of electronic service may be by any of the methods provided in Code of Civil Procedure § 1013a, except that the proof of service must state [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(f)(1)]:

- The electronic notification address of the person making the service, in addition to that person's residence or business address.

- The date and time of the electronic service, instead of the date and place of deposit in the mail.

- The name and electronic notification address of the person served, in place of that person's name and address as shown on the envelope.

- That the document was served electronically, in place of the statement that the envelope was sealed and deposited in the mail with postage fully prepaid.

Proof of electronic service may be in electronic form and may be filed electronically with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(f)(2)].

The party filing the proof of electronic service must maintain the printed form of the document bearing the declarant's original signature and must make the document available for inspection and copying on the request of the court or any party to the action or proceeding in which it is filed, in the manner provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.77(c) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.80(f)(3)].

§ 45.20 Appellate Motions Generally

All appellate motions are governed generally by Rules of Ct., Rules 8.25-8.44, discussed in § 45.10 et seq. Some of the more common motions, applications, and notices made in civil appellate proceedings are described in § 45.21 et seq., in most cases with references to more detailed discussion and forms in this or related chapters.

§ 45.21 Motion or Stipulation to Consolidate Appeals

When several parties appeal from the same judgment or order or some part of that judgment (or when there is a cross appeal), the superior court clerk prepares and files a single record [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.147(a)]. In some instances, even when related appeals are not consolidated by the court on its own motion, a party may move or the parties may stipulate to consolidate appeals. § 45.22 Motions Relating to Record

The record on appeal is prepared by the trial court clerk and reporter, and transmitted by the trial court clerk. Most motions relating to preparation or completion and transmission of the record are filed in the trial court [see Ch. 44, Appeal: Preparing and Filing the Record]. In proceedings to augment the record, however, an application or motion may be addressed to the appellate court as well as, or in lieu of, a notice to the trial court clerk or reporter to prepare, certify, and transmit the omitted material [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.155(a)].

Motions for an order directing that all or part of the record on appeal be filed under seal, or for an order unsealing records, must also be directed to the reviewing court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.46(e), (f)].

For further discussion and forms relating to proceedings to augment the record on appeal, see Ch. 44, Appeal: Preparing and Filing the Record, § 44.90 et seq. § 45.23 Motions Relating to Briefs

Briefs and the various motions relating to briefs are discussed in Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs , including discussion and forms of the following types of motions or applications:

- Application to extend time for filing brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a); see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.16[4][b], 50.75[2], 50.75[3]; for discussion and forms concerning extension of time to file papers generally, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time].

§ 45.24 Motions or Stipulations to Substitute a Party or Counsel

Substitution of parties in an appeal or original proceeding must be made by serving and filing a motion in the reviewing court. The clerk of that court must notify the superior court of any ruling on the motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36(a)].

A party may substitute attorneys by serving and filing in the reviewing court a substitution signed by the party represented and the new attorney. In all appeals and in original proceedings related to a superior court proceeding, the party must also serve the superior court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36(b)]. An attorney may request withdrawal by filing a motion to withdraw [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36(c)].

For further discussion and forms relating to substitution of a party and substitution or withdrawal of counsel, as well as discussion of an application for out-of-state counsel to appear pro hac vice, see Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.14[3] [see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(a)].

Justice Vogel is an Associate Justice in Division One of the Second Appellate District Court of Appeal, while Ms. Sorem is a senior staff attorney with Division Four of that Court.

§ 45.26 Notice of Settlement

If a civil case is settled after a notice of appeal is filed, the appellant is required to provide the reviewing court with immediate written notice, as well as immediate telephone or other expeditious notice if a hearing or conference is scheduled. If the record on appeal has not been completed and transmitted to the reviewing court at the time of the settlement, the appellant must also provide written notice to the clerk of the superior court, and include proof of that notice with the notice given to the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.244(a); see Huschke v. Slater (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1160, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (appellant, not respondent, has duty to file notice of settlement)].

Within 45 days after filing a notice of settlement, the appellant who filed the notice of settlement must file either an abandonment under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.244(b), if the record has not yet been filed in the court of appeal, or a request to dismiss under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.244(c), if the record has already been filed in the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.244(a)(3)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Notice of Settlement. Note that a notice of settlement under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.244(a), does not in itself operate to divest the appellate court of jurisdiction in the appeal. The parties must seek a final determination of the cause by a voluntary dismissal, or in some instances by a motion for stipulated reversal. Although the parties may stipulate for an immediate issuance of remittitur once a final determination has been made, the determination itself is a necessary prerequisite to remittitur [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272, and discussion in Ch. 53, Appeal: Remittitur and Costs on Appeal, § 53.13]. For further discussion of voluntary dismissal and stipulated reversal, see §§ 45.33, 45.36 and Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal, §§ 48.11, 48.12.

An attorney or unrepresented party whose address or telephone number changes while a case is pending must promptly serve and file a written notice of the change in the court in which the case is pending [*Cal. If an attorney gives the notice, the notice must include the attorney's California State Bar number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.32(a)(2)].

§ 45.36 Motion for Stipulated Reversal

The parties, on reaching a settlement, may move for a stipulated reversal of the trial court judgment, as distinguished from the more usual procedure following settlement of a stipulated or voluntary dismissal [see § 45.33]. An appellate court, however, will grant a stipulated reversal only after making certain findings that the reversal will not adversely affect nonparties, the public, public trust in the judicial process, or the incentivefor pretrial settlement [*see Code Civ. § 45.37 Request for Judicial Notice

Generally, a reviewing court must take judicial notice of matters that the trial court properly noticed or that it was required to notice, and it has the same discretionary power to take judicial notice as that possessed by the trial court [see Evid. Code § 459]. Thus a party may request that the appellate court take judicial notice of certain matters, although as a general rule appellate courts will decline to take notice of matters that were not before the trial court [see, e.g., Brosterhous v. State Bar of California (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 315, 325, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87, 906 P.2d 1242 ; Violante v. Communities Southwest Development and Construction Company (2006) 138 Cal. Rptr. 2d 735 (court granted request for judicial notice when opposing party failed to file any opposition)]. Former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 41.5, which required that a request for judicial notice be made under a motion separate from the appeal brief, has been repealed effective July 1, 2003. § 46.11 Application to Shorten Time Requirement

The presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings), for good cause shown, may shorten the time for serving or filing a notice of motion or other paper incident to an appeal or to an original proceeding in the reviewing court. An application to shorten time must be made as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.68].

Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, except as otherwise provided in the appellate rules, applications must set out facts showing the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50]:

- Good cause for granting the application.
- Any previous applications granted or denied to any party after filing of the notice of appeal.

Applications to shorten time must be served and filed, which means each adverse party represented by counsel must be served and the application must be filed with proof of such prior service in a manner permitted by law [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.10(f)]. The presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) may for good cause excuse advance service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50]. Thus, any routine application made without advance service must include a request for excuse of the service requirement, and show good cause for granting this request [but see discussion in Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]].

In the case of routine applications, it is customary to submit a proposed order as part of the application. Such orders are commonly included in printed forms of application to extend time that are provided by some courts. In the Second Appellate District, a proposed order must, by local rule, accompany any application, and failure to do so may be grounds for denying the application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 2d App. Dist., Rule 4].

A routine application must be accompanied by addressed, postage prepaid envelopes for mailing the order granting or denying the motion to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

The application is granted or denied by the presiding justice (or the Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) at his or her discretion, unless thecourt determines that another method of disposition is appropriate [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

For a form of application to shorten time, see § 46.40.

§ 46.12 Application to Extend Time Requirement

[1] Availability and Procedure

[a] Extension of Time Not Available in All Proceedings

The California Rules of Court provide the following limitations on extensions of time by the reviewing court:

- Time is not extended for [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.104(b), 8.268(f), 8.500(e)(2), 8.308(a); see also Silverbrand v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 106, 125-126, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 205 P.3d 1047 (court may not extend time for filing notice of appeal); Freiberg v. City of Mission Viejo (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1488, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 802 (time for appeal absolutely jurisdictional)]:
  - Filing a notice of appeal;
  - Filing a petition for Supreme Court review of a court of appeal decision; or
  - Granting or denying a rehearing in the court of appeal.
- The time for granting or denying Supreme Court review of a decision of a court of appeal may be extended only as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b).
- The time for granting or denying a rehearing in the Supreme Court may be extended only as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.536(c).
- The time for ordering a case transferred from the appellate department of the superior court to the court of appeal as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1008 is not extended, and the time for the superior court to certify the transfer of a case to the court of appeal may not be extended except as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1005(d).

Aside from these exceptions, the Chief Justice or presiding justice may, for good cause shown, extend the time for doing any act required or permitted under the rules on appeal (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.1-8.276) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Try Stipulating Before Applying for Extension. Before applying for an extension, try first to obtain a stipulation from opposing counsel, particularly if the extension is for filing a brief. In this situation, stipulations are expressly authorized under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.212(b)(1), and the appellate courts naturally prefer that this alternative be exhausted before making any application that must be disposed of by the presiding justice [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 1st App. Dist., Rule 7(a)]. For further discussion relating to stipulations for anextension of time to file a brief, and a form of stipulation, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.16[4][a], 50.75[1].

[b] Contents of Application to Extend Time

An application to extend time must be made by a declaration containing specific facts, not mere conclusions. The application is required to state when the brief is due, how long an extension is requested, whether any prior extensions of time have been granted and, if so, their length, and whether granted by stipulation or by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(c)]. The application must also demonstrate good cause pursuant to the standards stated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a)]. These standards are set out in Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.63(c), discussed in [3], below.

The provisions of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a) and (b), if satisfied, also satisfy the content requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, which govern routine applications generally [see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[1]].

In the case of routine applications, it is customary to submit a proposed order as part of the application. Such orders are commonly included in printed forms of application to extend time that are provided by some courts. In the Second Appellate District, a proposed order must, by local rule, accompany any application, and failure to do so may be grounds for denying the application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Supp., Local Rules of Cts. of Appeal, 2d App. Dist., Rule 4].

[c] Service and Filing of Application

An application to extend time must be served on all parties to the appellate proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(c); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25 (proof of such service must accompany application when filed)]. For discussion and forms relating to proof of service of papers generally, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers]. See also discussion in [2], below, regarding proof of delivery of a copy of the application to the client.

In addition, counsel must mail or otherwise deliver to his or her client a copy of each stipulation or application for additional time for a step in preparation of the record or for filing a brief, and must affix evidence of doing so to the application or stipulation presented for filing. In class actions, delivery of a copy to one represented party is adequate. The evidence of delivery need not state the client's address [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.10(f)].

In other respects, the service and filing requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50 apply. However, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60 an applicationto extend time for filing records and briefs must be served and filed, but the presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) may, for good cause, excuse advance service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.60(c)]. Thus, any application made without advance service must include a request for excuse of the service requirement, and show good cause for granting this request. It would appear, however, in light of the superseding requirement of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(c), of service on all parties, that excuse of advance service will rarely be granted in the case of applications to extend time [see also discussion in Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]

A routine application must be accompanied by addressed, postage prepaid envelopes for mailing the order granting or denying the motion to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

[2] Extensions for Preparing the Record or Filing Briefs

Certain additional provisions apply to specifically to applications to extend the time for preparing the record on appeal, or for filing a brief:

- While preparation of the record on appeal is done in the superior court, and superior court judges may make a number of orders respecting its preparation, they may not extend the time for doing any act involved in the preparation of the record on appeal. Those times may be extended only by the court of appeal as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(e)].

- Additional requirements or provisions apply to stipulations or applications for additional time for filing a brief, both under the appellate rules [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.216(b)] and local appellate rules. For further discussion of these requirements, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.16[4] and 50.17 [see also Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.75, for forms of stipulation and application for additional time to file a brief].

[3] Standards for Showing Good Cause for Extension

As discussed in [1], above, an application to extend time must demonstrate good cause under the standards stated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a)], as shown in a declaration containing specific facts, not mere conclusions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)].

The standards under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b), for determining good cause, which the court will consider if applicable, are as follows [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(b)]:

- The degree of prejudice, if any, to any party from a grant or denial of the extension. A party claiming prejudice must support the claim in detail [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(1)].

- The positions of the client and any opponent with regard to the extension [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(2)].

- The length of the record, including the number of relevant trial exhibits. A party relying on this factor must specify the length of the record. A record containing one volume of clerk's transcript or appendix and two volumes of reporter's transcript is considered an average-length record [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(3)].

- The number and complexity of the issues raised. A party relying on this factor must specify the issues [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(4)].

- Whether there are settlement negotiations and, if so, how far they have progressed and when they might be completed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(5)].

- Whether the case is entitled to priority [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(6)].

- Whether counsel responsible for preparing the document is new to the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(7)].

- Whether other counsel or the client needs additional time to review the document [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(8)].

- Whether counsel responsible for preparing the document has other time-limited commitments that prevent timely filing of the document. Mere conclusory statements that more time is needed because of other pressing business will not suffice. Good cause requires a specific showing of other obligations of counsel that: (i) involve deadlines that as a practical matter preclude filing the document by the due date without impairing its quality, or (ii) arise from cases entitled to priority [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(9)].

- Illness of counsel, a personal emergency, or a planned vacation that counsel did not reasonably expect to conflict with the due date and cannot reasonably rearrange [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(10)].

- Any other factor that constitutes good cause in the context of the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b)(11)].

[4] Disposition of Application

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50 does not expressly provide for opposition, but opposing parties may wish to submit opposition nevertheless, especially when the application is for an extension of time. Parties wishing to file opposition should follow the procedures set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54 as much as possible [see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[3]].

An application to extend time may be granted or denied by the presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court Proceedings), unless the court otherwise determines [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50].

§ 46.13 Rules for Computing Time and Extensions of Time

The time for doing any act required or permitted under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.1- 8.277 (rules on appeal) is computed and extended in the manner provided by the Code of Civil Procedure [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(a)].

The time in which any act provided by law is to be done is computed by excluding the first day and including the last, unless the last day is a holiday, and then it is also excluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 12].

If the last day for the performance of any act provided or required by law to be performed within a specified period of time falls on a holiday, that period is extended to and includes the next day that is not a holiday. The term "holiday" includes all Saturdays, all holidays specified in Code of Civ. Proc. §§ 135, 659, 659a, and 921, and all days required to be considered as holidays under Code Civ. Proc. § 12b (discussed below) [Code Civ. Proc. § 12a]. Code Civ. Proc. § 12a applies to all provisions requiring performance on a particular day or within a specified period of time, whether set out in statute, code section, rule, regulation, or ordinance [Code Civ. Proc. § 12a]. Code Civ. Proc. § 12a applies to all provisions requiring performance on a particular day or within a specified period of time, whether set out in statute, code section, rule, regulation, or ordinance [Code Civ. Proc. § 12a].

If any city, county, state, or public office, other than a branch office, is closed for business the whole of any day, that day is considered a holiday for the purposes of computing time under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 12 and 12a [Code Civ. Proc. § 12b].

§ 46.14 Extension of Time Ordered by Judicial Council Due to Earthquake, Fire, or Other Public Emergency

When necessary due to earthquake, fire, or other public emergency, or due to the danger from any such event, or the destruction of or danger to the building housing an appellate court, the Chairperson of the Judicial Council may make one or more of the following orders, notwithstanding any provision of the appellate rules (i.e., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.100 et seq.) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66]:

- An order extending by no more than 14 additional days the time to do any act required or permitted under the California Rules of Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66(a)(1)].

- An order authorizing specified courts to extend by no more than 30 additional days the time to do any act required or permitted under the California Rules of Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66(a)(2)].

If the nature and extent of the public calamity make it necessary, the Chairperson of the Judicial Council may extend or renew an order issued for an additional period of not more than 14 days for an order under Rule 8.66(a)(1), or an additional period of not more than 30 days for an order under Rule 8.66(a)(2) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66(c)]. The Chief Justice of California is the Chair of the Judicial Council [Advisory Committee Comment to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66].

An order issued by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council under this rule must specify whether it applies throughout the state, applies only to specified courts, applies to courts within specified geographic areas, applies to attorneys within specified geographic areas, or applies in some other respect [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.66].

§ 46.30 Party Seeking Order Shortening Time

☐ Prepare application setting forth: (1) facts showing good cause for granting the application, and (2) any previous applications granted or denied to any party after filing of the notice of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; see § 46.11, and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, §§ 45.13 (general format requirements), 45.15 (general procedures for routine applications under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50)]. For a form of application to shorten time, see § 46.40.

☐ Prepare and attach proof of service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.10(f), 8.50; see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]].

☐ If seeking to file without advance service, prepare application to include request for excuse from advance service requirement, showing good cause for excuse [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; but see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]].

☐ Prepare and include proposed order if local rule or practice so dictates [see § 46.11, and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[1]].

☐ Serve one copy of application on each adverse party represented by counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.10(f), 8.50; see § 46.11 and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]].

☐ File original and three copies in court of appeal (or original and eight copies in Supreme Court) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(5), (b)(4)].

☐ Provide the clerk of the court with addressed, postage prepaid envelopes for mailing the order granting or denying the application to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; see § 46.11 and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[2]].

☐ Unless the court determines and orders otherwise, the application will be decided without further papers (e.g., by opposing party) or a hearing, by the presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; see § 46.11 and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[3], [4]].

§ 46.31 Party Seeking Order Extending Time

[1] Preliminary Determinations

☐ Determine whether time extension is necessary and whether good cause exists, using the following factors [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63; see § 46.12[3]]:

☐ The degree of prejudice, if any, to any party from a grant or denial of the extension. Support this claim in detail.

☐ The positions of the client and any opponent with regard to the extension.

☐ The length of the record, including the number of relevant trial exhibits. Specify the length of the record. A record containing one volume of clerk's transcript or appendix and two volumes of reporter's transcript is considered an average-length record.

☐ The number and complexity of the issues raised. Specify the issues.

☐ Whether there are settlement negotiations and, if so, how far they have progressed and when they might be completed.

☐ Whether the case is entitled to priority.

☐ Whether counsel responsible for preparing the document is new to the case.

☐ Whether other counsel or the client needs additional time to review the document.

☐ Whether counsel responsible for preparing the document has other time-limited commitments that prevent timely filing of the document. Mere conclusory statements that more time is needed because of other pressing business will not suffice. Good cause requires a specific showing of other obligations of counsel that: (i) involve deadlines that as a practical matter preclude filing the document by the due date without impairing its quality, or (ii) arise from cases entitled to priority.

☐ Illness of counsel, a personal emergency, or a planned vacation that counsel did not reasonably expect to conflict with the due date and cannot reasonably rearrange.

☐ Any other factor that constitutes good cause in the context of the case.

[2] Prepare and Serve Application

☐ Prepare application in the form of a declaration containing specific facts, not mere conclusions, showing good cause for granting the application under the standards stated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(b) [see [1], above], and also stating when document is due, how long an extension is needed, whether any prior extensions have been granted and if so, how long, and whether they were granted by stipulation or application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(c); see § 46.12[1][b]]. For general format requirments, see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.13. For a form of application to shorten time, see § 46.40.

☐ Prepare and attach proof of service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.25, 8.50; see § 46.12[1][c]].

☐ Prepare and include proposed order if local rule or practice so dictates [see § 46.12[1][b], and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[1]].

☐ Serve all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(c); see § 46.12[1][c]].

☐ File original and one copy in court of appeal (or original and eight copies in Supreme Court) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(5), (b)(6)].

☐ Provide the clerk of the court with addressed, postage prepaid envelopes for mailing the order granting or denying the application to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; see § 46.12[1][c]].

☐ Unless the court determines and orders otherwise, the application will be decided without further papers (e.g., by opposing party) or a hearing, by the presiding justice (or Chief Justice in Supreme Court proceedings) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50; see § 46.12[4]].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party seeking an extension of time for doing any act involved in the preparation of the record or filing a paper incident to an appeal pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.100 et seq. (rules on appeal) [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.50, 8.63, 8.68] or a shortening of time for serving or filing a paper incident to an appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.50, 8.60, 8.63]. For discussion of applications to shorten or extend time, see respectively §§ 46.11 and 46.12.

Note that several districts of the court of appeal have printed forms of application to extend time; the First Appellate District has a printed form for use specifically to extend time to file a brief. Counsel should check the district clerk's office to determine whether a printed form should be used in lieu of this form [see also Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.75[2], setting out a form of application for extension of time to file a brief, based on the First Appellate District's printed form and § 50.75[3], setting out Judicial Council Form APP-006, Application for Extension of Time to File Brief (Civil Case)].

The application must be accompanied by a proof of prior service in a manner permitted by law, either on all parties (application for extension), or on each adverse party separately represented by counsel (application to shorten time), unless the presiding justice has excused advance service [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.50, 8.60, 8.63(b), and discussion in §§ 46.11, 46.12[1]]. For discussion concerning proof of service, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

A routine application, by custom and in some courts by requirement, is accompanied by a proposed order [see § 46.12[1][b], and Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.15[1]].

§ 53.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the following proceedings that occur after a decision has been filed in a civil appeal:

- Remittitur proceedings, or the return of the case to the jurisdiction of the superior court, including proceedings to expedite or recall remittitur [see § 53.10 et seq.].

- Proceedings after remittitur, in the superior court, to recover costs and fees on appeal [see § 53.30 et seq.].

Although this chapter focuses on rehearing and remittitur by the court of appeal, these proceedings apply also to review proceedings before the Supreme Court, and are identical, with a few noted exceptions [see also Ch. 54, Appeal: California Supreme Court Review].

This chapter includes the following forms relating to remittitur and the recovery of costs on appeal:

- A stipulation to expedite remittitur, a stipulation and motion to stay remittitur, and a stipulation and motion to recall remittitur [see §§ 53.60 -53.62].

- Memoranda for costs on appeal and a motion to recovery attorney's fees on appeal [see §§ 53.70, 53.71].

§ 53.11 Remittitur Defined

The remittitur is essentially the document by which the final judgment of the appellate court is communicated to the trial court. The appellate court, in issuing the remittitur, notifies the trial court that the appellate court's judgment is final, authenticates its judgment to the trial court, and thereby transfers the case back to the trial court, reinvesting it with jurisdiction over the case. The clerk of the appellate court attaches a copy of the court's opinion or decision to the remittitur [see Code Civ. Proc. § 912; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b); *In re Anna S. (2010) 180 Cal. § 53.12 Procedure for Issuance of Remittitur

[1] Issuance by Clerk After Lapse of Time for Obtaining Further Review

On final determination of an appeal by the reviewing court, the clerk of the court remits to the trial court a certified copy of the judgment or order of the reviewing court and of its opinion, if any [Code Civ. Proc. § 912; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Form of Remittitur and "Judgment." The remittitur issued by an appellate court is typically a one-page printed form, which, as discussed in § 53.11, essentially advises the lower court that a copy of the opinion or decision is attached and that the decision has now become final. It may also specify that a party is entitled to an award of costs.

The "judgment or order" of the appellate court, referred to in Code Civ. Proc. § 912, is typically the final paragraph of the court's opinion, stating that the trial court judgment is affirmed or reversed, or otherwise providing the disposition and directions for the trial court to follow after remittitur. It may provide for the award of costs or sanctions, or both, in addition to its other disposition of the cause [see § 53.30 et seq.].

Unless otherwise ordered, the clerk of the Supreme Court issues the remittitur when a judgment of that court becomes final, and the clerk of the court of appeal issues the remittitur on the expiration of the period during which a hearing in the Supreme Court may be determined, including any extension of such period granted in the particular cause. The remittitur is deemed issued on the date the clerk enters a remittitur in the record of the case. It is transmitted immediately to the lower court, with a certified copy of the opinion or order, to the lower court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.540(b)].

When the remittitur is from the Supreme Court's review of a court of appeal decision, it is addressed to the court of appeal unless otherwise ordered by the Supreme Court, and is accompanied by a second certified copy of the remittitur and by two certified copies of the opinion or order. In this situation, the court of appeal must issue its own remittitur immediately afterwards, after an unqualified affirmance or reversal of its judgment by the Supreme Court, or after the finality of such further proceedings in the court of appeal that may have been mandated by the Supreme Court's decision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)(2)].

The clerk of the trial court, or the judge if there is no clerk, files this certified copy of the judgment and opinion of the appellate court, and attaches that copy to the judgment roll if the appeal was from a judgment. The clerk then enters a note of the judgment of the reviewing court, stating whether the judgment or order appealed from has been affirmed, reversed, or modified, both in the margin of the original entry of the judgment or order and also in the register of actions [Code Civ. Proc. § 912].

PRACTICE TIP:

Delay in Issuance of Remittitur. In some instances, such as when the parties settle and dismiss, they may wish to stipulate to an immediate issuance of remittitur [see [3], below]. Unless you have some reason for doing so, however, do not worry about a certain amount of time delay in its issuance. When it has been transmitted, you should receive a notice by mail. Sometimes it will be issued immediately and sometimes a few weeks, or more, may pass before it actually issues. The only effect of the delay is that transfer of jurisdiction to the trial court is postponed. Jurisdiction is not lost. If there is inordinate delay, call or write the clerk's office to check on its issuance, since it is possible that it was issued, but your name was inadvertently omitted from the service list.

CAUTION: Be Aware of Time Requirements. Note that the time periods for doing certain important acts begin to run either from the date of the mailing by the appellate court of notice of issuance of the remittitur [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c) (40-day period for filing memorandum of costs), and discussion in § 53.33] or from the date of the filing of the remittitur in the trial court [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3) (mandatory three-year period for bringing case to trial following appeal and remand for trial or new trial), and discussion in Ch. 212, Dismissal, § 212.60 et seq.].

[2] Immediate Issuance on Stipulation of Parties

The court of appeal may direct the immediate issuance of a remittitur on a stipulation of the parties [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.268(c)(1)]. The Supreme Court may order an immediate remittitur either on the parties' stipulation or on a motion showing good cause [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.540(c)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Expedited Issuance of Remittitur. If you reach settlement while your appeal is pending, consider, to save time, submitting a stipulation for immediate issuance of the remittitur along with your request to dismiss the appeal. This way, the trial court will immediately be reinvested with jurisdiction and will be able to enforce your settlement agreement.

For a form of stipulation for immediate issuance of remittitur, see § 53.60.

[3] Notice of Issuance

The clerk of the appellate court is required to mail a notice to the parties that it has issued the remittitur promptly after having done so [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(d)].

§ 53.13 Stay of Issuance

An appellate court, for good cause, may stay the issuance of a remittitur for a reasonable period [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)(2)].

For example, when a party files a petition for writ of certiorari with the United States Supreme Court, a stay of issuance of the California Supreme Court's remittitur, pending the determination of that petition, is proper [see Severns Drilling Co. v. Superior Court (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 435, 437, 60 P.2d 530 ; Reynolds v. E. Clemens Horst Co. (1918) 36 Cal. App. 529, 529-530, 172 P. 623].

Issuance of remittitur also may be stayed when the appellate court issues an order to show cause why its judgment should not be vacated due to mistaken assumption of fact [Krug v. Meehan (1951) 108 Cal. App. 2d 416, 239 P.2d 46].

For form of a motion for stay of issuance of remittitur, see § 53.61.

§ 53.14 Recall of Remittitur

[1] Grounds for Recall

As a general rule, the appellate court cannot exercise any jursidiction over a case once it has issued a remittitur that has been filed in the lower court. This rule rests on the assumption that all of the proceedings have been regular. Thus, if it appears that this has not been the case, and that, for example, one party has practiced fraud on the appellate court or the opposing party, the appellate court will assert its jurisdiction and recall the case. This is not done on the principal of resumption of jurisdiction, but on the ground that the jurisdiction of the court cannot be divested by an irregular or improvident order [Isenberg v. Sherman (1932) 214 Cal. 722, 725-726, 7 P.2d 1006]. Absent fraud, inadvertence, or mistake, however, the appellate court does not have the power to recall a remittitur once it has been issued and filed [Chin Ott Wong v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 91 Cal.App.2d 1, 2, 204 P.2d 387].

A remittitur may not be recalled, for example, simply to correct judicial error. The remedies of petition for rehearing or modification of the judgment are available if a party is dissatisfied with the appellate court's decision for this reason [Bank of America v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 613, 625, 269 Cal. Rptr. 596 ; Davis v. Basalt Rock Co. (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 300, 301-311, 250 P.2d 254 ; Chin Ott Wong v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 91 Cal.App.2d 1, 2-3, 204 P.2d 387 ; see Pacific Legal Foundation v. California Coastal Com. (1982) 33 Cal. 3d 158, 165, 188 Cal. Rptr. 104, 655 P.2d 306]. On the other hand, an appellate court may recall remittitur for the purpose of correcting a clerical error [Pacific Legal Foundation v. California Coastal Com. (1982) 33 Cal. 3d 158, 166, 188 Cal. Rptr. 104, 655 P.2d 306]. For example, if the clerk of the reviewing court fails to enter on the record and insert in the remittitur a judgment for costs as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(b)(1), the reviewing court may recall the remittitur for correction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(b)(2)].

A misstatement of material facts also may justify recall of the remittitur if it constitutes a misstatement of facts presented in evidence, not a mere faulty conclusion as to the legal effect of those facts [Davis v. Basalt Rock Co. (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303, 250 P.2d 254].

[2] Motion or Stipulation for Recall

In a proper case, the remittitur may be recalled by order of the reviewing court on its own motion, on a motion of a party, or on a stipulation, for good cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)(2)].

Any motion must be made promptly by the moving party, as soon as that party has learned of the facts on which the motion is based [Talbot v. Fire etc. Pension Bd. (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 193, 194, 124 P.2d 352].

For forms of motion and stipulation for recall of remittitur, see § 53.62.

PRACTICE TIP:

Recall vs. Stay. Both stay of issuance of remittitur and recall of remittitur are rarely utilized or granted by the court. A party is more likely, however, to be able to show good cause for a stay of issuance of the remittitur [see § 53.13], than to establish the very narrow and limited grounds on which the court may recall remittitur [see [1], above]. A recall is exceedingly rare.

Deadline for Recall. While there is no specific deadline for a stipulation or motion to recall remittitur in general, a recall motion for the purpose of correcting errors regarding the award of costs on appeal must be filed within 30 days of the issuance of the remittitur [see Cal Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)(2), and discussion in § 53.31].

§ 53.15 Action by Trial Court on Receipt of Remittitur

[1] Court Is Reinvested With Jurisdiction Only to Carry Out Remittitur

After final decision on appeal, the trial court is reinvested with jurisdiction of the cause, but only as defined by the terms of the remittitur. The trial court is empowered to act only in accordance with the direction of the reviewing court. Action which does not conform to that direction is void. The order of the appellate court as stated in the remittitur is decisive of the character of the judgment to which the appellant is entitled. When entry of a specific judgment is directed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 906 (power of appellate court to direct entry of proper judgment)], the trial court has no discretion but to enter the judgment called for [Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 655-656, 242 P.2d 1 ; Bell v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1143-1144, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306] . The lower court cannot reopen the case on the facts, allow the filing of amended or supplemental pleadings, or retry the case. If it does so, any subsequent judgment is rendered void [Wanland v. Law Offices of Mastagni, Holstedt & Chiurazzi (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 15, 23, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 633 ; Bach v. County of Butte (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 294, 301, 263 Cal. Rptr. 565]. If the appellate court inadvertently omits to include in its instructions to the trial court, on the reversal of a judgment, essential elements within the issues necessarily determined on the appeal, a party's proper remedy is to petition for rehearing [Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 655-656, 242 P.2d 1 ; for discussion of rehearing proceedings, see Ch. 52, Appeal: Rehearing, § 52.10 et seq.]. The trial court may not exceed the specific directions of the appellate court, including the addition of conditions that the trial court has merely assumed the appellate court should have included [Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 656, 242 P.2d 1]. An unqualified affirmance ordinarily sustains the judgment and ends the litigation [Griset v. Fair Political Practices Commission (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 688, 701, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 149, 23 P.3d 43].

[2] Remittitur to Be Interpreted by Reference to Opinion

A remittitur must be interpreted by reference to the reviewing court's opinion. Especially when there is any ambiguity, the remittitur must be interpreted so as to harmonize with the appellate court's ruling [In re Justin S. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1434-1435, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 ; Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 690, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192].

[3] Restitution on Reversal

[a] Restitution May Be Ordered to Conform With Terms of Remittitur

When a judgment or order is reversed or modified, the appellate court may direct that the parties be returned so far as possible to the positions they occupied before the enforcement of or execution on the judgment or order. In doing so, the appellate court may order restitution on reasonable terms and conditions of all property and rights lost by the erroneous judgment or order of the trial court, to the extent that the restitution is consistent with rights of third parties. The appellate court may direct the entry of a money judgment sufficient to compensate for property or rights not restored. The court may take evidence and make findings concerning restitution, or it may, by order, refer such matters to the trial court for determination [Code Civ. Proc. § 908].

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 908, a person who has conferred a benefit on another in compliance with a judgment, or whose property has been taken pursuant to a judgment, is entitled to restitution if the judgment is reversed or set aside, unless restitution would be inequitable or the parties contract that payment is to be final. If the judgment is modified, there is a right to restitution of the excess. A party's voluntary compliance with an erroneous judgment or order does not preclude restitution, because satisfaction of a judgment, when not forced or done only pursuant to execution, is not deemed to be such a voluntary or gratuitous act that would preclude restitution after reversal [Schubert v. Bates (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 785, 791-792, 185 P.2d 793 (vacation of premises by defendant-appellant pursuant to judgment in unlawful detainer action did not preclude restitution when judgment was later reversed)].

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 908 provides that the appellate court may order restitution when the judgment or order appealed from is reversed or modified, this is rarely done. More often, restitution is sought in the trial court after remittitur. The trial court has inherent, discretionary power to order restitution [see Schubert v. Bates (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 785, 789, 185 P.2d 793 ; see also Loeb v. Record (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 431, 451-452, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 551 ; Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324, 33 Cal. Rptr. 129]. The existence of this power stems from the rule that, on reversal, the action is as though it had never been tried, and the court will, when justice requires it, place the parties as nearly as maybe in the condition in which they stood previously [Schubert v. Bates (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 785, 789-791, 185 P.2d 793].

For a discussion of proceedings by the appellate court to determine and order restitution, see Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.17[4][e].

[b] Motion or Action for Restitution

Restitution may be sought by way of motion made in the main action in either the appellate or trial court. Due to the summary nature of this procedure, there is no right of setoff [Bank of America, etc. v. McLaughlin (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 415, 417-418, 99 P.2d 548]. Restitution may also be sought in an independent action, such as one for money had and received, and in that instance the claim for restitution is subject to a setoff claim [Buckman v. Tucker (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 403, 406, 71 P.2d 69 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70 (right to setoff cross demands for money)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Restitution vs. Stay of Enforcement. As a general rule, it is far more preferable to obtain a stay of enforcement of the judgment at the outset of the appeal, than it is to rely on restitution proceedings after remittitur. For further discussion, including detailed discussion and forms relating to stay proceedings, see Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings, § 43.11[1].

§ 53.16 Relief by Petition for Extraordinary Writ When Trial Court Fails to Carry Out Remittitur Properly

If the trial court enters a judgment that does not conform with the remittitur, an aggrieved party may petition the appellate court for writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate the improper judgment and enter one properly conforming to the remittitur [Lamb v. Owen (1929) 98 Cal. App.106, 108, 276 P. 628].

Similarly, a party make seek a writ of prohibition to prevent the trial court from proceeding to a trial in violation of the terms of the appellate court's remittitur. Although appeal from the judgment after further trial of the action would also be an available remedy, it is not an adequate remedy when the vicissitudes and expenses of an unnecessary trial would result [Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 656-657, 242 P.2d 1].

For detailed discussion and form relating to petitions for writ of mandate generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

§ 53.17 Trial Court Proceedings After Remittitur

Following remittitur, after the trial court resumes jurisdiction of the cause, further proceedings depend upon the disposition by the appellate court. The following are some of the questions that arise after remittitur:

- The recovery of costs on appeal and attorney's fees, when recovery is permitted. For detailed discussion of these proceedings, see § 53.30 et seq.

- The trial court's interpretation and implementation of the appellate court's disposition. For discussion of the doctrine of the "law of the case," see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.30.

- Time deadlines for prosecuting a new trial.

  - For discussion of the three-year time period that begins running from the date that the trial clerk files the remittitur, within which a plaintiff must bring an action to trial after a judgment has been reversed and remanded for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3)], see Ch. 212, Dismissal, § 212.60 et seq.

  - For discussion of the one-year period within which a plaintiff must recommence an action if a judgment for plaintiff is reversed on appeal other than on the merits [Code Civ. Proc. § 355], see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

- The conduct of a new trial itself, particularly, whether the case will be assigned to the same judge who presided over the initial trial. Assignment of trials on remand vary from court to court, and counsel should check with clerk of the particular court or its local rules to ascertain its assignment practices. A peremptory challenge may be made in the event that the trial court judge in the prior proceeding is assigned to conduct a new trial on the matter after reversal on appeal; the motion to challenge the assignment must be made within 60 days after the party or the party's attorney has been notified of the assignment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6(2); for further discussion and forms, see Ch. 317, Judges].

§ 53.31 Recovering Costs on Appeal

With certain qualifications and exceptions, the party prevailing on appeal is entitled to recover costs on appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(a)(1)].The appellate court may, and in some cases is required to, specify an award, apportionment, or denial of costs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(a)(3)]. The appellate court has discretion to award costs to the losing party [see Quest Int'l, Inc. v. Icode Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 745, 778, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 173 (court awarded costs to losing appellant because appeal issue was very complex and respondent's actions added to complexity)].The appellate court clerk enters in the record, and inserts into the remittitur, either the court's directions as to an award or denial of costs, or, in the absence of directions, a "judgment awarding costs" pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(b)].

For further discussion of who is a "prevailing party" under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(a), and the entry of a cost award under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(b), see Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.18.

§ 53.32 Items Recoverable as Costs

The party to whom costs are awarded on appeal may recover only the following costs, if reasonable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)]:

- Filing fees;
- The amount the party paid for any portion of the record, whether an original or a copy or both;
- The cost to produce additional evidence on appeal;
- The costs to notarize, serve, mail, and file the record, briefs, and other papers;
- The cost to print and reproduce any brief, including any petition for rehearing or review, answer, or reply; and
- The cost to procure a surety bond, including the premium and the cost to obtain a letter of credit as collateral, unless the trial court determines the bond was unnecessary.

PRACTICE TIP:

When a Bond May Be Deemed Unnecessary. In most instances the trial court approves or even sets the requirement for a bond as a condition for a court-ordered stay. Nevertheless, there are some situations in which a trial court may determine that a bond was unnecessary for the purpose of fixing costs on appeal. For example, it may find the bond unnecessary if it appears that respondent was willing to consent to a stay without security, but appellant posted the bond anyway.

Courts have consistently held that items of expense not listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d) are not a recoverable item of costs on appeal, even though it may otherwise be a reasonable item of expense [see, e.g., Golf West of Kentucky, Inc. v. Life Investors, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 313, 316-317, 223 Cal. Rptr. 539 (holding that the expense of obtaining letters of credit in securing surety bonds was not listed and not recoverable; note that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d), as set out above, was subsequently amended to allow this item of expense)]. This is consistent with the language of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d), providing that a party may recover "only" the items listed, "if reasonable" [see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1034(b) (directing that Judicial Council establish by rule the costs allowable on appeal and procedure for claiming costs on appeal)].

Costs previously incurred in connection with another appeal are not recoverable under Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.278(d), even though the cost benefitted the current appeal. For example, the cost of preparing a reporter's transcript incurred in a prior appeal is not recoverable in a second appeal, even though the reporter's transcript is used in the second appeal [Acree v. General Motors Acceptance Corp. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 385, 405-410, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 99].

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.276(d)(4) provides that attorney's fees are not an item of costs and therefore costs on appeal do not normally include attorney's fees. Nevertheless, when attorney's fees are authorized to be awarded under a statute or contract provision, attorney's fees are available when incurred on appeal as well as when incurred at trial [Butler-Rupp v. Lourdeaux (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 918, 925, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 (rule does not create substantive basis for recovering fees); Harbour Landing-Dolfann, Ltd. v. Anderson (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 260, 263, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640 ; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.276(d)(4)]. For further discussion of the recovery and the procedure for recovery of attorney's fees on appeal, see § 53.34.

PRACTICE TIP:

The Cost of Getting Costs. Because the items of allowable costs are so limited, there may be some small appeals in which it is not necessarily time- or cost-effective to seek to recover costs. Therefore, before you actually go to the trouble of preparing the memorandum of costs, make a quick outline of allowable items to verify whether the potential amount recoverable justifies the time and expense.

§ 53.33 Procedure for Claiming Costs

[1] Memorandum of Costs After Notice of Remittitur

After remittitur, the party to whom costs have been awarded on appeal may recover such costs in the trial court, by serving and filing in that court amemorandum of costs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c); for discussion of the manner in which costs are awarded by the appellate court, see § 53.31]. For a form of memorandum of costs, see § 53.70.

The memorandum must be filed within 40 days after the clerk of the appellate court mails that party notice of the issuance of the remittitur [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(1); for discussion of notice of remittitur, see § 53.12[3]]. The memorandum must also be verified as prescribed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(1)], that is, by a statement of the party, attorney, or agent, that to the best of his or her knowledge the item of costs are correct and necessarily incurred in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(1) (allowable costs are recoverable only "if reasonable")].

The time for filing a memorandum of prejudgment costs may be extended for certain periods by stipulation or by the court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(3)]. There is, however, no corresponding provision allowing for extensions of time to file a memorandum of costs on appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c). Courts, in construing the prior time requirement for filing a memorandum of costs on appeal (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1034), have held that a trial court may not consider a memorandum that is filed after the deadline [Johnson v. Schimpf (1928) 91 Cal. App. 26, 36-37, 266 P. 597], unless the party seeking costs has also filed a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (relief from default due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect) that provides a sufficient showing of good cause for the court to grant relief from the failure to file on time [see Soda v. Marriott (1933) 130 Cal. App. 589, 594, 20 P.2d 758 ; for discussion and forms relating to relief from default under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 generally, see Ch.

489, Relief from Judgments and Orders].

PRACTICE TIP:

Awarded Costs May Be Waived by Delay in Filing Memorandum. Costs which have been awarded by the appellate court will be waived unless a cost memorandum is timely filed and served, or an extension is granted. Therefore, begin preparing a draft costs memorandum as soon as you receive the decision, or at least as soon as you receive notice of the issuance of the remittitur.

[2] Motion to Tax Costs

After the service of a copy of the memorandum of costs on appeal, an opposing party may move to have the claimed costs taxed in the same manner, and within a like time, as is prescribed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(2)].

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b), provides as follows:

- A notice of motion to tax costs must be served and filed within 15 days after service of the cost memorandum (discussed in [1], above); this time is extended pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 when the cost memorandum was served by mail [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)].

- Unless objection is made to the entire memorandum, the motion to tax must refer to each item objected to by the same number, and inthe same order, as the items appear in the memorandum, and must state why each item is objectionable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(2)].

The burden is on the moving party to establish the illegality of the challenged items; otherwise the amount demanded in the verified cost bill is controlling [Wilson v. Nichols (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 678, 682-683, 131 P.2d 596].

For further discussion relating to a motion to tax following the filing of a costs memorandum under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b), and forms of a motion to tax that may be adapted for use in moving to tax a memorandum of costs on appeal, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.10 et seq.

PRACTICE TIP:

Motion to Tax Costs Is Not the Correct Method for Disputing Appellate Court's Award. If you want to attack the appellate court's award of costs, you must do so in the appellate court, for example, by a petition for rehearing, request for modification, or even a petition for review. The sole function of the motion to tax costs is to challenge the allowableness or amount of specific items claimed in the memorandum of costs.

[3] Enforcement of Award

After the costs have been taxed or the time for taxing costs has expired, the award of costs may be enforced in the same manner as a money judgment [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(3)]. For discussion and forms relating to the enforcement of money judgments generally, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

§ 53.34 Attorney Fees on Appeal

Attorney's fees incurred on appeal are normally not recoverable [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(2)]. When, however, attorney's fees are available pursuant to a statute or a contract provision, attorney's fees are available on appeal as well as at trial [Butler-Rupp v. Lourdeaux (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 918, 923-924, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 ; Harbour Landing-Dolfann, Ltd. v. Anderson (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 260, 263, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640 ; see, e.g., Morcos v. Board of Retirement (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 924, 930, 275 Cal. Rptr. 187, 800 P.2d 543 (attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 31536); Wilson v. Wilson (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 264, 272, 5 Cal. Rptr. 317, 352 P.2d 725 (attorney's fees pursuant to contract); Buescher v. Lastar (1976) 61 Cal. App.3d 73, 76, 132 Cal. Rptr. 124 (promissory note); Union Bank v. Ross (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 290, 299, 126 Cal. Rptr. 646 (contract); Roberts v. Brian (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 427, 430-431, 106 Cal. Rptr. 360 (attorney's fees under Welf. & Inst. Code § 10962)].

Attorney's fees on appeal may be claimed in either the appellate court, while the appeal is pending, or in the trial court [Harbour Landing-Dolfann, Ltd. v. Anderson (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 260, 263-265, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640].

At the appellate court level, the court may determine a party's entitlement to attorney's fees as provided by contract or statute [Walsh v. New West Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1539, 1548, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35]. Although the court of appeal has the power to appraise and fix attorney's fees on appeal, the better practice is to leave it to the trial court to determine the amount of an award of attorney's fees at the time that it determines the costs on appeal [Security Pacific National Bank v. Adamo (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 492, 498, 191 Cal. Rptr. 134 ; see also Milman v. Shukhat (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 538, 546, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526 ; Mackinder v. OSCA Development Co. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 728, 739, 198 Cal. Rptr. 864].

Unless otherwise ordered by the reviewing court, an order or judgment regarding costs on appeal does not include attorney's fees on appeal, but neither does it preclude any party from seeking attorney fees on appeal in the trial court after remittitur. In the latter situation, the issue of entitlement to attorney fees on appeal is determined by a motion in the trial court under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(2); see also Butler-Rupp v. Lourdeaux (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 918, 925, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 (rule does not create substantive basis for recovering fees); Harbour Landing-Dolfann, Ltd. v. Anderson (1996) 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640].

PRACTICE TIP:

Requests for Attorney Fees on Appeal. If entitlement to attorney's fees is a disputed issue that may be properly decided by appellate court on the record before it, a party may wish to raise this issue on appeal, and request that the appellate court determine entitlement to an award of fees, and then direct the trial court to determine the amount after remittitur [see, e.g., Security Pacific National Bank v. Adamo (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 492, 498, 191 Cal. Rptr. 134 (awarding fees with direction to trial court to determine amount); see also discussion of award of costs and fees by appellate court in Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.18]. In many cases it will be as effective, and more efficient, simply to request, after remittitur, that the trial court determine both entitlement to fees and their amount.

An award of attorney's fees on appeal to the prevailing party should, however, be distinguished from the recovery of attorney fee expenses as part of an award of sanctions for a frivolous or bad-faith appeal. In the latter situation, the motion must be made to the appellate court [see discussion and forms in Ch. 49, Appeal: Sanctions].

The procedure for obtaining attorney's fees after remittitur, as set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702, is as follows:

- If a party is seeking to recover attorney's fees on appeal pursuant to a contract or statute that requires the court to determine entitlement to the fees, the amount of fees, or both, that party must serve and file a notice of motion requesting that the trial court make these determinations. This motion must be served and filed within 40 days after the clerk of the appellate court has mailed to that party notice of the issuance of remittitur, that is, within the time for filing the memorandum of costs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c); see discussion of time for filing cost memorandum in § 53.32]. For a form of motion for the recovery of attorney's fees under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c), see § 53.71.

- If a party is entitled to attorney's fees under a statute or contract in which the fees are fixed without the necessity of a court determination, the attorney's fees may be claimed as an item of costs in the memorandum of costs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(e); see discussion of memorandum of costs and a form of memorandum of costs in §§ 53.31, 53.32[1], 53.70, respectively].

For good cause, the trial judge may extend the time for filing a motion for attorney's fees, either in the absence of a stipulation or for a longer period than allowed by stipulation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(d)].

§ 53.42 Decisions

[1] Remittitur

[a] Generally

The issuance of remittitur is the act by which the reviewing court transfers jurisdiction to the court reviewed. When the remittitur issues, the jurisdiction of the reviewing court terminates and the jurisdiction of the trial court reattaches. In re Anna S. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1500, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 889

Jurisdiction revests in the trial court upon the appellate court's issuance of the remittitur. Bellows v. Aliquot Associates, Inc. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 426

Remittitur designates and authenticates the judgment of the appellate court to the trial court from which appeal was taken; it corresponds with "mandate" procedure used by United States Supreme Court. Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 690, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192

Trial court must interpret remittitur by consulting appellate court's opinion and giving to it the meaning that best harmonizes with the appellate court's ruling. Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 690, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192

Inherent power of trial court to direct nunc pro tunc filing of certified copy of remittitur when original had previously been filed but had disappeared from court's files. Wilson v. Nichols (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 678, 681, 131 P.2d 596

Waiver of irregularities underlying issuance of remittitur. Muller v. Union Traction Co. (1924) 68 Cal. App. 239,

242-243, 228 P. 731

[b] Recall of Remittitur

Example of order on stipulation directing recall and setting aside of remittitur, and directing that stipulated findings of fact and judgment be entered. Estate of Davis (1936) 8 Cal. 2d 11, 11-12, 63 P.2d 827

Appellate court is ordinarily without jurisdiction of cause for purpose of recall when remittitur is sent to and filed by trial court. Isenberg v. Sherman (1932) 214 Cal. 722, 725, 7 P.2d 1006

Appellate court does not lose jurisdiction of cause after remittitur is sent to trial court, when judgment and remittitur were secured by fraud or imposition, or when court is led astray so as to decide case under misapprehension as to true facts; in these circumstances, the appellate court is entitled to recall remittitur. Isenberg v. Sherman (1932) 214 Cal. 722, 725-726, 7 P.2d 1006

Faulty conclusion as to legal effect of facts does not constitute misstatement of material facts justifying recall of remittitur. Davis v. Basalt Rock Co. (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303, 250 P.2d 254

Remittitur is not to be recalled to correct judicial error; remedies of petition for rehearing or modification of judgment are available when party is dissatisfied with judgment rendered in appellate court. Davis v. Basalt Rock Co. (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 300, 301, 311, 250 P.2d 254 ; Chin Ott Wong v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 1, 2, 3, 204 P.2d 387

Motion to recall remittitur must be promptly made. Talbot v. Fire etc. Pension Bd. (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 193, 194, 124 P.2d 352

[c] Jurisdiction of Trial Court After Remittitur

Trial court has no discretion but to enter judgment directed by appellate court and is not permitted to exceed specific directions of the appellate court; action by trial court not conforming to directions of appellate court in remittitur is void. Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 655-656, 242 P.2d 1

Writ of prohibition is the proper remedy to restrain the trial court from proceeding in violation of terms of final judgment of reviewing court. Hampton v. Superior Court (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 652, 656-657, 242 P.2d 1

If directions to trial court are ambiguous, they are interpreted in accordance with views, reasoning, and holdings expressed in opinion as a whole. In re Justin S. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1434-1435, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376

When there has been a decision on appeal, the trial court is reinvested with jurisdiction of the case, but only such jurisdiction as is defined by the terms of the remittitur. The trial court is empowered to act only in accordance with the direction of the reviewing court; action which does not conform to those directions is void. Bell v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1143-1144, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306

Writ of mandate is the proper remedy to require the superior court to enter judgment in conformity to remittitur. Lamb v. Owen (1929) 98 Cal. App. 106, 108, 276 P. 628

[d] Restitution After Remittitur

Trial court has inherent power to restore benefits lost pursuant to a judgment that is later reversed on appeal; exercise of this power is discretionary. Schubert v. Bates(1947) 30 Cal. 2d 785, 789-791, 185 P.2d 793 ; Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324, 33 Cal. Rptr. 129 ; Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Asso. v. McLaughlin (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 415, 417-418, 99 P.2d 548

Right of appellant to restitution as to any benefit conferred or property taken under judgment which is later reversed on appeal. Schubert v. Bates (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 785, 791, 185 P.2d 793

Claim for restitution after reversal of judgment is subject to setoff claim when restitution is sought in independent action for money had and received. Buckman v. Tucker (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 403, 406, 71 P.2d 69

Respondent who collects money pursuant to judgment later reversed on appeal becomes trustee for appellant with respect to the amount collected. Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 322, 325, 33 Cal. Rptr. 129

Trial court order requiring restitution of proceeds from execution on a judgment later reversed on appeal, is proper even though the cause is remanded for a new trial. Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 322, 326, 33 Cal. Rptr. 129

Claim for restitution is not subject to setoff by opposing party when restitution is sought in summary proceeding by way of motion made in main action in either appellate or trial court. Bank of America, etc. v. McLaughlin (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 415, 417-418, 99 P.2d 548

Motion for restitution is to be denied when it would be inequitable to opposing party. Bank of America, etc. v. McLaughlin (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 415, 418, 99 P.2d 548

[2] Costs on Appeal

Recall of remittitur, on motion, is the proper remedy to strike an improper allowance of costs. Estate of Steehler (1925) 197 Cal. 67, 68-69, 239 P. 718 ; Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 690, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192 ; Paine v. Bank of Ceres (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 621, 621-622, 141 P.2d 219

Trial court has discretionary power to stay retrial proceedings until costs on appeal have been paid, when judgment was reversed on appeal and there is a showing of hardship by virtue of failure to pay costs on appeal. Weile v. Sturtevant (1917) 176 Cal. 767, 770, 169 P. 685

Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.27(d)(2) (formerly Rule 8.276(c)(2)), does not provide a substantive basis for an appellate court to award or to disallow attorney's fees to the prevailing party. When a party claims the right to an award of attorney's fees on appeal pursuant to a contract or a statute, the party may request that award from the appellate court in the first instance, and the appellate court may make that award. Butler-Rupp v. Lourdeaux (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 918, 925, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242

Court of appeal may award costs to losing appellant if appeal issue was very complex and respondent's actions added to complexity. Quest Int'l, Inc. v. Icode Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 745, 778, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 173

Trial court is without jurisdiction to apportion or amend award of costs made by appellate court in appellate judgment; only recourse is to the appellate court. Ramirez v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 473, 478-479, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416

Absent cost award by court, clerk has no discretion but to award costs as provided under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(b); (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)) plaintiff and defendant both obtaining partial reversal of judgment of appeal are entitled to recover costs on their appeals apportioned on basis of portions of transcripts and briefs devoted to each appeal. People ex rel. Cooper v. Mitchell Brothers' Santa Ana Theater (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 378, 384-385, 211 Cal. Rptr. 501

Court may apportion costs among multiple parties when justified by circumstances surrounding appeal; costs on appeal from judgment in consolidated actions involving different parties are properly apportioned on basis of portions of transcripts and briefs devoted to each case when appellants prevailed in one case and respondents prevailed in other. Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 691, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192

Entry in remittitur by appellate court clerk that "prevailing party to recover costs" does not comply with former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(b) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)), which requires clerk to insert judgment for costs for "respondent" or "appellant," depending on whether lower court judgment is affirmed, modified, or reversed or appeal dismissed. Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 689, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192

Appellate court alone is entitled under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(a) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(a)), to award or apportion costs based on "interests of justice." Schwartz v. Schwartz (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 685, 689-690, 74 Cal. Rptr. 192

Bankruptcy discharge does not affect liability under judgment for costs on appeal. Supera v. Moreland Sales Corp. (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 517, 522, 82 P.2d 963

[b] Items Recoverable as Costs

Reimbursement for cost of entire clerk's transcript on prior appeal is proper despite appellant's abandonment of portion of appeal, when it is reasonable to infer respondent did not receive notice of abandonment until after obtaining transcript. Lubetzky v. Friedman (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 35, 42, 278 Cal. Rptr. 706 .

Reasonable costs associated with producing briefs by any process of duplication (except typewriter ribbon and carbon copies) are recoverable under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(c) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)); recoverable costs include cost of typing final draft of brief from which copies are then made by photocopying, as well as cost of preparing brief on a word processor. Lubetzky v. Friedman (1991) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1350, 1357, 245 Cal. Rptr. 589 .

Necessarily incurred travel expenses in transmitting appellate briefs are recoverable costs under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(c) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)). Lubetzky v. Friedman (1991) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1350, 1357-1358, 245 Cal. Rptr. 589 .

After remand to state court of appeal after United States Supreme Court ruling concerning federal Constitution, costs of printing Supreme Court petition are not recoverable because in actions in federal courts, federal statute that covers subject controls and may not be regulated by state statutes that result in penalizing free access to federal courts in proper cases. People ex rel. Cooper v. Mitchell Brothers' Santa Ana Theater (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 378, 390, 211 Cal. Rptr. 501 .

Pursuant to former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(c) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(c)), prevailing respondent on appeal is entitled to cost of preparation ofonecopy of reporter's transcript. Santa Barbara County Fire Fighters v. County of Santa Barbara (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 521, 522-523, 175 Cal. Rptr. 389

[c] Memorandum of Costs on Appeal

Trial court has power to grant relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (relief from proceedings taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect) for failure to file and serve cost bill within statutory time provided in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 26(d) (now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(d)). Soda v. Marriott (1933) 130 Cal. App. 589, 594, 20 P.2d 758 ; but see Johnson v. Schimpf (1928) 91 Cal. App. 26, 36-37, 266 P. 597 (trial court unable to consider untimely memorandum of costs not accompanied by request for relief from default)

Absence of, or defect in, verification as proper grounds for motion to strike memorandum of costs. Snodgrass v. Snodgrass (1930) 103 Cal. App. 412, 414, 284 P. 696

Failure to complete verification of memorandum of costs on appeal is an insufficient basis for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, permitting amendment of proceedings, when the relief sought is not to amend the memorandum but rather to add proper verification. Snodgrass v. Snodgrass (1930) 103 Cal. App. 412, 414, 284 P. 696

[d] Motion to Tax Costs on Appeal

Party moving to tax costs has burden of proving illegality of challenged items; otherwise amount demanded in verified cost bill is controlling. Wilson v. Nichols (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 678, 682-683, 131 P.2d 596

[e] Attorney's Fees on Appeal

Civ. Code § 1717 does not support an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party on appeal, but only to the prevailing party in the lawsuit. Wood v. Santa Monica Escrow Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 802, 805-808, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909

Attorney's fees incurred on appeal recoverable if recovery of fees is authorized by statute or contract; they may be claimed in appellate court while appeal is pending, or in trial court after remittitur; trial court has jurisdiction to award fees under statute or contract even if remittitur includes no directions concerning attorney's fees. Harbour Landing-Dolfann, Ltd. v. Anderson (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 260, 264-265, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640

Attorney's fees authorized by contract are to be claimed only by noticed motion, not by filing a memorandum of costs. Russell v. Trans Pacific Group (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1725, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 274 ; see also Allstate Insurance Company v. Loo (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1794, 1797-1798, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 (when entitlement to attorney's fees is provided by contract to the prevailing party, they are to be awarded by noticed motion)

Attorney's fees authorized by statute are recoverable on appeal as well as in trial court. People ex rel. Cooper v. Mitchell Brothers' Santa Ana Theater (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 378, 387, 211 Cal. Rptr. 501

Provision in contract for attorney's fees encompasses fees on appeal; although the court of appeal has the power to fix attorney's fees on appeal, the better practice is to remand cause to trial court for determination of such fees. Mackinder v. OSCA Development Co. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 728, 739, 198 Cal. Rptr. 864

Attorney's fees on appeal recoverable under parties' agreement are recoverable as "costs," but costs awarded on appeal do not normally include attorney's fees, and an order that each party shall bear its own costs on appeal therefore does not preclude recovery of attorney's fees on appeal under contract provision. De La Cuesta v. Superior Court (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 945, 950, 200 Cal. Rptr. 1 .

A party who prevails on appeal is not entitled under a contract provision to fees incurred on appeal, when the appellate decision does not decide who wins the lawsuit but instead contemplates further proceedings in the trial court. Presley of Southern California v. Whelan (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 959, 961, 196 Cal. Rptr. 1

§ 53.51 Trial Court Proceedings to Recover Costs and Fees on Appeal

[1] Checklist for Party Entitled to Costs and Fees

[a] Memorandum of Costs

☐ To determine whether to seek an award of costs on appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(a), see Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.18 [see also discussion in § 53.31].

☐ To determine items recoverable as costs on appeal as limited to items expressly allowed under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d), see § 53.32.

☐ Serve and file in the superior court a memorandum of costs on appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c); see discussion in § 53.33[1]; for a form of memorandum, see § 53.70].

☐ File memorandum within 40 days after the clerk of the appellate court mails notice of issuance of remittitur [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(1); for discussion of notice of remittitur, see § 53.12[3]].

☐ Specify applicable items of allowable costs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(1); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)].

☐ Verify applicable items by a declaration of the party, attorney, or agent, to the effect that all claimed costs are correct and were necessarily incurred.

[b] Motion for Attorney's Fees

☐ To determine whether to apply for award of attorney's fees, see discussion in § 53.34.

☐ If the appellate court awards fees, request that the trial court fix the amount of the award.

☐ If the appellate court makes no award, request that the trial court determine entitlement to an award under contract or statute and fix the amount [see discussion in § 53.34].

☐ If determination by trial court is required, make a noticed motion requesting determination [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c), and discussion in § 53.34; for a form of motion see § 53.71]:

☐ Serve and file motion within the same time as the memorandum of costs on appeal. For detailed discussion relating to procedures for noticed motions in the trial court generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 327.21.

☐ If no determination by the trial court of entitlement to award or the amount is necessary, because entitlement was established and the amount is fixed by the authorizing statute orcontract, claim amount as part of memorandum of costs on appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(d), and discussion in § 53.34; see also checklist for and form for memorandum of costs on appeal in [a], above, and § 53.70, respectively].

☐ Refer to each item to which you object to by the same number, and in the same order, as it appears in the memorandum.

☐ State why each item is objectionable.

☐ Serve and file an opposing memorandum of points and authorities [see discussion in § 53.34; for discussion relating to procedures for opposing a noticed motion in the trial court generally, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders, § 327.21[9]].

☐ Attach proof of service.

☐ Attach declarations or other evidence, if appropriate, in the same manner as any other opposition to a motion in the trial court.

§ 53.70 Memorandum of Costs on Appeal--Judicial Council Form MC-013

[1] FORM Memorandum of Costs on Appeal

The form set out in [1], above, is a reproduction of the form of Memorandum of Costs on Appeal approved by the Judicial Council for mandatory use [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35]. The memorandum of costs must be served and then filed in the superior court within 40 days after the appellate clerk mails to the party claiming costs the notice of issuance of remittitur [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(c)(1)]. It lists only those items that are expressly allowable as costs on appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d). For further discussion of allowable costs on appeal, see § 53.32.

The form contains one item labeled "Other," which may be used for attorney's fees on appeal. When attorney's fees on appeal are claimed from the opposing party pursuant to statute or contractual provision authorizing such fees, and the fees are fixed by statute or contract so that the trial court need not make any determination with regard to either entitlement to fees or their amount, these fees should be included in the memorandum of costs on appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(a), and discussion in § 53.34]. The "Other" item in this form should be used for attorney's fees only in this situation. When it is necessary for the trial court to determine entitlement to fees, or their amount, or both, the party claiming attorney's fees on appeal must make a motion requesting that these determinations be made, and must serve and file the motion within the same time as the memorandum of costs on appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c), and discussion in § 53.34]. For a form of such motion, see § 53.71.

For discussion and additional forms relating to prior service requirements in trial court proceedings, and proof of service generally, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis[(R)] Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[2] Use of Form

The form set out in [1], above, is a notice of motion and motion requesting that trial court determine entitlement of the moving party to an award of attorney's fees on appeal, to determine the amount of the award, or both.

In some instances the appellate court may award attorney's fees on appeal, and leave to the trial court the determination of the amount. In this case the motion need seek only the latter determination. If the appellate court has not awarded fees, the trial court may nevertheless determine both entitlement and amount. The fees are allowable only when authorized by statute or contract [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c), and discussion in § 53.34].

Declarations and other evidence, such as authenticated copies of the contract, should be attached to the motion to provide sufficient facts to enable the court to determine entitlement to the award, the amount, or both. If fees are claimed under a contract, counsel should check to see if there is a local rule that establishes a fee schedule for contract actions. Generally, any claim for fees that is not based on the court's established schedule of fees for actions on a contract bears the burden of proof [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)], and therefore must be supported by evidence of time expended, special difficulty, or of a protracted contest. It appears that this burden of proof applies in any action in which fees may be awarded by statute, and not just in actions on a contract [see, e.g., Los Angeles Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 3.2 (applying contract schedule to other types of actions based on statute authorizing recovery of attorney's fees)]. For further discussion of the recovery of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, as an item of costs at the conclusion of trial, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.140 et seq.

A memorandum is required to accompany notices of motion in law and motion proceedings as defined in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. Although the definition in Rule 3.1103(a) does not extend to the post-remittitur motion noticed in this form, the better practice is to support the motion with a memorandum.

A notice of motion and motion for attorney's fees on appeal must be served and filed within the same time as the memorandum of costs on appeal, that is, within 40 days after the appellate clerk mails to the moving party the notice of issuance of remittitur [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(c); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(2), and discussion in §§ 53.34, 53.60[2]]. For discussion and additional forms relating to prior service requirements in trial court proceedings, and proof of service generally, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

When the trial court need not determine either entitlement or amount, for example, because the appellate court has determined entitlement and the statute or contract provides a formula or otherwise fixes the amount, the party claiming fees is required to include the claim for fees with memorandum of costs on appeal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702(d), and discussion in § 53.34]. For a form of memorandum for use in this situation, see § 53.70.

Civil proceedings in the California Supreme Court are governed primarily by Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 1, 2, 10-14, and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.500-8.552 (review proceedings), Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.485-8.499 (original or writ proceedings).

Other statutes apply in specific actions or proceedings, for example, Supreme Court review of proceedings before the Public Utilities Commission under Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756, 1758.

Other statutes and rules applicable to all state appellate courts include Code Civ. Proc. §§ 41-45, 901-914, 923, 936.1, and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.200-8.276, 8.10, 3.1702(c) and 8.1105-8.1125.

§ 54.11 Civil Proceedings in the Supreme Court

[1] Summary of Civil Proceedings in the Supreme Court

The California Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and six associate justices. The concurrence of four justices at argument is necessary for a judgment by the Supreme Court [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 2].

The Court holds regular sessions in San Francisco, Sacramento, and Los Angeles, at times specified by the court, and it may hold special sessions elsewhere [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.256(a); see also discussion of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction and structure in Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.11[2]].

Civil proceedings and miscellaneous proceedings conducted in the Supreme Court consist primarily of the following:

- Review of decisions of the court of appeal under the Court's "review jurisdiction," upon grant of a petition for review [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500 et seq., and discussion in [2], below, and § 54.20 et seq.].

- Proceedings to transfer a cause, either from the court of appeal to the Supreme Court, from the Supreme Court to the court of appeal, or from one court of appeal district to another [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a), (c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000, and discussion in [3], below].

- Original proceedings for an extraordinary writ of mandate, prohibition, review, or habeas corpus [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10, and discussion in [4], below].

- Proceedings, upon the request of a party, interested third person, or on the Court's own motion, to "depublish" an opinion that was previously certified for publication by the court of appeal. Also, frequently, proceedings to publish a court of appeal opinion upon the request of a party or interested third person, in instances when that request has been forwarded by the court of appeal [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 14; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.1105-8.1125, and discussion in [5], below].

- Proceedings to answer a question concerning California law, when the question has been requested and "certified" by the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals, or the court of last resort of any state, territory, or commonwealth [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548, and discussion in [6], below].

[2] Review Proceedings

The Supreme Court does not have appellate jurisdiction in civil causes. This means a party aggrieved by a judgment or order in a civil action or proceeding may not appeal directly to the Supreme Court [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 11 (Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction only in criminal cases involving a judgment of death); Hollywood Park Land Co., LLC v. Golden State Transportation Financing Corp. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 924, 938-948, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 752 (casino compact statute unconstitutional because it bypasses court of appeal and mandates direct review by California Supreme Court)].

While the Supreme Court does not have civil appellate jurisdiction, it does have "review" power or jurisdiction, which describes the Court's power to review, in its discretion, any decision rendered by the court of appeal in a civil appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500 et seq. (procedures and grounds for Supreme Court review)]. When the Supreme Court has exercised its discretion to grant review of a court of appeal decision, its review jurisdiction or power of review under Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b), extends to any or all issues in the case [see Cedars-Sinai v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 5-7, 7-8 n.2, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 (as a matter of policy, the Court ordinarily exercises review power only with respect to issues raised in the court of appeal, but it may exercise this power to decide any other issue in the case, even though not raised in the court of appeal, if it deems it appropriate to do so)].

Review proceedings, the primary focus of this chapter, are discussed in detail in § 54.20 et seq.

[3] Transfer Proceedings

[a] Constitutional Authority

The Supreme Court may transfer to itself a cause pending in the court of appeal, before decision, and may likewise transfer a decision from itself to the court of appeal, before decision. The court to which the cause is transferred has jurisdiction [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a)]. The Judicial Council is authorized to establish rules of procedure for transfer [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(c)].

[b] Transfer From the Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court

[i] Transfer May Be Ordered Any Time Before Court of Appeal Decision Is Final

The phrase in Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a), that a transfer to or from the Supreme Court is to be made "before decision," suggests that a transfer must be made before a decision is rendered by the court in which the cause is pending. In practice, this is always likely to be the case.

When, however, the Supreme Court orders a transfer from the court of appeal to itself, the appellate rules, adopted under the constitutional authority of Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(c) (discussed in [a], above), provide that the Court may order the transfer at any time before the court of appeal decision becomes final as to that court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(b) (transfer may be made while cause is "pending" in court of appeal and cause is deemed pending until it is final as to court of appeal)]. Nevertheless, considering that a transfer will, in any case, be granted only under the most compelling circumstances [see discussion in [iii], below], and considering also the availability of review proceedings once a decision has been rendered by the court of appeal [see § 54.20 et seq.], the Supreme Court is not likely to exercise its power to order a transfer to itself, except in the most extraordinary circumstance, when the court of appeal has rendered a decision but that decision has not yet become final.

A cause decided by the appellate division of the superior court is not pending in the court of appeal, for purpose of a transfer to the Supreme Court under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552, until the cause has been ordered transferred from the superior court appellate division to the court of appeal under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1008 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(b); for discussion of transfer from the superior court appellate division to the court of appeal, see Ch. 345A, Limited Civil Cases, § 345A.71].

[ii] Transfer May Be Made on Motion or Petition of Party or on Court's Own Motion

The Supreme Court may order a cause pending in the court of appeal to be transferred to itself on its own motion, or on the motion or petition of a party [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(a)].

[iii] Grounds for Transfer

Transfer to the Supreme Court is an extraordinary procedure that is infrequently exercised by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court will not order a transfer from the court of appeal to itself before decision by the court of appeal, unless the cause "presents an issue of great public importance that the Supreme Court must promptly resolve" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(c); see Brosnahan v. Brown (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 236, 241, 186 Cal. Rptr. 30, 651 P.2d 274 , 651 P.2d 274] . The language of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(c), is drawn from U.S. Sup. Ct. Rules, Rule 18, the procedure under which the United States Supreme Court will transfer to itself a cause pending in but not yet decided by a lower federal court. [For discussion of the procedure under U.S. Supreme Court Rules, Rule 18, see Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 518, Appeal From a United States District Court (3d ed., Matthew Bender)].

[iv] Petition for Transfer and Answer to Petition

A party seeking transfer must promptly serve and file in the Supreme Court a petition explaining how the cause satisfies the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(c) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(d)].

An answer to the petition may be served and filed within 20 days after service of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(d)].

The format of both the petition and answer must conform as nearly as practicable to the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.204 and 8.504 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(d)]. For further discussion of these requirements, see § 54.25.

[v] Order Granting Transfer

Transfer is granted by an order signed by at least four justices [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(e); Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § II].

[vi] Proceedings After Transfer

The clerk of the Supreme Court must promptly send each party a copy of the order of transfer showing the new case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000(a)(2)]. Once a transfer is accomplished, the Supreme Court may conduct review to the same extent as in review proceedings [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a); see also discussion of review proceedings in § 54.20 et seq.].

[c] Transfer From the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeal

The Supreme Court may order that a cause pending before it be transferred, before it has rendered a decision in the cause, from itself to the court of appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000(a)(1)(A)].

In most instances the Supreme Court will order such a transfer as part or all of its disposition of a cause once it has granted review of a court of appeal decision. It may order transfer to the court of appeal, for example, in the following situations:

- When it decides some issues and transfers the cause to the court of appeal for decision of the remaining issues [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(c), discussed in § 54.38[2]].

- When it decides that a transfer to itself [discussed in [b], above], was improvidently ordered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(e), discussed in § 54.38[2]].

- When it grants review of a decision of the court of appeal, but decides thereafter to transfer the cause to the court of appeal with instructions to conduct further proceedings as the Supreme Court deems necessary (e.g., in light of an opinion recently decided by the Supreme Court) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(d), discussed in § 54.38[2]].

Any supplemental briefing in the court of appeal after transfer from the Supreme Court is governed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.200(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(f)]. For detailed discussion and forms relating to appellate briefs generally, and for further discussion relating to supplemental briefing, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs .

[d] Transfer Within Courts of Appeal

Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a) mentions only transfer to and from the Supreme Court. Under Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(c) (discussed in [a], above), however, the Judicial Council is authorized to establish rules of procedure for transfer, and, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000, has provided that the Supreme Court may also order the transfer of causes from one district or division of the court of appeal to another [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000(a)(1)(D); see, e.g., PG&E Corp. v. Public Utils. Comm. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1192 n.16, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 630 (related actions filed in separate districts where defendants had principal places of business all transferred to single district for decision)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Transfer Between Districts Rarely Ordered by Supreme Court. The procedure by which the Supreme Court may order transfer from one district or division to another is almost never utilized. In most instances a transfer between divisions may be accomplished by the administrative presiding justice of a district [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000(b) and discussion in Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.11[4]]. In rare cases when a transfer between districts is necessary, for example, for consolidation, parties should consider applying to the court of appeal panel, or to the administrative presiding justice, requesting transfer. The panel justices or presiding justice may thereafter informally request a transfer order from the Supreme Court for this purpose [see Ch. 45, Appeal: Motion Procedure, § 45.21].

In situations in which the Supreme Court orders a transfer from one court of appeal district or division to another, the clerk of the court from which the cause is being transferred must immediately transmit to the other court the original record, briefs, and all original papers and exhibits on file in the cause. The clerk of the court to which the cause is transferred must promptly send to each party a copy of the order of transfer showing the new case number [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 10.1000(a)(2)].

[4] "Original" Proceedings for Relief by Petition for Extraordinary Writ

The Supreme Court, together with the courts of appeal and the superior courts and their judges, have original jurisdiction in proceedings for extraordinary relief by writ of mandate, prohibition, review (certiorari), or habeas corpus [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10]. As a general rule, original writ proceedings are undertaken by the Supreme Court (that is, proceedings other than summary denial of a writ petition) only in extraordinary circumstances involving issues of public interest with statewide and urgent implications. Thus, unless otherwise ordered by the Chief Justice, a petition for a writ of mandate or prohibition that has not previously been filed with the proper court of appeal is transferred to that court [Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § II].

In some instances, review by writ in the Supreme Court is authorized by statute, for example, the review of decisions by the Public Utilities Commission [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 1756, 1758; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.496; Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § II; see also discussion in Ch. 480, Public Utilities].

Generally, the Supreme Court as well as the court of appeal has power to review a grant or denial of a writ petition by a lower court on a petition for an extraordinary writ [see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(1)]. This review is discretionary, however, and rarely granted by the Supreme Court absent extraordinary circumstances [see discussion in Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.13[3][a]]. The normal method of review of a court of appeal order summarily denying a writ petition within the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is by petition for review [see Rule 8.500, and discussion in § 54.21[2][c]].

For discussion and forms relating to original proceedings for relief by writ of mandate or prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion and forms relating to original proceedings for relief by writ of review or certiorari, see Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of . For discussion and forms relating to original proceedings for relief by writ of habeas corpus in civil proceedings (such as review of contempt orders), see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus .

[5] Proceedings for "Depublication" or Publication of Court of Appeal Opinion

[a] Request for "Depublication" of Court of Appeal Opinion

Any person may request, by letter to the Supreme Court, an order directing that an opinion certified for publication by the court of appeal not be published. The letter must be filed with the Supreme Court within 30 days after the decision becomes final as to the court of appeal that rendered the opinion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1125(a)]. The letter must state the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1125(a)]:

- The nature of the person's interest.
- A concise statement of the reasons why the opinion should not remain published.

The request may not exceed 10 pages, and must be accompanied by proof of its mailing to the court of appeal and proof of service on each party to the action or proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1125(a); for discussion and forms relating to proof of service generally, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers].

For more detailed discussion of this procedure, including responses by other interested persons, and a form of request to the Supreme Court for an order directing depublication of a court of appeal opinion, see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, §§ 41.52, 41.91.

Note that the Supreme Court may order that a court of appeal opinion not be published on its own motion, as well as on the request of an interested person [see Cal. Const. art. VI, § 14; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(d)(2), and discussion in Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, §§ 41.50[2], 41.52].

[b] Forwarded Request for Publication of Court of Appeal Opinion

Any person may request publication of a court of appeal opinion that has not already been certified for publication by the court rendering that opinion. The request must be made to the court that rendered the opinion. The request must be delivered to the rendering court within 20 days after the opinion is filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1120(a)]. If, however, the court of appeal that rendered the opinion does not grant the request, or cannot grant it by reason of the decision's finality as to that court, that court must transmit the request for publication and a copy of the opinion to the Supreme Court with its recommendation for disposition and a brief statement of its reasons. The transmitting court must also send a copy of its recommendation and reasons to each party and to any person who has requested publication. The rendering court must forward these materials within 15 days after the decision is final in that court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1120(b)].

When the Supreme Court receives a request for publication under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1120(b), it must either order the opinion published or deny the request, and send notice of its action to the transmitting court, each party, and any person who has requested publication [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1120(c)]. Note that, in addition to the procedure in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1120, for publication on the request by an interested person, the Supreme Court retains the power to order publication on its own motion [see Cal. Const. art. VI, § 14; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(d)(2)].

For more detailed discussion of this procedure and a form of request for publication of a court of appeal opinion that has not already been certified for publication by that court, see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, §§ 41.50[2], 41.51, 41.90.

[6] Proceedings to Answer Question on California Law Certified by Another Jurisdiction

[a] Authority to Review Certified Questions

The Supreme Court has authority to answer questions of California law by the Supreme Court of the United States, a United States Court of Appeals, or the court of last resort of any state, territory, or commonwealth [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(a))]. The Court may answer such questions so long as the certifying court requests the answer, the question is one that may be determinative of a cause pending in the certifying court, and there is no California appellate court decision that otherwise provides a controlling precedent for the certified question [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(a); see International Society for Krishna Consciousness of California, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 446, 455, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 2063] .

The Supreme Court noted, in its first opinion relating to a certified question, the following benefits of state law certification procedures generally [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 360-361, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] :

- The procedure allows federal courts to avoid mischaracterizing state law, thereby avoiding a misstatement that might produce an injustice in the particular case and potentially mislead other federal and state courts until the state supreme court finally, in other litigation, corrects the error.

- The procedure strengthens the primacy of the state supreme court in interpreting state law by giving it the first opportunity to decide an issue conclusively.

- The procedure avoids conflicts between federal and state courts, and forestalls needless litigation.

- The procedure protects the sovereignty of state courts, especially in that a federal court's erroneous construction of state law results in application of law contrary to the law of the state, in derogation of the state's right to prescribe a rule of decision.

The Court in Los Angeles Alliance also noted, in dictum, that other state supreme courts with similar certification procedures have uniformly determined that the constitutional scope of their jurisdiction properly includes the power to entertain and decide certified questions, and that the issuance of an opinion on a certified question is not an improper advisory opinion so long as the court addresses only issues that are truly contested by the parties and that are presented on a factual record, and the court's opinion on the certified question will be dispositive of the issue and res judicate between the parties [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 361-362, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 ; but see Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 379, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 , conc. opn. of Werdegar, J. (writing separate concurrence to stress the majority opinion on this point is dictum only; the majority opinion does not decide the issue of the constitutionality of the certification procedure adopted by the Court under former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 29.5 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548), because that rule's validity was not questioned by the parties)].

[b] Content of Request to Answer Certified Question

The request must be made by a court specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(a) (discussed in [a], above), in an order that sets out the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(b); see, e.g., Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 1162 (certifying a question concerning California constitution to California Supreme Court from Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals)]:

- The title and number of the case, including names and addresses of counsel and of parties appearing pro se, and a designation of the party to be deemed the petitioner on the certified question if the request to answer is granted [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(b)(1)].

- The question of law to be answered with a statement that the requesting court will accept the decision [Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 8.548(b)(2)].

- A statement, by stipulation of the parties subject to approval by the certifying court, or by the court itself, of all facts relevant to the certified question [Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 8.548(b)(3)].

- Statements demonstrating the question presented is contested and that there is no controlling precedent in California case law, explaining how the answer may be determinative of a cause pending before the certifying court, and indicating that the answer provided by the Supreme Court will be followed by the certifying court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(b)(4)].

The certifying court must supply copies of all relevant briefs and any portions of the record the Supreme Court may request [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(c)].

[c] Procedure for Making Request

The requesting court clerk must file an original and 10 copies of the request in the Supreme Court with a certificate of service on the parties [Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 8.548(d)].

[d] Briefs and Letters Supporting or Opposing the Request

[i] Briefs of Parties

When another court files a request with the Supreme Court for an answer to a certified question, it will have given notice of the request to the parties to the action or proceeding to which the request pertains [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(d) and discussion in [c], above]. Such parties may, within 20 days after the filing of the request, file a letter that supports or opposes the request [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(e)(1)].

When a party has filed a letter with the Supreme Court supporting or opposing the request, any other party may reply to that letter. The reply must be filed within 10 days of the filing of the initial supporting or opposing brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(e)(2)].

A letter or reply filed with the Supreme Court must be served on the other parties to the action or proceeding and on the requesting court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(e)(2)].

A letter supporting or opposing a request may include a request that the Supreme Court restate the certified question pursuant to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(5) (discussed in [e], below). If a letter includes such a request, it must provide a proposed restatement of the question [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(e)(3)].

[ii] Letters of Amici Curiae

When another court has filed with the Supreme Court a request for an answer to a certified question under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548, any non-party individual or entity, acting as amicus curiae, may lodge with the Supreme Court a letter that supports or opposes the Court's acceptance of the request. Such a letter, like that supporting or opposing a petition for review, is in lieu of filing an amicus curiae brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(e)(1)]. For further discussion of the requirements applicable to such letters and their disposition by the Supreme Court, see Ch. 22, Amicus Curiae .

[e] Disposition of Request

The Supreme Court has discretion to accept or deny the request for an answer to the certified question [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(1)]. There is no stated time limit for the Court to act on a request. In deciding whether to accept or deny the request, the Court may consider any factors it deems appropriate, including, whether resolution of the question is necessary to secure uniformity of decision or to settle an important question of law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(1)].

Thus, it is not necessary for the request to meet the standards for granting a petition for review. At any time, the Supreme Court may restate the certified question or ask the certifying court to restate or clarify the question [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(5)].

If the legal issues raised are of continuing public interest and likely to recur, the Supreme Court has discretion to answer a certified question, even if the parties have settled the underlying litigation, thereby making the case moot [Cadence Design Systems, Inc. v. Avant! Corporation (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 215, 218, n.2, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169, 57 P.3d 647 (trade secret issues likely to recur)].

After the Supreme Court accepts a request, the California Rules of Court governing briefing, argument, and the conduct of appeals apply [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(3)]. Thus, the rules governing certified questions contemplate full briefing and oral argument by the parties once a request has been granted [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(3)].

[f] Notice to Attorney General

If, after granting a request, the Supreme Court determines that a decision on the question may require an interpretation of the California Constitution or a decision on the validity or meaning of a California law affecting the public interest, the Supreme Court must direct the clerk to send to the Attorney General a copy of the request and the order granting it. The only exception to this rule is if the Attorney General is representing a party to the litigation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule

8.548(f)(4)].

[g] Publication and Effect of Answer to Certified Question

The clerk of the Supreme Court is required to forward the Supreme Court's opinion on the certified question to the certifying court, and to counsel of record [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(6)]. An opinion in answer to a certified question has the same authority and precedential effect as any other decision of the Supreme Court, and is published in the Official Reports [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(7)].

[h] Fees And Costs in Connection With Request

The Supreme Court imposes no fees in cases involving a certified question. Costs are dealt with in accordance with Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.544 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548, Advisory Committee Comment (2003); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.548(f)(3)].

§ 54.21 Review Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court

[1] Power to Review Decisions of Court of Appeal

Before 1984, the Supreme Court's grant of a hearing in a civil appeal operated to vacate the decision of the court of appeal automatically. The Supreme Court then reviewed the trial court's judgment independently, without regard to the court of appeal decision.

This procedure was altered fundamentally by the enactment of Proposition 32. By this enactment, Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12, now provides for a grant of "review" rather than a grant of "hearing," in all cases other than criminal cases involving the death penalty, and the "review" so granted is a review of the court of appeal decision rather than the decision of the trial court [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b)].

The Supreme Court may now review trial court decisions only if it exercises its power to transfer to itself an appeal pending in and not yet decided by the court of appeal [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a), and discussion in § 54.11[3]]. The Judicial Council was given authority, by the same enactment, to provide rules of procedure for both transfer and review, as well as for remand of a cause in which the Court determines that its grant of review was improvident [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(c)], and on this authority the Judicial Council adopted Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.500-8.552.

Thus, in determining whether to grant review in a civil appeal, the Supreme Court now focuses on the decision of the court of appeal rather than on the decision of the trial court; the Court very rarely exercises its power to transfer an appeal from the trial court before it has been first been reviewed by the court of appeal. The Supreme Court's current method of review is more analogous to that used by the United States Supreme Court in reviewing decisions from the state supreme courts [see Agricultural Labor Relations Bd. v. Tex-Cal Land Management, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 696, 709 n.12, 238 Cal. Rptr. 780, 739 P.2d 140] .

Note also that before 1984, the Supreme Court reviewed the entire judgment of the trial court, whereas now it may review specific issues in the court of appeal decision (or issues embraced by the case but not previously raised) [see discussion in [2][b], below, and in § 54.22].

[2] Scope of Review Power

[a] Review Is Discretionary

The Supreme Court's review of civil appeals is wholly discretionary [see Cal. Const., art. VI, §§ 11, 12 (also providing that the only instance of the Supreme Court's "appellate," as distinguished from review, jurisdiction, in which a party is entitled by right to direct review, is a criminal case involving imposition of the death penalty); People v. Davis (1905) 147 Cal. 346, 348, 81 P. 718 ; see also discussion in § 54.11[1] and Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, § 40.11[2][a]].

[b] Review of Court of Appeal Decision

The Supreme Court's review power under Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(b), once it has exercised its discretion to grant review, extends to any or all issues in the case [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)]. Ordinarily, as a matter of policy, the Court exercises its review power only with respect to issues raised in the court of appeal, and, as discussed in § 54.23, will ordinarily decline review of issues that could have been raised in the court of appeal but were not. The Court may nevertheless exercise its review power to decide any issue in a case, even though not raised in the court of appeal, if it deems it appropriate to do so. Thus, for example, it may address an issue not raised below, when that issue is one of continuing importance, and when review is granted expressly to consider the issue and the issue is fully briefed and argued before the Supreme Court [see Cedars-Sinai v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 5-7, 7-8 n.2, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 (addressing spoliation of evidence issue raised for the first time on appeal because "[t]he petition for review ... squarely raised the issue [and] ... the issue has been extensively briefed not only by the parties but also by numerous amici curiae ... [i]t is an issue of law that does not turn on the facts of this case, it is a significant issue of widespread importance, and it is in the public interest to decide the issue at this time")].

The Supreme Court usually grants review only to address issues of public policy or institutional importance, or to articulate uniform rules of law in areas in which there there may be confusion or a conflict of authority [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b), and discussion in § 54.22; see also People v. Davis (1905) 147 Cal. 346, 348, 81 P. 718] . It will not usually grant review merely to correct errors in the judgments of the trial court or court of appeal. The error-correcting function is deemed to be fulfilled by the court of appeal, in which a civil litigant is afforded his or her only right to an appeal [see People v. Davis (1905) 147 Cal. 346, 347-350, 81 P. 718] .

[c] Review of Interlocutory Court of Appeal Orders and Court of Appeal Judgments in Original Proceedings

The Supreme Court's review power extends not only to review of court of appeal decisions, but also to interlocutory orders issued by the court of appeal in civil appeal proceedings, and orders of the court of appeal summarily denying writs within the original jurisdiction of the Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(a)(1); for discussion of original proceedings in the Supreme Court, see also discussion in § 54.11[4]].

Note that summary denials of writ petitions are final immediately [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.264(b)(2)], and a petition for review of such an order must therefore be filed within 10 days of the filing of the order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(1)]. Interlocutory orders of the court of appeal may also be deemed final immediately to enable a party to petition the Supreme Court for review within 10 days of the filing of the order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(a)(1)].

[3] Review on Transfer From Court of Appeal Distinguished

In rare instances, the Supreme Court may, either on petition or on its own motion, transfer to itself a cause pending in the court of appeal. Once transferred to itself, the Court has jurisdiction over the cause [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a);

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(a)]. Once the cause is transferred, the Court has jurisdiction [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a)], but it is to be distinguished from the Court's jurisdiction to review court of appeal decisions. Because a transfer must be accomplished before decision by the court of appeal [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 12(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.552(a)], the Supreme Court necessarily reviews the judgment of the trial court rather than the decision of the court of appeal. For further discussion of transfer proceedings and the limited grounds for transfer, see § 54.11[3].

§ 54.22 Grounds For Review

The Supreme Court will order review of a court of appeal decision in the following circumstances:

- When it appears necessary to secure uniformity of decision or the settlement of important questions of law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)(1)].

- When the court of appeal was without jurisdiction of the cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)(2)].

- When, because of disqualification or other reason, the decision of the court of appeal lacks the concurrence of the required majority of qualified judges [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)(3); see Amwest Surety Ins. Co. v. Wilson (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 1243, 1266, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12, 906 P.2d 1112] .

- For the purpose of transferring the matter to the court of appeal for proceedings that the Supreme Court may order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)(4)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Grant of Review Is Very Selective. As a practical matter, review is granted in those cases that meet the first of these three criteria, that is, when it appears necessary to the Supreme Court in order to secure uniform application of state law or to settle an important question of state law [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)(1)]. Moreover, review is more likely to be granted when the opinion of the court of appeal was certified for publication [see discussion regarding publication in Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.51].

Litigants should be realistic about the chances of the Supreme Court granting a petition for review. Statistics prepared in 1997 indicate that the Supreme Court granted only 5% of 4,657 petitions for review filed in a one year period [1997 Judicial Council Report On Court Statistics, p. 10].

§ 54.23 Issues Not Regarded as Proper Grounds for Review

As a matter of policy, on petition for review the Supreme Court normally will not consider:

- Any issue that could have been but was not timely raised in the briefs filed in the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(c)(1)].

- Any issue or any material fact that was omitted from or misstated in the opinion of the court of appeal, unless the omission or misstatement was called to the attention of the court of appeal in a petition for rehearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(c)(2); see also discussion in Ch. 52, Appeal: Rehearing for detailed discussion of rehearing proceedings].

All other issues and facts may be presented in the petition for review without the necessity of filing a petition for rehearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(c)(2)].

Certain types of issues are appropriately raised for the first time in the Supreme Court [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a) (issue regarding lack of subject matter jurisdiction or failure to state facts constituting cause of action are not waived by failure to object in pleadings); Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 438-439, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610 (addressing standing issue first raised before Supreme Court); see also discussion in § 54.21[2][b]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Don't Wait to Raise Issues in Supreme Court. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(c)(1), is a statement of policy rather than a jurisdictional limitation. Nonetheless, it is an important policy that the Supreme Court follows in all but the most exceptional cases. A party considering review proceedings in the Supreme Court should always present to the court of appeal an issue it intends to present later to the Supreme Court, even if prevailing on the issue appears hopeless in the court of appeal, and should always consider whether a petition for rehearing in the court of appeal is a necessary precursor to the petition for review. In rare instances strategic considerations may dictate otherwise. For example, it may appear unwise to raise an issue in the court of appeal when the party intends to argue against a position squarely taken by the division of the court of appeal that is to decide the appeal. Even in these situations, however, the most prudent course is to raise the issue in the court of appeal, rather than rely on the Supreme Court to exercise its discretion to review an issue not raised below. For an informative discussion of the Supreme Court's exercise of its discretionary power to review an issue that counsel did not raise below for strategic reasons, but afterwards presented squarely in the petition for review, see Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 5-7, 7-8 n.2, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 , discussed in § 54.21[2][b].

§ 54.24 Methods and Deadlines for Exercising Review Power

[1] On Court's Own Motion After Court of Appeal Decision Becomes Final

If no petition for review is filed, the Supreme Court, on its own motion, may order review of a court of appeal decision within 30 days after the court of appeal decision becomes final as to that court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.264, 8.60(c)].

The Supreme Court rarely grants review on its own motion [see, e.g., American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 586, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; Skaff v. Small Claims Court for Los Angeles Judicial Dist. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 76, 77-78, 65 Cal. Rptr. 65, 435 P.2d 825] .

[2] On Petition by a Party

The Supreme Court may order review of a court of appeal decision within 60 days after the filing by a party of the last timely petition for review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)(1)]. The Court may, within this original 60-day period and for good cause, extend this time by one or more periods of not more than 30 days in the aggregate. The total time to grant review on petition, including extensions, cannot exceed 90 days after filing of the last timely petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)(4)].

§ 54.25 Petition for Review

[1] Deadline for Filing Petition for Review

[a] Petition Must Be Filed Within 10 Days After Finality of Court of Appeal Decision

A party seeking review in the Supreme Court must serve and file a petition for review within 10 days after the decision of the court of appeal becomes final as to that court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(1); see also service requirements discussed in [4], below]. Every party seeking review must file a timely petition or join in the petition of another party [see Woods v. Young (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 315, 333, 279 Cal. Rptr. 613, 807 P.2d 455 (concurring opinion of Justice Baxter)].

A decision of the court of appeal generally becomes final 30 days after filing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.264(b)]. However, for the purpose of determining the time within which a petition for review must be filed, the time when the decision of the court of appeal becomes final is not extended if the 30th day falls on a weekend, holiday, or other day the clerk's office is closed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(1); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 10-13b (calculation of time periods generally)]. For detailed discussion relating to the finality of court of appeal decisions, see Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.19.

[b] Special Rule For Summary Denial of Writs

The summary denial of a writ petition by the court of appeal is final immediately, and a petition for review from such an order is therefore due within 10 days after the order of summary denial is filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.264(b)(2), 8.500(e); see discussion in § 54.21[2][c]].

[c] "Date of Filing" Defined

The "date of filing" of a petition for review, or an answer to a petition for review, is the date of delivery to the clerk's office during normal business hours [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25]. The document is timely, however, if the time for its filing has not expired on the date of its mailing by certified or express mail as shown on the postal receipt or postmark, or on the date of delivery to a common carrier promising overnight delivery as shown on the carrier's receipt [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25].

[d] Premature Petition Is Received But Not Filed

If a petition for review is submitted for filing before the court of appeal decision becomes final, the clerk of the Supreme Court will receive the petition but not file it. The petition will be deemed to have been filed on the day after the decision becomes final as to the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoid Premature Petitions. Litigants should generally avoid submitting a premature petition. The court of appeal might modify an opinion or change its publication status any time before the opinion becomes final as to that court, thus making the premature petition inaccurate or unnecessary.

[e] Generally No Extension for Filing Petition Absent Grant of Relief From Default

The time for filing a petition for Supreme Court review of a court of appeal decision cannot be extended [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)]. The Chief Justice may, however, relieve a party from a default for failure to file a timely petition for review if the time within which the Court could order review on its own motion has not expired [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(d) (relief from default); see also discussion in § 54.24[1] (time for granting review by Supreme Court sua sponte), and Ch. 47, Appeal: Relief from Default, § 47.11 et seq.].

[2] Contents of Petition

[a] Beginning Statement of Issues

The body of the petition for review must begin with a "concise, nonargumentative statement of the issues presented for review, framing them in terms of the facts of the case but without unnecessary detail" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(b)(1)].

The Supreme Court need consider only the issues set forth in the petition for review and the answer to the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)(1)]. The statement of issues is therefore not only a means of summarizing the issues before the court: it defines the scope of the issues to be considered, unless the Supreme Court decides on its own to consider other issues embraced by the cause [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)(2) (the Court "may decide an issue that is neither raised nor fairly included in the petition or answer if the case presents the issue")]. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)(1), is adapted from an analogous United States Supreme Court rule, and, like other provisions of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516, is intended to conform California Supreme Court practice to practice before the United States Supreme Court. Thus, the California Supreme Court is not limited to issues presented in the petition or answer, but ordinarily will limit itself to the issues thus presented as a matter of policy [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b); see also ABC Internat. Traders, Inc. v. Matsushita Electric Corp. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1247, 1268 n.10, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112, 931 P.2d 290 ; In re Marriage of Heikes (1994) 10 Cal. 4th 1211, 1215 n.5, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155, 899 P.2d 1349 (the Court need not reach issues not raised in petition for review)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Drafting the Statement of Issues. The statement of issues presented is the single most important vehicle for attracting the interest of the Supreme Court. Counsel for both petitioner and respondent should be selective and concise in drafting their statements, focusing on why the issues presented have the significance that warrants the devotion of the Supreme Court's limited resources.

Counsel should therefore take great care in drafting the statement of issues. The best petition for review usually presents a single, compelling issue. It is a rare case that truly has several issues worthy of review; listing several issues tends to convey the message there is no single and sufficiently important issue that the Court should address. Do not attempt to restate the same issue several ways; a shotgun approach will not impress the Supreme Court. The issue should be stated objectively, simply, but as interestingly and as compellingly as possible. The Supreme Court is the court of last resort in California, and as such has both great responsibility and great discretion in how best to satisfy that responsibility. The court is interested only in issues of general or public importance, not those of interest only to the parties in a particular cause; counsel should present their issues for review accordingly.

Because, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(d), the Supreme Court may grant review and then defer action pending disposition of another case before the court (the "grant and hold" procedure discussed in § 54.31[3]), it is important for petitioners (and respondents) to advise the court in the statement of issues of any related cases pending before the court. A "grant and hold" will give the litigants, if not the benefit of direct review by the Supreme Court, at least the benefit, on remand, of having their cause decided in light of the Supreme Court's decision in similar pending cases.

[b] Argument Why the Cause Is Appropriate for Review

The petition must address, in particular, why the cause is appropriate for review, focusing as concisely as possible on why the case satisfies the criteria for review set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(b); for discussion of grounds for review under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(b), see §§ 54.22, 54.23].

[c] Generally No Incorporation of Materials by Reference

No authorities or argument may be incorporated into the petition by reference, with the following exceptions [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e)]:

- Portions of a petition for review, answer or reply filed by another party in the same case.

- Portions of a petition for review, answer or reply filed in a connected case in which a petition for review is pending or has been granted.

[d] Copy of Court of Appeal Opinion Must Be Attached or Included

The petition, and each copy of the petition filed in the Supreme Court, must contain or be accompanied by a copy of the court of appeal opinion, showing the date that opinion was filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(b)(4)].

[e] Petition Must Conform in Other Respects to Requirements for Appellate Briefs

Except as superseded by the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504, discussed in [a]-[d], above, the contents of a petition for review, its answer, and the reply, must comply with the relevant provisions of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204. For detailed discussion of the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by the requirements that are specifically applicable to petitions for review, such as descriptive headings, references to the record, and tables of contents and authorities, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[1].

[3] Form of Petition

[a] Generally

It is advisable to include the following in the body of a petition for review:

- An introduction that briefly provides an overview of the case and explains why review should be granted in a way that sets the stage for the remainder of the petition. The introduction should be as persuasive as possible, summarizing in one or two pages the most compelling reasons for granting review.

- A statement of the necessary and pertinent facts.

- A brief legal argument that focuses on the institutional or policy implications of the issues presented.

For a form of petition, see § 54.100.

[b] Length and Attachments

The petition should be as concise as possible [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(b)(1)]. If produced on a computer, it may not exceed 8,400 words, including footnotes. The petition must include a certificate by appellate counsel or an unrepresented party stating the number of words in the document. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the document [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(d)(1)]. If typewritten, the petition may not exceed 30 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(d)(2)]. These limits do not include any tables, the court of appeal opinion, a certificate under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e)(1), and any permitted attachments [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(d)(3)].

There may be no exhibits or appendices, however named, attached, annexed, or filed with the petition, other than the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e)(1)]:

- An opinion or order from which the party seeks relief.

- Exhibits or orders of a trial court or court of appeal that the party considers unusually significant.

- Copies of relevant local, state, or federal regulations or rules, out-of-state statutes, or other similar citable materials that are not readily accessible.

- An opinion required to be attached under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1115(c).

These attachments may not exceed a combined total of 10 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e)(2)].

Upon a written application, the Chief Justice may permit petitions, answers, or replies of greater length, or the inclusion of additional annexed material [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e)(4)]. For discussion relating to an analogous procedure for filing a lengthy appellate brief, and a form of application which may be adapted for this purpose, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.15 and 50.74.

PRACTICE TIP:

Keep the Petition Short and Concise. There are rarely circumstances that would justify a petition in excess of 30 pages, particularly since a new brief on the merits can be filed in the event review is granted [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516].

The petition should rarely even approach the page limit. Conciseness is of great value. An effective petition is sometimes only a few pages long, although obviously some have to be longer. If the importance of a case or issue is not obvious and requires many pages to explain, this is often an indication that it is not important after all. If the first draft of the petition has over ten pages of text, counsel should ask whether the length is really necessary. The petition should stress legal issues of general application, not fact-specific issues relevant only to the specific case. Counsel should always bear in mind the sole purpose of the petition: to convince the court to consider the issue on the merits. The goal of the petition is not to win the case but to get it reviewed. Arguing that the court of appeal opinion was erroneous might be a useful means to this end, but it is not an end in itself. After the petition has succeeded, and the court grants review, then counsel can brief the merits more thoroughly.

[c] Cover

The cover of the petition should be white [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40(b)].

[d] Petition Must Conform in Other Respects to Requirements for Appellate Briefs

Except as superseded by the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504, discussed in [a]-[c], above, the form of a petition for review, the answer to the petition, and the reply to the answer must conform to the relevant provisions of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(a)]. For detailed discussion of the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to petitions for review, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.14. For additional discussion of drafting considerations applicable to briefs that may also be useful to consider when drafting a petition for review, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13.

PRACTICE TIP:

Further Your Cause by Adhering to Formal Requirements. The procedural rules for the form of the petition are relatively simple. Following them rigorously will contribute to the Court's impression that counsel knows what he or she is doing. The importance of such an impression can hardly be understated, since counsel for petitioner is attempting to persuade a busy Supreme Court that his or her case is one of the small percentage of civil appeals that merits further review.

[4] Service and Filing of Petition

A petition for review must be "served and filed" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(1)]. This means that the petition, at the time of filing, must be accompanied by proof of prior service, in a manner permitted by law, of one copy on each party represented by separate counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25].

A petition must also be served on the superior court clerk and the court of appeal clerk [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(f)(1)].

A petition for review accompanied by a defective proof of service will be filed, but if proper proof of service is not thereafter filed within five days, after the clerk gives notice of the defect, the Court may strike the petition or impose a lesser sanction [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(f)(3)].

At the time of filing, counsel for petitioner must file an original and 13 copies of the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(1)]. The filing fee that must accompany a petition for review of a civil appeal is currently an aggregate amount of $590 [Gov. Code § 68927 (requires $420); Gov. Code § 68926.1(b) (requires additional $170 for deposit in appellate court trust fund)].

Petitions for review (and other papers) may be filed with the Supreme Court clerks' offices in San Francisco, Los Angeles, or Sacramento, or, alternatively, may be filed with the clerk of the court of appeal for the Fourth District in its San Diego office or with the clerk of the court of appeal for the Fifth Appellate District at its office in Fresno [see Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part I, Functions and Structure of the California Supreme Court].

For discussion of the deadline for filing the petition, see [1], above.

§ 54.26 Answer to Petition for Review

[1] Deadline for Filing Answer

If an answer to a petition for review is contemplated, it must be served and filed within 20 days after the filing of the petition for review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(4)]. For discussion of the deadline for filing the petition, see § 54.25[1]; for discussion of the definition of "date of filing," see § 54.25[1][c].

The Chief Justice may, for good cause shown, extend the time for doing any act other than the filing of a petition for review, including the filing of an answer to the petition [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.500(e)(2), 8.60(d)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Extension to File Answer to Petition or Reply to Answer. The Chief Justice's authority to extend time under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(b), includes extensions of time for filing an answer to a petition for review or a reply to the answer. However, any such extension should be avoided if possible, since it will only decrease the time available to the Court to consider the merits of the petition, answer, and reply. This is because the Court's time to act on the petition is itself limited, and may not be extended except as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.532(b); for discussion of the time for grant or denial of the petition under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(a), see § 54.24].

An application for an extension of time must be made as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, and must demonstrate good cause under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a)]. For further discussion and a form of application for an extension of time, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time .

[2] Answer Is Permitted But Is Not Required

An answer to a petition for review "may" be filed; it is not required [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(4)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Deciding Whether to Answer. An answer is technically not required, and the vast majority of petitions are denied. Most practitioners, nevertheless, feel it is prudent to file an answer to any petition for review, so that the Court has the opposing party's view of why the petition should not be granted.

Counsel should note, however, that within the Supreme Court, an answer to a petition is seldom regarded as a determinative factor, either in denying or granting a petition, if the Court is disposed otherwise to do one or the other. The Court knows the applicable standards and rules and generally can determine from the petition and court of appeal opinion whether a case is worthy of review. If the case is important enough to warrant review, an answer will not obscure or defeat the fact of that importance. Sometimes an answer might even work against opposing counsel by highlighting the importance of the case and suggesting counsel is worried about the court of appeal opinion.

Counsel should not therefore consider an answer to be a routine matter, but should consider carefully whether it will be helpful, by supplying the Court with information and argument not readily apparent. Counsel should also consider whether an answer might even prove to be harmful, by giving the impression that counsel has serious concerns over the court of appeal decision and fears it will likely be reversed if the Court grants review.

Although an answer is rarely determinative in preventing a grant of review, it may nevertheless serve other useful purposes. For example, the Supreme Court will sometimes exercise its discretion to order that a court of appeal opinion not be published, even when it decides not to grant review. If a petition for review requests that the court of appeal opinion be ordered not published, opposing counsel should use the answer to the petition to argue why the court of appeal opinion should remain published, in the same manner as a response to a request for depublication [see discussion in Ch. 41, Standards of Review and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.52[2][b]].

The answer to a petition may also be useful if the responding party wishes to raise additional issues for review [see discussion in the Practice Tip set out in [3], below].

For a form of answer to a petition for review, see § 54.101.

[3] Content of Answer

[a] Answer May Present Additional Issues For Review

The answer may present additional issues for review in the event the petition for review is granted [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(a)(2); see In re Manuel G. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 805, 814 n.3, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701, 941 P.2d 880 (respondent must raise additional issues in answer to petition for review in order to raise those issues in briefs on the merits);

PRACTICE TIP:

An Answer May Be Useful in Presenting Additional Issues. The answer is generally underutilized for the purpose of suggesting additional issues for review. Often, the prevailing party in the court of appeal loses on some issues. The prevailing party might not want the case reviewed but, if review is granted, would want such issues to be considered by the Supreme Court. The answer may be more effective in taking such an approach than by simply arguing against a grant of review, and making it clear that the court of appeal opinion was not entirely one-sided as to the parties. The Court understands that, by presenting additional issues for review, the opposing party does not thereby seek or consent to a grant of review.

If additional issues are presented, the answer must contain a concise, nonargumentative statement of those issues, framing them in terms of the facts of the case, but without unnecessary detail [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(c)]. For discussion of the statement of issues required to appear at the beginning of the body of a petition for review, see § 54.25[2][a].

As discussed further in § 54.25[2][a], the Court need only consider issues presented in either the petition or the answer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)].

[b] Answer Must Conform in Other Respects to Requirements for Appellate Briefs

Except as superseded by the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(a), discussed in [a], above, the contents of an answer must comply with the relevant provisions of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(a)]. For detailed discussion of the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to an answer to a petition for review, such as descriptive headings, references to the record, and tables of contents and authorities, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[1].

[4] Form of Answer

The answer is subject to the same page limits and the same limits on attachments, exhibits, and the incorporation of matter by reference that apply to petitions for review [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(e), (f)]. For discussion of these limits and requirements and their exceptions, see § 54.25[2][c], [3][b].

The cover of the answer should be blue [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40(b)].

Again, like the petition for review, the answer to the petition must comply with the relevant requirements for appellate briefs under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(a)]. For detailed discussion of the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to an answer to a petition for review, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.14. For additional discussion of drafting considerations applicable to briefs that may be useful when drafting an answer to a petition for review, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13.

For a form of answer, see § 54.101.

[5] Service and Filing of Answer

An answer to a petition for review must be "served and filed" within 20 days after the petition is filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(4)]. This means that the answer, at the time of filing, must be accompanied by proof of prior service, in a manner permitted by law, of one copy on each party represented by separate counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.25 ("serve and file" as applied to briefs), 8.10(7) ("briefs" defined to include answer to petition for review)].

An answer must also include proof of deposit with the clerk of the superior court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.212(c) (requiring proof of deposit of one copy of brief with superior court clerk for delivery to trial court judge), 8.10(7) (i) (defining "briefs" in appellate rules to include answer to petition for review)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Deliver Copy to Court of Appeal. A petition filed in the Supreme Court must have proof of delivery or mailing of a copy to the clerk of the court of appeal that rendered the decision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(f)(1)]. This delivery is designed primarily to trigger the transmittal of the record by the court of appeal to the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, it is recommended as a courtesy that the responding party also deliver to the court of appeal a copy of any answer to the petition.

At the time of filing, counsel for petitioner must file an original and 13 copies of the answer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(1)].

For discussion of the deadline for filing an answer, see [1], above. For discussion of the locations at which papers may be filed with the Supreme Court, see § 54.25[4].

§ 54.27 Reply to Answer to Petition for Review

[1] Deadline for Filing Reply

A reply, if justified [see [2], below], must be served and filed within 10 days after the filing of the answer to a petition for review [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(5)]. For discussion of the deadline for filing the answer, see § 54.26[1]; for discussion of the definition of "date of filing," see § 54.25[1][c].

The Chief Justice may, for good cause shown, extend the time for filing a reply to an answer to a petition for review [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.60(b)]. For further discussion of the requirements and practical considerations when seeking an extension for filing a reply, see § 54.26[1].

[2] Reply Limited to Addressing Additional Issues Presented in Answer

A petitioner may file a reply to the answer [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(a)(3)]. Prior to January 1, 2004, a petitioner could file a reply only if the answer to his or her petition for review presented additional issues for review [see former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 28(a)(3)].

For a form of reply, see § 54.102.

[3] Content and Form of Reply

A reply must not exceed 4200 words or 15 pages, not including tables of contents and authorities [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.504(d)(1); but see § 54.25[3][b] for discussion of procedures for leave to file a longer reply].

Otherwise, a reply is subject to the same restrictions in Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 8.504(e), that apply to petitions for review and answers, regarding the incorporation of material by reference and the attachment of exhibits or appendices. For discussion of these restrictions and their exceptions, see § 54.25[2][c], [3][b].

The cover of a reply should be white [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40(b)].

Again, like the petition for review and the answer, a reply must comply with the relevant requirements for appellate briefs under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.504(a)]. For detailed discussion of the requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to a reply to an answer to a petition for review, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, §§ 50.12[1] and 50.14. For additional discussion of drafting considerations applicable to briefs that may be useful when drafting a reply, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13.

[4] Service and Filing of Reply

A reply must be "served and filed" [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(5)]. This means that the reply, at the time of filing, must be accompanied by proof of prior service, in a manner permitted by law, of one copy on counsel for each adverse party represented by separate counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.10(f)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Deliver Copy to Court of Appeal and Superior Court. A petition filed in the Supreme Court must have proof of delivery or mailing of a copy to the clerk of the court of appeal that rendered the decision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(f)(1)]. This delivery is designed primarily to trigger the transmittal of the record by the court of appeal to the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, it is recommended as a courtesy that the petitioner also deliver to the court of appeal a copy of any reply to an answer to the petition. The petitioner may also, as a courtesy, deposit a copy of any reply with the clerk of the superior court for delivery to the trial court judge; this is required in the case of a petition and answer, but not in the case of a reply [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.212(c) (requiring proof of deposit of one copy of brief with superior court clerk for delivery to trial court judge)].

At the time of filing, counsel for petitioner should file an original and 13 copies of the reply [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(1)].

For discussion of the deadline for filing a reply, see [1], above.

§ 54.28 Letter of Amicus Curiae Supporting or Opposing Petition

An individual or entity that desires to support or oppose a petition for review or petition for original writ in the Supreme Court may lodge with that Court a letter (in lieu of a brief of amicus curiae) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(g)]. For detailed discussion and forms relating to letters of amicus curiae filed in civil proceedings before the Supreme Court, see Ch. 22, Amicus Curiae .

PRACTICE TIP:

Seek Out Amici Curiae. Letters by amici curiae can provide important background information that enhances the Court's understanding of the issues and their importance.

§ 54.29 Transmission of Record, Briefs, Papers, Exhibits

When a copy of the petition for review is delivered to the clerk of the court of appeal, or on request by the clerk of the Supreme Court, whichever is earlier, the clerk of the court of appeal must "promptly" send the record to the Supreme Court. If the petition is denied, the Supreme Court clerk must promptly return the record to the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(a)].

§ 54.30 Disposition of Petition for Review

[1] Denial of Petition

[a] Denial by Order or Lapse of Time

Denial of review of a court of appeal decision may be evidenced by an order signed by the Chief Justice and filed with the clerk [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)(2)]. If no order, either granting or denying the petition, is made within the time specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)(1) [see discussion in § 54.24], the petition is deemed denied, and the clerk enters a notation in the register to that effect [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b)(3)].

[b] Finality and Remittitur After Denial of Petition

An order of the Supreme Court denying a petition for review of a decision of a court of appeal (or, by implication, the notation of the clerk indicating denial due to lapse of time, discussed in [2], above) becomes final when it is filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.532(b)(2)]. The clerk of the court of appeal then issues its remittitur transmitting a certified copy of the court of appeal's opinion to the superior court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)]. For further discussion of remittitur proceedings and subsequent proceedings in the trial court after remittitur, see Ch. 53, Remittitur and Costs on Appeal .

[c] Effect of Denial of Petition

Denial of a petition for review by the Supreme Court is not an expression of an opinion by the Supreme Court on whether the opinion or judgment of the court of appeal is correct and is not to be construed as such [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500, Advisory Committee Comment (1985); Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 274, 287 n.1, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241, 902 P.2d 259 ; see also discussion in Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.52[4] (discussing effect of order that court of appeal opinion not be published, sometimes issued in connection with order denying petition for review)].

[2] Grant of Petition

[a] Grant by Order Signed by at Least Four Justices

Review in the Supreme Court of a court of appeal decision may be granted by an order, signed by at least four justices, and filed with the clerk [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(b); see Cothran v. San Jose Water Works (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 608, 612, 25 Cal. Rptr. 569, 375 P.2d 449 (order granting hearing in Supreme Court signed by justice who was thereafter absent from state when concurring three justices signed was effective); cf. Giometti v. Etienne (1934) 219 Cal. 687, 688-689, 28 P.2d 913 (order granting hearing in Supreme Court was void where one of four justices who signed order was legally disqualified from participating in order)].

[b] Effect of Order Granting Petition

A grant of review supersedes the court of appeal's opinion, at least pending disposition of the Court's review [Quintano v. Mercury Casualty Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 1049, 1067 n.6, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 906 P.2d 1057] .

No court of appeal decision superseded by a grant of review is to be published, or remain published, unless the Supreme Court expressly orders otherwise. After granting review, the Court may order that the opinion of the court of appeal be, or remain, published in whole or in part [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.1105(e)]. For further discussion regarding the citability of opinions, see Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.50[3][a].

§ 54.31 Issues to Be Decided on Grant of Review

[1] Court May Decide Any Issue for Review

On review of a court of appeal decision, the Supreme Court may review and decide any or all issues in the cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)(2)]. As a matter of policy, however, the Court need only consider, and usually will only consider, those issues presented in the petition for review and answer or fairly included in them [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(b)(1)]. For more detailed discussion of the Court's power of review, that is, to limit its review to issues presented by the litigants, or to select for review, in special circumstances, other issues fairly embraced by the cause in which review has been granted, see § 54.21[2][b].

[2] Specification of Selected Issues

[a] Court May Specify Issues After Granting Review

After granting review of a court of appeal decision, the Supreme Court may specify the issues to be argued. The Court will give the parties reasonable notice of any specification of the issues to be argued [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(a)(1)].

Notwithstanding its specification of issues, the Court may order argument on fewer or additional issues, or on the entire cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(a)(2)]. The Court will give the parties reasonable notice of any change in its specification of issues [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(a)(2)].

Hence, the Court is expressly authorized to specify the issues that may be argued on appeal and is not required to address all the issues addressed by the court of appeal [Southern Cal. Ch. of Associated Builders etc. Com. v. California Apprenticeship Council (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 422, 431 n.3, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491, 841 P.2d 1011] . It may also specify for review issues not addressed by the court of appeal [see Cedars-Sinai v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 5-7, 7-8 n.2, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 and discussion in § 54.21[2][b]].

[b] Briefs Must Be Confined To Specified Issues

Unless otherwise ordered, the parties are to confine their briefs on the merits and their arguments to the issues specified by the Supreme Court, and to any other issues fairly included in those that the Court has specified [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.516(a)(1)].

[3] "Grant and Hold" of Issues

After granting review of a court of appeal decision, the Supreme Court may order action on the cause deferred until disposition of another cause pending before the Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.512(d)(2)]. This is commonly referred to as a "grant and hold" [see also Practice Tip in § 54.25[2][a]].

§ 54.32 Petitioner's Opening Brief on Grant of Review

[1] Deadline for Filing Opening Brief on Merits

Within 30 days after the Supreme Court files the order of review, the petitioner must serve and file in that court either an opening brief on the merits or the brief it filed in the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(1)].

The time for service and filing may not be extended by stipulation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(5)]. The Chief Justice may, for good cause, extend the time for doing any act other than the filing of a petition for review, including the filing of an opening brief on the merits [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.520(a)(5), 8.60(b)]. An application for an extension of time must be made as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, and must demonstrate good cause under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a)]. For further discussion and a form of application for an extension of time, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time .

[2] Contents of Opening Brief

The opening brief must be either of the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(1)]:

- The brief filed in the court of appeal together with a notice of intention to rely on that brief.
- A new brief on the merits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

A Grant of Review Usually Deserves a New Brief on the Merits. Generally, it is advisable to file a new brief on the merits rather than rely upon the court of appeal brief. Filing a new brief enables the petitioner to take advantage of new authority, and make new arguments focusing on the court of appeal's opinion and on the issues that the Supreme Court has expressly specified for review or that are otherwise obviously of more public or institutional concern.

A new petitioner's brief on the merits must quote any order of the Supreme Court specifying the issues upon grant of review, or, in the absence of an order specifying the issues, quote the statement of issues included in the petition for review and any additional issues stated in the answer to the petition [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(2)]. Unless otherwise ordered, briefs on the merits must be confined to those issues and issues fairly included in them [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(3)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Limit Briefing to the Issues Under Review. Counsel should be careful to brief only those issues that are actually before the Court. Obviously, the issues that are fairly embraced by the grant of review are often open to interpretation, and counsel may take an expansive view if helpful to the client. If appropriate, the brief on the merits should explain how a particular issue is included in the issue presented. Counsel should not, however, brief entirely unrelated issues unless the Court so requests. The Court typically grants review on specific issues and expects the parties to confine briefing and argument to the issues it has framed.

Otherwise, the opening brief must comply with the requirements applicable to appellate briefs set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(1)]. For detailed discussion of the content requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by the requirements specifically applicable to an opening brief on the merits, such as descriptive headings, references to the record, and tables of contents and authorities, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[1].

For a form of new opening brief on the merits, see § 54.110.

[3] Form of Opening Brief

If produced on a computer, the opening brief on the merits must not exceed 14,000 words. The brief must include a certificate by counsel stating the number of words in the brief. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(1)]. If typewritten, the brief must not exceed 50 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(2)]. The tables, certificate, and quotation of issues are excluded from these limits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(3)].

Otherwise, the opening brief must comply with the requirements applicable to appellate briefs set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(1)]. For detailed discussion of the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to an opening brief on the merits, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.14. For additional discussion of drafting considerations applicable to briefs that may be useful when drafting an opening brief on the merits, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13.

[4] Service and Filing of Opening Brief

A petitioner must "serve and file" his or her opening brief on the merits in the Supreme Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(1)]. This means that the brief, at the time of filing, must be accompanied by proof of prior service, in a manner permitted by law, of one copy on each party represented by separate counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.25(a) ("serve and file" as applied to briefs)].

The brief must also include proof of deposit of one copy of the brief with the clerk of the superior court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.212(c) (requiring proof of deposit of one copy of brief with superior court clerk for delivery to trial court judge)]. It is not required, but many practitioners also deposit a copy of the brief with the clerk of the court of appeal as a courtesy to the justices who decided the appeal.

At the time of filing, counsel for petitioner must file an original and 13 copies of the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.44(a)(1)].

For discussion of the deadline for filing the brief, see [1], above.

§ 54.33 Opposing Party's Answering Brief

[1] Deadline for Filing Answering Brief

The opposing party must serve and file any new answering brief on the merits within 30 days after the petitioner has filed either a notice of intention to rely on the brief filed in the court of appeal or a new opening brief on the merits, or after the expiration of time for the time for petitioner to do either [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(2); for discussion of petitioner's deadlines, see § 54.32[1]].

The opposing party may alternatively elect to rely on the brief filed in the court of appeal, by serving and filing that brief within 15 days after the petitioner has filed his or her brief (or notice of intention to rely on petitioner's court of appeal brief), or the time for doing so has elapsed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(2)].

For discussion of the "date of filing," as defined by the appellate rules, see § 54.25[1][c].

The time for service and filing may not be extended by stipulation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(5)]. The Chief Justice may, for good cause, extend the time for doing any act other than the filing of a petition for review, including the filing of an answering brief on the merits [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.520(a)(5), 8.60(b)]. An application for an extension of time must be made as provided in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.50, and must demonstrate good cause under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.63(a)]. For further discussion and a form of application for an extension of time, see Ch. 46, Appeal: Extending or Shortening Time .

[2] Contents of Answering Brief

The opposing party must file either of the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(2)]:

- The brief filed in the court of appeal together with a notice of intention to rely on that brief.

- A new answering brief on the merits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Supreme Court Review Usually Merits a New Brief. As with the petitioner [see § 54.32[2]], it is usually in the opposing party's best interest to take the trouble to file a new answering brief on the merits, to address the issues as they have been narrowed by the grant of review.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the answering brief should confine itself to the issues specified by the Court upon granting review, or in the absence of such order, upon the issues presented in the petition for review and the answer, and those issues that are fairly included [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(3)].

Otherwise, the answering brief must comply with the requirements applicable to appellate briefs set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(1)]. For detailed discussion of the content requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to an answering brief on the merits, such as descriptive headings, references to the record, and tables of contents and authorities, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.12[1].

For a form of new answering brief on the merits, see § 54.111.

[3] Form of Answering Brief

If produced on a computer, the opposing party's answering brief on the merits must not exceed 14,000 words. The brief must include a certificate by counsel stating the number of words in the brief. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(1)]. If typewritten, the brief must not exceed 50 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(2)]. The tables, certificate, and quotation of issues are excluded from these limits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(3)].

Otherwise, the opening brief must comply with requirements applicable to appellate briefs set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(b)(1)]. For detailed discussion of the format requirements of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204, that are not superseded by those specifically applicable to an opening brief on the merits, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.14. For additional discussion of drafting considerations applicable to briefs that may be useful when drafting an opening brief on the merits, see Ch. 50, Appeal: Briefs, § 50.13.

[4] Service and Filing of Answering Brief

The answering brief should be served and filed in the same manner as the opening brief on the merits [see § 54.32[4]].

§ 54.34 Petitioner's Reply Brief

Within 20 days after the opposing party files an opening brief, the petitioner may file a reply brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(a)(3); see also discussion in § 54.32[1] regarding extension of time to file].

The cover of a petitioner's reply brief on the merits should be white [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.40(b)]. If produced on a computer, the reply brief must not exceed 8,400 words. The brief must include a certificate by counsel stating the number of words in the brief. The person certifying may rely on the word count of the computer program used to prepare the brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(1)]. If typewritten, the reply brief on the merits must not exceed 30 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(2)]. The tables and certificate are excluded from these limits [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(c)(3)]. In other respects, a reply brief is subject to the same form and content requirements as a petitioner's opening brief, except that the quotation of the issues is not required [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(d); see § 54.32[2] and [3]].

The reply brief should be filed and served in the same manner as the opening brief [see § 54.32[4]].

§ 54.35 Supplemental and Additional Briefs

If any party wishes to present new authorities, newly enacted legislation, or other intervening matters that were not available in time to have been included in that party's briefs on the merits, the party may serve and file a supplemental brief no later than 10 days before oral argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(d)]. A supplemental brief must be limited to the new matter and must not exceed 2,800 words if produced on a computer or ten pages if typewritten [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(d); see Waller v. Truck Ins. Exchange, Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 1, 23-24, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370, 900 P.2d 619] . The service and filing requirements are the same as for briefs on the merits [see § 54.31[4]].

The Supreme Court may also request additional briefs on all or any issues, whether or not the parties have filed new briefs [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(e)].

§ 54.36 Amicus Curiae Briefs

Once review is granted, a nonparty acting as amicus curiae may file a brief on the merits after obtaining prior permission of the Chief Justice [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.520(f)]. For detailed discussion and forms relating to letters and briefs of amicus curiae filed in civil proceedings before the Supreme Court, see Ch. 22, Amicus Curiae .

PRACTICE TIP:

Seek Out Amici Curiae. Briefs by amici curiae can provide important background information that enhances the court's understanding of the issues and their importance. Counsel in cases accepted for review by the Supreme Court should seek out amicus briefing from individuals or entities that can provide the court with pertinent information and argument that may not be available to the parties concerning the institutional or policy aspects of the issues raised in the case.

§ 54.37 Oral Argument on Review

[1] Scheduling Oral Argument

The Supreme Court clerk sends notice of the time and place of oral argument to all parties at least 20 days before the argument date. The Chief Justice may shorten that period for good cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(c)].

Cases are set for argument on days and at times set by the Court, according to the following schedule [Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § V]:

- Argument scheduled during January, April, June, and October is heard in Los Angeles.
- Argument scheduled during February, May, September, and December is heard in San Francisco.
- Argument scheduled during March and November is heard in Sacramento.

[2] Duration and Order of Oral Argument

Unless otherwise ordered, counsel for each party is allowed 30 minutes for oral argument in a civil case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(e)]. The petitioner or appellant has the right to open and close the argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(d)].

In civil cases, only one counsel may be heard on each side of a case, even if there is more than one party on a side, unless the Supreme Court orders otherwise [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(f)(1)]. If counsel wish to divide oral argument with other counsel, a request must be filed not later than 10 days after the date of the order setting the case for argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(f)(2)]. In no event may oral argument be divided into segments of less than 10 minutes, except that one counsel for the opening side (unless additional counsel are so authorized) may reserve a portion of his or her allotted time for rebuttal [Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § V].

PRACTICE TIP:

Oral Argument. As in any appellate court oral argument, counsel should be thoroughly prepared to discuss all aspects of the case. However, oral argument in the Supreme Court gives counsel an opportunity to go beyond the briefs and focus the Court's attention on the institutional concerns or policy issues raised by a case.

It is usually more effective if argument on each side of the case is presented by a single counsel. Argument should not be divided among several counsel unless there is a compelling reason for doing so.

For further discussion of practical considerations in presenting oral argument, see the discussion of oral argument in the court of appeal in Ch. 51, Appeal: Hearing and Decision, § 51.15.

§ 54.38 Disposition Of Causes Accepted For Review

[1] Submission of the Cause and Filing of the Opinion

A cause is submitted either after oral argument or, if the Court has approved a waiver of oral argument, after the time has passed for filing all briefs and papers, including supplementary briefs. Submission may be vacated only by an order which both states in detail the reasons for doing so and provides for prompt resubmission [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.524(h)]. Absent good cause to vacate the submission, the Court will file its opinion or opinions in the cause on or before the 90th day after submission [Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part V, Internal Operating Practices and Procedures of the California Supreme Court, § X].

Opinions are normally filed on Mondays and Thursdays at 10 a.m. and are posted immediately on the State of California Judicial Branch website at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov [Supreme Court of California, Practices and Procedures, Part IV, Description of California Supreme Court Operations].

[2] Types Of Dispositions

The Supreme Court may dispose of causes in the following manner [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528]:

- On review of a court of appeal decision, unless otherwise ordered, the judgment of the court of appeal will be affirmed, reversed, or modified [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(a)].

- In any cause, the Supreme Court may decide one or more issues and transfer the cause to a court of appeal for a decision on any remaining issues in the cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.532(c)].

- The Supreme Court may dismiss review. The Supreme Court clerk must promptly send an order dismissing review to all parties and the court of appeal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(b)(1)]. When the court of appeal receives an order dismissing review, the decision of the court is final and its clerk must promptly issue a remittitur or take other appropriate action [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(b)(2)]. The decision of the court of appeal in this instance remains unpublished, however, unless the Supreme Court expressly orders otherwise [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(b); see Morgan Hill Unified School Dist. v. Amoroso (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1083, 1085, 252 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; see also Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law, § 41.50 et seq. for discussion of citability and other issues relating to publication or nonpublication of court of appeal opinions, and Ch. 53, Appeal: Remittitur and Costs on Appeal , for discussion of remittitur and post-remittitur proceedings].

- After transferring to itself, before decision, a cause pending in a court of appeal, the Supreme Court may retransfer the cause to a court of appeal without decision [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(e); for discussion of transfer proceedings, see § 54.11[3]].

- After granting review of a court of appeal decision, the Supreme Court may transfer the cause to a court of appeal with instructions to conduct such further proceedings as the Supreme Court deems necessary [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.528(d)].

If a cause is transferred from the Supreme Court to the court of appeal for further proceedings, a party may, within 30 days after the Supreme Court's order, serve and file in the court of appeal a supplemental brief [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.528(f), 8.200(b)].

§ 54.40 Rehearing

A rehearing in the Supreme Court may be sought in the same manner and on any of the grounds that would support a rehearing in the court of appeal (e.g., omission or misstatement of issue or material fact in the Court's written opinion) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(c)(2)]. A Supreme Court order granting rehearing must be signed by at least four assenting justices [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.536(d)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Rehearings in the Supreme Court. As a practical matter, rehearings in the Supreme Court are rarely granted. The Supreme Court will more frequently modify its opinion. Counsel should always request a modification in the alternative to a grant of rehearing, providing specific directions for a requested modification together with the underlying reasons. The rehearing procedure applies only to decisions of the Supreme Court. Rehearing may not be sought of an order denying review because that order becomes final immediately upon being filed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.532(b)(2)(A)].

§ 54.41 Remittitur and Subsequent Lower Court Proceedings

After the Supreme Court has made a final determination in a proceeding to review a decision of the court of appeal, the clerk of the Supreme Court is required to issue the remittitur once that determination has become final [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.540(b)]. A decision of the Supreme Court becomes final 30 days after it is filed, unless the Court orders a shorter time or, before the date of finality, orders one or more extensions not exceeding a total of 60 days [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.532(b)]. The Court may order immediate issuance of remittitur for good cause or on stipulation of the parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.540(c)(1)].

After review of a court of appeal decision, the Supreme Court clerk addresses the remittitur to the court of appeal and sends that court two copies of the remittitur and two file-stamped copies of the Supreme Court opinion or order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.540(b)(2)]. The court of appeal then issues its own remittitur immediately, if there will be no further proceedings in the court of appeal. The clerk of the court of appeal then sends the court of appeal remittitur to the lower court, together with a copy of the Supreme Court remittitur, and a file-stamped copy of the Supreme Court opinion or order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272(b)(2)].

For further discussion of remittitur proceedings, including proceedings to stay or vacate the remittitur, and for discussion of further proceedings in the trial court after issuance of the remittitur, particularly the recovery of costs on appeal, see Ch. 53, Appeal: Remittitur and Costs on Appeal .

§ 54.42 Subsequent Review by the United States Supreme Court

Under limited circumstances, a party may seek discretionary review by the United States Supreme Court of a decision of the California Supreme Court, or of a decision of a California court of appeal after the California Supreme Court has denied review [see 28 U.S.C. § 1257]. Counsel filing a petition for writ of certiorari seeking such discretionary review must be a member of the Bar of the United States Supreme Court, and generally must file the petition in accordance with all applicable requirements of the United States Supreme Court Rules within 90 days after entry of the California Supreme Court's decision or its order denying a petition for review [see 28 U.S.C. § 2101; U.S. Sup. Ct. Rules, Rules 13.1-13.3].

☐ Determine deadlines for filing petition for review.

☐ Petition must be served and filed in Supreme Court within 10 days after the decision of the court of appeal becomes final as to that court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.500(e)(1); *see Cal. Chapter 56 ARCHITECTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Overview

6-56 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 56.11

§ 56.11 Practice of Architecture

[1] Definition

The practice of architecture within the meaning and intent of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. is defined as offering, performing, or being in responsible control of, professional services that require the skills of an architect in the planning of sites and the design, in whole or in part, of buildings or groups of buildings and structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(a)]. "Responsible control" means that amount of control over the content of all architectural instruments of service during their preparation that is ordinarily exercised by architects applying the required professional standard of care [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.1].

Architects' professional services may include any or all of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(b)]:

- Investigation, evaluation, consultation, and advice.
- Planning schematic and preliminary studies, designs, working drawings, and specifications.
- Coordination of the work of technical and special consultants.
- Compliance with generally applicable codes and regulations, and assistance in the governmental review process.
- Technical assistance in the preparation of bid documents and agreements between clients and contractors.
- Contract administration.
- Construction observation.

[2] When License Is Required

It is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $100 or more than$5,000, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both, for any person who is not licensed to practice architecture under Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. to practice architecture in California, to use any term confusingly similar to the word architect, to use the stamp of a licensed architect, as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1, or to advertise or put out any sign, card, or other device that might indicate to the public that he or she is either an architect, qualified to practice architecture, or an architectural designer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a)]. In addition, it is a misdemeanor for any person who is not licensed to practice architecture in California to affix a stamp or seal that bears the legend "State of California" or words or symbols that represent or imply that the person is so licensed by the state to prepare plans, specifications, or instruments of service [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(b)]. It is also a misdemeanor for any person to advertise or represent that he or she is a "registered building designer" or is registered or otherwise licensed by the state as a building designer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(c)].

Exemptions from the requirement of an architect's license are given to certain categories of professional persons, and also to any person carrying on certain types of work. Insofar as they are authorized, registered, or licensed under another section of the Business and Professions Code, the following need not have an architect's certificate to practice their professions: structural engineers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.1]; contractors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.2]; professional engineers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.4]; civil engineers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.5]; landscape architects [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.6]; and land surveyors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537.7].

Further, it is not prohibited for any person to prepare plans, drawings, or specifications for the following types of structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537(a)]:

- Single family dwellings of woodframe construction not more than two stories and basement in height.

- Multiple dwellings containing no more than four dwelling units of woodframe construction not more than two stories and basement in height, excluding multiple clusters of up to four dwelling units each to form apartment or condominium complexes when the total exceeds four units on any lawfully divided lot.

- Garages or other structures appurtenant to single family dwellings of woodframe construction not more than two stories and a basement in height.

- Agricultural and ranch buildings of woodframe construction, unless the building official having jurisdiction deems that an undue risk to the public health, safety, or welfare is involved.

Nor is it prohibited for any person to furnish, either alone or with contractors, if required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq., labor and materials, with or without plans, drawings, specifications, instruments of service, or other data covering such labor and materials to be used for any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5538]:

- Nonstructural or nonseismic storefronts, interior alterations or additions, fixtures, cabinetwork, furniture, or other appliances or equipment;

- Any nonstructural or nonseismic work necessary to provide for their installation; and

- Any nonstructural or nonseismic alterations or additions to any building necessary to or attendant on the installation of those storefronts, interior alterations or additions, fixtures, cabinetwork, furniture, appliances, or equipment, provided those alterations do not change or affect the structural system or safety of the building.

[3] Discipline

Article 5 [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5560-5590] of the Architects Practice Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.] provides for investigation and discipline of architects, and sets forth particular acts or omissions constituting grounds for disciplinary action [Hughes v. Board of Architectural Examiners (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 763, 773-774, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624, 952 P.2d 641]. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5583, 5584 provide that fraud or deceit or negligence or willful misconduct by a license holder in the practice of architecture are grounds for disciplinary action.

An architect may be disciplined under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5583, 5584 for wrongful conduct occurring after his or her license has been issued [Hughes v. Board of Architectural Examiners (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 763, 767-768, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624, 952 P.2d 641]. Although Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5583, 5584 do not explicitly authorize the Board to impose discipline for acts occurring before licensure, the more reasonable estimation of legislative intent is that the Board may discipline an architect under those sections for conduct that occurred before the license was issued, even if the license was not obtained by fraud or misrepresentation [Hughes v. Board of Architectural Examiners (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 763, 768, 774-793, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624, 952 P.2d 641 (upholding revocation of license based on prelicensure acts)]. For discussion and forms related to discipline of holders of licenses issued by public agencies generally, see Ch. 471B, Licensing by Public Agencies .

§ 56.12 When Written Contract Is Required

With certain exceptions noted below, an architect must use a written contract when providing professional services to a client. The contractmust be executed by the architect and the client, or the client's representative, before the architectbegins work unless the client knowingly states in writing that work may begin before the contract is executed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(a)]. At a minimum, the contract must include the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(a)]:

- A description of the services the architect will provide.
- A description of any basis for compensation under the contract and the payment method to which the parties agree.
- The names and addresses of both the architect and the client, and the architect's license number.
- A description of the procedure to be used to accommodate additional services under the contract.
- A description of the procedure to be used by either party to terminate the contract.

A written contract is not required when the following apply [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.22(b)]:

- The architect will not be compensated for providing the client with professional services.
- The architect and the client have an arrangement as to the basis for compensation and manner of providing professional services, which is implied by the fact that the services are of the same general kind that the architect has previously rendered to and received payment from the same client.
- The client knowingly states in writing, after full disclosure of the right to use a written contract, that a written contract is not required.

- The architect is rendering services to a registered professional engineer or a licensed land surveyor.

There is no authority indicating that failure to comply with the written contract requirement will, absent other circumstances, bar an architect's right to receive compensation for professional services performed, whether based on a contract theory or quantum meruit.

§ 56.13 Architectural Corporations

Subject to all applicable statutes, rules, and regulations, a professional architectural corporation (that is, one that is licensed with the California Architects Board and has a currently effective license from the board pursuant to the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [Corp. Code § 13400 et seq.] and Bus. & Prof. Code § 5610 et seq.) is entitled to practice architecture [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5610]. The Architects Practice Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.] does not prevent other corporations from furnishing or supplying by contract architectural services, as long as any architects' professional services are offered and provided under the responsible control of a licensed architect or architects [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.3].

Except as provided in Corp. Code § 13403, each director, shareholder, and officer of a professional architectural corporation is required to be a licensed person as defined in the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5610.4].

Actions for breach of contract and actions on common counts by architects to recover fees or the reasonable value of their services are governed by the law governing contractual obligations generally [*see Havens v. § 56.21 Damages

[1] Breach of Contractual Obligation

For the breach of an obligation arising from contract, the measure of damages, except when otherwise expressly provided by the Civil Code, is the amount that will compensate the party aggrieved for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, or that in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result therefrom [Civ. Code § 3300]. No damages can be recovered for a breach of a contract that are not clearly ascertainable in both their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301]. The detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest thereon [Civ. Code § 3302].

[2] Late Payment Penalty in Lieu of Interest (Private Works Contracts)

In any contract for a private work of improvement entered into on or after January 1, 1996, the contracting party and the architect (or other design professional) may agree to include a clause providing for the assessment of a late payment penalty in lieu of any interest otherwise due for delayed payments underthe contract. The contract must specify the terms of the penalty [Civ. Code § 3319(a)].

Any late payment penalty provided for will be separate from, and in addition to, the architect's rights to a design professionals' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3319(b); see § 56.23]. None of the rights or obligations created or permitted by Civ. Code § 3319 between an architect (or other design professional) and the contracting party will apply to construction loan funds held by a lender pursuant to a construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3319(c)].

[3] Penalty for Late Progress or Final Retention Payments (Public Works Contracts)

A statutory deadline applies to progress payments and final retention payments made under any contract for a public work of improvement entered into on or after January 1, 1996. Specifically, the public agency must pay the prime design professional (hereafter referred to as "the architect") any progress payment within 30 days of receipt of the architect's written demand for payment under the contract. The final retention payment must be made within 45 days of receipt of written demand for payment. If the public agency disputes in good faith any portion of the amount due, it may withhold from the payment an amount not to exceed 150 percent of the disputed amount. The disputed amount withheld will not be subject to any penalties authorized by Civ. Code § 3320 [Civ. Code § 3320(a)].

If a progress or retention payment is wrongfully withheld or not timely paid, the architect will be entitled to a penalty of one and one-half percent of the amount due per month for every month that payment is not made. This penalty is in lieu of any interest that would otherwise be due. In any collection action for wrongfully withheld amounts, the prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 3320(b)].

Any penalty assessed is separate from, and in addition to, the architect's rights to a design professionals' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3320(c); see § 56.23].

These penalty provisions do not apply to construction loan funds held by a lender pursuant to a construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3320(e)]. Nor do they apply in situations involving either (1) certain contracts between the state and small businesses, or (2) certain state contracts that are subject to other statutory payment deadlines [Civ. Code § 3320(d); see Gov. Code § 927 et seq. (California Prompt Payment Act)].

[4] Quantum Meruit

If no basis for compensation is stated, or the architect chooses to treat the contract as rescinded by the client, the reasonable value of architectural services rather than a contract price may be sought [Havens v. Donahue (1896) 111 Cal. 297, 298-299, 43 P. 962 ; Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824 ; see also White v. Kanrich (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 356, 358, 20 Cal. Rptr. 37 ; Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825].

[5] Where Fee Is Based on Construction Cost

If an architect has agreed to prepare plans and specifications and the fee is to be a fixed percentage of the cost of construction of the structureplanned, the recovery is not barred by the failure of the client to complete construction. If the architect has completed his or her work, an estimate of the cost of completing the structure will usually be made and the architect's fee computed accordingly [see Havens v. Donahue (1896) 111 Cal. 297, 299-301, 43 P. 962 ; Stacy-Judd v. Stone (1932) 124 Cal. App. 165, 168, 12 P.2d 143].

If the architect has been prevented from completing performance of the contractual obligation, he or she may recover as the fee an amount based on the cost of completing construction, or an estimate thereof if construction is not completed, less any actual expenses that were saved by not performing the obligation [see Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 298, 302, 273 P.2d 15 (general rule regarding employment contracts); Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824 (contract with architect as treated as employment contract); see also Kingsbury v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 33, 41-42, 271 P.2d 40]. If, however, construction has not started, an estimated price may not be ascertainable; the architect will then be limited to recovering the reasonable value of his or her services [see Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92-96, 13 P.2d 824]. It has been held that an architect's contract to design and supervise construction of a building and receive as his or her fee a percentage of the construction costs that fails to specify a maximum construction cost is incomplete on its face, and parol evidence may be introduced to show the existence of an oral agreement that limits the cost of the building [Crawford v. France (1933) 219 Cal. 439, 442-444, 27 P.2d 645 ; Spurgeon v. Buchter (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 198, 204-205, 13 Cal. Rptr. 354 (rule in Crawford case particularly applicable if plans are not let out for competitive bidding)].

An architect who agrees to prepare plans for a structure not to cost more than a specified sum and whose plans do not comply with that provision, cannot recover his or her contractual fee or the reasonable value of his or her services on quantum meruit if the plans are not used by the client [Spurgeon v. Buchter (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 198, 206-207, 13

Cal. Rptr. 354 ; Rowell v. Crow (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 500, 503, 209 P.2d 149].

§ 56.22 Lack of Architectural License

A contract with an unlicensed architect for services not exempt from the licenserequirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. [see § 56.11] is against public policy [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a) (misdemeanor to practice architecture without license)] and the architect cannot recover for services rendered under the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1596, 1667(2); Force v. Hart (1930) 209 Cal. 600, 605, 289 P. 828 ; Payne v. De Vaughn (1926) 77 Cal. App. 399, 404, 246 P. 1069]. A client who knowingly contracts with an unlicensed architect cannot recover monies paid under the contract, at least if the client receives an adequate quid pro quo for the monies and there is no unjust enrichment. A client who is justifiably ignorant of the lack of license is not barred from recovering consideration paid under the contract [Medak v. Cox (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 70, 78, 90 Cal. Rptr. 452].

An architect is not prevented by the Architects Practice Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq.] from forming a business entity or collaborating with persons who are not architects, provided that any architects' professional services that are provided through the entity or collaboration are offered and provided under the responsible control of an architect, or architects, and in accordance with the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.2]. "Business entity" and "collaboration" include employer-employee relationships, joint ventures, partnerships, general corporations, and consulting relationship formed by written agreement in which the architect provides immediate and responsible direction of architectural services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.25; see 16 Cal. Code Reg. § 151 ("immediate and responsible direction" defined)]. The entity or collaboration is not required to affirmatively advise the client that non-architects may be involved [see Joseph v. Drew (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 575, 580, 225 P.2d 504 (construing predecessor to Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.2)], although work done by a person who is not an architect must be done under an architect's direction and supervision [Palmer v. Brown (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 54, 273 P.2d 306].

§ 56.23 Mechanics' Liens, Design Professionals' Liens, and Stop Notices

NOTE:

SB 189, which was introduced in February 2009 as a two-year bill, would comprehensively revise the law governing mechanics' liens and associated construction remedies. If enacted, the legislation will be operative January 1, 2011. For further information see the Special Alert preceding Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens.

Architects contributing to a work of improvement other than a public work [see Civ. Code § 3109] have a mechanics' lien on the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished materials or appliances or leased equipment, for the value of such labor done or materials furnished and for the value of the use of such appliances, equipment, teams, or power whether done or furnished at the instance of the owner or of any person acting by his or her authority or under him or her as contractor or otherwise. For the purposes of Civ. Code § 3109 et seq. (mechanics' liens), every architect is held to be the agent of the owner [Civ. Code § 3110]. Architects may also obtain stop notices for public works [Civ. Code § 3181].

An architect must be licensed, or must be eligible for an exemption under Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537, in order to use the mechanics' lien as security for recovery [see Cash v. Blackett (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 233, 237, 196 P.2d 585].

A design professional, including a certificated architect, may obtain a lien on real property for which a work of improvement is planned, even if actual construction has not yet commenced, for the amount of his or her fee for any services rendered prior to commencement of the work of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3081.2; see also Civ. Code § 3081.1 et seq.]. The design professional lien is not applicable to a work of improvement relating to a single-family owner-occupied residence when the construction costs are less than $100,000 [Civ. Code § 3081.10].

For the procedure to obtain a mechanics' lien and related forms, see Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens .

C. Actions Against Architects

6-56 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 56.30

§ 56.30 Liability

[1] Generally

The same act may be both a tort and a breach of contract. A cause of action in tort may sometimes arise out of the negligent manner in which the contractual duty is performed, or out of a failure to perform such duty. If the cause of action arises from a breach of a promise set forth in the contract, the action is ex contractu, but if it arises from a breach of duty growing out of the contract, it is ex delicto [Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810, 811, 249 P.2d 257 ; see also Zurich Ins. Co. v. Kings Industries, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 919, 923, 63 Cal. Rptr. 585]. Implicit in the architect's contract are the possession of architectural skills and abilities and a promise to exercise them reasonably [see Benenato v. McDougall (1913) 166 Cal. 405, 408, 137 P. 8]. Indeed, architects are members of a professional class subject to a duty to conform to the existing standards of their profession [Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 278, 313, 136 Cal. Rptr. 603].

Architects may be liable for failure as excavators to carry out a duty imposed by statute in favor of the right of a landowner to lateral support for his or her soil from adjoining land [Peak v. Richmond Elementary Sch. Dist. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 366, 368-369, 326 P.2d 860 ; see also Civ. Code § 832; for forms, see Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners].

When an architect acts under a contract as the official interpreter of its conditions and the judge of its performance, he or she should favor neither side, but exercise impartial judgment [Macomber v. State of California (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 391, 398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 393 (affirming court judgment in favor of contractor on claim rejected through gross error by defendant's architect)].

[2] Negligence

A duty of reasonable care is owed persons other than those in privity of contract with the architect [Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 868, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724]. For example, an architect who plans and supervises construction work, as an independent contractor, is under a duty to exercise ordinary care in the course thereof for the protection of any person who foreseeably and with reasonable certainty may be injured by his or her failure to do so, even though such injury may occur after the architect's work has been accepted by the person engaging his or her services [Montijo v. Swift (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 353, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133]. The duty to third persons not in privity with the architect may be limited, however, by the California Supreme Court's decision in Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. Although Bily involved an accountant's duty to third parties during an audit, the decision may indicate the duty of care applied generally to information-supplying professionals [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 410-413, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 (Court recognized that other professionals, including architects, supply information and evaluations for use and benefit of others, and also may face suits by third persons claiming reliance on their information)]. Thus, an architect, in his or her function as a supplier of information or evaluations relied on by third parties, may be insulated from general negligence claims [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. However, the Court also held that intended beneficiaries of audit reports who are known to the auditor and for whose benefit the auditor renders the report may recover on a theory of negligent misrepresentation [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. Thus, under the reasoning in Bily, an architect may be liable for negligent misrepresentation to these beneficiaries.

Mere deviation from "customary practice" in the community does not necessarily prove that a resulting architectural condition was dangerous or defective, when the deviation was reasonably safe [Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 406, 259 P.2d 934].

The negligent act of an architect may involve either design or supervision [see Pieri v. Rosebrook (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 250, 257, 275 P.2d 67 ; Goldberg v. Underhill (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702, 213 P.2d 516]. Thus, liability may result from the architect's failure to exercise ordinary care regarding a stairway for which he or she drew up the plans and supervised construction [Montijo v. Swift (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 352, 353, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133], the inaction of a supervising architect with authority to remedy the substitution of inferior sheathing on a roof [Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 408-412, 259 P.2d 934], or failure to mention in the plans an underground high voltage line the architect knew about, which failure caused the operator of a jackhammer to strike the line [Mallow v. Tucker, Sadler & Bennett, Architects etc., Inc. (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702-703, 54 Cal. Rptr. 174].

An architect who negligently prepares plans and supervises construction is not a joint tortfeasor with a negligent contractor in the case [Alexander v. Hammarberg (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 872, 879-880, 230 P.2d 399 (property damage)]. Concurrent negligence of a contractor is not a superseding cause of an accident that will relieve a negligent architect from liability [Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 411-412, 259 P.2d 934].

A tort duty runs, not only to the original owner for whom architectural services are provided, but also to subsequent owners of the same property [Krusi v. S. J. Amoroso Construction Co. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005-1006 ; see Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal.2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 ; Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 419-425, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800]. This does not mean, however, that in a case involving damage to the property, once a cause of action in favor of a prior owner accrues, another cause of action against the same defendant or defendants can accrue to a subsequent owner, unless the damaged suffered by that subsequent owner is fundamentally different from the earlier type. Thus, if owner number one has an obviously leaky roof and suffers damage to its building as a result, a cause of action accrues to it against the defendant whose deficient architectural plans cause the defect. But, if that condition goes essentially unremedied over a period of years, owners two and three of the same building have no such right of action against the defendant (unless the right was explicitly transferred to them by owner number one). But owners two and three could well have a cause of action against the defendant architect for damage caused by, for example, an earthquake if it could be shown that the architectural plans included inadequate seismic safeguards. This is a new and different cause of action [see Krusi v. S. J. Amoroso Construction Co. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005-1006].

The duty to third persons not in privity with the architect may be affected by a California Supreme Court decision that has limited an accountant's duty to third parties during an audit [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. In dictum, the Court recognized that other professionals, including architects, supply information and evaluations for use and benefit of others, and also may face suits by third persons claiming reliance on their information [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 410-413, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. Thus, an architect, in his or her function as a supplier of this information, may be insulated from general negligence claims [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745]. However, an architect may be liable on a theory of negligent misrepresentation to intended beneficiaries of the information who are known to the architect and for whose benefit the architect renders the information [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745].

[3] Liability for Signed Plans, Specifications, or Other Documents

A person who prepares or is in responsible control of plans, specifications, or instruments of service for others must sign those documents, and if that person is a licensed architect, must affix a stamp to the documents as evidence of that person's responsibility for them [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(a)]. This stamp must bear, at a minimum, the architect's name,license number, the legend "licensed architect," and the legend "State of California" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b)]. The stamp also must provide a means for indicating the renewal date of the license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b)].

A licensed architect who signs and stamps plans, specifications, reports, or documents is not liable for damage caused by subsequent changes to or uses of those documents, including those made by state or local governmental agencies, if the architect did not authorize or approve in writing the subsequent changes or uses, provided that the architect did not unreasonably withhold the written authorization or approval and the architectural service rendered by the licensed architect was not also a cause of the damage [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(a)]. Moreover, the signing and stamping of plans, specifications, reports, or documents that relate to the design of fixed works does not impose a legal duty or responsibility on the signer to observe the construction of the fixed works that are the subject of the plans, specifications, reports, or documents [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(b)]. Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25 does not, however, preclude an architect from agreeing to provide construction observation services, nor does it modify the liability of an architect for construction observation services that he or she has undertaken to render, contractually or otherwise [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.25(b); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6735.1, 8761.2 (similar provisions applicable to licensed civil engineers or land surveyors)].

A licensed architect's use of the words "certify" and "certification" merely constitutes an expression of professional opinion regarding those facts or findings that are the subject of the certification. It does not constitute an express or implied warranty or guarantee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.26].

[4] Liability for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold on or After January 1, 2003

In accordance with Division 2, Part 2, Title 7 of the Civil Code, "Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects" [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.], any action against a design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938].

Design professionals may also be liable under Title 7 for damages to the extent that they cause, in whole or in part, a violation of a particular statutory construction standard as the result of a negligent act or omission or a breach of contract. All actions by a claimant or builder to enforce an express contract, or any provision of an express contract, against a design professional is preserved. Design professionals may be held joint and severally liable to the extent that they contribute to any specific violation of the statutory construction standards. This does not apply, however, to any design professional to which strict liability applies [Civ. Code § 936]. For complete discussion of Title 7 to Part 2 of

§ 56.31 Cost Estimates

Unless cost estimates are expressly warranted, it is sufficient that they be reasonably made. An architect sometimes makes a mistaken estimate of the cost of certain construction. But the client may have sufficient notice to apprise a prudent person [see Civ. Code § 19] of the fact that he or she cannot complete the work for the sum of money the client intends to invest. In that case, the architect's mistake is not the proximate cause of the loss sustained by the client from the client's lacking the financial ability to complete the work. One to whom an architect gives an estimate of cost may not recklessly proceed to make contracts that may and probably would make the cost of construction far above that estimated and then hold the architect responsible for the surplus expenditure [Benenato v. McDougall (1913) 166 Cal. 405, 407, 408, 137 P. 8].

Gross knowing misrepresentation of a building's maximum cost, whether expressed as an opinion or a fact, gives rise to an action against the architect for deceit [Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 572, 574, 126 P. 351 ; see generally Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit]. In such a case, when the client discovers the misrepresentation in mid-construction, the client has a right to abandon the unfinished building or to complete it at reasonable cost, without waiving his or her right of an action to recover damages for fraud and deceit [Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 577, 579, 126 P. 351].

§ 56.32 Statutes of Limitations

[1] General Provisions

The statute of limitations of an action on any contract, obligation, or liability founded on an instrument in writing is four years, with exceptions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 336a, 337(1) [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)]. If the contract, obligation, or liability is not founded on an instrument of writing, the limitations period is two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)].

The statute of limitations on an action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake is three years; the cause of action in such a case is deemed not to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)].

An action for injury to or for the death of one caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another is required to be brought within two years after the cause of action has accrued [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1].

Actions for relief not otherwise provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 335 et seq. (periods of limitation for actions other than for recovery of real property) must be commenced within four years after the cause of action has accrued [Code Civ. Proc. § 343].

With certain limited exceptions, any action related to construction defects in new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, must be filed within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. For further discussion, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

[2] Improvements to Real Property (Patent Deficiency)

Except as otherwise provided below, no action shall be brought to recover damages from any person performing or furnishing the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to real property more than four years after the substantial completion of the improvement for any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1]:

- Any patent deficiency (deficiency apparent by reasonable inspection [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(e)]) in the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, observation of construction, or construction of an improvement to, or survey of, real property [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a)(1)];

- Injury to property, real or personal, arising out of the patent deficiency [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a)(2)]; or

- Injury to the person or for wrongful death arising out of the patent deficiency [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a)(3)].

If, by reason of the patent deficiency, an injury to property or the person or an injury causing wrongful death occurs during the fourth year after the substantial completion, an action in tort to recover damages for such an injury or wrongful death may be brought within one year after the date on which the injury occurred, irrespective of the date of death, but in no event may such an action be brought more than five years after the substantial completion of construction of the improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(b)].

Nothing in the foregoing rule is to be construed as extending the period prescribed by the laws of California for the bringing of any action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(c)]. The limitation period prescribed above is not to be asserted by way of defense by any person in actual possession or the control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of such an improvement at the time any deficiency in such an improvement constitutes the proximate cause of the injury or death for which it is proposed to bring an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(d)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a), (b), discussed above, does not apply to any owner-occupied single unit residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(f)].

The four-year statute of limitations for patent defects specified by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 does not apply to an action seeking damages for construction defects in new residential construction sold on or after January 1, 2003 [Civ. Code § 941(d); see [1], above; see also Ch. 104, Building Contracts].

[3] Improvements to Real Property (Latent Deficiency)

No action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c)] may be brought to recover damages from any person or the surety of a person who develops real property or performs or furnishes the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to real property more than 10 years after the substantial completion of the development or improvement for any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)]:

- Any latent deficiency (deficiency that is not apparent by reasonable inspection) [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(b)] in the design, specification, surveying, planning, supervision, observation of construction, or construction of an improvement to, or survey of, real property [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)(1)].

- Injury to property, real or personal, arising out of the latent deficiency [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)(2)].

An action for indemnity arising out of any act within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is also barred. However, a cross complaint for indemnity arising from the same transaction or occurrence as that sued on in the complaint may be filed if the principal action is timely [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

An action for personal injury based on latent defects is not barred after 10 years [Martinez v. Traubner (1982) 32 Cal.

3d 755, 760, 187 Cal. Rptr. 251, 653 P.2d 1046].

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is to be construed as extending the period prescribed by the laws of California for bringing any action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(d)]. The limitation prescribed by the above rule is not to be asserted by way of defense by any person in actual possession or the control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of such an improvement at the time any deficiency in the improvement constitutes the proximate cause for which it is proposed to bring an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(e)]. Thisrule refers to the person in possession or control at the time that the deficiency becomes the proximate cause of the damages and not to the person in possession or control at the time of construction, that is, when the defective latent condition was designed, installed, or built into theimprovement [Eden v. Van Tine (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886, 148 Cal. Rptr. 215].

The 10-year limitation period does not apply to actions based on willful misconduct or fraudulent concealment [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f)]. Willful misconduct encompasses not only intentional wrongdoing, but negligence of such a character as to constitute reckless disregard for the rights of others [Felburg v. Don Wilson Builders (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 383, 391, 191 Cal. Rptr. 92].

The 10-year period commences on substantial completion of the improvement, but not later than the earliest of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g)]:

- The date of final inspection by the applicable public agency.
- The date a valid notice of completion is recorded.
- The date of use or occupation of the improvement.
- One year after termination or cessation of work on the improvement.

The date of substantial completion relates specifically to the performance or furnishing of design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, observation of construction, or construction services by each profession or trade rendering services to the improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g); see also Eden v. Van Tine (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 879, 883-885, 148 Cal. Rptr. 215].

The statute may be tolled during any period when the contractor, who has breached a warranty, claims that the defect can be repaired and attempts to make repairs [Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Associates (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 1255-1257, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113]. Tolling is justified on the basis that the plaintiff is relying on the words or actions of the contractor who originally caused the problem. If the plaintiff obtains repairs by a third party, the statute is not tolled because the plaintiff is not relying on the defendant to remedy the problem; thus, there is no basis for tolling the statute [A & B Painting & Drywall, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 349, 354-355, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 (court refused to extend rule of Cascade Gardens to situations where repairs were made by third parties)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-56 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 56.33

§ 56.33 Undertaking

If a complaint for damages is filed against any architect, landscape architect, engineer, building designer, or land surveyor, duly licensed as such under the laws of California, in an action for error, omission, or professional negligence in the creation and preparation of plans, specifications, designs, reports, or surveys that are the basis for work performed or agreed to be performed on real property, any such defendant may, within 30 days after service of summons, move the court for an order, on notice and hearing, requiring the plaintiff to furnish an undertaking, in a sum not to exceed $500 as security for the costs of defense as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(d), discussed below, which may be awarded against the plaintiff. The motion is to be supported by affidavit (declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) showing that the claim against the defendant is frivolous [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(a)].

At the hearing on the motion, the court orders the plaintiff to file security if the defendant shows to the satisfaction of the court that (1) the plaintiff would not suffer undue economic hardship in filing the undertaking, and (2) there is no reasonable possibility that the plaintiff has a cause of action against each named defendant with respect to whom the plaintiff would otherwise be required to file the undertaking. No appeal is to be taken from any order made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(a) to file or not to file security [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(a)].

The undertaking must be in writing and signed by the sureties under oath [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.320(a)]. It must be executed by two or more sufficient personal sureties, by one admitted surety insurer, or by any combination of sufficient personal sureties and admitted surety insurers [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.310]. For further discussion, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

A determination by the court that security either is or is not to be furnished or is to be furnished as to one or more defendants and not as to others, is not to be deemed a determination of any one or more issues in the action or of the merits. If the court, on any such motion, makes a determination that an undertaking be furnished by the plaintiff as to any one or more defendants, the action is to be dismissed as to those defendant or defendants, unless the security required by the court has been furnished within a reasonable time as may be fixed by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(a)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5 does not apply to a complaint for bodily injury or for wrongful death, nor to an action commenced in a small claims court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(b)].

If more than one defendant is named, the undertaking is to be increased in an amount not to exceed $500 for each additional defendant in whose favor the undertaking is ordered, not to exceed the total of $3,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(c)].

In any action requiring an undertaking as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5 (certain actions against architects and others), on the dismissal of the action or the award of judgment to the defendant, the court requires the plaintiff to pay the defendant's costs of defense authorized by law. Any sureties are to be liable for these costs in an amount not to exceed the sum of $500 or the amount of the undertaking, whichever is less, for each defendant with respect to whom these sureties have executed an undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.5(d); see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.320]. If the plaintiff prevails in the action against any defendant with respect to whomthe security has been filed, that defendant is required to pay the cost to plaintiff of obtaining the undertaking [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250].

The 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects specified by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 does not apply to an action seeking damages for construction defects in new residential construction sold on or after January 1, 2003 [Civ. Code § 941(d); see § 56.32[1]; see also Ch. 104, Building Contracts].

§ 56.34 Certificate of Merit

In any action for damages arising out of the professional negligence of a person holding a valid architect's license issued pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq., on or before the date of service of the complaint on any defendant, the plaintiff's attorney must file a certificate as prescribed in Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35 [see § 56.61]. Failure to comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35 is a ground for demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(h); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c) (prohibiting special demurrers in limited civil cases)] or a motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 435; but see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(d) (prohibiting motions to strike in limited civil cases except on the ground that the damages or relief sought are not supported by the allegations of the complaint)], and may subject plaintiff's counsel to discipline [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(f)].

In addition, on the favorable conclusion of the litigation with respect to any party for whom a certificate of merit was filed or should have been filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, the trial court may, on a finding of noncompliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b), order the noncomplying party or the party's attorney to pay any reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by another party as a result of the failure to comply [see Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(h); see also §§ 56.67, 56.68 (notice of motion and order, respectively)].

The requirement to furnish a certificate of merit is not eliminated or abrogated in an action against a design professional, for claims and damages that are not covered by the statutory scheme governing construction defect litigation for new residences sold on or after January 1, 2003 [Civ. Code § 937; see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.; see also Ch. 104, Building Contracts].

§ 56.35 Penalty for Late Payments Due Subconsultant Design Professionals Under Public Works Contracts

The prime design professional (hereafter referred to as "the architect") under a contract for a public work of improvement must pay to each subconsultant design professional, within 15 days after receipt of each progress payment or final retention payment, the amount due the subconsultant [Civ. Code § 3321(a)]. If a progress or retention payment is wrongfully withheld or not timely paid, the subconsultant design professional will be entitled to a penalty of one and one-half percent of the amount due per month for every month that payment is not made. This penalty is in lieu of any interest that would otherwise be due. The prevailing party is entitled to attorneys' fees in any action involving a delay in making progress or retention payments [Civ. Code § 3321(b)].

Any penalty assessed is separate from, and in addition to, the architect's rights to a design professionals' lien or stop notice [Civ. Code § 3321(c); see § 56.23]. These penalty provisions do not apply to situations involving construction loan funds held by a lender pursuant to a construction loan agreement [Civ. Code § 3321(d)].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

6-56 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 56.42

§ 56.42 Decisions

[1] Generally

Bus. & Prof. Code § 5537, excluding from architect licensing requirements persons preparing plans for single family dwellings of wood frame construction not more than two stories high, does not restrict number of houses that person may design without architect's license. Medak v. Cox (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 70, 77, 90 Cal. Rptr. 452

Suspension of architect for dishonest practice must be supported by record making dishonesty apparent to all. Coffman v. Board of Architectural Exam. (1933) 130 Cal. App. 343, 348, 19 P.2d 1002

[2] License to Practice Architecture

Claim to fee by architect without certificate was denied because it was contrary to public policy of architectural certification statute. Force v. v Hart (1930) 209 Cal. 600, 605, 289 P. 828 ; Medak v. Cox (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 70, 77-79, 90 Cal. Rptr. 452 ; Payne v. De Vaughn (1926) 77 Cal. App. 399, 404, 246 P. 1069

In action by registered designer to recover fees on alternative breach of contract theories, designer's failure to sign contract and affix registration number to it as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536.1(b) was at most technical violation not barring recovery. Felix v. Zlotoff (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 155, 163, 153 Cal. Rptr. 301

Architect's fees paid for work done by uncertificated designer is not recoverable by client, despite fact that payment of such fees would be against public policy, when both designer and client know designer to lack certificate. Medak v. Cox (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 70, 78-79, 90 Cal. Rptr. 452

Supervision of actual construction was within scope of architect's certificate and agency of builder; architect was not required to secure a contractor's license. Wallich v. Salkin (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 157, 160-163, 33 Cal. Rptr. 125

In partnership, uncertificated partner was required to be under supervision of certificated partner. Palmer v. Brown

(1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 54, 273 P.2d 306

Partnership was not required to advise client one partner was uncertificated. Joseph v. Drew (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 575, 580, 225 P.2d 504

[3] Mechanics' Lien

Mechanic's lien denied to architect when real property on which building to be designed by architect will be located is not physically benefited by architect's "pre-preliminary" plans to be used for a stock offering. Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 173-174, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341

Action by unlicensed architect to foreclose mechanic's lien was denied, based on his lack of a contractor's license. Cash v. Blackett (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 233, 237, 196 P.2d 585

[4] Recovery of Fees

Recovery of reasonable value of architectural services. Havens v. Donahue (1896) 111 Cal. 297, 298-299, 43 P. 962 ; Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824 ; see also White v. Kanrich (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 356, 357, 20 Cal. Rptr. 37 ; Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 632-633, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825

Damages measured using the estimated full cost of building, not partial cost of incomplete structure, when construction not completed and architect's fee was to be measured as percentage of construction costs. Havens v. Donahue (1896) 111 Cal. 297, 298-299, 43 P. 962 ; Stacy-Judd v. Stone (1932) 124 Cal. App. 165, 168, 12 P.2d 143

Architect was entitled to recover percentage of construction cost provided by contract less actual expenses saved in not performing when performance of contract was prohibited. Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 298, 302, 273 P.2d 15 ; Miller v. San Francisco Church Extension Soc. of Methodist Episcopal Church (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824 ; cf. Kingsbury v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 33, 43-44, 271 P.2d 40

Recovery of reasonable value of services was barred, as well as recovery on the contract, when architect's design violated cost condition of contract and was of no use to client. Spurgeon v. Buchter (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 198, 206-207, 13 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; Rowell v. Crow (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 500, 503, 209 P.2d 149

When parol evidence may be introduced to show existence of cost condition. Crawford v. France (1933) 219 Cal. 439, 442-444, 27 P.2d 645 ; Spurgeon v. Buchter (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 198, 204-205, 13 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; Hudson v. Barneson (1919) 41 Cal. App. 633, 636-637, 183 P. 274

[5] Duty

In determinations under construction contract, architect occupies position of trust and confidence, and must not favor client or contractor but must exercise impartial judgment. Macomber v. State of California (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 391, 397-398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 393

Architect who plans and supervises construction work as independent contractor is under duty to exercise ordinary care in course thereof forprotection of any person who foreseeably and with reasonable certainty may be injured by his or her failure to do so, even though such injury may occur after his or her work has been accepted by person engaging his or her services. Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 868, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; see also Montijo v. Swift (1963)

219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 353, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133

Duty based on statute giving adjacent landowner right to lateral support of his or her soil, which architect must respect when plans call for architect's supervision of excavation. Peak v. Richmond Elementary Sch. Dist. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 366, 368-369, 326 P.2d 860

[6] Fraud

Fraud is basis for liability against architect claiming to have unique skill or experience that he or she does not have, or giving opinion that building of certain type can be built for specified sum when he or she does not in fact believe so. Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 572, 126 P. 351

Liability based on fraud when architects issued certificates to contractors showing satisfactory completion of work without ascertaining whether premises free from liens chargeable to contractors. Palmer v. Brown (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 47, 58-59, 273 P.2d 306

Fraud and misrepresentation in respect to cost of proposed building by contractor-architect. Goldberg v. Underhill (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 700, 701-702, 213 P.2d 516

[7] Liability

A duty of reasonable care is owed persons other than those in privity of contract with the architect, and failure to do so may result in liability to any person who foreseeably and with reasonable certainty may be injured thereby. Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 868, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724

Architect may be liable to lender with security interest in underlying real property. U.S. Financial v. Sullivan (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 5, 12-14, 112 Cal. Rptr. 18

Negligent execution of contract duty possibly gives rise to both cause of action in tort and in contract. Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810-811, 249 P.2d 257 ; Zurich Ins. Co. v. Kings Industries, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 919, 923, 63 Cal. Rptr. 585

Architect, by every contract, implies his or her possession of skill and ability and promise to exercise them reasonably and without neglect. Benenato v. McDougall (1913) 166 Cal. 405, 408, 137 P. 8

Architect who negligently supervises construction has liability separate and distinct from liability of the party who negligently performs actual building process. Alexander v. Hammarberg (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 872, 879-880, 884, 230 P.2d 399

[8] Negligent Design and Supervision

Negligence in failure to safeguard and make apparent stairway to bottom of steps. Montijo v. Swift (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 352-353, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133

Negligence found in specification of supports, fastening, and weight of concrete sundeck. Pieri v. Rosebrook (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 250, 258, 275 P.2d 67

Public entity was principal of architect-agent liable when lumber of lower grade used to construct roof that workman fell through, and when architect had authority to remedy condition, had notice of condition, and failed to remedy in reasonable time. Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 408-410, 259 P.2d 934

Negligence was proximate cause of wrongful death of jackhammer operator who struck buried high-voltage wire that should have been located and identified by architect. Mallow v. Tucker, Sadler & Bennett, Architects etc, Inc. (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702-703, 54 Cal. Rptr. 174

Liability of architect-contractor for negligent design and execution of design. Goldberg v. Underhill (1950) 95 Cal. App. 2d 700, 702, 213 P.2d 516

Liability as based on breach of duty in issuing payment certificates to contractors without requiring proof that premises were free from subcontractor liens chargeable to the contractors and without carefully examining the work to see that it had been properly done. Palmer v. Brown (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 47, 58-59, 273 P.2d 306

Expert testimony useful but not necessary for trier of fact to conclude that proper architectural supervision and design had not been employed when sun deck sagged and leaked. Pieri v. Rosebrook (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 250, 258, 275 P.2d 67

[9] Proximate Cause

When client knew [Civ. Code § 19] before letting contracts to build that cost would exceed architect's estimate, and proceeded to build, architect was not proximate cause of detriment. Benenato v. McDougall (1913) 166 Cal. 405, 407, 137 P. 8

[10] Relationship to Contractor

When contracting for plans and supervision, architect acts as independent contractor; but in supervising the contractor, architect acts as agent and representative of the owner. Trane Co. v. Gilbert (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 720, 726, 73 Cal. Rptr. 279

Negligent supervision and misrepresentation by architect that caused expense to contractor was recoverable from architect despite lack of privity. United States v. Rogers & Rogers (S.D. Cal. 1958) 161 F. Supp. 132, 135-136

[11] Standard of Care

Professional standard of care must be established by qualified expert testimony unless standard is a matter of common knowledge, but when standardof care is within knowledge of experts only, expert evidence is conclusive and cannot be disregarded. Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 278, 313, 136 Cal. Rptr. 603

Breach of standard of care by architect must be proven by showing not only that architect deviated from customary architectural practices of locality but also that in deviating architect acted unreasonably. Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 399, 406, 259 P.2d 934

Standard of care is standard of architectural practice that can only be established by having jury hear architects testify as to those practices. Paxton v. County of Alameda (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 393, 399, 259 P.2d 934

[12] Statute of Limitations

If plaintiff obtains repairs by third party, 10-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is not tolled because plaintiff is not relying on defendant to remedy problem; thus, there is no basis for tolling statute. A & B Painting & Drywall, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 349, 354-355, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418

Ten-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 for latent defects is tolled during any period when contractor, who has breached warranty, claims that defect can be repaired and attempts to make repairs. Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Associates (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 1255-1257, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113

Ten-year limitation on actions alleging latent deficiency in property design is inapplicable to action for personal injuries caused by deficiency. Martinez v. Traubner (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 755, 759, 760, 187 Cal. Rptr. 251, 653 P.2d 1046

Ten-year statute of limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 for actions for latent defects is not applicable to actions for personal injuries; thus, action for indemnity for damages for personal injuries is not barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15. Grimmer v. Harbor Towers (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 88, 92-94, 183 Cal. Rptr. 634 ; but see Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 567, 570-571, 166 Cal. Rptr. 644 (holding such indemnity action barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15)

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is constitutional when applied to person who did not learn of defect until after 10-year statute had run. Barnhouse v. City of Pinole (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 171, 183-187, 183 Cal. Rptr. 881

[13] Certificate of Merit

Building owner who consulted with structural engineer instead of architect complied with Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, requiring the filing of a certificate of merit as a prerequisite to action for professional negligence against architect Ponderosa Center Partners v. McClellan/Cruz/Gaylord & Associates (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 913, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 64

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use to recover money under a common count on indebitatus assumpsit, which should not be confused with a common count for quantum meruit (the reasonable value of services) [for an allegation for use in a common count on quantum meruit, see § 56.51]. This form should be used when the services were rendered for a fixed and agreed price.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- The time within which the indebtedness arose (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337, 339];
- The indebtedness (Paragraph 4);
- The consideration (Paragraph 4);
- Nonpayment after a demand for payment (Paragraph 5) [Philpott v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 512, 518-523, 36 P.2d 635 ; Pike v. Zadig (1915) 171 Cal. 273, 276-277, 152 P. 923];
- The capacity of defendant (Paragraph 2);
- Defendant's residence for venue purposes (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]; and
- An optional allegation as to fictitiously named defendants (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

The fact that plaintiff is an architect and licensed to practice in California may be alleged (Paragraph 1), although denial is properly a matter for defendant's answer [Harris v. Bucher (1914) 25 Cal. App. 380, 382, 143 P. 796 ; for a form of affirmative defense, see § 56.53].

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a) (unless otherwise required by law, pleadings not required to be verified)]. However, if the complaint is verified, the defendant is required to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446] and is precluded from making a general denial in superior court actions and in some limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Allegations or Affidavit Showing Proper Venue

If the action is commenced as a limited civil case and is subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b) (venue for action arising from offer or provision of goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use), facts showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court must be set forth in the complaint, verified by the oath of the plaintiff or of his or her attorney, or in an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) of the plaintiff or of his or her attorney filed with the complaint. If such an affidavit or declaration is filed with the complaint, a copy of it must be served with the summons. If the complaint or affidavit or declaration be not so filed, unless the court on such terms as may be just permits a later filing of the affidavit or declaration, no further proceedings shall be had in the action or proceeding, except to dismiss the same without prejudice [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a(a); see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used].

[6] Interest

Every person who is entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and the right to recover which is vested in him upon a particular day, is entitled also to recover interest thereon from that day, except during such time as the debtor is prevented by law, or by the act of the creditor from paying the debt [Civ. Code §

3287(a)]. Every person who is entitled under any judgment to receive damages based upon a cause of action in contract where the claim was unliquidated, may also recover interest thereon from a date prior to the entry of judgment as the court may, in its discretion, fix, but in no event earlier than the date the action was filed [Civ. Code § 3287(b)]. If the action is to recover the reasonable value of services, as opposed to the agreed price, the amount, character, or value of which can only be established by evidence in court, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest prior to verdict or judgment [see Kingsbury v. Arcadia Unified School Dist. (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 33, 43-44, 271 P.2d 40 ; Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634-636, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825].

[7] Common Counts

Common counts are appropriate where the contract on which the count is based is implied in fact or implied in law [Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 778, 793, 256 P.2d 947] or, in an express contract where plaintiff has executed his or her obligations and nothing remains to be done thereunder except the payment of money by the defendant [Ferro v. Citizens Nat. Trust & Sav. Bank (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 401, 409, 282 P.2d 849], except that plaintiff may recover on a common count on an express contract partially unexecuted on his or her part if defendant prevented complete performance by plaintiff [Rains v. Arnett (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 337, 342-343, 11 Cal. Rptr. 299].

6-56 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 56.51

§ 56.51 Allegations--For Reasonable Value of Services (Quantum Meruit)

[1] FORM Allegations--For Reasonable Value of Services (Quantum Meruit)

1. _____ [Within the last _____ (two or four) years or On or about _____ (date)] at _____ [city], _____ County, California plaintiff rendered architectural services to defendant to wit: _____ [specify, e.g., conferred with and advised defendant concerning the proposed building, prepared preliminary studies, prepared plans and working drawings, let bids, supervised construction, etc.].

2. At all times herein mentioned the above services were and are of the reasonable value of $_____, neither any part nor the whole of which has been paid [except $_____].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, are for use in an action in which the architect seeks to recover the reasonable value of his or her services. The allegations may be inserted in a complaint, such as the one in § 56.50[1] in place of the allegations in Paragraphs 4 and 5 of that form.

[3] Damages

Damages may be measured by the reasonable value of an architect's services if the client terminates the contract without just cause [Hart v. Buckley (1912) 164 Cal. 160, 163, 128 P. 29].

The reasonable value of services is recoverable when the architect has chosen to treat the contract as rescinded or no basis of compensation is stated [Havens v. Donahue (1896) 111 Cal. 297, 298-299, 43 P. 962 ; Miller v. San Francisco Church Exten. Soc. (1932) 125 Cal. App. 85, 92, 13 P.2d 824 ; Kimes v. Davidson Inv. Co. (1929) 101 Cal. App. 382, 385-386, 281 P. 639].

A schedule of fees published by an architect's association is competent evidence of the value of services recoverable in quantum meruit [Laver v. Hotaling (1897) 115 Cal. 613, 616, 47 P. 593].

[4] Interest

Interest before judgment [Civ. Code § 3287] is not available in an action in quantum meruit where there is no express contract or where there is a contract but the value of the services can only be established by evidence rather than from face of the contract or reference to established market values [Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 4 Cal. Rptr. 825].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was certificated to practice architecture in California.

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 56.50, Paragraph 2.]

3. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into _____ [a written or an oral] agreement whereby defendant employed plaintiff as an architect for the construction of _____ [type of structure] to be erected in _____ County, California. _____ [If contract is oral, specify pertinent provisions. If contract is written, plead accordingly to its legal effect or set forth its exact words or attach a copy as an exhibit.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff received a _____ [specify, e.g., letter from defendant] dated _____ [date], giving notice that defendant would not perform the contract and totally repudiated it. [A copy of defendant's _____ (specify, e.g., letter) is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof]. Defendant's repudiation was not retracted before the time at which defendant's performance was due.

5. At the time plaintiff received defendant's repudiation, plaintiff had performed all conditions, covenants, and promises under the contract which were then to be performed by him [except _____ (describe condition), the performance of which was excused on the ground that _____ (specify)], and plaintiff was ready, able, and willing to complete performance.

6. As a result of defendant's breach of the contract, plaintiff has lost the profit to be realized therefrom in the sum of $_____.

3. For costs of suit herein incurred.

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired. See § 56.50.]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain damages for breach of a contract for architectural services where the defendant gives notice prior to the time for his or her performance that he or she will not perform [see Civ. Code § 1440]. Although neither the conditions in the contract nor time specified for defendant's performance have occurred, an immediate right of action accrues to the architect when the client communicates a definite and unconditional repudiation [Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 287, 39 Cal. Rptr. 443].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges:

- The existence of the contract and its nature as written or oral [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)];
- Its terms or legal effect (Paragraph 3);
- Anticipatory breach (Paragraph 4) [see Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 11, 18, 206 P.2d 847 ; Daum v. Superior Court (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 283, 287-288, 39 Cal. Rptr. 443].

If a party to an obligation gives notice to another, before the latter is in default, that he or she will not perform the same on his or her part, and does not retract such notice before the time at which performance on his or her part is due, such other party is entitled to enforce the obligation without previously performing or offering to perform any conditions on his or her part in favor of the former party [Civ. Code § 1440]. Anticipatory breach thus creates a cause of action for damages, a right of rescission, or right to stand on contract until after failure to perform on stated date [Jeschke v. Lamarr (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 506, 511, 44 Cal. Rptr. 416] . For this reason, the pleading of performance or excuse appears optional, although it is customary (Paragraph 5). In addition, plaintiff need not allege that he or she is an architect, although it is customary (Paragraph 1) [Harris v. Bucher (1914) 25 Cal. App. 380, 382, 143 P. 796].

Finally, in case of anticipatory breach, venue is found in the county from which letter repudiating the contract was posted rather than the county of receipt [Karson Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 7, 9-10, 77 Cal. Rptr. 714].

[4] Damages

For the breach of an obligation arising from contract, the measure of damages, except where otherwise expressly provided by the Civil Code, is the amount which will compensate the party aggrieved for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, or which, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result therefrom [Civ. Code § 3300]. The detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest thereon [Civ. Code § 3302]. No damages can be recovered for a breach of a contract which are not clearly ascertainable in both their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301].

§ 56.53 Affirmative Defense--Lack of Architect's License [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Lack of Architect's License [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5536(a)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. The services allegedly performed by plaintiff pursuant to the contract alleged in plaintiff's complaint are architectural services within the meaning of Section 5500.1 of the Business and Professions Code. [If insufficiently pleaded in complaint, set out the contract in exact words, set out its legal effect, or incorporate it and attach a copy.]

2. Plaintiff _____ [is not, and never has been, or at the time of his/her performance under the contract was not] licensed as an architect in the State of California. Plaintiff's alleged performance of the services required under the contract is thereby illegal and in violation of Section 5536 of the Business and Professions Code. The contract alleged in plaintiff's complaint is against the public policy of Section 5536 of the Business and Professions Code and the State of California and is unenforceable.

[2] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint by an architect to recover for his or her services. A contract for architectural services, where the architect is not licensed [see § 56.11] is unenforceable [Civ. Code §§ 1596, 1667(2); Force v. Hart (1930) 209 Cal. 600, 605, 289 P. 828 ; Medak v. Cox (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 70, 77-79, 90 Cal. Rptr. 452] and this defect is properly raised in the answer [Palmer v. Brown (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 44, 55, 273 P.2d 306].

[3] Practice of Architecture

The practice of architecture within the meaning and intent of Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. is defined as offering, performing, or being in responsible control of, professional services that require the skills of an architect in the planning of sites, and the design, in whole or in part, of buildings, or groups of buildings and structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(a)]. "Responsible control" means that amount of control over the content of all architectural instruments of service during their preparation that is ordinarily exercised by architects applying the required professional standard of care [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5535.1].

Architects' professional services may include any or all of several specified services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500.1(b); see § 56.11[1]].

A plaintiff suing on an express contract need not plead compliance with licensing requirements, but the issue is properly raised by defendant in order to defeat recovery [Harris v. Bucher (1914) 25 Cal. App. 380, 382, 143 P. 796].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a person injured by the collapse of a building platform to bring an action against the architect who drew the plans and specifications and supervised the construction to recover damages for personal injuries based on negligence.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges [see Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 733-734, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912 ; Montijo v. Swift (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 351, 353, 33 Cal. Rptr. 133]:

- Defendant's duty (Paragraphs 2, 4, 5);
- Breach of duty (Paragraph 6); and
- Injury and damages as a proximate result thereof (Paragraphs 7-9).

[4] Specification of Damages

In a superior court action that is not a limited civil case, brought to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)]. Therefore, if using this form in that type of case, do not use the optional clauses in brackets that give the amounts of damages.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case or whether it is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Attorney's Certificate

If the theory of relief is res ipsa loquitur [see Evid. Code § 646 (definition)] or failure to inform of the consequences of a procedure, a certificate to that effect executed by plaintiff's counsel should be appended to the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(d)]. In that event, a certificate of merit [see § 56.61] need not be filed. Otherwise, however, the complaint is subject to a motion to strike or demurrable, and plaintiff's counsel may be subjected to discipline, if a certificate of merit is not filed in compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(a),(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(h), 411.35(f),(g); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c), (d) (respectively prohibiting special demurrers in limited civil cases and allowing motions to strike in such actions only on the ground that the damages or relief sought are not supported by the allegations of the complaint)].

[2] Use of Form

The form of certificate in [1], above, is for use by plaintiff's counsel in any action, including any cross complaint, for damages or indemnity arising out of the professional negligence of a person holding a valid architect's license issued pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq., in compliance with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35 discussed in the following subsections.

[3] Requirement of Attorney's Certificate

In any action for damages arising out of the professional negligence of a person holding a valid architect's certificate issued pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq., plaintiff's counsel is required to file a certificate as follows:

- If counsel intends to rely solely on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as defined by Evid. Code § 646, or exclusively on a failure to inform of the consequences of a procedure, or both, counsel must file a certificate to that effect, when the complaint is filed; and in that event, a certificate in the form illustrated above need not be filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(d)]. Such a certificate, when counsel relies on one or the other or both of those doctrines, may conveniently be appended to the complaint [see Form 5].

- Otherwise, counsel must, on or before the date of service of the complaint on any defendant, file and serve a certificate in the form illustrated above [see Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(a)].

The term "action" includes a complaint or cross complaint for equitable indemnity arising out of the rendition of professional services, whether or not the complaint or cross complaint specifically asserts or utilizes the terms "professional negligence" or "negligence" [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(i)].

[4] Contents of Certificate

The certificate will be one or the other of the following forms:

- An "Attorney's Certificate of Merit" declaring that counsel has reviewed the facts of the case, that counsel has consulted with and received an opinion as to the defendant's or cross defendant's professional negligence from at least one architect who is licensed to practice and practices in California or another state or teaches at an accredited college or university, who is in the same discipline as the defendant or cross defendant, who is not a party to the litigation, and whom counsel reasonably believes to be knowledgeable in the relevant issues involved in the case, and that counsel has concluded on the basis of this review and consultation that there is reasonable and meritorious cause for commencing the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b)(1)]; or

- An "Attorney's Certificate" declaring that counsel was unable to obtain the consultation referred to in Paragraph (1) because, although counsel made three separate good-faith attempts with three separate (and appropriately credentialed) architects to obtain the consultation, none of those contacted would agree to the consultation [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b)(3)].

The governing statute also provides for a third alternative, a certificate declaring that counsel "was unable to obtain the consultation required by [P]aragraph (1) because a statute of limitations would impair the action and that the certificate required by [P]aragraph (1) could not be obtained before the impairment of the action" [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b)(2)]. However, such a certificate would serve no purpose. The action may be commenced to avoid the bar of limitation, without the filing of any certificate (except when counsel relies on res ipsa loquitur or failure to inform; see § 56.60). The statute requires the filing and service of a certificate, in the form illustrated above, on or before the date of service of the complaint on any defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(a)], not on the date of filing the complaint.

[5] Multiple Defendants

Only one certificate need be filed, notwithstanding that two or more defendants may be named in the complaint or may be named at a later time [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(c)]. The certificate must be filed and served on or before the date of first service on any of the defendants [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(a)].

[6] Disclosing Consultants' Identities or Statements

Subject to Evid. Code § 912 (waiver of privilege against disclosure), an attorney who submits a certificate of merit pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b)(1) has a privilege to refuse to disclose the identity of the consultant or the substance of the consultation, and the consultant has the same privilege [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(e)].

If counsel submits a certificate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b)(3), to the effect that attempts to obtain consultation were unavailing, the court may require counsel to divulge the names of those who were contacted and refused to give consultation [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(e)].

[7] Consequences of Noncompliance With Statute

Failure to file a required certificate is a ground for demurrer to the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(h) (grounds for demurrer); but see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(c) (prohibiting special demurrers in limited civil cases)] or a motion to strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(g); see Code Civ. Proc. § 435; but see Code Civ. Proc. § 92(d) (prohibiting motions to strike in limited civil cases except on the groundthat the damages or relief sought are not supported by the allegations of the complaint)], and may subject plaintiff's counsel to discipline [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(f)].

In addition, on the favorable conclusion of the litigation with respect to any party for whom a certificate of merit was filed or should have been filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, on the motion of a party or on the court's own motion, the trial court may verify compliance with the statute by requiring the attorney for the plaintiff or cross complainant who was required to execute the certificate to reveal the name, address, and telephone number of the person or persons consulted pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(b). If the trial judge finds there has been a failure to comply with the statute, the court may order a party, a party's attorney, or both, to pay any reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by another party as a result of the failure to comply [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(h)]. For forms of motion and order under Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35(h), see §§ 56.67 and 56.68, respectively.

On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into _____ [a written or an oral] agreement whereby plaintiff employed defendant as architect for _____ [describe particular improvement, e.g., designing and installing heating equipment in plaintiff's hotel] to be carried on in _____ County, California. _____ [If contract is oral, specify pertinent portions. If contract is written, plead according to its legal effect, set forth its exact words, or attach a copy as an exhibit].

6. Thereafter, in accordance with the agreement, defendant prepared plans and specifications, blueprints, and other data for the construction [and installation], and, as provided in the agreement, rendered opinions and recommendations in connection with the foregoing.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action against an architect for damages resulting from his or her deficient design and specification of a hotel heating system. It characterizes the architect's errors as both a breach of his or her professional duty of adequate performance under the contract and a breach of the general duty to plaintiff to practice architecture with the same standard of care of architects in that locality [see Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810-811, 249 P.2d 257 ; Zurich Ins. Co. v. Kings Industries, Inc. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 919, 923, 63 Cal. Rptr. 585 (tortious breach of contract)].

This cause of action might be joined with one based on strict liability against the manufacturer and supplier of defective building material [see Ch. 460, Products Liability].

2. [Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 56.60, Paragraph 3.]

3. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was, and now is, the owner of that certain real property in _____ County, California, described as _____ [street address or other description].

4. At all times herein mentioned, defendant was, and now is, an architect duly certified by the State of California, and held, and now holds, himself out to be skilled in his/her profession in designing and in supervising construction of hotel structures.

5. On or about _____ and _____ [date], plaintiff discussed with defendant plaintiff's intention and plans for a hotel structure, with dining and banquet facilities, on the above described real property. He/She informed defendant that he/she would have a limited budget for the project, and specifically required and requested a design for a hotel, including dining and banquet facilities, which would be built for approximately $_____ and within plaintiff's budget. In addition, he/she advised that plaintiff required the structure to be complete and ready for occupancy on or before _____ [date]. Defendant represented and agreed to perform pursuant to plaintiff's requirements and requests as aforesaid.

Plaintiff, relying on the representations and on the alleged skills of defendant, and his/her agents, servants, and employees, entered into _____ [a written or an oral] contract on or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California with defendant _____ [a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and made part hereof or set forth the contract in exact words or plead according to its legal effect, e.g., that defendant draw the plans and specifications for, and superintend the construction of, a hotel building and appurtenances thereto, to be known as the _____ Hotel to be built on the herein described real property]. Defendant then drew and prepared the plans and specifications for the project and assisted plaintiff in entering into a construction contract for $_____ with _____ [name] providing for the construction to be completed prior to _____ [date].

7. Plaintiff performed all conditions, covenants, and promises of the agreement, including the payment of $_____ for fees.

8. In reliance on defendant's representations and the contract executed for the construction, plaintiff prepared to open for business on or about_____ [date], and to that end contracted for the services of _____ [number] employees and leased adjacent vacant property as a parking lot.

9. Defendant, in preparing the plans and specifications, and in rendering opinions and recommendations, negligently and carelessly designed, recommended, and specified foundations and a building which were beyond the safe load-bearing value of the soil, making the building as designed and planned inadequate, dangerous, and unsafe for use and not in conformity with standards set and required by the Building Department and Chief Building Inspector of the City of _____, California, and below the generally accepted architectural standards of the area, all of which defendant knew, or in the exercise of ordinary care by a person of his/her profession should have known, at the time he/she prepared the plans and specifications and rendered his/her opinions and recommendations.

10. _____ [Name] began work under the construction contract, leveled the land, built forms, and commenced pouring concrete footings pursuant to the plans and specifications prepared by defendant, when construction was halted on or about _____ [date], by the Chief Building Inspector of the City of _____, California, for the reason that the building designed by defendant was beyond the safe load-bearing value of the soil. Defendant thereon amended the plans and specifications and obtained consent of said Chief Building Inspector for construction to proceed pursuant to the plans and specifications as amended.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____.

2. For special damages in the sums of $_____ for fair rental value, $_____ for parking lot rental, $_____for salaries, and $_____ for lost earnings.

3. For costs of suit herein incurred.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action where the breach of duty arises from failure of architectural plans to conform to the local ordinance setting permissible building support limits, resulting in redesign of the structure and delay in its availability to plaintiff.

[3] Profits From Unestablished Business

Anticipated profits from an unestablished business may not be recoverable on the ground that they are too uncertain, unless an operating history of the business (or of a comparable one in the vicinity) can be produced [Gerwin v. Southeastern Cal. Assn. of Seventh Day Adventists (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 209, 221-222, 92 Cal. Rptr. 111 ; see also Macmorris Sales Corp. v. Kozak (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 430, 442, 69 Cal. Rptr. 719 (recovery denied where business established only a few days)]. Evidence of the later rate of profitability would support a finding of certain damages of loss of profits [see Edwards v. Container Kraft Carton etc. Co. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 752, 758-759, 327 P.2d 622 ; see also Civ. Code § 3301 (contract damages are required to be clearly ascertainable)].

Chapter 57 ART
PART I. SCOPE

§ 57.01 Scope

This chapter discusses and provides forms for use in a variety of actions and proceedings involving art. Works of art are products of the fine arts rather than industrial or mechanical arts or literary arts (including musical composition). This chapter does not relate to machinery, tools, vehicles, musical instruments, or other items of the kind that can be patented, nor does it relate to architecture. The works of art dealt with in this chapter include examples of creative endeavor that a museum or gallery of art is likely to display, even if they are products of industrial or mechanical arts (for example, armor, antiques, oriental rugs, ancient vases, and other relics). For the statutory defintions of "art" relevant to this chapter, see § 57.20.

The chapter contains the following discussions and forms:

- Discussion of the involvement of California public entities in art [see §§ 57.10 -57.13].

- Discussion of sales of fine art multiples, pursuant to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1740 et seq. [see § 57.22], a form of complaint for use in an action for restitution by an aggrieved purchaser [see § 57.130], and forms of affirmative defenses to such an action [see § 57.131].

- Discussion of the assignment, transfer, and reservation of royalty rights in fine art [see §§ 57.23 -57.26], and a form for use by an artist to recover royalty payments from the resale of a work of art pursuant to Civ. Code § 986. [see § 57.132].

- Discussion of general contract principles as they apply to art works and artists [see §§ 57.40 -57.41], and related forms of complaint [see §§ 57.133 -57.136], including one based on the negligent authentication of an art work [see § 57.136].

- Discussion of the protection of the artist's moral rights under both federal and California law [see §§ 57.50 -57.53], and forms of complaint for use by an artist to vindicate those rights [see §§ 57.150 -57.152].

- Discussion of various aspects of the bailment of art works [see §§ 57.60 -57.63], and forms for complaints and defenses relating to bailed art works [see §§ 57.160 -57.166].

- Discussion of the loan of art to a museum [see §§ 57.70 -57.79], a form of notice for use when property is loaned to a museum [see § 57.180], and a form of affirmative defense for use by a museum that damaged or destroyed a work of art as, or in the process of, necessary conservation measures [see § 57.181].

- A form of complaint for recovery after loss or theft of an art work [see § 57.190].

§ 57.10 California Arts Act

[1] Enactment

The Dixon-Zenovich-Maddy California Arts Act of 1975 (*Gov. The council meets on 8-day public notice no more than 8 times each calendar year in various places throughout the state so as to encourage broad and diverse attendance [Gov. Code § 8752].

(c) Promoting the employment of artists and those skilled in crafts in both the public and private sector;

(d) Providing for the exhibition of art works in public buildings throughout California; and

(e) Enlisting the aid of all state agencies in the task of ensuring the fullest expression of our artistic potential.

In addition, the council is to hold hearings, execute agreements, and perform any acts necessary and proper to carry out the purposes of the California Arts Act [Gov. Code § 8753(k)].

Provisions relating to the administration of the council, including the adoption of regulations, the appointment of advisory committees, and the appointment of a director and two deputies for the council by the Governor are set forth in Gov. Code §§ 8751, 8753(f)-(j), and 8754.

[4] Accepting and Awarding of Grants and Other Gifts

The council accepts for any of the purposes of the California Arts Act federal gifts, and only unrestricted gifts, donations, bequests, or grants of funds from private sources and public agencies giving careful consideration to any donor requests concerning specific dispositions [Gov. Code § 8753(l), (m)]. The council is also directed to establish grant application criteria and procedure and award prizes or direct grants to individuals or organizations in accordance with regulations the council may prescribe [Gov. Code § 8753(n), (o)]. Any grants or the funding of any program which has not been established by Gov. Code §§ 8750-8756 (California Arts Act) is prohibited [Gov. Code § 8753.5].

If any member of the council is an employee, member, director, or officer of any arts organization that has applied to the council for a grant, that member is prohibited from communicating with any other member of the council or any member of an advisory panel regarding such grant application and being present when the grant application is considered by the council or panel [Gov. Code § 8751.5.]

[1] County Art Museums

A county may acquire and manage real and personal property necessary properly to house and care for exhibits and materials comprising an art museum [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 5120, 5121]. The board of supervisors may purchase, collect, trade, exchange, or otherwise acquire exhibitions or study material proper or necessary for the use of the museum, and may sell, lend, or exchange material, according to the established custom of museums [see Pub. Res. Code § 5123]. The board may also carry on various activities related to operation of the museum, which are specified in Pub. Res. Code §§ 5124-5132 but generally include any power necessary and proper to promote the objects and purposes of a museum devoted to acquisition, exhibition, and utilization of artistic material [see Pub. Res. Code § 5120].

A county may also accept the donation of an art gallery in the same manner as a city may [Pub. Res. Code §§ 5135-5138; see [5], below].

A local agency is authorized by Gov. Code § 50331 to acquire and hold land within its boundaries for (among other purposes) erecting, rebuilding, or furnishing an art gallery. The land may be acquired by purchase or otherwise, or may be leased for a term not to exceed 50 years [see Gov. Code § 50331]. The term "local agency" as used here means city, county, or city and county [see Gov. Code § 50001].

[2] County Art Institutes

A county may construct, lease, build, rebuild, furnish, refurnish, or repair buildings for an art institute [see Gov. Code § 25351]. In the operation of a county art institute, the board of supervisors may charge fees necessary to defray the cost of instruction and may issue certificates evidencing the completion of courses of instruction to the satisfaction of the board [see Gov. Code § 25351.2].

[3] County Historical Monuments

The board of supervisors of a county may appropriate money from the general fund of the county to erect monuments to commemorate historic spots or places within the limits of the county [see Pub. Res. Code § 5109].

[4] California Pioneer Monuments

A county or a city may receive devises, bequests, donations, and gifts for the purpose of erecting within the county or city a monument in memory of California pioneers [see Pub. Res. Code § 5101], or may submit a tax initiative to the voters for that purpose [see Pub. Res. Code § 5103]. When sufficient funds are available, the monument may be erected [see Pub. Res. Code §§ 5102, 5108].

[5] City Art Galleries

Every city may accept title to real property for art gallery purposes, or permit the erection of buildings and improvements for such purposes on lands owned by the city [see Pub. Res. Code § 5135]. The governing body of the city has the same powers with respect to a city art gallery as the board of supervisors has with respect to a county art museum under Pub. Res. Code § 5120 et seq. [see Pub. Res. Code § 5138]. In addition, the city may delegate the management, operation, maintenance, and regulation of the art gallery to the donor or the donor's successors, or to boards of trustees or directors nominated by the donor and appointed by the governing body of the city on such terms and conditions as it may prescribe [see Pub. Res. Code § 5136]. In that case, certain requirements specified in Pub. Res. Code § 5137 must be met. The governing body of the city may also appropriate and expend funds for the improvement, operation, expansion, and support of the art gallery [see Pub. Res. Code § 5138].

A city art gallery is also authorized by Gov. Code § 50331, relating to local agencies (i.e., cities [Gov. Code § 50001]) [see [1], above].

Solicitation and sale by fraternal, social, political, or service organizations, when they do not constitute a major part of the organization's activities and are not conducted as a permanent or continuous operation, are not subject to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 148-148.9 [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 148.1]. An association exempt from taxation under Rev. & Tax Code § 23701d (religious, charitable, etc., corporations) is also partially exempt from regulation under *Welf. & Inst. § 57.13 Property Taxation

All property located in California, not exempt under the laws of the United States or of California, is subject to the property tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 201]. All property subject to general property taxation is assessed according to its value on the lien date [Rev. & Tax. Code § 401.3]. The lien on personal property attaches on the first day of January of each year [Rev. & Tax. Code § 11492]. The assessment of all property subject to general property taxation is made at its full value [Rev. & Tax. Code § 401]. The taxable value of personal property is its market value on the lien date or the price for which the property could be sold on the lien date [18 Cal.Code Reg. § 10].

For tax purposes, the full value of a work of art, still owned by the artist who created it and which has never been sold or exhibited for profit, is the full value of the materials which constitute the work of art [Rev. & Tax. Code § 986]. Works of art used for "free museums" are exempt from taxation [Cal. Const., art. XIII, § 3(d); Rev. & Tax. Code § 202]. Household furnishings and personal effects not held or used in connection with a trade, profession, or business are exempt [Cal. Const., art. XIII, § 3(m); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 224].

A work of art which is brought into California exclusively for purposes of public exhibition, which is used only for these purposes while in California, which is intended to be removed from California following its exhibition, which is subject to taxation in another state or a foreign country while in California, and on which all taxes due in the other state or foreign county have been paid, is exempt [Rev. & Tax. Code § 213]. For procedure in claiming the exemption, see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 251, 252.1, 254, 259, 260.

§ 57.20 Definitions of Fine Art

Civil Code sections governing creative works of the mind define the term "fine art" variously with respect to the purposes of the particular statute involved. For example, Civ. Code § 982(d)(1) defines fine art for purposes of the assignment or transfer of an artist's right (including right of reproduction) in a work as any work of visual art, including, but not limited to the following:

- A drawing, painting, sculpture, mosaic, or photograph.
- A work of calligraphy.
- A work of graphic art (including an etching, lithograph, offset print, silk screen, or a work of graphic art of like nature).
- Crafts (including crafts in clay, textile, fiber, wood, metal, plastic, and like materials).
- Mixed media (including a collage, assemblage, or any combination of the art media listed above).

This Civ. Code § 982(d)(1) definition also applies to the statutory provisions respecting art in public buildings [Gov. Code § 15813.1(b)].

Other definitions are provided in the following contexts:

- Definitions concerning the royalty rights of an artist from the sale of fine art are contained in Civ. Code § 986(c).
- The definition of fine art for purposes of preservation is contained in Civ. Code § 987(b)(2).
- For purposes of reservation of ownership rights when fine art is reproduced or displayed, the definition of fine art Civ. Code § 988(a)(2) applies.

- The definition of fine art contained in Civ. Code § 989(b)(1) governs injunctive relief to preserve or restore integrity of fine art.

- Definitions concerning the consignment of fine art are contained in Civ. Code § 1738(b).

- Definitions relating to the sale of fine prints and other fine art multiples are contained in Civ. Code § 1740.

In addition, Civ. Code § 997 provides that, in California, for any purpose, porcelain painting and stained glass artistry are to be considered a fine art.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Authentication, Valuation, Sale, and Consignment of Fine Art and Fine Art Multiples

6-57 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 57.22

§ 57.22 Sale of Fine Art Multiples

[1] In General

The law governing the sale of fine art prints was significantly expanded in 1982 to include not only prints, but also photographs, sculpture casts, collages, or similar art objects produced in more than one copy. These objects are now referred to as "fine art multiples" or "multiples" [see Civ. Code § 1740(a); see also Civ. Code § 1740(b) (definition of "fine print")]. The Legislature determined that the sale of fine art multiples affected large segments of the public, and that the marketing, in both volume and monetary value, of these objects, had substantially increased during the past two decades. The Legislature further determined that among the main questions to be answered, and about which information was necessary, in determining the value of fine art multiples in relation to their sale, were [see Stats. 1982, Ch 1320, § 10]:

- Whether the fine art multiple is properly attributed to the named artist;
- Whether the fine art multiple was signed by the artist after it was produced;
- Whether the fine art multiple is a reproduction of a work formerly created by the artist in a different medium;
- Whether the purported number of fine art multiples in a "limited edition" is the actual number; and
- Whether there are other editions of the same or virtually the same image.

[2] Sales Subject to Regulation

The provisions governing sales of fine art multiples [Civ. Code §§ 1740-1745.5] apply to the sale of any fine art multiple when offered for sale or sold at wholesale or retail for $100 or more, exclusive of any frame [Civ. Code § 1741].

[3] Disclosure by Art Dealer

Before sale or consignment of a fine art multiple into or from California, an art dealer [see Civ. Code § 1740(g) (art dealer defined)] must furnish to a purchaser or consignee a written certificate of authenticity containing all specific and relevant details and descriptive information required by Civ. Code § 1744 [see [6], below]. The information must be clearly, specifically, and distinctly addressed to each of the items required by Civ. Code § 1744 unless the required data is not applicable. The information must be in writing and be given to the purchaser or consignee at his or her request, or in any event prior to a sale or consignment. If a prospective purchaser so requests, the information must be transmitted to him or her prior to the payment or placing of an order for a multiple. If payment is made by a purchaser prior to delivery of a multiple, this information must be supplied at the time of or prior to delivery [Civ. Code § 1742(a)].

With respect to auctions, the required information may be furnished in catalogs or other written materials which are made readily available for consultation and purchase before the sale. However, a bill of sale, receipt, or invoice describing the transaction must then be provided which refers to the catalogs and lot number in which the information was supplied [Civ. Code § 1742(a)].

If an artist sells or consigns a fine art multiple of his or her own creation or conception, the artist is also bound to disclose the information required by Civ. Code § 1744 [Civ. Code § 1742(e)].

[4] Disclosure in Written Materials

An art dealer who solicits a direct sale, by inviting transmittal of payment for a specific multiple, in a catalog, prospectus, or flyer, or other written material or advertisement to be distributed in, into, or from California, must clearly set forth, in close proximity to the place in the material in which the fine art multiple is being described, the descriptive information required by Civ. Code § 1744 [Civ. Code § 1742(b)].

The art dealer may, in lieu of setting forth the information required by Civ. Code § 1744, supply the information contained in the quoted passage in Civ. Code § 1742(b) concerning disclosure requirements to the buyer before or with the delivery of the fine art multiple [Civ. Code § 1742(b)].

[5] Public Posting of Disclosure Requirement

In each place of business in California in which an art dealer is regularly engaged in sale of fine art multiples, the art dealer must post in a conspicuous place a sign which in legible format contains information informing the general public that California law provides for the disclosure in writing of certain information concerning prints, photographs, and sculpture casts, and that the information is available to the public and may be requested by a prospective buyer before purchase of a fine art multiple [Civ. Code § 1742(c)].

[6] Information Required

Except as provided below, the informational details required to be supplied in a written certificate of authenticity in all transactions for the sale or consignment of fine art multiples are contained in Civ. Code § 1744(a). The required information includes [see Civ. Code § 1744(a)]:

(1) The artist's name;

(2) If the artist's name appears on the multiple, a statement whether or not the multiple was signed by the artist;

(3) A description of the medium or process;

(4) A statement concerning certain types of reproduction of an image produced in a different medium for a purpose other than the creation of the multiple;

(5) If the previous paragraph applies and the multiple is not signed, a statement whether or not the artist authorized or approved in writing the multiple or edition;

(6) If the purported artist was deceased at the time the master was made that produced the multiple;

(7) If the multiple is a "posthumous" multiple;

(8) A statement concerning whether or not the multiple was made from a master that produced a prior limited edition;

(9) The year or approximate year the multiple was produced as to multiples produced after 1949;

(10) A statement concerning whether or not the edition is being offered as a limited edition; and

(11) Whether or not the master has been destroyed, effaced, altered, defaced, or canceled after the current edition.

Refer to Civ. Code § 1744(a) for the express informational requirements.

In addition to the above information, every certificate of authenticity must contain the following statement: "This is to certify that all information and the statements contained herein are true and correct" [Civ. Code § 1740(j)].

More limited informational details are required for multiples produced from 1950 to January 1, 1983 [see Civ. Code § 1744(c)], from 1900 to 1949 [see Civ. Code § 1744(d)], and before 1900 [see Civ. Code § 1744(e)].

[7] Exemption for Charitable Organizations

A charitable organization which conducts a sale or auction of fine art multiples is exempt from the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1744 if it posts in a conspicuous place, at the site of the sale or auction, a disclaimer of any knowledge of the information specified in that section, and includes this disclaimer in any catalog distributed by the organization with respect to the sale or auction of fine art multiples. However, an art dealer used or employed by a charitable organization to conduct the sale or auction of fine art multiples is subject to all disclosure requirements regulating the sale of fine art multiples [Civ. Code § 1742.6].

[8] Art Dealer's Disclaimer of Knowledge

An art dealer offering fine art multiples by means of a catalog, prospectus, flyer or other written material or advertisement distributed in, into, or from California, may disclaim knowledge as to any relevant detail referred to in Civ. Code § 1744. However, he or she must so state specifically and categorically with regard to each detail disclaimed to the end that the purchaser will be able to judge the degree of uniqueness or scarcity of each fine art multiple contained in the edition offered [Civ. Code §§ 1742(d), 1744.7]. For discussion of this disclaimer as a defense to an action by a purchaser, see [11][c], below.

Describing the edition as an edition of "reproductions" eliminates the need to furnish further informational details unless the edition was allegedly published in a signed, numbered, or limited edition, or any combination thereof, in which case all of the informational details are required to be furnished [Civ. Code § 1742(d)].

[9] Information Disclosed as Express Warranty

Whenever an art dealer furnishes the name of an artist pursuant to Civ. Code § 1744 for any time period after 1949, and otherwise furnishes information required under that statute for any time period relating to offers, sales, or consignments made to purchasers other than art dealers, the information conveyed forms a part of the basis of the bargain and creates an express warranty as to the information provided [Civ. Code § 1744.7; see also Civ. Code § 1744(b)]. The warranty is not negated or limited by the art dealer's failure to use the words "warrant" or "guarantee," or because he or she did not have specific intention or authority to make a warranty, or because any of the required statements represented only the dealer's opinion [Civ. Code § 1744.7].

The existence of a basis in fact for information warranted by virtue of Civ. Code § 1744.7 will not give rise to a defense in an action to enforce a given warranty. However, with respect to photographs and sculptures, produced before 1950, and other fine art multiples produced before 1900, the required information given relating to the description of the medium or process of production of the multiple [Civ. Code § 1744(a)(3)], reproduction of an image produced in a different medium [Civ. Code § 1744(a)(4)], whether the reproduction of the image from a different medium was authorized or approved by the artist [Civ. Code § 1744(a)(5)], or whether the purported artist was deceased at the time the master was made that produced the multiple [Civ. Code § 1744(a)(6)] will be sufficient if a reasonable basis in fact existed for the information provided. When information is not supplied as to any subdivision or paragraph of Civ. Code § 1744 because not applicable, this constitutes an express warranty that the paragraph is not applicable [Civ. Code § 1744.7].

[10] Liability of Consignors and Agents

An artist or art dealer who consigns a multiple to an art dealer for the purpose of effecting a sale of the multiple does not incur any liability to a purchaser if the consignor, as to the consignee, has complied with Civ. Code §§ 1740-1745.5 [Civ. Code § 1744.9(a)].

When an art dealer has agreed to sell a multiple on behalf of a consignor, who is not an art dealer, or an artist has not consigned a multiple to an art dealer but the art dealer has agreed to act as the agent for an artist for the purpose of supplying the information required, the art dealer incurs the liabilities of other art dealers as prescribed by Civ. Code §§ 1740-1745.5, as to a purchaser [Civ. Code § 1744.9(b)].

[11] Action to Enforce Liability of Art Dealer

[a] Recovery of Consideration Paid

An art dealer, including a dealer consignee, who offers or sells a fine art multiple in, into, or from California without providing the certificate of authenticity required in Civ. Code §§ 1742 and 1744 [see [1]-[10], above], is liable to the purchaser of the multiple. Liability also occurs if the information provided is mistaken, erroneous, or untrue, except for harmless errors. The purchaser may sue to recover the consideration paid by him or her for the multiple, together with interest at the legal rate, on return of the fine art multiple in the condition in which it was received [Civ. Code § 1745(a)]. It is apparent that an offer which does not ripen into a sale will not give rise to liability since recovery is based on the consideration paid for the fine art multiple.

For a form of complaint to recover consideration paid, see § 57.130.

[b] Willful Violation

If an art dealer, including a dealer consignee, willfully offered or sold a fine art multiple in violation of Civ. Code §§ 1740-1745.5, the purchaser of the multiple may recover from the art dealer an amount equal to three times the amount required under Civ. Code § 1745(a), that is the consideration paid plus interest [Civ. Code § 1745(b)].

For a form of complaint, see § 57.130.

[c] Defense of Disclaimer

In any proceeding an art dealer may rely on a disclaimer of knowledge as to any relevant information set forth in Civ. Code § 1744 for any time period. The disclaimer is effective unless the claimant is able to establish that the art dealer failed to make reasonable inquiries, according to the custom and usage of the trade, to ascertain the relevant information or that such relevant information would have been ascertained as a result of such reasonable inquiries [Civ. Code § 1745(f)].

For a form raising this affirmative defense, see § 57.131[1].

[d] Limitation of Action

No action shall be maintained to enforce any liability under Civ. Code § 1745 unless it is brought within one year after discovery of the violation on which it is based, and in no event more than three years after the print was sold [Civ. Code § 1745(c)].

[e] Recovery of Costs

In any action to enforce any provision of Civ. Code §§ 1740-1745.5, the court may allow the prevailing purchaser the costs of the action together with reasonable attorney's and expert witness's fees. In the event, however, that the court determines that an action to enforce was brought in bad faith, it may allow such expenses to the seller as it deems appropriate [Civ. Code § 1745(d)].

[f] Remedies Not Exclusive

The remedies provided by Civ. Code §§ 1745 and 1745.5 (injunctive relief) are not a bar to, nor can they be deemed inconsistent with, a claim for damages or with the exercise of additional remedies otherwise available to the purchaser [Civ. Code § 1745(e)].

[g] Injunctive Relief and Civil Penalties

Any person performing or proposing to perform an action in violation of Civ. Code § 1740 et seq. may be enjoined in any court of competent jurisdiction in California [Civ. Code § 1745.5(a)]. Injunctive relief may be sought by the Attorney General, any district or city attorney or prosecutor, or any person acting in his or her own interests or in the interests of the members of a corporation, association, or in the interests of the general public [Civ. Code § 1745.5(b)]. In addition, any person who violates any provision of Civ. Code § 1740 et seq. may also be liable for a civil penalty up to $1,000 for each violation assessed and recovered in a civil action brought in the name of the People of the State of California [Civ. Code § 1745.5(c)]. Moreover, a violator of any the above sections may be liable for a civil penalty surcharge of up to $1,000 for each violation, to be applied to the costs of enforcement [Civ. Code § 1745.5(d)]. For further discussion and forms relating to provisional and permanent relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[h] Additional Remedies in Case of Merchants of Fine Art Multiples

If a defendant is a merchant [see Com. Code § 2104 (merchant defined)] with respect to fine art multiples, or if both parties are merchants, then a plaintiff may have additional remedies under the Commercial Code, which governs sales of goods [see Com. Code § 2102; see also Com. Code § 2105 (goods defined)]. For discussion and forms relating to these remedies, see Ch. 500, Sales: Sales Under the Commercial Code .

§ 57.23 Right of Reproduction After Assignment and Transfer of Fine Art

Whenever a work of fine art is transferred, whether by sale or on commission, or otherwise, by or on behalf of the artist who created it, or by that artist's heir, legatee, or personal representative, the right of reproduction thereof is reserved to the artist or his or her heir, legatee, or personal representative until it passes into the public domain by act or operation of law, unless that right is expressly transferred by a document in writing in which reference is made to the specific right of reproduction, signed by the owner of the rights conveyed or that person's duly authorized agent. If the transfer is pursuant to an employment relationship, the right of reproduction is transferred to the employer, unless it is expressly reserved in writing. If the transfer is pursuant to a legacy or inheritance, the right of reproduction is transferred to the legatee or heir, unless it is expressly reserved by will or codicil [Civ. Code § 982(c)].

§ 57.24 Reservation of Ownership After Conveyance of Right to Reproduce or Display

Whenever an exclusive or nonexclusive conveyance of any right to reproduce, prepare derivative works based on, distribute copies of, publicly perform, or publicly display a work of art is made by or on behalf of the artist who created it or the owner at the time of the conveyance, ownership of the physical work of art remains with and is reserved to the artist or owner, as the case may be. However, the right of ownership may be expressly transferred by an instrument, note, memorandum, or other writing, signed by the artist, owner, or their duly authorized agent [Civ. Code § 988(b); see Civ. Code § 988(a) (artist and work of art defined)]. Any ambiguity with respect to the nature or extent of the rights conveyed are resolved in favor of the reservation of rights by the artist or owner, unless in any given case the federal copyright law provides to the contrary [*Civ. 6-57 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 57.25

§ 57.25 Consignment of Fine Art

[1] Delivery as Consignment

Notwithstanding any custom, practice, or usage of the trade to the contrary, whenever an artist delivers or causes to be delivered a work of fine art of the artist's own creation to an art dealer in California for the purpose of exhibition or sale on a commission, fee, or other basis of compensation, the delivery to and acceptance of the work of fine art by the art dealer constitutes a consignment [see Civ. Code § 1738(e) (consignment defined)], unless the delivery to the art dealer is pursuant to an outright sale for which the artist receives or has received full compensation for the work of fine art on delivery [Civ. Code § 1738.5].

[2] Effect of Consignment

A consignment of a work of fine art results in the following [Civ. Code § 1738.6]:

- The art dealer, after delivery of the work of fine art, is an agent of the artist for the purpose of sale or exhibition of the consigned work of fine art within California;

- The work of fine art constitutes property held in trust by the consignee for the benefit of the consignor, and is not subject to claims by a creditor of the consignee;

- The consignee is responsible for the loss of, or damage to, the work of fine art; and

- The proceeds from the sale of the work of fine art constitute funds held in trust by the consignee for the benefit of the consignor. The proceeds must first be applied to pay any balance due the consignor, unless the consignor expressly agrees otherwise in writing.

In addition, a work of fine art received as a consignment remains trust property, notwithstanding the subsequent purchase thereof by the consignee directly or indirectly for the consignee's own account until the price is paid in full to the consignor. If the work is thereafter resold to a bona fide purchaser before the consignor has been paid in full, the proceeds of the resale received by the consignee constitute funds held in trust for the benefit of the consignor to the extent necessary to pay any balance still due to the consignor, and the trusteeship continues until the fiduciary obligation of the consignee with respect to the transaction is discharged in full [Civ. Code § 1738.7].

[3] Waivers Void

Any provision of a contract or agreement whereby the consignor waives any part of the rights specified by Civ. Code §§ 1738-1738.9 is void [Civ. Code § 1738.8]. These statutes do not apply to a written contract executed prior to January 1, 1976, unless either party agrees by mutual written consent that the statutory provisions apply or the contract is extended or renewed after that date. Civ. Code §§ 1738-1738.9 prevail over any conflicting or inconsistent provisions of the Commercial Code affecting the subject matter of these statutes [Civ. Code § 1738.9].

§ 57.26 Royalty Rights of Artist

[1] Royalty Due on Sale

Except as otherwise provided by law (see below), whenever a work of fine art is sold and the seller resides in California or the sale takes place in California, the seller or the seller's agent must pay to the artist or the artist's agent five percent of the sale price. The right of the artist to receive this "royalty" is not transferable and may be waived only by a written contract providing for payment of a sum exceeding five percent of the sale price. An artist may assign the right to collect the royalty payment to another individual or entity. However, the assignment must not have the effect of creating a waiver [Civ. Code § 986(a)].

When a work of art is sold at an auction or by a gallery, dealer, broker, museum, or any other person acting as the agent of the seller, that agent must withhold five percent of the sale price, locate the artist, and pay the withheld sum to the artist [Civ. Code § 986(a)(1)]. If the seller or his or her agent cannot locate and pay the artist the sum due, within 90 days after the sale, the sum due must be transferred to the California Arts Council [Civ. Code § 986(a)(2)]. The council will deposit the sum in the Special Deposit Fund in the State Treasury and will attempt to locate the artist to whom it is due. If he or she is not located within seven years and does not file a written claim for the sum due within that period, his or her right to it terminates and the money is transferable to the council for use in acquiring fine art pursuant to the Art in Public Buildings program set forth in Gov. Code §§ 15813-15813.8 [Civ. Code § 986(a)(4), (5)].

[2] Action for Damages by Artist

If the seller or the seller's agent fails to pay an artist the five percent residual required by Civ. Code § 986(a) or fails to transfer the money to the California Arts Council as required, the artist may sue for damages [Civ. Code § 986(a)(3)].

The period of limitation is three years after the sale or one year after the artist discovers that the sale was made, whichever is longer court [Civ. Code § 986(a)(3)].

The prevailing party in the action is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees, in an amount as determined by the court [Civ. Code § 986(a)(3)].

For a form of complaint for use by an artist to recover the royalty, see § 57.132.

[3] Proceeds Exempt From Enforcement of Money Judgment

Any sum held by a seller or his or her agent for payment to an artist pursuant to Civ. Code § 986(a) is exempt from enforcement of a money judgment by the creditors of the seller or agent [Civ. Code § 986(a)(6)].

[4] Rights of Artist's Heirs

On the death of an artist, the rights and duties created under Civ. Code § 986 inure to his or her heirs, legatees, or personal representative, until the twentieth anniversary of the death of the artist [Civ. Code § 986(a)(7) (applicable only with respect to an artist who dies after January 1, 1983)].

[5] Exempt Transactions

The provisions of Civ. Code § 986(a) [see [1]-[4], above] do not apply to any of the following [Civ. Code § 986(b)]:

(1) The initial sale of a work of fine art when legal title is vested in the artist;

(2) The resale of a work of fine art for a gross sales price of less than $1,000;

(3) Resale after the artist's death, except that, pursuant to Civ. Code § 986(a)(7), the right to the five percent royalty payment inures to the artist's heirs, legatees, or personal representative for 20 years after the death of an artist who dies after January 1, 1983;

(4) The resale of the work of fine art for a gross price less than the purchase price paid by the seller;

(5) A transfer of a work of fine art which is exchanged for one or more works of fine art or for a combination of cash, other property, and one or more works of fine art when the fair market value of the property exchanged is less than $1,000;

(6) The resale of a work of fine art by an art dealer to a purchaser within 10 years of the initial sale of the work by the artist to an art dealer, provided all intervening resales are between art dealers; and

(7) A sale of a work of stained glass artistry when it has been permanently attached to real property and is sold as part of the sale of the real property. The provisions of Civ. Code § 986 (operative January 1, 1977) apply to works of fine art created before the section's operative date as well as to works created thereafter [Civ. Code § 986(d)].

§ 57.40 Artists' Contracts for Works

An artist's agreement to make a work of art is a contract for the performance of personal services [see Mackay v. Clark RigBldg. Co. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 44, 58-59, 42 P.2d 341] . Such a contract is not specifically enforceable against the artist [see Civ. Code § 3390].

As a general rule, an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of an agreement that cannot be specifically enforced [see Adams v. Williams Resorts, Inc. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 456, 463, 26 Cal. Rptr. 656 ; see also Civ. Code § 3423; Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)]. However, an injunction may be available to prevent a breach of a contract to make a work of art, provided that the contract is in writing and provides for compensation of not less than $6,000 per year for contracts entered into on or before December 31, 1993, and at higher rates in successive years for contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1994, and that the promised service is of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it a peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law [see Civ. Code § 3423; Code Civ. Proc. § 526; see also Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 235-236, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896 (construing former Civ. Code § 3423(e) prior to 1992 and 1993 amendments to the minimum annual compensation)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 528, Specific Performance .

The death or disability of the artist discharges his or her obligation [see Mackay v. Clark Rig Bldg. Co. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 44, 56-57, 42 P.2d 341] .

§ 57.41 Ascertainment of Damages

In an action based on breach of contract, no damages can be recovered that are not clearly ascertainable both in their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301]. This condition refers to the fact, not the extent or monetary value, of the plaintiff's injury [see Stott v. Johnston (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 864, 875, 229 P.2d 348] .

It appears to be the rule in California that if an item is so unusual in character that a market value cannot be determined, its value (that is, the plaintiff's damages), must be ascertained in some other rational way from elements that are attainable, such as the difficulty and expense to which plaintiff was put in acquiring the property, the nature and character of the use to which it was put by him or her, and the like [Zvolanek v. Bodger Seeds, Ltd. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 106, 109, 42 P.2d 92 (negligence); see also Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 15-16, 151 P. 286 (negligence)].

A person is competent to testify regarding the value of property that he or she owns, even though he or she is not an expert [Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 14-16, 151 P. 286 ; see also Evid. Code § 800 (opinions of nonexperts)]. When certain property has a peculiar value to a person recovering damages for deprivation thereof or injury thereto, the peculiar value may be deemed to be its value against one who had notice thereof before incurring a liability to damages in respect thereof, or against a willful wrongdoer [Civ. Code § 3355], when the property also has a market value; but this rule does not apply to property having no market value [Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 15, 151 P. 286] .

§ 57.50 Nature of Rights Protected

Some European and other nations have long recognized rights that are personal to artists and that are separate and distinct from the economic or proprietary rights of copyright. These personal rights are known as moral rights. Two species of moral rights are protected, in limited contexts, by both federal and California law, which are discussed in this subpart. The protected moral rights are the right of attribution and the right of integrity. For further discussion of moral rights generally, and of the rights of attribution and integrity specifically, see M. Nimmer on Copyright, Moral Rights, Ch. 8D.

The right of attribution includes the right of an artist to be known as the author of his or her work, to prevent others from being named as the author of his or her work, and to prevent others from falsely attributing to that artist authorship of work that he or she has not created. The right of integrity includes an artist's right to prevent others from making deforming changes to the artist's work [M. Nimmer on Copyright, § 8D.03]. At the federal level and in the context of narrowly defined "works of visual art," these rights are set forth in 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a) [see § 57.52[3], below]. In California, and in the context of narrowly defined works of "fine art," these rights are set forth in Civ. Code § 987(c) and (d) [see § 57.53[1], below].

D. Protection of Artist's Moral Rights Under Federal and State Law

6-57 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 57.51

§ 57.51 Preemption of State Statutory and Common Law by Federal Law

[1] In General

On or after June 1, 1991, all legal or equitable rights that are equivalent to any of the rights conferred by 17 U.S.C. § 106A relative to works of visual art to which the rights conferred by 17 U.S.C. § 106A apply are governed exclusively by 17 U.S.C. §§ 106A and 113(d) and by the provisions of the Copyright Act of 1976 relating to those sections. Thereafter, no person is entitled to any such right or equivalent right in any work of visual art under the common law or statutes of any state [17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(1)]. Thus, federal statutes protecting and providing a cause of action for violation of the rights of attribution and integrity preempt California law protecting and providing a cause of action for violation of the same rights [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)].

If a state attempts to grant an artist the rights of attribution or integrity for works of visual art as defined in the federal moral rights law, those state laws are preempted. For example, the federal moral rights law preempts Civ. Code § 987 as it applies during an artist's lifetime, at least to the artist's right of integrity in a work of fine art [see Civ. Code § 987(b)(2)] created on or after June 1, 1991. The California statute is preempted in this respect even though Civ. Code § 987 is broader than the federal law, inasmuch as the California statute provides a right of integrity with respect to covered works without regard to injury to the author's honor or reputation [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1990); compare 17 U.S.C. §§ 101, 106A with Civ. Code § 987, discussed in § 57.53].

[2] Exceptions

Nothing in the federal preemption statute, however, annuls or limits any rights or remedies under the common law or statutes of any state with respect to the following [17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(2)]:

- Any cause of action from undertakings commenced before June 1, 1991;

- Activities violating legal or equitable rights that are not equivalent to any of the rights conferred by 17 U.S.C. § 106A relative to works of visual art; or

- Activities violating legal or equitable rights that extend beyond the life of the author.

Consistent with current law on preemption for economic (copyright) rights, federal moral rights law will not preempt state causes of action relating to works that are not covered by federal moral rights law, such as audiovisual works and photographs produced for nonexhibition purposes [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1990); see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work of visual art" defined), discussed under § 57.52[2], below]. Similarly, state laws governing artists' rights that grant rights not equivalent to those accorded under the federal law are not preempted, even when they relate to works covered by the federal moral rights law. For example, the federal law will not preempt a cause of action for a misattribution of a reproduction of a work of visual art [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1990)]. Nor will it preempt a cause of action for violation of a right to a resale royalty under Civ. Code § 986 [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1990); see Civ. Code § 986, discussed in § 57.26, above].

With respect to activities violating legal or equitable rights that extend beyond the life of the author (subparagraph (3), above), federal moral rights law will not preempt a cause of action under Civ. Code § 987(e) for violation of an attribution or integrity right when the work is otherwise covered by the federal moral rights law but the violation occurred within 50 years after the artist's death [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(2)(C); Civ. Code § 987(g)(1); see also discussion under § 57.53[3], below].

Finally, state law causes of action such as those for misappropriation, unfair competition, breach of contract, and deceptive trade practices are not preempted by the federal moral rights law [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 21 (1990)].

§ 57.52 Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990

[1] Federal Protection of Artist's Rights of Attribution and Integrity

The Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 is a set of amendments to various provisions of the Copyright Act of 1976 (17 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.) that protects both the reputations of certain visual artists and the works of art they create. It provides these artists with the rights of attribution and integrity. The right of attribution ensures that artists are correctly identified with the works of art they create and that they are not identified with works created by others. The right of integrity allows artists to protect their works against modifications and destructions that are prejudicial to their honor or reputations. Together, these rights enable visual artists to protect the integrity of their works and the fact of their authorship [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 5 (1990)].

[2] Protected Works of Visual Art

A "work of visual art" is any of the following [17 U.S.C. § 101]:

- A painting, drawing, or print, existing in a single copy or in a limited edition of 200 copies or fewer that are signed and consecutively numbered by the author;

- A sculpture existing in a single copy or in multiple cast, or carved or fabricated sculptures of 200 or fewer that are consecutively numbered by the author and bear the signature or other identifying mark of the author; or

- A still photographic image produced for exhibition purposes only, existing in a single copy that is signed by the author, or in a limited edition of 200 copies or fewer that are signed and consecutively numbered by the author.

The general protective principle operative in these definitions is that protection is limited to originals, that is, to works created in single copies or limited editions. Reproductions are not protected [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 9 (1990)].

In an action for infringement of attribution or integrity rights, the author ordinarily has the burden of showing that the particular work falls within the definition set forth in 17 U.S.C. § 101 [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 13 (1990)].

[3] Works Not Protected

A work of visual art excludes a host of articles and art forms, in whole or in part, specified in 17 U.S.C. § 101, and including applied art and motion pictures or other audiovisual works. Reproductions are not protected [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 9 (1990)]. Protected visual art also does not include merchandising, advertising, promotional, or packaging material. Finally, protected visual art does not include any work made for hire [17 U.S.C. § 101; see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work made for hire" defined)] and any work not subject to copyright protection under the Copyright Act of 1976 [17 U.S.C. § 101]. The following 13 factors are to be considered in determining whether a work was produced for hire (by an employee) or by an independent contractor [Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid (1989) 490 U.S. 730, 751-752, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 ; Carter v. Helmsley-Spear, Inc. (2d Cir. 1995) 71 F.3d 77, 85] :

- The hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished.
- The skill required.
- The source of the instrumentalities and tools.
- The location of the work.
- The duration of the relationship of the parties.
- Whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party.
- The extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work.
- The method of payment.
- The hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants.
- Whether the work is part of the regular business or the hiring party.
- Whether the hiring party is in business.
- The provision of employee benefits.
- The tax treatment of the hired party.

A sculpture made in the lobby of defendants' building was found to be a work for hire, and thus excluded from the protection of the act on the basis of the following criteria [Carter v. Helmsley-Spear, Inc. (2d Cir. 1995) 71 F.3d 77, 86-88] :

- The contract gave the hiring party the right to require the artists to perform other related projects.
- The artists were assigned and did complete projects in other places in the building.

- The hiring party paid payroll and social security taxes.
- The hiring party provided life, health, and liability insurance and paid vacations.
- The hiring party contributed to unemployment insurance and workers' compensation funds on the artists' behalf.
- Two of the three artists filed for unemployment benefits after their positions were terminated.
- Each artist was paid a weekly salary for the two years it took to complete the work.
- The artists agreed to work principally for the defendants for the duration of the agreement on a 40-hour per week basis.
- Most of the supplies used to create the sculpture were provided by defendants.
- Artists could not hire paid assistants without defendants' approval.

[4] Right of Attribution

[a] To Claim Authorship

The author of a work of visual art has the right of attribution to claim authorship of that work [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(1)(A)].

[b] To Prevent Attribution of Authorship to Work Not Created by Author

Additionally, the author of a work of visual art has the attribution right to prevent the use of his or her name as the author of any work of visual art that he or she did not create [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(1)(B)].

[c] To Prevent Attribution of Authorship to Modified Work

Finally, the author of a work of visual art has the combined right of attribution and integrity to prevent the use of his or her name as the author of the work in the event of a distortion, mutilation, or other modification of the work that would be prejudicial to the author's honor or reputation [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(2)].

It is not clear whether this right applies when the modification is the result of the passage of time or the inherent nature of the materials of which the work is made [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(1)]. It is also not clear whether this right applies when the modification is made without gross negligence as the result of either conservation or the public presentation of the work [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(2); see also H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1990)]. On the other hand, the rights of integrity (discussed under [5], below) clearly do not apply when modification of the work is the result of these factors [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(1), (2); see also H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1990)].

All of the rights of attribution are subject to the fair use limitations of the Copyright Act of 1976 [see 17 U.S.C. § 107] and independent of the exclusive rights of copyright afforded the owner of the copyright in the work [see 17 U.S.C. § 106]. For discussion of fair use and exclusive rights of copyright, see Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright .

[e] Attribution Right Inapplicable to Specified Depictions

These attribution rights do not apply to any use of a work in connection either with a work made for hire or with any of the art forms and articles excluded by statute from the definition of a work of visual art. Furthermore, any such use of the work is not a prejudicial modification of the work giving rise to the author's right to prevent the use of his or her name in connection with the work [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(3); see also 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work of visual art" defined), discussed under [2], above]. This exception operates, for example, when a magazine includes a photograph of a work, such as a painting or a piece of sculpture, that meets the definition of a "work of visual art." The depiction of that work in the photograph is not a violation of the painter's or sculptor's right of attribution [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1990)].

[5] Right of Integrity

[a] To Prevent Modification of Work

The author of a work of visual art has the integrity right to prevent any intentional distortion, mutilation, or other modification of the work that would be prejudicial to the author's honor or reputation. Any intentional distortion, mutilation, or modification of that work is a violation of this right [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3)(A)].

This right is subject to both the fair use and building incorporation limitations of the Copyright Act of 1976 [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3); see 17 U.S.C. §§ 107 (fair use, discussed in Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright), 113(d) (artwork incorporated in buildings, discussed under [d], below)]. The right is also independent of the exclusive rights of copyright afforded the owner of the copyright in the work [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3); see 17 U.S.C. § 106, discussed in Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright].

A modification that is a result of the passage of time or the inherent nature of the materials is not a distortion, mutilation, or other modification [17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(1)]. Additionally, a modification that is the result of conservation or of the public presentation of the work (including lighting and placement) is not a destruction, distortion, mutilation, or other modification as described, unless the modification is caused by gross negligence [17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(2)]. Generally, the removal of a work from a specific location comes within the presentation exclusion because location is a matter of presentation, unless the work cannot be removed without causing the kinds of actionable modifications discussed, above. Therefore, despite the statutory grant of the right of integrity, galleries and museums continue to have normal discretion to light, frame, and place works of art. Nevertheless, conduct that goes beyond presentation of a work to physical modification of it is actionable [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1990)].

[b] To Prevent Destruction of Work of Recognized Stature

Furthermore, the author of a work of visual art has an integrity right that prevents any destruction of a work of recognized stature. Any intentional or grossly negligent destruction of that work is a violation of that right [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3)(B)]. This right is also subject to the fair use and building incorporation limitations and independent of the rights of copyright of the Copyright Act of 1976 [17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3); see 17 U.S.C. §§ 106, 107, 113(d)].

A modification of the work, however, that is the result of conservation or of the public presentation of the work, including lighting and placement, is not a destruction of the work as described above, unless the modification is caused by gross negligence [17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(2)]. Presentation issues are discussed under [a], above.

It is not clear exactly what a work "of recognized stature" is. The legislative history surrounding enactment of the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 seems to indicate that such a work presupposes the artist has a preexisting standing in the artistic community, and that the artist would be required to prove that standing in any action to enforce the integrity right related to such a work. There is also an indication that this proof would entail expert witness testimony to provide evidence of the work's "recognized" stature [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 15 (1990)]. Persuasive assistance in the proof of recognized stature may perhaps be found in the California moral rights law. Under the applicable statute, in determining whether a work of fine art is of "recognized quality" for purposes of enforcement of moral rights, the trier of fact is instructed to rely on the opinions of artists, art dealers, fine art collectors, art museum curators, and other persons involved with the creation or marketing of fine art [see Civ. Code § 987(f); see also Civ. Code § 987(b)(2) (defining "fine art" as being of "recognized quality")].

[c] Integrity Right Inapplicable to Specified Depictions

Any reproduction, depiction, portrayal, or other use of a work in connection either with a work made for hire or with any of the art forms specified by statute as not constituting a work of visual art is not a modification of the work giving rise to the author's integrity rights [17 U.S.C. § 106A(c)(3); see 17 U.S.C. § 101 ("work of visual art" defined), discussed under [2], above]. For example, this exception applies when a motion picture includes a scene set in an art gallery. The showing in the motion picture of a painting on display in the gallery, when the painting qualifies as a "work of visual art," does not violate the painter's integrity rights [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1990)].

[d] Inapplicable to Work Incorporated in Building

If a work of visual art has been incorporated in or made part of a building in such a way that the work cannot be removed from the building without causing modification or destruction of the work in a way that would be prejudicial to the author's honor or reputation, none of the author's integrity rights of 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(2) and (3) apply. Similarly, none of the integrity rights apply if the author consented to installation of the work in the building either before June 1, 1991, or in a written instrument, signed by both the building owner and the author, executed on or after June 1, 1991, that specifies that installation of the work may subject the work to destruction, distortion, mutilation, or other modification because of its removal [17 U.S.C. § 113(d)(1)].

If, however, a work of visual art has been incorporated in or made part of a building in such a way that the work can be removed from the building without any modification of the work that would be prejudicial to the artist's honor or reputation, the artist's integrity rights under 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(2) and (3) apply, subject to the occurrence of either of the following conditions [17 U.S.C. § 113(d)(2)]:

- The building owner desiring to remove the work has made a diligent, good faith, but unsuccessful, attempt to notify the author of the owner's intended action affecting the work. An owner is presumed to have made a diligent, good faith attempt to send notice if the owner sent the notice by registered mail to the author at the author's most recent address as recorded with the Register of Copyrights pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 113(d)(3). If the work is removed at the author's expense, title to that copy of the work is deemed to be in the author; or

- The owner did provide written notice but the person so notified failed, within 90 days after receiving the notice, either to remove the work or to pay for its removal.

The Register of Copyrights is required by law to establish a recording system to make this notice scheme work [see 17 U.S.C. § 113(d)(3)].

[6] Ownership of Rights

Only the author of a work of visual art has the rights of attribution and integrity in that work, whether or not the author is the copyright owner. The authors of a joint work of visual art are coowners of these rights [17 U.S.C. § 106A(b)].

[7] Duration of Rights

With respect to works of visual art created on or after June 1, 1991, the rights of attribution and integrity endure for the life of the author [17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(1)].

With respect to works of visual art created before June 1, 1991, but to which title has not been transferred from the author as of June 1, 1991, the rights of attribution and integrity are coextensive with, and expire at the same time as, the exclusive rights conferred on a copyright owner by 17 U.S.C. § 106 [17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(2)]. The duration of copyright, and therefore of the attribution and integrity rights, depends on when the work was created or published or when it first acquired a copyright [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 302-304; for further discussion of the duration of copyright, see Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright]. It is important to note, however, that, in some instances, the attribution and integrity rights of these works will be of longer duration than those of works created on or after June 1, 1991, and in some cases may even extend beyond the life of the author [see, e.g., 17 U.S.C. § 302(a) (copyright in work created on or after January 1, 1978, endures generally for term consisting of life of author plus 70 years)]. It appears from the language of 17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(2) that, when the moral rights in the work subsist beyond the life of the author, they may be devised to the author's beneficiaries or inherited by the author's heirs [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(2); see also 17 U.S.C. § 201(d)(1) (transfer of ownership of copyright by will or intestate succession)]. It also appears, however, that this language is at odds with the statutory prohibition against the transfer of moral rights [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(e)(1), discussed under [8], below].

In the case of a joint work prepared by two or more authors, the rights of attribution and integrity endure for the life of the last surviving author [17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(3)].

All terms of the rights of attribution and integrity run to the end of the calendar year in which they expire [17 U.S.C. § 106A(d)(4)].

[8] Assignment, Transfer, and Waiver of Rights

The rights of attribution and integrity cannot be assigned or otherwise transferred [17 U.S.C. § 106A(e)(1)]. An assignment or transfer to third parties is contrary both to the personal nature of the rights and to the legislative purpose of strictly controlling the circumstances under which the author chooses to exercise these rights [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 19 (1990)]. Because the rights also die with the author when the work is created on or after June 1, 1991, the rights in works created on or after that date cannot be devised to the author's beneficiaries or inherited by the author's heirs, in contradistinction to the operation of the California moral rights statute [see Civ. Code § 987(g)(1)].

The rights may, however, be waived if the author expressly agrees to a waiver in a writing signed by the author. The writing must specifically identify the work, and the uses of that work, to which the waiver applies. The waiver can apply only to the work and uses so identified. Blanket waivers are prohibited [17 U.S.C. § 106A(e)(1); H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 19 (1990)]. Furthermore, according to legislative history, the waiver applies only to the specific person to whom the waiver is made, and that person cannot subsequently transfer that waiver to a third party. Any third party must obtain a waiver directly from the author [see H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 18-19 (1990)].

In the case of a joint work prepared by two or more authors, a waiver of rights made by one joint author waives the same rights for all joint authors [17 U.S.C. § 106A(e)(1)].

Ownership of the rights of attribution and integrity with respect to a work of visual art is distinct from ownership of any copy of that work or of a copyright or any exclusive right under a copyright in that work. Transfer of ownership of any copy of a work of visual art, or of a copyright or any exclusive right under a copyright, does not constitute a waiver of the rights of attribution and integrity. Except as may otherwise be agreed by the author in a writing signed by the author, a waiver of the rights of attribution and integrity with respect to a work of visual art does not constitute a transfer of ownership of any copy of that work, or ownership of a copyright or of any exclusive right under a copyright in that work [17 U.S.C. § 106A(e)(2)].

[9] Civil Action for Enforcement of Rights

[a] Availability

The author of the work is entitled to institute an action for any infringement of the rights of attribution or integrity committed while he or she is the holder of those rights [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 106A(e), 501(b); for a form of complaint for infringement of attribution and integrity rights, see § 57.150[1]]. An infringement is any violation of the attribution or integrity rights as provided in 17 U.S.C. § 106A [see 17 U.S.C. § 501(a); see also 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)]. An infringement action is only available for any cause of action from undertakings commenced on or after June 1, 1991 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(1), (2)(A)]. Note that the author retains this right of action as long as he or she is the holder of the rights, even if he or she does not own the work or the copyright in the work [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a), (e)].

An infringer of the rights is anyone who violates those rights. "Anyone" includes any State, any instrumentality of a state, and any officer or employee of a state or instrumentality of a state acting in an official capacity. Any state, and any instrumentality, officer, or employee, is subject to the provisions of the Copyright Act of 1976 in the same manner and to the same extent as any nongovernmental entity [17 U.S.C. § 501(a)].

[b] Period of Limitation

An artist's action to enforce the rights of attribution and integrity must be commenced within three years after the claim has accrued [17 U.S.C. § 507(b)].

[c] Remedies

With the exception of the imposition of criminal penalties [see 17 U.S.C. § 506(f)], any remedy that is applicable under the Copyright Act of 1976 for infringement of copyright is applicable to the owner of attribution and integrity rights in an action to enforce and prevent the violation of those rights [see 17 U.S.C. § 501(b)]. These remedies are money damages [17 U.S.C. § 504(b)], profits [17 U.S.C. § 504(b)], special damages in certain cases [see 17 U.S.C. § 504(d)], temporary and final injunctive relief [17 U.S.C. § 502(a)], and the equitable relief of seizure [17 U.S.C. § 509], impoundment [17 U.S.C. § 503(a)], destruction [17 U.S.C. § 503(b)], and forfeiture [17 U.S.C. § 509]. These remedies are discussed in Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright].

To the degree that costs, attorney's fees, and interest are applicable in an action for infringement of copyright under the Copyright Act of 1976 [see 17 U.S.C. § 505], they are applicable in an action under the Act for the enforcement of attribution and integrity rights [see 17 U.S.C. § 501(a)]. The recovery of items is discussed in Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright .

[d] Defenses

The defenses of fair use and waiver of rights are specifically applicable in an action for infringement of moral rights, in addition to any other available defenses [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a), (e); see generally Cort v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Cos. (9th Cir. 2002) 311 F.3d 979 (when building owner obliterated mural that had been painted on side of building as public-art project, and artists sued under VARA, building owner's property insurer had no duty to defend because artists' claims could not be construed as alleging any cause of action within personal injury or advertising injury coverage of insurance policy)]. For a discussion of fair use, see Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Protection of Artist's Moral Rights Under Federal and State Law

6-57 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 57.53

§ 57.53 California Art Preservation Act

[1] Prohibition Against Alteration or Destruction of Fine Art

Works of fine art are an expression of an artist's personality. The physical alteration or destruction of a work of fine art is detrimental to the artist's reputation, and therefore artists have an interest in protecting their works against alteration or destruction. There is also a public interest in preserving the integrity of cultural and artistic creations [Civ. Code § 987(a)]. To protect these interests, the Legislature enacted the California Art Preservation Act (Civ. Code § 987). Organizations seeking to preserve the integrity of cultural and artistic creations may seek injunctive relief pursuant to Civ. Code § 989 [see [5][d], below].

The act provides that no person, except an artist (defined in Civ. Code § 987(b)(1)) who owns and possesses a work of fine art that he or she has created, may intentionally commit or authorize the intentional commission of any physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction of a work of fine art [Civ. Code § 987(c)(1)]. Additionally, no person who frames, conserves, or restores a work of fine art may personally commit, or authorize the commission of, any physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction of a work of fine art by an act of gross negligence. The term "gross negligence" means the exercise of so slight a degree of care as to justify the belief that there was an indifference to the particular work of fine art [Civ. Code § 987(c)(2)].

There is no implied remedy for destruction due to simple negligence [Lubner v. City of Los Angeles (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 525, 530, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24 (truck crashed into artists' home; no recovery under section 987, common law, or 17 U.S.C. § 106A)]. Similarly, the artist cannot recover damages for emotional distress in a case involving destruction of art works due to simple negligence [Lubner v. City of Los Angeles (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 525, 533-534, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24] .

It appears that Civ. Code § 987 has been preempted by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [17 U.S.C. § 301(f); Lubner v. City of Los Angeles (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 525, 531, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24 ; accord, Cort v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Cos. (9th Cir. 2002) 11 F.3d 973 n.1]. For discussion of the extent of preemption, see § 57.51.

[2] Artist's Right of Attribution

The artist retains at all times the right to claim authorship or, for just and valid reason, to disclaim authorship of his or her work of fine art [Civ. Code § 987(d)].

For discussion of the extent of preemption of state law by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)], see § 57.51.

[3] Action by Artist to Enforce Rights Under Act

To effectuate the rights created by Civ. Code § 987, the artist may commence an action to recover or obtain (1) injunctive relief, (2) actual damages, (3) punitive damages, (4) reasonable attorney's and expert witness's fees, and (5) any other relief the court deems proper. In the event that punitive damages are awarded, the court must, in its discretion, select an organization or organizations engaged in charitable or educational activities involving the fine arts in California to receive those damages [Civ. Code § 987(e)]. This action is available only for intentional damage or destruction of the work of art [see Civ. Code § 987(c)(1) set forth at [1], above]. For a form of complaint, see § 57.151.

No action may be maintained to enforce any liability under Civ. Code § 987 unless brought within three years of the act complained of or one year after discovery of the act, whichever is longer [Civ. Code § 987(i)].

A work of fine art for purposes of Civ. Code § 987 must be of recognized quality [see Civ. Code § 987(b)(2) ("fine" art defined)]. In determining whether a work of fine art is of recognized quality, the trier of fact must rely on the opinions of artists, art dealers, collectors of fine art, curators of art museums, and other persons involved with the creation or marketing of fine art [Civ. Code § 987(f)].

For discussion of the extent of preemption of state law by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)], see § 57.51.

[4] Scope of Waiver of Rights

The rights and duties created under Civ. Code § 987 exist, with respect to the artist or, if any artist is deceased, to his or her heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative, until the 50th anniversary of the artist's death [Civ. Code § 987(g)(1)]. The rights and duties also exist in addition to any other rights and duties that may now or in the future be applicable [Civ. Code § 987(g)(2)]. Additionally, except as provided for works of art permanently attached to a building, these rights and duties may not be waived except by a written instrument expressly so providing which is signed by the artist [Civ. Code § 987(g)(3)].

For discussion of the extent of preemption of state law by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)], see § 57.51.

[5] Work of Art Attached to Building

[a] In General

The California Art Preservation Act protects works of fine art that are attached to buildings. Murals come within the statutory definition of "fine art," but graffiti is not protected [Botello v. Shell Oil Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1130, 1134, 1134 n.2, 280 Cal. Rptr. 535] .

The rights and duties created under the Act are deemed waived when a work of fine art cannot be removed from a building without substantial physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction, unless expressly reserved in a written instrument that is signed by the owner of the building, contains a legal description of the property, and is properly recorded. If properly recorded, the written reservation is binding on subsequent owners of the building involved [Civ. Code § 987(h)(1)].

For discussion of the extent of preemption of state law by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)], see § 57.51.

[b] Notice to Artist of Removal

In cases in which the work of fine art can be removed from a building without substantial harm to the work, the rights and duties created under the act apply if the owner of the building, in the course of or after removal, intends to cause or allow the work to suffer physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction. The rights and duties do not apply if the owner (1) has diligently attempted without success to notify the artist or, if the artist is deceased, the artist's heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative in writing of his or her intention affecting the work, or (2) provided notice and the artist or other person notified failed within 90 days either to remove the work or to pay for its removal. If the work is removed at the expense of the artist or his or her heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative, title to the fine art passes to that person [Civ. Code § 987(h)(2)].

If the work of fine art can be removed from a building scheduled for demolition without substantial physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction of the work, and the owner of the building either owns the work or has notified the owner of the work of the scheduled demolition, and the owner of the work elects not to remove the work, the rights and duties created under the act apply. The rights and duties do not apply, however, if the owner of the building (1) has diligently attempted without success to notify the artist or, if the artist is deceased, his or her heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative in writing of the intended action affecting the work, or (2) did provide notice and that person failed within 90 days either to remove the work or to pay for its removal. If the work is removed at the expense of the artist or his or her heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative, title to the fine art passes to that person [Civ. Code § 987(h)(3)].

[c] Public Notice of Removal

An owner of real property who wishes to remove a work of fine art of recognized quality and of substantial public interest [see Civ. Code § 989(b)(1) ("fine art" defined)] that is part of the real property, and that can be removed without substantial harm, but that the owner intends to allow to suffer physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction, may be required to give public notice of the removal [see Civ. Code § 989(e)(2)]. Either concurrently or after the 90-day notice required by Civ. Code § 987(h)(2) of an owner's intent to remove a work of fine art that will cause substantial harm to that work [see [b], above], to which the artist or his or her heir, beneficiary, devisee, or personal representative has not responded, the owner is required to provide 30 days' notice of his or her intended action. The written notice must be a display advertisement in a newspaper of general circulation in the area where the fine art is located [Civ. Code § 989(e)(2)(A)]. An organization acting in the public interest [see Civ. Code § 989(b)(2) ("organization" defined)] may respond within the 30-day period by agreeing to remove the work and paying the cost of removal [see Civ. Code § 989(b)(3) ("cost of removal" defined)]. Payment and removal must occur within 90 days of the first day of the 30-day notice. In this event, title to the fine art work passes to that organization [Civ. Code § 989(e)(2)(A)(i), (ii)]. If an organization does not agree to remove the work or fails to remove and pay the cost of removal within the applicable periods, the owner may take the intended action affecting the work [Civ. Code § 989(e)(2)(B)].

[d] Action for Injunctive Relief by Organization

An organization acting in the public interest may commence an action for injunctive relief to preserve or restore the integrity of a work of fine art from acts prohibited by Civ. Code § 987(c) [Civ. Code § 989(c); see [1], above]. If it appears that a work of fine art cannot be removed from real property without substantial physical harm to the work, an organization, nonetheless, may offer some evidence as to the likelihood that the work can be removed from the property without substantial harm. If the organization can present that evidence and is prepared to pay the cost of the removal, it may bring a legal action for a determination of this issue. The organization is entitled to injunctive relief to preserve the integrity of the work of fine art, but has the burden of proof in the action. The action must commence within 30 days after filing. The action is unavailable if the organization's interest is in conflict with a written reservation of rights binding against the building owner under Civ. Code § 987(h)(1) [Civ. Code 989(e)(1); see discussion under [5][a], above].

The court may award reasonable attorney's and expert witness's fees to the prevailing party, and require the organization to post a bond in a reasonable amount [Civ. Code § 989(f)]. The action for injunctive relief must be brought within three years of the act complained of, or one year after discovery of the act, whichever is longer [Civ. Code § 989(g)].

§ 57.60 Elements of Bailment Agreement

[1] In General

A bailment is the delivery of personal property to a person for some special object or purpose, on a contract, express or implied, to conform to the objects or purposes of delivery, which may be as various as the transactions of men [Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 850, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39] .

In order to constitute a bailment, possession of the bailed article must be given or delivered to the bailee [Garcia v. Halsett (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 319, 324, 82 Cal. Rptr. 420] . A bailee cannot be responsible for redelivering that which has not been delivered to him [Porter v. Los Angeles T. Club (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 840, 842 , 105 P.2d 956] .

[2] Storage or Depositary for Hire

A bailment for storage otherwise than gratuitously is termed a depositary for hire [Civ. Code § 1851]. A depositary for hire, including an artisan in the position of a depositary for hire [see [3], below], has a lien for the following [Civ. Code § 1856]:

- Storage charges.
- Advances and insurance incurred at the request of the bailor.
- Money necessarily expended in and about the care, preservation, and keeping of the property stored.
- Money advanced at the request of the bailor, to discharge a prior lien.
- Expenses of sale to satisfy a valid lien.

The bailee of a stored work of art may not use it or permit it to be used, for any purpose, without the bailor's consent [see Civ. Code § 1835]. If the bailee does use the stored work wrongfully, then he or she is liable for any damage happening to it during the wrongful use, except damage that must have inevitably happened even though the bailee had not so used it [see Civ. Code § 1836]. For a form of complaint for damages based on wrongful use of an art work by a bailee for storage, see § 57.163.

[3] Bailment for Repair, Alteration, or Improvement

[a] Bailment Implied

When bailee has possession of a work of art for the purpose of repair, alteration, or improvement, the bailment is a mere incident to the conduct of the business from which the bailee derives profits (i.e., repairing, altering, or improving works of art). The bailment is for the mutual benefit of the parties, even though the bailee may receive no compensation for the bailment as such [see Civ. Code §§ 1858-1858.3]. One who becomes a bailee for the purpose of repair, alteration, or improvement is a depositary for hire [see Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 532, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770] . Even though a bailment was not expressly created by the parties' agreement, if a bailment is an incidental service to the principal transaction, the law will deem it included in the agreement [see Franklin v. Southern Pacific Co. (1928) 203 Cal. 680, 683, 265 P. 936] .

An artisan who is entrusted with a work of art for the purpose of applying skilled labor to it and who gives it to another person for this purpose does not thereby breach the bailment agreement unless he or she was expressly or impliedly required to perform the labor personally [see Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905] .

[b] Liens

An artisan in the position of a depositary for hire has the lien described in Civ. Code § 1856 [see [2], above]. An artisan also has a special possessory lien as provided in Civ. Code § 3051 on property with respect to which he or she has rendered a service, for any compensation due him or her [see Civ. Code § 3051].

[c] Notification of Lack of Insurance

A person who in the ordinary course of business regularly receives property from customers for the purpose of repair or alteration is required, on accepting property from a customer, to present the customer with a written receipt that includes the statement, if that is the case, that the deposited property is not insured or protected to the amount of its actual cash value by the depositary against loss occasioned by theft, fire, and vandalism while the property remains with the depositary [Civ. Code §§ 1858(b), 1858.1]. Failure to furnish the receipt or statement, or the making of any misrepresentation in the receipt, makes the depositary strictly liable to the customer for any loss occasioned by theft, fire, or vandalism while the property remains with the depositary [see Civ. Code § 1858.2]. A depositary who is insured or self-insured to protect property deposited by customers for loss or damage occasioned by theft, fire, or vandalism while property remains in his or her possession is not required to make or deliver the statement to the customer [see Civ. Code § 1858.3].

As a further consequence, a depositary who becomes liable under Civ. Code § 1858.2, forfeits any lien or other right to hold the property arising from services rendered in holding, repairing, altering, or selling the property [see Civ. Code § 1858.2]. Liability imposed on a depositary under Civ. Code § 1858.2, is deemed to have been imposed for the commission of a willful act for the purposes of Ins. Code § 533, which provides that an insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured [see Civ. Code § 1858.2].

For a form alleging that the purpose of a bailment was for the repair, alteration, or improvement of an art work, see § 57.161[1].

[4] Loan for Use

The loan of a work of art solely for the borrower's use is a contract by which the lender gives to the borrower the temporary possession and use of the work, and the borrower agrees to return it at a future time, without reward for its use [see Civ. Code § 1884]. Title is not transferred to the borrower [Civ. Code § 1885].

The borrower may use a borrowed work of art only for purposes that the lender might reasonably anticipate at the time of lending [see Civ. Code § 1890] and must not part with it to a third person without the lender's consent [see Civ. Code § 1891].

For a form alleging that the purpose of a bailment was for the use of an art work, see § 57.161[2].

[5] Rental or Lease

The rental or lease of a work of art (called "hiring" in the Civil Code) is a contract by which the lessor gives the lessee temporary possession of the work, for reward, and the lessee agrees to return it at a future time [see Civ. Code § 1925].

If a work of art is rented for a particular purpose, the lessee must not use it for any other purpose; and if the lessee does, then he or she is liable to the lessor for all damages resulting from the unauthorized use, or the lessor may elect to treat the contract as rescinded [see Civ. Code § 1930; Constantian v. Mercedes-Benz Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 631, 633, 55 P.2d 841 (art objects rented by defendant and destroyed by fire while being used in place not contemplated by agreement; defendant held liable for loss, although not negligent)].

For a form alleging that the purpose of a bailment was the rental or lease of an art work, see § 57.161[3].

§ 57.61 Bailee's Duty of Care

[1] Gratuitous Bailee

A gratuitous bailee is liable only for failure to use slight care [see Civ. Code § 1846(a); Roselip v. Raisch (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 125, 133, 166 P.2d 340] .

[2] Depositary for Hire

A depositary for hire (storage) is chargeable with "at least ordinary care" in safeguarding the bailor's property, and thus, is liable only if he or she has been guilty of some negligence [see Civ. Code § 1852]. For discussion of the standard of care, see Ch. 93, Bailments .

[3] Borrower's Duty Towards Property Loaned for Use

A borrower of a work of art must use great care for its preservation in safety and good condition [see Civ. Code § 1886]; and if he or she caused the lender to believe that he or she possesses skill in the care of the work, then he or she is bound to have and to exercise that skill in caring for it [see Civ. Code § 1888]. A borrower must repair all deteriorations of or injuries to the work that are occasioned by his or her negligence, however slight [see Civ. Code § 1889]. For a discussion of a museum's duty of care in applying conservation measures to or disposing of property on loan without a lender's permission under Civ. Code § 1899.6, see § 57.75[1].

[4] Lessee's Duty of Care

The lessee of a work of art must use ordinary care for its preservation in safety and good condition [see Civ. Code § 1928] and must repair all deteriorations or injuries occasioned by his or her want of ordinary care [see Civ. Code § 1929]. The lessee must bear all expenses concerning the rented work as might naturally be foreseen to attend it during its use by him or her [Civ. Code § 1956].

[5] Presumption Regarding Loss of or Injury to Stored Property

If a stored work of art is lost or injured during storage, and the bailee refuses to inform the bailor of the circumstances under which the loss or injury occurred (insofar as he or she has information concerning them) or willfully misrepresents the circumstances, then the bailee is presumed to have permitted the loss or injury to occur willfully or by gross negligence [see Civ. Code § 1838].

§ 57.62 Damages Recoverable for Loss of or Injury to Bailed Property

[1] Monetary Value of Property

The liability of a depositary for negligence cannot exceed the amount which he or she is informed by the depositor, or has reason to suppose, the thing deposited to be worth [Civ. Code § 1840]. If the bailor does not disclose the value of the deposited property, and the bailee has no reason to suppose that it has a special value, this limitation does not apply, and the measure of damages is the actual value of the deposited property [see Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 855, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; see also Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 368-369, 291 P. 624 (warehouseman's liability as limited to value of lost containers because bailor stated no special value for property other than to say that it was valuable, and warehouseman had no reason to know that property had any particular value)].

[2] Personal Injuries

A bailee is liable for the bailor's emotional distress if it is by negligent loss of the bailed property and the property has sentimental value, which was known to the bailee [Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 851-852, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39] . The court in Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 upheld an award for headaches and distress to plaintiff/bailor's nervous system that proximately resulted from a bailee's losing some rings which, as plaintiff had told the bailee, had great sentimental value to plaintiff.

§ 57.63 Duty to Return

[1] Stored Art Work

The bailee of a stored work of art must deliver it on demand to the person for whose benefit it was stored, whether or not there is a fixed period of storage, unless he or she has a lien on it or has been prevented or forbidden from making the delivery by the owner or by operation of law [Civ. Code § 1822]. In order to assert the excuse of prevention or prohibition by the owner or operation of law, the bailee must give prompt notice, to the person for whose benefit the work is stored, of the proceeding taken adversely to his or her interest which may tend to excuse nondelivery [Civ. Code § 1825]. Delivery is not required until demanded, even if there is a fixed period of storage [Civ. Code § 1823], and delivery must be made at the bailee's residence or place of business, whichever is more convenient for him or her [Civ. Code § 1824].

If the bailee believes that the stored work is being wrongfully detained from the owner by the bailor, the bailee may notify the owner of the bailment. If the owner does not claim the work, sufficiently establish his or her right to it, and indemnify the bailee against the claim of the bailor within a reasonable time after notification, the bailee is exonerated from liability to the owner, on returning the work to the bailor, or on assuming in good faith a new obligation changing his or her position with respect to the work, to his or her prejudice [Civ. Code § 1826].

[2] Borrowed Art Work

A work of art that is borrowed for a specified period or purpose must be returned to the lender, without demand, as soon as the period has expired or the purpose has been accomplished, but in other cases it need not be returned until demanded [Civ. Code § 1895]. Even though the lender may have lent the work for a specified period or purpose, he or she may require its return at any time; but if, on the faith of an agreement for a specified period or purpose, the borrower has made such arrangements that a premature return of the work would cause him or her loss, in excess of the benefit derived by the borrower from the loan, then the lender must indemnify the borrower for that loss if the lender compels return and provided the borrower has not in any manner violated his or her duty [Civ. Code § 1894]. The borrower must return the work to the lender at the place contemplated by the parties at the time of lending or, if no particular place was contemplated, at the place where the work was located at the time of lending [Civ. Code § 1896].

For a form of complaint based on failure to return an art work, see § 57.165.

[3] Rented Art Work

At the expiration of the term for which the work was rented, the lessee must return it to the lessor at the place contemplated by the parties at the time of renting or, if no particular place was contemplated, at the place where the work was located at the time of renting [Civ. Code § 1958].

The lessor may terminate the rental and reclaim the rented work before the end of the term agreed on when [Civ. Code § 1931]:

- The lessee uses the work or permits a use of it in a manner contrary to the agreement of the parties; or

- The lessee does not, within a reasonable time after request, make any repairs he or she is bound to make.

Termination may also come about as a result of any of the following events:

- Expiration of the rental term agreed on [Civ. Code § 1933].

- Mutual consent of the parties [Civ. Code § 1933].

- Acquisition by the lessee of a title superior to the lessor's [Civ. Code § 1933].

- Destruction of the rented work [Civ. Code § 1933].

- If the rental is terminable at the pleasure of one of the parties, by notice of that party's death or incapacity to contract [Civ. Code § 1934].

[4] Failure to Return Work as Conversion

Failure to return the deposited work of art when the bailment has been terminated and its return has been properly demanded may constitute prima facie evidence of conversion [see Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 532, 535, 294 P. 436 ; Civ. Code § 3336 (measure of damages for conversion)]. However, failure to return the deposited property because it was negligently destroyed does not constitute conversion [see George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 834, 838, 205 P.2d 1037] . Exemplary and punitive damages may be claimed in an action for conversion, given the requisite malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294; Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331] . For forms and discussion, see Ch. 150, Conversion .

For a fact situation in which defendant was held liable for conversion after appropriating two granite statues sculpted by plaintiff and left in defendant's custody, see Bufano v. City & County of San Francisco (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 61, 63-68, 43 Cal. Rptr. 223 .

§ 57.71 General Notice Requirements

When a museum is required to give a lender any notice pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899 et seq., notice is deemed to have been given if the museum mails the notice to the lender at the lender's address and proof of receipt is received by the museum within 30 days from the date the notice was mailed. If the museum does not have an address for the lender, or if proof of receipt is not received by the museum, notice shall be deemed given if the museum publishes notice at least once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in both the county in which the museum is located and the county of the lender's address, if any [Civ. Code § 1899.2(a)]. For purposes of notice, a museum is "located" in the county of the branch of the museum to which the loan is made. In all other instances, a museum is located in the county in which it has its principal place of business [Civ. Code § 1899.2(c)].

In addition to any other information required to be included pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899 et seq., all notices given pursuant to these sections must contain the lender's name; the lender's address if known; the date of the loan; and, if the notice is being given by the museum, the name, address, and telephone number of the appropriate office or official to be contacted at the museum for information regarding the loan [Civ. Code § 1899.2(b)].

§ 57.72 Notice Required by Museum

[1] Notice of Lender's Rights

If a museum [see Civ. Code § 1899.1(a) ("museum" defined)] accepts a loan of property [see Civ. Code § 1899.1(d) ("property" defined)] for an indefinite term, or for a term in excess of seven years, the museum must inform the lender in writing at the time of the loan of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1899 et seq. The form notice set forth in Civ. Code § 1899.5 or a citation to the code sections is sufficient [Civ. Code § 1899.3(a) (governing loans of property accepted on or after January 1, 1984); for a form of notice, see § 57.180[1]]. Unless the loaned property is returned to the claimant, the museum must retain for a period of not less than 25 years the original or an accurate copy of each notice filed by a claimant pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.4 [Civ. Code § 1899.3(b); see § 57.73].

[2] Receipt for Notice of Intent to Preserve Interest

The museum must also furnish anyone who files a notice of interest in loaned property proof of receipt of the notice by mailing an original receipt or a copy of the receipt portion of the form notice prescribed in Civ. Code § 1899.5 to the lender or other claimant at the address given on the notice within 30 days of receiving the notice [Civ. Code § 1899.3(c); for a form of notice of intent to preserve interest in property, see § 57.180].

[3] Notice of Injury to Loaned Property

In addition, a museum must give a lender prompt notice of any known injury to or loss of property on loan [Civ. Code § 1899.3(d); see § 57.76[1]].

It is the responsibility of the owner of property on loan to a museum to notify the museum promptly in writing of any change of address or change in the ownership of the property. Failure to notify the museum of these changes may result in the owner's loss of rights in the property [Civ. Code § 1899.4(a)].

The owner of property on loan to a museum may choose to file with the museum a notice of intent to preserve an interest in the property as provided for in Civ. Code § 1899.5 [for a form of notice of intent to preserve interest, see § 57.180; see also § 57.74]. However, the filing of a notice of intent does not validate or make enforceable any claim that would be extinguished under the terms of a written loan agreement or that would otherwise be invalid or unenforceable [*Civ. § 57.74 Notice of Intent to Preserve Interest

A notice of intent to preserve an interest in property on loan to a museum must comply with the following requirements [Civ. Code § 1899.5(a)]:

- Be in writing;
- Contain a description of the property adequate to enable the museum to identify it;
- Be accompanied by documentation sufficient to establish the claimant as owner of the property; and
- Be signed under penalty of perjury by the claimant or a person authorized to act on behalf of the claimant.

The museum need not retain a notice that does not meet the above requirements. However, if the museum does not intend to keep a notice for this reason, it must promptly notify the claimant at the address given on the notice that the notice is ineffective and the reasons why it is ineffective. The fact that a museum retains a notice cannot be construed to mean that the museum accepts the sufficiency or accuracy of the notice or that the notice is effective to preserve an interest in property on loan [Civ. Code § 1899.5(b)].

A notice of intent to preserve an interest in loaned property that is in substantially the form set forth in Civ. Code § 1899.5(c) and that contains the information and attachments described in that section satisfies the requirements noted above [Civ. Code § 1899.5(c); for a form of notice of intent to preserve interest, see § 57.180].

A notice of intent filed pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899 et seq. is exempt from the disclosure requirements of the California Public Records Act (Gov. Code § 6250 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1899.5(d)].

[1] When Allowed

Absent a written loan agreement to the contrary, a museum may apply conservation measures to or dispose of property on loan to the museum without the lender's permission in the following two situations.

First, the museum may take action if immediate action is required to protect the property or to protect other property in the custody of the museum or if the property has become a hazard to the health and safety of the public or the museum's staff and either (1) the museum is unable to reach the lender at the lender's last address of record in order to agree on a resolution or (2) the lender will not agree to the protective measures recommended by the museum, but is unwilling or unable to terminate the loan and retrieve the property [Civ. Code § 1899.6(a)(1)].

Second, the museum may take action if a lender cannot be contacted in person, the museum publishes a notice containing the information set forth in Civ. Code § 1899.7(a), and there is no response for 120 days [Civ. Code § 1899.6(a)(2); see discussion of Civ. Code § 1899.7(a) under § 57.76[1]].

[2] Lien on Property

If a museum applies conservation measures to or disposes of property pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.6(a), it has a lien on the property and the proceeds from any disposition for the costs incurred [Civ. Code § 1899.6(b)(1)].

[3] Liability for Injury or Loss

A museum is not liable for injury to or loss of property resulting from conservation measures or disposal of property if the museum had a reasonable belief at the time the action was taken that the action was necessary to protect the loaned property or other property in its custody or that the property on loan constituted a hazard to the health and safety of the public or the museum's staff. In the case of conservation measures, the museum is not liable if it exercised reasonable care in the choice and application of the measures [Civ. Code § 1899.6(b)(2)].

For a form raising this affirmative defense, see § 57.181.

[1] Notice Requirements

A museum must give a lender prompt notice of any known injury to or loss of property on loan [Civ. Code § 1899.3(d)]. Except as provided by Civ. Code § 1899.7(b), if a museum is unable to give this notice by mail, notice by publication will be deemed sufficient if two requirements are met [Civ. Code § 1899.7(a)]. The published notice must contain the information required by Civ. Code § 1899.2(b) [see § 57.71], and it must include a statement containing substantially the following information [Civ. Code § 1899.7(a)]:

> "The records of _____ (name of museum) indicate that you have property on loan to it. Your failure to notify it in writing of a change of address or ownership of property on loan or to contact it in writing regarding the loan may result in the loss of rights in the loaned property. See California Civil Code Sections 1899 et seq."

If, within three years of giving a proper notice by publication, the museum receives a notice from a claimant pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.4, the museum must promptly advise the claimant in writing of the nature of the injury to or the fact of the loss of property and the approximate date thereof. For the purposes of the limitation period prescribed by Civ. Code § 1899.8 [see [2], below], if the museum mails the information to the claimant within 30 days of receipt of the claimant's notice, the museum is deemed to have given the claimant notice of the injury or loss on the date notice by publication pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.7(a) was completed [Civ. Code § 1899.7(b)].

[2] Limitation Period for Damage Action

The limitation period for actions against a museum for damages for injury to or loss of property loaned to the museum is the earlier of the following [Civ. Code § 1899.8 (effective January 1, 1985)]:

- Three years from the date the museum gives the lender notice of the injury or loss, or
- Ten years from the date of the injury or loss.

§ 57.77 Termination of Loan by Museum

A museum may give a lender notice of the museum's intent to terminate a loan for an indefinite term, or one made on or after January 1, 1984, for a term in excess of seven years. The notice must include a statement containing substantially the following information [Civ. Code § 1899.9(a)]:

> "The records of _____ (name of museum) indicate that you have property on loan to it. The institution wishes to terminate the loan. You must contact the institution, establish your ownership of the property, and make arrangements to collect the property. If you fail to do so promptly, you will be deemed to have donated the property to the institution. See California Civil Code Sections 1899 et seq."

For the purposes of Civ. Code § 1899 et seq., a loan for a specified term becomes a loan for an indefinite term if the property remains in the custody of the museum when the specified term expires [Civ. Code § 1899.9(b)].

§ 57.78 Recovery of Property Loaned to Museum

[1] Limitation Period

The limitation period for actions for the recovery of personal property loaned to a museum is the three-year period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c) [see Civ. Code § 1899.10(a) (note section refers to nonexistent Code Civ. Proc. § 338.3)]. The three-year limitation period runs from the date the museum gives the lender notice of intent to terminate the loan pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.9 [Civ. Code § 1899.10(a); see § 57.77]. Except as provided in Civ. Code § 1899.10(e) [see [2], below], no action may be brought against a museum for the recovery of property on loan if more than 25 years have passed from the date of the last written contact between the lender and the museum, as evidenced by the museum's records [Civ. Code § 1899.10(b) (effective January 1, 1985)].

A lender is deemed to have donated loaned property to the museum if the lender fails to file an action to recover the property within the limitation periods specified above [Civ. Code § 1899.10(c)]. A person who thereafter purchases property from a museum acquires good title if the museum represents that it has acquired title by donation pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.10(c) [Civ. Code § 1899.10(d)].

[2] Recovery If No Notice Given

Notwithstanding Civ. Code § 1899.10(b) and (c), a lender may be entitled to recover the property if the lender was not given notice of the museum's intent to terminate the loan, and the lender proves that the museum received a notice of intent to preserve an interest in loaned property within the 25 years immediately preceding the date on which the lender's right to recover the property otherwise expired under Civ. Code § 1899.10(b). If the property has been disposed of, the lender may recover the reasonable value of the property at the time of its disposal plus interest at the rate allowed on judgments pursuant to Cal. Const., art. XV, § 1 [Civ. Code § 1899.10(e)].

The provisions of Civ. Code § 1899 et seq. supersede the Unclaimed Property Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq., which is discussed in Ch. 252, Escheat (Unclaimed Property)). However, the museum may, at its option, dispose of loaned property pursuant to the Unclaimed Property Law, provided the property has been unclaimed for more than seven years [Civ. Code § 1899.11(a)]. If a museum elects to proceed under the Unclaimed Property Law, it must mail notice to the lender of its intent not less than six months or more than 12 months before reporting the property to the controller pursuant to the Unclaimed Property Law. The notice must be mailed to the lender at the lender's address, if known, and must include a statement containing substantially the following information [Civ. Code § 1899.11(b)]:

> "The records of _____ (name of museum) indicate that you have property on loan to the institution. The institution wishes to terminate the loan. You must contact the institution, establish your ownership of the property and make arrangements to collect the property before _____ (fill in date) or the property will be disposed of in accordance with the provisions of the Unclaimed Property Law (commencing with Section 1500 of the Code of Civil Procedure)."

§ 57.90 Deposit of Art With Pawnbroker

[1] Pawnbroker Distinguished From Other Lenders

When a work of fine art is deposited as security for a loan, Fin. Code § 21000 et seq., governing pawnbrokers, may apply. A pawnbroker is a person engaged in the business of receiving goods as security for a loan [Fin. Code § 21000]. A pawnbroker should be distinguished from other types of lenders who may obtain a security interest in an item of personal property, including a work of art, but do not retain possession of the property. Those lenders are known as "finance lenders" under California law [see Fin. Code § 22009] and are governed by Fin. Code § 22000 et seq.

For a more detailed discussion of licensing and other legal requirements governing pawnbrokers, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102B, Pawnbrokers, Finance Lenders, and Secondhand Goods Dealers (Matthew Bender).

[2] Pawnbroker's Rights and Duties After Loan Is Due

A pawnbroker who has taken possession of art (or any other item of personal property) as security for a loan must retain possession of it for four months after the date when the loan is due. The borrower may redeem the pledged work of art during this four-month period by paying the applicable charges. If the borrower and the pawnbroker agree in writing that the pledged work of art may be stored off-premises, then following the request for redemption of the loan, the pawnbroker must return the pledged work of art to the borrower the next calendar day when both the pawnbroker's store and the storage facility are open, not to exceed two business days [Fin. Code § 21201].

If the pledged work of art is not redeemed during the four-month period, and the borrower and the pawnbroker do not mutually agree in writing to extend the loan period, the pawnbroker must notify the borrower within 30 days after the loan period expires. If the pawnbroker fails to notify the borrower within that period, the pawnbroker may not charge interest from the day after the expiration of the 30-day period. The pawnbroker must notify the borrower, at his or her last known address, of the termination of the loan period, by a means for which verification of mailing or delivery of the notification can be provided by the pawnbroker, and must extend the right of redemption for a period of 10 days from the date of mailing the notice. The 10-day notice must include this statement: "If the tenth day falls on a day when the pawnshop is closed, the time period is extended to the next day that the pawnshop is open." If any pledged property is not redeemed within the 10-day period, the pawnbroker becomes vested with all right, title, and interest of the pledgor, or his or her assignees, to the pledged, to hold and dispose of as his or her own property [Fin. Code § 21201].

A pawnbroker who sells any pledged property before he or she has become vested with the title to that property is guilty of a misdemeanor under Fin. Code § 21209 [Fin. Code § 21201].

The posted schedule of charges required by Fin. Code § 21200.5 must contain a notice informing the borrower that, if he or she desires, the notice of termination of the loan period shall be sent by registered or certified mail with return receipt requested, on prepayment of costs [Fin. Code § 21201].

§ 57.91 Junk Dealers and Secondhand Dealers

Junk dealers, who are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21600 et seq. and 21650-21653, and secondhand dealers, who are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21625 et seq. and 21650-21653, may become involved in dealings with art works. A work of art might accidentally come into the hands of a junk dealer or secondhand dealer; and the property with which they deal could include works of art, antiques, and collector's items of varying descriptions [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 21600, 21627 (definitions of junk and secondhand goods)].

Every junk dealer or secondhand dealer, before accepting for resale from any person any goods or materials in a state or condition that they are neither abandoned nor scrapped, must require that the person selling the property present adequate evidence of authority to sell. Violation of this provision is a misdemeanor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21652]. Resale of an item acquired in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 21652 is an offense [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21653].

§ 57.92 Lost or Stolen Property

[1] Finder's Rights and Duties

One who finds lost property is a depositary for the owner, with the rights and obligations of a depositary for hire [see Civ. Code § 2080]. He or she may acquire title to it only by following the statutory procedure [Civ. Code §§ 2080.1-2080.3] which involves delivering it to the police or sheriff, if its value is $100 or more [Civ. Code § 2080.1], who will try to find the owner, and waiting a period of time for the owner to claim it. If the owner does not claim it, title will vest in the finder [see Civ. Code § 2080.3].

If owner is entitled to possession, the finder is entitled to a reasonable sum for saving and taking care of the property [see Civ. Code § 2080].

For a form for a complaint to recover lost or stolen art from a junk dealer or secondhand dealer, see § 57.190.

[2] Penal Provisions

Every swap meet vendor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 21661 (definition)] and every person whose principal business is dealing in, or collecting, merchandise or personal property, and every agent, employee, or representative of that person, who buys or receives any property of any value that has been stolen or obtained in any manner constituting theft or extortion, under circumstances that should cause the person, agent, employee, or representative to make reasonable inquiry to ascertain that the person from whom the property was bought or received had the legal right to sell or deliver it, without making a reasonable inquiry, is guilty of an offense [Penal Code § 496(b); see Penal Code § 496(a) (offense of knowingly receiving stolen property)].

One who finds lost property under circumstances that give him or her knowledge of or means of inquiry as to the true owner, and who appropriates that property to his or her own use or to the use of another person not entitled to the property without first making reasonable and just efforts to find the owner and to restore the property to that person, is guilty of theft [Penal Code § 485].

If the defendant is guilty of the crime of receiving stolen property, then the owner, or any other person who has been injured by the crime, may bring an action for three times the amount of actual damages, if any, plus costs and reasonable attorney's fees [see Penal Code § 496(c); see, e.g., Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 17-20, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455]. For example, the manufacturer of high end apparel could sue the operator of a discount warehouse store where some of manufacturer's current-season products were being sold, on the theory that the store operator acquired those products as stolen property, even though they were not stolen from the manufacturer. The harm to the manufacturer's goodwill could constitute the "actual damages" that must be sought under the statute [Citizens of Humanity, LLC v. Costco Wholesale Corp. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1, 17-20, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455].

[3] Purchaser's Lack of Title

A good faith purchaser from a thief acquires no title, because the thief's title is void rather than merely voidable. Therefore, the thief possesses no power to transfer property. Voidable title under Com. Code § 2403(1) only arises from a voluntary transfer or delivery by a true owner [Suburban Motors, Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1359-1361, 268 Cal. Rptr. 16] .

A purchaser who paid an unreasonably low price, or otherwise should have been suspicious that property that he or she bought was stolen, is not a good faith purchaser from a thief and cannot prevail against the owner [see Kelley Kar Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 263, 264-265, 298 P.2d 590 ; see also Com. Code § 2403].

[4] Limitation Period for Action Regarding Stolen Property

An action involving the taking, detaining, or injuring of chattels, including actions for the specific recovery of personal property, must be commenced within three years [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)].

Effective January 1, 1983, the three-year statute was amended to include a discovery rule. Under this amendment, the cause of action for theft [see Pen. Co § 484] of any article of historical, interpretive, scientific, or artistic significance is not deemed to have accrued until the discovery of the whereabouts of the article by the aggrieved party, his orher agent, or the law enforcement agency that originally investigated the theft [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)]. This rule applies to cases in which the limitations period had not yet expired as of January 1, 1983 [Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 783-784, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 (post-1983 rule governed when statute had not expired by January 1 of that year)]. The language "in the case of theft" in Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c) does not limit the application of the discovery rule to actions against thieves [Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 783-784 n.11, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865] .

The time at which a cause of action accrued prior to January 1, 1983, is less clear [see Orkin v. Taylor (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 734 ("[t]he California Supreme Court has never confronted the question of what rule governs accrual of pre-1983 causes of action for theft and conversion")]. In one case involving the pre-1983 statute, the court held that in a case of theft, the cause of action based on wrongful taking did not accrue until the aggrieved person discovers the identity of the person in possession of the stolen property--in other words, a discovery rule implicitly existed even prior to the 1983 amendment [Naftzger v. American Numismatic Soc'y (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 421, 433, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784] . Another court expressly disagreed, holding that under pre-1983 case law the three-year statute began to run when the defendant acquired property from a wrongful possessor [Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 781-782, 783 n.10 , 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 ; see San Francisco Credit C. House v. Wells (1925) 196 Cal. 701, 239 P. 319 ; Harpending v. Meyer (1880) 55 Cal. 555]. However, the latter court also held that the statute of limitations in an action concerning stolen property began to run anew against a subsequent purchaser. Thus, for example, when an object was stolen in 1978 and sold to a third party in 1980, the statute began to run anew on the latter date; it therefore had not expired when the discovery rule took effect on January 1, 1983, and became subject to the 1983 rule at that time [Society of Cal. Pioneers v. Baker (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 774, 782-783, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 ; see First Nat'l Bk. v.

Thompson (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 79, 82, 140 P.2d 75 ; Culp v. Signal Van & Storage (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 859, 861, 298 P.2d 162] .

The California discovery rule incorporates the general principle of constructive notice, under which a plaintiff is held to his or her actual knowledge as well as knowledge that could reasonably be discovered through investigation of sources open to the plaintiff [Orkin v. Taylor (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d.734 ; see Jolly v. Eli Lilly & Co. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1103, 1109-1111, 245 Cal. Rptr. 658, 751 P.2d 923] . In other words, under the discovery rule, a cause of action accrues when the plaintiff discovered or reasonably could have discovered his or her claim to and the whereabouts of the property [Orkin v. Taylor (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d.734] . In the context of a Van Gogh painting that allegedly was sold under duress due to economic coercion by the Nazis during the Holocaust, this meant that the plaintiff "most probably" could have discovered its whereabouts in 1963 when it was acquired by a celebrity in a highly publicized international auction, and "certainly" when the celebrity unsuccessfully offered the painting for sale at another international auction in 1990. Under this analysis, the statute of limitations expired, at the absolute latest, in 1993, and had already expired by the time plaintiff subsequently read an Internet rumor regarding ownership of the painting in 2002 [Orkin v. Taylor (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 734 ; see § 57.97].

§ 57.96 Malicious and Willful Injury to Art

Any person who maliciously cuts, tears, defaces, breaks, or injures any book, map, chart, picture, engraving, statue, coin, model, apparatus, or other work of literature, art, mechanics, or object of curiosity deposited in any public library, gallery, museum collection, fair, or exhibition is guilty of a misdemeanor. The parent or guardian of a minor who willfully and maliciously commits any of these acts is liable for all damages so caused by the minor [Educ. Code § 19910; for liability of parents for torts of minors generally, see Civ. Code § 1714.1; see also Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions].

Any person, other than an owner, who willfully injures, disfigures, or destroys any monument, work of art, or ornamental improvement within the limits of any village, town, or city, whether situated on private ground or on any street, sidewalk, or public park or place, is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 622; *see also Penal Code § 622*1/2 (willful injury of any archaeological or historical object is misdemeanor)].

The Native American Historic Resource Protection Act [Pub. Res. Code § 5097.993 et seq.] provides (among other purposes) for the protection of certain Native American art objects. In general, any person who unlawfully and maliciously excavates on, removes, destroys, injures, or defaces a Native American historic, cultural, or sacred site that is listed or may be listed in the California Register of Historic Resources, including any historic or prehistoric ruins, burial ground, any archaeological or historical site, any inscriptions made by Native Americans at the site, any archaeological or historic Native American rock art, or any archaeological or historic feature, is guilty of a misdemeanor if the act was committed with the specific intent to vandalize, deface, destroy, steal, convert, possess, collect, or sell a Native American art object, inscription, or feature, or site, and the act occurs on public land or, if on private land, is committed by a person other than the landowner [see Pub. Res. Code § 5097.993(a); see also Pub. Res. Code § 5097.994 (liability for civil penalty); but see Pub. Res. Code § 5097.993(b) (exceptions)].

§ 57.97 Recovery of Holocaust-Era Artwork From Museum or Gallery

Holocaust-era artwork is any article of artistic significance taken as a result of Nazi persecution during the period of 1929 to 1945. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any owner, or heir or beneficiary of an owner, of Holocaust-era artwork may bring an action to recover the Holocaust-era artwork from any museum or gallery that displays, exhibits, or sells any article of historical, interpretive, scientific, or artistic significance [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(a), (b)]. For a complaint to recover such an article, see § 57.191. The action cannot be dismissed for failure to comply with the applicable statute of limitations, if the action is commenced on or before December 31, 2010 [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(c)].

Normally, an individual has three years, after discovering the whereabouts of missing artwork, to commence an action in court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)]. The statement of legislative intent behind enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3, however, notes that because of the unique circumstances surrounding the theft of Holocaust-era artwork, commencement of an action requires detailed investigation in several countries, involving numerous historical documents and the input of experts. In order to obtain all necessary data, investigating a prospective action may take several years. Thus, the legislature has decided that the normal three-year period of limitation, after discovery of the whereabouts of the artwork, is an insufficient amount of time to finance, investigate, and commence an action. To the extent that the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3 extends the statute of limitation, that extension of the limitation period is intended to be applied retroactively, irrespective of whether the claims were barred by any applicable statute of limitation under any other provision of law prior to the enactment of *Code Civ. Proc. § 354.*3 [Stats. 2002, ch. 332, § 1]. For additional discussion, see § 57.92[4].

WARNING:

Federal Preemption. In August 2009, a Ninth Circuit panel held that the extension of the limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(c) is invalid under the field-preemption doctrine because it "intrudes on the power to make and resolve war, a power reserved exclusively to the federal government by the Constitution" [Saher v. Norton Simon Museum of Art at Pasadena (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1016]. However, the Ninth Circuit's opinion does recognize that legislative amendments may avoid a preemption problem. In addition, the opinion may be subject to en banc review.

Courts have now invalidated, on preemption grounds, four of the six code sections embodying, in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 354.3-354.7, the legislature's scheme to provide remedies for the victims, and survivors of victims, of torts and crimes that occurred many years ago in other countries. The statutes so far invalidated, along with Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3, are Code Civ. Proc. § 354.4 [Movsesian v. Victoria Versicherung AG (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1052], Code Civ. Proc. § 354.5 [Steinberg v. International Comm'n on Holocaust Era Ins. Claims (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 689, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 944], and Code Civ. Proc. § 354.6 [Deustch v. Turner (9th Cir. 2003) 324 F.3d 692]. In addition, the United States Supreme Court has invalidated, on preemption grounds, a similar effort under Ins. Code § 13800 et seq. [American Ins. Ass'n v. Garamendi (2003) 539 U.S. 396, 123 S. Ct. 2374, 156 L. Ed. 2d 376].

§ 57.98 Artist's Sale of Original Work as Protected Speech

An artist's sale of his or her original artwork constitutes speech protected under the First Amendment. A painting, for instance, expresses the painter's perspective and therefore, while in the hands of the painter, is self-expression protected by the First Amendment. The painter's sale of a painting does not remove it from the ambit of protected expression (while it is yet in the painter's hands), nor is the painting to be considered as commercial speech merely because it is offered for sale or sold [White v. City of Sparks (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 953, 956-957 (city could not prevent artist from selling his paintings in public areas where limited selling of other merchandise was permitted, on ground asserted by city, that his paintings did not patently express religious, ideological, political, or philosophical message and therefore did not constitute protected speech)].

Injunction is generally unavailable to prevent breach of agreement that is not specifically enforceable. Adams v. Williams Resorts, Inc. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 456, 463, 26 Cal. Rptr. 656

Artist's agreement for services is contract for purely personal services. Mackay v. Clark Rig Bldg. Co. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 44, 58-59, 42 P.2d 341 (dictum)

Death or disability of artist discharges contractual obligation for services. Mackay v. Clark Rig Bldg. Co. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 44, 58-59, 42 P.2d 341 (dictum)

[2] Ascertainment of Damages

Certainty-of-damages requirement refers to fact of damage, not extent or value. Stott v. Johnston (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 864, 875, 229 P.2d 348

Criteria for establishing value of unusual item having no market value. Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 14-15, 151 P. 286 ; Zvolanek v. Bodger Seeds, Ltd. (1935) 5 Cal. App. 2d 106, 109, 42 P.2d 92

Owner is competent to testify as to value of property, even though not expert. Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 14-16, 151 P. 286

Rule of Civ. Code § 3355 (damages for loss of property with peculiar value) is not applicable if property has no market value. Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 Cal. 9, 15, 151 P. 286

[3] Bankruptcy

Property exempt from execution under state law is exempt from bankrupt's creditors' claims. Smalley v. Laugenour (1905) 196 U.S. 93, 97, 25 S. Ct. 216, 49 L. Ed. 400

[4] Fine Art Defined

Architectural drawings made pursuant to contract for commercial purpose do not constitute fine art. Robert H. Jacobs, Inc. v. Westoaks Realtors, Inc. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 637, 644, 205 Cal. Rptr. 620

[5] Transfer of Fine Art

Holocaust Victims Redress Act, Pub. L. No. 105-158 (Feb. 13, 1998), does not create private right of action for rightful owner's recovery of Nazi-confiscated work of art; rather, legislative intent was to encourage state and foreign governments to enforce existing rights for protection of Holocaust victims. Orkin v. Taylor (9th Cir. 2007) 487 F.3d 734

District court finding that Civ. Code § 988 created statute of frauds requirement for transfers of art objects was erroneous; Civ. Code § 988 provides instead that written agreement is required before transfer of property rights may accompany transfer of copyright rights. Chamberlain v. Cocola Associates (9th Cir. 1992) 958 F.2d 282, 282-285 (remanding case to determine whether transaction at issue is loan or sale)

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used to plead a cause of action for recovery of the consideration paid (and for a penalty, in appropriate cases) when a fine art multiple has been sold without accompanying disclosures, in violation of Civ. Code § 1740 et seq. [see § 57.22[11]].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The sale of an art work that is a multiple subject to Civ. Code § 1740 et seq. (Paragraph 4) [see Civ. Code §§ 1740-1742, 1744; for discussion see § 57.22[1], [2]].

- The art dealer's failure to make the required disclosures (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code §§ 1742, 1744; for discussion, see § 57.22[3]-[6]].

- Plaintiff's return or tender of the work (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 1745(a)].

There are also optional allegations for use in the following situations:

- If the action is commenced more than one year, but within three years, after the sale of the work (Paragraph 6) [Civ. Code § 1745(c); see § 57.22[11][d]].

- If the art dealer gave a disclaimer but had not made appropriate investigations (Paragraph 7) [Civ. Code § 1745(f); see § 57.22[11][c]].

- If the violation was willful (Paragraph 9) [Civ. Code § 1745(b); see § 57.22[11][b]].

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§

92(b), 446(a)]. Verification will also preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 57.131 Affirmative Defenses to Complaint Arising From Unlawful Sale of Fine Art Multiple [Civ. Code § 1742(d)]

[1] Disclaimer by Seller

[a] FORM Affirmative Defenses to Complaint Arising From Unlawful Sale of Fine Art Multiple [Civ. Code § 1742(d)]--Disclaimer by Seller

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. At the time of the sale referred to in the complaint, defendant had no knowledge of any of the [following] informational details about the fine art multiple described in the complaint [: _____ (describe specifically what details are claimed to be unknown, if fewer than all details referred to in Civ. Code § 1744 are disclaimed)].

2. In connection with the sale, defendant informed plaintiff _____ [orally or in writing], specifically and categorically with regard to each detail, that defendant disclaimed knowledge thereof, and defendant advised plaintiff that defendant could not state an opinion as to the degree of uniqueness or scarcity of the fine art multiple in question.

[b] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1], above, may be used in answer to the complaint set out at § 57.130[1], when the seller disclaimed knowledge of relevant details as provided in Civ. Code § 1742(d), (f) [see § 57.22[8], [11][c]].

The disclaimer must have been specific and categorical as to each informational detail of which the seller disclaimed knowledge [see Civ. Code § 1744 (required informational details listed)], to the end that the purchaser was able to judge the degree of uniqueness and scarcity of the fine art multiple in question [see Civ. Code § 1742(d)]. There is no express requirement that the disclaimer be written.

[2] Sale of Reproduction Not in Signed, Numbered, or Limited Edition

[a] FORM Affirmative Defenses to Complaint Arising From Unlawful Sale of Fine Art Multiple [Civ. Code § 1742(d)]--Sale of Reproduction Not in Signed, Numbered, or Limited Edition

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the fine art multiple described in the complaint was not published in a signed, numbered, or limited edition, or any combination thereof, and defendant so informed plaintiff and described the fine art multiple in question as an edition of reproductions in connection with the sale.

[b] Use of Form

The affirmative defense in [1] above, may be used in answer to the complaint set out at § 57.130[1], when the seller described the fine art multiple in question as an edition of reproductions [Civ. Code § 1742(d); see § 57.22[8]]. Describing the edition as a reproduction eliminates the need for further informational details unless the fine art multiple was allegedly published in a signed, numbered, or limited edition, or any combination thereof, in which case all of the informational details are required to be furnished [see Civ. Code § 1742(d)]. There is no express requirement that the description of the multiple as a reproduction be written.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain restitution based on plaintiff's rescission of an agreement for the sale of an art work. The grounds for rescission are set out in Civ. Code § 1689.

When a contract has been rescinded in whole or in part, any party to the contract may seek relief based on the rescission by bringing an action to recover any money or thing owing to him or her by any other party to the contract as a consequence of the rescission [*see Com. - Plaintiff's performance in accordance with that agreement (Paragraph 5).
- Defendant's performance, or lack thereof (alternative Paragraphs 6).

5. The consideration set forth in the agreement is the fair and reasonable value of the _____ [e.g., figurine], and the agreement is, as to the defendant, just and reasonable.

6. On or about _____ [date], pursuant to the agreement, plaintiff tendered, and defendant accepted, _____ [dollar amount or other consideration] as full consideration for defendant's sale of the _____ [e.g., figurine].

7. [2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain specific performance of a seller's obligation to deliver a work of art which plaintiff bought [see Civ. Code § 3384]. Specific performance is available to the buyer under a contract for the sale of goods if the goods are unique or in other proper circumstances [see Com. Code § 2716(1)].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The agreement for the sale of the art work (Paragraph 4).

- The consideration for the art work, and that it was fair and reasonable as to defendant (Paragraph 5) [Civ. Code § 3369].

- Plaintiff's performance in accordance with that agreement (Paragraph 6) [Civ. Code § 3392].

- Defendant's failure and ability to perform (Paragraph 7).

- That the subject of the contract is unique so that money damages cannot adequately compensate plaintiff for its nondelivery (Paragraph 8) [see Civ. Code § 3367; Com. Code §§ 2711(2)(b), 2716].

[4] Requirement of Writing

Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 2201, a contract for the sale of goods for the price of $500 or more is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless there is some writing sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale has been made between the parties and signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or by his or her authorized agent or broker [Com. Code § 2201(1)]. A writing is not insufficient because it omits or incorrectly states a term agreed on, but the contract is not enforceable beyond the quantity of goods shown in that writing [Com. Code § 2201(1)].

Between merchants, if within a reasonable time a writing in confirmation of the contract and sufficient against the sender is received and the party receiving it has reason to know its contents, then it satisfies the above requirements against that party, unless written notice of objection to its contents is given within 10 days after it is received [Com. Code § 2201(2)].

A contract that does not satisfy the requirements of Com. Code § 2201(1), above, but that is valid in other respects is enforceable in the following circumstances [Com. Code § 2201(3)]:

- If the goods are to be specially manufactured for the buyer and are not suitable for sale to others in the ordinary course of the seller's business and the seller, before notice of repudiation is received and under circumstances which reasonably indicate that the goods are for the buyer, has made either a substantial beginning of their manufacture or commitments for their procurement.

- If the party against whom enforcement is sought admits in his or her pleading, testimony, or otherwise in court that a contract for sale was made, in which case the contract is enforceable with respect to the quantity of goods admitted.

- With respect to goods for which payment has been made and accepted or which have been received and accepted (as specified in Com. Code § 2606).

[5] Limitation Period for Specific Performance

The limitation period for action on a written contract is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)], while the limitation period for action on an oral contract is two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)].

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 57.130[1]; for discussion, see § 57.130[4].]

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain damages by a plaintiff who has been defrauded in the purchase of a work of art worth less than what he or she paid for it [see Civ. Code § 1709 (liability for deceit)]. A cause of action for fraud may be an alternative to seeking restitution based on rescission [see § 57.133] if plaintiff wants to keep the work.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges [see Civ. Code § 1710 (elements of actionable fraud)]:

- The sale of the art work, the date of the sale, and the price plaintiff paid for the work (Paragraph 4).
- The representations made by defendant to induce the sale (Paragraph 5).
- That the representations were false (Paragraph 6).
- The true facts (Paragraph 6).
- Plaintiff's reliance on the misrepresentations (Paragraph 7).
- The date and fact of plaintiff's discovery that the representations were false (Paragraph 7).
- On information and belief, that defendant knew the representations were false and made them with intent to defraud plaintiff (Paragraph 8).

There are also a reminder to allege any additional damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 3343(a), discussed at [4][a], below (Paragraph 10) and an allegation for use to recover punitive damages (Paragraph 11) [Civ. Code § 3294].

[4] Damages for Fraud

[a] Civil Code Measure

Civ. Code § 3343 is a special relief statute setting out the measure of damages recoverable by any person (buyer or seller) defrauded in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property. The measure of damages specified in Com. Code § 2714(2) for breach of warranty is different from the measure of damages provided in Civ. Code § 3343, which expressly states that it may not be invoked to permit the defrauded person to recover any amount measured by the difference between the value of the property as represented and the actual value [Civ. Code § 3343(b)(1)]. The basic measure of damages provided in Civ. Code § 3343 is the difference between the actual value of that with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of that which he or she received [Civ. Code § 3343(a)]. In other words, the plaintiff in a fraud action will always have parted with something more valuable than what he or she received, and is entitled to have the defendant make up the difference.

The defrauded person may also have additional damages to compensate for (1) expenses actually and reasonably incurred in reliance on the fraud [see Civ. Code § 3343(a)(1)], (2) proximately caused loss of the use and enjoyment of the property, if the defrauded party parted with it [see Civ. Code § 3343(a)(2)], (3) lost profits or other gains which might reasonably have been earned by use of the property, if the defrauded party parted with it [see Civ. Code § 3343(a)(3)], and (4) loss of profits or other gains which were reasonably anticipated to be earned from use or sale of the property, if the defrauded party bought it for the purpose of using or reselling it for a profit [see Civ. Code § 3343(a)(4)].

For forms of allegations pleading damages under Civ. Code § 3343, see the Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit).

[b] Remedies Under Commercial Code

Com. Code § 2721 provides that remedies for material misrepresentation or fraud include all remedies available under Com. Code §§ 2101-2725 for nonfraudulent breach; and neither rescission or a claim for rescission of the contract for sale, nor rejection or return of the goods, shall bar or be deemed inconsistent with a claim for damages or other remedy.

[5] Limitation Period

The limitation period for an action based on fraud is three years [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)].

[3. Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 57.130[1], Paragraph 3.]

4. [At all times herein mentioned, and particularly] [O]n or about _____ [date], defendant [was engaged in the business of, and] held himself/herself out to [the public in general, and to] plaintiff [in particular,] as being skilled in the authentication of certain kinds of art works, to wit: _____ [describe kinds of works on which defendant purported to be an authority], by reason of his/her superior knowledge and experience.

5. On or about that date, defendant undertook to examine a certain work of art, to wit: _____ [describe], for the purpose of determining whether it was a genuine work. Defendant's undertaking was the result of _____ [state circumstances in which defendant undertook to authenticate work, e.g., an oral agreement by which plaintiff promised to pay defendant the sum of $_____ as a fee in compensation for defendant's examining the work of art and determining whether it was genuine].

6. Defendant knew at the time of the examination that plaintiff intended to buy the work of art if it was genuine, and

10. As a proximate result of defendant's negligence, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____ [difference between purchase price and actual value].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

_____ [firm name, if any]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain damages based on defendant's negligent determination that a copy or reproduction was a genuine work [see Civ. Code § 1714(a) (negligence); Civ. Code § 3333 (damages for breach of noncontractual injury)]. It is not a complaint for negligent misrepresentation, even though defendant's negligence consists in misrepresenting the quality of the work as genuine, or perhaps in misrepresenting his skill and ability to distinguish copies from genuine works. The gist of the cause of action is defendant's negligent performance of a contractual obligation to use professed skill and experience in authenticating a work of art.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- Defendant's expertise and the fact that defendant held himself or herself out to the public as having that expertise (Paragraph 4).

- The agreement between plaintiff and defendant (Paragraph 5).

- The fact that defendant knew plaintiff would be relying on defendant's authentication in deciding whether to purchase the object (Paragraph 6).

- Defendant's pronouncement that the work was genuine (Paragraph 7).

- Plaintiff's purchase of the work in reliance on defendant's assertion that it was genuine (Paragraph 7).

- [Plaintiff's discovery, and the date of that discovery, that the work was not genuine (Paragraph 8).

- The fact that and reasons why a person with the degree of skill and experience defendant purported to have would have know the work was not genuine (Paragraph 9).

- Plaintiff's damage as measured between the price plaintiff paid for the work or art and its actual value (Paragraph 10).

There is also a reminder to allege any other damages (Paragraph 11).

[4] Negligent Performance of Contractual Obligation

Accompanying every contract is a common law duty to perform with care, skill, reasonable expedience, and faithfulness the thing agreed to be done. A negligent failure to observe any of these conditions is a tort, as well as a breach of contract. The rule which imposes this duty is of universally applied to all persons who by contract undertake professional or other business engagements requiring the exercise of care, skill, and knowledge. The obligation is implied by law and need not be stated in the agreement [see Roscoe Moss Co. v. Jenkins (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 369, 376, 130 P.2d 477 ; Perry v. D. J. & T. Sullivan, Inc. (1933) 219 Cal. 384, 390, 26 P.2d 485 (gratuitous undertaking as creating duty to use reasonable care)].

The same act may be both a tort and a breach of contract [Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810, 249 P.2d 257] . Even when there is a contractual relationship between the parties, a cause of action in tort may sometimes arise out of the negligent manner in which the contractual duty is performed, or out of a failure to perform that duty. The contract is of significance only in creating the legal duty, and the negligence of the defendant should not be considered as a breach of contract, but as a tort governed by tort rules. If the cause of action arises from a breach of a promise set forth in a contract, the action is ex contractu; but if it arises from a breach of duty growing out of the contract, it is ex delicto. If the cause of action arises from the breach of a contractual duty, the action is delictual notwithstanding that it also involves a breach of contract. Contractual negligence ordinarily gives rise to an action either on contract or in tort. The injured party may elect to waive the contract and sue in tort. In general, it has been held that actions based on negligent failure to perform contractual duties, although containing elements of both contract and tort, are regarded as delictual actions, because negligence is considered the gravamen of the action [see Eads v. Marks (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 807, 810-812, 249 P.2d 257] .

[5] Limitation Period

The limitation period for an action for negligent performance of an implied obligation based on contract is the four-year period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1) [Bruckman v. Parliament Escrow Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1057-1058, 235 Cal. Rptr. 813] .

Defendant did so by _____ [describe defendant's acts, e.g., treating three prints from the limited edition of "_____" in his/her possession with a blue watercolor wash so that each print, which consisted of black figures on a white ground when created by plaintiff, now consists of black figures on a blue ground].

4. Defendant's willful and intentional distortion, mutilation, and other modification of plaintiff's work is the proximate cause of prejudice to plaintiff's honor or reputation, to plaintiff's damage [in the amount of $_____].

COUNT TWO
(Infringement of Right of Attribution)

9. Plaintiff refers to Paragraphs One through Eight of Count One, and incorporates them by reference herein.

10. Despite defendant's willful and intentional distortion, mutilation, or other modification of plaintiff's work as alleged above, the distorted, mutilated, and otherwise modified work continues to bear plaintiff's signature.

11. Plaintiff has notified defendant that the continued presence of plaintiff's name on the work as distorted, mutilated, and otherwise modified by defendant, and defendant's continued attribution to plaintiff of the work as distorted, mutilated, and otherwise modified by defendant, is a violation of plaintiff's rights under Title 17, Section 106A(a)(2), of the United States Code. Despite this notification, [plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] defendant is preparing and intends to permit plaintiff's name to remain on any work that, in future, defendant distorts, mutilates, or

13. Plaintiff has not waived any of his/her attribution rights under Title 17, Section 106A(a), of the United States Code.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff requests judgment as follows:

That defendant be restrained and enjoined during the pendency of this action, and permanently thereafter, from infringing plaintiff's right of attribution in the work by permitting plaintiff's name to remain on work that defendant has distorted, mutilated, and otherwise modified to the prejudice of plaintiff's honor or reputation;

3. That defendant be required to pay to plaintiff such damages as plaintiff has sustained in consequence of defendant's infringement of plaintiff's integrity and attribution rights in plaintiff's work;

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use by the author of a work of visual art to enforce his or her rights of integrity and attribution in the work under the Copyright Act of 1976, specifically, that portion of the Act known as the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990, discussed at § 57.52.

The specific integrity right sought to be enforced in the form is the right to prevent any intentional distortion, mutilation, or other modification of the work that would be prejudicial to the artist's honor or reputation (Count One) [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(3)(A); see § 57.52[5]].

The specific attribution right sought to be enforced in the form is the right to prevent the use of the artist's name as the author of a work in the event of a distortion, mutilation, or other modification of the work that would be prejudicial to the artist's honor or reputation (Count Two) [see 17 U.S.C. § 106A(a)(2); see § 57.52[5]].

[3] Allegations

[a] Jurisdiction

A complaint filed in federal court must include an allegation of the court's jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action (Paragraph 1) [Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 8(a)(1)]. Local court rule may govern the allegation of federal jurisdiction [see, e.g., U.S. Dist. Ct., Cen. Dist. of Cal., Rules 3.7.1, 3.7.2 (jurisdictional allegation required to be first paragraph of complaint); U.S. Dist Ct., No. Dist. of Cal., Rule 200-5 (required to be separate paragraph entitled "Jurisdiction")]. Jurisdiction is discussed further in [6], below.

[b] Prima Facie Case

To state a prima facie case of infringement of these rights, plaintiff must allege and prove (1) that the work at issue is a "work of visual art" within the meaning of 17 U.S.C. § 101 (Paragraph 2); (2) that plaintiff is the holder of the rights (Paragraphs 2, 8, and 13); (3) that the rights have been or will be intentionally infringed (Paragraphs 3, 5, 10, and 11); and (4) that the infringement will prejudice plaintiff's honor or reputation (Paragraphs 4, 6, 10, and 11) [see 17 U.S.C. §§ 101, 106A(a)(2), (3), (d), (e); see § 57.52[9]].

[c] Injunction

To enjoin a defendant preliminarily from continued or future infringement of these rights, it appears that, analogizing to copyright law, plaintiff must show either a likelihood of success on the merits and a possibility of irreparable injury or that serious questions going to the merits of the action are raised and that the balance of hardships tips in plaintiff's favor (Paragraphs 7 and 12) [see Johnson Controls v. Phoenix Control Systems (9th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 1173, 1174 (copyright infringement action); 17 U.S.C. 501(a) (for purposes of remedies section of federal Copyright Act, any reference to copyright is deemed to include rights of attribution and integrity); Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 65; see also H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 22 (1990) (Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 makes all copyright infringement remedies, except criminal penalties, available to moral rights infringement plaintiffs); see also § 57.52[9][c]].

Local federal rules also govern the procedure for obtaining temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions [see, e.g., U.S. Dist. Ct., Cen. Dist. of Cal., Rule 7.17; U.S. Dist. Ct., East. Dist. of Cal., Rule 231; U.S. Dist. Ct., No. Dist. of Cal., Rules 220-7, 220-8; see also U.S. Dist. Ct., Cen. Dist. of Cal., Rule 19 (seizure of property)].

[d] Willful Infringement

In the Ninth Circuit, to sustain a finding of willful infringement of a moral right, it appears that, analogizing to copyright law [see 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(2) (statutory damages for willful infringement)], the court must find that a defendant knew that its conduct constituted an act of infringement (Paragraphs 5 and 11) [see 17 U.S.C. § 501(a) (for purposes of remedies section of federal Copyright Act, any reference to copyright is deemed to include rights of attribution and integrity); Peer Intern. Corp. v. Pausa Records, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 909 F.2d 1332, 1335, 1335 n.3, 1336 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1109, 111 S. Ct. 1019, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1100 (1991) (copyright infringement action); see also H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 22 (1990) (Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 makes all copyright infringement remedies, except criminal penalties, available to moral rights infringement plaintiffs)]. For further discussion of statutory damages in copyright infringement actions, see Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright .

[4] Standard of Harm to Honor or Reputation

The legislative history indicates that the best approach to construing the term "honor or reputation" is to focus on the artistic or professional honor or reputation of the individual as embodied in the work that is protected. The standard used is not analogous to that of a defamation case, in which the general character of the plaintiff is at issue. In a suit for violation of moral rights, any evidence with regard to the latter is irrelevant [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 15 (1990)].

The formulation for determining whether harm to honor or reputation exists must of necessity be flexible. The trier of fact must examine the way in which a work has been modified and the professional reputation of the author of the work. Fed. R. Evid., Rules 701-706 permit expert testimony on the issue of whether the modification affects the artist's honor or reputation. Although no per se rule exists, modification of a work of recognized stature will generally establish harm to honor or reputation [H.R. Rep. No. 514, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. 15-16 (1990)].

[5] Verification

Pleadings in federal court need not be verified or accompanied by affidavit unless specifically provided by rule or statute [Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 11]. Thus, a verified pleading does not thereby automatically require an opposing party to verify subsequent or responsive pleadings unless specifically required by rule or statute.

Nevertheless, an application for an ex parte temporary restraining order must proceed by either verified complaint or affidavit. In such an action, the applicant must present verified facts, by either complaint or separate supporting affidavit(s), showing that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage to the applicant will result before the adverse party or its attorney can be heard in opposition to the application. Additionally, the applicant must certify to the court, in writing, both the applicant's efforts, if any, to give notice to the opposing party, and reasons supporting the applicant's claim that notice should not be required [Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 65(b)].

Rule 65(b) does not expressly require a verified complaint when accompanied by supporting affidavits [see Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 65(b)]. An unverified complaint, coupled with a supporting affidavit stating the affiant's source of information for the complaint and the fact that the affiant prepared the complaint, has been held sufficient to meet the requirements of the rule [Brown v. Bernstein (M.D. Pa. 1943) 49 F. Supp. 497, 499] .

[6] Signature of Pleadings

Every pleading of a party represented by an attorney in federal court must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name. Additionally, the attorney must state his or her address in the pleading. The attorney's signature constitutes a certificate by the attorney that he or she has read the pleading; that to the best of his or her knowledge, information, and belief formed after reasonable inquiry, it is well grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or by a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law; and that the pleading is not interposed for any improper purpose. If a pleading is not signed, it must be stricken unless it is signed promptly after the omission is called to the pleader's attention. If a pleading is signed in violation of Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 11, the court will impose an appropriate sanction on the person who signed the pleading, a represented party, or both [see Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 11].

[7] Jurisdiction and Venue

The United States District Court has exclusive, original subject matter jurisdiction in any civil action arising under any act of Congress relating to copyrights [28 U.S.C. § 1338(a)]. Therefore, neither diversity of citizenship nor a specific amount in controversy is required.

Venue is laid in the judicial district where (1) any defendant resides, if all defendants reside in the same state; (2) a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred or a substantial part of property that is the subject of the action is situated; or (3) any defendant may be found, if there is no district in which the action can otherwise be brought [28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) (venue in federal question jurisdiction cases); see 28 U.S.C. § 1392 (venue when defendants reside or property is located in different districts of the same state)].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for the intentional physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction of a work of fine art pursuant to the California Art Preservation Act [Civ. Code § 987(c)(1) and (e); see discussion in § 57.53[1], [3]].

To a great extent, the California Art Preservation Act has been preempted by the Visual Artists Rights Act of 1990 [17 U.S.C. §§ 106A, 113(d)], effective June 1, 1991 [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f), discussed in § 57.51]. However, California courts have not yet determined the extent of the preemption [see, e.g., Lubner v. City of Los Angeles (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 525, 531, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 24] , so this form is included, using as an example, a situation that may not be preempted, namely, the enforcement of the rights created by Civ. Code § 987 after, but within 50 years of the artist's death, by the artist's heir, devisee, beneficiary, or personal representative [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(2)(C), Civ. Code § 987(g)(1), discussed at § 57.51[2] and § 57.53[4], respectively].

For discussion of the effect of this statute with respect to works of fine art which are part of a building, see § 57.53[5].

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- The creation of the work of art (Paragraph 4).

- Plaintiff's status as the artist or a person entitled to enforce the rights for 50 years after the artist's death (Paragraph 4) [Civ. Code § 987(g)(1)].

- The description of the work of art, and the time and place of the wrongful act (Paragraph 4).

- Defendant's wrongful act (Paragraph 5).

- Damages [see Civ. Code § 987(a) (statement of legislative intent; damage presumed to flow from alteration or destruction of work of fine art)]. There is also an optional allegation that the defendant's act was malicious, oppressive, or fraudulent enough to warrant an award of punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 987(e)(3), discussed under [4], below].

[4] Statute of Limitations

The action must be brought within three years of the act complained of or one year after discovery of the act, whichever is longer [Civ. Code § 987(i)].

[5] Punitive Damages

An artist bringing an action to enforce his or her rights under Civ. Code § 987 may seek punitive damages. However, the court must, in its discretion, select an organization or organizations engaged in charitable or educational activities involving the fine art in California to receive the damages when awarded [Civ. Code § 987(e)(3)]. For further discussion of punitive damages generally, see Ch. 177, Damages , §ensp;177.40 et seq.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action for damages for the negligent commission of any physical defacement, mutilation, alteration, or destruction of a work of fine art when the work is being framed, conserved, or restored. The act that causes the destruction to the work of art must constitute gross negligence, which means the exercise of so slight a degree of care as to justify the belief that there was an indifference to the particular work of fine art. The action may be brought against the person who committed, or authorized the commission of, any destructive act [see Civ. Code § 987(c)(2), (e), discussed in § 57.53[1], [3]].

As discussed in § 57.151[2], Civ. Code § 987, has been preempted to a great extent by 17 U.S.C. §§ 106A, 113(d) [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f), discussed in § 57.51]. Nevertheless, this form is included, using as an example a situation that does not appear to be preempted, namely, vindication of rights created by Civ. Code § 987 after the artist's death, by the artist's heir beneficiary, or personal representative [see 17 U.S.C. § 301(f)(2)(C), Civ. Code § 987(g)(1), discussed at § 57.51[2] and § 57.53[4], respectively].

For discussion of Civ. Code § 987 as applied to works of fine art which are part of a building, see § 57.53[5].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- Plaintiff's status as the artist or a person entitled to enforce the rights for 50 years after the artist's death (Paragraph 1) [Civ. Code § 987(g)(1)].
- The description of the work of art (Paragraph 1).
- Delivery of the work to defendant for a purpose specified in Civ. Code § 987(c)(2) (Paragraph 5).
- Defendant's wrongful act (Paragraph 6).
- Damages [see Civ. Code § 987(a) (statement of legislative intent; damage presumed to flow from alteration or destruction of work of fine art)].

The form also includes an optional allegation regarding punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 987(e)(3), discussed at § 57.151[5]].

[4] Statute of Limitations

The action must be brought within three years of the act complained of or one year after discovery of the act, whichever is longer [Civ. Code § 987(i)].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use to obtain damages for injury to a work of art in the possession of a bailee for storage, based on the bailee's breach of the bailment agreement. If the bailee's breach consists in negligent performance of his or her duty to care for the property, plaintiff may alternatively have a cause of action in tort [see § 57.136[4]. The bailor is entitled to recover damages for injury to or destruction of bailed goods even if the bailor is not the owner of those goods [Sperisen v. Heynemann (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 228, 230, 308 P.2d 436] .

For alternative forms for allegations as to the nature of the bailment, which may be substituted in place of Paragraph 4 of this form, see § 57.161.

For special notices and procedures required under Civ. Code § 1899 et seq. when property is loaned to a museum, see §§ 57.70 -57.79.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges (1) the making of the agreement for a bailment for storage (Paragraph 4) and (2) delivery of the art work to the bailee in accordance with that agreement (Paragraph 4). If the right of recovery rests on the existence of the bailment relationship and the fact of bailment is in issue, the burden of establishing a bailment rests on the plaintiff and includes the burden of proving the making of a valid contract of bailment between the parties, the delivery to the bailee under the contract, and acceptance by the bailee [H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 647, 307 P.2d 429 ; see § 57.60[1]].

The complaint continues with allegations of the value of the art work including, if it has a special value, the fact that plaintiff informed defendant of that value or the facts from which defendant should have known the special value (Paragraph 5). The liability of a depositary for negligence cannot exceed the amount which the depositary is informed by the depositor, or has reason to suppose, the thing deposited to be worth [Civ. Code § 1840]. If the bailor does not disclose the value of the deposited property, and the bailee has no reason to suppose that it has a special value, this limitation does not apply, and the measure of damages is the actual value of the deposited property [see Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 855, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; see also § 57.62[1]].

Finally, the complaint alleges defendant's lack of care (Paragraph 6) and the consequences of that lack of care in terms of the specific damage to the work of art (Paragraph 7) and the financial loss to plaintiff (Paragraph 8). For optional allegations regarding special damaged, see § 57.162.

[4] Limitation Period

Mercedes-Benz Co. _____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 57.130[1]; for discussion, see § 57.130[4].]

The complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain recovery of a work of art that plaintiff put into the hands of defendant, as bailee, for storage and defendant has failed to return according to the terms of the bailment agreement [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380 (recovery of personal property)]. For discussion of the duty to return a bailed object, see § 57.63

This complaint may also be used in an action for the recovery of property loaned to a museum pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899 et seq., in which case the allegation regarding loan for use at § 57.161[2] should be used in place of the allegation regarding storage. For special notices and procedures required when property is loaned to a museum, see discussion in §§ 57.70 -57.79.

For alternative forms of allegations as to the type of bailment, which may be used in place of Paragraph 5 in the foregoing complaint, see § 57.161[1] (repair, alteration, or improvement), [2] (loan), [3] (rental).

For various defenses to a bailee's duty to return the bailed object, see § 57.166.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges (1) plaintiff's ownership of the work of art (Paragraph 4); (2) the bailment and delivery of the work of art to the defendant (Paragraph 5); plaintiff's demand for return of the work (Paragraph 6) [see Downey v. Martin Aircraft Service, Inc. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 100 (demand for return as not necessary if property is destroyed or lost)]; (4)defendant's failure and refusal to return the work (Paragraph 7); and (5) the value of the work of art (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 627 (jury as required to find value of property in action for recovery of personal property)].

There is also an optional allegation for use to set forth plaintiff's performance of any condition precedent to the return of the work, such as payment of any storage fees or fees for repair (Paragraph 8) [see § 57.60[3][b]].

The value of the property and damages for detention (Paragraph 10) are alleged because in an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession or the value thereof, in case a delivery cannot be had, and damages for detention [Code Civ. Proc. § 667].

If this form of complaint is being used against a museum to recover a work of art loaned to the museum, add either an allegation that the museum gave no notice of intent to terminate the loan, or an allegation that plaintiff received the museum's notice of intent to terminate the loan within three years prior to the filing of the [see Civ. Code § 1899.10(c); § 57.78[2]].

(For use by the museum.)

Notice received by: _____

Date of receipt: _____

Date: _____.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is identical to the form contained in Civ. Code § 1899.5(c); [see § 57.74].

This form may be used by the owner of property on loan to a museum to give notice to the museum of his or her intent to preserve an interest in the property [see Civ. Code § 1899.4(b); see §§ 57.73 -57.74].

A museum may also use a copy of this form to give the required written notice to a lender of the terms of Civ. Code §§ 1899-1899.11. A museum must give that notice if, on or after January 1, 1984, it accepts a loan of property for an indefinite term or for a term in excess of seven years. The notice must be given at the time of the loan. A copy of this form, or a citation to Civ. Code §§ 1899-1899.11, constitutes adequate notice [Civ. Code § 1899.3(a); see § 57.72[1]].

[3] Contents of Form

A notice of intent to preserve an interest in property must [Civ. Code § 1899.5(a); see § 57.74]:

- Be in writing;
- Contain a description of the property adequate to enable the museum to identify it;
- Be accompanied by documentation sufficient to establish the claimant as owner of the property; and
- Be signed under penalty of perjury by the claimant or a person authorized to act on behalf of the claimant.

A museum need not retain a notice which does not meet the above requirements. However, if a museum does not intend to keep a notice for this reason, it must promptly notify the claimant at the address given on the notice that the notice is ineffective and the reasons why it is ineffective. The fact that a museum retains a notice may not be construed to mean that the museum accepts the sufficiency or accuracy of the notice, or that the notice is effective to preserve an interest in property on loan [Civ. Code § 1899.5(b)].

[4] Receipt by Museum

A museum must furnish proof of receipt of a notice of intent to preserve an interest in property. The museum must either mail an original receipt or a copy of the receipt portion of the form notice to the lender or other claimant at the address given on the notice within 30 days of receiving the notice [Civ. Code § 1899.3(c)]. A museum must also retain for a period of not less than 25 years the original or an accurate copy of each notice filed by a claimant pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.4, unless the loaned property is returned to the claimant [Civ. Code § 1899.3(b)].

[5] Prerequisite to Some Actions for Recovery of Loaned Work

Effective January 1, 1985, no action can be brought against a museum to recover loaned property more than 25 years after the date of the last written contact between the lender and the museum, as evidenced by the museum's records [Civ. Code § 1899.10(b); see § 57.78[1] (limitation period for action against museum)]. However, if the lender was not given notice of the museum's intent to terminate the loan [see Civ. Code § 1899.9, discussed in § 57.77], and if the lender proves that a notice of intent to preserve an interest in the property was received by the museum within the 25 years immediately preceding the date on which the lender's right to recover the property otherwise expired under Civ. Code § 1899.10(b), the lender may be entitled to recover the property, or the reasonable value of it at the time of the disposal plus interest at the legal rate [Civ. Code § 1899.10(e)].

If a lender fails to file an action to recover property loaned to a museum within three years of receiving the museum's notice of intent to terminate the loan, or within the 25-year period noted above, the lender will be deemed to have donated the property to the museum [see Civ. Code § 1899.10(c); § 57.78[2]].

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that the subject property was injured or disposed of in the course of defendant's _____ [application of conservation measures or disposal of the property] pursuant to Section 1899.6 of the Civil Code. At the time of defendant's action, defendant had a reasonable belief that the action was necessary _____ [specify one or all of the following: to protect the subject property and/or to protect other property in the custody of defendant and/or because the subject property constituted a hazard to the health and safety of the public or defendant's staff] in that _____ [specify facts supporting allegation, e.g., the property was an organic material and it had become infected with life-threatening bacteria]. [2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, may be used in answer to a complaint for injury to or loss of property on loan to a museum, as set out in §§ 57.160, 57.161[2], if defendant museum applied conservation measures or disposed of the property pursuant to Civ. Code § 1899.6(a) [Civ. Code § 1899.6(b)(2) (discussed in § 57.75[3]; museum's reasonable belief that action was necessary as sufficient to protect it from liability)]. In general, Civ. Code § 1899.6(a) provides that, absent a written loan agreement to the contrary, a museum may apply conservation measures to or dispose of loaned property without the lender's consent if immediate action is required, and the lender cannot be reached or does not agree to the proposed measures but will not retrieve the property [see Civ. Code § 1899.6(a)]. See further discussion in § 57.75[1].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain recovery of an item of Holocaust-era artwork, after provenance research has authenticated the plaintiff's claim to the item. Holocaust-era artwork is any article of artistic significance taken as a result of Nazi persecution during the period of 1929 to 1945. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any owner, or heir or beneficiary of an owner, of Holocaust-era artwork, may bring an action to recover Holocaust-era artwork from any museum or gallery that displays, exhibits, or sells any article of historical, interpretive, scientific, or artistic significance [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(a),(b)]. For discussion, see § 57.97.

Subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 (providing that a California court may exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with the constitutions of California and of the United States), the action may be brought in a superior court, which will have jurisdiction over the action until its completion or resolution [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(b)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 361 does not apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(b)]. That section provides that when a cause of action has arisen in another state, or in a foreign country, and by the laws of that state or country an action cannot be maintained there against a person by reason of the lapse of time, an action cannot be maintained against the person in California, except in favor of one who has been a citizen of California, and who has held the cause of action from the time it accrued.

An action brought under Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3 cannot be dismissed for failure to comply with the applicable statute of limitations, if the action is commenced on or before December 31, 2010 [Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(c)].

WARNING: Federal Preemption.

In August 2009, a Ninth Circuit panel held that the extension of the limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3(c) is invalid under the field-preemption doctrine because it "intrudes on the power to make and resolve war, a power reserved exclusively to the federal government by the Constitution" [Saher v. Norton Simon Museum of Art at Pasadena (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1016]. However, the Ninth Circuit's opinion does recognize that legislative amendments may avoid a preemption problem. In addition, the opinion may be subject to en banc review.

Courts have now invalidated, on preemption grounds, four of the six code sections embodying, in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 354.3-354.7, the legislature's scheme to provide remedies for the victims, and survivors of victims, of torts and crimes that occurred many years ago in other countries. The statutes so far invalidated, along with Code Civ. Proc. § 354.3, are Code Civ. Proc. § 354.4 [Movsesian v. Victoria Versicherung AG (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1052], Code Civ. Proc. § 354.5 [Steinberg v. International Comm'n on Holocaust Era Ins. Claims (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 689, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 944], and Code Civ. Proc. § 354.6 [Deustch v. Turner (9th Cir. 2003) 324 F.3d 692]. In addition, the United States Supreme Court has invalidated, on preemption grounds, a similar effort under Ins. Code § 13800 et seq. [Am. Ins. Ass'n v. Garamendi (2003) 539 U.S. 396, 123 S. Ct. 2374, 156 L. Ed. 2d 376].

§ 58.10 Governing Statutes

[1] Statutory Right of Protection

Many of the common law tort rules were included in the 1872 codification of the common law in the Civil Code. The right of protection from bodily harm is set forth in Civ. Code § 43. The right to protect one's person, property, relative, family, ward, servant, master, or guest from wrongful injury is found in Civ. Code § 50. The maxim of jurisprudence that one who consents to an act is not wronged by it is found in Civ. Code § 3515.

[2] Minor and Incompetent Liability

The scope of liability of incompetents for their civil wrongs is stated in Civ. Code § 41.

The scope of minors' liability for their civil wrongs is governed by Fam. Code § 6600, and the liability of parents or guardians for the willful acts of their minor children is governed by Civ. Code § 1714.1. For discussion and forms regarding liability of a parent or guardian for a battery committed by a child or ward, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

[3] Employer and Employee Liability

Liability is governed by the following:

- The liability of principals for the acts of their agents is governed by Civ. Code §§ 2338, 2339.
- The liability of public employees is governed by Gov. Code §§ 820, 820.2.
- The liability of public employers is governed by Gov. Code § 815.2.

For further discussion of employer and employee liability, see Ch. 248, Employer Liability for Employee's Torts , Ch. 427, Principal and Agent , and Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

Limitations periods are prescribed as follows:

- The statute of limitations for actions for personal injuries is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1.

- The statute of limitations for actions against certain medical personnel is set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5.

- The statute of limitations for actions for personal injuries by a minor sustained prior to or in the course of birth is set forth in Civ. Code Proc. § 340.4.

Periods of disability not included in time limitations for the commencement of actions are provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 352.

For further discussion of limitations of actions, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

[5] Damages

Compensatory damages are governed by Civ. Code § 3333; punitive damages by Civ. Code § 3294.

For further discussion of compensatory damages, see § 58.17. For further discussion of punitive damages, see § 58.18.

[6] Crimes of Assault and Battery

The crimes of assault and battery are set forth in Penal Code §§ 240-247.5.

The Penal Code also sets forth certain duties with regard to arrest and resistance. The duty of a person to refrain from resisting arrest is stated in Penal Code § 834a. The right of a peace officer to arrest and to use reasonable force to effect an arrest is stated in Penal Code §§ 835a, 836. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 58.11 Distinction Between Assault and Battery

Although the terms "assault" and "battery" are frequently used interchangeably or in conjunction with one another in both pleadings and appellate court opinions, the terms refer to two distinct torts [see Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 603, 191 P.2d 432] . Battery is an unconsented invasion of a person's right to be free from intentional, unlawful, and harmful or offensive contact [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 (emphasis added)]. An assault is an invasion of a person's right to live without being put in fear of personal harm [Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 (emphasis added)]. Simply stated, a battery is a completed act of tortious contact, while an assault is the creation of the apprehension of tortious contact [see Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 603, 191 P.2d 432] .

Thus, although both an assault and a battery may be present in many cases, one may exist without the other. For example, an offensive contact inflicted on another while he or she is asleep or unconscious, but not discovered until afterward, would constitute a battery but not an assault since the victim had no apprehension of the contact [see Zanotto v. Marogna (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 329, 331-332, 268 P.2d 826] . On the other hand, the act of pointing a gun at another person for the purpose of frightening him or her would constitute an assault but not a battery [seee.g., Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57] .

Chapter 58 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.12

§ 58.12 Applicability of Penal Code Definitions

[1] Definitions under the Penal Code

Assault and battery are crimes as well as torts in California. Criminal battery is any willful and unlawful use of force or violence on the person of another [Penal Code § 242]. Criminal assault is an unlawful attempt, coupled with a present ability, to commit a violent injury on the person of another [Penal Code § 240]. The least touching is sufficient force to constitute criminal battery [People v. Rocha (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 893, 899 n.12, 92 Cal. Rptr. 172, 479 P.2d 372 (force need not be violent or severe, need not cause bodily harm or pain, and need not leave any mark)]. Also, "violent injury," as used in the definition of assault, has been broadly construed to include any wrongful act committed by means of physical force against another [People v. Herrera (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 846, 851, 86 Cal. Rptr. 165] . Therefore, it has been said that, under criminal law, an assault is essentially an attempted battery [People v. Rocha (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 893, 899, 92 Cal. Rptr. 172, 479 P.2d 372] .

[2] Criminal Assault and Battery Compared to Civil Assault and Battery

The criminal definitions of assault and battery vary significantly from the corresponding civil torts. An act that intentionally places another in fear of a battery may be a civil assault even if no actual battery is intended or possible [see Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 ; see § 58.15]. Criminal assault, in contrast, must be based on an actual intent to commit a battery, not just on an attempt to frighten, and must be accompanied by a present ability to complete the act [People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520] .

Also, there may be some harmful and offensive contacts that are civilly actionable as battery, but that do not constitute the use of force or violence within the criminal meaning [see Comment to BAJI, No. 7.51 (7th ed.) (adopting definition of civil battery from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 18 and expressly rejecting definition of battery in Penal Code § 242)]. For example, it is difficult to conceptualize unauthorized medical treatment as a criminal battery [see § 58.14[1]], although it may be civilly actionable as an unprivileged touching.

Numerous older cases may be found that endorse civil jury instructions based on the Penal Code definitions of assault or battery [see, e.g., Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; McChristian v. Popkin (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 249, 260, 171 P.2d 85 ; Fraguglia v. Sala, (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742, 62 P.2d 783] .

None of these cases expressly considers the differences in the civil and criminal standards, nor does any expressly reject the broader civil definitions in favor of applying the narrower criminal definitions in a civil action. These cases all deal with alleged conduct that, if true, would be both tortious and criminal in the absence of an affirmative defense, and for which it was unnecessary to carefully distinguish between civil and criminal standards. More recent opinions have abandoned the Penal Code definitions in favor of the broader civil standards [see, e.g., Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; Delia S. v. Torres (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 471, 480, 184 Cal. Rptr. 787 (overruled on other grounds in Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 868, 905, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.13

§ 58.13 Cause of Action for Battery

[1] Battery Defined

The tort of battery has been defined as any intentional, unlawful, and harmful or offensive contact by one person with the person of the other [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; Delia S. v. Torres (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 471, 480, 184 Cal. Rptr. 787 (overruled on other grounds in Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 868, 905, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79)]. This definition, which is set out in the standard California jury instructions [see BAJI, No. 7.51 (7th ed.)], is essentially in accordance with the definition of the tort of battery of the Restatement (Second) of Torts [see Comment to BAJI No. 7.51; Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 13(1), 18(1)].

*BAJI No. 7.51*as it existed before a 1992 amendment, although correct in the abstract, required clarification in some cases. By defining battery as "any intentional, unlawful and harmful contact," it was not clear that lack of consent was sufficient to make contact unlawful for purposes of the definition [Barouh v. Haberman (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 40, 45 47, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259 (use of instruction, and refusal to give clarifying instruction, required reversal of defense judgment)]. The instruction now uses the word "unconsented" instead of "unlawful."

[2] Elements of Battery

The applicable Restatement sections provide that a person is subject to liability to another for battery if:

- He or she acts intending to cause harmful or offensive contact with the person of the other or a third person, or to cause an imminent apprehension of such a contact; and

- A harmful or offensive contact with the person of the other directly or indirectly results [see Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 13(a), 18(1)].

[3] Element of Intent

[a] General Intent Required

The general rule is that every person is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his or her acts. One is liable for the consequences that directly and naturally result from conduct, even if the particular injury that results is not intended [see Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111 (liability for gunshot wounds even if there is no intent to injure by firing gun)]. Therefore, it has been said that the intent necessary to constitute battery is an intent to do the act that causes the harm, not the intent to cause the harm [Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 641, 301 P.2d 440] .

This statement, however, it is not a complete statement of the element of intent. In Lopez, the court stated that a specific intent to injure is immaterial only if the act causing the injury is itself unlawful or wrongful [Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111] . The reasonable conclusion of the court's language is that if the act itself is an innocent one, the mere intent to do the act is insufficient if it has the unintended consequence of leading to a harmful or offensive contact.

For example, in Singer, the rule that the only intent required is that of doing the particular act was applied to a nine-year-old who threw a rock at another child. However, the act was considered to be throwing a rock at a person. The court noted that throwing rocks is an innocent and lawful pastime if thrown at trees or into the street, and becomes wrongful only if thrown at another person [Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 641-642, 301 P.2d 440] . Thus, if the act itself is not always wrongful, it is not strictly the intent to do the act that causes the harm (for example, throwing a rock) that is required, but rather an intent that the act have, as a consequence, contact with the person of another (for example, throwing a rock at a person), even if there is no specific intent to injure [see Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 315, 253 P.2d 675] .

In another case, a special education teacher was not liable for battery when his touching of autistic students was reasonable under the circumstances and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the defendant intended to harm the students. The court stressed that the school teacher stood in loco parentis to the students and the teacher's contact with the students was necessary to control and guide the students [Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 872-876, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 454] .

[b] Intent to Harm One's Self

One court of appeal has upheld a trial court's implicit finding that the attempt to harm one's self is not unlawful or wrongful conduct because the law imposes no criminal liability for intentional acts of self-destruction [Fluharty v. Fluharty (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 484, 497, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244] . In that case, the plaintiff's wife was slightly injured when plaintiff successfully intervened in the defendant's suicide attempt. Plaintiff initiated the contact and defendant had sought to avoid it. The court reasoned that defendant had no intent to harm anyone other than himself and therefore plaintiff's assault and battery claim was properly rejected by the trial court [Fluharty v. Fluharty (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 484, 497, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244] .

[c] Doctrine of Transferred Intent

If a person acts with the intent to make a wrongful contact with one person and instead accidentally makes contact with another, the actor may be liable for any injury suffered by the person struck. This rule is frequently referred to as the doctrine of "transferred intent" [Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 642, 301 P.2d 440 ; Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111] .

It is sufficient intent if the actor intended only to put the victim in apprehension of the contact and not to make contact, if the result is that a harmful or offensive bodily contact is actually made. In other words, the intent to commit an assault is sufficient intent to support a battery. Thus, firing a weapon in the general direction of another with the intent solely to scare that person is sufficient intent to constitute a battery if the result is that the person is struck and injured by the act [Weisbart v. Flohr (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 281, 284-285, 67 Cal. Rptr. 114] .

[4] Element of Offensive Contact

[a] Offensive Contact Defined

A person is liable for a battery if his or her act results in a harmful or offensive contact with another [Delia S. v. Torres (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 471, 480, 184 Cal. Rptr. 787 (emphasis added; overruled on other grounds in Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 868, 905, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79); see CACI No. 1300]. California courts have not been called on to set the parameters of what is offensive contact. However, the Restatement (Second) defines offensive contact as contact that offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity [Restatement (Second) Torts § 19]. The contact must be one that would offend the ordinary person, who is not unduly sensitive as to his or her personal dignity. Therefore, it must be unwarranted by the social usages prevalent at the time when and the place where the contact occurs [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 19, Comment a]. However, the least touching of another may constitute a battery if it involves an element of personal indignity or insult, or if done in a rude and insolent manner [Prosser and Keeton on Torts, Ch. 2, § 9 (West 5th ed. 1984); see People v. Martinez (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 886, 889, 83 Cal. Rptr. 914 (criminal case involving kick by barefoot person to shin of police officer wearing boots)].

[b] Awareness of Contact Not Necessary

A victim need not have been aware of the contact to recover damages for battery. For example, if A is attacked first by B, and rendered unconscious, and then attacked by C, A may recover from C as well as from B even though A was unaware of C's acts when they occurred [see Zanotto v. Marogna (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 329, 331-332, 268 P.2d 826] . Thus,unauthorized medical treatment performed on an unconscious person may constitute a battery [see Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142 ; see also § 58.14[1]].

[5] Element of Absence of Consent

[a] Consent Defined

A person may consent to an act that otherwise would be a battery. Consent may be express or by voluntary participation in a lawful activity within which the contact occurs [Delia S. v. Torres (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 471, 480, 184 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; see BAJI No. 7.52]. Thus, it has been stated that consent is a complete legal defense to a battery [Carr v. Dickey (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 416, 423, 329 P.2d 539 ; see Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 892-892D (discussing consent in chapter on Justification and Excuse in Division entitled "Defenses Applicable to All Tort Claims")].

Despite this statement, consent is not an affirmative defense to battery, but, rather, lack of consent to the alleged contact is an essential element of the tort [Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39-40, 224 P.2d 808 ; see Civ. Code § 3515 (maxim that one who consents to act is not wronged by it); see also Prosser and Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 18 (West 5th ed. 1984) (consent is not, strictly speaking, a defense, but prevents the existence of any tort in the first instance by negating the wrongful element of the defendant's act); but see Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 892-892D (discussing consent in Division on defenses to any tort action without considering burdens of pleading and proof)].

[b] Plaintiff Required to Plead Absence of Consent

The plaintiff must plead facts sufficient to show that there was an absence of informed consent to the particular offensive contact alleged [see Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249] . The defendant need not plead consent affirmatively, but its lack may be shown under a general denial. The burden of proving lack of consent is on the plaintiff [Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39-40, 224 P.2d 808] . For a form of complaint that contains sample allegations showing a lack of informed consent, see § 58.50. For a form of a demurrer based on the plaintiff's failure to properly plead lack of consent, see § 58.91.

[c] Exceeding Scope of Consent

An act that exceeds the scope of the consent given may constitute a battery [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr.422] . For consideration of this rule in the context of medical treatment, see § 58.14[1], and Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[d] Consent to Illegal Conduct

A person who consents to and participates in an illegal act that otherwise constitutes a battery cannot recover for the consequences of the act from another participant [Sayadoff v. Warda (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 630-632, 271 P.2d 140 (illegal abortion)]. There is an exception in the case of an act made illegal for the purpose of protecting a particular class of persons from their inability to appreciate the consequences of the act. In such a case, the consent of a member of the protected class does not negate liability [Hudson v. Craft (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 654, 657, 204 P.2d 1 (unlicensed promoter of boxing exhibition liable for injuries suffered by willing participant)].

As to voluntary mutual combat, there is a division of authority that has not been resolved in California. Some courts in other jurisdictions have allowed each combatant to hold the other liable for any injury received even though both consented to the contest [see Comment to BAJI No. 7.52 (noting that such is the majority rule, although not resolved in California)]. Because it is perceived that this rule encourages rather than deters mutual combat, other courts and commentators have taken the contrary position, that by consenting, each negates any claim of tortious conduct against the other [see generally Hudson v. Craft (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 654, 656, 204 P.2d 1 (discussing cases from other jurisdictions in dictum)].

[i] Misrepresentation

Misrepresentation may vitiate consent to contact that otherwise would constitute a battery. Misrepresentation as to the identity of the person making the contact would vitiate consent if the offensive nature of the contact is altered according to the identity or capacity of the actor in relation to the person subjected to the contact (for example, impersonating a physician). Also, misrepresentation as to the necessity of the contact vitiates consent (for example, representing that a given contact, otherwise offensive, is required for medical treatment, when, in fact, it is not) [Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 939-940, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249] .

[ii] Misrepresentation Compared to Collateral Inducement

It has been stated that the misrepresentation must extend to the essential character of the act itself, that is, to that which makes it harmful or offensive, rather than to a collateral matter that merely operates as an inducement. For example, consent to sexual intercourse obtained by misrepresentation that it will improve one's singing voice goes to the essential character of the act and is vitiated; consent obtained by a false promise to marry is collateral inducement and does not vitiate consent[Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 939-940, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; (citing Prosser on Torts, ch. 4, § 18 (West 4th Ed. 1971), and Fleming on Torts § 78 (4th ed. 1971))].

However, it is not clear whether or not this distinction is still viable under California law. One court has held that a battery was well pleaded by an allegation that consent to sexual intercourse was vitiated by the man's misrepresentation of his infertility [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 (woman suffered sterility because of tubal pregnancy)]. Another court appears to have allowed an action for battery to proceed based on vitiation of consent to sexual intercourse by the fraudulent concealment of the risk of transmission of disease [Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994-997, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 (plaintiff pleaded multiple tort theories, including battery; court found action not to be barred by constitutional right of privacy without specific consideration of facts as applied to battery)]. The misrepresentations in these cases seem more like collateral inducement, such as a fraudulent promise to marry, than to fraud regarding the essential character of the act, such as a promise of vocal enhancement. Other courts, without addressing the essential-character/collateral-inducement distinction, have found tort actions based on misrepresentations in the area of procreative decisions to be barred by the constitutional right of privacy [see Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 16-17, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402 (abortion induced by misrepresentation); Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 642-645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 (woman's misrepresentation as to birth control)].

For further discussion, see § 58.26. For a form for allegations of battery arising from sexual intercourse fraudulently induced, see § 58.57.

Chapter 58 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.14

§ 58.14 Battery in Medical Context

[1] Informed Consent to Medical Treatment

Providing medical treatment to a person without his or her consent may constitute a battery [Rainer v. Community Memorial Hospital (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 255, 95 Cal. Rptr. 901 ; see BAJI No. 6.10.5], a situation sometimes referred to as "technical battery"[see Weinstock v. Eissler (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 212, 233, 36 Cal. Rptr. 537] . If a medical professional obtains the patient's consent to perform one type of treatment and subsequently performs a substantially different treatment for which consent has not been obtained, a battery may also have been committed [Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 239, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 ; see BAJI No. 6.10.5].

Consent to medical care, including surgery, may be express or implied from the circumstances, and may be oral or written [Clemens v. Regents of University of California (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-9, 87 Cal. Rptr. 108 ; see BAJI No. 6.10]. It may be manifested by acts or conduct, in addition to words [Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39, 224 P.2d 808] .

[2] Scope of Consent to Medical Care

Consent to a particular procedure implies consent to do all those things that are a normal incident of the procedure [Bradford v. Winter (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 448, 454, 30 Cal. Rptr. 243 (consent to bronchoscopy carries with it consent to remove tissue and perform biopsy)]. However, consent to a particular medical procedure or treatment does not constitute a general consent to other procedures or treatment that the treating medical professional may deem to be appropriate [see Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142 ; see also Hundley v. St. Francis Hospital (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 800, 803, 806, 327 P.2d 131 (consent to surgery does not imply consent to remove other parts of body that are not normally excised during the operation consented to)].

[3] Duty to Disclose

A medical professional has a duty to disclose the nature of any medical procedures that may be performed on a patient along with the risks involved so that the patient may give his or her informed consent to the treatment. However, the occurrence of injury from an undisclosed risk, alone, is not a battery. If the patient consents to a particular treatment and the medical professional performs that treatment, but an undisclosed inherent complication with a low probability occurs, there is no intentional deviation from the consent obtained. Rather, the medical professional may have failed to meet the duty to disclose pertinent information. In such a situation, the action should be pleaded as negligence rather than as a battery [Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 239-241, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] . A battery theory, however, may still apply to some situations involving a lack of disclosure of inherent risks [see Nelson v. Gaunt (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 623, 634-635, 178 Cal. Rptr. 167] .

The facts of Nelson were extreme in that the medical professional made false and misleading statements and knowingly concealed both the nature of the proposed procedure and its inherent risks. On these facts, the court held that the patient had consented to a procedure that was substantially different from the one that was performed, and that, therefore, a battery was well pleaded [Nelson v. Gaunt (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 623, 634-635, 178 Cal. Rptr. 167 (construing Cobbs as implying that failure to discuss nature of treatment sounds in battery)].

For further discussion of a medical professional's duty to disclose information on which informed consent may be based, see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice .

[4] Implied Consent in Emergency Situations

[a] Scope of Emergency Situation

Consent may be implied from an emergency situation [Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 243, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 ; cf. Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39, 224 P.2d 808 (medical emergency is a not an instance of implied consent, but rather a separate and distinct defense)]. An emergency is an unforeseen combination of circumstances that calls for immediate action [Wheeler v. Barker (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 776, 785, 208 P.2d 68 ; see BAJI No. 6.15]. It is the general rule that if there is an emergency or unanticipated condition for which some immediate action is necessary for the preservation of the life or health of a patient and it is impracticable to first obtain consent, the medical professional is justified in rendering the necessary treatment without the express consent of the patient. In the case of surgery being performed on a patient under anesthesia, the surgeon must respond to emergency conditions as required by usual and customary practice without waiting to obtain the consent of the patient [Preston v. Hubbell (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 53, 57-59, 196 P.2d 113 ; see BAJI No. 6.13].

A true emergency situation is required in order to invoke implied consent. There is no implied consent to treatment that is merely deemed advisable by the medical professional on discovering unexpected conditions [Preston v. Hubbell (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 53, 59-60, 196 P.2d 113] . If the evidence is in conflict, whether an emergency situation exists is a question of fact [Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142] .

[b] Scope of Written General Consent

It is not entirely clear whether the scope of a patient's consent may be broadened to extend to treatment that is only advisable by the use of a written general consent form that often must be signed by a patient on admission to a hospital. In one case, such a writing was narrowly construed to extend only to a situation of necessity even though the writing stated that the patient was giving consent to treatment that may "be deemed advisable or necessary"[Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142] . In two other cases, the same wording was relied on, in part, to find valid consent. In each, the facts involved a true emergency and not merely advisable treatment. Thus, implied consent for emergency treatment could have been found without considering the writing at all under the rule of implied consent to emergency treatment, suggesting that the courts might have enforced the writing even in the absence of a true emergency [Danielson v. Roche (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 832, 835, 241 P.2d 1028 ; Wheeler v. Barker (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 776, 783-786, 208 P.2d 68] . In a fourth case, not involving an emergency, the same language was not treated as conclusive, but noted as evidence supporting the jury's inference of consent from conduct [see Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37 39, 224 P.2d 808] .

[5] Conditional Consent or Legal Disabilities of Patient

Consent may be conditioned on the existence or nonexistence of a given fact. If the medical professional proceeds without regard to the condition on which consent is given, there may be a battery based on a deviation from that consent [Grieves v. Superior Court (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 159, 164-166, 203 Cal. Rptr. 556 (consent given to tubal ligation after birth only if child born without abnormalities; surgeon proceeded with ligation, and child subsequently died from abnormality)]. To be liable for performing a medical procedure while failing to abide by a known condition imposed by the patient, the doctor must have intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition. Negligent failure to abide by the condition is an insufficient basis for liability for battery [Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540, 544, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 (approving intent requirement imposed in CACI No. 530B)].

If a patient is under no legal disability, his or her consent, alone, is sufficient [Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 38, 224 P.2d 808 (consent of patient's spouse not required)]. If the patient is a minor or incompetent, the authority to consent is transferred to the patient's legal representative or closest available relative [Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 244, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 ; see BAJI No. 6.10; see also Civ. Code § 25.8 (person with legal custody may authorize medical treatment of minor)]. A minor may consent to his or her own medical treatment if married or a member of the armed services [Civ. Code §§ 25.6, 25.7], or for certain needs that are specified by statute [see Civ. Code §§ 34.5-34.10, discussed in Ch. 366, Minors: Court Consent for Medical Care or Enlistment]. Chapter 58 ASSAULT AND BATTERY

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.15

§ 58.15 Cause of Action for Assault

[1] Assault Defined

[a] Elements of Civil Assault

The civil tort of assault requires no intent to actually make any contact with the victim, nor any actual ability to inflict injury. Rather, it is sufficient that the actor intends only to put another in apprehension of such a contact, if the apprehension is actually created [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 21(1); Prosser and Keaton on Torts, ch. 4, § 10 (West 5th ed. 1984)].

[b] Civil Use of Criminal Assault Definition

The parameters of the tort of assault in California are somewhat unclear. This uncertainty has been created primarily by the use of the Penal Code definition of assault in civil cases [see, e.g., Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251Cal. App. 2d 378, 386 , 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] , which is significantly different than the generally accepted civil tort [see People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520 ; see also § 58.12].

Under the Penal Code, an assault is an attempt to commit a violent injury on another, accompanied by the actual ability to inflict the injury [Penal Code § 240]. This differs from the civil definition which does not require an actual ability to inflict injury. Thus, it is not a crime in California to scare another person [People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520] , but it may be civilly actionable. These distinctions have been recognized by the California Supreme Court in the criminal context [see People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520] , but have not been expressly adopted in civil cases.

Unlike battery, assault has not often been litigated, and standard jury instructions on assault have not been adopted [see Use Note to BAJI No. 7.50 (instructions for battery do not apply to assault, defined as the apprehension of harmful or offensive contact)]. A single California opinion has departed from the criminal definition of assault in a civil case and applied the common civil definition instead. In 1944, it was held that the act of pointing a gun at another in a menacing manner for the purpose of scaring that person was an assault, regardless of whether or not the gun was loaded and regardless of whether or not the actor intended to shoot the victim, as long as the victim was unaware that the gun was not loaded and feared personal injury [Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57] . However, since 1944 courts have continued to use the Penal Code definition of assault in civil actions [see, e.g., Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] .

[2] Element of Intent

Under either the Penal Code or the civil definition, assault is an intentional act. Under the civil definition, the actor must intend either to cause a harmful or offensive contact or to put one in apprehension of such a contact. An unintentional act does not constitute an assault regardless of how much apprehension the act causes [Restatement (Second) Torts § 21; see Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57 (assault is demonstration of unlawful intent by one person to inflict immediate injury on another)].

It has been said that the crime of assault is an intentional tort [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 385, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] . However, if civil assault is the same as criminal assault, the intent must be to actually commit a violent injury [see Penal Code § 240]. An intent to frighten alone is not sufficient [People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520] .

[3] Element of Harmful or Offensive Contact

Under the definition of civil assault, the assaulter must either intend to cause harmful or offensive contact or intend to put the victim in imminent apprehension of such a contact [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 21(1); see also Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57] . Therefore, the element of harmful or offensive contact must be present, either in the mind of the actor or in the mind of the victim. For further discussion, see § 58.13[4].

If civil assault is the same as criminal assault, an attempted violent injury is required [see Penal Code § 240]. However, "violent injury" has been broadly construed to include any wrongful act committed by means of physical force against another [People v. Herrera (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 846, 851, 86 Cal. Rptr. 165] .

[4] Element of Absence of Consent

Lack of consent to tortious conduct is an essential element of any tort [see Civ. Code § 3515 (maxim that one who consents to an act is not wronged by it); see also Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39-40, 224 P.2d 808 (lack of consent to harmful or offensive contact is essential element of battery)]. Therefore, consent to conduct that otherwise might constitute an assault would vitiate the tort [see § 58.13[5]].

[5] Element of Apprehension of Harm

Under the civil definition of assault, the victim must actually be put in imminent apprehension of a harmful or offensive contact [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 21(1)(b); see also Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 (essence of civil assault is invasion of one's right to live without fear of personal harm)]. An attempt to inflict a harmful or offensive contact is not an assault if the intended victim is not aware of the attempt before it is terminated [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 22].

Mere words, however threatening or profane, do not amount to an assault [Tomblinson v. Nobile (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 266, 269, 229 P.2d 97] . The Restatement sets forth numerous additional rules as to what constitutes sufficient apprehension [see e.g., Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 25 (source of danger other than actor is sufficient), 26 (threat to third person is insufficient)]. None of these rules appears to have ever been applied in California.

If civil assault is the same as criminal assault, the subjective state of the victim's mind is irrelevant to the tort [People v. Mosqueda (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 540, 544, 85 Cal. Rptr. 346 (in criminal cases, subjective belief of victim is not determinative)].

[6] Element of Ability to Cause Immediate Harm

Under the civil definition of assault, the ability or lack of ability of the actor to actually carry out a battery is irrelevant as long as the intended victim believes the act can be carried out and has imminent apprehension of the act [Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 (pointing of gun at another is sufficient unless target knows that gun in fact is unloaded)]. If civil assault is the same as criminal assault, the actor must have the present ability to commit a violent injury on the person of another [Penal Code § 240; see People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.16

§ 58.16 Persons Liable for Torts of Assault and Battery

[1] Liability of Aiders and Abettors

A party who is injured by an assault or battery may recover damages not only from the actual assailant, but from any other person who aids, abets, counsels, or encourages the attack [Ayer v. Robinson (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 424, 428, 329 P.2d 546] . This rule appears to be merely another way of saying that nonassailants may be held liable for conspiracy to commit an assault or battery [see Michael R. v. Jeffrey B. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 1059, 1069, 205 Cal. Rptr. 312 (words, "Hey shoot him; go for it" sufficient to make speaker liable as co-conspirator); see Sayadoff v. Warda (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 629, 271 P.2d 140] .

For a form adding a count for conspiracy to a complaint for assault and battery, see § 58.57. For further discussion of civil conspiracy, see Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

[2] Liability of Minor or Incompetent

In general, a minor or incompetent person of any degree is civilly liable for his or her torts, but is not liable in punitive damages unless at the time of the act he or she was capable of knowing that it was wrongful [Civ. Code § 41]. Therefore, it is not necessary that a minor or incompetent appreciate the wrongfulness of conduct in order to be liable in compensatory damages for the results [Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 314-315, 253 P.2d 675] .

This rule is qualified by the limitation that the minor or incompetent must have the state of mind necessary to formulate any intent that is an element of the tort [Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 314-315, 253 P.2d 675] . With regard to battery, the minor or incompetent must have the capacity to intend the violent contact that is essential to the commission of the tort [Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 315, 253 P.2d 675 ; see §§ 58.13[3], 58.15[2]]. A specific intent to cause injury is not required [Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 301 P.2d 440] . Whether a minor or incompetent had the requisite intent is a question of fact [Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 317, 253 P.2d 675 (four-year-old may be liable for attack on baby sitter); see Weisbart v. Flohr (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 281, 287-291, 67 Cal. Rptr. 114 (seven-year-old may be liable for shooting arrow at playmate); Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 641-642, 301 P.2d 440 (nine-year-old may be liable for throwing rock at playmate)].

[3] Liability of Parent or Guardians

A minor's willful conduct is imputed by statute to a parent or guardian who has custody or control of the minor, subject to dollar limitations on liability [see Civ. Code § 1714.1; see also Civ. Code § 1714.3 (parent's liability for minor's discharge of firearm); Educ. Code § 48904 (parent's liability for willful misconduct of pupil)].

In addition to this limited statutory imputed liability, a parent may be liable for a child's torts if the parent's negligence made it possible for the child to cause the injury and probable that the child would do so [Weisbart v. Flohr (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 281, 291, 67 Cal. Rptr. 114] . The parent will incur liability for the child's intentional acts of violence if, knowing of the child's vicious or destructive tendencies or acts, the parent fails to exercise reasonable measures to restrain or discipline the child, and thus encourages or acquiesces in the misconduct [Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 318, 253 P.2d 675 ; see Civ. Code § 1714.1(a) (statutory imputed liability is in addition to any other liability imposed by law)]. For further discussion of a parent's liability for the torts of a child and for forms imputing liability to a parent for the acts of a child, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

[4] Liability of Employer

[a] Liability under Doctrine of Respondeat Superior

An employer is liable for the willful and malicious torts of an employee committed in the scope of employment [Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 654, 171 P.2d 5 ; see Civ. Code § 2338]. This rule of respondeat superior applies to both private and public employers [Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 138-139, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 ; see Gov. Code § 815.2].

[b] "Incident to Duties" Standard

[i] "Incident to Duties" Standard Defined

Vicarious employer liability does not require that the employee's act further the employer's interest. It is sufficient if the act is incident to a dispute arising out of the employment relationship [Carr v. Wm C. CrowellCo. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 654, 171 P.2d 5] . Thus, an employer is liable for an employee's battery on a customer resulting from a dispute over an order or account [see Stansell v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 822, 824, 113 P.2d 264 ; Hiroshima v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 24, 28, 63 P.2d 340] , and an employer-contractor is liable for a battery by its employees on the employees of another contractor at the same job site arising from a dispute over work-related matters [Carr v. Wm C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 653-657, 171 P.2d 5 ; Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617 624, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

[ii] Employee's Personal Malice

An employee is not acting incident to his or her duties if the act committed arises from personal malice unconnected with the employment relationship [Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 621, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143] . This rule applies even if the battery is committed on the employer's premises during the employee's work hours [see Monty v. Orlandi (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 620, 624, 337 P.2d 861] . Nor is nonliability negated by factors such as the employee's being on assignment for the employer, with an expense account, company car, and living quarters, if the motive is unconnected to the employment [Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 955-958, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95] .

[iii] "Incident to Duties" Standard Applied to Sexual Assault

The "incident-to-duties" standard has been applied in cases of sexual assault committed by the employee while on duty with differing results. In one case, the court held that an employer school district was not liable for an employee janitor's assault on a student because the assault was in no way incident to any duties of a janitor [Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139-144, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287] . In another, the court held that a sexual assault committed by a police officer after making a traffic stop was incident to the officer's duties. The court considered that a police officer, unlike a janitor, was cloaked with the authority of the law, and that the employer-government should be liable for acts done during the exercise of this authority [White v. County of Orange (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571-572, 212 Cal. Rptr. 493] .

In comparison to the case involving a police officer, the court of appeal has held that the private employer of an on-duty security guard was not liable for a sexual assault committed by the uniformed and armed guard after he pulled over the victim while she was driving down the highway. In that case, although the assault may not have occurred but for the employment, the guard's decision to assault the victim was strictly personal and did not arise out of the guard's duties [Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 146-147, 102 Cal.Rptr. 2d 326] . The assault did not arise from the misuse of authority uniquely conferred on a public law enforcement officer, and the guard was not acting as an official representative of the state at the time of the assault [Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 146, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326] .

[c] "Foreseeability of Act" Standard

In recent cases, it has been stated that, as an alternative to the "incident-to-duties" standard, the determination as to whether an employee committed a tort during the course of employment may turn on whether the employee's misconduct could be reasonably foreseen by the employer [White v. County of Orange (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 566, 570-571, 212 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287] . Foreseeability in this context is distinct from foreseeability as a test for negligence. It means only that, in the context of the particular enterprise, an employee's conduct is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the loss resulting from it among other costs of the employer's business [Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 618-619, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

To date, the foreseeability test has not been applied to find an employer liable for an employee's battery [see Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139-144, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 (sexual assault by employee janitor on student is not reasonably foreseeable to employer school district)]. The test seems more appropriate for analysis of respondeat superior on the basis of an employee's negligence.

[d] Punitive Damages

If the plaintiff seeks punitive damages from an employer based on an employee's conduct, plaintiff must also establish the facts specified in Civ. Code § 3294(b). For discussion, see § 58.18.

For a form for an allegation of agency between an employer and employee, see § 58.59. For a further discussion of respondeat superior liability, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

[e] Reference to Workers' Compensation Law

It has been said that the test for determining whether a given act arose out of or in the course of employment for the purpose of respondeat superior is closely related to the test applied in workers' compensation cases for determining whether an injury to an employee is compensable [Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 619, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 ; see discussion of compensability of injuries in Ch. 577, Worker's Compensation]. However, it has also been said that there is a marked conceptual difference in the rationale for workers' compensation and respondeat superior, and that workers' compensation law is not controlling under thedoctrine of respondeat superior [Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 958, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95] .

[f] Actions Brought by Co-Employee

The rules discussed above apply only when an action is being brought by a third party; they do not apply when the plaintiff is a co-employee of the person committing the assault. The Labor Code specifically provides that, while an injured co-employee may bring an action for assault against a co-employee, an action against the employer for the co-employee's assault is prohibited by the exclusive remedy doctrine of workers' compensation law [Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1)]. The respondeat superior doctrine may not be used to avoid the exclusive remedy doctrine and extend civil liabilityfor such assaults vicariously to the employer [Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1486-1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359] . However, since an employer may be civilly liable for an assault committed by the employer [see Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)], an employer might be directly liable if participating in or ratifying the assault [See Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1489-1491, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (no evidence employer ratified assault of employee)]. For further discussion of the effect of workers' compensation coverage on actions brought by employees, see Chapter 577, Workers' Compensation .

[5] Liability of Public Employees and Public Employers

[a] Public Employee Liability

A public employee, including a law enforcement officer, is liable for injury caused by his or her act or omission to the same extent as a private person, subject to the same defenses that would be available to the public employee if he or she were a private person [Gov. Code § 820]. The governmental entity that employs the officer is liable for injury proximately caused by an act or omission of the officer committed within the scope of the employee's employment if the act or omission would, apart from this rule, have given rise to a cause of action against that employee or his or her personal representative [see Gov. Code § 815.2(a); see also § 58.16[4]].

A law enforcement officer who commits an assault and battery on an individual in the course of an arrest without warrant or probable cause is liable for the injuries inflicted [Boyes v. Evans (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 472, 479, 58 P.2d 922 ; see Dawkins v. City of Los Angeles (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 126, 148 Cal. Rptr. 857, 583 P.2d 711] . Similarly, a law enforcement officer is liable to a person arrested for using unreasonable force in making an otherwise lawful arrest [Scruggs v. Haynes (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 256, 264, 60 Cal. Rptr. 355 ; see BAJI No. 7.54].

For discussion of defenses available to a law enforcement officer to civil assault and battery, see § 58.22.

For discussion of sovereign immunity of public employees, see § 58.23.

For forms for a complaint and allegations against a public entity and its law enforcement officer employee for battery committed in the course of the officer's duties, see §§ 58.61 and 58.62.

For more detailed discussion of public entity and officer liabilities and immunities, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[b] Public Employer Liability

In addition to employer liability under respondeat superior, a public entity may also incur liability for willfully continuing to employ a law enforcement officer of known violent propensities. The public entity may also be liable for the negligent failure to adequately supervise its law enforcement officers [City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 778, 782-783, 109 Cal. Rptr. 365] .

§ 58.18 Punitive Damages

[1] Requirement for Punitive Damage Award

Punitive damages may be awarded in an action for assault or battery if plaintiff shows that defendant acted with the requisite malice, oppression, or fraud [see Civ. Code § 3294(a),(c); see, e.g., Scruggs v. Haynes (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 256, 269, 60 Cal. Rptr. 355 ; Thomas v. Doorley (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 545, 549, 346 P.2d 491 ; Ayer v. Robinson (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 424, 428-429, 329 P.2d 546] . Punitive damages are not recoverable if the defendant, acting in good faith, committed the assault or battery under a mistake of fact [Ebaugh v. Rabkin (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 891, 895, 99 Cal. Rptr. 706 (technical battery for performing surgery on wrong patient)]. Also, a showing that the defendant acted in the heat of anger after provocation serves to eliminate or reduce punitive damages [see Badostain v. Grazide (1896) 115 Cal. 425, 429, 47 P. 118] . For a form for an affirmative defense to punitive damages based on provocation, see § 58.76.

[2] Employer Liability for Punitive Damages

An employer is not liable for punitive damages based on the acts of an employee [see § 58.16[4][a]] unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, or authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded, or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. With respect to a corporate employer,the particular conduct giving rise to a claim for punitive damages against the employer must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation [Civ. Code § 3294(b)].

For forms to allege punitive damages against an employer for the acts of the employee, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent . For further discussion of the recovery of punitive damages in tort actions, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.19

§ 58.19 Self Defense

[1] Scope of Privilege of Self Defense

Any necessary force may be used to protect oneself from wrongful injury [Civ. Code § 50]. Self-defense is an affirmative defense, and the defendant has the burden of proving that the assault or battery was justified [Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192 ; see Marriott v. Williams (1908) 152 Cal. 705, 711, 93 P. 875] .

For a form to allege self-defense as an affirmative defense, see § 58.70.

[2] Necessity of Using Force

The justification of self-defense is viewed subjectively from the position of the defendant. If the circumstances as they appeared to the defendant were such that a reasonable person in the position of the defendant would be justified in believing that the plaintiff had the present ability to inflict serious injury and that the plaintiff intended to do so, the defendant is justified in using force in self-defense. The plaintiff's actual lack of intent to inflict injury is not a limitation of the right of self-defense [Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 599-600, 191 P.2d 432 ; see Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 743, 745, 62 P.2d 783 ; see also BAJI No. 7.55].

Force, however, may be resorted to only to prevent or repel the threatened use of force. It may not be used to punish for past acts [Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 457, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617] .

The defendant's state of mind at the time of his or her use of force is material and an important factor in determining justification in his or her belief of an impending attack. However, the defendant must first establish a prima facie case that the assault and battery was in self-defense [Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 452, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617] . A prima facie case of self defense requires some evidence of imminent danger from the plaintiff reasonably contemporaneous with the acts of the defendant. Absent this prima facie showing, evidence of the plaintiff's prior specific acts of violence or prior threats of violence is inadmissible to show defendant's belief that the plaintiff is a violent and dangerous person [Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 456, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617 ; see Evid. Code § 1101(b)].

[3] Reasonableness of Force Used

[a] Force in Excess of Privilege

If defendant uses force in excess of that which is privileged, he or she may be held liable for damages resulting from the excessive force [see Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 745, 62 P.2d 783] . However, the amount of force that one may use in self-defense is viewed subjectively from the position of the defendant. The defendant is justified in using the amount of force that reasonably appears necessary to the defendant, in view of all the circumstances of the case, to prevent the impending injury. The amount of force that was actually necessary to repel the attack is not a limitation of the scope of self-defense [Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 599-600, 191 P.2d 432 ; see BAJI No. 7.55].

The burden of proof that the force used was not excessive is on the defendant [Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192] . The question of excessive force is for the trier of fact [Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 730, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192] .

[b] Use of Deadly Force

Although no civil assault or battery case in California explicitly discusses the point, the Restatement and other authorities indicate that the use of force intended or likely to cause death or great bodily injury is not privileged unless the defendant reasonably believes that (1) the other is about to inflict an intentional contact that places defendant in peril of death or serious bodily harm, and (2) the peril can only safely be prevented by the immediate use of that force [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 65(1); Prosser and Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 19 (West 5th ed. 1984)]. This rule appears to be consistent with the Penal Code provisions pertaining to justifiable homicide in criminal cases [see Penal Code §§ 197, 198].

Also, no reported civil case in California has directly addressed the issue of whether one is privileged to use deadly force in self-defense if he or she can safely avoid the necessity of doing so by retreating. In one case, the use of deadly force was approved to stop the commission of a felony against property that involved a reasonable fear of great bodily harm. The question of a duty to retreat was not discussed, although it appeared from the facts that retreat, or at least avoidance of a confrontation with the felons, was possible [Nakashima v. Takase (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 39, 46 P.2d 1020 (defendant store owner hid on premises to prevent impending burglary, then fired at them in dark)].

In criminal cases, California courts have held that a person need not retreat under these circumstances, but may stand his or her ground and use deadly force in self-defense, if necessary [see People v. Hughes (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 487, 493-494 ; People v. Zuckerman (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 366, 372-374, 132 P.2d 545] . Other authorities areapparently split as to whether a civil defendant is required to retreat, if possible, before using deadly force [see Prosser and Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 19 (West 5th ed. 1984)]. The Restatement requires retreat before use of deadly force, but not before use of nondeadly force [see Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 63(2)(a), 65(3)(a)]. Retreat is not necessary, however, if one is attacked in one's dwelling [see Prosser and Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 19 (West 5th ed. 1971); Restatement (Second) Torts § 65(2)(a)].

[4] Liability to Innocent Bystanders

If the defendant injures an innocent bystander while acting in the lawful exercise of his or her right of self-defense, the defendant's liability to the third person depends on whether or not the defendant acted with reasonable care so as not to injure the bystander. Under these circumstances, the comparative negligence of the third person is available as a defense to the person exercising a right of self-defense, although comparative negligence is not a defense as to the person whose conduct required the act of self-defense [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 385-386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; see § 58.25].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.20

§ 58.20 Defense of Third Persons

[1] Scope of Privilege to Defend Third Persons

The statutory privilege to use necessary force to protect against wrongful injury extends to the defense of a spouse, child, parent, or other relative, or member of one's family, or of a ward, servant, master, or guest [Civ. Code § 50]. The commentaries extend the privilege to the defense of any third person [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 76; Prosser and Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 20 (West 5th ed. 1984); see also Ward v. De Martini (1930) 108 Cal. App. 745, 748, 292 P. 192 (plaintiff went to defense of coemployee and was subsequently injured by attacker)]. For a form to allege defense of third persons as an affirmative defense, see § 58.71.

No California case has directly addressed the issue of whether a defendant may be held liable for a battery committed in defense of a third person who was, in fact, not justified in forcibly defending himself or herself. In cases involving acts that were alleged to be both self-defense and defense of others, the general rule that the reasonableness of the defendant's acts must be viewed subjectively from defendant's position has been applied [see Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 600, 191 P.2d 432 (defense of defendant and wife); Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App.2d 725, 727 728, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192 (defense of defendant, family, and home); see § 58.19]. This result is in accord with the Restatement, which takes the position that the defendant is relieved from liability if he or she reasonably believed that the third person was justified in defending himself or herself by force, even if the defendant's belief was mistaken [see Restatement (Second) Torts § 76].

[2] Reasonableness of Force Used

As in the case of self-defense, the reasonableness of the degree of force used is to be judged from the subjective viewpoint of the defendant [see § 58.19[3]]. The force must not be greater than that which would appear reasonably necessary as judged by the situation as it reasonably appeared to the defendant at the time of the assault or battery [see Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 317-319, 246 P.2d 111 (defendant alleged that he fired gun to break up fight between his son and another boy, and one bullet struck plaintiff; court held that force used to defend son was excessive)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.21

§ 58.21 Defense of Property

[1] Scope of Privilege to Defend Property

A person may use any necessary force to protect from wrongful injury his or her property or the property of a spouse, child, parent, or other relative, or member of one's family, or of a ward, servant, master, or guest [Civ. Code § 50]. Thus, a possessor of land may eject a trespasser from the premises without incurring liability, as long as unnecessary force is not employed [Livesey v. Stock (1929) 208 Cal. 315, 317-318, 281 P. 70 ; see Townsend v. Briggs (1893) 99 Cal. 481, 483, 34 P. 116 ; Phelps v. Arnold (1931) 112 Cal. App. 518, 522-523, 297 P. 31] . A person in rightful possession may also use reasonable force to prevent a forcible and unlawful entry [see Lorenz v. Hunt (1928) 89 Cal. App. 6, 12, 264 P. 336] . Likewise, the proprietor of a tavern may use reasonable force to eject a patron who is engaging in conduct that is dangerous to other invitees or that is morally offensive [see Coorough v. DeLay (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44-46, 339 P.2d 963] . For a form to allege defense of property by ejection of a trespasser as an affirmative defense, see § 58.72.

[2] Reasonableness of Force Used

[a] Scope of Reasonable Force

In cases in which the court determined that both defense of persons and of property was involved, it has been stated that a person has a right to use all such force as is reasonably necessary to protect person or property [Nakashima v. Takase (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 39, 46 P.2d 1020 (emphasis added; property owner was justified in shooting at burglar because of reasonable belief that burglar was armed, was attempting to commit felony on premises, and would use force or violence to consummate felony or to facilitate escape); see Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App.2d 725, 727, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192] .

[b] Use of Deadly Force

Cases holding that a person has a right to use such force as is reasonably necessary to protect property suggest that deadly force may be justified solely in the defense of property if no lesser degree of force will suffice to protect the property. However, it is unlikely that this is the correct statement of the law.

In the criminal context, the use of deadly force to protect property has been limited to situations that also involved a threat to life or of great bodily injury [see People v. Ceballos (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 470, 478-482, 116 Cal. Rptr. 233, 526 P.2d 241 (construing language in Penal Code § 197(2) that might otherwise allow use of deadly force solely in defense of property); see also CALJIC 5.10, 5.16, 5.43]. However, there is a presumption that a person who uses deadly force on an intruder into his or her residence has a reasonable fear of imminent peril of death or great bodily injury [Penal Code § 198.5].

The California criminal law is in accord with generally accepted common-law principles, which indicate that force intended or likely to cause death or serious bodily injury may not be used solely to defend one's property. The use of deadly force is not privileged unless the plaintiff's conduct also threatens, or reasonably appears to threaten, death or serious bodily injury to the defendant or to a third person who the defendant is entitled to defend [see generally Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 5, Torts, § 420 (10th ed. 2005); Restatement (Second) Torts § 81; Prosser & Keeton on Torts, ch. 4, § 20 (West 5th ed. 1984)].

[c] Force Used in Excess of Privilege

If a lesser degree of force would be sufficient to defend property, one is liable for injuries inflicted by excessive force [Rogers v. Kabakoff (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 487, 491, 184 P.2d 312] . The same applies to the amount of force that is justified in the removal of a trespasser or one whose presence represents a danger to property [Tomblinson v. Nobile (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270, 229 P.2d 97 (use of blackjack by security guard to eject trespasser not justified); Haworth v. Elliott (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 77, 82-83, 153 P.2d 804] .

[3] Necessity of Warning

The use of force in defense of property against a trespasser is generally not privileged unless the intruder has first been requested to desist from the intrusion [Chapell v. Schmidt (1894) 104 Cal. 511, 514, 38 P. 892 (defendant not justified in using force against old man who was picking flowers on defendant's property without first warning him to desist and leave premises); see Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 77(c), 87, 104]. The warning need not, however, be couched in polite language so long as it is sufficient to inform the other that he or she is being told to leave the premises [see Townsend v. Briggs (1893) 99 Cal. 481, 484, 34 P. 116] . The trespasser need not be given more than one warning to stay off the premises, and if he or she returns after being told to stay away, he or she may be removed forcibly without a second warning [see Phelps v. Arnold (1931) 112 Cal. App. 518, 524, 297 P. 31] .

No warning is necessary if the actor reasonably believes that it will be useless or that substantial harm will be done before the warning can be given. In the case of a burglary in progress, the defendant has a right to assume that giving warning would have the effect of placing him or her in danger [Nakashima v. Takase (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 38-39, 46 P.2d 1020 ; see Restatement (Second) Torts § 77(c)].

[4] Recapture of Property

[a] No Privilege to Forcibly Recover Land Peaceably Possessed

A person who claims title or the right to possession of land may not use force to recover possession of the land from one who is in peaceable possession of it. The person in possession may recover in tort for damages for injuries to his or her person or property that are proximately caused by the other's forcible entry, regardless of whether the entering party has title or right to possession [see Daluiso v. Boone (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 484, 499 500, 78 Cal. Rptr. 707, 455 P.2d 811 (disapproving earlier cases holding to the contrary)]. The rationale behind this rule is that a person claiming the right to possession of land should resort to judicial proceedings rather than resorting to self-help [see Daluiso v. Boone (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 484, 500, 78 Cal. Rptr. 707, 455 P.2d 811] . In the case of a tenant holding over or otherwise in breach under a lease, the landlord must result to unlawful detainer proceedings and may not forcibly eject the tenant [Jordan v.

Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 604-605, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1161-1179a].

[b] No Privilege to Forcibly Recover Chattel Wrongfully Retained

The use of force to recapture a chattel from one whose original possession of it was lawfully acquired but who subsequently wrongfully retains possession is not privileged even if possession is being lawfully withheld [Deevy v. Tassi (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 109, 130 P.2d 389 (alleged default under chattel mortgage); Rogers v. Kabakoff (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 487, 490, 184 P.2d 312 (alleged overcharge under bailment)]. However, a person who has the right to immediate possession of a chattel may use force to recover possession from one who has wrongfully taken possession of the property, if he or she acts promptly after the dispossession or timely discovery of the dispossession [see Restatement (Second) Torts §§ 100-106; see also McLean v. Colf (1918) 179 Cal. 237, 238, 176 P. 169 ; Riffel v. Letts (1916) 31 Cal. App. 426, 428, 160 P. 845] . The amount of force that maybe used in recapturing a chattel must not exceed that which is reasonably adequate and necessary [see McLean v. Colf (1918) 179 Cal. 237, 238-239, 176 P. 169 ; see also Riffel v. Letts (1916) 31 Cal. App. 426, 428, 160 P. 845 ; Restatement (Second) Torts § 106 (force used may not be intended or likely to cause death or serious bodily injury)]. For a form to allege recapture of personal property as an affirmative defense, see § 58.73.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.22

§ 58.22 Law Enforcement Defense: Reasonable Force to Effect Arrest

[1] Privilege of Reasonable Force to Effect Arrest

A person arrested may be subjected to such restraint as is reasonable for his or her arrest and detention [see Penal Code § 835]. Any peace officer who has reasonable cause to believe that the person to be arrested has committed a public offense may use reasonable force to effect the arrest, to prevent escape, or to overcome resistance [Penal Code § 835a]. Thus, a law enforcement officer is privileged to use reasonable force to effect an arrest as long as the arrest is otherwise lawful [see Boyes v. Evans (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 472, 479, 58 P.2d 922 (law enforcement officer may be liable for battery committed in course of making unlawful arrest)]. For discussion of when an arrest is lawful, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment .

A peace officer who makes or attempts to make an arrest need not retreat or desist from his or her efforts because of the resistance or threatened resistance of the person being arrested [Penal Code § 835a]. Furthermore, the officer may not be deemed an aggressor or lose his or her right to self-defense by the use of reasonable force to effect the arrest, prevent escape, or overcome resistance [Penal Code § 836.5(b)]. Similarly, if an arrest is made by an officer under the authority of a warrant, the officer may use all necessary means to effect the arrest if, after information of the intention to make the arrest, the person to be arrested either flees or forcibly resists [Penal Code § 843]. However, an officer may be liable for battery if the officer's use of deadly force in effecting an arrest is unreasonable under the circumstances [Munoz v. City of Union City (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1106, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 521] .

If the battery claim stems from an inadvertent injury to a bystander caused by the use of force against an arrestee, it appears that if the force used against the arrestee is reasonable under the totality of the circumstances, then the police officer is also free from liability to the bystander. In one case, for example, the court held that police acted reasonably as a matter of law in shooting at a murder suspect who, while attempting to flee in a vehicle being driven on a curb at a strip mall, was headed straight for another police officer. As the suspect, who was shot and killed, could not have sued for battery, police also had a defense from liability for battery to a bystander in one of the mall offices who was hit by a deflected bullet fragment [Brown v. Ransweiler (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 516, 526-533, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 801].

[2] Plaintiff's Burden to Show Force Unreasonable

Although the plaintiff bears the burden of proving the use of unreasonable force in a battery action against a peace officer [Edson v. City of Anaheim (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1269, 1272, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614] , the defendant peace officer should affirmatively answer a complaint by alleging facts showing that the force used to effect the arrest was reasonable. For a form to allege that a plaintiff has failed to plead facts that demonstrate that the force used to effect a lawful arrest was unreasonable, see § 58.93.

A plaintiff may not pursue state law tort claims against a police officer based on the conduct of the officer in effecting the plaintiff's arrest, including claims for assault and battery or false imprisonment, if, based on the same events, the plaintiff was convicted of resisting or obstructing a police officer and the plaintiff has not previously been granted postconviction relief that invalidates that conviction [Susag v. City of Lake Forest (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1413, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269] .

However, although an admission by a convicted criminal defendant that he or she resisted officers in the performance of their duties, and that those officers had the right to respond with reasonable force, may bar a civil action based on the use of reasonable force, an action for battery alleging the unreasonable use of deadly force is not barred if that civil action would not call into question the validity of the arrest and conviction. In one case, for example, a drunk driver who had strenuously resisted arrest was pinned to the ground by multiple police officers, one of whom shot the driver in the buttock by accident under the belief that he had pulled out his taser rather than his pistol. The driver was convicted after entering a plea admitting that he had resisted arrest. While agreeing that police had the right to use reasonable force to subdue him when he was resisting arrest, the driver argued that a subsequent civil claim for battery was not barred because it was based on a use of deadly force that was unreasonable under the circumstances. The California Supreme Court agreed, concluding that while a battery claim based on the use of any force would be barred, a battery claim based on the unreasonable use of excessive force was not barred under the circumstances, as such a claim would not call into question plaintiff's arrest and conviction for resisting arrest [Yount v. City of Sacramento (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 885, 898-900, 902, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787, 183 P.3d 471].

[3] Use of Force to Resist Arrest

A person who has knowledge, or who by the exercise of reasonable care should have knowledge, that he or she is being arrested by a peace officer has the duty to refrain from using force or any weapon to resist the arrest [Penal Code § 834a]. In criminal law, this statute has been construed as making a person who resists an unlawful arrest guilty of misdemeanor battery, but not of any crime for which an element is that a police officer is engaged in performance of his or her duties [see People v. Henderson (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 349, 356, 129 Cal. Rptr. 844] . The same distinction applies to the resistance of excessive force in effecting a lawful arrest [People v. White (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 161, 167, 161 Cal. Rptr. 541] . If the person making the arrest is not a peace officer, the arrestee may forcibly resist an unjustified arrest [see Griswold v. Hollywood Turf Club (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 578, 584, 235 P.2d 656] .

A similar rule applies to detentions by peace officers; because a detention is a lesser infringement than an arrest, there is no right to resist the lesser infringement if there is no right to resist the greater [Evans v. City of Bakersfield (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 321, 330] . Thus, as with an unlawful arrest, if the detention is unlawful, the resistance can constitute assault or battery, unless excessive force is used or threatened, in whichcase the individual has the right of self-defense [Evans v. City of Bakersfield (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 321, 331] .

A public employee is not liable for an injury resulting from his or her act or omission if the act or omission was the result of the exercise of the discretion vested in him or her, whether or not that discretion was abused [Gov. Code § 820.2]. However, this immunity for discretionary acts does not apply to the use of excessive force in effecting an arrest [Scruggs v. Haynes (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 256, 263-268] . § 58.24 Private Privilege to Detain and Search Suspected Thief

[1] Merchant's Privilege Defined

A merchant may detain a person for a reasonable time for the purpose of conducting an investigation in a reasonable manner if the merchant has probable cause to believe that the person to be detained is attempting to unlawfully take or has unlawfully taken merchandise from the merchant's premises [Penal Code § 490.5(f)(1); see also Penal Code § 490.5(g)(1), (2) (definitions of "merchandise" and "merchant")].

Likewise, a person employed by a library facility may detain a person for a reasonable time for the purpose of conducting an investigation in a reasonable manner whenever the person employed by the library facility has probable cause to believe that the person to be detained is attempting to unlawfully remove or has unlawfully removed books or library materials for the premises of the library [Penal Code § 490.5(f)(1); see also Penal Code § 490.5(g)(4), (5) (definitions of "book or other library materials" and "library facility")].

Also, a theater owner may detain a person for a reasonable time for the purpose of conducting an investigation in a reasonable manner whenever the theater owner has probable cause to believe the person to be detained is attempting to operate a video recording device within the premises of a motion picture theater without the authority of the theater's owner [Penal Code § 490.5(f)(1); see also Penal Code § 490.5(g)(3) (definition of "theater owner")].

[2] Reasonableness of Force Used

In making such a detention, the merchant, theater owner, or library employee may use a reasonable amount of nondeadly force necessary to protect himself or herself and to prevent the escape of the person detained or tangible or intangible loss of the property [Penal Code § 490.5(f)(2)]. If the person detained refuses on request to voluntarily surrender any item that the merchant, theater owner, or library employee has probable cause to believe was unlawfully taken, or a recording that the person made within the premises of a motion picture theater without the authority of the theater's owner, the merchant, theater owner, or library employee may also make a limited and reasonable search of any packages, shopping bags, handbags, or other property in the immediate possession of the person detained to recover the item, but may not search the clothing worn by that person [see Penal Code § 490.5(f)(4)].

[3] Use of Privilege as Defense

In any civil action brought by any person resulting from a detention or arrest by a merchant, theater owner, or person employed by a library facility, the merchant, theater owner, or library employee may assert as a defense that he or she had probable cause to believe that the person detained had stolen or attempted to steal merchandise, books, or library materials or was attempting to operate a video recording device within the premises of a motion picture theater without the authority of the theater's owner, and that he or she acted reasonably under all the circumstances [see Penal Code § 490.5(f)(7)].

For a form to allege the merchant's privilege as an affirmative defense, see § 58.75. For further discussion of the merchant or librarian's privilege to detain and search, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.25

§ 58.25 Negligence of Plaintiff Not a Defense

Traditionally, contributory negligence has not been recognized as a defense to assault, battery, or intentional torts generally [see Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 385, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382 ; Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 458, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617 ; Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5-6, 146 P.2d 57] . For example, courts have held that the plaintiff's voluntary intoxication at the time of the injury does not relieve defendant from liability for intentionally shoving or pushing the plaintiff [see Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 458, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617] . Likewise, a court has held that if an innocent bystander is injured as a proximate result of a battery committed by the defendant on a third person, the defendant may not assert the defense of contributory negligence against the bystander on the grounds that the latter failed to retreat from a place lawfully occupied by him or her to an area outside the range of the defendant's wrongful conduct [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 385, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] .

The cases referred to above were decided prior to adoption in California of the rule of comparative fault by the California Supreme Court [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 ; for discussion, see Ch. 380, Negligence]. Whether or not a plaintiff's recovery should be diminished in proportion to his or her own negligence if defendant is guilty of an intentional tort, rather than mere negligence, was left open by the Court in Li. However, the nonapplicability of comparative fault principles to intentional torts has subsequently been reaffirmed by the court of appeal, including one opinion that involved a plaintiff's claim of battery [see Heiner v. Kmart Corp. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 335, 348-350, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 854 (although defendant waived argument, comparative fault was inapplicable to battery claim); see also Allen v. Sundean (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 216, 226-227, 186 Cal. Rptr. 863 (comparative fault inapplicable to fraudulent concealment claim)].

§ 58.26 Right of Privacy as Bar to Action

[1] Relationship between Right of Privacy and Tort Actions

Four cases have looked at the interrelationship between the constitutional right of privacy [see Cal. Const., art. I, § 1] and traditional tort actions arising from acts of consensual sexual intercourse. Two courts have found the right of privacy to bar such an action [see Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 16-17, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402 ; Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 643, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618] , and two have allowed the action to proceed [see Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994-995, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 ; Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 374-375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422] . Neither of the two cases finding a privacy bar involved causes of action for assault or battery, but rather sounded in fraud. By contrast, both cases that were allowed to proceed included causes of action for battery. However, this result may be more related to questions of pleading rather than any particular relationship between battery and the right of privacy.

[2] Cases Barring Tort Action Arising from Consensual Sexual Intercourse

In a case involving misrepresentation of birth control practices, one court refused to attach tortious liability to the results of consensual sexualintercourse, finding the cause of action to be barred by the right of privacy. The court stated that to allow the action to proceed would encourage unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters affecting the individual's right to privacy. The court rejected any role in defining standards of conduct in the highly intimate and private relationship [Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 643, 645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618] .

Another court followed Stephen K. and rejected the distinction and reasoning of Barbara A., below. The facts involved a termination of pregnancy by abortion. The plaintiff woman alleged that she had agreed to have an abortion because of the defendant man's intentional misrepresentation that he would impregnate her at a later date. The court refused to intervene in the area of procreative decisions, citing Stephen K. for its holding concerning unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters affecting the individual's right to privacy [Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 16-20, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402] .

Nevertheless, the court in Perry found a reasonable distinction between a cause of action involving pregnancy or termination of pregnancy and one involving the transmission of disease. While holding that no cause of action could be stated for fraudulently inducing a person to have an abortion, the court stated that the transmission of a contagious disease implicates policy considerations beyond the sexual conduct and procreative decisions of two consenting adults, and that the state's interest in the prevention and control of contagious and dangerous diseases is sufficient to allow a cause of action for fraudulent concealment of the risk of infection with venereal disease [Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 20-21, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402] .

[3] Cases Permitting Tort Action Arising from Consensual Sexual Intercourse

A court reached a different result in a subsequent case involving a man's alleged fraudulent misrepresentation of infertility before engaging in intercourse. The court analyzed the complaint under traditional tort principles and found causes of action to be stated for both battery and deceit [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 374-375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 (plaintiff developed tubal pregnancy, which, according to allegations, endangered her life, required major corrective surgery, and caused sterility and emotional and financial injury; see § 58.13[5][e]]. In reaching its decision, the court considered whether its finding on the facts before it would constitute unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters affecting the individual's right to privacy. The court found that the right of privacy was not absolute and does not insulate a person from all judicial inquiry into his or her sexual relationships, noting examples of illegal consensual intercourse, spousal rape, and paternity. Thus, the right of privacy does not insulate from liability one sexual partner who, by intentionally tortious conduct, causes physical injury to the other [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422] .

In a case involving the transmission of genital herpes through an act of sexual intercourse, the court allowed the plaintiff to proceed under theories of negligence, battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and fraudulent misrepresentation. The court found that the constitutional right to privacy was subordinate to the state's fundamental right to protect the health and welfare of its citizens [Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273] .

§ 58.27 Cause of Action for Sexual Battery

[1] Elements of Sexual Battery

A person commits a sexual battery who does any of the following [Civ. Code § 1708.5(a)]:

> Acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with an intimate part of another, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.
> Acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with another by use of his or her intimate part, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.
> Acts to cause an imminent apprehension of the conduct described in *Civ. Code § 1708.5(a)(1)*or (2), and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results.

[2] Intimate Part and Offensive Contact Defined

"Intimate part" means the sexual organ, anus, groin, or buttocks of any person, or the breast of a female [Civ. Code § 1708.5(d)]. "Offensive contact" means contact that offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity [Civ. Code § 1708.5(f)].

[3] Remedies for Sexual Battery

A person who commits a sexual battery on another is liable to that person for damages, including but not limited to general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code § 1708.5(b)]. The court in an action pursuant to Civ. Code § 1708.5 may award equitable relief, including but not limited to an injunction, costs, and any other relief the court deems proper [*Civ. § 58.28 Cause of Action for Stalking

[1] Elements of Tort of Stalking

A person is liable for the tort of stalking when the plaintiff proves all of the following elements:

- The defendant engaged in a pattern of conduct the intent of which was to follow, alarm, or harass the plaintiff. In order to establish this element, the plaintiff shall be required to support his or her allegations with independent corroborating evidence [Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(1)].

- As a result of that pattern of conduct, the plaintiff reasonably feared for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member [Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(2)].

- One of the following [Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(3)]:

  - The defendant made a credible threat with the intent to place the plaintiff in reasonable fear for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member and, on at least one occasion, the plaintiff clearly and definitively demanded that the defendant cease and abate his or her pattern of conduct and the defendant persisted in his or her pattern of conduct [see Civ. Code § 1708.7(b)(2) ("credible threat" means a verbal or written threat, including that communicated by means of an electronic communication device, or a threat implied by a pattern of conduct or a combination of verbal, written, or electronically communicated statements and conduct, made with the intent and apparent ability to carry out the threat so as to cause the person who is the target of the threat to reasonably fear for his or her safety or the safety of his or her immediate family member); see also Civ. Code § 1708.7(b)(1), (4) (defining "pattern of conduct" and "harass," respectively)].

  - The defendant violated a restraining order, including, but not limited to, any order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6, prohibiting any act described in Civ. Code §

[2] Immediate Family Defined

"Immediate family" means a spouse, parent, child, any person related by consanguinity or affinity within the second degree, or any person who regularly resides, or, within the six months preceding any portion of the pattern of conduct, regularly resided, in the plaintiff's household [see Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(2)].

[3] Remedies for Tort of Stalking

A person who commits the tort of stalking on another is liable to that person for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code § 1708.7(c)]. The court in an action pursuant to Civ. Code § 1708.7 may grant equitable relief, including, but not limited to, an injunction [Civ. Code § 1708.7(d)]. The rights and remedies provided in Civ. Code § 1708.7 are cumulative and in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law [Civ. Code § 1708.7(e)]. Civ. Code § 1708.7 shall not be construed to impair any constitutionally protected activity, including, but not limited to, speech, protest, and assembly [Civ. Code § 1708.7(f)].

For a form of a complaint alleging the tort of stalking under Civ. Code § 1708.7, see § 58.60.

§ 58.29 Statute of Limitations

[1] Two Year Statute of Limitations

The usual limitation period for actions for assault or battery is two years after accrual of the cause of action (prior to January 1, 2003, one year after accrual of cause of action) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 312, 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.14; see, e.g., Trube v. Katz (1923) 60 Cal. App. 474, 476, 213 P. 264] .

For general discussion of statutes of limitations, including discussion of provisions for tolling the statute of limitations, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

For discussion of the statute of limitations for civil actions for damages based on childhood sexual abuse under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1 see Ch. 5, Abuse of Minors and Elderly , Pt. I.

For discussion of the limitation period applicable to actions for medical malpractice, see Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice , and Ch. 295, Hospitals .

For discussion of the special limitation periods and claims requirements applicable to actions against public entities and employees under the Tort Claims Act (Gov. Code § 810 et seq.), see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[2] Accrual of Cause of Action

Ordinarily, a cause of action for assault accrues at the time that plaintiff anticipates the harm, and a cause of action for battery accrues at the time of the physical contact, even though no observable damage occurs at that time [see Sonbergh v. MacQuarrie (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 771, 774, 247 P.2d 133] . The statute of limitations begins to run at that time in theabsence of fraud, concealment, or duress on the part of the defendant that prevented the plaintiff from ascertaining the extent of his or her injury [see Sonbergh v. MacQuarrie (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 771, 774, 247 P.2d 133 ; see also Collins v. County of Los Angeles (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 451, 455, 457 459, 50 Cal. Rptr. 586 (applying similar rule to accrual of cause of action for false imprisonment)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.30

§ 58.30 Cause of Action for Domestic Violence

[1] Definition and Elements

Domestic violence means abuse committed against an adult or a fully emancipated minor who is a spouse, former spouse, cohabitant, former cohabitant, or person with whom the defendant has had a child or is having or has had a dating or engagement relationship. "Cohabitant" means one of two unrelated adult persons living together for a substantial period of time, resulting in some permanency of relationship. Factors that may determine whether persons are cohabiting include, but are not limited to, (1) sexual relations between the parties while sharing the same living quarters, (2) sharing of income or expenses, (3) joint use or ownership of property, (4) the parties' holding themselves out as husband and wife, (5) the continuity of the relationship, and (6) the length of the relationship [Penal Code § 13700(b)].

A person is liable for the tort of domestic violence if the plaintiff proves both of the following elements [Civ. Code 1708.6(a)]:

- The plaintiff suffered injury resulting from abuse, which is defined as intentionally or recklessly causing or attempting to cause bodily injury or placing another person in reasonable apprehension of imminent serious bodily injury to himself or herself or to another [Penal Code § 13700(a)].

- The abuse was committed by the defendant, a person having a relationship with the plaintiff as defined in Penal Code § 13700(b).

[2] Remedies

A person who commits an act of domestic violence against another person is liable to that other person for damages including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code 1708.6(b)]. The court may grant a prevailing plaintiff equitable relief, an injunction, costs, and any other relief that the court deems proper, including reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code 1708.6(c)].

[3] Statute of Limitations

The plaintiff must bring a domestic violence action either (1) within three years after the date of the last act of domestic violence by the defendant against the plaintiff, or (2) within three years after the date that the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should have discovered that an injury or illness resulted from an act of domestic violence by the defendant against the plaintiff [Civ. Code § 1708.6(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 340.15].

Although the three-year statute of limitations uses the "last act" of domestic violence as a trigger, a plaintiff may recover for domestic violence occurring more than three years before suit is brought if plaintiff proves a continuing course of abusive conduct and files suit within three years of the last act [Pugliese v. Superior Court (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1451, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 681] .

§ 58.31 Judicial Immunity Not Defense

Judicial immunity, which provides absolute immunity from suit for a judge and all other persons who act in a judicial capacity, including court commissioners and court-appointed referees, does not extend to nonjudicial actions. As such, it would not ordinarily protect judges and other judicial actors from liability for assault and battery if the judge abandons the traditional role of the judge and uses brute force against a litigant. An exception could exist, however, if the litigant has initiated a physical assault on court personnel and the judge intervenes to protect staff because court security personnel are absent or unable to do so [Regan v. Price (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1491, 1497, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 130] .

[Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that these injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.] As a result of these injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages.

[EITHER]

12. As a further proximate result of defendant's acts, plaintiff has been damaged in that he/she has been required to expend money and incur obligations for medical services, x-rays, drugs, and sundries reasonably required in the treatment and relief of the injuries herein alleged.

[OR]

12. As a further proximate result of the acts of defendant, plaintiff has incurred, and will continue to incur, medical and related expenses. The full amount of these expenses is not known to plaintiff at this time.

[EITHER]

13. As a further proximate result of the acts of defendant, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual occupation as a _____ [state occupation] for a period of _____ [specify, e.g., 2 months] and thereby lost earnings to his/her damage.

[OR]

13. As a further proximate result of the acts of defendant, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual occupation as a _____ [state occupation] for a period of _____ [specify, e.g., 2 months] as of the date of this complaint and continuing for an as yet undetermined period. Plaintiff thereby has lost and will lose earnings. [As a further proximate result of the acts of defendant, plaintiff's present and future earning capacity has been greatly impaired.]

[CONTINUE]

14. The aforementioned conduct of defendant was willful and malicious and was intended to oppress and cause injury to plaintiff. Plaintiff is therefore entitled to an award of punitive damages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment on both causes of action against defendant(s) as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For medical and related expenses according to proof;

3. For lost earnings, past and future, according to proof;

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint to allege causes of action for both an assault and battery from relatively contemporaneous acts by the defendant, for example, threatening with a knife and immediately thereafter cutting plaintiff with the knife. It may be modified to allege only an assault by deleting the second cause of action. It may also be modified to allege only a battery by deleting the first cause of action.

An assault without a battery might involve the use of a weapon to frighten without any intent to actually use it [see, e.g., Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57] ; a battery without an assault might occur in the case of an offensive contact with someone who is asleep or unconscious [see Zanotto v. Marogna (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 329, 331-332, 268 P.2d 826] . For further discussion of the distinction between the causes of action for assault and battery, see [3], below.

[3] Allegations

[a] General Allegations

In addition to the allegations commonly used for capacity, fictitiously named defendants, and agency (Paragraphs 1 and 3), the complaint alleges the following:

- The defendant's acts that constituted an assault, that is, the acts that placed plaintiff in apprehension of a harmful or offensive contact (Paragraph 4).
- The defendant's acts that constituted a battery, that is, the acts of harmful or offensive contact (Paragraph 7).
- The defendant's intent to cause the apprehension (Paragraph 5).
- The defendant's intent to actually make the contact (Paragraph 8).
- The plaintiff's actually feeling apprehension (Paragraph 6).
- The plaintiff's lack of consent to the defendant's act (Paragraph 9).

Paragraphs 4, 5, and 6 are essential elements of assault [see Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57 ; see also § 58.15]. Paragraphs 7 and 8 are essential elements of battery [see Barbara A. v. John G. (1983)

145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; see also § 58.13]. Lack of consent is an element of any intentional tort [see Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249] .

[b] Assault Allegations

The allegations of assault contained in this form of complaint are those of the commonly understood civil tort [see Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944)63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57] and not those of the crime of assault as defined in the Penal Code [see Penal Code § 240]. Despite the common use of criminal assault as a civil jury instruction [see, e.g., Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] , there are significant dissimilarities between the civil and criminal standards [see People v. Wolcott (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 92, 99, 192 Cal. Rptr. 748, 665 P.2d 520 ; see also §§ 58.12 and 58.15[1]].

[c] Damage Allegations

The complaint also contains allegations of:

- Specific physical injury (Optional Paragraph 10).
- General damages (Paragraph 11).
- Special damages for medical expenses (Alternative Paragraph 12).
- Special damages for lost earnings (Alternative Paragraph 13).
- Punitive damages (Paragraph 14).

[d] Battery Allegations

This form alleges the defendant's intent to make contact with plaintiff's person (Paragraph 8). Intent to make contact is the requisite intent for battery [see Ellis v. D'Angelo (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 310, 315, 253 P.2d 675 ; see also § 58.13[3]]. Battery may also be committed in the case of unintended contact if the defendant acted with the intent to place plaintiff in fear of great bodily harm [Weisbart v. Flohr (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 281, 284-285, 67 Cal. Rptr. 114] . In such a situation, Paragraphs 7 and 8 should be modified to alleged an inadvertent contact from an intent to assault. Paragraphs 7 and 8 may also be modified to allege a battery committed with transferred intent, that is, the defendant intended an offensive contact with one person but actually made contact with another [see Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 642, 301 P.2d 440] .

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the actionis a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Venue

Venue of the action may be based on the residence of defendant (Paragraph 1) or the location of the assault (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[6] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[2] Use of Form

[a] Intentional Tort Forms

These forms are illustrations of the Judicial Council approved forms for use to allege a cause of action for an intentional tort [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12; Cal. Judicial Council Form PLD-PI-001(3)]. The first form is an example of allegations that state a cause of action for assault. The second form is an example of a cause of action for battery. For further discussion, see § 58.51. These forms are available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[b] Separate Causes of Action

A separate cause-of-action form must be filled out for each cause of action to be pleaded. For greater clarity if multiple causes of action are pleaded, it is recommended that a title of the cause of action be included somewhere on the form. These forms are illustrated with a title under the reference to "Intentional Tort." Also, the identifying paragraph number of additional causes of action should be changed to match the cause of action number (note change of IT-1 to IT-2 in second cause of action).

[c] Complaint Must be Attached

A cause-of-action form may not be used alone, but must be attached to the Judicial Council form of complaint or cross complaint for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.45]. Use of the Judicial Council pleading forms is optional [see Code Civ. Proc. § 425.12].

[d] Completing Judicial Council Form of Complaint

In filling out the approved complaint form for use with these attachments, the box labeled "OTHER" in the caption to the complaint should be checked, and the cause of action should be specified, for example, by inserting "INTENTIONAL TORTS ASSAULT AND BATTERY." The appropriate injuries should be noted in Paragraph 8 and the appropriate prayer for compensatory damages should be checked in Paragraph 10. Additionally, the box labeled "Intentional Tort" in Paragraph 11 of the approved complaint form must be checked.

For a filled-out example of the Judicial Council complaint for personal injury, property damage, and wrongful death, see Ch. 380, Negligence . For general information relating to the use of Judicial Council complaint forms, see Ch. 123, Complaints and Cross Complaints .

[e] Completing Judicial Council Form Attachments

The short title of the case, as taken from the caption of the complaint in the box at the top left corner of the form, should be entered at the top of the attachment. The number of the cause of action must be entered in the space provided below the title. The appropriate box labeled "Complaint" or "Cross-Complaint" must be checked to indicate the document to which the form is attached.

The page number that the attachment represents as to the entire form of complaint must be inserted. The complaint form is three pages long; thus, the first cause-of-action attachment will be page 4.

This form provides a box that, when checked, alleges that the Doe defendants specified along with specifically named defendants "was the legal (proximate) cause of damages to plaintiff." This language may be sufficient to meet the requirement that the complaint set forth a cause of action against fictitiously named defendants [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474; Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 87-88, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90] . This box should always be checked and all Does named in the caption should be included. In line 4, the word "was" should be changed to "were" and the word "defendant" should be changed to "defendants." As a precautionary measure, an allegation tying all fictitiously named defendants to the allegations of the cause of action is also included (Paragraph a). For further discussion, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used .

[f] Exemplary Damages Attachment

If exemplary damages are sought under Civ. Code § 3294, the approved Judicial Council form of attachment for exemplary damages should be used [see Cal. Judicial Council Form PLD-PI-001(6); see also Judicial Council form in Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq.].

1. On or about _____ [date] at _____ [location] in _____ [city], California, defendant _____ [name] asked plaintiff to engage in an act of sexual intercourse with him/her.

2. Before agreeing to participate in the act, plaintiff inquired of defendant whether he/she was then or ever had been infected with any sexually transmitted disease, including Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), or had ever tested positive for the AIDS antibody.

3. Defendant replied in the negative and denied that he/she had AIDS or any other sexually transmitted disease or had tested positive for the AIDS antibody.

4. In reliance on these representations of defendant, plaintiff then engaged in an act of sexual intercourse with defendant.

5. The representations of defendant were false, in that at that time, defendant was in fact infected with the AIDS virus and knew that he/she was so infected.

6. Had plaintiff known the true facts, he/she would not have consented to engage in sexual intercourse with defendant. Plaintiff's apparent consent to this act, therefore, was vitiated by the misrepresentation, and plaintiff did not consent to the act.

7. In doing the acts as alleged above, defendant acted with the intent to make a contact with plaintiff's person.

8. On learning the true facts, plaintiff found the contact made with his/her person by defendant to be harmful and offensive to his/her person and dignity.

9. As a proximate result of the acts of defendant, plaintiff has tested positive for the AIDS antibody.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegations in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for battery if the acts that constitute the battery involve sexual intercourse for which consent was fraudulently induced by representations of freedom from disease, when in fact the defendant was infected with the virus for Acquired Immunity Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). These allegations may be substituted for Paragraphs 4-10 in § 58.50[1]. They may also be used as the charging allegations on the Judicial Council intentional tort cause-of-action attachments to a complaint for personal injury [see § 58.51[1]]. This cause of action would generally be included in a complaint that also includes a cause of action for fraud or misrepresentation [see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit].

[3] Allegations

[a] Vitiation of Consent

The plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving lack of consent to acts that otherwise would constitute a battery [Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39-40, 224 P.2d 808] . Absence of consent may be shown by proof that apparent consent was fraudulently induced [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; see § 58.13[5][e]]. Therefore, this form includes allegations of the defendant's misrepresentations as to his or her freedom from disease (Paragraphs 1-5) in order to establish the vitiation of consent as alleged in Paragraph 6.

[b] Intent

The intent necessary to constitute a battery is not an intent to cause harm but an intent to do the act that causes the harm [Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 641, 301 P.2d 440] . Under this standard, the only intent necessary with regard to the transmission of AIDS to a sexual partner is the intent to engage in sexual intercourse, not an intent to infect the other with the disease. For further discussion on the intent required for battery, see § 58.13[3].

[c] Right of Privacy

The interaction of traditional tort causes of action, including battery, with the constitutional right of privacy as applied to acts of consensual sexual intercourse is currently an unresolved area of California law. Causes of action for battery have been held to be well pleaded despite the right of privacy in cases involving transmission of herpes [see Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273] and misrepresentation of infertility [Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 374-375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422] . However, a cause of action for fraud has been found barred by the right of privacy in a case involving misrepresentation as to birth control use [see Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618] . For further discussion, see § 58.26.

PART IV. FORMS

6-58 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 58.58

§ 58.58 Allegations--Count for Conspiracy

[1] FORM Allegations--Count for Conspiracy

COUNT FOR CONSPIRACY

1. On or about _____ [date], defendants _____ [specify all defendants alleged to have conspired] knowingly and willfully conspired and agreed among themselves to assault and batter plaintiff [in that _____ (state facts that show how defendants who did not actually commit assault or battery entered into agreement that acts be committed, e.g., when plaintiff entered the bar, defendant John Jones stated to defendant Robert Smith, "There's the guy who I saw with your girl friend. Why don't you go teach him a lesson?")].

2. Thereafter and in furtherance of this conspiracy, defendant _____ [name of defendant who actually committed the assault and battery] did, in fact, assault and batter plaintiff as alleged in the first and second causes of action.

3. Defendants _____ [names of all defendants who did not actually commit assault and battery but are alleged to have conspired as subsequent aiders and abettors] furthered the conspiracy by lending aid and encouragement to defendant _____ [name of defendant who committed assault and battery] [in that _____ (state facts that show how defendants encouraged acts, e.g., as defendant Robert Smith was assaulting and battering plaintiff, defendant Joe Brown urged defendant Robert Smith to continue the attack, stating, "Come on, give it to him good. Show him what happens to guys who mess with us!")].

4. As a proximate result of this conspiracy, plaintiff suffered injury and damages as hereinafter alleged.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegations in [1], above, is for use to allege a count for conspiracy to commit assault and battery. It may be added to the allegations in § 58.50[1], after the first and second causes of action and before the allegations of damages.

Paragraphs 1 and 3 include optional provisions to specify facts that show initial formation of the conspiracy or subsequent encouragement of it. If these facts are known, they should be pleaded. However, it is not required, and formation and participation may be pleaded in general language [see Greenwood v. Mooradian (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 532, 537-538, 290 P.2d 955] . For further discussion, see Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

[3] Allegations

[a] Civil Conspiracy

This form alleges the elements of a civil conspiracy, which are as follows [see Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] :

- Formation of the conspiracy through agreement of initial conspirators (Paragraph 1).

- Tortious acts done in furtherance of the conspiracy (Paragraph 2, referring to charging causes of action).

- Acts of cooperation, aid, encouragement, or ratification of conspirators who participated after formation (Paragraph 3) [see Orser v. George (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 660, 667, 60 Cal. Rptr. 708] .

- Damages resulting from the acts done pursuant to the conspiracy (Paragraph 4, referring to subsequent allegations of damages).

For further discussion, see § 58.16[1], and Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

[b] Conspiracy to Assault and Batter

Nonassailants may be held liable for conspiracy to commit an assault or battery if they agree with the perpetrator before the fact that the acts be committed [see Michael R. v. Jeffrey B. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 1059, 1069, 205 Cal. Rptr. 312] . If a conspiracy is in progress, those who subsequently cooperate, aid, encourage, or ratify the acts are also liable as coconspirators for all the acts of the conspiracy [Orser v. George (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 660, 667, 60 Cal. Rptr. 708] . For further discussion, see § 58.16[1], and Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

[c] Counts and Causes of Action

Generally, if recovery is sought for invasion of the same primary right, it is sought under the same cause of action, even if sought on a different legal ground or theory [see Mattson v. City of Costa Mesa (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 441, 448-449, 164 Cal. Rptr. 913] . Different legal grounds or theories for recovery for invasion of the same right are commonly denominated as "counts."

An agreement of persons, alone, is not a tort, and conspiracy brings liability only if a wrongful act is done pursuant to the agreement [see Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] . Thus, conspiracy is a count whose function is to bring liability to persons who, absent the conspiracy, would not be liable to plaintiff for the injuries incurred [see Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063] . For further discussion, see Ch. 126, Conspiracy .

1. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [A]t all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ [name of employee] was the employee and agent of defendant _____ [name of employer], and in doing the things hereinafter alleged, was acting within the course and scope of that agency.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use to allege the liability of an employer under the doctrine of respondeat superior for an assault and battery committed by an employee [see Civ. Code §§ 2338, 2339; see also § 58.16[4]]. This allegation may be inserted into the complaint in § 58.50[1] after Paragraph 3 as an additional allegation of agency. It should not be used instead of the universal agency allegation set forth in Paragraph 3 because of the need to allege agency involving fictitiously named defendants. Alternatively, this form may be used as a numbered count for liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior [see discussion in § 58.58[3][c]]. Under appropriate facts, it may be used in conjunction with a separate count for the negligence of the employer in hiring or supervising the employee who committed the assault and battery [see City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 778, 782-783, 109 Cal. Rptr. 365 ; see also Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint for the tort of stalking if the defendant's pattern of conduct constituted stalking under the statute [see Civ. Code § 1708.7]. [2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use as a complaint to allege a battery against a city and its employee law enforcement officer for the use of excessive force in effecting an arrest. It may be modified for use against any other public entity that engages in law enforcement functions, such as the state, a county, or a special district, by selecting appropriate allegations of capacity from forms in Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act . It may be expanded to also allege an assault in addition to a battery by adapting the allegations in the first cause of action in § 58.50[1].

[3] Allegations

This form alleges the capacity of the city (Paragraph 1), the specific employment-agency relationship between the city and the officer (Paragraph 2), and the existence of fictitiously named defendants and their universal agency (Paragraphs 3, 4).

Paragraphs 5 through 10 set forth the facts establishing the use of the excessive force and the elements of a cause of action for battery. Paragraphs 11-14 allege injury and damages. For discussion, see § 58.13, Cause of Action for Battery, above, and § 58.50[2]-[7].

Paragraph 15 alleges the filing of a claim for compensation with the defendant city, which is a condition precedent to an action against the city for damages [see Gov. Code § 905]. Paragraph 16 alleges the resolution of the claim that removes the condition precedent and allows a civil action to proceed, either the rejection of the claim in whole or in part (first alternative), or the passing of 45 days without any action being taken on the claim (second alternative) [Gov. Code § 912.4].

[4] Verification

A public entity need not verify its answer even though the complaint is verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446]. The verification of a complaint against a public entity does, however, preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Venue

In an action against a local public entity for personal injuries, the proper venue is the county in which the public entity is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 394].

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [allege where plaintiff was and what he/she was doing at time of injury, e.g., was standing at the corner of Main Street and First Avenue in defendant City of _____ waiting for a bus.

2. At that time and place, defendant _____ [name of law enforcement officer] approached plaintiff and stated that plaintiff was under arrest [for _____ (specify if pertinent)].

3. _____ [Allege all facts constituting battery that occurred during course of arrest and detention, e.g., defendant _____ (name of law enforcement officer) then ordered plaintiff to stand against defendants' vehicle with his arms extended touching the hood and his feet spread wide apart. Defendant then performed a full-body search of plaintiff's person].

4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at the time of the above-described events, and at all other pertinent times, defendants had no warrant for the arrest of plaintiff or other facts or information that constituted probable cause that plaintiff had ever committed or was about to commit a crime, so as to provide grounds for a lawful arrest; nor did defendants have any facts or information that constituted a reasonable suspicion that defendant was involved in any unlawful activity so as to provide grounds for any detention or restraint whatsoever on plaintiff's freedom of movement, and that plaintiff's detention and arrest was, therefore, unlawful.

5. In doing the acts as alleged above, defendant acted with the intent to make a contact with plaintiff's person.

6. At all times stated herein, plaintiff found the contact made with his/her person by defendant to be harmful and offensive to his/her person and dignity.

7. At no time did plaintiff consent to any of the acts of defendant alleged above.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegations in [1], above, is for use in a complaint against a city and its employee law enforcement officer for battery committed by offensive touching in the course of an unlawful arrest. It is designed to be substituted for the charging allegations in § 58.61[1] (Paragraphs 5-10). It may be expanded to allege assault also by adapting the allegations in the first cause of action in § 58.50[1]. The allegations in this form should be combined with allegations of a cause of action for false imprisonment. For the appropriate form, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment .

These acts of defendant are the same acts of which plaintiff complains.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use as an affirmative defense in an answer to a complaint for damages for assault and battery arising from the detention of a suspected shoplifter [see Penal Code § 490.5(f)]. The form alleges that defendant had reasonable cause to detain plaintiff and used only the force necessary to effect the detention [see Penal Code § 490.5(f)(7)]. § 58.76 Affirmative Defense--Opposing Demand for Punitive Damages--Plaintiff Provoked Altercation

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Opposing Demand for Punitive Damages--Plaintiff Provoked Altercation

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE TO THE _____ [specify, e.g., FIRST AND SECOND] CAUSE(S) OF ACTION, defendant alleges:

1. The acts complained of by plaintiff were provoked by plaintiff's unlawful and wrongful conduct in that plaintiff willfully and maliciously _____ [specify acts of provocation, e.g., directed vile and obscene language toward defendant and defendant's wife]. Plaintiff is, therefore, not entitled to an award of punitive damages.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint for assault and battery that includes a prayer for punitive damages [Civ. Code § 3294] in which defendant alleges that the acts forming the basis of the complaint were done by defendant only after being provoked by plaintiff.

An act of provocation that might defeat an award of punitive damages must be distinguished from an act that would justify defendant's conduct as an affirmative defense such as self-defense [see Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 599-600, 191 P.2d 432] . In the case of provocation, plaintiff's behavior does not give the defendant any reasonable belief of imminent danger to self or others so as to justify a response by force. Rather, if plaintiff has been provoked, the response is viewed as the product of sudden anger rather than the malice required to support an award of punitive damages [Badostain v. Grazide (1896) 115 Cal. 425, 429, 47 P. 118] .

[3] Separate Statement of Defense

Defenses set forth in an answer must be separately stated. Each defense must refer to the causes of action that it is intended to answer in a manner by which it may be intelligibly distinguished [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[2] Use of Form

[a] Demurrer

This form is for use to object by demurrer to a complaint for battery in which the alleged acts of defendant are within the sphere of activities protected from tort liability by the constitutional right of privacy [see Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 642-645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618] . A notice of hearing is also included.

A demurrer must be accompanied by a notice of hearing [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(c)]. It must also be accompanied by a memorandum of points and authorities in support of each ground [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. This form contains an optional prayer; a prayer to a demurrer is not required but is frequently included. For further discussion of demurrer procedures and sample forms, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings ; for discussion and forms relating to points and authorities generally, see Ch. 417, Points and Authorities .

[b] Objection by Demurrer

If any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, objection to the complaint on that ground may be taken by demurrer [Code Civ.

Proc. § 430.30(a)]. Objection may also be taken by answer if the ground does not appear on the face of the complaint, or by both demurrer and answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b),(c)]. Objection maybe made on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)].

The cases that have found tort actions involving sexual acts and procreative decisions to be barred by public policy and the constitutional right of privacy have held that the allegations did not state a cause of action [see Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 21, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402 ; Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 642-645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Therefore, if on review of the complaint, it appears that the allegations fall into the sphere of activities so protected, a demurrer is the appropriate response. For further discussion of the effect of the right of privacy on a tort action for battery, see § 58.26.

§ 58.91 Demurrer to Complaint for Failure to State Cause of Action on Ground that Plaintiff Consented to Defendant's Conduct

[1] FORM Demurrer to Complaint for Failure to State Cause of Action on Ground that Plaintiff Consented to Defendant's Conduct

[Caption. See § 58.90[1].]

Defendant _____ [name] demurs to the complaint herein on the following ground:

The complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that nowhere does it appear on the face of the complaint that plaintiff did not consent to the acts of defendant therein alleged, and therefore, an essential element of a battery has not been alleged.

[Optional prayer for relief, memorandum of points and authorities, and notice of hearing. See § 58.90[1].]

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use to object by demurrer to a complaint for battery to which the defendant wishes to place at issue the question of whether plaintiff consented to the alleged contact, and the complaint fails to include an allegation of nonconsent. A notice of hearing is also included.

[3] Allegations

Lack of consent is an essential element of battery on which plaintiff bears the burdens of pleading and proof. Defendant does not have to plead consent affirmatively, but its lack may be shown under a general denial [Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39, 224 P.2d 808 ; see Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249] . Therefore, consent should not be pleaded as an affirmative defense; pleading it as such suggests that defendant bears the burden of proof on an issue for which the burden correctly lies with the plaintiff. The standard California jury instruction does not refer to the burden of proof [see BAJI No. 7.52], and thus cannot be relied on to correct any error of allocation of burden derived from the pleadings.

A complaint may expressly allege a lack of consent [see, e.g., § 58.50[1]], or allege that apparent consent was vitiated by the defendant's misrepresentations [see, e.g., Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 936-938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 ; see also § 58.57[1]]. In that case, consent is placed at issue by the defendant's denial of these allegations in the answer [see Kritzer v. Citron (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 33, 39-40, 224 P.2d 808] . To emphasize that consent is at issue, the defendant may wish to deny the allegations with specific language in the answer, for example, "defendant denies the allegations of paragraph _____ in that at all times mentioned in the complaint, plaintiff consented to each and every act of defendant as alleged in the complaint."

If the complaint is silent as to consent or lack of consent, an essential element of the cause of action is missing [Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249] . In that case, the defendant may raise the issue by demurrer for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)].

The form in [1], above, is for use to object by demurrer to a complaint for battery brought against a peace officer arising from the alleged use of excessive force in effecting an arrest [see § 58.61]. § 59.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter provides a general overview of the federal and California constitutional rights of free speech, assembly, and petitioning the government for redress, as applied to assemblies, meetings, demonstrations, and distribution of materials on public and private property, and limitations on those rights.

The chapter contains the following forms:

- A complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief challenging a governmental entity's refusal to permit use of a public forum for free speech activities [see § 59.50].

- A petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 for expedited judicial review of the denial by a public agency of a permit involving expressive conduct protected by the First Amendment [see § 59.50A].

- A complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief challenging a private shopping center owner's refusal to allow access to the shopping center for free speech activities [see § 59.51].

- A petition for writ of habeas corpus for release from custody when the underlying criminal prosecution is based on a statute or ordinance that violates the petitioner's right to free expression [see § 59.52].

- A complaint by a private property owner for damages for trespass and for injunctive relief against constitutionally unprotected activities on the owner's property [see § 59.53].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.10

§ 59.10 Governing Law

[1] Constitutional Provisions

[a] Federal

The First Amendment of the United States Constitution declares that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or press [U.S. Const., amend. I]. The First Amendment also provides that Congress may make no law abridging the right of the people to assemble peaceably and to petition the government for redress of grievances [U.S. Const., amend. I].

[b] California

The California Constitution provides that the people have the right to instruct their representatives, petition the government for redress of grievances, and assemble freely to consult for the common good [Cal. Const., art. I, § 3]. The California Constitution also provides that every person may freely speak, write, and publish sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of this right; a law may not restrain or abridge liberty of speech or press [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a)].

[c] Protection of Speech, Assembly, and Petition Rights by Due Process Clause

The exercise of speech protected by the First Amendment is a fundamental right in both state and federal constitutions. Thus, this right is protected from state action or infringement by any government entity under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution [New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 265, 84 S. Ct. 710, 11 L. Ed. 2d 686 ; Loza v. Panish (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 821, 824-825, 162 Cal. Rptr. 596] .

The state and federal constitutional rights of assembly and petition are also protected by the Fourteenth Amendment due process clause against government intrusion [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 52, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694 ; Sun Co. of San Bernardino v. Superior Court (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 815, 821-822, 105 Cal. Rptr. 873] .

[2] Comparison of Protection for Free Expression Under Federal and State Constitutions

California Constitution's "liberty of speech" clause [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2] is broader and more protective than the free speech clause of the federal Constitution's First Amendment [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 365-366, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . The free speech provisions of the California Constitution provide more definitive and inclusive protection, and greater restrictions from governmental interference, than comparable federal provisions [see, e.g., Blatty v. New York Times Co. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1033, 1041, 232 Cal. Rptr. 542, 728 P.2d 1177 , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 934 (1987) ; Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908-910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)] . The expanded rights of every citizen set forth in Cal. Const., art. I, § 2 include the following [Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 393, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866] :

- An affirmation that all persons may freely speak, and may write and publish their sentiments;
- A provision allowing for liability if the right is abused; and
- A prohibition against laws that infringe on freedom of speech or the press.

However, merely because the California Constitution's provision is worded more broadly and has been interpreted as more protective than the First Amendment does not mean it is broader than the First Amendment in all its applications [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 367, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . Protection may at times be coterminous [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 367 n.12, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] .

[3] Combined Protection for Freedom of Expression

The First Amendment rights to speech and to assemble and petition for the redress of grievances are related and inseparable freedoms and are often collectively described in the cases as "freedom of expression" [see, e.g., Thomas v. Collins (1945) 323 U.S. 516, 530, 65 S. Ct. 315, 89 L. Ed. 430 ; De Jonge v. Oregon (1937) 299 U.S. 353, 364, 57 S. Ct. 255, 81 L. Ed. 278] .

[4] California Statutes

Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 provides an expedited procedure for judicial review of local public agency decisions regarding issuance, revocation, suspension, or denial of a permit that involves expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I. For a detailed discussion of Section 1094.8, see § 59.12[5][b][iv].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.11

§ 59.11 General Types of Conduct and Activities Protected by Freedom of Expression

[1] Purpose of Protection

The purpose of constitutional provisions that guarantee right to expression is to ensure that ideas, views, and information may be widely disseminated to the public without restriction on content, subject, or manner. Free expression is essential to maintaining a democratic system of self-government that respects individual dignity [see, e.g., Guglielmi v. Spelling-Goldberg Productions (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 860, 866, 160 Cal. Rptr. 352, 603 P.2d 454 ; Weaver v. Jordan (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 235, 241, 49 Cal. Rptr. 537, 411 P.2d 289 , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 844] .

The First Amendment safeguards a freedom that is the indispensable condition of nearly every other form of freedom. When the ultimate effect of sustaining a claim of a waiver of First Amendment rights might be an imposition on that freedom, courts are unwilling to find waiver in circumstances that fall short of being clear and compelling [Ferlauto v. Hamsher (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1399-1400, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 , citing Curtis Publishing Co. v. Butts (1967) 388 U.S. 130, 145, 87 S. Ct. 1975, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1094] . Courts closely scrutinize waivers of constitutional rights and indulge every reasonable presumption against a waiver [Ferlauto v. Hamsher (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1399-1400, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 ; City of Glendale v. George (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1394, 1398, 256 Cal. Rptr. 742] . However, courts will find a waiver if it appears that First Amendment rights have been knowingly and voluntarily waived [see United States v. Berke (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 882 (criminal defendant accused of violations of federal obscenity laws and operation of criminal enterprise knowingly and voluntarily waived First Amendment rights by agreeing to permanent injunction from involvement with production, sale, or distribution of sexually explicit materials)].

[2] Protected Speech

Federal and California decisions have broadly defined the types of speech that are protected by the First Amendment [see, e.g., Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661] . Protected speech includes all of the following:

- Most methods and modes of speech [see, e.g., Aaron v. Municipal Court of San Jose-Milpitas Judicial Dist. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 596, 602, 140 Cal. Rptr. 849] , including (1) artistic and literary expression [see, e.g., Miller v. California (1973) 413 U.S. 15, 23, 93 S. Ct. 2607, 37 L. Ed. 2d 419 ; but see National Endowment for the Arts v. Finley (1998) 524 U.S. 569, 577-585, 118 S. Ct. 2168, 141 L. Ed. 2d 500 (federal statute requiring National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) to consider general standards of "decency" in judging grantapplications does not inherently interfere with First Amendment rights of free expression)], (2) commercial advertising [see Metromedia, Inc. v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 500, 101 S. Ct. 2882, 69 L. Ed. 2d 800 ; but see Keimer v. Buena Vista Books, Inc. (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1220, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 781 (commercial speech is not stripped of all free speech protections, but protections are limited by rational and carefully crafted restrictions, including California's Unfair Trade Practices Act)], (3) peaceful picketing [United Food & Commercial Workers Union v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 566, 574, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849] , and (4) symbolic speech [see Texas v. Johnson (1989) 491 U.S. 397, 403-406, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342] ;

- Speech of a political nature [Browne v. Russell (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1122, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29] , including contributions to political campaigns [Austin v. Michigan Chamber of Commerce (1990) 494 U.S. 652, 657, 110 S. Ct. 1391, 108 L. Ed. 2d 652 ; VanNatta v. Keisling (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1215, 1219 , cert. denied sub nom. Miller v. VanNatta (1999) 525 U.S. 1104 (state constitutional amendment by ballot measure prohibiting state candidates from using or directing contributions from out-of-district residents violates First Amendment)];

- Speech that conveys religious social beliefs, opinions, and messages [see, e.g., Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650; see also Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 111, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151 (activities quintessentially religious in nature such as religious instruction, prayer, and discussion and recitation of Bible, are protected speech); Lamb's Chapel v. Center Moriches Union Free School Dist. (1993) 508 U.S. 384, 393-394, 113 S. Ct. 2141, 124 L. Ed. 2d 352 (presentation of cultural and educational subject matter from religious perspective is speech protected by First Amendment); Widmar v. Vincent (1981) 454 U.S. 263, 269, 102 S. Ct. 269, 70 L. Ed. 2d 440 (religious worship and discussion are forms of speech and association protected by First Amendment); Faith Center Church Evangelistic Ministries v. Glover (9th Cir. 2006) 462 F.3d 1194, 1202 (church engaged in protected speech when its participants met in county public library for prayer, praise, and worship)] ;

- Speech in the context of a privileged relationship such as physician-patient [Conant v. Walters (9th Cir. 2002) 309 F.3d 629, 636] or psychotherapist-patient [Nat'l Ass'n for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis v. California Bd. of Psychology (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1043, 1054] ;

- Verbal criticism, challenges, and profanity directed at police officers, unless the speech is likely to produce a clear and present danger of a serious substantive evil rising far above public inconvenience, annoyance, or unrest [City of Houston v. Hill (1987) 482 U.S. 451, 461, 107 S. Ct. 2502, 96 L. Ed. 2d 398 ; United States v. Poocha (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1077, 1080] ;

- Employee speech on matters of public concern, but not complaints over internal office affairs [Connick v. Myers (1983) 461 U.S. 138, 147, 103 S. Ct. 1684, 75 L. Ed. 2d 708 ; Weisbuch v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 778, 784] ;

- Artistic depictions of celebrities that would otherwise be protected by the right of publicity (Civ. Code § 3344.1), which contain significant transformative elements or creative contributions [Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 387, 405-406, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126, 21 P.3d 797 (transformative elements or creative contributions not confined to parody and can take manyforms, from factual reporting to fictionalized portrayal, from heavy-handed lampooning to subtle social criticism); see also Winter v. DC Comics (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 881, 887-892, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d

634, 69 P.3d 473 (transformative elements test applied to comic book depiction of well-known performers); Kirby v. Sega of America, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 47, 57-62, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (transformative elements test applied to videogame depiction of rock performer)];

- An artist's sale of the artist's own original artwork [White v. City of Sparks (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 953, 955-957] .

- Vote swapping and vote exchange mechanisms provided by Internet websites [Porter v. Bowen (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1009, 1018-1026] .

- Speech that can reasonably be characterized as political rhetoric or hyperbole, particularly speech not directed at specific individuals [Fogel v. Collins (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 824, 830].

- Anonymous speech on the Internet [Krinsky v. Doe 6 (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1162-1164, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 231].

The right of free speech also includes a speaker's right to tailor speech by deciding "what not to say," i.e., to be free from being compelled to present a viewpoint with which the speaker disagrees. In one case, for example, the United States Supreme Court held that private parade organizers in Boston could not be required to include among marchers a group imparting a message that the organizers do not wish to convey [Hurley v. Irish-American Gay Group (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487, 495, 503-508] . The right to be free from being compelled to speak is also protected by the California Constitution [see ARP Pharmacy Svcs., Inc. v Gallagher Bassett Svcs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1307, 1314-1316, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256] . However, the right to exclude does not extend to the exclusion of a speaker in a public forum seeking only to be heard, not to have his or her speech included or possibly confused with another's, and the speaker has not violated a valid statute or ordinance [Gathright v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 573, 576-579] .

The First Amendment affords the right of free speech to the communication, its source, and its recipients [Virginia Pharmacy Bd. v. Virginia Consumer Council (1976) 425 U.S. 748, 756, 96 S. Ct. 1817, 48 L. Ed. 2d 346 ; National Association for the Advancement of Colored People v. Jones (9th Cir. 1997) 131 F.3d 1317, 1322] . However, the listener's rights are no greater than those of the speaker [National Association for the Advancement of Colored People v. Jones (9th Cir. 1997) 131 F.3d 1317, 1322 (voters, as recipients of campaign speech, have no greater rights than candidates to have candidates publish statements in sample ballot or to have candidates' campaigns publicly funded)].

Commercial speech receives a lesser degree of constitutional protection than many other forms of expression, and governments may entirely prohibit commercial speech that is false or misleading [Kasky v. Nike (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 939, 946, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296, 45 P.3d 243 ; for discussion of commercial speech generally, see Ch. 14, Advertising].

Threats are generally not protected by the First Amendment. The objective test for determining whether a threat is a "true" threat that falls outside the protection of the First Amendment is whether a reasonable person would foresee that the statement would be interpreted by those to whom the person making the speech communicates it as a serious expression of intent to harm or assault [Planned Parenthood of the Columbia/Willamette, Inc. v. American Coalition of LifeActivists (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1058, 1088 ("wanted"-type posters showing physicians providing reproductive services constituted true threat even though posters on their face contained no explicitly threatening language); Bauer v. Sampson (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 775, 782 ; Lovell v. Poway Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 367, 371-372] .

The display of a permanent monument in a public park is government speech, which is not subject to scrutiny under the Free Speech Clause [Pleasant Grove City, Utah v. Summum (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1125, 1131-1138, 172 L. Ed. 2d 853].

[3] Methods of Disseminating Protected Speech

Federal and California decisions have uniformly recognized that First Amendment protection extends to most means of assembly employed to communicate and disseminate ideas and information [see, e.g., Organization for a Better Austin v. Keefe (1971) 402 U.S. 415, 419, 91 S. Ct. 1575, 29 L. Ed. 2d 1] , including all of the following:

- Acts of picketing [see, e.g., Planned Parenthood Shasta-Diablo, Inc. v. Williams (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1009, 1019, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88, 898 P.2d 402 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1133 (1997) ; see also discussion in § 59.13[6]];

- Distribution of handbills, leaflets, and pamphlets [see, e.g., McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm'n (1995) 514 U.S. 334, 345-346, 115 S. Ct. 1511, 131 L. Ed. 2d 426 (state prohibition of anonymous campaign literature unconstitutional); Talley v. California (1960) 362 U.S. 60, 80 S. Ct. 536, 4 L. Ed. 2d 559 (municipal ban on anonymous leafleting unconstitutional); American Civil Liberties Union of Nevada v. Heller (9th Cir. 2004) 378 F.3d 979, 987-1002 (statute requiring groups or entities publishing material or information relating to election, candidate, or question on ballot to reveal names and addresses of publications' financial sponsors unconstitutional); Rancho Publications v. Superior Court of Orange County (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 274 (subpoena seeking identities of members of group that published newspaper advertorials in controversy surrounding public hospital unenforceable because of qualified immunity in First Amendment protection of speech); Paradise Hills Associates v. Procel (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1528, 1539, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514] ;

- Marching and demonstrating in streets [see, e.g., Dillon v. Municipal Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 860, 867, 94 Cal. Rptr. 777, 484 P.2d 945] ;

- Charitable appeals for funds on streets [see, e.g., Village of Schaumburg v. Citizens for Better Environment (1980) 444 U.S. 620, 633, 100 S. Ct. 826, 63 L. Ed. 2d 73] ;

- Demonstrating and leafletting in parks [see, e.g., United States v. Baugh (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1037, 1042 (march and protest activities on national park land); Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204] ;

- Parading [see, e.g., Hurley v. Irish-American Gay Group (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487, 500-501] ; and

- Acts of disclosing and publishing information, even if the information was obtained from a source that obtained it unlawfully [Bartnicki v. Vopper (2001) 532 U.S. 514, 528-535, 121 S. Ct. 1753, 149 L. Ed. 2d 787] .

Nonverbal conduct implicates the First Amendment when it is intended to convey a "particularized message" and the likelihood is great that the message would be so understood [Texas v. Johnson (1989) 491 U.S. 397, 404, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342 ; Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1226 ; see discussion of nonverbal activity in § 59.11[4]].

Courts have recognized that the rights of free speech and free press are worthless without effective means of expression [Wollam v. City of Palm Springs (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 276, 284, 29 Cal. Rptr. 1, 379 P.2d 481 ; In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 496-497, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89] . Thus, First Amendment protections extend to tools for disseminating speech like cellular telephones, pagers, and beepers, which are important communication devices, analogous to the telephone. Regulation of these modes of communication must be narrowly tailored so that they do not proscribe a substantial amount of protected speech [In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 496-497, 79 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 89 (provision of preliminary injunction prohibiting all uses and possession of pagers and beepers by gang members within specified target area is overbroad and infirm)].

Even if information has been obtained in a manner which is itself lawful, but from a source that obtained it unlawfully, the government may not punish the ensuing publication of the information based on the fact that it was unlawfully obtained [Bartnicki v. Vopper (2001) 532 U.S. 514, 528-535, 121 S. Ct. 1753, 149 L. Ed. 2d 787 (application of 18 U.S.C. § 2511(1)(c), punishing willful disclosure or attempt to disclose contents of unlawfully obtained wire or oral communication if publisher knows or has reason to know it was unlawfully intercepted, to radio commentator who played tape of unlawfully intercepted telephone conversation violated commentator's First Amendment rights)].

[4] Nonverbal Activity

Protected expression is not limited to verbal expression, such as written or spoken words. The federal and California constitutions protect nonverbal, symbolic speech as an effective way of communicating ideas [see, e.g., Hurley v. Irish-American Gay Group (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 569-570, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487 (parade)].Conduct is expressive when two factors are present: (1) intent to convey a particularized message, and (2) a substantial likelihood that the message will be understood by those receiving it [Spence v. Washington (1974) 418 U.S. 405, 410-411, 94 S. Ct. 2727, 41 L. Ed. 2d 842 ; Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 549 n.1]. Cases have recognized that the First Amendment shields such symbolic acts as a Ku Klux Klan display of a cross in a town square [see Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650] , wearing an arm band to protest a war [Tinker v. Des Moines Community School Dist. (1969) 393 U.S. 503, 505-506, 89 S. Ct. 733, 21 L. Ed. 2d 731] , and dancing [4805 Convoy, Inc. v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1108, 1111 n.2 (nude dancing is form of expression entitled to First Amendment protection and subject only to reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions); Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 549 (nude dancing); see City of Erie v. Pap's A. M. (2000) 529 U.S. 277, 120 S. Ct. 1382, 1391, 146 L. Ed. 2d 265 (plurality opinion that nude dancing is expressive conduct falling only within outer ambit of First Amendment); Barnes v. Glen Theatre, Inc. (1991) 501 U.S. 560, 565-566, 111 S. Ct. 2456, 115 L. Ed. 2d 504 (same)].

Religious activity typically involves expressive speech and, although protected by the First Amendment, as a matter of law it is subordinate to establishment clause concerns [DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 280, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 (school district properly refused to post sign containing Ten Commandments at high school baseball field)]. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 59.12 Governmental Limitations on Freedom of Expression

[1] General Principles

Although free speech, assembly, and petition are fundamental rights guaranteed by federal and state constitutions, they are not absolute [see Near v. Minnesota (1931) 283 U.S. 697, 708, 51 S. Ct. 625, 75 L. Ed. 1357 ; Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 134, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846] . In many instances, important governmental interests such as public safety may outweigh an individual's liberty interests in free expression [see, e.g., People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110-1112, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 (upholding preliminary injunction against gang members "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within four block area, which was directed at ending gang members' trafficking in illegal drugs and securing control of community through systematic acts of intimidation and violence, is not invalid on associational grounds); Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 55-59, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694 (upholding Code Civ. Proc. § 391 et seq., vexatious litigant statute, as not impermissibly chilling right to petition government for redress); In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1100-1101, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 (upholding riot curfew against First Amendment challenge)].

An otherwise valid statute, which is not aimed at protected expression, does not conflict with the First Amendment simply because the statute can be violated by the use of spoken words or other expressive activity [Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 628, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 ; Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 134, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846 (also true when spoken words, alone or with conduct, violate statutes relating to employment discrimination, and use of racial epithets constitute discrimination)]. On the other hand, a city has no legitimate interest in protecting its "image" qua image as against the free speech rights of its citizens [Gammoh v. City of Anaheim (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 186, 192, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 194 ("visual blight" can be prevented by lesser intrusive means than complete preclusion of adult business from any major roadway)].

In determining the constitutionality of governmental limitations on free expression, the cases frequently distinguish between restrictions based on the content of speech and content-neutral limitations on the time, place, and manner of expression. A more stringent standard of scrutiny applies to the former [see, e.g., Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650 ; Perry Ed. Ass'n v. Perry Local Ed. Ass'n

(1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 364-378, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . The level of scrutiny applied to content-neutral time, place, and manner regulations is an "intermediate" scrutiny [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 364, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . For discussion of time, place, and manner restrictions, see [2], below. For discussion of content-based restrictions, see [3], below. The courts also strictly scrutinize any prior restraints on expression [see Organization for a Better Austin v. Keefe (1971) 402 U.S. 415, 419 ; Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204] , as discussed in [5], below.

In addition, cases involving demonstrations and marches frequently raise issues regarding the right of access to public property to engage in such activities. When the government seeks to limit expressive activity on public property, the standard for judging the constitutionality of the limitation depends on the nature of the public property involved and whether it has the status of a "public forum" [see, e.g., Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 799-800, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 ; Perry Ed. Ass'n v. Perry Local Ed. Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45-46, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794] . For discussion, see § 59.13.

A court may have to decide if speech is the government speaking for itself (or adopting private speech as its own), which the government is free to regulate without constraint [see Rosenberger v. Rector and Visitors of Univ. of Va. (1995) 515 U.S. 819, 833, 115 S. Ct. 2510, 132 L. Ed. 2d 700 (when government speaks for itself, it may take legitimate and appropriate steps to ensure its message is neither garbled nor distorted)], or if speech is private, which the government may only regulate within the constraints for the First Amendment [Ariz. Life Coalition, Inc. v. Stanton (9th Cir. 2008) 515 F.3d 956, 963]. The Ninth Circuit has adopted a four-part test to differentiate between government speech and private speech [Ariz. Life Coalition, Inc. v. Stanton (9th Cir. 2008) 515 F.3d 956, 963-965 ; see also Johanns v. Livestock Marketing Ass'n (2005) 544 U.S. 550, 125 S. Ct. 2055, 161 L. Ed. 2d 896 (when government sets overall message to be communicated and approves every word that is disseminated, it is government speech); Downs v. Los Angeles Unified School District (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1003 (addressing whether messages conveyed through school bulletin boards constituted government speech)]:

- The central purpose of the program in which the speech in question occurs.

- The degree of editorial control exercised by the government or private entities over the content of the speech.

- The identity of the literal speaker.

- Whether the government or the private entity bears the ultimate responsibility for the content of the speech, in analyzing circumstances in which both government and a private entity are claimed to be speaking.

[2] Permissible Time, Place, and Manner Regulations

[a] General Test for Constitutionality

Many federal and California decisions have held that governmental restriction of free expression is permissible when the regulation is reasonably limited only to the time, place, and manner of exercise of the First Amendment activity, provided that the regulation complies with all of the following [see, e.g., Perry Ed. Ass'n v. Perry Local Ed. Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794 ; Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1205 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 364, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1571-1573, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; Bodenheimer v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 885, 891, 167 Cal. Rptr. 26] :

- It does not refer to the content of regulated speech (i.e., is "content-neutral") [see discussion in [b], below];

- It is narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest [see discussion in [c], below]; and

- It leaves open adequate alternative avenues of communication to express views [see discussion in [d], below].

The relevant standards under the federal and state constitutions are the same. California's formulation of the time, place, and manner test was fashioned from a long line of United States Supreme Court cases, and analysis of speech regulation under the California Constitution's Liberty of Speech Clause employs time, place, and manner restrictions measured by federal constitutional standards [Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196, 1200 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 363 n.7, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] .

[b] Requirement of Content-Neutrality

To qualify as a constitutionally permissible "time, place, and manner" restriction, a regulation or injunctive provision must be "content-neutral" [see, e.g., Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 551 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 364-365, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1573, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302] . Any regulation of content is presumptively invalid and is subject to a different and stricter level of constitutional scrutiny [see, e.g., CapitolSquare Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650 ; Perry Ed. Ass'n v. Perry Local Ed. Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794] , as discussed in [3], below.

The principal inquiry in determining content neutrality is whether the government has adopted a regulation of speech without reference to the content of the regulated speech [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 763, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 ; Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 367-368, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . This does not require literal or absolute content neutrality, only that the regulation be "justified" by legitimate concerns unrelated to a disagreement with the message conveyed by the speech [Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 368, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] . Thus, courts look to the government's purpose as the threshold consideration [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 763, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] . A regulation that serves purposes unrelated to the content of expression is deemed neutral even if it has an incidental effect on some speakers or messages, but not others [see, e.g., Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 320-321, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 368, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1573, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

For example, the United States Supreme Court found that a municipal ordinance requiring a permit to conduct an event involving more than 50 individuals in public parks is a content-neutral time, place, and manner regulation of the use of a public forum since (1) the ordinance is not directed to communicative activity, but to all activity in a public park, and (2) the object of the ordinance and permit system is not to exclude communication of a particular content [Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 122 S. Ct. 775, 779-780, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783] . The Supreme Court has also found that an ordinance prohibiting knowingly or intentionally appearing in public in a state of nudity is to be evaluated as a content-neutral restriction on symbolic speech [City of Erie v. Pap's A. M. (2000) 529 U.S. 277, 120 S. Ct. 1382, 1391, 146 L. Ed. 2d 265 (plurality opinion)]. The Court also found a federal injunction that imposed place restrictions against abortion protesters to be content-neutral since it focused exclusively on location and manner of the protest activities. The protesters' claim that the restriction was against a particular ideology was rejected since the injunction was issued in response to their harassing conduct, not their viewpoint [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 763, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 ; accord, Planned Parenthood Shasta-Diablo, Inc. v. Williams (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1009, 1019-1020, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88, 898 P.2d 402 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1133 (1997)] . Similarly, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals found content-neutral a city ordinance regulating all demonstration activity within 100 feet of an abortion clinic, in which demonstration activity was defined as including but not limited to "protesting, picketing, distributing literature, attempting to impede access, or engaging in oral protest, education or counseling activities," so that the ordinance did not refer to the content of the speech it regulated [Sabelko v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 1997) 120 F.3d 161, 164 (invalidating ordinance because not narrowly drawn)].

The United States and California Supreme Courts have found regulation of the solicitation of money to be content-neutral, thus requiring intermediate rather than strict scrutiny, even though the regulations distinguish between speech soliciting the immediate payment or donation of money and other protected speech, and thus are not totally unconcerned with the literal content of spoken or written words so long as the regulation predominantly is addressed to the inherently intrusive and potentially coercive nature of that kind of speech and not to the content [see Int'l Soc. for Krishna Consciousness v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541 ; United States v. Kokinda (1990) 497 U.S. 720, 110 S. Ct. 3115, 111 L. Ed. 2d 571 ; Heffron v. Int'l Soc. for Krishna Consciousness (1981) 452 U.S. 640, 101 S. Ct. 2559, 69 L. Ed. 2d 298 ; Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 368-379, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334] .

A restriction may be content-based, and therefore subject to strict scrutiny, even though it is not "viewpoint based." In one case, for example, the United States Supreme Court considered the constitutionality of an ordinance that banned the display of any sign within 500 feet of a foreign embassy if the sign tended to bring the foreign government into "public odium" or "public disrepute." The Court rejected the government's contention that the restriction was not content-based. The Court agreed that the restriction was not viewpoint-based because the government was not selecting permissible expression on the basis of the views expressed in the signs; the permissible message was essentially determined by the policies of the foreign governments. Nevertheless, the expression was content-based because the permissibility of picket signs was determined by whether or not the sign criticized the foreign government [Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 319, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333] . Furthermore, the justification for the ordinance was based on its potential primary impact on the target of the speech, i.e., the foreign governments [Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 320-321, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333] .

Generally, laws that by their terms distinguish favored speech from disfavored speech on the basis of the ideas or views expressed are content based [Turner Broad. Sys. v. F.C.C. (1994) 512 U.S. 622, 643, 114 S. Ct. 2445, 129 L. Ed. 2d 497 ; Foti v. City of Menlo Park (9th Cir. 1998) 146F.3d 629, 636]. Thus, when exceptions to restrictions on noncommercial speech are based on content, the restriction itself is based on content [Foti v. City of Menlo Park (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 629, 636 ; National Advertising Co. v. City of Orange (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 246, 249] . For example, a municipal ordinance banning all signs on all public property that created exemptions for real estate and safety, traffic, and public informational signs is unconstitutional, since enforcement of the ordinance requires that a law enforcement officer examine the content of signs to determine whether the exemptions apply [Foti v. City of Menlo Park (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 629, 636 , citing Desert Outdoor Advertising v. City of Moreno Valley (9th Cir. 1996) 103 F.3d 814, 820] .

[c] Requirement of Narrow-Tailoring

A narrowly tailored time, place, or manner restriction on speech is one that does not burden substantially more speech than is necessary to achieve a substantial government interest [Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 799, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1041]. It must target and eliminate no more than the exact source of the evil it seeks to remedy [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 485, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1041].

Because it is content-neutral, a time, place, or manner restriction passes constitutional muster if it is narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest and leaves open ample alternative channels of communication [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 482, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; Edwards v. City of Santa Barbara (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1213, 1215 ; for discussion of alternative channels of communication, see [d], below]. Though the regulation must be narrowly tailored to serve the government's legitimate, content-neutral interests, it need not be the least restrictive or least intrusive means of doing so [Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 798-799, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196, 1201 ; Edwards v. City of Santa Barbara (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1213, 1215-1216] . However, the existence of obvious, less burdensome alternatives is a relevant consideration in determining whether the fit between ends and means is reasonable [City of Cincinnati v. Discovery Network, Inc. (1993) 507 U.S. 410, 417 n.13, 113 S. Ct. 1505, 123 L. Ed. 2d 99 (1993) ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1041 ; see also Santa Monica Food Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1041].

The narrow tailoring requirement has been refined in three ways since it was first announced [Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 753] :

- As long as the government's interest in a regulation of speech in a public forum is substantial, the regulation need not be the least restrictive or least intrusive alternative [One World One Family Now v. City and County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 1996) 76 F.3d 1009, 1014] . So long as the governmental interests would be achieved less effectively absent the regulation and the regulation achieves its ends without significantly restricting a substantial quantity of speech that does not create the same evils, the regulation is sufficiently narrowly tailored [Ward v. Rock against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 799 & n.7].

- Although the regulation need not be minimally restrictive, the availability of several obvious less-restrictive alternatives is pertinent in deciding whether the regulation burdens substantially more speech than necessary to achieve its purposes [Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 755 ; see Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196, 1201 (existence of numerous and obvious less-burdensome alternatives is relevant to assessing whether restriction on speech reasonably fits interest asserted); Project 80's, Inc. v. City of Pocatello (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 635, 638].

- When there is a generic regulation, its validity need not be judged solely by reference to the demonstration at hand, but can also take into account the need for the regulation as applied to other speakers.

A state's interest in protecting the safety and convenience of persons using a public forum is a valid government objective [Heffron v. Intl. Soc. of Krishna Consciousness, Inc. (1981) 452 U.S. 640, 650, 101 S. Ct. 2559, 69 L. Ed. 2d 298 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1041-1043 (while city's asserted reasons for enacting permitting regulations were substantial governmental interests of protecting safety and convenience of persons using public park, permitting requirements did not promote interests in any significant way); see also Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 323, 122 S. Ct. 775, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783 ; Cox v. State of New Hampshire (1941) 312 U.S. 569, 574, 61 S. Ct. 762, 85 L. Ed. 1049].

For example, in one case, a California court of appeal held that an ordinance establishing a 300-foot buffer zone around residences, within which "targeted picketing" was prohibited, was constitutionally valid, even though some lesser zone might conceivably have accomplished the purpose of protecting residential privacy. The court noted that an ordinance is valid under the "narrow tailoring" test for time, place, and manner restrictions if it reasonably supports the government purpose in such a way that any less restrictive ordinance would do an inferior job [City of San Jose v. Superior Court (Thompson) (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 330, 340-341, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , cert. denied sub nom., Thompson v. City of San Jose, 516 U.S. 932] .

In contrast, the Ninth Circuit found that a city ordinance banning sales and solicitation of donations along a city boardwalk, but containing an exception for nonprofit organizations, was invalid as not narrowly tailored to serve a governmental interests of protecting local merchants and aiding free traffic flow. The Ninth Circuit held that there was no evidence that those without nonprofit status were any more cumbersome on fair competition or free traffic flow than those with nonprofit status. Nor was there a justification for allowing those with membership in a nonprofit organization to sell items and solicit donations, while disallowing those with no nonprofit membership from the same activities [Perry v. Los Angeles Police Dep't (9th Cir. 1997) 121 F.3d 1365, 1369-1370] . In another case, the Ninth Circuit held that dispersing a prayer service held on public land to protest the destruction of former military housing rather than its conversion to housing for the homeless to a " First Amendment" zone was not narrowly tailored to serve the important governmental interests of ensuring that the prayer service was conducted so as not to impede access to the visitor center on the land or use of the roadways running through the land. In this case, the location was an essential part of the message sought to be conveyed, so that the requirement that the protesters use the First Amendment area burdened the speech to a substantially greater degree than was needed to achieve the government's purposes [Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 753-755] .

The "narrow tailoring" test discussed above applies when testing the constitutionality of generally applicable rules such as statutes or ordinances. A more stringent standard applies when testing the constitutionality of an injunction against expressive activities [see Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 763, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 ; City of San Jose v. Superior Court (Thompson) (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 330, 335, 337-341, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , cert. denied sub nom., Thompson v. City of San Jose, 516 U.S. 932] . For discussion of constitutional restrictions on such injunctions, see [6], below.

[d] Requirement of Alternative Forum for Expression

A time, place, and manner restriction imposed on protected expression must leave open adequate alternative channels of expression that allowsthe message to reach its audience, i.e., the speaker's target audience must not be altogether insulated from the speaker's message [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 480, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420] . In one case, for example, a "buffer zone" limiting protesters to anti-abortion activity across the street from a clinic was held to be an adequate alternative avenue to convey their message since the protesters were in plain view and within hearing distance of their target audience, the clinic's patients, and staff [Planned Parenthood Shasta-Diablo, Inc. v. Williams (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1009, 1020-1022, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88, 898 P.2d 402 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1133 (1997) ; see also Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 (striking down floating buffer zone imposed as part of injunctive relief as not narrowly drawn on basis of record in case); see also § 59.13[6]].

[e] Discretion of Decision Maker

To be valid under the First Amendment, a regulation of speech, such as a statute or an ordinance, must not delegate overly broad discretion to a government official to decide whether to restrict speech [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798-803 ; Long Beach Area Peace Network v. City of Long Beach, 522 F.3d 1010, 1022 (9th Cir. 2008) ; Santa Monica Food Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1037 (9th Cir. 2006)] . To determine whether a regulation impermissibly grants the official unduly broad discretion, courts consider whether the language of the regulation contains adequate standards to guide the official's decision and render it subject to effective judicial review [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798 ; see also Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 323, 122 S. Ct. 775, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783] . These guidelines mitigate the risk that the official will favor or disfavor speech based on its content [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798 ; see also Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 323, 122 S. Ct. 775, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783] . Among the factors courts consider is whether the regulation contains narrowly drawn, reasonable, and definite standards guiding the hand of the official [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798 ; see also Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement (1992) 505 U.S. 123, 133, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101] . There is particular concern about statutes that do not require the official to provide any explanation for the decision, and that decision is unreviewable [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798-799 ; see also Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 324, 122 S. Ct. 775, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783 (ordinance did not confer excess discretion where licensor had to clearly explain its reasons for denial, and statute's standards were enforceable on review by appeal to administrative board and then to state courts); Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement (1992) 505 U.S. 123, 133, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101] . None of these factors is itself necessarily determinative of whether a statute confers excess discretion. Instead, courts look to the totality of the factors to assess whether a regulation contains adequate safeguards to protect against official abuse [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 799] .

For example, the open-ended standard in a city's parade ordinance, combined with the absence of a requirement that officials articulate their reasons or an administrative-judicial review process, vested the chief of police with sweeping authority to determine whether a parade could utilize the forum of the streets to broadcast its message. This unduly broad discretion was prohibited by the First Amendment as placing unfettered discretion in the hands of the licensing officials and rendered the parade ordinance constitutionally defective on its face [Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798-803] .

[f] Captive Audiences

The government may only restrain speech to captive audiences in public fora under narrow circumstances [Erznoznik v. City of Jacksonville (1975) 422 U.S. 205, 210-211, 95 S. Ct. 2268, 45 L. Ed. 2d 125 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1054]. The government must show that substantial privacy interests are being invaded in an essentially intolerable manner [Cohen v. California (1971) 403 U.S. 15, 21, 91 S. Ct. 1780, 29 L. Ed. 2d 284 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1054]. Substantial privacy interests include the following:

- The psychological and physical well-being of a hospital patient held captive by medical circumstance [Madsen v. Women's Health Ctr. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 768-771, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 (validating injunction creating 36-foot buffer zone around entrances of abortion clinic in which picketing and demonstrating, among other activities, were barred); see also Hill v. Colorado (2000) 530 U.S. 703, 728-730, 120 S. Ct. 2480, 147 L. Ed. 2d 597 (upholding eight-foot regulatory buffer around clinic entrances due to unique concerns surrounding health care facilities, where those using facilities are often in particularly vulnerable physical and emotional conditions)].

- The quiet enjoyment of one's home [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 483, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 (upholding ban on focused picketing taking place solely in front of particular residence)].

Under the captive audience rule, the Ninth Circuit found a city's rule prohibiting speech activities in a park within 30 feet of any person or group waiting in line to obtain tickets, food, or other goods or services; attending or being the audience in a park event; or seated and eating or drinking, to be an unconstitutional "captive audience" regulation [Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1053-1057 ; see Lehman v. City of Shaker Heights (1974) 418 U.S. 298, 302-304, 94 S. Ct. 2714, 41 L. Ed. 2d 770 (recognizing that public streetcar is not First Amendment forum like park, where First Amendment values inalterably prevail); Kuba v. A Agric. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2004) 387 F.3d 850, 861 n.10 (patrons of place of public entertainment were not captive audience similar to intended audiences in Madsen and its progeny, because they were obviously not particularly vulnerable, as were patients and doctors in those cases)]. Even if the city could have justified a prohibition on unwelcome speech, the "captive audience" regulation was too broad because it prohibited all "speech activities," not just those that continued after the recipient of the speech signaled a preference to be left alone [Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1055 ; see Board of Airport Comm'rs v. Jews for Jesus, Inc. (1987) 482 U.S. 569, 574-575, 107 S. Ct. 2568, 96 L. Ed. 2d 500 (regulation was constitutionally overbroad where it prohibited all First Amendment activities and no conceivable governmental interest justified such absolute prohibition of speech); see also Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network of Western New York (1997) 519 U.S. 357, 383-384, 117 S. Ct. 855, 137 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1997) (injunction provision requiring abortion protestors to move away from abortion clinic patients who asked to be left alone did not violate First Amendment)]. Moreover, even if the city's purported interest in protecting certain park-goers from communications by others were substantial, the rule was not narrowly tailored to meet that interest [Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1055-1057].

[3] Content Restrictions

[a] General Strict Scrutiny Standard of Review

As a general rule, laws that by their terms distinguish favored speech from disfavored speech on the basis of the ideas or views expressed are content based [Baba v. Board of Supervisors (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 504, 513, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428] . The First Amendment does not permit government to restrict the content of speech because of its disapproval of the ideas expressed. Such content-based regulations are presumptively invalid [R.A.V. v. St. Paul (1992) 505 U.S. 377, 382, 112 S. Ct. 2538, 120 L. Ed. 2d 305 ; Free Speech Coalition v. Reno (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1083, 1091] .

Most purported regulation of speech content is subject to a strict-scrutiny standard to determine its constitutional validity. In particular, content-based restrictions on expression in a public forum must be necessary to serve a compelling state interest and narrowly drawn to achieve that end [U.S. v. Playboy Entertainment Group, Inc. (2000) 529 U.S. 803, 813-814, 120 S. Ct. 1878, 146 L. Ed. 2d 865 ; Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 761, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650 ; Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 321, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333 ; Perry Ed. Ass'n v. Perry Local Ed. Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794 ; see § 59.13[3], [6][a]]. However, there may be content restriction in a nonpublic forum, such as a school, so long as the restriction is reasonably related to legitimate governmental concerns [80 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 155, 169 (1997) (school district that permits commercial motion picture studios to film on school property may deny permission based solely on content of movie so long as reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns)]. Further, regulation of solicitation of the immediate payment or donation of money has been found to be content-neutral and subject to a lower level of scrutiny [see Los Angeles Alliance for Survival v. City of Los Angeles (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 352, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 993 P.2d 334 , and discussion in [2][b], above].

In determining whether a regulation is content based, the focus should be on determining the following [Reed v. Town of Gilbert (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 966, 976] :

- Whether the regulation targets certain content.

- Whether the regulation or an exemption is based on identification of a speaker or event instead of on content.

- Whether an enforcement officer would need to distinguish content to determine applicability of the regulation.

[b] "Unprotected" Content Categories

In addition to the general standard set forth in [a], above, the following limited categories of speech have been held to be subject to content regulation because their social value is deemed to be "slight" when compared with society's interest in order and morality [R.A.V. v. St. Paul (1992) 505 U.S. 377, 383, 112 S. Ct. 2538, 120 L. Ed. 2d 305] :

- Obscenity;
- Defamation; and
- "Fighting words."

The California Supreme Court has also found knowingly false statements of fact to be unprotected speech [see People v. Stanistreet (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 497, 501-512, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 633, 58 P.3d 465 (Pen. Code § 148.6, making filing of allegation of misconduct against peace officer knowing allegation to be false a misdemeanor, is constitutional on its face)]. The United States Supreme Court held that a state may punish words that by their very utterance inflict injury or tend to incite an immediate breach of the peace [Virginia v. Black (2003) 538 U.S. 343, 359, 123 S. Ct. 1536, 155 L. Ed. 2d 535 ; Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire (1942) 315 U.S. 568, 572, 62 S. Ct. 766, 86 L. Ed. 1031] .

Even in the above areas, however, the Supreme Court has indicated that there are First Amendment limits on the extent of permissible governmental regulation [R.A.V. v. St. Paul (1992) 505 U.S. 377, 383-384, 112 S. Ct. 2538, 120 L. Ed. 2d 305] . For speech to be actionable fighting words, the government must show there was a likelihood the person addressed would make an immediate violent response [Gooding v. Wilson (1972) 405 U.S. 518, 528, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408 ; United States v. Poocha (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1077, 1080-1081 (fighting words exception requires narrower application when words addressed to police officer because properly trained officer may reasonably be expected to exercise higher degree of restraint than average citizen and be less likely to respond)]. Further, the Supreme Court struck down as unconstitutional a state law prohibiting the placement of symbols or objects on private or public property that "one knows or has reason to know arouses anger, alarm or resentment on the basis of race, color, creed, religion or gender." Although the state had justified the regulation as a prohibition of "fighting words," the Court held that the statute was unconstitutional because it discriminated based on viewpoint; those using fighting words that communicate messages of ethnic or gender intolerance are punished, while those expressing other viewpoints are free to use fighting words [R.A.V. v. St. Paul (1992) 505 U.S. 377, 112 S. Ct. 2538, 120 L. Ed. 2d 305 ; see Department of Corrections v. State Personnel Bd. (Wallace) (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 131, 144-145, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (white male correctional officer's expression of frustration and anger regarding affirmative action policy of California Department of Corrections to Hispanic female officer was not within "fighting words" exception to First Amendment protection)].

The First Amendment also permits a state to ban a "true threat." True threats encompass statements in which the speaker means to communicate a serious expression of an intent to commit an act of unlawful violence to a particular individual or group of individuals [Virginia v. Black (2003) 538 U.S. 343, 123 S. Ct. 1536, 1547-1548, 155 L. Ed. 2d 535 ; Watts v. United States (1969) 394 U.S. 705, 708, 89 S. Ct. 1399, 22 L. Ed. 2d 664] . The speaker need not actually intend to carry out the threat. Intimidation in the constitutionally proscribable sense is a type of true threat, in which a speaker directs a threat to a person or group of persons with the intent of placing the victim in fear of bodily harm or death [Virginia v. Black (2003) 538 U.S. 343, 123 S. Ct. 1536, 1547-1548, 155 L. Ed. 2d 535 (some cross-burnings fit within this meaning of intimidating speech)].

[c] "Clear and Present Danger" Test

In a number of earlier decisions, the United States Supreme Court held that the restriction of otherwise protected speech may be justified if the words pose a "clear and present danger" to an undeniable public interest or to the administration of justice. Generally, the "clear and present danger" test required the government to demonstrate that the speech involved a "serious substantive evil" and a high degree of imminence to justify the restriction [see, e.g., Dennis v. United States (1951) 341 U.S. 494, 510, 71 S. Ct. 857, 95 L. Ed. 1137 ; Terminiello v. Chicago (1949) 337 U.S. 1, 4, 69 S. Ct. 894, 93 L. Ed. 1131 ; Bridges v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 252, 263, 62 S. Ct. 190, 86 L. Ed. 192] . In a later case, the Court struck down a statute that punished mere advocacy of unlawful violence without citing the "clear and present danger" test, and two justices expressed the view, in concurring opinions, that the test should not be applied in interpreting the First Amendment [see Brandenburg v. Ohio (1969) 395 U.S. 444, 447-455, 89 S. Ct. 1827, 23 L. Ed. 2d 430] . The Court in that case held that the state cannot ban advocacy of unlawful conduct unless the expression is directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action and is likely to incite or produce such action [Brandenburg v. Ohio (1969) 395 U.S. 444, 447-448, 89 S. Ct. 1827, 23 L. Ed. 2d 430 ; see Texas v. Johnson (1989) 491 U.S. 397, 409, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342] .

Although the Supreme Court apparently no longer relies on the "clear and present danger" test, some later California decisions have continued to refer to it when testing the constitutionality of various restrictions on free expression [see, e.g., In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1100, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 (upholding riot curfew); DiBona v. Matthews (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1329, 1342-1343, 269 Cal. Rptr. 882 (striking down censorship of play by community college officials); Sun Co. of San Bernardino v. Superior Court (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 815, 826-829, 105 Cal. Rptr. 873 (striking down restraining order against news media pertaining to publication of information about pending criminal case)]. One California court of appeal has indicated that the following factors should be balanced to determine the constitutionality of restrictions on speech under the clear and present danger test [Sun Co. of San Bernardino v. Superior Court (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 815, 826, 105 Cal. Rptr. 873] :

- The seriousness of the danger relative to the value of the occasion for speech;
- The availability of more moderate controls than those the state has imposed; and
- The specific intent with which the speech is delivered.

In one case, a court of appeal held that a play containing racial slurs and profanity whose community college production was canceled due to "community opposition" was a "classic illustration" of speech not satisfying the clear and present danger test. The appellate court reversed a summary judgment granting the college declaratory and injunctive relief, and ordered college officials to allow the play's production. The court found that by cancelling the production, the government was censoring protected speech based on undifferentiated fear of dissension, with no showing of evil. The court concluded that the play was intended to provoke public thought, not violence [DiBona v. Matthews (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1329, 1342-1344, 269 Cal. Rptr. 882] . On the other hand, a speaker's "serious" offer to reward killing or maiming a Nazi Party member made at a rally was held to be evil and dangerous and did present a clear and present danger of producing imminent lawless conduct--killing for a reward. Therefore, the rally speech was not protected by the First Amendment, and the speaker could be prosecuted [People v. Rubin (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 968, 976-980, 158 Cal. Rptr. 488 , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 821 (1980)] .

Speech that merely advocates violation of the law or creates undifferentiated fear of provoking dissension does not satisfy the clear and present danger test [see DiBona v. Matthews (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1329, 1342-1343, 269 Cal. Rptr. 882 ; Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1294, 265 Cal. Rptr. 96] . For example, a rock singer's lyrics that were claimed to have incited teenage suicide did not present a clear and present danger since the words did not command immediate suicide and the music was not intended toward the goal of inciting imminent suicide of rock music listeners [McCollum v. CBS, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 989, 1000-1002, 249 Cal. Rptr. 187] .

[4] "Incidental" Limitations on Expression

[a] Examples of Limitations

In some instances, the government may indirectly or incidentally infringe on First Amendment rights as a result of a statute or injunction aimed, on its face, at prohibiting or restricting unprotected speech [Times Mirror Co. v. City of Los Angeles (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 170, 237 Cal. Rptr. 346 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 1022 (1988)] . Often, incidental interferencewith First Amendment activity results from an overbroad injunction or an ordinance that condemns protected speech along with unprotected conduct, as demonstrated by the following examples [Spiritual Psychic Science Church v. City of Azusa (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 501, 516-517, 217 Cal. Rptr. 225, 703 P.2d 1119] :

- An ordinance regulating distribution of newspapers at an airport that granted sole authority to the distributor to decide what newspapers would be sold [People v. Singer (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 9].

- An injunctive order prohibiting former residents of a mobilehome park from contacting current residents [Smith v. Silvey (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 400, 197 Cal. Rptr. 15] .

- An ordinance prohibiting fortunetelling for profit [Spiritual Psychic Science Church v. City of Azusa (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 501, 516, 217 Cal. Rptr. 225, 703 P.2d 1119] .

For discussion of the overbreadth doctrine, see § 59.15[2]. For discussion of constitutional limitations on injunctive relief, see [6], below.

[b] Test for Constitutionality of Incidental Limitation

An incidental limitation on free speech is subject to constitutional scrutiny and is justified if it meets both of the following criteria [United States v. O'Brien (1968) 391 U.S. 367, 377, 88 S. Ct. 1673, 20 L. Ed. 2d 672] :

- It furthers an important governmental interest unrelated to the suppression of free expression; and

- The incidental restriction is no greater than necessary to further that interest.

A finding that a city has the restriction of First Amendment speech as a "motivating factor" in enacting an ordinance is not of itself sufficient to hold the regulation presumptively invalid [Renton v. Playtime Theatres, Inc. (1986) 475 U.S. 41, 46-49, 106 S. Ct. 925, 89 L. Ed. 2d 29 ; Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 552] .

For example, a city could reasonably rely on a 1977 study it conducted before enacting an ordinance prohibiting the establishment or maintenance of more than one adult entertainment business in the same building, since the study revealed that areas with high concentrations of adult establishments are associated with high crime rates. Thus, it was reasonable for the city to suppose that a concentration of adult establishments is correlated with high crime rates because a concentration of operations in one locale draws a greater concentration of adult consumers to the neighborhood, and a high density of adult consumers either attracts or generates criminal activity [City of Los Angeles v. Alameda Books, Inc. (2002) 535 U.S. 425, 436, 122 S. Ct. 1728, 152 L. Ed. 2d 670] .

As another example, a city regulation imposing a night curfew in the wake of a major riot was justified, despite its incidental limit on speech, since the compelling interest in controlling widespread rioting and preventing imminent destruction of life and property was promoted, and the restriction was limited to certain hours of the night [In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1100, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919] . Similarly, an ordinance requiring cabarets to close between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. did not constitute excessive infringement on free expression in that the infringement was minimal relative to potential public harm from excess noise and disorderly patrons [Sundance Saloon, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814-822, 261 Cal. Rptr. 841] .

By contrast, a conviction under an ordinance forbidding flag-burning was found not consistent with the First Amendment because the government's interest in preserving the flag as a symbol of nationhood did not justify the incidental limitation on First Amendment political speech [Texas v. Johnson (1989) 491 U.S. 397, 410-420, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342] .

[5] Prior Restraint on Expression

[a] General Prohibition

A prior restraint exists when the enjoyment of protected expression is contingent on the approval of government officials [Near v. Minnesota (1931) 283 U.S. 697, 713, 51 S. Ct. 625, 75 L. Ed. 1357 ; Clark v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 996, 1005 (licensing scheme regulating nude dancing is prior restraint because enjoyment of protected expression is contingent on approval of government officials); Baby Tam & Co., Inc. v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1097, 1100] . Prior restraint on protected expression is the most serious and the least tolerable infringement on First Amendment rights. Any governmental action that seeks prior restraint of exercise of protected speech or assembly in public forums is presumptively invalid under the First Amendment [see Organization for a Better Austin v. Keefe (1971) 402 U.S. 415, 419, 91 S. Ct. 1575, 29 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204 ; Hurvitz v. Hoefflin (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1241, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 ; Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 395, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866] . Publication of lawfully obtained, truthful information about a matter of public significance may not be restrained unless it is necessary to protect a state interest of the highest order [The Florida Star v. B. J. F. (1989) 491 U.S. 524, 533, 109 S. Ct. 2603, 105 L. Ed. 2d 443 ; South Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 866, 870, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487] . Therefore, although prior restraints are not unconstitutional per se, any system of prior restraint bears a heavy presumption against its constitutional validity [FW/PBS, Inc. v. City of Dallas (1990) 493 U.S. 215, 225, 110 S. Ct. 596, 107 L. Ed. 2d 603 ; Southeastern Promotions,Ltd. v. Conrad (1975) 420 U.S. 546, 558, 95 S. Ct. 1239, 1246, 43 L. Ed. 2d 448 ; Clark v. City of Lakewood (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 996, 1005 ; Baby Tam & Co., Inc. v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1097, 1100 ; Tily B., Inc. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10, 81 Cal Rptr 2d. 6 (nude dancing comes within rule because is marginally within outer perimeters of First Amendment)].

For a claim of prior restraint to lie, the government's action constituting the basis for the claim must involve content discrimination [see Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 59-60, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694] . Thus, a prefiling order prohibiting a vexatious litigant from filing new litigation absent leave from the presiding judge of the court in which the litigation is proposed to be filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 391.7] does not constitute a prior restraint on the constitutionally protected right to petition the government for redress. The prefiling order is more akin to a license or permit "administered to narrowly drawn, reasonable and definite standards," representing the only practical means for the government to manage competing uses of a public facility, the court, than to a prior restraint [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 59-60, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694] . The following are further examples of situations in which prior restraints are allowed:

- Pure commercial speech, to the extent it is fraudulent [Central Hudson Gas & Elec. Corp. v. Public Serv. Comm'n (1980) 447 U.S. 557, 563-564, 100 S. Ct. 2343, 65 L. Ed. 2d 341 ; for regulation of commercial speech generally, see Ch. 14, Advertising].

- Speech that will incite imminent lawlessness [Brandenburg v. Ohio (1969) 395 U.S. 444, 447, 89 S. Ct. 1827, 23 L. Ed. 2d 430 ; for discussion of the "clear and present danger" test, see [3][c], above].

- Speech that aids or abets criminal activity [Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Telemarketing Assocs. (2003) 538 U.S. 600, 612-613, 123 S. Ct. 1829, 155 L. Ed. 2d 793] .

The California Supreme Court has also held that an injunction issued banning racial epithets at the workplace is not a constitutionally invalid prior restraint on expression, since in the case at issue, the injunction was issued only after the jury had determined at trial that the defendants engaged in unlawful employment discrimination and the order simply precluded the defendants from continuing their unlawful activity [Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 138-145, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846 (determination under U.S. Const., amend. I and Cal. Const., art. I, § 2].

[b] Administrative Permit Requirements

[i] General Rule

An ordinance or regulation that requires a speaker to secure a permit in advance to conduct expressive activity in a public forum is a form of prior restraint [Forsyth County, Ga. v. Nationalist Movement (1992) 505 U.S. 123, 130, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101 ; Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1037 (permitting requirement is prior restraint on speech and therefore bears heavy presumption against its constitutionality); United States v. Baugh (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1037 (arrest of demonstrators after Park Service refused to issue permit because leader of demonstrators would not promise not to enter certain areas violated First Amendment rights); Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204 (advance permit for demonstrating in public park; held invalid); Rosen v. Port of Portland (9th Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 1243, 1247 (one-day advance notice for demonstrating; held invalid)]. However, as discussed below, such permit requirements may be constitutional if they meet the requirements for a valid, content-neutral time, place, and manner restriction [see, e.g., Long Beach Lesbian & Gay Pride, Inc. v. City of Long Beach (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 312, 324-325, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861] .

As a result of the significant burden registration requirements place on speakers, the Supreme Court has consistently struck down permitting systems that apply to individual speakers, as opposed to large groups, in the context of solicitation of private homes [Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1038 ; see Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, Inc. v. Village of Stratton (2002) 536 U.S. 150, 166-167, 122 S. Ct. 2080, 153 L. Ed. 2d 205 ; Village of Schaumburg v. Citizens for a Better Envt. (1980) 444 U.S. 620, 638-639, 100 S. Ct. 826, 63 L. Ed. 2d 73 (striking down solicitation permit requirement); Cantwell v. State of Conn. (1940) 310 U.S. 296, 301, 306-307, 60 S. Ct. 900, 84 L. Ed. 1213 (striking down license requirement as applied to Jehovah's Witnesses going singly from house to house for purpose of religious solicitation); Schneider v. State of N.J. (1939) 308 U.S. 147, 163-164, 60 S. Ct. 146, 84 L. Ed. 155 (striking down permitting scheme covering all forms of solicitation)]. The Court has concluded that single-speaker permitting requirements are not a constitutionally valid means of advancing valid governmental interests of the prevention of crime and fraud and the protection of residential privacy because of the following reasons [Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1038]:

- They sweep too broadly [see Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, Inc. v. Village of Stratton (2002) 536 U.S. 150, 165-166, 122 S. Ct. 2080, 153 L. Ed. 2d 205 ; Village of Schaumburg v. Citizens for a Better Envt. (1980) 444 U.S. 620, 636-637, 100 S. Ct. 826, 63 L. Ed. 2d 73].

- They only marginally advance the government's asserted interests [see Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, Inc. v. Village of Stratton (2002) 536 U.S. 150, 168-169, 122 S. Ct. 2080, 153 L. Ed. 2d 205].

- The government's interests can be achieved by less intrusive means [see Watchtower Bible & Tract Society of New York, Inc. v. Village of Stratton (2002) 536 U.S. 150, 168-169, 122 S. Ct. 2080, 153 L. Ed. 2d 205 ; Village of Schaumburg v. Citizens for a Better Envt. (1980) 444 U.S. 620, 637, 100 S. Ct. 826, 63 L. Ed. 2d 73].

The Supreme Court has not addressed the validity of single-speaker permitting requirements for speech in a public forum. The Ninth Circuit has refused to uphold registration requirements that apply to individual speakers or small groups in a public forum [see Santa Monica Food Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1039 ; Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204-1205 ; Rosen v. Port of Portland (9th Cir. 19981) 641 F.2d 1243, 1247-1248], including single-speaker permitting requirements for speech in a public park [see Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 1029, 1039-1048 (permitting requirements had impermissibly broad scope; did not meaningfully promote city's asserted interests; and addressed interests that could have been achieved through means far less intrusive than individual speaker registration requirement)].

To regulate competing uses of public forums such as streets and parks, the government may impose a permit requirement on those wishing to hold a march, parade, or rally. However, a regulatory scheme delegating an official unfettered discretion to grant or deny a permit is facially invalid as an impermissible prior restraint [see Forsyth County, Ga. v. Nationalist Movement (1992) 505 U.S. 123, 130, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101 ; see also In re Juan C. (1994) 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919] . Instead, a permit scheme must be limited to restriction of time, place, manner, and duration of the march or parade and be narrowly drawn to serve a significant government interest, such as safety and convenience of the public. Official discretion must be exercised with content-neutrality, reasonableness, and uniformity based on the facts of each permit application [Dillon v. Municipal Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 860, 869-871, 94 Cal. Rptr. 777, 484 P.2d 945] .

In one case, the United States Supreme Court found a municipal practice of allowing demonstrations or parades only when prior approval has been obtained from city officials to be unconstitutional since it vested arbitrary control in public officials to issue or withhold the permit, depending on their approval or disapproval of the paraders' purpose [Cox v. Louisiana (1965) 379 U.S. 536, 555-558 & n.15]. Likewise, a federal appellate court found improper a transit authority requirement for a permit to participate in any "organized exercise of rights which deal with political, religious, and social matters" as sweeping too broadly in regulating protected speech [Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Turner (D.C. Cir. 1990) 893 F.2d 1387, 1389-1390 ; see also Rosen v. Port of Portland (9th Cir. 1990) 641 F.2d 1242, 1247-1250 ; cf. Welton v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 497, 134 Cal. Rptr. 668, 556 P.2d 1119 (restriction regarding sale of merchandise on streets constitutional)].

For a form of complaint against a public entity for injunctive and declaratory relief based on an unconstitutional denial of a permit to use a public facility for free speech activities, see § 59.50.

For discussion of expedited judicial review procedures of public agency decisions regarding the issuance, revocation, suspension, or denial of a permit involving expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I,see [iv], below. For a form of petition for writ of mandate for expedited judicial review of a public agency decision related to a permit or other entitlement regarding expressive conduct protected by the First Amendment, including a denial of a permit to use a public facility for free speech activities, see § 59.50A.

[ii] Advance Notice Requirements

Some permit schemes impose advance notice provisions, such as application submission requirements and waiting periods, that must be fulfilled before a permit is granted. These procedural hurdles potentially pose "drastic" burdens on protected speech since potential speakers may be discouraged [see N.A.A.C.P., Western Region v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 1346, 1355-1357] . Therefore, courts apply strict scrutiny in evaluating the justification for these notice requirements [Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204] . For example, theNinth Circuit found a city's requirement of 20 days' advance notice to receive a parade permit as violative of the First Amendment because it was not the least restrictive means of protecting its interest in regulating traffic [N.A.A.C.P., Western Region v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 1346, 1355-1357] .

Moreover, delays caused by complying with procedures may have a chilling effect on spontaneous speech responding to immediate events, often the most effective type of expression. For instance, a federal court found no justification for a "built-in delay mechanism" inherent in a challenged permit requirement since it only served to deter and even preclude expression necessary to provide an "immediate response to late-breaking events" [Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Turner (D.C. Cir. 1990) 893 F.2d 1387, 1389-1390] .

Some types of advance notice provisions may be justified in the case of large groups, where the burden placed on park facilities and the possibility of interference with other park users is substantial. However, in one case, the Ninth Circuit found that even if a 24-hour advance notice requirement was justified for large groups, it swept too broadly in regulating small groups [Rosen v. Port of Portland (9th Cir. 1990) 641 F.2d 1242, 1247-1250] .

[iii] Permit Fee

The government may require payment of a fee as a condition of granting a permit to cover the cost for police protection and traffic control necessary to maintain public order. A fee that is neither arbitrary nor excessive, but that reflects the added public cost, is constitutional [Cox v. New Hampshire (1941) 312 U.S. 569, 576-577, 61 S. Ct. 762, 85 L. Ed. 1049] . However, a fee that is arbitrarily applied to tax the content of the speaker's message is invalid [Forsyth County, Ga. v. Nationalist Movement (1992) 505 U.S. 123, 112 S. Ct. 2395, 120 L. Ed. 2d 101] .

[iv] Expedited Judicial Review of Agency Decisions Regarding Permits Involving Expressive Conduct

Effective July 1, 1999, an action or proceeding for judicial review of the issuance, revocation, suspension, or denial of a permit or other entitlement for expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I, must be conducted in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(a)]. This procedure is designed to provide a judicial hearing and decision on the issuance, revocation, suspension or denial of a permit for expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I, in an expeditious manner consistent with constitutional requirements, in view of the holding of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Baby Tam & Co. v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1097 [Stats. 1999, ch. 49, § 2].

Within five court days after receiving written notification from a permit applicant that the permit applicant will seek judicial review of a publicagency's action on the permit, the public agency must prepare, certify, and make available the administrative record to the permit applicant [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(1)]. "Permit applicant" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 includes both the applicant for a permit and a permit holder [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(b)(2)]; "public agency" includes a city, county, city and county, joint powers authority or similar public entity formed pursuant to Gov. Code § 65850.4, or any other public entity authorized by law to issue permits for expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(b)(3)].

Either the public agency that took action on the permit or the permit applicant may bring an action for judicial review in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(2)]. If the permit applicant brings the action, it must be in the form of a petition for writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085 or 1094.5, as appropriate [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(2)]. For discussion of petitions for writ of mandate generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition ; for discussion of petitions for writ of administrative mandate to review administrative decisions pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

The party bringing the action for judicial review must file and serve the petition on the respondent no later than 21 calendar days following the public agency's final decision on the permit. The title page of the petition must contain the following language in 18-point type [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(3)]:

ATTENTION: THIS MATTER IS ENTITLED TO PRIORITY AND SUBJECT TO THE EXPEDITED HEARING AND REVIEW PROCEDURES CONTAINED IN SECTION 1094.8 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

For a form petition for writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8, see § 59.50A[1].

The clerk of the court must set a hearing for review of the petition not later than 25 calendar days from the date the petition is filed. Moving, opposition, and reply papers are to be filed as provided in the California Rules of Court. The petitioner must lodge the administrative record with the court no later than 10 calendar days in advance of the hearing date [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(4)]. The court must render its decision in an expeditious manner consistent with constitutional requirements, in view of the particular facts and circumstances. However, in no event may the court render the decision later than 20 calendar days after the matter is submitted, or 50 calendar days after the date the petition is filed, whichever is earlier [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(5)].

The parties to the action may jointly waive the time limits provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(f)]. If the presiding judge determines that as a result of either the press of other court business or other factors, the court will be unable to meet any one or more the deadlines provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8, the presiding judge must request the temporary assignment of a judicial officer to hear the petition and render a decision within the stated time limits, pursuant to Gov. Code § 68543.8. Given the short time period involved, that request is entitled to priority [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(e)].

[c] Gag Orders

Gag orders on litigants and trial participants are unconstitutional unless each of the following is true [Hurvitz v. Hoefflin (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1241, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558] :

- The speech sought to be restrained poses a clear and present danger or serious and imminent threat to a protected competing interest;
- The order is narrowly tailored to protect that interest; and
- No less restrictive alternatives are available.

The trial court must make express findings showing it applied this standard and considered and weighed the competing interests. The appellate court makes an independent examination of the entire record to determine the constitutionality of the trial court order in light of the standard. The fact that information is protected by the physician-patient privilege, that dissemination might prejudice potential jurors, and that information is protected by a patient's right of privacy, while important considerations, may not be sufficient to justify a prior restraint on litigants' speech [see Hurvitz v. Hoefflin (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1242-1246, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558] .

[6] Injunction Restricting Expression

Although some cases have indicated that any injunction prohibiting or restricting First Amendment activity is a form of prior restraint subject to strict scrutiny [see, e.g., Paradise Hills Associates v. Procel (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1528, 1538, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 ; Chico Feminist Women's Health Center v. Scully (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 230, 240, 256 Cal. Rptr. 194] , the United States Supreme Court has more recently stated that not every injunction that incidentally limits expression constitutes a prior restraint that is subject to the heavy presumption of invalidity, particularly whenthe injunction is content-neutral and leaves the defendant with alternative means of expressing his or her message [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 763-764 n.2, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] .

Nevertheless, because of the risk of censorship and discriminatory application posed by injunctions, the Court has indicated that even content-neutral injunctions imposing restrictions on expressive activity must meet a higher level of scrutiny than time, place, and manner restrictions imposed under a generally applicable statute or ordinance. Rather than merely being "narrowly tailored to serve a significant governmental interest," injunctive provisions must "burden no more speech than necessary" to serve that interest [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 764-765, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593 ; San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. U.S. Citizens Patrol (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 971, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364] . In addition, such an injunction must leave open ample alternative channels of communication [Chico Feminist Women's Health Center v. Scully (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 230, 246-247, 256 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

Thus, for example, the United States Supreme Court declared provisions in a preliminary injunction establishing a floating buffer zone requiring abortion protestors to stay 15 feet from people entering and leaving abortion clinics unconstitutional. In holding that the floating buffer zone burdened more speech than necessary to serve relevant governmental interests, the Court noted that the floating zones required protestors to move with various people entering and leaving clinics to communicate their messages, resulting in a lack of certainty as to how to comply with the injunction, leading in turn to substantial risk that much more speech would be burdened than that prohibited by the terms of the injunction [Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network Of Western New York (1997) 519 U.S. 357, 375-380, 117 S. Ct. 855, 137 L. Ed. 2d 1] . However, in light of the protestors' purposeful blocking of clinic entrances and parking lots and their harassment of local police before and after issuance of the temporary restraining order, the Court upheld the portion of the injunction imposing a fixed buffer zone requiring protestors to remain 15 feet from clinic doorways, driveways, and driveway entrances as necessary to ensure that people and vehicles attempting to enter or exit abortion clinic property or parking lots could do so [Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network Of Western New York (1997) 519 U.S. 357, 372-376, 117 S. Ct. 855, 137 L. Ed. 2d 1] .

The California Supreme Court, relying on Madsen, upheld an injunction thatcreated a 60-foot "buffer zone" around the front of a medical clinic by ordering anti-abortion protesters to remain on the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street from the clinic. The Court found that the injunction, which was granted in response to the protesters' previous harassment of clinic patients and staff and interference with access to the clinic, did not unduly burden any more of the protesters' expression than was necessary to serve the government's significant interests in promotingsafety and order around the clinic, protecting the safety and well-being of patients, and assuring unfettered access to and egress from the clinic. Furthermore, the injunction allowed the protesters to communicate their viewpoint from across the street in plain view of persons entering and leaving the clinic, without subjecting patients to physical intimidation [Planned Parenthood Shasta-Diablo, Inc. v. Williams (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1009, 1019-1025, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88, 898 P.2d 402 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1133 (1997)] .

Efforts to enjoin the publication of lawfully obtained information about pending court proceedings are consistently struck down [South Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 866, 870, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 ; see, e.g., Nebraska Press Ass'n v. Stuart (1976) 427 U.S. 539, 562, 96 S. Ct. 2791, 49 L. Ed. 2d 683 (trial court's enjoining of publication of lawfully obtained, publicly available information relating to defendant's confessions or other strongly implicative information based on dangers to defendant's Sixth Amendment rights struck down); KGTV Channel 10 v. Superior Court (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1673 (trial court order prohibiting media from publishing likeness of minor charged with murder for whom court was holding detention hearing was unconstitutional prior restraint); San Bernardino County Dept. of Public Social Services v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 188, 283 Cal. Rptr. 332 (trial court order restricting media reporting on dependency proceeding, including ban on publishing photos of minor, reversed)].

An order prohibiting a party from making or publishing false statements is a classic type of an unconstitutional prior restraint [Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1167-1168, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 ; see Gilbert v. National Enquirer, Inc. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1145, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 91 (while party may be held responsible for abusing right to speak freely in subsequent tort action, party has initial right to speak freely without censorship)]. The rule does not apply to an order issued after a trial prohibiting the defendant from repeating specific statements found at trial to be defamatory [Balboa Island Village Inn, Inc. v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1155-1156, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339]. Thus, an injunction following a trial that determined that defendant defamed plaintiff, which does no more than prohibit the defendant from repeating the defamation, is not a prior restraint and does not offend the First Amendment [Balboa Island Village Inn, Inc. v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1148, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339]. However, in determining whether an injunction restraining defamation may be issued, a court must consider constitutional prohibitions against prior restraints on free speech and press [Balboa Island Village Inn, Inc. v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1158, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339].

A prohibition against disclosing confidential information constitutes a prior restraint [Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1169, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 ; see Hurvitz v. Hoefflin (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 1244, 101 Cal. Rptr.

2d 558]. However, because it also potentially concerns the countervailing right of privacy protected under the California Constitution [Cal. Const., art. I, § 1], a prohibition may be proper under compelling or extraordinary circumstances [Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1170, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 ; see Wilson v. Superior Court (1975) 13 Cal.3d 652, 661-662, 119 Cal. Rptr. 468, 532 P.2d 116 ; Gilbert v. National Enquirer, Inc. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1145, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 91 ; see also Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 200, 245, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 955 P.2d 469 (conc. opn. of Kennard, J.); In re Marriage of Burkle (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1059-1060, 1063, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805]. In determining whether such circumstances exist, courts generally apply a balancing test, weighing the competing privacy and free speech constitutional rights [Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1170, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 ; see Gilbert v. National Enquirer (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1148, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 91]. Relevant factors include the following [Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1170, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859]:

- Whether the person is a public or private figure.
- The scope of the prior restraint.
- The nature of the private information.
- Whether the information is of legitimate public concern.
- The extent of the potential harm if the information is disclosed.
- The strength of the private and governmental interest in preventing publication of the information.

A city's seeking a preliminary injunction and a stay in violation of the First Amendment will not provide the basis for liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 even if the ordinance on which the injunction and stay are based is found unconstitutional and even if those acts cause injury to the party against whom the preliminary injunction and stay are sought, in the absence of evidence that the city materially misled or pressured the judge who issued the injunction and/or the stay. The exercise of independent judgment by the judges in granting the injunction and stay breaks the chain of causation for purposes of § 1983 liability [Manta Management Corp. v. City of San Bernardino (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 400, 406-413, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 353, 181 P.3d 159].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.13

§ 59.13 Right to Free Expression in Public Forums

[1] Public Forum Analysis of Restrictions on Free Expression

Even on public property, the government may impose certain reasonable limitations on the First Amendment right to engage in expressive activities. The United States Supreme Court has observed that the government, "no less than a private owner of property, has power to preserve the property under its control for the use to which it was lawfully dedicated" [Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 799-800, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567] . Recognizing this power, the Court has adopted a "public forum analysis" as a means to determine when the government's interest in limiting the use of its property to its intended purposeoutweighs the interests of those who wish to use the property for other purposes [see Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 800, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 ; see also Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] .

The application of public forum analysis to a challenged regulation of expression on governmental property involves the following analytical steps [Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 484, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] :

- The court first defines the "forum" by deciding whether the forum is the entire property to which access is sought, or only a portion of that property.

- The court determines whether the forum, as defined in step one, is traditional, designated, or nonpublic [see [2], below].

- If the court decides the forum is traditional or designated, the court determines whether the challenged regulation restricts content of speech or only its time, place, and manner.

- The court then tests the challenged law by the standard that governs the class of forum it has selected in step one, and, if relevant, the type of speech restriction it has identified in step two.

A forum need not be a physical place [Pocatello Educ. Ass'n v. Heideman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 1053, 1061-1062 ;

see Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va. (1995) 515 U.S. 819, 830, 115 S. Ct. 2510, 132 L. Ed. 2d 700 (1995) (endorsing use of forum analysis in considering fora defined more in metaphysical than in spatial or geographic sense). The following are examples of things found to be fora even though they are not physical places:

- A charity drive within federal workplaces constituted a forum [Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Def. & Educ. Fund, Inc. (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 801-802, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 (1985) (relevant forum should be determined on basis of type of access sought by speaker to relevant property; relevant forum was charity drive itself rather than federal workplace)].

- A university's student fund responsible for monetary reimbursements to student groups [Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Va. (1995) 515 U.S. 819, 830, 115 S. Ct. 2510, 132 L. Ed. 2d 700 (1995)].

- Public school mail facilities and delivery system [Perry Educ. Ass'n v. Perry Local Educators' Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 46, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794 (1983)].

- Student government election [Flint v. Dennison (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 816, 831].

- A school's policy of waiving fees for the after-hours use of school facilities [Child Evangelism Fellowship v. Anderson Sch. Dist. Five (4th Cir. 2006)].

The mere possession of legal authority to regulate an entity, without more, is an insufficient level of control over that property to claim the forum in the name of thestate [Pocatello Educ. Ass'n v. Heideman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 1053, 1063 ; see also Consolidated Edison Co. v. Pub. Service Comm'n (1980) 447 U.S. 530, 532-533, 534 n.1, 100 S. Ct. 2326, 65 L. Ed. 2d 319 (rejecting attempt by state, acting through its public service commission, to regulate utility's monthly bill inserts and noting that utility, although privately owned, was government-regulated monopoly)]. Thus, for example, in a challenge by labor unions to the application of a state law prohibiting payroll deductions for political activities for local government employers, the state failed to establish that it was the proprietor of the local workplaces or of local government payroll systems. The state's relationship with the local governments instead resembled that of a regulator possessing broad powers over them [Pocatello Educ. Ass'n v. Heideman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 1053, 1063-1065].

Although a park is a traditional public forum for speeches and other transitory expressive acts, the display of a permanent monument in a public park is not a form of expression to which the forum analysis applies [Pleasant Grove City, Utah v. Summum (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1125, 1131-1138, 172 L. Ed. 2d 853 (placement of permanent monument in public park is best viewed as form of government speech and is therefore not subject to scrutiny under Free Speech Clause)].

[2] Classification of Forums

For purposes of forum analysis, the courts have divided all public property into three categories [Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482-483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] :

- "Traditional" public forums, such as public streets, sidewalks, and parks [see [3], below].

- "Designated" or limited public forums, nontraditional in nature, which the state has opened up for expressive activity [see [4], below].

- Nonpublic forums (i.e., all remaining property) [see [5], below].

Traditional public fora are open for expressive activity regardless of the government's intent. The objective characteristics of these properties require the government to accommodate private speakers. The government is free to open additional properties for expressive use by the general public or by a particular class of speakers, thereby creating designated public fora. Where the property is not a traditional public forum and the government has not chosen to create a designated public forum, the property is either a nonpublic forum or not a forum at all [Arkansas Educ. Television Com'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886-887 ; see Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1074 (two main categories of fora: public, where strict scrutiny applies, and nonpublic, where more lenient "reasonableness" standard governs, with government property divided into public fora, designated public fora, and nonpublic fora)].

[3] Traditional Forums

No clear-cut test has emerged for determining when a "traditional" public forum exists. In the absence of widespread agreement among the courts on how to determine the nature of a forum, courts consider a jumble of overlapping factors, frequently deeming a factor dispositive or ignoring it without reasoned explanation. Consequently, courts do not always agree on the goals and proper application of forum analysis. However, the factors the courts emphasize consistently reflect the following two underlying considerations [ACLU of Nevada v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 1092, 1100] :

- Most significantly, a common concern for the compatibility of the uses of the forum with expressive activity; and

- A commitment to guarding speakers' reasonable expectations that their speech will be protected.

The Ninth Circuit emphasizes the following factors in considering whether an area constitutes a traditional public forum [ACLU of Nevada v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 1092, 1100] :

- The actual use and purposes of the property, particularly status as a public thoroughfare and availability of free public access to the area [see, e.g., Venetian Casino v. Local Executive Bd., Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 937, 944-945, 948 ; Hale v. Dept. of Energy (9th Cir. 1986) 806 F.2d 910, 916] ;

- The area's physical characteristics, including its location and the existence of clear boundaries delimiting the area [see, e.g., Gerritsen v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 570, 576] ; and

- Traditional or historic use of both the property and other similar properties [see, e.g., Venetian Casino v. Local Executive Bd., Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 937, 944 ; Jacobsen v. Bonine (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1272, 1274] .

"Traditional" public fora are defined by the objective characteristics of the property, which include whether, by long tradition or by government fiat, the property has been devoted to assembly and debate [Arkansas Educ. Television Com'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886 ; Perry Educ. Ass'n v. Perry Local Educators' Ass'n (1983) 460 U.S. 37, 45, 103 S. Ct. 948, 74 L. Ed. 2d 794] . The government can exclude a speaker only when necessary to serve a compelling state interest, and the exclusion is narrowly drawn to achieve the interest [Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886] . Thus, traditional public forums are state properties that historically have been used by the public for exchange of ideas [see Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 790-791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661] , such as:

- Public streets and sidewalks [see, e.g., Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 480-481, 108 S. Ct.

- Parks [see, e.g., Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1035-1036 ; United States v. Baugh (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1037, 1042 ; Grossman v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1204] .

- Public squares [see, e.g., Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette(1995) 515 U.S. 753, 761, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650 (statehouse square)].

However, the United States Supreme Court declined to extend the public forum doctrine mechanically to public television broadcasting, since broad rights of access for outside speakers would be antithetical as a general rule to the discretion stations and editorial staff must exercise to fulfill their journalistic purpose and statutoryobligations [Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 883-886 (upholding exclusion of third party candidate from televised debate as reasonable exercise of journalistic discretion consistent with First Amendment)].

Expression conducted in a traditional forum receives special protection under the First Amendment. The government may not restrict all expression in a traditional public forum, but may impose reasonable, content-neutral restrictions on the time, place, and manner of expression that are narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest and that leave open ample alternative channels of communication [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 480, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420] . Any restrictions based on the content of such expression are invalid unless the regulation is necessary and narrowly tailored to achieve a compelling state interest [Capitol Square Review & Advisory Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 761, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650 ; Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 321, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482-483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975 ; see also discussion of content restriction in § 59.12[3]].

For example, the government failed to meet its burden against an anti-nuclear protester arrested for violating an ordinance requiring an advancepermit "to conduct any organized" demonstration in a public park. The appellate court found that rather than being tailored to the city's asserted interest in maintaining safety of park users, the ordinance was directed at prohibiting speech activities. The court noted that a group of 100 noisy picnickers would not be impeded by the law, but quiet protesters with anti-nuclear signs could be subject to arrest [Grossman v. City of Portland (1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1205-1207] .

[4] Designated Public Forums

The government can create a "designated" public forum by opening for use by part or all of the public a public place that has not traditionally been used as a public forum for expressive activity [see International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 678, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541 (recognizing category of designated public forum as property state opens for expressive activity by all or part of public); Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] . Designated public forums are created by purposeful governmental action. The court looks to the policy and practice of the government to ascertain whether it intended to designate a place not traditionally open to assembly and debate as a public forum [Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886-887 ; Children of The Rosary v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 972, 976] .

Access to a designated forum may be restricted in a manner consistent with the purposes for which the forum is normally used [see Leeb v. DeLong (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 47, 56, 243 Cal. Rptr. 494] . When the state establishes a limited public forum, it is not required to and does not allow persons to engage in every type of speech, and the state may be justified in reserving the forum for certain groups or for the discussion of certain topics [Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 2100, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151] . However, any content-based regulation of speech in such a forum is subject to the same strict scrutiny applied to restriction of speech in a traditional forum, as described in [3], above [Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 2100, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151 ; Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 887 ; International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 678, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] .

Although the United States Supreme Court has recognized the concept of designated public forums in its decisions, there are very few examples of public places the Supreme Court has placed in this category [see Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 2100, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151 (because parties agreed that school created limited public forum when it opened its facilities to public use for specified purposes, Court need not resolve issue); Culbertson v. Oakridge School. Dist. No. 76 (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1061, 1064 (school district providing that school buildings should function as community centers to be available for nonprofit community activities, including educational activities, created public forum); Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 483 & n.8 and cases discussed therein].

Although some courts use the terms "designated public forum" and "limited public forum" interchangeably, in the Ninth Circuit, they are not the same. A limited public forum is a subcategory of a designated public forum; the term refers to a type of nonpublic forum the government intentionally opens to certain groups or certain topics. In a limited public forum, restrictions that are viewpoint neutral and reasonable in light of the purpose served by the forum are permissible [Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1074-1075 ; DiLoreto v. Downey Unified Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 958, 964 , cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1067] . The fact that the government has opened a nonpublic forum to expressive activity means that the court must examine the terms on which the forum operates to determine whether it is a designated public forum, to which the strict scrutiny standard applies, or a limited public forum, to which a more lenient reasonableness standard applies [Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1075] . Government intent is the essential question in determining whether a designated public forum has been established [Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1075] . Courts examine all of the following factors [Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1075-1078] :

- Consistency in application of the policy designed to preserve the nonpublic status of a forum;

- Whether the policy is based on subjective or overly general criteria, or whether the standards for inclusion and exclusion are unambiguous and definite;

- The selectivity with which the forum is open to particular forms of expression; the more restrictive the criteria for admission and the more administrative control over access, the less likely a forum will be deemed public; and

- Whether the expressive activity is consistent with the principal function of the forum, focusing on the specific space in which the would-be speaker seeksaccess, but also taking into account the context of the property as a whole.

[5] Nonpublic Forums

Publicly owned property that is neither a traditional public forum [see [3], above] nor a designated public forum [see [4], above] is referred to in the case law as a "nonpublic" forum [see, e.g., Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 887 (property that is not traditional public forum and as to which government has not chosen to create designated public forum is either nonpublic forum or not forum at all); International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 678, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541 ; Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 800, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 483 & n.9, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] . The following are examples of publicly-owned places that have been held to be nonpublic forums:

- The sidewalks in front of a post office [see U.S. v. Kokinda (1990) 497 U.S. 720, 730, 110 S. Ct. 3115, 111 L. Ed. 2d 571] .

- Airport terminals operated by a public agency [see International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541] .

- Perimeter walkways bordering the parking area and facilities of an interstate rest area [Jacobsen v. Bonine (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1272] .

- Schools [DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 280, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791 (high schools); see 80 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 155, 159 (school district may restrict use of school property to educational activities, including exclusion of filming movies by motion picture studios; rental of facilities for movie filming would be solely to enhance revenues and not for purpose of providing public forum for expressive activity, and district could deny permission to film specific movies based solely on content so long as actions were reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns)].

- Advertising panels on buses [see Children of the Rosary v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 972, 976-978 (Arizona case)].

- A city's fund to encourage civic events and provide a budgetary mechanism for accounting for the costs of in-kind services provided by the city for selected civic events [Gentala v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 2000) 213 F.3d 1055, 1062-1063] .

- Airspace protected by a city and county ordinance prohibiting aerial advertising, for purposes of determining the scope of First Amendment protection of banner towing in airspace [Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. City & County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 2006) 448 F.3d 1101, 1108-1110] .

In addition, the United States Supreme Court held that a televised debate involving candidates for political office sponsored by a public broadcaster is a nonpublic forum rather than a designated public forum. Thus, the broadcaster could constitutionally exercise its reasonable, viewpoint-neutral journalistic discretion to exclude from the debate an independent candidate with little popular support [Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 679-681, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875] . The debate in Forbes did not have an open-microphone format. Instead, the broadcaster reserved eligibility for participation to candidates for a particular congressional district seat, and made candidate-by-candidate determinations as to which of the eligible candidates wouldparticipate in the debate [Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 679-681, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875] . Such selective access, unsupported by evidence of a purposeful designation for public use, does not create a public forum [Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 680, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875] .

A government restriction on use of a nonpublic forum for expressive activities is subject to limited review, and is valid so long as it is reasonable and not designed to suppress the speaker's activity due to public officials' disagreement with the speaker's viewpoint or message [Arkansas Educ. Television Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 677-678, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875 ; International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541 ; Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 800, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 483, 491, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975] . For example, a regulation forbidding the solicitation of funds or distribution of literature inside publicly owned airport terminals was held not to violate the First Amendment rights of members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness who sought to solicit funds inside the terminals, because the regulation was a reasonable means of promoting the free flow of traffic through the terminals and protecting members of the public from undue interference and delay [see International Soc. for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee (1992) 505 U.S. 672, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541] .

A speaker may be excluded from a nonpublic forum if he or she wishes to address a topic not encompassed within the forum's purpose, or if he or she is not a member of the class of speakers for whose special benefit the forum was created [Cornelius v. NAACP Legal Defense & Ed. Fund (1985) 473 U.S. 788, 806, 105 S. Ct. 3439, 87 L. Ed. 2d 567 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 491, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975 ; see U.C. Nuclear Weapons Labs Conversion Project v. Lawrence Livermore Laboratory (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 1157, 1165, 201 Cal. Rptr. 837] . Moreover, public institutions that do not perform speech-related functions at all, such as hospitals, jails, or military bases, can exclude speech and assembly that would otherwise be protected by the First Amendment when it interferes, or is fundamentally incompatible, with normal activity at the particular institution [Prisoners Union v. Department of Corrections (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 930, 935, 185 Cal. Rptr. 634] .

[6] Application of Public Forum Analysis to Picketing and Similar Activities

[a] General Rules

Peaceful picketing in a public forum such as a public sidewalk is a time-honored method of protest protected by the First Amendment. Any governmental restrictions on such activity are subject to strict scrutiny, as discussed in [3], above [see, e.g., Boos v. Barry (1988) 485 U.S. 312, 318, 108 S. Ct. 1157, 99 L. Ed. 2d 333] . Furthermore, any injunction against such picketing must satisfy the even more rigorous standards discussed in § 59.12[6] [see, e.g., Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] .

[b] Residential Picketing

A public street or sidewalk does not lose its status as a traditional public forum merely because it runs through a residential neighborhood. Thus, restrictions on picketing and other expressive activities conducted on streets or sidewalks in a residential area are subject to the same strict scrutiny as restrictions on such activities in any other traditional public forum [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 480-481, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; see discussion in [3], above].

Nevertheless, the courts have recognized that the state has an important interest in protecting privacy in the home, and that individuals should not be required to hear unwelcome speech in their households [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 484-485, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; see City of San Jose v. Superior Court (Thompson) (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 330, 341, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , cert. denied sub nom., Thompson v. City of San Jose, 516 U.S. 932] . Thus, courts will uphold a regulation of picketing in a residential area if it is narrowly tailored to serve the government's compelling interest in protecting the privacy of home, does not unduly burden the picketers' message, and leaves open ample alternative channels of communication [see Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 488, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; Carey v. Brown (1980) 447 U.S. 455, 465, 100 S. Ct. 2286, 65 L. Ed. 2d 263] .

The United States Supreme Court has described picketing targeted specifically at residents of households as "especially offensive" conduct that intrudes on the privacy of residents and leaves them "captive" with no means of avoiding the unwanted speech [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 487, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420] . In that case, the Court upheld an ordinance imposing a complete ban on residential picketing "before or about" the residence of any individual, which the Court construed to refer only to picketing targeted at a specific house. The Court ruled that the ordinance was narrowly directed to protect the important household privacy interest, and left open an alternative channel of communication, marching through the neighborhood streets, that reached its audience, the residents, without intruding on the resident's privacy [Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 482-487, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420] .

In another case, a California court of appeal upheld a city ordinance prohibiting targeted picketing within 300 feet of a residence as a reasonable time, place, and manner restriction. The court ruled that the ordinance was appropriate to preserve a resident's constitutional right to privacy. The court further noted that the "more precise" 300-foot zone was a less onerous burden on speech than the "on or about" standard upheld in Frisby, so that there was a lesser chance of discriminatory application by the police [see City of San Jose v. Superior Court (Thompson) (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 330, 337-341, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , cert. denied sub nom., Thompson v. City of San Jose, 516 U.S. 932] .

§ 59.14 Private Property Owners' Power to Restrict Expression

[1] General Rule: First Amendment Not Applicable

The First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution limit only governmental action and do not apply to actions by owners of private property used for purely private purposes [Lloyd Corp. v. Tanner (1972) 407 U.S. 551, 567, 92 S. Ct. 2219, 33 L. Ed. 2d 131] . Thus, the First Amendment does not compel a private property owner to permit free speech activities on his or her property against his or her wishes; the owner may expel such persons as trespassers [Lloyd Corp. v. Tanner (1972) 407 U.S. 551, 567-568, 92 S. Ct. 2219, 33 L. Ed. 2d 131 ; Trader Joe's Co. v. Progressive Campaigns (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 425, 430, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1578-1580, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; see Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1390, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530] . Under the First Amendment, the mere fact that the property is "open to the public" does not transform private property into public property so as to require the owner to permit expressive activities on the premises [Lloyd Corp. v. Tanner (1972) 407 U.S. 551, 568-570, 92 S. Ct. 2219, 33 L. Ed. 2d 131] . However, even if title is held privately, property on which a servitude is imposed for public use, such as a sidewalk, is a public forum [Venetian Casino v. Local Executive Bd., Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 937] .

For a form of complaint by a private property owner against protesters or picketers for damages for trespass and for injunctive relief, see § 59.53.

[2] Shopping Centers and Other Private Property Functioning as Traditional Public Forum

[a] Free Speech Rights Under California Constitution

Although the First Amendment does not limit the power of private property owners to restrict free speech activities on their property [see [1], above], the right to free speech under the California Constitution [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a)] is more "definitive and inclusive" than that afforded by the First Amendment [Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)]. Thus, in Robins, the California Supreme Court held that large retail shopping centers act as an invaluable public forum for free expression and that the California Constitution protects speech and petitioning, when reasonably exercised, in shopping centers, even if privately owned [Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592

P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)] .

Later cases have restated the Robins holding as establishing that the California Constitution protects the reasonable exercise of free speech rights on private property when that property is generally open to the public and functions as the equivalent of a traditional public forum [Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850, 858-863, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 172 P.3d 742 ; Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1390, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530] , thus implying that the holding is not strictly limited to shopping centers. However, the court also held that the property involved in Allred, a medical center parking lot and interior corridors, lacked the attributes of a public forum, and thus the owner was not required to allow picketing on the premises [Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1391-1393, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530]. Further, a privately owned shopping center may prohibit free speech activity that is unrelated to the operation of the shopping center [Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850, 862, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 172 P.3d 742].

The California Supreme Court has clarified at least one aspect left unaddressed in Robins, that is, whether the California free speech protection requires state action. In a plurality opinion, the Court held that Cal. Const. art. I, § 2(a) only protects against state action, and the actions of a private property owner constitute state action for these purposes only if the property is freely and openly accessible to the public [Golden Gateway Center v. Golden Gateway Tenants Assn. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 1013, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 29 P.3d 797 (plurality opinion)]. In Golden Gateway, the Court found that a tenants association had no state constitutional right to distribute a newsletter in a privately owned apartment complex, and that judicial enforcement of injunctive relief against the tenants association did not constitute the requisite state action [Golden Gateway Center v. Golden Gateway Tenants Assn. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 1013, 1033-1034, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 29 P.3d 797] .

The California Supreme Court in Robins developed a balancing test to apply in other situations, i.e., to balance the competing interests of the property owner and of the society with respect to the particular property or type of property at issue to determine whether there is a state constitutional right to engage in the challenged activity [Trader Joe's Co. v. Progressive Campaigns (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 425, 433, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442] . In Trader Joe's, the court found that although a free-standing, single-structure, single-use retail food store and parking lot voluntarily opens its doors to the public, its invitation to the public is more limited than a shopping center's since it invites the public only to shop for food and food-related items, so that the owner's interest in maintaining exclusive control over its private property is stronger than the interest of a shopping mall owner and the public's interest in using the store as a forum for free speech and petitioning activity is not as strong as its interest in engaging in those activities at a large shopping center [Trader Joe's Co. v. Progressive Campaigns (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 425, 433, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442 ; see also Albertson's, Inc. v. Young (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 106, 115, 118, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721 (taken as whole, Pruneyard implies that smaller privately owned commercial establishments that do not assume societal role of a town center may prohibit expressive activity unrelated to business enterprise, and nothing in Golden Gateway can be interpreted to support conclusion that any large business establishment is public forum for expressive activity simply because it is freely and openly accessible to public)].

Although Pruneyard held that the California Constitution protects expressive activity in the common areas of a large, privately owned shopping center, that holding does not apply to the area immediately surrounding the entrance of an individual retail store that does not itself possess the characteristics of a public forum, even when that store is part of a larger shopping center [Van v. Target Corp. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 1382-1391, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 497 (apron and perimeter areas at entrances and exits of stores located in shopping centers did not serve as public fora in view of undisputed evidence that those particular areas lacked any public forum attributes); see also Albertson's, Inc. v. Young (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 106, 118, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721 (grocery store located in shopping center was akin to stand-alone store and lacked characteristics of traditional public forum)].

Decisions applying Pruneyard focus on whether the property owner has so opened up his or her property for public use as to make it the functional equivalent of a traditional public forum [see, e.g., Albertson's, Inc. v. Young (2003) 107

Cal. App. 4th 106, 118-119, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721 ; Trader Joe's Co. v. Progressive Campaigns, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 425, 433-434, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442 ; Bank of Stockton v. Church of Soldiers (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1623, 1630, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429 ; Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1390-1391, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530 ; Planned Parenthood v. Wilson (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1662, 1671-1672, 286 Cal. Rptr. 427 ; Allred v. Shawley (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1489, 1501-1502, 284 Cal. Rptr. 140] . The less an owner has opened up the property for use by the general public, the less the owner's rights are circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional rights of those who use it. Whether private property is considered quasi-public property subject to the exercise of constitutional rights of free speech and assembly depends in part on the nature, purpose, and primary use of the property; the extent and nature of the public invitation to use the property; and the relationship between the ideas sought to be presented and the purpose of the property's occupants [Albertson's, Inc. v. Young (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 106, 119, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721] .

The United States Supreme Court, in affirming the California Supreme Court's decision in Robins, held that California law requiring private shopping center owners to permit the exercise of free speech rights on shopping center property infringes on neither the owner's federally recognized property rights nor its First Amendment rights [Pruneyard Shopping Center v. Robins (1980) 447 U.S. 74, 82-88, 100 S. Ct. 2035, 64 L. Ed. 2d 741] .

Protection under the liberty of speech clause of the California Constitution includes the following expressive activities conducted at shopping centers:

- Speech and leafletting [see Westside Sane/Freeze v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 546, 554-556, 274 Cal. Rptr. 51] ;

- Distribution of religious literature [see Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562]; and

- Gathering of signatures for a petition [see Robins v. Pruneyard ShoppingCenter (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908-910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)] .

For a form of complaint against a shopping center owner for injunctive and declaratory relief for refusal to permit free speech activities on the premises, see § 59.51.

[b] Time, Place, and Manner Regulations

Like the government, private shopping center owners may impose reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions on protected speech and petitioning, provided they are content-neutral, narrowly tailored, and leave ample alternative means of communication [Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850, 865-870, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 172 P.3d 742 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1572-1573, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; see Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)] . However, a mall's prohibition of speech advocating a boycott of a store in the mall was not a time, place, or manner restriction because it was not content neutral. It could not withstand strict scrutiny because the mall's purpose to maximize the profits of its merchants was not compelling compared with a union's right to free expression, and urging customers to boycott a store lies at the core of the right to free speech [Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850, 869-870, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 172 P.3d 742]. In promulgating time, place, and manner rules governing when, where, and how a group may exercise expressive rights, a shopping center is constitutionally permitted to protect important rights of substance such as freedom from disruption of normal business operations and freedom from interference with customer convenience [Union of Needletrades, Indus. & Textile Employees, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (Taubman Co.) (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 996, 1009-1010, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 838] . This is because a shopping center exists as a center of commerce. Its function is to facilitate the ease of commerce and to promote the business of its merchant tenants. Consequently, a center can impose reasonable, objective limitations on the number of persons who can be present, and those persons can be required to be in a certain area to limit disruption. They can be prohibited from areas normally subject to congestion, and can be excluded entirely from areas such as doorways and loading areas where their presence would threaten personal danger or block the flow of traffic [Union of Needletrades, Indus. & Textile Employees, AFL-CIO v. Superior Court (Taubman Co.) (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 996, 1010, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 838] .

In one case, for example, a court of appeal held that a shopping center's ban on all leafletting in the center's parking lot was constitutional because it was narrowly tailored to prevent litter and traffic problems, was content-neutral, and allowed leafletters to use the center's sidewalks as an alternative channel of communication [Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1573-1576, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.15

§ 59.15 Uncertainty and Overbreadth

[1] Void-for-Vagueness Doctrine

[a] General Rule

The void-for-vagueness doctrine requires that a criminal statute define the criminal offense with sufficient certainty so that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited, and in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement [see Free Speech Coalition v. Reno (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1083, 1095 ; Nunez v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 935, 940 ; People v. Ewing (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 199, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177 (Pen. Code § 646.9(a), prohibiting stalking, not void for vagueness); People v. Custodio (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 807, 811, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18] . An enactment may be impermissibly vague because it fails to establish standards for the police and public that are sufficient to guard against the arbitrary deprivation of liberty interests. [City of Chicago v. Morales (1999) 527 U.S. 41, 78, 119 S. Ct. 1849, 144 L. Ed. 2d 67 ; Kolender v. Lawson (1983) 461 U.S. 352, 358, 103 S. Ct. 1855, 75 L. Ed. 2d 903] . A statute imposing criminal liability may be declared invalid in its entirety if piecemeal adjudication of the legality of the statute would entail the vague or uncertain future application of the statute [People v. Custodio (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 807, 811, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18] . In analyzing whether a statute is sufficiently definite to pass constitutional muster, courts look not only at the language of the statute, but also to legislative history and California decisions construing the statute [People v. Custodio (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 807, 811, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18] .

The doctrine affects statutes limiting free expression: If the statute fails to give fair notice of what acts will be punished so that First Amendment rights are chilled, an accused's rights under due process and freedom of speech are violated [see Kolender v. Lawson (1983) 461 U.S. 352, 357, 103 S. Ct. 1855, 75 L. Ed. 2d 903 ; Connally v. General Constr. Co. (1926) 269 U.S. 385, 391 46 S. Ct. 126, 70 L. Ed. 322 ; People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1115, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 ; Manning v. Municipal Court (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 825, 829, 183 Cal. Rptr. 458] . A claim of void for vagueness can only succeed when the litigant demonsrates that the law is vague as to the litigant or impermissibly vague in all of its applications [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1115, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Hoffman Estates v. Flipside, Hoffman Estates (1982) 455 U.S. 489, 497-498, 102 S. Ct. 1186, 71 L. Ed. 2d 362 ; Parker v. Levy (1974) 417 U.S. 733, 755-757, 94 S. Ct. 2547, 41 L. Ed. 2d 439 ; see also City of Chicago v. Morales (1999) 527 U.S. 41, 78, 119 S. Ct. 1849, 144 L. Ed. 2d 67 (ordinance prohibiting loitering in public place by two or more people, one of whom is member of criminal street gang, unconstitutionally vague); but see Nunez v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 935, 940 (in facial vagueness challenge, ordinance need not be vague in all applications if it reaches substantial amount of constitutionally protected conduct)].

There are two guiding principles endorsed by the United States Supreme Court for applying the void-for-vagueness doctrine:

- Abstract legal commands must be applied in a specific context, and acontextual application of otherwise unqualified legal language may give facially standardless language a constitutionally sufficient concreteness [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1116-1117, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing American Communications Ass'n v. Douds (1950) 339 U.S. 382, 412, 70 S. Ct. 674, 94 L. Ed. 925] ; and

- Only a reasonable degree of certainty or specificity can be demanded. We cannot expect mathematical certainty from language [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1116-1117, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Coates v. City of Cincinnati (1971) 402 U.S. 611, 614, 91 S. Ct. 1686, 29 L. Ed. 2d 214] .

[b] Application of Doctrine

A statute prohibiting individuals from wandering "without apparent business" and refusing to identify themselves to police was void for vagueness because it failed to sufficiently describe the guilty conduct and vested excessive discretion in the police to decide guilt [Kolender v. Lawson (1983) 461 U.S. 352, 103 S. Ct. 1855, 75 L. Ed. 2d 903] .

By contrast, a curfew that specifies that no person may be on the streets at specific times is not void for vagueness because it applies, on its face, to all persons, clearly informs the public and police of the proscribed illegal conduct, and does not allow the police to stop people on a "whim" [In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1102-1103, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919] . However, a juvenile curfew ordinance that makes it unlawful for any minor to "loiter, idle, wander, stroll or play in or upon the public streets, highways, roads, alleys, parks, playgrounds, wharves, docks, or other public grounds, public places and public buildings, places of amusement and entertainment, vacant lots or other unsupervised places, between the hours of ten o'clock P.M. and daylight immediately following" except in four specific situations, is unconstitutionally void for vagueness and allows the police excessive discretion to decide whether to stop and arrest juveniles after curfew hours [Nunez v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 935, 940-944] .

The portion of a preliminary injunction enjoining specified gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with any other gang member within a specified four-block area was not void for vagueness. The application of the injunction language within the context gave the language a constitutionally sufficient concreteness. The fact that the City would have to prove that a defendant knew that the person with whom he engaged in the activities was a gang member was fairly implied in the injunction or would be imposed by the trial court in any attempt to enforce the injunction [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1117-1118, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 ; see also In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 492-496, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (neither fact that target area of injunction prohibiting gang activity similar to injunction in Acuna is significantly greater nor fact that some gang members live in or have relatives living in target area did not make injunction unconstitutionally void for vagueness, since injunction does not prohibit presence in target area, only association with other gang members in area, and living in or having relatives in area does not transform gang activities into intimate or intrinsic associational activities)]. The portion of the injunction enjoining the defendants from "confronting, intimidating, annoying, harassing, threatening, challenging, provoking, assaulting and/or battering any residents or patrons, or visitors to [the specified area] ... known to have complained about gang activities" was also not impermissibly vague. The required element that defendants know that the person complained of gang activities could be fairly implied in the injunction imposed by a trial court in an action to enforce the injunction. Further, similar words were upheld against claims of vagueness by the United States Supreme Court [Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] . The words were also not impermissibly vague when the objectives of the injunction were considered and the words read in context, and declarations filed in support of preliminary relief left little doubt as to the kind of conduct the injunction sought to enjoin [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1118, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 ; see also In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 492-496, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 (neither fact that target area of injunctionprohibiting gang activity similar to injunction in Acuna is significantly greater nor fact that some gang members live in or have relatives living in target area did not make injunction unconstitutionally void for vagueness, since injunction does not prohibit presence in target area, only association with other gang members in area, and living in or having relatives in area does not transform gang activities into intimate or intrinsic associational activities)].

On the other hand, an ordinance forbidding loitering in any public place by two or more persons, one of whom is a member of a criminal street gang, is impermissibly vague. Although the ordinance does not prohibit speech or any form of conduct apparently intended to convey a message so that by its terms, the ordinance is inapplicable to assemblies designed to demonstrate a group's support of or opposition to a particular point of view, the freedom to loiter for innocent purposes is part of the "liberty" protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment [City of Chicago v. Morales (1999) 527 U.S. 41, 78, 119 S. Ct. 1849, 144 L. Ed. 2d 67] .

[2] Overbreadth Doctrine

A statute that prohibits protected speech along with unprotected speech so that it has a chilling effect on free expression is facially invalid [see People v. Hsu (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 976, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 (statute restricting speech as invalid in any respect is invalid in all respects); People v. Tisbert (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1 ; see also Kash Enterprises, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 294, 303, 138 Cal. Rptr. 53, 562 P.2d 1302] . A governmental purpose to control or prevent activities constitutionally subject to state regulation cannot be achieved by means that sweep unnecessarily broadly and thereby invade areas of protected freedoms [In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 497, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89 , quoting Williams v. Garcetti (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 561, 577, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341, 853 P.2d 507] .

The First Amendment doctrine of overbreadth is an exception to the normal rule regarding the standards for facial challenges. Showing that a law punishes a substantial amount of protected free speech, judged in relation to the law's legitimate sweep,suffices to invalidate all enforcement of the law until a limiting construction or partial invalidation narrows it to remove the seeming threat or deterrence to constitutionally protected expression [Virginia v. Hicks (2003) 539 U.S. 113, 123 S. Ct. 2191, 2196, 156 L. Ed. 2d 148] . The doctrine's concern with "chilling" protected speech attenuates as the otherwise unprotected behavior it forbids the state to sanction moves from pure speech toward conduct. Rarely, if ever, will an overbreadth challenge succeed against a law or regulation not specifically addressed to speech or to conduct necessarily associated with speech, such as picketing or demonstrating [Virginia v. Hicks (2003) 539 U.S. 113, 123 S. Ct. 2191, 2199, 156 L. Ed. 2d 148] . The court's first task is to determine whether an enactment reaches a substantial amount of constitutionally protected conduct; if not, the overbreadth challenge fails [Village of Hoffman Estates v. Flipside, Hoffman Estates, Inc. (1982) 455 U.S. 489, 494-495, 102 S. Ct. 1186, 71 L. Ed. 2d 362 ; Bauer v. Sampson (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 775, 782] .

A broadly written statute or injunction that has a deterrent effect on protected free expression may be challenged by a party whose own conduct is unprotected [City Council v. Taxpayers for Vincent (1984) 466 U.S. 789, 798-799, 104 S. Ct. 2118, 80 L. Ed. 2d 772 ; People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1113, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 ; see 4805 Convoy, Inc. v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1108, 1112] . A party may challenge a statute or injunction as overbroad because its very existence may cause others not before the court to refrain from constitutionally protected speech, and, if the overbreadth is "substantial," the law may not be enforced against anyone until it is narrowed to reach only unprotected activity [In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 497, 79 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 89 citing Broadrick v. Oklahoma (1973) 413 U.S. 601, 612, 93 S. Ct. 2908, 37 L. Ed. 2d 830] . However, a claim of overbreadth will not lie if no one other than those before the court are affected [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1113, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596] .

In one case, the court ordered dismissal of a misdemeanor complaint against a defendant who had set up a table in a county courthouse to collect signatures for a ballot initiative and to collect donations. The defendant was charged with violating a county ordinance that broadly banned all solicitation on county property. The court held that the ordinance was unconstitutionally overbroad since it did not attempt to exempt acts of solicitation protected by the First Amendment [People v. Tisbert (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 6].

When the overbreadth challenge involves both conduct and speech, the overbreadth must not only be real, but substantial as well, judged in relation to the statute's plainly legitimate sweep [In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1099, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919] .

There is a constitutionally significant difference between injunctions and statutes in the context of protected speech. "The narrow and particularized focus inherent in the nature of the injunction as an equitable remedy" is significant in evaluating a contention of overbreadth [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1114, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] . Thus, a preliminary injunction enjoining specified gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with any other gang member within a specified four-block area was not overbroad in the context of being a product of a "concrete judicial proceeding prompted by particular events" that were inimical to the residents of the area, which led to a specific request for preventive relief [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1114, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596] . However, a provision of an injunction that proscribes all uses of pagers or beepers by gang members within a specified area is overbroad and infirm because pagers and beepers have lawful, legitimate, and everyday uses so that constitutionally protected communications are swept within the ambit of the injunction [In re Englebrecht (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 486, 496-498, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89] .

[3] Construing Statute or Ordinance to Avoid Vagueness or Overbreadth

Sometimes an uncertain or overbroad statute or ordinance can be "saved" by construing it so as to avoid conflict with the state or federal constitution. A statute can be given such a limiting construction if [Spiritual Psychic Science Church v. City of Azusa (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 501, 519, 217 Cal. Rptr. 225, 703 P.2d 1119] :

- The statute's effect and operation can be limited to matters that may be constitutionally regulated;
- The terms are reasonably susceptible to an interpretation consistent with the constitution; and
- Judicial construction does not create uncertainty or overbreadth inhibiting the exercise of protected expression.

In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that an ordinance principally aimed at the sale of "goods, wares, and merchandise" on the streets also incidentally affected the sale of printed matter, but could be judicially construed to sever reference to printed matter to save the constitutionality of the ordinance. Construing the ordinance to refer only to unprotected conduct did not substantially alter its focus and limited the regulation to conduct that was constitutionally subject to regulation [see Welton v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 497, 134 Cal. Rptr. 668, 556 P.2d 1119] .

In another case, by contrast, the Court held that a statute prohibiting fortunetelling for profit was unconstitutionally overbroad and invalid "in its essence." The Court held that the ordinance could not be saved without rewriting it and that such a revision would be an abuse of the Court's power [Spiritual Psychic Science Church v. City of Azusa

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.16

§ 59.16 Remedies for Violation of Freedom of Expression

[1] Federal Remedies

[a] Civil Action Against Person Acting Under Color of State Law

Any person who, under color of a state statute or ordinance, deprives a United States citizen of a federal constitutional right or privilege (such as the right to free speech), is liable to the injured party in an action at law or suit in equity [see 42 U.S.C. § 1983;see also 42 U.S.C. § 1985(3) (damages for conspiracies to deprive persons of specified rights); Mitchum v. Foster (1972) 407 U.S. 225, 226, 243, 92 S. Ct. 2151, 32 L. Ed. 2d 705 (in action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, federal court may enjoin state court proceedings based on unconstitutional state statute, notwithstanding "anti-injunction" statute, 28 U.S.C. § 2283)]. The federal district courts have original jurisdiction of such actions [28 U.S.C. § 1343(a); see generally Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal , Pt. I]. State courts also have concurrent jurisdiction over civil rights actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 [Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 173 & n.10, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1] .

For full discussion of actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and forms for use in such actions, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities , as well as Cook & Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions (Matthew Bender).

[b] Other Potential Civil Remedies

Other potential federal civil remedies for infringement of the First Amendment right of free expression include both of the following:

- Actions for declaratory relief [see 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201, 2202; Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 57; see also Golden v. Zwickler (1969) 394 U.S. 103, 108-110, 89 S. Ct. 956, 22 L. Ed. 2d 113 (requisite controversy did not exist; case involving distribution of handbills); see generally Moore's Federal Practice, Ch. 57 (3d ed. Matthew Bender); but see Samuels v. Mackell (1971) 401 U.S. 66, 73, 91 S. Ct. 764, 27 L. Ed. 2d 688 (federal declaratory relief ordinarily denied if injunctive relief is unavailable under 28 U.S.C. § 2283, barring federal injunction of state court proceedings in absence of statute specifically authorizing such injunction)]; and

- Federal mandamus proceedings, if the case involves constitutional violations by an agency, officer, or employee of the United States [see 28 U.S.C. § 1361].

[c] Federal Review of State Criminal Proceedings

[i] Review of Conviction That Infringes on Right to Freedom of Expression

A final judgment rendered by the highest court of a state may be reviewed by the United States Supreme Court by writ of certiorari [28 U.S.C. § 1257]. Thus, a person convicted under a state statute that he or she claims infringes on his or her right to free expression, and whose conviction is affirmed by state appellate courts, may petition the United States Supreme Court for review of the conviction and consideration of the constitutional issues [see, e.g., Texas v. Johnson (1989) 491 U.S. 397, 400-402, 109 S. Ct. 2533, 105 L. Ed. 2d 342 ; Cohen v. California (1971) 403 U.S. 15, 16-18, 91 S. Ct. 1780, 29 L. Ed. 2d 284] .

For discussion of certiorari procedures before the United States Supreme Court, see Moore's Federal Practice, Chs. 405 and 406 (3d ed. Matthew Bender).

[ii] Habeas Corpus Review of Custody That Violates Constitution

The United States Supreme Court or the appropriate United States court of appeals or district court may hear an application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person in custody pursuant to a state court judgment. The ground for federal habeas corpus review is that the applicant's custody violates the Constitution or laws of the United States [see 28 U.S.C. § 2254(a)].

A habeas corpus writ will be granted only if the applicant has exhausted remedies of the state courts, or if there is no state corrective process available to the prisoner [28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)]. An applicant has not exhausted remedies if he or she has the right under state law to raise the issues presented by a procedure available in state courts [28 U.S.C. § 2254(c)].

For discussion of review of state court criminal judgments by federal habeas, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla & Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Ch. 102 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Standing

The following special standing principles apply in First Amendment cases in which someone makes facial constitutional challenges to a law related to expressive activity:

- First, a plaintiff seeking to vindicate his or her own constitutional rights may argue that a law is unconstitutional on its face if it is unconstitutionally vague or impermissibly restricts a protected activity [Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1033 ; Foti v. City of Menlo Park (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 629, 635 ; see Nunez v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 935, 949 (plaintiffs could seek directly on their own behalf facial invalidation of overly broad statutes creating unacceptable risk of suppression of ideas), quoting Sec'y of Md. v. Joseph H. Munson Co. (1984) 467 U.S. 947, 965 n.13, 104 S. Ct. 2839, 81 L. Ed. 2d 786] .

- Second, a plaintiff whose own speech or expressive conduct may validly be prohibited or sanctioned may challenge a statute on its face because it threatens others not before the court [Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1033 ; Brockett v. Spokane Arcades, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 491, 503, 105 S. Ct. 2794, 86 L. Ed. 2d 394 ; see NAACP v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 1346, 1352] .

The first kind of challenge may be paired with the more common as-applied challenge, when a plaintiff argues that a law is unconstitutional as applied to his or her own speech or expressive conduct [Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1033 ; see Foti v. City of Menlo Park (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 629, 635 ; see also NAACP v. City of Richmond (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 1346, 1352] .

[2] State Remedies

[a] Civil Remedies

[i] Potential Remedies Listed

Potential remedies available under state law to redress a violation of constitutional free expression rights include all of the following:

- Declaratory relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see, e.g., Weaver v. Jordan (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 235, 240, 49 Cal. Rptr. 537, 411 P.2d 289 , cert. denied, 385 U.S. 844 (1967) (affirming judgments for plaintiff in declaratory relief action involving statute violating constitutional free speech guarantees); see generally Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief];

- Injunctive relief [see Civ. Code §§ 3422, 3423 (final injunctions); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527 (temporary injunctions); see, e.g., Ketchens v. Reiner (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 480, 239 Cal. Rptr. 549 ; see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions ; but see discussion in [b], below];

- A writ of mandate to compel an inferior tribunal or board to allow a petitioner to engage in free expression activities from which he or she has been unlawfully precluded [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084, 1085; see, e.g., American Civil Liberties Union v. Board of Education (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 167, 182, 10 Cal. Rptr. 647, 359 P.2d 45 (political group precluded from using junior high school auditorium for series of monthly meetings on current topics); see generally Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition];

- A writ of prohibition to restrain criminal proceedings when the court lacks jurisdiction because the ordinance on which the proceedings arebased is facially invalid under the First and Fourteenth Amendments [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1102; see, e.g., Dillon v. Municipal Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 860, 872, 94 Cal. Rptr. 777, 484 P.2d 945 ; see generally Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]; and

- A writ of review to restrain a lower court from proceedings in excess of jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1067, 1068; see generally Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of], such as a contempt order arising from a violation of a temporary restraining order that violates the contemnor's free speech rights [see, e.g., Fortenbury v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 405, 406-410, 106 P.2d 411] .

An individual may not bring an action for money damages on the basis of an alleged violation of Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) in the absence of a statutory provision or an established common law tort authorizing such a damage remedy for the constitutional violation [Degrassi v. Cook (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 333, 335-344, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508, 58 P.3d 360] .

[ii] Limitation on Injunctive Relief Against Enforcement of Statute or Ordinance

Generally, injunctions may not be granted to restrain a public officer from executing a statute for the public benefit [Civ. Code § 3423(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4); McCarthy v. Superior Court (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1031-1032, 236 Cal. Rptr. 833] . Nevertheless, courts have recognized an exception to this rule and have permitted injunctive relief to enjoin prosecution under laws or ordinances that infringe on a plaintiff's constitutional rights, including the right to free expression [see, e.g., Abbott v. City of Los Angeles (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 674, 678 (criminal registration ordinance); Sundance Saloon, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 812, 261 Cal. Rptr. 841 (ordinance restricting cabaret license); see also Leach v. City of San Marcos (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 660-661, 261 Cal. Rptr. 805 (injunction may be issued if statute or ordinance is invalid and showing of irreparable injury is made)].

In deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction against enforcement of an unconstitutional statute or ordinance, the courts will weigh the following factors [see Sundance Saloon, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 811, 261 Cal. Rptr. 841 ; Leach v. City of San Marcos (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 657, 261 Cal. Rptr. 805]:

- The likelihood that plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial; and

- The interim harm that plaintiff is likely to suffer if the injunction is denied, as compared with the harm that defendant will suffer if the injunction is granted pending trial.

Thus, when a preliminary injunction challenges a statute or ordinance as infringing on free expression guarantees, the court weighs the competing burdens on the individual and the government to determine if aninjunction should be granted [see, e.g., Elrod v. Burns (1976) 427 U.S. 347, 373, 96 S. Ct. 2673, 49 L. Ed. 2d 547] . While the loss of First Amendment freedoms for even minimal periods of time may constitute irreparable injury [see, e.g., Ketchens v. Reiner (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 480, 239 Cal. Rptr. 549] , when the burden imposed by the statute on the individual's First Amendment rights is minimal compared to the potential burden on the public if the injunction is granted, a preliminary injunction will not be granted [see Sundance Saloon, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814-818, 261 Cal. Rptr. 841] .

[iii] Bane Act

The Bane Act provides for a cause of action for damages, injunctive and other equitable relief, and attorney's fees against a person who interferes or attempts to interfere, by threats, intimidation, or coercion, with the exercise or enjoyment by another of rights under the constitution or laws of the United States or of California [see Civ. Code § 52.1(a), (b), (h)]. The action may be brought by the individual whose rights have been violated in his or her own name [see Civ. Code § 52.1(b)] or by the Attorney General, a district attorney, or a city attorney, in the name of the people of the State of California [see Civ. Code § 52.1(a)].

An action under the Bane Act may not be based on speech alone unless the plaintiff shows that [Civ. Code § 52.1(j)]:

- The speech itself threatens violence against a specific person or group of persons; and

- The person or group of persons against whom the threat is directed reasonably fears that, because of the speech, violence will be directed against the person or group or his, her, or their property, and the person threatening violence has the apparent ability to carry out the threat.

Furthermore, no injunction issued in a Bane Act case can restrict the content of speech. Orders restricting time, place, or manner of any person's speech are permissible only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the peaceable exercise or enjoyment of constitutional or statutory rights, consistent with the constitutional rights of the person sought to be enjoined [Civ. Code § 52.1(k)]. For discussion of the constitutionality of time, place, and manner restrictions, see § 59.12[2].

For further discussion of the Bane Act, including a complaint for damages and temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, and permanent injunction for interference with the exercise of civil rights under the Act, see Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference with Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence .

[iv] Limitation Period for Civil Actions

A claim for violation of speech rights under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2 is subject to the one-year statute of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 340, which covers infringements of personal rights. Note that effective January 1, 2003, Code Civ. Proc. § 340 was amended to no longer govern actions for personal injuries and Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 was added to provide that an action for assault, battery, or injury to, or for the death of, an individual caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another must be brought within two years. Actions for certain infringements of personal rights, such as libel, slander, and false imprisonment, are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c), which provides a one-year statute of limitations.

Before the amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 340, one court had held that claims for wrongful firing of a tenured professor for disapproval of political views, as well as a claim of wrongful denial of a tenured professorship based on speech discrimination, were governed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [Acuna v. Regents of University of California (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 639, 645-646, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 (claim of wrongful denial of application for tenured professorship filed 15 months after denial was time barred)]. However, it is now unclear whether a one-year or two-year statute of limitations governs causes of action for wrongful firing of a tenured professor for disapproval of political views or wrongful denial of a tenured professorship based on speech discrimination. It is clear, however, that Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), prescribing a two-year limitations period for claims involving property rights, does not apply, since there is no property right to a tenured teaching position [Acuna v. Regents of University of California (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 639, 646-647, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388] .

The cause of action for violation of state constitutional rights accrues on the date of the action which allegedly constitutes the violation [see, e.g., Acuna v. Regents of University of California (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 639, 646, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 (no equitable tolling for exhaustion of other legal or administrative remedies where evidence showed no administrative remedies to exhaust; equitable tolling did not apply to letter-writing campaign)].

[b] Review of Criminal Proceedings

[i] Habeas Corpus

The legality of any imprisonment or confinement may be challenged by a writ of habeas corpus [see Penal Code § 1473(a)]. A person may be discharged from custody if the confinement is based on a judgment or order that exceeds the court's jurisdiction [see Penal Code § 1487(1)]. For example, habeas corpus is available to obtain release from custody when the petitioner has been criminally convicted for conduct protected by the First Amendment [see, e.g., In re Brown (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 612, 624-625,108 Cal. Rptr. 465, 510 P.2d 1017 (convictions for unlawful assembly)]. Habeas corpus may also be used to obtain release from custody before trial when the prosecution is based on an unconstitutional statute or ordinance or when the defendant has been charged with contempt for violation of an unconstitutional court order, even when the defendant has been released on bail [see, e.g., In re Berry (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 137, 145-146, 157, 65 Cal. Rptr. 273, 436 P.2d 273 (involving First Amendment challenge to injunction against labor picketing)].

For general discussion of habeas corpus procedure and forms for use in habeas corpus proceedings, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus . For specific discussion of habeas corpus in state criminal proceedings, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla & Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Ch. 102 (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Appeal of Criminal Conviction

An individual convicted of violating a statute or ordinance that allegedly violates his or her right of free speech may also challenge its constitutionality on appeal from his or her conviction [see, e.g., People v. Davis (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 481, 482, 67 Cal. Rptr. 547, 439 P.2d 651 (appeal from municipal court conviction under anti-riot statute; conviction upheld)]. For discussion of appellate procedure in criminal proceedings, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla &

Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Ch. 101 (Matthew Bender).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.17

§ 59.17 Right of Association

The First Amendment recognizes and shields from government intrusion a limited right of association. There is no generalized right of social association [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Dallas v. Stanglin (1989) 490 U.S. 19, 25, 109 S. Ct. 1591, 104 L. Ed. 2d 18] .

There are two kinds of associations entitled to First Amendment protection. The first are those with "intrinsic" or "intimate" value, exemplified by "personal affiliations ... [attending] the creation and sustenance of a family--marriage ... the raising and education of children; and cohabitation with one's relatives. ... [T]hey are distinguished by such attributes as relative smallness, a high degree of selectivity in decisions to begin and maintain the affiliation, and seclusion from others in critical aspects of the relationship" [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 619-620, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462] . Parents and children have a well-elaborated constitutional right to live together without governmental interference, which is an essential liberty interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee that parents and children will not be separated by the state without due process of law except in an emergency. Officials may remove a child from the custody of its parent without prior judicial authorization only if the information they possess at the time of the seizure is such as provides reasonable cause to believe that the child is in imminent danger of serious bodily injury and that the scope of the intrusion is reasonably necessary to avert that specific injury [Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725, 731 ; Wallis v. Spencer (9th Cir. 2000) 202 F.3d 1126, 1136-1138] . Although non-custodial parents have a reduced liberty interest in the companionship, care, custody, and management of their children, parents with legal custody, regardless of whether they also possess physical custody of their children, have a constitutionally protected right of familial association [Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725, 733] , preliminary injunction enjoining defendants, as members of a street gang, from "standing, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view with any other defendant or any other member of the gang" within a specified four-block area was not invalid on First Amendment associational grounds. The gang's activities within the area failed to qualify as either of the two protected forms of association. The gang was not an association of individuals formed "for the purpose of engaging in protected speech or religious activities" [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1111, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , quoting Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 544, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474] , nor did it fit within a constitutionally protected "intrinsic" or "intimate" association [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1112, 60 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596] . The constitutionally protected right of association does not extend to associating for the "purpose of depriving third parties of their lawful rights" [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1112, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , citing Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593] .

The second type of association entitled to First Amendment protection is pursuit of "a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends." This is directly related to the freedom to speak, worship, and petition the government for redress of grievances because without the right to associate, the others could not exist [People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110-1111, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , quoting Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 622, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462] . This right includes partisan political organization [Tashjian v. Republican Party of Connecticut (1986) 479 U.S. 208, 214, 107 S. Ct. 544, 93 L. Ed. 2d 514] . The First Amendment protects the freedom to join together in furtherance of common political beliefs, which presupposes the freedom to identify the people constituting the association and limit the association to those people only, so that a corollary of the right to associate is the right not to associate [California Democratic Party v. Jones (2000) 530 U.S. 567, 120 S. Ct. 2402, 2408, 147 L. Ed. 2d 502] .

The government may abridge the freedom to associate directly, or abridgement of associational rights, even though unintended, may inevitably follow from varied forms of governmental action [NAACP v. Alabama (1958) 357 U.S. 449, 461, 78 S. Ct. 1163, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1488 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1159] . The government must justify its actions when it imposes direct limitations on associational rights, and when governmental action would have the practical effect of discouraging the exercise of constitutionally protected political rights [NAACP v. Alabama (1958) 357 U.S. 449, 461, 78 S. Ct. 1163, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1488 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1159-1160] . Those actions have a chilling effect on, and therefore infringe, the exercise of fundamental rights, and they must survive exacting scrutiny [Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15, 64, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1159-1160] .

The compelled disclosure of political associations can have a chilling effect [Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15, 64, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1160] . Disclosures of political affiliations and activities that have a deterrent effect on the exercise of First Amendment rights are therefore subject to exacting scrutiny [Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15, 64-65, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1160] . A party who objects to a discovery request as an infringement of the party's First Amendment rights is in essence asserting a First Amendment privilege [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1160] . In the Ninth Circuit, a claim of First Amendment privilege is subject to a two-part framework. The party asserting the privilege must demonstrate a prima facie showing of arguable First Amendment infringement [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1160 ; Brock v. Local 375, Plumbers Int'l Union (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 346, 349-350] . The prima facie showing requires the party to demonstrate that enforcement of the discovery requests will result in harassment, membership withdrawal, or discouragement of new members, or other consequences that objectively suggest an impact on, or chilling of, the members' associational rights [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1160 ; Brock v. Local 375, Plumbers Int'l Union (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 346, 350] . If party opposing discovery can make the necessary prima facie showing, the evidentiary burden then shifts to the proponent to demonstrate that the information sought through the discovery is rationally related to a compelling governmental interest and the least restrictive means of obtaining the desired information [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1161 ; Brock v. Local 375, Plumbers Int'l Union (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 346, 350 ; see also Dole v. Serv. Employees Union, AFL-CIO, Local 280 (9th Cir. 1991) 950 F.2d 1456, 1459-1461] . The second step is meant to make discovery that has an impact on First Amendment associational rights available only after careful consideration of the need for the discovery, but not necessarily to preclude it. The question is whether the party seeking the discovery has demonstrated an interest in obtaining the disclosures it seeks, which is sufficient to justify the deterrent effect on the free exercise of the constitutionally protected right of association [NAACP v. Alabama (1958) 357 U.S. 449, 461, 78 S. Ct. 1163, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1488 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1161] . The court balances the burdens imposed on individuals and associations against the significance of the interest in disclosure to determine whether the interest in disclosure outweighs the harm [Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15, 72, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 ; Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1161] . This balancing may take into account the following [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1161] :

- The importance of the litigation [see Dole v. Serv. Employees Union, AFL-CIO, Local 280 (9th Cir. 1991) 950 F.2d 1456, 1461 (purpose of investigating possible criminal violations serves compelling governmental interest)].

- The centrality of the information sought to the issues in the case [see NAACP v. Alabama (1958) 357 U.S. 449, 464-465, 78 S. Ct. 1163, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1488 ; Grandbouche v. Clancy (10th Cir. 1987) 825 F.2d 1463, 1466 ; Black Panther Party v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1981) 661 F.2d 1243, 1268, 213 U.S. App. D.C. 67] .

- The existence of less intrusive means of obtaining the information [see Grandbouche v. Clancy (10th Cir. 1987) 825 F.2d 1463, 1466 ; Black Panther Party v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1981) 661 F.2d 1243, 1268, 213 U.S. App. D.C. 67] .

- The substantiality of the First Amendment interests at stake [see Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 15, 71, 96 S. Ct. 612, 46 L. Ed. 2d 659 (weighing seriousness of threat to exercise of First Amendment rights against substantiality of state's interest); Black Panther Party v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1981) 661 F.2d 1243, 1267, 213 U.S. App. D.C. 67 (argument in favor of upholding claim of privilege will ordinarily grow stronger as danger to rights of expression and association increases)].

The party seeking the discovery must show that the information sought is highly relevant to the claims or defenses in the litigation. The request must be carefully tailored to avoid unnecessary interference with protected activities, and the information must be otherwise unavailable [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1161] .

Disclosure of internal campaign communications can have a deterrent effect on the exercise of protected activities. The disclosure of this information can have a deterrent effect on participation in campaigns, which is a protected activity [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1162 ; see San Francisco County Democratic Cent. Comm. v. Eu (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 814, 827 (right of individuals to associate for advancement of political beliefs is fundamental)]. Disclosure of internal campaign information can also have a deterrent effect on the free flow of information within campaigns [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1162-1163 (implicit in right to associate with others to advance shared political beliefs is right to exchange ideas and formulate strategy and messages in private)]. Disclosure of internal campaign information could chill protected activities in other ways as well [Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1163] .

Political parties' government, structure, and activities enjoy constitutional protection [Timmons v. Twin Cities Area New Party (1997) 520 U.S. 351, 357, 117 S. Ct. 1364, 137 L. Ed. 2d 589 ; see California Democratic Party v. Jones (2000) 530 U.S. 567, 120 S. Ct. 2402, 2408, 147 L. Ed. 2d 502 (state's blanket open primary violates First Amendment right of association; in no area is political associations' right to exclude more important than in process of selecting its nominee)]. When deciding whether a state election law violates First and Fourteenth Amendment associational rights, courts weigh the character and magnitude of the burden the state's rule imposes on those rights against the interests the state contends justify that burden, and consider the extent to which the state's concerns make the burden necessary. Regulations imposing severe burdens on associational rights must be narrowly tailored and advance a compelling state interest; lesser burdens trigger less-exacting review, and a state's "important regulatory interests" will usually be enough to justify reasonable nondiscriminatory restrictions. No bright line separates permissible election-related regulation from unconstitutional infringements on First Amendment freedoms [Timmons v. Twin Cities Area New Party (1997) 520 U.S. 351, 358, 117 S. Ct. 1364, 137 L. Ed. 2d 589] .

The First Amendment right of association also guarantees that liability will not be imposed on an individual by reason of association with a particular group alone, unless it can be established that the group with which the individual associates possesses unlawful goals and the individual holds a specific intent to further those illegal aims [N.A.A.C.P. v. Claiborne Hardware Co. (1982) 458 U.S. 886, 918-920, 102 S. Ct. 3409, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1215 ; Humanitarian Law Project v. Reno (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1130, 1133] .

Freedom of association does not trump a parent's right to direct and control the activities of a minor child, including with whom the child may associate. Parents' liberty interest in the care, custody, and control of their children gives them broad authority over their minor children, and their fundamental right to make child rearing decisions includes deciding who may spend time with a minor child [Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1410, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609] .

§ 59.18 Right to Petition Government for Redress of Grievances

The federal and state constitutional right to petition for redress of grievances is the right to complain about the government to the government. It encompasses the right to sue [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 50-52, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694 ; see also Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587 ; Oren Royal Oaks Venture v. Greenberg, Bernhard, Weiss & Karma, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 1157, 232 Cal. Rptr. 567, 728 P.2d 1202 ; Smith v. Silvey (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 400, 197 Cal. Rptr. 15] . A suit against the government has preferred status over a suit invoking judicial power against a nongovernmental subject [City of Long Beach v. Bozek (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 527, 530 , vacated and remanded (1983) 459 U.S. 1095 , reiterated (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 727, 728, 190 Cal. Rptr. 918, 661 P. 2d 1072] . "The First Amendment attains its highest potency in cases ... which manifest political expression" [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 56, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694 (emphasis in original), citing 44 Liquormart, Inc. v. Rhode Island (1996) 517 U.S. 484, 517-518, 116 S. Ct. 1495, 134 L. Ed. 2d 711 (conc. opn. of Scalia, J.); Garrison v. Louisiana (1964) 379 U.S. 64, 77-78, 85 S. Ct. 209, 13 L. Ed. 2d 125] . An application for a use permit is not the equivalent of a petition to the government forredress of grievances [WMX Technologies v. Miller (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 367] .

The right to petition for redress of grievances is not absolute [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 56, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694] . Any impairment to the right, however, must be narrowly drawn [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 57, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694] . For example, enforcement of California's vexatious litigant statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 391 et seq., against a litigant who had previously lost five cases against the government in seven years did not impermissibly chill the litigant's right to petition. The statute would only create a "chill" by causing one who had lost several suits against the government to fear being branded a vexatious litigant only if the last suit lacked merit, and baseless litigation is not protected by the right to petition [Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 57-58, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694] .

For discussion and forms relating to the requirement that vexatious litigants furnish security for costs, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.90 et seq. For discussion and forms relating to the requirement that vexatious litigants obtain permission from the court before filing additional lawsuits, see Ch. 573, Vexatious Litigants .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-59 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 59.19

§ 59.19 First Amendment Right of Access

The Ninth Circuit recognizes a qualified First Amendment right of access in the public to certain types of documents, especially those involved with criminal prosecutions [see United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1026 (First Amendment right of access to cooperation addendum to plea agreement, government's motion and memoranda filed in support of it to seal plea agreement, and district court's orders granting government's motion); Oregonian Publ'ng Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court (9th Cir. 1990) 920 F.2d 1462, 1464]. When there is a qualified right of access, the question is whether the right to access is overcome by a compelling governmental interest.

To decide whether the public has a First Amendment right to access to a certain type of document, the court considers historical experience and logic [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1026 ; Times Mirror Co. v. United States (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 1210, 1213] although logic alone, even without experience, may be enough to establish the right [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1026 ; see Seattle Times Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court (9th Cir. 1988) 845 F.2d 1513, 1516, 1517 (even without unbroken history of public access, First Amendment right exists if public scrutiny would benefit proceedings); see also Phoenix Newspapers, Inc. v. U.S. Dist. Court (9th Cir. 1998) 156 F.3d 940, 948 (even if historic right of access were not dispositive, logic prong of test would be)]. Thus, for example, the public has a qualified First Amendment right to access a plea colloquy transcript, because logic favors access [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1026-1027]. There is also a qualified right of access to transcripts of hearings on a motion to seal by the government. Although there is no historical experience of public access to the hearings or their transcripts because the hearings did not exist until quite recently, logic requires that at least part of the hearings be open to the public, because one of their purposes is to give the public an opportunity to be heard. If the public has a right to attend the hearings, it necessarily follows that it is entitled to read the transcript of those parts of the proceeding that were public [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1027]. However the public does not have the right to attend such hearings in their entirety. The court may close portions of the hearings to hear in private, for example, the government's explanation of how unsealing a plea would endanger the defendant and others. It would be illogical to give the public a right to read the transcripts of these portions of the hearings [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1027-1028]. There is no historical experience of access and logic militates against granting access to declarations and documentation appended to the government's motion to seal and to memoranda supporting that motion [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1027].

The qualified right of access can be overcome if each of the following is true [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1028 ; Oregonian Publ'ng Co. v. U.S. Dist. Court (9th Cir. 1990) 920 F.2d 1462, 1466]:

- Closure serves a compelling interest.

- There is a substantial probability that, in the absence of closure, the compelling interest would be harmed.

- There are no alternatives to closure that would adequately protect the compelling interest.

Governmental interests that can be compelling include keeping criminal defendants or informants or others safe [United States v. Higuera-Guerrero (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1022, 1028].

§ 59.34 Decisions

[1] Applicability of Free Expression Rights

[a] To State Action

First Amendment rights to assemble and petition are liberties guaranteed by due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment and thus are protected against state action. Sun Co. of San Bernardino v. Superior Court (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 815, 105 Cal. Rptr. 873

[b] To Private Property Owners

First and Fourteenth Amendments limit only governmental action and do not apply to actions by owners of private property used for purely private purposes; mere fact that the property is "open to the public" does not transform private property into public property so as to require the owner to permit expressive activities on the premises. Lloyd Corp. v. Tanner (1972) 407 U.S. 551, 567-570, 92 S. Ct. 2219, 33 L. Ed. 2d 131

Under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2, shopping mall could not enforce rule prohibiting persons from urging customers to boycott store in mall; shopping mall was public forum in which persons could reasonably exercise their right to free speech guaranteed by Cal. Const., art. I, § 2. Although mall could enact and enforce reasonable regulations of time, place and manner of free expression to assure these activities did not interfere with normal business operations of mall, it could not prohibit certain types of speech based upon content, such as prohibiting speech urging boycott of one or more of stores in mall. Fashion Valley Mall, LLC v. National Labor Relations Board (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 850, 857-870, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 288, 172 P.3d 742

Tenants association had no state constitutional right to distribute its newsletter in privately-owned apartment complex, when complex owner had restricted public's access to complex by carefully limiting access to residential tenants and their invitees, so that complex is not functional equivalent oftraditional public forum and complex owner's actions did not constitute state action for purposes of state constitutional free speech protection; further, owner's action in seeking and enforcing injunctive relief was not state action. Golden Gateway Center v. Golden Gateway Tenants Assn. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 1013, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 29 P.3d 797

Right to free speech under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) is more "definitive and inclusive" than that afforded by First Amendment; California Constitution protects speech and petitioning, when reasonably exercised, in privately owned shopping centers. Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 908, 910, 153 Cal. Rptr. 854, 592 P.2d 341 , aff'd, 447 U.S. 74 (1980)

Trial court properly granted mall owners injunction against and denied anti-SLAPP motion to strike by protestors at shopping mall protesting adult entertainment club, when mall, although shopping center contained many stores, was small property with limited access, and owners could restrict speech on mall property, but because mall had more than one store, protestors could not be completely barred; when original stipulated injunction entered into by leader of protesters and property owners was admirable accommodation by giving protestors sufficient access to mall given its multi-store layout yet taking into account mall's small size and limited purposes, mainly shopping, but leader and other protestors abused generous access they were given by yelling on bullhorns in admittedly residential area at 12:30 in morning, accosting and harassing patrons and defacing property, and leader directed protestors, kept list of many of their names, and negotiated original injunction, purportedly on their behalf, and there was ample evidence of wrongful conduct on his part, for example, use of bullhorn; and when evidence on preliminary injunction supported denial of motion to strike. Slauson Partnership v. Ochoa (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 1028-1029, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668

Although free-standing, single-structure, single-use retail food store and parking lot voluntarily opens its doors to the public, its invitation to public is more limited than shopping center's since it invites public only to shop for food and food-related items, so that trial court properly granted preliminary injunction against organization and individuals attempting to obtain signatures for initiative petitions from individuals patronizing store, where owner's interest in maintaining exclusive control over its private property is stronger than interest of shopping mall owner and public's interest in using store as forum for free speech and petitioning activity is not as strong as its interest in engaging in those activities at large shopping center. Trader Joe's Co. v. Progressive Campaigns (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 425, 433, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442

California Constitution protects reasonable exercise of free speech rights on private property when that property is generally open to the public and functions as the equivalent of a traditional public forum. Allred v. Harris (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1386, 1390, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530

[c] Differentiating Government and Private Speech

In action by nonprofit coalition of pro-life organizations alleging violation of First Amendment rights by state license plate commission's denial of application for special organization license plate that would portray its message, trial court erred in granting summary judgment to license plate commission on grounds that it was state-adopted speech which state was free to regulate without First Amendment constraint, where, by allowing organizations to obtain speciality license plates with their logo and motto, state provided forum in which philanthropic organizations could exercise their First Amendment rights in hopes of raising money to support their cause, supporting finding of private speech; license plate commission's de minimis editorial control over plate design and color did not support finding that messages conveyed by organization constituted government speech; factor of ownership of means of communication had characteristics of both private and government speech, but fact that coalition's logo would also be displayed on license plate supporting its message weighed in favor of its being primarily private speech; and fact that coalition had to take affirmative step of submitting application suggested that coalition, rather than state, bore ultimate responsibility for content of speech. Ariz. Life Coalition, Inc. v. Stanton (9th Cir. 2008) 515 F.3d 956, 963-968

[2] Protected Expression

City's decision to accept certain privately donated monuments while rejecting religious organization's was best viewed as form of government speech, which was not subject to scrutiny under Free Speech Clause. Pleasant Grove City, Utah v. Summum (2009) -- U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 1125, 1131-1138, 172 L. Ed. 2d 853

Although First Amendment protected school's right to publish truthful information about school and its athletic programs and school's right to try to persuade prospective students and their parents that its excellence in sports was reason for enrolling, enforcement by not-for-profit membership corporation that regulated interscholastic sports among its members, which school chose to join, and which was athletic league and state actor invested with threefold obligation to prevent exploitation of children, ensure high school athletics remained secondary to academics, and promote fair competition among its members, of rule prohibiting coaches from trying to recruit impressionable middle school athletes, was not protected by First Amendment, where anti-recruiting rule struck nowhere near heart of First Amendment because league did not ban dissemination of truthful information relating to sports or claim that it could, and where, even accepting questionable holding that league's closed-door deliberations relating to school's recruiting violations were unconstitutional, any due process violation was harmless beyond reasonable doubt. Tenn. Secondary Sch. Ath. Ass'n. v. Brentwood Academy (2007) 551 U.S. 291, 127 S. Ct. 2489, 168 L. Ed. 2d 166, 170-176

Court of Appeals was correct to affirm district court ruling that enforcement of Child Online Protection Act (COPA) [47 U.S.C. § 231], which imposescriminal penalties of $50,000 fine and six months in prison for knowingly posting, for "commercial purposes," of World Wide Web content "harmful to minors," should be enjoined because COPA likely violates First Amendment, when statute was likely to burden some speech that is protected for adults and there were plausible, less restrictive alternatives to COPA, including blocking and filtering software, which were likely more effective as means of restricting children's access to materials harmful to them than COPA, and when potential harms from reversing injunction outweighed those of leaving it in place by mistake. Ashcroft v. American Civil Liberties Union (2004) 542 U.S. 656, 124 S. Ct. 2783, 2790-2795, 159 L. Ed. 2d 690

Virginia statute banning cross-burning with intent to intimidate does not run afoul of First Amendment, because statute does not single out for opprobrium only speech directed toward specified disfavored topics; burning cross is particularly virulent form of intimidation, and state chose to prohibit only forms of intimidation most likely to inspire fear of bodily harm. However, provision that cross-burning is prima facie evidence of intent to intimidate, as interpreted by jury instruction that burning of cross, by itself, is sufficient evidence from which jury could infer required intent, renders statute unconstitutional because it permits a jury to convict in every cross-burning case in which defendants exercise their constitutional right not to put on defense, or when defendant presents defense, makes it more likely jury will find intent to intimidate regardless of particular facts of case, creating unacceptable risk of suppression of ideas. Virginia v. Black (2003) 538 U.S. 343, 123 S. Ct. 1536, 1547-1552, 155 L. Ed. 2d 535

Municipal ordinance requiring one to obtain permit before engaging in door-to-door advocacy of political cause and to display on demand permit, which contains one's name, violates First Amendment protection accorded to anonymous pamphleteering ordiscourse. Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, Inc. v. Village of Stratton (2002) 536 U.S. 150, 122 S. Ct. 2080, 2087-2091, 153 L. Ed. 2d 205

Punishing radio commentator for playing tape of unlawfully intercepted telephone conversation under 18 U.S.C. § 2511(1)(c), which punishes willful disclosure or attempt to disclose contents of unlawfully obtained wire or oral communication if publisher knows or has reason to know it was unlawfully intercepted, violated commentator's First Amendment rights. Bartnicki v. Vopper (2001) 532 U.S. 514, 121 S. Ct. 1753, 149 L. Ed. 2d 787

Condition imposed by Congress on use of Legal Services Corporation (LSC) funds, prohibiting legal representation funded by recipients of LSC moneys if representation involves effort to amend or otherwise challenge existing welfare law, which prevents attorney from arguing to court that state statute conflicts with federal statute or that either state or federal statute by its terms or in its application violates federal Constitution, violates First Amendment rights of LSC grantees and their clients, when, although viewpoint-based funding decisions can be sustained when government is itself speaker or government uses private speakers to transmit information pertaining to its own program, LSC program was designed to facilitate private speech, i.e., to provide attorneys to represent interests of indigent clients, not to promote governmental message and in context of suits for welfare benefits, LSC-funded attorney speaks on behalf of client and attorney defending decision to deny benefits delivers government's message; when government sought to use an existing medium of expression to control it, in class of cases, in ways that distort its usual functioning; and when restriction threatened severe impairment of judicial function of interpretation of law and constitution. Legal Services Corp. v. Velazquez (2001) 531 U.S. 533, 121 S. Ct. 1043, 149 L. Ed. 2d 63

Section 505 of Telecommunications Act of 1996, requiring cable television operators providing channels primarily dedicated to sexually-oriented programming either to fully scramble or otherwise fully block channels or limit transmission to hours when children are unlikely to be viewing, with purpose of shielding children from hearing or seeing images resulting with signal bleed, is content-based restriction on speech violating First Amendment, when government failed to show it is least restrictive means for addressing problem. U.S. v. Playboy Entertainment Group, Inc. (2000) 529 U.S. 803, 120 S. Ct. 1878, 146 L. Ed. 2d 865

Communications Decency Act of 1996, prohibiting knowingly transmission of obscene or indecent messages to recipient under 18 years of age and knowing sending or displaying of patently offensive messages in manner available to person under 18 years of age, is unconstitutional as abridging free speech protected by federal constitution. Reno v. ACLU (1997) 521 U.S. 844, 117 S. Ct. 2329, 138 L. Ed. 2d 874

Protected speech under First Amendment includes speech that conveys religious social beliefs. Capitol Sq. Review Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650, 659 (private group's unattended display of cross in state-owned square)

Parading is form of expression protected by First Amendment. Hurley v. Irish-American Gay Group (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487, 500-501

Under First Amendment, parade organizers may not be compelled to affirm belief with which they disagree by being required to include among parade marchers a group imparting a message that organizers do not wish to convey. Hurley v. Irish-American Gay Group (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 115 S. Ct. 2338, 132 L. Ed. 2d 487, 495, 503-508

Nude dancing is expressive conduct marginally within outer perimeters of First Amendment; however, ordinance making knowingly or intentionally appearing in public place in state of nudity, defined as showing of human male or female genitals, pubic area, or buttocks with less than fully opaque covering, showing of female breast with less than fully opaque covering or any part of nipple, or showing of covered male genitals in discernibly turgid state misdemeanor is constitutional. *Barnes v. Conduct is expressive and thus protected by First Amendment when two factors are present: (1) intent to convey a particularized message, and (2) a substantial likelihood that the message will be understood by those receiving it. Spence v. Washington (1974) 418 U.S. 405, 410-411, 94 S. Ct. 2727, 41 L. Ed. 2d 842 ; Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 549 n.1 (nude dancing)

"Heckler's veto" is impermissible content-based speech restriction under which speaker is silenced due to anticipated disorderly or violent reaction of audience. Brown v. Louisiana (1966) 383 U.S. 131, 133 n.1, 86 S. Ct. 719, 15 L. Ed. 2d 637

Demonstrators failed to plead actionable viewpoint discrimination in their relocation by Secret Service agents, where bald allegations of impermissible motive on agents' part and that, in ordering relocation of their demonstration agents acted in conformity with officially authorized sub rosa Secret Service policy of suppressing speech critical of President, standing alone, were conclusory and therefore not entitled to assumption of truth, and where court could not reasonably infer First Amendment violation from non-conclusory factual allegations that agents ordered relocation of their anti-President demonstration but left similarly situated pro-President demonstration undisturbed and that diners and guests inside inn where President was dining were not subjected to security screening or asked to leave premises, despite their close proximity to President as argument for presuming agents' discriminatory intent by way of evidence of disparate impact, because agents' instruction to state and local police to move demonstrators to location situated comparable distance from inn as other demonstrators, establishing consistent perimeter around President, was not plausible allegation of disparate treatment. Moss v. United States Secret Service (9th Cir. 2009) 572 F.3d 962, 969-972

Restrictions on lobbying, soliciting clients, participating in class actions, and seeking attorney's fees Congress imposed on legal aid organizations receiving federal grants through Legal Services Corporation (LSC) were not facially violative of First Amendment, where they did not discriminate against particular viewpoint; LSC did not apply program integrity rule, permitting grantees to channel restricted speech, paid for with non-federal dollars, through unrestricted affiliates, to plaintiffs in manner that violated First Amendment, where plaintiffs did not demonstrate as factual matter that PIR had not left them adequate alternative channels for protected expression. Legal Aid Servs. of Or. v. Legal Servs. Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 1006, 1015-1021

Removal of political activist from public street for which one defendant had obtained permit to state private event constituted constitutional violation of activist's First Amendment rights, where First Amendment plainly protected activities of gathering signatures for political petition and registering voters, and where defendants' conduct resulting in complete exclusion of plaintiff for no reason other than asserted right of permittees to exclude anyone expressing political message, violated First Amendment. Dietrich v. John Ascuagua's Nugget (9th Cir. 2008) 548 F.3d 892, 896-899

Police officers violated plaintiff's First Amendment rights by arresting him for political messages painted on his van, impounding his van, and forcing him to remove the messages, where reasonable person would expect that observer of van would have seen old Volkswagen van covered with artwork, American flag, and obviously satiric or hyperbolic political message, and actions of officers who actually saw van and its message made clear that reasonable people would not have understood and did not understand speech as true threat; and where there was virtually no evidence plaintiff subjectively intended speech as true threat of serious harm. Fogel v. Collins (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 824, 829-833

City ordinance contained provisions that violated First Amendment and provisions that did not, where provisions permissibly distinguished between expressive activity, as defined in ordinance, and city manager did not have unbridled discretion to impose conditions on permits to hold special events because provision allowed city manager to impose conditions on permits only to achieve specified purposes that were objective and relatively precise and had no discernable connection to content of any particular message; where provision allowing city manager to require documentation of indigent status to avoid imposition of service charges defined indigency in content-neutral and objective manner and limited city to relevant information reasonably necessary, which adequately ensured that choice of means of proof was not left to whim of city manager; where insurance requirement was content-neutral because city could authorize permit applicant to provide, indemnification as alternative to insurance at applicant's option; and where, to degree ordinance was otherwise constitutional, misdemeanor penalty forintentional violation of its provisions did not violate First Amendment. However, provisions governing special events were unconstitutional because they were not narrowly tailored to serve substantial governmental interest, provisions governing spontaneous events were unconstitutional because they were not narrowly tailored and did not provide sufficient alternative means of communication, hold-harmless and indemnification provisions were unconstitutional because they were not narrowly tailored to serve significant governmental interest, and funding and waiver provision was unconstitutional because it allowed exercise of unbridled discretion. Long Beach Area Peace Network v. City of Long Beach (9th Cir. 2008) 522 F.3d 1010, 1025-1043

State license plate commission violated First Amendment rights of nonprofit coalition of pro-life organizations by denying coalition's application for special organization license plate that would portray its message, where state's speciality license plate program was limited public forum, and where, because abortion-related speech fell within boundaries of limited public forum and because commission denied application based on nature of message, commission's actions were viewpoint discriminatory. Ariz. Life Coalition, Inc. v. Stanton (9th Cir. 2008) 515 F.3d 956, 968-973

State statute prohibiting payroll deductions for political activities was constitutional as applied to state government itself, but violated First Amendment as applied to local government employers, where it was content-based law for which there was no compelling justification, and where state officials failed to demonstrate statute should be reviewed under more relaxed standard applicable to speech restrictions in nonpublicfora, because they failed to show that state could properly assert proprietary interest in controlling access to payroll systems that constituted fora, caselaw suggested authority over local governments state possessed by operation of law was not enough to associate local workplaces or payroll deduction programs with state, and state officials adduced no specific evidence state owned, administered, or controlled payroll deduction programs. Pocatello Educ. Ass'n v. Heideman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 1053, 1057-1068

First Amendment protects artist's sale of the artist's original artwork, and city applied wrong First Amendment standard in its First Amendment exception to its vendor-permitting policy, only allowing exception for sale of merchandise carrying or constituting political, religious, philosophical or ideological message. White v. City of Sparks (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 953, 955-957

Threatened criminal prosecution of owners of websites offering voters mechanisms for vote swapping and vote exchange violated their First Amendment rights, where owners had First Amendment interest vote-swapping mechanisms and communication and vote swaps that mechanisms enabled, and where state's legitimate interests of preventing corruption, preventing fraud and preventing subversion of Electoral College did not support threatened criminal prosecution. Porter v. Bowen (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1009, 1018-1026

District properly denied claim of Christian evangelists that city officials implemented "heckler's veto" that was impermissible viewpoint discrimination by responding to complaints by citizens who were hostile to Christian message, where there was no evidence police officers who responded to incidents involving evangelists knew about, agreed with or adopted any views of complainants, and evidence showed city was concerned about unacceptable noise levels, not content of Christian message. City did not exercise viewpoint discrimination by exercising unbridled discretion over volume, where police commissioner's discretion to issue permits was guided by statutory criteria, and decisions to deny evangelists permits were based on fact that proposed use of amplified sound was unsuitable for area covered by requested permit under statutory criteria. Finally, city did not engage in impermissible viewpoint discrimination by making no legitimate showing of probable cause when citing evangelists under Pen. Code § 415 for maliciously and willfully disturbing others, where both incidents of citation were legitimately based on probable cause, and where, even if probable cause were lacking, two isolated incidents did not amount to pattern or policy of abusive citation under § 415, given that two unrelated individuals prompted complaints and two different officers responded. Rosenbaum v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2007) 484 F.3d 1142, 1157-1163

City ordinance prohibiting soliciting in specified area as part of city's effort to revitalize downtown area was unconstitutional on its face as violating First Amendment, where ordinance was content-based and did not represent least restrictive means of achieving city's stated goals of protecting potential visitors from aggressive or intrusive solicitation, eliminating obstructions to free movement of pedestrians, and protecting local merchant economy. Further, city ordinance prohibiting use of portables in same area for distribution of literature was limitation on expressive activity protected by Constitution to extent tables facilitated dissemination of First Amendment speech. American Civil Liberties Union of Nevada v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2006) 466 F.3d 784, 791-799

Church engaged in protected speech when its participants met in county public library for prayer, praise, and worship. Faith Center Church Evangelistic Ministries v. Glover (9th Cir. 2006) 462 F.3d 1194, 1202

Defendants contributing to organization designated as terrorist organization by State Department could be prosecuted under 8 U.S.C. § 1189, assigning criminal penalties to one who knowingly provides material support orresources to foreign terrorist organization or attempts or conspires to do so, because what defendants proposed to do was not to engage in speech, but rather to provide material assistance. United States v. Afshari (9th Cir. 2005) 426 F.3d 1150, 1159-1162

Criminal statutory scheme barring giving of material support to foreign organizations designated as terrorist by State Department [8 U.S.C. § 2339B] does not violate First Amendment right of association by denying accused opportunity to challenge foreign terrorist organization designation and depriving them of First Amendment right to make contributions, when giving money to perfectly legitimate political expression within United States can be restricted by Congress consistent with Constitution, so that a fortiori, contribution of money to organizations engaging in terrorism, as well as expressing political agenda with speech, can be restricted by Congress. United States v. Afshari (9th Cir. 2004) 392 F.3d 1031, 1037-1040

First Amendment prohibition of compelled speech does not apply when excise tax is used to produce message indisputably coming from government itself. Thus, state excise tax imposed on cigarette sales, part of which was used for media campaign designed to raise public awareness of deleterious effects of smoking and to effect reduction in tobacco use, was not unconstitutional as compelled subsidization of speech. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. v. Shewry (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 1126, 1131-1141

Operating restrictions in county ordinance prohibiting provision of services by adult entertainment businesses between 1:00 a.m. and 8:00 a.m. on Monday through Saturday or 1:00 a.m. and noon on Sunday were constitutional under secondary effects test, when predominate concerns motivating ordinance were secondary effects of adult speech because ordinance was designed to combat secondary effects of adult entertainment establishments on surrounding community, including effects on crime rates, property values, and quality of city's neighborhoods. Further, requiring managers to obtain work permits was reasonable time, place, and manner restriction because adult businesses are associated with variety of secondary effects, such as presence of organized crime and money laundering, which directly involve employees in management positions. Ban on "specific sexual activity" was not reasonable time, place, and manner restriction because there was no way for adult entertainment business to comply with ordinance, unless it simply ceased to engage in protected expression entirely and ban was not necessary to serve county's unquestioned significant interest in ameliorating secondary effects. Dream Palace v. County of Maricopa (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 990, 1012-1021

University student failed to state claim for violation of First Amendment rights either by administrators and university law enforcement officers placing lock on door of university newspaper office after student informed them he had box of confidential student records and by removing handbills advertising press conference that were posted in area not approved for posting, when even if First Amendment or state's exceptionally strong shield law entitled student to reporter's privilege protecting his news-gathering work, privilege did not avail because he voluntarily returned box of confidential student records to university administrators and officers and administrators and officers complied with Fourth Amendment and did not interfere with publication of news since student remained free to write about university's handling or mishandling of confidential student records and he remained in possession of summary of records he compiled and placed on hard drive of his computer; and when unapproved areas were not public for a or designated public fora because university did not intend to open them for expression as manifested by university's bulletin board posting policy, andregulation of students speech in nonpublic fora was not viewpoint-based, since all fliers were removed in one place and with regard to selectively removed fliers elsewhere on campus, no allegation connected any defendants to their removal, and regulation of speech in nonpublic forum was reasonable in light of purpose served by fora because hallways, doorways, and columns of campus were designated off-limits to fliers primarily for aesthetic

City's prohibitions of leafleting, vending, solicitation, and use of tables in pedestrian mall were unconstitutional, because mall was traditional public forum. Although ban on leafleting was content-neutral, it was clearly not narrowly tailored, nor did it leave open ample alternative channels for communication. By placing decision to authorize vending wholly within discretion of company official operating mall, ordinance created situation ripe for abuse in violation of First Amendment. Because solicitation and use of tables are expressive activities protected under First Amendment, district court would need to determine on remand whether City was able to show restrictions were narrowly tailored to serve significant government interest without burdening substantially more speech than necessary to further government's legitimate interests. ACLU of Nevada v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 1092, 1106-1109

Enjoining federal government from revoking physician's license to prescribe controlled substances or conducting investigation of physician that might lead to revocation when basis for government's action is solely physician's professional "recommendation" of use of medical marijuana was proper to protect physicians' First Amendment rights, when injunction was not intended to limit government's ability to investigate doctors who aid and abet actual distribution and possession of marijuana, and government did not provide any empirical evidence to demonstrate that injunction interfered with or threatened to interfere with any legitimate law enforcement activities. Conant v. Walters (9th Cir. 2002) 309 F.3d 629, 632

Night club owners stated actionable claim for violation of First Amendment by offering undisputed evidence that city withdrew its offer to settle nuisance abatement action because of owners' choice of music format, because city learned they were still playing rap music occasionally and intended to doso at party on New Year's Eve, and city agreed to continue postponing abatement hearing, which was critical for owners to pursue negotiations to sell club, only after owners agreed never to play rap music again. RK Ventures, Inc. v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1045, 1063

Municipal charitable solicitation ordinance requirement of information card endorsement was form of compelled speech that should have been subject to exacting First Amendment scrutiny requiring municipality to show compelling need to force disclosure and whether ordinance was precisely tailored. Gospel Missions of America v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1099, 1106

In action under federal Freedom of Access to Clinics Entrances Act (FACE) [18 U.S.C. § 248], which gives aggrieved persons right of action against whoever by "threat of force" intentionally intimidates person because person is or has been providing reproductive health services, defendant's conduct amounted to true threat and was not protected speech, where defendant was aware that "wanted"-type poster would likely be interpreted as serious threat of death or bodily harm by plaintiffs, who were doctors in reproductive health services community identified on one, given previous pattern of "WANTED" posters identifying specific physician followed by that physician's murder, and same was true of posting about plaintiffs on part of "Nuremberg Files" website where lines were drawn through names of doctors who provided abortion services and who had been killed or wounded. Planned Parenthood of the Columbia/Willamette, Inc. v. American Coalition of Life Activists (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1058, 1077-1088

Conviction under state statute of participating in criminal street gang, based on former gang member discussing organization of his former gang with members of another street gang, unconstitutionally violated defendant's First Amendment rights, when advice defendant gave to gang was nothing more than abstract advocacy of overarching gang philosophy lacking specific intent to further or promote criminal acts, when circumstances of speech at barbeque and social party made it unlikely anyone would act on it immediately, and when advice was very general and abstract as it was not aimed at any particular person or particular time. McCoy v. Stewart (9th Cir. 2002) 282 F.3d 626

While community college's prohibition of verbal threats interfering with employee's safety in workplace as workplace violence is facially constitutional, policy was unconstitutionally applied, when professor's statements regarding president were not true threats, but were hyperbole of sort found in non-mainstream political invective, and when college's rights were not impermissibly burdened by professor's expression. Bauer v. Sampson (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 775

Profanity expressing disapproval of National Park Service rangers' conduct in making arrest, which was not likely to provoke violent response from trained officer, was not fighting words, but fell within protection of First Amendment and did not provide lawful basis for conviction of disorderly conduct. United States v. Poocha (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1077, 1079-1082

Court administrator's conduct in sending two court clerks to attend training seminar despite two supervising judge's instruction to limit attendees at training seminars to court employees who had worked in his reelection campaign and these clerks had not, was protected speech under First Amendment, where administrator testified that she intended by her conduct to convey message to court clerks and co-workers that judge should not condition court clerks's benefits on working in his reelection campaign, and court clerks and coemployees testified that they understood that message, so that administrator's expressive conduct possessed sufficient communicative elements to bring First Amendment into play. Nunez v. Davis (9th Cir. 1999) 169 F.3d 1222, 1226

Contributions to political campaigns are protected speech under the First Amendment. *Austin v. Michigan Chamber of Commerce (1990) 494 U.S. 652, 657, 110 S. Ct. 1391, 108 L. Employee speech on matters of public concern, but not complaints over internal office affairs, is protected under the First Amendment. Connick v. Myers (1983) 461 U.S. 138, 147, 103 S. Ct. 1684, 75 L. Ed. 2d 708 ; Weisbuch v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 778, 784

City ordinance regulating distribution of food in public parks was not subject to facial challenge as violating First Amendment because food distribution generally is notexpressive activity protected by First Amendment. Whether food distribution could be expressive activity protected by First Amendment under particular circumstances was question to be decided in as-applied challenge. Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1032

City ordinance requiring person who wishes to sit or lie on city sidewalk at specified times for specific kinds of events to obtain permit does not violate First Amendment on its face, when ordinance does not regulate speech or patently expressive conduct. Amster v. City of Tempe (9th Cir. 2001) 248 F.3d 1198

State university professor's removal of handbills publicizing appearance of former colleague at conference to be held on campus constituted First Amendment violation, when handbills were speech in that they were posted for purpose of conveying information, and when removal of handbills denied former colleague access to public forum and removal of handbills constituted viewpoint discrimination in that professor sought to silence speech only by former colleague rather than speech by all non-university speakers or all speakers promoting conference and its participants. Giebel v. Sylvester (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1182

City violated First Amendment rights of two artists by creating public forum in exhibition of work of local artists in new city hall under contract with private organization to manage program, and then excluding their works without compelling governmental interest, when although children might pass through hallways, city conceded that artworks were not obscene, it was beyond peradventure that works had serious artistic value and city offered no evidence that children would be harmed by or even saw artworks, when mere fact that works caused controversy was patently insufficient to justify their suppression, and when city's standard for disapproval of works in exhibition failed narrow tailoring requirement because it did not adequately limit discretion of city in approving or disapproving artwork to be exhibited. Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067

Provisions of Food and Drug Administration Modernization Act of 1997 prohibiting drug providers from promoting or advertising particular compounded drugs violated First Amendment free speech protections afforded to group of pharmacists, when prohibited speech, although commercial, neither was inherently misleading nor concerned unlawful activity, when although two of three of government's stated interests served by speechrestriction were substantial, government failed to show how speech restriction directly advanced government interests of protecting public, and when speech restrictions were more extensive than necessary to achieve asserted government interests, since there were clear alternatives to advance government's asserted interests in manner far less intrusive to pharmacist's free speech rights. Western States Medical Center v. Shalala (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1090 , aff'd sub nom. Thompson v. Western States Med. Ctr. (2002) 535 U.S. 357, 122 S. Ct. 1497, 152 L. Ed. 2d 563

Rejection of application for coverage of cost of city services for local observance of National Day of Prayer as part of annual observance, under civic events fund established to encourage civic events, on ground of fund's explicit policy of not funding events held in direct support of religious organizations violated free speech rights of event organizers, when local observance was protected expressive conduct; when, although fund was nontraditional public form from which speakers could be excluded if inconsistent with fund's purpose to encourage and support civic events, observance had civic character fitting comfortably within general subject matter of events for which fund was created so that decision to exclude event was content-based discrimination was not consistent with fund's purposes; when reimbursement of costs of observance would not be direct support of religion in constitutional sense, since minimal and diffuse benefits to members of Jewish and Christian religious organizations more than members of other faith traditions or nonreligious members of public at large did not amount to constitutionally impermissible support of religion; and when even if exclusion were reasonable, city could not reject coverage based on viewpoint that most relevant manner to address important social concerns for which local observance was established in part, was through expressive acts of worship, singing, and prayer. Gentala v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 2000) 213 F.3d 1055

Portion of Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 proscribing computer images not involving use of real children in production or dissemination, thus criminalizing generation of images of fictitious children engaged in imaginary but explicit sexual conduct, violates free speech protections of First Amendment and government's articulated compelling state interest cannot justify criminal proscriptionwhen no actual children are involved. Free Speech Coalition v. Reno (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1083

Neither First Amendment nor Religious Freedom Restoration Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000bb-1, required city to retain as member of its Human Rights Commission a minister who made public statements explicitly condemning homosexuality as a sin and implicitly endorsing violence against homosexuals, which were antithetical to Commission's official charge to eliminate prejudice and discrimination because of, among other things, sexual orientation and to officially encourage private persons and groups to promote and provide equal oportunity for and good will toward all people; although First Amendment strictly protects freedom of expression, government, as employer, has latitude to protect its operations and policies from subversion by its own personnel, and city's interest in eliminating prejudice and discrimination prevailed over minister's First Amendment interest in condemning homosexuality while serving as a voting member of city's Human Rights Commission. Lumpkin v. Brown (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 1498, 1500-1501

Although public employee speech on matters of public concern merits highest degree of First Amendment protection if it helps citizens make informed decisions about operation of their government, private transmission of case citations from police officer who chose to remain anonymous to prosecutor to advise prosecutors on search and seizure issues should similar situations arise in the future, which allegedly resulted in officer's transfer to another jurisdiction, did not constitute a matter of public concern sufficient to meet threshold requirement for First Amendment retaliation lawsuit. Roe v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 578, 585-586

Sections of Communications Decency Act of 1996, 47 U.S.C. § 223(a)(1)(A)(ii) and 223(a)(2), can be construed so as to render them constitutionally valid, where in light of prior case law and statutory history, it is possible to read them as applying only to "obscene" communications. Apollomedia Corp. v. Reno (N.D. Cal. 1998) 19 F. Supp. 2d 1081 , aff'd, 526 U.S. 1061, 119 S. Ct. 1450, 143 L. Ed. 2d 538 (1999)

Comic book depictions of well-known performers were entitled to First Amendment protection in action by performers for appropriation of likeness, where comic book characters were not just conventional depictions of plaintiffs, but contained significant expressive content other than plaintiffs' mere likenesses. Winter v. DC Comics (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 881, 887-892, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 634, 69 P.3d 473

Although artist's lithographs with likenesses of Three Stooges did not lose First Amendment protections by being sold and being used to create T-shirts that were sold, enforcement of judgment against him for violation of Civ. Code § 3344.1 (former Civ. Code § 990), which prohibits use of likeness of deceased personality without prior consent from deceased's heirs and assignees, did not violate First Amendment, whenartistic expression took form of literal depiction or imitation of celebrity for commercial gain, thus directly trespassing on right of publicity without adding significant expression beyond trespass, so that state law interest in protecting fruits of artistic labor outweighed expressive interests of artist; had work contained significant transformative elements, it would be especially worthy of First Amendment protection and less likely to interfere with economic interest protected by right of publicity, so that First Amendment protection would outweigh whatever interest state may have in enforcing right of publicity. Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 387, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 126, 21 P.3d 797

California plum marketing program issued by state Secretary of Food and Agriculture, which is funded by plum producers and compels them to fund generic advertising about plums, does not implicate individual producer's First Amendment right to freedom of speech, but does implicate producer's right to freedom of speech under free speech clause of Cal. Const., art. I. Gerawan Farming, Inc. v. Lyons (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 468, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 470, 12 P.3d 720

In action for defamation based on anonymous postings on financial bulletin board on Internet, plaintiff's ability to discover identity of anonymous poster through subpoena to message board host had to be weighed against poster's long-recognized First Amendment right to speak anonymously; plaintiff was required to make prima facie showing of elements of libel to overcome poster's motion to quash subpoena, and language of Internet posts, together with surrounding circumstances compelled conclusion that statements of which plaintiff complained were not actionable. Applicability of First Amendment to speech on message board also foreclosed cause of action for interference with business relationships. Krinsky v. Doe 6 (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1154, 1162-1179, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 231

Civil Code § 1785.11.2, known as "security freeze" law, which allows California consumers to prevent dissemination of their credit reports, was unconstitutional as applied to credit reporting agency providing consumer credit reports to landowners who rent and lease apartments and property managers, whether or not it was considered commercial speech, where agency's consumer credit reports neither related to unlawful activity nor were misleading, and where, although asserted government interest in protecting consumers from identity theft was substantial and compelling state interest, there was no evidence that § 1785.11.2 directly and materially advanced government's asserted interest in protecting consumers from identity theft. Also, the court held that restriction was excessive because it swept more broadly than necessary to serve government interest in protecting consumers from identity theft. However, in terms of facial challenge, there was no total and fatal conflict between § 1785.11.2 and First Amendment, where there were logically conceivable circumstances under which consumer could forestall release of credit information federal and state constitutions did not protect, such as a false credit report. U.D. Registry, Inc. v. State of California (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 405, 417-430, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647

In action for appropriation of likeness by celebrity who was former member of rock group against manufacturers of videogame, trial court properly held that videogame was protected by First Amendment, where, notwithstanding similarities, videogame character was more than mere likeness or literal depiction of plaintiff and contained sufficient expressive content to constitute transformative work; where videogame character was not literal depiction of plaintiff and defendants added creative elements to create new expression; and where transformative test specifically did not require videogame character to say something factual, critical or comedic about plaintiff to receive First Amendment protection. *Kirby v. Civ. Code § 2527(c), (d) (requiring every prescription drug claims processor in California to conduct or obtain results of studies identifying fees, separate from ingredient costs, of all or statistically significant sample of California pharmacies, for pharmaceutical dispensing services to private consumers no less often than every 24 months, and to transmit the studies by certified mail to chief executive officer or designee of each client for whom it performs claims processing services no less often than every 24 months) and Civ. Code § 2528 (providing statutory damages plus reasonable attorney's fees and costs, declaratory and injunctive relief, and other relief deemed proper for violation of § 2527(c), (d)) were unconstitutional as compelled speech. Statutes required transmission of specific content so as to be content-based regulation of speech implicating drug claims processors' right to freedom of speech. Further, speech was not commercial speech, thus requiring strict scrutiny, and requiring drug claims processors to provide cost studies to insurers was not narrowly tailored means of achieving compelling state interest nor did it have least restrictive impact on processors' right to free speech. ARP Pharmacy Svcs., Inc. v. Gallagher Bassett Svcs., Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1307, 1314-1322, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 256

Administrator of 4-H program was entitled to qualified immunity in action for violation of First Amendment free speech rights brought by club members and adult leader who had been suspended while administrator investigated whether members, who participated in making film depicting violent behavior, posed risk of violent behavior, when there was no federal constitutional violation. Adult leader had no part in filmmaking project, so that if administrator punished adult leader at all, punishment was unrelated to any speechor other expressive act by adult leader so that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim did not allege violation of adult leader's constitutional right to free speech. As to members who had participated in film, administrator was shown expressive work of art raising concerns about possibility of future violence, and suspended plaintiffs for short period of time while she conducted investigation to determine whether they and other participants in project were threat to others, and temporary suspension did not violate plaintiffs' First Amendment rights. Robbins v. Regents of University of California (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 653, 661-664, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 851

Injunction requiring 15-year-old boy to stay away from 16-year-old former girlfriend based on letters he wrote to harass girl's mother did not violate boy's First Amendment free speech rights, when speech was between purely private parties, about purely private parties, on matters of purely private interest. Trial court did not err in considering as evidence of harassment song lyrics boy quoted in one letter, when by including lyric in letter, boy was not singing or otherwise attempting to entertain, but used lyric to ridicule and annoy mother. Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1409-1410, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609

Rev. & Tax. Code § 19714, allowing State Board of Equalization to impose penalty on taxpayer who institutes or maintains proceedings primarily for delay or if it appears taxpayer's position in proceedings was frivolous or groundless or that taxpayer unreasonably failed to pursue available administrative remedies, does not violate First Amendment free speech rights, because it is content-neutral in penalizing conduct outside First Amendment protection, not expression of views. Neufeld v. State Bd. of Equalization (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 1476-1479, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 423

Rent control ordinance prohibiting landlords from making bad faith threats of eviction and providing that tenant's waiver of rights was void unless tenant was represented by independent counsel was unconstitutional content-based regulation of speech understate and federal speech protections. Regulation was not permissible because it addressed false commercial speech, since regulation penalized certain types of speech regardless of whether speech was motivated by economic considerations, so both commercial and noncommercial speech were regulated. In addition, provision regulated speech that was neither false nor inherently misleading, and it was not narrowly tailored to serve governmental interest. Baba v. Board of Supervisors (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 504, 512-521, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428

Civ. Code § 47.5, allowing peace officers to bring defamation claims against those filing complaints against them for "misconduct, criminal conduct, or incompetence" with their employers if complaint is knowingly false and made with "spite, hatred, or ill will," does not violate First Amendment, because § 47.5 makes actionable only formal complaints against peace officers based on knowingly false statements of fact, which is speech that is constitutionally unprotected, and there is no realistic possibility that § 47.5 results in official suppression of ideas. Loshonkohl v. Kinder (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 510, 514-519, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114

Actions of California Highway Patrol in directing anti-abortion protesters to desist from standing on sidewalks of freeway overpasses during rush hours and holding signs, visible to motorists below on freeways, communicatingtheir views concerning abortion, in response to reports of freeway congestion caused by those activities did not violate protesters' free speech rights. Highway Patrol's actions were not based on content of message, served significant governmental interest of allowing traffic to flow freely on freeways, and left open ample alternatives for protesters to communicate their message in other forums. Sanctity of Human Life Network v. Cal. Highway Patrol (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 858, 869-872, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 708

Conduct of dumping gallons of garbage on floor of schoolroom during school board meeting was sufficient to support arrest for disturbing public meeting under Pen. Code § 403 and was not speech protected by First Amendment. McMahon v. Albany Unif. Schl. Dist. (2003) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1275, 1283-1291, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

Civ. Code § 47.5, allowing defamation action by peace officer against individual who files complaint against officer if complaint is false, made with knowledge it was false, and made with spite, hatred, or ill will, is unconstitutional content-based regulation, when (1) it restricts defamatory speech against peace officers while leaving intact privilege under Civ. Code § 47 for defamatory speech against all other public officials so that whether speech is actionable depends solely on its content and statute discriminates based on viewpoint since it makes actionable only defamatory complaint against police officer and defamatory statement by officer or other witness about complainant or anyone else is not actionable; (2) it does not single out especially egregious defamatory speech as basis for civil liability because it does not make actionable only more injurious defamatory speech, such as that accusing officer of committing crime, but includes allegations of ordinary misconduct or incompetence; (3) there was no basis for concluding § 47.5 was justified based on secondary effects associated with kind of speech it regulates; (4) there was no basis for concluding that there is no realistic possibility of official suppression of ideas because § 47.5 makes speech actionable or not depending solely on target of speech; and (5) § 47.5 is supported by governmental interest of deterring false complaints against law enforcement officers which might inhibit them in vigorous performance of their duties, which is important, but not so compelling to justify engaging in content-based speech discrimination, and is not narrowly tailored to promote that interest, since there are ways other than content-based discrimination to insure peace officers' careers are not unduly jeopardized by unfounded citizen complaints, which Legislature has already taken. Walker v. Kiousis (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 69

Pub. Util. Code § 453(d), which prohibits inclusion of specified political literature by public utility with any bill for services or commodities furnished to customer or subscriber, violates First Amendment protection of speech on its face, when public utilities have right to freedom of speech, and newsletters discussing political matters included by utilities with their bills include discussion of matters of public concern that First Amendment both fully protects and implicitly encourages; when § 453(d) is content-related, as utility would be free to include newsletter with billing so long as newsletter does not contain discussion of restricted political issues, so that § 453(d) cannot be upheld as content-neutral time, place, or manner restriction; when § 453(d) is impermissible subject-matter regulation since it attempts to restrict public utilities' discussion of entire topics; and when § 453(d) cannot be justified as narrowly tailored means of serving compelling state interest. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Public Utilities Commission (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 86, 102

Cal. Rptr. 2d 20

Peaceful picketing is constitutionally protected as incident of free speech; to justify limitation or restriction of union's right of free speech by limitation or restriction on picketing, employer must demonstrate "compelling public interest." United Food & Commercial Workers Union v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 566, 574, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849

Pen. Code § 288.2(b), prohibiting distribution or exhibition of lewd matter to minor by Internet, does not violate First Amendment prohibition of restriction of speech, even though it is content-based restriction on speech, since purpose of § 288.2(b) (i.e., to prevent particular of message from reaching minors in order to provoke in them arousal of sexual desire) cannot be served without referring to speech it seeks to restrict (i.e., cannot be justified without reference to content of Internet transmission) where § 288.2(b) serves compelling interest of protecting children from material harmful to them even if not obscene by adult standards; and where § 288.2(b) is not unconstitutionally overbroad or vague. People v. Hsu (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 976, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

First Amendment does not protect advertising statements made on book and videotape covers that reiterate verifiably false factual statements contained in books and videotape themselves since this advertising is commercial speech not protected by First Amendment, and regulated under California's Unfair Trade Practices Act, *Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 et seq., 17500 et seq. School district properly refused to post sign proffered by private party containing Ten Commandments at high school baseball field in response to district's fund raising campaign, where, although religious activity typically involves expressive speech and is protected by First Amendment, as matter of law, it is subordinate to establishment clause concerns. DiLoreto v. Board of Educ. of Downey Unif. Sch. Dist. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 267, 280, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 791

City's refusal to approve application for permit to operate adult business contravened First Amendment, where city required that adult businesses be at least 400 feet from residences and barred adult business from industrial area because of wedge-shaped sliver of undeveloped land that was zoned for any use, and while reasonable location limits to keep adult businesses apart from residential zones are constitutional, principle cannot be twisted into per se rule that any time adult business might be located within given distance of any land zoned residential location limit is always constitutional as applied; where city's retroactive preclusionary zoning of area in which property on which adult business was to be opened was located, after owner first filed application, functioned as discretionary refusal to grant permit, so that by changing rules of game while it was being played, effect was to confer on city arbitrary power to censorspeech; and where city could not advance its "image" as basis for denying permit, since city has no legitimate interest in protecting its "image" qua image as against free speech rights of its citizens. Gammoh v. City of Anaheim (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 186, 191-192, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 194

City ordinance prohibiting total nudity in adult-oriented business by prohibiting owners or other persons with managerial control from permitting any person on premises to engage in live showing of human male or female genitals, pubic area, or buttocks with less than fully opaque covering, and/or female breasts with less than fully opaque covering over any part of nipple or areola and/or covered male genitals in discernibly turgid state is constitutional. Tily B. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15-19, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6

Popular entertainment is entitled to same constitutional protection as exposition of political ideas; film, whether exhibited in theaters or on television, is protected by constitutional guarantees of free expression, which is not diminished when film makers advertise and sell work as mass public entertainment. Thus, private individual was not entitled to recover under commercial appropriation of name or likeness theory merely because maker of film that was fanciful work of fiction and imagination used name that sounded like individual's name or employed actor who resembled individual as a child. *Polydoros v. [3] Time, Place, and Manner Regulations

Municipal ordinance requiring permit to conduct event in public park involving more than 50 individuals is content-neutral time, place, and manner regulation of use of a public forum, when ordinance is not directed to communicative activity, but to all activity in public park, and object of ordinance and permit system is not to exclude communication of particular content, but to coordinate multiple uses of limited space, assure preservation of park facilities, prevent dangerous, unlawful, or impermissible uses, and assure financial accountability for damage caused by event. Further, ordinance does not vest unduly broad discretion in licensing official to grant or deny permit, when park district can only deny permit for reason set forth in ordinance and must explain reasons for denial, providing narrowly drawn, reasonable, and definite standards. Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist. (2002) 534 U.S. 316, 122 S. Ct. 775, 779-781, 151 L. Ed. 2d 783

City ordinance prohibiting knowingly or intentionally appearing in public in state of nudity was content-neutral regulation that did not violate First Amendment, when city's efforts to protect public health and safety were within city's police powers; ordinance furthered important governmental interests, unrelated to suppression of expression, of regulating conduct through public nudity ban and combating harmful secondary effects associated with nude dancing; and restriction was no greater than essential to furtherance of governmental interest. City of Erie v. Pap's A. M. (2000) 529 U.S. 277, 120 S. Ct. 1382, 146 L. Ed. 2d 265

State statute making it unlawful for any person within 100 feet of health care facility's entrance to knowingly approach within eight feet of another without person's consent, to pass leaflet or handbill to, display sign to, or engage in oral protest, education, or counseling with that person is permissible time, place, and manner restriction on speech-related conduct, when statute is regulation not of speech but of places where some speech may occur; when statute was not adopted because of disagreement with message speech conveys as it makes no reference to content of speech; when state's interests in protecting access to health care facilities and privacy and providing police with clear guidelines are unrelated to content of speech; and when statute is narrowly tailored to serve significant and legitimate governmental interests, leaving open ample alternative channels for communication. Hill v. Colorado (2000) 530 U.S. 703, 120 S. Ct. 2480, 147 L. Ed. 2d 597

Federal injunction imposing 36-foot buffer zone against abortion protesters around front of abortion clinic and requiring protesters to remain on the sidewalk across the street was valid time, place, and manner regulation since government's combined interests in protecting privacy and safety of patients, medical staff, and residents, and ensuring access to clinic were sufficient to justify injunction tailored to protect these interests, and injunction burdened no more speech than necessary to protect these interests; limited noise reduction provision was also justifiable; however, injunctive provisions that created buffer zone on side and rear of clinic, that banned "all images" observable within the clinic, that restrained protesters from making uninvited physical approaches to any person within 300 feet of the clinic, and that created wide "buffer zone" around clinic owners' residences were unnecessarily broad restrictions on speech. Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc. (1994) 512 U.S. 753, 114 S. Ct. 2516, 129 L. Ed. 2d 593, 610-614

Regulation of activity involving public solicitation for immediate donation or payment of funds implicates liberty of speech clause of California Constitution [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2] and free speech protection of federal Constitution, but should not be considered content based or constitutionally suspect under California or federal Constitutions. *Int'l Soc. for Krishna Consciousness v. P.2d 334

Regulation of time, place, or manner of protected speech must be narrowly tailored to serve government's legitimate content-neutral interests, but is not required to be least-restrictive or least-intrusive means of doing so; requirement of narrow tailoring is satisfied so long as regulation promotes substantial government interest that would be achieved less effectively absent regulation. Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 798-799, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; City of San Jose v. Superior Court (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 330, 340-341, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205

Municipalities may impose reasonable restrictions on time, place, or manner of protected speech, provided restrictions are content-neutral, are narrowly tailored to serve significant government interest, and leave open ample alternative channels for communication of information; in determining whether ordinance is content-neutral, principal inquiry is whether government has adopted regulation of speech because of disagreement with message it conveys. Ward v. Rock Against Racism (1989) 491 U.S. 781, 791, 109 S. Ct. 2746, 105 L. Ed. 2d 661 ; Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 551

Rule requiring street performers at public park and entertainment complex to obtain permits before performing and to wear badge displaying permit while performing was not valid time, place, and manner regulation, where permitting requirements had impermissibly broad scope, did not meaningfully promote city's asserted interests, and addressed interests that could have been achieved through means far less intrusive than individual speaker registration requirement. There was genuine issue of material fact as to whether city met its burden of justifying rule setting out specified locations for street performances and establishing first-come, first-served rule for using locations, where city's evidence that, before introduction of location restriction, it received weekly complaints from park tenants about street performers blocking entranceways and egresses and that street performers regularly engaged in disruptive and volatile territorial disputes met its burden of establishing that significant problem existed, and there was conflicting evidence concerning whether dedicated locations provided street performers with adequate access to intended audience. Rule allowing only passive solicitation of funds by street performers was content-based regulation that did not satisfy exacting standard for valid content-based regulation. Rule prohibiting any communication, by street performers or anyone else, within 30 feet of visitors to complex who were waiting in line, attending event, or sitting in spot available for eating or drinking was unconstitutional "captive audience" regulation, where even if city could have justified a prohibition on unwelcome speech, regulation was too broad because it prohibited all "speech activities," not just those that continued after recipient signaled preference to be left alone, and even if city's purported interest in protecting certain park-goers from communications by others were substantial, rule was not narrowly tailored to meet that interest. Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2009) 569 F.3d 1029, 1035-1057

Provision of town's sign ordinance prohibiting all signs without permit, subject to 19 enumerated exemptions ranging from directional signs to ideological and political signs, did not violate First Amendment rights of church by regulating its deployment of temporary directional signs, where portion of ordinance regulated physical characteristics, such as size, number, and construction of signs, location of placement, and timing of display, none of which implicated content of speech, where portion of ordinance defining "qualifying event signs" to which it applied as any assembly, gathering, activity, or meeting sponsored, arranged or promoted by religious, charitable, community service, educational or other similar non-profit organization" did not mention any idea or viewpoint or single one out for differential treatment; where ordinance was narrowly tailored, as it did not sweep in more speech than necessary to achieve town's aesthetic and traffic control objectives, and church had ample alternative channels of communicating its invitation to church services; and where ordinance did not favor commercial speech over non-commercial speech. However, although ideological signs, political signs, and qualifying event signs were all exempted from permit requirement and treated favorably in that respect, each category faced different restrictions and requirements, and district court did not address whether church was likely to succeed on merits of its claim that ordinance impermissibly discriminated among certain forms of noncommercial speech, requiring remand. Reed v. Town of Gilbert (9th Cir. 2009) 587 F.3d 966, 973-981

City ordinance prohibiting leafleting of unoccupied vehicles parked on city streets violated First Amendment as not narrowly tailored to serve significant government interests, where, assuming prevention of litter could constitute sufficiently significant government interest to justify interference with free speech, city failed to provide any evidence that placing leaflets on parked cars resulted in any litter, much less more-than-minimal amount of additional litter; and where protection of private property was not sufficiently substantial government interest to justify across-the-board ban on placing leaflets on windshields of empty vehicles parked on public streets. Under California law, vehicle-leafleting ban could not be justified by interest in protecting private property rights of recipients of leaflets. Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196, 1201-1207

Open-ended standard in city's parade ordinance, combined with absence of requirement that officials articulate their reasons or administrative-judicial review process, vested chief of police with sweeping authority to determine whether parade could utilize forum of streets to broadcast its message, and unduly broad discretion was prohibited by First Amendment as placing unfettered discretion in hands of licensing officials and rendered parade ordinance constitutionally defective on its face. Seattle Affiliate of the October 22nd Coalition to Stop Police Brutality, Repression and the Criminalization of a Generation v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 550 F.3d 788, 798-803

To extent protestors' blockade in protest of high speed ferry constituted symbolic speech, Coast Guard's rule establishing security zone around harbor to allow ferry to dock was reasonable time, place, and manner restriction. Wong v. Bush (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 732, 736

Application of Cal. Pen. Code § 626.8, prohibiting disruptive entry onto school grounds, was not a reasonable time, place, or manner regulation of plaintiff's activities in driving around middle school in truck displaying large, graphic photographs of first-term aborted fetuses on sides of truck, where, although language of § 626.8 did not indicate intent to suppress speech of certain content, lack of purpose did not render application of statute to plaintiffs' speech content-neutral, and disruptions caused by plaintiffs' conduct were all result of students' reactions to plaintiffs' message, and where there is no precedent for "minors" exception to prohibition on banning speech because of listeners' reaction to its content. Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. Los Angeles County Sheriff Dept. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 780, 786-793

Comprehensive zoning ordinance governing operation of adult entertainment businesses within county's jurisdiction, restricting hours in which businesses could operate, requiring removal of doors on peep show booths, and limiting adult entertainment establishment to areas of county zoned for industrial use, stated rationale of which was to combat negative secondary effects including crime, disorderly conduct, blight, noise, traffic, property value depreciation, and unsanitary behavior concentrating in and around adult businesses did not violate either First Amendment or California Constitution, where hours-of-operation restriction survived intermediate scrutiny under California Constitution, and where county's requirement of open booths at peep shows did not violate First Amendment as it was supported by evidence of nexus between closed booths and adverse secondary effects such as prostitution and pandering, which county had substantial interest in regulating; ordinance was narrowly tailored because content, number, and availability of peep shows were untouched as ordinance dealt only with doors. Fantasyland Video, Inc. v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 2007) 505 F.3d 996, 1001-1005

County ordinance prohibiting residential picketing activity targeted at and within 300 feet of residential dwelling in unincorporated areas of county was valid time, place, and manner regulation, when ordinance was content neutral on its face and narrowly tailored to serve significant governmental interest of protecting residential tranquillity. In addition, despite problematic aspects, court could not say ordinance was unconstitutional in every application, primarily because ordinance did not have unconstitutional effect in test case leading to instant suit. Ordinance left open adequate alternatives to communicate to targeted resident and resident's neighbors by leaving open opportunity for general dissemination of picketer's message, including picketing in other neighborhoods, direct mail and telephone contact with those in neighborhood, and picketing more than 300 feet from targeted residence. Klein v. San Diego County (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 1029, 1033-1037

City ordinance establishing permitting process for community events held in public spaces was permissible time, place, and manner regulation, when ordinance had to be viewed as content-neutral time, place, and manner permitting scheme, not as scheme imposing subject matter censorship through prior restraint since no grounds for denying permit had anything to do with what speaker might say, ordinance was not directed to communicative activity as such, but rather to all activity conducted in public places, and object of permitting scheme was to coordinate multiple uses of limited space, assure preservation of facilities, prevent dangerous or unlawful uses or impermissible uses under rules, and assure financial accountability for damage caused by event rather than exclude expression based on particular content; and when challenged provisions of ordinance were narrowly tailored and left open ample alternatives for communication. Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1035-1049

Ordinance prohibiting aerial advertising was reasonable and viewpoint neutral restriction on speech in nonpublic forum given importance of preserving area's coastal and scenic visual beauty; banner towing prohibited by ordinance, although form of speech protected under First Amendment, was neither historically important form of communication nor speech with unique identifying attributes for which there was no practical substitute. Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. City & County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 2006) 448 F.3d 1101, 1108-1114

City's ordinance and policy of allowing private permittees of public property for events open to public to exclude speakers from events of whose speech permittees did not approve was not valid time, place, or manner regulation of public property allowing exclusion of speakers whose speech was form of expression protected by First Amendment, including preaching. Being required to allow expression by one of whose message permittee disapproved did not make speaker part of organizer's message for First Amendment purposes. Further, policy of allowing permittees unfettered discretion to exclude private citizens on any or no basis was not narrowly tailored to city's legitimate interest in protecting permittees' right not to be forced to include message of which permittees disapproved. Gathright v. City of Portland (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 573, 576-579

Ordinance restricting pole signs as carriers of communication within city's general commercial zones did not violate owners' First Amendment rights by impermissibly banning protected medium of expression. Pole sign restriction was not content based, government had significant interests in regulating pole signs, including preservation of city's aesthetic quality and protection of travel safety, ordinance permissibly and in narrowly tailored way limited prominence of plaintiffs' advertising sign by restricting its length and position, and although ordinance restricted availability of pole signs in city, and code said nothing about other non-sign-based forms of communication such as handbills, radio, television, newspaper or telemarketing. Further, even with regard to signage, code authorized wall signs, monument signs, awning and canopy signs, blade signs and overhanging signs, allowing plaintiffs reasonable opportunity to communicate their message. Additionally, sign code as whole was not facially unconstitutional and was reasonable time, place, and manner restriction. G.K. Ltd. Travel v. City of Lake Oswego (9th Cir. 2006) 436 F.3d 1064, 1071-1081

Emergency order prohibiting access to portions of downtown Seattle, Washington, during 1999 World Trade Organization conference was constitutional time, place, and mannerrestriction on speech on its face, when order was content-neutral and motivating factor in adopting order was city's observation that level of civil disturbances and danger to persons and property had been highest in areas in which there were protests in vicinity of meetings and need to ensure safety of delegates as well as downtown residents and workers; when order was narrowly tailored to serve significant governmental interest; and when order left protestors ample channels of communication. Further, order did not improperly give unfettered discretion to officers charged with enforcing it. However, statements of assistant police chief and others created genuine issue of material fact as to whether it was city policy to apply order in manner excluding only anti-WTO protestors, requiring reversal of district court's grant of summary judgment to city on constitutionality of order as applied. Menotti v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2005) 409 F.3d 1113, 1128-1148

City ordinance requiring adult cabaret dancers to remain two feet away from patrons during performances did not violate plaintiffs' First Amendment rights, when ordinance was not complete ban on expression. Intermediate scrutiny applied because ordinance was regulation of sexual or pornographic speech and reducing secondary effects of adult establishments was ordinance's primary purpose. Ordinance passed intermediate scrutiny, because reducing negative secondary effects of adult businesses was substantial governmental interest, two-foot rule was narrowly tailored to address problem of secondary effects from adult entertainment, and ordinance left alternate channels of communication open by allowing dancers to perform at two-foot distance. Gammoh v. City of La Habra (9th Cir. 2005) 395 F.3d 1114, 1121-1128

Forest Service regulations that make it illegal to use or occupy National Forest System land or facilities without special-use authorization for non-commercial group uses, which is activity conducted on National Forest System lands involving group of 75 or more people, is constitutional time, place, and manner restriction for public forum, because scheme is content-neutral, narrowly tailored to serve significant government interest, and leaves open ample alternatives for communication. United States v. Adams (9th Cir. 2004) 388 F.3d 708, 710-711 ; Black v. Arthur (9th Cir. 2000) 201 F.3d 1120, 1123 ; United States v. Linick (9th Cir. 1999) 195 F.3d 538, 540

Agricultural association's First Amendment expression policy prohibiting individuals from demonstrating except in designated "free expression zones," none of which was near entrance to building, was not permissible time, place, and manner regulation, when association provided no evidence that protest activity was threat to financial success of its facility or in any other regard more than mere annoyance to patrons, when association failed to meet burden of proving that demonstrators handing out leaflets and carrying signs on parking lots and walkways outside facility would implicate significant governmental interest in preventing traffic congestion and ensuring safety of pedestrians and drivers alike by causing congestion and danger to safety, and when policy restricted substantially more speech than necessary to address congestion and traffic problems. Kuba v. 1-A Agricultural Ass'n (9th Cir. 2004) 387 F.3d 850, 856-863

Dispersing prayer service on public land to protest destruction of former military housing rather than its conversion to housing for homeless to " First Amendment" zone was not narrowly tailored to serve important governmental interests of ensuring that service was conducted so as not to impede access to visitor center or use of roadways running through land, when location was essential part of message sought to be conveyed, so that requirement that protesters use First Amendment area burdened speech to substantially greater degree than needed to achieve government's purposes, and protestors, had they asked, would have been allowed to use much closer parking lot just across street, directly in front of visitor center, which would have distorted witnessing considerably less, as connection between visitor center and protest activity would have been maintained. Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 753-755

State's Mass Gathering Act, which regulates gatherings of large numbers of people overnight in open spaces, bore sufficiently close nexus to conduct commonly associated with expression that it was subject to facial First Amendment challenge, but was not unconstitutional time, place, and manner regulation, when although Act lacked deadline for local governing body to act on permit applications or for prompt judicial review of permit application denials, because it was content-neutral, Act did not need procedural safeguards required of content-based regulations, because overnight mass gatherings state sought to regulate raised special health and safety issues because of their size and duration and state had eminently valid interest in ensuring health and safety of its residents and visitors at large, lengthy events, so that local governing bodies needed time to evaluate applications and conduct inspections, making strict deadline for permit action impracticable; and when discretion conferred on governing body to set permit application fees reasonably calculated to reimburse county for reasonable and necessary costs in receiving, processing, and reviewing applications for permits to hold outdoor mass gatherings was not unconstitutional because there no was actual evidence of pattern of abuse, statutory limits objectively constrained governing body's discretion and allowed effective judicial review, and statutory standard did not allow governing body to gauge reaction applicant's message would generate and set fee according to projected costs of policing hostile listeners. South Oregon Barter Fair v. Jackson County (9th Cir. 2004) 372 F.3d 1128, 1136-1141

City's ordinances regulating location of adult-oriented retail businesses were constitutional, when city's purpose in enacting ordinances as "place" restriction was to regulate harmful secondary effects associated with sexually oriented businesses so that ordinances were subject to intermediate scrutiny, when ordinances were narrowly tailored to serve city's substantial interest in reducing undesirable secondary effects of adult stores because ordinances left open sufficient relocation sites and thus were likely to reduce secondary effects by moving stores from sensitive areas without substantially reducing speech by forcing stores to close, when city satisfied initial burden of producing evidence that fairly supported ordinances but store owner failed to provide sufficient contrary evidence to shift burden back to city by failing to cast direct doubt on rationale behind ordinances, either by showing that city's evidence did not support it or by supplying its own contrary actual and convincing evidence, and when ordinances were narrowly tailored because through testimonial evidence, city showed that retail-only stores generated secondary effects and therefore its interests in enacting ordinances would be achieved less effectively absent regulation. World Wide Video of Wash., Inc. v. City of Spokane (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1186, 1191-1198

Although Park Service police officers' decision to relegate protesters' prayer service to designated " First Amendment area" rather than allowing them to remain at site they chose because of its significance was content-neutral, dispersal of prayer service because of protesters' refusal to retreat to designated First Amendment area was not narrowly tailored enough to serve significant governmental interest. Because location restriction on prayer service was unconstitutional, court would not reach more difficult application of ample alternative channels for communication of message prong of time, place, and manner test. Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 361 F.3d 1134, 1146-1150

State's highway billboard regulation prohibiting outdoor advertising signs except those existing as of June 12, 1975, exempting on-premises signs attracting attention to activities conducted on premises, temporary signs on private property and signs of a governmental unit, and allowing applications for variances from prohibition, was content-neutral, time, place, and manner restriction that did not violate First Amendment rights of person wishing to display political sign on his residence, whenstatutes specifically prohibit consideration of content in deciding whether to allow variance and although commercial billboards could prevail under legislative scheme, neutrality was maintained because regulation allowed noncommercial messages on either onsite or offsite signs. Lombardo v. Warner (9th Cir. 2003) 353 F.3d 774, 776-779

Neither of two different versions of county ordinance regulating erection and maintenance of signs and billboards within county limits violated First Amendment by imposing impermissible restrictions on speech, favoring commercial over noncommercial speech, and conferring unbridled discretion on county officials to grant or deny sign permits. Although neither ordinance was model of statutory clarity, content-neutral zoning, size, and height provisions in both ordinances were constitutional, severable, and independently enforceable regardless of other constitutional issues in either ordinance. "Grandfather" provision in more recent version of ordinance was not specifically targeted at billboard companies' billboards or constitute attempt by county to single them out for retribution. Valley Outdoor, Inc. v. County of Riverside (9th Cir. 2003) 337 F.3d 1111, 1114-1115

Even though city ordinance prohibiting carrying or possession of rectangular wooden pieces more than 1/4 inch thick and 2 inches wide, or non-rectangular pieces thicker than 3/4 inch arguably constrained "communicative conduct" of demonstrators, it was not facially unconstitutional as applied to protestor arrested at entrance to circus for having bull hook that exceeded allowable dimensions, where city has constitutional authority to control use of its public streets for parades or processions by imposing time, place, and manner restrictions and substantial interest in safeguarding its citizens and police against violence, which is not related to free expression; and where ordinance imposed no greater burden than necessary to protect safety of circus-goers, police, and demonstrators. Although non-wooden replicas and pictures of bull hook may not have had same impact, potential hazards of wielding it in crowd during demonstrations justified relatively small burden imposed by ordinance. Further, fact that protestor and her husband brought leaflets, pictures, signs, videotapes, and press releases to demonstration showed that other, less hazardous but still effective ways of communicating their message were available. Vlasak v. Superior Court (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 683, 690-691

City ordinance regulating newsracks and setting up system segregating publications into two classes based on whether or not publisher charges its readers, not on content of publications, was content-neutral on its face, and there was no evidence ordinance had been applied in anything but content-neutral manner; ordinance was narrowly tailored to serve significant government interests to protect health, safety, and welfare of pedestrians and to preserve aesthetics, and was not substantially broader than necessary. Honolulu Weekly, Inc. v. Harris (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1037, 1045-1046

Imposing conditions that pro-life demonstrators on public college campus not create public disturbance and not interfere with campus activities or access to school buildings were content-neutral regulations that did not violate demonstrators First Amendment rights, when regulations did not distinguish among speakers based on content of message and were narrowly tailored to achieve college's pedagogical purpose; however, having permitted demonstrators to conduct demonstration on campus, dean could not, consistent with First Amendment's free speech and free exercise clauses, limit demonstration to secular content and impose condition that demonstrators refrain from religious worship or instruction. Orin v. Barclay (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1207, 1214-1216

Ordinance prohibiting carrying of signs attached to wooden or plastic handles during parades and public assemblies, which clearly regulated expressive activity protected by First Amendment, is not valid time, place, and manner restriction on protected speech, when, although ordinance is content-neutral since there is no evidence it is designed to favor some viewpoints or ideas at expense of others and it was enacted to combat evil unrelated to speech, ordinance was not narrowly tailored to advance significant governmental interest of safeguarding its citizens against violence and fails to leave open ample alternative means of communication. Edwards v. City of Coeur D'Alene (9th Cir. 2001) 262 F.3d 856

Trial court erroneously found zoning ordinance restricting locations in which adult businesses can locate constitutional; ordinance that does not ban adult businesses outright, but limits areas of city in which they may operate is content-neutral time, place, and manner restriction, which is constitutional so long as it is designed to serve substantial governmental interests and allows for alternative avenues of communication; although parties did not dispute that curbing secondary effects of adult businesses is substantial governmental interest, city had burden of proving alternative avenues of communication by showing reasonable opportunity to open and operate within city, and city did make good faith attempt to prove it was providing adult businesses with reasonable opportunity; burden then rested with adult businesses to show that particular sites shown by city to be available would not reasonably become available, and trial court denied businesses' request to submit additional evidence to satisfy their burden. Lim v. City of Long Beach (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1050

City ordinance requiring nude dancers to perform at least 10 feet from patrons, effectively barring "table dancing," is content-neutral, and 10-foot distance requirement is narrowly tailored and leaves open ample alternative avenues for communication of protected expression; 10-foot distance requirement not shown to bar market entry; whether table dancing is unique form of expression entitled to separate First Amendment analysis is not outcome determinative since uniquenessalone is insufficient to trigger special protection. Colacurcio v. City of Kent (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 545, 551-557

Whether or not Los Angeles International Airport is public forum for free expression under California Constitution, ordinance prohibiting solicitation of funds at Los Angeles International Airport is valid as reasonable time, place, and manner restriction of expressive rights to extent it prohibits soliciting immediate receipt of funds. Intl. Society for Krishna Consciousness of Cal. v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 48 Cal. 4th 446, 454-460

City ordinance that bans all mobile billboard advertising of any content, at any time, on any street was content-neutral reasonable time, place and manner restriction, where ordinance regulated manner of speech, not its content; declared purpose of ordinance to eliminate mobile billboard advertising within city to promote safe movement of vehicular traffic, reduce air pollution, and improve aesthetic appearance of city was legitimate governmental interest; and ordinance was narrowly tailored to achieving city's legitimate interests even though it exempted buses and taxicabs that also carried billboards, and ban on mobile billboard advertising left plaintiff with numerous alternative channels for effectively communicating its message, such as the Internet. Showing Animals Respect and Kindness v. City of West Hollywood (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 815, 820-825, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134

Suspension of police permit to operate nude entertainment establishment as sanction for numerous and on-going violations of regulations was proper time, place, and manner regulation even though nude or semi-nude entertainment is expressive activity falling within ambit of First Amendment. Regulation was content neutral on its face and applied to any business required to have police permit. In addition, ordinance authorizing permit suspension was within city's constitutional police power and could further governmental interest of gaining compliance with regulations. Further, governmental interest of obtaining compliance with laws and regulations relating to permitted business was unrelated to suppression of speech because regulation applied to all businesses requiring permit to any violation, not just those related to expressive activity. Lastly, restriction was no greater than necessary to further governmentalinterest. Krontz v. City of San Diego (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1136-1139, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 535

State regulation prohibiting touching, caressing, or fondling of the breast, buttocks, anus, or genitals or exposure of breast or buttock unless dancer is on raised stage at least six feet from patrons in business establishments selling alcohol did not violate First Amendment rights, when adoption of regulation was supported by ample evidence of deleterious effects inherent in combination of alcoholic beverages and explicitly erotic performances, governmental interest was not related to suppression of any particular expression or expression in general, and any incidental impact on expressive element of dancing was de minimis. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board of California (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 880, 890-891, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 729

Restrictions by owner of chain of retail warehouse stores at locations where it shared parking lot with other retail businesses, prohibiting all expressive activity on 34 days on which historically it has experienced high volume of customer traffic, preventing any individual or organization from using its property for expressive activity on more than five days within any 30-day period, not permitting any individual or group to useits facilities on consecutive weekends, restricting expressive activities to designated areas in front of its stores, only allowing three participants to engage in expressive activity at any one time and requiring that they identify themselves, requiring that individuals or groups complete application at least three days in advance of any expressive activity, and prohibiting all expressive activity at its stand-alone facilities, are valid; owner presented evidence that expressive activity at its stores has imposed on it considerable expenses, administrative burdens, and risks which directly impaired commercial purposes of stores, and regulations were narrowly tailored to protect owner's substantial interests in smooth operation of its stores. Costco Companies, Inc. v. Gallant (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 740, 743, 748-753, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 344

Policy of private, stand-alone warehouse-type retail store, allowing signature gatherers and others with free speech interests to stand only in designated areas near its stores in accordance with written guidelines requiring each store to have at least one designated area for noncommercial speech activity and prohibiting noncommercial speech activity outside the designated area to ensure that no person or property is injured in the course of the activity was reasonable time, place, and manner regulation which complied with any duty store had to provide public access and did not violate free speech rights of signature gatherer who was arrested after leaving designated area several times; further, placing designated area a few feet from entrance was not unreasonable when persons with political messages could set up table and/or sign so that anyone interested could step forward for further information. Lushbaugh v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1166-1170, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700

Under California Constitution, reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions on protected speech and petitioning may be imposed by private shopping center owner provided they are content-neutral, narrowly tailored, and leave open ample alternative means of communication. Westside Sane/Freeze v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 546, 558, 274 Cal. Rptr. 51 ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1572-1576, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302

Restriction on leafletting in shopping center parking lot is valid time, place, and manner restriction since it is content-neutral and narrowly tailored to prevent litter and traffic problems, and leafletters are allowed to use sidewalks as alternative channel of communication. Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1573-1576, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302

[4] Administrative Permits to March or Parade

Federal Park Service employees were entitled to qualified immunity in Bivens action based on denial of march permit to protestors without concomitant promise on their part not to engage in civil disobedience and dispersal of prayer service that began as alternative to march, when before opinion of Ninth Circuit in United States v. Baugh, involving same parties and same facts, contours of constitutional right violated by defendants' denial of permit were not sufficiently clear that reasonable official would have understood that what he was doing violated that right; and when as to dispersal of prayer service, although location restriction was unconstitutional because dispersal of service due to refusal to retreat to designated First Amendment area was not sufficiently narrowly tailored, law at time of events in question was not sufficiently clear that reasonable official would understand that what he was doing violated that right because although defendants were wrong in their assumption that terminating prayer service was narrowly tailored response to threatened governmental interests, their error was not unreasonable given law as clearly established at time. Galvin v. Hay (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 739, 745

United States Park Service's application of permit regulation to group demonstrating on national park property against Park Service's plan to demolish housing instead of providing housing for homeless violated demonstrator's First Amendment rights, where national park as public park constituted quintessential public forum, and where Park Service engaged in informal process of negotiating terms for permit and demonstrators expressed desire for permit for their march and initiated prayer service as direct consequence of Park Service's refusal to issue permit for the march. United States v. Baugh (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1037

Transit Authority requirement for permit to participate in any "organized exercise of rights which deal with political, religious, and social matters" swept too broadly in regulating protected speech. Rosen v. Port of Portland (9th Cir. 1990) 641 F.2d 1242, 1247-1250

Government may impose a permit requirement on those wishing to hold a march, parade, or rally; however, permit scheme must be limited to restriction of time, place, manner, and duration of the march or parade and must be narrowly drawn to serve a significant government interest, such as safety and convenience of the public. Dillon v. Municipal Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 860, 869-871, 94 Cal. Rptr. 777, 484 P.2d 945

[4A] Prior Restraint

Permanent injunction prohibiting picketing, displaying signs, placards, or other written or printed material, and orally uttering statements about famous attorney and about attorney's law firm in any public forum became overly broad prior restraint on speech, lacking plausible justification on death of attorney, since picketing attorney and his law offices while engaging in injunction-forbidden speech could no longer achieve objectives trial court had in mind, i.e., coercing attorney to pay "tribute" for desisting in activity and grounds for injunction were much diminished, if they had not disappeared altogether. Tory v. Cochran (2005) 544 U.S. 734, 125 S. Ct. 2108, 2111-2112, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1042

"Adult business" ordinance requiring adult bookstore, novelty store, or video store to have adult business license met First Amendment's requirement that licensing scheme assure prompt judicial review of administrative decision denying license, when although First Amendment requires assurance of prompt judicial determination of applicant's legal claim, ordinance satisfied any prompt judicial determination requirement because ordinary court procedural rules and practices in state of city enacting ordinance provide reviewing courts with judicial tools sufficient to avoid delay-related First Amendment harm, there was no reason to doubt willingness of state's judges to exercise powers wisely so as to avoid serious threats of delay-induced First Amendment harm, ordinance did not seek to censor material and its licensing scheme applied reasonably objective, nondiscretionary criteria unrelated to content of expressive materials that adult business may sell or display and objective criteria were simple enough to apply and their application simple enough to review that their use was unlikely in practice to suppress total presence of any specific item of adult material in community, and nothing in earlier case law required city or state to place judicial review safeguards all in city ordinance setting forth licensing scheme. City of Littleton v. Z. J. Gifts D-4, L.L.C. (2004) 541 U.S. 774

With regard to licensing of sexually-oriented businesses, licensing scheme placing unbridled discretion in hands of government official or agency constitutes a prior restraint and may result in censorship; prior restraint that fails to place limits on time within which decision maker must issue license is also impermissible; licensing scheme regulating adult entertainment must contain, at minimum, two procedural safeguards: (1) licensor must make decision whether to issue license within specified and reasonable time period during which status quo is maintained, and (2) there must be possibility of prompt judicial review in event license is erroneously denied. FW/PBS, Inc. Dallas (1990) 493 U.S. 215, 225-228, 110 S. Ct. 596, 107 L. Ed. 2d 603

Any system of prior restraint comes with heavy presumption against its constitutional validity. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. Conrad (1975) 420 U.S. 546, 558, 95 S. Ct. 1239, 43 L. Ed. 2d 448

City did not engage in unconstitutional prior restraint in rejecting amplified sound permit applications by Christian evangelists based on their noncompliance with conditions for permits issued in past, where city's hearing officer's reference to past violations did not show absolute prohibition based on past violation, but rather that hearing officer sought to balance, within constitutional bounds, competing interests at proposed permit location, and receipt by evangelists received of permits at different city locations reinforced hearing officer's finding that it was proposed location, not content of message, that was unsuitable. Rosenbaum v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2007) 484 F.3d 1142, 1163-1167

Permitting requirement for signs was not unconstitutional prior restraint. Sign code was content neutral so that procedural requirements of prior restraint doctrine need not have been satisfied. Further, officials did not have unbridled discretion because city could deny permits only when sign did not comport with reasonably specific size and type criteria or was not compatible with surrounding environment. G.K. Ltd. Travel v. City of Lake Oswego (9th Cir. 2006) 436 F.3d 1064, 1081-1084

County ordinance requiring adult entertainment business to obtain license before conducting business in county was not unconstitutional prior restraint, when, although requiring businesses to apply for and obtain license before engaging in business was prior restraint, ordinance was not invalid because it placed burden of proof in administrative appeals process on applicant and provided constitutionally sufficient judicial review. However, requirement that managers and dancers obtain work permits before beginning work at adult entertainment businesses was invalid prior restraint, when, although placing burden of proof on managers and dancers in administrative proceedings did not violate their First Amendment rights and requiring managers and dancers to exhaust their administrative remedies before seeking judicial review did not constitute prior restraint, public disclosure requirements with regard to work permit applications resulting from interplay of county ordinance and state law violated First Amendment because First Amendment would not permit county to put employees of adult entertainment establishments to choice of whether to apply for permit to engage in protected expression in circumstances in which they exposed themselves to unwelcome harassment from aggressive suitors and overzealous opponents of such activity. Dream Palace v. County of Maricopa (9th Cir. 2004) 384 F.3d 990, 1001-1012

Trial court properly enjoined publication of book purporting to teach reader how to "legally" stop paying federal income taxes as making fraudulent claims, when book was integral part of program to market various products for taxpayers to utilize forms and techniques to avoid paying income tax, and expressive and political portions of book were not inextricably entwined with its commercial elements. United States v. Schiff (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 621,

In action under under federal Freedom of Access to Clinics Entrances Act (FACE) [18 U.S.C. § 248], which gives aggrieved persons right of action against whoever by "threat of force" intentionally intimidates person because person is or has been providing reproductive health services, injunction prohibiting dissemination of "wanted"-type posters about plaintiffs, who were doctors in reproductive health services community identified on posters, and dissemination of information about plaintiffs on part of "Nuremberg Files" website when lines were drawn through names of doctors who provided abortion services and who had been killed or wounded, was not improper prior restraint on speech, when terms of injunction were finely tuned and exceedingly narrow, so that only threats or use of posters or their equivalent with specific intent to threaten plaintiffs were prohibited, and only personal information about plaintiffs could not be used in Nuremberg Files with specific intent to threaten them, which left huge room for defendant to express its views. Planned Parenthood of the Columbia/Willamette, Inc. v. American Coalition of Life Activists (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1058, 1077-1088

Refusal of United States Park Service to authorize any expressive activity in Presidio in San Francisco absent demonstrators' promise to keep out of certain areasconstitutes prior restraint preventing expressive activity from occurring, where promise sought by Park Service that no trespassing would occur before Park Service would issue permit was illusory and meaningless at best. United States v. Baugh (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1037, 1042

City's statutory scheme for suspension and revocation of licenses for adult-oriented businesses is unconstitutional prior restraint, where, although city's ordinance fails to impose specified and reasonable time limits for decision on suspension/revocation, it provides for automatic stay on enforcement of suspension/revocation so that status quo is maintained, but where neither city's ordinance nor California's statutory scheme provide express time limits or guarantee prompt hearing or decision for judicial review and do not guarantee stay of enforcement pending judicial review. 4805 Convoy, Inc. v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1108, 1113-1116

Injunction issued following trial that determined defendant defamed plaintiff, which did no more than prohibit defendant from repeating defamation, was not prior restraint and did not offend First Amendment. Balboa Island Village Inn v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1148-1160, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339

Remedial injunction prohibiting continued use of racial epithets in the workplace does not violate right to freedom of speech if there has been judicial determination that use of epithets will contribute to continuation of hostile or abusive work environment and therefore will constitute employment discrimination. Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846

Order enjoining newspaper from reporting on trial testimony in wage-and-hour class action brought by persons who deliver copies of paper to homes and businesses each morning, in which newspaper was defendant, contained within broader order barring all nonexpert witnesses from courtroom except during their own testimony, forbidding witnesses from discussing their testimony with other witnesses, and forbidding parties and witnesses from disclosing to nonexpert witness testimony of another witness in order to prevent witnesses from being influenced by testimony of others, was unconstitutional prior restraint violating press freedoms of state and federal constitutions, where order was presumptively invalid because risk that witnesses in civil trial might be influenced by reading news reports of testimony of other witnesses could not possibly justify censorship imposed, and where less restrictive alternatives were available to protect plaintiffs' fair trial rights without infringing on newspaper's First Amendment rights, including trial court's admonishment of witnesses not to read press accounts of trial. Freedom Communications, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 150, 153-154, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861

Trial court's preliminary injunction prohibiting ex-wife from publishing any "false and defamatory" statements about ex-husband on Internet was constitutionally invalid prior restraint, where there had been no trial and no determination on merits that any statement made by her was defamatory. Court of Appeal could not determine whether trial court properly applied balancing test in prohibiting ex-wife from publishing"confidential personal information" about ex-husband on Internet, where order was ambiguous as to meaning of "confidential personal information" and, without definition, injunction was not sufficiently clear to determine whether ex-husband's privacy rights to information substantially outweighed ex-wife's free speech rights; and where reference to "confidential personal information" did not provide ex-wife with reasonable basis to understand what she was prohibited from placing on Internet. To extent ex-husband, who was law enforcement officer, sought injunction preventing ex-wife from placing his telephone number, address, and Social Security number on Internet, supported by evidence, trial court would be justified in immediately ordering that information be kept private because restriction would not involve information with any public value and would serve significant public interest of protecting safety of law enforcement officer; however, information about divorce proceedings, including information in family court file, would not be protected unless it would harm best interests of children if publicly disclosed, was information obtained through discovery, or information that would compromise person's financial security or personal safety, and order enjoining disclosure was narrowly tailored to protect only specific interests and did not unnecessarily interfere with person's free speech rights. Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1167-1171, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859

Suspension of police permit to operate nude entertainment establishment as sanction for numerous and on-going violations of regulations was not improper prior restraint even though nude or semi-nude entertainment is expressive activity falling within ambit of First Amendment. Nude dancing in establishment in which owner allowed violations of valid regulations did not confer First Amendment coverage to defeat regulation, which was aimed at penalizing and terminating illegal conduct, not expressive activity, on premises. Krontz v. City of San Diego (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1132-1136, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 535

Admonition to grand jury witness after testifying not to reveal to any person, except as directed by court, what questions were asked and what responses were given or any other matters concerning nature or subject of grand jury's investigation which witness learned during appearance before grand jury until transcript of proceeding was made public and that violation of admonition was punishable as contempt of court was not unjustifiable prior restraint on newspaper's speech in violation of First Amendment. Admonition did not prevent newspaper from publishing anything and restraint on source of news was not required to survive strict scrutiny of prior restraint analysis when media, and not source, was challenger. Further, information impeded was not type generally available to public. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. v. Criminal Grand Jury (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 410, 415-418, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 645

Trial court's order in response to possible disclosure of confidential information, restraining plaintiffs' counsel from discussing lawsuit or related lawsuits with third parties who were current or former investors in any partnership in which defendants were general partners without first applying for and receiving court's permission, requiring any such application for court's permission to be served on defendants' counsel, restraining plaintiffs' counsel from accepting representation of any new plaintiffs in any lawsuits against any defendants, any corporate general partners of partnerships in which defendants held partnership interests, or any partnerships themselves, and plaintiffs to immediately notify defendants and court if any investors contacted them or their counsel, and requiring presence of court-appointed discovery referee when plaintiffs' counsel spoke with investors who had contacted counsel and parties had to agree on areas of questioning court would then approve during subsequent hearing, violated plaintiffs' and plaintiffs' counsel's freedom of speech as prior restraint. Restrained speech did not implicate protected competing interest, which during trial was constitutional right to fair trial and interest at issue was trial court's ability to govern discovery process and sanction violations of discovery orders and party's right to be free from abusive discovery designed to disrupt and interfere with relationships with investors, which were not constitutionally protected competing interests analogous to right to fair trial. Further, gag order was not appropriate method to protect confidential information from disclosure, no matter how damaging or private that information and was not appropriate sanction after confidential information had already been disclosed. Lastly, other forms of sanctions could address abuses of discovery process and violations of court orders, such as monetary sanctions or limiting depositions of third-party investors to topics relevant to case. Maggi v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1224-1226, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 161

Trial court order prohibiting news media from publishing images of defendant in pending criminal proceedings, which were not tilized, i.e., did not obscure facial features on individual depicted, regardless of source from which media obtained images, was unconstitutional prior restraint, when, although defendant's due process right to fair trial is substantial or overriding interest competing with media's free speech rights and order was narrowly tailored, and order was entered to preserve integrity of witnesses' in-court testimony concerning identity of perpetrators, which was at issue, record did not support substantial probability that, absent prior restraint, witnesses' in-court identifications of defendants would be based on photographs in newspapers rather than their observations of perpetrators at crime scene, since record was devoid of evidence that publishing photographs created substantial probability that victims' identifications of perpetrators were either tentative or in danger of being altered by published photographs, and when there were less restrictive means of achieving competing interest, i.e., by in limine motion or trial objection to exclude testimony and require court to take evidence out of jury's presence to determine whether proposed in-court identification was admissible as witness' independent recollection or inadmissible as tainted by unduly suggestive pretrial events. South Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 866, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487

Trial court order barring disclosure of information relating to patients of cosmetic surgeons involved in litigation against each other, whether obtained through discovery or otherwise, was unconstitutional prior restraint on speech, despite competing interests of protecting information protected by physician-patient privilege, possible prejudice of potential jurors and protecting patients' right of privacy, when mere possibility of prejudicing potential jurors, without finding of actual risk of prejudice, was not enough to support prior restraint; when, although physician-patient privilege protects patient from forced disclosure of protected information in course of litigation, it may not be extended to cover dissemination of information already made known outside litigation; and when sparing citizens from embarrassment, shame, or even intrusions into their privacy has never been held to outweigh constitutional guarantees of free speech. Hurvitz v. Hoefflin (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1232, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558

City's licensing scheme for restaurants as applied to adult business seeking to serve food as well as provide adult entertainment was unconstitutional prior restraint, where, by defining restaurant as any place serving food or beverages yet applying additional primary use test to adult business, licensing scheme gave city impermissible unbridled discretion so that city was free to add that gloss or not, depending on applicant, and thus discourage disfavored expression in form of nude dancing; however, city's licensing scheme for businesses offering live entertainment is not unconstitutional prior restraint, where there is nothing impermissible in authorizing city manager to conduct investigations to determine if proposed business complies with municipal requirements, and scheme satisfies requirement that license for First Amendment-protected business must be issued within reasonable period of time. Tily B., Inc. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 13-15, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6

City's ordinance scheme for revocation or nonrenewal for entertainment and adult business permits is not unconstitutional prior restraint, where scheme does not give city manager unbridled discretion to revoke or refuse to renew permit. Tily B., Inc. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 25, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6

[5] Incidental Limitations on Expression

City could reasonably rely on 1977 study it conducted before enacting ordinance prohibiting establishment or maintenance of more than one adult entertainment business in same building, when study revealed that areas with high concentrations of adult establishments are associated with high crime rates so that it is reasonable for city to suppose that concentration of adult establishments is correlated with high crime rates because concentration of operations in one locale draws greater concentration of adult consumers to neighborhood, and high density of adult consumers either attracts or generates criminal activity. City of Los Angeles v. Alameda Books, Inc. (2002) 535 U.S. 425, 122 S. Ct. 1728, 1735, 152 L. Ed. 2d 670

First Amendment analysis of state public records statute as applied to public release of documents showing names and contact information of individuals who signed petitions in support of ballot referendum required intermediate scrutiny, not strict scrutiny, where signing referendum petition had speech element such that petition signing qualified as expressive conduct, and public access provision of public records access statute had incidental effect on referendum petition signers' speech by deterring some would-be signers from signing petitions. Statute as applied to referendum decisions did not violate First Amendment, where state interests in preserving integrity of election by promoting government transparency and accountability and in providing voters with information about who supported placing referendum on ballot were sufficiently important to justify incidental limitations on referendum petition signers' First Amendment freedoms, incidental effect on speech was no greater than necessary, and there was no claim that state's interests were at all related to the suppression or regulation of expression. Doe v. Reed (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 671, 676-680

Order for sale of federal inmate's personal writings under federal restitution lien statute [18 U.S.C. § 3613] did not violate inmate's First Amendment rights as generally applicable law with incidental effect on First Amendment issues, where inmate's right to communicate information contained in papers would not be impaired because inmate could still communicate any ideas contained in documents without originals because originals were simply worth more; where government's ability to redact from originals names of victims and their families, names of other intended victims, and recognizable descriptions of victims and their injuries at request of named victims did not hinder his right of expression and result in suppression of information that could have been of value to public, because any diminution in originals' value was justified because of importance of excising information to protect privacy interests of victims and intended victims; and because district court would review materials in camera and approve redactions to ensure they corresponded to and did not exceed approved descriptions. United States v. Kaczynski (9th Cir. 2009) 551 F.3d 1120, 1126-1128

State statute requiring all sexually oriented businesses to close between 1:00 a.m. and 8:00 a.m. on Monday through Saturday and between 1:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon on Sunday did not violate First Amendment, when, under Renton three-part test for evaluating constitutionality of sexually oriented business regulations, statute did not amount to complete ban on protected expressive activity, but was classic time, place, or manner restriction; when, although statute is content based on its face because whether establishment falls within its parameters and is subject to sanction for violating prohibition against operating during nighttime hours can only be determined by reference to content of expression inside establishment, United States Supreme Court has clearly carved out sexual and pornographic speech as type of speech than can be subject to reasonable restriction and examination of record as a whole indicated that in enacting hours of operation restriction, state Legislature was concerned with curbing negative secondary effects associated with such businesses so that intermediate scrutiny applies; and when state's specific interest in reducing secondary effects associated with late-night operations of sexually oriented businesses, including noise, traffic, unlawful public sexual activity, prostitution, and drug trafficking, is substantial, Legislature relied on evidence reasonably believed to be relevant in demonstrating connection between its stated rationale and protected speech, it appeared self-evident that state's asserted interest, i.e., amelioration of secondary effects associated with late-night operation of sexually oriented businesses would be achieved less effectively in statute's absence, and statute left open ample alternative channels for communication. Center for Fair Public Policy v. Maricopa County (9th Cir. 2003) 336 F.3d 1153, 1159-1170

Fam. Code § 7640, allowing court in actions under Uniform Parentage Act to order party to pay reasonable fees of counsel, experts, and child's guardian ad litem, and other costs of action and pretrial proceedings, including blood tests, does not unconstitutionally burden speech, because orders to pay opposing party's attorney's fees do not constitute interference with free speech or compelled subsidization of opponent's speech and purpose of fee award is to ensure that child's best interests are represented. Assuming § 7640 imposes significant encroachment on fundamental constitutional rights, such infringement is permissible because law is narrowly tailored and justified by compelling state interest, which is interest in promoting the best interests of children involved in custody proceedings, and requirement that father pay attorney's fees, even when he prevails on legal issue, is necessary to ensure that welfare of child he fathered is protected by presentation of all evidence bearing on various issues arising in custody dispute, and employment of attorney is essential to allow lay persons, such as mother, to present evidence bearing on child's best interests. Banning v. Newdow (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 438, 448-450, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 447

City regulation imposing a night curfew was justified, despite incidental limit on speech, since the compelling interest in controlling widespread rioting and preventing imminent destruction of life and property was promoted and the restriction was limited to certain hours of the night. In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1100, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919

[6] Public Versus Nonpublic Forums

Children's Internet Protection Act, under which public library may not receive federal assistance to provide Internet access unless it installs software to block images that constitute obscenity or child pornography and to prevent minors from obtaining access to material that is harmful to them, is not facially invalid for inducing public libraries to violate patrons' First Amendment rights. Forum analysis and heightened judicial scrutiny are incompatible with the discretion that public libraries must have to fulfill their traditional missions. A library provides Internet access, not to encourage a diversity of views from private speakers, but to facilitate research, learning, and recreational pursuits by furnishing materials of requisite and appropriate quality. United States v. American Library Ass'n (2003) 539 U.S. 194, 123 S. Ct. 2297, 2301-2305, 156 L. Ed. 2d 221

Having created limited public forum by opening school for public use for specified purposes, school's exclusion of organization because of its religious nature constituted viewpoint discrimination in violation of First Amendment, when school opened its limited public forum to events pertaining to welfare of community and to groups promoting moral and character development of children, which organization teaches, and there is no logical difference in kind between invocation of Christianity by organization and invocation of teamwork, loyalty, or patriotism by other associations; school's interest in not violating Establishment Clause did not outweigh organization's interest in gaining equal access to school's facilities, since school had no valid Establishment Clause interest. Good News Club v. Milford Central School (2001) 533 U.S. 98, 121 S. Ct. 2093, 150 L. Ed. 2d 151

Traditional public forums are open for expressive activity regardless of government's intent; government is also free to open additional properties for expressive use by general public or particular class of speakers, thereby creating designated public fora. Government's exclusion of speaker from traditional or designated public forum is subject to strict scrutiny; exclusion must be necessary to serve compelling state interest and exclusion must be narrowly drawn to achieve that interest. Where property is not traditional or designated public forum, it is either nonpublic forum or not forum at all,as to which government can restrict access as long as restrictions are reasonable and not effort to suppress expression merely because officials oppose speaker's view. Arkansas Educ. TV Comm'n v. Forbes (1998) 523 U.S. 666, 118 S. Ct. 1633, 140 L. Ed. 2d 875, 886-887

Public forum doctrine holds that restrictions on speech should be subject to higher scrutiny when speech occurs in areas playing vital role in communication, such as those places historically associated with First Amendment activities, including streets, sidewalks, and parks; in these quintessential public forums, government cannot prohibit all communicative activity, but can enforce reasonable regulations of time, place, and manner of expression. Capitol Sq. Review Bd. v. Pinette (1995) 515 U.S. 753, 115 S. Ct. 2440, 132 L. Ed. 2d 650, 660 ; Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975

Unlike public forum, speaker may be excluded from nonpublic forum if he wishes to address topic not encompassed within the forum's purpose, or he is not member of the class of speakers for whose special benefit the forum was created; airport terminal was nonpublic forum; airport authority's policy of excluding all solicitors from inside airport terminal did not violate First Amendment rights of Krishna Consciousness members since it was justified by government's interest in protecting free flow of traffic in terminal and protecting travellers from undue interference and

School district's refusal to recognize and sponsor student club that discriminated on religious grounds in its membership criteria, which recognition would have allowed club access to student association funds, additional access to school property and facilities, and special rights to post materials around school, based on district's non-discrimination policy, was not restriction on limited public forum, where, although access to recognition qualified as limited public forum, district's policy of restricting access to forum based on compliance with its non-discrimination policy was viewpoint neutral and reasonable in light of purposes of forum. However, there was evidence that other groups were granted recognition despite violating district's non-discrimination policy, so that to extent club argued it was denied exemption from non-discrimination policy based on content of its speech, it raised triable issue of fact. Truth v. Kent School District (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 634, 648-650

State university could impose dollar limit on what student could spend on campaign for student office because, unlike exercise of state-wide political self-determination at national level at issue in Buckley v. Valeo, student election occurred in limited public forum, opened by university to serve viewpoint neutral educational interests but closed to all save enrolled students who carried minimum course load and maintained minimum grade-point average, and educational interests outweigh free speech interests of students who campaigned within limited public forum. Flint v. Dennison (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 816, 826-836

Airspace protected by city and county ordinance prohibiting aerial advertising was nonpublic forum for purposes of determining whether prohibition of banner towing violated First Amendment. Airspace did not fit public forum category because (1) it was not among places immemorially held in trust for use of public and used for purposes of assembly, communicating thoughts between citizens, and discussing public questions and use of airspace for banner towing was relatively modern creation; (2) airspace had access historically restricted by FAA regulations governing airspace and 25 years of regulating aerial advertising; (3) airspace was not extension of beaches below because airspace was physically separate from ground or beaches, required special equipment and authorization for access, and was never typically locus of expressive activity; (4) airspace was not designated public forum, because local ordinance explicitly prohibited using airspace as forum for expressive conduct and airspace was not naturally compatible with expressive activity. Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. City & County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 2006) 448 F.3d 1101, 1108-1110

By making public library meeting rooms publicly available during operating hours, county library created limited public forum rather than traditional public forum. County's policy and practices made clear county did not intend for meeting rooms to be open for indiscriminate use and forum was not intended to undermine library's primary function as avenue for reading, writing, and quiet contemplation. Further, county consistently applied its policy restrictions to, inter alia, exclude religious worship as a permissible use, and enforcement of policy to exclude religious worship services from meeting room was reasonable in light of forum's purpose. Exclusion of religious organization's worship services from library meeting room was permissible limitation on subject matter that could be discussed in meeting room, and was not suppression of prohibited perspective from otherwise permissible topic. Faith Center Church Evangelistic Ministries v. Glover (9th Cir. 2006) 462 F.3d 1194, 1203-1215

Pedestrian mall created by city of Las Vegas from city street was traditional forum, when property remained public thoroughfare despite recreation as pedestrian mall and addition of entertainment to uses did not alter fact it remained public thoroughfare and shopping and gambling district, when, although there was no doubt decorative pavement, barriers to cars, and canopy indicated to public that mall was not simply another street, its openness to public and smooth integration into downtown preserved its public forum status, and when there was no dispute it was historically public forum and case law indicated that courts regard public pedestrian malls and commercial zones as type of property traditionally used as public forum, and city failed to show public forum status was destroyed by transformation from street to pedestrian mall. ACLU of Nevada v. City of Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 1092, 1099-1106

California state highway overpass fences are not public fora, because they have not traditionally been available for public expression. Overpasses are not designated public fora, because CalTrans has not intentionally made them available for public discourse and they are not compatible with expressive activity because messages displayed invariably distract drivers, posing safety risks. Thus, highway overpasses are nonpublic fora, and restrictions on free expression are constitutional only if distinctions drawn are (1) reasonable in light of purpose served by forum, and (2) viewpoint neutral. CalTrans policy of allowing flags on highway over-pass fences but no other banners is not reasonable because flags are no less distracting than other types of banners. Further, policy amounts to impermissible viewpoint discrimination because flag expresses viewpoint and policy supports one viewpoint to exclusion of another. Brown v. Cal. Dept. of Transportation (9th Cir. 2003) 321 F.3d 1217, 1221-1226

Military Honor and Decency Act, which prohibits sale or rental of sexually explicit material on Department of Defense property including military exchanges, does not violate First Amendment speech rights as unconstitutionally vague and restricting protected speech, when Act is not government speech so traditional public forum analysis applies, when government has not created designated public forum and military exchanges fall into category of nonpublic fora, and when restrictions imposed by Act are viewpoint-neutral since Act targets only sexually-oriented materials deemed sexually explicit and reasonable in light of Supreme Court's long-standing deference to military regulations in First Amendment context and because Act seeks to restrict sale of materials at odds with military's image of honor, professionalism, and proper decorum. PMG Int'l Div., L.L.C. v. Rumsfeld (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1163, 1167-1172

Government building, which was judicial and municipal complex and to which individualswere denied entrance after refusing to remove clothing bearing symbols of motorcycle organizations, was nonpublic forum. Individuals showed high probability of success on claim that rules barring them from entering wearing such clothing violated First Amendment, when although complex has legitimate need to preserve orderly and safe place to conduct public's business, review of record revealed almost no evidentiary support for argument that need is reasonably served by rules, and when rules do not comply with First Amendment's requirement that regulation of speech in nonpublic forum be viewpoint neutral. Sammartano v. First Judicial District Court (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 959, 966-973

School district that had policy that buildings be considered community centers to beavailable for nonprofit community activities including education, could not deny access to group providing home Bible class for children, when district created limited public forum by its policy and then denied group access because education provided by group was religious. Culbertson v. Oakridge School Dist. No. 76 (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1061

Sidewalk owned privately by casino, but on which there was recorded servitude imposed for unobstructed public use, was public forum, when casino had agreed with county to construct sidewalk with unobstructed pedestrian traffic on its property to replace public sidewalk lost by widening traffic lanes, and function of replacement sidewalk was to be same as former public sidewalk and sidewalks connecting on either end of property; when, although particular parcel of land used for replacement sidewalk had not been public forum historically, sidewalk in front of casino had been historically public forum and newly constructed sidewalk still performed same role as thoroughfare for pedestrian traffic that it performed before construction of casino; when provisions of agreement constituted dedication of sidewalk to public use and agreement operated as servitude because it specified it was to be recorded and bind heirs, successors, and assigns of parties; and when mere retention of some property interest in parcel did not affect public nature of dedicated use of sidewalk. Venetian Casino v. Local Executive Bd., Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2001) 257 F.3d 937

City created designated public forum, to which strict scrutiny standard applied, rather than limited public forum, to which more lenient reasonableness standard would apply, by opening display space to expressive activity by retaining organization to manage gallery with exhibitions by local artists, when city's policy of non-controversy, by which it purported to limit to display only noncontroversial art, became no policy at all because it was not consistently enforced and lacked definite standards, given lack of prescreening or previous lack of exercise to right to exclude works so that city retained no substantive control over content of arts program. Hopper v. City of Pasco (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1067, 1078-1081

Fund established by city to encourage and provide support for civic events celebrating and commemorating historical, cultural, and ethnic heritage of city and nation or increasing community's knowledge and understanding of critical issues, which provides budgetary mechanism for accounting for costs of in-kind services for funded events, is limited public forum opened to support expressive activities of certain groups speaking about certain topics, when fund, although not forum for speech in physical sense, is government-created source of funding to cover costs associated with engaging in behavior protected by First Amendment; when fund is not traditional public forum, since it is not source of funding for expressive activities held in trust since time immemorial; and when city has not designated fund as forum open to general expressive activity so as to be designated public forum, since fund is limited to certain topics and speakers and has been managed in selective manner. Gentala v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 2000) 213 F.3d 1055, 1062-1063

Ordinance requiring advance permit "to conduct any organized" demonstration in public park not tailored to city's interest in maintaining safety of park users, but was directed at prohibiting speech activities. Grossman v. City of Portland (1994) 33 F.3d 1200, 1205-1207

California Constitution did not protect expressive conduct in area immediately surrounding entrance of individual retail store that, although located in shopping center, did not itself possess characteristics of public forum. Van v. Target Corp. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1375, 1382-1391, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 497

Single structure, single-use supermarket with no plazas, walkways, or courtyards for patrons to congregate and spend time together did not become functional equivalent of traditional public forum. In view of physical layout of center in which supermarket was located, restrictions on types of businesses that could open in center, and absence of any common areas that would invite public to meet, congregate, or engage in other activities typical of public forum, supermarket's location in center did not impress walkways of supermarket with character of traditional public forum. That supermarket established content-neutral and nondiscriminatory rules and procedures by which expressive activity may be permitted on the store's premises did not impress it with the character of traditional public forum. Therefore, solicitors did not have constitutional right to use supermarket to solicit signatures on initiative petitions. Albertson's, Inc. v. Young (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 106, 113-129, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721

[7] Residential Areas

Picketing targeted at residence of individual may be prohibited since it is fundamentally different from other means of communication that may not be banned in residential areas; targeted picketing does not seek dissemination of a message to the general public, but intrudes on the targeted resident in an especially offensive way. Frisby v. Schultz (1988) 487 U.S. 474, 486-487, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420

Preliminary injunction enjoining gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within specified four-block residential area did not violate First Amendment right of association, since gang affiliation does not fall within either of two kinds of associations entitled to First Amendment protection, "intimate" or "intrinsic" associations, such as familial associations, or joining together for political, social, economic, educational, religious and cultural ends. People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110-1112, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596

When First Amendment activity impinges on peaceful enjoyment by others of their home in residential neighborhood, state is able to impose reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions to advance compelling interest of preserving integrity of neighborhood; ordinance restricting decoration of residence and time during which certain decorations may be displayed as valid. City of Glendale v. George (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1394, 1399-1401, 256 Cal. Rptr. 742 (property had been decorated with numerous Christmas ornaments, thereby attracting crowds of people)

[8] Void-for-Vagueness Doctrine

11 U.S.C. § 526(a)(4), prohibiting debt relief agency from advising client to incur more debt in contemplation of filing for bankruptcy, was not unconstitutionally vague, where § 526(a)(4) prohibits debt relief agency only from advising debtor to incur more debt because debtor is filing for bankruptcy, rather than for valid purpose, to prevent prefiling abusive conduct, and where scope of prohibition was adequately defined, both on its own terms and by reference to Bankruptcy Code's other provisions. Milavetz, Gallop & Milavetz, P.A. v. United States (2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 1324, 1334-1339, 176 L. Ed. 2d 79

18 U.S.C. § 2252A(a)(3)(B), which criminalizes in specified circumstances pandering or solicitation of child pornography, is not impermissibly vague, where statute requires defendant to hold and make statement reflecting belief material is child pornography or that defendant communicate in manner intended to cause another so to believe, which are clear questions of fact and does not give law enforcement officials virtually unfettered discretion. United States v. Williams (2008) 553 U.S. 285, 128 S. Ct. 1830, 1845-1846, 170 L. Ed. 2d 650

Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2003 [18 U.S.C. § 1531], allowing criminal prosecutions of doctors performing specified abortions occurring in second trimester of pregnancy involving intact extraction of fetus, was not void for vagueness, where Act set forth relatively clear guidelines as to prohibited conduct and provided objective criteria to evaluate whether doctor performed prohibited procedure by defining line between potentially criminal conduct and lawful abortion and by requiring intent to be proved to impose liability. Further, Act did not encourage arbitrary or discriminatory enforcement, because Act's anatomical landmarks established minimal guidelines to govern law enforcement, and scienter requirements narrowed scope of Act's prohibition and limited prosecutorial discretion. Gonzales v. Carhart (2007) 550 U.S. 124, 127 S. Ct. 1610, 1628-1629, 167 L. Ed. 2d 480

Provisions of Communications Decency Act of 1996 (CDA) prohibiting knowing transmission of obscene or "indecent" messages to recipient under 18 years of age and knowingly sending or displaying of "patently offensive" messages in manner available to person under 18 years of age, are void for vagueness; CDA lacks precision First Amendment requires when statute regulates content of speech. Reno v. ACLU (1997) 521 U.S. 844, 117 S. Ct. 2329, 138 L. Ed. 2d 874

Ban imposed by Executive Order issued by President in wake of attack of September 11, 2001, on "services to or in support of" "Specially Designated Global Terrorists" (SDGTs) was not unconstitutionally vague facially or as applied, where, even if term "services" standing alone would have been ambiguous, regulations clarified term by offering examples of what was contemplated, alerting person of ordinary intelligence to services that should not be provided to or for benefit of SDGTs. Humanitarian Law Project v. United States Dept. of Treasury (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1133, 1146-1147

Definition of in-kind expenditures and contributions in state's election law as furnishing of services, property, or rights without charge or at charge less than fair market value to person, candidate, or political committee for purpose of supporting or opposing any person, candidate, ballot issue or political committee, was void for vagueness as applied to church's placing petitions in church's foyer and pastor's exhortation to sign petition during regularly scheduled sermon, where conduct neither caused economic detriment to church nor carried ascertainable market value. However, regulation was not impermissibly void as applied to church's acquiescence with member's use of its copy machine to photocopy petition, where church incurred some, albeit de minimis, expense in wear and tear of its equipment and member would have been charged if she had secured same photocopying services on open market. Canyon Ferry Rd. Baptist Church of East Helena, Inc. v. Unsworth (9th Cir. 2009) 556 F.3d 1021, 1028-1030

18 U.S.C. § 1466A(a)(1), proscribing transfer of certain obscene visual representations of sexual abuse of children, was not unconstitutionally void for vagueness, where it was limited to prohibition of obscene material and employed same requirements Supreme Court already deemed valid. United States v. Schales (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 965, 972-973

Parts of section 303(a) of Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA) and 2004 amendment, Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act (IRTPA), codified at 18 U.S.C. § 2339B(a), making crime to knowingly provide "material support or resources" to support to even nonviolent activities of designated organization, were impermissibly vague, where definitions of "training" remained impermissibly vague even after amendment; portion of definition of "expert advice or assistance" referring to "scientific" and "technical" knowledge was not vague because meaning of "technical" and "scientific" was reasonably understandable to person of ordinary intelligence, but "other specialized knowledge" was vague; "service" was impermissibly vague because statute defined "service" to include "training" or "expert advice or assistance," and it was easy to imagine protected expression falling within bounds of "service"; and, because IRTPA's definition of "personnel" provided fair notice of prohibited conduct to person of ordinary intelligence and did not punish protected speech, "personnel" as defined in IRTPA was not vague. Humanitarian Law Project v. Mukasey (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1122, 1133-1136

County ordinance prohibiting residential picketing activity targeted at and within 300 feet of residential dwelling in unincorporated areas of county was not unconstitutionally void for vagueness. Language of ordinance was not ambiguous and, although no public record contained setback distance so that would-be picketers could precisely measure 300-foot boundary, assessor's maps available from county tax assessor's office showed lot sizes. While maps did not indicate exactly where residence sat on lot, would-be picketer, with lot map in hand, should have been able to estimate boundary with some level of precision. Klein v. San Diego County (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 1029, 1038-1039

City's sign code regulating advertising signage was not void for vagueness. Codeappeared quite clearly to describe what conduct was permitted by providing explicit sign size and type requirements, stating which signs were exempt from permitting, offering thorough and precise list of definitions for various types of signs, and requiring most parties to obtain permit before erecting sign, thereby preventing unexpected citations. Further, in addition to providing notice of what conduct was punishable, clarity of code's proscriptions avoided fear of arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Lastly, although with regard to code's permitting process, there was element of subjectivity to determination of compatibility, this subjectivity, alone, did not render code unconstitutionally vague and impreciseness of compatibility and was mitigated by clarity of rest of design review section directing officials to determine compatibility with reference to form, color, shape, size, etc. G.K. Ltd. Travel v. City of Lake Oswego (9th Cir. 2006) 436 F.3d 1064, 1084-1085

Definition of "charitable" in city ordinance regulating solicitations by charitable organizations, as well as term "charitable purpose" in definition of "solicitation," were not unconstitutionally vague both facially and as applied to activities of non-profit corporation, where "charitable" was word of common understanding generally understood to describe both religious and non-religious charity, and when nonprofit's fundraising activities for evangelical and missionary purposes clearly constituted solicitations for charitable purpose. Gospel Missions of Am. v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2005) 419 F.3d 1042, 1047-1049

City ordinance requiring adult cabaret dancers to remain two feet away from patrons during performances and defining "adult cabaret dancer" was not void for vagueness as containing subject terms, when subjective terms in ordinance were used in combination with other terms and combined terms outlined performer, place of performance, and type of performance, giving notice to performers and ample guidance to law enforcement officers as to who was and was not adult cabaret dancer, and when subjective terms did not define prohibited conduct and prohibited conduct was defined objectively. Gammoh v. City of La Habra (9th Cir. 2005) 395 F.3d 1114, 1119-1121

State statute prohibiting sexual intercourse with person incapable of consent by reason of mental defect was not unconstitutionally void for vagueness, when mistaken evaluation of other person's ability to consent to sexual intercourse had no bearing on whether statute was vague and thus unconstitutional and statute was clear on what it prohibited, i.e., sexual intercourse with person incapable of consent by reason of mental defect; and when statute was not vague because it did not provide explicit standards to those who apply them so as to avoid arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement, because statute gave law enforcement officials clear standards on conduct that must be prosecuted, and fact that state might have arbitrarily chosen to prosecute one person who had sex with alleged victim but none of her other sexual partners sounded in selective prosecution rather than arbitrary enforcement. United States Supreme Court's holding in Lawrence v. Texas (2003) 539 U.S. 558, 123 S. Ct. 2472, 156 L. Ed. 2d 508 had no impact on vagueness claim, because holding that Due Process Clause of Fourteenth Amendment protects right of two individuals to engage in fully and mutually consensual private sexual conduct did not affect state's legitimate interest andduty to interpose when consent was in doubt, and Supreme Court did place certain kinds of primary, private individual conduct beyond power of criminal law-making authority to proscribe, but not conduct in this case. Anderson v. Morrow (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 1027, 1031-1033

Federal statute prohibiting using Internet to solicit sexual activity from minor [18 U.S.C. § 2422(b)] is not facially unconstitutional as vague by regulating content of speech, when statute does not chill legitimate speech because scienter and intent requirements sufficiently limit criminal culpability to reach only conduct outside protection of First Amendment; and when statutory terms "persuade," "induce," "entice," and "coerce" have plain and ordinary meaning that do not need further technical explanation, and lack of statutory definitions for terms posed no danger of chilling legitimate speech because statute's intent provision, coupled with requirement that purpose of conduct be for criminal sexual activity, sufficiently excluded legitimate activity, including speech, from its scope. United States v. Dhingra (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 557, 561-563

Hobbs Act [18 U.S.C. § 1951], prohibiting conspiracy to interfere with commerce by robbery, is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness as vague and ambiguous with regard to use of term "commerce," because definition of commerce in § 1951 is well-established given Supreme Court's interpretation of jurisdiction under Hobbs Act to be coextensive with Commerce Clause so that notice of scope of conduct proscribed by § 1951 is supplied by common understanding of reach of Commerce Clause. United States v. Rodriguez (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 949, 953-954

City ordinance prohibiting carrying or possession of rectangular wooden pieces more than 1/4 inch thick and 2 inches wide, or non-rectangular pieces thicker than 3/4 inch is not facially unconstitutional as vague for failing to define "public assembly" or "demonstration." Terms are not oblique or ambiguous, particularly in specific context of ordinance. Vlasak v. Superior Court (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 683, 689

Educ. Code § 320, allowing parents to sue and hold personally liable teacher, administrator, or official who willfully and repeatedly refuses to implement requirement that instruction be in English only is sufficiently clear so as not to violate First and Fourteenth Amendments by being void for vagueness. California Teachers Ass'n v. State Board of Education (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 888

Provision of Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 criminalizing material that "appears to be a minor" and "convey[s] the impression" of minor engaged in explicit sexual activity is void for vagueness. Free Speech Coalition v. Reno (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1083, 1095

Asportation element of simple kidnapping under Cal. Pen. Code § 207, requiring movement of "substantial distance," was not impermissibly vague under statutory construction existing at time of criminal defendant's offense and trial, where, in context of simple kidnapping statute, "substantial" meant "significant amount" as contrasted with distance that was "trivial," so that "substantial distance" met constitutional requirement of reasonable certainty; and where case law in effect at time of offense provided adequate guidance as to what distances would be considered "substantial" under simple kidnapping statute. People v. Morgan (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 593, 604-607, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 753, 170 P.3d 129

Juvenile court's imposition of condition of probation that juvenile "not associate with anyone disapproved of by probation" was unconstitutionally vague in absence of express requirement of knowledge, when condition did not notify juvenile in advance with whom she might not associate. However, modification by Court of Appeal inserting qualification that juvenile have knowledge of who was disapproved of by her probation officer, secured constitutional validity of condition. In re Sheena K. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 875, 889-892, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716, 153 P.3d 282

Preliminary injunction enjoining specified gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within specified four-block residential area was not void for vagueness, since injunction enjoined acts within specific context, and, to extent defendant could violate injunction only if defendant knew that other person with whom he engaged in prohibited activity was another gang member, element of knowledge was fairly implied in injunction or would be imposed by trial court in any attempt to enforce injunction; section of injunction enjoining specified gang members from "confronting, intimidating, annoying, harassing, threatening, challenging, provoking, assaulting and/or battering any residents or patrons, or visitors to [the residential area] known to have complained about gang activities" was also not void for vagueness, since requirement that gang member know that person had complained of gang activities was fairly implied or would be imposed by trial court in any attempt to enforce injunction, and words "confront, annoy, provoke, challenge or harrass" were sufficiently definite in this context. People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1115-1119, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596

Definition of "residence" in Penal Code § 290.011(g), relating to registration as sex offender, was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to defendant, where definition of "residence" in § 290.011(g) was consistent with common meaning of residence and reasonably certain to provide offenders and law enforcement with notice of statutory registration requirements, when considered in context with other terms, and adequate in view of legislative purpose of allowing local law enforcement agencies to keep known sex offenders under surveillance; and where there was substantial evidence defendant was aware of need to register residence because he spent considerable amount of time there and defendant was told by law enforcement officers and his parole officer that he was required to register any place where he regularly resided, regardless of number of days or nights spent there. People v. Gonzales (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 24, 37-39

Prob. Code § 1516.5, providing that if guardianship is in place, proceeding to terminate parental rights may be brought if three requirements are met: one or both parents do not have legal custody of child, child has been in physical custody of guardian for period of not less than two years, and child will benefit from being adopted by guardian, is not void for vagueness, where while "physical custody" requirement is not more specifically defined or elucidated, "physical custody" grants adequate notice of its meaning and is rendered reasonably certain by reference to other statutory provisions and judicial decisions defining joint and sole physical custody. In re Noreen G. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1373-1377, 105 Cal. Rptr. 3d 521

Probation condition prohibiting defendant from associating with gang members was unconstitutionally vague, where it lacked explicit knowledge requirement, and, absent that qualification, renders him vulnerable to criminal punishment for associating with persons not known to him to be gang members. Condition prohibiting him from possessing gang paraphernalia was unconstitutionally vague because it lacked explicit knowledge requirement and rendered defendant vulnerable to criminal punishment for possessing paraphernalia he did not know was associated with gangs. Condition prohibiting him from frequenting areas of gang-related activity was unconstitutionally vague absent knowledge requirement, because he could be criminally punished for gang involvement of which he was unaware, and because "frequent" was both obscure and had multiple meanings. People v. Leon (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 943, 949-952, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 410

Probation condition prohibiting minor from possessing any "dangerous or deadly weapon" was not unconstitutionally vague, where condition was sufficiently precise for probationer to know what was required of him, and where condition did not create inherent danger law enforcement officers could construe term instead as strict liability prohibition and punish completely innocent conduct because legal definition of "dangerous or deadly weapon" included user's unlawful intent in possessing object. In re R.P. (2007) 176 Cal. App. 4th 562, 566-569, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 822

Probation condition imposed on minor that he "not associate with any known probationer, parolee, or gang member" was void for vagueness, where it was unlikely minor would know that person was probationer or a parolee, because that kind of detail is province of law enforcement officers, and would be modified to state that minor not "associate with any person known to you to be on probation, on parole or a member of a criminal street gang." Condition that he not "frequent any areas of gang related activity and not participate in any gang activity" was void for vagueness, where "frequenting" areas of gang-related activity was obscure and area with "gang-related activity" could be entire district or town, and condition should be revised to say that minor not visit any area known to him to be place of gang-related activity. In re H.C. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 1071-1072, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 793

Probation condition that defendant not own, possess, or have custody or control of any firearms or ammunition was void for vagueness, where, although defendant, as felon, had no constitutional right to bear arms, and it was unnecessary to state expressly knowledge requirement as to guns or ammunition because status of those items as guns or ammunition was patent, requirement that defendant not knowingly possess those items was required because law had no legitimate interest in punishing innocent citizen who had no knowledge of presence of firearm or ammunition. People v. Freitas (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 747, 751-752, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 51

State law intended to resolve problems with widespread sale of seller assisted marketing plans in state for purchasers was not void for vagueness, and, read in context of state legislature's articulated purpose, meaning of terms "will earn, is likely to earn, or can earn" was plain. People ex re.l Brown v. iMergent, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 333, 339-341, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844

Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1786 et seq.], governing reports containing information on consumer's character, was unconstitutionally vague as applied to impose requirements on tenant screening reports containing information regarding unlawful detainer actions that may have been filed against prospective tenant, where reasonable persons could not readily determine whether unlawful detainer information constituted "character" information governed by ICRAA or "creditworthiness" information governed by Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act [Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.], which governed reports containing information on a consumer's creditworthiness. Ortiz v. Lyon Management Group, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 604, 612-619, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66

Curfew provision enjoining criminal street gang members from being outside in safety zone between hours of 10:00 p.m. on any day and sunrise following day, unless going to or from legitimate meeting or entertainment activity, specifically excluding activities at which other gang members were present; actively engaged in business, trade, profession or occupation requiring presence, including directly driving to or from work; or involved in legitimate emergency situation requiring immediate attention, was unconstitutionally void, where provision did not define "outside" or "legitimate meeting or entertainment activity" exception; however, description of enjoined parties as gang and its active members, as well as persons participating with or acting in concert with gang in more than nominal, passive, inactive or purely technical way, as defined by applicable law, was not unconstitutionally void. People ex rel. Totten v. Colonia Chiques (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 31, 46-50, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70

City ordinance imposing on owners 10 percent transient occupancy tax upon stays of 30 days or less at hotels, motels, and like accommodations within city was not unconstitutionally void for vagueness, where ordinance clearly described circumstances in which it applied. City of Santa Cruz v. Patel (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 234, 243-247, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 824

Reference to "mitigating circumstances" in Veh. Code § 14602.6(b) did not renderstatutory provision unconstitutionally vague on its face, when mitigating circumstances standard was reasonably specific and certain when viewed in context. Section 14602.6 itself set forth mitigating circumstances requiring release of impounded vehicle prior to expiration of 30-day period, and case law was constitutional application of "mitigating circumstances" standard set forth in § 14602.6(b), precluding finding that statute was unconstitutional on its face. Samples v. Brown (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 787, 800-804, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216

Penal Code § 211 was not impermissibly vague due to failure to provide adequate definition of bank robbery, for which defendant was convicted, where defendant was not charged with robbery of banks, but rather with robbery of persons who happened to be bank employees, and language of statute was sufficiently clear and settled to provide notice of proscribed conduct and enable those charged with its violation to properly prepare defense. People v. Sullivan (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 524, 542-544, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 876

Former Pen. Code § 290(a)(1)(A), requiring sex offender to re-register on change of address, was not void for vagueness as applied to defendant. It was only when transient offender moved from location to location that concept of change of residence did not apply and concept of change of location was sole governing criterion, which was held unconstitutionally vague unless change of location was to another jurisdiction. Further, it was not relevant whether defendant had moved to address where law enforcement found him or was merely transient temporarily there, since it still could be said he changed his residence so as to trigger the re-registration requirement. In addition, record demonstrated he had moved out of residence, making his residence different, and he was given adequate notice to comply with re-registration requirements by having signed registration notification statement informing him that on coming into, or when changing address or transient location within, any city, county, or city and county in which he resided or was located, he was required to register with law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over his residence or location within five working days. People v. Musovich (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 983, 989-992, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 62

Welf. & Inst. Code § 213.5(a), allowing issuance of temporary restraining order against grandmother after petition was filed to declare grandchildren dependent children, enjoining her from, inter alia, stalking children, was not unconstitutionally void for vagueness for failure to define stalking, when reasonable person would necessarily be on notice that if she surreptitiously concealed herself for purpose of making unauthorized contact with specific children, hired investigators to spy on them, videotaped their home, tracked their movements, and went to their schools unannounced to see them and spread defamatory information about their caretakers, all resulting in emotional distress to children and their caretakers, she would have been engaged in stalking and subject to restraining order under § 213.5. In re Brittany K. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1497, 1508-1512, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 487

Provisions in former Pen. Code § 290(a)(1)(A), (f)(1), requiring sex offenders to register in jurisdiction in which they are "located" within five working days of changing "location," and give authorities written notice of new "location," were unconstitutionally vague because they do not give transient sex offenders fair notice of what they must do to conform with registration requirements governing changes of "location" and fail to provide even minimal guidelines for registering authorities encouraging arbitrary enforcement. However, basic registration requirements for transient sex offenders that they register in each jurisdiction in which they are regularly "located" and update their registration every 60 days [former Pen. Code § 290(a)(1)(A)-(C)] may be reasonably and practically understood by offenders and law enforcement as mandating registration in any jurisdiction in which offender is present on five consecutive working days and are valid. People v. North (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 621, 627-636, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 337

County fair dress code prohibiting apparel or accessories intended to provoke, offend, or intimidate others, including offensive slogans, insignia, or "gang colors" was void for vagueness because operative criteria were so highly subjective as to provide enforcement authorities almost unfettered license to decide what dress code permits and prohibits. Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 769-776, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550

Use of "seducing" and "harmful matter" in Pen. Code § 288.2(b), prohibiting distribution or exhibition of lewd matter to minor by Internet with intent to seduce minor, is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness, when in context of § 288.2(b), with references to gratifying lust, passion, and sexual desire, people of ordinary intelligence would readily understand "seducing" as used in § 288.2(b) to mean "persuading into partnership in sexual discourse" as defined in Webster's Third New International Dictionary; and when "harmful matter" incorporates definition from Pen. Code § 313(a), which essentially tracks three-prong test for obscenity articulated by United States Supreme Court; lack of definition of "sexual conduct" does not make § 288.2(b) impermissibly vague, where given that term "prurient interest" in § 313 is used in conjunction with intent elements of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying lust or passions or sexual desires of and seducing in § 288.2(b), meaning of sexual conduct can be objectively ascertained by reference to common experiences for purposes of acts proscribed by § 288.2(b), and where meaning of sexual conduct can easily be made certain by reference to other statutes in companion chapters of Penal Code dealing with related subject of obscenity. People v. Hsu (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 976, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

Pen. Code § 646.9(a), prohibiting stalking by, inter alia, harassing, is not void for vagueness where § 646.9(a), in conjunction with definition of term "harasses" contained in Pen. Code § 646.9(e) provides person of ordinary intelligence reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he or she may act accordingly. People v. Ewing (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 199, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 177

Pen. Code § 4502(a), prohibiting possession of sharp instrument while confined in penal institution, is not unconstitutionally vague on its face, where viewing § 4502(a) according to fair import of its terms person of ordinary intelligence would know what is and what is not prohibited by statute; § 4502(a) also is not unconstitutionally vague as applied to inmate who possessed sharp instrument in his cell that was capable of being used to inflict injury as stabbing device and was not necessary for inmate to have in his possession. People v. Custodio (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 807, 811-813, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18

In prosecution of jury nullification advocate under state jury tampering statute, statute as interpreted by Alaska state Supreme Court as prohibiting knowingly communicating with juror, directly or indirectly, with intent to influence outcome of specific case, unless such communication was permitted by rules of proceeding, did not violate First Amendment as overbroad. Turney v. Pugh (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1197, 1200-1205

City ordinances prohibiting in general terms "physical contact" between entertainers and patrons is not void for vagueness, where ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and in manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement; ordinances prohibiting owners and persons with managerial control over place of entertainment from allowing specific sexual acts and specific acts of touching, caressing, fondling and stimulation are also not void for vagueness, where what is meant is easily understood by person of ordinary intelligence and where use of wordsin context are clear to anyone; similarly, stage height and distance requirements requiring that stage be six feet from nearest area occupied by patrons, and prohibition against patron directly tipping entertainer are not void for vagueness. Tily B., Inc. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 22, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6

Void-for-vagueness doctrine requires that penal statute define criminal offense with sufficient certainty that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited, and in manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement; curfew that specifies "no person" shall be on streets at specific times is not void for vagueness because it applies, on its face, to all persons, clearly informs the public and police of the proscribed illegal conduct, and does not allow the police to stop people on a "whim." In re Juan C. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1102-1103, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919

[9] Overbreadth Doctrine

18 U.S.C. § 2252A(a)(3)(B), which criminalizes in specified circumstances pandering or solicitation of child pornography, is not overbroad, where statute's definition of material or purported material that may not be pandered or solicited precisely tracks material held constitutionally proscribable in earlier cases, and where statute does not criminalize substantial amount of protected expressive activity because offers to provide or requests to obtain child pornography are categorically excluded from First Amendment. United States v. Williams (2008) 553 U.S. 285, 128 S. Ct. 1830, 1838-1845, 170 L. Ed. 2d 650

Nonresident arrested for trespassing after notice not to return to housing development failed to show that housing authority policy was overbroad in violation of First Amendment, even assuming unlawfulness of unwritten rule that demonstrating and leafleting at development required permission from manager. Nonresident failed to show no-return notice served on nonresidents with no "legitimate business or social purpose" to be in development would be given to anyone engaged in constitutionally protected speech by failing to show that any First Amendment activity fell outside "legitimate business or social purpose" permitting entry. Provision authorizing police to arrest nonresidents returning to development after receiving barment notice did no t violate First Amendment as applied to persons whose postnotice entry was not for purpose of engaging in constitutionally protected speech. Even assuming the streets of development, which had become private, were public forum, notice-barment rule subjected to arrest those reentering after trespassing and being warned not to return regardless of whether, on their return, they sought to engage in speech. Finally, notice-barment and "legitimate business or social purpose" rules applied to all persons, not just to those seeking to engage in expression. Virginia v. Hicks (2003) 539 U.S. 113, 123 S. Ct. 2191, 2199, 156 L. Ed. 2d 148

Child Online Protection Act's (COPA) reliance in part on community standards to identify material harmful to minors does not violate First Amendment by rendering statute facially unconstitutional as overbroad, even though Internet publishers are unable to control geographic scope of recipients of their communications, since COPA is additionally restricted to material displayed on World Wide Web for commercial purposes, and defines the harmful-to-minors material restricted in manner parallel to Miller definition of obscenity. *Ashcroft v. Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 (CPPA), 18 U.S.C. § 2251 et seq., extending federal prohibition against child pornography to sexually explicit images that appear to depict minors but were produced without using real children, is overbroad and unconstitutional, when it proscribes significant universe of speech that is neither obscene under Miller nor child pornography under New York v. Ferber. Ashcroft v. Free Speech Coalition (2002) 535 U.S. 234

Gov. Code § 6254(f)(3), requiring that person requesting arrestee's address declare that request is made for one of five prescribed purposes and that address will not be used directly or indirectly to sell product or service, is not constitutionally overbroad where § 6254(f)(3) is not abridgment of anyone's right to engage in speech, but simply law regulating access to information in government's hands. Los Angeles Police Dept. v. United Reporting Publishing Corp. (1999) 528 U.S. 32, 120 S. Ct. 483, 145 L. Ed. 2d 451

Provisions of Communications Decency Act of 1996 (CDA) prohibiting knowing transmission of obscene or "indecent" messages to recipient under 18 years of age and knowing sending or displaying of "patently offensive" messages in manner available to person under 18 years of age, are overbroad; CDA effectively suppresses large amount of speech adults have constitutional right to receive and to address to one another, and burden on adult speech is unacceptable if less restrictive alternatives would be at least as effective in achieving legitimate purpose of protecting children from harmful materials that CDA was enacted to serve. Reno v. ACLU (1997) 521 U.S. 844, 117 S. Ct. 2329, 138 L. Ed. 2d 874

In addressing overbreadth challenge to statutory enactment, court's first task is ascertaining whether enactment reaches substantial amount of constitutionally protected conduct; in that assessment, court considers actual text of statute as well as limiting constructions that have been developed. *Boos v. Statute that prohibits protected speech along with unprotected speech so that it has chilling effect on free expression is facially invalid; broadly written statute that has deterrent effect on free expression may be challenged by party whose own conduct is unprotected. *City Council v. Organization's challenge to executive order issued by President in wake of attack of September 11, 2001, blocking property of 27 designated terrorists and authorizing Secretary of Treasury to designate others whom Secretary determines to be acting for, providing support or services to, or are otherwise associated with, designated persons, as unconstitutionally overbroad failed, where organization could not suggest how designation of U.S. groups or individuals under executive order could be unconstitutional if groups or individuals were aiding or supporting terrorists, and where there was no reason to think that "infinite regression of designations" implicated due process if each designation was in turn based on impermissible dealings with "Specially Designated Global Terrorists" (SDGTs). Further, as the executive order was not aimed at speech and did not cover substantial amount of it, ban on "services" to SDGTs was not facially overbroad. Humanitarian Law Project v. United States Treasury Dep't (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1133, 1145, 1148

Federal restitution lien statute [18 U.S.C. § 3613], which assisted government in collecting unpaid restitution orders imposed on those convicted of federal crimes, and which provided that lien arose automatically upon entry of judgment against these individuals and could be enforced against all property and property rights regardless of nature of property, was not subject to facial challenge as overbroad, where statute was generally applied to all individuals subject to restitution orders, was not dependent upon discretion of any government officials, and did not vary according to type of property owned by these individuals. United States v. Kaczynski (9th Cir. 2009) 551 F.3d 1120, 1124-1126

18 U.S.C. § 1466A(a)(1), proscribing transfer of certain obscene visual representations of sexual abuse of children, was not unconstitutionally overbroad because it encompassed material not produced with actual minors, where statute required that material be obscene and statutes proscribing conduct only with respect to material that is obscene under Miller test are not overbroad. United States v. Schales (9th Cir. 2008) 546 F.3d 965, 971-972

City's requirement that street performers have permit within city's arts center was not overbroad, where requirement affected only specific form of activity that had generated documented concerns for patrons and center staff; where, although permit requirement affected all street performers, not only those proven to be disruptive, city was not required to wait for problems to arise or to speculate as to which performers would pose greater threats; where attempts to discriminate among performers in granting permits could have destroyed content neutrality of permit scheme; and where permit requirement for all street performances did not exceed scope warranted by city'sinterests in order and accountability. Rule limiting street performers to specific locations was not overbroad, where street performers could still perform in numerous well-located sites. Berger v. City of Seattle (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 582, 593-594, 601-603

Because section 303(a) of Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA) and 2004 amendment, Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act (IRTPA), codified at 18 U.S.C. § 2339B(a), making crime to knowingly provide "material support or resources" to support to even nonviolent activities of designated organization, was not aimed at expressive conduct and did not cover substantial amount of protected speech, prohibition against providing "material support or resources" to foreign terrorist organization was not facially overbroad. Humanitarian Law Project v. Mukasey (9th Cir. 2007) 509 F.3d 1122, 1136-1137

County ordinance prohibiting residential picketing activity targeted at and within 300 feet of residential dwelling in unincorporated areas of county was not unconstitutionally overbroad. Ordinance prohibited only picketing targeted at single residential dwelling and was not intended to preclude right to picket in residential area generally and in manner that did not target or focus on particular residence or household. Further, ordinance was unlikely to have substantial effect on truly welcome picketing. Klein v. San Diego County (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 1029, 1037-1038

Definitions of "charitable" and "solicitation" in city ordinance governing solicitations by charitable organizations were not unconstitutionally overbroad because they indirectly burdened solicitation activities by religious organizations in violation of Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses of First Amendment, when overbreadth challenges cannot be based on constitutional provisions other than the protection for speech and other specified settings, not including Establishment and Free Exercise Clauses. Gospel Missions of Am. v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2005) 419 F.3d 1042, 1049-1051

City ordinance requiring adult cabaret dancers to remain two feet away from patrons during performances and defining

"adult cabaret dancer" was not unconstitutionally overbroad because it could apply to mainstream or avant-garde performances as well as adult entertainment, when potentially overbroad applications of ordinance were minimal since performances occurring outside adult cabaret were unaffected by ordinance, and performances occurring in adult cabaret and containing sexual emphasis defining adult cabaret dancer were within ordinance's legitimate sweep. Gammoh v. City of La Habra (9th Cir. 2005) 395 F.3d 1114, 1121-1122

Federal statute prohibiting using Internet to solicit sexual activity from minor [18 U.S.C. § 2422(b)] is not facially unconstitutional as overbroad for incorporating local criminal laws in determining whether sexual activity solicited from minortriggers culpability, when statute national in scope may rely on community standards for determining what is harmful to minors without being substantially overbroad for purposes of First Amendment, and when any concern with not knowing identity or whereabouts of person at other end of e-mail, instant messaging, or website was addressed by statute's intent requirement, both with regard to minor and illegal sexual activity. United States v. Dhingra (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 557, 563-564

City ordinance regulating location of adult retail establishments and defining regulated establishments as enclosed building or any portion thereof which, for money or any other form of consideration, devotes significant or substantial portion of its stock in trade to sale, exchange, rental, loan, trade, transfer, or viewing of adult-oriented merchandise was not overbroad, when cases directly addressing phrase "significant or substantial" in this context have upheld its validity and phrase is readily susceptible to narrowing construction, and when "any portion thereof" clause plainly meant ordinance was intended to cover stores occupying only portion of enclosed building, such as one store in shopping mall, as distinct from entire building, and language had nothing to do with determination whether adult material constituted significant or substantial portion of store's stock. World Wide Video of Wash., Inc. v. City of Spokane (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1186, 1198-1199

City ordinance prohibiting carrying or possession of rectangular wooden pieces more than 1/4 inch thick and 2 inches wide, or non-rectangular pieces thicker than 3/4 inch is not facially unconstitutional as overbroad, where ordinance applies to all demonstrators, regardless of persuasion, viewpoint, or cause, and its self-avowed purpose is to protect police and demonstrators alike, so it is justified without reference to content of regulated speech; where ordinance is narrowly tailored to meet city's substantial interest in safeguarding its citizens and police against violence; and where ordinance does not deprive demonstrators of alternative means of communication. Vlasak v. Superior Court (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 683, 689-690

Community college's workplace violence definition as including, but not being limited to, making written, physical, or visual contact with verbal threats or violent behavior overtones violates First Amendment, when some expression with violent "overtones" would not offend standard defining unprotected threat as whether reasonable person would foresee that statement would be interpreted by those to statement made as serious expression of intent to harm or assault. Bauer v. Sampson (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 775, 782

Provision of Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 criminalizing material that "appears to be a minor" and "convey[s] the impression" of a minor engaged in explicit sexual activity is constitutionally infirm as overbroad, since nonobscene sexual expression not involving actual children is protected under First Amendment. Free Speech Coalition v. Reno (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 1083, 1095

Injunction against neighbor of restaurant from initiating contact with employees of restaurant at any time or place and requiring neighbor to contact restaurant management to communicate any problems related to restaurant's operation, and from making specified defamatory statements about restaurant to third persons, was impermissibly broad and violated neighbor's right to free speech under federal and California Constitutions, but properly limited injunction prohibiting neighbor from repeating to third persons statements about restaurant that were determined at trial to be defamatory would not violate right to free speech. Balboa Island Village Inn v. Lemen (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1141, 1147-1161, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 156 P.3d 339

Probation condition imposed on juvenile forbidding her association with "anyone disapproved of by probation" was, in absence of express requirement of knowledge, unconstitutionally vague, where, as orally pronounced by juvenile court and as set forth in minute order, condition did not notify juvenile in advance with whom she might not associate through any reference to persons whom defendant knew to be disapproved of by her probation officer. In re Sheena K. (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 875, 889-892, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 716, 153 P.3d 282

Injunction barring racial epithets directed at or descriptive of Hispanic/Latino employees, even outside hearing of Hispanic/Latino employees, was not constitutionally infirm as overbroad where it certainly is possible that use of racial epithets even outside hearing of Hispanic/Latino employees would contribute to atmosphere of racial hostility perpetuating hostile work environment created by employer, and where nothing in limited record presented to California Supreme Court suggested that injunction was more burdensome than necessary to prevent future violations of California Fair Employment and Housing Act. Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 121, 145-146, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132, 980 P.2d 846

Preliminary injunction enjoining gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within specified four-block residential area was not overbroad; foundation of overbreadth doctrine is inhibitory effect of contested statute on freedom of those, although possibly subject to its reach, who are not before court, and injunction presented no danger of violating rights of parties not before court, and injunction did not embody broad and abstract commands of statute, but was product of concrete judicial proceeding prompted by particular events inimical to well-being of residents of area that led to specific request for preventive relief. People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1112-1115, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596

Probation condition that defendant not attend any court hearing or be within 500 feet of any court in which he is neither defendant nor under subpoena was overbroad, where condition was not limited to protecting specific witnesses or parties or confined to trials involving gang members, it was so broad that it restricted defendant from engaging in activities unrelated to future criminality, and Attorney General had not shown why narrower condition restricting attendance at trials of gang members and prohibiting contact with witnesses would not have sufficed. People v. Perez (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 380, 383-386, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632

Probation condition prohibiting defendant from possessing gang paraphernalia was not unconstitutionally overbroad because it tailored restrictions to articles that were evidence of defendant's gang of choice, but purportedly required defendant to avoid colors, symbols, and paraphernalia from all criminal gangs, where defendant's need for rehabilitation was due to his association with criminal street gang, and condition could be aimed squarely at that without inserting name of his gang. However, condition prohibiting defendant from appearing at any court proceeding unless defendant is party, defendant in criminal action, or subpoenaed as witness, or with permission of probation officer was overbroad restriction of defendant's First Amendment right of access to court proceedings, where condition was neither limited to protecting specific witnesses or parties nor confined to trials involving gang members and prevented activities unrelated to future criminality; condition was not saved because it allowed defendant to attend court proceedings with probation officer's permission, because condition in effect delegated unfettered discretion to probation officer to determine its scope. People v. Leon (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 943, 951, 952-954, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 410

Probation condition imposed after plea of no contest to grand theft that defendant possess no stolen property was overbroad, where defendant had constitutional right to possess property, "stolen" nature of property would not always be apparent, express requirement of knowledge had to appear in probation condition; to extent it was overbroad, it was not reasonably related to compelling state interest in reformation and rehabilitation and was unconstitutional restriction on exercise of fundamental constitutional rights, and was modified to prohibit defendant from being in possession of stolen property he knew was stolen. People v. Freitas (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 747, 750-751, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 51

Probation condition forbidding defendant from associating with persons designated by his probation officer was unconstitutionally overbroad, where requirement that defendant not be present with persons designated by probation officer was not limited to those who defendant knew to have been so designated, and where there were no limits on persons whom probation officer could prohibit defendant from associating with, which would allow probation officer to banish defendant by forbidding contact with his family and close friends, even though prohibition might have no relationship to state's interest in reforming and rehabilitating defendant. People v. O'Neil (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1355-1358, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 878

Preliminary injunction prohibiting ex-wife from contacting ex-husband's employer, which was sheriff's department, concerning ex-husband, except to call "911 to report criminal conduct." was unconstitutionally overbroad, where, balanced against substantial burden on ex-wife's constitutional petitioning rights resulting from court's restrictions on her communications with sheriff's department, and there was minimal evidence in record supporting need for pretrial injunction on communications; where record did not support conclusion ex-husband would prevail on his causes of action challenging ex-wife's complaints to sheriff's department; and where there were less intrusive means to limit ex-wife's filing false complaints with sheriff's department. Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1171-1173, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859

Pen. Code § 288.2(b), prohibiting knowing transmission of harmful matter to minor with intent of seducing minor, is not unconstitutionally overbroad, where statute is sufficiently tailored to serve a compelling state interest of protecting children from harmful material by proscribing only transmission of harmful matter to known minor with intent to sexually arouse and seduce minor. People v. Garelick (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1107, 1122-1124, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 815

Provision enjoining criminal street gang members from possessing open containers of alcoholic beverages in public or knowingly being in presence of someone possessing or of open container of alcohol in public was not overbroad in violation of right to privacy, where possessing open container of alcoholic beverage in public view or in place accessible to public was not freedom protected by constitutional right to privacy. People ex rel. Totten v. Colonia Chiques (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 31, 51, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70

Probation conditions prohibiting defendant who pled no contest to felony indecent exposure from associating with persons under 18 and possessing sexually stimulating materials or patronizing places where materials were available were unconstitutionally vague, where conditions did not provide fair notice of prohibited activities; conditions modified to prohibit association with persons defendant knows or reasonably should know to be under age of 18 unless accompanied by responsible adult unrelated to defendant, and to prohibit possession of sexually stimulating/oriented material having been informed by probation officer that material is inappropriate and/or patronize places where such material or entertainment in style of said material were known to be available. People v. Turner (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1435-1437, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803

Probation condition that minor who was ward of court by reason of her having committed misdemeanor battery that she not associate with anyone disapproved of by probation officer was unconstitutionally vague and overbroad; because of breadth of probation officer's power to virtually preclude minor's association with anyone, minor must be advised in advance of those whom minor must avoid. However, conditions that she not use or possess dangerous or deadly weapons, and not remain with any person known to be unlawfully armed were not vague or overbroad and were permissible, because people of common intelligence know what is deadly or dangerous weapon and trial court's judgment was that she could not remain with anyone she knows is unlawfully armed. In re Sheena K. (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 436, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444

County fair dress code prohibiting apparel or accessories intended to provoke, offend, or intimidate others, including offensive slogans, insignia, or "gang colors" was overbroad because it did not aim specifically at evils within allowable area of governmental control, but swept within its ambit other activities constituting exercise of protected expression and conduct, since a great deal of the apparel and accessories celebrated in contemporary fashion magazines can fairly be described as provocative and/or intimidating, and conventional dress bearing forms of political speech and religious expression protected under First Amendment are clearly offensive to many people, and sometimes even likely to provoke violence. Gatto v. County of Sonoma (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 744, 776-777, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550

Pen. Code § 288.2, prohibiting transmission of harmful matter to a minor (including over the Internet, Pen. Code § 288.2(b)), with intent of seducing minor, is not unconstitutionally overbroad as chilling protected speech, where banned matter is properly defined; § 288.2 only addresses communications in which adult seeks to seduce child, and activity prohibited by § 288.2 is more akin to conduct than communication. Hatch v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 170, 197-204, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453

Pen. Code § 288.2(b), prohibiting distribution or exhibition of lewd matter to minor by Internet, is not unconstitutionally overbroad, when it is written in manner thatdoes not impermissibly infringe on rights of adults to transmit and receive constitutionally protected material via Internet, since to violate § 288.2(b), sender must know recipient is minor, know transmitted matter is harmful, intend to arouse minor's sexual desires, and intend to seduce minor, and chilling effect is on those who would use otherwise protected speech to seduce minors; when built-in affirmative defenses limit reach of § 288.2(b) so that it targets only those who prey on minors to seduce them; and when gauges whether published material is harmful to minors on narrow basis of contemporary statewide standards. People v. Hsu (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 976, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184

City ordinances prohibiting entertainer or nonmanagerial employee from allowing patrons of adult-oriented businesses to engage in specified sexual acts and prohibiting same individuals from allowing any person to touch, caress, or fondle certain anatomical parts of any other person are overbroad, when neither entertainers nor nonmanagerial employees ordinarily have control over conduct between patrons of club nor, presumably, authority to eject them, and city could revoke adult business's permit because entertainer or waiter/waitress failed to stop one patron from fondling another patron, so that restrictions are not narrowly drawn to achieve city's legitimate goals; further, ordinance requiring restroom attendant to be present in restroom duringoperating hours to prevent any persons from engaging in any specified sexual activities within restroom is also overbroad, since ordinance is drawn so as to require attendant to prevent touching of genitals or buttocks, so that attendant is required to prevent patrons from using facilities for intended sanitary purposes; however, stage height and distance requirements further the city's interest in crime and disease prevention and are narrowly tailored to meet that goal, so they are constitutional. Tily B., Inc. v. City of Newport Beach (1998) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1, 22-23, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6

Code Civ. Proc. § 391.7, allowing court to enter order prohibiting "vexatious litigant" from filing new state court litigation absent leave of court, is not overbroad for preventing filing of writs of habeas corpus and petitions for dissolution of marriage, resolution of paternity, and adoption, since court presumably will take nature of action into consideration, and, as to all categories of cases, if presiding judge refused to exercise or abused his or her discretion, litigant could file mandamus action in higher court to compel presiding judge to act according to law. Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 60-61, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694

[9A] Waiver

Individual indicted for violations of federal obscenity laws and operation of criminal enterprise knowingly and voluntarily waived First Amendment rights as part of plea agreement, by agreeing to consent decree permanently enjoining him from involvement with production, sale, or distribution of any sexually explicit materials, even though terms of consent decree reach not only obscene materials, but also sweep in nonobscene sexually-explicit materials otherwise protected by First Amendment, and even though district court failed to establish explicitly, on the record, voluntary waiver of the First Amendment rights potentially implicated by consent decree, when record established that individual had discussed consent decree with his attorneys, that he had read it, and that he understood it, court elicited from prosecution description of consent decree that clearly indicated that injunction at issue was central feature of decree, and court then asked second time if individual understood terms of agreement, and where individual never contended that he actually did not understand agreement. United States v. Berke (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 882

Confidential settlement agreement in earlier lawsuit between author of book and attorney allegedly defamed in book did not constitute waiver of First Amendment protections, where confidentiality clause does not by its terms specifically prohibit characterizations of legal abilities or personality of attorney, where attorney's complaint in defamation action does not assert attorney was party to confidentiality agreement or even mentioned in terms of agreement, and when terminology used in agreement is so imprecise and overbroad as to fall short of being clear and compelling waiver of specific First Amendment rights regarding comments about attorney. Ferlauto v. Hamsher (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1399-1400, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843

[9B] Remedies

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 challenging city ordinance prohibiting leafleting of unoccupied vehicles parked on city streets, plaintiff was entitled to preliminary injunction, where plaintiff demonstrated likelihood of success on merits of claim that ordinance violated his right to free speech under the federal and state constitutions as city failed to show that ordinance was narrowly tailored to advance either of its asserted interests, and where plaintiff demonstrated that he was likely to suffer irreparable injury in absence of preliminary injunction and balance of equities and public interest tipped in his favor because loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constituted irreparable injury, and harm was particularly irreparable as plaintiff sought to engage in political speech. Klein v. City of San Clemente (9th Cir. 2009) 584 F.3d 1196, 1207-1208

In action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, trial court could deny company lost profits caused by preliminary injunction and stay pending appeal city sought and superior court and court of appeal, respectively, issued on grounds that city's ordinance that was legal basis for preliminary injunction was unconstitutional, where courts' intervening exercise of independent judgment in issuing preliminary injunction and stay, though former was dissolved and latter was lifted after ordinance was declared unconstitutional, broke chain of causation for purposes of § 1983 liability in absence of evidence city materially misled or pressured judges who were expected to exercise independent judgment. Because parties disputed whether material misrepresentations were made to judges who issued preliminary injunction and stay, action remanded for further proceedings on that factual issue. Manta Management Corp. v. City of San Bernardino (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 400, 406-413, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 353, 181 P.3d 159

Former city council member alleging violation of free speech clause of Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) based on conduct of various city officials and other individuals that assertedly interfered with performance of her duties, could not bring action for money damages, when no statutory provision or established common law tort authorized a damage remedy for constitutional violation. Degrassi v. Cook (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 333, 335-344, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508, 58 P.3d 360

[10] Right of Association

Solomon Amendment [10 U.S.C. § 983], specifying that if any part of institution of higher education denied military recruiters access equal to that provided other recruiters, entire institution would lose certain federal funds, did not infringe schools' First Amendment freedom of association for purpose of speaking, when recruiters were, by definition, outsiders coming onto campus for limited purpose of trying to hire students, not to become members of school's expressive association, and when students and faculty were free to associate to voice their disapproval of military's message and nothing about statute affected composition of group by making group membership less desirable. Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic & Institutional Rights, Inc. (2006) 547 U.S. 47, 126 S. Ct. 1297, 1311-1313, 164 L. Ed. 2d 156

California's blanket open primary violates First Amendment right of association where open primary forces political parties to associate with, to have their nominees, their positions determined by those who have refused to affiliate with party or have expressly affiliated with rival, and the prospect of having party's nominee determined by adherents of opposing party is clear and present danger; when no compelling state interest was articulated; and when even if state interests were compelling, blanket primary was not narrowly tailored means of furthering them. California Democratic Party v. Jones (2000) 530 U.S. 567, 120 S. Ct. 2402, 2408, 147 L. Ed. 2d 502

First Amendment permits public university to require students to pay nonrefundable student activity fee used to fund program to facilitate free and open exchange of extracurricular student speech, where university's mission is served by providingstudents with means to engage in dynamic extracurricular discussions of philosophical, religious, scientific, social, and political subjects, and allocation of funding support to student organizations engaging in such speech is viewpoint neutral; remand was necessary to resolve question of First Amendment validity of student referendum mechanism, which appeared to permit exaction of fees in violation of viewpoint neutrality. Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System v. Southworth (2000) 529 U.S. 217, 120 S. Ct. 1346, 146 L. Ed. 2d 193

In action by white merchants against black individuals and organizations seeking racial equality and integration, for losses sustained during 7-year boycott of their businesses, First Amendment precluded imposition of liability on boycott participants for all damages resulting from boycott, because boycott was protected by First Amendment as nonviolent, politically-motivated, and designed to force governmental and economic change, and liability could not be imposed on individuals who were nonviolent solely by association with individuals who committed nonviolent acts. N.A.A.C.P. v. Claiborne Hardware Co. (1982) 458 U.S. 886, 102 S. Ct. 3409, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1215

Sheriff's officer who removed child from home without warrant and placed her in protective custody based on interview with child after she had returned home after running away was entitled to summary judgment on claim that he violated mother's and stepfather's familial association rights, where officer's reliance on child's statements was reasonable and, under totality of circumstances, officer had reasonable cause to believe child was in imminent danger of physical harm, and there was no delay here between interview with child and decision to remove her, and where, as to mother, removing child from her because she lived with allegedly abusive stepfather was reasonable. However, as to non-custodial father, who was never personally accused of violence, scope of officer's intrusion on his associational rights was for jury to decide, where officers made no attempt to contact him and did not explore possibility of putting child in his care that evening rather than placing her in government custody, and he was not informed of removal for two days. Burke v. County of Alameda (9th Cir. 2009) 586 F.3d 725, 731-733

Proponents of successful ballot proposition that was later challenged in court, as to which opponents sought disclosure of internal campaign information, made prima facie showing of arguable First Amendment infringement by demonstrating consequences objectively suggesting impact on, or chilling of, associational rights, where they presented declarations from several individuals attesting to impact compelled disclosure would have on participation and formulation of strategy, after which evidentiary burden should have shifted to plaintiffs to demonstrate sufficient need for discovery to counterbalance infringement. District court erred by not applying heightened relevance test, but, rather, having determined First Amendment privilege did not apply to disclosure of internal campaign communications except to protect identities of rank-and-file members and volunteers, applied Fed. R. Civ. Proc. Rule 26 standard of reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence, and plaintiffs' request satisfied Rule 26 standard, because it was reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence on issues of voter intent and existence of legitimate state interest. Applying First Amendment's more demanding heightened relevance standard, plaintiffs did not demonstrate interest in obtaining disclosures sufficient to justify deterrent effect on free exercise of constitutionally protected right of association. Perry v. Schwarzenegger (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1147, 1159-1165

As part of investigation of criminal activity, by disclosing information about North American Man/Boy Love Association members to FBI field offices, government did not violate members' rights to associational privacy, where FBI did not compel disclosure of membership lists, and FBI investigation did not impose any significant hardships on associational rights of NAMBLA members or lack sufficient connection to legitimate government interest. United States v. Mayer (9th Cir. 2007) 490 F.3d 1129, 1134-1135

Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 ("AEDPA"), which punishes knowingly providing material support or resources to foreign terrorist organization, does not violate First Amendment right of association by imposing guilt by association, where AEDPA does not prohibit being member of designated group, vigorously promoting and supporting political goals of group, praising groups for using terrorism as means of achieving ends, or advocating goals of organizations, but only giving material support, and there is no constitutional right to give terrorists support, and where government need not show specific intent to aid organization's illegal activities before attaching liability to donation of funds. Humanitarian Law Project v. Reno (9th Cir. 2000) 205 F.3d 1130, 1133-1134

University did not violate students' free speech and associational rights by requiring them, as condition of matriculation, to pay incidental fees that contributed to the support of student public interest research group education fund, where fund's activities are germane to purpose for which mandatory exaction was imposed as matter of law and distribution of funds to fund serves legitimate governmental interest that does not violate First Amendment. Rounds v. Oregon State Bd. of Higher Educ. (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1032

Preliminary injunction enjoining gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within specified four-block residential area did not violate First Amendment right of association, since gang affiliation does not fall within either of two kinds of associations entitled to First Amendment protection, "intimate" or "intrinsic" associations, such as familial associations, or joining together forpolitical, social, economic, educational, religious and cultural ends. People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110-1112, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596

Injunction prohibiting enjoined persons from knowingly associating with criminal street gang members did not impermissibly burden associational rights of those enjoined, where injunction as issued had limited impact on familial relationships, and any liberalization of injunction to try to allow greater familial contact in target area would have limited effectiveness of injunction. People ex rel. Totten v. Colonia Chiques (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 31, 45-46, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70

Probation conditions prohibiting defendant who pled no contest to felony indecent exposure from associating with persons under 18 and possessing sexually stimulating materials or patronizing places where materials were available were unconstitutionally overbroad; conditions as modified to prohibit association with persons defendant knows or reasonably should know to be under age of 18 unless accompanied by responsible adult unrelated to defendant, and to prohibit possession of sexually stimulating/oriented material having been informed by probation officer that material is inappropriate and/or patronize places where such material or entertainment in style of said material were known to be available not overbroad, because defendant had two convictions for indecent exposure involving child victims and two federal convictions for possessing child pornography, giving state compelling interest in protecting children from him, and preventing possession of sexually oriented materials by persons such as defendant promoted public safety and his rehabilitation and did not infringe on his First Amendment rights. People v. Turner (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1432, 1435-1437, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 803

Injunction obtained by mother to restrain boy from contacting minor daughter did not violate boy's First Amendment right of association, because boy had no right to associate with plaintiff's minor child or to otherwise interfere with her parents' exercise of their right to control her activities. Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1410-1411, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609

[11] Right to Petition Government for Redress of Grievances

Code Civ. Proc. § 391 et seq., "vexatious litigant" statute, did not violate federal or state right to petition government for redress of litigant who previously lost five suits against government in seven years, even though statute did not require that five losing suits be frivolous, since statute required proof that suer had come into court again with suit with no reasonable probability of success in order to be declared vexatious litigant, which, coupled with abysmal history of failure, was sufficient to establish vexatiousness in sense of litigation lacking reasonable or probable cause or excuse. Wolfgram v. Wells Fargo Bank (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 43, 55-59, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 694

[12] Forced Expression

Solomon Amendment [10 U.S.C. § 983], specifying that if any part of institution of higher education denied military recruiters access equal to that provided other recruiters, entire institution would lose certain federal funds, did not infringe schools' First Amendment freedom of speech as forced speech, when Congress' constitutional authority to provide for common defense included authority to require campus access for military recruiters and Congress' power to regulate military recruiting under Solomon Amendment was arguably greater than First Amendment rights because universities were free to decline federal funds. Solomon Amendment neither limited what law schools could say nor required them to say anything, and conduct regulated by Solomon Amendment was not inherently expressive. Rumsfeld v. Forum for Academic & Institutional Rights, Inc. (2006) 547 U.S. 47, 126 S. Ct. 1297, 1306-1311, 164 L. Ed. 2d 156

Provisions in state statute forbidding employers who received state grant or program funds in excess of $10,000 from using funds to assist, promote, or deter union organizing did not violate employers' First Amendment rights by compelling employers to take position of neutrality with regard to labor relations. Statutes did not impose any condition on receipt of state grant and program funds, and, because employer retained freedom to raise and spend its own funds however it wished, so long as it did not use state grant and program funds on union-related advocacy, statutes did not infringe employers' First Amendment right to express whatever view they wished on organizing. Chamber of Commerce of the United States v. Lockyer (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 1076, 1096-1097

District court's order that copy of preliminary injunction enjoining defendants from engaging in plan or arrangement advising or encouraging taxpayers to attempt to violate internal revenue laws or unlawfully evade assessment or collection of federal tax liabilities on defendants' websites did not violate their First Amendment rights by forcing them to promote ideological position with which they did not agree, because defendants sold product that, if used, could expose customers to criminal liability for tax evasion, and government did not offend First Amendment by warning potential customers of hazards of product. United States v. Schiff (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 621, 630-631

City could properly condition Sea Scouts' free berth at city marina on group's adoption ofmembership policy that expressly adopted nondiscrimination policy against homosexuals and atheists without violating group's First Amendment rights when city did not prohibit or penalize group's exercise of speech or associational rights. To extent Sea Scouts objected to compliance with city's policy, organization was free to terminate its participation in free berth program and avoid requirements of nondiscrimination provision. Evans v. City of Berkeley (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 1, 10-21, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 205, 129 P.3d 394

[13] Standing

Protestors had standing to maintain claim that Coast Guard's rule establishing security zone around harbor to allow high-speed ferry to dock prevented them from exercising their First Amendment right to communicate view that operation of ferry was illegal by blocking its entrance, where several protestors referenced First Amendment in their complaint, complaint detailed protests that had already occurred, and many protestors alleged their resolve to reenter water in protest should ferry return, and there was little doubt, based on affidavits in record, that once ferry resumed operations, Coast Guard would enforce security zone, and protestors' asserted First Amendment rights would be implicated. Wong v. Bush (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 732, 735-736

Organization that organized two separate events covered by city ordinance had standing to challenge its facial constitutionality based on showing of injury in fact fairly traceable to ordinance that was likely to be redressed if its First Amendment action was successful, where city assessed departmental services charges against organization for second event and brought suit in state court to obtain payment, where organization provided evidence that it modified its behavior as a result of ordinance by declining to hold such events in city in future because of city's enforcement of ordinance, and where organization stated that if district court's permanent injunction against enforcement of ordinance were upheld, it would hold expressive events in city. Long Beach Area Peace Network v. City of Long Beach (9th Cir. 2008) 522 F.3d 1010, 1018-1019

Organization that organized marches and demonstrations and obtained permits to do so in other localities had standing to challenge city ordinance establishing permitting process for community events held in public spaces. Organization's apprehension that ordinance would be enforced against it for engaging in activities protected by First Amendment without permit was sufficient to establish injury-in-fact and support facial challenge, injury alleged was fairly traceable to ordinance, and injury would likely be redressed by decision in organization's favor. Fact that organization never applied for permit under ordinance did not destroy its standing because organization was subject to law and could challenge it facially without necessity of first applying for and being denied permit, and organization averred that it had modified its behavior by choosing locations other than city because of permit requirements. Santa Monica Foods Not Bombs v. City of Santa Monica (9th Cir. 2006) 450 F.3d 1022, 1033-1034

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Injunctive Relief Against Violation of Constitutional Right to Free Speech and Free Assembly)

1. Plaintiff _____ [name] is _____ [allege facts regarding plaintiff's capacity and standing, e.g., a California nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of (describe in detail purpose of corporation). Plaintiff's principal place of business is located at _____ (city), _____ County, California].

2. Defendant _____ [name of government entity] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [state capacity and type of governmental entity], duly organized under the laws of the State of California, and was empowered and authorized to _____ [describe duties and operations of entity, e.g., enforce all rules and regulations for government operations and management of the public facilities and properties under its jurisdiction]. [Unless defendant is the county, add: Defendant _____ (name of governmental entity) is located and operates within the County of _____.]

3. Defendant, _____ [name], is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [allege capacities and duties of any individual defendant(s), e.g., the chief administrative officer of defendant _____ (name of governmental entity), and is and at all times herein mentioned has been responsible for the enforcement of ordinances, rules, and regulations pertaining to facilities and property owned and/or operated by defendant _____ (name of governmental entity)].

4. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's injuries as herein alleged were proximately caused by the wrongful conduct of these fictitiously named defendants.]

5. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [A]t all times herein mentioned, defendants _____ [names], were the agents, servants, and employees of their codefendants and in doing the things hereinafter alleged were acting within the course and scope of their authority as agents, servants, and employees with the permission and consent of their codefendants.

6. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [A]t all times herein mentioned defendant _____ [name] was authorized and empowered by defendant _____ [name of principal] to act and did act as the agent of defendant _____ [name of principal], and each and all of the things herein alleged to have been done by him/her were done in the capacity of and as agent for defendant _____ [name of principal].

7. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [A]t all times herein mentioned, each of the defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, was the agent and employee of each of the remaining defendants and was at all times acting within the course and scope of that agency and employment.

8. Defendant _____ [name of entity] has promulgated an ordinance that requires certain public facilities and properties under its jurisdiction to be dedicated as forums for members of the public and/or public groups to _____ [specify nature of use, e.g., use to peaceably meet, assemble, and disseminate and convey messages and information to the public]. A copy of this ordinance is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this complaint by reference.

9. Among the facilities and properties covered by the ordinance referred to in Paragraph 8 is _____ [identify and describe public facility that plaintiff desires to use for speech activities].

10. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of official], established procedures to implement the ordinance that included specific requirements for administration of the ordinance referred to in Paragraph 9. Any members of the public and/or public groups who wished to use any facilities or properties operated by defendant _____ [name of entity] as a public forum for assembly, as described in Paragraph 9, were required to submit an application for a permit to defendant _____ [name of official] for approval as to time, place, and manner of use of the forum. A copy of these procedures is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and made a part of this complaint by reference.

11. On _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [name(s)] submitted an application for a permit to use the _____ [name of public facility referred to in Paragraph 9] as a public forum by [specify manner of application, e.g., fully and properly completing the application as described in Paragraph 10 and submitting it to defendant _____ (name of official)'s office]. The application stated that plaintiff wished to use the _____ [name of public facility] to peaceablyassemble for the purpose of _____ [describe in detail the purpose and nature of plaintiff's proposed use of public facility, alleging any facts necessary to show that plaintiff's activities are constitutionally protected, e.g., distributing literature and displaying signs informing the public of plaintiff's position and opinions on the subject of _____ (specify)].

12. On _____ [date], defendant(s) informed plaintiff [by letter] that his/her/its application for a permit was denied on grounds that _____ [specify reasons, e.g., defendant did not consider use of its facilities and properties to be suitable for the purpose of plaintiff's meeting because of its concern for maintaining public safety and it did not believe the forum to be a suitable place for conveying plaintiff's message].

13. _____ [Allege subsequent efforts, if any, to obtain reconsideration of permit denial, e.g., On _____ (date), plaintiff contacted defendant _____ (name of official) and requested a meeting to discuss the denial of the application for permit and request reconsideration of the denial. Defendant _____ (name of official) declined to attend such a meeting and further indicated that there was no process for appealing defendants' decision].

[14. Plaintiff is informed and believe, and on that basis alleges, that the denial of his/her/its application for use of _____ (identify public facility or property) as a public forum was based wholly or in part on defendants' disagreement with the content of the message that plaintiff intended to convey, that is, _____ (specify nature and content of message to be conveyed by plaintiff).]

[EITHER]

15. _____ [Identify public facility] is a public forum that has traditionally been used by members of the public for expressive activities.

[OR]

15. By passing an ordinance described in Paragraph 8, defendant _____ [name of entity] has designated _____ [identify public facility] as a public forum for use by members of the public for expressive activities.

[CONTINUE]

16. No compelling state interest justifies defendants' refusal to make _____ [identify public facility] available for use by plaintiff to convey his/her/its constitutionally protected speech and message. In fact, defendants articulated no legitimate governmental reason whatsoever for refusing plaintiff use of _____ [identify public facility] to convey his/her/its message. Defendants' decision to refuse plaintiff's request for use of _____ [identify public facility] was wholly arbitrary.

17. As a proximate result of defendants' policies and actions, plaintiff has been deprived of the right to free speech and assembly as guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution and by California Constitution, Article I, Sections 2 and 3.

18. Unless defendants are restrained by injunction, plaintiff will continue to suffer severe, irreparable harm in that _____ [describe harm, e.g., the message proposed by plaintiff will not be conveyed in a public forum in defendants' jurisdiction and plaintiff's constitutional rights to express its message as described in Paragraph 10 will continue to be violated]. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that unless the court grants injunctive relief, defendants will continue to prohibit plaintiff's exercise of free speech, and plaintiff and the public will continue to suffer injury as described in Paragraph 17.

19. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law because monetary damages will not afford adequate relief for the suppression of plaintiff's message and the deprivation of plaintiff's constitutional rights.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Relief)

20. Plaintiff incorporates by reference the allegations of Paragraphs 1 through 19, inclusive, in the First Cause of Action, above, as though fully set forth here.

21. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendants regarding their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that defendants' rules, policies, and practices concerning the use of its facilities and properties for speech activities, as described in Paragraphs 8 through 14 inclusive, of the First Cause of Action set forth above, violate plaintiff's rights of freedom of speech and freedom of assembly under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of United States Constitution and under the California Constitution, Article I, Section 2, in the following manner: _____ [specify manner in which policies and actions amount to constitutional violation, e.g., Defendants' rules vest total discretion in defendant _____ (name of official) to determine and allocate use of defendant _____'s (name of entity) property for speech activities and permits arbitrary suppression of messages with which defendant _____ (name of official) disagrees]. Defendants dispute these contentions and contend that the rules, policies, and practices described in this complaint are lawful and constitutional.

22. Plaintiff desires a declaration as to the validity of defendant's rules, policies, and practices, as described in this complaint, both on their face and as applied to plaintiff's permit application and proposed free speech activities. Unless the court issues an appropriate declaration of rights, the parties will not know whether defendants' policies and procedures comply with the law, and there will continue to be disputes and controversy surrounding the defendants' current policies for permitting use of and access to its facilties and properties, including _____ [identify facility], for public use and dissemination of information and messages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all enjoining defendant(s) and his/her/their/its agents, servants, and employees, and all such persons acting under, in concert with, or for him/her/them/it from denying plaintiff's constitutional right to express his/her/its views and inparticular to require defendants, and each of them, to grant plaintiff's application for a permit to use _____ [identify facility] as a public forum for the purposes of distributing literature and other free speech activities, as described in Paragraph 11 of this complaint;

2. For a declaration by the court of the rights and duties of plaintiff herein, and specifically for a declaration that

_____ [describe declaratory judgment sought, e.g., the policies and practices of defendants are unconstitutional as a violation of plaintiff's rights, as described in Paragraph 21];

3. For reasonable attorney's fees according to proof, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use in an action arising from a governmental agency's violation of the plaintiff's constitutional rights of free speech and assembly by denying a permit to use a public forum for constitutionally protected expressive activities. The form combines a complaint for injunctive relief [see generally Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527; Ch. 303, Injunctions] against the defendants' violations of plaintiff's constitutional rights (First Cause of Action), with a complaint for declaratory relief [see generally Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief] requesting that the court declare the defendants' rules, policies, and practices to be unconstitutional (Second Cause of Action). For discussion of free speech rights in public forums, see § 59.13.

In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to add to this complaint a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for damages for deprivation of federal constitutional rights under color of state law. For discussion of the general requirements for establishing a cause of action under that statute and a general form of complaint that may be adapted for that purpose, see Ch. 112, Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

Plaintiff's counsel may also wish to join a petition for writ of mandate compelling the governmental entity to immediately issue the permit to plaintiff for exercise of free speech [see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 427.10, 1084 et seq.; Wrather-Alvarez Inc. v. Hewicker (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 509, 511, 305 P.2d 236] with the causes of action for declaratory and injunctive relief. For discussion of mandate proceedings, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

The prayer of the complaint includes a request for attorney fees under the statutory "private attorney general" provision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5]. For discussion of criteria and procedures for an award of attorney's fees under that statute, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[3] Allegations

[a] Injunctive Relief

The First Cause of Action in [1], above, seeks injunctive relief and alleges the following:

- Plaintiff's capacity (Paragraph 1).

- Defendants' capacities as a governmental entity and officials (Paragraphs 2, 3).

- Agency and fictitious name allegations (Paragraphs 4-7).

- Location and description of the public facility or property that plaintiff wishes to use for free speech activities (Paragraph 9) and its status as a traditional or designated public forum (Paragraph 15) [see, e.g., Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482-483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975 ; see generally discussion in § 59.13].

- Defendants' permit rules and other policies regarding the use of its facilities for such activities (Paragraphs 8, 10).

- Plaintiff's application for a permit to use the public facility for free speech activities and facts showing that the intended use was constitutionally protected under U.S. Const., amend. I, XIV, and Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraph 11).

- Defendants' refusal to grant the permit and the reasons given for the denial, if any (Paragraph 12).

- Plaintiff's subsequent efforts to obtain reconsideration of the permit denial, if any (Paragraph 13).

- Defendants' lack of a constitutionally sufficient justification for denying plaintiff access to the public forum and the consequent violation of plaintiff's rights of free speech and assembly under U.S. Const., amend. I, XIV, and Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraphs 16, 17).

- Facts showing how defendants' denial of permit to use the public forum constitutes great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's constitutional rights (Paragraph 18) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2); E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1] .

- Facts showing plaintiff lacks an adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 19) [see Civ. Code § 3422(1)-(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4)-(6)].

[b] Declaratory Relief

The Second Cause of Action in [1], above, seeks declaratory relief. It incorporates by reference the allegations of the First Cause of Action (Paragraph 20) and alleges the following:

- Facts showing the existence of an actual controversy between the parties concerning their respective rights and duties, including the parties' conflicting contentions regarding the constitutionality of defendants' actions (Paragraph 21) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

- Plaintiff's present need for a declaration of his, her, or its rights (Paragraph 22) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1060, 1061].

[4] Verification

Verification [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446] is required if plaintiff seeks a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction on a complaint instead of on affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a); see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions]. In addition, if a temporary restraining order is sought without notice on the other party, the certification requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c) must be satisfied. For discussion of the procedural requirements for obtaining a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

If no preliminary injunctive relief is sought, the complaint need not be verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a) (unless otherwise required by law, pleadings not required to be verified); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(j) (§ 128.7 applies to complaint or petition filed on or after January 1, 1995, and any other pleading, written notice of motion, or other similar paper filed in that matter)].

A public entity need not verify its answer even though the complaint is verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a)]. However, the verification of a complaint against a public entity does preclude a general denial in superior court actions that are not limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

The complaint should contain allegations showing that the action has been commenced in the proper county for trial. The proper place for trial of an action against a public officer for an act done by him or her "in virtue of the office" is the county in which the cause of action arose [see Code Civ. Proc. § 393(b)]. An action against a city, county, or other local public entity may be tried in the county in which the defendant public entity is located [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)]. As a practical matter, an action against a local governmental entity and its officials arising out of challenges to restrictions on speech activities will normally be brought in the county in which the entity is located, which will also normally be the place where the cause of action arose.

For discussion of venue in actions against the State of California, see Ch. 571, Venue .

An action seeking permanent injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

5. Among the facilities and properties covered by the ordinance referred to in Paragraph 4 is _____ [identify and describe public facility that petitioner desires to use for speech activities].

6. On _____ [date], respondent _____ [name of official], established procedures to implement the ordinance that included specific requirements for administration of the ordinance referred to in Paragraph 4. 7. On _____ [date], petitioner _____ [name(s)] submitted an application for a permit to use the _____ [name of public facility referred to in Paragraph 5] as a public forum by [specify manner of application, e.g., fully and properly completing the application as described in Paragraph 6 and submitting it to respondent _____ (name of official)'s office]. 8. On _____ [date], respondent(s) informed petitioner [by letter] that his/her/its application for a permit was denied on grounds that _____ [specify reasons, e.g., respondent did not consider use of its facilities andproperties to be suitable for the purpose of petitioner's meeting because of a concern for maintaining public safety and it did not believe the forum to be a suitable place for conveying petitioner's message].

In fact, respondents articulated no legitimate governmental reason whatsoever for refusing petitioner use of _____ [identify public facility] to convey his/her/its message. Respondents' decision to refuse petitioner's request for use of _____ [identify public facility] was wholly arbitrary.

13. As a proximate result of respondents' policies and actions, petitioner has been deprived of the right to free speech and assembly as guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution and by California Constitution, Article I, Sections 2 and 3.

14. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, other than the relief sought in this petition, because monetary damages will not afford adequate relief for the suppression of plaintiff's message and the deprivation of plaintiff's constitutional rights, and _____ [specify facts showing absence of any other adequate legal remedy such as appeal].

[15. Respondents' denial of petitioner's application for a permit to _____ (describe in detail the purpose and nature of petitioner's proposed use of public facility) has damaged petitioner in the sum of $_____ in that _____ (describe facts showing petitioner's damages, if any).]

should not do so, and thereafter a peremptory writ commanding respondents to grant petitioner's application for a permit to use _____ [identify facility] as a public forum for the purposes of _____ [specify purposes for which petitioner applied for permit, e.g., distributing literature and other free speech activities, as described in Paragraph 7 of this complaint];

[2] Use of Form

This form is a petition for writ of mandate for expedited judicial review of a decision by a local public agency to deny a permit involving expressive conduct in a public forum protected by U.S. Const., amend. I, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8. An action for expedited review under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8 by the permit applicant must be in the form of a petition for writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085 or 1094.5.

For discussion of free speech rights in public forums, see § 59.13; for discussion of mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition ; for discussion of administrative mandate proceedings, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to join a complaint asserting a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for damages for deprivation of federal constitutional rights under color of state law. For discussion of the general requirements for establishing a cause of action under that statute and a general form of complaint that may be adapted for that purpose, see Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes .

The prayer of the complaint includes a request for attorney fees under the statutory "private attorney general" provision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5]. For discussion of criteria and procedures for an award of attorney's fees under that statute, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[3] Allegations

The petition alleges the following:

- Petitioner's capacity (Paragraph 1).

- Respondents' capacities as a public agency and as officials (Paragraphs 2, 3).

- Location and description of the public facility or property that petitioner wishes to use for free speech activities (Paragraph 5) and its status as a traditional or designated public forum (Paragraph 11) [see, e.g., Clark v. Burleigh (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 474, 482-483, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455, 841 P.2d 975 ; see generally discussion in § 59.13].

- Respondents' permit rules and other policies regarding the use of the agency's facilities for such activities (Paragraph 4, 6).

- Petitioner's application for a permit to use the public facility for free speech activities and facts showing that the intended use was constitutionally protected under U.S. Const., amend. I and Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraph 7).

- Respondents' refusal to grant the permit and the reasons given for the denial, if any (Paragraph 8).

- Petitioner's subsequent efforts to obtain reconsideration of the permit denial, if any (Paragraph 9).

- Respondents' lack of a constitutionally sufficient justification for denying petitioner access to the public forum and the consequent violation of petitioner's rights of free speech and assembly under U.S. Const., amend. I and Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraphs 10, 12).

- That respondents' denial of permit to use the public forum constitutes great and irreparable injury to petitioner's constitutional rights (Paragraph 13).

- Facts showing petitioner lacks an adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 14).

- Damages, if any, suffered by petitioner as a result of respondents' denial of the permit (Paragraph 15).

[4] Notice of Priority and Expedited Hearing and Review

Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.8(d)(3) requires that a petition for expedited judicial review of decisions by local public agencies regarding the issuance, revocation, suspension or denial of a permit involving expressive conduct protected by U.S. Const., amend. I, must contain the following language in 18-point type:

ATTENTION: THIS MATTER IS ENTITLED TO PRIORITY AND SUBJECT TO THE EXPEDITED

HEARING AND REVIEW PROCEDURES CONTAINED IN SECTION 1094.8 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

[5] Verification

A petition for writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1086, 1103]. The verification requirement may be met by affidavit or by declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 1109, 2015.5]. For discussion of the verification requirements for a petition for writ of mandate, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[6] Jurisdiction and Venue

The petition should contain allegations showing that the action has been commenced in the proper county for trial. The proper place for trial of an action against a public officer for an act done by him or her "in virtue ofthe office" is the county in which the cause of action arose [see Code Civ. Proc. § 393(b)]. An action against a city, county, or other local public entity may be tried in the county in which the defendant public entity is located [see Code Civ. Proc. § 394(a)]. As a practical matter, an action against a local governmental entity and its officials arising out of challenges to restrictions on speech activities will normally be brought in the county in which the entity is located, which will also normally be the place where the cause of action arose. For discussion of filing a petition for writ of mandate in Los Angeles County, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition , Form 1; for discussion of venue in actions against the State of California, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[7] Points and Authorities

Neither the Code of Civil Procedure nor the California Rules of Court require points and authorities when a petition for writ of mandate is filed in superior court. However, points and authorities are required by practice in some local rules. Before filing the petition, counsel should ascertain the local practice and rules. However, even if points and authorities are not required by local rules or practice, it is advisable to include a memorandum. For further discussion, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions, § 474C.13[9].

§ 59.51 Complaint Against Action Against Owner and Operator of Shopping Center for Injunctive and Declaratory Relief for Denial of Right to Freedom of Expression [Cal. Const., art. I, § 2]--Denial of Access to Shopping Center for Free Speech Activities

[Caption. See § 59.50[1].]

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Injunctive Relief Against Violation of State Constitutional Right to Free Speech and Free Assembly)

1. [Plaintiff's capacity and standing. See § 59.50[1], Paragraph 1.]

2. Defendant _____ [name of shopping center owner/operator] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [state defendant's capacity, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business in this state at _____ (city), County of _____, California].

3. Defendant _____ [name of individual defendant] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [allege capacities and duties of any individual defendant(s), e.g., an employee of defendant _____ (name of shopping center owner/operator), and is and at all times herein mentioned has been responsible for security at retail shopping center facilties operated by defendant _____ (name of shopping center owner/operator)].

4. [Fictitious name allegations. See § 59.50[1], Paragraph 4.]

5-7. [Agency allegations. See § 59.50[1], Paragraphs 5-7.]

8. Defendant _____ [name of shopping center owner/operator] _____ [owns and/or operates] a retail shopping center known as _____ [name of shopping center], which is located at _____ [address], in the City of _____, County of _____, California.

9. _____ [Name of shopping center] has frequently been used by members of the public for expressive activities, such as picketing and the distribution of political and religious literature, and has served as the functional equivalent of a traditional public forum such as a town square or public sidewalk for the City of _____.

10. On _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [name] entered the premises of _____ [name of shopping center] for the purpose of _____ [describe in detail the purpose and nature of plaintiff's use of public forum, alleging any facts necessary to show that plaintiff's activities are constitutionally protected, e.g., peacefully distributing literature informing the public of plaintiff's position and opinions on the subject of _____ (specify)].

11. _____ [Describe plaintiff's actions and defendant's response, e.g., On entering the premises of _____ (name of shopping center), plaintiff began peacefully and politely distributing leaflets to customers, as described in Paragraph 10. A copy of the leaflet that plaintiff distributed is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated in this complaint by reference. Shortly after plaintiff began distributing his/her leaflets, defendant's employees and agents _____ (names) approached plaintiff and told him that he/she could not distribute the leaflets anywhere on the premises of _____ (name of shopping center). When plaintiff stated that he/she believed that he/she had a constitutional right to distribute the leaflets and that he/she intended to continue doing so, defendant's employees and agents used abusive language toward plaintiff and threatened to have him/her arrested if he/she did not cease distributing the literature and leave the premises. Upon being threatened with arrest, plaintiff left the premises].

12. _____ [Allege subsequent efforts, if any, to excercise free speech rights on the premises, e.g., On _____ (date), plaintiff returned to the premises of _____ (name of shopping center) and began peacefully distributing the same leaflets referred to in Paragraph 11. Plaintiff was again approached by an employee and agent of defendant _____ (name of shopping center owner/operator) and asked to leave the premises. Plaintiff refused to leave and asked to speak to the manager in charge of (name of shopping center). Plaintiff was escorted to the office of defendant _____ (name of shopping center manager), who informed plaintiff that his/her leaflets were "too controversial" and "may cause problems" and that some of the tenant-merchants disagreed with plaintiff's views and had complained about the leaflets. Defendant _____ (name of shopping center manager) further stated that _____ (name of shopping center) was private property and that since plaintiff had not entered the premises to patronize any of the businesses located therein, plaintiff was a trespasser and that defendant _____ (name of shopping center manager) would call the police and have plaintiff arrested if he/she did not leave voluntarily. Plaintiff thereupon left the premises].

13. No constitutionally sufficient interest justifies defendants' refusal to make _____ [name of shopping center] available for use by plaintiff to convey his/her/its constitutionally protected speech and message. In fact, defendants articulated no legitimate reason whatsoever for refusing plaintiff use of _____ [name of shopping center] to convey his/her/its message. Defendants' decision to refuse plaintiff's request for use of _____ [name of shopping center] was wholly arbitrary.

14. As a proximate result of defendants' policies and actions, plaintiff has been deprived of the right to free speech and assembly as guaranteed by the California Constitution, Article I, Sections 2 and 3.

15. [Irreparable injury justifying injunctive relief. See § 59.50[1], Paragraph 18.]

16. [Lack of adequate remedy at law. See § 59.50[1], Paragraph 19.]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Declaratory Relief)

17. Plaintiff incorporates by reference the allegations of Paragraphs 1 through 16, inclusive, in the First Cause of Action, above, as though fully set forth here.

18. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendants regarding their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that defendants' rules, policies, and practices concerning the use of _____ [name of shopping center] for speech activities, as described in Paragraphs 11 and 12, inclusive, of the First Cause of Action set forth above, violate plaintiff's rights of freedom of speech and freedom of assembly under the California Constitution, Article I, Section 2, in the following manner: _____ [specify manner in which policies and actions amount to constitutional violation, e.g., Defendants' total refusal to permit plaintiff to distribute his/her leaflets on the premises of _____ (name of shopping center) prevents plaintiff's use of an important public forum for the dissemination of his/her message. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendants' actions and policies were based in part on defendants' disagreement with plaintiff's message and in part on undifferentiated and unsubstantiated fears of disruption and are not justified by any constitutionally sufficient interest of defendants]. Defendants dispute these contentions and contend that the rules, policies, and practices described in this complaint are lawful and constitutional.

19. Plaintiff desires a declaration as to the validity of defendant's rules, policies, and practices, as described in this complaint, both on their face and as applied to plaintiff's free speech activities. Unless the court issues an appropriate declaration of rights, the parties will not know whether defendants' policies and procedures comply with the law, and there will continue to be disputes and controversy surrounding the defendants' current policies for permitting use of and access to _____ [name of shopping center] for public use and dissemination of information and messages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all enjoining defendant(s) and his/her/their/its agents, servants, and employees, and all such persons acting under, in concert with, or for him/her/them/it from denying plaintiff's constitutional right to express his/her/its views and in particular to require defendants, and each of them, to permit plaintiff to use _____ [name of shopping center] as a public forum for the purposes of distributing literature and other free speech activities, as described in Paragraph 10 of this complaint;

2. For a declaration by the court of the rights and duties of plaintiff herein, and specifically for a declaration that _____ [describe declaratory judgment sought, e.g., the policies and practices of defendants are unconstitutional as a violation of plaintiff's rights, as described in Paragraph 18];

3. For reasonable attorney's fees according to proof, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use in an action arising from a shopping center owner's denial of access to a shopping center for free speech activities. The form combines a complaint for injunctive relief [see generally Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527; Ch. 303, Injunctions] against the defendants' violations of plaintiff's constitutional rights (First Cause of Action), with a complaint for declaratory relief [see generally Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief] requesting that the court declare the defendants' rules, policies, and practices to be unconstitutional (Second Cause of Action). For discussion of free speech rights in shopping centers and other similar private property, see § 59.14[2].

The prayer of the complaint includes a request for attorney fees under the statutory "private attorney general'provision [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5]. For discussion of criteria and procedures for an award of attorney's fees under that statute, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50 et seq.

[3] Allegations

[a] Injunctive Relief

The First Cause of Action in [1], above, seeks injunctive relief and alleges the following:

- Plaintiff's capacity (Paragraph 1).
- Capacities of the defendant shopping center owner and any individual defendants (Paragraphs 2, 3).
- Agency and fictitious name allegations (Paragraphs 4-7).
- Defendant's ownership of a shopping center and location of the property (Paragraph 8).
- The shopping center's status as a public forum (Paragraph 9) [see, e.g., Robins v. Pruneyard Shopping Center (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 899, 910 , aff'd 447 U.S. 74 (1980) ; Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1576-1581, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 ; see generally discussion in § 59.14[2][a]].
- Plaintiff's attempt to use the shopping center premises for free speech activities protected under Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraphs 10, 11).

- Defendants' interference with plaintiff's attempt to exercise his or her free speech rights (Paragraphs 11, 12).

- Defendants' lack of a constitutionally sufficient justification for denying plaintiff access to the public forum and the consequent violation of plaintiff's rights of free speech and assembly under Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 2, 3 (Paragraphs 13, 14).

- Facts showing how defendants' denial of permit to use the public forum constitutes great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's constitutional rights (Paragraph 15) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2); E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1] .

- Facts showing plaintiff lacks an adequate remedy at law (Paragraph 16) [see Civ. Code § 3422(1)-(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4)-(6)].

[b] Declaratory Relief

The Second Cause of Action in [1], above, seeks declaratory relief. It incorporates by reference the allegations of the First Cause of Action (Paragraph 17) and alleges the following:

- Facts showing the existence of an actual controversy between the parties concerning their respective rights and duties, including the parties' conflicting contentions regarding the constitutionality of defendants' actions (Paragraph 18) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].

- Plaintiff's present need for a declaration of his, her, or its rights (Paragraph 19) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1060, 1061].

[4] Verification

Verification [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446] is required if plaintiff seeks a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction on a complaint instead of on affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a); see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions]. In addition, if a temporary restraining order is sought without notice on the other party, the certification requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c) must be satisfied. For discussion of the procedural requirements for obtaining a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

If no preliminary injunctive relief is sought, the complaint need not be verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a) (unless otherwise required by law, pleadings not required to be verified); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(j) (§ 128.7 applies to complaint or petition filed on or after January 1, 1995, and any other pleading, written notice of motion, or other similar paper filed in that matter)]. However, in superior court actions that are not limited civil cases, if plaintiff does verify the complaint, the defendant must verify the answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a)] and is precluded from making a general denial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

The complaint should contain allegations showing that the action has been commenced in the proper county for trial. An action against an individual should ordinarily be brought in his or her county of residence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If the defendant is a corporation or association, the action may be brought in the county where the liability arises or in the county where the defendant's principal place of business is located [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. For full discussion of venue rules, see Ch. 571, Venue .

An action seeking permanent injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read this petition and know its contents. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a petition for writ of habeas corpus [see Penal Code § 1473 et seq.] for use by a petitioner to obtain release from confinement under a criminal charge. The basis of the petition is that the confinement is unlawful because it is based on a statute or ordinance that violates the petitioner's constitutional right of free expression [see § 59.16[2][b][i]].

This form is for use when the petitioner has been arrested and charged, but not yet tried and convicted. Petitions for writs of habeas corpus filed by counsel are governed by Cal. Rules Ct., Rule 8.384. If the petitioner is being held under process of the court (i.e., has been convicted), and is not represented by counsel, the petition must generally be submitted on a form adopted by the Judicial Council [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.380(a)]. For a reproduction of the adopted Judicial Council form of petition for writ of habeas corpus, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus .

[3] Contents

The petition alleges the following:

- The petitioner is the person on whose behalf the relief is sought (Paragraph 1) [see Penal Code § 1474].

- The fact of petitioner's confinement, the name of the person holding petitioner in custody, and the place of confinement (Paragraph 2) [see Penal Code § 1474(1)].

- Facts concerning petitioner's arrest and confinement, showing that petitioner was engaged in lawful, constitutionally protected speech activities at the time of his or her arrest (Paragraph 3).

- Facts showing that petitioner's arrest and confinement was based on a statute or ordinance that unconstitutionally infringed on petitioner's right of free expression and is therefore unlawful (Paragraphs 4 and 5) [see Penal Code § 1474(2)].

- Whether or not petitioner has made a previous application for habeascorpus in connection with this matter and, if so, a summary of the facts concerning the proceedings held on the previous application (Alternative Paragraphs 6) [see Penal Code § 1475].

[4] Verification

The petition must be verified [Penal Code § 1474(3); see Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a) (form of verification)].

[5] Service on District Attorney and City Attorney

If the person applying for the writ is held in custody or restraint by any officer of a California court, or by a peace officer of the State of California or any political subdivision of the state, a copy of the petition must be served on the district attorney of the county where the petitioner is being held in custody at least 24 hours before the time when the writ is returnable. The application may not be heard without proof of such service [Penal Code § 1475].

In addition, if the person is in custody for violation of a city ordinance and if the city has a city attorney, a copy of the petition must be served on the city attorney at least 24 hours before the time when the writ is returnable. The failure to serve the city attorney does not, however, deprive the court of jurisdiction to hear the application [Penal Code § 1475].

[6] Jurisdiction

The California Supreme Court, courts of appeal, and superior courts have original jurisdiction to issue writs of habeas corpus [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10]. Appellate courts have discretion, however, to refuse to issue a writ of habeas corpus if application has not initially been made in a lower court. Thus, in general, habeas corpus proceedings should normally be initially brought in the superior court, at least when there are factual issues to be resolved [see In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 789, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 ; In re Hillery (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 293, 294, 20 Cal. Rptr. 759] .

4. At all times herein mentioned, each of the defendants were the agents, servants, and employees of their codefendants, and in doing the things hereinafter alleged were acting within the course and scope of their authority as such agents, servants, and employees, and with the permission and consent of their codefendants.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for use by a private property owner or other person entitled to possession to recover damages sustained as a result of persons entering the owner's property without his, her, or its consent for the purpose of demonstrating. This complaint seeks damages for trespass, along with preliminary and permanent injunctive relief to restrain the demonstrators from entering the property [see Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3333; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527(a)].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges the following:

- Facts showing plaintiff's protectible right or interest in the property (Paragraph 1) [see Lightner Mining Co. v. Lane (1911) 161 Cal. 689, 694-695, 120 P. 771] .

- Defendants' status and capacity (Paragraph 2).

- Fictitious name and agency allegations (Paragraphs 3, 4).

- Defendants' conduct constituting trespass on plaintiff's property (Paragraph 5) [see Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 229, 233, 185 Cal. Rptr. 280, 649 P.2d 922] .

- Property damages (Paragraph 6) and personal injury damages (Optional Paragraphs 7, 8) proximately caused by the defendant's trespass [see Civ. Code § 3333].

- Facts supporting an award of punitive damages (Optional Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code § 3294].

- Facts supporting the request for injunctive relief (Paragraphs 10, 11) [see Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527].

[4] Verification

Verification [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446] is required if plaintiff seeks a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction on a complaint instead of on affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a); see generally Ch. 303, Injunctions]. In addition, if a temporary restraining order is sought without notice on the other party, the certification requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c) must be satisfied. For discussion of the procedural requirements for obtaining a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

If no preliminary injunctive relief is sought, the complaint need not be verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a) (unless otherwise required by law, pleadings not required to be verified); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(j) (§ 128.7 applies to complaint or petition filed on or after January 1, 1995, and any other pleading, written notice of motion, or other similar paper filed in that matter)]. However, if the complaint is verified, the defendant must verify the answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a)] and is precluded from making a general denial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

Since the action involves injury to real property, the county in which the real property that is the subject of the action is located is the proper county for trial of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1)].

If the issue of title or right of possession is so involved that it must be decided in order to determine the case, the superior court has original jurisdiction and the action is not a limited civil case, whether or not the involution may be merely incidental [Morrissey v. Morrissey (1923) 191 Cal. 782, 784] . Furthermore, municipal courts and superior courts in limited civil cases (amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less) have original jurisdiction in limited civil cases to issue only temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions. An action seeking permanent injunctive relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 85.1, 86(a)(8), 580(b)(2)].

PART I. SCOPE

This chapter covers actions by assignees on assignments of things in action (also called "choses in action") and obligees' rights in general. It contains complaints for use by assignees [see §§ 60.60 -60.62, 60.73], allegations relating to assignment [see § 60.63 -60.72], and forms for defenses [see §§ 60.71 -60.72].

Actions and claims based on assignments of particular things in action or particular rights may be covered in other chapters. See generally the listing under Cross References in the Research Guide to this chapter. For example, a defendant may assign to a judgment creditor the defendant's claim against the defendant's liability insurer, based on the insurer's bad faith refusal to settle [see Ch. 308, Insurance]; or a merchant may assign to a commercial lender the merchant's rights under a conditional sale contract for goods or equipment or a lease of goods or equipment [see Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions].

Regarding actions and claims based on assignments of licenses, privileges, copyrights, trademarks, and the like--that is, assignments of intangible property apart from things in action and obligees' rights--see chapters concerning the kinds of property involved [see, e.g., Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names].

Assignments for the benefit of creditors are covered in Ch. 307, Insolvency .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-60 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 60.11

§ 60.11 Things in Action and Obligees' Rights

[1] Definitions

A "thing in action" is a right to recover money or personal property by a judicial proceeding [Civ. Code § 953]. A thing in action arising out of the violation of a right of property or out of an obligation may be transferred by the owner [Civ. Code § 954; see discussion in § 60.15[5]].

A right arising out of an obligation is the property of the person to whom it is due and may be transferred as such [Civ. Code § 1458]. The obligation may arise either from a contract or by operation of law [Civ. Code § 1428; see discussion in § 60.11[2], [3], below].

[2] Assignments in General

The transfer of a thing in action or an obligee's right commonly is effected by an assignment (from the "assignor" to the "assignee") [Commercial Discount Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 610, 614, 116 P.2d 599 (ordinarily "assign ... [is] used in connection with the transfer of a thing in action"); see, e.g., Com. Code § 3414(f) (circumstances in which drawer of check may discharge payment obligation "by assigning to the person entitled to enforce the check the rights of the drawer against the drawee with respect to the funds"); Woodruff v. California Republic Bank (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 108, 110, 141 Cal. Rptr. 915 (bank depositor "assigned his claim [to recover deposited funds that the bank had seized through exercise of the so-called banker's lien] to plaintiff herein who thereupon brought this action")]. References in statutes and opinions to "assignment," however, often do not mean a transfer of a thing in action or an obligee's right. In current usage "assignment" can be applied to almost any kind of transfer of any kind of property [Commercial Discount Co. v. Cowen (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 610, 614, 116 P.2d 599] . The term is most usefully restricted to a transfer of intangible property.

Generally, the validity of an assignment is governed by the law of contracts. For example, leaving aside statutory formalities, an assignment of money to become due under a contract of sale is valid if there is a bona fide agreement for a sufficient consideration and without intent to defraud creditors. An antecedent debt may be consideration for an assignment. The fact that an assignment is oral does not defeat it in the absence of a statutory requirement for a writing or recordation [Northern Counties Bank v. Earl Himovitz & Sons Livestock Co. (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 849, 855-856, 31 Cal. Rptr. 551] . A transfer may be made without a writing in every case in which a writing is not expressly required by statute [Civ. Code § 1052; see, e.g., Union Supply Co. v. Morris (1934) 220 Cal. 331, 338-339, 30 P.2d 394 (oral assignment of mechanics' lien claim as valid)]. For discussion of the law governing contracts generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

The substance rather than the form of a transaction determines whether an assignment was intended. An effective assignment may be the product of inference and, when the parties to a transaction indicate an intent to transfer a specific claim, the courts will infer an assignment [Kelley v. British Coml. Ins. Co. (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 554, 564, 34 Cal. Rptr. 564 (inadvertent use of one of two insurance policy numbers)]. In determining whether an assignment has been made, a court may go outside the terms of an instrument and may find an assignment from the conduct of the parties [California Pac. Title Co. v. Moore (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 114, 117, 40 Cal. Rptr. 61 (assignment to title insurance company for purpose of prosecuting action to clear title)].

[3] Novation Distinguished

"Novation" refers to a contractual substitution of a new obligation for an existing obligation [Civ. Code §§ 1530, 1532]. One of the three means of effecting a novation [see Civ. Code § 1531] is a substitution of a new obligee for the existing obligee. When this is done with the obligor's consent, it is a novation; without the obligor's consent, it is merely an assignment by the existing obligee [Wells Fargo Bank v. Bank of America (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 424, 432, 435] .

A second means of effecting a novation is a substitution of a new obligor for the existing obligor [see Civ. Code § 1531(2)], that is, a delegation by the existing obligor. Although an obligee's rights may be transferred (assigned) without the consent of the person bound, the burden of an obligation may not be transferred (delegated) without the consent of the person entitled to the benefit [Civ. Code § 1457]. The substitution of a new obligor for the existing obligor is often referred to, confusingly, as an "assignment of the contract" [see, e.g., Corp. Code § 25234(a)(2) (investment advisory contract must provide that no assignment of contract may be made by investment advisor without consent of other party); Baer v. Associated Life Ins. Co. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 117, 123-124, 248 Cal. Rptr. 236] ; and this confusion may be compounded by Commercial Code rules regardingassignments [see discussion in § 60.18[3]]. Older cases stating the rule that a contract is not assignable mean, usually, that the obligor's burden cannot be transferred without the obligee's consent [see, e.g., La Rue v. Groezinger (1890) 84 Cal. 281, 283, 24 P. 42] . The courts have consistently held that the obligee's rights (in particular, or at least, the right to receive payment) can always be transferred without the obligor's consent [see, e.g., Trubowitch v. Riverbank Canning Co. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 335, 339, 182 P.2d 182] . In some cases, assignment of the obligee's rights may be described as assignment of "the contract" [see, e.g., Drennan v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 764, 767, 170 Cal. Rptr. 904, 621 P.2d 1318 , cert. denied, 454 U.S. 833] .

The third means of effecting a novation is a substitution of a new obligation between the existing parties, in place of the existing obligation [see Civ. Code § 1531(1)].

For further discussion regarding novation, see Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction ; see also California Legal Forms, Ch. 77, Discharge of Obligations (Matthew Bender).

[4] Subrogation Distinguished

"Subrogation" refers to the substitution of a new obligee for the existing obligee after satisfaction (or partial satisfaction) of the obligation by the new obligee. Subrogation may be effected either by operation of law, called legal subrogation, or by contract, called conventional subrogation [see Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 632, 638-640, 7 Cal. Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073] . Conventional subrogation is the result of an assignment from the existing obligee to the new obligee [see, e.g., Krusi v. Bear, Stearns & Co. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 664, 677, 192 Cal. Rptr. 793 (right of subrogation "means only that ... [the subrogee] may bring a cause of action ... as an assignee")]. Legal subrogation sometimes may be described as an assignment by operation of law, or a legal assignment, or an equitable assignment [see, e.g., Bank of California v. Connolly (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 350, 366-368, 111 Cal. Rptr. 468 (equitable assignment)]. The common example of subrogation is the substitution of an insurer in the place of the insured with respect to a claim against a third person arising from the insured's loss for which the insurer has paid compensation [see, e.g., Lee v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465-466, 129 Cal. Rptr. 271] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 536, Subrogation .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-60 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 60.12

§ 60.12 Assignments of General Intangibles

[1] Priority Among Assignees

In general, a transfer (other than one intended to create a security interest [see generally Com. Code § 9109(a)(1), (3)]) of any paymentintangible [see Com. Code § 9102 (definition)] and any transfer of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes excluded from the coverage of Division 9 of the Commercial Code by Com. Code § 9109(d)(4) (excluding a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes as part of a sale of the business out of which they arose) is perfected as against third persons on the execution and delivery to the transferee of an assignment in writing [Civ. Code § 955.1(a); but see Civ. Code §§ 954.5, 955 (transfers of certain judgment rights and nonnegotiable instruments)].

As between bona fide assignees of the same right for value without notice, the assignee first giving notice to the obligor in writing has priority [Civ. Code § 955.1(b); see City of Los Angeles v. Knapp (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 168, 171, 60 P.2d 127] .

Such an assignment is not, of itself, notice to the obligor so as to invalidate any payments made by the obligor to the transferor [Civ. Code § 955.1(c)].

Transfers or assignments of transition property or recovery property as defined in the Public Utilities Code [see Pub. Util. Code §§ 840, 848] are not subject to Civ. Code § 955.1 [Civ. Code § 955.1(d)].

[2] Federal Government as Obligor

Any claim, or part of a claim, against the United States may be assigned, but only after the claim has been allowed, the amount has been decided, and a warrant has been issued. The assignment must meet certain formal requirements. A conforming assignment is valid for any purpose [31 U.S.C. § 3727(a), (b)]. In general, nonconforming assignments are void; hence, the governing statute (or the predecessor) is called the Anti-Assignment Act in many cases. The courts, however, have recognized narrow exceptions [see generally United States v. Shannon (1952) 342 U.S. 288, 291-294, 72 S. Ct. 281, 96 L. Ed. 321] .

A contractor's right to receive money due or to become due from the United States under a contract for $1,000 or more may be assigned to a financing lender under other rules [31 U.S.C. § 3727(c); 41 U.S.C. § 15; § 60.15[3]].

[3] Tax Claims of Counties

If the collection procedure authorized by the Revenue and Taxation Code [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 2951] will not be used, the board of supervisors of a county, by a four-fifths vote and with the approval of the tax collector, may assign for purposes of collection any or all delinquent unsecured taxes 90 days after the date they are due and delinquent [Gov. Code § 26220(b)]. The assignee, through an attorney duly licensed to practice in California, may invoke legal process in the collection of obligations assigned [Gov. Code § 26222]. The board of supervisors may assign, for purposes ofsecuring any financing of the same, any obligations arising out of any delinquent assessments or taxes levied on the secured roll by the county or any other political subdivision of the state. However, no assignment to a collection agency may be made of obligations arising out of any delinquent assessments or taxes levied on the secured roll by the county or any other political subdivision of the state [Gov. Code § 26220(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-60 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 60.13

§ 60.13 Assignments of Insurance

[1] Automobile Policies to Dealers

It is a misdemeanor for any person engaged in the business of selling motor vehicles at retail (a dealer) to accept, in connection with the sale of a motor vehicle, an assignment of an insurance policy, or rights under an insurance policy, pertaining to any motor vehicle traded in by the buyer, unless all amounts realized on the policy or rights by the dealer are credited by the dealer to the buyer on the next monthly payment due or are refunded to the buyer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 18450]. If the dealer accepts assignment of a policy in violation of this provision, the buyer may bring a civil action against the dealer for three times the amount realized on the policy or rights under the policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 18451].

[2] Casualty Insurance; CIGA Assignments

Any insured or claimant entitled to the benefits of the California Insurance Guaranty Association Act (Ins. Code § 1063 et seq.) who elects to proceed under that law is deemed to have assigned to the association the insured's or claimant's rights against the estate of the insolvent insurer [Ins. Code § 1063.4(b); see generally Middleton v. Imperial Ins. Co. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 134, 137, 193 Cal. Rptr. 144, 666 P.2d 1] .

A covered claim under the CIGA law does not include a claim asserted by an assignee, except an assignee of a premium finance agreement [see Ins. Code § 673] that was entered into before the insurer became insolvent [Ins. Code § 1063.1(c)(9)].

[3] Life and Health Insurance and Annuity Contracts; CLHIGA Assignments

Any person receiving benefits under the California Life and Health Insurance Guarantee Association Act (Ins. Code § 1067 et seq.) is deemed to have assigned the rights under, and any causes of action relating to, the covered policy or contract [see Ins. Code § 1067.02(b)] to the association, to the extent of the benefits received because of the act, whether the benefits are payments of or on account of contractual obligations, continuation of coverage, or provision of substitute or alternative coverages. The association may require an assignment to it of those rights and the cause of action by any payee, policy or contract owner, beneficiary, insured, orannuitant, as a condition precedent to the receipt of any right or benefits conferred by the act [Ins. Code § 1067.07(m)(1)].

[4] Life Insurance Policy Assigned to Secure Military Service Member's Obligation

If any life insurance policy on the life of a service member in military service (as defined below) was assigned before his or her period of military service, to secure his or her payment of any obligation, then any assignee of the policy, except the insurer in connection with a policy loan, must not, during the period of military service of the insured or within one year after that period, exercise any right or option by virtue of that assignment, except on the consent in writing of the insured made during that period or when the premiums on the policy are due and unpaid or on the death of the insured, unless on leave of court granted on an application made by the assignee. (For general discussion of applying for leave of the court to commence an action or go forward, see Ch. 372, Motions and Orders .) The court may refuse to grant that leave unless in the opinion of the court the ability of the obligor to comply with the terms of the obligation is not materially affected by reason of his or her military service [50 U.S.C. App. § 536(c); Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.1(a)].

A violation of the above proscription is subject to civil and criminal penalties [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 536(e)(1); Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.1(c)]. Any disallowed civil action or proceeding, or execution on a judgment obtained, by the assignee could be stayed on an application by, or on behalf of, the service member [see 50 U.S.C. App. §§ 522, 591; Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 403, 409.3]; or a disallowed default judgment could be opened to enable the mounting of a defense [see 50 U.S.C. App. § 521(g); Mil. & Vet. Code § 402(d)]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 136, Continuances , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments , and Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

The protections described above are available under federal law to members of the uniformed services [see 10 U.S.C. § 101(a)(5) (definition)] in military service [see 50 U.S.C. § 511(1), (2)] and, under California law, to the following [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a); see generally Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.8 (proof of service member's status and relevant facts)]:

- An officer or enlisted member of the national guard called or ordered into active state service by the governor pursuant to Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 143 or 146 or into active federal service by the President pursuant to Title 10 or Title 32 of the U.S. Code; or

- A reservist of the U.S. military reserve who has been called to full-time active duty.

"Military service" for purposes of the California requirements means full time active state or federal service of a national guard member or full-time active duty of a reservist, for a period in excess of seven days in any 14-dayperiod. For any service member who has been called to active service or duty since September 11, 2001, to engage in homeland defense against terrorism, his or her days of service before June 21, 2002, are to be credited toward this seven-day period [Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(b); see generally Mil. & Vet. Code § 409.11 (legislative intent to provide for retroactive qualification for benefits, back to September 11, 2001, but prospective only application of law in creating benefits); see also 50 U.S.C. App. § 511(3) (meaning of "period of military service" for purposes of federal requirements)].

§ 60.15 Assignments of Nonnegotiable Instruments

[1] By Endorsement

A nonnegotiable written contract for the payment of money or personal property may be transferred by endorsement, in like manner with negotiable instruments. The endorsement transfers all the rights of the assignor under the instrument to the assignee, subject to all equities and defenses existing in favor of the maker at the time of the endorsement [Civ. Code § 1459; Royal Bank Export Finance Co. v. Bestways Distributing Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 764, 768, 280 Cal. Rptr. 355] .

[2] Priority Among Assignees

A transfer (other than one intended to create a security interest [see generally Com. Code § 9109(a)(1), (3)]) of a nonnegotiable instrument that is otherwise negotiable within Division 3 of the Commercial Code but is not payable to order or to bearer, and a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes as part of a sale of the business out of which they arose [see generally Com. Code § 9109(d)(4)], is perfected against third persons when those property rights have been endorsed or assigned in writing and, in the case of such instruments or chattel paper delivered to the transferee, whether or not notice of such transfer or sale has been given to the obligor. However, such an endorsement, assignment, or delivery is not, of itself, notice to the obligor so as to invalidate any payments made by the obligor to the transferor [Com. Code § 955].

As between bona fide assignees of the same right for value, the one who first gives notice to the obligor has priority [see City of Los Angeles v. Knapp (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 168, 171, 60 P.2d 127] .

[3] Federal Contract Rights

A bank, trust company, or other financing institution (including any federal lending agency) may be the assignee of a contractor's right to receive money due or to become due from the United States under a contract providing for payments aggregating $1,000 or more, provided the contract does not prohibit the assignment. The assignment must cover all amounts payable and not already paid and must be to one person only. Reassignment is prohibited (however, the single assignee may be an agent or trustee for two or more lenders participating in the financing). Written notice of the assignment must be filed as specified by the governing law [see 41 U.S.C. § 15]. These requirements set up an exception to the general rules governing assignments of claims against the United States [31 U.S.C. § 3727(c); § 60.12[2]]. The purpose of the exception is to facilitate the financing of contractors performing under government contracts [Peterman Lumber Company v. Adams (W.D. Ark. 1955) 128 F. Supp. 6, 13] .

[4] Improvement Contracts; Priority of Stop Notices

No assignment of construction loan funds by the owner or contractor under a contract for a private work of improvement, whether made before or after a stop notice or bonded stop notice is given to a construction lender, takes priority over a stop notice or bonded stop notice under the Civil Code provisions governing works of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.], and the assignment has no effect insofar as the rights of claimants who give the stop notice or bonded stop notice are concerned [Civ. Code § 3166]. For further discussion, see Ch. 104, Building Contracts .

No assignment by the original contractor of any of the money due or to become due to the original contractor under a public works improvement contract, or for "extras" in connection with the contract, whether made before or after the service of a stop notice, takes priority over a stop notice under the Civil Code provisions governing stop notices for public works of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3179 et seq.], and the assignment has no effect on the rights of the stop notice claimants. Any garnishment of the money by any creditor of the original contractor [see Code Civ. Proc. § 708.710 et seq.] and any statutory lien on the money are subordinate to the rights of all stop notice claimants [Civ. Code § 3193]. For further discussion, see Ch. 481, Public Works .

[5] Local Agency Public Construction Contracts; Priority of Mechanics' and Materialmen's Lien Claims

In the case of a local agency public construction contract, no assignment by the contractor of the whole or any part of the money, assessment, partial assessment, any reassessment, and any bonds that may be issued to represent any assessment or reassessment, due or to become due under the contract, or for "extras" in connection with the contract, whether madebefore or after a verified claim is filed pursuant to the Local Agency Public Construction Act (Pub. Contract Code § 20100 et seq.), will take priority over lien claims by mechanics and materialmen [see Pub. Contract Code §§ 20459, 20460 (filing of claims and claimants' liens)]. The assignment has no binding force insofar as the rights of the claimants and their assignees are concerned. None of the provisions of the Civil Code governing works of improvement [see Civ. Code § 3082 et seq.; see also discussion § 60.15[4]] will be applied to any assessment, partial assessment, reassessment, bonds, money, or funds payable to the assignee under the Local Public Agency Construction Act [Pub. Contract Code § 20461]. For further discussion, see Ch. 481, Public Works .

[6] Insurance Premium Finance Agreements

In the case of an insurance premium finance agreement with an industrial loan company [see Fin. Code § 18560 et seq.], unless the insured has notice of the assignment of the premium finance agreement, payment under the agreement by the insured to the last known assignee of the agreement is binding on all subsequent assignees. The obligations and rights of the loan company, as a premium finance agency, also are imposed on and belong to the assignee of a premium finance agreement [Fin. Code § 18588].

[1] Actions on Bonds

A cause of action on a bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.140] may be transferred and assigned as other causes of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(c); see generally Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq. (Bond and Undertaking Law), and Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings; see also discussion in § 60.19[5]].

[2] Antitrust Claims Arising From Public Purchase Contracts

In submitting a bid to a public purchasing body, the bidder offers and agrees that if the bid is accepted, the bidder will assign to the purchasing body all rights, title, and interest in and to all causes of action that the contractor or subcontractor may have under Section 4 of the Clayton Act [see 15 U.S.C. § 15] or under the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.) arising from purchases of goods, materials, or services by the bidder for sale to the purchasing body pursuant to the bid [Gov. Code § 4552].

[3] Consumer Warranty Claims

An independent repair or service facility may take an assignment of a buyer's right under the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act (Civ. Code§ 1790 et seq.) to recover from a manufacturer of consumer goods the actual and reasonable cost of service and repair, including any cost for parts and any reasonable cost of transporting the goods or parts, plus a reasonable profit [see Civ. Code § 1793.3(c)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties .

[4] Lien Claims

Generally a claim that is secured by a lien may be assigned [see Civ. Code §§ 1428, 1458 (right arising out of contractual or legal obligation is transferrable)], and the lien automatically is assigned along with the claim [see Civ. Code § 1084 (incidents of thing transferred are transferred along with it); Union Supply Co. v. Morris (1934) 220 Cal. 331, 338-339, 30 P.2d 394 (mechanics' lien is incident of debt and automatically transferred by assignment of debt, regardless of whether assignment is oral or written); Champion Home Builders Co. v. Sipes (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1415, 1423-1424, 269 Cal. Rptr. 75] , unless the assignment expressly excepts the lien [Civ. Code § 1084] or a statute forbids assignment of the lien. Assignment of a debt secured by a mortgage carries with it the security [Civ. Code § 2936]. Assignment of a lien does not automatically transfer the secured debt [see Civ. Code § 1084].

Numerous lien statutes provide, in various ways (including by implication), that the liens mentioned in the following list are assignable [see generally Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences]:

- Agricultural chemical and seed lien [Food & Agric. Code § 57590].
- Aircraft lien [Code Civ. Proc. § 1208.63].
- Boaters lien [Harb. & Nav. Code § 508].
- Dairy cattle supply lien [Food & Agric. Code § 57411; see also Ch. 24, Animals: Liens].
- Equipment dealer's lien [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22921(a); see also Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation].
- Harvester's lien [see Civ. Code § 3061.6(a), (c)].
- Livestock lien (on livestock sold or delivered to a meatpacker) [see Food & Agric. Code § 55703].
- Livestock service lien [see Civ. Code § 3080.22; see also Ch. 24, Animals: Liens].
- Logger's lien and lumber millman's lien [see Civ. Code §§ 3065-3065b; see also Ch. 350, Logs and Timbers].
- Oil and gas lien [Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.64; see Ch. 393, Oil and Gas].
- Poultry and fish supply lien [Food & Agric. Code § 57540].
- Vehicle lien [Civ. Code § 3069; but see Veh. Code § 22851(a)(1) (garage keeper's lien for towing and storing parked or abandoned vehicle pursuant to police order is not assignable); see also Ch. 274, Garages and Gas Stations].

A lien acquired by a local agency pursuant to the Delinquent Assessment Acquisition and Sales Law of 1915 (Gov. Code § 53860 et seq.) may be assigned [Gov. Code §§ 53864, 53865].

[5] Tort Causes of Action

As a general rule, the only causes or rights of action in tort that are not assignable or transferrable in any sense are those arising from wrongs of a purely personal nature, such as slander, assault and battery, negligence causing personal injuries, malicious prosecution, and others of like nature [Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 834, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Fifield Manor v. Finston (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 632, 638-639, 7 Cal. Rptr. 377, 354 P.2d 1073 ; Bush v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 1381, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 ; Peller v. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 610, 611-612, 34 Cal. Rptr. 41] . In other words, the doctrine of nonassignability of tort causes of actions is confined to wrongs done to the person, the reputation, or the feelings of the injured person [Webb v. Pillsbury (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 324, 327, 144 P.2d 1] . A cause of action for legal malpractice is not assignable [Goodley v. Wank & Wank, Inc. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 389, 398, 133 Cal. Rptr. 83 ; see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability]. The Goodley rule prohibiting assignment of legal malpractice claims applies to any assignment of a claim, whether voluntary or involuntary [Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1022-1024, 268

Cal. Rptr. 637] . Thus, a legal malpractice claim belonging to the bankruptcy estate of a corporation may not be assigned by the trustee of that estate to a creditor of the corporation for prosecution in state court [Baum v. Duckor, Spradling & Metzer (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 54, 67-69, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703] . See Ch. 536, Subrogation , for discussion of the equitable rule under which a third person (usually an insurance company) paying compensation may be entitled to prosecute the injured person's cause of action against the tortfeasor, for the purpose of recovering the amount paid.

A joint tortfeasor's right to equitable indemnity [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] is assignable to the injured person in a settlement, regardless of whether the injured person's cause of action is assignable [Bush v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 1380-1383, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382] . For discussion, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

The rules of the Code of Civil Procedure concerning the survival of causes of action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.10 et seq.] do not affect the assignability of causes of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.22].

A cause of action for damages based on an insurer's failure to settle is assignable by the insured, whether the action is considered as sounding in tort or sounding in contract [Johansen v. California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 9, 14 n.3, 123 Cal. Rptr. 288 ;744; Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 654, 661, 328 P.2d 198] . For discussion and forms, see Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.10 et seq.

Causes of action arising from torts that affect property rather than the person of an individual are generally held to be assignable. For example, the owner of particular property may assign claims based on conversion of the property, claims based on negligent or intentional injury to the property, and claims based on fraud and deceit arising out of violation of a right of property [Jackson v. Deauville Holding Co. (1933) 219 Cal. 498, 500-501, 27 P.2d 643 ; Wikstrom v. Yolo Fliers Club (1929) 206 Cal. 461, 463-464, 274 P. 959] .

§ 60.17 Assignments of Wages

[1] In General

Wage assignments are governed in general by Lab. Code § 300 and are discussed in Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes . Certain wage assignments are treated as loan transactions subject to state regulation, and certain wage assignments are unlawful, as follows.

[2] Treatment as Regulated Loans

The payment of money, credit, goods, or things in action by an industrial loan company or consumer financial lender (including a personal property broker) [see Stats. 1994, ch. 1115, § 9; see also Fin. Code § 22009 ("finance lender" defined)], as consideration for any assignment of wages, salary, commissions, or other compensation for services, whether earned or to be earned, is for purposes of regulation under the Industrial Loan Law [Fin. Code § 18000 et seq.] and the Finance Lenders Law [Fin. Code § 22000 et seq.], a loan secured by assignment. The amount by which the assigned compensation exceeds the amount of consideration actually paid must be accounted for as interest and charges on or for the loan from the date of payment to the date the compensation is payable. This does not modify or affect existing statutes governing wage assignments, nor does it authorize wage assignments [Fin. Code §§ 18192, 22335].

The requirements of the Finance Lenders Law are matters of fundamental public policy that cannot be waived by way of agreement between the parties. For example, the Finance Lenders Law may not be circumvented by a choice-of-law provision by which another state's law is chosen in a loan agreement of the kind that law regulates. In determining whether such a provision should be enforced in California, a court will consider which state, under the circumstances presented, would suffer greater impairment of its policies if the other state's law were applied [Brack v. Omni Loan Co., Ltd. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1312, 1326, 1329, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 275 (choice of Nevada law, in consumer loan contract of adhesion, was not enforceable)].

[3] Unlawful Wage Assignments

[a] Debt Proraters

A debt prorater [see Fin. Code § 12002.1] may not take any wage assignment to secure the prorater's charges [Fin. Code § 12318(c)].

[b] Employment Agencies and Counseling Services; Job Listing Services

No employment agency, employment counseling service, or job listing service [see Civ. Code § 1812.500 et seq. (Employment Agency, Employment Counseling, and Job Listing Services Act)] may take from a job seeker an assignment of wages to cover its fees [Civ. Code §§ 1812.505(d), 1812.512(d), 1812.517(c)].

[c] Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants

It is a violation punishable by fine and imprisonment for a mortgage foreclosure consultant to take any wage assignment to secure the payment of compensation [Civ. Code §§ 2945.4(c), 2945.7]. Any such security is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 2945.4(c)].

[d] Motor Vehicle Conditional Sale Contracts and Leases

No motor vehicle conditional sale contract subject to the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) nor any lease contract subject to the Vehicle Leasing Act (Civ. Code § 2985.7 et seq.) may contain any provision by which an assignment of wages is given; however, this does not prohibit an assignment of wages in a separate instrument executed pursuant to Lab. Code § 300 (governing wage assignments generally) [Civ. Code §§ 2983.7(b), 2986.3(a)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act , and Ch. 90, Automobiles: Vehicle Leasing Act .

[e] Nurses' Registries

No nurses' registry [see Civ. Code § 1812.524(b)] may take an assignment of wages from a nurse to cover its fees [Civ. Code § 1812.530(b)].

[f] Retail Installment Sale Contracts

No contract or obligation subject to the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) may contain any provision by which an assignment of wages is given; however, this does not prohibit an assignment of wages in a separate instrument executed pursuant to Lab. Code § 300 (governing wage assignments generally) [Civ. Code § 1804.1(c)]. For further discussion of retail installment sale contracts, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

§ 60.18 Assignments Under Commercial Code

[1] Letters of Credit

The right of a beneficiary to draw or otherwise demand performance under a letter of credit [see Com. Code § 5101 et seq.] may not be transferred unless the letter of credit provides that it is transferable [see Com. Code § 5112(a); but see Com. Code § 5113 (rules governing successor of beneficiary)]. Even if a letter of credit provides that it is transferable, the issuer may refuse to recognize or carry out a transfer if (1) the transfer would violate applicable law, or (2) the transferor or transferee has failedto comply with any requirement stated in the letter of credit or any other requirement relating to transfer imposed by the issuer which is within the standard of practice [see Com. Code § 5108(e)] or is otherwise reasonable under the circumstances [Com. Code § 5112(b)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions .

[2] Negotiable Instruments

A check or other draft does not of itself operate as an assignment of funds in the hands of the drawee available for its payment, and the drawee is not liable on the instrument until the drawee accepts it [Com. Code § 3408].

If a transferor of a negotiable instrument purports to transfer less than the entire instrument, negotiation of the instrument does not occur. The transferee obtains no rights under the Commercial Code division on negotiable instruments [see Com. Code § 3101 et seq.] and has only the rights of a partial assignee [Com. Code § 3203(d); see discussion under § 60.19[2]].

For further discussion, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[3] Sales

[a] Availability and Effect of Assignment

For purposes of the Commercial Code division on sales [see Com. Code § 2101 et seq.], unless otherwise agreed, generally all rights of either seller or buyer can be assigned except when the assignment would materially change the duty of the other party, or increase materially the burden or risk imposed on the other party by that party's contract, or impair materially the other party's chance of obtaining return performance. A right to damages for breach of the whole contract or a right arising out of the assignor's due performance of the assignor's entire obligation can be assigned despite agreement otherwise [Com. Code § 2210(2); but see Com. Code § 9406 (effects of filing statement of assignment after secured party assigns all or part of security interest in all or part of collateral covered by filed Financing statement)].

Unless the circumstances indicate the contrary, a prohibition of assignment of "the contract" is to be construed as barring only the delegation to the assignee of the assignor's performance [Com. Code § 2210(4); see discussion in § 60.18[3][b], below.].

An assignment of "the contract" or of "all my rights under the contract" or an assignment in similar general terms is an assignment of rights. Unless the language and the circumstances indicate the contrary (as in an assignment for security), it is also a delegation of performance of the duties of the assignor, and its acceptance by the assignee constitutes a promise by the assignee to perform those duties [see discussion under § 60.18[3][b]]. This promise is enforceable by either the assignor or the other party to the original contract [Com. Code § 2210(5)].

[b] Delegation of Duties

A party's duties under a contract governed by the Commercial Code division on sales [see Com. Code § 2101 et seq.] may be performed through a delegate unless otherwise agreed or unless the other party has a substantial interest in having the original promisor perform or control the acts required by the contract. No delegation of performance relieves the party delegating of any duty to perform or any liability for breach [Com. Code § 2210(1)].

The other party may treat any assignment that delegates performance as creating reasonable grounds for insecurity and may, without prejudice to that party's rights against the assignor, demand assurances from the assignee [Com. Code § 2210(6)]. For discussion of sales under Division 2 generally, see Ch. 500, Sales: Sales Under the Commercial Code .

[4] Secured Transactions

[a] Excluded Transfers and Prohibited Terms In General

The Commercial Code division on secured transactions [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.] does not apply to (1) an assignment of accounts or chattel paper that is for the purpose of collection only [see discussion in § 60.19[4]]; (2) an assignment of a right to payment under a contract to an assignee that is also obligated to perform under the contract [see discussion in § 60.18[3][a], above]; or (3) an assignment of a single account, payment intangible, or promissory note to an assignee in full or partial satisfaction of a preexisting indebtedness [Com. Code § 9109(d)(5)-(7)].

In general (except in the case of a lease agreement; see discussion in § 60.18[4][b]), a term in an agreement between an account debtor and an assignor or in a promissory note is ineffective to the extent that it either [Com. Code § 9406(d)(1), (2)]:

- Prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of the account debtor or person obligated on the promissory note to the assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in, the account, chattel paper, payment intangible, or promissory note; or

- Provides that the assignment or transfer or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of the security interest may give rise to a default, breach, right of recoupment, claim, defense, termination, right of termination, or remedy under the account, chattel paper, payment intangible, or promissory note.

However, this rule does not apply to the sale of a payment intangible or promissory note [Com. Code § 9406(e)] and does not apply to an assignment of a health-care insurance receivable [Com. Code § 9406(i); see discussion in § 60.18[d], below]. The rule also is subject to any other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9406(h)].

In general (except in the case of a lease agreement; [see discussion in § 60.18[4][b]), a rule of law, statute, or regulation, that prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of a government, governmental body or official, or account debtor to the assignment or transfer of, or creation of a security interest in, an account or chattel paper is ineffective to the extent that the rule of law, statute, or regulation either [Com. Code § 9406(f)(1), (2)]:

- Prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of the government, governmental body or official, or account debtor to the assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in, the account or chattel paper; or

- Provides that the assignment or transfer or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of the security interest may give rise to a default, breach, right of recoupment, claim, defense, termination, right of termination, or remedy under the account or chattel paper.

However, this rule does not apply to an assignment of a health care insurance receivable [Com. Code § 9406(i); see discussion in § 60.18[d], below]. The rule also is subject to any other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9406(h)]. In addition, the foregoing rule does not apply to an assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in, a claim or right to receive compensation for injuries or sickness as described in I.R.C. § 104(a)(1) or (2) (allowing a gross-income exclusion for worker's compensation or damages received for bodily injuries or sickness) or a claim or right to receive benefits under a special-needs trust as described in 42 U.S.C. § 1396p(d)(4) (concerning grants to states for medical assistance programs), to the extent that the rule is inconsistent with those laws [Com. Code § 9406(j)].

Another exception to the rule of Com. Code § 9406(f) is the prohibition against any assignment of the right to a prize in the California State Lottery [Gov. Code § 8880.325]. That prohibition takes precedence over the Commercial Code rule generally invalidating such prohibitions [Stone St. Capital, LLC v. California State Lottery Comm'n (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 109, 119-120, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 326]. Specified assignments of the payment of a prize are permitted, however [see Gov. Code §§ 8880.325, 8880.326].

For discussion of the assignment of a conditional sale contract for the purpose of creating a security interest in goods or equipment that a merchant has sold, see Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions .

[b] Lease Agreements

In general, a term in a lease agreement is ineffective to the extent that it either [Com. Code § 9407(a)(1), (2)]:

- Prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of a party to the lease to the assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in, an interest of a party under the lease contract or in the lessor's residual interest in the goods; or

- Provides that the assignment or transfer or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of the security interest may give rise to a default, breach, right of recoupment, claim, defense, termination, right of termination, or remedy under the lease.

A term described in the second clause above is effective nonetheless to the extent that there is either (1) a transfer by the lessee of the lessee's right of possession or use of the goods in violation of the term, or (2) a delegation of a material performance of either party to the lease contract in violation of the term [Com. Code § 9407(b)(1), (2)]. In a consumer lease, in order to prohibit the transfer of an interest of a party under the lease contract or to make a transfer an event of default, the language must be specific, by a writing, and conspicuous [Com. Code § 10303(g)].

The creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in the lessor's interest under the lease contract or the lessor's residual interest in the goods is not a transfer that materially impairs the lessee's prospect of obtaining return performance or materially changes the duty of or materially increases the burden or risk imposed on the lessee within the purview of Com. Code § 10303(d) (prescribing rights and remedies; see discussion, below) unless, and then only to the extent that, enforcement actually results in a delegation of material performance of the lessor [Com. Code § 9407(c)].

[c] Personal Property Leases

Additionally, in the case of a personal property lease agreement governed by Division 10 of the Commercial Code [for discussion, see Ch. 413, Personal Property Leases], a provision in the lease agreement might either (1) prohibit the voluntary or involuntary transfer of an interest of a party under the lease contract or of the lessor's residual interest in the goods, including a transfer by sale, sublease, creation or enforcement of a security interest, or attachment, levy, or other judicial process, or (2) make such a transfer an event of default. Such a provision gives rise to specified rights and remedies [see Com. Code § 10303(d)], but in general, a transfer that is prohibited or is an event of default under the lease agreement is otherwise effective [Com. Code § 10303(b)]. In this context, "creation of a security interest" includes the sale of a lease contract that is subject to Division 9 of the Commercial Code by reason of Com. Code § 9109(a)(3) (providing that Division 9 governs a sale of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes) [Com. Code § 10303(a)].

A provision in a personal property lease agreement might either (1) prohibit a transfer of a right to damages for default with respect to thewhole lease contract or of a right to payment arising out of the transferor's due performance of the transferor's entire obligation or (2) make such a transfer an event of default. Such a provision is not enforceable, and such a transfer is not a transfer that materially impairs the prospect of obtaining return performance by, or materially changes the duty of, or materially increases the burden or risk imposed on, the other party to the lease contract within the purview of Com. Code § 10303(d) (prescribing rights and remedies) [Com. Code § 10303(c)].

A transfer of "the lease" or of "all my rights under the lease," or a transfer in similar general terms, is a transfer of rights and, unless the language or the circumstances, as in a transfer for security, indicate the contrary, the transfer is a delegation of duties by the transferor to the transferee. Acceptance by the transferee constitutes a promise by the transferee to perform those duties. The promise is enforceable by either the transferor or the other party to the lease contract [Com. Code § 10303(e)].

Unless otherwise agreed by the lessor and the lessee, a delegation of performance does not relieve the transferor as against the other party of any duty to perform or of any liability for default [Com. Code § 10303(f)].

In a consumer lease, in order to prohibit the transfer of an interest of a party under the lease contract or to make a transfer an event of default, the language must be specific, by a writing, and conspicuous [Com. Code § 10303(g)].

[d] Promissory Notes, Health Care Insurance Receivables, and General Intangibles

In general, a term in a promissory note or in an agreement between an account debtor and a debtor which relates to a health care insurance receivable or a general intangible, including a contract, permit, license, or franchise, and which term prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of the person obligated on the promissory note or the account debtor to, the assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, or perfection of a security interest in, the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible, is ineffective to the extent that the term either [Com. Code § 9408(a)(1), (2)]:

- Would impair the creation, attachment, or perfection of a security interest; or

- Provides that the assignment or transfer or the creation, attachment, or perfection of the security interest may give rise to a default, breach, right of recoupment, claim, defense, termination, right of termination, or remedy under the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible.

However, this rule would not apply to a security interest in a payment intangible or promissory note unless the security interest arises out of a sale of the payment intangible or promissory note [Com. Code § 9408(b)].

A rule of law, statute, or regulation that prohibits, restricts, or requires the consent of a government, governmental body or official, person obligated on a promissory note, or account debtor to, the assignment or transfer of, or the creation of a security interest in, a promissory note, health-care insurance receivable, or general intangible, including a contract, permit, license, or franchise between an account debtor and a debtor, is ineffective to the extent that the rule of law, statute, or regulation either [Com. Code § 9408(c)(1), (2)]:

- Would impair the creation, attachment, or perfection of a security interest; or

- Provides that the assignment or transfer or the creation, attachment, or perfection of the security interest may give rise to a default, breach, right of recoupment, claim, defense, termination, right of termination, or remedy under the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible.

However, the foregoing rule does not apply to an assignment or transfer of, or the creation, attachment, perfection, or enforcement of a security interest in, a claim or right to receive compensation for injuries or sickness as described in I.R.C. § 104(a)(1) or (2) (allowing a gross income exclusion for worker's compensation or damages received for bodily injuries or sickness) or a claim or right to receive benefits under a special needs trust as described in 42 U.S.C. § 1396p(d)(4) (concerning grants to states for medical assistance programs), to the extent that the rule is inconsistent with those laws [Com. Code § 9408(e)].

If, and to the extent that, a term in a promissory note or in an agreement between an account debtor and a debtor which relates to a health care insurance receivable or general intangible, or a rule of law, statute, or regulation described above, would be effective under other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code, but it is ineffective under any of the foregoing rules, then all of the following rules apply with respect to the creation, attachment, or perfection of a security interest in the promissory note, health-care insurance receivable, or general intangible [Com. Code § 9408(d)(1)-(6)]:

- It is not enforceable against the person obligated on the promissory note or the account debtor.

- It does not impose a duty or obligation on the person obligated on the promissory note or the account debtor.

- It does not require the person obligated on the promissory note or the account debtor to recognize the security interest, pay or render performance to the secured party, or accept payment or performance from the secured party.

- It does not entitle the secured party to use or assign the debtor's rights under the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible, including any related information or materialsfurnished to the debtor in the transaction giving rise to the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible.

- It does not entitle the secured party to use, assign, possess, or have access to any trade secrets or confidential information of the person obligated on the promissory note or the account debtor.

- It does not entitle the secured party to enforce the security interest in the promissory note, health care insurance receivable, or general intangible.

[e] Notification and Proof of Assignment

In general, an account debtor on an account, chattel paper, or a payment intangible may discharge its obligation by paying the assignor until, but not after, the account debtor receives a notification, authenticated by the assignor or the assignee, that the amount due or to become due has been assigned and that payment is to be made to the assignee. After receipt of the notification, the account debtor may discharge its obligation by paying the assignee and may not discharge the obligation by paying the assignor [Com. Code § 9406(a)].

Notification is ineffective if it does not reasonably identify the rights assigned or to the extent that an agreement between an account debtor and a seller of a payment intangible limits the account debtor's duty to pay a person other than the seller and the limitation is effective under other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code [Com. Code § 9406(b)(1), (2)]. At the option of an account debtor, notification is ineffective if the notification notifies the account debtor to make less than the full amount of any installment or other periodic payment to the assignee, even if (1) only a portion of the account, chattel paper, or payment intangible has been assigned to that assignee, or (2) a portion has been assigned to another assignee, or (3) the account debtor knows that the assignment to that assignee is limited [Com. Code § 9406(b)(3)(A)-(C)]. However, these rules are subject to any other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9406(h)].

If requested by the account debtor, an assignee must seasonably furnish reasonable proof that the assignment has been made. Unless the assignee complies, the account debtor may discharge its obligation by paying the assignor, even if the account debtor has received a notification under Com. Code § 9406(a) as described above [Com. Code § 9406(c)].

In addition, the foregoing rules are subject to Com. Code § 9406(d)-(g) and (i) [see Com. Code § 9406(a)], which are discussed in § 60.18[4][a], above.

[f] Modification or Substitution

In general, a modification of or substitution for an assigned contract is effective against an assignee if made in good faith. The assignee acquires corresponding rights under the modified or substituted contract. The assignment may provide that the modification or substitution is a breach of contract by the assignor [Com. Code § 9405(a)]. These rules apply to the extent that either (1) the right to payment or a part thereof under an assigned contract has not been fully earned by performance or (2) the right to payment or a part thereof has been fully earned by performance and the account debtor has not received notification of the assignment under Com. Code § 9406(a) [Com. Code § 9405(b)]. See discussion in § 60.18[4][e].

However, the above rule is subject to any other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9405(c)]. The rules stated above also do not apply to an assignment of a health-care insurance receivable [Com. Code § 9405(d)]. See discussion in § 60.18[4][d], above.

[g] Claims and Defenses

Com. Code § 9403 establishes rules regarding agreements not to assert claims and defenses against assignees. In general, an agreement between an account debtor and an assignor not to assert against an assignee any claim or defense that the account debtor may have against the assignor is enforceable by an assignee taking an assignment that satisfies all of the following conditions [Com. Code § 9403(b)(1)-(4)]:

- It is taken for value [see Com. Code §§ 3303(a), 9403(a)].
- It is taken in good faith.
- It is taken without notice of a claim of a property or possessory right to the property assigned.
- It is taken without notice of a defense or claim in recoupment of the type that may be asserted against a person entitled to enforce a negotiable instrument under Com. Code § 3305(a).

However, this does not apply to defenses of a type that may be asserted against a holder in due course of a negotiable instrument under Com. Code § 3305(b) [Com. Code § 9403(c)]. For discussion of Com. Code § 3305(a) and (b), see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

In a consumer transaction, if a record evidences the account debtor's obligation, and other law apart from Division 9 requires that the record include a statement to the effect that the rights of an assignee are subject to claims or defenses that the account debtor could assert against the original obligee, and the record does not include such a statement, then both of the following apply [Com. Code § 9403(d)(1), (2)]:

- The record has the same effect as if the record included such a statement.
- The account debtor may assert against an assignee those claims and defenses that would have been available if the record included such a statement.

Except to that extent, Com. Code § 9403 does not displace other law apart from Division 9 which gives effect to an agreement by an account debtor not to assert a claim or defense against an assignee [Com. Code § 9403(f)].

Com. Code § 9403 is subject to other law apart from Division 9 which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9403(e)]. For discussion of the contrary statutory rules for buyers or lessees of consumer goods, see § 60.21[1].

Chapter 60 ASSIGNMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

6-60 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 60.19

§ 60.19 Actions by Assignees

[1] Assignment as Security

When an assignment of a thing in action or an obligee's rights is made for the purpose of security, the assignee (secured party) may sue to foreclose the security interest without joining the assignor as a party. The assignor is a proper party but is not a necessary party. The assignor may sue on the assigned thing in action or to enforce the assigned rights if the assignee consents or the assignor joins the assignee as a party. The assignee is a necessary party in that case [Greco v. Oregon Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 674, 687, 12 Cal. Rptr. 802 ; see discussion in § 60.19[4], below].

[2] Assignment of Partial Rights

An assignee of less than the whole of a thing in action or less than all of an obligee's rights--a partial assignee--may sue on the thing in action or sue to enforce the assigned rights, provided the assignor and any other partial assignees are joined as parties [Martin v. Howe (1922) 190 Cal. 187, 194, 211 P. 453] . A partial assignee may not sue alone [Stein v. Cobb (1940) 38 Cal. App. 2d 8, 10-11, 100 P.2d 358] . The assignor and any other partial assignees are necessary parties [cf. Greco v. Oregon Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 674, 687, 12 Cal. Rptr. 802 (assignor is a proper party, but not necessay party)] because of the prohibition against splitting a cause of action [Martin v. Howe (1922) 190 Cal. 187, 194, 211 P. 453] . For the same reason, if the assignor retained any interest in the thing in action or rights in question, the assignor may not sue alone but must join all partial assignees [Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 783, 794-795, 121 Cal. Rptr. 200 ; see generally Ch. 395, Parties , regarding joinder].

[3] Damages

[a] In General

The detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest [Civ. Code § 3302].

The detriment caused by the wrongful conversion of personal property is presumed to be (1) the value of the property at the time of the conversion, with interest from that time, or an amount sufficient to indemnify the injured person for the loss that is the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of and that a proper degree of prudence on the part of the injured person would not have averted, plus (2) a fair compensation for the time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property [Civ. Code § 3336]. This presumption cannot be defeated, in favor of one whose possession was wrongful from the beginning, by his or her subsequent application of the property to the owner's benefit, without the owner's consent [Civ. Code § 3337].

For further discussion, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[b] Bounced Checks, Drafts, and Money Orders

A cause of action for actual and treble damages may be brought as a limited civil case by an assignee of the payee of a bounced check, draft, or money order [see Civ. Code § 1719(f), (i); see generally Civ. Code § 1719 (action for treble damages by payee of dishonored check, draft, or money order is a limited civil case); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1); Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter]. However, if the assignee is acting on behalf of the payee for a flat fee or a percentage fee--that is, in the case of an assignment for collection--the assignee may not charge the payee a greater flat fee or percentage fee for that portion of the amount collected that represents treble damages than is charged the payee for collecting the face amount of the check, draft, or order [Civ. Code § 1719(f)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[c] Trust Deed Forgeries

In an action for damages by an assignee or a successor in interest against a beneficiary of a trust deed on real property consisting of a single-family residence containing not more than four dwelling units, if it is established that the trust deed was forged in whole or in part by the beneficiary, judgment may be entered for three times the amount at which the actual damages are assessed [Code Civ. Proc. § 749.5(a); see generally Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages].

[d] Unfair Trade Practices

In an action based on a violation of the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) or a violation of the statutes governing unfair pharmacy trade practices [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 4380 et seq.], the plaintiff may both obtain injunctive relief and also recover three times the amount of the plaintiff's actual damages, if any, as well as three times the actual damages, if any, sustained by any person who assigned to the plaintiff a claim for damages resulting from such a violation [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 4381(c), 17082]. For further discussion, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[4] Debts Assigned for Collection

When a debt is assigned for collection, the assignee usually is in the business of taking assignments of debts for collection. The assignee is a contractor of the creditor for the purpose of collecting the debt and will pay to the creditor whatever amount is collected from the debtor, less a fee [see generally Hospital Medical Collections, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 46, 50, 135 Cal. Rptr. 147 (description of collection agency business)]. The function of the assignment is to give the collector standing to sue on the debt [see, e.g., Associated Creditors' Agency v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 374, 378-379, 118 Cal. Rptr. 772, 530 P.2d 1084 (suit by assignee for collection); James Talcott, Inc. v. Short (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 504, 507, 161 Cal. Rptr. 63 , disapproved on other grounds in Morehart v. County of Santa Barbara (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 725, 743 n.11, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 872 P.2d 143 (same)]. An assignment for the purpose of collection is not void for lack of consideration. The assignee (collector) may sue on the debt in the assignee's own name even though the assignor retains an equitable interest in the assigned debt [National R. Co. v. Metropolitan T. Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 827, 831, 112 P.2d 598] . For a complaint by an assignee for collection, see § 60.62; see also the discussion in §§ 60.19[3][b], 60.20[2].

An assignee for the purpose of security may be considered as an assignee for collection with respect to any part of the assigned claim that exceeds the secured debt. If the assignee sues on the claim for the purpose of foreclosing the security interest, any amount recovered in excess of the secured debt belongs to the assignor, and the assignee is accountable to the assignor for that excess amount [Ginocchio v. Amador C. & M. Co. (1885) 67 Cal. 493, 496, 8 P. 29 ; see also the discussion in § 60.18[4][a]].

An assignee of a legal claim for money owed has standing to pursue that claim in a federal court, even when the assignee has promised to remit the proceeds of the litigation to the assignor. However, in a particular case there could be so-called prudential reasons--for example, the assignment was made in bad faith, or there will be practical impediments in the litigation (such as the defendant's difficulty in pursuing discovery against the assignor)--on which the court could rely in concluding that the complaint should be dismissed for lack of standing [*Sprint Communs. Co. v. APCC Servs. (2008) -- U.S. --, 128 S. Ct. 2531, 171L. Ed. 2d424, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5034, at *5, *36-41].

[5] Oil and Gas Lien Claims; Actions on Bonds

Whenever any lien is claimed or recorded under the Oil and Gas Lien Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.50 et seq.), the lessor or owner (or a contractor, in the case of a subcontractor's lien) may record a surety bond to take the place of the property against which the lien is claimed or recorded. Oneaction on the bond does not exhaust the remedies of obligees on the bond. Any assignee of any obligee may, within the period prescribed for enforcement of a lien [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.61], commence and maintain a separate suit on the bond in any court having jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.60]. For further discussion, see Ch. 393, Oil and Gas .

[6] Private School Student Contracts

Any private postsecondary school or vocational institution [see Educ. Code § 94300 et seq.] extending credit or lending money to any person for tuition, fees, or any charges whatever for educational services to be rendered or furnished must cause any note, instrument, or other evidence of indebtedness taken in connection with that loan or extension of credit to be conspicuously marked on the face with a notice set forth in Educ. Code § 94335(c). The notice alerts any holder that he or she is subject to specified claims and defenses of the debtor, and describes the recovery available to the debtor. In the event the school or institution fails to insert this notice, it is liable for any damage or loss suffered or incurred by any subsequent assignee, transferee, or holder of that evidence of indebtedness on account of the absence of that notification [Educ. Code § 94335(c)].

[7] Recovery of Street Improvement Assessments

At any time after the first of July next after the expiration of nine months following the date of recording of an assessment for street improvements under the Improvement Act of 1911 (Sts. & Hy. Code § 5000 et seq.), the contractor's assignee may sue, in the assignee's own name, the owner of the land, lots, or portions of lots assessed on the date of recording of the warrant, assessment, and diagram, to recover the amount of any assessment [see Sts. & Hy. Code § 5410 (what assessments may be collected by action)] remaining unpaid, together with interest and any penalties allowed under the act. If any state, county, or municipal taxes or any other special assessments are delinquent on the property, the action may be brought at any time after the expiration of 90 days following the recording of the assessment [Sts. & Hy. Code § 5411]. The Commercial Code division dealing with secured transactions [see Com. Code § 9101 et seq.] does not apply to any security interest created by an assignment of the benefits of any public construction contract under the Improvement Act of 1911 [Com. Code § 9109(d)(14)].

In the case of delinquent assessments under the Municipal Improvement Act of 1913 (Sts. & Hy. Code § 10000 et seq.), the legislative body of the city may be empowered to authorize collection under the foregoing provision [see Sts. & Hy. Code § 10600.1].

[8] Retail Installment Sale Contracts

In any action by an assignee of the seller's rights under a retail installment salecontract subject to the Unruh Act, the buyer's writtenacknowledgment, conforming to statutory requirements, creates a rebuttable presumption of delivery of a legible copy of the contract and any other document signed by the buyer at the seller's request during the contract negotiation, provided the assignee was without knowledge to the contrary at the time of purchasing the contract [Civ. Code § 1803.7]. For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 60.20 Bars to Assignees' Actions

[1] Attorneys Disbarred or Suspended

No person who has been an attorney, while a judgment of disbarment or suspension is in force, may appear in his or her own behalf as plaintiff in the prosecution of any action if the subject of the action was assigned to him or her after entry of the judgment of disbarment or suspension and solely for the purpose of collection [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6130; see Wilde v. Superior Court (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 168, 177, 127 P.2d 560 (disbarred attorney not precluded from suing as assignee if assignment was not solely for purpose of collection)]. However, an attorney who resigned may appear as an assignee for collection [Gresham v. Superior Court (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 664, 665, 112 P.2d 965] and, therefore, may lawfully operate a collection agency business. See also the discussion in § 60.19[4], above.

[2] Attorney's Fees Assigned for Collection

If an assignee commences an action in any court for the recovery of attorney's fees, the client may stay the action by serving and filing a request for arbitration in accordance with the rules established by the State Bar Board of Governors for the arbitration of fee disputes [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq.], unless those rules do not apply to the dispute in question [Bus. & Prof. § 6201(b); see Bus. & Prof. § 6200(b) (excepted disputes)]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

[3] Commercial Rent Control Ordinance

Any ordinance or other local law establishing a notice requirement relating to termination of a commercial lease because of expiration of the term must contain (or will be deemed to contain) a provision that no right or cause of action accruing to a tenant pursuant to the local law or the enabling state law [see Civ. Code § 1954.25 et seq.] may be assigned except to a person who is a lawful assignee of the lease, is in lawful possession of the premises under the lease, and has performed the terms of the lease in such manner as would entitle the tenant to exercise any option the tenant might have under the lease [Civ. Code § 1954.31(b)(1), (2)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 335, Landlord and Tenant: Rent Control .

[4] Consumer Credit Contracts

No action may be brought, and no security interest may be enforced, by any assignee of a creditor on any consumer credit contract that fails to comply with Civil Code provisions governing consumer credit contracts [see Civ. Code § 1799.90 et seq.], against any person, however designated, who is entitled to notice under Civ. Code § 1799.91 and who does not in fact receive any of the money, property, or services that are the subject matter of the consumer credit contract [Civ. Code § 1799.95]. This provision may protect certain accommodation co-signers from being sued on consumer credit contracts. For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales ; see also the discussion of consumer credit contracts in Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans.

[5] Contract or Transaction in Fictitious Business Name

No assignee of a person transacting business under a fictitious business name contrary to the applicable provisions of the Business and Professions Code [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900 et seq.] may maintain any action on, or on account of, any contract made, or transaction had, in the fictitious business name in any California court until a fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published as required by law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918]. For forms of allegations of compliance with the requirements to execute, file, and publish a fictitious business name statement, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used . A fictitious business name statement may be executed, filed, and published by an assignee of the business at any time after the assignment, if a failure to comply with the applicable provisions of the Business and Professions Code would otherwise preclude the maintenance of an action to recover any sums due to the assignee by reason of the assignment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17919(c)]. For discussion of the execution, filing, and publishing of a fictitious business name statement, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting A New Business, §§ 1A.51, 1A.130, 1A.140 (Matthew Bender). A fictitious business statement form is illustrated in California Legal Forms, Ch. 1A, Role of Counsel in Starting A New Business, § 1A.205 (Matthew Bender).

[6] Health Care Service Plans

No assignee of a contracting provider under a health care service plan [see Health & Safety Code § 1340 et seq.] may maintain any action at law against a subscriber or enrollee to collect sums owed by the plan [Health & Safety Code § 1379(c)].

[7] Insurance Adjusters as Assignees

No licensee under the Insurance Adjuster Act (Ins. Code § 14000 et seq.) may appear as an assignee party in any proceeding involving claim anddelivery or replevin, or any other possessory action, or any action to foreclose a chattel mortgage, mechanics' lien, materialman's lien, or any other lien [Ins. Code § 14038(g)].

[8] Repossessors as Assignees

A repossessor under the Collateral Recovery Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7500 et seq.) is subject to an administrative fine for appearing as an assignee party in any court proceeding involving claim and delivery or replevin, or any other possessory court action, action to foreclose a chattel mortgage, or action to foreclose a mechanics' lien, materialman's lien, or any other lien. This does not prohibit a repossessor from appearing as a defendant in any of those actions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7508.1(d)].

[9] Small Claims

No claim may be filed or maintained in small claims court by an assignee of the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.420(a)]. However, this does not prevent the filing or defense of an action in the small claims court by the holder of a security agreement, retail installment contract, or lien contract subject to the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) or the Rees-Levering Automobile Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) purchased by the holder for the holder's portfolio of investments, provided the holder is not an assignee for the purpose of collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.420(b)].

A workers' compensation insurer is an assignee for this purpose and may not sue a third-party tortfeasor in small claims court to recover benefits paid to an injured employee [Allianz Insurance Co. v. Municipal Court (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1046, 179 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

For further discussion of small claims court proceedings, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

[10] Tax Refund Claims

[a] Commercial Fishing Landing Tax

A judgment may not be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in any action brought against the Department of Fish and Game to recover any amount paid as a commercial fishing landing tax [see Fish & Game Code § 8040 et seq. (landing taxes imposed on commercial fishermen)] when the action is brought by or in the name of an assignee of the person paying the amount [Fish & Game Code § 8070].

[b] Excise Taxes

The Revenue and Taxation Code provides, in various separate excise tax laws, that a judgment may not be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in any action brought to recover any amount paid as tax (sometimes specifyingalso interest and penalties) under the law in question, when the action is brought by or in the name of an assignee of the person paying the tax (or interest or penalties). Such a provision exists with respect to each of the following types of taxes:

- Alcoholic beverage tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 32418].
- Cigarette and tobacco products tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 30407].
- Emergency telephone users surcharge [Rev. & Tax. Code § 41114].
- Energy resources surcharge [Rev. & Tax. Code § 40131].
- Hazardous substances tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 43478; but see discussion following this list].
- Oil spill response, prevention, and administration fees [Rev. & Tax. Code § 46528 but see discussion following this list)].
- Private railroad car tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 11577].
- Sales and use taxes [Rev. & Tax. Code § 6937].
- Solid waste disposal site cleanup and maintenance fees [Rev. & Tax. Code § 45708 (but see discussion following this list)].
- Timber yield tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 38617].
- Underground storage tank maintenance fees [Rev. & Tax. Code § 50149(a) (but see discussion following this list)].

- Use fuel tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 9175].
- Vehicle fuel license tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 8152].

In the case of the hazardous substances tax, the oil spill response, prevention, and administration fees, the solid waste disposal site cleanup and maintenance fees, and the underground storage tank maintenance fees, "assignee" does not include a person who has acquired the business of the taxpayer or fee payer that gave rise to the taxes or fees and who is thereby a successor in interest to the taxpayer or fee payer [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 43478, 45708, 46528, 50149(b)].

For further discussion and forms relating to refunds of sales or use taxes, see Ch. 540, Taxes and Assessments .

[c] Fees Collectible by Board of Equalization

In the case of fees that are collectible by the Board of Equalization pursuant to the Fee Collection Procedures Law (Rev. & Tax. Code § 55001 et seq.), a judgment may not be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in any action brought against the board to recover any fee paid when the action is brought by or in the name of an assignee of the person paying the fee. "Assignee" does not include a person who has acquired the business of the fee payer that gave rise to the fee and who is thereby a successor in interest to the fee payer [Rev. & Tax. Code § 55248].

[d] Generation Skipping Transfer Tax

Any person who has paid any tax imposed by the Generation Skipping Transfer Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code § 16700 et seq.) that later is determined by judgment to have been in excess of the amount legally due, or an heir, the executor of the will, or the administrator of the estate of any such person, but not any such person's assignee, is entitled to a refund in the amount of the excess paid within one year after the judgment becomes final [Rev. & Tax. Code § 16852].

[e] Insurance Company Taxes

A judgment may not be rendered in favor of the plaintiff in any action brought to recover any amount paid as tax, interest, or penalties imposed on an insurance company under the Revenue and Taxation Code [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 12001 et seq.] when the action is brought by or in the name of an assignee of the insurer paying the tax, interest, or penalties [Rev. & Tax. Code § 13108].

§ 60.21 Claims and Other Defenses Assertable Against Assignees

[1] In General

Assignees are subject to the general rule that a voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all of the obligations arising from it, as far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting [Civ. Code § 1589; see Melchior v. New Line Productions, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 779, 788-790, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (assignee of film production company, which accepted benefits of company's original agreement with author, also accepted obligations of original agreement despite different terms in assignment agreement); Heppler v. J.M. Peters Company, Inc. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1265, 1289-1292, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (under Civ. Code § 1589, plaintiffs assumed rights and obligations associated with attorney fee provisions of subcontracts under settlement agreement); Hughes v. Nashua Mfg. Co. (1968) 257 Cal. App. 2d 778, 784, 65 Cal. Rptr. 380 ; see also Recorded Picture Co. v. Nelson Entertainment (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 350, 362-363, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 742 (subdistributor of motion picture which did not accept benefit of agreement between producer and distributor was not subject to burdens of that agreement under Civ. Code § 1589)].

In the case of an assignment of a thing in action, an action by the assignee is without prejudice to any set-off or other defense existing at the time of, or before, notice of the assignment. This provision, however, does not apply in the case of a negotiable promissory note or bill of exchange transferred in good faith and on good consideration, before maturity [Code Civ. Proc. § 368].

[2] Account Debts Under Commercial Code

In general, unless an account debtor has made an enforceable agreement not to assert defenses or claims [see discussion under § 60.18[4][e]], the rights of an assignee are subject to Com. Code § 9404(a)(1), (2):

- All terms of the agreement between the account debtor and assignor and any defense or claim in recoupment arising from the transaction that gave rise to the contract; and

- Any other defense or claim of the account debtor against the assignor which accrues before the account debtor receives a notification of the assignment authenticated by the assignor or the assignee [ see discussion under § 60.18[4][c]].

In addition, the claim of an account debtor against an assignor may be asserted against an assignee only to reduce the amount the account debtor owes [Com. Code § 9404(b)].

In a consumer transaction, if a record evidences the account debtor's obligation, law other than this division requires that the record include a statement to the effect that the account debtor's recovery against an assignee with respect to claims and defenses against the assignor may not exceed amounts paid by the account debtor under the record, and the record does not include such a statement, the extent to which a claim of an account debtor against the assignor may be asserted against an assignee is determined as if the record included such a statement [Com. Code § 9404(d)].

However, the foregoing rules are subject to any other law apart from Division 9 of the Commercial Code which establishes a different rule for an account debtor who is an individual and who incurred the obligation primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Com. Code § 9404(c)]. The rules stated above also do not apply to an assignment of a health-care insurance receivable [Com. Code § 9404(e); see discussion in § 60.18[4][d]].

[3] Dance and Health Studio Contracts

No right of action or defense arising out of a contract for dance studio lessons and other services [see Civ. Code § 1812.50 et seq.] or for health studio services [see Civ. Code § 1812.80 et seq.] that the buyer has against the seller, which normally would be cut off by assignment, is cut off by assignment of the contract to any third party whether or not the assignee acquires the contract in good faith and for value, unless the assignee gives notice of the assignment to the buyer and, within 30 days after mailing the notice, receives no written notice of the facts giving rise to the claim or defense of the buyer [Civ. Code §§ 1812.56 (dance studio), 1812.88 (health studio)].

A notice of assignment must be in writing addressed to the buyer at the address shown on the contract and must identify the contract and informthe buyer that within 30 days after the date of mailing of the notice, the buyer must notify the assignee in writing of any facts giving rise to a claim or defense that he or she may have. The notice of assignment must state the names of the seller and the buyer, a description of the lessons and other services, the contract balance, and the number and amounts of the installments [Civ. Code §§ 1812.56 (dance studio), 1812.88 (health studio)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 128, Consumer Contracts: Statutes Regulating Specific Types of Contracts .

[4] Discount Buying Services

No right of action or defense arising out of a contract for discount buying services [see Civ. Code § 1812.100 et seq.] that the buyer has against the discount buying organization is cut off by assignment or transfer of the contract to any third party [Civ. Code § 1812.114]. For further discussion, see Ch. 128, Consumer Contracts: Statutes Regulating Specific Types of Contracts .

[5] Insurance Premium Finance Agreements

In the case of an insurance premium finance agreement with an industrial loan company [see Fin. Code § 18560 et seq.], assignment of the premium finance agreement does not cut off any defenses that the insured would have against the company or an assignee of the agreement arising from obligations imposed by the Industrial Loan Law [Fin. Code § 18588; see Fin. Code § 18000 et seq. (Industrial Loan Law)].

[6] Invention Development Services Contracts

An assignee of an invention developer's rights under an invention development services contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 22370 et seq.] is subject to all equities and defenses of the customer against the invention developer existing in favor of the customer at the time of the assignment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 22377]. For further discussion, see Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions .

[7] Mobilehome Conditional Sale Contracts

Except as otherwise specifically provided in Health & Safety Code § 18036.5 (governing conditional sale contracts for manufactured homes and mobilehomes), any civil action for a violation of that section that may be brought against a seller may be maintained against any assignee of the seller only if the violation for which the action or proceeding is brought is apparent on the face of the required disclosure statement. If the assignment was involuntary, however, no civil action may be brought against the assignee for the violation. A violation apparent on the face of the disclosurestatement includes, but is not limited to, (1) a disclosure that can be determined to be incomplete or inaccurate from the face of the disclosure statement or other documents assigned, and (2) a disclosure that does not use the terms required to be used in Regulation Z [Health & Safety Code § 18036.5(k)].

Notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary, the assignee of a mobilehome conditional sale contract for which Regulation Z disclosures are required pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 18036.5 is subject to all equities and defenses of the buyer against the seller, except as provided by that section. However, the assignee's liability may not exceed the amount of the debt owing to the assignee at the time of assignment. The assignee has recourse against the seller to the extent of any liability incurred by the assignee pursuant to this provision, whether the assignment was with or without recourse, except to the extent of any written agreement between the seller and assignee that expressly references this provision and modifies its effect [Health & Safety Code § 18037]. For further discussion, see Ch. 369, Mobilehomes and Mobilehome Parks .

[8] Motor Vehicle Conditional Sale Contracts

An assignee of the seller's right under a conditional sale contract governed by the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.) is subject to all equities and defenses of the buyer against the seller, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary, but the assignee's liability may not exceed the amount of the debt owing to the assignee at the time of the assignment [Civ. Code § 2983.5(a)]. No conditional sale contract may contain any provision by which the buyer agrees not to assert a claim or defense arising out of the sale against the seller or an assignee [Civ. Code § 2983.7(a)]. The assignee has recourse against the seller to the extent of any liability incurred by the assignee pursuant to these provisions, regardless of whether the assignment was with or without recourse [Civ. Code § 2983.5(b)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act .

[9] Motor Vehicle Leases

An assignee of the lessor's rights under a motor vehicle lease governed by the Vehicle Leasing Act (Civ. Code § 2985.7 et seq.) is subject to all equities and defenses of the lessee against the lessor, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary, but the assignee's liability may not exceed the amount of the obligation owing to the assignee at the time of the assignment [Civ. Code § 2986.10(a)]. Except as otherwise specifically provided in the Vehicle Leasing Act, any civil action for a violation of the act that may be brought against the original lessor in any lease transaction may be maintained against any subsequent assignee of the original lessor, if the violation from which the alleged liability arose is apparent on the faceof the instrument assigned, unless the assignment was involuntary [Civ. Code § 2988.5(e)].

A lease contract may not contain any provision by which the lessee waives any right of action against the lessor or holder of the contract, or other person acting on behalf of the lessor or holder, for any illegal act committed in the collection of payments under the contract or in the repossession of the motor vehicle [Civ. Code § 2986.3(b)]. Additionally, a lease contract may not contain any provision by which the lessee relieves the lessor from liability for any legal remedies that the lessee may have against the lessor under the contract or any separate instruments executed in connection with the contract [Civ. Code § 2986.3(c)].

The assignee has recourse against the lessor to the extent of any liability incurred by the assignee pursuant to these provisions, regardless of whether the assignment was with or without recourse [Civ. Code § 2986.10(b)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 90, Automobiles: Vehicle Leasing Act .

[10] Nonnegotiable Instruments

A nonnegotiable written contract for the payment of money or personal property may be transferred by endorsement, in like manner with negotiable instruments. The endorsement transfers all of the rights of the assignor under the instrument to the assignee, subject to all equities and defenses existing in favor of the maker at the time of the endorsement [Civ. Code § 1459; Royal Bank Export Finance Co. v. Bestways Distributing Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 764, 768, 280 Cal. Rptr. 355] .

[11] Oil and Gas Lien Claims

An assignee of a cause of action to recover on a lien claim under the Oil and Gas Lien Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.50 et seq.) is subject to all defenses that might have been raised if the assignment had not been made [Code Civ. Proc. § 1203.64; see also the discussion in § 60.19[5]].

[12] Retail Installment Contracts

An assignee of the seller's rights under a retail installment sale contract governed by the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) is subject to all equities and defenses of the buyer against the seller arising out of the sale, notwithstanding an agreement to the contrary, but the assignee's liability may not exceed the amount of the debt owing to the assignee at the time of the assignment [Civ. Code § 1804.2(a); see Fin. Code § 22341(a)(5) (refinancing of buyer's obligation through consumer finance lender or broker that is seller's assignee)]. No retail installment sale contract may contain a provision by which the buyer agrees not to assert a claim or defense arising out of the sale against an assignee [Civ. Code § 1804.1(a)].

Unless the buyer has notice of an actual or intended assignment of a retail installment sale contract or installment account, payment made by the buyer to the last known holder of the contract or installment account discharges the buyer's obligation, to the extent of the payment [Civ. Code § 1806.1(a)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

[13] Seller Assisted Marketing Plans

Any assignee of a seller assisted marketing plan contract [see Civ. Code § 1812.200 et seq.] is subject to all equities, rights, and defenses of the purchaser against the seller [Civ. Code § 1812.211; see Civ. Code § 1812.215 (voidability of contract)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 515, Securities and Franchise Regulation .

[14] Student Credit Contracts

Notwithstanding the presence or absence of any required notification to the student in a private school student credit contract [see discussion under § 60.19[6]] and notwithstanding any agreement in which the student waives the right to assert any claim or defense, the private postsecondary school or vocational institution making a loan or extending credit under the contract and the transferee, assignee, or holder of the evidence of indebtedness are subject to all defenses and claims that could be asserted against the school or institution that was to render or furnish the contracted-for educational services by any party to that evidence of indebtedness or by the person to whom the educational services were to be rendered or furnished, up to the amount remaining to be paid [Educ. Code § 94335(d)].

[15] Trust Deed Forgeries

In an action for damages by a homeowner or trustor against a beneficiary of a trust deed on real property consisting of a single family residence containing not more than four dwelling units, or against an assignee or successor in interest of the beneficiary, if it is established that the trust deed was forged in whole or in part by the beneficiary, judgment may be entered for three times the amount at which the actual damages are assessed [Code Civ. Proc. § 749(a)]. However, an assignee of a beneficiary or a transferee of a prior assignee is not subject to treble damages unless it is established that the person purchased or obtained the deed of trust with actual knowledge of the forgery of the deed of trust [Code Civ. Proc. § 749(b)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages .

[16] Truth in Lending Act

Assignees of consumer retail installment contracts who regularly extend or arrange for the extension of credit to consumers through the assignorsof the contracts may themselves be "creditors" within the meaning of the Truth in Lending Act and subject to liability under the act. A finance company cannot shed the duties and responsibilities of a lender by accepting the assignment of contracts from a seller with which it is intimately connected [Glaire v. La Lanne-Paris Health Spa, Inc. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 915, 923-924, 117 Cal. Rptr. 541, 528 P.2d 357] . For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

[4] Assignee as Plaintiff

Fact that assignment of contract between assignor and supplier was conditioned on supplier's written approval, which had not been obtained at time assignee plaintiff sued supplier for declaratory relief regarding contract, did not deprive assignee of standing to maintain action; plaintiffs required to be provided forum even though decision might not uphold assignment. *Don Rose Oil Co., Inc. v. [6] Notice

Payment by obligor to assignor of note before notice of assignment is defense to action on note. Bank of Stockton v. Jones (1884) 65 Cal. 437, 438, 4 P. 418

(1954) 42 Cal. 2d 284, 292, 267 P.2d 16* ; Neptune Society Corp. v. Longanecker (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1242, 240 Cal. Rptr. 117

Fact that obligor treated plaintiff as assignee was not sufficient to establish fact of assignment when authority of corporate officer to make assignment was not proved and obligor relied on misrepresentations of plaintiff regarding fact of assignment. Neptune Society Corp. v. Longanecker (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1242-1243, 240 Cal. Rptr. 117

Judgment on property owner's claim against construction contractor for breach of warranty, based on defects in building, could not include attorney's fees for successful plaintiff because warranty, which was separate from construction contract and which property owner had acquired by assignment on purchasing property from previous owner that had erected building, did not contain attorney's fees provision, and construction contract, which did contain such provision, had not been assigned by seller. Vons Cos. v. Lyle Parks Jr., Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 823, 825-826, 835, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562

[10] Validity of Assignment

Whether assignment of notes and deeds of trust was intended outright sale or as security for loan is determined from facts and circumstances surrounding transaction; fact that buyers did not take possession not conclusive. Bear v. Coben (In re Golden Plan of Ca., Inc.), (9th Cir. 1986) 829 F.2d 705, 708-709 (finding sale)

Intent of parties rather than form of assignment determines rights. Republic Indem. Co. v. Maier Brewing Co. (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 495, 498, 57 Cal. Rptr. 670 (involving waiver of assignment)

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use in an action by an assignee of the payee of a promissory note against the payor.

[3] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. If the cause of action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection and the complaint is verified, the defendant's denial of the allegations must be made positively or according to the information and belief of the defendant, even if the complaint is subject to the statutory provisions for economic litigation in limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] Jurisdiction

Actions for declaratory relief are generally in the jurisdiction of the superior court as cases of unlimited jurisdiction. An action for declaratoryrelief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court, as a limited civil case only when brought as a cross complaint for indemnity in an action or proceeding that is otherwise a limited civil case or in cases following nonbinding arbitration between an attorney and client when the amount in controversy is $25,000 or less [*Cal. § 61.04 Definitions

[1] Association

The usual meaning of the term "association" is an unincorporated organization composed of a body of people partaking in general form and mode of procedure of the characteristics of a corporation [Estate of Irwin (1925) 196 Cal. 366, 372, 237 P. 1074] . By its terms, this definition is not inclusive and exclusive [Law v. Crist (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 862, 865, 107 P.2d 953] , and the formalities of quasi-corporate organization are not required [Barr v. United Methodist Church (1981) 90 Cal. App. 3d 259, 267, 153 Cal. Rptr. 322] . Thus, for example, an organization may be found to be an association even if there are no officers, no constitution and no by-laws [Law v. Crist (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 862, 865, 107 P.2d 953 (group working together to advance and disseminate teachings of theosophy constituted association)]. Conversely, the existence of articles of association and by-laws is not dispositive; the membership requirements may be reviewed to determine whether exclusivity is actual or only apparent [DeMott v. Board of Police Commissioners (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 296, 305-306, 175 Cal. Rptr. 879 (picture arcade in bookstore was not association, but place to which public was admitted despite alleged operation as private film club)].

The criteria applied to determine whether an entity is an unincorporated association are no more complicated than [Barr v. United Methodist Church (1981) 90 Cal. App. 3d 259, 266, 153 Cal. Rptr. 322] :

- A group whose members share a common purpose, and
- Who function under a common name under circumstances where fairness requires the group be recognized as a legal entity.

"Association" is defined for purposes of Corp. Code §§ 21300-21310 (insignia) as any lodge; order; beneficial association; fraternal or beneficial society or association; historical, military, or veterans organization; laborunion; foundation; federation; or any other society, organization, or association, or degree, branch, subordinate lodge, or auxiliary thereof [Corp. Code § 21300(a)].

[2] Unincorporated Association

"Unincorporated association" is defined as an unincorporated group of two or more persons joined by mutual consent for a common lawful purpose, whether organized for profit or not [Corp. Code § 18035(a)]. Joint tenancy, tenancy in common, community property, or other form or property tenure does not by itself establish an unincorporated association, even if co-owners share ownership of the property for a common purpose [Corp. Code § 18035(b)]. Marriage or creation of a registered domestic partnership does not by itself establish an unincorporated association [Corp. Code § 18035(c)].

[3] Nonprofit Association

"Nonprofit association" is defined as an unincorporated association with a primary common purpose other than to operate a business for profit [Corp. Code § 18020(a)]. A nonprofit association may carry on a business for profit and apply any profit that results from the business activity to any activity in which it may lawfully engage [Corp. Code § 18020(b)].

[4] Club

"Club" is defined as a voluntary, incorporated or unincorporated association of persons for common purposes of a social, literary, investment, or political nature, or the like [Black's Law Dictionary, p. 256 (6th ed. 1990); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 23037 (definition of "club" for purposes of Alcoholic Beverage Control Act)].

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.10

§ 61.10 Association's General Right to Establish Membership Qualifications

The general rule is that membership in a voluntary association is a privilege that may be withheld or accorded on such terms and conditions as the association sees fit to impose [Greenwood v. Building Trades Council (1925) 71 Cal. App. 159, 171, 233 P. 823 (labor union council)]. As further discussed in § 61.11, a private association's power to establish membership membership qualifications is reinforced to some extent by the constitutional right to freedom of association. Absent constitutional protection, however, an association's power to exclude persons from membership may be limited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act [see discussion in § 61.12] and by certain common-law principles of fairness when exclusion from membership would cause economic harm to an applicant [see discussion in § 61.13].

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.11

§ 61.11 Effect of Constitutional Right of Association

[1] Two Separate Interests Protected

The power of the government to regulate the discretion of an unincorporated association or club to select its own members (for example, by applying antidiscrimination laws to the association's membership decisions) is limited to some extent by the constitutional freedom of association. The constitutional protection of freedom of association protects two separate types of associational interests, intimate and expressive. The intimate associational interest protects the freedom to form and preserve certain kinds of personal relationships or associations as a fundamental element of personal liberty. The expressive associational interest protects the right to associate for the purpose of engaging in those activities protected by U.S. Const., amend. I--speech, assembly, petition for redress of grievances, and the exercise of religion. This freedom of association is an indispensable means of preserving other individual liberties [see Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 617-618, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 ; Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 624-626, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ; Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986)187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987) ; see also People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1111, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596 , cert. denied sub nom. Gonzalez v. Gallo, 521 U.S. 1121 (street gang's conduct in taking over neighborhood, fighting, and participating in other illegal conduct fails to qualify as either of two protected forms of association)].

[2] Intimate Associational Interest

Certain intimate human relationships must be secured against undue intrusion by the state because of the role of those relationships in safeguarding the individual freedom that is central to our constitutional scheme. The relationships protected are typically distinguished by their relative smallness, high degree of selectivity in decisions to begin and maintain the affiliation, and seclusion from others in critical aspects of the relationship. Only relationships with these sorts of qualities are likely to reflect the considerations that have led to an understanding of freedom of association as an intrinsic element of personal liberty. The factors considered in deciding whether an association possesses the requisite degree of intimacy include size, purpose, policies, selectivity, congeniality, and other characteristics that in a particular case may be pertinent [Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 620, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 ;

Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12-13, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987)] .

For example, an organization comprised mostly of former cult members, which was devoted to informing the public about the harmful effects of mind control and the unethical practices employed by cults, was not required to accept Scientologists as members because it was based on sufficiently intimate relationships to warrant constitutional protection that precluded application of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, Civ. Code § 51 [see Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788-789, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] . By contrast, in another case, the California Supreme Court held that the Unruh Civil Rights Act could be constitutionally applied to strike down a country club's policy of excluding women from proprietary membership. In finding untenable the club's claim that application of the Act infringed on club members' freedom of intimate association, the Court relied on several factors, including (1) the size of defendant's membership (about 700 members); (2) the fact that the premises and activities of the defendant club were not narrowly restricted to club members (or their families), but were open to numerous nonmembers, including invited guests, participants in sponsored events, and patrons of the club's golf and tennis pro shops; and (3) the fact that elimination of the men-only requirement for proprietary membership would not fundamentally alter the nature of the club or its specific purposes, since the club's recreational facilities had generally been open to women and women had routinely held nonproprietary classes of membership within the club [see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf& Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] .

For further discussion and forms pertaining to the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments , Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination .

[3] Expressive Associational Interest

The right to engage in expressive activities protected by U.S. Const., amend. I implies a corresponding right to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends. Governmental impediments to the exercise of one's right to choose one's associates can violate that protected right [BSA v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 2451, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554 ; Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 548, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 ; Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 622-623, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462] .

The right to associate for expressive purposes is not absolute. Infringements on the right of association may be justified by regulations adopted to serve compelling state interests, unrelated to the suppression of ideas, that cannot be achieved through means significantly less restrictive of associational freedoms [Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 623, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462] .

Furthermore, when state law does not affect in any significant way the existing members' ability to carry out the association's purposes, that state law may be applied to an association. Thus, for example, the United States Supreme Court has held that because application of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51), which prohibits discrimination against women, did not require the Rotary Clubs to abandon or alter any of their activities, basic goals, classification system, or admit members who do not reflect a cross section of the community, it could be constitutionally applied to Rotary Clubs, so as to require them to admit women as members [Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 548-549, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 ; see also Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 628-629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 (application of Unruh Act to private country club did not violate constitutional freedom of expressive association because club was not organized for and did not regularly engage in expressive activities protected by U.S. Const., amend. I); see generally Ch. 116, Discrimination in Business Establishments]. State law will not be applied to force inclusion of individuals, however, when their presence would interfere with a group's expressive activities. For example, New Jersey's application to the Boy Scouts of its public accommodations law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of, inter alia, sexual orientation violated the Boy Scouts' First Amendment expressive associational right [BSA v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 2449, 147

L. Ed. 2d 554] . As another example, a cult awareness group could notbe forced to accept Scientologists as members [see Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 790, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] .

[4] Public Organizations Involving Business Relationships

Clubs and associations that are allegedly "private" and based on intimate relationships may not necessarily be constitutionally immune from state intrusion. Thus, an ordinance that prohibited discrimination in private clubs was upheld by the United States Supreme Court in New York State Club Assn. v. NYC [N.Y. State Club Ass'n v. City of New York (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1] . The ordinance in New York State Club Assn. applied to clubs that were within its definition of "public," that is, clubs with more than 400 members that provide regular meal service and regularly receive payment for dues, fees, use of space, facilities, services, meals, or beverages directly or indirectly from or on behalf of nonmembers for the furtherance of trade or business. In upholding the ordinance, the Court did not explicitly focus on the intimate versus nonintimate interests of the members. Instead, it focused on the "commercial" nature of the organizations; they were clubs where business deals were made and personal contacts valuable for business and employment purposes were formed. The Court found that such associations involved business relationships rather than intimate personal relationships. It explained that strangers played a major role in the ordinary existence of such clubs. The provision of regular meal service, the receipt of regular payments from nonmembers for the furtherance of business, and the regular participation of strangers at meetings were all significant in defining the nonprivate nature of the clubs [N.Y. State Club Ass'n v. City of New York (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 12-15, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 (holding that Unruh Civil Rights Act could be constitutionally applied to "private" country club; relying in part on club's large size (over 700 members) and on fact that use of club's facilities were not strictly limited to proprietary members)].

[5] Inapplicability to Relations With Association's Employees

Although the membership policies of an association may be entitled to constitutional protection under the right to freedom of association, that right will not necessarily protect the employment policies of that association. In one case, for example, a California court of appeal held that because the Bohemian Club membership policy limiting membership to males who had an appreciation of the arts was extremely selective and created an intimate relationship among the members, the members' association rights were protected. However, because the same selectivity was not applied in the employment process and there was a policy of nonfraternization between members and employees, the members did not have the same associational rights with employees, and the club could not exclude women from employment. In reaching this conclusion, the court of appeal stated that even if the mere presence of women on a regular basis would change the spirit of the organization and destroy the "bohemian feeling" of the club, those feelings are not afforded constitutional protection. The right to freedom of association only protects highly personal relationships, and the club members' relationship with employees could not reasonably be termed intimate within the letter or spirit of the term [Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 13-14, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987)] . Moreover, even if the members' associational rights would somehow be constricted by the club's forced hiring of women or others typically excluded from membership, that infringement might be justified by the state's compelling interest in eradicating employment discrimination [Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987)] .

§ 61.12 Applicability of Unruh Civil Rights Act

The Unruh Civil Rights Act proscribes arbitrary discrimination in all business establishments [see Civ. Code § 51]. Except when application of the Act would violate the constitutional freedom of association [see discussion in § 61.11], the exclusion of a person from membership in an association or club (or expulsion of a current member) because of the person's sex, race, religion, disability, or other basis specified in Civ. Code § 51 may constitute a violation of the Unruh Act. The term "business establishment" includes all entities, whether carried on for profit or not, that are open to and serving the general public. Thus, all associations and clubs that are not strictly private (that is, exclusive in their selection of members and not open to the general public) are potentially subject to the application of the Unruh Act [see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 ; Randall v. Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261 (Boy Scouts are not subject to Unruh Act for membership decisions and may exclude homosexuals and atheists without violating Act, but are subject to Act for business transactions with nonmembers)]. Furthermore, even if an association or club is "private" in the sense that it exercises selectivity in choosing members, that association or club may be deemed a business establishment for purpose of the Act if it regularly engages in business transactions with nonmembers on its premises [see, e.g., Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ("private" country club was business establishment subject to Unruh Act)]. An association or club may be subject to the Act for one purpose, e.g., business transactions, but not for another, e.g., its membership decisions [see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 697, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 ; Randall v. Orange CountyCouncil, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 736, 744, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453, 952 P.2d 261 (Boy Scouts may exclude homosexuals and atheists from membership without violating Act, but business transactions with nonmembers are subject to Act)].

- Resignation of the member.
- Expiration of the fixed term of the membership, unless the membership is renewed before its expiration.

2. General Rights and Duties of Members

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.21

§ 61.21 Rights and Duties of Members Determined by Association's Constitution, Rules, and Bylaws

The constitution, rules, and bylaws of a voluntary unincorporated association constitute a contract between the association and its members. The rights and duties of the members as between themselves and in their relation to the association, in all matters affecting the association's internal government and the management of its affairs, are measured by the terms of the constitution and bylaws [Weber v. Marine Cooks' & Stewards' Assn. (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 327, 335, 208 P.2d 1009 (labor union)]. Those provisions, rules, and bylaws are regarded in the same light as the terms of any other contract unless they contravene some law of the land [Lawson v. Hewell (1897) 118 Cal. 613, 619, 50 P. 763] .

The rights and duties of the members are to be determined by a consideration of the entire body of the rules governing the association, and are not limited to those existing at the time an individual became a member. Unless the rules at that time placed a limitation on the power of the association to make any change or amendment, any amendment or change adopted in accordance with the rules of the association is binding on each of the members [Lawson v. Hewell (1897) 118 Cal. 613, 621, 50 P. 763 (fraternal organization); Gear v. Webster (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 57, 61-62, 65 Cal. Rptr. 255 (controversy between two members; board of realtors bylaw was involved)], except that the power of amendment may not be used to repudiate obligations of a mutual benefit association that, in equity and justice, it should continue to pay [Power v. Sheriffs' Relief Asso. (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 350, 352, 134 P.2d 827 (sick benefits)].

The practical and reasonable construction of the constitution and bylaws of a voluntary organization by its governing board is binding on the membership and will be recognized by the courts [DeMille v. American Fed. of Radio Artists (1947) 31 Cal. 2d 139, 147, 187 P.2d 769 , cert. denied, 333 U.S. 876 (1948) (labor union)]. However, an unreasonable construction is not binding on the membership and will not be recognized by the courts [Mandracio v. Bartenders Union, Local 41 (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 81, 85, 256 P.2d 927 (labor union)]. The general rule is that when a private voluntary organization plainly contravenes the terms of its bylaws, whether and to what extent judicial relief will be available depends on balancing the rights of the aggrieved party against the infringement on the organization's autonomy and the resulting burdens on the courts [California Dental Assn. v. American Dental Assn. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 346, 350, 354-355, 152 Cal. Rptr. 546, 590 P.2d 401 (mandate available to require parent association to recognize rules of affiliate)].

If the internal dispute of a private voluntary association involves the interpretation and construction of seemingly inconsistent provisions of its bylaws and if the meaning attributed to those provisions by the association's governing board is not unreasonable, arbitrary, or plainly in contravention of those bylaws, a court may not intervene and substitute its judgment for that of the association [California Trial Lawyers Assn. v. Superior Court (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 575, 579-581, 231 Cal. Rptr. 725 (order of trial court directing association to disqualify candidate for office of president-elect and to install opposing candidate improper)].

Interference by the courts in the internal affairs of an association, involving the relations between it and its members, is justifiable under certain circumstances on the basis of public policy [Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 843-844, 313 P.2d 857 (right of labor union member to inspect union financial records without exhausting union remedies)]. Furthermore, if a private organization is "tinged with public stature or purpose" or has attained a "quasi-public significance," the organization must afford its members fair procedure before denying them benefits or otherwise adversely affecting their interests [see Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1607-1608, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 (largest private dental plan in state was required to afford its participating dentists fair procedure before modifying participating dentists' list of usual, customary, and reasonable fees)]. Issues regarding fair procedure most often arise in connection with expulsion from membership [see discussion in § 61.31[1]], although the right to fair procedure is not limited to matters of expulsion or exclusion [Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1607, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381] .

For a form of complaint by members of an unincorporated association for declaratory relief to challenge the validity of amendments to the association's constitution, bylaws, or other rules, see § 61.87.

A member's interest in association property is only incidental to his or her membership and will cease on his or her ceasing to be a member when the property was accumulated by reason of the payment of dues [Lawson v. Hewell (1897) 118 Cal. 613, 621-622, 50 P. 763 (fraternal organization)]. However, courts may interfere for the purpose of protecting property rights of members of unincorporated associations, such as the right to participate in their benefit features [*Otto v. § 61.23 Member's Right to Inspect Association Records

Analogizing to the rule applicable to corporations, the California Supreme Court has held that members of an unincorporated association are entitled to inspect financial records of the association on written demand, at least to the extent reasonably related to the member's interests in the association [see Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 843, 313 P.2d 857 (citing former Corp. Code § 3003; now see Corp. Code § 1601)]. Furthermore, the Court held that a member need not exhaust the association's internal remedies before exercising the right of inspection [see Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 843-844, 313 P.2d 857] .

The association involved in the Mooney case was a labor union. After that decision, Congress enacted specific statutory provisions pertaining to the inspection by members of union records [see 29 U.S.C. § 431(c)]. Nevertheless, the holding in Mooney apparently remains applicable to other types of unincorporated associations.

For a form of petition for writ of mandate to require an association to permit inspection of its records, see § 61.86. For discussion of a shareholder's right to inspect corporate records, see Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports .

Except as otherwise provided by statute or by an unincorporated association's governing principles, the following rules govern a member vote conducted pursuant to the provisions of the Corporations Code governing unincorporated associations [Corp. Code § 18330(a)-(e); see Corp. Code § 18000 et seq.]:

- A vote may be conducted either (1) at a member meeting at which a quorum is present, or (2) by a written ballot in which the number of votes cast equals or exceeds the number required for a quorum.Approval of a matter voted on requires an affirmative majority of the votes cast.

- Written notice of the vote must be delivered to all members entitled to vote on the date of delivery. The notice must be delivered or mailed or sent electronically to the member addresses shown in the association's records a reasonable time before the vote is to be conducted. The notice may not be delivered electronically, unless the recipient has consented to electronic delivery of the notice. The notice must state the matter to be decided and describe how and when the vote is to be conducted.

- If the vote is to be conducted by written ballot, the notice of the vote will serve as the ballot. It must (1) set forth the proposed action, (2) provide an opportunity to specify approval or disapproval of any proposal, and (3) provide a reasonable time within which to return the ballot to the unincorporated association.

- One-third the voting power of the association constitutes a quorum.

- The voting power of the association is the total number of votes that can be cast by members on a particular issue at the time the member vote is held.

- The member expressly assumes liability for injury, damage, or harm caused by particular conduct and that conduct causes the injury, damage, or harm.
- The member engages in tortious conduct that causes the injury, damage, or harm.
- The member is otherwise liable under any other statute.

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.30

§ 61.30 Grounds for Suspension or Expulsion

The right of an unincorporated association to expel a member may be based and upheld on either of the following two grounds [Smith v. Kern County Medical Asso. (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 263, 270, 120 P.2d 874 (medical society); Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 314, 17 P. 217 (labor union); see Anderson v. Los Angeles County Employee Relations Com. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 817, 826, 280 Cal. Rptr. 415 (organization has right of self-preservation and may expel members who are disloyal and join rival organization)]:

- A violation of those established rules of the association that have been subscribed or assented to by the members, if those rules provide expulsion for such violation; or

- Conduct that clearly violates the fundamental objects of the association and that, if persisted in and allowed, would thwart those objects or bring the association into disrepute.

However, an association may not expel a member if the expulsion is substantively unreasonable and rests on a rule that is capricious or contrary to public policy. For example, the expulsion of a Boy Scout based solely on his status as a homosexual was found to be substantively unreasonable [see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 721, 723, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , appeal dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) (Boy Scouts not subject to Unruh Act for purposes of membership decisions)].

At least in situations in which a private organization controls an important economic interest, its decision to expel an individual may not be arbitrary. An expulsion will be deemed arbitrary either because the reason for the exclusion is itself irrational or because, in applying a rule in a particular case, the organization has proceeded in an unfair manner [Gaenslen v. Board of Directors (1985) 185 Cal. App. 3d 563, 568, 232 Cal. Rptr. 239 ; see § 61.31[1]].

For a form of petition for writ of mandate challenging an association's decision to expel a member and for damages for wrongful expulsion, see § 61.80. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that there were sufficient grounds for a member's expulsion, see § 61.101.

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.31

§ 61.31 Procedure for Expulsion

[1] General Fair Procedure Requirement

Corp. Code § 18320 codifies the fair procedure requirement for suspension or expulsion from membership in an unincorporated association. It applies only if membership in an unincorporated association includes a property right, or if expulsion or suspension of a member would affect an important, substantial economic interest [Corp. Code § 18320(a)]. It does not apply to an unincorporated association that has a religious purpose [Corp. Code § 18320(a)]. In addition, § 18320 governs only the procedure for expulsion or suspension and not the substantive grounds for expulsion or suspension [Corp. Code § 18320(f)]. An expulsion or suspension basedon substantive grounds that violate contractual or other rights of the member or are otherwise unlawful is not made valid by compliance with § 18320 [Corp. Code § 18320(f)].

Expulsion or suspension of a member must be done in good faith and in a fair and reasonable manner. A procedure that satisfies the requirements of Corp. Code § 18320(c) is fair and reasonable, but a court may also determine that another procedure is fair and reasonable taking into account the full circumstances of the expulsion or suspension [Corp. Code § 18320(b)].

A procedure for expulsion or suspension of a member that satisfies the following requirements is fair and reasonable [Corp. Code § 18320(c)]:

- The procedure is included in the unincorporated association's governing documents [see Corp. Code § 18008 ("governing documents" defined)].

- The member to be expelled or suspended is given notice, including a statement of the reasons for the expulsion or suspension. The notice must be delivered at least 15 days before the effective date of the expulsion or suspension [Corp. Code § 18320(c)(2)]. A notice pursuant to Corp. Code § 18320 may be delivered by any method reasonably calculated to provide actual notice. A notice delivered by mail must be sent by first-class, certified, or registered mail to the last address of the member shown on the unincorporated association's records [Corp. Code § 18320(d)].

- The member to be expelled or suspended is given an opportunity to be heard by the person or body deciding the matter, orally or in writing, not less than five days before the effective date of the expulsion or suspension.

A member may commence a proceeding to challenge his or her expulsion or suspension, including a claim alleging defective notice, within one year after the effective date of the expulsion or suspension [Corp. Code § 18320(e)]. The court may order any relief, including reinstatement, it determines is equitable under the circumstances [Corp. Code § 18320(e)]. A vote of the members or of the board may not be set aside solely because a person was wrongfully excluded from voting by virtue of the challenged expulsion or suspension, unless the court determines that the wrongful expulsion or suspension was in bad faith and for the purpose, and with the effect, of wrongfully excluding the member from the vote or from the meeting at which the vote took place, so as to affect the vote's outcome [Corp. Code § 18320(e)].

California courts recognize a common law right to fair procedure protecting individuals from arbitrary exclusion or expulsion from private organizations that control important economic interests [Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1060, 1071-1072, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496, 997 P.2d 1153 ; Applebaum v. Board of Directors (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 648, 163 Cal. Rptr. 831 ; see Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1607, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 ; Gaenslen v. Board of Directors (1985) 185 Cal. App. 3d 563, 568, 232 Cal. Rptr. 239] . The purpose of the common law right to fair procedure is to protect against arbitrary decisions by private organizations in certain situations, including the following [Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1060, 1066, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496, 997 P.2d 1153] :

- Membership expulsions adversely affecting rights in specified funds held for the associations' members, so that court intervention is necessary to protect the affected members' property rights against arbitrary deprivation by the association [Von Arx v. San Francisco G. Verein (1896) 113 Cal. 377, 45 P. 685 ; Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 17 P. 217] ;

- Exclusion from membership on the basis of race [James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 155 P.2d 329 (union's arbitrary denial of full membership to African-American workers)];

- Exclusion from professional organizations [Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 (Pinsker II); Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Soc. of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495 (Pinsker I)];

- Expulsion from a hospital surgical residency program [Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32] ; and

- Removal of a physician from an insurance company's preferred provider lists [Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1060, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496, 997 P.2d 1153] .

The right of fair procedure generally applies when a private organization is "tinged with public stature or purpose" or has attained a "quasi-public significance" [see Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1060, 1070, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496, 997 P.2d 1153 (private insurer maintaining list of preferred provider physicians is "private entity affecting public interest"); Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1607-1608, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 (largest California dential plan; citing Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1125, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352)]. However, automatic suspension of a member pursuant to the association's bylaws following his or her failure to pay dues does not contravene the requirements of fair procedure [DeMille v. American Fed. of Radio Artists

What constitutes fair procedure is not fixed or judicially prescribed; however, if the right of fair procedure applies, the association generally may not expel a member without affording him or her notice and a hearing, even though the rules of the association make no provision for these protections [Youngblood v. Wilcox (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1368, 1375, 255 Cal. Rptr. 527 (expulsion of lifetime members from country club); see Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 555, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 (denial of orthodontist's application for membership in professional society); see also Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1608, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 (dental plan's modification of participating dentist's list of fees)]. Generally, the hearing required by the right of fair procedure includes the right to notice of the charges, to confront and cross examine the accusers, and to examine and refute the evidence [Cason v. Glass Bottle Blowers Asso. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 134, 143-144, 231 P.2d 6 ; Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1445, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819] . Additionally, the right to fair procedure includes the right to impartial adjudicators and a practical method of testing impartiality [Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1448-1449, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819 (in proceeding to determine hospital staff privileges, physician has right to examination of committee members to discover possible bias or conflicts of interest)].

One court has held that public censure is sufficient to invoke judicial protection of fair procedure rights. The court reasoned that public censure may tend to impair a member's opportunity to earn a livelihood through his or her chosen profession because, in the public view, membership in those organizations may appear to be a tangible demonstration of professional competence and skill, professional responsibility, and acceptance by one's professional peers [Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1121-1126, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352] .

For a form of petition for writ of mandate containing allegations that a member was expelled without a fair hearing, see § 61.80. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the member was afforded a fair expulsion proceeding, see § 61.101.

[2] Judicial Review and Relief

[a] Exhaustion of Internal Remedies

A plaintiff who seeks judicial relief against an organization of which he or she is a member must first invoke and exhaust the remedies provided by that organization applicable to his or her grievance. This makes possible the settlement of the matter by simple, expeditious, and inexpensive procedures by persons who are familiar with those procedures. Pursuit of internal relief is excused only if the organization violates its rules for review or on a showing that it would be futile to invoke the internal procedures [Holderby v. Internat. Union etc. Engrs. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 843, 846-847, 291 P.2d 463 (denial of reinstatement into labor union); DeVaughn Peace, M.D., Inc. v. St. Francis Medical Center (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 454, 460, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459] . The exhaustion of internal remedies is a jurisdictional prerequisite to resort to the courts [American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers v. Superior Court (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 676, 684, 24 Cal. Rptr. 772 ; see also DeVaughn Peace, M.D., Inc. v. St. FrancisMedical Center (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 454, 459-460, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 (physician's failure to exhaust intraorganizational remedies and thereafter file petition for writ of mandate pursuant to medical staff bylaws was fatal to his tort action against medical center for damages caused by alleged wrongful deprivation of medical staff privileges); Ferguson v. Writers Guild of America (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1382, 1390, 277 Cal. Rptr. 450 (exhaustion of internal remedies prevents litigant from pursuing judicial remedy for procedural defects in arbitration without having first asked responsible private organization to correct them)].

Furthermore, when a remedy is resorted to, the member must give the association a reasonable time to act [Simpson v. The Salvation Army (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 371, 376, 121 P.2d 847 (religious and charitable association)].

An incorrect decision by the appellate organs of the association is not a violation of the association's rules on appeal that justifies the member in refusing to further follow these rules. However, imposition of a penalty nowhere prescribed that constitutes a violation of the association's appellate procedure rules makes it futile to invoke the further appellate rules [Gonzales v. International Asso. of Machinists (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 207, 211-212, 298 P.2d 92 , affirmed, 356 U.S. 617 (1958) (labor union)]. An aggrieved association member is also excused from further internal appeal if exhaustion of appeals would create too great a delay [Mitchell v. International Asso. of Machinists (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 796, 808, 16 Cal. Rptr. 813] .

For a form of demurrer to a complaint or petition based on the plaintiff's or petitioner's failure to exhaust an association's internal remedies, see § 61.100.

[b] General Power of Court in Mandate Proceeding

Mandate is a proper proceeding to compel the reinstatement to membership of one who has been illegally expelled from a duly organized association [Smetherham v. Laundry Workers' Union (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 135, 111 P.2d 948 ; see generally Code Civ. Proc. § 1084 et seq.; Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. Furthermore, in cases in which the expulsion decision is subject to the right to fair procedure [see discussion in [1], above], judicial review of the organization's decision is by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 because the right to fair procedure includes the right to a hearing, which contemplates the receiving of evidence and the vesting of discretion in a trier of fact [Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1608, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 ; see Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 813-817, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162 (administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 is not limited to review of decisions by governmental agencies, but applies to adjudicatory decisions by nongovernmental bodies or officers that are result of proceedings in which hearing is required bylaw)]. For general discussion of procedures pertaining to adminstrative mandate, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , through Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

In cases in which the association's decision affects a fundamental vested right, such as the right to practice one's profession, the trial court must exercise its independent judgment on the evidence presented to the decisionmaking body and determine whether the decision is supported by the weight of the evidence [see Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 820-825, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162 ; Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c)]. In other cases, the court is limited to determining whether the association's decision and findings are supported by substantial evidence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c); see also Bush v. International Alliance (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 357, 363, 130 P.2d 788 (standard is whether association's decision is supported by any evidence whatsoever); McConville v. Milk W.D. Union (1930) 106 Cal. App. 696, 698, 289 P. 852] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(d) sets forth standards for review of decisions of private hospital boards, boards of directors of hospital districts or governing bodies of municipal hospitals. For further discussion, see Ch. 416, Physicians: Membership on Hospital Staffs or in Professional Organizations .

For a form of petition for writ of mandate to review the decision of a private association to expel a member, see § 61.80. For a form of affirmative defense to such a petition, alleging the legality of the expulsion, see § 61.101.

[c] Mandate as Prerequisite to Damages Action

Before an association member may bring an action for damages based on wrongful expulsion, he or she must first seek and obtain a favorable decision on a petition for writ of mandate overturning the expulsion [*Westlake Community Hosp. v. § 61.40 Association's General Power to Own, Manage, and Transfer Property

An unincorporated association may, in its name, acquire, hold, manage, encumber, or transfer an interest in real or personal property [Corp. Code § 18105; see Corp. Code § 21200 (property rights of certain unincorporated medical societies)]. Property acquired by or for an unincorporated association is property of the unincorporated association and not of the members individually [Corp. Code § 18110]. No limitation on the power of an unincorporated association to acquire, hold, manage, pledge, encumber, or transfer an interest in real or personal property, or the manner of exercise of those powers, can be asserted as between the unincorporated association or a member of the unincorporated association and a third person, except in the following proceedings [Corp. Code § 18125]:

- A proceeding to enjoin an unauthorized act, or the continuation of an unauthorized act, when a third person has not yet acquired rights that would be adversely affected by the injunction, or when, at the time of the unauthorized act, the third person had actual knowledge that the act was unauthorized.

- A proceeding to dissolve the unincorporated association.

- A proceeding against a director, officer, or agent of the unincorporated association for violation of that person's authority.

The acquisition of an interest in real property by an unincorporated association must be executed by (1) its president and secretary or other comparable officers; (2) a person specifically designated by a resolution adopted by the association; or (3) a committee or other body or person authorized to act by the governing principles of the association [Corp. Code § 18115].

An unincorporated association may record in a county in which it has an interest in real property a verified and acknowledged statement of authority stating the name of the association, and the names, title, or capacity of its officers and other persons who are authorized on its behalf to acquire real property. For these purposes, "statement of authority" includes a certified copy of a statement recorded in another county [Corp. Code § 18120(a)]. An unincorporated association may revoke a statement of authority by recording either of the following documents in the county in which the statement of authority is recorded [Corp. Code § 18120(b)]:

- A new statement of authority that satisfies the requirements described above. The new statement supersedes the revoked statement; or

- A verified and acknowledged document that expressly revokes the statement of authority.

It will be conclusively presumed in favor of a bona fide transferor for value of real property of the association located in the county in which a statement of authority has been recorded, that a person designated in the statement is authorized to acquire real property on behalf of the association [Corp. Code § 18120(c)]. This presumption does not apply if, before the acquisition, either of the following occurs [Corp. Code § 18120(d)]:

- The statement of authority is revoked by the unincorporated association; or

- A person claiming to be a member, director, or officer of the unincorporated association records, in the county in which the property is located, a verified and acknowledged document stating that the statement of authority is erroneous or unauthorized.

A testamentary disposition may be made to unincorporated societies or associations or lodges or branches thereof [Prob. Code § 6102].

The transfer or encumbrance of an interest in real property by an unincorporated association must be executed by (1) its president and secretary or other comparable officers; (2) a person specifically designated by a resolution adopted by the association; or (3) a committee or other body or person authorized to act by the governing principles of the association [*Corp. - A new statement of authority that satisfies the requirements described above. The new statement supersedes the revoked statement; or

- A verified and acknowledged document that expressly revokes the statement of authority.

It will be conclusively presumed in favor of a bona fide purchaser or encumbrancer for value of real property of the association located in the county in which a statement of authority has been recorded, that a person designated in the statement is authorized to transfer or encumber real property on behalf of the association [*Corp. - The statement of authority is revoked by the unincorporated association; or

- A person claiming to be a member, director, or officer of the unincorporated association records, in the county in which the property is located, a verified and acknowledged document stating that the

§ 61.42 Levying on Association's Real Property

A money judgment against an unincorporated association, whether organized for profit or not, may be enforced only against the association's property [Corp. Code § 18260]. A judgment creditor of a member, director, officer, or agent of an unincorporated association may not levy execution against the assets of the member, director, officer, or agent to satisfy a judgment based on a claim against the unincorporated association unless a judgment based on the same claim has been obtained against the unincorporated association and any of the following conditions is satisfied [Corp. Code § 18270(a)]:

- A writ of execution on the judgment against the unincorporated association has been returned unsatisfied in whole or in part.

- The unincorporated association is a debtor in bankruptcy.

- The member, director, officer, or agent has agreed that the creditor need not exhaust the assets of the unincorporated association.

- A court grants permission to the judgment creditor to levy execution against the assets of a member, director, officer, or agent based on a finding that the assets of the unincorporated association subject to execution are clearly insufficient to satisfy the judgment, that exhaustion of the assets of the unincorporated association is excessively burdensome, or that the grant of permission is an appropriate exercise of the court's equitable powers.

Nothing in Corp. Code § 18270 affects the right of a judgment creditor to levy execution against the assets of a member, director, officer, or agent of an unincorporated association if the claim against the member, director, officer, or agent is not based on a claim against the unincorporated association [Corp. Code § 18270(b)].

§ 61.43 Use of Association's Name or Insignia

[1] General Rights of Association

An association may enjoin the use of its name by another group, even though neither is incorporated nor engaged in business for material profit. The right to an injunction does not depend on either the actual showing of specific injury or the misleading of any particular person. An injunction is proper when there is a natural and probable tendency to mislead and confuse the public to the hurt and injury of the association having the prior right to the distinctive names and emblems [Law v. Crist (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 862, 865-866, 107 P.2d 953 (lodge of theosophists); see also Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 289, 300-313, 92 Cal. Rptr. 228 (use of name similar to American College of Trial Lawyers)].

The use of the name of an association or organization in a commercial venture may be enjoined under specific statutory provisions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 14493; Corp. Code § 21308(2)], as may the wearing or use of the insignia of an association [Corp. Code § 21308(1)].

For a form of complaint seeking an injunction against the unauthorized use of an association's name and insignia, see § 61.120. For related discussion of remedies for infringement of trademarks and tradenames and similar forms of unfair competition, see Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names , and Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[2] Penal Provisions

Any person who willfully wears the badge, lapel button, rosette, or any part of the garb, robe, habit, or any other recognized and established insignia or apparel of any secret society, or fraternal or religious order or organization, or of any sect, church, or religious denomination, or who uses the same to obtain aid or assistance, with intent to deceive, unless entitled to wear and use the same under the constitution, bylaws, or rules and regulations, or other laws or enactments of that society, order, organization, sect, church, or religious denomination is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 538b].

Any person who willfully wears, exhibits, or uses for any purpose a name or insignia registered under Corp. Code §

21300 et seq. (association names and insignia) in the office of the Secretary of State, unless the person is entitled to use, wear, or exhibit the name or insignia under the constitution, bylaws, or rules of the association that registered it, is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed 60 days [Corp. Code § 21307; see also Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 1801, 1820].

B. Property Rights of Associations

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.44

§ 61.44 Dissolution of Association

An unincorporated association may be dissolved by any of the following methods [Corp. Code § 18410]:

- If the association's governing documents provide a method for dissolution, by that method.
- If the association's governing documents do not provide a method for dissolution, by the affirmative vote of a majority of the association's voting power.
- If the association's operations have been discontinued for at least three years, by the board or, if the association has no incumbent board, by the members of its last preceding incumbent board.
- If the association's operations have been discontinued, by court order.

Promptly after commencement of dissolution of an unincorporated association, the board or, if there is no board, the members, must (1) promptly wind up the affairs of the association; (2) pay or provide for its known debts or liabilities; (3) collect any amounts due to it; (4) take any other action as is necessary or appropriate for winding up, settling, and liquidating its affairs; and (5) dispose of its assets as provided in Corp. Code § 18130 [Corp. Code § 18420].

Apparently, dissolution of an unincorporated association may be brought about by the action of the association itself as provided for in its articles of association, charter, or bylaws. The propriety of such a method of disslution stems from the principle that the constitution or bylaws of an unincorporated association has the force and effect of a contract between the association and its members concerning which the members are bound and are charged with full knowledge. When no provision is made in the association's constitution or bylaws concerning the method of dissolution, it may be dissolved by the unanimous consent of its members, by the decision of some superior organization, or by a court decree [Holt v. Santa Clara County Sheriff's Benefits Assn. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 925, 929-930, 59 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

When the dissolution of an unincorporated association is by court decree, a court of equity has jurisdiction to decree dissolution and to distribute the association's funds among the several members or contributors when its operations have been discontinued and its objects have been abandoned by common consent of the members. It will not be involuntarily dissolved or dissolved on complaint of some of the members for slight causes, but only when it has apparently ceased to answer the purpose of its existence and no other relief can be had [Holt v. Santa Clara County Sheriff's Benefits Assn. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 925, 930, 59 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

Because the courts do not favor dissolution, even when the majority of the members desire it, if the government of the association is fairly administered and its purposes can be carried out by a minority consisting of a sufficient number to constitute the association, the association may not accomplish dissolution by an amendment to its constitution or bylaws providing for the dissolution itself and not for the method or manner by which dissolution could be accomplished by future action of the association [Holt v. Santa Clara County Sheriff's Benefits Assn. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 925, 930, 931 n.2, 59 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

Generally, on the dissolution of a voluntary association, its property is distributed pro rata among its members unless otherwise provided by its constitution or bylaws. The constitution or bylaws may provide, for example, that, on dissolution, the distribution of assets is to be limited to those members of the organization who, by virtue of the longevity of their membership, played a substantial part in the acquisition of those assets [Holt v. Santa Clara County Sheriff's Benefits Assn. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 925, 932, 933, 59 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

When an unincorporated association is incorporated, the creation of the corporation ipso facto dissolves the association and transfers its propertyand rights to the corporation [Oliver v. Swiss Club Tell (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 528, 544, 35 Cal. Rptr. 324 ; Security-First Nat. Bk. v. Cooper (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 653, 670, 145 P.2d 722 ; cf. Barber v. Irving (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 560, 566-567, 38 Cal. Rptr. 142 (approving reconveyance of property to unincorporated church association that had been taken by corporation formed by minority faction)]. For discussion pertaining to dissolution of a corporation, see Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up.

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.50

§ 61.50 Standing Issues

[1] Association as Named Party

[a] General Right to Sue and Be Sued

A partnership or other unincorporated association, whether organized for profit or not, may sue and be sued in the name it has assumed or by which it is known [Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(a); see Tenants Assn. of Park Santa Anita v. Southers (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1293, 1299-1305, 272 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

For captions and general allegations of status and capacity for use in actions by and against unincorporated associations, see §§ 61.110 -61.114.

[b] Standing to Sue on Behalf of Members

An association has standing to sue on behalf of its members when (1) its members would otherwise have standing to sue in their own right; (2) the interests it seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the lawsuit [N.Y. State Club Ass'n v. City of New York (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 9, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; United Union of Roofers v. Insurance Corp. of Am. (9th Cir. 1990) 919 F.2d 1398, 1400 ; California Rural Legal Assistance v. Legal Services Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 917 F.2d 1171, 1174] .

An unincorporated association can sue in a representative capacity when it has been injured itself, or it can bring an action for prospective relief, such as an injunction or a declaration of rights [Tenants Assn. of Park Santa Anita v. Southers (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1293, 1299-1305, 272 Cal. Rptr. 361] . Thus, an unincorporated association of residents in a mobilehome park had standing to sue for prospective relief and damages that were generally applicable to the tenants, because there was anascertainable class, there was a community of interest in the questions of law and fact, the members had a common interest, and the members were all alleged victims of the defendants. However, the association did not have standing to bring actions for intangible and inherantly personal injuries, such as the infliction of emotional distress [Tenants Assn. of Park Santa Anita v. Southers (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1293, 1299-1305, 272 Cal.

Rptr. 361 (also holding trial court should grant relief to amend complaint to add individual plaintiffs)].

[c] Effect of Fictitious Business Names

No person transacting business under a fictitious business name contrary to the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900 et seq. (requiring filing of a fictitious business name statement), or his or her assignee, may maintain any action on or on account of any contract made, or transaction had, in the fictitious business name in any court of California until the fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published as required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

In the case of a partnership or other association of persons (other than a limited partnership that has filed a certificate of limited partnership with the Secretary of State under Corp. Code §§ 15621 or 15902.01, a foreign limited partnership that has filed an application for registration with the Secretary of State under Corp. Code §§ 15692 or 15909.02, a registered limited liability partnership that has filed a registration under Corp. Code §§ 16953, or a foreign limited liability partnership that has filed an application for registration under Corp. Code §§ 16959), a fictitious business name means a name that does not include the surname of each general partner or a name that suggests the existence of additional owners [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(b)(2); Corp. Code §§ 15621, 15692 (inoperative and repealed on January 1, 2010, unless later enacted statute, effective on or before January 1, 2010, deletes or extends that date; to be replaced by Corp. Code §§ 15902.01, 15909.02)]. A name that suggests the existence of additional owners is one that includes such words as "Company," "& Company," "& Son," "& Sons," "& Associates," "Brothers," and the like, but not words that merely describe the business being conducted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17900(c)].

For a further discussion of, and forms related to, the fictitious business name statement, see Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties .

[2] Standing of Members

[a] Joinder of Member in Action Against Association

A member of the partnership or other unincorporated association may be joined as a party in an action against the unincorporated association. If service of process is made on the member as an individual, whether or not the member is also served as a person on whom service is made on behalf of the unincorporated association, a judgment against the member based on the member's personal liability is joint,joint and several, or several [Code Civ. Proc. § 369.5(b)].

[b] Derivative Action Against Association's Management

The provisions of Corp. Code § 800, relating to corporate shareholder's derivative actions, are applicable to actions in the right of unincorporated associations [see Corp. Code § 800(a)].

No action may be instituted or maintained in right of any unincorporated association by a member of that association unless the following conditions exist [see Corp. Code § 800(a), (b)]:

- The plaintiff alleges in the complaint that he or she was a member at the time of the transaction or any part thereof of which he or she complains or that his or her membership thereafter devolved on him or her by operation of law from a person who was a member at the time of the transaction or any part thereof complained of.

- The plaintiff alleges in the complaint with particularity his or her efforts to secure from the managing body of the association the action that he or she desires, or the reasons for not making such effort.

- The plaintiff alleges further that he or she has either informed the association or the managing body in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action against each defendant member of the managing body or delivered to the association or the managing body a true copy of the complaint that he or she proposes to file.

Under certain circumstances, the court has discretion to allow a person who was not a member at the time of the transaction complained of to bring a derivative action [see Corp. Code § 800(a), (b)(1)].

For a form of skeletal complaint for use in a derivative action by a member on behalf of an unincorporated association, see § 61.85. For further discussion and forms involving shareholder's derivative actions, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions .

[c] Tort Actions Against Association

Unincorporated associations are entitled to general recognition as separate legal entities. As a consequence, a member of an unincorporated association may maintain a tort action against the association [see White v. Cox (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 824, 828, 95 Cal. Rptr. 259 (negligence action against condominium); see also Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments].

[1] General Rule

Except as otherwise provided by law, an unincorporated association is liable for its act or omission and for the act or omission of its director, officer, agent, or employee, acting within the scope of the office, agency, or employment, to the same extent as if the association were a natural person [Corp. Code § 18250; see also Corp. Code § 18605 et seq. (liability of directors and officers)].

[2] Immunities for Professional Societies

[a] Immunity for Operation of Public Service Referral Program

A professional society or a nonprofit corporation authorized by such a society may operate a public service referral program for referring any member of the public to any professional member of the society or service. Neither the society or corporation nor its agents, employees, or members may be held liable for damages for referring a member of the public to a professional member of the organization, or for acts of negligence or conduct constituting unprofessional conduct committed by the professional member to whom the member of the public was referred, if the following conditions are met [Civ. Code § 43.95(a)]:

- The organization or persons making the referral acted without malice.
- The referral was made at no cost added to the initial referral fee.

The immunity described above does not apply unless, at the time of making the referral, the organization or other person making the referral disclosed the nature of any disciplinary action, of which the organization or person had actual knowledge, taken by a state licensing agency against the professional member in question, except (1) a disciplinary proceeding resulting in no disciplinary action being taken against the professional member, or (2) a disciplinary action concerning which the professional has satisfied all terms, conditions, and sanctions imposed, at least three years prior to the referral [see Civ. Code § 43.95(b)]. However, if the professional is an attorney, there is no time limit on the duty to disclose [see Civ. Code § 43.95(b)(2)].

For purposes of the immunity, "professional society" includes any legal, psychological, architectural, medical, dental, dietetic, accounting, optometric, podiatric, pharmaceutic, chiropractic, veterinary, licensed marriage and family therapy, licensed clinical social work, and engineering organizations having as members at least 25 percent of the eligible persons or licentiates in the geographic area served by the particular society. "Professional society" also includes organizations with nonprofit lawyer-referralservices that have been authorized by the State Bar of California and operated in accordance with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service in California, and organizations that have been established to provide free assistance or representation to needy patients or clients [Civ. Code § 43.95(a)].

Professional societies are also immune from monetary liability for providing a telephone information library available for use by the general public without charge. This immunity extends to nonprofit corporations authorized by a professional society to provide such a library service [Civ. Code § 43.95(a)].

[b] Immunity for Reviewing Professional Standards

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.52

§ 61.52 Liability of Members to Third Parties

A member of a nonprofit association is not liable for a debt, obligation, or liability of the association solely by reason of being a member [Corp. Code § 18605]. Mere membership in an unincorporated association does not make a member liable for unlawful acts of other members without participation, knowledge, or approval. Liability may exist, however, based on a member's personal participation in an unlawful activity or the fact that he or she set the unlawful activity in motion. The liability of members cannot extend beyond the principles of agency on which the liability of each copartner for the acts of his or her fellow partners is grounded [Orser v. George (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 660, 670-671, 60 Cal. Rptr. 708 (wrongfuldeath action against members of duck club; defendants were not acting within scope of their activities as members)].

A member of a nonprofit association is not liable for a contractual obligation of the association unless one of the following conditions is satisfied [Corp. Code § 18610]:

- The member expressly assumes personal responsibility for the obligation in a signed writing that specifically identifies the obligation assumed.

- The member expressly authorizes or ratifies the specific contract, as evidenced by a writing. This does not apply if the member authorizes or ratifies a contract solely in the member' s capacity as a director, officer, or agent of the association.

- With notice of the contract, the member receives a benefit under the contract, in which case liability is limited to the value of the benefit received.

- The member executes the contract without disclosing that the member is acting on the association's behalf.

- The member executes the contract without authority to execute.

Notwithstanding any other provision governing unincorporated associations in the Corporations Code, a member or person in control of a nonprofit association may be subject to liability for a debt, obligation, or liability of the association under common law principles governing alter ego liability of shareholders of a corporation, taking into account the differences between a nonprofit association and a corporation [Corp. Code § 18630]. Further, nothing in those provisions limits application of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act [Corp. Code § 18640; see Civ. Code § 3439 et seq. (Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act); see also Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances].

For discussion of the liability of individual partners for the obligations of a partnership, see Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties , and Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties. For discussion of liability under agency principles, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

C. Litigation Between Associations and Third Parties

6-61 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 61.53

§ 61.53 Venue in Action Against Association

An association may be sued in one of the following counties [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]:

- The county where the contract is made or is to be performed.
- The county where the obligation or liability arises, or the breach occurs.
- The county where the principal place of business of the association is situated.

If an unincorporated association has filed a statement with the Secretary of State pursuant to statute [see Corp. Code § 18200 et seq.], designating its principal office in California, the proper county for the trial of an action against the unincorporated association is the same as it would be if the unincorporated association were a corporation. For the purpose of determining the proper county, the principal place of business of the unincorporated association is deemed to be the principal office in California listed in the statement [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2].

Venue in an action against an association is subject to the court's power to transfer the action, as in other cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. For general discussion of venue rules and of motions to transfer proceedings to another county, see Ch. 571, Venue .

§ 61.66 Decisions

[1] Definitions

Usual meaning of term "association" is unincorporated organization composed of body of persons partaking in general form and mode of procedure or characteristics of corporation. Estate of Irwin (1925) 196 Cal. 366, 372, 237 P. 1074

Definition of "fraternity." City of Long Beach v. California Lambda etc. Fraternity (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 789, 794, 63 Cal. Rptr. 419

Term "association" is often used as synonymous with "company" or "society." Law v. Crist (1940) 41 Cal. App. 2d 862, 865, 107 P.2d 953

[2] Constitutional Freedom of Association

Application of New Jersey's public accommodations law barring discrimination on the basis of, inter alia, sexual orientation to Boy Scouts to force Boy Scouts to include a gay man as assistant scoutmaster violates Boy Scouts' First Amendment expressive associational right, where Boy Scouts seek to transmit system of values so that it engages in expressive activity, and where forced inclusion of gay man would significantly affect Boy Scouts' ability to advocate its viewpoints on homosexuality. BSA v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554

City ordinance restricting admission to certain dance halls to persons between 14 and 18 years of age is not violative of patrons' associational rights; activity of dance hall patrons--coming together to engage in recreational dancing--not protected by U.S. Const., amend I, because that activity qualifies neither as form of intimate association nor expressive association. Dallas v. Stanglin (1989) 490 U.S. 19, 23-28, 109 S. Ct. 1591, 104 L. Ed. 2d 18

Freedom of association encompasses political party's decisions about identity of, and process of electing, its leaders. Eu v. San Francisco Democratic Com. (1989) 489 U.S. 214, 229, 109 S. Ct. 1013, 103 L. Ed. 2d 271

Application of Civ. Code § 51 (Unruh Act) to associations is not violative of First Amendment rights of members when it does not interfere unduly with members' freedom of private association and does not violate right of expressive association. Board of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 547, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474

Constitutional protection of freedom of association protects intimate and expressive associations; intimate associational interest is fundamental element of personal liberty; expressive associational interest protects right to associate for purpose of engaging in activities relating to speech, assembly, petition for redress of grievances, and exercise of religion. Board of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 544-545, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 ; Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 617-618, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 ; Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 624-626, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ; Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987)

Right to associate for expressive purposes allows individuals to associate with others in pursuit of wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends, but does not extend to association unrelated to those goals, such as sexual conduct constituting statutory rape. Fleisher v. City of Signal Hill (9th Cir. 1987) 829 F.2d 1491, 1500 , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 961 (1988)

Preliminary injunction enjoining gang members from "[s]tanding, sitting, walking, driving, gathering or appearing anywhere in public view" with another gang member within a specified four-block residential area did not violate First Amendment right of association, because gang affiliation does not fall within either of two kinds of associations entitled to First Amendment protection, i.e., "intimate" or "intrinsic" associations, such as familial associations, or joining together for political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends. People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1090, 1110-1112, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277, 929 P.2d 596

Constitutional freedom of association does not protect groups of strangers who are not members of any organized association and who are patrons of business establishment; therefore, ordinance that prevented persons between 18 and 20 years from remaining on premises of cabaret between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. did not infringe on associational rights of patrons. Burnett v. San Francisco Police Department (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1189, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879

Constitutional protection includes members and their right to associate, but does not extend to employment policies of association. Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 13-14, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , appeal dismissed, 484 U.S. 805 (1987)

[5] Exclusion From Membership

Private club that regularly transacts business on its premises with nonmembers is "business establishment" governed by Unruh Act. Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 (involving country club)

In action for exclusion from membership, question of whether Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons was Pinsker-type organization, affecting significant economic and professional concerns so as to clothe it with public interest and wielding monopoly power, is question for trier of fact. Bunzel v. American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 165, 169-170, 165 Cal. Rptr. 433

[6] Expulsion From Membership

[a] Fair Procedure

In action by physician alleging that insurer removed physician from its preferred provider lists in violation of common law right of fair procedure, trial court erroneously granted summary judgment for insurer, where relationship between insurers and their preferred provider physicians significantly affects public interest, and where insurer has obligation to comply with common law right to fair procedure because it possess power so substantial that removal significantly impairs ability of ordinary, competent physician to practice medicine or medical specialty in particular geographic area, thereby affecting important, substantial economic interest. Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1060, 1071-1078, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496, 997 P.2d 1153

Courts may interfere with decision of association expelling member if association's rules governing expulsion have not been observed or if member has not been afforded certain rudimentary procedural rights. Cason v. Glass Bottle

Adequate notice of charges and reasonable opportunity to respond are basic to both due process and fair procedure; member has right to tribunal that meets prevailing standards of impartiality, as well as opportunity to confront and cross examine accusers, examine and refute evidence, and present defense. Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1444-1446, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Hackethal v. California Medical Assn. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 442, 187 Cal. Rptr. 811

Substantial evidence test of Code Civ. Proc § 1094.5(d) utilized in reviewing private hospital board's decision suspending physician from medical staff does not violate due process and equal protection. Anton v. San Antonio Community Hospital (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 638, 650-656, 183 Cal. Rptr. 423
