Neither the Supreme Court nor the State Bar Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has addressed the issue of whether or how an attorney can ethically commence foreclosure proceedings or exercise the power of sale under the deed of trust [see Hawk v. State Bar (1988) 45 Cal. 3d 589, 598-601, 247 Cal. Rptr. 599, 754 P.2d 1096 ; State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1981-62].

For additional, detailed discussion of these requirements, see § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.170 et seq.

[c] Pledge Agreement in Client's Assets

The Committee on Legal Ethics of the Los Angles County Bar Association has stated that it is ethically permissible for a law firm to take a security interest by means of pledge agreements in a client's assets in order to secure payment of fees [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 398 (1982)]. The Committee stated that the attorneys must comply with the California Rules of Professional Conduct, former Rule 5-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300) requirements of a fair and reasonable transaction, written disclosure, opportunity for the client to consult independent counsel, and written consent. For further discussion of these requirements, see discussion under § 72.198[2][b], and § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.180 et seq. The Committee did not decide the question of the attorney's proceeding to foreclose on the security [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 398 (1982)].

A third party, such as a client's friend or relative, may pledge his or her own funds or other property as security for the client's attorney's fees [see, e.g., Hartford v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1139, 1147, 270 Cal. Rptr. 12, 791 P.2d 598] . If the attorney has full knowledge of the terms of the pledge agreement between the third party and the client, the attorney will owe a duty of care concerning the funds or property not only to the client but also to the third party [Hartford v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1139, 1153, 270 Cal. Rptr. 12, 791 P.2d 598] .

[d] Family Law Attorney's Real Property Lien

In a family law case, either party may encumber his or her interest in community real property to pay reasonable attorney's fees in order to retain or maintain legal counsel. Such a lien, known as a "family law attorney's real property lien," attaches only to the encumbering party's interest in the community real property [Fam. Code § 2033(a)]. An attorney for whom a family law attorney's real property lien is obtained must comply with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300 [Fam. Code § 2033(e); see also § 72.198[2][d]].

[3] Impermissible to Take Possessory Lien on Client's Files or Personal Property

Neither a contractual nor a common law attorneys' retaining or possessory lien, which attaches to the client's personal property and papers in the attorney's possession, has been recognized in California to secure an attorney's fee [see Hulland v. State Bar (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 440, 447, 105 Cal. Rptr. 152, 503 P.2d 608] . Courts have held that an attorney who has been discharged by his or her client may not rely on a contractual or common law retaining lien on the client's files, papers, documents, or other property in the attorney's possession as a basis for refusing to give the client's subsequent attorney the client's papers or to substitute out of the case until the first attorney receives payment for his or her work on the case [see Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 949-951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999, 1006, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668] . Such conduct by an attorney violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1), which requires that the attorney return the client's papers and property at the client's request on termination of the attorney-client relationship [see Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950-951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-111(A)(2)); Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999, 1005, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-111(A)(2))]. For additional discussion of an attorney's duties with regard to his or her client's files and property, see § 72.371[2][a].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Creation And Scope Of Attorney-Client Relationship
1. Drafting The Representation Agreement And Fee Arrangements

§ 72.199 Fee-Splitting Arrangements

[1] Between Attorney and Outside Associated Counsel

If the attorney and client contemplate that outside counsel will be associated to accomplish the client's objective, the attorney's fee agreement should include authorization and reimbursement provisions. An attorney has no implied authority to hire outside associates, assistants, or investigators on behalf of the client. If an attorney hires an outside associate without the client's express authorization, the attorney cannot obtain reimbursement [see Johnson v. California I.M.T. Asso. (1938) 24 Cal. App. 2d 322, 335, 74 P.2d 1073] .

When the attorney and client recognize that the assistance of a specialist is necessary, the contract can provide that the specialist will be associated at a specified fee, or the client can contract directly with the specialist. In some circumstances, an attorney's ethical duty of competence will require that he or she not accept employment or continue in the representation of the client unless another attorney who is competent in the subject matter is associated [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110; see §§ 72.221, 72.270].

Cal. Rule of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A) permits a division of fees between attorneys provided that [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, rule 2-200(A); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, rule 4-200 (discussed in § 72.193)]:

- A full written disclosure pertaining to the proposed division of fees is made to the client.
- The client consents in writing to the appointment of the other attorney.
- The total fee charged by the attorneys is not increased solely because of the fee-splitting arrangement and is not unconscionable as that term is defined in Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200.

Rule 2-200 does not require that the attorneys' fee-splitting arrangement be in writing [Mink v. Maccabee (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 835, 838, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 486] . The Rule also requires that the client's consent to a division of fees be given prior to the actual division of the fees; it does not require client consent prior to the commencement of work by the associated in attorney [Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302, 320 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24].

Rule 2-200 is not limited in its application to "pure referral fees" nor does it purport to exempt fee division categorically among attorneys who work jointly on behalf of a client. The rule encompasses any division of fees where the attorneys working for the client are not partners or associates of each other, or are not shareholders in the same law firm [Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 148, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536] .

While Rule 2-200 expressly exempts from the written disclosure and consent requirements fee divisions between attorneys who are partners, it does not exempt fee divisions between attorneys who are joint venturers [Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 151, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536] . Nor should Rule 2-200 be read to exempt outside counsel who is retained and functions on a particular client matter essentially on the same basis as an "associate" of the law firm [Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 154, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 , citing with disfavor Sims v. Charness (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 884, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619 ; see also LACBA Formal Opinion No. 511 (2003) (attorney may not concurrently serve as partner or associate in two law firms and share in fees generated by each firm unless attorney complies with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200)].

If the requirements of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 for fee-splitting between attorneys are not followed, any agreement between attorneys for a division of fees is not enforceable [Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 162, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 ; Mark v. Spencer (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 219, 225-227, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569 (attorneys' failure to fully disclose fee-splitting agreement to court when they petitioned for approval of class action settlement bars enforcement of agreement); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1994-138 (certain situations in which Rule 2-200 is not applicable)].

Even if an agreement for the division of fees is found unenforceable because of a failure to comply with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Conduct, Rule 2-200, an attorney can recover fees in quantum meruit [Huskinson & Brown v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 461, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379 ; Mink v. Maccabee (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 835, 838-839, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 486] . Allowing recovery in quantum meruit does not discourage compliance with Cal. Rules of Conduct, Rule 2-200 because attorneys "prefer to receive their negotiated fees rather than the typically lesser amounts representing the reasonable value of the work performed" [Huskinson & Brown v. Wolf (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 453, 460, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 693, 84 P.3d 379] . Allowing an attorney to recover the reasonable value of his or her services from a client is premised on the services being requested by the client. Thus, when an attorney performs services under a fee-sharing agreement between the attorney and another attorney that violates Cal. Rules of Conduct, Rule 2-200, and the client neither requested the services from the attorney seeking recovery nor offered to pay that attorney, the attorney who performed the services may recover in quantum meruit only from the attorney who was the other party to the agreement, not from the client for whom the services were performed [Strong v. Beydoun (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1404, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632].

[2] Between Referring Attorney and Referred Attorney

Fee-splitting arrangements, involving bare referrals from one attorney to another attorney, were held to be unearned forwarding fee arrangements and unenforceable as contrary to public policy under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 22, which was enacted in 1972, and under its successor, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-108, until its amendment in 1979 [see Altschul v. Sayble (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 153, 159-164, 147 Cal. Rptr. 716] . These two rules allowed enforcement of fee-splitting agreements so long as there was a true division of services performed and responsibility assumed by the attorneys [see Breckler v. Thaler (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 189, 194-196, 151 Cal. Rptr. 50] . The 1979 amendment of former Rule 2-108 deleted from the rule the requirement that the division of fees must have been made in proportion to the services performed or responsibility assumed by each attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-108(A) (superseded by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 on May 27, 1989)].

Thus, fee-splitting arrangements that comply with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A) (discussed in § 72.199[1]) are not contrary to public policy and are enforceable even if they involve a bare referral [see Mink v. Maccabee (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 835, 838, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 486 (client's written consent must be obtained prior to division of fees, not prior to lawyers' entering into fee-splitting arrangement); Moran v. Harris (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 913, 916, 920-922, 182 Cal. Rptr. 519 (decided under former Rule 2-108(A), as amended in 1979)]. The justification for referral fees is that this device serves the best interests of many clients. If an inexperienced attorney is retained by a client to handle a complex case, and referral fees are not allowed, the attorney may attempt to handle the case because he or she needs the fee. If the attorney does not perform competently, the client suffers. However, if the inexperienced attorney can refer the case to a specialist and receive a referring fee, the attorney will be more likely to assist the client in finding competent counsel. The result is that the client receives better representation and the referring attorney is subsidized while handling cases within his or her competence. The long range effect is that the inexperienced attorney will look for referral cases, and the specialist will have a continuing flow of clients [Moran v. Harris (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 913, 921-922, 182 Cal. Rptr. 519] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Timing of Written Consent. Despite the holding in Mink v. Maccabee (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 835, 838, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 486 , that a client's written consent must be obtained prior to the actual division of fees, not prior to the lawyers' entering into fee-splitting arrangement, it is preferable that the written consent be given prior to entering into the fee-splitting arrangement. Failure to do so is fraught with peril. It may be construed as a breach of the fiduciary duties to the client as well as of the lawyer's duty to keep the client reasonably appraised of developments relating to the engagement [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500]. Certain factors that may be of concern to the client cannot be addressed at the conclusion of the engagement. These concerns may include:

- Whether the client is actually retaining the best attorney for the work or whether the referred attorney was recommended simply because of his or her agreement to pay a referral fee.

- Whether the referred attorney will devote sufficient time to the matter in light of the fact that he or she will be receiving a reduced fee.

- Whether the client may prefer to negotiate a more favorable arrangement directly with the referring and referred attorney.

Each of these factors militates in favor of disclosure at the time of the referral or at a time reasonably close to the fee arrangement [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 467 (1993)].

If the requirements of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 (former Rule 2-108) for fee-splitting between attorneys are not followed, any agreement between the attorneys for a referral fee is not enforceable [Margolin v. Shemaria (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899-903, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 502 ; Scolinos v. Kolts (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 635, 639-640, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 31 ; see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1994-138 (certain situations in which Rule 2-200 is not applicable)].

A bonus paid to outside counsel based on fees received in a particular matter or matters is a division of fees under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, and is subject to the requirements of the rule. For example, the payment of a year-end bonus to an "of counsel" attorney who is not a partner, associate, or shareholder of the law firm and whose relationship to the law firm consists primarily of the reciprocal referral of business, is prohibited without client consent under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 470 (1993); see also § 72.199[3][a] (when bonus to layperson employee permitted)].

For discussion of gifts or gratuities to referring attorneys, see § 72.249[2].

[3] Between Attorney and Non-Attorney

[a] Ethical Prohibition

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A) prohibits an attorney from directly or indirectly sharing fees with non-attorneys except with the following:

- A deceased attorney's estate [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A)(1), (2)].
- Employees through a profit sharing plan [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A)(3)].
- A lawyer referral service [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A)(4)].

The perceived dangers from lawyers sharing legal fees with laypersons include [Emmons, Williams, Mires & Leech v. State Bar (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573-574, 86 Cal. Rptr. 367] :

- Encouragement of competitive solicitation for attorneys by laypersons.
- Potential interference or control by laypersons over the attorney's duty to exercise independent professional judgment on behalf of the client.
- Selection by laypersons receiving fee splits of the most generous, rather than the most competent, attorneys.

Thus, for example, an agreement between an attorney and a private investigator under which the investigator was to be compensated by a designated percentage of net fees received by the attorney was held to be improper [Cain v. Burns (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 439, 441-442, 280 P.2d 888] . Although the investigator was paid from the attorney's general funds, rather than from the individual client's recovery, the device was regarded as a subterfuge to avoid the proscription against sharing of fees with laypersons [Cain v. Burns (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 439, 442, 280 P.2d 888 ; see also McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 349-350, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 (contract between lawyer and nonlawyer for fee-splitting void and unenforceable when both were aware of contract's illegality)].

A lawyer who prepares living trusts at the direction of a nonlawyer who markets living trust packages to the public, who pay either the lawyer or the marketer for the trust, violates the prohibition of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320 against sharing legal fees with a nonlawyer, specifically the giving of value in exchange for recommending or securing employment for the lawyer. The lawyer may not receive payment from the public for the trusts and then pay the marketer a share for finding the clients and referring them to the lawyer. They lawyer also may not have the marketer receive the funds and divide them with the lawyer. In either case, the risk posed is the possibility of control of legal matters by a nonlawyer interested more in personal profit than the client's welfare to the extent of controlling the lawyer's exercise of independent judgment on behalf of the client in being able to advise the client that a living trust might not be a useful part of the client's estate plan [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-148].

In the opinion of one local bar association, a financing program by which a lender loans money to pay the cost of prosecuting a case that an attorney has accepted on a contingency fee basis and by which the lender is to be reimbursed an agreed percentage from the attorney's fee recovery is impermissible fee-splitting with a layperson [Bar Ass'n of San Francisco Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1981-1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoid Compensation Tied to Fees Collected. To avoid violating the prohibition against sharing fees with laypersons, the attorney should be careful about any type of arrangement by which a layperson's compensation for services is in some way tied to the amount of fees collected by the attorney.

[b] Bonuses to Laypersons Permitted

The Los Angeles County Bar Association has opined that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320 does not bar an attorney from paying bonuses to laypersons (e.g., paralegals) to reward excellent performance. Compensation is ethically proper provided that [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 457 (1990)]:

- The bonus is not paid as a percentage of the lawyer's fees.
- The bonus is not bargained for based on the fee the lawyer is to receive in a particular case.
- The layperson has no expectation of receiving the bonus.
- The bonus is paid as compensation for the laypersons' productivty and performance based on the lawyer's subjective assessment.

The prohibition against sharing fees with laypersons must be distinguished from paying fees to third parties from the client's funds. An attorney, with the client's consent, may pay third parties from funds collected for the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-210(A)(1)].

[c] Contingent Fee Contracts With Non-Lawyer Consultants

Contingent fee consulting contracts are not per se invalid as violating Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320. They are ethically permissible provided that they are consistent with the purposes of Rule 1-320 [see Ojeda v. Sharp Cabrillo Hospital (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15-17, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 230] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Medical Malpractice Consulting Contract. After retaining an attorney, a plaintiff in a medical malpractice case contracts with a medical-legal consulting service to assist the attorney. The consideration for the services is a percentage of the plaintiff's gross recovery in the action. Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 requires the attorney's maximum compensation to be calculated based on a percentage of the client's net recovery (that is, gross recovery minus costs of prosecution). Is the contract with the consulting service ethically prohibited under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320? No. The rationale underlying the fee-splitting doctrine would not justify its application to invalidate an otherwise proper contract. The purpose of Rule 1-320 is to discourage solicitation by lay intermediaries, assure control of the litigation by the lawyer, and to protect clients from unreasonably high fees. Concerns about solicitation are irrelevant when the lay organization receiving a fee becomes involved in the case only after the lawyer is retained by the client. Concerns about control may be relevant, but they exist any time an entity other than the lawyer is paid on a contingent basis. Finally, the interest in protecting clients from unreasonably high fees would not be served by prohibiting the contract [see Ojeda v. Sharp Cabrillo Hospital (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1, 16-17, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 230 ; see also § 72.196[7][b][iii]].

[d] Remitting Part of Fee Back to Client

The Los Angeles County Bar Association Committee on Legal Ethics opined that when a private individual client employed an attorney under a prior specified contingency fee agreement, and the court awards the attorney and client attorney's fees that exceed what the attorney would have received under the fee agreement, the attorney may remit the difference to the client. Remission of fees is ethically permissible provided that both of the following requirements are met [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 447 (1988) (interpreting Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 3-102(A); now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320)]:

- The lawsuit was brought in good faith and not for the purpose of generating attorney's fees.

- The proposed new fee was not contemplated until after the court has awarded attorney's fees. (If prior to the award of fees, attorney and client agreed that court-awarded attorney fees will be remitted in part to the client, then the attorney should inform the court of that fact prior to its award of any attorney's fees). This type of arrangement does not implicate the concerns typically associated with fee-splitting: the client is not encouraged to practice law, the attorney's professional independence is not compromised, and there is no issue of solicitation of attorney services [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 447 (1988)].

[4] Between Lawyer Referral Services and Panel Attorneys

Fee splitting between lawyer referral services and their panel attorneys is authorized by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A)(4), which states that a State Bar member may pay a prescribed registration, referral, or participation fee to a lawyer referral service meeting State Bar standards [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A)(4); see also Emmons, Williams, Mires & Leech v. State Bar (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573-574, 86 Cal. Rptr. 367 (judicial approval of fee splitting between lawyer referral services and their panel attorneys)].

This type of fee splitting furthers a public purpose and does not involve the dangers perceived in fee splitting with or receipt of referral fees from laypeople [see § 72.199[3]], which are prohibited by the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320]. Bar association lawyer referral services fulfill public and professional objectives by making legal services more readily available to the general public. The bar association lawyer referral services do not seek a profit. The fees charged to panel members are necessary to finance the service. Unlike fee arrangements in which attorneys split fees with laypeople, fee arrangements between lawyer referral services and panel attorneys do not result in neither solicitation by nonattorneys, nor selection of the most generous rather than the most competent referral attorney, or exercise of control by a third party over the referral attorney [see Emmons, Williams, Mires & Leech v. State Bar (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573-574, 86 Cal. Rptr. 367] .

The Rules of Professional Conduct provide that an attorney can accept payment from a third person for representing a client if the payment does not interfere with the attorney's independence of professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship, and if the client's confidences and secrets are protected as required under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(F)(1), (2); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) (attorney's duty to maintain client confidences and secrets inviolate); LACBA Formal Opinion No. 500 (1999) (*Cal. The client must be informed of the payment and give written consent, unless nondisclosure is authorized by law, or the attorney is rendering legal services on behalf of a public agency that provides legal services to other public agencies or members of the public [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(F)(3)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Creation And Scope Of Attorney-Client Relationship
1. Drafting The Representation Agreement And Fee Arrangements

§ 72.201 Publication Rights as Fee in Criminal Case

An agreement by which an attorney, usually representing a notorious criminal defendant, receives the literary and film rights to the client's life story for all or part of the fee may lead to a conflict of interest between the attorney and client. Some courts have held that a conflict of interest caused by the existence of an agreement constitutes a violation of the defendant's constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel if the client's defense is prejudiced by it [see, e.g., People v. Corona (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 684, 702-705, 719-727, 145 Cal. Rptr. 894 ; Ray v. Rose (6th Cir. 1974) 491 F.2d 285, 289-290] . The attorney may want to handle the case in a way that will make the book or film right more salable, rather than in a way that best protects the client's interests. Nevertheless, these agreements are permissible in California if the client adequately consents to any conflict of interest. For a publication rights fee agreement to be upheld, the attorney must make an adequate disclosure to the client of the conflict of interest, and the client in an informed manner must knowingly and intelligently consent to it [Maxwell v. Superior Court (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 606, 619, 180 Cal. Rptr. 177, 639 P.2d 248 , overruled in part, 45 Cal. 4th 390 (2009) ; see also People v. Bonin (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 808, 843, 254 Cal. Rptr. 298, 765 P.2d 460 (court's failure to inquire into potential conflict concerning literary-rights fee arrangement is not constituting reversible error absent showing that conflict adversely affected counsel's performance)].

In Maxwell v. Superior Court, the defendant was charged with robbery and ten counts of murder. He entered into a "life story" fee agreement with his counsel. The trial court held a hearing on the issue of the defendant's competence and his knowing and intelligent consent to the agreement. Although the defendant insisted he wanted his attorney to continue to represent him, the trial court ordered his counsel removed because of a conflict of interest. The California Supreme Court granted the defendant's petition for writ of mandate and directed the trial court to reinstate the defendant's original counsel. The Court pointed out that the defendant's right to choose his own counsel prevails unless significant prejudice or disruption will be caused to the judicial process. The Court held that the mere possibility of a conflict of interest did not justify removal of counsel prior to trial over the defendant's informed objections [Maxwell v. Superior Court (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 606, 619, 180 Cal. Rptr. 177, 639 P.2d 248] , overruled in part, 45 Cal. 4th. 390 (2009) . However, the Court criticized the "life story" fee arrangement, stating that such contracts tempt attorneys to tilt the defense for commercial reasons, presenting a threat of adverse or deficient representation, and raise ethical questions under the Rules of Professional Conduct [Maxwell v. Superior Court (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 606, 616-617, 180 Cal. Rptr. 177, 639 P.2d 248] .

Under Civ. Code § 2225, all proceeds from the preparation for sale, the sale of rights to, or the sale of materials that include or are based on the story of a felony for which a felon was convicted are subject to an involuntary trust for the benefit of the victim of the felony or his or her heirs or beneficiaries [Civ. Code § 2225(a), (b)]. An action to enforce the trust may be brought by the victim or the beneficiaries or by the Attorney General [see Civ. Code § 2225(c), (e)]. "Proceeds" under Section 2225 are defined as fees, royalties, real property, or other consideration "received by or owing to a felon or his or her representatives" [Civ. Code § 2225(a)(9)]. The existence of this legislation would seem to greatly diminish the desirability, from the attorney's standpoint, of a fee arrangement involving the transfer of publication rights.

§ 72.202 Arbitration and Mediation Provisions in Fee Agreements

A contract provision requiring the arbitration of a future dispute is generally valid and legally enforceable, [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281]. There are, however, both statutory and ethical requirements affecting the inclusion of an arbitration provision in an agreement between an attorney and his or her client.

With respect to the arbitration of future disputes over fees, a statutory scheme exists under which the disputes are arbitrated by the State or local bar associations [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq.]. Under this scheme, unless the client has agreed in writing to arbitration of all disputes concerning fees, costs, or both, arbitration is voluntary for the client, but mandatory for the attorney if requested by the client [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c)]. This statutory scheme cannot be contravened by private agreement between the attorney and client to conduct their fee arbitration in an outside forum, such as the American Arbitration Association [Alternative Systems, Inc. v. Carey (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1034, 1041-1042, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567] . For discussion of the statutory scheme for arbitrating fee disputes, see § 72.470 et seq.

No similar scheme or statutory prohibition exists to preclude an initial employment agreement between an attorney and client from including a provision requiring the arbitration of potential malpractice claims. When there is no pre-existing attorney-client relationship, the client's knowledge and consent to such a provision affects its legal enforceability rather than its ethical propriety [see, e.g., Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1504-1508, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6 (affirming denial of attorney's petition to compel arbitration; arbitration provision was not enforceable based on finding that client did not knowingly consent to it)]. This is due in part to the public policy encouraging the arbitration of claims. Moreoever, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-400(A), which forbids an attorney from prospectively limiting malpractice liability, does not apply in this situation because it is essentially the forum, not the liability, that is being limited by an arbitration provision [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1989-116].

PRACTICE TIP:

Provision Must Be Conspicuous and Clear. To ensure the enforceability of an arbitration provision, counsel should make it conspicuous and clear. The State Bar has suggested that these provisions be drafted like those in medical service contracts as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1295 [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1989-116].

When, however, there is a pre-existing attorney-client relationship, the attorney has an ethical duty to ensure that the client is fully aware of and knowingly consents to the terms and consequences of any arbitration provision the attorney seeks to negotiate with the client [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1989-116]. For detailed discussion of the applicable ethical duties, see § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.170 et seq.

Disputes over fees may also be subject to voluntary mediation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(a), (c), (d), (f)]. Participation in mediation is a voluntary, consensual process, based on direct negotiations between the attorney and the client, and is an extension of the negotiated settlement process. All discussions and offers of settlement are confidential, and may not be disclosed in any subsequent arbitration or other proceedings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(h)].

2. Attorney's Authority

§ 72.220 General Authority of Attorney

[1] Agency Principles

As a general proposition, the attorney-client relationship, insofar as it concerns the authority of the attorney to bind his or her client by agreement or stipulation, is governed by principles of agency [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 403, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565, 1581, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901 (matters concerning attorney's authority to bind client through stipulation or agreement governed by agency principles); American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 590-591, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561 ; Yanchor v. Kagan (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 544, 549, 99 Cal. Rptr. 367 ; see Civ. Code § 2295 et seq. (agency)].

The client, as principal, is bound by the attorney-agent's acts within the scope of his or her actual authority, express or implied, or by his or her apparent or ostensible authority, or by unauthorized acts that are ratified by the client [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 403, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; see also Sauer v. Superior Court (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 213, 231, 240 Cal. Rptr. 489 (attorney's negligence imputed to client)]. This is especially so if third parties have changed their positions in justifiable reliance on the attorney's ostensible authority [Phelps v. Kozakar (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 1078, 1082, 194 Cal. Rptr. 872] .

Any knowledge obtained by the lawyer in the course of the particular transaction in which he or she has been employed by the client is generally imputed to the client, under principles of agency [Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1413, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653] . However, knowledge gained by the attorney outside of the particular transaction is ordinarily not imputed to the client [Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1413, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653] .

Although an attorney is treated as the agent of his or her client in transactions undertaken on the client's behalf, the client is not the agent of the attorney, and the client's misconduct cannot be imputed to counsel [Tool Research & Engineering Corp. v. Henigson (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 675, 682, 120 Cal. Rptr. 291 (rejecting argument that in malicious prosecution action brought against attorney and his former client, client's alleged malfeasance was imputable to counsel), disapproved on other grounds in Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 883 n.9, 254 Cal. Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] .

For discussion of agency in general, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[2] Attorney's Presumed Authority in Relation to Third Parties

There is a strong presumption that the attorney who appears on behalf of a person is authorized to represent that person, and that the attorney's actions are within the scope of his or her employment [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 460-461, 289 P.2d 466 ; Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343 ; see Sarracino v. Superior Court (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 1, 13, 118 Cal. Rptr. 21, 529 P.2d 53 (authority of guardian ad litem similar to that of attorney)]. The presumption is rebuttable [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343] , and the court may require the attorney to provide evidence of his or her authority on a motion; however, the burden of proof rests on the person attacking the attorney's authority to act [Kallman v. Henderson (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 91, 98, 44 Cal. Rptr. 108] .

For further discussion regarding an opposing party's challenge to an attorney acting without actual authority, see discussion under § 72.220[6].

[3] Scope of Attorney's Authority in Relation to Client

[a] Broad Authority to Bind Client

An attorney's authority to bind his or her client extends to all acts, in or out of court, that are necessary or incidental to the transaction in question or the management of a lawsuit or the accomplishment of some other purpose for which the attorney is retained [Zurich G. A. & L. Ins.Co., Ltd., v. Kinsler (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 98, 106, 81 P.2d 913 , disapproved on other grounds in Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . Matters that are within the attorney's general authority include:

- The choice of proceedings.
- The forum.
- The manner of trial.
- All matters of procedure.

In these matters, the attorney has authority to bind the client without consulting him or her, even against the client's wishes [Zurich G. A. & L. Ins. Co., Ltd., v. Kinsler (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 98, 106, 81 P.2d 913 , disapproved on other grounds in Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] .

Matters that are, by contrast, within the exclusive control of the client include the following:

- The cause of action.
- The claim or demands sued upon.
- The subject matter of the litigation.

An attorney may not impair compromise, settle, surrender, or destroy these without the client's consent [Zurich G. A.

& L. Ins. Co., Ltd., v. Kinsler (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 98, 106, 81 P.2d 913 , disapproved on other grounds in Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . An attorney ordinarily does not have implied authority to do an act without the client's consent that will effect the surrender or loss of a client's substantial rights [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 460, 289 P.2d 466 ; Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565, 1580-1584, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901 (stipulation waiving mediation confidentiality does not impact client's substantial rights and therefore client bound by attorney's agreement)]. A client may have a legal claim against the attorney for exceeding his or her authority in compromising the client's substantive rights in litigation [see Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 406, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

Code Civ. Proc. § 283 provides that an attorney has authority to do the following:

- Bind the client in any of the steps of an action or proceeding by his or her agreement filed with the clerk, or entered on the minutes of the court, and not otherwise.

- Receive money claimed by the client in an action or proceeding during the pendency thereof, or after judgment, unless a revocation of the attorney's authority is filed, and on payment, and not otherwise, to discharge the claim or acknowledge satisfaction of the judgment.

Section 283 does not enlarge or abridge an attorney's authority, but only prescribes the manner of its exercise by requiring the filing of the attorney's agreement with the clerk or its entry on the minutes [Preston v Hill (1875) 50 Cal. 43, 53 ; City of Fresno v. Baboian (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 753, 757, 125 Cal. Rptr. 332] .

[b] Binding Client in Regular Conduct of Litigation

In civil litigation, the attorney, as the client's agent and in the absence of fraud, has authority to bind his or her client in all matters pertaining to the regular conduct of a case. Absent special instructions from the client, the conduct and management of the action is entrusted to the attorney's judgment; the attorney decides what should be contested, what points should be taken, and what should be abandoned [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 460, 289 P.2d 466 ; see Gdowski v. Gdowski (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 128, 138, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 799 (client had no power to control attorney's cross-examination)].

When counsel is retained to represent a client in a lawsuit, his or her general authority includes the right to do many actions incidental to the prosecution or defense of that action. For example, the attorney has the authority to enter into stipulations and agreements in all matters of procedure during the course of the trial. These actions are binding on the client to the extent that they are necessary or incidental to the management of the suit and affect only the procedure or remedy, as distinguished from the cause of action itself and the client's essential rights [Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 277, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 ; see In re Marriage of Helsel (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 332, 337, 243 Cal. Rptr. 657] .

For example, an attorney may:

- Refuse to call a witness even though the client desires that the witness testify [Nahhas v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 145, 146, 13 Cal. Rptr. 299] .

- Abandon a defense the attorney deems unmeritorious [see Duffy v. Griffith Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 780, 790-791, 24 Cal. Rptr. 161] .

- Stipulate that the trial judge could view premises at issue in litigation [Lachman Bros. v. Muenzer (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 520, 525, 300 P.2d 295] .

- Stipulate to waive the confidentiality of communications during mediation [Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565, 1580-1584, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901] .

In these tactical matters, the attorney's authority is implied in law, as a necessary incident to the function he or she is engaged to perform [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 404, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

[c] Limitation on Binding Client Regarding Substantive Rights

The courts draw a distinction between actions that bind the client in procedural matters arising during the course of the action, and those that impair the client's substantive rights or the cause of action itself [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 277, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 ; Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565, 1580-1584, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901 ; City of Fresno v. Baboian (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 753, 757-758, 125 Cal. Rptr. 332] . In the latter case, the attorney has no implied or ostensible authority merely on the basis of his or her employment to do an act that will effect the surrender or loss of a client's substantial rights [Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 ; Whittier Union High Sch. Dist. v. Superior Court (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 504, 508, 136 Cal. Rptr.86] . For example, an attorney may not do the following without the client's authorization:

- Settle and compromise a claim [Alvarado Community Hospital v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 476, 480, 219 Cal. Rptr. 52 ; see Bowden v. Green (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 65, 73-74, 180 Cal. Rptr. 90 (ordering trial court to grant motion to vacate dismissal of cross-complaint); Whittier Union High Sch. Dist. v. Superior Court (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 504, 508, 136 Cal. Rptr. 86 (affirming setting aside dismissal of complaint); see also In re Marriage of Helsel (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 332, 339-340, 243 Cal. Rptr. 657] .

- Stipulate to submit a claim to binding arbitration [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 405, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1221-1223, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97].

- Stipulate that an action can be decided on the record made in a prior trial, thus waiving the party's right to have the trier of fact observe the demeanor of the parties and their witnesses [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 275-276, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760] .

- Agree to the entry of a default judgment [see Ross v. Ross (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 70, 74, 260 P.2d 652] .

- Agree to a judgment to the extent it included a conservatee's placement, disabilities, and conservator powers without the trial court obtaining the conservatee's on-the-record consent [see Conservatorship of Christopher A. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 604, 612-613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427] .

These decisions differ from the routine and tactical decisions, which have been called "procedural," both because of the degree to which they affect the client's interest, and because they involve matters of judgment that extend beyond technical competence, so that any client may be expected to share in the decisionmaking [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 405, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

Although a client may have a legal claim against the attorney for exceeding his or her authority in compromising the client's substantive rights in litigation, there may be some situations in which the client is nevertheless bound by an attorney's unauthorized compromise of substantive rights. This may occur, for example, when the compromise has been completed, carried into final judgment, and is not challenged by the client for a considerable period of time [see Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 459-460, 289 P.2d 466 (suggesting that presumption of attorney's authority, even in substantive matters, may be conclusive on collateral attack of a final judgment); Burns v.

However, in Blanton v. Womancare, Inc., the California Supreme Court reversed a judgment on an arbitration award in defendants' favor, when it concluded that the attorney for plaintiff lacked the authority to stipulate to submission of the claim to arbitration without the plaintiff's consent. The Court noted that defense counsel knew of plaintiff's objections and her attorney's lack of actual authority before arbitration began, and chose not to allow the case to proceed to trial. It was only after the trial judge refused to grant plaintiff's motion to invalidate the agreement that plaintiff appeared and participated in the arbitration hearing [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

In reaching this decision, the Court considered on the one hand the "commendable" practice of attorneys to rely on representations made by other attorneys with respect to the scope of their authority, and on the other hand the well-established principles of the law of agency, in which the rights of the clients as between themselves are concerned. The Court also noted the rule in other jurisdictions that when an attorney undertakes to bind his or her client by an agreement to compromise the client's substantial rights, the opposing party must ascertain at his or her peril whether the attorney has authority to make the agreement [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 406, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] . Thus, the Court concluded that when a client does not consent to an agreement that compromises his or her substantive rights in litigation, does nothing beyond retention of the attorney to suggest that the attorney had authority to enter into such an agreement on the client's behalf, and repudiates the agreement as soon as he or she learns of it, the client is not bound by the attorney's act [Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 402, 408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645 ; see also Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1221-1223, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97 (remanding to determine whether client consented to arbitration)].

Another court held similarly that when a family law proceeding is substantially resolved by a stipulation, tantamount to a settlement and dismissal in a civil case, the stipulation must be set aside if the client demonstrates that his or her attorney entered into the stipulation without the client's authorization or consent [In re Marriage of Helsel (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 332, 339-340, 243 Cal. Rptr. 657 (also noting that stipulations that do not dispose of dispute but only narrow issues for trial should not be routinely set aside for lack of client authorization)].

[d] Ratification by Client

A client may also ratify his or her attorney's unauthorized action, such as an unauthorized settlement or compromise, and thereby become bound by it [see Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1221-1223, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97 (remanding to determine whether client ratified agreement to arbitrate); Lazarus v. Titmus (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1247-1249, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 ; Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 ; Alvarado Community Hospital v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 476, 480, 219 Cal. Rptr. 52] . However, a client may not base rights on an unauthorized act by subsequently ratifying the act if to do so would prejudice the rights of third parties [see Title Ins. etc. Co. v. California etc. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 397, 401, 143 P. 723 (defendant could not ratify attorneys' unauthorized filing of notice of appeal after time for filing notice of appeal had expired)].

[e] Binding Client in Criminal Litigation

Like the civil practitioner, a criminal defense attorney controls the court proceedings, and has the authority and duty to determine all questions of strategy and trial tactics [see People v. Whittington (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 806, 820, 141 Cal. Rptr. 742] . It is the criminal defense attorney's responsibility to determine which witnesses to call, what motions to make, which jurors to challenge, and the extent and conduct of cross-examination [see People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 631, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769 ; Townsend v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 774, 781, 126 Cal. Rptr. 251, 543 P.2d 619 ; People v. Whittington (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 806, 820, 141 Cal. Rptr. 742] . However, fundamental protections guaranteed to an accused may not be waived by counsel without the client's concurrence, and substantive decisions such as what plea to enter, whether to waive a jury trial, and whether to testify are ultimately to be made by the defendant after consultation with counsel [People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 631 n.9, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769 ; see People v. Robles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 205, 214-215, 85 Cal. Rptr. 166, 466 P.2d 710] .

[4] Exclusivity of Authority of Attorney of Record

The general rule is that the attorney of record has the exclusive right to appear in court for his or her client and to control the court proceedings, so that neither the client nor another attorney can be recognized by the court in the conduct or disposition of the case [Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 42-43, 152 P.2d 625 ; Magee v. Superior Court (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 201, 213, 109 Cal. Rptr. 758 , disapproved on other grounds in People v. Norris (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 51, 56, 219 Cal. Rptr. 7, 706 P.2d 1141 ; see also § 72.222]. Unless the adverse party receives written notice of a change of attorney, he or she must recognize the former attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 285; for discussion and forms of substitution of attorneys, see § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.].

A party to an action may appear in propria persona or by attorney, but cannot do both. If a party appears by attorney, he or she must be heard through the attorney. The attorney has management and control of the action, and his or her authority generally must go unquestioned by anyone except the party whom the attorney represents. The court cannot recognize anyone other than the attorney of record as having the management of the case. The client may move the court for leave to change his or her attorney, but until that has been done, the client cannot assume control of the case [Commissioners S.J. v. Younger (1865) 29 Cal. 147, 149 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 284 (substitution of attorney)]. Once a party is represented by counsel, pro se documents may normally not be filed [People v. Mattson (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 777, 798, 336 P.2d 937 ; Lovret v. Seyfarth (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 841, 857-858, 101 Cal. Rptr. 143 ; see also Mott v. Foster (1872) 45 Cal. 72, 72-73 (court must disregard stipulation signed by party who has attorney of record, even though attorney was unable to sign because of his temporary absence)].

[5] Termination of Authority by Death, Incapacity, or Insanity of Client

The death, incapacity, or insanity of a client terminates an attorney's authority to represent that client [see Civ. Code § 2356 (termination of agency on death or incapacity of principal); Deiter v. Kiser (1910) 158 Cal. 259, 262, 110 P. 921 ; Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 527-528, 128 P.2d 128 ; cf. Civ. Code § 2400 et seq. (Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act; authority of one with durable power of attorney to represent principal in claims and litigation not affected by principal's subsequent incapacity)]. The client, or in some instances the court, may also terminate an attorney's authority to act for the client [see § 72.224].

For discussion of terminating the attorney's authority, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 74.410 et seq.

[6] Challenge by Party to Authority of Attorney

A party to an action who disputes the authority of the attorney who purports to represent the party must take prompt action and establish his or her contention by cogent and strong evidence [Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 600] , as does an adverse party who challenges the authority of the attorney for his or her opponent [see Turner v. Caruthers (1861) 17 Cal. 431, 433 (mere suggestion by adverse party insufficient)]. A motion to dismiss is the proper procedure for a defendant to challenge an attorney's authority to bring an action on behalf of the purported plaintiff client [see County of Ventura v. Clay (1897) 119 Cal. 213, 214, 51 P. 189 ; see §§ 72.684, 72.685]. The authority of an attorney to appear on behalf of a defendant may be challenged by a motion to strike the answer [People v. Honey Lake Valley Irr. Dist. (1926) 77 Cal. App. 367, 374, 246 P. 819 (decided before enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 437, which provides that grounds for motion to strike must appear on face of pleading or from matter subject to judicial notice); see §§ 72.688, 72.689]. A motion to dismiss or motion to strike is appropriate, for example, when the party, due to mental illness or other disability, was not competent to authorize the attorney to file the action [see also § 72.220[5]].

When it is clearly shown that the attorney had no authority to perform a particular act, the party whom he or she purported to represent cannot base any rights on the unauthorized act by ratifying the act if to do so would prejudice the rights of third parties [Title Ins. etc. Co. v. California etc. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 397, 401, 143 P. 723 (defendant could not ratify attorneys' unauthorized filing of notice of appeal after time for filing notice of appeal had expired)].

For related discussion regarding a motion by a party to disqualify opposing counsel for conflict of interest, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.

§ 72.221 Attorney's Authority to Enter Stipulation on Client's Behalf

[1] Binding Client by Stipulation

An attorney has the authority to bind his or her client in any of the steps of an action or proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 283(1) and discussion in § 72.220]. Thus, an attorney has the power to enter into stipulations that are binding on the client so far as they are simply necessary or incidental to the management of the suit, and that affect only the procedure or remedy as distinguished from the cause of action itself or the essential rights of the client [Stewart v. Preston Pipeline Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1565, 1580-1584, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 901 (stipulation waiving mediation confidentiality does not impact client's substantial rights and therefore client bound by attorney's agreement); Armstrong v. Brown (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 22, 28, 54 P.2d 1118] .

An attorney must obtain his or her client's consent to enter into a stipulation that surrenders the client's substantial rights or sole interest in the litigation [Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276-278, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 ; Conservatorship of Christopher A. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 604, 612-613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 ; Harness v. Pacific Curtainwall Co. (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 45 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; see § 72.220]. However, a client may ratify an unauthorized stipulation entered into by his or her attorney [Redsted v. Weiss (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 660, 664-665, 163 P.2d 105] .

[2] Matters Subject to Stipulation

The parties may make valid and enforceable stipulations respecting any of the steps of an action or proceeding [Barendregt v. Downing (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 733, 736, 346 P.2d 870 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 283]. For discussion concerning the circumstances under which an attorney may make a stipulation binding on his or her client, depending on whether the stipulation relates to procedural matters or affects substantive rights of the client, see discussion under § 72.220.

The rights growing out of a stipulation are similar to those arising from a contract [Harris v. Spinali Auto Sales, Inc. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 447, 453, 49 Cal. Rptr. 610 ; L. A. City Sch. Dist. v. Landier Inv. Co. (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d

744, 752, 2 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

For discussion of matters that are and are not proper subjects of an otherwise authorized stipulation and the interpretation or construction of stipulations, see Ch. 533, Stipulations .

[3] Requirement That Stipulation Be Written

A stipulation must usually be in writing, filed with the clerk, or entered on the minutes of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 283(1); see Lipscomb v. Krause (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 970, 974, 151 Cal. Rptr. 465] . Binding effect may, however, be given to an executed oral agreement on the basis of estoppel or ratification [see Smith v. Whittier (1892) 95 Cal. 279, 288-289, 30 P. 529 ; Harding v. Collazo (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1044, 1052, 223 Cal. Rptr. 329] .

For further discussion, see Ch. 533, Stipulations .

[4] Relief From Stipulations

The issue of relief from stipulations that were beyond the attorney's authority may arise in a variety of procedural contexts. For example, the issue has been raised by motion to set aside the stipulation on the ground of the client's lack of consent [see Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 400, 403-408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] (stipulation submitting dispute to binding arbitration), by motion for new trial [Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 275-279, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 (stipulation that judge could decide case entirely on basis of record made before another judge who had become disabled)], and by motion to correct a judgment on the ground of clerical error [Bowden v. Green (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 65, 69-70, 73-74, 180 Cal. Rptr. 90 (stipulation to dismiss cross complaint was not authorized by client and judge did not notice or intend that provision of judgment)].

A motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 to set aside the stipulation for mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect is also available [see Roth v. Morton's Chefs Services, Inc. 173 Cal. App. 3d 380, 383, 385-387, 218 Cal. Rptr. 684 (setting aside due to surprise, not related to attorney's authority)].

For forms for motions and orders to set aside a stipulation based on the attorney's lack of authority to enter into it, see §§ 72.686 and 72.687. For further discussion of the procedure and general forms for obtaining relief from stipulations, including time limitations, see Ch. 533, Stipulations .

2. Attorney's Authority

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.222

§ 72.222 Authority of Attorney to Associate Other Counsel

[1] Attorney of Record May Associate Another Attorney

As an exception to the general rule that the attorney of record has the exclusive right to appear in court for the client, it is recognized, though not by statute, that the attorney of record may associate another attorney and divide the duties concerning the conduct of the cause [Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 42-43, 152 P.2d 625] . The associated attorney may not act as the sole attorney of record, however, unless an actual substitution of attorneys is effected [Prescott v. Salthouse (1878) 53 Cal. 221, 222-223 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 284, 285 (procedure for substituting attorney)]. The associated attorney may properly act as "one of the attorneys for" the party while referring to the association with the attorney of record from whom the associated attorney derives his or her authority [Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 42-43, 152 P.2d 625] .

If a party litigant is also an attorney and officer of the court, he or she may be recognized as an associate attorney when participating in the presentation of the case with the ostensible authority of the attorney of record [Muller v. Tanner (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 445, 456-457, 82 Cal. Rptr. 738] .

Associations may be made between otherwise unaffiliated attorneys who agree to provide services on behalf of particular clients in particular cases. However, if a lawyer holds himself or herself out as being a partner or associate in a law firm when the lawyer is not one in fact, the lawyer may be held liable for wrongful acts of the alleged partners [see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 ; cf. A.B.A. Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 2-13 (1980)].

PRACTICE TIP:

When Association of Counsel Appropriate. Association of counsel may be appropriate when referral is not: when the first attorney retains responsibility and control over the client matter and, accordingly, continues to perform services for the client. For example, an attorney qualified to try a personal injury matter may associate trial counsel to handle the trial of the case either because the first attorney prefers pretrial matters or because the first attorney's schedule has conflicting trial dates.

When an attorney is associated on a case and there is an agreement for the sharing of a fee, an express agency relationship may be created. A breach of agency duties may support an action for fees lost brought by the original attorney (principal) against the associated attorney (agent) [Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 942-943, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81 (malpractice action against second attorney precluded by public policy, but breach of duty by agent permitted action); see also § 72.220].

[2] Procedure for Associating Counsel

As association of counsel is not required to be effected formally, there is no prescribed form for association of counsel. When the association is made, the attorney of record has the professional responsibility to prepare the associate counsel for trial proceedings at which he or she appears and may be disciplined for failure to do so [see Vaughn v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 698, 701-702, 108 Cal. Rptr. 806, 511 P.2d 1158] .

PRACTICE TIP:

File Formal Association of Counsel. Even though it is not required, it is a good practice to file a formal association of counsel stating the name, address, and telephone number of the attorney associated, and showing the consent of the associated counsel. It then becomes part of the record to explain the participation of the associated attorney in the conduct of the case.

Although there is no authority requiring that a client consent to an association of counsel for the conduct of the case, it is good practice to obtain the client's consent and agreement to incur the expenses of the associate's fees and costs [see Tasker v. Cochrane (1928) 94 Cal. App. 361, 366, 271 P. 503 (client not liable for fees and costs of associate without an express agreement); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A)(1) (requiring client's informed written consent for division of fees with lawyer who is not partner of, associate of, or shareholder with attorney)].

§ 72.223 Counsel Pro Hac Vice

[1] Association of Out-of-State Attorney

State courts have customarily extended, in their discretion, permission for out-of-state attorneys to appear in a particular case despite Bus. & Prof. Code § 6125, which provides that only active members of the State Bar may practice in state courts [In re McCue (1930) 211 Cal. 57, 67, 293 P. 47 ; see Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 162, 174, 174 n.10, 118 Cal. Rptr. 175, 529 P.2d 599 ; see also Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v. Superior Court (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 119, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 304, 949 P.2d 1 (unauthorized practice of law in California by out-of-state law firm)].

Appearances as counsel pro hac vice (i.e., for a particular case only) by an out-of-state attorney are regulated by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40 [Consumers Lobby Against Monopolies v. Public Utilities Com. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 891, 913-914 n.12, 160 Cal. Rptr. 124, 603 P.2d 41 ; cf. Katz v. Superior Court (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 952, 972, 141 Cal. Rptr. 234 (consent granted without compliance with this rule not questioned on appeal absent timely objection)]. For a form for an application under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40, see § 72.695.

PRACTICE TIP:

Out-of-State Attorneys May Appear Pro Hac Vice in Arbitrations and Hearings. Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4 and Cal. Rules. of Ct., Rule 9.43 allow out-of-state attorneys to appear as counsel pro hac vice in arbitration proceedings and hearings held in California. The statutory requirements for pro hac vice appearances in arbitrations are generally similar to those for pro hac vice appearances in state court [see § 72.223[3]]. The out-of-state attorney, prior to the first scheduled hearing in arbitration, must serve a certificate on the arbitrator, the State Bar of California and all parties and counsel, containing information required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4(c)]. An attorney who files a certificate containing false information or who otherwise fails to comply with the standards of professional conduct required of members of the State Bar or California will be subject to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the State Bar with respect to any of his or her acts occurring in the course of the arbitration [see Cal. Rules. of Ct., Rule 9.43]. Lawyers with compliance questions regarding Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4 should write or call the State Bar of California Office of Certification (180 Howard Street, San Francisco, CA 94105; (415) 538-2100).

[2] Eligibility

Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40, a state court has discretion to grant a written application for leave to appear as counsel pro hac vice, submitted by an applicant who has been retained in a particular cause pending before the court, who is not a member of the State Bar, but is a practicing member in good standing of a federal court bar, or the bar of the highest court of a state, territory, or insular possession of the United States. The court can only permit appearances made in association with an active State Bar member who acts as the attorney of record [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(a); see People v. Cooks (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 224, 290, 190 Cal. Rptr. 211 (attorney of record acting in association with counsel pro hac vice has more than perfunctory duty and must appear regularly at trial); see also Daybreak Group, Inc. v. Three Creeks Ranch, LLC (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 37, 41, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 365 (law firm not required to be admitted pro hac vice)].

Consent to appear may not be given to an applicant who resides in; has regular employment in; or regularly engages in substantial business, professional, or other activities in California [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(a); but see Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 706, 711, 168 Cal. Rptr. 785 (trial court's consent upheld despite close question as to applicant's business activities in California)]. The fact that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40 allows courts to accord pro hac vice status to an non-resident attorney admitted to practice in a foreign jurisdiction, but does not allow such status to be accorded to a resident attorney who is admitted to practice in a foreign jurisdiction but is not a member of the California bar, does not render Rule 9.40 unconstitutional [Paciulan v. George (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 1226, 1227-1228, 1231 (upholding constitutionality of rule under challenges based on privileges and immunities clause of U.S. Const., art. IV, § 2, free association clause of U.S. Const., amend. I, and due process and privileges and immunities clauses of U.S. Const., amend. XIV)].

Repeated prior appearances are also a cause for denial of an application absent special circumstances [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(b); see Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 706, 710, 168 Cal. Rptr. 785 (one prior appearance not cause for denial)].

Despite these limitations, an appellate court may permit argument in a particular case from one who is not a member of the State Bar, but who is licensed to practice in another jurisdiction and has special expertise in the particular field affected by the proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(g)].

Out-of-state attorneys may appear as counsel pro hac vice in arbitration proceedings and hearing held in California [Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.43; see § 72.223[1]].

[3] Procedure

An out-of-state attorney desiring to appear pro hac vice in a superior court must file a verified application with proof of service under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a that all parties who have appeared in the cause and the State Bar have been served by mail with the application and a notice of hearing. The notice of hearing must be given in the manner provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1005, unless the court authorizes a shorter period [Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rules 4.1, 4.3]. Thus, all moving and supporting papers must be served and filed at least 16 court days before the time appointed for the hearing; if the notice is served by mail, this period is increased by 5 days if the place of mailing and the place of address are within the State of California, by 10 days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the State of California but within the United States, and by 20 days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States; if notice is served by fax, express mail or other overnight delivery method, the period is extended by two days [Code Civ. Proc. § 1005(b)].

Counsel applying to appear pro hac vice in the Supreme Court or a court of appeal must make a motion as provided in

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54 (procedure and format for motions in reviewing courts), with proof of service on all parties who have appeared in the cause and the State Bar [Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.4].

Counsel applying to appear pro hac vice in arbitration proceedings and hearings in California must serve a certificate on the arbitrator, the State Bar of California and all parties and counsel, containing information required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.4(c)].

The copy of the application and notice of hearing that is served on the State Bar must be accompanied by a reasonable fee, fixed by the Board of Governors [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(e)].

[4] State Jurisdiction Over Professional Conduct

While appearing pro hac vice, an out-of-state attorney submits to the jurisdiction of state courts regarding state laws governing attorney conduct to the same extent as a State Bar member. Familiarity and compliance with the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct are also required, subject to disciplinary action by the State Bar under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6075 et seq. and the State Bar Rules of Procedure. A trial court's inherent powers include the authority to revoke an attorney's pro hac vice status when that attorney has engaged in conduct that would be sufficient to disqualify a California attorney [Sheller v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1697, 1716, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 207]. For further discussion concerning disciplinary proceedings in general, see Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline .

2. Attorney's Authority

§ 72.224 Termination of Attorney-Client Relationship

Unless the agreement between the parties provides otherwise, the attorney-client relationship terminates once the task for which the attorney was retained is concluded [see Ruszovan v. Ruszovan (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 902 ; Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 677, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680 ; see also BAJI No. 6.37.3; but see Barboza v. West Coast Digital GSM, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 540, 545-546, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295 (general rule may be inapplicable to class counsel representing absent class members)]. The cautious attorney, however, will communicate with the client to confirm that the client understands that the relationship has terminated. An attorney is prohibited from terminating representation of any cient on the basis of race, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-400(B)].

The relationship also may end when an attorney is relieved either by the court or by the client [see Code Civ. Proc. § 284]. The client's power to discharge an attorney, with or without cause, is generally absolute under Code Civ. Proc. § 284 [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 372, 90 P.2d 63 ; see also Jones & Matson v. Hall (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1610, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 ; Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45 (setting forth nature of attorney's interest necessary to preclude substitution)].

Once the attorney-client relationship has been terminated, the attorney does not have a duty to represent the client in another matter [see Brandlin v. Belcher (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1001, 134 Cal. Rptr. 1] or, particularly if other counsel is retained, to further represent the client in the matter for which the attorney was originally retained [see Steketee v. Lintz, Williams & Rothberg (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 46, 57, 210 Cal. Rptr. 781, 694 P.2d 1153 (attorney not liable for failing to file action prior to expiration of statute of limitations when he ceased to represent client and was replaced by other counsel before statute ran on client's action)].

For discussion of the termination of the attorney-client relationship, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.

§ 72.240 Governing Law

The law regulating advertising and solicitation by attorneys is derived primarily from the following:

- United States Supreme Court cases defining the constitutional limits of regulation,
- State Bar Act provisions prescribing certain activities as unlawful (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6126, 6150-6156),
- State Bar Act provisions setting forth specific standards for solicitation and advertising (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157-6159.2), and
- Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400.

Bar association opinions may also provide useful guidance concerning "grey" areas of conduct, but those opinions lack precedential value in the courts [see § 72.11[7]].

3. Advertising And Solicitation

§ 72.241 Solicitation and Advertising Distinguished

Broadly defined, solicitation refers to any activity by which an attorney seeks professional employment from a potential client for pecuniary gain [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 454, 462 n.20, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . Advertising involves informing or advising the public about the availability of an attorney's services [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 454-455, 457, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . Advertising is thus a form of solicitation because the attorney hopes to gain new clients from the advertisement's audience [see Millsberg v. State Bar (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 65, 74, 98 Cal. Rptr. 223, 490 P.2d 543 ; Bar Assn. of San Francisco Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1979-1; Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2 (in effect 1928-1975, set out in 1 Cal. 3d (1970)); see also Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 454-455, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

To avoid confusion, this part generally uses the term "solicitation" to refer specifically to forms of solicitation that are directed at specific individuals or entities, such as in-person contact and telephone calls, rather than forms directed at the public generally, for which the term "advertising" is used [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B) (discussed in § 72.531[11]) and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157(c) (discussed in § 72.242[3])].

[1] Communication

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, governing advertising and solicitation, uses the general term "communication" to refer to any message or offer made by or on behalf of a California State Bar member concerning the availability for professional employment of a member or law firm directed to any former, present, or prospective client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A)]. Communications include the following types of conduct [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A)]:

- Any use of firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of the member or law firm;
- Any stationery, letterhead, business card, sign, brochure, or other comparable written material describing the member, law firm, or lawyers;
- Any advertisement (regardless of medium) of the member or law firm directed to the general public or any substantial portion thereof; or
- Any unsolicited correspondence from a member or law firm directed to any person or entity.

[2] Solicitation

Rule 1-400 also regulates "solicitations." [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400]. A "solicitation" is a specific type of "communication" concerning the availability for professional employment of a member or a law firm in which a significant motive is pecuniary gain. Such a communication is a "solicitation" if it is conveyed in any of following ways [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B)]:

- Delivered in person;

- Delivered by telephone; or

- Directed by any means to a person known to the sender to be represented by counsel in a matter that is a subject of the communication.

[3] Advertising

The State Bar Act provisions regulating legal advertising, uses the term "advertising" to refer to any communication by a lawyer or attorney directed to the general public soliciting employment of legal services, which is paid for, or on the behalf of an attorney by [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157(c)]:

- Television or radio;

- Any print medium including, but not limited to newspapers and billboards; or

- Mailings directed generally to members of the public and not to a specific person.

PRACTICE TIP:

Regulation of Advertising. Historically, advertising and solicitation by attorneys were considered unethical conduct subject to discipline by the State Bar. With the advent of constitutional protection for commercial speech, the State Bar has been forced to permit some forms of truthful advertising and solicitation. To the extent that it is permitted by the Constitution, the State Bar has tried to regulate the content of advertising and ensure that it is not false, misleading, or deceptive.

§ 72.243 Retention of Records

An attorney must keep for two years a copy or recording of any "communication" as that term is defined in the Rules of Professional Conduct (discussed under § 72.242[1]) made by any type of written or electronic media [Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(F)]. The attorney must make these records available to the State Bar on written request and, if requested, must provide evidence to support any factual or objective claim contained in the "communication" [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(F)].

An attorney must retain for one year a true and correct copy of any advertisement as that term is defined in the State Bar Act (discussed under § 72.242[3]) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159.1]. Any person found in violation of this requirement shall be reported by the court to the appropriate professional agency for review and possible disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159].

PRACTICE TIP:

Include Dates in Records. It is important that records of advertisements or letters include the dates on which the communications were made. The rules that permit a certain advertisement or letter at a certain time may well change by the time a State Bar investigation commences.

The United States Supreme Court has stated that attorneys may be constitutionally required to file a copy of a mass mailing with the State Bar [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 206, 206 n.20, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . Presently, however, the State Bar of California does not require an attorney to file copies of communications.

§ 72.244 Types of Communication Prohibited

[1] False Statements

A communication or solicitation made by or on behalf of an attorney may not contain any untrue statement [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(1); see Best Buy Stores, L.P. v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 772, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 (state may not bar lawyers from sending truthful letters soliciting legal business for pecuniary gain)]. For example, the inclusion in an advertisement of the words, "Approved as a Bankruptcy Trustee by U.S. Courts," when the attorney has not been officially appointed by the courts, is a false statement that violates this rule [see Standing Committee on Discipline etc. v. Ross (9th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 1168, 1172 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former rule 2-101)].

This rule is extended by statute to nonattorneys and to attorneys who are inactive, suspended, disbarred, or otherwise not current active members of the State Bar, at least to the extent that such persons are prohibited from advertising or holding themselves out as "practicing or entitled to practice law" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6126 (violation a misdemeanor)].

[2] Deceptive Matter

The Rules of Professional Conduct prohibit communications and solicitations that contain any matter, or present or arrange any matter in a manner that is false, deceptive, or that tends to confuse, deceive, or mislead the public [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(2)]. The California Supreme Court has held that the provisions of the Rules of Professional Conduct prohibiting communications that contain false, confusing, misleading, or deceptive statements are a constitutionally permissible regulation of misleading advertisements [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 626, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (construing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101(A)(1)-(3), which is similar to present Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(1)-(3))]. For further discussion of constitutional restrictions regarding regulation of attorney advertising, see § 72.251.

A statement may be misleading if it involves the use of words that are not well known to the public. For example, use of the term "approved" as a Bankruptcy Trustee, when the attorney was not officially "appointed" as a trustee, was found to be misleading because the lay public is not familiar with the appointment process of bankruptcy trustees [Standing Committee on Discipline etc. v. Ross (9th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 1168, 1172 (decided under former Rule 2-101); cf. Friedman v. Rogers (1979) 440 U.S. 1, 11-16, 99 S. Ct. 887, 59 L. Ed. 2d 100 (Texas statute prohibiting practice of optometry under trade name as constitutional regulation of potentially misleading practice)].

In another case, the California Supreme Court found that letters that were mailed to certain potential clients who had lawsuits pending against them had a tendency to and actually did mislead members of the public, although they contained no literally untrue statements. The Court made note of one particular letter, stating that it was misleading because it implied that an adverse judgment was imminent and that the recipients' personal assets would be attached as a result of the judgments [see Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 626-627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (decided under former Rule 2-101); but see Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 472-478, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475 (targeted direct-mail solicitation is a constitutionally protected category of attorney advertising)].

In the first Supreme Court discipline case regarding solicitation in several years, the court found that an attorney had engaged in mass mailing of misleading advertisements entitled "homestead information sheet" [In re Morse (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 184, 201-202, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620, 900 P.2d 1170] . The court found the content of the mailings misleading in four specific ways. Further, Morse did not comply with the specific provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17537.6, which requires certain important disclosures regarding homestead declarations [In re Morse (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 184, 203, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620, 900 P. 2d 1170] . The court placed the attorney on disciplinary probation for four years, on conditions including at least two years of actual suspension [In re Morse (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 184, 212, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620, 900 P.2d 1170] .

A lawyer who prepares living trusts at the direction of a nonlawyer who markets living trust packages to the public violates the prohibition of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400 against misleading advertising. Statements by the marketer regarding lawyer preparation of living trusts and the lawyer's availability for professional employment are "communications" within the meaning of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A). The communications have the potential to mislead the public through a generic "one-size-fits-all" recommendation of living trusts to the public, which contain untrue statements and omit facts, for example, that living trusts may not be best in every case, necessary to make them not misleading [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-148].

[3] Omissions of Fact

Omissions of fact that make a communication or solicitation misleading are forbidden by the Rules of Professional Conduct [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(3)]. The circumstances under which the communication or solicitation is made will be considered in determining whether the omission is misleading [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(3)].

In one case, letters sent to a number of potential clients were held to have violated this rule because they stated that clients needed only $60 in cash to apply for debt relief under the bankruptcy laws, but failed to state that the firm would also charge attorney's fees equal to 10 times that amount [see Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (decided under former Rule 2-101)].

[4] Failure to Indicate Nature of Communication

An attorney's communication must not fail to indicate that it is a "communication" or "solicitation," as those terms are used in the Rules [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(4)]. In other words, the communication must somehow indicate that its purpose is to offer the availability of the attorney or his or her firm for professional employment [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A), (B)]. The communication or solicitation must state its nature clearly, expressly, or by context [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(4)]. A communication that does not have the word "Advertisement," "Newsletter," or similar words on the first page and, if mailed, also on the outside of the envelope is presumed to violate this rule [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 5 (word on first page required to be in 12-point type); see § 72.245].

In one case, the California Supreme Court disciplined the lawyers in a law firm for sending mass mailings of letters that violated this rule, among others. The letters in question were specifically directed at certain potential clients who had legal proceedings pending against them. The Court noted that, although the letters could have been interpreted by a lawyer as indicating that they were messages concerning the firm's availability for employment, the letters did not clearly state that they were for that purpose and a layperson would not necessarily have understood that they were advertisements. The Court stated that the rule "could easily be satisfied by including a statement such as 'This is an advertisement' " [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (decided under former Rule 2-101); see also Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 472-478, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475 (truthful and nondeceptive targeted direct-mail solicitation is a constitutionally protected category of attorney advertising)].

[5] Intrusive or Coercive Manner

The Rules of Professional Conduct prohibit communications and solicitations that are transmitted in an intrusive or coercive manner, or in any manner involving duress, compulsion, intimidation, threats, or vexatious or harassing conduct [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(5)]. In one case, the California Supreme Court held that particularized, misleading, and unsolicited letters mailed to defendants against whom cases were pending, and that were bound to cause panic and fear in the lay recipients of those letters, violated this prohibition [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (decided under former Rule 2-101); but see Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 472-478, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475 (impliedly overruling Leoni in part and holding that targeted, direct-mail solicitation is a constitutionally protected category of attorney advertising)].

[6] Direct Solicitation by Attorney

The Rules of Professional Conduct provide that no "solicitation" (as defined under § 72.531[11]) may be made by or on behalf of a member or law firm to a prospective client with whom the member or law firm has no family or prior professional relationship, unless the solicitation is protected from abridgment by the United States or California Constitutions [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C)]. Nevertheless, a solicitation to a former or present client in the discharge of a member's or law firm's professional duties is not prohibited [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct., Rule 1-400(C)]. A lawyer's claim against another lawyer for soliciting a client did not come within the statutory exemption to the anti-SLAPP statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17) [Taheri Law Group v. Evans (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 482, 490, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 847].

A lawyer who prepares living trusts at the direction of a nonlawyer who markets living trust packages to the public violates the prohibition of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B), (C) against in-person solicitation. A significant motivation for promotion of the lawyer's services is pecuniary gain for the marketer and the lawyer, and the solicitation is directed at obtaining prospective clients with whom the lawyer has no prior professional relationship. The use of the marketer does not insulate the communication, since Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C) prohibits solicitations made "on behalf of" the lawyer [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-148].

For discussion of the scope of the permissible constitutional limitations on in-person and telephone solicitation, see §§ 72.246, 72.247 and 72.249. For discussion of the constitutional limitations on the above prohibitions as they apply to unsolicited mailings and advertisements containing legal advice or pertaining to specific potential clients, see § 72.253[4].

PRACTICE TIP:

Rule Prohibiting Solicitation Unclear. The California rule prohibiting solicitation is not as clear as it should be. It requires legal research into the current status of law of commercial speech each time an attorney proposes to engage in solicitation.

§ 72.245 Presumptive Violations

The State Bar Board of Governors, as required by the Rules of Professional Conduct, has adopted standards setting forth what communications will be presumed to violate Rule 1-400 [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E) (requirement of adoption); Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400]. The standards may only be used as presumptions affecting the burden of proof in State Bar disciplinary proceedings [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E); see Evid. Code §§ 605, 606 (effect of presumption affecting burden of proof)]. Violation of some of these standards also is prohibited by provisions of the State Bar Act regulating legal advertising [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2 discussed under § 72.592[4][a]].

The following types of communications are presumed to violate Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400:

- A communication containing guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the result of the representation [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 1].

- A communication containing testimonials about, or endorsements of, a State Bar member, unless such communication also contains an express disclaimer of guarantees, warranties, or predictions regarding the outcome of the legal matter [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 2].

- A communication delivered to a potential client whom the attorney knows or should reasonably know is in such a physical, emotional, or mental state that he or she would not be expected to exercise reasonable judgment as to the retention of counsel [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 3].

- A communication transmitted at the scene of an accident, or at, or en route to, a hospital or other health care facility [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 4; see also § 72.247].

- A communication, except professional announcements, seeking professional employment for pecuniary gain that is transmitted by mail or equivalent means that does not bear the word "Advertisement'," "Newsletter," or words of similar import in 12 point print on the first page. If the communication, including firm brochures, newsletters, recent legal development advisories, and similar materials, is transmitted in an envelope, the outside of the envelope must bear the word "Advertisement'," "Newsletter," or similar word [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 5].

PRACTICE TIP:

Labeling Mailing to Prospective Client. Because letters from attorneys can often have an strong impact on their recipients, the State Bar requires attorney advertisements to be clearly labeled as such both on the outside of the envelope and inside. Members of the public are entitled to know that their legal rights are not at stake as they open and after they have opened a letter from an unknown lawyer. If an attorney opts to choose a label other than "advertisement" or "newsletter," the chosen label should be clear enough to apprise the public that the attorney is seeking business and that there is no duty to respond to the letter.

- A communication in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation that states or implies a relationship between any member in private practice and a government agency or instrumentality or a public or nonprofit legal services organization [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 6].

- A communication in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation that states or implies that a member has a relationship to any other member or a law firm as a partner or associate or as officer or shareholder pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6160 et seq., unless that relationship in fact exists [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 7].

- A communication that states or implies that a member or law firm is "of counsel" to another member or a law firm, unless the former has a relationship with the latter (other than as a partner or associate or as officer or shareholder pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6160 et seq.) that is close, personal, continuous, and regular [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 8].

PRACTICE TIP:

Treatment of "Of Counsel" Attorney. If a lawyer or law firm is to be held out as "of counsel" to another lawyer, the "of counsel" lawyer will be treated as a partner or associate for conflicts purposes [People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1135, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 816, 980 P.2d 371 ; see § 72.113[6][b][iv]]. Before holding out another lawyer as "of counsel," counsel should consider the potential impact of conflicts of interest. For discussion of conflicts generally, see § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.170 et seq.

- A communication in the form of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation used by a member or law firm in private practice that differs materially from any other such designation used by such member or law firm at the same time in the same community [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 9].

- A communication that implies that the member or member's firm is participating in a lawyer-referral service that has been certified by the State Bar of California or as having satisfied the Minimum Standards for Lawyer Referral Services in California, when that is not the case [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 10].

- A communication that states or implies that a member is a "certified specialist" unless such communication also states the complete name of the entity that granted the certification as a specialist [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 11].

PRACTICE TIP:

Advertising Areas of Expertise. Attorneys occasionally advertise that they are specialists or experts in particular areas. This is not prohibited by Standard 11, which deals with attorneys who state that they are "certified" specialists. As discussed in § 72.270 et seq. through § 72.290 et seq., however, attorneys holding themselves out as specialists are likely to be held to a higher standard of care than general practitioners.

- A communication, except professional announcements, in the form of an advertisement primarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain that is transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion of the public by mail or equivalent means or by means of television, radio, newspaper, magazine or other commercial mass media that does not state the name of the member responsible for the communication. If the communication is on a law firm's behalf, the communication must state the name of at least one member responsible for it [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 12].

- A communication that contains a dramatization without including a disclaimer stating 'this is a dramatization' or words of similar import [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 13].

- A communication that states or implies "no fee without recovery" unless it also expressly discloses whether or not the client will be liable for costs [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 14].

- A communication that states or implies that a member is able to provide legal services in a language other than English unless the member can actually do so or the communication states, in the language of the communication, the employment title of the person who speaks the language and that the person is not a member of the State Bar of California, if that is the case [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 15].

- An unsolicited communication transmitted to the general public or any substantial portion of the public primiarily directed to seeking professional employment primarily for pecuniary gain that sets forth a specific fee or range of fees for a particular service if, in fact, the member charges a greater fee within 90 days following dissemination of the communication, unless the communication expressly specifies a shorter period when the advertised fee is available. If the communication is published in the classified ("yellow pages") of telephone, business, or legal directories or other media not published more than once a year, the member must conform to the advertised rate for one year from initial publication, unless the communication expressly specifies a shorter period regarding the fee [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 16].

§ 72.246 Constitutionality of Prohibition Against Solicitation

[1] General Rule--By Attorney In Person

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, prohibits communications delivered in person or by telephone concerning the availability for professional employment of an attorney or law firm in which a significant motive is pecuniary gain, provided that there is no prior professional or familial relationship between the attorney or firm and the solicited party [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B), (C)]. Rule 1-400 provides, however, that in-person or telephone solicitation may take place if it is protected by the California or United States Constitutions [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C)]. A determination of the permissible scope of in-person solicitation, therefore, requires an examination of the decisions of the United States and California Supreme Courts regarding the constitutionality of restrictions on such solicitation.

In Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 , the United States Supreme Court held that a state may constitutionally prohibit an attorney's in-person solicitation of legal employment for pecuniary gain under circumstances likely to present dangers that the state has a right to prevent [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 449, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . In Ohralik, an attorney was disciplined for soliciting potential clients in person at a hospital and at their homes, in violation of Ohio's Code of Professional Responsibility. The Court held that the state's restraint of this type of conduct does not violate U.S. Const., amend. I [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 459, 462, 468, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

One of the two rules of professional conduct considered in Ohralik was identical to former Rule 2-104(A) of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, in effect from 1975 to 1979 [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 453 n.9, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . The rule prohibited an attorney from recommending himself or herself or an associate or partner to a layperson who had not asked for a recommendation of an attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-104(A) (repealed April 1, 1979)]. The other rule considered in Ohralik prohibited an attorney from accepting employment resulting from unsolicited legal advice [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 453 n.9, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

The Court held that the dangers that the state is entitled to avert by regulation of in-person solicitation of professional legal employment include fraud, undue influence, intimidation, overreaching, invasion of privacy, subordination of the client's interests to the attorney's financial interests, and other vexatious conduct [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 461-462, 468, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . The state has a compelling interest in protecting the public from these potential dangers; therefore, the preventive nature of in-person solicitation restraints is justified [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 462-464, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . The possibility of the identified dangers occurring is constitutionally sufficient to warrant the prohibition; actual injury to a potential client is not required to be shown [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 465-468, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . If the purpose of solicitation involves the furtherance of civil rights, however, the solicitation is permissible unless actual misconduct or injury is shown [In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 434, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417] . For discussion of the civil liberties exception, see § 72.246[3].

Although their purposes may be the same, in-person solicitation for monetary gain differs significantly from the type of truthful advertising that is permitted. Although both activities ostensibly give information about the availability and terms of legal services, in-person solicitation, unlike advertising, invokes the negative elements of undue pressure and demand for an immediate answer and fails to give potential clients time and opportunity for reflection and comparison [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 455-458, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

In Edenfield v. Fane, the United States Supreme Court addressed the constitutionality of Florida's blanket prohibition on solicitation by certified public accountants. The accountant who challenged the prohibition had solicited prospective clients who were sophisticated and experienced business executives who understood well the services offered by a CPA. The Supreme Court held that, as applied to CPA solicitation in the business context, the Florida ban was unconstitutional [Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761, 113 S. Ct. 1792, 123 L. Ed. 2d 543, 550] . Unpersuaded that allowing solicitation by CPAs in the business context would result in fraud and overreaching, the Court held that the ban did not advance state interests in any direct and material way. Contrasting the instant case from Ohralik, where dangers of fraud and overreaching were found in the context of attorney solicitation of a young accident victim, the Court noted that a CPA is not "a professional trained in the art of persuasion," and that a CPA's training emphasizes independence and objectivity, not advocacy. Also, the Court opined that a typical client of a CPA is far less susceptible to manipulation than a client such as the young accident victim in Ohralik [Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761, 113 S. Ct. 1792, 123 L. Ed. 2d 543, 558] . The Court in Edenfield noted that under Ohralik, a preventive rule is justified only in situations "inherently conducive to overreaching and other forms of misconduct" [Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761, 113 S. Ct. 1792, 123 L. Ed. 2d 543, 557-558] . The Court concluded that the Florida rule did not advance substantial government interests, and suppressed legitimate commercial speech; consequently, the rule infringed on the accountant's constitutional free speech rights [Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761]. In light of Edenfield, it seems possible that the Court would view attorney solicitation of sophisticated business clients (for example, corporate CEOs and other attorneys) as constitutionally protected speech, inasmuch as dngers of fraud, overreaching, or other misconduct, are minimal with respect to such clients, and prohibitions on such speech would not directly advance a substantial government interest. Solicitation of sophisticated business clients, if constitutionally protected, would not be prohibited under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C).

[2] By Telephone

Attorneys are subject to discipline for soliciting clients directly over the telephone [In the Matter of Kroff (Review Dept. 1998) 3 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 838 (4/15/98; 1998 D.A.R. 4151) (attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C), by calling accident victims at their homes seeking to represent them); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1988-105 (construing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101(B); telephone solicitation involves same danger of abuse and difficulty of regulation inherent in "face-to-face" solicitation and is therefore both constitutionally unprotected and prohibited under California Rules of Professional Conduct); but see LACBA Formal Opinion No. 494 (1998) (telephone call by attorney offering to conduct in-house educational seminar not solicitation under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, where attorney does not communicate message or offer concerning availability for professional employment in practice of law)].

[3] Through Runners and Cappers

An attorney's solicitation of clients through agents, commonly called runners and cappers, may be constitutionally prohibited [see Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 863-864, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 (construing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rules 2 and 3, repealed January 1, 1975); In re Arnoff (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 740, 746, 150 Cal. Rptr. 479, 586 P.2d 960 ; for the current California rules prohibiting the use of runners and cappers, see § 72.247[2]]. The same kinds of evils that inure to in-person solicitation are presented by solicitation through runners and cappers [Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 863-864, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 ; see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 464 n.22, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; see also § 72.246[1][a][i]]. Solicitation through others also involves undesirable factors such as a demand for an immediate response and lack of opportunity for comparison and reflection [Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 863-864, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 ; see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 464 n.22, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] .

[4] Exception for Activities Involving Political Expression and Association

[a] In General

As noted under § 72.246[1][a][i], the United States Supreme Court held that states generally may proscribe in-person and other types of solicitation under circumstances likely to cause deception, undue influence, overreaching, conflicts of interest, invasion of privacy, or other evils against which the state has the right to protect, regardless of whether those circumstances are actually present in a particular case [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 465-468, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . The Court also held, however, that certain types of solicitation involving political expression and association are protected under U.S. Const., amend. I, and may not constitutionally be proscribed unless the particular activity actually involves the type of misconduct that the state seeks to prevent [see In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 434-436, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417 ; N.A.A.C.P. v. Button (1963) 371 U.S. 415, 431-438, 437, 83 S. Ct. 328, 9 L. Ed. 2d 405] .

For example, the efforts of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to advise potential litigants that their civil rights have been violated, and to refer them to particular attorneys, were permissible activities that could not be prohibited under the State of Virginia's antisolicitation statutes [N.A.A.C.P. v. Button (1963) 371 U.S. 415, 428-429, 437, 83 S. Ct. 328, 9 L. Ed. 2d 405] . Because the NAACP employed litigation for the purpose of redressing civil rights violations, its activities were protected as forms of political expression and association [N.A.A.C.P. v. Button (1963) 371 U.S. 415, 429-431, 437, 83 S. Ct. 328, 9 L. Ed. 2d 405] . In another case, an attorney's offer of free legal assistance by the American Civil Liberties Union to vindicate a potential client's civil rights was constitutionally protected in the absence of a showing of actual undue influence, overreaching, misrepresentation, invasion of privacy, or other misconduct, or a serious likelihood of such misconduct [see In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 431-436, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417] .

[b] Assertion of Legal Rights by Unions and Other Groups

Activities protected by U.S. Const., amend. I, include collective activity undertaken to obtain meaningful access to the courts [In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 425-426, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417 ; United Transportation Union v. State Bar of Michigan (1971) 401 U.S. 576, 585, 91 S. Ct. 1076, 28 L. Ed. 2d 339] . The constitutional right to engage in collective activities encompasses the right of unions and other groups to assert their legal rights in the most effective and economical way practicable [United Transportation Union v. State Bar of Michigan (1971) 401 U.S. 576, 580, 91 S. Ct. 1076, 28 L. Ed. 2d 339] . Protected activities include the following:

- Offering advice regarding legal rights to group members [Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v.

Virginia (1964) 377 U.S. 1, 8, 84 S. Ct. 1113, 12 L. Ed. 2d 89, 94 Ohio Law Abs. 33] ;

- Recommending an attorney to group members [Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Virginia (1964) 377 U.S. 1, 8, 84 S. Ct. 1113, 12 L. Ed. 2d 89, 94 Ohio Law Abs. 33] ;

- Employing attorneys to represent group members, either on staff or outside the organization [United Mine Workers v. Illinois Bar Asso. (1967) 389 U.S. 217, 221-222, 88 S. Ct. 353, 19 L. Ed. 2d 426 ; see N.A.A.C.P. v. Button (1963) 371 U.S. 415, 428-429, 83 S. Ct. 328 ; 9 L. Ed. 2d 405] ;

- Furnishing the names of potential clients and information about accidents to particular attorneys [United Transportation Union v. State Bar of Michigan (1971) 401 U.S. 576, 581-582, 91 S. Ct. 1076, 28 L. Ed. 2d 339] ;

- Arranging with attorneys to limit their fees [United Transportation Union v. State Bar of Michigan (1971) 401 U.S. 576, 584-585, 91 S. Ct. 1076, 28 L. Ed. 2d 339] ; and

- Receiving reimbursement for costs of transporting group members to attorneys' offices [United Transportation Union v. State Bar of Michigan (1971) 401 U.S. 576, 582, 91 S. Ct. 1076, 28 L. Ed. 2d 339] .

For discussion of the California rule regarding participation by attorneys in group legal services programs, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-600, see § 72.249[4].

[5] Permissible Restrictions on Solicitation

As discussed under § 72.246[1], a state may constitutionally restrain in-person solicitation by attorneys for pecuniary gain and other types of solicitation by attorneys that is in fact misleading, overbearing, or otherwise deceptive. In addition, state regulations may forbid solicitation by lawyers on behalf of lay organizations that exercise control over the conduct of the litigation [Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 449, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 438-439, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417] . Reasonable restrictions on the time, place, and manner of solicitation are also constitutionally permitted [In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 438, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417] .

[1] Ambulance Chasing

One form of legal solicitation that has achieved notoriety and virtually unanimous condemnation involves attorneys or their agents seeking professional legal employment at accident scenes or at hospitals, an activity commonly known as "ambulance chasing" [see, e.g., Tonini v. State Bar (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 491, 497, 297 P.2d 1 ; People v. Kitsis (1977) 77 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 2 , cert. denied, 436 U.S. 950 (1978) (describing Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152 as prohibiting ambulance chasing)]. This form of solicitation is considered especially reprehensible because it involves a high potential for overreaching [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 464-465, 468, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444] . In these situations, the victim is usually distressed and may even be semi-conscious or not cognizant of what is going on around him or her [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 464-466, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 866, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 ; Tonini v. State Bar (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 491, 493-494, 297 P.2d 1] .

Ambulance chasing may encompass activities that involve an attorney personally [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 449-452, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; Tonini v. State Bar (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 491, 493-497, 297 P.2d 1] or an attorney's runners and cappers [see Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 861-862, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323] . An attorney's use of runners or cappers to solicit business under these circumstances is a violation of the State Bar Act and subjects both the attorney and the runner or capper to criminal penalties [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6152(a), 6153 (discussed under § 72.247[2][a])]. Furthermore, a communication regarding an attorney's availability for professional employment is presumed to violate Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, if the communication is transmitted at either of the following places [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 4; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E) (authorizing State Bar Board of Governors to adopt standards regarding communications that are presumed to violate the rule); see also § 72.245]:

- The scene of an accident.

- At or en route to a hospital, emergency care center, or other health care facility.

Places in which solicitation of potential clients is generally prohibited include the following [see, e.g., Urbano v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 16, 19, 136 Cal. Rptr. 572, 560 P.2d 1 ; Kelson v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 1, 4-5, 130 Cal. Rptr. 29, 549 P.2d 861 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a)(1) (listing specific places, such as jails, hospitals, courts, and highways, where solicitation by runners and cappers is prohibited)]:

- Accident scenes.
- Car repair shops.
- Hospitals.
- The victim's home shortly after an accident.

Prohibited ambulance chasing may involve:

- Communication with the victim directly [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n. (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 449-452, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; Tonini v. State Bar (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 491, 493-495, 297 P.2d 1 ; In the Matter of Kroff (Review Dept. 1998)--Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr.--(4/15/98; 1998 D.A.R. 4151)].

- Communication with the victim's family [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n. (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 449-452, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444 ; Younger v. State Bar (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 274, 278-283, 113 Cal. Rptr. 829, 522 P.2d 5 ; In the Matter of Kroff (Review Dept. 1998)--Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr.--(4/15/98; 1998 D.A.R. 4151)].

[2] Activities of Runners and Cappers

[a] Statutory Prohibition

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a) makes it unlawful for a person to act as a runner or capper for an attorney or otherwise to solicit employment for an attorney [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a)(1)]. As used in Section 6152(a), a runner or capper is any person, firm, association, or corporation acting for consideration in any manner or in any capacity as an agent for an attorney at law or law firm, whether the attorney or any member of the law firm is admitted in California or in any other jurisdiction, in the solicitation or procurement of business for the attorney or law firm [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6151(a)]. The statute lists specific places, such as jails, prisons, hospitals, and courts, where such solicitation is prohibited, but also prohibits solicitation "in any public place," "upon any public street or highway" and "upon private property of any character whatsoever" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a)(1)].

The statute also prohibits any person from soliciting another person to act as a runner or capper or from otherwise joining in the activities of a runner or capper [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a)(2)]. This subsection was added in 1976 to clarify Section 6152(a) and to codify previous judicial holdings that an attorney can be criminally liable for aiding, abetting, or conspiring with others to act as runners and cappers [see Hutchins v. Municipal Court (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 77, 81-90, 132 Cal. Rptr. 158 ; see also § 72.247[2][b]].

Violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a) is punishable by criminal penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6153], and may be, under certain circumstances, a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C), (D) (certain types of "communications" prohibited); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A) (offers "made by or on behalf of" an attorney are form of "communication")]. For discussion of the criminal penalties and potential disciplinary consequences of a violation of the section, see § 72.250.

PRACTICE TIP:

Private Investigator Must Be Monitored. The practice of using a so-called "private investigator" to talk to witnesses or victims at accident scenes must be carefully monitored by the attorney to make sure that there is no violation on the prohibition against running and capping. Merely giving the runner or capper a different label does not alleviate the violation of the rules.

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152 exempts from criminal liability a public defender or appointed counsel who makes the availability of his or her services as a criminal defense attorney known to criminal defendants [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(d)]. For a discussion of permissible activities involving solicitation by public defenders and appointed counsel, see § 72.249[5]. Additionally, Section 6152 is not intended to prohibit any recommendation of legal employment that is permissible under the Rules of Professional Conduct [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(c)]. For a discussion of permissible types of recommendation of employment, see § 72.249[1].

The impermissible activities of runners and cappers frequently involve "ambulance chasing," or soliciting at accident scenes and hospitals [see § 72.247]. The runner's or capper's method usually consists of approaching the victim, presenting the attorney's business card, and urging, to various degrees, the person to hire the attorney [see, e.g., Urbano v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 16, 19, 136 Cal. Rptr. 572, 560 P.2d 1 ; Kelson v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 1, 4-5, 130 Cal. Rptr. 29, 549 P.2d 861] . Sometimes, runners and cappers are employees of hospitals who work part-time as so-called "investigators" for an attorney. In other cases, the "investigator" may be a full-time employee of the attorney. The runner or capper improperly solicits patients at the hospital and turns over signed retainer agreements to the attorney [see, e.g., Goldman v. State Bar (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 130, 135-136, 141 Cal. Rptr. 447, 570 P.2d 463] .

An heir hunter's practice of requiring a discovered estate beneficiary to sign a general power of attorney whereby the beneficiary effectively retained the heir hunter's own counsel to represent the beneficiary at no cost to the beneficiary amounted to unlawful solicitation of business for the attorney in violation of Business and Professions Code § 6152 [see Estate of Wright (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 228, 235, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 572] .

Furthermore, the arrangement described above also presented the attorney with an unsurmountable conflict of interest. The attorney representing the heir hunter cannot advise the estate beneficiary concerning the reasonableness of the heir-hunting fee or whether the assignment to the heir hunter the beneficiary's interest in the estate was suspect or unreasonable [See Estate of Wright, above, 90 Cal. App. 4th 228, 235-236, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 572 . See also discussion under § 72.110[4][i]].

[b] Participation by Attorney

As noted under § 72.247[2][a], the attorney may be subject to criminal liability as well as discipline by the State Bar for obtaining employment through the use of runners and cappers [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(a)(2) (criminal liability for soliciting another to act as runner or capper or for joining in commission of such act); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(C); Hutchins v. Municipal Court (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 77, 83-89, 132 Cal. Rptr. 158 (criminal liability under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6152, 6153 not limited to runners and cappers themselves, but includes attorney who uses them to obtain clients)]. The attorney's knowledge or participation in solicitation by a runner or capper may be shown by circumstantial evidence [Geffen v. State Bar (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 843, 853, 122 Cal. Rptr. 865, 537 P.2d 1225] . For example, in a case in which the attorney's investigator had approached accident victims and made unsolicited recommendations that the victim retain his employer, the California Supreme Court found sufficient evidence to indicate that the employing attorney had willfully participated in the activities from the fact that the attorney had failed to instruct the investigator sufficiently regarding the ethical restrictions on soliciting potential clients [see Geffen v. State Bar (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 843, 853-856, 122 Cal. Rptr. 865, 537 P.2d 1225] .

[3] Accepting Employment From Unsolicited Advice

The current rule regarding the propriety of accepting employment as a result of unsolicited legal advice offered by an attorney is not entirely clear. Cases have indicated that it is not improper for an attorney to offer unsolicited legal advice [see Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 458 ; Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 864, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323] because helping to educate the public about their legal rights is a laudable objective [see Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 785, 795, 795 n.13, 183 Cal. Rptr. 810, 647 P.2d 86 ; A.B.A. Model Code of Professional Responsibility, EC 2-3].

The California Supreme Court stated in dictum that it is improper for an attorney to accept employment resulting from such unsolicited advice [see Colonial Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 785, 795, 183 Cal. Rptr. 810, 647 P.2d 86 ; Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 864, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 (quoting from Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 458, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444)]. In a more recent decision, however, the United States Supreme Court held that U.S. Const., amend. I, precludes a state from disciplining an attorney for soliciting legal business through printed advertising containing truthful and nondeceptive information and advice regarding the legal rights of potential clients [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315 ; for a discussion of the permissible contents of advertising, see § 72.254]. The extent to which this holding would apply to unsolicited advice offered by means other than printed advertising is not settled. In its opinion, the Court appeared to distinguish between printed advertisements and in-person contact by attorneys, which involves dangers of undue influence and overreaching, suggesting that constitutional protection might not apply to employment accepted as a result of unsolicited advice offered by the attorney through in-person contact [see Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 642, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315 ; see also Adams v. Attorney Registration & Disciplinary Com'n (7th Cir. 1986) 801 F.2d 968, 971-974 (noting potential distinction between advertising and in-person solicitation, but holding that rule protecting advice ven in printed advertisements applies to mailings directed toward specific target audiences)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Newsletters and Legal Development Advisories. The most common forms of providing legal advice as a means of seeking business are newsletters or legal development advisories. These are not prohibited, but the outside of the envelope must be labeled with an identifying term, such as "advertisement" or "newsletter." Also, the materials must bear those words on the first page in 12-point print [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 5; see § 72.245].

[4] Providing Unsolicited Legal Services

An attorney may not provide legal services not actually ordered or requested by the recipient [see Civ. Code § 1584.5]. The recipient may keep as an unconditional gift any unsolicited services that are provided and may bring an action to enjoin the sending of bill statements or requests for payment with respect to those unsolicited services [see Civ. Code § 1584.5].

[5] Providing Combined Legal and Non-Legal Services

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400 applies when a lawyer uses his or her credentials (e.g., "Esq.," "Attorney at Law") to market combined services that include legal services. The lawyer's advertisements must meet all Rule 1-400 communication requirements, and the lawyer is prohibited from improper solicitation of clients [see State Bar of California Formal Opinion No. 1999-154].

§ 72.249 Permissible Activities Involving Solicitation

[1] Personal Recommendations or Referrals by Laypersons

Although the Rules of Professional Conduct do not address the issue directly, most likely, an attorney may accept legal employment from a person who was referred to the attorney through the personal recommendation of a friend, relative, or present or former client [see Ashe v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 123, 138-139, 77 Cal. Rptr. 233, 453 P.2d 737 ; Hildebrand v. State Bar (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 816, 828, 117 P.2d 860] . Furthermore, an attorney may apparently contact a potential client to whom the attorney reasonably believes he or she has been recommended, even if it turns out that the belief was mistaken [see Hildebrand v. State Bar (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 816, 822, 117 P.2d 860 (doctor in hospital recommended attorney when asked by patients; attorney visited patients at physician's request; attorney held not to have improperly solicited patients even though patients testified that they had not requested that attorney visit them)].

It is improper for an attorney to compensate a nonlawyer by giving, or promising to give, anything of value in exchange for referring legal business to the attorney or to the attorney's firm [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(B); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1983-75 (attorney may not ethically mail letter to all real estate brokers in area, encouraging them to refer potential clients to attorney by offering discount on legal fees for clients so referred)]. An attorney is not prohibited, however, from offering or giving a gift or gratuity to a person or entity that has made a recommendation resulting in employment of the attorney or the attorney's firm, if the gift or gratuity was not given in consideration of an agreement or understanding that such a gift would be made or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(B)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Single Gift or Gratuity Permitted. The Rules of Professional Conduct apparently would permit an attorney to give a gift or gratuity on a one-time basis following a referral. However, a pattern of gifts or gratuities to a single referring party could be viewed by the State Bar as circumstantial evidence of an impermissible agreement or understanding concerning future gifts or referrals.

[2] By Attorneys or Attorney Referral Services

It is common practice for attorneys to refer potential clients to other attorneys, and the Rules of Professional Conduct contain no provision prohibiting acceptance of employment based on such referrals. In many cases, the attorney may have a duty to refer a client to another attorney if the first attorney does not have the experience, skills, or time to handle the particular matter competently [see Lewis v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 683, 687-688, 170 Cal. Rptr. 634, 621 P.2d 258 ; Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(A), (B)]. An attorney may enter into a fee-splitting agreement with the referring attorney if the attorneys comply with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(A) [for discussion, see § 72.199[2]]. Except for fee division agreements permitted by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 or sale or purchase of a law practice permitted by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-300, an attorney may not give or promise anything of value to another attorney for the purpose of obtaining a recommendation or securing employment of the first attorney or his or her firm by a client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(B)]. An attorney, however, is not prohibited from offering or giving a gift or gratuity to another attorney who has made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the attorney or the attorney's firm if the gift or gratuity was not given in consideration of an agreement or with the understanding that such a gift would be made or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200(B)].

An attorney's participation in a referral service that is established, sponsored, supervised, and operated in conformity with the Minimum Standards for a Lawyer Referral Service adopted by the Board of Governors of the State Bar is also permitted and encouraged and does not, of itself, violate the Rules of Professional Conduct [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-600, Drafter's Notes; for discussion of fee splitting with referral services, see § 72.199[4]]. Such officially sanctioned referral services should be distinguished, however, from private, profit-making services, which are not sanctioned by the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Selten v. Hyon (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 463, 468-469, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 896] . Any advertisement created or disseminated by a lawyer referral service must disclose whether the attorneys on the organization's referral list paid any consideration, other than a proportional share of actual cost, to be included on that list [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.4].

PRACTICE TIP:

Inference of Rule Violation. As with gifts or gratuities to laypersons under Rule 1-320(B), an attorney must exercise caution when giving more than one gift or gratuity to any attorney. Multiple gifts or gratuities may raise an inference that the attorney provided the gifts or gratuities in consideration of an agreement or pursuant to an understanding regarding future referrals.

[3] Solicitation Made to Another Attorney

The State Bar Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has issued an advisory opinion that an attorney may recommend himself or herself to another attorney for legal employment, notwithstanding Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101 [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1981-61]. Such a solicitation is permitted regardless of whether the purpose is to obtain a client of the second attorney or to obtain the second attorney as a client [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1981-61]. The committee reasoned that attorneys, unlike the general public, have superior knowledge regarding the law and other resources to allow them to evaluate an attorney's recommendation effectively. Furthermore, fellow attorneys are less likely to be susceptible to the undue influence, deception, and other dangers that may result from solicitations made to members of the general public. Finally, uninhibited communication between attorneys is worth preserving because it is the most efficient way to foster appropriate association, consultation, and referrals [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1981-61].

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, the successor of former Rule 2-101, generally prohibits in-person solicitation made for pecuniary gain, unless such solicitation is protected under the California or United States Constitutions or the prospective client is one with whom the lawyer has a family or prior professional relationship [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B), (C)]. The rule does not provide an exception when the solicited party is an attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400]. It remains to be seen whether the State Bar Court or the Supreme Court will follow the Standing Committee's advisory opinion allowing attorneys to solicit other attorneys.

PRACTICE TIP:

Possible Constitutional Protection for Solicitation Directed at Attorney. It appears that the United States Supreme Court would take a position in accord with the Standing Committee's advisory opinion allowing attorneys to solicit other attorneys. In Edenfield v. Fane, the Court ruled that certified public accountants, in the business context, could not constitutionally be prohibited from soliciting because of the relatively high level of sophistication of their clients [see Edenfield v. Fane (1993) 507 U.S. 761, 113 S. Ct. 1792, 123 L. Ed 2d 543, 558-559] . It seems to follow from Edenfield that an attorney's solicitation of other attorneys would be constitutionally protected and thus not prohibited by Rule 1-400.

[4] Group Legal Service Programs

State Bar members are prohibited from participating in a nongovernmental program, activity, or organization furnishing, recommending, or paying for legal services if the entity does any of the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-600(A)]:

- Allows a third person or organization to interfere with the attorney's independence of professional judgment, or with the client-lawyer relationship;

- Allows unlicensed persons to practice law;

- Allows any third person or organization to receive directly or indirectly any part of the consideration paid to the attorney except as permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 1-320(A), 2-200(A) (restrictions on splitting legal fees)]; or

- Violates the State Bar Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.) or the Rules of Professional Conduct.

For example, a lawyer who permits a nonlawyer who markets living trust packages to represent to the public that the lawyer will prepare the documents, but allows the marketer to interfere with the lawyer's ability to exercise independent judgment regarding the type of estate plan involved and other matters, acts unethically [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1997-148].

These prohibitions are not intended to override any contractual agreement or relationship between insurers and insured regarding the provision of legal services [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-600, Drafter's Notes]. Nor are these prohibitions intended to apply to the activities of a public agency responsible for providing legal services to a government or to the public [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-600, Drafter's Notes].

[5] Public Defenders and Appointed Counsel

The statutory rules against unlawful solicitation do not prohibit a public defender or assigned counsel from making known his or her services as a criminal defense attorney to an indigent defendant, whether or not the defendant is in custody [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6152(d); see In re Brindle (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 660, 682, 154 Cal. Rptr. 563] . Nevertheless, a public defender does not have a broad right to consult, unrequested, with all persons held under investigation in a jail or detention facility. A public defender may merely make known his or her presence; the detained person then has the right to decide whether or not to consult with the attorney [In re Brindle (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 660, 677, 154 Cal. Rptr. 563] .

It is not unlawful solicitation for an attorney to submit a contract bid to represent indigent defendants in counties without a public defender, at least when the idea to offer legal services on a contract basis originated with the county and not with the attorney [see Phillips v. Seely (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 104, 118, 117 Cal. Rptr. 863] .

§ 72.250 Sanctions for Violations of Solicitation Rules

[1] Criminal Penalties

Any person, firm, partnership, association, or corporation violating the statutory prohibition on solicitation through runners or cappers may be punished, on a first conviction, by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year, or by a fine not exceeding $15,000, or both. For a second or subsequent conviction, a person, firm, partnership, association, or corporation is punishable by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year, a state jail for two, three or four years, or by a fine not exceeding $15,000, or by both that imprisonment and fine [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6153]. If the violator is employed by the state or a local public entity, the violator also forfeits his or her job [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6153].

[2] Disciplinary Action

The State Bar has the power to discipline an attorney for willfully violating the Rules of Professional Conduct, by public or private reproval or by recommending suspension for no more than three years [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-100(A)]. The State Bar may also recommend that suspension or disbarment be ordered by the California Supreme Court if the attorney's acts violate the attorney's oath or duties, involve moral turpitude, dishonesty, or corruption, or lead to a conviction of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6078, 6101-6103, 6106]. For a detailed discussion of disciplinary proceedings, see Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline .

It has not been decided whether a conviction under Bus. and Prof. Code §§ 6152(a) and 6153 (discussed under § 72.247[2][a]), prohibiting attorneys from soliciting business through the use of runners and cappers, involves moral turpitude [see Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 865-866, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323 (implying conviction for solicitation involves moral turpitude)]. One court has found, however, that a guilty plea to a solicitation charge constitutes a violation of the attorney's oath and duties, and a knowing violation of the oath and duties generally is an act involving moral turpitude [Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 865-866, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323] . In addition, an attorney's conduct in misleading a runner or capper by stating that solicitation was not illegal has been held to be an act involving moral turpitude [Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 866, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323] .

The California Supreme Court has not rendered any written opinions regarding appropriate sanctions for violations of the solicitation provisions of the current Rules of Professional Conduct. Under former versions of the Rules, which were more restrictive than the current rules, discipline for solicitation violations in reported cases usually consisted of suspension [see, e.g., Urbano v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 16, 20-21, 136 Cal. Rptr. 572, 560 P.2d 1 ; Geffen v. State Bar (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 843, 856, 122 Cal. Rptr. 865, 537 P.2d 1225] . The terms ranged from three months [Ewell v. State Bar (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 209, 220, 40 P.2d 264] to two years [Rose v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 646, 667-668, 262 Cal. Rptr. 702, 779 P.2d 761 (two-year actual suspension); In re Arnoff (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 740, 748, 150 Cal. Rptr. 479, 586 P.2d 960] . The higher term was imposed when other violations of the rules were also involved [see Rose v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 646, 666, 262 Cal. Rptr. 702, 779 P.2d 761 (other violations included willful failure to communicate with clients, willful failure to provide services, and improper business dealings with a client); In re Arnoff (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 740, 748, 150 Cal. Rptr. 479, 586 P.2d 960 (other violations included fee splitting with nonlawyer and knowing use of fraudulent medical reports)].

Disbarment proceedings have been instituted when the solicitation was coupled with other acts involving moral turpitude [see Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 866-867, 153 Cal. Rptr. 836, 592 P.2d 323] , such as giving false testimony under oath to the State Bar during an investigation [Waterman v. State Bar (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 224, 227-228, 93 P.2d 95.] or making false statements to a judge [Best v. State Bar (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 633, 638-639, 21 Cal. Rptr. 589, 371 P.2d 325] , or with previous disciplinary action [Best v. State Bar (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 633, 638-639, 21 Cal. Rptr. 589, 371 P.2d 325 ; Waterman v. State Bar (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 224, 226, 228, 93 P.2d 95] . Also, a large number of solicitations, indicating a continuing course of misconduct, may warrant disbarment [Kitsis v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 857, 866-867].

The Board of Governors of the State Bar has promulgated Standards for Attorney Sanctions for Professional Misconduct, which are intended to help achieve greater consistency in disciplinary sanctions for similar offenses [Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Introduction]. The Standards provide that a State Bar member who violates Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6151-6153 shall be suspended or disbarred, depending on the gravity of the offense or harm, if any, to the victim, to the extent consistent with the purposes of the disciplinary proceedings [Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 2.6(f); see Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 1.3 (setting forth purposes of imposing discipline)]. Absent compelling mitigating circumstances, disbarment must be imposed if the member is convicted in a criminal proceeding and the crime is found to involve moral turpitude [Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 3.2]. No specific standard is provided for violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, relating to advertising and solicitation.

By statute, any contract for legal services obtained through the illegal solicitation activities of a runner or capper is void [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6154]. The contract between an attorney and his or her runners and cappers is also void [Alpers v. Hunt (1890) 86 Cal. 78, 84, 90, 24 P. 846] . For discussion of the enforcement of fee agreements, see § 72.430 et seq.

In any action against any attorney or law firm under the Unfair Practices Act, Chapter 4 of Division 7 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) or Chapter 5 of Division 7 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.), any judgment must include an order divesting the attorney or law firm of any fees and other compensation received pursuant to a contract for legal services obtained through the services of a runner or capper. Those fees and compensation will be recoverable as additional civil penalties under the Unfair Practices Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6154(a)]. For discussion of the Unfair Practices Act, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.10 et seq.

[1] General Rule Against Blanket Prohibition of Advertising

In Bates v. State Bar of Arizona, the United States Supreme Court declared that attorneys enjoy a limited constitutional right to advertise their professional services [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . The Court held that a state, through its state bar association, could not prohibit an attorney's truthful advertisement regarding the availability and terms of routine legal services [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; see Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 624, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183] . The Court also held that the possibility of various abuses by attorneys in specific instances did not constitutionally justify a blanket suppression of all attorney advertising [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 366-379, 383, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

The challenged disciplinary rule in Bates was similar to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-102(B) (set forth at 14 Cal. 3d 2-3 (1975)) , which was in effect from 1975 to 1979. The disciplinary rule prohibited an attorney from publicizing himself or herself, through various media, as an attorney except in a few limited circumstances, such as political advertisements and legal documents prepared by the attorney [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 355, 355 n.5, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

California statute expressly provides that Article 9.5 of the Business and Professions Code (Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157 et seq.), regulating legal advertisi 14 Cal. 3d 2-3 (1975)) Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 355, 355 n.5, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157 et seq.ng, does not limit the right of advertising under the California or United States Constitution. Provisions that are found to violate either Constitution are severable, and the remaining provisions are enforceable without the severed provision [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159.2(b)].

[2] Permissible Restrictions on Advertising

[a] False, Deceptive, Misleading Advertising

The right of advertising does not extend to false, deceptive, and misleading advertising [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 383, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 624-625, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(1)-(3) (prohibiting false, deceptive, or misleading communications by attorneys; discussed under § 72.244[3] and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.1 discussed under § 72.592[4][a])]. Claims regarding the quality of legal services are a type of advertisement that will most likely be considered misleading [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 383-384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 (dictum); for discussion of permissible regulations on advertising claims regarding quality of service, see § 72.254[6]].

To protect the public from misleading advertising, some regulations may be necessary; for example, warnings or disclaimers may be required in legal advertisements [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . Any disclosure requirements, however, must be reasonably related to the state's interest in preventing deception of consumers [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 651, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] .

Supreme Court cases subsequent to Bates have reaffirmed that truthful advertising related to lawful activities enjoys protection under U.S. Const., amend. I, as commercial speech [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 203, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . Restrictions on such advertisements are permissible, however, if the advertising is inherently misleading or has proven to be misleading in practice, but restrictions may be no broader than reasonably necessary to prevent possible deception. Potentially misleading information cannot be completely banned if it can be presented in a nondeceptive manner [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 206-207, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64 ; see Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel(1985) 471 U.S. 626, 644-646, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315 (blanket prohibition of all advertising is not justified by argument that some advertising may be deceptive and prohibition against only deceptive advertising would be difficult to enforce; distinguishing between deceptive and nondeceptive advertising is no more difficult in cases of attorneys' advertising than in other types of commercial advertising)]. Nevertheless, a blanket prohibition on purely misleading advertising is permissible [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 203, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . Attorney advertisements that are not misleading may also be subjected to some regulations, but the regulations must be necessary to further substantial state interests and must be narrowly drawn [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 203, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] .

Applying these principles, the California Supreme Court has held that the provisions in the Rules of Professional Conduct prohibiting, among other things, advertisements that contain false, confusing, misleading, or deceptive statements are a constitutionally permissible regulation of misleading advertisements [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 626, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101)].

[b] Time, Place, and Manner Restrictions

Reasonable restrictions on the time, place, and manner of attorney advertising are also permissible. Advertisements that concern illegal transactions may be prohibited [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . Additional regulations concerning advertisements on electronic broadcast media may also be required in the future [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

§ 72.252 Types of Advertising Prohibited

Article 9.5 of the Business and Professions Code (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157-6159.2) regulates legal advertising; however, it does not preempt enforcement of other provisions of the law, any court rule, or the Rules of Professional Conduct [Bus. & Prof. § 6159.2(a)]. Any person found by a court to violate these Business and Professions Code provisions must be reported to the appropriate professional licensing agency for review and possible disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159].

Legal advertising as defined by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157(b) (§ 72.242[3]), which is not paid for by the attorney soliciting business, must disclose the business relationship, past or present, between the attorney and the person paying for the advertisement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.3]. Legal advertising is prohibited if it contains any false, misleading, or deceptive statement; or omits any fact that makes an advertisement false, misleading, or deceptive [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.1]. In addition, no legal advertisement shall contain:

- Any guarantee or warranty regarding the outcome of a legal matter [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(a)]; or

- Statements or symbols stating that an attorney featured in the advertisement can generally obtain immediate cash or quick settlements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(b)].

A dramatization of events, or an impersonation of the name, voice, photograph, or electronic image of any person purporting to be that of the attorney or a client also is prohibited unless the advertisement discloses that it contains an impersonation or dramatization [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(c)(1), (2); see Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 13]. A spokesperson may be used, so long as there is no direct or implicit suggestion that the spokesperson is the advertising attorney, and the spokesperson's title is disclosed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(c)(3)].

An advertisement refering to representation on a contingent basis must contain a statement that advises whether a client is responsible for any costs advanced by the attorney when no recovery is obtained [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(d); see Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 14].

For additional restrictions on advertising, see § 72.245].

§ 72.253 Form of Advertisement

[1] No Restriction of Medium

The Rules of Professional Conduct do not restrict attorneys' advertising to any particular form or medium. The rules do, however, provide that a communication may not present or arrange any matter in a manner or format that is false or deceptive or that tends to confuse, deceive, or mislead the public [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(2)].

[2] Visual Media

The United States Supreme Court has held that visual media of expression in advertisements are entitled to the same constitutional protection as verbal or written expressions [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . Consequently, illustrations and pictures may not constitutionally be prohibited in attorney advertising as long as they are not inaccurate or misleading [see Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647-649, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . For example, the Court held that an accurate and nondeceptive illustration of the Dalkon Shield intrauterine device in an advertisement informing the public of an attorney's availability to represent plaintiffs in actions against the manufacturer of the device was constitutionally protected, and the State of Ohio therefore could not subject the attorney who placed the advertisement to disciplinary action [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647-649, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] .

[3] Electronic Media

[a] Prohibition Against False, Misleading, or Deceptive Advertising

To comply with the prohibition against false, misleading, or deceptive statements [see § 72.251[2]], an advertisement in the electronic media may not, taken as a whole, be false, misleading, or deceptive, and the message as a whole must be factually substantiated [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158]. For this purpose, "electonic media" includes television, radio, and computer networks [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157(d)].

The "message" subject to this regulation includes the combination, of the spoken word, sound, background, action, symbols, visual image, or any other technique employed to create the message. The message is "factually substantiated" when it is capable of verification by a credible source [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158].

[b] Rebuttable Presumption That Message Is False, Misleading or Deceptive

There is a rebuttable presumption that the following messages are false, misleading, or deceptive, which affects the attorney's burden of producing evidence [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158.1]:

- A message as to the ultimate result of a specific case (or cases) presented out of context, without adequately providing information as to the facts or law giving rise to the result.

- The depiction of an event through methods such as the use of displays of injuries, accident scenes, or portrayals of other injurious events that may or may not be accompanied by sound effects and that may give rise to a claim for compensation.

- A message referring to or implying money received by or for a client in a particular case (or cases), or to potential monetary recovery for a prospective client.

- A reference to money or monetary recovery includes, but is not limited to, a specific dollar amount, characterization of a sum of money, monetary symbols, or the implication of wealth.

[c] Presumption That Information Is Not False, Misleading or Deceptive

The following information is presumed not to be misleading or deceptive when presented in electronic media advertising [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158.2]:

- The attorney's fields of practice

- Fees for routine legal services

- Schools attended

- Legal authorship

- Technical or professional licenses

- Foreign language ability of the attorney or member of the attorney's firm.

[d] Required Disclosures

One of the following disclosures must appear in electronic media advertising that conveys a message portraying a result in a particular case (or cases) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158.3]:

- The advertisement must adequately disclose the factual and legal circumstances justifying the result portrayed in the message, including the basis for liability and the nature of the injury or damage sustained; or

- The advertisement must state that the result portrayed was dependent on the facts of that case, and that the results will differ if based on different facts.

[e] Remedies For Violations

Any person claiming a violation of these provisions may file a complaint with the State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158.4(a)]. A civil enforcement action may also be brought by any California resident for an amount up to $5,000 for each individual broadcast that violates these provisions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6158.4(e)].

[4] Unsolicited Mailings

Attorneys' advertising in the form of unsolicited mass mailings to nonclients is constitutionally protected, provided that the content of the mailing is not misleading or otherwise improper [see In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 206, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64 ; Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 383-384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; Adams v. Attorney Registration & Disciplinary Com'n (7th Cir. 1986) 801 F.2d 968, 971-974 ; Bar Ass'n of San Francisco Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1979-1; cf. Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (noting generally that attorney advertising by mail is subject to constitutional protection, but holding that unsolicited mass mailings in that particular case were misleading and involved intrusion, threats, intimidation, harassment, or duress and therefore violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101(A)); Best Buy Stores, L.P. v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 772, 776-777, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 (discovery to permit class representative to obtain substitute plaintiff did not constitute solicitation); see also LACBA Formal Opinion No. 494 (1998) (attorney's unsolicited mailing of recent legal developments bulletins not regulated "communication" under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, where attorney does not communicate message or offer concerning availability for professional employment in practice of law)]. The fact that the mailing is targeted to a particular audience and mailed only to persons likely to have a particular legal problem does not diminish its constitutional protection [see Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S.466, 473-474, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d. 475 ; Adams v. Attorney Registration & Disciplinary Com'n (7th Cir. 1986) 801 F.2d 968, 973 ; Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 639-647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315 ; see also § 72.254[7]].

The United States Supreme Court has stated that attorneys may be constitutionally required to file a copy of a mass mailing with the State Bar or to include the statement, "This is an advertisement," on the envelope [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 206, 206 n.20, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . The Rules of Professional Conduct do not require that attorneys' mailings be filed. The rules do, however, require that the attorney retain a copy of any advertisement for two years and make a copy available to the State Bar on request [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(F); see § 72.243]. Also, the standards under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E) establish a presumpiton that mailings violate the rule unless they are labeled as advertisements [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 5; see § 72.245].

[1] Basic Factual and Biographical Information

An attorney may advertise basic factual and biographical information about the legal services offered [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 366-367, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. Disclosure of an attorney's name, address, and telephone numbers has historically been permitted [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rules 2(b) (effective 1928-1975), 2-103(A) (effective 1975-1979)]. The Bates decision indicated that this information plus "office hours, and the like," is constitutionally protected [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 366, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

The advertisement of relevant biographical information about an attorney is also protected, provided that such information is not misleading [see In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 205-206, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64 ; Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 366-367, 367 n.18, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810 ; State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. An attorney's qualifications, including biographical information, are necessary information for helping the public make an informed choice about legal counsel [see State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. Relevant biographical information may include schools attended, public offices held, and memberships in legal associations [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 367 n.18, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

[2] Name of Firm

Under the Rules of Professional Conduct, use of a firm name is subject to restrictions. Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A), defining "communications," states that any use of a firm name, trade name, fictitious name, or other professional designation of a State Bar member or law firm is a "communication" for purposes of the rule [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A)(1)]. Therefore, uses of a firm name may not violate the restrictions on communications set forth in Rule 1-400(D) [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A), (D); see also discussion in § 72.244]. The names that may be used by law corporations are subject to additional restrictions [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6171(c); Cal. State B. Law Corp. Rules, Rule IV(A)(5)]. When a communication is on behalf of a law firm, the communication must identify the name of at least one member of the State Bar responsible for it [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 12].

Three types of firm name uses are presumed to violate the rule governing solicitation and advertising [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E) (discussed under § 72.245)]:

- Uses that state or imply a relationship between any State Bar member in private practice and a government agency or instrumentality or a public or nonprofit legal services organization [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 6];

- Uses that state or imply that a State Bar member has a relationship to any other State Bar member, or to a law firm as a partner or associate or as officer or shareholder pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6160 et seq., unless the relationship in fact exists [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 7; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6160 et seq. (licensing and regulation of law corporations)]; and

- Uses by a State Bar member or law firm in private practice that differ materially from any other such designation used by such State Bar member or law firm at the same time in the same community [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 9].

When used in an advertisement, the name may not be false or misleading [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(1), (2); State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-66 (decided under former rule 2-101]. The State Bar Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has suggested that the following factors may be useful in determining whether a firm name is misleading [Cal. State Bar Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct, Formal Opinion No. 1982-66]:

- Whether the name implies that the firm is publicly supported;

- Whether the name is deceptive with respect to the identity of the attorney actually performing the legal services;

- Whether the name is deceptive regarding the types of services offered.

The term "Legal Clinic" as part of a firm name has been found not to be misleading [Jacoby v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 359, 366-367, 138 Cal. Rptr. 77, 562 P.2d 1326 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2 (effective 1928-1975))]. The practice of retaining the name of deceased or retired members of the firm in the firm name is permissible, as long as it is not misleading [see Crawford v. State Bar (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 659, 666, 7 Cal. Rptr. 746, 355 P.2d 490] .

Attorneys sharing space, services, facilities or staff without forming a law firm must ensure that in any communications, the public is not confused, deceived or misled that there is any law firm, partnership, corporate, "of counsel" or other relationship when no such relationship exists, such as by using separate business cards and letterhead or some other clear identification of separate practices [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-150].

[3] Jurisdiction Admitted to Practice

An attorney may advertise the jurisdictions in which he or she is admitted to practice. This information is not per se misleading and may be relevant to potential clients, particularly if an attorney practices in a geographical area located close to another jurisdiction [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 205-206, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64 ; State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67].

A statement that an attorney is admitted to the bar of the United States Supreme Court has been termed "at least bad taste," although the statement was not held to be misleading in the circumstances of the particular case [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 205-206, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . The Court has stated that this information has the potential for being misleading because the public is not generally aware of the requirements for admission to that bar [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 205, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] .

[4] Areas of Practice and Specialization

An attorney is entitled to state in advertisements the areas of law in which he or she practices. A state bar cannot constitutionally require that an attorney use only certain words to identify the fields of law in question; a listing of areas of practice is not per se misleading [In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 205, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] .

Regarding specialization, a communication is presumed to be in violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, if it states or implies that a member is a "certified specialist" unless the communication also states the complete name of the entity that granted the certification as a specialist [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 11]. Although the use of the words "certified specialist" isrestricted, the State Bar Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has indicated in an advisory opinion that the terms "specialist" and "specializing in" are generally permissible [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. Such terms could be misleading, however, if used in conjunction with an area of law in which Board certification is available [see State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. The words "practice limited to" and "experience in" are also apparently permissible [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67].

States may not impose blanket prohibitions on designations of specialty in attorney advertising [Peel v. Attorney Reg. & Disciplinary Com'n (1990) 496 U.S. 91, 110-111, 110 S. Ct. 2281, 110 L. Ed. 2d 83] . When the United States Supreme Court was called on to decide whether a member of the Illinois State Bar could be prohibited from using on his professional letterhead the words, "Certified Civil Trial Specialist by the National Board of Trial Advocacy," under an Illinois rule prohibiting an attorney from holding himself or herself out as "certified" or as a "specialist," the Court held that the attorney's letterhead was neither actually nor inherently misleading, and that the letterhead was protected commercial speech under U.S. Const., amend. I [Peel v. Attorney Reg. & Disciplinary Com'n (1990) 496 U.S. 91, 98, 110-111, 110 S. Ct. 2281, 110 L. Ed. 2d 83] . The Court noted that the state rule was broader than reasonably necessary to prevent the perceived evil of misleading the public [Peel v. Attorney Reg. & Disciplinary Com'n (1990) 496 U.S. 91, 107, 110 S. Ct. 2281, 110 L. Ed. 2d 83] . The Court stated that, to the extent that potentially misleading statements of private certification or specialization could confuse consumers, a state might consider screening certifying organizations or requiring a disclaimer about the certifying organization or the standards of a specialty [Peel v. Attorney Reg. & Disciplinary Com'n (1990) 496 U.S. 91, 110, 110 S. Ct. 2281, 110 L. Ed. 2d 83] .

An attorney who chooses to advertise that he or she has special knowledge or experience in a particular field of law will be held to the standard of care of a specialist in that field [see Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . For discussion of the standard of care, see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

[5] Price for Routine Services

A state cannot constitutionally prohibit an attorney from advertising the price charged for routine legal services [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 372-373, 384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . "Routine" legal services include matters such as uncontested divorces, simple adoptions, uncontested personal bankruptcies, and name changes [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 372, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . The state may, however, define specifically what services can and must be included in an advertisement for routine legal services [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 373 ; see In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 200 n.11, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64] . Failure to adhere to advertised fees is a presumed violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400 [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 16; for discussion, see § 72.245

]. The State Bar Standing Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has advised that an attorney clearly define the services that are included in an advertisement and add disclaimers regarding any limitation on the quoted price [see State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1982-67]. Failure to include such information could possibly result in a violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(3), requiring that an advertisement include any facts necessary to prevent the advertisement from being misleading.

Disclosure of the cost of an initial consultation and credit arrangements for payment are also protected [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 367, 372 n.26, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

The United States Supreme Court has held that a state may constitutionally require an attorney advertising services on a contingency fee basis to include a statement that the client may be liable for costs even if the lawsuit is unsuccessful [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 652, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . The standards establishing presumed violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400 require any communication that states or implies "no fee without recovery" to expressly disclose whether or not the client will be liable for costs [Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Std. 14; see § 72.245].

[6] Quality of Services and Other Subjective Claims

The United States Supreme Court has indicated in dictum that advertising claims concerning the quality of legal services offered can constitutionally be prohibited [see Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 383-384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] . The main objection to claims of quality is that they are not capable of measurement or verification; hence, their potential for misleading the public is great [Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 383-384, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810] .

The provisions of the State Bar Act regulating legal advertising prohibit statements or symbols stating that an attorney featured in the advertisement can generally obtain immediate cash or quick settlements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(b)]. In addition, advertisements or communications that contain guarantees, warranties, or predictions about the result of any legal action and testimonials about, or endorsements of, an attorney made without an express disclaimer is prohibited [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6157.2(a); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E); Standards for Presumed Violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400, Stds. 1, 2 discussed under § 72.245].

[7] Advertisements Containing Legal Advice or Directed at Particular Potential Clients

[a] Constitutionally Protected

A state may not constitutionally prohibit an advertisement containing truthful and nondeceptive information and advice regarding the legal rights of potential clients [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . Thus, an attorney may not be disciplined for soliciting legal business by placing an advertisement geared toward people with a specific legal problem and containing advice about that legal problem. For example, an advertisement reporting that the Dalkon Shield intrauterine device has led to numerous lawsuits and indicating that the attorney placing the advertisement is available to represent women with similar legal claims is constitutionally protected [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 639-647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] .

The challenged disciplinary rules in the Dalkon Shield advertisement case prohibited self-recommendation and acceptance of employment resulting from unsolicited advice [see Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 633, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . The Court held that the challenged rule as applied to the advertisements in that case violated U.S. Const., amend. I, under the commercial speech doctrine because the advertisements were not deceptive and did not present any dangers of undue influence or overreaching [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 642, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] .

Furthermore, the Court rejected the state's arguments that a broad prophylactic rule barring all advertisements containing legal advice was necessary to guard against the possibility that some advertisements might be misleading. The Court reasoned that it is no more difficult to ferret out actually misleading ads relating to legal services than it is to regulate misleading ads relating to other types of services or goods [Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 643-647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] . The Court thus concluded that the state had failed to demonstrate that the rules directly advanced a substantial government interest, as is necessary to support a restriction of advertising under U.S. Const., amend. I [see Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 641-642, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315] .

[b] By Mass Mailing

Mass mailings of form letters directed at particular types of potential clients are constitutionally protected unless the letters are actually misleading or deceptive [Adams v. Attorney Registration & Disciplinary Com'n (7th Cir. 1986) 801 F.2d 968, 973-974] .

The United States Supreme Court has held that a blanket prohibition on targeted, direct-mail solicitation by lawyers for pecuniary gain isunconstitutional under U.S. Const., amend. I [Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 472-478, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475] . In this case, an attorney sought permission from the Kentucky Attorneys Advertising Commission to send a letter to potential clients who faced foreclosures on their homes, inviting these potential clients to call him for free information on how they could keep their homes. The Commission could find nothing in the letter that was false or misleading, but nevertheless denied the attorney's request on the ground that a Kentucky Supreme Court rule prohibited the mailing. The rule in question prohibited targeted, direct-mail solicitation by lawyers for pecuniary gain, without a particularized finding that the solicitation is false or misleading. The United States Supreme Court found that Kentucky's unconditional prohibition on direct-mail solicitation violated U.S. Const., amend. I, noting that targeted solicitation by mail does not involve the same danger of overreaching and undue influence as in-person targeted solicitation [Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 475, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475] . The Court acknowledged that targeted, direct-mail solicitation might present lawyers with opportunities for isolated abuses or mistakes. This possibility of such opportunities, however, would not justify a total ban on that mode of protected commercial speech. The Court commented that states can regulate abuses and minimize mistakes in direct-mail advertising through far less restrictive and more precise means. For example, states may require lawyers to file solicitation letters with a state agency [Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Ass'n. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 476, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475] .

[c] Letters to Particular Potential Client Regarding Specific Case

The cases discussed under § 72.254[7][a] and [b] make it clear that attorneys can solicit employment by mailing advertisements in the form of letters to groups of potential clients containing truthful and nondeceptive information and advice concerning the potential clients' legal rights. It should be noted, however, that, in these cases, the communications, although directed at groups of people who might have particular types of legal problems, did not attempt to address the specifics of any particular potential client's rights regarding a particular case. The United States Supreme Court has not expressly addressed the issue of the constitutionality of restrictions regarding letters directed at a particular potential client regarding a specific case. Thus, it is not clear whether such letters would be regarded as akin to in-person solicitation, which, the Court has held, may constitutionally be prohibited in most situations (as discussed in § 72.246[1]) or as a form of constitutionally protected targeted advertising. The State Bar Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct has issued an opinion that it is ethically permissible for an attorney to solicit employment for pecuniary gain by means of a letter to a particular individual regarding a specific case involving that individual, provided that the letter is not false, deceptive, or misleading [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1988-105].

Assuming that letters regarding a particular case are entitled to some constitutional protection, the attorney must ensure that they are not misleading and that they clearly indicate that their purpose is to inform the client of the attorney's availability for professional employment [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(A)(4), (D)(2)-(4); see also discussion in § 72.244].

In one case, a law firm instituted a program of mailing informational letters to potential clients who had various types of legal proceedings pending against them, containing information about debt collection, asset protection, bankruptcy, and related topics. The letters were personalized and contained information relating to the status of the actions pending against them. The purpose of the letters was, in part, to encourage the recipients to hire the firm to represent them. The California Supreme Court held that one particularized unsolicited mailing involved in this case was misleading in that it implied that adverse judgments and consequent attachment of the recipients' personal assets were imminent [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 626-627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183] . Furthermore, the Court found that the mailing violated the provisions of Rules of Professional Conduct because the letter did not clearly indicate to laypersons that they were messages regarding the firm's availability for employment [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (construing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct., former Rule 2-101(A)(4), which was similar to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(4)]. Finally, although noting that transmission of commercial speech by mail appears to be entitled to some constitutional protection, the Court found that the particularized, misleading, and unsolicited letters involved in this case were bound to cause panic and fear in the lay recipients and therefore violated the rule prohibiting transmission in a manner involving intrusion, threats, intimidation, harassment, or duress [Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 627, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(D)(5); see also discussion under § 72.244[5]].

In another case, an attorney who was acting as both class counsel and the class representative sought precertification discovery to allow him to seek substitute class representatives. The trial court allowed him to send a notice to other customers who were charged a restocking fee for not providing an original box or carton at the time of returning an item, seeking a qualified class representative. The defendant challenged the discovery on the ground that it was an unlawful solicitation. The court of appeal upheld the discovery order, holding that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(B) did not cover the type of communication proposed here [Best Buy Stores, L.P. v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 772, 776-777, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575] .

[1] Constitutional Protection

The California Supreme Court has held that an attorney's participation in a news report and statements made to the news media concerning newsworthy topics are protected by U.S. Const., amend. I. Thus, the State Bar may not discipline an attorney for such participation, even though the news report may result in publicity for the attorney and may have the indirect result of attracting clients [Jacoby v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 359, 371-380, 138 Cal. Rptr. 77, 562 P.2d 1326] . Such statements and participation are not subject to the restrictions relating to advertising andsolicitation unless they serve no discernible purpose other than the attraction of clients; if a legitimate purpose appears on the face of a publication or in the demonstrated motivation of the attorney, the publication must receive at least prima facie protection under U.S. Const., amend. I [Jacoby v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 359, 371, 138 Cal. Rptr. 77, 562 P.2d 1326] .

In one case, two attorneys responded to news reporters' questions and held their own press conference about their new type of legal clinic and the pending disciplinary action against them [Jacoby v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 359, 363-365, 138 Cal. Rptr. 77, 562 P.2d 1326] . The Supreme Court found that the attorneys' statements, viewed in their entirety, were newsworthy and served a legitimate purpose of educating the public. Because they served this purpose, rather than one of primarily soliciting clients, the attorneys' statements were protected free speech [Jacoby v. State Bar (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 359, 371-374, 138 Cal. Rptr. 77, 562 P.2d 1326] .

In another case, certain acts of an attorney's personal publicity agent were found not to violate a former Rule of Professional Conduct prohibiting solicitation and advertising, whereas other acts were found to be violations [Belli v. State Bar (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 824, 841, 112 Cal. Rptr. 527, 519 P.2d 575 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2 (effective 1928-1975)]. The publicist's activities, directed primarily at obtaining lecture engagements for the attorney and publicizing the attorney's law seminars, were held to be permissible and protected by U.S. Const., amend. I. Because lectures and seminars by the attorney were protected free speech, advertisements concerning those activities were also held to be protected free speech [Belli v. State Bar (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 824, 836, 112 Cal. Rptr. 527, 519

P.2d 575] . Acts of the agent directed primarily at soliciting clients for the attorney's legal practice, however, were found to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct. These acts consisted of publicizing client testimonials and procuring a liquor company's endorsement for the attorney [Belli v. State Bar (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 824, 837-841, 112 Cal. Rptr. 527, 519 P.2d 575 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2 (1928-1975)]. It should be noted, however, that this case was decided before the United States Supreme Court decision in Va. Pharmacy Bd. v. Va. Consumer Council (1976) 425 U.S. 748, 770, 96 S. Ct. 1817, 48 L. Ed. 2d 346 , and its progeny, holding that even purely commercial speech is entitled to some protection under U.S. Const., amend. I. Thus, some of the reasoning used by the California Supreme Court in holding the publicity agent's acts improper may no longer apply.

[2] Improper Compensation for Publicity

The Rules of Professional Conduct forbid an attorney from compensating a member of the news media in exchange for publicity about the attorney, the attorney's firm, or even another attorney, in a news item [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(C)]. With the exception of giving incidental food and beverages, compensation includes giving, or promising to give, anything of value [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(C)]. The prohibition on compensation for publicity in the Rules of Professional Conduct is not intended to preclude compensation to the communications media in exchange for advertising the member's or law firm's availability for professional employment [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320, Drafter's Notes].

§ 72.256 Disciplinary Sanctions for Violations of Advertising Rules

The California State Bar has the power to take disciplinary action against attorneys for violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077; Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-100(A)]. Any person found by a court to violate the provisions of the State Bar Act regulating legal advertising (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6157-6159.2) must be reported to the appropriate professional licensing agency for review and possible disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6159].

Discipline may take the form of public or private reproval, or a recommendation of suspension for no more than three years [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077]. If an attorney's misconduct involves a violation of the oath or duties of an attorney or an act of moral turpitude, dishonesty, or corruption, the attorney may be suspended or disbarred by the California Supreme Court [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6103, 6106]. For discussion of disciplinary proceedings, see Ch. 70, Attorney Admission and Discipline .

In cases interpreting Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101, which prohibited similar types of advertising as the present Rule, the California Supreme Court imposed discipline ranging from public reprimand to disbarment [see Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 628, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183 (public reprimand); Ballard v. State Bar (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 274, 293, 197 Cal. Rptr. 556, 673 P.2d 226 (disbarment)]. Public reprimand was imposed when the firm was guilty of violating the provisions of former Rule 2-101 regarding misleading advertising, but had no previous disciplinary record and had made good faith efforts to modify its statements to make them truthful and not misleading [see Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 628, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183] . Disbarment was imposed in a case in which violations of former Rule 2-101 were combined with numerous other willful ethical violations [see Ballard v. State Bar (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 274, 278-280, 292-293, 197 Cal. Rptr. 556, 673 P.2d 226] .

Sanctions for violating earlier Rules of Professional Conduct on advertising, which were more restrictive than former Rule 2-101, included public censure [Millsberg v. State Bar (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 65, 75, 98 Cal. Rptr. 223, 490 P.2d 543] , suspensions ranging from one month [Belli v. State Bar (1974) 10 Cal. 3d 824, 841-842, 112 Cal. Rptr. 527, 519 P.2d 575] to three years [Johnson v. State Bar (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 744, 760, 52 P.2d 928] , and disbarment [Mayer v.

State Bar (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 71, 75, 39 P.2d 206] . Suspensions for longer periods of time were imposed in cases in which violations of other rules were also involved. For example, advertising plus charging an unconscionable fee [Bushman v. State Bar (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 558, 560-561, 564, 570, 113 Cal. Rptr. 904, 522 P.2d 312] and advertising coupled with pursuing meritless litigation contrary to clients' instructions [Johnson v. State Bar (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 744, 752, 759, 52 P.2d 928] have been held to warrant longer suspensions. Disbarment was imposed in a case in which the advertising also violated former Penal Code § 159a, which prohibited advertising to procure a divorce [Mayer v. State Bar (1934) 2 Cal. 2d 71, 73-74, 39 P.2d 206] .

The Standards for Attorney Sanctions for Professional Misconduct do not contain any specific standards for violations of the provisions of the Rules of Professional Conduct relating to advertising. If, however, an advertisement contains intentional misrepresentations, it could possibly be regarded as an act of fraud, for which the Standards provide for actual suspension or disbarment, depending on the extent of harm or deception caused to the victim, the magnitude of the misconduct, and the degree to which it relates to the attorney's law practice [see Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 2.3].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Duty To Represent Client Competently And Zealously
1. Duties Of Representation

§ 72.270 Duty of Competence

[1] Ethical Duty of Competence

An attorney must not intentionally, recklessly, or repeatedly fail to perform legal services competently [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(A)]. "Intent" is a willful violation referring to an intent to perform an act in violation of the rules, and does not require a specific intent to violate the California Rules of Professional Conduct [see In the Matter of Respondent G (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 181, 183]. To "perform legal services competently" means to apply the diligence, learning, and skill, and mental, emotional, and physical ability, reasonably necessary for the performance of legal services [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(B)].

Rule 3-110 may be violated, for example, when an attorney unexplainedly fails to appear at court hearings or fails to timely file a client's claim after providing the client with assurances that the claim is progressing [see Gary v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 820, 826-827, 244 Cal. Rptr. 482, 749 P.2d 1336 (decided under former Rule 6-101, now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110); see also In the Matter of Johnson (2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 179 ; In the Matter of Rodriguez (1993) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct.Rptr. 480, 482 ; In the Matter of Bach (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 631, 643]. In that case, the gravamen is not the failure to appear, but the lack of appearance coupled with misrepresentation regarding the status of the case.

If the lawyer does not have sufficient learning and skill when the legal service is undertaken, the attorney may nonetheless perform duties competently by doing either of the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(B)]:

- Associating with or, when appropriate, professionally consulting another attorney reasonably believed to be competent.
- Acquiring sufficient learning and skill before performance is required.

[2] Reckless Disregard or Gross Negligence

A finding of willfullness is not necessary for a violation of Cal Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110 [see, e.g., In the Matter of Respondent G (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 181, 183]. Under the "reckless disregard"standard, repeated inattention to the needs of the client is sufficient [see In the Matter of Respondent G (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 171, 178 ; In the Matter of Layton (1993) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 366, 377-378].

Reckless disregard encompasses concepts such as "gross negligence" [see Davis v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 231, 238, 188 Cal. Rptr. 441, 655 P.2d 1276] , "extreme neglect" [see Spindell v. State Bar (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 253, 259-260, 118 Cal. Rptr. 480, 530 P.2d 168] , "gross carelessness" [see Ridley v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 551, 560, 99 Cal. Rptr. 873, 493 P.2d 105] , and "habitual disregard" [see In the Matter of Hindin (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 657, 686], but not discrete acts amounting to simple negligence [see Call v. State Bar (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 104, 111, 287 P.2d 761 ; Friday v. State Bar (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 501, 505, 144 P.2d 564 (act committed due to mere ignorance does not constitute moral turpitude)].

With the inception of the State Bar Court and increasing civil liability for violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Mirabito v. Liccardo (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 41, 46, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571 (violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-100 does not create civil cause of action but can be utilized to establish breach of fiduciary duty in subsequent malpractice action)], matters that would have traditionally constituted simple malpractice (for example, missing a statute of limitations) [see, e.g., In the Matter of Bach (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 631, 643] are increasingly being investigated by the State Bar.

PRACTICE TIP:

Gross Negligence. For the State Bar Court to find gross negligence, the cases present scenarios involving lack of competence coupled with other reprehensible conduct, or repeated misconduct, usually involving misrepresentations concerning the filing of the suit or the status of the case.

[3] Nonmitigating Factors

The State Bar Court strictly applies the standards of competent performance, even in the presence of factors cited as mitigating by the disciplined attorney. For example, the following circumstances do not reduce the strict standards of competent performance required by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110:

- Heavy workload: A large volume of cases will not vitiate incompetent performance [Blair v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 762, 780, 263 Cal. Rptr. 641, 781 P.2d 933 ; Garlow v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 689, 711, 244 Cal. Rptr. 452, 749 P.2d 1307] .

- Attorney is not a specialist: If an attorney represents that he or she can perform competently with respect to a specific matter, the fact that he or she is not a specialist in the matter is not weighed in assessing competence [see Layton v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 889, 904-905, 268 Cal. Rptr. 845, 789 P.2d 1026 (attorney unsuccessfully argued that he was a family law attorney, not probate specialist, and thus should not be held to probate attorney's standard)].

- Attorney is acting in dual capacity: Attorneys are uniformly held to the requirements of the Rules of Professional Conduct regardless of what other capacity they may believe they are performing in (for example, as a real estate agent, collection agent, executor, etc.). Attorneys will be held to the Rules vis-a-vis their performance and cannot claim a lesser degree of competency due to the other activity. Lower standards for executors, for example, will not vitiate an attorney's duties or the requirement of competent performance [see Layton v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 889, 904, 268 Cal. Rptr. 845, 789 P.2d 1026 ; see also Crawford v. State Bar (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 659, 667, 7 Cal. Rptr. 746, 355 P.2d 490 (attorney must conform to professional standards when performing services that might lawfully have been performed by title companies, insurance companies, brokers, and other laypeople); Alkow v. State Bar (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 257, 263, 239 P.2d 871 (attorney acting as collection agency's representative must conform to professional standards)].

- Case taken on pro-bono basis: The fact that a lawyer takes a case on a pro-bono or quasi pro-bono basis is not a defense to the rule requiring attorney competence. Whether a fee is paid does not affect the standards of performance pursuant to the Rules [see Segal v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1077, 1084-1085, 245 Cal. Rptr. 404, 751 P.2d 463] .

- Attorney limits practice to residents of high-crime area: An attorney's continuing practice in a poverty-stricken area or a practice limited to residents of a high crime area does not justify incompetent representation or allow the attorney's clients to be subjected to lesser standards of legal representation [see Blair v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 762, 780, 263 Cal. Rptr. 641, 781 P.2d 933] .

[4] Other Standards of Competence Distinguished

[a] Professional Liability Standard in Civil Actions

An attorney, by accepting employment to give legal advice or to render other legal services, impliedly agrees to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as lawyers of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks that they undertake [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] . If an attorney breaches this duty to the client, the attorney may be liable for damages resulting from the breach, either in tort or breach of contract [Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406] . The standard of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence [see Evid. Code § 115].

For detailed discussion and forms, see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

[b] Attorney's Oath

The California Supreme Court has held that gross negligence or neglect and carelessness in the handling of client matters constitutes a violation of the attorney's oath pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077 to faithfully discharge the duties of an attorney to the best of his or her knowledge and ability [Black v. State Bar (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 676, 692, 103 Cal. Rptr. 288 ; Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 847, 857-859, 100 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; Moore v. State Bar (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 74, 81, 41 Cal. Rptr. 161] .

[5] Common Performance Problems

[a] Abandonment of Client Matters

The following examples illustrate instances of abandonment of client matters:

ILLUSTRATION:

Failure to Perform Services. On August 2, 1992, Landlord hires Attorney to take prompt action to evict a nonpaying tenant. Landlord gives Attorney $500 as an advance on attorney's fees. During the next three weeks, Landlord repeatedly calls attorney to ask about the case. Attorney takes no action on Landlord's behalf. On August 28, 1992, Landlord asks Attorney to return the advance on fees. Landlord prosecutes the unlawful detainer action on his own. Landlord complains to the State Bar when Attorney refuses to repay the $500. Has Attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110, by failing to perform the services for which attorney was retained? Yes. Attorney's reckless disregard is established by the client's repeated reminders that prompt action was required followed by lawyer's total failure to act [see In the Matter of Koehler (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 615, 629].

ILLUSTRATION: Failure to File Within Limitation Period. On January 5, 1992, Victim, an automobile accident victim, hires Attorney on a contingency basis to pursue Victim's personal injury claims. On December 30, 1991, Victim was riding as a passenger with her supervisor, who had consumed beer. They were returning from a business luncheon meeting to Megabucks, Inc., an office building in downtown Los Angeles. Another vehicle, driven by Wealthy Actor, rear-ended the car in which Supervisor and Victim were riding. In June 1992, Attorney receives x-rays and final medical reports from Victim's doctor showing the extent of Victim's soft tissue injuries and estimating that treatment will cost about $10,000. Victim telephones Attorney in March, June, August, and October 1992, asking about the status of her case. Each time Attorney tells her that the case is "progressing nicely." Megabucks' insurance company adjuster rejects a settlement offer made by Attorney in December 1992, and orally advises Attorney that the statute of limitations is about to run. Attorney fails to file the complaint on victim's behalf within the statute of limitations, and fails to pursue any other remedies on her behalf. Victim complains to the State Bar when she reviews the index of actions in Los Angeles and finds that no action has been filed on her behalf. Has Attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110(A)? Yes. Attorney failed to file the complaint within the statutory period, the time when performance would have been due. Attorney's reckless disregard is established by (1) the oral reminder of the insurance adjuster, (2) the receipt of the medical evidence that there was injury, and (3) the client's repeated reminders.

[b] Great Delay in Performing Client Matters

The following examples illustrate what may or may not constitute great delay in performing client matters:

ILLUSTRATION:

Failure to File Incorporation Papers. In January 1992, Group retains Attorney to incorporate Group and obtain status as a nonprofit religious organization. Attorney is paid $300. Attorney estimates that 60 to 90 days will be needed to perform the legal services. In May, June, and early September 1992, Group's representative writes letters to Attorney requesting evidence that the incorporation and nonprofit status had been accomplished. Attorney fails to respond. On September 14, 1992, Group demands a refund of its money. On September 12, 1992, the Secretary of State receives an incorporation document that it rejects because the articles of incorporation were not acknowledged and the fee payment was insufficient. In October 1992, the documents are resubmitted by Attorney and again rejected. In October 1992, Group hires subsequent counsel who promptly files the required documents with the Secretary of State. Has the attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110? Yes. Attorney failed to use due diligence in filing the papers necessary to obtain nonprofit status and incorporation on behalf of the client. The element of reckless disregard is established by Group's persistent reminders that they had not seen the incorporation documents and by Attorney's failure to perform following those reminders until September 1992.

ILLUSTRATION: No Delay if Complaint Filed Within Limitation Period. On January 5, 1990, Attorney is hired on a contingency basis to pursue the personal injury claims of Victim, who was injured in an automobile accident. On December 30, 1989, Victim was driving from a business luncheon meeting back to Supermedia Co.'s office building in west Los Angeles. Another vehicle, driven by Wealthy Producer, rear-ended Victim's car. Victim has only soft tissue injuries. Attorney files a complaint for Victim's personal injuries on December 29, 1990, naming all possible defendants and appropriately serves the complaint on all parties. Victim complains to the State Bar that Attorney delayed in the filing of the complaint. Has the attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110? No. Without more facts, Attorney has not violated Rule 3-110. Attorney filed the complaint within the statutory period, the time when performance would have been due.

A lawyer may make a strategic or tactical decision to delay. Nevertheless, an attorney violates his or her ethical duties if the delaying strategy is not explained to the client and the attorney presumes the goal the client is seeking to accomplish [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(m); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500; Calvert v. State Bar (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 765, 782, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 684, 819 P.2d 424 ; see also § 72.271[1]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect of Fast-Track Rules. Delay reduction or "fast track" programs providing expedited time frames for pretrial proceedings will, in many cases, result in a decrease in the time for performance that a court will consider as "timely" or "reasonably diligent."

[c] Failure to Properly Supervise Others

The duty to supervise includes support staff, office managers, and associate attorneys [see Gadda v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 344, 356, 267 Cal. Rptr. 114, 787 P.2d 95 (associate attorney); In the Matter of Whitehead (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 354, 368 (associate attorney); In the Matter of Bouyer (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 404, 414 (office staff); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1988-103 (duty to supervise paralegal); Bus. & Prof Code § 6452(b) (attorney using services of paralegal liable for any harm caused as result of paralegal's negligence, misconduct, or violation of paralegal duties found in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6450-6456)]. Although an attorney is not responsible for every event that takes place in the attorney's office, gross neglect in addressing office and staff problems of which the attorney is aware can amount to a failure to perform competently and lead to discipline of the attorney [see In the Matter of Hindin (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 657, 681-683]. The supervising attorney of a group of associates is considered responsible for the misconduct of his or her subordinates [see Gadda v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 344, 356, 267 Cal. Rptr. 114, 787 P.2d 95] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Properly Instruct Staff. The duty to maintain inviolate client confidences and secrets applies to paralegals, secretaries, and law clerks [see In re Complex Asbestos Litigation (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 572, 587-591, 283 Cal. Rptr. 732 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6452(b) (attorney using services of paralegal liable for any harm caused as result of paralegal's negligence, misconduct, or violation of paralegal duties found in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6450-6456)]. Good practice would mandate that this be explained and understood by staff.

The failure to supervise others is illustrated by the following examples:

ILLUSTRATION:

Insufficient Supervision of Associate. On January 5, 1990, Defendant retains Attorney to defend him in a civil action that had been served in December 1989. Attorney introduces Defendant to Associate, who will be handling much of the paperwork. In February 1990, Defendant meets with Associate and signs a piece of paper that "would enable Associate to proceed with the defense." In May 1990, Defendant learns from Plaintiff (who was representing himself in propria persona) that Plaintiff has obtained a default judgment against Defendant. Defendant immediately contacts Attorney, who then contacts Associate. Associate advises Attorney that he had prepared the answer but had failed to file it. Attorney instructs Associate and Secretary to prepare a motion for relief from default to be filed by the end of the week. In July 1990, Defendant receives a Notice for a Judgment Debtor's Examination to take place in August 1990. Defendant takes the Notice to Attorney, who tells him that he (Attorney) would take care of everything and that Defendant should not appear as noticed. Attorney then determines that Associate has still not filed the motion for relief, which he ordered Associate and the Secretary to do by the end of the week. At the end of August, Defendant receives a notice that a warrant has been issued for his arrest. Defendant complains about Attorney to the State Bar. Has Attorney violated his duties as an attorney? Yes. Since Attorney was retained by Defendant to perform legal services, Attorney bears responsibility for the proper delegation of the work and for proper supervision of Associate. When Attorney learned that Defendant's default had been taken, he was on notice that Associate had already failed to perform. His continued reliance on Associate without close supervision and follow-up was gross negligence, amounting to a breach of his oath as an attorney.

ILLUSTRATION: Improper Signatures and Recording of Funds. Attorney, who represented Wife in a dissolution action, obtains an order that Husband should pay $1,000 in attorney's fees to Attorney by May 1990. On January 2, 1990, Husband comes to Attorney's office and hands Attorney a $500 check, which is then cashed. Thereafter, Husband sends Attorney the remaining $500 in $125 increments every month. In July 1990, Attorney causes a writ of execution to be issued, accompanied by a declaration under penalty of perjury, purportedly signed by Attorney, stating that Husband has failed to pay $500 of the $1,000 judgment. Husband's wages are ultimately garnished to satisfy the $500 amount. When Husband complains to the State Bar, Attorney states that his office has no receipt for the $500 received in January 1990. Evidence at trial shows that the $500 was deposited into Attorney's personal account and that Attorney's secretary was authorized to sign Attorney's name to pleadings and declarations under penalty of perjury and to thereafter file the pleadings. Has Attorney violated his duties? Yes. Attorney's practice of allowing a secretary to sign his name to pleadings and documents sworn under penalty of perjury is gross neglect. His failure to have office procedures noting the receipt of all funds received by the office is also gross neglect, amounting to a breach of his oath under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.

[6] Sanctions for Violation of Duty of Competence

The Standards for Attorney Sanctions for Professional Misconduct, Standard 2.4, deals with offenses involving willful failure to perform services for which the attorney has been retained, as well as willful failure to communicate with a client. The discipline normally imposed in cases when there is a pattern of willful failure to perform demonstrating abandonment of the client is disbarment [Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 2.4(a); but see In the Matter of Kennon (1990) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 267, 277 (two years stayed suspension, two years probation, and 30 days actual suspension were recommended when respondent had no prior discipline record)].

If a lawyer is found to have willfully failed to perform services in an individual matter, or in several matters but not demonstrating a pattern of misconduct, the discipline imposed will range from reproval to suspension, depending on the extent of misconduct and the degree of harm to the client [Cal. State B. Stds. for Att'y Sanctions, Std. 2.4(b); see also Van Sloten v. State Bar (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 921, 933-934, 258 Cal. Rptr. 235, 771 P.2d 1323 (proper discipline for single instance of client abandonment); but see In the Matter of Nunez (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 196, 206 ; In the Matter of Stamper (1990) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 96, 106 (Standards are guidelines for use by State Bar Court, not mandatory sentencing provisions)].

D. Duty To Represent Client Competently And Zealously
1. Duties Of Representation

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.271

§ 72.271 Duty to Communicate With Clients

[1] Inform Client of Case Developments

An attorney has a duty to keep clients reasonably informed about significant developments relating to the attorney's employment or representation, and must comply promptly with reasonable client requests for information and copies of significant documents when necessary to keep clients so informed [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(m)]. Failure to communicate with or inattention to the needs of the client, standing alone, may constitute a violation of an attorney's oath of office [Shalant v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 485, 489, 189 Cal. Rptr. 374, 658 P.2d 737 (failure to inform client that client had been named as defendant in civil action); McMorris v. State Bar (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 96, 99-100 , cert. denied 466 U.S. 958 (1984) ; Doyle v. State Bar (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 973, 978, 126 Cal. Rptr. 801, 544 P.2d 937 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6067; McMorris v. State Bar (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 77, 81-82 , cert. denied 466 U.S. 958 (1984) (failure to respond to inquiries)]. Failure to communicate with a client, coupled with habitual client neglect, constitutes moral turpitude and is grounds for disbarment [Carter v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1091, 1100, 245 Cal. Rptr. 628, 751 P.2d 894 ; In the Matter of Hindin (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 657]. However, a member will not be disciplined for failing to communicate insignificant or irrelevant information [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500, Discussion].

An attorney may breach the standard of care to a client when the attorney fails to inform a client fully about his or her rights and the alternatives available under the circumstances, their cost, and the liklihood of success [Considine Co. v. Shadle, Hunt & Hagar (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 760, 765, 232 Cal. Rptr. 250] . For example, an attorney must inform a client of the existence of a motion for discovery sanctions that would affect the client's interest before the court or impose liability on the client, the fact that sanctions are sought against the client and the attorney, the amount of sanctions sought, the practical consequences if the motion is granted or denied, and additional information necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions with respect to the motion [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-151 (extent of information to be provided depends on circumstances)].

While the attorney's standard of care requires that he or she fully inform the client concerning the likelihood of success as part of a discussion of available alternatives, a guarantee, warranty, or prediction of outcome is presumed to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400].

PRACTICE TIP:

Advice as to Alternatives. The Considine case requires the lawyer to advise his or her client of alternative courses of action and the costs and likelihood of success. At one extreme, the lawyer should not attempt to defend his or her activities as those of a mere scribner who did not advise on, and therefore is not responsible for, the success or failure of the project. At the other extreme, the lawyer cannot attempt to guarantee or predict the outcome. By Robert L. Kehr.

[2] Communicate Settlement Offers to Client

An attorney must promptly communicate to his or her client all terms and conditions of any offer made to the client in a criminal matter and all amounts, terms, and conditions of any written offer of settlement made to the client in all other matters [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103.5; Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-510; see In the Matter of Yagman (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 788, 795 (attorney must communicate all written settlement offers to client regardless of whether they are significant or binding under contract law)]. The "client" includes any person employing the attorney who has authority to accept a settlement offer. In a class action, it is the representative of the class [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103.5(a)]. Implicit in this rule is the notion that the client and not the attorney must decide whether to accept or reject a settlement offer [cf. Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-7 (1980) (client must decide whether to accept settlement offer)], although the attorney should fully advise the client of all relevant considerations [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-8 (1980)].

An attorney who represents two or more clients must obtain each clients' informed written consent prior to entering into an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against the clients [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(D); see § 72.110 et seq. and § 72.130 et seq. regarding conflicts of interest].

Chapter 72 ATTORNEY PRACTICE AND ETHICS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Duty To Represent Client Competently And Zealously
1. Duties Of Representation

§ 72.272 Duty of Diligence in Zealous Representation

[1] General Standard of Diligence

When an attorney accepts employment to give legal advice or to render other legal services, the attorney impliedly agrees to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as attorneys of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks they undertake [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6067]. The standard is that of members of the legal profession in the same or similar locality under similar circumstances [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . An attorney who holds himself or herself out to the public and the legal profession as a specialist in an area of law is required to exercise the skill, prudence, and diligence exercised by other specialists of ordinary skill and capacity who specialize in the same field [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

[2] State Bar Sanctions and Civil Liability for Lack of Diligence

An attorney's willful failure to perform legal services for which the attorney has been retained constitutes a breach of the good faith and fiduciary duty the attorney owes to his or her clients and warrants disciplinary action [Harris v. State Bar (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1082, 1088, 275 Cal. Rptr. 428, 800 P.2d 906 ; Slavkin v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 894, 898, 264 Cal. Rptr. 131, 782 P.2d 270 ; Smith v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 525, 539, 213 Cal. Rptr. 236, 698 P.2d 139 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6067, 6103]. Moreover, an attorney's habitual disregard of his or her clients' interests combined with failure to communicate with those clients constitutes disciplinable acts of moral turpitude [McMorris v. State Bar (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 77, 85 , cert. denied 466 U.S. 958 (1984)]. Even when such inaction is grossly negligent or careless rather than willful or dishonest, the inaction constitutes moral turpitude and professional misconduct [Selznick v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 704, 709, 129 Cal. Rptr. 108, 547 P.2d 1388] .

Delay, as well as complete inaction, is improper. An attorney's delay of five years in completing the probate of a relatively simple estate was a breach of his duty to his client and to the other parties interested in the estate, and unnecessarily burdened the court system, warranting public reproval [see Samuelsen v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 558, 563, 152 Cal. Rptr. 918, 591 P.2d 15] . In another case, an attorney's disregard of his clients' interests in seven matters and his failure to pursue legal actions in these matters for which he had been retained was held to constitute habitual disregard of his clients' interests warranting disbarment [see Schullman v. State Bar (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 631, 635, 128 Cal. Rptr. 671, 547 P.2d 447] .

If an attorney breaches the duty owed to the client, the attorney can be civilly liable for breach, either in tort or breach of contract [Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 147, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406] . For detailed discussion and forms relating to civil liablity, see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

[3] Aspects of Duty of Diligence

[a] Possess Knowledge of Law

An attorney is expected to possess a knowledge of those plain and elementary principles of law that are commonly known by well-informed attorneys, and to discover those additional rules of law which, although not commonly known, may be readily found by standard research techniques [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358, 530 P.2d 589 , disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 419, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 (act of malpractice to base legal decision on incomplete reading of single case); see also Beverly Union Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 40, 43, 253 Cal. Rptr. 359 (professional responsibility to be aware of local trial delay reduction rules); Brekhus & Williams v. Parker-Rhodes (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 788, 791, 244 Cal. Rptr. 48 (duty to be knowledgeable about local court rules)].

[b] Undertake Diligent Research of Law and Facts

If the law in a particular area is unsettled, an attorney has an obligation to his or her client to undertake reasonable research in an effort to ascertain the relevant legal principles and to make an informed decision as to a course of conduct based on an intelligent assessment of the problem [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 359, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621, 530 P.2d 589 , disapproved on other grounds in In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561); see also Stanley v. Richmond (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1070, 1084-1085, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768] . If the law is unsettled but the attorney researches the area of the law and makes an informed judgment based on this research, the attorney is not negligent if subsequently the matter is settled contrary to the conclusion reached by the attorney [Davis v. Damrell (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 883, 888-889, 174 Cal. Rptr. 257] . An attorney is not liable for being in error as to a question of law on which reasonable doubt may be entertained by well-informed attorneys [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] .

Although an attorney may often rely on statements made by his or her client without further investigation, an attorney may be obliged to conduct a further investigation when circumstances known to the attorney indicate that further investigation is needed [Butler v. State Bar (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 323, 329, 228 Cal. Rptr. 499, 721 P.2d 585] .

[c] Make Referral to Specialist When Appropriate

An attorney in general practice has a duty to refer his or her client to a specialist or to recommend the assistance of a specialist if, under the circumstances, a reasonably careful and prudent practitioner would do so [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] . The attorney generally must inform the client of the outside attorney's involvement [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1994-138].

PRACTICE TIP:

Emergency Assistance. In an emergency a lawyer may give advice or assistance in a matter in which the lawyer does not have the skill ordinarily required when referral to or consultation with another lawyer would be impracticable [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110, Discussion]. But assistance should be limited to that reasonably necessary in the circumstances. Attorneys should be careful not to rely too heavily on this apparent emergency exception to Rule 3-110.

[d] Only Undertake Representation if Adequate Time Available

An attorney has an obligation not to undertake legal representation in a matter unless the attorney has adequate time to pursue the matter with reasonable diligence. When an attorney takes on more cases than he or she can handle, the attorney jeopardizes both the client's cause and the public interest in sound and efficient administration of justice [Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 400, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (failure to serve sole defendant for 28 months or to take any action to prosecute case to trial until defendant moved to dismiss, 30 months after suit filed)]. If an attorney lacks the time and resources to pursue a client's case with reasonable diligence, the attorney is obliged to decline representation, regardless of whether the attorney is paid or performs services pro bono [Segal v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1077, 1084, 245 Cal. Rptr. 404, 751 P.2d 463] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Advice as to Time Constraints. Because an attorney's standard of care requires, among other things, that he or she fully inform a client concerning the likelihood of success, it is fundamental that an attorney advise the client concerning problems created by deadlines imposed by the client or by law. The time limits might compel the lawyer to retain co-counsel, refer the matter to an attorney more knowledgeable in the field, or refer the matter to another law firm better able to staff the project. In an extreme situation, when the attorney thinks it is unlikely that any law firm could competently handle the matter within the time permitted, the lawyer should explain the difficulty to the client and refuse to handle the project (especially in a business transaction in which the client is not obliged to involve him- or herself). By Robert L. Kehr.

[e] Zealously Prepare Defense on Behalf of Insurer and Insured

An insurance defense counsel owes a duty of zealous representation to both the insurer and the insured under the policy [see Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904] . The obligation of an attorney selected by an insurance company to the insured is the same obligation of good faith that is owed by an attorney who is personally retained by the client [American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 590, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] .

An attorney hired by an insurance company to defend an insured is ethically bound to explain to the insurer and the insured the full implications of joint representation in a situation in which the insurer has reserved its right to deny coverage [McGee v. Superior Court (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 221, 227, 221 Cal. Rptr. 421 (superseded on issue of insurer's duty to provide independent counsel by Civ. Code § 2860); San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 375, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494 (superseded on issue of insurer's duty to provide independent counsel by Civ. Code § 2860); see also Civ. Code § 2860(a), (b)]. If the insured does not give an informed consent to the joint representation, the attorney must cease to represent both parties and the insurer must pay for the reasonable cost of hiring independent counsel for the insured [see Civ. Code § 2860(a)].

§ 72.290 Acceptance of Employment With Improper Objective

An attorney must counsel or maintain such actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to him or her legal or just, except the defense of a person charged with a crime [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c)]. He or she may not encourage either the commencement or continuance of an action or proceeding from any corrupt motive of passion or interest [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(g)]. Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200 prohibits an attorney from seeking, accepting, or continuing employment if the attorney knows or should know that the objective of the employment is either of the following:

- To bring an action, conduct a defense, assert a position in litigation, or take an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200(A)].

- To present a claim or defense in litigation that is not warranted under existing law, unless it can be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of such existing law [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200(B)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Improper Means of Redress. Court Reporter sends Attorney A a $94.05 bill for services rendered. Attorney A disputes the amount as being excessive. Court Reporter files a small claims action to recover her fee, plus costs and interest. Attorney A's associate, Attorney B, agrees to represent Attorney A in the matter. Attorney B fails to return any of Court Reporter's phone calls and letters for six months and does not answer the small claims complaint. On the day before the small claims trial, Attorney B files an action against Court Reporter for fraud and deceit, seeking damages according to proof, as well as $14,000 in punitive damages. At the small claims trial, Court Reporter obtains a judgment of $123.94, including costs and interest. As Court Reporter leaves the court room, Attorney B serves her with the complaint. Attorney A fails to appear for a deposition noticed by opposing counsel and Attorney B fails to return opposing counsel's calls. The fraud action is eventually dismissed on Court Reporter's > unopposed motion for summary judgment, after Court Reporter incurs over $4,000 in legal fees. Has Attorney B violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200? Yes. Attorney B was motivated in large measure by spite and vindictiveness, and he acted on these base impulses by selecting the most oppressive and financially taxing means of redress, out of all proportion to the minor sum and rather innocuous incident in controversy. A reasonable attorney would not have acted like B; the case was a simple and minor billing dispute, clearly not a case of fraud [see Sorensen v. State Bar (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1036, 1042-1043, 277 Cal. Rptr. 858, 804 P.2d 44 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-110); see also § 72.296[3]].

If an attorney is asked to pursue an unwarranted or frivolous claim, he or she should refuse to do so and if necessary withdraw from employment [see § 72.370 et seq.]. If an attorney decides not to undertake representation of a client after meeting with the client and conducting a preliminary investigation of the case, the attorney is advised to confirm this decision by a letter to the client, although the attorney is not required to do so [see Chefsky v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 116, 130, 202 Cal. Rptr. 349, 680 P.2d 82 (absence of letter, in itself, did not support conclusion that client did not receive notice of attorney's withdrawal from employment)].

§ 72.291 Withdrawal From Meritless Case

[1] Not Warranted Under Existing Law

An attorney may not present a claim or defense in litigation that is not warranted under existing law, unless it can be supported by good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200(B); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c), (g)]. When an attorney loses faith in the justness of the cause, the attorney should either retire from the case or dismiss the action [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 309-310, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Withdrawal From Medical Mapractice Action. An attorney files a medical malpractice action for his client. He subsequently concludes that the action is not justified because of insufficient evidence of malpractice. He notifies the client by letter of his intention to withdraw from the case and advises the client to obtain other counsel if the client wishes to pursue the case. Has the attorney acted properly? Yes. Confronted with a choice between his duty to advance his client's cause by continuing to prosecute the action and his duty to the fair administration of justice to refuse to maintain actions he believed to lack merit, the attorney has acted properly in this matter [see Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 306-309, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] .

[2] "Reasonableness" Standard for Evaluating Merits of Claim

The determination of whether or not a claim is warranted is subject to a standard of reasonableness. If an attorney does not prosecute a claim that a reasonable attorney would regard as untenable or does not unreasonably neglect to investigate the facts and the law before determining to proceed, the client's adversary will have no right to assert a claim of malicious prosecution against the attorney if the client does not prevail on the claim [see Norton v. Hines (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 917, 924, 123 Cal. Rptr. 237] .

An attorney may urge any permissible construction of the law that is favorable to the client, without regard to the attorney's professional opinion as to the likelihood that the construction will ultimately prevail, provided the claim is not frivolous [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-4]. If the issue that the attorney is called on to decide is fairly debatable, the attorney has an obligation to present and urge the client's claim, and the attorney will not be liable for malicious prosecution if it is subsequently determined that the position honestly taken by the attorney was erroneous [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 309, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; Silver v. Shemanski (1949) 89 Cal. App. 2d 520, 546, 201 P.2d 418 ; see Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3.1 cmt. (1983) (filing action not frivolous merely because attorney has not first fully substantiated facts or expects to develop vital evidence only by discovery, even if attorney believes client ultimately will not prevail)].

For detailed discussion relating to malicious prosecution, see Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process .

[3] Frivolous Appeal

An appeal is frivolous if it is prosecuted for an improper motive, such as to harass the respondent or to delay the effect of an adverse judgment, or when it indisputably has no merit, such that any reasonable attorney would agree that the appeal is totally and completely without merit [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Flaherty (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 637, 650, 183 Cal. Rptr. 508, 646 P.2d 179 ; Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 ; Summers v. City of Cathedral City (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1075, 275 Cal. Rptr. 594 ; see also Taylor v. Sentry Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1984) 729 F.2d 652, 656 (appeal is frivolous in Ninth Circuit if result is obvious or appellant's arguments of error are totally without merit); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c), (g) (duties of attorney); Code Civ. Proc. § 907 (damages for frivolous or dilatory appeal)]. For further discussion of frivolous appeals, see Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal .

§ 72.292 Acceptance of Employment Compensated by Proceeds From Unlawful Activities

An attorney may be subject to criminal penalties for accepting employment compensated from an illegal source. 18 U.S.C. § 1957 makes it a criminal offense for a person, under specified circumstances, to knowingly engage in or attempt to engage in monetary transactions in property constituting, or derived from, proceeds obtained from a criminal offense [18 U.S.C. § 1957(a), (d)]. Section 1957 apparently would enable the federal government to prosecute defense attorneys who knowingly accept tainted money from their clients.

Section 1957 applies only when the criminally derived property is worth more than $10,000 and is derived from one of the "specified unlawful activities" listed in 18 U.S.C. § 1956(c)(7) [18 U.S.C. § 1957(a), (d), (f)(3)]. Listed activities include racketeering, bribery, smuggling, and various drug offenses [see 18 U.S.C. § 1956(c)(7)]. In a prosecution under 18 U.S.C. § 1957, the Government is not required to prove that the defendant knew that the offense from which the criminally derived property was derived was "specified unlawful activity" [18 U.S.C. § 1957(c)]. Penalties for violation of Section 1957 may include up to 10 years' imprisonment and/or a fine [18 U.S.C. § 1957(b)].

§ 72.293 Advising Violation of Law

[1] Scope of Prohibition

An attorney may not advise the violation of any law, rule, or court ruling, unless the attorney believes in good faith that the law, rule, or court ruling is invalid. An attorney may take appropriate steps in good faith to test the validity of any law, rule, or court ruling [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210; see Wolfrich Corp. v. United Services Automobile Assn. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1206, 1211, 197 Cal. Rptr. 446 , disapproved on other grounds in Doctors' Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 39, 42, 260 Cal. Rptr. 183, 775 P.2d 508 (attorneys have high obligation to represent and protect their clients' interests zealously, and to that end may properly challenge the validity of any law or decision); see also Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-102(A)(7) (1980)].

In its "good faith" exception, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, demonstrates the tension that exists in the law as attorneys attempt to test established boundaries in order to achieve social and legal growth. As articulated in one appellate opinion, "[t]he law... is not immutable. It remains in flux to allow constructive change through the effort of diligent and conscientious lawyers. It is through legal imagination and ingenuity in pleading that evolution of the law occurs" [Umansky v. Urquhart (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 368, 372, 148 Cal. Rptr. 547] .

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, is intended to apply not only to the prospective conduct of a client, but also to the interaction between the attorney and client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, Discussion]. For example, it applies to the handling of physical evidence of a crime in the possession of the client and offered to the attorney [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, Discussion; see also State Bar Formal Opinion Nos. 1984-76, 1986-89; LACBA Formal Opinion No. 477 (1993)]. Rule 3-210 also is intended to apply to the specific legal service sought by the client from the attorney [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, Discussion]. For example, the rule applies to a request that the attorney negotiate the return of stolen property in exchange for the owner's agreement not to report the theft to the police or prosecutorial authorities [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, Discussion; see People v. Pic'l (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 731, 737-745, 183 Cal. Rptr. 685, 646 P.2d 847] .

[2] Discipline or Contempt Citation

An attorney is subject to discipline for advising a client to violate a lawful order of the court [see Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 288-289, 293, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864 (advising clients not to appear for their depositions, notwithstanding court order requiring appearance, in addition to numerous other acts of misconduct warranted disbarment)]. For example, the State Bar imposed discipline on an attorney who advised his client and other witnesses not to appear and testify in a State Bar proceeding against him after the client and witnesses had been served with subpoenas directing them to appear [see Waterman v. State Bar (1936) 8 Cal. 2d 17, 19, 63 P.2d 1133 (six months' suspension ordered)].

An attorney who advises his or her client to violate a lawful order of the court may also be held in contempt [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 117, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] . In Hawk, an attorney was held in contempt for instructing his client not to provide handwriting samples ordered by the court [see Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 117, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

Other examples of discipline for wrongfully advising violations of law include the following:

- Advising a client to make a conveyance of real property for the purpose of defrauding one of the client's creditors warranted a three-year suspension [see Townsend v. State Bar (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 592, 598, 197 P.2d 326 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)].

- In two annulment actions, instructing clients not to disclose to the court the existence of the clients' children, and in another action, telling a client to forge his wife's name to a document, warranted a two-year suspension [see Paonessa v. State Bar (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 222, 225-227, 272 P.2d 510] .

[3] Penalties for Advising Perjury

Advising a client to commit perjury is a serious ethical violation. An attorney who advises a client to commit perjury is subject to discipline and criminal prosecution under an array of ethical rules and statutes, including the following:

- Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210, which prohibits an attorney from advising the client to violate the law [see In re Jones (1929) 208 Cal. 240, 241-243, 280 P. 964 (attorney merited one-year suspension for advising his clients in criminal case to commit perjury)].

- Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200, which prohibits an attorney from presenting false statements to the court.

- Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d), which requires an attorney to employ only such means as are consistent with the truth and never to seek to mislead the court by making false statements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103 (violation of attorney's duties as cause for disbarment or suspension)].

- Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128, which states that an attorney is guilty of a misdemeanor if the attorney is guilty of any deceit or collusion, or consents to any deceit or collusion, with the intent to deceive the court or any party.

- Penal Code § 127, which authorizes an attorney who advises a client to testify falsely to be prosecuted either for subornation or solicitation of perjury if the client, in fact, testifies falsely [In re Branch (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 200, 210-211, 74 Cal. Rptr. 238, 449 P.2d 174 (attorney who attempts to benefit client through use of perjured testimony may be subject to criminal prosecution as well as severe disciplinary action)].

- Penal Code § 653f(a), which permits an attorney who advises a client to testify falsely to be prosecuted for solicitation of perjury if the client does not, in fact, testify falsely.

An attorney has no duty to cooperate with a client in presenting perjured testimony [see Nix v. Whiteside (1986) 475 U.S. 157, 168-171, 106 S. Ct. 988, 89 L. Ed. 2d 123 (criminal defendant not deprived of U.S. Const., amend. VI right to effective assistance of counsel when counsel refused to cooperate in presenting perjured testimony); see also § 72.304[2] (attorney's ethical responsibilities when client insists on testifying falsely or attorney discovers client has done so)].

§ 72.294 Debt Collection

An attorney who regularly tries to collect through litigation "consumer" debts, i.e., those arising out of transactions primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, is subject to the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA), 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692-1692o, which prohibits debt collectors from making false or misleading representations and engaging in specified abusive and unfair practices, and subjects to violators to civil liability to those they, for example, harass, mislead, or treat unfairly [Heintz v. Jenkins (1995) 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395] . California's Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Civ. Code § 1788 et seq., expressly exempts attorneys from compliance with its provisions [Civ. Code § 1788.2(c)]. However, the FDCPA expressly supersedes state laws affording less protection to consumers [15 U.S.C. § 1692(n)].

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.296

§ 72.296 Misuse of Legal Process

[1] Threatening Prosecution

A State Bar member may not threaten to present criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-100(A); see Flatley v. Mauro (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 299, 327-332, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 606 (attorney's threats to publicly accuse entertainer of rape and other unspecified violations unless he settled violated rule); Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302, 317-318, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24 (improper to file state bar complaint in order to coerce attorney to sign contract)]. The threat need not be expressly stated [see Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 117, 121, 123, 177 Cal. Rptr. 670 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-104; threatening letter interpreted "in context")]. Nor may an attorney threaten to have his or her client present criminal, administrative or disciplinary charges to obtain an advantage in a civil dispute [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 469 (1993)]. Reporting a bar disciplinary matter to the State Bar knowing that the report or complaint is false or malicious is a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6043.5(a)].

Rule 5-100 does not prohibit an attorney from presenting criminal, administrative, or disciplinary charges with respect to matters arising out of the same transaction as a civil dispute. Such action may be appropriate where the attorney has a good faith basis for presenting the charges. An attorney then may reveal to the proper authority all unprivileged knowledge which the attorney in good faith believes to be a violation of the applicable criminal, adminstrative, or disciplinary standards [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 469 (1993)].

For purposes of Rule 5-100, the term "administrative charges" means the filing or lodging of a complaint with a federal, state, or local governmental entity that may order or recommend the loss or suspension of a license, or may impose or recommend the imposition of a fine, pecuniary sanction, or other sanction of a quasi-criminal nature [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-100(B)]. The term does not include filing charges with an administrative entity required by law as a condition precedent to maintaining a civil action [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-100(B)]. The term "civil dispute" means a controversy or potential controversy over the rights and duties of two or more parties under civil law, whether or not an action has been commenced, and includes an administrative proceeding of a quasi-civil nature pending before a federal, state, or local government entity [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-100(C)].

[2] Examples of Threatening Prosecution

Prior to the 1989 amendment and renumbering of the California Rules of Professional Conduct, former Rule 7-104, the predecessor of Rule 5-100, contained a prohibition on threats similar to that found in the present rule [compare Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-100(A) with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-104; see also SFCBA Formal Opinion No. 1975-6 (prosecutor may not threaten criminal prosecution to obtain acceptance of final judgment in civil suit)]. The following types of actions were found to violate former Rule 7-104:

- Sending a letter to opposing parties stating that if the attorney did not receive a beneficiary statement from a party within five days, he would request the Department of Savings and Loan and the Attorney General's office to assist him in resolving the matter, noting on the letter that copies were being sent to a named commissioner of the Department of Savings and Loan and to a named deputy attorney general [Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 117, 121-123, 177 Cal. Rptr. 670, 635 P.2d 163] .

- Sending a letter to an opposing party, in an attempt to collect a bad check that the party had given to the attorneys' client, stating that issuing a check with insufficient funds to cover it is a misdemeanor and that the attorneys planned to exercise their rights to file a criminal complaint against the party [Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895-896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321 (attorneys' conduct was of such an extreme nature as to be outrageous; plaintiff could state cause of action against attorneys for intentional infliction of emotional distress), disapproved on other grounds in Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 212-213, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365] .

- Sending a letter to a company hired by an opposing party to manage an apartment complex in which the attorney demanded that the company resign, and stated that failure to comply with this demand would result in a request for criminal charges against the company for embezzlement and other appropriate offenses [Standing Committee. on Discipllline etc. v. Ross (9th Cir 1984) 735 F.2d 1168, 1171-1172] .

- Telling the mother of a child to be adopted that her demand for an additional $3,000 was an attempt at extortion for which she could be prosecuted [Arden v. State Bar (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 310, 320-321, 341 P.2d 6 (attorney was threatening mother with prosecution unless she desisted from her threat to interfere with and overturn the pending adoption)].

A statement that "all available legal remedies will be pursued" unless satisfactory settlement is promptly forthcoming is not, in itself, ethically improper [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1991-124].

PRACTICE TIP:

Client Threatening Prosecution. If a client wishes to threaten to present charges (or actually files charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil action), unless the course of action would constitute a crime or expose the client to civil liability, the attorney may advise the client that he or she is free to do so, but that the attorney may not assist the client. The attorney should not give the client any support or advice in the matter [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1983-73; see also LACBA Formal Opinion No. 469 (1993)].

[3] Commencement of Action for Improper Purpose

An attorney may not encourage the commencement or the continuance of an action or proceeding from any corrupt motive of passion or interest [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(g)]. An attorney also may not bring a legal action without probable cause [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200(A)].

An attorney violated the predecessor of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-200, former Rule 2-110, in two cases by filing an involuntary bankruptcy petition against the opposing parties, falsely alleging that his clients were creditors of the opposing parties, solely for the purpose of harassing the opposing parties and in an attempt to delay the proceedings against his clients by obtaining a stay of proceedings in the trial court [see Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 288-290, 293, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 (conduct warranted disbarment)].

In another case, an attorney violated Rule 2-110 by filing duplicative lawsuits involving the same transactions and parties [see Standing Committee on Discipline etc. v. Ross (9th Cir 1984) 735 F.2d 1168, 1171]. The canons of professional ethics impose on every attorney an obligation not to clog the courts with frivolous actions; filing a single frivolous claim, after a warning, may be sufficient to trigger disciplinary proceedings [Standing Committee on Discipline etc. v. Ross (9th Cir 1984) 735 F.2d 1168, 1171] .

2. Prohibited Conduct Exceeding Proper Bounds Of Representation

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.297

§ 72.297 Communication With Adverse Party Represented by Counsel

[1] Basic Rule

An attorney, while representing a client, must not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a party the attorney knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the attorney has the consent of the other lawyer [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(A)]. The purpose of this rule is to allow an attorney to function adequately in his or her proper role and to prevent another attorney from impeding his or her performance in this role. If a party's counsel is present when another attorney communicates with the party, the party's counsel can correct any error in the communication to the party [Mitton v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 525, 534, 78 Cal. Rptr. 649, 455 P.2d 753 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 12)]. The rule shields the other party not only from an attorney's approaches that are intentionally improper, but also from approaches that are well intentioned but misguided [Mitton v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 525, 534, 78 Cal. Rptr. 649, 455 P.2d 753] .

An attorney's violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 can properly serve as the basis for that attorney's disqualification from an action only if the misconduct that is urged as a ground for disqualification will have a continuing effect on the judicial proceedings that are before the court [Bell v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 194, 200, 260 Cal. Rptr. 459 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-103)].

[2] Definition of Party

For purposes of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, a "party" includes a current officer, director, or managing agent of a corporation or association, and a partner or managing agent of a partnership [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(1); see Continental Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 118-119, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 ; Nalian Truck Lines, Inc. v. Nakano Warehouse & Transportation Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1261-1264, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467 ("party" does not include former employees); see also SFCBA Formal Opinion No. 1973-4 (ex parte contact of hospital employee and physicians practicing medicine at party hospital is permissible)]. The definition includes directors: it is improper for an opposing party's attorney to have unauthorized ex parte communications with a dissident director concerning the subject of the representation regardless of who initiates the communication [State Bar

Formal Opinion 1991-125]. The definition also includes an association member or an employee of an association, corporation, or partnership, if the subject of the communication is any act or omission of such a person that may be binding on or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability or whose statement may constitute an admission on the part of the organization [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(2); Truitt v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558] .

A "party represented by another lawyer" includes a party who has counsel of record, whether or not that counsel is in fact authorized to act for the party [see People v. Sharp (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 13, 18, 197 Cal. Rptr. 436 (interpreting meaning of "party represented by counsel" under former Rule 7-103, the predecessor of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100)]. Although a prosecutor may not communicate, ex parte and without defense counsel's permission, once formal proceedings have commenced, it is unclear whether there is a prohibition regarding unauthorized ex parte communications on the subject of the representation before the filing of criminal charges [see United States v. Lopez (9th Cir. 1993) 989 F.2d 1032, 1036-1041 ; 91 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 1205 (1992)]. Rule 2-100 is triggered by a court's conditional class certification [Hernandez v. Vitamin Shoppe Industries Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1459-1460, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734].

PRACTICE TIP:

Adverse Party Includes a Non-Litigant. The application of Rule 2-100 is not limited to the litigation context, so it is important not to be misled by the use of the word "party" in the text and title of the rule. It is helpful to think of the rule as applying to "persons" who are represented by counsel.

[3] Permissible Communications

[a] In General

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 states that three types of communications are not prohibited under the rule:

- Communications with a public officer, board, committee, or body [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(C)(1)]. For example, an attorney may discuss the subject of litigation against a city with a city council or city manager without consent of the city attorney [see State Bar Formal Opinion 1977-43].

- Communications initiated by a party seeking advice or representation from an independent lawyer of the party's choice [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(C)(2)]. This rule is intended to permit an attorney to communicate with an individual seeking to hire new counsel or to obtain a second opinion [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, Discussion].

- Communications otherwise authorized by law [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(C)(3); see also 75 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 223, 232 (1992) (for purposes of Rule 2-100, public prosecutor is "authorized by law" to communicate with person known to be represented by counsel during investigative phase of proceeding, concerning subject of representation, without consent of counsel)].

Rule 2-100 does not prohibit an attorney from communicating with employees of a law firm representing an opposing party without disclosing substantive information [see Gregori v. Bank of America (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 291, 303, 254 Cal. Rptr. 853 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-103)].

[b] Communications Between Parties Themselves

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, is not intended to prevent the parties themselves from communicating with respect to the subject matter of the representation, and nothing in the rule prevents an attorney from advising the client that the communication can be made as long as the attorney does not make the client his or her agent [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, Discussion; see SFCBA Informal Opinion No. 1985-1 (client may negotiate directly, ex parte, with opposing represented party where client does not act as attorney's agent); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1993-131 (permitting communication of parties in dissolution proceeding)].

Furthermore, Rule 2-100 does not prohibit an attorney who is also a party to a legal matter from directly or indirectly communicating on his or her own behalf with a represented party [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, Discussion]. The attorney has independent rights as a party that should not be abrogated because of his or her professional status [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, Discussion]. To prevent any possible abuse in these situations, the counsel for the opposing party may advise that party about the risks and benefits of communications with a lawyer-party, and not to accept or engage in communications with the lawyer-party [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, Discussion].

[c] Communications With Corporate Adversaries

With respect to corporate adversaries, the following activities have been held permissible under Rule 2-100:

- Communicating ex parte with former members of a corporate adversary's control group of officers and agents who were responsible for directing the corporation's actions in response to legal advice [Nalian Truck Lines, Inc. v. Nakano Warehouse & Transportation Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1261-1264, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467] .

- Initiating ex parte contacts with unrepresented former employees of the corporation, and present employees of the corporation (other than officers, directors, or managing agents) who are not separately represented, so long as the communication does not involve the employee's act or failure to act in connection with the matter that may bind the corporation, be imputed to it, or constitute an admission of the corporation for purposes of establishing liability [Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 140, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; see Bobele v. Superior Court (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 708, 713, 245 Cal. Rptr. 144 (decided under former Rule 7-103)].

- Communicating with an officer or Board of Directors provided that the communication is in writing with delivery made through the attorney representing the organization in the matter [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 472 (1993)].

- Communicating with an employee of a defendant corporation, who was allegedly represented by corporation's counsel, at the employee's request regarding the employee's allegations that corporate officers were attempting to suborn perjury and obstruct justice [United States v. Talao (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 1133, 1140] .

- Having an investigator interview unrepresented current corporate employees without consent of the corporation's counsel seven months before filing action against the corporation and one of the employees as routine prelitigation activities, where counsel did not know the interviewed employees were represented by another lawyer in the matter [Jorgensen v. Taco Bell Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178] .

- Having an investigator obtain a written statement from a current corporation employee without obtaining the consent of the defendant corporation's counsel, where plaintiff's attorney had filed a complaint but corporate counsel had not yet served defendant's answer, and where there was no evidence that plaintiff's attorney had actual knowledge that the corporate employer and employee were represented at the time of the interview in question [Truitt v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1187-1188, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558] .

[4] Prohibited Communications

Former Rule 7-103, the predecessor to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, provided a prohibition on attorney communications with represented parties that was similar to that found in Rule 2-100. Attorneys were found to have violated former Rule 7-103 in the following circumstances:

- The attorney asked the father of a former client, now represented by other counsel, to contact him about resolution of a fee dispute between himself and another attorney arising out of his representation of the former client [Shalant v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 485, 488-489, 189 Cal. Rptr. 374, 658 P.2d 737] .

- The attorney sent two demand letters to opposing parties whom he knew were represented by counsel without notifying their counsel [Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 117, 121-122, 177 Cal. Rptr. 670, 635 P.2d 163] .

- The attorney talked with the opposing party on several occasions after he knew she was represented by counsel, discussing a new trial motion with her and advising her to obtain new counsel to represent her in opposing the motion [Mitton v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 525, 534, 78 Cal. Rptr. 649, 455 P.2d 753] .

- The attorney, who had previously represented the defendants in a case, negotiated a settlement with the plaintiffs after a judgment was rendered in plaintiffs' favor when the plaintiffs were represented by counsel who opposed the settlement [Turner v. State Bar (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 155, 158, 222 P.2d 857] .

- The attorney interviewed a former president and current director of a corporation (which was the opposing party) without contacting the corporation's counsel [Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 131, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461] .

By violating the prohibition of Rule 2-100 on unauthorized ex parte communication with an adverse party represented by counsel, an attorney is not only subject to disciplinary proceedings by the State Bar, but in addition may be disqualified from continuing to represent the client in the matter. An attorney who had communicated with the opposing party was held to have been properly disqualified from acting as attorney of record in the action because he would have an unfair advantage if allowed to use the information he improperly obtained from the opposing party [see Chronometrics, Inc. v. Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 607-608, 168 Cal. Rptr. 196 (rejecting disqualification of attorney's entire firm); see also Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 132-133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 (defendants' attorney properly disqualified for interview of corporate plaintiff's director in violation of former Rule 7-103, but trial court's disqualification of attorney's entire firm was abuse of discretion)].

§ 72.298 Communication With Adverse Party Not Represented by Counsel

When an opposing party is not represented by counsel, the attorney is under a strict duty to deal fairly and objectively with the opposing party [Gregory v. Gregory (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 343, 349, 206 P.2d 1122] . When an attorney must deal directly with an opposing party not represented by counsel, he or she should not undertake to give advice to the opposing party, except to advise the opposing party to obtain a lawyer [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-18 (1980); see also Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-104(A)(2) (1980)]. An opposing attorney should not state or imply that he or she is disinterested. If the attorney knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented party misunderstands the attorney's role in the matter, the attorney should make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding [see Model Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 4.3 (1983)].

An attorney may communicate directly with an opposing party not represented by counsel of record, even if the unrepresented party seeks advice from counsel who is not of record [McMillan v. Shadow Ridge at Oak Park Homeowner's Association (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965-968, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550 (no violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100)].

§ 72.299 Trial Publicity

Effective October 1, 1995, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120 was added to the Rules of Professional Conduct. This rule, titled "Trial Publicity," prohibits an attorney who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter from making any extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if the attorney knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter. There are several factual statements specified in the rule as being exceptions to the prohibited statements, such as:

- Information contained in a public record;
- The identity, residence and occupation of an accused defendant; and
- The scheduling or result of any step in litigation.

Following the language of the new rule is a "Discussion" section, which sets forth the intent and further meaning of new Rule 5-120. Since this is a very recent addition to the ethical responsibilities of lawyers, the new rule and discussion should be carefully reviewed and researched for recent case law and ethics opinions before relying on it [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120].

The Supreme Court, addressing this new issue, has held that a prosecutor had not violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120 when he spoke to a reporter regarding limited information [People v. Marshall (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 799, 800, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347, 919 P. 2d 1280] .

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.300

§ 72.300 Communication With or Investigation of Jurors

[1] Before or During Trial

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320 prohibits an attorney connected with a case from:

- Communicating directly or indirectly before trial with anyone the attorney knows to be a member of the jury pool from which the jury will be selected for the trial of the case, except as a part of the official proceedings [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(A), (H)].

- Communicating directly or indirectly with any impaneled, discharged, or excused juror during trial except as a part of the official proceedings [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(B), (H); State Bar Formal Opinion 1989-100; see In re Possino (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 163, 170, 207 Cal. Rptr. 543, 689 P.2d 115 (attorney on trial for a drug offense approached juror outside of courtroom, and, although they did not discuss merits of the case, attorney did ask juror what she thought of the prosecutor and talked to her about himself, others involved in the trial, and the judge)].

- Conducting directly or indirectly an out-of-court investigation of an impaneled, discharged, or excused juror, or a member of the jury pool from which the jury will be selected, in a manner that is likely to influence the subject's state of mind in present or future jury service [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(E), (I); see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1988-100]. These restrictions on attorney conduct also apply to communications with or investigations of the family of a juror or a member of the jury pool [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(F)].

In addition, an attorney communicating with a juror might be subject to criminal prosecution. It is a felony to corruptly attempt to influence a juror, or any person summoned as a juror, in respect of the juror's verdict or decision in any proceeding that is pending in or about to be brought before the juror, by means of any oral or written communication with the juror, except in the regular course of the proceedings [Penal Code § 95; see In re Possino (1984) 37 Cal. 3d

Permitted investigation of jurors should be conducted with circumspection and restraint [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-30 (1980)]. During the course of a judicial proceeding, an attorney should avoid undue solicitude for the comfort or convenience of the jury and should avoid any other conduct calculated to gain special consideration [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-36 (1980)]. An attorney must reveal promptly to the court any improper conduct by a member of the jury pool or by a juror, or by any person toward a member of the jury pool or a juror or a member of the juror's family, of which the attorney has knowledge [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(G)].

During trial, an attorney who is not connected with the case may not communicate directly or indirectly concerning the case with anyone the attorney knows is a juror in the case [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(C)].

[2] After Trial

After discharge of the jury, an attorney may not ask questions of or make comments to a juror that are intended to harass or embarrass the juror or to influence the juror's actions in future jury service [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(D)]. This prohibition also applies to communications with or investigations of the family of a juror or a member of the jury pool [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(F)]. The prohibition remains fully applicable in the period from jury discharge to expiration of the time for filing new trial motions in the case in which the jurors served [Lind v. Medevac, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 516, 520-521, 268 Cal. Rptr. 359 ; In the Matter of Respondent A (1990) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 255, 265 ; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 657(2), 658, 659].

After the trial, an attorney may communicate with a juror to ascertain whether or not the verdict might be subject to legal challenge, so long as the attorney refrains from asking questions or making comments that tend to harass or embarrass the juror [see Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-29 (1980); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-320(D) (prohibiting harassing or embarrassing questions and comments)].

An attorney may disclose excluded evidence to discharged jurors absent an intent to harass, embarrass, or influence future juror service [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1987-95 disapproving State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1976-39].

If the attorney has won a jury trial, he or she may write jurors post verdict and thereby request notification of any posttrial contact with jurors by the adverse side [Lind v. Medevac, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 516, 522, 268 Cal. Rptr. 359 (dictum)]. The attorney may also request that he or she be present for any interviews granted by the adverse side or to discuss with the juror any telephonic or written communications received from the adverse side [Lind v. Medevac, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 516, 522, 268 Cal. Rptr. 359 (dictum)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Improper Communication With Jurors After Trial. Attorney mails a letter to jurors after trial warning that the other side might employ "sharp investigative tactics" to "impeach" the jury's verdict and have it set aside as "improper." The purpose of the letter was to prevent the losing side from communicating with the jurors in an effort to determine if juror misconduct had occurred. Does the letter violate the ethical rule restricting contact with jurors after trial? Yes. The Rules of Professional Conduct prohibit an attorney from making comments to a juror after discharge of the jury that are intended to influence the juror's actions in future jury service. In this case, the letter could easily influence jurors in their present or future jury service [Lind v. Medevac, Inc. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 516, 521-522, 268 Cal. Rptr. 359 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-106)].

§ 72.301 Communication With Media

An attorney is restricted from making potentially prejudicial statements to the media [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120]. While this rule was developed primarily to address perceived abuses in high-publicity criminal cases, it may apply in many civil proceedings as well.

An attorney who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter is prohibited from making any extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication, if the attorney knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adudicative proceeding in the matter [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120(A)]. This applies to statements made by on behalf of the attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120, Discussion].

The attorney may, however, communicate the following information [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120(B)]:

- The claim, offense, or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved.
- The information contained in a public record.
- That the investigation of a matter is in progress.
- The scheduling or result of any step in litigation.
- A request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto.
- A warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or the public interest. (This provision is not intended to alter, enlarge, or diminish any application of the lawyer-client privilege nor the attorney's duty to maintain client confidences [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120, Discussion].)

- Additional specified matters in criminal cases.

The attorney may also make a statement that a reasonable attorney would believe is required to protect a client from the substantial undue prejudicial effect of recent publicity not initiated by the attorney or his or her client. Any such statement must be limited to such information as is necessary to mitigate the recent adverse publicity [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120(C)].

Whether an attorney violates this rule depends on many factors, including the timing of the statement, whether it violates any lawful "gag" or protective order, when it is knowingly false or deceptive, or when it presents clearly inadmissible matters as evidence to prove or disprove a material fact in issue [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-120, Discussion].

§ 72.302 Contacts With Witnesses

[1] Payment of Witnesses

[a] Limitations

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(B) prohibits an attorney from directly or indirectly paying, offering to pay, or acquiescing in the payment of compensation to a witness contingent on the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case. However, the attorney may advance, guarantee, or acquiesce in the payment of:

- Expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending the proceeding or testifying [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(B)(1); see Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-109(C) (1980)].

- Reasonable compensation to a witness for the witness's loss of time in attending the proceeding or testifying [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(B)(2); see Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-109(C) (1980)].

- A reasonable fee to an expert witness for his or her professional services [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(B)(3); see Gov. Code § 68092.5 (expert witness has right to reasonable fees in addition to witness fees otherwise provided by law); Bureau of Medical Economics v. Cossette (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 9 ; see also Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-109(C) (1980)].

An attorney may pay a nonexpert witness for time spent preparing for deposition or trial. The compensation must be reasonable in light of all the circumstances, and may not be contingent on the content of testimony or the outcome of the matter. Possibly objective bases on which to determine reasonable compensation might include the witness' rate of pay if currently employed or what the witness last earned if unemployed, or what others earn for comparable activity [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-149].

Any person who gives, offers, or promises to give, to any witness a bribe on the understanding or agreement that the witness's testimony is to be influenced by the bribe is guilty of a felony [Penal Code § 137(a)]. In a case in which an attorney offered a witness $500 not to testify against the attorney's client in a murder trial, the court held that the attorney merited disbarment following a conviction under Penal Code § 137 [see In re Hanley (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 448, 450, 119 Cal. Rptr. 5] .

The payment of a larger sum than is reasonable to compensate the witness is judicially condemned because it may induce a witness to color testimony or present it in a light most favorable to the party paying the compensation [Crutchfield v. Davidson Brick Co. (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 34, 37-38, 130 P.2d 183] . Also, a witness may not be paid on a contingency basis [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(B); see Pelkey v. Hodge (1931) 112 Cal. App. 424, 425, 296 P. 908 (contingency fee agreement with expert witness is void as against public policy because it offers inducement to perjury)].

[b] Medical Malpractice Cases

In medical malpractice cases, attorneys occasionally contract with legal-medical consulting services to obtain expert assistance. Typically, payment to the service is contingent on the outcome of the plaintiff's case. When a consulting service hires expert witnesses to testify on the client's behalf, the arrangement does not violate Rule 5-310, so long as the expert witnesses hired by the service are themselves compensated on a noncontingency basis [see Ojeda v. Sharp Cabrillo Hospital (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1, 15, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 230 (flat rate hourly compensation to expert witnesses is permissible); see also Medical Legal Consulting Services, Inc. v. Covarrubias (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 80, 92, 285 Cal. Rptr. 559 (no California public policy bars enforcement of Maryland sister-state judgment based on legal-medical consulting services contract)].

[2] Secretion of Witnesses

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-310(A) prohibits an attorney from advising or directly or indirectly causing a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a court for the purpose of making the person unavailable as a witness in the court. An attorney who advised his client and other witnesses not to appear and testify in a proceeding against the attorney by the State Bar after the client and witnesses had been served with subpoenas directing them to appear was found to have clearly violated former Rule 7-107(B), the predecessor to Rule 5-320 [see Waterman v. State Bar (1936) 8 Cal. 2d 17, 19, 63 P.2d 1133 ; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)].

An attorney who advises a client or witness not to testify could also be guilty of a misdemeanor and held in contempt. Any person who knowingly and maliciously prevents or dissuades, or attempts to prevent or dissuade, a witness from attending or testifying at trial or any other legal proceeding is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 136.1(a); see In re Holmes (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 934, 942, 193 Cal. Rptr. 790 (assisting witness to avoid service of subpoena violates Penal Code § 136.1)]. Such acts constitute a felony if they are accompanied by force or a threat of force, are in furtherance of a conspiracy, or are committed for pecuniary gain [see Penal Code § 136.1(c)]. The offending attorney may also be guilty of contempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(8) [In re Holmes (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 934, 936, 193 Cal. Rptr. 790] .

[3] Suppression of Evidence

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d) requires an attorney to use only such means as are consistent with truth in maintaining the causes confided to him or her and never to seek to mislead the judge or any judicial officer by an artifice or false statement of fact or law.

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-220 prohibits an attorney from suppressing any evidence that the attorney or the client is legally obligated to reveal or produce. An attorney clearly violates Rule 5-220 by altering evidence or documents submitted to the court [see Price v. State Bar (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 537, 543, 179 Cal. Rptr. 914, 638 P.2d 1311

(prosecutor altered evidence in criminal trial to conform to witness's testimony, giving copy of altered document to defense counsel and destroying original copy of document); Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 290, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 (attorney transformed an assignment of contract form into confession of judgment and offered it to the court to obtain judgment)].

The attorney-client privilege does not bar revelation of the original location or condition of evidence if the attorney removes or alters the evidence [People v. Meredith (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 682, 695, 175 Cal. Rptr. 612, 631 P.2d 46 ; see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1986-89; LACBA Formal Opinion No. 466 (1993)]. Furthermore, anyone who knowingly and willfully destroys or conceals any evidence about to be produced in evidence in any trial, inquiry, or investigation authorized by law is guilty of a misdemeanor [Penal Code § 135].

§ 72.303 Contacts With Judges or Court Officials

[1] Prohibited Communications

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(B) prohibits a State Bar member from directly or indirectly communicating with or arguing to a judge or judicial officer on the merits of a contested matter pending before such judge or judicial officer, except in the following five contexts:

- In open court.
- With the consent of all other counsel in the matter.
- In the presence of all other counsel in the matter.
- In writing with a copy thereof furnished to the other counsel.
- In ex parte matters.

As used in Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300, the terms "judge" and "judicial officer" include law clerks, research attorneys, and other court personnel who participate in the decision-making process [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(C)].

Rule 5-300(B) is a rule of fairness that is designed to ensure that all interested sides will be heard on an issue [Heavey v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 553, 559, 131 Cal. Rptr. 406, 551 P.2d 1238 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-108(B), the predecessor of Rule 5-300(B), which prohibited similar types of contacts as Rule 5-300(B))].

ILLUSTRATIONS:

Application of Rule 5-300(B). An attorney represents a plaintiff in a wrongful death action. The judge orders dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to answer an interrogatory, but later orders the dismissal vacated on the condition that the plaintiff's attorney personally pay to the defendant $600 in attorney's fees and costs. The attorney sends four letters to the judge, asking the judge to annul the penalty and unconditionally vacate the dismissal. The attorney does not send a copy of the letters to opposing counsel, after two warnings by the judge to do so. Has the attorney violated Rule 5-300(B)? Yes. The attorney's letters arguing that that the dismissal should be unconditionally vacated clearly concerned the merits of the case, which were still being contested [see Heavey v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 553, 557, 559, 131 Cal. Rptr. 406, 551 P.2d 1238] .

In an ex parte communication between a prosecutor and a juvenile court judge, the prosecutor raises the issue of whether or not the court had jurisdiction to grant a rehearing. Has the prosecutor violated Rule 5-300(B)? No. The communication did not prejudice the juvenile and did not violate the ethical rule, because the contacts did not concern the exercise of the court's discretion to grant a rehearing but only the court's power to do so [see In re Jonathan S. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 468, 471-472, 151 Cal. Rptr. 810] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Ex Parte Contacts Regarding Contested Matter. Unless expressly authorized by law, ex parte contacts between the court and an attorney are always ill-advised and violate the Rules of Professional Conduct if the contacts concern the merits of a pending, contested matter [In re Jonathan S. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 468, 471, 151 Cal. Rptr. 810] .

An attorney should not communicate ex parte with a trial judge on the merits of a contested matter decided by that judge and on review by a higher court. Such a matter is "pending" before the trial judge if it may come before trial judge again [State Bar Formal Opinion 1984-78].

An attorney is not prohibited by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(B) from communicating with the court regarding a matter that is no longer pending. Thus, an ex parte communication between defense counsel and the court that sentenced the defendant in which counsel asked the court to initiate proceedings to recall the defendant's sentence did not violate the rule, because no contested matter was pending and such a request is not a matter to be heard in open court [see People v. Laue (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 1055, 1060-1061, 182 Cal. Rptr. 99] .

[2] Prohibited Gifts

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(A) prohibits a State Bar member from directly or indirectly giving or lending anything of value to a judge or court official or employee, unless the personal or family relationship between the attorney and the judge, official, or employee is such that they customarily give and exchange gifts [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(A)]. However, Rule 5-300(A) does not prohibit a State Bar member from contributing to the campaign fund of a judge running for election or confirmation pursuant to applicable law pertaining to such contributions [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(A); see also LACBA Formal Opinion No. 387 (1981)].

As used in Rule 5-300(A), the term "judge" includes law clerks, research attorneys, or other court personnel who participate in the decision-making process [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(C)].

§ 72.304 Moral Turpitude and Deception

[1] Deception of Court by Attorney

An attorney has a duty to use only means that are consistent with the truth and never to mislead the judge by an artifice or false statement of fact or law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)]. An attorney is subject to discipline under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106 for engaging in conduct intended to deceive the court.

Prohibited conduct includes:

- Perjury [Montag v. State Bar (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 721, 723, 726, 186 Cal. Rptr. 894, 652 P.2d 1370 (attorney gave false testimony at grand jury proceeding); Codiga v. State Bar (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 788, 793, 144 Cal. Rptr. 404, 575 P.2d 1186 (attorney prepared will containing ambiguity and, after testator's death, substituted page in original will to cure ambiguity, filing declaration under penalty of perjury stating that he had witnessed testator's execution of altered will); see also § 72.293[1]].

- Fraudulently altering legal documents [Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 291, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 (fraudulent transformation of assignment of contract form into confession of judgment and submission of altered document to court for purposes of obtaining judgment)].

- Concealing evidence [Sullins v. State Bar (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 609, 613, 125 Cal. Rptr. 471, 542 P.2d 631 (attorney deliberately misled trial court by concealing existence of letter sent to attorney by party interested in matter before the court that contained material facts relevant to issues)].

- Having the client sign blank verification forms, and later attaching the forms to discovery responses prepared by the attorney [Drociak v. State Bar (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1085, 1087-1088, 278 Cal. Rptr. 86, 804 P.2d 711] .

- Failing to disclose to the court suspension from practice [Arm v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 763, 770-772, 774, 268 Cal. Rptr. 741, 789 P.2d 922] .

- Advising and assisting client to violate court custody order [In the Matter of Lais (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 112].

- False representations of fact [Mammoth Mountain Ski Area v. Graham (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1374-1375, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 (false representation during appellate argument); In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166 (false representation to two judges that attorney had personally served summons and complaint on opposing party)].

- Requesting or agreeing to a trial date when the attorney does not intend to commence trial on that date [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1972-30].

If the attorney suborns perjury of a witness [Penal Code § 127] or offers in evidence as genuine any writing known by him or her to have been forged or fraudulently altered [Penal Code § 132], he or she is guilty of a felony.

For discussion of the prohibition on misleading the court, see § 72.305[1].

[2] Deception of Court by Client

[a] No Attorney Participation

Any attorney who condones a client's commission of perjury may be guilty of a misdemeanor under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128(a), which states that an attorney is guilty of a misdemeanor if the attorney is guilty of any deceit or collusion, or consents to any deceit or collusion with the intent to deceive the court or any party. Additionally, an attorney who permits his or her client to testify falsely may be subject to criminal prosecution under Penal Code § 127 for subornation of perjury, as well as to severe disciplinary action [In re Branch (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 200, 210-211, 74 Cal. Rptr. 238, 449 P.2d 174 ; see People v. Pike (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 70, 97, 22 Cal. Rptr. 664, 372 P.2d 656 (attorney may not knowingly allow his or her client to testify falsely); but cf. Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 427, 96 S. Ct. 984, 47 L. Ed. 2d 128 (state prosecutor who knowingly used false testimony is absolutely immune from civil liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983)].

[b] When Client Intends to Commit Perjury

If the attorney discovers that his or her client intends to commit perjury, he or she should immediately attempt to dissuade the client from doing so, and withdraw from the representation if the client insists on testifying falsely [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B)(2) (withdrawal mandatory when attorney knows or should know continued employment will result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act); see also Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6068(d), 6128(a); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200(A), (B)]. Counsel is not required to disclose to the court the precise reason for wishing to withdraw when the disclosure would violate attorney-client confidentiality [see In re Branch (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 200, 213, 74 Cal. Rptr. 238, 449 P.2d 174 ; Chaleff v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 721, 724, 138 Cal. Rptr. 735 ; People v. Blye (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 143, 148-149, 43 Cal. Rptr. 231 ; see also Nix v. Whiteside (1986) 475 U.S. 157, 171, 106 S. Ct. 988, 89 L. Ed. 2d 123 (defendant not deprived of U.S. Const., amend. VI right to effective assistance of counsel when counsel refused to cooperate with defendant in presenting perjured testimony); but see People v. Johnson (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 608, 619-634, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805 (defendant has constitutional right to testify even over objection of defense counsel; trial court should follow California's "narrative approach" in which defense counsel calls defendant as witness and allows defendant to testify in free narrative manner)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Maintain Client Confidentiality. As noted above, counsel is not required to disclose to the court the precise reason for withdrawal. In many instances, disclosure of the reason may be a breach of the duty of client confidences and secrets. Consequently, a sanitized motion for withdrawal, discussing a "failure of the meeting of the minds" in vague contractual terms may be appropriate. If questioned in chambers, the attorney should still maintain client confidentiality.

A trial court has discretion to deny an attorney's motion to withdraw that is based on his or her belief that the client is about to give perjured testimony at trial if no evidence is presented to show that the disagreement has resulted in a breakdown of the attorney-client relationship of such a magnitude as to jeopardize the client's right to the effective assistance of counsel [People v. Brown (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1335, 1341, 250 Cal. Rptr. 762] .

[c] When Client Has Committed Perjury

If the attorney discovers that the client has already committed perjury the attorney should urge the client to correct the testimony. If the client will not, the attorney may withdraw from the case [see Nix v. Whiteside (1986) 475 U.S. 157, 169-170, 106 S. Ct. 988, 89 L. Ed. 2d 123 (criminal defendant not deprived of U.S. Const., amend. VI right to effective assistance of counsel when counsel refused to cooperate with defendant in presenting perjured testimony)].

The Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct of the State Bar has concluded that an attorney in a civil, nonjury trial is not bound to inform the court if he or she knows that the client has testified falsely during the trial. Furthermore, it expressed the opinion that the attorney is precluded from divulging the perjury without the client's consent due to the mandate of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e), requiring an attorney to maintain the confidences and preserve the secrets of the client [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1983-74].

The attorney must take remedial action, however, by explaining to the client that if the perjured testimony is not corrected or at least removed from the record, the attorney is required to make a motion to the court to be allowed to withdraw from the case, but without disclosing the perjury, unless the client consents. The attorney must explain to the client that if the client attempts to correct the perjury by testifying contrary to his or her earlier testimony, he or she may be subject to criminal prosecution for perjury, may also be subject to cross-examination about his or hercredibility, and may lose the case. The attorney may also seek a stipulation from opposing counsel that the testimony be stricken from the record or may move that the testimony be stricken, but without disclosing that the testimony is false [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1983-74].

For further discussion concerning advising client perjury, see § 72.293[1]. For further discussion concerning misleading the court, see § 72.305.

[3] Deception of Opposing Counsel

An attorney is subject to discipline for engaging in conduct that deceives opposing counsel [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6068(d), 6106; see also State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1967-11]. Examples of such conduct include:

- Misleading opposing counsel about the validity of signatures on documents [Coviello v. State Bar (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 57, 66, 286 P.2d 357 (attorney fraudulently inserted his client's name as grantee in blank deeds to property owned by opposing counsel's client); Hallinan v. State Bar (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 246, 249, 200 P.2d 787 (attorney signed his client's name to settlement documents); but see In the Matter of Lazarus (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 387, 397-398 (with prior written authorization set forth in express power of attorney, attorney may sign client's name without stating his or her representative capacity)].

- Deceiving opposing counsel about the commencement of legal action [Bryant v. State Bar (1942)

21 Cal. 2d 285, 296, 299, 131 P.2d 523 (attorney willfully failed to keep his word to another attorney not to commence an action against the other attorney's clients while the other attorney was out of town, along with other dishonest actions)].

[4] Deception of State Bar

An attorney who deceives the State Bar during disciplinary proceedings is subject to disciplinary action for that conduct [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106]. Examples of such conduct include:

- Submitting fabricated documents to a State Bar hearing committee and making false representations to the committee [Olguin v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 195, 200-201, 167 Cal. Rptr. 876, 616 P.2d 858 (18 months' suspension imposed)].

- Submitting misleading testimony to a State Bar hearing panel [Franklin v. State Bar (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 700, 709, 224 Cal. Rptr. 738, 715 P.2d 699 ; Wren v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 81, 90, 192 Cal. Rptr. 743, 665 P.2d 515] .

- Falsifying a letter allegedly sent by the attorney to his client and submitting it to a State Bar hearing committee [Phillips v. State Bar (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 492, 500, 121 Cal. Rptr. 605, 535 P.2d 733] .

- Making false representations to a State Bar investigating committee [Ridley v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 551, 555, 99 Cal. Rptr. 873, 493 P.2d 105] .

An attorney has the duty to cooperate and participate in any State Bar investigation or proceeding pending against him or her, although he or she must not be deprived of any privilege guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. V or any other constitutional or statutory privileges. An attorney is also not required to cooperate with a disciplinary request that requires the attorney to waive a constitutional or statutory privilege or to comply with a request for information or other matters within an unreasonable amount of time in light of the time constraints of the attorney's practice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(i); see also Franklin v. State Bar (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 700, 708, 224 Cal. Rptr. 738, 715 P.2d 699 (attorney has no obligation to provide, on his or her own initiative, incriminating evidence in disciplinary hearing)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Cooperation vs. Self-Incrimination. Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(i), there is a delicate tension between cooperation and self-incrimination. Thus far, this problematic area has not been well delineated by the State Bar Court.

[5] Deception of Client

An attorney who knowingly makes false statements to his or her client concerning the matters the attorney is handling for the client is guilty of dishonest conduct under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106 [Stevens v. State Bar (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 283, 289, 272 Cal. Rptr. 167 ; see also Fitzpatrick v. State Bar (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 73, 87-88, 141 Cal. Rptr. 169 (disbarment warranted for numerous breaches of duties to clients)]. He or she is also guilty of violating the duty under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d) to use only those means as are consistent with truth in maintaining the causes entrusted to him or her.

[6] Deception of Others

The ethical duty to avoid dishonesty and deception covers everyday dishonesty and includes deception of nonclient third parties. It is not necessary that criminal activity be involved, actual harm result to merit disciplinary action when actual deception is intended and shown [Reznik v. State Bar (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 198, 81 Cal. Rptr. 769 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6068(b), (d), 6103, 6106].

An attorney's conduct in deleting language in a trust deed beneficiary statement, without the consent or knowledge of the beneficiary, and in subsequently forwarding the altered document to the escrow company thatwas handling the sale of the property, was held to be willful, improper, and a dishonest act involving moral turpitude under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106, warranting discipline [Crane v. State Bar (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 117, 120-122, 177 Cal. Rptr. 670, 635 P.2d 163 (attorney was suspended for one year for this conduct and violations of Rules 7-103 and 7-104); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)]. An attorney's deception of a bank officer by presenting a forged intrabank transfer order to the officer was held to clearly exhibit conduct so unprofessional as to warrant discipline [Allen v. State Bar (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 172, 178-179, 141 Cal. Rptr. 808, 570 P.2d 1226 (for this act and other deceitful acts, in addition to previous suspension for similar misconduct, appropriate discipline was disbarment); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)].

In addition, attorneys have been disciplined for making perjured representations on a lease application [Marquette v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 253, 262, 242 Cal. Rptr. 886, 746 P.2d 1289] , executing five rent checks against insufficient funds [Marquette v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 253, 262, 242 Cal. Rptr. 886, 746 P.2d 1289] , and establishing a client trust account to shield a client from judgment creditors [Coppock v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 665, 683-684, 244 Cal. Rptr. 462, 749 P.2d 1317 (attorney also relinquished control of trust account to client, allowing client to use it without supervision in fraudulent investment scheme)].

[7] Insurance Fraud

[a] Prohibited Conduct

It is grounds for disbarment or suspension for an attorney to engage in any conduct prohibited by the following statutes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106.5]:

(a) Penal Code § 550 (former Ins. Code § 1871.1, repealed and recodified by Stats. 1992, Ch. 675 §§ 4, 8); or

(b) Ins. Code § 1871.4.

Conduct prohibited by the two statutes includes doing any of the following or aiding abetting, soliciting, or conspiring with any person to do any of the following:

- Knowingly presenting or causing to be presented any false or fraudulent claim for the payment of a loss or injury, including payment of a loss or injury under a contract of insurance [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(1); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(1)].

- Knowingly presenting multiple claims for the same loss or injury, including presentation of multiple claims to more than one insurer, with an intent to defraud [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(2); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(2)].

- Knowingly causing or participating in a vehicular collision, or any other vehicular accident, for the purpose of presenting any false orfraudulent claim [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(3); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(3)].

- Knowingly presenting a false or fraudulent claim for the payments of a loss for theft, destruction, damage, or conversion of a motor vehicle, a motor vehicle part, or contents of a motor vehicle [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(4); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(4)].

- Knowingly preparing, making, or subscribing any writing, with intent to present or use the same, or to allow it to be presented in support of any false or fraudulent claim [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(5); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(5)].

- Knowingly make or cause or be made any false or fraudulent claim for payment of a health care benefit [Pen. Code § 550(a)(6)].

- Knowingly submitting a claim for a health care benefit that was not used by, or on behalf of, the claimant [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(8); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(7)].

- Knowingly presenting multiple claims for payment of the same health care benefit with an intent to defraud [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(9); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(8)].

- Knowingly presenting for payment any undercharges for health care benefits on behalf of a specific claimant unless any known overcharges for health care benefits for that claimant are presented for reconciliation at that time [former Ins. Code § 1871.1(a)(10); now see Penal Code § 550(a)(9)].

- Making or causing to be made a knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Lab Cal. § 3207 [see Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(1)].

- Presenting or causing to be presented a knowingly false or fraudulent written or oral material statement in support of, or in opposition to, a claim for compensation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Lab Cal. § 3207 [see Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(2)].

- Making or causing to be made a knowingly false or fraudulent statement with regard to entitlement to benefits with the intent to discourage an injured worker from claiming benefits or pursuing a claim [see Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(4)].

[b] Examples Resulting in Discipline

Attorneys have been disciplined for insurance fraud for:

- Knowingly submitting a false claim to an insurance company [Sampson v. State Bar (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 70, 83, 115 Cal. Rptr. 43, 524 P.2d 139 (decided under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106)].

- Knowingly duplicating items of special damage in claims submitted to insurance carriers on behalf of clients [Scofield v. State Bar (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 624, 628, 43 Cal. Rptr. 825, 401 P.2d 217] .

- Employing others to stage false automobile accidents for purposes of producing personal injury and property damage claims [In re Petty (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 356, 359-360, 173 Cal. Rptr. 461, 627 P.2d 191] .

- Falsifying medical reports and property damage reports [In re Petty (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 356, 359-360, 173 Cal. Rptr. 461, 627 P.2d 191] .

- Presenting false claims to insurers for settlement [In re Petty (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 356, 359-360, 173 Cal. Rptr. 461, 627 P.2d 191] .

- Forging the names of individuals to releases in order to obtain the settlement proceeds [In re Petty (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 356, 359-360, 173 Cal. Rptr. 461, 627 P.2d 191] .

[8] Disciplinary Action Based on Moral Turpitude

[a] Actual Harm Not Prerequisite

The commission of any act involving moral turpitude, dishonesty, or corruption, whether or not the act is committed while an attorney is acting as an attorney and whether or not the act is a felony or misdemeanor, constitutes cause for disbarment or suspension [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106]. Any act of dishonesty by an attorney is grounds for disciplinary action against the attorney, whether or not any harm results from the dishonest act [Olguin v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 167 Cal. Rptr. 876, 616 P.2d 858 ; Bryant v. State Bar (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 285, 296, 131 P.2d 523] . Actual injury or loss is not a prerequisite to discipline for fraudulent or deceitful acts under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106. The purpose of a disciplinary proceeding is not to ascertain the extent of the damage caused by an attorney, but rather to determine whether or not the attorney's conduct was unprofessional [Allen v. State Bar (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 172, 178, 141 Cal. Rptr. 808, 570 P.2d 1226] . Discipline may be imposed when actual deception is intended and shown [Coviello v. State Bar (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 57, 65, 286 P.2d 357] .

[b] Moral Turpitude Defined

Moral turpitude determinations are a matter of law. Moral turpitude is not a concept that fits a precise definition. The definition most often recited by the Supreme Court is "an act of baseness, vileness, or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellowmen, or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and customary rule of right and duty between man and man" [In the Matter of Francscinella (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 543, 549 (quoting from In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 93, 97, 82 P.2d 442)].

The definition of moral turpitude is measured by the morals of the day, and may vary according to the community or the times. The moral turpitude prohibition is a flexible standard, and its purpose is not the punishment of attorneys, but the protection of the public and the legal community against unsuitable practitioners. A holding that the attorney's act constitutes moral turpitude characterizes the attorney as unsuitable to practice law [In the Matter of Francscinella (1991) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 543, 549].

Matters are also referred to the State Bar Court by the Supreme Court when an attorney is convicted of a criminal act (including the mere violation of a municipal code section) for a determination of whether the criminal act involved moral turpitude. The Office of Trials will launch a full inquiry in these cases, and it is not bound by pleas or findings. An attorney's criminal conviction is conclusive proof in a disciplinary action that the attorney committed the crime for which he or she was convicted [see In re Crooks (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1090, 1097, 275 Cal. Rptr. 420] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Duty To Represent Client Competently And Zealously
2. Prohibited Conduct Exceeding Proper Bounds Of Representation

§ 72.305 Disrespect for Judiciary

[1] Filing False Pleadings and Documents

An attorney violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d) by knowingly filing any pleading or document with the court or other judicial officer that:

(a) Contains false statements or allegations [see Dixon v. State Bar (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 728, 739, 187 Cal. Rptr. 30, 653 P.2d 321 (attorney violated duty under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d) by filing false declarations with court); Weir v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 564, 576, 152 Cal. Rptr. 921, 591 P.2d 19 (attorney's repeated practice of filing false applications with the Immigration and Naturalization Service involved moral turpitude and warranted disbarment); Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 291, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 (attorney's filing of involuntary bankruptcy petitions containing false allegations for purposes of harassment and delay violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068 and professional rules)];

(b) Is forged [Garlow v. State Bar (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 912, 918, 180 Cal. Rptr. 831, 640 P.2d 1106 (attorney, by signing client's name to declaration under penalty of perjury and representing to court that signature was client's signature, willfully violated former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 7-105 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200) and suspension was warranted)]; or

(c) Is fabricated [Olguin v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 195, 199, 167 Cal. Rptr. 876, 616 P.2d 858 (submission of documents to State Bar committee that were fabrications intended to deceive the committee constituted violation of former Rule 7-105(1) (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200) warranting suspension)].

An attorney has an unqualified duty to refrain from acts that mislead the court, and the representation to a court of facts known to be false is presumed intentional and is a violation of the attorney's duties as an officer of the court [see

Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 509, 513, 153 Cal. Rptr. 24, 591 P.2d 47 (attorney filed false accountings with probate court); In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166 (attorney made false representations to two judges that attorney had personally served summons and complaint on opposing party)]. An attorney is subject to suspension for filing a false pleading even if there is no direct evidence of malice, intent to deceive, or hope of personal gain [Giovanazzi v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 465, 473, 169 Cal. Rptr. 581, 619 P.2d 1005] . Furthermore, it is not necessary that actual harm result before disciplinary action is warranted, when actual deception is intended and shown [Garlow v. State Bar (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 912, 917, 180 Cal. Rptr. 831, 640 P.2d 1106] . The filing of a false or misleading pleading or document that the attorney knows to be false or misleading presumes an intent to secure a determination based on it [Davis v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 231, 239-240, 188 Cal. Rptr. 441, 655 P.2d 1276 (false allegations in answer)]. Misrepresentation exceeds the bounds of zealous advocacy and is grounds for discipline [Davis v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 231, 239-240, 188 Cal. Rptr. 441, 655 P.2d 1276] .

[2] Making False Statements to Court

An attorney also violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-200 and Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d) by making false statements to the court or to another judicial officer.

For example, in Chefsky v. State Bar, the Court held that an attorney's false statements to the court that he was prepared to pay a judgment at once and his concealment of any reservations or conditions to immediate payment of the judgment clearly violated former Rule 7-501(1) (the predecessor of Rule 5-200, which prohibited similar types of conduct as Rule 5-200) and involved moral turpitude [Chefsky v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 116, 124, 202 Cal. Rptr. 349, 680 P.2d 82] .

False testimony on a material issue is a serious breach of an attorney's duties and is grounds for disciplinary action even if no harm results from the false testimony [Davis v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 231, 240, 188 Cal. Rptr. 441, 655 P.2d 1276 ; Olguin v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 167 Cal. Rptr. 876, 616 P.2d 858 (same duty applies to proceedings conducted by State Bar); see Dixon v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 335, 344 (attorney's lack of candor in proceedings before State Bar and numerous violations of duties owed to clients warranted disbarment); see also Warner v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 36, 44, 192 Cal. Rptr. 244, 664 P.2d 148 (attorney's fraudulent statements to State Bar investigating committee may constitute greater offense than misappropriation of client's funds); Spielbauer v. County of Santa Clara (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 914, 951, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 ; In re Regan, 2005 Calif. Op. LEXIS 7, 23,--Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr.--(attorney who made false statement to judge is not exculpated based on belief he is acting in clients' best interest); In the Matter of Chesnut (Review Dept. 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 166 (attorney's false representations to two judges were material regardless of whether courts were successfully mislead)]. Additionally, lawyers may face court sanctions for making misrepresentations to the court [Mammoth Mountain Ski Area v. Graham (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1374-1375, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 (court of appeal requested clerk to forward copy of opinion to State Bar because it was probable that attorney mischaracterized facts of case); Bryan v. Bank of America (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 185, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 148 (court of appeal has authority to issue sanctions against appellate attorney for misrepresentations made to appellate court)].

For discussion of client perjury, see §§ 72.293[3] and 72.304[2].

[3] Failing to Disclose Material Facts to Court

Intent to mislead a court by concealment of material information within the attorney's knowledge as effectively misleads a judge as does an overtly false statement. Both are improper [Rodgers v. State Bar (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 300, 315, 256 Cal. Rptr. 381, 768 P.2d 1058 ; Griffis v. S.S. Kresge Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 499, 197 Cal. Rptr. 771 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(d)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Concealment of Telephone Number. In a custody dispute in which the attorney's client had taken the child from the jurisdiction to Los Angeles, the attorney fails to disclose to the judge that he knows the client's telephone number. Has the attorney violated his ethical duties? Yes. The attorney's failure to disclose to the judge that the attorney knew his client's telephone number in Los Angeles constituted concealment of a material fact, involving moral turpitude [see Davidson v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 570, 574, 131 Cal. Rptr. 379, 551 P.2d 1211] .

[4] Offensive or Disrespectful Acts

[a] Toward Court

An attorney has a duty to maintain the respect due to the courts and judicial officers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(b)] and to abstain from all offensive personality and to advance no fact that is prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness unless required by the justice of the cause with which the attorney is charged [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f); see Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-106(C)(2), (6) (1980); Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rules 3.5, 4.4 (1983); see also In re S.C. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 396, 422-424, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 453 (contemptuous for attorney to make unsupported assertion that trial judge was acting out of bias toward party); but see United States v. Wunsch (9th Cir. 1996) 84 F.3d 1110 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f), regarding refraining from "all offensive personality" is unconstitutionally void for vagueness)].

An attorney may breach his or her duty by making insulting remarks about judges in briefs filed with an appellate court. In Ramirez v. State Bar, the attorney falsely maligned court of appeal justices in a reply brief in which he alleged that in reversing a judgment in favor of his clients the justices acted "unlawfully" and "illegally" and had become "parties to the theft" of his clients' property, and in a petition for a writ of certiorari in which he implied the justices had falsified the record and suggested that their "unblemished" records were "undeserved"; the court rejected the attorney's argument that outrageous and unwarranted statements concerning a justice of the court were protected by free speech considerations and held that the attorney's allegations were not supported by any credible factual basis [Ramirez v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 402, 404-405, 169 Cal. Rptr. 206, 619 P.2d 399] .

The attorney may also violate this duty of respect by writing letters to or about a judge containing insulting and offensive language, or by disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior toward the judge while holding court [see Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 289, 292, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 (unwarranted charge of bias and prejudice against all superior court judges in county in which matter was pending); Heavey v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 553, 560, 131 Cal. Rptr. 406, 551 P.2d 1238 (court did not find attorney guilty of violating Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f) because this charge was redundant to charge of violation of Rule 16 (now Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-300(B)), which prohibits communications with judge about matter pending before judge outside of opposing counsel's presence); Hogan v. State Bar (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 807, 809-810, 228 P.2d 554 (attorney disparaged judge's fairness and quality of legal education in letter addressed to State Bar)]. This conduct may also be sanctioned by contempt proceedings [Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 289, 292, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104 ; see Ridge v. State Bar (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 952, 960, 254 Cal. Rptr. 803, 766 P.2d 569 (appearance at judicial hearing under influence of alcohol); In re Siegel (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 843, 845, 120 Cal. Rptr. 8 , disapproved on other grounds in People v. Romero (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 728, 744, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270, 883 P.2d 388 (two attorneys who accused trial judge of lack of integrity during course of trial properly held in contempt)].

Additionally, an attorney has a duty to respectfully yield to a court's ruling regardless of whether the ruling is right or wrong. The Court of Appeal found a district attorney's "continued bickering with the court and threats of disobedience, even at the risk of a mistrial" could not be characterized as "mere advocacy" [People v. Pigage (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1374, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88] .

[b] Toward Opposing Counsel or Party

Personal attacks on the character or motives of an adverse party, an adverse party's counsel, or an adverse party's witnesses constitute misconduct [Stone v. Foster (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 334, 355, 164 Cal. Rptr. 901] . An attorney was held to have engaged in "offensive personality," prohibited by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f), by preparing and filing a declaration of one of his clients that referred to the opposing parties as "flannel-mouth" and "The Mouche" and referred to their attorneys as "alleged attorneys" [Snyder v. State Bar (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 286, 292, 133 Cal. Rptr. 864, 555 P.2d 1104] . A defense attorney's reference to the prosecutor as a "high-priced lawyer" was behavior calculated to irritate the prosecutor and to annoy the court, and was a violation of the attorney's duty to abstain from all offensive personality under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f); after having been warned by the court to refrain from this conduct, the attorney was properly held in contempt [see Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 129-130, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

[c] Toward Former Client

An attorney also has a duty to refrain from "offensive personality" toward a former client. In Dixon v. State Bar, the Court held that an attorney violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(f) by alleging in a declaration filed in response to an action brought against the attorney by a former client that the client worried about everything, including an affair her husband had supposedly had with her sister. The declaration was irrelevant to any issues in the case and was made solely for the purpose of harassing and embarrassing both the former client and her sister. Importantly, the conduct evidenced the attorney's failure to adhere to the duty to maintain client confidences and secrets inherent in the basic and fundamental fiduciary duty owed by all attorneys to their clients [Dixon v. State Bar (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 728, 739, 187 Cal. Rptr. 30, 653 P.2d 321] .

[5] Disobedience of Court Order

[a] Grounds for Discipline

A willful disobedience or violation of a court order requiring an attorney to do or not to do an act connected with or in the course of his or her profession, which the attorney ought in good faith to do or not to do, constitutes cause for disbarment or suspension [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103; see Dixon v. State Bar (1982) 32 Cal.3d 728, 739, 187 Cal. Rptr. 30, 653 P.2d 321 (attorney violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 6103 by willfully disobeying court order to turn over files to client after client had discharged attorney); see also Montalto v. State Bar (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 231, 234, 113 Cal. Rptr. 97, 520 P.2d 721 (attorney who willfully disobeyed court's order to produce documents warranted suspension for this and two other breaches of duty to clients)].

Failure to obey a court order in an attorney's nonprofessional or personal capacity may also constitute cause for disbarment or suspension when noncompliance was in bad faith [see Maltaman v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 924, 951, 239 Cal. Rptr. 687, 741 P.2d 185 ; but see Marquette v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 253, 264, 242 Cal. Rptr. 886, 746 P.2d 1289 (attorney's single act of noncompliance with court order to appear at debtor's examination, which resulted in continuation of debtor's examination for two weeks, did not involve moral turpitude or breach of attorney duties)].

An attorney's refusal to accede to a court's ruling may also constitute contempt of court [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 127, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; see also Trans-Action Commercial Investors, Inc. v. Firmaterr, Inc. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 352, 371-372, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449] . However, an attorney may take appropriate steps in good faith to test the validity of any court ruling [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-210; see Model Code of Professional Responsibility DR 7-106(A) (1980); Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 7-22 (1980)].

An attorney has a duty to respectfully yield to the rulings of the court, whether right or wrong. If the ruling is adverse, the attorney does not have the right to resist it. The attorney's only right is to respectfully preserve the point for appeal [

People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 632, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769 ; Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 126, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

[b] Grounds for Contempt

A willful neglect or violation of a duty by an attorney is punishable as contempt [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(3)], as is disobedience of any lawful judgment, order, or process of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(5)]. Attorneys have been found to be in contempt in the following situations:

- The attorney persistently repeated questions to witnesses after the court had sustained objections to these questions and admonished the attorney not to repeat them [Hawk v. Superior Court (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 108, 126-127, 116 Cal. Rptr. 713] .

- The attorney failed to appear for trial after the court had granted him a continuance of the trial date, without a valid excuse for his failure to appear [In re Stanley (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 588, 591, 170 Cal. Rptr. 755] .

- The attorney, without adequate justification, failed to appear for oral argument before the California Supreme Court and to notify the Court that he would not be appearing [In re Aguilar (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 386, 389, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874] .

For detailed discussion and forms relating to contempt, see Ch. 135, Contempt .

§ 72.320 Rigid Adherence to Rule 4-100

[1] Prophylactic Nature of Rule

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100 is prophylactic in nature. Harm to the client is not a prerequisite to discipline. The rule was adopted to provide against the probability in some cases, the possibility in many cases, and the danger in all cases that misappropriation, commingling, or other mismanagement will result in the loss of the client's money. There is inherent danger in such a practice, for frequently unforeseen circumstances arise jeopardizing the safety of the client's funds, and as far as the client is concerned the result is the same whether the money is deliberately misappropriated by an attorney or is unintentionally lost by circumstances beyond the attorney's control [Peck v. The State Bar (1932) 217 Cal. 47, 51, 17 P.2d 112] .

The purpose of the rule, then, is to minimize the possibility that the lawyer will, intentionally, negligently, or inadvertently, improperly use clients' funds, and to minimize the possibility that creditors of the lawyer will be able to reach clients' funds by writ of execution or otherwise. The latter possibility arises not only if a client's funds are placed in the lawyer's personal account, but also if the integrity of the trust account is compromised by the lawyer's placing his or her own funds in it. Commingling occurs when a client's money is intermingled with that of the attorney and its separate identity is lost so that it may be used for the attorney's personal expenses or subjected to the claims of his or her creditors [Black v. State Bar (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 219, 225-226, 18 Cal. Rptr. 518, 368 P.2d 118] .

[2] Harsh Sanctions for Violations of Rule

The purpose of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100 is fundamental. Clients are compelled to entrust their claims and property to attorneys, who are often essential agents in vindicating their rights through the legal process. Attorneys are therefore rightly expected to exercise extraordinary care and fidelity in dealing with clients' money and other property. These requirements are perhaps among the most important of any encountered by practicing attorneys. Thus, misappropriation or mismanagement of client funds is perhaps the most grievous breach of attorney ethics and fiduciary duty.

Disciplinary sanctions are relatively harsh and inflexible for misappropriation or commingling of client funds, for otherwise failing to properly safeguard the client's property or maintain adequate records, or for failing to deliver client property to the client on request. Violators are subject to severe discipline, often without regard to harm to the client or any but the most compelling mitigating factors [see, e.g., Pineda v. State Bar (1989)49 Cal. 3d 753, 759-760, 263 Cal. Rptr. 377, 781 P.2d 1 ; Silva-Vidor v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1071, 1079, 264 Cal. Rptr. 439, 782 P.2d 680 ; Guzzetta v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 962, 980-981, 239 Cal. Rptr. 675, 741 P.2d 172 (claim that mismanagement is not willful or fraudulent is no defense to charge of violating trust accounting requirements); see also In the Matter of Respondent F. (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 17, 29-31 (private reproval imposed for inadvertent mishandling of small sum of trust funds)]. For further discussion, see § 72.329.

PRACTICE TIP:

Record-Keeping Standards. Be aware that 1993 changes imposing mandatory client trust accounting standards will make the imposition of discipline by the State Bar even more effortless in this area. Counsel are advised to adhere carefully to the requirements for identifying, protecting, and otherwise maintaining and administering client funds and property [see § 72.321[4]].

§ 72.321 Components of Rule 4-100

[1] Summary of Components

Analytically, there are at least five basic components of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100:

(1) The segregation rule. Funds received or held for the benefit of clients must be segregated from the lawyer's personal funds and placed in one or more trust accounts, generally in California [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A); see also § 72.321[2]].

(2) The notification rule. The lawyer must promptly notify a client of the receipt of any of the client's property [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(1); see also § 72.321[3]].

(3) The identification and safekeeping rule. The lawyer must identify and label property of the client and place it in a safe place as soon as possible [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(2); see also § 72.321[3]].

(4) The recordkeeping requirement. This includes not only a record preservation provision, but also a requirement of compliance with any proper order for an audit of the lawyer's trust account [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(3); see also § 72.321[4]].

(5) The payment-delivery rule. This requires the lawyer to pay or deliver, on the client's request, all the property to which the client is entitled, either to the client or to a third person as requested by the client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(4); see § 72.321[5][a]].

[2] Segregation of Client Funds in Trust Account

[a] Prohibition Against Commingling

The primary component of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100 is doubtless the commingling prohibition. Commingling occurs when a client's money is intermingled with that of his or her attorney and its separate identity is lost so that it may be used for the attorney's personal expenses or subjected to the claims of his creditors [see Clark v. State Bar (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 161, 167-168, 246 P.2d 1] . A violation occurs if the attorney fails to deposit and manage funds in the required manner, even if the failure does not harm the client and is never discovered by the client [Murray v. State Bar (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 575, 584, 220 Cal. Rptr. 677, 220 Cal. Rptr. 677, 709 P.2d 480] . An attorney's honest, but mistaken, belief that he or she has the client's permission to retain client funds is no defense to a charge of commingling those funds with those of the attorney [see Dudugjian v. State Bar (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1092, 1099, 278 Cal. Rptr. 90, 804 P.2d 715] .

An attorney also may not allow the attachment of the trust account to secure the attorney's personal debts. In this situation the client account functions as security for the attorney's personal obligations; the attorney's failure to substitute his or her personal funds amounts to commingling [Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 847, 853, 100 Cal. Rptr. 713, 494 P.2d 1257] .

[b] No Deposit of "Buffer" Funds

Deposits of an attorney's own funds constitute commingling even if they are made for the purpose of providing a "buffer" or "cushion" against the potentially harsh effect of misappropriation or mismanagement (such as overdrafts) [see Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 398, 404, 158 Cal. Rptr. 869, 600 P.2d 1326 ; Silver v. State Bar (1977) 13 Cal. 3d 134, 145 n.7, 117 Cal. Rptr. 821, 528 P.2d 1157 (rule violated when attorneys placed $2,000 of their own funds in client account as buffer)]. Such commingling, by itself, may be considered a violation warranting up to three years' suspension [see Fitzpatrick v. State Bar (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 73, 87, 141 Cal. Rptr. 169, 569 P.2d 763 (dictum); see also § 72.329].

If an attorney misappropriates client funds, there is a violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A). The attorney does not, however, commit a further violation based on commingling if he or she subsequently reimburses the client account out of personal funds [Guzzetta v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 962, 978-979, 239 Cal. Rptr. 675, 741 P.2d 172] .

[c] Attorney Acting in Dual Capacity

An attorney's obligation to maintain separate client trust accounts exists regardless of the fact that the attorney is acting in another capacity, or in a dual capacity [Ridge v. State Bar (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 952, 961-962 (executor); Worth v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 337, 341, 130 Cal. Rptr. 712, 551 P.2d 16 (developer); Simmons v. State Bar (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 361, 365, 74 Cal. Rptr. 915, 450 P.2d 291 (real estate developer)].

[d] Identifiable Trust Account Maintained in California

Stated simply, Rule 4-100 requires that clients' funds be placed in one or more trustee accounts [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)]. The rule against commingling is absolute; all funds received or held for the benefit of clients by an attorney must be deposited in one or more identifiable bank accounts labeled "Trust Account," "Client's Funds Account" or words of similar import, and no funds belonging to the attorney may be commingled with them [Arm v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 763, 776-777, 268 Cal. Rptr. 741, 789 P.2d 922 (construing former Rule 8-101(A); now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-101(A))].

Absent specific circumstances, such as a significant amount of money or funds held by the attorney for more than a short period of time, there is no need to segregate individual clients' funds; all client funds may be commingled in one trust account. Those funds that are nominal in amount or are on deposit for a short period of time must be placed in an interest-bearing demand trust account, the interest on which must be paid to the State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211; see § 72.323].

Funds ordinarily must be deposited in a bank account maintained in the State of California. They may be deposited in non-California institutions with the client's consent if there is a substantial relationship between the client and the jurisdiction in which the funds are deposited [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)].

[e] Account Management

When the account is opened or closed, the attorney should send a deposit slip or voided blank check on the account to the Legal Services Trust Fund Program at the State Bar, including the attorney's bar membership number [see § 72.323]. For discussion of additional record-keeping requirements, see § 72.321[4].

The rule against commingling requires that an attorney withdraw any funds from the client trust account when those funds become property of the attorney. The attorney must withdraw such funds at the earliest reasonable time after the attorney's interest in them becomes fixed [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)]. For further discussion, see § 72.324[1].

[f] Exception for Payment of Bank Charges

There is a limited exception to the rule against commingling, which has been strictly construed: the attorney may deposit funds "reasonably sufficient" to pay bank charges into the client's trust account [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Only Deposit Amount Needed to Fund Charges. The maximum prudent reserve permitted to be maintained in a client trust account to handle "bank charges" is approximately $500. Avoid depositing additional amounts, e.g., to cover overdrafts [see § 72.321[2][b]]. The deposit of an attorney's own funds into a client's trust account is a "red flag" should future investigation occur.

[3] Notification and Safekeeping Requirements

[a] Basic Duties

A lawyer must promptly notify a client of the receipt of his or her funds, securities, or other property [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(1)], and must promptly identify and label the property and place it in a safe deposit box or other place of safekeeping as soon as practicable [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(2)]. Funds must be deposited in a trust account [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A); see also § 72.321[2][d]].

The attorney's duties with regard to the safekeeping of client funds are nondelegable. An attorney will be subject to discipline for commingling or other violations that occur because of the negligence of office employees [see Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 785, 795-796, 205 Cal. Rptr. 834, 685 P.2d 1185] .

[b] Grounds for Disciplinary Sanctions

Violations of the notification or safekeeping requirements are usually accompanied by commingling, misappropriation of the client's funds, or other serious violations [see, e.g., McCray v. State Bar (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 257, 260, 211 Cal. Rptr. 691, 696 P.2d 83 (misappropriation); Phillips v. State Bar (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 492, 495-496, 121 Cal. Rptr. 605, 535 P.2d 733 (unauthorized endorsement of release and settlement check); Monroe v. State Bar (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 145, 152, 10 Cal. Rptr. 257, 358 P.2d 529 (intentionally deceiving opposing counsel); Griffith v. State Bar (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 273, 277, 158 P.2d 1 (misappropriation and commingling)].

Nonetheless, there have been cases in which the failure to comply with the notification or safekeeping requirements, or both, was used to justify disciplinary sanctions. For example, in Browne v. State Bar, the lawyer received his client's money and went to a local bar where he was allegedly given knockout drops and robbed of the money [Browne v. State Bar (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 165, 166-168, 287 P.2d 745] . Even though no misappropriation was proved, the Supreme Court nevertheless suspended the attorney for three months for failure to notify his client promptly of the receipt and loss of the funds. Similarly, in Walter v. State Bar, the Supreme Court referred to a prior proceeding involving Mr. Walter in which he was reproved for taking his client's check and depositing a like amount of cash in an envelope attached to the client's file in his office, even though there was no finding of misappropriation or commingling [Walter v. State Bar (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 880, 887, 87 Cal. Rptr. 833, 471 P.2d 481] .

In both Browne and Walter, it may be that the Supreme Court was somewhat unpersuaded of the bona fides of the lawyers' conduct. In other cases, conduct arguably in violation of the rules regarding safekeeping of client funds and notification has not been sufficient to warrant sanctions when the Court was clearly persuaded of the lawyer's good faith. For example, in Russill v. State Bar, the lawyer had an open book account with a third party and possessed a full power of attorney with regard to his affairs. The lawyer was given money by his client to give to the third party. Instead of doing so, he put the money in his own account because the third party owed him more than the money he was given by the client. While the Court criticized the lawyer's conduct as bad business practice, it found no moral turpitude and dismissed the proceeding [Russill v. State Bar (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 321, 328, 115 P.2d 464] .

[4] Record Keeping

[a] Basic Requirements

A lawyer must maintain complete records of the clients' funds, securities, and other property he or she holds, preserve those records for no less than five years after the final appropriate disposition of the property, render appropriate accountings to his or her clients, and comply with any order for an audit of such records issued pursuant to the Rules of Procedure of the State Bar [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(3); see also § 72.321[4][d]].

PRACTICE TIP:

State Bar Access to Financial Records. The State Bar also has access to trust accounts for purposes of any audit, by issuance of a subpoena [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6069]. Although an attorney may seek to quash the subpoena, this is usually a waste of valuable time [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6049].

[b] Breach of Duties Generally

The failure to keep proper books of accounts, vouchers, receipts, and checks is a breach of the attorney's duty to his or her clients [Fitzsimmons v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 327, 332, 193 Cal. Rptr. 896, 667 P.2d 700 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128(c)]. The fact that the failure was in good faith and without injury to the client is irrelevant [Fitzsimmons v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 327, 331, 193 Cal. Rptr. 896, 667 P.2d 700] . Moreover, the duties are nondelegable, so that an attorney is subject to discipline for negligent lapses in recordkeeping procedures by office employees; serious and inexcusable lapses may be deemed willful for disciplinary purposes [Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 785, 795-796, 205 Cal. Rptr. 834, 685 P.2d 1185 ; see Edwards v. State Bar (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 28, 37, 276 Cal. Rptr. 153, 801 P.2d 396] .

As with the notification and safekeeping requirement, it is unlikely that violation of the recordkeeping requirement will be unaccompanied by other violations. For example, in Fitzsimmons v. State Bar, the attorney failed to obtain a receipt for cash he allegedly gave to a third party on instructions of his client. Under the circumstances of the case, the Court held his conduct in violation of the recordkeeping requirement. However, the reproval administered was in part based on his failure to deposit large sums of clients' funds in his trust account [Fitzsimmons v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 327, 330, 193 Cal. Rptr. 896, 667 P.2d 700] .

Nonetheless, an attorney's failure to provide a proper accounting to the client for funds received on the client's behalf is grounds for discipline regardless of whether there is consequent financial loss by the client [McCray v. State Bar

(1985) 38 Cal. 3d 257, 270, 211 Cal. Rptr. 691, 696 P.2d 83] . Failure to keep records is a "suspicious circumstance" that gives rise to an adverse inference in disciplinary proceedings, for example, of conversion of the proceeds [see Rodgers v. State Bar (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 300, 311, 256 Cal. Rptr. 381, 768 P.2d 1058 ; Walter v. State Bar (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 880, 889, 87 Cal. Rptr. 833, 471 P.2d 481] .

[c] Improper Use of ATM Cards or Overdraft Protection

An attorney who repeatedly withdraws small amounts of cash for personal use from a trust account by means of his or her ATM card may be regarded as improperly treating the trust account as a personal or general office account, and either allowing the attorney's own funds to remain in the trust account longer than they should or misappropriating funds that properly belong to the attorney's client. This is true regardless of the means by which the withdrawals are accomplished--check, ATM card, withdrawal slip, or other means. This does not mean that all use of ATM cards in connection with client trust accounts is inherently improper or suspect. For example, an attorney may not be precluded from using an ATM card to accomplish a transfer of funds from a client trust account to a general office account that is otherwise proper, provided that adequate records are kept [see In re Heiner (1990) 1 State Bar Ct Rptr 301].

Similarly, the use of "instant over draft protection" and so-called instant availability of funds may be improper with respect to a client trust account. In these situations the bank is in reality extending a loan to the attorney on the basis of the "balances" maintained in the client trust account, which is improper in that it represents the utilization of the client's funds as security. Although many attorneys maintain accounts with these attributes, it is improper to maintain automatic "overdraft" protection because of the requirement to report all overdrafts.

[d] Standards for Recordkeeping

[i] Client Funds

The Board of Governors of the State Bar has adopted standards, effective January 1, 1993, as to what "records" shall be maintained by members and law firms in accordance with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(3). These standards are effective and binding on all State Bar members [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(C)].

Under the Standards, a State Bar member must, from the date of receipt of client funds through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of such funds, maintain the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100, Standards]:

- A written ledger for each client on whose behalf funds are held that sets forth:
  - The name of the client.
  - The date, amount, and source of all funds received on behalf of the client.
  - The date, amount, payee, and purpose of each disbursement made on behalf of the client.
  - The current balance for the client.
- A written journal for each bank account that sets forth:
  - The name of the account.
  - The date, amount, and client affected by each debit and credit.

- The current balance in the account.

- All bank statements and canceled checks for each bank account.

- Each monthly reconciliation (balancing) of the above items.

Under the Check Clearing for the 21st Century Act [Pub. L. 108-100], banks have the option to abandon returning original checks to customers with their monthly bank statements. Banks may destroy the original checks and send the customer a digital image of the check called a substitute check. To remain in compliance with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct Rule 4-100, lawyers should determine their bank's policy regarding returning original checks or substitute checks.

[ii] Client Securities or Other Property

The Standards also require a member, from the date of receipt of all securities and other properties held for the benefit of the client through the period ending five years from the date of appropriate disbursement of the securities and other properties, to maintain a written journal that specifies the following [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100, Standards]:

- Each item of security and property held.

- The person on whose behalf the security or property is held.

- The date of receipt of the security or property.

- The date of distribution of the security or property.

- Each person to whom the security or property was distributed.

[5] Payment and Delivery of Property to Which Client Is Entitled

[a] Basic Requirements

A lawyer must promptly pay or deliver to the client funds, securities, or property that the client requests and is entitled to [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(4)]. Violations of this rule will almost invariably be accompanied by misappropriation [see, e.g., Warner v. State Bar (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 36, 41-42, 192 Cal. Rptr. 244, 664 P.2d 148 ; Doyle v. State Bar (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 12, 16-18, 184 Cal. Rptr. 720, 648 P.2d 942] , because there is no reason for a lawyer to refuse a client's request for his or her funds unless the lawyer simply does not have the money or property which, except in an extraordinarily unusual case [see, e.g., Butts v. State Bar (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 453, 457-458, 189 P.2d 1 (attorney's mistaken but good faith withholding, after client's death, of part of trust fund as payment for monies advanced to penniless client for necessaries of life was improper but was not moral turpitude)], would establish misappropriation.

Generally, when an attorney unreasonably refuses to or delays in endorsing a client's settlement draft that requires the attorney's signature, the attorney will be found to violate Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(4) for failure to promptly pay or deliver funds to the client [see In the Matter of Berg (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 725 ; In the Matter of Kaplan (Review Dept. 1993) 2 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 509 ; but see In the Matter of Feldsott (Review Dept. 1997) 3 Cal. State B. Ct. Rptr. 754 (attorney's refusal to sign settlement draft after taking appropriate steps not unreasonable)].

If there is a dispute between the lawyer and client as to whether the funds belong to the lawyer (for example, as his or her fee) or to the client, the funds must be retained in the lawyer's trust account until the dispute is resolved [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)]. While the lawyer may not put the disputed amount into his or her general account, he or she will not be disciplined for retaining it in the trust account if there is a bona fide dispute over the right to the funds. There may also be a dispute over whether a lawyer has a lien on property belonging to the client. For a discussion of the attorney's lien rights, see § 72.198.

For further discussion of the extent to which an attorney is obligated to return property to a client other than trust account funds, particularly files and attorney work product, see §§ 72.198[3] and 72.371[2][a].

[b] Effect of Third-Party Liens

In some situations, the attorney will hold money on which a third party has placed a lien. For example, in a personal injury action a doctor may require a medical lien for reports and examinations. Because the client is not necessarily entitled to the full sum in the account, the attorney need not pay the amount to the client that is in dispute [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 368 (1977)]. Nevertheless, it appears that the attorney may not pay the amount of the lien without the client's consent [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-210(A)(1)].

If a third party has a lien on the client's property in the attorney's possession of which the attorney has notice, and the client objects to the payment of the lien, the attorney should notify both the holder of the lien and the client that the attorney will hold the funds until the dispute between them is settled [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 368 (1977)]. However, the attorney should also, consistent with his or her obligations to the client, encourage a reasonably prompt resolution of the dispute to avoid the necessity of bringing an action of interpleader, such as settlement discussions or arbitration [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 368 (1977)].

For discussion of payment of medical liens, see § 72.327[1].

§ 72.322 Fiduciary Duty to Nonclients

An attorney acting as a fiduciary for a nonclient may be disciplined for violating his or her fiduciary duty to that person, notwithstanding the lack of an attorney-client relationship [Guzzetta v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 962, 979, 239 Cal. Rptr. 675, 741 P.2d 172 ; Galardi v. State Bar (1986) 43 Cal. 3d 683, 691, 238 Cal. Rptr. 774, 739 P.2d 134 , cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1062 (1988) ; Worth v. State Bar (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 337, 341, 130 Cal. Rptr. 712, 551 P.2d 16] .

For example, an attorney breached his fiduciary duties to nonclients when he entered into joint venture agreements with them to improve and sell real properties, and then subsequently diverted funds from loans secured by the properties, failed to obtain consent of the co-joint venturers before encumbering the properties, and failed to comply with the request of one of the co-joint venturers for an accounting, all of which eventually resulted in foreclosures on the properties [Galardi v. State Bar (1986) 43 Cal. 3d 683, 691-693, 238 Cal. Rptr. 774, 739 P.2d 134] .

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.323

§ 72.323 Placement of Client Funds in Interest Bearing Trust Account

[1] IOLTA Requirements

Prior to 1981, attorneys were required only to segregate client funds from their own funds. Typically, all client funds were put in one demand (that is, checking) account, and no interest was paid on the account. After banks were allowed to pay interest on checking accounts, the Legislature, in 1981, enacted Bus. & Prof. Code § 6210 et seq., entitled "Funds for the Provision of Legal Services to Indigent Persons," generally referred to as "IOLTA" (Interest on Lawyers Trust Accounts). These statutes require any lawyer who receives or disburses trust funds to establish and maintain an IOLTA account in which the attorney or law firm must deposit or invest all client deposits or funds that are nominal in amount or are on deposit or invested for a short period of time [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211(a)].

Interest earned on these accounts must be transmitted to the State Bar of California at least quarterly [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6212(e)(1)]. The monies received by the State Bar must be used to fund "qualified legal services projects" [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6213(a), 6214] in accordance with criteria established by the legislation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6216]. There is no discretion to use the interest earned on nominal or short term accounts for any purpose other than the statutory one [Carroll v. State Bar (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1193, 1200-1201, 213 Cal. Rptr. 305 , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 848] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Setting Up State Bar Trust Account. Most banks are familiar with Bus. & Prof. Code § 6210 et seq. and will be able to set up an account that complies with these provisions. Banks generally automatically remit interest to the State Bar. It is important for the attorney to check periodically to ensure that the bank has set up the right type of account and is sending the interest to the State Bar. There have been some instances in which a bank fails to set up the account properly or later stops sending interest to the State Bar.

[2] Implementing Regulations

Requirements and restrictions imposed on recipients of the funds are also established by the legislation [see Bus. &

Prof. Code § 6217 et seq.]. The Board of Governors of the State Bar has adopted regulations and procedures necessary to implement the legislation [see Rules Regulating Interest-Bearing Trust Fund Accounts, Rule 1 et seq.].

The statutory scheme is not an unconstitutional "taking" of property without just compensation [Carroll v. State Bar (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1193, 1204-1206, 213 Cal. Rptr. 305 , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 848 ; Brown v. Legal Foundation of Washington (2003) 538 U.S. 216, 235, 123 S. Ct. 1406, 155 L. Ed. 2d 376 (interest earned in the IOLTA accounts is the private property of the owner of the principal, the transfer of which could be a per se taking, requiring just compensation)], or unconstitutionally vague because of its reference to "deposits that are nominal in amount or are on deposit for a short period of time" [Carroll v. State Bar (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1193, 1203-1204, 213 Cal. Rptr. 305 , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 848] .

The program is mandatory and the client has no right to have his or her funds deposited in any other account, so long as they are either "nominal" in amount or held "for a short period of time." Funds are nominal if it is impractical to segregate them to earn income for the benefit of the client, in light of the income the funds could earn or the costs involved in earning or accounting for such income [Rules Regulating Interest-Bearing Trust Fund Accounts, Rule 1.4].

Constitutionality of IOLTA Program. In Brown v. Legal Foundation of Washington (2003) 538 U.S. 216, 123 S. Ct. 1406, 155 L. Ed. 2d 376 , the Supreme Court reiterated its stance in Phillips that the interest earned in an IOLTA account is the "private property" of the owner of the principal. The court went on to hold that a state law that requires client funds which could not otherwise generate net earnings for the client to be deposited in an IOLTA account is not a "regulatory taking." The court further held that a law requiring the interest on such funds to be transferred to a different owner "for a legitimate public use" could be a per se taking requiring the payment of just compensation to the client, but that compensation was to be measured by the client's pecuniary loss, that is, the net interest actually earned. (For example, if the interest generated was less than the cost of distributing the interest to the client, then no net interest would have been earned.) The court reasoned that if the pecuniary loss was zero, then no violation of the Just Compensation Clause of the Fifth Amendment occurred. Thus, the constitutionality of an IOLTA program, in this respect, appears to hinge on whether adherence to the laws of a particular program result in a pecuniary loss to the client. While California's IOLTA program is currently in effect, it is unclear whether Bus. & Prof. Code Section 6210 is constitutional.

Each attorney or firm must make a determination of whether the criteria are met [Rules Regulating Interest-Bearing Trust Fund Accounts, Rule 1.5]. The Rules also provide, however, that regardless of the determination of the attorney, no disciplinary action will be brought if the determination was made in good faith [Rules Regulating Interest-Bearing Trust Fund Accounts, Rule 1.5].

PRACTICE TIP:

Deposit of Client Trust Funds. Any client trust funds that are more than nominal, or are to be held for more than a short period of time, should also be placed in an interest bearing account with the interest payable to the client. A fiduciary has a general duty to make the trust productive by depositing funds in interest bearing accounts [see Prob. Code §§ 16007, 16225, 16440(a)(3)]. Under similar fiduciary duties to preserve the trust corpus [see Prob. Code § 16006], an attorney should only deposit funds into federally insured accounts, and open several accounts if necessary at separate banks when a client's trust funds exceed the federally insured limits.

[3] Overdraft Reporting

Depositories for attorney trust accounts are required to report overdrafts from the accounts to the State Bar, irrespective of whether the instrument drawn on insufficient funds is honored [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6091.1(a), 6091.2(a), (b); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1(b) (format of reports)]. As a condition of practicing law in California, attorneys are deemed to have consented to reporting [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1(c)]. A financial institution may charge an attorney or law firm for the reasonable cost of producing reports and records concerning overdrafts from attorney trust accounts [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091.1(d); see also Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 924-929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 (charge for check drawn on insufficient funds must not be unconscionable)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Overdraft Report Sent to State Bar. The requirements that banks report overdrafts on IOLTA accounts to the State Bar do not require that the banks also notify the attorney. Often the attorney's first notice of an overdraft will be through contact by the State Bar.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Client Trust Account Management

§ 72.324 Withdrawal From Trust Account

[1] By Attorney for Earned Fees

To the extent that a lawyer becomes entitled to a portion of the client's funds (for example, for services performed), he or she must withdraw that portion at the earliest reasonable time after his or her interest in the funds becomes fixed. If, however, there is a dispute over the lawyer's right to withdraw the funds, then the disputed amount must remain in the trust account until the dispute is resolved [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2); see also § 72.324[3]].

To assure the integrity of the trust account, Rule 4-100(A)(2) requires that the attorney withdraw funds "at the earliest reasonable time" after the attorney's interest in those funds becomes fixed [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)]. Failure to do this subjects the client's funds to the very risks the commingling rule was designed to protect against [see Arm v. State Bar (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 763, 777, 268 Cal. Rptr. 741, 789 P.2d 922] .

[2] Deposit and Distribution of Settlement Proceeds

Often funds placed in a trust account belong, either currently or potentially, to both the lawyer and the client. For example, a lawyer may receive a settlement check, from the proceeds of which the client is to receive the net settlement and the lawyer is to receive his or her fee. In these circumstances, the check should, after proper endorsement, be deposited in the lawyer's trust account. After the check is properly endorsed, the lawyer should write two checks on the trust account: one to the client and one to the attorney, to be placed in his or her general account. An accounting should also be given to the client. Thus it is not proper for the lawyer to leave his or her funds in the trust account, nor is it proper for the lawyer to deposit the initial settlement check in his or her general account.

[3] When Fee in Dispute

If there is a fee dispute between the lawyer and the client, any portion of the lawyer's fee that is disputed must remain in the trust account until the dispute is finally resolved and any interest has become fixed [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2); see also Garlow v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 689, 707-710, 244 Cal. Rptr. 452, 749 P.2d 1037 (attorney may not sell chattels pledged as security for attorney's fees if client disputes disposition of the chattels)]. A lawyer may not unilaterally determine his or her fee and withhold trust funds to satisfy that fee, even though he or she may be entitled to reimbursement for services [see Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 398, 404, 158 Cal. Rptr. 869, 600 P.2d 1326 ; Brody v. State Bar (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 347, 350 n.5, 113 Cal. Rptr. 371, 521 P.2d 107] .

ILLUSTRATION:

Disputed Amount Left in Trust Account. Client and attorney enter a one-third contingency fee contract. However, the contract is not put in writing, as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147. The client exercises the statutory right to avoid the contract, and as a consequence, the lawyer is only entitled to the reasonable value of his or her services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(b)]. The recovery in the case is $60,000. The client contends that the lawyer's services are worth $10,000. The lawyer claims one-third of the recovery ($20,000) as reasonable compensation. What should the lawyer do? The lawyer should pay the client $40,000, pay himself or herself $10,000, and leave the remaining (disputed) amount in the trust account until the dispute is resolved [see Jackson v. State Bar (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 398, 404, 158 Cal. Rptr. 869, 600 P.2d 1326] .

If funds are claimed by another attorney, and the client has not directed their disbursement to this attorney, the attorney holding the funds does not violate his or her duties by withdrawing the disputed funds from the account after the client has received the share due to him or her [Shalant v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 485, 489, 189 Cal. Rptr. 374, 658 P.2d 737] .

[4] Determining Client's Funds

[a] Dependent on Nature of Agreement

Determining which funds in a trust account belong to a client is relatively simple when those funds are received by the lawyer on behalf of the client by way of settlement of litigation, proceeds from a sale of property, or the like. The problem becomes more complex, however, when the funds are given to the lawyer by the client for services to be performed. Analytically, there are three possible agreements (or interpretations of ambiguous agreements) that might have been intended:

- The so-called "true retainer."
- The so-called "flat" or "fixed" fee.
- The advance against fees to be earned.

Adding to the confusion is the fact that an arrangement by which funds are advanced against fees to be earned is often loosely referred to as a "retainer" [see Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1980-1]. For further discussion of fee agreements, see § 72.195[1].

[b] True Retainer Agreement

The "true retainer" is a sum of money paid to the attorney to assure his or her availability for future services that he or she may or may not ever be called on to render. The amount paid as a retainer is solely for the purpose of assuring the lawyer's availability and will not reduce the lawyer's fee for future services. The lawyer may never be called on to perform any services. In this true retainer agreement, the money paid to the lawyer becomes his or hers on payment and should be placed in the general account [see Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 164 n.4, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] . If the payment is to be billed against the future performance of work, it is not a "true retainer."

The determination that funds belong to the lawyer is made for the specific purpose of determining whether they must be placed in a trust account. It does not immunize the lawyer from, for example, a failure-of-consideration claim against the estate of a deceased lawyer who died before the end of the retainer period [see Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1980-1]. It is also an open question whether the discharge of the lawyer before the end of the retainer period entitles the attorney only to the value of his or her services [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . In any event, for purposes of the commingling rules, fees given for a true retainer belong to the lawyer when received [see Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 164 n.4, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] .

One court has identified a third type of fee falling between a "true retainer" and an "advance payment retainer." In discussing this intermediate "security retainer," the court defined it as an amount paid by the client to the attorney to secure payment of fees for future services that the attorney is expected to provide. It remains the property of the client until the attorney applies it to services actually rendered, and it acts as a "credit toward fees." The court found that such a "security retainer" must be deposited into a client trust account and withdrawn only as it is earned [T. & R. Foods, Inc. v. Rose (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 7-8].

ILLUSTRATION:

True Retainer Agreement. On January 2, 1991, Lawyer receives $10,000 from Megabucks Corporation to be available to handle any civil litigation in which it is a defendant during 1991. On January 5, 1991, Lawyer deposits the $10,000 received from Megabucks into his office account. Megabucks Corporation does not need Lawyer during 1991. Is this a true retainer fee? Yes. A true retainer fee is paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the attorney for the matter. The true retainer fee is not paid for the performance of any legal service or specific engagement. A true retainer does not include a flat or fixed fee arrangement. The true retainer is earned when received and should not be placed in the client trust account, because it is not held for the benefit of the client. A true retainer does not have to be returned to the client if the client does not utilize the attorney's services [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(2)].

ILLUSTRATION: Fee Advance and Security Deposit. On January 2, 1991, Lawyer receives $3,000 from Defendant, $2,500 as a "retainer" to represent Defendant in a civil action against her and $500 for advanced costs. Lawyer tells Defendant that he will deduct $150 per hour from the retainer as he does work. Lawyer deposits the entire $3,000 check into his general account. Is this a true retainer? No. Although this is styled by the lawyer as a "retainer," it is not a true retainer because deductions will be taken as work is performed. It is really in the nature of an advance on attorney's fees and a security against fees. The attorney's failure to place the advanced costs in the client trust account may be a violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A). Should the office account drop below $500 at any time before the costs are paid out, the attorney may also be found culpable of misappropriation and dishonesty constituting moral turpitude [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106]. Note, on the other hand, that it may be arguable that the $2,500 "advance" becomes the lawyer's property on receipt [see Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1973-14; see also § 72.324[4][c]].

[c] Charges Against Advance Fees

Probably more common than the true retainer agreement is the advance against fees to be earned, sometimes referred to as a retainer. In this type of agreement, the attorney estimates the fee that will be involved in the particular matter and then, to assure payment, requires that some or all of the estimated fee be advanced prior to accepting employment. This type of agreement differs from the flat fee agreement discussed under § 72.324[4][d][i] below.

The issue of where to place advance fees, whether in a client trust account or in the attorney's general account, is unclear and currently a subject of controversy. The California Supreme Court has not yet imposed discipline in any reported decision for a violation of former Rule 8-101(A) for the failure of an attorney to place advances against fees in a client's trust account [see Read v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 394, 408-409, 279 Cal. Rptr. 818, 807 P.2d 1047 ;

Baker v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 804, 817-818, 263 Cal. Rptr. 798, 781 P.2d 1344 ; Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 164, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] .

Under current practice in California, it appears that it may be permissible in some circumstances for attorneys to place advance fees in their general account, to be billed against as they are earned [see Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1973-14 (advance fees that are relatively small and commensurate with services to be performed reasonably current with their receipt become attorney's property on receipt)]. If the attorney has a 30-day billing period, they may be properly removed after 30 days if the client fails to dispute the billing during that time period [see also § 72.450[5]].

The State Bar's Commission on the Revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct has been working with the State Bar Board of Governors to clarify the issue of where advances against fees should be deposited under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100.

PRACTICE TIP:

Client Trust or General Account. The general practice of many firms is to place these funds into the general account. Some firms adopt the "prudent" course of placing the funds in the client trust account. One possible middle course is to deposit such funds into a separate account labeled "advance fee account."

In any event, the attorney may withdraw the funds periodically as earned. Monthly bills sent to the client will indicate the services performed, fees or costs involved, funds withdrawn from the trust account, and the balance remaining. If the matter is concluded before the entire advance is expended, the remaining balance must be remitted to the client.

[d] Fixed or Flat Fee

[i] Nature of Agreement

A third type of agreement is the so-called "flat" or "fixed" fee agreement. Here, the lawyer charges a fixed fee for a particular matter. For example, a criminal attorney may charge a fixed fee to take the matter through a preliminary examination, a business lawyer may charge a fixed fee to provide the client with a corporation, or a family law practitioner may charge a fixed fee in an adoption proceeding. Bankruptcy attorneys also generally charge flat fees. Often, though not invariably, the flat fee includes the out-of-pocket costs the attorney will incur (for example, filing fees) that are not separately itemized.

Although the lawyer who enters into this type of agreement takes the risk that unforeseen complications may require an unusually large expenditure of time, the slight risk may be more than compensated for by the obviation of the need to keep accurate time records and make periodic billings.

PRACTICE TIP:

"Value Billing." "Value billing" is an increasingly popular concept, under which attorneys who work under a flat fee agreement become entitled to additional compensation when the client obtains a "good" or beneficial (and usually prompt) result, a device that theoretically is intended not only to reduce the risk of uncompensated effort but also reduce "padding" by the flat fee attorney.

In some instances a flat fee may become excessive, giving rise to a duty on the attorney's part to arrive at some equitable settlement based on the reasonable value of his or her services. For further discussion regarding excessive fees, see § 72.193.

[ii] Where to Deposit Fee

For purposes of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100, how are funds received pursuant to this type of agreement to be treated? On one hand, as in the advance against fees arrangement, the lawyer is clearly required to perform specified services. On the other hand, as in the true retainer, the lawyer is under no obligation to account to the client for time or funds expended. The majority of a sharply divided legal ethics committee of the San Francisco Bar Association has given the opinion that such fees belong to the lawyer and should be deposited in the general account [Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1980-1; cf. Baranowski v. State Bar (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 153, 164, 154 Cal. Rptr. 752, 593 P.2d 613] .

[iii] Fee When Attorney Discharged

It seems clear that a flat fee agreement is subject to the rule of Fracasse v. Brent. Thus, if the client exercises his or her absolute right to discharge the attorney, the attorney is entitled only to the reasonable value of services rendered to the date of discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] .

The fact that for purposes of the commingling rule the lawyer need not put the fee in a trust account does not necessarily allow him or her to retain the entire fee if he or she is discharged before the services have been performed. It is as if the client paid cash under a contract that gave him or her a conditional right to rescind. The right to rescind (to discharge the lawyer and pay only the reasonable value of services rendered) is not affected by the fact that the contracting party has the immediate use of the cash (that the lawyer need not put it in a trust account).

For further discussion of the client's right to discharge the attorney, and recovery of reasonable value of services rendered, see respectively §§ 72.592[2] and 72.451.

At the client's written request, a lawyer must provide the client with a full accounting of the funds received and disbursed and any charges on the trust account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091]. The attorney must furnish this statement within 10 calendar days after receipt of the request [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091]. § 72.326 Notice of Insurance Settlement Payment Delivered to Attorney

On payment of $100 or more in settlement of a third-party liability claim, an insurer is required to provide written notice to the claimant if the claimant is a natural person and if the payment is delivered to the claimant's attorney or other representative by draft, check, or otherwise [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6149.5(a)].

An insurer may satisfy this requirement by providing the claimant with a copy of the cover letter sent to the claimant's attorney or representative that accompanied the settlement payment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6149.5(b)]. This notice requirement does not create a cause of action for any person against an insurer for failure to provide notice, and does not create a defense for any party to any cause of action based on the insurer's failure to provide notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6149.5(c)].

§ 72.327 Payment of Medical Liens

[1] Require Prompt Resolution

Failure to promptly pay medical liens when withholding funds from settlement to satisfy the liens can result in discipline pursuant to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, 4-100(B)(4) [In the Matter of Mapps (1990) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 1, 10-11, 16-18 (violation under former Rule 8-101(B)(4))].

Funds held to pay medical liens must be maintained in the client trust account until disbursed. Complaints generated by medical lienholders result in auditing of client trust accounts.

Note that it appears that if the client disputes the lien, the attorney may not pay the amount disputed without the client's consent [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-210(A)(1); see § 72.321[5][b]].

[2] Discounting of Liens

The discounting or obtaining a reduction of the full medical lien is a very common feature of personal injury practice. The fee agreement or retainer in these cases should specify what percentage of the funds realized by the discount are disbursable to the client and to the attorney. The better theory is that the client should receive the amount designated in the fee agreement even if this results in a "windfall," and that the attorney conversely is not required to negotiate the discount.

[3] Illustrations of Lien Payments From Trust Account

The following examples illustrate common questions that arise regarding payment of medical liens from a client's trust account:

(1) Attorney does not enter into medical lien with a medical provider, but client does. Attorney does not withhold funds from settlement for doctor. Has the attorney acquired a fiduciary duty to the doctor to withhold funds from the settlement? No. Since the lawyer has executed no lien with the doctor, the lawyer has acquired no fiduciary duty to the doctor to withhold funds from the settlement. In this instance, the lawyer's fiduciary duty is to pay the client the proceeds of the settlement demanded by the client, including any funds that the client owes the doctor. The attorney has a duty to advise the client of the legal consequences of the client's failure to pay the doctor's lien.

(2) Attorney and client sign a lien. Attorney retains money for the medical lien in the general account prior to payment of the medical provider. Has the attorney assumed fiduciary responsibilities to the doctor? Yes. The attorney has assumed fiduciary responsibilities to the doctor respecting the handling of the amount necessary to pay the lienholder and violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) in failing to maintain the funds in trust.

(3) Attorney and client sign a lien. Attorney retains money for the medical lien in the trust account. Client contests the fairness of the medical bill. Attorney negotiates the dispute on behalf of client. Is the attorney's conduct appropriate and permissible? Yes [see § 72.321[5][b]].

(4) Attorney and client sign a lien. Attorney retains money for the medical lien in the trust account. Client contests the fairness of the medical bill. Client demands that attorney give client the money while the dispute over the medical bills proceeds. Can the attorney give the client the money? No. The attorney cannot give the money to the client, because the attorney has acquired fiduciary responsibilities to hold the money in trust to satisfy the lien. Because the client also signed the lien, the attorney owes no paramount duty to follow the client's wishes. Interpleading the disputed amount is a more impractical and costly alternative (in that it reduces recovery and raises the possibility that the funds will escheat to the state) [see State Bar Formal Opinion 1988-101; see also § 72.321[5][b]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Obtain Authority to Hold Disputed Funds in Trust. This type of problem may be avoided by anticipating it in the fee agreement or in the lien agreement itself. Authority should be obtained from the client and the health care provider to hold the funds in the trust account pending resolution of any dispute between them. In the absence of such an agreement by both the provider and client, the attorney may have no alternative but to interplead the money in dispute.

(5) Attorney and client sign a lien. Attorney retains money for the medical lien in the trust account. Client contests the fairness of the medical bill. Attorney negotiates the dispute on behalf of client. Attorney's trust account dips below the amount of the lien. Is the attorney guilty of an ethical violation? Yes. The attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) by failing to maintain the amount of the lien in trust.

(6) Attorney and client sign a lien. Attorney retains money for the medical lien in the trust account. Client contests the fairness of the medical bill. Attorney negotiates the dispute on behalf of client and obtains a 50% reduction. Attorney then fails to disburse the funds to the doctor for over six months and fails to give the client any further moneys. Is the attorney guilty of an ethical violation? Yes. The attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(4) by failing to pay the compromised medical lien promptly to the doctor on behalf of the client. The attorney also failed to promptly pay the client's portion of the savings obtained by the compromise of the medical lien.

§ 72.328 Examples of Common Problems in Trust Account Management

[1] Failure to Place Client Funds in Client Trust Account

The following examples illustrate potential violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) regarding the placement of client funds into trust accounts:

ILLUSTRATION:

Failure to Deposit Client Funds in Trust Account. On January 2, 1991, ABC Law Firm's Los Angeles office receives $100,000 from its client, California Corporation, to be used as a down payment for real property, the purchase of which ABC Law Firm is handling. Pursuant to the partnership agreement of this multistate law firm, all monies received from clients are transferred for deposit into the firm's client trust account located in Big Bank in New York, New York. California Corporation has no offices in New York state. Has ABC Law Firm violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)? Yes. ABC Law Firm has violated Rule 4-100(A) because it failed to deposit California Corporation's funds in a trust account in a bank situated in the state of California.

Attorney is representing Buyer in a large commercial lease transaction. Attorney, on demand of Seller's lawyers, represents that Attorney is holding $10,000 in trust to be paid to Seller, during the lease negotiations and while Seller takes the commercial property off of the market. Buyer gives Attorney a third party check for $10,000 that Attorney, at Buyer's request, deposits into his office account. Has Attorney violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)? Yes. By making the agreement to hold funds in trust for the benefit of Seller, Attorney has acquired fiduciary responsibility to Seller to hold the funds in a client's trust account [see § 72.322].

[2] Insufficiently Funded Checks

Examples of ethical violations with regard to insufficiently funded checks include the following:

- Trust Accounts : One insufficiently funded check drawn on a trust account, coupled with the attorney's promise to make good on the check and failing to make good on it (a deceitful promise to pay), constitutes an act of moral turpitude [Bowles v. State Bar (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 100, 109, 111, 255 Cal. Rptr. 846, 768 P.2d 65] .

- Office Accounts : Numerous bounced checks from the office accounts with knowledge of insufficient funds constitute acts of moral turpitude [In the Matter of Heiser (1990) 1 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 47, 53-54].

- Personal Checking Accounts for Non-Legal Expenses : Knowingly issuing checks from personal accounts that the attorney should know contain insufficient funds and that would not be honored is a violation of the oath and duties of an attorney [Rhodes v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 50, 55-56, 59, 260 Cal. Rptr. 266, 775 P.2d 1035 ; Segal v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 1077, 1086-1087, 245 Cal. Rptr. 404, 751 P.2d 463] .

See also discussion under § 72.328[3][a].

[3] Commingling Funds

[a] In General

The following examples illustrate potential violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2) by commingling funds:

ILLUSTRATION:

Commingling Funds. Lawyer receives a settlement draft of $100,000 on behalf of Client in a personal injury action settlement. The draft is deposited into Lawyer's client's trust account the following day. Pursuant to their written contingency agreement, Lawyer disburses $10,000 to medical lienholders, $60,000 to the client, and leaves the $30,000 representing Lawyer's fees in the trust account for six months. Has Lawyer breached Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)? Yes. Lawyer has breached the rule by leaving the fees in the trust account, where they have been commingled with the funds of clients.

Lawyer discovers that his bookkeeper has embezzled $10,000 in trust funds from the client's trust account. Immediately on discovery of the embezzlement, Lawyer terminates the bookkeeper, files a complaint with the police department against bookkeeper, safeguards all checks and other financial access, and deposits $10,000 of the Lawyer's personal funds into the clients trust account. Has Lawyer breached Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)? No. This is not commingling of personal funds, since the Lawyer is replacing funds over which Lawyer had fiduciary duties.

[b] Dips Below Minimum Amount Required

Once the trust account balance is shown to have dipped below the appropriate amount, an inference of misappropriation may be drawn. The burden then shifts to the attorney to show that his or her office procedure was adequate [see In the Matter of Respondent F (1992) 2 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 17, 26].

The following examples illustrate potential violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) by allowing account balances to dip below the required minimum:

ILLUSTRATION:

Balance Falls Below Minimum. Lawyer receives a settlement draft of $100,000 on behalf of Client in a personal injury action settlement. Pursuant to their written contingency agreement, Lawyer disburses

$10,000 to medical lienholders, $60,000 to the client by trust account check, and takes a draw of $30,000 representing Lawyer's attorney's fees. Lawyer's secretary fails to deposit the settlement draft for 5 days. Lawyer's trust account falls beneath the limit he is required to maintain on behalf of all clients. Has Lawyer violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)? Yes. The mere fact that the balance in an attorney's trust account has fallen below the total of amounts deposited and purportedly held in trust supports a conclusion of misappropriation [Giovanazzi v. State Bar (1980) 28 Cal. 3d 465, 474, 169 Cal. Rptr. 581, 619 P.2d 1005] . It is at least a technical violation. Care should be taken that the deposited check has cleared prior to writing checks to clients.

Lawyer receives a settlement draft of $100,000 on behalf of Client in a personal injury action settlement. The settlement draft is deposited into the client's trust account on the following day. Pursuant to their written contingency agreement, Lawyer disburses $10,000 to medical lienholders, $60,000 to the client by trust account check, and takes a draw of $30,000 representing Lawyer's attorney's fees. The bank places a 10-day hold on the check and then the check is returned by the insurance company's bank for improper endorsements. Lawyer's trust account falls beneath the limit he is required to maintain on behalf of all clients. Has Lawyer violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)? Yes. There is a presumption that misappropriation has occurred because the balance in the trust account has fallen below the total of amounts deposited in and purportedly held in trust. Because Lawyer has a duty to safeguard all clients' funds, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) has been violated. Care should be taken that settlement drafts clear before such monies are disbursed.

Lawyer receives a settlement draft of $100,000 on behalf of Client in a personal injury action settlement. The settlement draft is deposited into the clients' trust account on the following day. When first retained in 1990, Lawyer and client had an oral agreement that Lawyer would receive 50% of any recovery. Lawyer disburses $10,000 to medical lienholders, $45,000 to the client by trust account check, and takes a draw of $45,000 representing Lawyer's attorney's fees. On receipt of Client's portion of the proceeds, Client telephones the Lawyer and tells Lawyer that Lawyer should have only gotten $30,000, or 1/3 of the recovery, according to Client's memory. Lawyer does nothing. Has Lawyer violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)? Yes. Pursuant to Rule 4-100(A)(2), when the Lawyer learns that Client is disputing the amount of the fee, Lawyer has a duty to place the disputed portion of the funds ($15,000) into the trust account until the dispute is resolved.

The deposit of a draft into a client trust account does not mean that the funds are automatically available; availability depends on when the draft is cleared at the home office of the issuing organization (possibly an out-of-state carrier). Consequently, financial institutions place "holds" on checks. The length of time for a "hold" can increase substantially, depending on the status of the carrier (admitted or non-admitted, frequently termed "off shore") and the amount of the recovery (longer holds are imposed for larger sums).

PRACTICE TIP:

Ascertain Availability of Funds. Attorneys should not disburse funds until they have verified with the bank that funds are available. Do not rely on friendly acquaintances with managers or bank employees; an NSF check may still result if the acquaintance is not in the office, or if a "hold" policy applies. Familiarity with the bank's "hold chart" may be unreliable in itself, as these may change periodically.

[4] Trust Account Used for Questionable Purposes

The following examples illustrate potentially improper use of trust account funds:

ILLUSTRATION:

Improper Use as Attorney's Account. Attorney receives a settlement on behalf of Client X for $100,000. Costs are $10,000, attorney's fees are $30,000, and $60,000 is remitted to the client. Attorney pays her Porsche monthly payment with a client's trust account check for $5,000. Attorney pays her secretary's salary of $2,000 and her VISA bill of $3,000. Has Attorney handled her trust account properly? No. While Attorney may prove to the State Bar's satisfaction that she is not misappropriating money, under these circumstances, the bar will audit her financial records to determine that no misappropriation has occurred. The better practice is to take one draw representing the undisputed amount of your fees and pay personal bills out of other accounts.

Attorney shelters funds from other creditors, including his former spouse and the IRS, through use of his Clients Trust Account. Is such use of the fund ethically proper? No. Such conduct is improper, and may even be commingling in violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A) [see Vaughn v. State Bar (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 847, 853, 100 Cal. Rptr. 713, 494 P.2d 1257 ; Clark v. State Bar (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 161, 167-168, 246 P.2d 1] .

§ 72.329 Sanctions for Violation of Trustee Duties

[1] State Bar Standards

The State Bar may investigate complaints by clients who allege trust fund mismanagement by an attorney, and may require an audit of an attorney if it determines that circumstances warrant it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6091].

The State Bar Board of Governors has adopted Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, which define the relevant terms used in disciplinary proceedings [Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standard 1.2], and set forth the degrees of sanctions available [Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standards 1.4, 1.5]. The Supreme Court is not bound by these standards, and may temper them with factors peculiar to each case, but it nevertheless accords them great weight [see In re Lamb (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 239, 245, 260 Cal. Rptr. 856, 776 P.2d 765 ; Lawhorn v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1357, 1366, 240 Cal. Rptr. 848, 743 P.2d 908] .

[2] For Willful Misappropriation

[a] Disbarment as Usual Discipline

Misappropriation has always been considered a serious violation of an attorney's professional obligations. The usual discipline is disbarment in the absence of strong mitigating circumstances [McKnight v. State Bar (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1025, 1035, 281 Cal. Rptr. 766, 810 P.2d 998 ; Sugarman v. State Bar (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 609, 618, 274 Cal. Rptr. 246, 798 P.2d 843 ; see also Hitchcock v. State Bar (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 690, 709, 257 Cal. Rptr. 696, 771 P.2d 394 (disbarment proper, notwithstanding attorney's claim that misappropriation was committed in response to threats of violence against him and his family)].

Willful misappropriation of entrusted funds or property must result in disbarment, unless the amount of funds or property misappropriated is insignificant or the most compelling mitigating circumstances clearly predominate [Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standard 2.2(a)]. In the latter cases, the Standards prescribe that discipline must not be less than one year actual suspension, regardless of mitigating circumstances [Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standard 2.2(a); but see Edwards v. State Bar (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 28, 38, 276 Cal. Rptr. 153, 801 P.2d 396 (Standard 2.2(a)'s one year minimum "should be regarded as a guideline, not an inflexible mandate"); Howard v. State Bar (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 215, 220-223, 270 Cal. Rptr. 856, 793 P.2d 62 (six months' actual suspension imposed by Supreme Court for single act of willful misappropriation, accompanied by strong mitigating circumstances)].

[b] Specialized Usage of "Willful"

The term "willful" has a specialized usage in disciplinary proceedings. Misconduct need not be deliberate or even intentional to be deemed willful, as indicated by the following:

- Misappropriation or other misconduct is willful if the attorney had "general purpose or willingness to commit the act, or make the omission" [see Durbin v. State Bar (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 461, 467, 152 Cal. Rptr. 749, 590 P.2d 876] .

- Evidence that the balance in a trust account fell below the amount credited to a client is sufficient to support a finding of willful misappropriation [Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 785, 795, 205 Cal. Rptr. 834, 685 P.2d 1185] .

- If a misappropriation resulted from serious and inexcusable lapses in office procedures, resulting in violations of the attorney's duties to oversee client funds entrusted to his or her care and to keep detailed records and accounts, it may be deemed willful even in the absence of deliberate wrongdoing [Palomo v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 785, 795-796, 205 Cal. Rptr. 834, 685 P.2d 1185] .

The degree of culpability involved in an attorney's "willful" misconduct is usually simply a factor in determining the degree of sanction to be imposed. It will be much more severe, for example, when an attorney has deliberately taken a client's funds with the intent to keep them permanently, and has answered the client's inquiries with lies and evasions. Alternately it may be less severe when the attorney has merely acted negligently, without intent to deprive and without acts of deception [see Murray v. State Bar (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 575, 582, 220 Cal. Rptr. 677, 220 Cal. Rptr. 677, 709 P.2d 480] .

[3] For Commingling or Other Failure to Safeguard Property

In the event that there is no willful misappropriation, an attorney guilty of commingling, failure to properly safeguard the client's property, or failure to maintain adequate records and deliver client property to the client on request must receive at least a three-month actual suspension from the practice of law. The punishment must be imposed regardless of mitigating circumstances [see Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standard 2.2(b) (referring to violations of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 8-101)].

[4] For Moral Turpitude, Fraud, or Dishonesty

If the attorney has committed an act of moral turpitude, fraud, or intentional dishonesty toward a court, client, or another person, or of concealment of a material fact to any of them, he or she must be suspended or disbarred, depending on the extent to which the victim of the misconduct is harmed or misled and depending on the magnitude of the act of misconduct and the degree to which it relates to the attorney's act within the practice of law [Standards For Attorney Sanctions For Professional Misconduct, Standard 2.3].

F. Terminating The Attorney-Client Relationship
1. Termination By Death Or Incapacity

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.350

§ 72.350 Death or Incapacity of Attorney

[1] Application of General Agency Principles

Under the law of agency, an agency is terminated as to every person having notice of it by the death or incapacity of the agent to act as such [Civ. Code § 2355(c), (e)]. Whether the attorney is an employee or independent contractor, the attorney is normally the agent of the client; hence, the law of principal and agent generally applies to the attorney-client relationship [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 192, 244 P. 343 ; see also § 72.220 et seq. (authority of attorney)].

For discussion of the law of agency, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[2] When Agreement Is With Law Firm

When the attorney-client relationship is created by an agreement between a client and a law firm, the law firm is the agent of the client. The death or incapacity of a member or associate of the firm does not terminate the agency relationship. Similarly, the voluntary departure of an individual attorney from the firm does not affect the agency. Significant changes in the structure of the firm may, however, give rise to the obligations to advise the client of (1) significant events; and (2) his or her right to elect to substitute in counsel of his or her own choice. For further discussion, see § 72.350[4].

PRACTICE TIP:

Assumption of Law Practice. If an attorney dies or becomes incapacitated (including by reason of suspension or disbarment), the client, the superior court, the State Bar of California, or any interested person may apply for assumption of jurisdiction by the superior court over the attorney's law practice [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6180.2]. If an attorney becomes incapable of properly representing a client for any reason (including by reason of substance abuse or physical or mental illness), such persons or entities may similarly apply to the superior court for the assumption of that attorney's law practice by the court, another attorney, or the State Bar of California [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6190 et seq.].

[3] Incapacity Includes Attorney's Suspension or Disbarment

Under Civ. Code § 2355(e), the term "incapacity of the agent to act as such" with respect to attorneys includes suspension and disbarment, since the attorney is precluded from practicing law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6117] and is no longer able to act as an attorney [see Aldrich v. San Fernando Valley Lumber Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 725, 741, 216 Cal. Rptr. 300 (involving suspension)].

When an attorney is suspended or disbarred, his or her authority to act as such on behalf of the client terminates by operation of law and, as a result, the agency relationship dissolves like any agency that is not coupled with an interest. In these circumstances, service on the attorney does not constitute constructive notice to the client [Lovato v. Santa Fe Internat. Corp. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 549, 553, 198 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; see also § 72.390[2]].

An order suspending or disbarring an attorney is authorized to include, and typically does include, a direction requiring the suspended or disbarred attorney to do the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.20(a)]:

- Notify, within a specified time, all clients being represented in pending matters, together with any co-counsel, of the attorney's suspension or disbarment and his or her consequent disqualification to act as an attorney.

- Notify these clients, in the absence of co-counsel, of their need to seek legal advice elsewhere, calling attention to any urgency in seeking the substitution of another attorney.

- Deliver to all clients being represented in pending matters any papers or other property to which the client's are entitled, or notify the clients or co-counsel of a suitable time and place at which they may obtain such papers or property, calling attention to any urgency for obtaining them.

- Refund any part of fees paid that have not been earned.

- Notify opposing counsel (or in the absence of opposing counsel, adverse parties) in pending litigation of the attorney's suspension or disbarment and his or her consequent disqualification to act as an attorney, and file a copy of the notice with court in which the litigation is pending.

See also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.20(b)-(c) for additional provisions regarding requirements for service of these notices, requirements for filing proof of compliance, and sanctions for failure to comply.

ILLUSTRATION:

Service on Suspended Attorney. Defendant hires Attorney in June 1979 to represent it in a lawsuit by Plaintiff. In January 1980, the State Bar suspends Attorney. In March 1980, Defendant fires Attorney, and hires new counsel. By mistake, a substitution is not accomplished. In October 1980, Plaintiff serves a set of interrogatories on Attorney, apparently unaware that Attorney had been suspended. Attorney never responds. Plaintiff files motions to compel answers and a motion for discovery sanctions that are both granted due to Attorney's nonopposition. Plaintiff successfully moves to strike Defendant's answer and obtains entry of default in April 1981. In April 1982, Defendant finds out about the these events and moves to set aside the default. Is the default judgment void? Yes. The default judgment is void under the federal constitution's due process clause because Defendant had no actual or constructive notice of the interrogatories and discovery motions. Defendant didn't actually learn of the interrogatories and default until approximately a year after entry of the default; and service on an attorney while he or she is suspended does not provide constructive notice to the client [see Lovato v. Santa Fe Internat. Corp. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 549, 553, 198 Cal. Rptr. 838] .

[4] Death or Incapacity of Member of Law Firm

When a law firm is employed to conduct litigation, the client contracts for the services of all the members of the firm. Hence, when a member of the firm dies or becomes incapacitated, the employment contract is not extinguished; the law firm remains employed and is responsible for representing the client.

However, the client must be informed of the event, and the client has the option to declare the contract terminated. If the client does not do so and chooses to entrust a surviving attorney member of the firm with the further management of the litigation in which the firm was employed, the surviving attorney is bound to complete the unfinished contract for the benefit of the partnership [Little v. Caldwell (1894) 101 Cal. 553, 559-561, 36 P. 107 ; see also Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 200, 218-219, 194 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Suggested Procedures. If a member or associate of a law firm dies or becomes incapacitated, the firm should advise his or her clients of this event, since the firm must keep clients informed of all significant matters affecting the client's case. The client should also be advised of his or her right to seek substitute counsel of his or her choice [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(m); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-500]. Presumably this requirement does not arise with regard to clients for whose matters the deceased or incapacitated attorney had little or no responsibility. Thus, such clients need not be notified.

Attorneys who cease to practice law jointly also have an obligation to cooperate in notifying their former clients of this develpment. This duty arises not only from their obligations to the clients, but also from their fiduciary obligations to one another [see Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 200, 218-219, 194 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

§ 72.351 Appointment of New Attorney

[1] Statutory Notice Requirement

When an attorney dies, is removed or suspended, or ceases to act as an attorney, no further proceedings may be taken against the attorney's client until that client has been given written notice, to appoint another attorney or to appear in person [Code Civ. Proc. § 286]. For a form of notice by an adverse party to appoint a new attorney, see § 72.710. For an additional optional form for designating the identity of a new attorney, see § 72.711.

The purpose of this requirement is to provide notice to a party who might not be aware that his or her attorney has died, been removed or suspended, or ceased to act as an attorney [see Aldrich v. San Fernando Valley Lumber Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 725, 742, 216 Cal. Rptr. 300 ; Gion v. Stroud (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 277, 280, 12 Cal. Rptr. 540] . It applies only when the attorney has died or ceased to be an attorney and not when the attorney has ceased to act for the client in a particular case [De Recat Corp. v. Dunn (1926) 197 Cal. 787, 790-794, 242 P. 936 ; California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 734, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

[2] Required for Affirmative Actions by Opposing Party

Since the purpose of the statutory requirement is to protect against unnoticed proceedings that might be taken against the unrepresented client, it applies only to affirmative actions taken by an opposing party, such as a motion to dismiss an action for want of prosecution [see Larkin v. Superior Court (1916) 171 Cal. 719, 724, 154 P. 841 (notice given)] or for failure to answer interrogatories [Aldrich v. San Fernando Valley Lumber Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 725, 742-743, 216 Cal. Rptr. 300] . It does not apply to suspend the mere running of mandatory time limits, such as the time to file a notice of appeal [Voinich v. Poe (1921) 52 Cal. App. 597, 601-602, 199 P. 74] or the time within which an action must be brought to trial to avoid dismissal [Larkin v. Superior Court (1916) 171 Cal. 719, 724, 154 P. 841 (involving application of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 requiring dismissal of action not brought to trial within five years; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 et seq.)].

[3] Waiver of Notice

The right to notice under Code Civ. Proc. § 286 may be waived by the party entitled to receive it [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 736, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] . For example, the right is waived if:

- The party's attorney dies and the party is fully aware of it [California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 734, 736-737, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

- The party makes a voluntary formal appearance in the case after his or her attorney has ceased to act as an attorney [Unwin v. Barstow-San Antonio Oil Co. (1918) 36 Cal. App. 508, 509, 172 P. 622] .

F. Terminating The Attorney-Client Relationship
1. Termination By Death Or Incapacity

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.352

§ 72.352 Death or Incapacity of Client

The authority of an attorney, unless coupled with an interest, is terminated by either the death of the client [Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 527-528, 128 P.2d 128 ; see Civ. Code § 2356(a)(2)] or the client's subsequent insanity or incapacity to contract [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 192, 244 P. 343 ; see Civ. Code § 2356(a)(3); see also § 72.390[2]].

There are exceptions this rule. The attorney of record representing a decedent who, if alive, would have had a right of appeal, may file a notice of appeal in the court in which the judgment was rendered within the time in which the decedent could have filed a notice had he or she survived [Code Civ. Proc. § 903]. Furthermore, in the case of a special contract of employment between the client and attorney, such as a specific contract to conduct a suit to final judgment, or an agreement providing a fee for the entire case, the agency is not terminated by the death or incapacity of the client [Estate of Mallory (1929) 99 Cal. App. 96, 104, 278 P. 488 (contract contained both elements)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Followup Measures. When a client dies, the attorney should immediately contact the personal representative of the decedent, inform him or her of the extent of attorney's authority while the client was living, and outline the status of any legal matters pending at the time of the client's death. The attorney should also take any actions immediately necessary to preserve any of the client's legal rights (for example, moving for a continuance in any pending litigation, if necessary) for a reasonable time to allow the personal representative to retain new counsel or give the attorney the authority to continue to act for the personal representative [cf. Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2) (attorney may not withdraw from employment without taking reasonable steps to avoid prejudice to client's rights)].

2. Withdrawal Of Attorney

§ 72.370 Grounds for Withdrawal From Employment

[1] Right to Withdraw

The right of an attorney to withdraw from employment is not absolute [Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 197, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401] , but is limited by the following:

- Statutes [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 284 (attorney may be changed with consent of client or on order of court); Code Civ. Proc. § 285.2 (withdrawal when public funding reduced); Penal Code § 987.1 (attorney at preliminary examination must continue to represent client until arraignment unless relieved by court); Welf. & Inst. Code § 634.6 (attorney who appears in juvenile court on behalf of minor must continue to represent minor unless relieved by court)].

- Rules of Professional Conduct [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700 (attorney may not withdraw until the attorney has taken steps to avoid prejudice to client)].

- The California Rules of Court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36 (withdrawal or substitution of attorney pending appeal)].

- Case law [People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; People v. Massey (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 623, 626, 290 P.2d 906 (criminal cases); see also De Recat Corp. v. Dunn (1926) 197 Cal. 787, 791, 242 P. 936] .

Consequently, an attorney desiring to withdraw from a case should take care to assure that withdrawal is allowed by law [see § 72.370[4] and [5]], and that the proper procedure is followed [see §§ 72.371 and 72.372[1]].

The Rules of Professional Conduct regarding withdrawal apply to all members of the State Bar of California, including:

- District attorneys and their deputies [People ex rel. Younger v. Superior Court (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 180, 192, 150 Cal. Rptr. 156] .

- Public defenders and their deputies [Chaleff v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 721, 724, 138 Cal. Rptr. 735] .

- An attorney appointed to act as an adviser to a defendant conducting his or her own defense in a criminal action [Chaleff v. Superior Court (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 721, 724, 138 Cal. Rptr. 735] .

[2] Abandonment at Will or for Personal Considerations Prohibited

An attorney in a pending case may not abandon the representation of a client at will or for personal considerations, but must continue the representation until he or she is released by either the client or the court. An attorney's withdrawal from a case on the eve of trial without proper cause may constitute a violation of professional ethics [County of San Bernardino v. Doria Mining & Engineering Corp. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 776, 783 n.4, 140 Cal. Rptr. 383] .

Thus, it has been held that the withdrawal of an attorney, who represented both a corporation and an individual in a breach of contract action, on the Friday preceding a Monday court date on the ground that the individual defendant refused to accept a settlement negotiated by the attorney, was held to be unethical under former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-111(2) (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2)) andconstituted an improper abandonment of the client [Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 197, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401] .

On the other hand, an attorney has a duty to maintain only such actions as appear to the attorney to be legal or just [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(c)]. Consequently, an attorney who loses faith in the cause for which he or she has been employed should request leave to withdraw [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B)(1), (C)(1)(a)-(c), (e); Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 309-310, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 (attorney's determination that action was not meritorious could not be characterized as manifestly erroneous when several doctors gave opinion that plaintiff's injury was not due to negligence and the doctor who initially gave a contrary opinion later questioned his first opinion)].

[3] Avoidance of Nonconsenual Withdrawal

When an attorney seeks to withdraw from a civil case without the consent of the client, there is an obvious inference that the withdrawal is not for the client's purpose but for the attorney's purpose, often a lack of confidence in the merits of the case. Care must be taken to balance the interests of the client with the duty of the attorney not to assist a position without probable cause. The inference may be obvious to the parties in the case and will ordinarily gravely jeopardize any chance of settlement. On the other hand, consensual withdrawal or substitution of another attorney, as opposing counsel are well aware, may be due to a number of reasons and is less likely to jeopardize on the client's case. Ordinarily, an attorney should not seek a nonconsensual withdrawal immediately on forming a belief that the case lacks merit. Absent circumstances requiring mandatory withdrawal, the attorney should delay applying to the court for an order permitting him or her to withdraw to give the client an opportunity to obtain other counsel or to file a consensual withdrawal [Kirsch v Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 311, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] . For a discussion regarding the substitution of attorneys, see § 72.392[1].

[4] Mandatory Withdrawal

An attorney representing a client before a tribunal which requires permission for withdrawal, must seek such permission, and must withdraw from employment if any of the following occurs [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B)]:

- The attorney knows or should know that the client is bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a position in litigation, or taking an appeal, without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person [see, e.g., Cosenza v. Kramer (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1100, 1103, 200 Cal. Rptr. 18 (attorney must withdraw if client insists on pursuing appeal that is frivolous or taken for purpose of delay); Metzger v. Silverman (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d Supp 30, 39, (attorney must withdraw if client insists on bringing action in wrong forum and action is taken solely to harass or maliciously injure opposing party); see also § 72.290 et seq.].

- The attorney knows or should know that his or her continued employment will result in a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.].

- The attorney's mental or physical condition renders it unreasonably difficult for him or her to carry out the employment effectively.

- See also discussion under § 72.371.

On a motion for sanctions from a lawyer and client in civil discovery proceedings, if the lawyer insists on exonerating himself or herself from liability for the sanctions and the client does not agree with that approach, the attorney must withdraw after satisfying the requirements of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(1) [see § 72.371[1], below]. After withdrawing, the lawyer must continue to maintain the client's confidential information, unless the client contends that the request for sanctions is based on conduct for which the lawyer is solely responsible and the lawyer disputes the contention. In that case, the lawyer may reveal confidential information to the extent necessary to defend against the client's assertions, so long as the information is relevant to an alleged breach of duty arising out of the lawyer-client relationship [State Bar Formal Opinion 1997-151].

[5] Permissive Withdrawal

If Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B) (discussed under § 72.370[4]) does not apply, an attorney may not request permission to withdraw in matters pending before a tribunal and may not withdraw in other matters unless the request or withdrawal is based on one or more of the following grounds [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(C)]:

- The client insists on presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law [see Davis v. State Bar (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 231, 238, 188 Cal. Rptr. 441, 655 P.2d 1276 (attorney who doubts client's credibility or legitimacy of claim should question client closely and withdraw if doubts persist); Metzger v. Silverman (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d Supp 30, 39, ; see also § 72.290 et seq.].

- The client seeks to pursue an illegal course of conduct.

- The client insists that the attorney pursue a course of conduct that is illegal or prohibited under the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.].

- The client by other conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the attorney to carry out his or her employment effectively [see Pearlmutter v. Alexander (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d Supp 16, 20, (withdrawal on client's refusal to consummate agreed-on settlement)].

- The client insists, in a matter not pending before a tribunal, that the attorney engage in conduct that is contrary to the judgment and advice of the attorney but not prohibited under the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.].

- The client breaches an agreement or obligation to the attorney regarding expenses or fees [see, e.g.,

Mandell v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 136 Cal. Rptr. 354 (criminal case); People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406-407, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 (client failed to pay fees or expenses after reasonable request, motion to withdraw was made before trial date was set, and no showing client was prejudiced by withdrawal)].

- The attorney's continued employment is likely to result in a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6000 et seq.].

- The attorney's inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the best interest of the client likely will be served by withdrawal.

- The attorney's mental or physical condition renders it difficult for him or her to carry out the employment effectively.

- The client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the employment.

- The attorney believes in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal.

See also discussion under § 72.371.

[6] Prohibited Discrimination on Withdrawal

An attorney shall not unlawfully discriminate or knowingly permit unlawful discrimination when terminating representation of a client on the basis of race, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, religion, age or disability [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-400(B)]. There is no basis for disciplinary action under this rule absent a finding of civil unlawfulness under applicable state or federal law [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-400(B), Discussion].

[7] Withdrawal for Lack of Public Funding of Legal Service Attorney Representing Indigent Client

[a] When Withdrawal Permitted

If a reduction in public funding for legal service materially impairs a legal service agency attorney's ability to represent an indigent client, either the attorney or the client may move for an order permitting the attorney to withdraw from the case, or the court on its own motion may permit the attorney to withdraw [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.2]. For forms of notice of motion and order under Code Civ. Proc. 285.2, see §§ 72.712 and 72.713.

The court is required to permit the attorney to withdraw as attorney of record from a case if it is shown that all of the following apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.2]:

- There are not adequate public funds to continue the effective representation of the indigent client.

- A good faith effort was made to find alternate representation for the client.

- All reasonable steps to reduce the legal prejudice to the client have been taken.

A showing of indigency, in and of itself, will not be deemed sufficient cause to deny the application for withdrawal [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.2].

[b] Tolling of Statute of Limitations

On granting a legal service agency's motion to withdraw, the court on its own motion or the motion of any party or attorney may toll the running of any statute of limitations, filing requirement, statute providing for mandatory dismissal, notice of appeal, or discovery requirement, for a period not to exceed 90 days when the court finds that tolling is required to avoid legal prejudice caused by the withdrawal of the legal service agency attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.3].

[c] Appointment for No Compensation

On granting a legal service agency's motion to withdraw, statutory authority allows the court to appoint any member of the bar or any law firm or professional law corporation to represent the indigent client without compensation on a showing of good cause, and permits the appointed attorney to recover, on behalf of the client, any attorney's fees and costs to which the client may be entitled by law [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.4]. In determining the existence of good cause, the court may consider, but is not limited to, the following factors [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.4]:

- The probable merit of the client's claim.
- The client's financial ability to pay for legal services.
- The availability of alternative legal representation.
- The need for legal representation to avoid irreparable legal prejudice to the indigent client.
- The ability of appointed counsel to effectively represent the indigent client.
- Present and recent pro bono work of the appointed attorney, law firm, or private law corporation.
- The ability of the indigent client to represent him or herself.
- The appointed attorney's workload.

However, at least one court of appeal has found it is unconstitutional as a denial of equal protection to appoint attorneys to represent indigent defendants in paternity actions without compensation [Cunningham v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 336, 356, 222 Cal. Rptr. 854] . In light of this opinion, it is questionable whether an appointment under Code Civ. Proc. § 285.4 would be valid.

[8] Withdrawal After Judgment in Domestic Relations Case

An attorney of record for any party in certain family law proceedings may withdraw at any time subsequent to the time that the judgment in the action or proceeding becomes final and before he or she is served with any pleadings or motion papers in any proceeding then pending in the cause [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.1]. This rule applies to proceedings for [Code Civ. Proc. § 285.1]:

- Dissolution of marriage.
- Legal separation.
- A declaration of nullity of a void or voidable marriage.
- The support, maintenance, or custody of minor children.

For a form of notice of withdrawal as attorney of record in a domestic relations case, see § 72.714.

[9] Representation of Minor in Juvenile Court Proceeding

When the court appoints counsel to represent a parent or minor at a juvenile detention hearing, the appointed counsel must represent the parent or minor at all subsequent proceedings before the juvenile court. Counsel must continue to represent the parent or minor unless relieved by the court on the substitution of other counsel or for cause. The representation includes representing the parent or the minor in termination proceedings and in those proceedings relating to the institution or setting aside of a legal relationship [Welf. & Inst. Code § 317(d)].

In any proceeding to declare a minor a ward of the court, on entering an appearance on behalf of the minor, counsel must continue to represent that minor unless relieved by the court on the substitution of other counsel or for cause [Welf. & Inst. Code § 634.6; see also Welf. & Inst. Code § 634 (stating when court must appoint counsel for minor in juvenile court proceeding to declare minor a ward of the court)].

[10] Representation of Minor Through Guardian Ad Litem

An attorney must obtain court approval to withdraw from representation of a minor who appears through a guardian ad litem [Torres v. Friedman(1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 880, 887-888, 215 Cal. Rptr. 604] . The court has a duty to see that the minor's rights are not unfairly compromised by those appointed to represent the minor, and a trial judge will not ordinarily permit an attorney to withdraw unless other qualified counsel has been obtained [see Torres v. Friedman (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 880, 887-888, 215 Cal. Rptr. 604] .

F. Terminating The Attorney-Client Relationship
2. Withdrawal Of Attorney

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.371

§ 72.371 Attorney's Duties on Withdrawal

[1] Avoiding Foreseeable Prejudice to Client's Interests

An attorney must not withdraw until he or she has taken reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client's rights [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2); see In re Hickey (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 571, 580, 268 Cal. Rptr. 170, 788 P.2d 684 ; Kapelus v. State Bar (1987) 44 Cal. 3d 179, 186-187, 242 Cal. Rptr. 196, 745 P.2d 917] . This includes [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2)]:

- Giving the client due notice.
- Allowing the client time to employ other counsel.
- Complying with applicable laws and rules.

The requirement that an attorney take steps to avoid prejudice to the client prior to withdrawing applies when the attorney ceases to provide services, even absent formation of intent to withdraw as counsel for client [Baker v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 804, 817 n.5, 263 Cal. Rptr. 798, 781 P.2d 1344] . Even when a final judgment on an underlying action has been entered, the attorney-client relationship may be deemed to continue for the purpose of the attorney accepting service on follow-up motions regarding the action [Maxwell v. Cooltech, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 629, 632-633, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293 (finding valid service made on attorney following final judgment for motion to vacate judgment under Code. Civ. Proc. § 473); see also Barboza v. West Coast Digital GSM, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 540, 545-546, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 295 (class counsel representing absent class members may be obligated to continue employment past entry of judgment)].

[2] Returning Client Property

[a] Client File and Other Property

An attorney whose employment has terminated must release to the client, promptly at the client's request, all the client's papers and property [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1)]. "Client papers and property" includes correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, exhibits, physical evidence, expert's reports, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1)]. An attorney may not retain a client's papers or files to secure payment of fees or costs, even if the client has granted the lawyer a contractual lien on the papers [Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999,1006, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1984-1; see also § 72.193[3]].

The requirement to return all papers and properties applies when the attorney ceases to provide services, even absent formation of intent to withdraw as counsel for the client [Baker v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 804, 817 n.5, 263 Cal. Rptr. 798, 781 P.2d 1344] . An attorney's obligation to return a client's files begins when the attorney is discharged. It is unnecessary for a client who has already requested return of papers and property prior to the attorney's discharge to be required to repeat that request after discharge [In re Regan, (2005) 4 Cal. State Car Ct. Rptr. 844].

Where an attorney has represented multiple clients jointly in a matter, and each of the clients seeks the original file, the attorney should consider whether an interpleader or declaratory relief action is appropriate [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 493 (1998)].

There may be limited circumstances in which portions of the client's file need not be released because of a protective order or nondisclosure agreement [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1)]. Counsel should, however, exercise caution in relying on this provision as a basis for withholding a portion of the client's file [see also § 72.371[2][b]].

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1) is intended to cover the recurring situation when new counsel seeks to obtain client's files in the former counsel's possession. But former counsel may still retain copies of the released files, particularly if they may be relevant to a future fee dispute or malpractice action. The attorney retaining copies must bear the cost of copying initially, unless the representation agreement provides otherwise, but the attorney may seek reimbursement for this cost in any subsequent legal proceeding [see Comment to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(1); BASF, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1984-1; SDCBA, Ethics Opinions Nos. 1977-3, 1984-3].

PRACTICE TIP:

Fee Agreement Provision on Returning Client Files. An attorney may want to cover the return of files, and possibly even the destruction of files not retrieved, in his or her fee agreement. The provision should also address the continuing obligation to maintain and return files even after the dissolution of a law firm.

[b] Attorney Work Product

[i] Scope of Protection

It is unclear whether the client is entitled to all information in his or her file, particularly the attorney's work product [see Bar Ass'n of San Francisco, Legal Ethics Committee, Opinion No. 1984-1]. Some courts have stated that the attorney's "work product" belongs to the client regardless of whether the attorney has been paid for services rendered [see Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 599, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] . However, while these decisions considered the attorney's work and effort expended on behalf of the client generally, they did not explicitly consider the application of Code Civ. Proc. § 2018 (attorney work product protection) as a basis for nondisclosure of certain aspects of the client's file [see generally Ch. 191, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations and DeMeo, California Deposition and Discovery Practice, Ch. 28 (Matthew Bender)].

The issue of when material is protected from disclosure to the client was raised in Lasky, Haas, Cohen & Munter v. Superior Court. In Lasky, the sole trustee and a current income beneficiary of a trust was sued by beneficiaries with future interests who charged him with mismanagement and a variety of breaches of his fiduciary duties. In the course of discovery, the beneficiaries sought and received discovery of relevant written and oral communications between the trustee and his law firm. The law firm refused to disclose writings or oral discussions, to which it referred as its "uncommunicated work product," consisting of its impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research and theories that were never communicated to or produced for its client. The firm contended that since its own client had no right to the material, the beneficiaries had no right either [Lasky, Haas, Cohler & Munter v. Superior Court (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 264, 269-270, 218 Cal. Rptr. 205] . In interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 2016 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2018], the court concluded that the attorney is the exclusive holder of the work product privilege, and that it may be asserted against the client in the context of litigation when it may be used by adversaries of the client to the client's disadvantage [Lasky, Haas, Cohler & Munter v. Superior Court (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 264, 279, 218 Cal. Rptr. 205] .

The factual context in which the work-product issue was raised by the court in Lasky is very unusual, however, and the breadth of its holding is unclear. The court specifically declined to reach the question of whether a different conclusion might be reached if the client had requested the work product in the context of a dispute with his former attorney [Lasky, Haas, Cohler & Munter v. Superior Court (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 264, 274 n.4, 218 Cal. Rptr. 205] ; it also did not attempt to resolve the potential conflict between the absolute language of the statutory privilege and the ethical obligation of the attorney not to assert the privilege against his or her client's wishes [Lasky, Haas, Cohler & Munter v. Superior Court (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 264, 276 n.6, 218 Cal. Rptr. 205] .

[ii] Action Between Attorney and Client

After the Lasky decision, the Legislature formulated a statutory exception to the work product privilege, applicable in attorney-client disputes. In an action between an attorney and his or her client or former client, no work product privilege exists if the work product is relevant to an issue of breach by the attorney of a duty to the attorney's client arising out of the attorney-client relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 2018(f)]. For purposes of the rule, a "client" is a person who, directly or through an authorized representative, consults an attorney for the purpose of retaining the attorney or securing legal service or advice from him or her in his or her professional capacity, and includes an incompetent who personally consults the attorney or whose guardian or conservator personally consults the lawyer on behalf of the incompetent [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2018(f); Evid. Code § 951].

[iii] Actions Against or Disclosures to Third Parties

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 2018 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.080 effective July 1, 2005) now limits the application of the work-product privilege with respect to disputes between attorney and client, it remains unclear whether an attorney's professional obligation under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700 should be construed to require disclosure to the client when the client asserts a need for the material to assist him or her in litigation against a third party. It is at least arguable that work product protection under Code Civ. Proc. § 2018 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.080 effective July 1, 2005) still exists and may be asserted by the attorney against the client in situations not covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 2018(f) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.080 effective July 1, 2005).

In any case, even when an attorney has transmitted work product to his or her former client, he or she may still assert work product protection to preclude disclosure to third parties [see, e.g., Kaiser Foundation Hosp. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1223-1228, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543 ; Wellpoint Health Networks, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 110, 120, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 ; BP Alaska Exploration v. Superior Court (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1240, 1260, 245 Cal. Rptr. 682 ; Popelka, Allard, McCowan & Jones v. Superior Court (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 496, 501-502, 165 Cal. Rptr. 748 (malicious prosecution action by third party against attorney and former client)].

[c] Unearned Fees

An attorney who withdraws from employment must also promptly refund any part of a fee paid in advance that has not been earned, unless it has been properly designated as a non-refundable fee or a true retainer fee that is paid solely for the purpose of ensuring the availability of the attorney for the matter [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)(2); see Chefsky v. State Bar (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 116, 120, 126-127, 202 Cal. Rptr. 349, 680 P.2d 82 (evidence failed to support finding in State Bar disciplinary proceeding that attorney failed, after abandoning client, to return fee on demand of client, although it could have supported conclusion that attorney violated Rule); see also Garlow v. State Bar (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 689, 706, 244 Cal. Rptr. 452, 749 P.2d 1307 (when attorney is fired for failing to perform services as agreed, attorney must refund unearned fees)]. For further discussion relating to fee agreements and fee collection, see respectively §§ 72.190 et seq., 72.610 et seq.

F. Terminating The Attorney-Client Relationship
2. Withdrawal Of Attorney

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.372

§ 72.372 Procedure to Be Relieved as Counsel

[1] Obtaining Permission to Withdraw

When permission for withdrawal from employment is required by the rules of a particular tribunal, the attorney may not withdraw from a proceeding before that tribunal without its permission [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(1)].

In an action or special proceeding before a California court, an attorney of record may be changed at any time, before or after judgment or final determination, by one of the following means [Code Civ. Proc. § 284]:

- On the consent of both client and attorney, filed with the clerk, or entered in the minutes.

- On the order of the court, on application by either the client or the attorney, after notice of one to the other.

These requirements apply to criminal as well as to civil cases [Mandell v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 136 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; People v. Ward (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 218, 234, 103 Cal. Rptr. 671] .

[2] Attempt to Obtain Consent

Because of the potential negative inference that may be drawn by adverse parties when an attorney withdraws without the consent of his or her client [see § 72.370[3]], and because of the attorney's duty to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client's rights [see § 72.371], an attorney contemplating withdrawal must generally attempt to obtain the client's consent before making any motion for leave to withdraw. This attempt should include an explanation for the requested withdrawal and notice of the potential negative inference that may result if an application for withdrawal is made to the court. In any event, it must include prior written notice to the client that provides the client with a reasonable opportunity to retain and substitute other counsel [see § 72.371].

It appears that the Judicial Council form of Substitution of Attorney must be used, substituting either another attorney or the party in propria persona, as this form is intended for mandatory statewide use because itincludes notice to the client regarding the advisability, and in some instances the necessity, of retaining other counsel [see § 72.372[3]]. For the form for substitution by consent, see § 72.719.

[3] Motion for Leave to Withdraw

If consent cannot be obtained and an application for leave to withdraw becomes necessary, the following requirements apply:

- The attorney must make the application by notice of motion and motion directed to the client, which must be made on the Judicial Council form Notice of Motion and Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, MC-051 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(a)].

- No memorandum is required to be filed or served with a motion to be relieved as counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(b)].

- The motion must be supported by a declaration on the Judicial Council form Declaration in Support of Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, MC-052. The declaration must state in general terms, and without compromising the confidentiality of the attorney-client relationship, why a motion is being made under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) as opposed to filing a consent under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(1) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(c)].

- The notice of motion and motion, the declaration, and the proposed order must be served on the client and on all other parties who have appeared in the case. The notice may be served by personal service or mail. If service is by mail under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013, the notice must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing that either [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1362(d)]:

  - The address is the client's current business or residence address, or,

  - The address is the client's last known business or residence, and the attorney has been unable to locate a more current address after making reasonable efforts to do so within 30 days prior to the filing of the motion.

For the purposes of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d), "current" means that the address was confirmed within 30 days before the filing of the motion. Merely demonstrating that the notice was sent to the client's last known address and was not returned is not, by itself, sufficient to demonstrate that the address is current [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d)]. If the service is by mail, Code Civ. Proc. § 1011(b) applies [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Disclosure of Facts. When contemplating withdrawal from representation without the client's consent, counsel must take care to preserve client confidences and avoid acts or statements detrimental to the client's interests. Counsel also has a duty to continue to represent the client zealously until the withdrawal is effective. Thus, neither the motion nor declaration should disclose facts that would breach confidentiality or jeopardize the client's interests. As a practical matter it is usually possible to obtain the court's permission to withdraw without disclosing the specific facts underlying the motion. Counsel may usually state simply that a disagreement regarding the direction of litigation has arisen, making continued representation unfeasible, or that the client has lost confidence in counsel. Counsel may also prepare a separate, more detailed supplemental declaration, and then state in the initial declaration that the supplemental declaration is available to be submitted to the court under seal for in camera review if the court requests additional evidentiary support.

For an illustrative version of the Judicial Council form Notice of Motion and Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil (MC-051), see § 72.715; for an illustrative version of the Judicial Council form Declaration in Support of Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil (MC-052), see § 72.716. For an optional form for the notice of withdrawal, see § 72.718.

[4] Order Granting Leave to Withdraw

The proposed order relieving counsel must be prepared on the Judicial Council form Order Granting Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, MC-053, and lodged with the court with moving papers. The order must specify all hearing dates scheduled in the action or proceeding, including the date of trial if known. If no hearing date is presently scheduled, the court may set one and specify the date in the order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(e)].

After the court signs the order, a copy of the signed order must be served on the client and on all parties that have appeared in the case. The court may delay the effective date of the order until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(e)].

For an illustrative version of the Judicial Council form Order Granting Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil (MC-053), see § 72.717.

[5] Procedure to Be Relieved as Counsel on Completion of Limited Scope Representation

An application to be relieved as attorney on completion of limited scope representation [see § 72.190[4]] under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) must be directed to the client and made on the Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-955) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(d)]. The application must be filed with the court and served on the client and on all other parties or attorneys for parties in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(e)].

The client must also be served with a blank Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(e)]. If no objection is served and filed with the court within 15 days from the date that the application is served on the client, the attorney making the application must file an updated form MC-955 indicating the lack of objection, along with a proposed Order on Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-958) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)]. The clerk must then forward the order for judicial signature [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)].

If the client serves and files an objection to the application within 15 days, the clerk must set a hearing date on the Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)]. The hearing must be scheduled no later than 25 days from the date the objection is filed. The clerk must send the notice of the hearing to the parties and the attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)].

If no objection is served and filed and the court signs the proposed order, the attorney who filed the application must serve a copy of the signed order on the client and on all parties or the attorneys for all parties who have appeared in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)]. The court may delay the effective date of the order relieving the attorney until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)].

2. Withdrawal Of Attorney

§ 72.373 Court's Discretion to Allow Withdrawal

If an attorney requests leave to withdraw, the court has the discretion to deny the motion if the withdrawal might work an injustice [People v. McCracken (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 336, 350, 246 P.2d 913] or cause undue delay in the proceeding [see Manfredi & Levine v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1133-1136, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 (trial court has discretion to deny attorney's request for withdrawal for alleged, but undisclosed, conflict of interest where court justifiably suspects delaying tactic); Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 725-726, 250 P. 880 (orderdenying motion to withdraw for nonpayment of fees heard day before trial was scheduled to begin not abuse of discretion when permitting withdrawal would have necessitated continuance so client could secure new counsel)]. However, the court's discretion must be exercised reasonably [Mandell v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 136 Cal. Rptr. 354 (abuse of discretion to deny motion based on erroneous belief that counsel who represented defendant at preliminary hearing must represent defendant at arraignment)].

Withdrawal has been permitted when a corporate client refused to cooperate with counsel or pay attorney's fees [see Ferruzzo v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 501, 502-504, 163 Cal. Rptr. 573 (issuing mandate directing trial court to grant motion to withdraw)], and when the client suspected and questioned the good faith of the attorney [Heple v. Kluge (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 461, 462, 231 P.2d 505 (withdrawal pending appeal granted on express condition that attorneys were entitled to no compensation for services previously rendered in connection with appeal)].

Apart from any disciplinary action that may be taken against an attorney who withdraws from a case without a court order or the consent of the client [see, e.g., Finch v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 659, 665, 170 Cal. Rptr. 629, 621 P.2d 253] , and any forfeiture of his or her right to compensation [see § 72.430[5][c]], the attorney may be subject to civil liability to the client. To recover damages on this ground, however the client must show that he or she was damaged by or sustained loss as a result of the attorney's abandonment [Lane v. Storke (1909) 10 Cal. App. 347, 351-352, 101 P. 937] .

If an attorney appointed to represent a criminal defendant refuses to actively participate in the trial, the court may hold the attorney in contempt and, if the attorney persists in his or her refusal, the court should relieve the attorney of his or her duties in the case and advise the client that the client may either represent himself or herself or have substitute counsel appointed [People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 628, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769] .

An attorney who is permitted by the court to withdraw from a case for cause is entitled to enforce any written lien for fees given by the client against any judgment subsequently rendered for the client [Pearlmutter v. Alexander (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 16, 20]. However, an attorney retained on a contingent fee basis who withdraws from the representation of a personal injury plaintiff without good cause is not entitled to assert a lien on amounts recovered by the plaintiff subsequently [Hensel v. Cohen (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 563, 567-569, 202 Cal. Rptr. 85] . For a discussion of attorney's liens, see § 72.190 et seq.

3. Discharge Of Attorney

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.390

§ 72.390 Discharge of Attorney

[1] Client's Right to Change Attorney--Basic Rules

Except as discussed in § 72.390[2], the client's power and right to discharge an attorney in California or to change attorneys under Code Civ. Proc. § 284, with or without cause, is absolute [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 527, 271 P. 906 ; Jones & Matson v. Hall (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1610, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 ; Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 200, 226-227, 194 Cal. Rptr. 180] .

The interest of the client in the successful prosecution or defense of the action is superior to that of the attorney, and, consequently, the client has the right to employ the attorney who will in the client's opinion best serve the client's interest. The relation between attorney and client is such that the client has absolute discretion to dissolve that relation whenever he or she ceases to have absolute confidence in the integrity, the judgment, or the capacity of the attorney, or for any other reason [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Gage v. Atwater (1902) 136 Cal. 170, 172, 68 P. 581] .

The fact the attorney has rendered valuable services under the employment or that the client is indebted to the attorney for the services or for money advanced in the prosecution or defense of the action does not affect the right of discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Isrin v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 153, 159, 45 Cal. Rptr. 320, 403 P.2d 728] . The right exists even though a contingent fee has been agreed on or an irrevocable power of attorney has been given [Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 413, 184 P. 684] . Consequently, the client need only request the change to justify the court's issuance of an order of substitution [Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 527, 271 P. 906] .

[2] Power Coupled With Interest Rarely Precludes Discharge

Under general agency principles, the principal has an absolute right to terminate an agency by revocation, "[u]nless the power of [the] agent is coupled with an interest in the subject of the agency" [see Civ. Code § 2356(a)]. This exception, however, rarely applies to preclude a client's discharge of his or her attorney.

To be a power coupled with an interest, the interest must be in the subject on which the power is to be exercised, not an interest in that which is produced by the power [see Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 414-415, 184 P. 684] . Thus, for example, the interest of an attorney in the proceeds of the lawsuit (as a source of payment of his or her fees) is not a power coupled with an interest, because the interest is only in that which is to be produced by the attorney's exercise of power [Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 372, 90 P.2d 63 (attorney employed under contingent fee contract); Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 531-533, 271 P. 906 (same); see also Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 414-415, 184 P. 684] . This is true even if the client "assigns" to the attorney a proportionate share of the eventual proceeds or expressly grants the attorney a lien to secure the attorney's fee [Isrin v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 153, 160-161, 45 Cal. Rptr. 320, 403 P.2d 728] .

Consequently it will be very unusual for an attorney in his or her representation of a client in a lawsuit to have a power coupled with an interest. This is particularly true in light of the current rules that restrict attorneys from obtaining or representing any interest adverse to his or her client [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 3-300, 3-310 and discussion in § 2.01 et seq.].

ILLUSTRATION:

City Attorney's Power Coupled With Interest. A city redevelopment agency agrees to have the city attorney represent it in actions to condemn certain lands for a redevelopment project. Under the redevelopment plan, part of these lands are to be later transferred to the city for public facilities, on the city's payment of at least one-third of the amounts assessed in the condemnation suits. The agency later decides to substitute its own general counsel in place of the city attorney. Does the city attorney hold a power coupled with an interest that precludes his discharge? Yes. In this unusual situation, the city attorney had a power coupled with an interest: the city had an interest in the subject of the action and the city attorney was empowered to act as the agency's attorney of record [see Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 594-595, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45] .

[3] Formal Substitution Required for Change in Attorney

Once an attorney has actually undertaken the representation of a client and filed a pleading, the execution and filing of a substitution of attorney is essential to an effective change in representation. Until the substitution is a matter of record, the successor attorney cannot act affirmatively to protect the client's interests and the original attorney retains the power to bind the client by his or her actions [Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; see also § 72.592[4][c]].

As long as a party to an action or proceeding has an attorney of record, the court cannot recognize any other attorney as having management or control of the action and the party can act only through the attorney of record [McMunn v. Lehrke (1915) 29 Cal. App. 298, 308, 155 P. 473] . Therefore, in litigation matters, a client's power to substitute one attorney for another has little meaning unless its exercise is accompanied by the original attorney's prompt execution of a consent to substitution of attorney. An attorney who refuses to execute a consent to substitution of attorney (as a device, for example, to protect his or her right to fees) violates the duty of fidelity the attorney owes the client and commits a breach of the attorney's ethical duty under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2) [Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950-951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; see also § 72.392]. If the attorney refuses to sign such a substitution, the client may move the court to discharge the attorney involuntarily.

In situations in which the successor counsel has appeared in an action, courts have excused the absence of a record of formal substitution, particularly when the adverse party has not been misled or otherwise prejudiced [see Baker v. Boxx

ILLUSTRATION:

Formal Substitution Excused. Plaintiffs' attorney files a complaint but never serves it. Later, plaintiffs change attorneys without filing a formal substitution. The new attorney files and serves an amended complaint. Does the new attorney's failure to file a substitution of attorneys render the amended complaint a nullity? No. Although an amended complaint filed by a new attorney technically should be preceded by a substitution, if the original complaint has never been served there is scant chance of the defendant being misled. In the absence of any showing that defendants were misled or prejudiced by the failure to file substitutions, the omission did not invalidate the pleading [Baker v. Boxx (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1303, 1311, 277 Cal. Rptr. 409] .

[4] Court's Power to Discharge Attorney

Counsel may also be relieved on the court's own motion, even over the objection of defendant or defendant's counsel, but this power should be exercised with great circumspection [People v. McKenzie (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 629-630, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769] . Nevertheless, a trial judge may remove defense counsel despite the objections of the defendant and his or her attorney if a serious conflict of interest arises during the trial proceedings resulting in an obviously deficient performance. Then the court's power and duty to ensure fairness and preserve the credibility of its judgment extends to recusal even when an informed defendant, for whatever reason, is cooperating in counsel's tactics [People v. McKenzie(1983) 34 Cal. 3d 616, 630, 194 Cal. Rptr. 462, 668 P.2d 769] . For discussion regarding disqualification for conflicts of interest, see § 72.410 et seq.

[5] Liability for Inducing Discharge

If the discharge is induced by the attorney for the adverse party, the attorney and the adverse party may be liable to the discharged attorney for damages for intentional interference with a contractual relation [see Herron v. State Farm Mutual Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 202, 205-207, 14 Cal. Rptr. 294 (defendant insurance company and defendant attorney had intentionally induced plaintiffs' clients to discharge plaintiffs as their counsel in personal injury action by representing to clients that they did not need attorney and that a satisfactory settlement of their claims would be made)].

[6] Attorney's Duties on Discharge

The duties imposed on an attorney who withdraws from employment apply with equal force to an attorney discharged by the client. The attorney's duty to the client is not altered by the circumstances of who terminates the relationship [Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 ; Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999, 1005-1006, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668] . Consequently, an attorney who is discharged must deliver to the client all papers and property to which the client is entitled [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)]. An attorney who retains a client's case files after discharge or fails to forward the client's files to a successor attorney breaches the duty imposed on him or her by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D), since the attorney's work product belongs absolutely to the client whether or not the attorney has been paid for services rendered prior to the discharge [Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-111); see also Finch v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 659, 665, 170 Cal. Rptr. 629, 621 P.2d 253 (disciplinary proceeding in which attorney, among other misconduct, failed to forward files and documents to substitute counsel)]. For further discussion, see § 72.371.

[7] Discharged Attorney's Right to Compensation

The client's discharge of an attorney does not constitute a breach of contract because the right of the client to terminate the contract at will is a basic term of the contract implied by law by reason of the special relationship that exists between the contracting parties. However, an attorney discharged with or without cause is entitled to recover the reasonable value of the services he or she rendered up to the time of discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790-792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; see also § 72.451].

§ 72.391 Discharged In-House Counsel Not Precluded From Recovering Damages

The general rule that a client may discharge an attorney at any time and for any reason [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] does not permit all clients to terminate the attorney-client relationship under all circumstances without consequence [General Dynamics Corp. v. San Bernardino County Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1174-1175, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] . An "in-house" attorney may therefore recover damages if he or she is discharged in breach of an employment contract, even if the contractual limitations on discharge are based on an implied-in-fact contract [General Dynamics Corp. v. San Bernardino County Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1177-1179, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] . Implied-in-fact limitations on a client-employer's right to discharge in-house counsel are not likely to present issues implicating the distinctive values subserved by the attorney-client relationship, and may therefore be treated the same as implied-in-fact claims brought by the nonattorney employee [General Dynamics Corp. v. San Bernardino County Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1179, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] .

In addition to actions based on breach of contract, an attorney's status as in-house counsel does not preclude a tort cause of action for discharge in violation of public policy. However, such an action may be stated only if the reasons for discharge contravene an attorney's mandatory ethical obligations, or if the reasons would support a claim by a non-attorney employee and a statutory or ethical code provision permits the attorney to depart from the usual rule that client matters remain confidential [General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1188-1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487] . To protect the values underlying the professional relationship, judicial access is limited to claims grounded in explicit and unequivocal ethical norms embodied in Rules of Professional Responsibility and statutes, and to claims that could be maintained by a non-attorney employee under circumstances in which the Legislature has manifested a judgment that the principle of professional confidentiality does not apply [General Dynamics Corp. v. San Bernardino County Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 ; see Evid. Code § 950 et seq. (attorney-client privilege)].

For discussion of wrongful termination actions generally, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.392

§ 72.392 Substitution of Attorneys

[1] Pursuant to Consent Agreement

The attorney in an action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before or after judgment or final determination with the consent of both the client and the attorney. The consent to substitution must be filed with the clerk or entered on the court's minutes [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(1); see also § 72.372[1]]. This applies to criminal as well as to civil cases [see Mandell v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 136 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; People v. Ward (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 218, 234, 103 Cal. Rptr. 671 ; see also Simon v. Superior Court (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 864, 865, 120 Cal. Rptr. 75, 533 P.2d 203] . For forms of consent to substitution, see § 72.719.

When an attorney represents more than one party on the same side, a substitution of attorneys need not be signed by all the parties involved, provided the party signing the form is authorized by his or her coparties to sign it on their behalf [Ehret v. Ichioka (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 637, 641, 55 Cal. Rptr. 869] .

For a discussion of the notice that must be given to adverse parties pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 285, § 72.592[4][c].

[2] Pursuant to Noticed Motion

[a] Availability

If either the attorney or client will not consent to a substitution of attorney or is unable to do so, the attorney in an action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before or after judgment or final determination by court order made on the application of either the client or attorney after notice from one to the other [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2); see Mandell v. Superior Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 136 Cal. Rptr. 354 ; People v. Ward (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 218, 234, 103 Cal. Rptr. 671] . For forms on notice of motion and order for substitution, see §§ 72.720 and 72.721.

The purpose of the substitution procedure is to make it clear to the parties with whom they are authorized to deal [People v. Metrim Corp. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 289, 294, 9 Cal. Rptr. 584] . The function of the notice is to apprise all parties of what is happening and, if there is some lawful reason why the new attorney ought not to be recognized as the attorney of record, to permit the person having knowledge of the defect to appear and be heard [People v. Metrim Corp. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 289, 294, 9 Cal. Rptr. 584] . For further discussion of the procedural requirements for making a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2), see § 72.372[1].

[b] Review of Order

Should the trial court erroneously deny a motion for substitution, a writ of mandate may issue on appropriate application to compel the trial court to grant the motion [see, e.g., Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 526, 534, 271 P. 906] .

An order granting a motion of substitution is not separately appealable by a discharged attorney. The order is not a final order because the attorney's right to recover earned fees is not impaired by it; the attorney can still pursue that right in a separate action [People v. Metrim Corp. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295, 9 Cal. Rptr. 584 ; see also § 72.470 et seq.].

[3] Notice of Substitution

[a] Requirements

When an attorney is changed, either by written consent of the client and attorney filed with the clerk or entered in the minutes or by court order pursuant to a noticed motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 284], written notice of the change and of the substitution of a new attorney, or of the appearance of the party in person, must be given to the adverse party [Code Civ. Proc. § 285]. In the case of a substitution by consent, the Judicial Council form of substitution also operates as the notice [see § 72.719]. It would appear that if the substitution is made on court order, the notice of the court's decision required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1019.5 may be combined with this notice. Until the notice of the change or substitution is given, the adverse party must continue to recognize the former attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 285]. For a form for notice of substitution, see § 72.722.

[b] Waiver by Acceptance of Papers or Failure to Object

The requirement of notice is for the benefit of the adverse party and may be waived by that party or by his or her attorney [see Livermore v. Webb (1880) 56 Cal. 489, 490 ; Withers v. Little (1880) 56 Cal. 370, 372 ; Alliance Bank v. Murray (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7 n.1, 207 Cal. Rptr. 233] . Slight circumstances of acquiescence are sufficient to show waiver [Starkweather v. Eddy (1925) 196 Cal. 73, 75, 235 P. 734] . For example, waiver may be found in the acceptance of papers served by the new attorney or by giving a written acknowledgment of service [see Livermore v. Webb (1880) 56 Cal. 489, 490 (waiver of notice by adverse party's acknowledging "due service" of notice of appeal signed by party's new attorney although no substitution of attorneys had been filed); Withers v. Little (1880) 56 Cal. 370, 372 (same)].

Consequently, if the attorney for the adverse party has not been notified of the substitution and is unaware of it, he or she should return any papers served on him or her by the new attorney or refuse to give any written acknowledgment of their service, stating as the ground that the attorney named is not the party's attorney of record. In addition, the attorney for the adverse party should object if the substituted attorney appears at any hearing or the trial and purports to act as the attorney for a party. The party effecting the change cannot, of course, object to his or her own failure to give the notice [Anderson v. City Ry. Co. (1935) 9 Cal. App. 2d 205, 207, 48 P.2d 969 (plaintiffs who knew that attorney was acting for them could not subsequently contend that they were not bound by his appearance because he was not technically an attorney of record)].

[4] Substitution of Attorneys on Appeal

The withdrawal or substitution of attorneys pending an appeal may be effected by serving and filing a stipulation in the reviewing court. The stipulation must be signed by the party, the retiring attorney, and any substituted attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.36(b) (appeal from superior court), 8.768(b) (appeal from municipal court)]. For a form for stipulation to withdraw or substitute attorneys pending appeal, see § 72.723.

In the absence of a stipulation, withdrawal or substitution may be effected only by an order made pursuant to a motion in the reviewing court, provided that unless otherwise ordered by the court, service of the motion need be made only on the party and the attorneys directly affected by it [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.36(b), 8.768(b)]. The form of notice for motion to be relieved as counsel [see § 72.715] may be modified for use as a notice of motion to withdraw or substitute attorneys pending an appeal. The order granting motion to be relieved as counsel [see § 72.717] also may be modified for use as an order allowing withdrawal or substitution of attorneys pending an appeal.

The clerk of the reviewing court is required to give a notification of the withdrawal or substitution to the clerk of the trial court. Substituted counsel must forthwith give notice of the substitution to all parties [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.36(b), 8.768(b)]. The notice of substitution of attorneys form [see § 72.722] may be adopted to serve as a notice of substitution to all parties.

§ 72.410 Representation Adverse to Former Client Ethically Prohibited

It is a breach of professional ethics for an attorney to do either of the following:

- Engage in conduct that will injuriously affect a former client in any matter in which the attorney formerly represented the client [People ex rel. Deukmejian v. Brown (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 150, 155-156, 172 Cal. Rptr. 478, 624 P.2d 1206 ; Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 573-574, 15 P.2d 505] .

- Use against a former client knowledge or information acquired by virtue of the previous attorney-client relationship [Leversen v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 530, 538, 194 Cal. Rptr. 448, 668 P.2d 755 ; Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 573-574, 15 P.2d 505] .

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) and Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) codify these ethical principles:

- Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) provides that it is an attorney's duty to maintain inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself or herself, to preserve the secrets, of his or her client.

- Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) provides that a lawyer cannot, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client or former client when, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the lawyer has obtained confidential information material to the employment.

For further, detailed discussion of an attorney's general ethical duties when faced with actual or potential conflicts of interest, see § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.170 et seq. For discussion of specific duties respecting use of confidential information obtained from a former client, see § 72.110 et seq. and § 72.130 et seq.

4. Disqualification Of Opposing Counsel

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.411

§ 72.411 Disqualification Motions

[1] Former Client May Move to Disqualify Attorney for Adverse Party

When an adverse party is represented by counsel who violates the prohibition against representation adverse to a former client [see Representation Adverse to Former Client Ethically Prohibited, above], the former client may move to disqualify the attorney from representing the adverse party [Elliott v. McFarland Unified School Dist. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 567, 211 Cal. Rptr. 802] . For forms for notice of motion and order disqualifying opposing counsel, see §§ 72.724 and 72.725.

PRACTICE TIP:

Motion Procedure. There is no specific statutory procedure for making a motion to disqualify an attorney from representation adverse to a former client. A motion to disqualify opposing counsel should be made on written notice, accompanied by a supporting memorandum [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1010; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)].

[2] Showing in Support of Motion

In proceedings on a motion for disqualification, the key issue is the potential for misuse of confidential information obtained during the prior representation. Standing alone, the fact that the moving party was once represented by counsel for the opposing party is not sufficient to justify disqualification. The moving party must show either of the following [H.F. Ahmanson & Co. v. Salomon Brothers, Inc. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1452, 280 Cal. Rptr. 614] :

- That the attorney actually possesses confidential information relevant to the present controversy obtained from the former client.

- That the attorney is presumed to possess relevant confidential information because there is a "substantial relationship" between the former and current representation.

Disqualification of an individual attorney may be extended to the attorney's entire law firm, based on the presumption that information known to one member of the firm is shared with all partners and associates [see, e.g., Klein v. Superior Court (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 894, 908-909, 244 Cal. Rptr. 226 ; William H. Raley Co. v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 1048, 197 Cal. Rptr. 232] .

For detailed coverage of the substantial relationship test, the presumption resulting from the test, and the principle of vicarious disqualification, see § 72.110 et seq.

[3] Standing to Make Motion

A disqualification motion may be brought by a party who is a former client of an attorney representing the adverse party [H.F. Ahmanson & Co. v. Salomon Brothers, Inc. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1452, 280 Cal. Rptr. 614] .

One appellate court has stated, in dictum, that a moving party must establish that he or she was represented by the attorney in a manner giving rise to an attorney-client relationship [Civil Service Com. v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 76-77, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159 ; see also § 72.190 et seq. (creation of attorney-client relationship)]. However, fiduciary obligations and professional responsibilities may warrant disqualification of counsel in appropriate cases even in the absence of a strict contractual attorney-client relationship [see Meza v. H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 980-981, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 (nonclient had interest in protecting confidential attorney work product developed during joint defense efforts)].

For example, in Trone v. Smith (9th Cir 1980) 621 F2d 994 , a law firm representing trustees in bankruptcy against a number of individuals and corporations was disqualified because of a prior substantial relationship with one of the defendants. The court held that the disqualification extended not only to the action against that defendant, but to all the other defendants. Although none of the defendants was ever technically in an attorney-client relationship with the plaintiff's attorney, the multiple and interlocking bonds between all defendants and the former client required the court to disqualify the firm from representing the plaintiffs against all defendants [Trone v. Smith (9th Cir 1980) 621 F2d 994, 1001-1002] .

[4] Reasonable Diligence Requirement

Reasonable diligence is required when making a motion to disqualify [Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386 ; see River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1309, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33] . Mere delay in making the motion is not grounds for denial of the motion, but an unreasonable delay together with resulting prejudice may justify denial. Laches may thus be a bar to disqualification [River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1309, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33 ; see also § 72.411[5]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Move to Disqualify Promptly. To avoid the potential bar under the doctrine of laches, it is important to make the disqualification motion as soon as practicable after discovery of the conflict.

ILLUSTRATION: Waiver. Plaintiffs bring an action against defendant. One of the plaintiff's attorneys had represented the defendant 30 years earlier in a matter substantially related to the subject of the present action. The defendant does not move for disqualification until 47 months after he files his answer, by which time the plaintiff's attorney has put in over 3,000 hours at a cost of $387,000. Has the defendant waived the right to disqualify the attorney? Yes. The delay in moving for disqualification is so unreasonable and the resulting prejudice so great that implied waiver must be presumed [see River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33] .

[5] Determination of Motion

[a] Evidence of Substantial Relationship

In determining a motion to disqualify an attorney, the judge may allow the presentation of evidence or may determine the motion on affidavits [Big Bear Mun. Water Dist. v. Superior Court (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 919, 927, 75 Cal. Rptr. 580] .

The grant or denial of the motion usually turns on whether there was a substantial relationship between the two representations [see § 72.110 et seq.]. In making this determination, the court should focus on factual similarity, legal similarity, and the nature and extent of the attorney's involvement with the cases, including the time spent by the attorney, the type of work performed, and the attorney's possible exposure to formulation of policy and strategy [see Rosenfeld Construction Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 566, 576, 286 Cal. Rptr. 609] .

[b] Effect of Finding Substantial Relationship on Court's Discretion

A split of authority exists over whether a court has discretion to deny a disqualification motion even though it finds a "substantial relationship" between the current and former matters.

Courts exercise discretion when deciding motions to disqualify. There are cases where a motion to disqualify is not granted despite evidence establishing a presumption that the attorney possesses relevant confidential information obtained during the former representation. In William H. Raley Co. v. Superior Court, the court took an expansive view of the trial court's discretion in ruling on a disqualification motion involving representation adverse to a former client. A court must weigh competing interests, including the combined effect of a party's right to counsel of choice, an attorney's interest in representing a client, the financial burden on a client of replacing disqualified counsel, and any tactical abuse underlying a disqualification proceeding against the principle that a fair resolution of disputes requires vigorous representation by independent counsel unencumbered by conflicts of interest. The Raley court noted that, under the circumstances of the case, it was also required to consider in favor of disqualification the disruptive effect of repeated disqualification proceedings on the administrative process of the court and the financial burden of the disqualification proceedings on the moving party [William H. Raley Co. v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 1048, 197 Cal. Rptr. 232 ; see Elliott v. McFarland Unified School Dist. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 567, 211 Cal. Rptr. 802] .

Other courts, while not stating the discretion to deny disqualification so broadly as Raley, have expressed concern that the disqualification motion may be used as a tactical device. In one case, the court found that the motion may not be used "as a tactical device to delay litigation" [Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v. Consortium Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 443, 450, 212 Cal. Rptr. 497] . In Western Continental Operating Co. v. Natural Gas Corp., the court stated that in exercising its discretion with respect to granting or denying a disqualification motion, a trial court may properly consider the possibility that the party brought the motion as a tactical device to delay litigation. If the party opposing the motion can demonstrate prima facie evidence of unreasonable delay in bringing the motion causing prejudice to the client, disqualification should not be ordered [Western Continental Operating Co. v. Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 763, 261 Cal. Rptr. 100 ; see also In re Complex Asbestos Litigation (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 572, 599-600, 283 Cal. Rptr. 732 (prejudice as contemplated by Western Continental does not include mere loss of services of knowledgeable counsel and forced retention of new counsel)].

The view that the trial court should exercise discretion in balancing the interests of the former and current clients was criticized in River West, Inc. v. Nickel. In River West, the court stated that if a substantial relationship is established, disqualification should be ordered automatically, and the court should not enlarge its inquiry by balancing the parties' competing interests under its equity jurisdiction [River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1304, 1308-1310, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33] . Nevertheless, if there is convincing evidence that delay by the movant was inexcusable, and the present client will suffer prejudice, the court may find that the former client has waived any right to disqualify counsel despite the existence of a substantial relationship [River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1310, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33 (discussed under § 72.411[4])].

[6] Scope of Consent by Joint Clients

When the prior representation involves joint clients, the determination of whether the attorney may be disqualified turns on whether the subsequent representation is within the scope of the consent of the clients, not on whether there is a substantial relationship [Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1294-1295, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] . The substantial relationship test, discussed under § 72.411[5][a] above, adds nothing to the disqualification analysis in these cases because a substantial relationship between the former representation and the subsequent action is inherent. Moreover, although the substantial relationship test determines whether confidences were likely disclosed, in a joint client situation, confidences are necessarily disclosed [Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1294, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] .

[7] Review of Order Granting or Denying Motion

An order granting or denying a motion to disqualify is reviewable by way of:

- Petition for writ of mandate [Rosenfeld Construction Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 566, 572, 286 Cal. Rptr. 609] .

- Direct appeal [Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1052 n.1, 8 Cal. Rptr.2d 228] .

A petition for writ of mandate accompanied by a request for an immediate stay is preferable because generally extraordinary writs are determined more speedily than appeals. The specter of disqualification of counsel should not be allowed to hover over the proceedings for an extended period of time for an appeal [Apple Computer, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1264, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818] .

If a party does not seek pretrial review of an order granting or denying a motion to disqualify opposing counsel, and raises the issue only on appeal from the final judgment in the action, that party must show that the erroneous granting or denial of a motion affected the outcome of the proceeding to his or her prejudice [In re Sophia B. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1436, 1439, 250 Cal. Rptr. 802] .

1. General Ethical And Practical Considerations

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.430

§ 72.430 Fee Collection and Attorney Ethics

[1] Suit for Fees Is Ethically Permissible

In California, an attorney may bring an action against a client to collect:

- Fees owed to him or her on an express contract [see, e.g., Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576-577, 222 P.2d 314 (breach of contract action); Ferro v. Citizens Nat. Trust & Sav. Bank (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 401, 409, 282 P.2d 849 (common count for money had and received); see also § 72.450].

- The reasonable value of the services performed by the attorney for the client [see, e.g., Spires v. American Bus Lines (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 211, 216, 204 Cal. Rptr. 531 ; see also § 72.451].

Although the American Bar Association's former position was to discourage attorneys' suits for fees, neither California courts nor the California State Bar have adopted this policy. One ethical consideration under the American Bar Association Model Code of Professional Responsibility, which was never adopted in California, states that an attorney should zealously attempt to avoid fee disputes, should try to resolve any disagreements amicably, and should not sue a client unless it is necessary to prevent fraud or a "gross imposition" [Model Code of Professional Responsibility EC 2-23 (1980)]. The State Bar Act and Rules of Professional Conduct, as well as the American Bar Association Model Rules of Professional Conduct, however, contain no provisions precluding an attorney from suing his or her client to recover a fee.

PRACTICE TIP:

Preliminary Measures to Avoid Lawsuits. Although actions to collect fees are ethically permissible, they are also last-resort measures. You can avoid these suits as much as possible by making certain practices, such as the following, part of your standard office management procedures:

- Make sure the initial fee agreement is detailed and covers all necessary terms concerning fees and payment. If a new client is involved and you suspect there may be problems with payment, be tough at the outset, e.g., demand a substantial fee deposit, and demand that the deposit be replenished as it nears depletion. For discussion of fee agreements generally, see § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.

- Keep the client informed regarding the work you are doing; one of the more common objections to collection efforts is the client's claim that he or she "did not know you were doing all that work."

- Bill frequently and monitor the returns. Respond promptly to inquiries about bills. If you get an inadequate response to a bill, talk to the client and attempt to ascertain and resolve problems early on in the attorney-client relationship.

- When a client falls behind in his or her bill payment, consider terminating the attorney-client relationship rather than continuing to do more and more work for the client indefinitely. Withdrawal becomes more and more difficult later on, e.g., as trial approaches, and as the client's arrears increase, so does the likelihood that he or she will put up a fight.

- Act promptly to recover fair and just claims for fees, but act just as promptly to reach a compromise on questionable claims.

[2] Terminating Attorney-Client Relationship Before Bringing Suit

While it may be permissible to bring suit to collect fees, counsel should not initiate an action before terminating the attorney-client relationship; to do so is generally regarded as ethically improper [see, e.g., LACBA Formal Opinion No. 407 (1982); see also Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 553 n.8, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142 (noting, without so deciding, that attorney's general duty of loyalty may dictate that attorney not sue present client)]. For discussion and forms relating to termination of the attorney-client relationship, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.

[3] Imposing Interest on Delinquent Fees and Costs

An attorney may not impose interest charges on delinquent statements of fees and costs unless the fee agreement signed by the client includes a provision expressly authorizing such charges. Moreover, even if the client has given such prior consent, the rate of interest imposed may not be unreasonable [LACBA Formal Opinion Nos. 499 (1999), 370 (1978)].

For a discussion of collection procedures that are unethical, see § 72.430[4]. For discussion of interest on fees, see § 72.197[4].

[4] Fees May Be Denied for Ethical Misconduct

Attorney misconduct may result in denial of fees, even though the client was not damaged by the misconduct and benefits from the denial of fees. Denial is possible, for example, if the attorney does one of the following:

- Breaches a fiduciary duty [Anderson v. Eaton (1930) 211 Cal. 113, 116-117, 293 P. 788] .

- Violates a provision of the Rules of Professional Conduct [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 10, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373 ; see also Sullivan v. Dorsa (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 947, 965-966, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 547 (no showing that attorney's violation of ethical rules serious enough to compel fee forfeiture); In re the Marriage of Friedman (2002)100 Cal. App. 4th 65, 71, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 and Pringle v. La Chapelle (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1000, 1006, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 90 (suggesting that there must be a serious violation of the attorney's responsibilities before an attorney who violates an ethical rule is required to forfeit fees)].

- Violates a provision of the State Bar Act [Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 618-619, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

The client can avoid payment of the fees even though he or she benefited from the attorney's ethical violation [Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 618-619, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

If an attorney is disqualified for violating an ethical obligation, the attorney is generally not entitled to fees (a court need not specifically state that a violation of California Rule of Professional Conduct 3-310(E) has occurred) [A.I. Credit Corp., Inc. v. Aguilar (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1072, 1076, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 813] .

If the attorney's fee contract violates the State Bar Act or the Rules of Professional Conduct at the time it is executed so that the contract can be considered voidable for public policy reasons, the attorney may in some instances not be able to recover fees at all [Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 620, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] . For example, a contract was held voidable in one case in which an attorney accepted employment adverse to a former client and had obtained material, confidential information obtained from that former client in violation of former Cal Rules of Prof Conduct, Rule 4-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)) [Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 620, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

If the violation occurs after the creation of the attorney-client relationship, the attorney may be denied fees for services rendered after the date of the violation [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 12, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373] . Furthermore, in one federal case from another jurisdiction, the court held that the attorney may be compelled to disgorge fees already received when found to have engaged in professional misconduct [see Financial General Bankshares, Inc. v. Metzer (D.D.C. 1981) 523 F. Supp. 744, 773 , vac. on other grounds, (D.C. Cir. 1982) 680 F.2d 768] .

In an action to recover attorney's fees, the trial court may raise the issue of professional misconduct on its own motion and deny the recovery of fees if the attorney's misconduct is sufficiently egregious to require voiding the contract on public policy grounds [see Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 623 n.10, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253] .

[5] Unethical Fee Collection Practices

[a] Refusal to Execute Substitution of Attorneys and Turn Over Files

It is an ethical violation for a California attorney, as a means to protect a fee, to do the following:

- Refuse to execute a substitution of attorneys form [Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

- Refuse to turn over the client's files [Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999, 1005, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668] .

A client has an absolute right to substitute one attorney for another, even though a fee is owed [Meadow v. Superior Court (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 610, 616, 30 Cal. Rptr. 824, 381 P.2d 648] . In this event, the attorney must take reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client's rights and deliver to the client, on the client's request, all papers and property to which the client is entitled [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2), (C); Academy of California Optometrists, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 999, 1005, 124 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(B)(4)]. An attorney can be subjected to discipline for failing to forward the client's files to the successor attorney [Finch v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 659, 665, 170 Cal. Rptr. 629, 621 P.2d 253] . For further discussion regarding discharge and substitution of attorneys, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.

Requiring that a fee-splitting agreement be executed by successor counsel before signing a substitution and turning over the files is illegal and against public policy [see Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 949-950, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879] .

[b] Disclosure of Confidential Client Information

An attorney has a duty to preserve confidential client information pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6060(e), which is owed to both current and former clients [Commercial Standard Title Company v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 945, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393] . In collecting fees from clients, an attorney generally must preserve confidential client information inviolate. However, LACBA Formal Opinion No. 498 (1999) maintains that an attorney may reveal confidential client information in a fee dispute with a client, but only where the information is relevant to the dispute and reasonably necessary due to an issue raised by the client. The disclosure should be made in a manner that avoids any unnecessary disclosure of confidential client information [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 498 (1999)].

[c] Unilateral Withdrawal of Trust Funds

When the client disputes the attorney's right to receive a portion of funds held in trust by the attorney, the attorney may not unilaterally withdraw the disputed portion of funds until final resolution of the dispute [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100(A)(2)]. Thus, an attorney cannot unilaterally determine his or her fee and withdraw that amount from the client's trust fund without the client's knowledge and consent [Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 26, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648] . If this were permitted, the attorney's claim for fees could be satisfied without even submitting a bill to the client, and the client would have the unfair burden of attempting to recover any excessive fee unilaterally withdrawn by the attorney [Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 26-28, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648] . The attorney may withdraw client trust funds to pay his or her fee only when the precise amount is fixed by agreement, judicial determination, or some other unequivocal manner. The attorney is further obligated to seek a prompt resolution of a dispute over fees and, absent any agreement, has an affirmative ethical obligation to seek arbitration or judicial determination of the respective interests in the trust funds [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 438 (1985)].

For further discussion of an attorney's duties with regard to withdrawal of client funds held in trust by the attorney, see § 72.370 et seq.

[d] Confession of Judgment

The use of a confession of judgment to collect attorney's fees is improper, and any confession of judgment executed for this purpose is unenforceable. If attorneys were allowed to use this device to secure the payment of fees, they would have opportunities to overreach that would not be subject to judicial review. Additionally, most clients probably would not understand the nature and effect of the confession of judgment [Hulland v. State Bar (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 440, 449-450, 105 Cal. Rptr. 152, 503 P.2d 608] . Furthermore, the California Supreme Court stated that use of a confession of judgment is unnecessary because a promissory note is equally effective as a means of enforcing the client's obligations to pay fees [Hulland v. State Bar (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 440, 450, 105 Cal. Rptr. 152, 503 P.2d 608 ; see Hawk v. State Bar (1988) 45 Cal. 3d 589, 600, 247 Cal. Rptr. 599, 754 P.2d 1096 ; see discussion of promissory notes in § 72.30 et seq. through § 72.170 et seq.].

[e] Prior Execution of Substitution of Attorneys

It is improper for an attorney to compel the client to execute at the commencement of the attorney-client relationship a substitution of attorney form for filing if the client later fails to pay the attorney's fees and costs in a timely manner [see LACBA Formal Opinion No. 371 (1977)]. This device violates the spirit and intent of the provisions of the California

Rules of Professional Conduct that pertain to withdrawal from employment. The use of a presigned, undated substitution of attorney form might be used in certain circumstances to avoid the requirement of obtaining the approval of the tribunal for withdrawal. There is a risk that the attorney may use a presigned form without taking reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client as required under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2) [see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.]. Finally, knowing and free consent to the execution of the substitution of attorney cannot be given in advance, when the circumstances in which it will be used cannot be foreseen [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 371 (1977)].

[f] Delay in Prosecution of Client's Case

It is a misdemeanor for a California attorney willfully to delay a client's suit for the attorney's own gain [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128(b)]. For example, it is improper for an attorney to delay a divorce action, such as by delaying entry of the final judgment, until the balance of fees is paid. If the client is deliberately disregarding an agreement or obligation related to payment of fees, the attorney has grounds for withdrawal. When an attorney delays a case because of nonpayment of fees and remains as attorney of record, the attorney places himself or herself in a position of conflict with the client's interest in having the matter completed promptly [State Bar Formal Opinion No. 1968-16; see also LACBA Formal Opinion No. 356 (1976) (attorney may not make payment of fee condition precedent to dismissal of action requested by client)].

[g] Threats to Coerce Payment

The making of certain types of threats to coerce payment of fees is an improper method of fee collection, which may subject the attorney to discipline or criminal charges. Examples of such behavior include the following:

- Offering to drop criminal charges against the client's husband if the client would pay the client's attorney's fee [Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 162, 170, 118 Cal. Rptr. 175, 529 P.2d 599] .

- Threatening to report the client's wife to immigration authorities in an attempt to compel the client, who had filed bankruptcy, to pay his fee [Lindenbaum v. State Bar (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 565, 573, 160 P.2d 9] .

- Intentionally withholding the client's funds to attempt to coerce payment of the attorney's fee [McGrath v. State Bar (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 737, 741, 135 P.2d 1] .

- Utilizing a collection agency to collect a claim against a former client when the collection agency, through its association with a credit service, has the ability to impair the client's credit until the claim is paid [LACBA Formal Opinion No. 373 (1978)].

The attorney, in attempting to collect fees, should be sure that he or she is not using oppressive methods of collection constituting extortion. Extortion is defined as the obtaining of property from another with that person's consent, induced by a wrongful use of force or fear [Penal Code § 518]. Fear that will constitute extortion may be induced by a threat to accuse an individual, or relative of that individual, of a crime, or to expose them to a crime, or to expose any secret affecting them [Penal Code § 519].

Even if an attorney's acts do not constitute attempted extortion, they may constitute moral turpitude [Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 162, 170, 118 Cal. Rptr. 175, 529 P.2d 599 ; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6106 (suspension or disbarment for acts of moral turpitude)]. Moral turpitude has been defined as "conduct which is contrary to justice, honesty and good morals..." [Fall v. State Bar (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 149, 160, 153 P.2d 1 ; see also In re Craig (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 93, 97, 82 P.2d 442 ("an act of baseness, vileness or depravity in the private and social duties which a man owes to his fellow men or to society in general, contrary to the accepted and the customary rule of right and duty between man and man")].

ILLUSTRATION:

Threat of Criminal Proceeding as Moral Turpitude. Wife retains Attorney to represent her in a divorce proceeding. A few weeks later, Husband comes to Attorney's office and initiates a fist fight with Attorney, who then prefers criminal charges of assault and battery against Husband. Attorney estimates sustaining $270 in property damage and medical expenses. Soon thereafter, Wife and Husband sign a marital settlement agreement, which among other things requires Husband to pay $1,000 in attorney's fees owed by Wife to Attorney. Not long afterward, however, Husband and Wife reconcile and no longer need the settlement agreement. As the trial date nears for Husband's criminal charges, both Wife and Husband's attorneys ask Attorney if he would be willing to drop the criminal charges against husband. Attorney informs them initially that he will drop the charges if Husband pays the $1,000 owed to him under the settlement agreement; later he offers to drop them if Husband pays him $700 of that amount. One of them asks Husband what the $700 has to do with the criminal charges, and Attorney replies "nothing, except that that's the only way I can make [Husband] pay me now that the parties have reconciled." The fee is never paid, and Husband is acquitted at the criminal trial. Does Attorney's conduct constitute moral turpitude? Yes. Moral turpitude includes oppressive methods of attempting to collect legal fees, such as this willful and wrongful attempt to use the threat of criminal proceedings in order to collect in a civil matter [Bluestein v. State Bar (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 162, 169-170, 118 Cal. Rptr. 175, 529 P.2d 599] .

[h] Willful Breach of Statutory Restrictions on Consumer Debt Collection

An attorney who represents another attorney in collecting a fee that is a consumer debt may be subject to discipline for willful breach of certain statutory restrictions on consumer debt collection [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(i)]. Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5, an attorney and his or her employees who are employed primarily to assist in the collection of a consumer debt owed to another, as defined by Civ. Code § 1788.2, must comply with specified statutory requirements. Civ. Code § 1788.2, a provision in the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, defines a "consumer debt" as a debt owing from a natural person by reason of a consumer credit transaction [Civ. Code § 1788.2(f)]. A "consumer credit transaction" means a transaction between a natural person and another person in which property, services, or money is acquired on credit by that natural person from the other person primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1788.2(e)]. If, under the above definition, the fee arrangement qualifies as a consumer credit transaction, the collecting attorney and his or her employees must do all of the following:

- Properly identify themselves when communicating with the consumer debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(b)].

- Limit communications with the debtor to times and places convenient to the debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(c)].

- Stop communications on the debtor's written request in several situations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(d)].

- Not take or threaten to take nonjudicial action against property in certain cases [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(e)].

- Not include in a demand concealed charges for certain items such as telegrams and collect telephone calls [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(f)].

- Provide the debtor with written notice in unsecured debt collection matters about the amount of the debt, the name of the creditor, and certain other information, and stop the unsecured debt collection effort except for filing suit if the debtor disputes all or part of the debt until the attorney obtains certain documentation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(g)].

- Apply any payment in accordance with the debtor's instructions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5(h)].

Although attorneys are subject to restrictions under the foregoing provisions of the State Bar Act (i.e., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6077.5), they are not otherwise subject to the provisions of the The Fair Debt Collection Practice Act (Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.). This Act applies only to statutorily defined "debt collectors," a definition that specifically excludes attorneys [see Civ. Code § 1788.2(c)]. Thus, a debtor does not have a statutory cause of action under the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act against an attorney representing a creditor based on alleged violations of the Act [see Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1526, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478] .

[i] Acceptance of Fee Derived From Proceeds of Federal Criminal Offense

18 U.S.C. § 1957 makes it a criminal offense for a person, under specified circumstances, to knowingly engage in or attempt to engage in monetary transactions in property constituting, or derived from, proceeds obtained from a criminal offense [18 U.S.C. § 1957(a), (d)]. The statute apparently enables the federal government to prosecute attorneys who knowingly accept tainted money from their clients.

The statute applies only if the criminally derived property is worth more than $10,000 and is derived from one of the "specified unlawful activities" listed in 18 U.S.C. § 1956(c)(7) [18 U.S.C. § 1957(a), (f)(3)]. Listed activities include racketeering, bribery, smuggling, and various drug offenses. In a prosecution under Section 1957, the Government is not required to prove that the defendant knew that the offense from which the criminally derived property was derived was "specified unlawful activity" [see 18 U.S.C. § 1957(c)(7)]. Penalties for violation of Section 1957 may include up to ten years imprisonment, a fine, or both [18 U.S.C. § 1957(b)].

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.431

§ 72.431 Factors Affecting Determination Whether to Sue Client for Fees

[1] Fee Agreement and Documentation of Attorney's Performance

Before initiating an action, counsel must determine the extent to which the written fee agreement, time records, and periodic billings establish the attorney's entitlement to the fee. A clear fee agreement should be reached, especially as to the basis for computing the fee, as soon as possible after establishment of the attorney-client relationship [Model Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 1.5(b) (1983)]. Contingency fee contracts and most other fee agreements are required by statute to be in writing and to contain certain provisions [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6147, 6148, discussed in § 72.196 et seq.]. If the attorney does not have any written documentary evidence, he or she may have difficulty establishing the amount of the claim for fees, and the claim may appear to be sloppy and unprofessional to the trier of fact in the fee collection proceeding.

[2] Quality of Work Performed

Counsel must also consider whether the services were done in a professionally competent manner. If there is some doubt concerning the quality of the services rendered, the attorney should consider the extent to which this may preclude recovery or raise an issue regarding the reasonableness of his or her fee.

[3] Risk of Malpractice Cross Complaint

If the quality of the services performed is doubtful, the attorney must also consider the likelihood that the client will cross complain for malpractice. Even if the client's cause of action for malpractice is barred by the applicable statute of limitations (i.e., Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6), the client's cause of action may be revived as an offset when the attorney files a fee collection action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70; Davis & Cox v. Summa Corp. (9th Cir. 1985) 751 F.2d 1507, 1521-1522] . In addition to being a cross defendant in the action, the attorney must report the malpractice claim on any future application for malpractice insurance; in some instances, the claim must also be reported to the State Bar [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(o)(1), (2)].

[4] Review Representation for Ethical Violations Before Filing Suit

Before filing suit against the client, the attorney should be certain he or she has not committed any ethical violations in the matter for which he or she is attempting to collect the fee. Even if the attorney believes that the violation had no impact on his or her performance or on the reasonableness of the fee, he or she may be denied fees or be reported to the State Bar for disciplinary action [see § 72.430[3]]. If the client or the client's attorney do not report the attorney to the State Bar for any professional misconduct, the arbitrator or court may do so.

[5] Reasonableness of Fee

The attorney must assess the reasonableness of the fee charged. If an attorney secures benefits from a client greatly out of proportion to the services rendered, the attorney violates Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200(E) [see discussion of fee agreements in § 72.192 et seq.]. An attorney may want to consult with other attorneys who have handled similar cases for their opinions about the reasonableness of the fee. If the fee is too high, the attorney may want to lower his or her demand before bringing suit. For discussion of the requirement of reasonableness, see § 72.190 et seq.

[6] Respective Effectiveness of Attorney and Client as Witnesses

The attorney must make a realistic evaluation concerning how the attorney, and his or her client, will come across as witnesses in the fee collection proceeding. Their respective impact on the trier of fact may have a substantive effect on the outcome.

[7] Expected Net Recovery

The anticipated net recovery to the attorney or firm must also be considered in determining whether to sue the client. If outside counsel is retained to prosecute the fee collection action, that attorney may want a contingency fee that must be deducted from the gross recovery or a fixed fee that will reduce the net recovery. Out-of-pocket litigation expenses will include arbitration, court filing fees, or both, and perhaps expert witness fees. At least one attorney will lose some time from practice in preparing the fee collection case and testifying. If a small claims court award or an arbitration award is appealed, some of this effort will be repeated. Some of that loss may be made up, however, if the attorney is the prevailing party in the appeal of an arbitration award and is awarded reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(d) (attorney's fees awarded to prevailing party at trial de novo following arbitration); see also § 72.479[5]]. The final net recovery consideration is the after-tax return to the attorney and any partners.

[8] Likelihood of Collecting Award

If it is likely that an award would be difficult or impossible to collect even if the attorney prevails in the fee collection action, because the client is a candidate for bankruptcy or entitled to exemptions from execution, counsel should factor that likelihood into his or her determination of the likely net recovery.

[9] Existence of Civ. Code § 1717 Attorney's Fee Clause in Fee Agreement

If a written fee agreement, signed by the client, includes a provision for the recovery of attorney's fees, counsel should decide whether this fact militates for or against bringing a fee collection action. This determination depends on the strength of the attorney's case. If the agreement provides that the attorney may recover fees incurred in bringing a collection action, the client is also entitled to recover such fees if he or she prevails [see Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. Thus, if the attorney has a doubtful case and the amount to be collected is small, it may be better not to bring the action than to risk liability for an award of fees in the client's favor [see, e.g., Kroff v. Larson (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 857, 862, 213 Cal. Rptr. 526 (attorney's fees on appeal)].

On the other hand, even if the attorney's case is strong, he or she may recover an award of fees under the contract provision only if he or she actually incurs the expense of attorney's fees. In particular, an attorney who acts pro se, representing himself or herself in an action on the written fee agreement, has been held not to incur any actual expense; even if the attorney prevails in the action he or she cannot recover an award of attorney's fees pursuant to the contract provision allowing their recovery [Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 274, 282, 292, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241, 902 P.2d 259] .

For detailed discussion and forms relating to the recovery of attorney's fees as an element of costs pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.50.

Although the California Supreme Court ruled in 1929 that an attorney may not recover attorney's fees when appearing in propria persona [see City of Long Beach v. Sten (1929) 206 Cal. 473, 474, 274 P. 968] , a court of appeal recently declined to follow that decision, noting that it had been subsequently questioned by the Supreme Court. Instead, the court of appeal ruled that an attorney who acts pro se to recover fees under a written agreement for compensation for services rendered to a client may recover attorney's fees and costs under Civ. Code § 1717 for prosecuting the suit if an appropriate clause has been included in the written agreement [Renfrew v. Loysen (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1105, 1109-1110, 222 Cal. Rptr. 413 ; see also Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 1189, 198 Cal. Rptr. 447 (also rejecting City of Long Beach, ruling that attorney who acted pro se in prosecuting inverse condemnation action was entitled to recover reasonable value of professional services rendered during pretrial and trial proceedings)]. For further discussion of attorney's fees and costs in the context of contractual attorney's fees clauses under Civ. Code § 1717, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[10] Negative Public Relations Impact

The attorney should also consider whether bringing the action could have a negative impact on other actual or potential clients. This may be a concern in some situations, caused either by the mere fact of suing a former client, by the consequent disclosure of the attorney's billing practices, or by the potential that the former client will make unfavorable statements about the attorney.

§ 72.432 Notice of Client's Right to Arbitrate Must Accompany Filing of Suit

With certain exceptions, an action brought by an attorney to recover fees from a client in a court other than small claims court is subject to a request by the client for mandatory arbitration [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(b)]. When a client requests arbitration of a fee dispute, the attorney must submit the dispute to arbitration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c); Fee Arbitration Hearing Rules, Rule 2.0]. Prior to or at the time of the service of summons in any fee collection action other than one in small claims court, a written notice of the client's right to arbitrate the fee dispute must be sent to the client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a); Fee Arbitration Hearing Rules, Rule 4.0]. Failure to give the notice is a ground for the dismissal of the action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a)].

For a form for notice of client's right to arbitration, see form at § 72.751. For discussion relating to arbitration of fee disputes, see § 72.470 et seq.

2. Civil Actions For Fee Recovery

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.450

§ 72.450 Action for Recovery of Fee on Express Contract

[1] Breach of Contract--Basis of Recovery

If the attorney has an express written or oral contract with a client setting a specific fee, the attorney can sue the client for breach of contract [Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576-577, 222 P.2d 314 ; but see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6147-6148 (requiring specific types of fee contract to be in writing), discussed in § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.].

The elements of a cause of action for a breach of an attorney's fees contract are [Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576-577, 222 P.2d 314] :

- An oral or written agreement for legal services providing for reimbursement.
- Performance by the attorney in accordance with the agreement.
- Breach of the agreement by the client by failure to pay for the services.
- Damages.

If an attorney has completed performance of the contract, he or she is entitled to recover damages based on the fee contract and is not limited to the reasonable value of services performed [Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 637, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144 ; Pinto v. Seely (1913) 22 Cal. App. 318, 327, 135 P. 43] .

For example, in one case, the evidence showed that the attorney had contracted to do the necessary legal work to incorporate and to acquire certain real property for his clients. The clients refused to pay on the basis that the attorney had not additionally obtained approval for a subdivision of the property. The court held that there was no evidence that the agreement for fees required the attorney to obtain subdivision approval, and held that the attorney had fully performed and was thus entitled to full compensation [Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 635, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144] .

[2] Recovery for Reasonable Value of Services if Contract Not Fully Performed

If the attorney has not fully performed the contract, he or she may be entitled to recover in quantum meruit for the reasonable value of his or her services [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; see also § 72.451, below]. Older cases have stated that if the client prevents performance by the attorney, the condition of performance is excused, and the attorney can recover the agreed fee [Stone v. Carpenter (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 491, 496, 27 Cal. Rptr. 203] . A later Supreme Court case indicates that if the performance is prevented due to the client's discharge of the attorney, the attorney is limited to the reasonable value of his or her services rather than the agreed contract price, even if the discharge was without cause, because the client has the absolute right to discharge the attorney [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; see also § 72.451[2][b]]. Although it appears that no case has expressly addressed the issue, the holding of this later case implies that prevention by the client may not excuse the condition of performance by the attorney, and that an attorney who has not performed the agreement will be limited to the reasonable value of his or her services, rather than the agreed fee. Actions to recover the reasonable value of services provided are discussed under § 72.451[1], below. For detailed discussion and forms relating to breach of contract generally, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

For a form of complaint for recovery of fee based on breach of contract, common count, and account stated, see § 72.740.

[3] Defenses

Among the defenses to an action for breach of an attorney's fees contract are:

- Unconscionability of a fee because of its excessiveness [Newmire v. Ford (1913) 22 Cal. App. 712, 716, 136 P. 504] .

- Undue influence [Civ. Code §§ 1550(2), 1567(4), 1575].

- Illegality of the contract [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 147-148, 308 P.2d 713] .

- Negligent performance of the contract [Estate of Kruger (1900) 130 Cal. 621, 626, 63 P. 31] .

If the illegality of the contract is obvious on its face, or evidence introduced to prove the contract establishes its illegality, the defense of illegality need not have been raised in the answer or even in argument to preserve it on appeal, because an illegal contract is void [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 147, 308 P.2d 713] . Of course, counsel would ordinarily raise the issue at the earliest opportunity, as in the answer or by demurrer.

When the attorney's negligence in handling the client's matter has caused a loss of assets [Estate of Kruger (1900) 130 Cal. 621, 626, 63 P. 31 ; see Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 43-44, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534] , greater expense than otherwise necessary, or increased difficulty in prevailing on appeal [Bridges & Hall v. Paige (1859) 13 Cal. 640, 642] , the client may offer evidence of this negligence in determining the amount of the fee owed.

[4] Common Counts

The common count for money had and received is generally used to recover on an express contract when the plaintiff has fully performed and the defendant has not paid, or the defendant possesses money that in equity and good conscience belongs to the plaintiff [Ferro v. Citizens Nat. Trust & Sav. Bank (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 401, 409, 282 P.2d 849] . Common counts are the common-law counterpart to modern quasi-contractual relief, and an action on a common count may be brought when equitable considerations require that money be refunded to a plaintiff [see Philpott v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 512, 518-519, 36 P.2d 635] . Common counts may be based on express contracts that have been fully performed [see Castagnino v. Balletta (1889) 82 Cal. 250, 258, 23 P. 127] , or on implied-in-fact contracts [see Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 778, 793, 256 P.2d 947] . For discussion and forms relating to common counts generally, see Ch. 121, Common Counts .

[5] Account Stated

[a] Basis of Recovery

The elements of an account stated are [Truestone, Inc. v. Simi West Industrial Park II (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 715, 725, 209 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; Withers v. Matthews (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 139, 141, 13 Cal. Rptr. 165] :

- An acknowledgment of an existing indebtedness from one party to the other.
- An agreement about the correct sum due from the debtor to the creditor.
- An express or implied promise by the debtor to the creditor to pay that sum.

If an attorney sends periodic billings, and the client does not object to the stated amounts within a reasonable time, the attorney can sue the client on an account stated because the client has impliedly agreed that the amount in question is due and owing [Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 25, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648] . If there is a dispute over one item or transaction, there may nevertheless be an account stated, or agreed balance owing, as to the remaining items or transactions in a billing [see California Milling Corp. v. White (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 469, 477, 40 Cal. Rptr. 301] .

When the client assents to the account, it becomes a new contract. The action is not based on the original items, but rather on the balance to which the parties agree [Gardner v. Watson (1915) 170 Cal. 570, 574, 150 P. 994] . A compromise of a claim is good consideration for an account stated [Gardner v. Watson (1915) 170 Cal. 570, 574, 150 P. 994] .

For a form of complaint for recovery of fee based on breach of contract, common count, and account stated, see § 72.740. For discussion and forms relating to accounts stated generally, see Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts .

[b] Open Book Account Distinguished

An open book account is different from an account stated in that in the former, the debtor has not expressly or impliedly agreed to the amount owed. An open book account consists of a detailed statement of one or more transactions between a debtor or creditor arising from a contractual or fiduciary relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 337a]. The account must be recorded during the regular course of business by either the debtor or creditor, and maintained in a reasonably permanent form [Code Civ. Proc. § 337a; Gardner v. Rutherford (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 874, 884, 136 P.2d 48] . For example, an attorney's docket of court cases and a separate journal for office charges has been held to constitute a book account [Egan v. Bishop (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 119, 122, 47 P.2d 500] . An open book account can be converted into an account stated if both parties expressly or impliedly assent to the correctness of the account or the debtor impliedly acknowledges that he or she owes that amount [R.E. Tharp, Inc. v. Miller Hay Co. (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 81, 84, 67 Cal. Rptr. 854] . Interest can be recovered on an open book account if the amount due is a liquidated sum ascertainable prior to judgment by reference to a contract or other definite source [Civ. Code § 3287; Schmidt v. Waterford Winery,

Ltd. (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 28, 34-35, 1 Cal. Rptr. 874] . Under certain circumstances, the party prevailing in an action on a contract based on an open book account is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to other costs [see Civ. Code § 1717.5; see also Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts].

[c] Defenses

Among the defenses to an account stated are [Gardner v. Watson (1915) 170 Cal. 570, 574, 150 P. 994 ; see Civ. Code §§ 1565-1579]:

- Fraud.
- Duress.
- Undue influence.
- Mistake.

Other defenses applicable to contracts generally include:

- Lack of consent [see Civ. Code § 1565 et seq.].
- Illegality [see Civ. Code §§ 1595-1599].
- Lack of capacity [see Civ. Code § 1556].

2. Civil Actions For Fee Recovery

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.451

§ 72.451 Action for Reasonable Value of Services

[1] When Action Is Available

Even if the attorney cannot recover a specific amount of payment under a fee contract, he or she may be able to recover the reasonable value of his or her services under the following circumstances:

- If the attorney and client expressly agree that the attorney's compensation will be the reasonable value of the attorney's services [Stuart v. Preston (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 310, 315-316 ; Lawrence Block Co. v. England (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 318, 325, 27 Cal. Rptr. 362] .

- If the attorney is employed without any specific agreement about his or her compensation and the consideration for the services is the client's implied promise to pay the reasonable value of the services [Batcheller v. Whittier (1909) 12 Cal. App. 262, 266, 107 P. 141] .

- If the contract expressly provides for compensation, but the attorney's performance becomes impossible or is excused without fault by either the attorney or client [Boardman v. Christin (1924) 65 Cal. App. 413, 419, 224 P. 97] .

- If the contract is unenforceable, for example, a contract with a minor [Spencer v. Collins (1909) 156 Cal. 298, 306, 104 P. 320] or an incompetent client [Estate of Doyle (1932) 126 Cal. App. 646, 647, 14 P.2d 920] .

- If the contract contains a severable illegal provision, but is otherwise valid [Calvert v. Stoner (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 97, 104, 199 P.2d 297] .

In addition, if the attorney is discharged, he or she may recover the reasonable value of the services provided prior to the time of discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; see also § 72.451[2][b]]. For a form of complaint in action to recover reasonable value of services, see § 72.741.

[2] Recovery in Quantum Meruit

[a] Promise to Pay Reasonable Value Implied in Absence of Fee Agreement

If the client and attorney do not have an agreement for the payment of a specific fee, the attorney can recover on a common count for the reasonable value of the services (quantum meruit) [Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549, 282 P. 791 (recovery under common count in action based on express contract); see also § 72.450[4]]. A formal contract is not a prerequisite to recovery in quantum meruit [Spires v. American Bus Lines (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 211, 216, 204 Cal. Rptr. 531] . When the attorney with the client's knowledge performs for the client a useful service for which a charge is usually made, and the client takes advantage of the service and does not object, a promise to pay the reasonable value of the service is implied [see Gray v. Whitmore (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 1, 24, 94 Cal. Rptr. 904] .

For a form of complaint to recover the reasonable value of the attorney's services, see § 72.741. For a form of complaint for compensation for legal services in obtaining settlement of a client's case, see § 72.744.

[b] Recovery by Discharged Attorney

[i] Contingent Fee Agreements

A client has both the power and the right to discharge an attorney with or without cause [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . In Fracasse v. Brent, the California Supreme Court held that when a client discharges an attorney before the attorney has completed performance, the attorney has no cause of action for breach of contract to recover damages for the contract amount, but the attorney is entitled to recover the reasonable value of his or her services rendered to the time of the discharge [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . The case involved a contingent fee contract, and the Court stated that the quantum meruit recovery depended on the occurrence of the contingency contemplated by the contract [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 786, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . For discussion of what constitutes the "reasonable value" of attorney's services, see § 72.451[3]. For a form of complaint to recover reasonable value of services by discharged attorney, see § 72.742.

[ii] Non-Contingent Fee Agreements

There appears to be some confusion regarding whether the rule permitting a discharged attorney to recover the reasonable value of his or her services is limited to contingency fee agreements, or applies as well to non-contingent fee agreements. Although Fracasse involved the dismissal of an attorney employed under a contingency fee agreement, the Court did not appear to limit its holding to contingency fee cases. The Court's reasoning in holding that the attorney was limited to the reasonable value of his services was based in large part on the premise that an attorney's discharge, even when without cause, does not constitute a breach of the fee contract because the client's right to discharge his or her attorney at will is a basic term of the contract, a term that is implied by law because of the special relationship between the parties [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . This reasoning appears equally applicable to all attorney's fees agreements, including non-contingent as well as contingency agreements. The Court further stated that "we find no injustice in a rule awarding a discharged attorney the reasonable value of the services he has rendered up to the time of discharge. In doing so, we preserve the client's right to discharge his attorney without undue restriction, and yet acknowledge the attorney's right to fair compensation for work performed" [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] .

At least one commentator, however, takes the position that an attorney who is unjustly discharged under a fixed fee agreement can recover the total agreed contract price [see Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 1, Attorneys, §§ 175, 176 (3d ed. 1985)]. An attorney who has been discharged without cause under a fixed fee agreement may therefore wish to allege counts for both breach of contract (seeking recovery of the contractual fee) and quantum meruit.

[iii] Accrual of Cause of Action

If the attorney has been employed on a contingency fee basis, the attorney's action for reasonable compensation accrues only when the contingency stated in the agreement has occurred, typically when the client has had a recovery by settlement or judgment, because until the matter has been finally resolved, the result obtained is impossible to determine and the amount involved is highly speculative. Additionally, without knowing the outcome of the litigation, it would be improper to burden the client with an absolute obligation to pay his or her former attorney. If judgment or settlement is not obtained, the attorney is denied any compensation [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . The same rule applies to the attorney's recovery under a contingency fee agreement of the costs of suit advanced to the client prior to the attorney's discharge. That is, the attorney cannot recover those costs until the client has made a recovery by settlement or judgment [Kroff v. Larson (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 857, 860, 213 Cal. Rptr. 526] .

[iv] No Recovery If Discharge Based on Attorney Impropriety

The general rule allowing a discharged attorney to recover the reasonable value of his or her services performed to the time of discharge is qualified by the rule that if the client discharges the attorney because of acts of impropriety inconsistent with the character of the legal profession and incompatible with the faithful discharge of professional duties, the attorney cannot recover for his or her services [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 9, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373] . For example, in one case in which the attorney had been hired to represent the husband in a personal injury action and then undertook to represent the wife in a dissolution action, the court held that the attorney was not entitled to the reasonable value of his services in representing the husband because he had violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 5-102(B) (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B)) by representing two clients with conflicting interests without obtaining the client's permission [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 9, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373] .

[v] Completion of Contract Before Discharge

If the attorney has completed performance of the contract prior to discharge, he or she may bring an action for damages under the contract and is not required to prove the reasonable value of his or her services [Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 637, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144 ; see Franklin v. Appel (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 875, 893-894, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759 ; see also § 7.10].

An attorney discharged shortly before the conclusion of a case may be able to assert entitlement to the entire contingent fee as the appropriate quantum meruit recovery [Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790-791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9] . The appropriate quantum meruit recovery for an attorney discharged even at an earlier point in the proceedings may be measured by a percentage of the originally agreed-on contingent fee [Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 288-289, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] .

A discharged attorney in a medical malpractice case who has a potential entitlement to all or a percentage of a contingent fee has standing to participate at a hearing to determine the value of the award on which the fee is to be computed pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146 [Schneider v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1311, 1315-1316, 264 Cal. Rptr. 227 , disapproved on other grounds in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 27-28, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 ; for discussion of contingent fees generally, see § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.].

[c] Recovery by Attorney Who Voluntarily Withdraws

The general rule is that the attorney can recover for services rendered prior to withdrawing from representation of the client only if justifiable cause exists for the withdrawal, such as the client's conduct making it unreasonably difficult for the attorney to effectively carry out his or her employment [see Moore v. Fellner (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 330, 342, 325 P.2d 857 (recognizing rule); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(C) (when attorneys may permissively withdraw from case); see also § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.]. However, if no justifiable cause exists, and the attorney withdraws from the case, he or she cannot claim a quantum meruit lien on any future recovery of the client. The fact that a trial court has granted an attorney's motion to withdraw does not establish cause to withdraw for the purpose of awarding attorney's fees [see Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1014, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] . In one case, for example, an attorney representing a client on a contingency fee basis determined that the case was not worth pursuing; the attorney instructed the client to dismiss the case, represent himself, or seek other counsel. The attorney then withdrew from the case and subsequently asserted the existence of a lien on any subsequent recovery by the attorney who had taken over the case. The court concluded that it would be highly unjust to permit the attorney to recover under these circumstances [see Hensel v. Cohen (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 563, 564, 568-569, 202 Cal. Rptr. 85] . In a case involving the granting of a permissive withdrawal for a law firm, the Court of Appeals stated that, "Good cause to withdraw is not necessarily good cause to recover money obtained in a settlement after withdrawal" [Rus, Miliband & Smith v. Conkle & Olesten (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 656, 673, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 612] .

When an attorney withdraws for ethical reasons, the attorney may be entitled to recover attorney's fees in quantum meruit, if withdrawal was justifiable [see Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1016, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] . The attorney has the burden of proof to show [see Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1016, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] :

- Counsel's withdrawal was mandatory, not merely permissive, under statute or state bar rules.
- The overwhelming and primary motivation for counsel's withdrawal was the obligation to adhere to these ethical imperatives under statute or state bar rules.
- Counsel commenced the action in good faith.
- Subsequent to counsel's withdrawal, the client obtained recovery.
- Counsel has demonstrated that his or her work contributed in some measurable degree towards the client's ultimate recovery.

In one case decided by the appellate department of the Superior Court, the court held that a client's failure to accept a settlement was justification for the attorney's withdrawal, entitling the attorney to receive attorney's fees on the basis of a written lien executed by the client [Pearlmutter v. Alexander (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 16, 20]. This holding was criticized, however, in a later court of appeal case, in which the court stated that a client's right to reject settlement is absolute, and that a client's exercise of the right cannot constitute cause for the purpose of awarding attorney's fees [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1018, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] . The court noted that a client's due process right to proceed to trial on the merits would be jeopardized under the rule espoused in Pearlmutter [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1018, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] . Nevertheless, restitution would be possible under a theory of unjust enrichment, if the client subsequently accepts settlement terms substantially similar to those negotiated by the attorney prior to his or her withdrawal [Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1019, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807] .

The issue of possible recovery under a contractual charging lien is discussed in § 72.452[1].

[3] Ascertaining Reasonable Value of Services

Although expert testimony on the reasonable value of an attorney's services is admissible [Kurland v. Simmons (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 79, 81, 271 P.2d 553] , it is not a prerequisite to recovery [Bunn v. Lucas, Pino & Lucas (1959) 172 Cal. App. 2d 450, 468, 342 P.2d 508 ; Ball v. Posey (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1209, 1215, 222 Cal. Rptr. 746] . Judges are familiar with the value of attorneys' services. On receiving evidence of the nature and extent of the attorney's services, the court is presumed competent to find a value [Excelsior Etc. School Dist. v. Lautrup (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 434, 448, 74 Cal. Rptr. 835] . Even when expert testimony isreceived, the court can ignore it and rely on its own experience and judgment [Freese v. Pennie (1895) 110 Cal. 467, 469, 42 P. 978] . A jury can also determine the reasonable value of an attorney's services without hearing expert testimony [Spencer v. Collins (1909) 156 Cal. 298, 307, 104 P. 320] .

The factors to be considered in determining what is a reasonable fee are discussed in § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.

§ 72.452 Action to Enforce Attorney's Contractual Charging Lien

[1] Lien Based on Agreement of Parties

Although California law does not recognize a common law attorney's charging or nonpossessory lien, which allows an attorney to satisfy his or her fees and expenses from the client's recovery even in the absence of an agreement to that effect, the parties can agree to a contractual charging or nonpossessory lien, and the agreement is enforceable to satisfy an attorney's fees and expenses out of the proceeds of the client's recovery [see Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v. Shivener (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 364, 371, 105 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Witkin, California Procedure, vol. 1, Attorneys § 193 (4th ed. 1996); see also § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.]. Any charging lien created by a contingency fee agreement survives the attorney's discharge and entitles the attorney to receive from any recovery by the client the reasonable value of services rendered prior to the discharge [Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 598, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] .

[2] Enforcing Lien

The attorney's contractual charging lien on the client's recovery is not self-executing. It can only be enforced by an independent action against the client after the client's recovery in the main action [Bandy v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 126 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; see Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp. v. Reed (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1321-1323, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d. 244 ; In re Marriage of Tushinsky (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 136, 143, 249 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; but see Spires v. American Bus Lines (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 211, 215, 204 Cal. Rptr. 531 (allowing former attorney to intervene in settlement conference for purpose of asserting attorney's fee lien on client's settlement of case in which client was represented by subsequently hired attorneys)].

A discharged attorney who has a contractual lien on a prospective judgment may file a notice of his or her contractual lien during a pending action [Hansen v. Jacobsen (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 350, 358, 230 Cal. Rptr. 580] , although such notice apparently is not essential to enforcement of the lien [see Cetenko v. United California Bank (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 528, 532-533, 179 Cal. Rptr. 902, 638 P.2d 1299 (notice of attorney's lien found to be superfluous)]. Any order or judgment granting the attorney fees made in the main (or pending) action is in excess of the court's jurisdiction and is void [Bandy v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 126 Cal. Rptr. 890] . If the question is erroneously determined in that forum, however, and the discharged attorney fails to directly attack the adverse determination by appealing, he or she may be barred from later reopening the fee dispute in an independent action, by principles of collateral estoppel, disfavor of collateral attack, and res judicata [Law Offices of Stanley J. Bell v. Shine, Browne & Diamond (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1011, 1021, 1027, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717] .

For a complaint in action to enforce attorney's charging lien based on a contingency fee agreement, see § 72.743. For a complaint for a declaratory judgment to ascertain an attorney's rights under a contingent fee agreement and to declare his or her right to a lien on a client's recovery, see § 72.746.

The attorney can enforce the charging lien by bringing causes of action for money had and received, an action for conversion, or an action to impose a constructive trust [Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 598, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] . The common count for money had and received is based on the defendant becoming indebted to the plaintiff for money had and received for the use and benefit of the plaintiff [Pike v. Zadig (1915) 171 Cal. 273, 276] . The conversion action is based on willful interference with the personal property of another without lawful justification resulting in the person entitled to the property being deprived of its use and possession [De Vries v. Brumback (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 643, 647, 2 Cal. Rptr. 764, 349 P.2d 532] . A constructive trust is a type of involuntary trust imposed by law on a person who has obtained property by fraud, accident, mistake, undue influence, violation of a trust, or other wrongful act [see Civ. Code § 2224]. The person who is not entitled to the property is required to restore it to the entitled person [Bainbridge v. Stoner (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 423, 428, 106 P.2d 423] . The purpose of a constructive trust is to prevent unjust enrichment [Day v. Greene (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 404, 411, 29 Cal. Rptr. 785, 380 P.2d 385] .

These actions may be brought directly against the client's second attorney who fails to pay the original attorney the amount of the lien to which he or she is entitled [Levin v. Gulf Ins. Group (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287-1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 ; Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 598-599, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] . Additionally, when the client's suit is to recover benefits under an insurance policy, the attorney may in some circumstances bring a cause of action against the client's insurer for nonpayment of the lien [see Levin v. Gulf Ins. Group (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287-1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 (insurer and attorneys retained to defend insured are liable for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage of insured's discharged attorney when, after receiving notice of contractual lien for attorney fees and costs filed by discharged attorney, they pay over settlement or judgment funds to attorney's former client and client's new attorney with knowledge of lien); Siciliano v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 745, 752-753, 133 Cal. Rptr. 376 (client discharged attorney and collected payment from his insurer in pro per, despite insurer's knowledge of attorney's lien on proceeds)]. When the contingency fee is insufficient to meet the quantum meruit claims of both the discharged and successor attorneys, a pro rata formula is applied in order to distribute the fee to the attorneys in proportion to the time each worked on the case [Spires v. American Bus Lines (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 211, 216, 204 Cal. Rptr. 531] .

For discussion of the required accompanying notice regarding the client's right to arbitration, see § 72.432.

§ 72.453 Subsequent Attorney May Be Liable for Tortious Interference with Contract

If an attorney has induced a client to discharge an attorney, a cause of action for tortious interference with contractual relations may be appropriate [Herron v. State Farm Mutual Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 202, 205, 14 Cal. Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 861-862, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556] . For a form of complaint for tortious interference with a contingent fee contract, see § 72.747. For discussion and forms relating to interference with contractual relationship generally, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.130 et seq.

§ 72.454 Compensation of Incapacitated Associated Counsel for Partial Performance

Associations may be made between otherwise unaffiliated attorneys who agree to provide services on behalf of particular clients in particular cases [see Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 42-43, 152 P.2d 625] . During the course of such a relationship, associated counsel may become incapable of continuing to perform on the contract of association. Such incapacity may occur, for example, if an associated attorney is appointed to judicial office [see Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 285, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] .

Generally, the incapacitated associating attorney is entitled to recover in quantum meruit for any services provided up to the time of incapacity [see Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 287, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] . If by contract, the incapacitated attorney were to receive a percentage of a contingent fee, the incapacitated counsel may recover a fraction of the fee, even if it exceeds the actual market value of the services provided [see Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 287-290, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] . In contingent fee cases, the judge is required to calculate a fraction in which the numerator is the value of the legal services rendered by the particular attorney at issue and the denominator is the aggregate value of all the legal services rendered by any attorney in the case [Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 288, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] . Thus, on a partially performed contingent fee contract, the incapacitated associated attorney properly receives a pro rata share of the contract price [Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 289, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209] .

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.455

§ 72.455 Actions to Recover Fees

[1] Statute of Limitations--When Statute Begins to Run

The statute of limitations on an action begins to run when the cause of action accrues [Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)], and a cause of action generally accrues when suit may be maintained [Osborn v. Hopkins (1911) 160 Cal. 501, 506, 117 P. 519] .

When the attorney is employed to represent the client in a matter, the attorney's cause of action for payment normally accrues on completion of that matter, because that is generally the time when the attorney is entitled to payment under the fee contract [Johnson v. Bank of Lake (1899) 125 Cal. 6, 8, 57 P. 664 ; see E.O.C. Ord, Inc. v. Kovakovich (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1194, 1203, 1206, 246 Cal. Rptr. 456] . If the attorney is retained under a general retainer and the attorney represents the client in separate matters, the cause of action accrues on completion of each matter unless the employment contract provides otherwise [Osborn v. Hopkins (1911) 160 Cal. 501, 507, 117 P. 519] . If the attorney is employed to provide continuous services, the cause of action accrues on completion of the services, or at the time that completion is prevented by an event beyond the attorney's control [Brooks v. Van Winkle (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 734, 743, 327 P.2d 151] .

[2] Limitations Periods Applicable to Various Types of Contract

If the action is on a written contract, the applicable limitations period is four years from the date of the breach [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1); see E. O. C. Ord, Inc. v. Kovakovich (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1194, 1202, 246 Cal. Rptr. 456] . If the action is on an oral contract, the statute of limitations is two years from the date of the breach [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1); see Iverson, Yoakum, Papiano & Hatch v. Berwald (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 990, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665 (noncompliance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148 written fee agreement requirement results in two-year statute of limitations on quantum meruit claim)].

When an account stated (discussed in § 72.613[1]) is based on a written account, regardless of whether the acknowledgment is written, the statute of limitations is four years from the date of the statement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(2)]. When the account stated is based on one item, the cause of action accrues from the date of that item. When the account stated is based on more than one item, the cause of action accrues from the date of the last item [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(2)]. When an account stated is based on a transaction in an unsettled amount, such as for legal services, the cause of action commences from the date the account is stated [Fleschler v. Strauss (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 735, 740, 60 P.2d 193] .

The statute of limitations on an open book account is four years, regardless of the number of entries comprising the account [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(2)]. The statute of limitation commences to run from the date of the last entry in the book account [Davidson v. Tilden (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 283, 287, 150 Cal. Rptr. 194] . Even if there has been a lapse between some of the payments that exceeds the four-year period of the statute of limitations, if the action is commenced within four years of the last item on the account, the entire account is not barred by the statute of limitations [Gardner v. Rutherford (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 874, 883, 136 P.2d 48] . The statute of limitations is tolled each time a new entry is made in the account [Furlow P.B. Co. v. Balboa L. & W. Co. (1921) 186 Cal. 754, 763, 200 P. 625] . If the open book account has been terminated, the statute of limitations runs from the date of termination [Davidson v. Tilden (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 283, 287-288, 150 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

[3] Parties to Action

The person who performed the services for which compensation is sought must have been an active member of the State Bar at the time the services were performed [Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576, 222 P.2d 314] . In addition to the attorney who contracted with the client to provide services, an assignee of the attorney's fee contract may file an action, even if the client did not consent to the assignment [Taylor v. Black Diamond Coal M. Co. (1890) 86 Cal. 589, 590, 25 P. 51] .

The proper defendant in an action to recover attorney's fees is usually the person or persons who employed the attorney. If an attorney is employed by someone other than the client and agrees that the other person should pay the fees, that other person is the proper defendant [Cullinan v. McColgan (1927) 87 Cal. App. 684, 697-698, 263 P. 353] . An attorney can also agree that the client not be liable, such as in a domestic relations case when the attorney agrees to recover fees from the spouse [Sapiro v. Marquis (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 34, 37-38, 226 P.2d 736] . If a person is a successor in interest to the original client, accepts the attorney's services with knowledge of the employment agreement, and makes payments to the attorney for services, that person is liable on a theory of ratification [Olson v. Foster (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 493, 497, 109 P.2d 388] . When an attorney is employed by two or more persons, the attorney is generally entitled to recover the entire fee from any one of these persons [Wheeler v. Houston, Gore & Loy (1918) 37 Cal. App. 407, 408, 174 P. 121] .

[4] Recovery of Fees on Death of Client

Generally, the attorney-client relationship is terminated by the client's death [Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 528, 128 P.2d 128] . Subsequent to the client's death, the attorney usually cannot represent the deceased client's interests without authorization from the decedent's personal representative [Judson v. Love (1868) 35 Cal. 463, 467] . If the contract specifically provides for the attorney to conduct a suit to final judgment or for a fee for an entire case, the attorney's authority continues after the client's death to act on the deceased client's behalf [Estate of Lanza (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724, 40 Cal. Rptr. 528] .

If the client dies before the attorney has completed performance under the fee agreement, the attorney should be able to recover the reasonable value of his or her services from the client's estate based on quantum meruit. The situation is analogous to that in which an attorney who is discharged or justifiably withdraws from representation recovers the reasonable value of his or her services [see Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Pearlmutter v. Alexander (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 16, 20]. For discussion of quantum meruit recovery for services rendered prior to discharge or voluntary withdrawal of attorney, see § 72.451[2][b] and [2][c]. For a form of complaint for compensation for legal services rendered prior to death of a client, see § 72.745.

For additional discussion of termination of the attorney-client relationship by death of the attorney or client and its effect on recovering fees, see § 72.350 et seq.

[5] Recovery of Fees on Death of Attorney

Because an attorney is an agent of the client [Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 192, 244 P. 343] , the attorney's death terminates that agency and thus terminates the attorney-client relationship [see Civ. Code § 2355(c)]. When an attorney dies after having only partially performed services under a contingency fee agreement, his or her estate is not entitled to recover any fees for the decedent's services unless and until the contract is completed, that is, the contingency occurs [Estate of Linnick (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761, 217 Cal. Rptr. 552] . If the contingency does occur, the attorney's estate is entitled to recover the reasonable value of services rendered pursuant to the contract [see Estate of Linnick (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761, 217 Cal. Rptr. 552] . If one party to the agreement is a law partnership, the surviving partners are obligated to continue the representation unless the client terminates the agreement [Little v. Caldwell (1894) 101 Cal. 553, 560, 36 P. 107] . Of course, if the client consents to continued performance by the surviving partners, he or she must pay the firm according to the contract terms [see California Water Service Co. v. Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 715, 735, 37 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

For additional discussion of termination of the attorney-client relationship by death of the attorney or client and its effect on recovering fees, see § 72.350 et seq. through § 72.410 et seq.

[6] Burden of Proof

The attorney has the burden of proof on the issues of:

- Employment by the client or the client's authorized agent [Cormac v. Murphy (1922) 58 Cal. App. 366, 369, 208 P. 360] .

- Performance of the agreed-on services [Mahony v. Haines (1924) 66 Cal. App. 456, 459, 226 P. 620] .

- The value of the services [Knight v. Russ (1888) 77 Cal. 410, 413, 19 P. 698] .

[7] Inapplicability of Attorney-Client Privilege

Although an attorney has a duty to maintain client confidences and preserve client secrets [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)], and communications between attorneys and clients are generally privileged [see Evid. Code § 950 et seq.], under Evid. Code § 958, no attorney-client privilege exists with respect to a communication relevant to an issue of breach, by the lawyer or by the client, of a duty arising out of the lawyer-client relationship. The California Law Revision Commission Comment to Evid. Code § 958 specifically mentions the client's duty to pay for the attorney's services [Law Rev. Comm. Comment to Evid. Code § 958]. The Comment to Evid. Code § 958 also refers to an earlier case as standing for the proposition that injustice would result if a client were allowed to refuse to pay an attorney's fee and then invoke the attorney-client privilege to defeat the attorney's claim [Law Rev. Comm. Comment to Evid. Code § 958, discussing Fleschler v. Strauss (1936) 15 Cal. App. 2d 735, 739-740, 60 P.2d 193] . In another case, decided prior to the effective date of the California Evidence Code, the court stated that it was an established principle that an attorney is released from the legal duty of preserving the client's secrets when it is necessary to protect the attorney's own rights [Carlson, Collins, Gordon & Bold v. Banducci (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 212, 227-228, 64 Cal. Rptr. 915] . In still another case, pursuant to Evid. Code § 958, a court held that a law firm could not move to dismiss another lawyer's action for referral fees against it on the ground that defending itself would violate the attorney-client privilege [Dietz v. Meisenheimer & Herron (2009) 2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 771, 785-794, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464].

There is a similar exception to the work product doctrine: Work product protection does not exist in an action between an attorney and a client or former client if the work product is relevant to the issue of a breach of duty owed by the attorney to the client arising out of the attorney-client relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 2018(f) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.080 effective July 1, 2005)].

For complete discussion of the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine in the context of fee disputes, see § 72.30 et seq.

[8] Defending Client Cannot Recover Attorney's Fees in Separate Action

When a client has incurred the expense of attorney's fees in successfully defending against an action brought by his or her former attorney, in which the former attorney had attempted to collect or retain an unreasonable fee, there is currently no authority under which the client may bring a later, separate cause of action against the former attorney to recover this expense in the form of a damage award [see Schneider v. Friedman, Collard, Poswall & Virga (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1276, 1281, 283 Cal. Rptr. 882 (rejecting "third party tort" exception to American rule that generally precludes recover of attorney's to successful party)]. However, the client may be entitled to recover attorney's fees in the original action if the agreement included a fees provision under Civ. Code § 1717 [see § 72.431[9]].

[9] Standard of Appellate Review

The appellate courts sometimes exercise their own fact-finding power in appeals of attorney's fee judgments, on the ground that the appellate judges have the same basic expertise on the subject as the trial court judges [Boller v. Signal Oil & Gas Co. (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 648, 656, 41 Cal. Rptr. 206] . However, the general rule is that an appellate court will not interfere with a jury's verdict establishing a reasonable fee, unless it appears to have been the result of passion or is so grossly excessive as to shock the judicial conscience [Stuart v. Preston (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 310, 318, 38 P.2d 155] . Additionally, an appellate court will not interfere in a trial court's finding of a reasonable attorney's fee, unless there was a plain and palpable abuse of discretion by the trial court [Still v. Plaza Marina Commercial Corp. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 378, 384-385, 98 Cal. Rptr. 414] .

[10] Advantages and Disadvantages of Proceeding in Small Claims Court

If the fee is less than the small claims court jurisdictional limit of $5,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220(c) (exception to jurisdictional amount applicable to claims against guarantors)], or it is economically desirable to reduce the amount of the fee claim to sue in small claims court, small claims court is a viable alternative to arbitration or to an action in a unified superior court in a limited civil case.

A client may stay the action by serving and filing a request for arbitration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(b); see § 72.475[1]]. The small claims court has jurisdiction to confirm, correct, or vacate a binding fee arbitration award that does not exceed $5,000. The small claims court also has jurisdiction to conduct a de novo hearing between the attorney and the client after nonbinding arbitration of a fee dispute involving no more than $5,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.220(a)(4)].

An attorney can prosecute an action in small claims court on behalf of [see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.530(b)]:

- Himself or herself.
- A law partnership in which he or she is a general partner.

- A professional corporation of which he or she is an officer and director and of which all other officers or directors are attorneys.

An assignee generally cannot file or prosecute a claim in small claims court [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.420(a)]. The plaintiff in a small claims action, if unsatisfied with the result, has no right to appeal the judgment on his or her claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.710(a)]. The defendant with respect to the plaintiff's claim, and a plaintiff with respect to a claim of the defendant, may appeal the judgment to the superior court in the county in which the action was heard [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.710(b)].

For complete discussion of small claims court actions and procedures, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

§ 72.470 Overview of Fee Arbitration and Mediation

[1] Administration of Program by State Bar

Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6200-6206 provide for arbitration and voluntary mediation of attorney's fee and cost disputes. These sections impose on the State Bar's Board of Governors the duty to adopt rules establishing, maintaining, and administering a system and procedure for arbitration of attorney's fee and cost disputes [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6200, 6201].

The Board of Governors may also establish, maintain, and administer a system and procedure for voluntary mediation of attorney's fee and cost disputes [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200].

The procedures provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. apply to disputes concerning fees, costs, or both, charged for professional services rendered on or after the date these statutes became effective: January 1, 1979, for disputes concerning fees, and January 1, 1990, for disputes concerning costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6205; see also Stats. 1978, Ch. 719 (legislation adding Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. took effect on January 1, 1979); Stats. 1989, Ch. 1416 (legislation making Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. applicable to disputes concerning costs took effect on January 1, 1990)].

[2] Matters Excepted From Fee Arbitration

The following matters are excepted from Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(b)]:

- Disputes either in which a member of the State Bar of California is also admitted to practice in another jurisdiction, or in which an attorney is only admitted to practice in another jurisdiction, and he or she maintains no office in the State of California, and no material portion of the services were rendered in the State of California.

- Claims for affirmative relief against the attorney for damages or otherwise based on alleged malpractice or professional misconduct, except as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a) [see § 72.477].

- Disputes when the fee or cost to be paid by the client or on the client's behalf has been determined pursuant to statute or court order.

[3] Arbitration Conducted by State Bar, Local Bar Association, and Lawyer Referral Services

[a] In General

The State Bar, local bar associations, and lawyer referral services adjudicate fee and cost disputes. The State Bar arbitrates fee and cost disputes between attorneys and clients when there is no local fee arbitration program having jurisdiction over the dispute. If a local fee arbitration program run by a local bar association or lawyer referral service has jurisdiction over the dispute, however, the local program will provide the adjudicatory forum [see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 11.1(a), (c); Fee Arbitration Guidelines §§ I-1, I-2].

In most localities, a local program will have jurisdiction over the dispute. Over 40 entities, including the county bar associations of Alameda, Contra Costa, Los Angeles, Orange, Sacramento, San Diego, and San Francisco counties, have fee arbitration programs. The State Bar encourages local bar associations to use a geographic test of jurisdiction, that is, to accept jurisdiction of all matters when an office of the attorney is, or substantial legal services were performed, within the geographic boundaries of the association [Fee Arbitration Guidelines § III-1].

In the event of a fee dispute, an attorney should first contact his or her local bar association to determine whether the association offers a fee arbitration program.

A client or attorney who believes that he or she cannot obtain a fair and impartial hearing under the procedural rules of a local bar association or lawyer referral service is entitled to a hearing through a State Bar panel on protest [see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 11.1(b); Fee Arbitration Guidelines § IV-1]. In a matter already pending before a local program, the local bar association or lawyer referral service must release jurisdiction of the matter on notification of the State Bar's acceptance of the matter for arbitration [see Fee Arbitration Guidelines § IV-1].

[b] Rules Governing Fee Arbitration

The Rules of Procedure for the Hearing of Fee Arbitrations by the State Bar of California provide a comprehensive procedural scheme that applies when the State Bar conducts fee arbitration [see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rules 1-47]. These rules do not govern in arbitration proceedings conducted by a local entity, unless the entity has expressly adopted them.

Locally adopted fee arbitration rules govern fee arbitration by local bar associations and lawyer referral services. Local rules must conform with the Guidelines and Minimum Standards for the Operation of Mandatory Fee Arbitration Programs, requirements formulated by the State Bar to ensure fair, speedy, and impartial disposition of arbitration matters [see Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-1; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(d) (power of State Bar to review local arbitration rules)].

[4] Mandatory Arbitration

Arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(c) is mandatory for the attorney if requested by the client, but voluntary for the client unless the client has agreed previously in writing to arbitrate all disputes concerning fees, costs, or both. All fee arbitrations must be conducted within the statutory system, that is, through the State Bar or an authorized county bar fee arbitration program, and the attorney and client may not contravene the statutory scheme by agreeing privately to conduct their fee arbitration in an outside forum, such as the American Arbitration Association [Alternative Systems,

Inc. v. Carey (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1034, 1041-1042, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567].

[5] Relationship Between Contractual Arbitration and Mandatory Fee Arbitration

An arbitration provision in a written retainer agreement between attorney and client generally is enforceable under the California Arbitration Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.] absent the client's exercise of the statutory right to mandatory fee arbitration [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. (MFAA)]. A client who waives MFAA rights by filing a malpractice action may be compelled to arbitrate that malpractice claim and any fee dispute in accordance with the arbitration provision in the retainer agreement and Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. [Aguilar v. Lerner (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 974, 983-986, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287, 88 P.3d 24]. The MFAA does not limit the ability of attorneys and clients to enter into binding contractual arbitration [Schatz v. Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 557, 564-575, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700, 198 P.3d 1109]. Thus, a client who does not request arbitration under the MFAA within 30 days of receiving the statutory notice can be compelled to arbitrate a fee dispute under Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., in accordance with an arbitration provision in the retainer agreement [Ervin, Cohen & Jessup, LLP v. Kassel (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 821, 826-830, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685].

Both types of arbitration can be coordinated in the attorney-client agreement. For example, an agreement could provide that if nonbinding arbitration under the MFAA was chosen and either party rejected that award, the matter would then proceed to binding arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. [see Schatz v. Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 557, 564-575, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700, 198 P.3d 1109].

§ 72.471 Notice to Client of Right to Arbitration

An attorney, before or at the time of service of summons in an action against the client for recovery of fees and/or costs governed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., must forward to the client a written notice of the client's right to arbitration, containing a statement of the client's right to arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. Failure to give this notice is a ground for dismissal of the attorney's action [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 4.0; Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-2]. However, dismissal of a case for an attorney's failure to provide notice is discretionary with the court [Law Offices of Dixon R. Howell v. Valley (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1087-1088, 1104, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 499] . Additionally, the notice to the client must be provided by the attorney only after an actual fee dispute has arisen [Huang v. Cheng (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1230, 1234, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550] . For a form of notice of client's right to arbitration, see § 72.751.

Failure to provide a notification to a client does not deprive the court of jurisdiction over the attorney's action to recover fees. The burden is on thedefendant-client to move for dismissal based on the plaintiff-attorney's failure to give the required notice [Aheroni v. Maxwell (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 284, 294-295, 252 Cal. Rptr. 369 (trial court had jurisdiction in fee action to enter default judgment against client, notwithstanding lack of notice to client of right to arbitrate)].

If an attorney brings an action against a client for recovery of fees, but failed to give the client notice of the client's right to arbitrate, as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201, dismissal of the action is discretionary, not mandatory [Richards, Watson & Gershon v. King (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1180, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169] . When an individual other than the client has agreed to be responsible for payment of the attorney's fees or costs, notice under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a) must given to that individual [Wagner v. Mirzayance (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1187, 1190-1191, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 661] .

§ 72.472 Initiating Arbitration

In arbitration proceedings conducted by the State Bar, arbitration is initiated by filing a written request for arbitration on the approved State Bar form and paying the appropriate filing fee established by the State Bar. The State Bar serves the request on the other party [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 15.0].

If arbitration is to be conducted by a local entity, counsel must consult local arbitration rules to determine the procedure for initiating fee arbitration.

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.473

§ 72.473 Arbitrators

[1] Composition of Hearing Panel

Arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. is conducted by a hearing panel, typically composed of one or three arbitrators [see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 21.0; Fee Arbitration Guidelines §§ II-7, II-8, III-2]. In a three-member panel, one member must be a lay person and the other two members must be attorneys [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(e)(1); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 21.1; Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-7]. If the panel consists of a sole arbitrator, the sole arbitrator must be an attorney [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(e)(2); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 21.1; Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-7].

At the client's option, one member of a three-person panel or a sole arbitrator must be an attorney whose area of practice is either civil or criminal law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(e); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 21.2; Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-8]. A client must be informed of this option at an early stage in the proceedings and provided with a means of exercising the option [Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-8].

[2] Powers

In the conduct of arbitrations under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., the arbitrator or arbitrators may [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(g)]:

- Take and hear evidence pertaining to the proceeding.
- Administer oaths and affirmations.
- Compel, by subpoena, the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents pertaining to the proceeding.

[3] Immunity

In a fee arbitration conducted by the State Bar or by a local entity, the arbitrator or arbitrators, as well as the arbitrating association and its directors, officers, and employees, have the same immunity that attaches in judicial proceedings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(f)]. Thus, under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(f), the immunity of a fee arbitrator is analogous to that of a judge in a judicial proceeding [Olney v. Sacramento County Bar Ass'n (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 807, 811-813, 260 Cal. Rptr. 842 (fee arbitrator is immune from liability for error of law)]. When a fee arbitrator is immune from liability, the organization sponsoring the arbitration is immune from claims based exclusively on agency [Olney v. Sacramento County Bar Ass'n (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 807, 814, 260 Cal. Rptr. 842] .

[4] Disqualification

Local procedural rules for fee arbitration must provide an appropriate procedure for the parties to disqualify no less than one arbitrator without cause and have an unlimited number of challenges for cause [Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-5].

In fee arbitration conducted by the State Bar, each party may disqualify one arbitrator without cause and may make unlimited challenges for cause [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 23.0; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204.5(a)].

§ 72.474 Tolling Statute of Limitations

The time for filing a civil action seeking judicial resolution of a fee or cost dispute subject to arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. is tolled from the time an arbitration is initiated until whichever of the following events comes first [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6206]:

- 30 days after receipt of notice of the award of the arbitrators.
- Receipt of notice that the arbitration is otherwise terminated.

Code Civ. Proc. § 12a, which extends the time for performing an act when the last day falls on a holiday, applies to the 30-day time limit within which to file a complaint after service of an arbitration award in an attorney fee dispute [McAvoy v. Harvey L. Lerer, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1129, 1132, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] .

Arbitration may not, however, be commenced under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. if a civil action requesting the same relief would be barred by any provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 312 et seq. (limitation of actions); provided, however, that this limitation does not apply to a request for arbitration by a client, pursuant to the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(b) (discussed under § 72.475[1]), following the filing of a civil action by the attorney [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6206].

§ 72.475 Stay of Attorney's Action for Fees

[1] Commencing Stay by Service of Request for Arbitration

If an attorney or the attorney's assignee commences an action to collect fees and/or costs in any court and the dispute is not one to which Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(b) [see § 72.470[2]] applies, the client may stay the action by serving and filing a request for arbitration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(b); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 9.0].

On the filing and service of the request for arbitration, the action will be stayed, without the necessity of a court order, until the award of the arbitrators is issued or the arbitration is otherwise terminated. The time of the pendency of the stay will not be part of the time limited for commencement of the action. The stay may be vacated in whole or in part after a duly noticed hearing by any party or the court, if the court finds that the matter or any part of it is not an appropriate one for arbitration under the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. The action may thereafter proceed subject to the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204 (discussed in § 72.479) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(c)].

[2] Vacating Stay

Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(c) implies an authority and discretion in the trial court to determine that an action, or a portion of an action, is not appropriate for arbitration. The corollary to this implicit discretion is that the court has the authority to lift the stay of the judicial proceeding, in whole or in part, if it determines that the stay is no longer appropriate [see Loeb & Loeb v. Beverly Glen Music, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1110, 1116-1117, 212 Cal. Rptr. 830 ; Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney v. Lawrence (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1172-1173, 199 Cal. Rptr. 246] . Thus, a court has the authority to lift a stay on its determination that an attachment proceeding in a fee dispute case is an ancillary proceeding and is not amenable to arbitration [Loeb & Loeb v. Beverly Glen Music, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1110, 1116-1118, 212 Cal. Rptr. 830] .

§ 72.476 Acts and Omissions Constituting Waiver of Client's Right to Arbitration

A client waives his or her right to fee arbitration by doing any of the following:

- Failing to request arbitration within 30 days after receipt of the notice of right to arbitration from the attorney (discussed under § 72.471) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.3].

- Failing to send to the State Bar a request for arbitration on the approved State Bar form that is (a) postmarked within 15 days from the date of the letter from the State Bar mailing the arbitration packet in response to a timely requesst by the client as described in Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.3, or (b) postmarked on or before the 30th day from receipt of the form entitled "Notice of Client's Right to Arbitration" given pursuant to Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 4.0, whichever is later [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.4].

- Failing to serve and file the request for arbitration prior to the filing of an answer in the attorney's action (provided that notice of the client's right to arbitration has been given pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a)) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(b); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.1].

- Commencing an action or filing a pleading seeking judicial resolution of a fee and/or cost dispute to which Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. applies [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(d); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.2].

- Seeking affirmative relief against the attorney for damages or otherwise based on alleged malpractice or professional misconduct [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(d); Juodakis v. Wolfrum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 587, 591-592, 223 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 8.2].

A client may waive its arbitration rights in certain instances even though it did not receive notice of its right to arbitrate under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201 [Law Offices of Dixon R. Howell v. Valley (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1094-1095, 29 Cal. Rptr.3d 499] . A court may look at the following nonstatutory factors to determine whether a client has waived its arbitration rights [Law Offices of Dixon R. Howell v. Valley (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1097, 29 Cal. Rptr.3d 499] :

- Whether the party's actions are inconsistent with the right to arbitrate.

- Whether the litigation machinery has been substantially invoked and the parties were well into preparation of a lawsuit before the party notified the opposing party of an intent to arbitrate.

- Whether a party either requested arbitration enforcement close to the trial date or delayed for a long period before seeking a stay.

- Whether important intervening steps, such as taking advantage of judicial discovery procedures not available in arbitration, had taken place.

- Whether the delay affected, misled, or prejudiced the opposing party.

If the client waives the right to arbitration, the parties may stipulate to set aside the waiver and to proceed with the arbitration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(e)].

§ 72.477 Evidence in Fee Arbitration Proceedings

In fee arbitration proceedings, the provisions of Evid. Code § 950 et seq., relating to the attorney-client privilege, do not prohibit the disclosure of any relevant communication. Furthermore, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.010 et seq. may not be construed to prohibit the disclosure of any relevant work product of the attorney in connection with an arbitration hearing pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. In no event, however, will such disclosure be deemed a waiver of the confidential character of such matters for any purpose not authorized in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6202 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6202].

Evidence relating to the claims of malpractice and professional conduct shall be admissible only to the extent that those claims bear on the fees and/or costs to which the attorney is entitled [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a)].

§ 72.478 Award

[1] Requirements for Making Arbitration Award

The arbitration award must be in writing and signed by the arbitrators concurring in it. It must include a determination of all the questions submitted to the arbitrators, the decision of which was necessary in order to determine the controversy, including the name of the responsible attorney or attorneys [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 37.2; see also Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 37.3 (required language and structure of awards)].

The arbitrators may not award affirmative relief, in the form of damages or offset, or otherwise, for injuries arising out of any action of malpractice or professional misconduct. This, however, does not prevent the arbitrators from awarding the client a refund of unearned fees, costs, or both, previously paid to the attorney [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rules 37.3, 37.6].

The award may not include any award to either party for attorney's fees incurred in connection with the arbitration, notwithstanding any contract between the parties providing for such an award or attorney's fees. This rule, however, does not preclude an award of attorney's fees to either party by a court pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c) or 6204(d) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a)]. For discussion of fee awards under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c), see § 72.478[4]. For discussion of fee awards under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(d), § 72.479[5].

The State Bar, or the local entity delegated by the State Bar to conduct the arbitration, must deliver an original declaration of service of the award, as well as the award itself, to each of the parties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(a); see Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 37.9].

[2] Notice of Post-Arbitration Rights

At the time the award is served on the parties, there must be served a notice of the parties' post-arbitration rights, which must substantially conform with the notice approved by the Board of Governors of the State Bar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204.5(b); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 37.9; Fee Arbitration Guidelines § II-6]. For a form providing information regarding rights after attorney-client fee arbitration, see § 72.752.

[3] Binding Effect of Award

The parties may agree in writing to be bound by the award of the arbitrators [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(a)]. In the absence of such an agreement, either party is entitled to a trial after arbitration if sought within 30 days [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(b), (c) (discussed in § 72.479[2])]. If, however, either party willfully fails to appear at the arbitration hearing in the manner provided by the rules adopted by the board of governors, that party will not be entitled to a trial after arbitration. The determination of willfulness must be made by the court. The party who failed to appear at the arbitration hearing has the burden of proving that the failure to appear was not willful. In making its determination, the court may consider any findings made by the arbitrators on the subject of a party's failure to appear [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(a)]. In addition, if a party rejects an arbitration award by filing a request for a trial de novo [see § 72.479], the party effectively repudiates that rejection by causing or permitting the action to be dismissed [Perez v. Grajales (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 596-603, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 784].

[4] Confirmation, Correction, or Vacation of Award

Even if the parties to the arbitration have not agreed in writing to be bound, the arbitration award becomes binding 30 days after service of notice of the award, unless a party, within the 30-day period, seeks a trial after arbitration pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(b)].

If an action previously has been filed in any court, any petition to confirm, correct, or vacate the award must be to the court in which the action is pending, and may be served by mail on any party who has appeared, as provided in Code Civ. Proc § 1003 et seq.; otherwise, service must be made in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. § 6203(b); see Loeb v. Record (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 431, 449-451, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 551]. If the claim is in small claims court, optional Judicial Council Form SC-100 and SC-101 may be used. If the lawsuit is in superior court, optional Judicial Council Form ADR-103 may be used [for form, see § 72.253].

If no action is pending in any court, the award may be confirmed, corrected, or vacated by petition to the court having jurisdiction over the amount of the arbitration award, in the same manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. § 6203(b)]. If the amount in dispute is $5,000 or less, the action can be filed in small claims court and Judicial Council Forms SC-100 and SC-101 may be used. If the amount exceeds $5,000, the petition must be filed in Superior Court, and Judicial Council Form ADR-103 (see above) may not be used.

[5] When Court May Refuse to Confirm Award

The trial court may properly refuse to confirm an arbitration award if it finds that the arbitrated dispute was not a fee dispute between attorney and client [National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Stites Prof. Law Corp. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1718, 1728, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570 (dispute between insurer and attorney in which relationship between insurer and attorney was not the usual relationship in which insurer, in fulfillment of its duty to defend, hires defense counsel and controls prosecution of the defense)]. The court can refuse to confirm an award in this situation even if the arbitrators specifically determine that they have subject matter jurisdiction to arbitrate the matter, because, in fact, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. do not confer subject matter jurisdiction on any arbitrator to arbitrate a fee dispute that is not between attorney and client. Furthermore, Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) gives the court the power to vacate an award in those circumstances because, by acting without subject matter jurisdiction, the arbitrators are deemed to have exceeded their powers [National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Stites Prof. Law Corp. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1718, 1723-1727, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d)].

[6] Fees and Costs

A court confirming, correcting, or vacating an award under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203 may award to the prevailing party reasonable fees and costs including, if applicable, fees or costs on appeal incurred in obtaining confirmation, correction, or vacation of the award. The party obtaining judgment confirming, correcting, or vacating the award will be the prevailing party, except that, without regard to consideration of who the prevailing party may be, if a party did not appear at the arbitration hearing in the manner provided by the rules adopted by the board of governors, that party is not entitled to attorney's fees or costs upon confirmation, correction, or vacation of the award [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c); see also Pacific Law Group: USA v. Gibson (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 577, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878 (affirmation of trial court's judgment confirming arbitration award as, in effect, confirmation of arbitration award by appellate court so that attorney's fees may be awarded under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c))].

§ 72.479 Trial After Arbitration

[1] Parties May Seek Trial De Novo After Arbitration

In the absence of an agreement by the parties to be bound by the arbitrators' award, either party is entitled to a trial after arbitration if sought within 30 days [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(b), (c) (discussed in § 72.479[2]); but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(a) (trial unavailable to party who willfully failed to appear at arbitration hearing), discussed under § 72.478[3]].

[2] Initiation of Trial

[a] If Action Pending

If an action is pending [see Loeb v. Record (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 431, 445-447, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 551 (defining "action pending")] involving the parties to the arbitration, the trial after arbitration must be initiated by filing, within 30 days after service of notice of the award, both of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(b)]:

- A rejection of the arbitration award.
- A request for trial after arbitration in that action.

If the rejection of arbitration award has been filed by the plaintiff in the pending action, all defendants must file a responsive pleading within 30 days following service on the defendant of the rejection of arbitration award and request for trial after arbitration. If the rejection or arbitration award has been filed by the defendant in the pending action, all plaintiffs must file a responsive pleading within 30 days after the filing of the rejection of arbitration award and request for trial after arbitration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(b)]. For an optional Judicial Council form for rejection of arbitration award and request for trial after arbitration, see § 72.754, Judicial Council Form ADR-104. For a form detailing information regarding rights after attorney-client arbitration, see § 72.754[1], Judicial Council Form ADR-105.

Service may be made by mail on any party who has appeared; otherwise, service must be made in the manner provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10 et seq., relating to service of summons in civil actions. On service and filing of the rejection of arbitration award, any stay entered pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201 [see § 72.475] will be vacated, without the necessity of a court order [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(b)].

[b] If No Action Pending

If no action is pending [see Loeb v. Record (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 431, 445-447, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 551 (defining "action pending")], the trial after arbitration must be initiated by the commencement of an action, in the court having jurisdiction over the amount of money in controversy, within 30 days after service of notice of the award. After the filing of the action, the action will proceed in accordance with the provisions of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 307 et seq.), concerning civil actions generally [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(c)].

A client's filing of a malpractice action within 30 days of notice of an arbitration award is insufficient to constitute a timely request for a trial de novo under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(c) if the malpractice complaint does not disclose an intention to challenge the arbitration award. The client's later amendment of the malpractice complaint also cannot constitute a timely request on the theory that an amendment to include a declaratory relief action concerning the client's right to a trial de novo "relates back" to the initial filing of the complaint [Shiver, McGrane & Martin v. Littell (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1041, 1045, 1047, 266 Cal. Rptr. 298] .

[3] Relief From Time Limits

Extensions granted under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 when service is "made by mail" do not apply to the mandatory 30-day limits for seeking a trial de novo [Simpson v. Williams (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 285, 287-289, 238 Cal. Rptr. 566 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1013]. If, however, a party seeking to challenge an arbitration award fails to timely file within 30 days and the award is confirmed by the trial court, relief may be available under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, which allows a court to vacate a judgment based on mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [see Simpson v. Williams (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 285, 290-291, 238 Cal. Rptr. 566 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 473]. However, one court of appeal noted that the Supreme Court has declined relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 in the context of appeal from arbitration under the Labor Code, and has refused to apply Code Civ. Proc. § 473 to extend the time for challenging a fee arbitrator's award [Shiver, McGrane & Martin v. Littell (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1041, 1049, 266 Cal. Rptr. 298 (citing Pressler v. Donald L. Bren Co. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 831, 834 n.5, 187 Cal. Rptr. 449, 654 P.2d 219)].

For further discussion and forms relating to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[4] Evidence at Trial

Evid. Code § 950 et seq., relating to the attorney-client privilege, does not prohibit the disclosure of any relevant communication, nor may Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.010 et seq be construed to prohibit the disclosure of any relevant work product of the attorney in connection with a trial after arbitration. In no event, however, will such a disclosure be deemed a waiver of the confidential character of such matters for any purpose other than as authorized in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6202 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6202].

[5] Award of Attorney's Fees and Costs to Prevailing Party

The party seeking a trial after arbitration will be the prevailing party if that party obtains judgment more favorable than that provided by the arbitration award, and in all other cases the other party will be the prevailing party [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204].

The prevailing party, in the discretion of the court, may be entitled to an allowance for reasonable attorney's fees and costs incurred in the trial after arbitration. The allowance will be fixed by the court. In fixing the attorney's fees, the court must consider the award and determinations of the arbitrators, in addition to any other relevant evidence [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204].

§ 72.480 Enforcing Arbitration Award

[1] Scope of State Bar Enforcement

In any matter in which (1) the award of the arbitrators includes a refund of fees or costs, or both, to the client, (2) the award is binding or has become binding by operation of law or has become a judgment either after confirmation under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c) or after a trial after arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204, and (3) the attorney has not complied with the award, the State Bar must enforce the award by placing the attorney on involuntary inactive status until the award has been paid [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(1)].

The State Bar has adopted, pursuant to statute, an administrative procedure to determine whether an award should be enforced [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rules 39.0-45.0; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(2)]. Under the statute and the rules, an award is enforced if either of the following applies [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(2)]:

- The State Bar shows that the attorney has failed to comply with a binding fee arbitration award rendered pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq.

- The attorney has not proposed a payment plan acceptable to the client or the State Bar.

The award will not be enforced if the attorney has demonstrated that he or she is not personally responsible for making or ensuring payment of the award, or is unable to pay the award [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(2); see § 72.480[5]].

[2] Requesting Enforcement

[a] Timing and Content of Request

A request for enforcement must be made within four years from the date the arbitration award was mailed. However, in no event may a request be made prior to 100 days from the date of the service of a signed copy of the award. In cases in which the award is appealed, a request cannot be made prior to 100 days from the date the award has become final [Bus.

& Prof. Code § 6203(d)(5); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 40.1]. The request must be made on the approved State Bar form, and may include all parties who were included in the original arbitration proceeding and who were awarded a refund of fees and/or costs [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 40.1].

The client's request for enforcement of the arbitration award will be served on the attorney by the State Bar [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 40.3].

[b] Reasonable Efforts to Contact Attorney Required Before Request

Before making the request, the client must make reasonable efforts to contact the attorney to arrange for payment of the award, including, at a minimum, mailing to the attorney a written request for payment. Proof of such a mailing may be required before the State Bar initiates an enforcement proceeding against the attorney [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 40.2].

[3] Attorney's Response to Request

Within 30 days from the date of service on the attorney of the request for enforcement of the award, the attorney must do one of the following [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 41.1]:

- Provide satisfactory proof to the State Bar that the award has been complied with.
- Agree to a payment plan that is satisfactory to the client or to the State Bar.
- Provide reasons why, under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d), the attorney should not comply with the award.

[4] Payment Plan

[a] Establishing Acceptable Plan

If the attorney has made a proposal for a payment plan to comply with the arbitration award, the State Bar must immediately transmit the proposed plan to the client, who may accept the proposal [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 42.1]. If the payment plan is not accepted by the client, the Presiding Arbitrator, or designee, may determine that the plan is reasonable and may accept the plan [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 42.2(a)], or may order that the plan be rejected [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 42.2(b)].

[b] Monitoring Compliance With Accepted Plan

If the payment plan is approved by the client or by the Presiding Arbitrator or designee, the State Bar will monitor the plan for compliance. If at any time the client advises the State Bar that the attorney has ceased to comply with the payment plan, and the attorney has not provided proof either of inability to pay (under Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.1, discussed under § 72.480[5][a]), or of compliance with the payment plan, the Presiding Arbitrator or designee must file a motion with the State Bar Court to place the attorney on temporary inactive status [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.3].

On submission of satisfactory proof that the payment plan has been completed and the award has been fully complied with, the State Bar must close its file and notify the parties [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 42.4].

[5] Determination Whether Attorney Is No Longer Responsible for Award or Is Unable to Pay

[a] Procedures

If the attorney believes that he or she is no longer personally responsible for payment of the award due to a change in circumstances since the arbitration hearing, or does not have the financial means to comply, the attorney must provide reasons for this belief in his or her response [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.1; see § 72.480[3]].

If the attorney provides the name or names of the other attorney or attorneys he or she believes is now responsible for the award, the State Bar must serve on that attorney copies of the client's request for arbitration and the first attorney's response. The other attorney(s) have 20 days from the date of service to respond [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.2].

The Presiding Arbitrator or designee considers any challenge to the attorney's responsibility or claim of inability to pay the award. The Presiding Arbitrator or designee may hold a hearing or may require the parties to submit additional information [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.3].

[b] Orders

The Presiding Arbitrator or designee must enter one of the following orders [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.4]:

- That due to the attorney's inability to pay, the file will be closed.
- That one or all of the attorneys in the proceeding is responsible for the award.
- That the attorney or attorneys can afford to comply with the award.
- That the matter cannot be resolved under the Rules.

[c] Challenging Orders

Any challenges to the Presiding Arbitrator's order requiring an attorney to pay the award will be considered by the State Bar Court. A Presiding Arbitrator order closing the file is final [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 43.5].

[6] Motion to State Bar Court to Place Attorney on Inactive Status

The Presiding Arbitrator may petition the State Bar Court to place the attorney on temporary inactive status in any matter in which the Presiding Arbitrator or designee determines that the attorney has not done at least one of the following [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 44.0]:

- Agreed to a payment plan.
- Proven an inability to pay the award.
- Proven that he or she is not responsible for the award.
- Proven that he or she has complied with the payment plan.

These proceedings are governed by the Rules of Procedure for State Bar Court Proceedings [Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 44.0; for discussion of the Rules of Procedure, see § 72.320 et seq.].

The State Bar must enforce the award by placing the attorney on involuntary inactive status if all of the following are true [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(1)]:

- The award of the arbitrators includes a refund of fees or costs, or both, to the client.

- The award is binding or has become binding by operation of law or has become a judgment either after confirmation under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c) or after a trial after arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204.

- The attorney has not complied with the award.

[7] Administrative Penalties and Costs

In any matter in which the attorney has failed to comply with a binding award, the Presiding Arbitrator or designee may require the attorney to pay administrative penalties. Penalties imposed may not exceed 20 percent of the amount awarded to the client or $1,000, whichever is greater [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(3); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 45.0]. If the attorney does not pay the administrative penalties, that amount will be added to the membership fee of the attorney for the next calendar year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(3); Fee Arbitration Rules, Rule 45.0].

[8] Termination of Inactive Enrollment

The board must terminate the inactive enrollment on proof that the attorney has complied with the award and on payment of any costs or penalties, or both, assessed as a result of the attorney's failure to comply [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(d)(4)].

Disputes over fees may also be subject to voluntary mediation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(a), (c), (d), (f)]. Participation in mediation is a voluntary, consensual process, based on direct negotiations between the attorney and the client, and is an extension of the negotiated settlement process. All discussions and offers of settlement are confidential, and may not be disclosed in any subsequent arbitration or other proceedings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(h)].

In a criminal case, petitioner's attorney had conflict of interest that caused procedural default when attorney interfered with petitioner's right to pursue habeas claim; conflict of interest existed because of attorney's interest in protecting himself from (1) damage that habeas claim would cause his professional career, and (2) exposure to potential malpractice liability or bar discipline. Manning v. Foster (9th Cir. 2000) 224 F.3d 1129, 1134

In criminal case, new trial was ordered when defendant's attorney had conflict of interest because a government witness was a co-defendant with whom attorney had an attorney-client relationship arising from a joint defense agreement. United States v. Henke (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 633, 636-638

A nonprofit law firm does not have the same financial incentives as a private firm insofar as the clients do not pay for services; therefore no single client becomes more important than others, and ethical walls are more effective. In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 145, 165, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597, 194 P.3d 330

Evidentiary burden on the disqualification issue should not fall on the party seeking disqualification. Instead, the burden should be on the attorney to show that the confidential information acquired during the prior representation of the client had been, and would be, adequately protected because it has unique access to the relevant information. In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 145, 166, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597, 194 P.3d 330

When attorney left private practice to become head of public law office, vicarious disqualification of entire public law office was required, and no screening was allowed. City and County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 839, 846-854, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 771, 135 P.3d 20

Attorneys' association had right to sue county employer for failing to bargain in good faith under Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (Gov. Code § 3500 et seq.) and not violate conflict of interest principles or common law ethical obligations to their employer-client. Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 544-549, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142

Attorney did not assume conflicting positions by representing both general contractor having claim of lien and materialman having similar claim. Perkins v. West Coast Lumber Co. (1900) 129 Cal. 427, 429-430, 62 P. 57

Attorney who acted for personal representative in administration of decedent's estate was not disabled from representing claimant in distribution proceeding when personal representative has no interest except fees and costs. Jones v. Lamont (1897) 118 Cal. 499, 503-504, 50 P. 766

When attorney with client confidences moves from one private law firm to another, there is rebuttable presumption of imputed knowledge to the law firm, which may be rebutted by evidence of effective ethical screening. Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 792-816, 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 478

Lawyer may take position as a private citizen that is adverse to prior client's interests. Oasis West Realty, LLC v. Goldman (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 688, 699-703, 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 287

Entire law firm may be disqualified even after the lawyer with the conflict left the firm. Meza v. H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 978-980, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422

It is not a defense to a claim under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) that the attorney's actions were protected activity under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation (anti-SLAPP) statute. United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1617, 1625-1629, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669

Although nonparty ordinarily must file a separate action to prevent former counsel from continuing with an adverse representation, nonparty who is alleged to be alter ego and coconspirator of a party may have standing to make a motion. Machado v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 875, 880-882, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902

Party may not disqualify attorney jointly representing the opposing parties based solely on their agreement to participate in confidential mediation. Dino v. Pelayo (2006) 145 Cal. App.4th 347, 355-357, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 620

Court should look at totality of circumstances to determine whether to disqualify attorney under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E). Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1581, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

Fact that same attorney did not represent adverse parties on cross-complaint did not eliminate adverse relationship between the parties, and thus required disqualification of attorney. Cal West Nurseries, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 170

Conflict existed when class representative was attorney employed by co-counsel of attorney representing class. Apple Computer, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1253, 1265, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818

Where attorney left private practice to work in city attorney's office, which was involved in suit against attorney's former client, vicarious disqualification of entire public law office not required, and screening allowed. City of Santa Barbara v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 17, 25, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 403

Where attorney represented insurer in coverage claims, attorney had conflict of interest in new firm when representing insured against insurer in bad faith claim. Farris v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Company (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th

671, 681, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 618

Lawyer not disqualified solely because spouse worked for disqualified attorney's firm. Derivi Construction & Architecture, Inc. v. Wong (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1276, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329

In action by investment banking firm against corporation for which it acted as underwriter for corporation's public stock offering, trial court's disqualification of plaintiff's law firm was in error even though law firm had represented plaintiff in connection with stock offering, and representation had been paid for by corporation. Strasbourger Pearson Tulcin Wolff Inc. v. Wiz Technology (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326

Law firm enjoined on basis of conflict of interest from representing water district in dispute with wholly owned subsidiary of corporation, where law firm had never directly represented corporation or its wholly owned subsidiary, but where law firm had represented insurance underwriter of parent corporation on ongoing basis and was privy to confidential information about nonclient corporation's financial condition, and where corporation, its subsidiary and insurance underwriter were found to have a "unity of interest." Morrison Knudsen Corp. v. Hancock, Rothert & Bunshoft (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425

Where no conflict exists between attorney's clients in lawsuit, opposing counsel may not create conflict through meritless cross-complaint. Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. v. La Conchita Ranch Co. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 856, 862, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 634

In shareholder's derivative action, current corporation lawyer simultaneously representing two closely held corporations and two majority shareholders disqualified from representing corporations but permitted to continue to represent majority shareholders. Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 74-75, 79-82, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857

Plaintiff's attorney in wrongful termination/discrimination action disqualified for conflict of interest where attorney simultaneously represented other plaintiffs in different action against same defendant, those plaintiffs had previously signed settlement agreement containing confidentiality clause, and attorney thereafter attempted to advance plaintiff's interests in instant action by calling one or more of other clients as witnesses in plaintiff's case, thereby risking harm to other clients' interests. Gilbert v. National Corp. For Housing Properties (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204

Dual representation of dissolved partnership and general partner results in actual conflict of interest when diligent representation of partnership requires attorney to raise defense that would work to general partner's detriment. Tsakos Shipping & Trading, S.A. v. Juniper Garden Town Homes, Ltd. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 74, 94-96, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 585

Law firm not permitted to avoid disqualification for adverse concurrent representation by withdrawing from representation of less favored client prior to hearing on disqualification. Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1057, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228

Mere fact that law firm of party's attorney had previously been engaged to perform work for adverse party insufficient to support adverse party's motion to disqualify attorney, in absence of showing of substantial relationship between prior representation of adverse party and current representa tion of party. Kirk Corp. v. First American Title Co. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 785, 812-813, 270 Cal. Rptr. 24

Client may not raise conflict of interest issue for first time on appeal; issue properly raised as defense in attorney's action to recover fees, in motion to disqualify attorney from acting for adverse party, or in separate action to enjoin adverse representation. Asbestos Claims Facility v. Berry & Berry (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 9, 26-27 & n.6

Conflict of interest concerns under California Rules of Professional Conduct arise if attorney is in position to acquire confidential information from nonclient that may be useful in attorney's representation of client, and when attorney puts himself or herself in position, without client consent, where he or she may be required to choose between or reconcile his or her interests with client's conflicting interests. Tri-Growth Centre City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 1151, 265 Cal. Rptr. 330

Attorney may accept employment adverse to former client when former client had, at time of prior representation, been represented by his own personal attorney and had consented to adverse employment. Cornish v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 467, 474-479, 257 Cal. Rptr. 383

Rule presuming prejudice when representation of client is adverse to interest of former client is directed at protecting confidential communications between attorney and former client; reason for rule presuming prejudice nonexistent, however, when former client was unable to communicate with attorney. In re Jessica B. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 504, 512, 254 Cal. Rptr. 883 (former client was brain-damaged infant)

Presumption that communications between attorney and employee of adverse counsel have resulted in improper exchange of information does not come into play unless party seeking attorney's disqualification shows not only apparent conflict of interest but likelihood that, as result of conflict, attorney acquired confidential information useful to his or her client. Gregori v. Bank of America (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 291, 304, 254 Cal. Rptr. 853

Whether attorney's acceptance of employment adverse to former client presents conflict of interest based on confidential information depends on whether former representation is substantially related to current representation; when substantial relationship exists, especially when relationship is of the type in which confidential information would normally have been imparted to attorney, rule of necessity causes presumption of conflict of interest, and actual possession of confidential information need not be proved. Elliott v. McFarland Unified School Dist. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 568-569, 211 Cal. Rptr. 802

Attorney required to obtain informed written consent of client before undertaking any representation that involves even potential conflict of interest; informed consent requires attorney to make full disclosure of all facts and circumstances relevant to conflict, including areas of potential conflict and possibility and desirability of seeking independent legal advice; attorney claiming client consented to conflicting representation bears heavy burden of demonstrating that all relevant facts relating to conflict were disclosed and explained. Civil Service Com. v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 70, 82-83, 209 Cal. Rptr. 159

When senior partner of law firm representing plaintiff in breach of lease action was also director of bank and member of its trust committee owning 100 percent of defendant corporation, vicarious conflicts of interest existed for law firm even though partner removed himself from committee matters involving defendant. William H. Raley Co. v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 1049, 197 Cal. Rptr. 232

Attorney's position as counsel for family business disqualified him from representing husband in dissolution proceeding on ground of conflict of interest even in absence of showing that attorney obtained confidential information from position as counsel for business, since business was focus of dissolution proceeding. Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 936, 197 Cal. Rptr. 185

Law firm is in breach of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 5-102(B) (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310) when, without knowledge and consent of current client, it undertakes to represent third person in suing client on unrelated matter. Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 10, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373

Attorney is permitted to represent both corporation and its officers and directors prior to judgment that corporation is entitled to relief against officers or directors. Jacuzzi v. Jacuzzi Bros., Inc. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 1, 36, 52 Cal. Rptr. 147

Attorney assumes conflicting professional duties by representing two defendants, one of whom cross complains against plaintiff and other defendant. Elberta Oil Co. v. Superior Court (1930) 108 Cal. App. 344, 346-348, 291 P. 668

[2] Conflict Arising From Insurer's Duty to Defend Insured

Both insured and insurer which employs attorneys or law firm to defend insured under the policy are deemed clients of the attorney and insurance company does not engage in the practice of law regardless of whether the attorneys or law firm is retained outside counsel or in-house counsel. Gafcon v. Ponsor (2002) 98 Cal. App.4th 1388, 1396-1397, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392 .

Not every reservation of right creates a conflict of interest requiring appointment of independent counsel for insured. Gulf Insurance Co. v. Berger, Kahn, Shafton, Moss, Figler, Simon & Gladstone (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 114, 130, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534

For purposes of disqualification, law firm representing insured also deemed to concurrently represent insurer where no reservation of rights asserted by insurer. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Federal Insurance Co. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20

Attorney retained by insurer to represent uninsured physician breached his fiduciary duty to physician where attorney corepresented physician, insurer and two other defendants in malpractice action in which actual conflict of interest existed between jointly represented clients. Mosier v. Southern California Physicians Insurance Exchange (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1022, 1044, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550

When conflict of interest arises between insured and insurer, insurer's assertion of right to approve attorneys privately retained by insureds does not breach insurer's obligation to insured as matter of law, if insurer's approval not unreasonably withheld. Center Foundation v. Chicago Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 547, 557-561, 278 Cal. Rptr. 13

Law applied by court in conflict of interest dispute between insured and insurer determined by date dispute began; Civ. Code § 2860 and San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494 , have no retroactive application. Center Foundation v. Chicago Ins. Co. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 547, 557-558, 278 Cal. Rptr. 13

Insured has right to select independent counsel at insurer's expense when conflict of interest arises. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1520-1527, 252 Cal. Rptr. 320

Conflict of interest arises between jointly represented clients whenever their common lawyer's representation of one is rendered less effective by lawyer's representation of other. San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 365 n.4, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494

Counsel representing insurer and insured owes both high duty of care; attorney hired by insurer is required to explain to insured and insurer full implications of joint representations in situations in which insurer has reserved its rights to deny coverage, and if insured does not give informed consent to continued representation, counsel must cease to represent both. San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 374-375, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494

Attorney for insurer able to act for insured; when conflict arises between insurer and its insured whom insurer has duty to defend, insurer's attorney required to withdraw from representation or make full disclosure to both clients, or risk exposure to liability for harm resulting from failure to do so, in addition to charge of professional misconduct. Purdy v. Pacific Automobile Ins. Co. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 59, 76-77, 203 Cal. Rptr. 524

[3] Conflicts Between Counsel

California and federal constitutions do not require complete compatability among appointed counsel in criminal case, judicial inquiry into all signs of disagreement between counsel or particular working relationships within defense team. People v. Montiel (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 877, 905-906, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705, 855 P.2d 1277

There is no fiduciary duty between cocounsel, since client's right to undivided loyalty of attorney must be protected, even where result is to deny attorney's cause of action against cocounsel. Joseph A. Saunders v. Weissburg & Aronson (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1423 , mod. 74 Cal. App. 4th 869

[1] Advertising and Solicitation

Illinois prohibition on lawyer holding self out in advertisement as "certified" or as "specialist" as overbroad under U.S. Const., amend. I; state as able, however, to screen certifying organizations or require disclaimer about certifying organization or standards of specialty. Peel v. Attorney Reg. & Disciplinary Com'n (1990) 496 U.S. 91, 108-109, 110 S. Ct. 2281, 110 L. Ed. 2d 83

Kentucky rule that categorically prohibited lawyers from soliciting legal business for pecuniary gain by sending truthful and nondeceptive letters to potential clients known to face particular legal problems as violation of First Amendment protection. Shapero v. Kentucky Bar Assn. (1988) 486 U.S. 466, 472-487, 108 S. Ct. 1916, 100 L. Ed. 2d 475

First Amendment as precluding state from disciplining attorney for soliciting legal business through printed advertising containing truthful and nondeceptive information and advice regarding legal rights of potential clients. Zauderer v. Office of Disciplinary Counsel (1985) 471 U.S. 626, 647, 105 S. Ct. 2265, 85 L. Ed. 2d 652, 17 Ohio B. 315

Missouri rules that restricted manner in which law practice could be described in advertisement as unconstitutional; attorney as entitled to advertise nonmisleading description of his or her areas of practice. In re R.M.J. (1982) 455 U.S. 191, 204-207, 102 S. Ct. 929, 71 L. Ed. 2d 64

Prohibition of in-person solicitation of legal employment for pecuniary gain as constitutional; state is entitled to avert dangers inherent in in-person solicitation such as fraud, undue influence, intimidation, overreaching, invasion of privacy, subordination of client's interest to attorney's financial interests, and other vexatious conduct. Ohralik v. Ohio State Bar Ass'n (1978) 436 U.S. 447, 461-462, 98 S. Ct. 1912, 56 L. Ed. 2d 444

In-person solicitation is permissible when purpose of solicitation involves furtherance of civil rights, unless actual misconduct or injury shown. In re Primus (1978) 436 U.S. 412, 434, 98 S. Ct. 1893, 56 L. Ed. 2d 417

Arizona rule that prohibited commercial advertising of routine legal services by lawyers violated of U.S. Const., amend. I. Bates v. State Bar of Arizona (1977) 433 U.S. 350, 354, 97 S. Ct. 2691, 53 L. Ed. 2d 810

Direct solicitation of employment from accident victim is ethically improper. Rose v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 646, 659, 262 Cal. Rptr. 702, 779 P.2d 761

Solicitation of clients through mass mailings is commercial speech properly subject to regulation for misleading advertising under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 2-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400). Leoni v. State Bar (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 609, 622-626, 217 Cal. Rptr. 423, 704 P.2d 183

Precertification discovery to permit class representative to obtain substitute class representative did not constitute unlawful solicitation. Best Buy Stores, L.P. v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 772, 776-777, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575

[2] Association of Counsel

Association of counsel to substitute at hearing in absence of attorney of record is proper and is not required to be effected formally. Vaughn v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 698, 701-702, 108 Cal. Rptr. 806, 511 P.2d 1158

Duty of attorney of record to prepare associate counsel for trial proceeding at which associate substitutes for attorney of record. Vaughn v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 698, 701-702, 108 Cal. Rptr. 806, 511 P.2d 1158

Attorney of record and associated attorney are entitled to divide duties concerning conduct of action, but associated attorney as not entitled to act as attorney of record without substitution. Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 43, 152 P.2d 625 (associated attorney may properly designate himself "one of the attorneys for" party when appearing for party in court)

Associate attorney is not entitled to appear or act on client's behalf as sole attorney of record without complying with procedure for substitution of attorneys provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 284, 285. Prescott v. Salthouse (1878) 53 Cal. 221, 222-223

When one member of law firm becomes incapable of performing association agreement with other lawyer, parties to agreement are discharged if it was contemplated that incapacitated attorney would perform substantial services under agreement; attorney who hired incapacitated attorney as not obligated to accept other member of incapacitated attorney's law firm as substitute. Cazares v. Saenz (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 279, 282, 284-286, 256 Cal. Rptr. 209

Attorney who is party to action was properly recognized by court as associated attorney in presenting his or her own case with ostensible authority of his or her attorney of record. Muller v. Tanner (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 445, 457, 82 Cal. Rptr. 738

[3] Attorney-Client Relationship in General

No attorney-client relationship existed when there was no evidence that client ever considered attorney to be its lawyer or potential lawyer, or that any confidential matters were disclosed. Med-Trans Corp. v. City of California City (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 666-669, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1789

Attorney making single, special appearance for litigant creates an attorney-client relationship with litigant, and owes a duty of care to litigant. Streit v. Covington & Crowe (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 441, 447, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193

Attorney-client relationship is founded on general rules governing relationship of principal and agent. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v. Abraham (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 776, 783, 161 P.2d 689

[4] Attorney of Record

Service of papers after entry of judgment may be made on attorney of record when there has been no substitution in manner prescribed by law. People v. Bouchard (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 438, 440, 317 P.2d 971 (dictum)

Attorney of record remains such for purpose of serving papers until notice of substitution filed, even if attorney in fact ceases to act as attorney for party. Scarpel v. East Bay Street Ry. (1940) 42 Cal. App. 2d 32, 33, 115 P.2d 862

[5] Authority of Attorney

[a] In Litigation

Plaintiff's attorney exceeded scope of implied authority by entering into agreement with defendants for binding arbitration without client's consent, when client did nothing beyond retaining attorney to suggest that attorney had authority to agree on her behalf, client had agreed only to nonbinding arbitration with right to trial de novo, and client repudiated agreement after learning of it. Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 396, 402-403, 406-408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645

Extent of attorney's authority to bind client. Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276-280, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760 ; Zurich G. A. & L. Ins. Co., Ltd. v. Kinsler (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 98, 105-106, 81 P.2d 913

Fact that attorney is authorized to represent person in one case is not evidence of authority to represent that person in another and distinct proceeding. Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343

Respondent was entitled to move appellate court for order dismissing appeal on ground that attorney purporting to represent appellant in filing notice of appeal was not authorized. Title Ins. etc. Co. v. California etc. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 397, 400, 405, 143 P. 723 (appeal dismissed on respondent's motion)

Court of appeal has exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether attorney purporting to represent party in appeal has authority to do so. Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 346, 139 P. 805

Proceeding based on appearance for defendant by attorney not authorized to appear was void when defendant was not duly served; appearance by attorney raises presumption of authority. Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 599-600

When several defendants appear by separate attorneys, attorney for one defendant is not authorized to give or accept notice, make stipulations, or consent to order or judgment on behalf of another defendant. Hobbs v. Duff (1872) 43 Cal. 485, 491

Attorney lacks apparent authority to sign arbitration contract on client's behalf; lawyer's signature alone is not sufficient evidence that client consented to arbitration. Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1221-1223, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97

Extent of conservatee's attorney to agree to judgment that included conservatee's placement, disabilities, and conservator powers without conservatee's on-the-record consent. Conservatorship of Christopher A. (2006) 139 Cal.

App. 4th 604, 612-613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427

Attorney had no express or actual authority from defendant to appear on his behalf based on understanding from a co-defendant that attorney was to appear for all defendants. Corcoran v. Arouh (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 310, 315-316, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326

Attorney's unauthorized voluntary dismissal with prejudice of client's cause of action constituted act beyond scope of attorney's authority and may be vacated at any time. Romadka v. Hoge (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1231, 1235-1237, 283 Cal. Rptr. 878

When party represented by attorney of record, trial court was precluded from accepting stipulation or agreement made by party without knowledge and consent of attorney. In re Marriage of Maricle (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 55, 58, 269 Cal. Rptr. 204

Counsel has authority to enter into stipulations to resolve discovery disputes; stipulations clearly are binding on client when client has, by conduct, ratified stipulation. Young v. Rosenthal (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 115-117, 260 Cal. Rptr. 369 , cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1080, 110 S. Ct. 1811, 108 L. Ed. 2d 941 (1990)

Stipulation entered into without client authorization is subject to being set aside if dispute is substantially resolved by virtue of stipulation. In re Marriage of Helsel (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 332, 339-340, 243 Cal. Rptr. 657

Attorney lacks authority to represent person when person lacks actual or constructive notice of representation by that attorney; trial court lacks jurisdiction to enter judgment against person when attorney's appearance for that person is unauthorized. Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1412-1414, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653

Trial attorney is in full charge of client's cause or defense and client is bound by attorney's action; trial judge and opposing counsel are justified in relying on apparent and presumptive authority of attorney and in acting on that basis. Kim v. Orellana (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1027, 193 Cal. Rptr. 827

Dismissal of cause of action by attorney without client's authority is act beyond scope of attorney's authority that may be vacated at any time on proper proof. Bowden v. Green (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 65, 73, 180 Cal. Rptr. 90 ; Whittier Union High Sch. Dist. v. Superior Court (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 504, 509, 136 Cal. Rptr. 86

[b] In Transactions

Absent express authority, attorney is without implied plenary authority to enter into contracts on behalf of his or her client. Wilson v. Eddy (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 613, 618, 82 Cal. Rptr. 826

[c] Challenging Authority

Third person is entitled to assert invalidity of attorney's act based on lack of authority in defense of proceeding to compel third person to do act he is bound to do if attorney's act valid. Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 194-195, 244 P. 343 (writ of mandate to compel judge to certify record on appeal denied when judge refused certification on ground that attorney was not authorized to file notice of appeal)

Judgment valid on its face cannot collaterally attacked on ground attorney appeared without authority, but can be collaterally attacked on that ground only by motion in rendering court or by action to set judgment aside. Parkside Realty Co. v. MacDonald (1914) 167 Cal. 342, 347-348, 139 P. 805

Motion to dismiss is proper procedure for challenging authority of attorney to bring action. County of Ventura v. Clay (1897) 119 Cal. 213, 215, 51 P. 189 (action by district attorney to recover money for county dismissed for lack of authorization from supervisors); Clark v. Willett (1868) 35 Cal. 534, 538, 540 ; Turner v. Caruthers (1861) 17 Cal. 431, 433

Defendant wishing to have judgment vacated on ground that appearance on his behalf by attorney was unauthorized is required to take prompt action and to make out clear case by cogent and strong evidence. Garrison v. McGowan (1874) 48 Cal. 592, 600

Motion for dismissal on ground plaintiff's attorney is not authorized to appear on plaintiff's behalf must be supported by affidavit showing lack of authority. People v. Mariposa Co. (1870) 39 Cal. 683, 685

Court is authorized to require attorney to produce evidence of authority to appear on behalf of supposed client when either supposed client or adverse party challenges authority by proper motion. Clark v. Willett (1868) 35 Cal. 534, 540 (motion by supposed client); Turner v. Caruthers (1861) 17 Cal. 431, 433 (motion by adverse party)

Fact that attorney is in action without authority is no defense in action at law on judgment. Carpentier v. City of Oakland (1866) 30 Cal. 439, 446

Plea in abatement is improper procedure for challenging authority of plaintiff's attorney to appear and prosecute action; mere suggestion of adverse party that plaintiff's attorney lacks authority is not a sufficient basis for court's inquiry into attorney's authority. Turner v. Caruthers (1861) 17 Cal. 431, 433

Setting aside judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is proper when defendant has shown that appearance on her behalf by attorney was unauthorized. Zirbes v. Stratton (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1410-1411, 232 Cal. Rptr. 653

Motion to strike answer is proper procedure for challenging authority of defendant's attorney to represent defendant. People v. Honey Lake Valley Irr. Dist. (1926) 77 Cal. App. 367, 374, 246 P. 819 (dictum)

[d] Conduct of Client

Court is authorized, in criminal action at least, to permit litigant both to have counsel and also to participate in conduct of case (examining witnesses, objecting, arguing, etc.) on substantial showing that justice will thereby be served and that orderly and expeditious conduct of court's business will not thereby be substantially hindered, hampered, or delayed. People v. Mattson (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 777, 797, 336 P.2d 937

Party to action is allowed to appear personally or by attorney but not both; court is required to recognize attorney of record as having management and control of action; client is not empowered to control action until attorney of record is removed. Board of Comm'rs v. Younger (1865) 29 Cal. 147, 149

[e] Presumption

Presumption of authority raised by attorney making appearance on behalf of party is rebuttable; party has no rights based on unauthorized act and is unable to validate unauthorized act by ratification after expiration of limitation period for doing act, even though act was timely. Title Ins. etc. v. California Development Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 397, 401 (unauthorized notice of appeal not validated by ratification after expiration of period for filing notice; appeal dismissed)

Licensed attorney is presumed authorized to appear for any person whom he or she professes to represent. Turner v. Caruthers (1861) 17 Cal. 431, 432-433 ; Kraus v. Walt Disney Productions (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 736, 741-742, 34

[f] Signing of Pleadings and Papers

Plaintiff who obtains dismissal on basis of stipulation signed by himself only, not by his attorney of record, is entitled to have trial court set aside judgment of dismissal on motion properly made through his attorney. Toy v. Haskell (1900) 128 Cal. 558, 560, 61 P. 89

Defendant who has appeared by attorney in an action is required to answer by pleading signed by attorney, not by defendant, absent evidence in record that attorney has been discharged. Crane v. Crane (1898) 121 Cal. 99, 100, 53 P. 433 (appearance by attorney on demurrer; answer signed only by defendant unacceptable)

Notice of motion for new trial must be signed by attorney of record; notice signed by other attorney not properly substituted ground for denying motion. McMahon v. Thomas (1896) 114 Cal. 588, 591, 46 P. 732

Issuance of writ of execution is not dependent on request by judgment creditor's attorney; party himself entitled to apply for issuance. Jones v. Spears (1880) 56 Cal. 163, 165

Stipulation signed by party who has attorney of record is to be disregarded by court, even though attorney was unable to sign it because of temporary absence. Mott v. Foster (1872) 45 Cal. 72, 72-73

[6] Fee Agreements

Modifications to a contingency fee contract must comply with Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147. Stroud v. Tunzi (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 377, 382-383, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 756

Negotiation of fee agreement between attorney and client at arms-length gives client no cause to complain, even if terms negotiated by attorney are favorable to attorney. Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 913, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554

Attorney was entitled to negotiate conditions under which he would continue to represent client, and for client's consent to terms of supplemental fee agreement. Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 914-916, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554

[7] Fee Splitting

Fee splitting arrangement between attorneys who are not partners or associates of each other, or are not shareholders in the same law firm is unenforceable absent strict compliance with Cal. Rule Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200. Chambers v. Kay (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 142, 148, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 (neither attorney obtained the client's written consent to the fee division arrangement)

Assignment between attorney and laypersons, clients, of interests in attorney's fee allowed to clients under statute is not an unlawful fee splitting agreement. Los Angeles v. Knapp (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 168, 171-172, 60 P.2d 127 (fees allowed to client defendant in condemnation action voluntarily dismissed; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1268.510-1268.620)

Cal. Rule Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 requires that the client's consent to a division of fees be given prior to the actual division of the fees; it does not require client consent prior to the commencement of work by the associated in attorney. Cohen v. Brown (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 302, 320 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 24

Attorneys' failure to fully disclose fee-splitting agreement to court when they petitioned for approval of class action settlement bars enforcement of agreement. Mark v. Spencer (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 219, 225-227, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569

Cal. Rule Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200 was inapplicable to law firm's partnership agreement requiring former partner to pay firm 25 percent of revenues for services rendered to firm's clients who had followed partner when he departed during the 24 months following former partner's departure from firm. Anderson, McPharlin & Connors v. Yee (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 129, 132-135, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 627

Under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200, client's written consent must be obtained prior to actual division of fees, not before lawyers enter into fee-splitting arrangement. Mink v. Maccabee (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 835, 838, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 486

Under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-320(A), contract between lawyer and nonlawyer for fee-splitting is void and unenforceable when both are aware of contract's illegality. McIntosh v. Mills (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 333, 349-350, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66

Two attorney shareholders of dissolved law corporation are entitled to share equally in fees received in all pending cases of corporation on date of dissolution. Rothman v. Dolin (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 755, 757-759, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 571

Agreement between discharged attorney and substituted attorney for splitting of fee was contrary to public policy and void when agreement was made after discharged attorney refused to turn over files or to execute substitution of attorney. Kallen v. Delug (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 940, 951, 203 Cal. Rptr. 879

Fee splitting arrangement between attorneys for referral of case was not contrary to public policy and enforceable by court if legal when entered into. Moran v. Harris (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 913, 916, 920-922, 182 Cal. Rptr. 519

Order apportioning fees is an appealable order under former Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(b) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1(a)(2)) after final judgment. Breckler v. Thaler (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 189, 193, 151 Cal. Rptr. 50

Interpretation of agreement between law partners on withdrawal of one partner from partnership. Dunne & Gaston v. Keltner (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 560, 564-565, 123 Cal. Rptr. 430 (see dissenting opinion for discussion of requirements in referral fee arrangements)

Fee splitting arrangement between local bar association and attorney to whom it referred client was not illegal. Emmons, Williams, Mires & Leech v. State Bar (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 565, 573-575, 86 Cal. Rptr. 367 (judgment in favor of bar association for one third of $48,000 fee affirmed)

[8] No Due Process Right to Competent Representation in Civil Action

In civil proceeding, due process does not guarantee right of competent representation; inadequate representation on part of retained counsel is not attributable to state. Kim v. Orellana (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1027, 193 Cal. Rptr. 827

[9] Ratification of Unauthorized Acts

Ratification by client of unauthorized acts of attorney. Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 703, 97 Cal.

Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637 ; Lazarus v. Titmus (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1242, 1247-1249, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 676 ; Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 ; Moving Picture etc. Union v. Glasgow Theaters, Inc. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 395, 403, 86 Cal. Rptr. 33

[10] Receipt of Money or Property for Client

Attorney who has authority to settle or collect claim also has authority to receive payment in money; payment to attorney discharges claim even though attorney subsequently absconds with money. Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 705, 97 Cal. Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637 ; Ely v. Liscomb (1914) 24 Cal. App. 224, 228, 140 P. 1086 ; see also Minor v. Minor (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 118, 126, 7 Cal. Rptr. 455

Authority of attorney to receive full payment of judgment and to acknowledge satisfaction [Code Civ. Proc. § 283(2)]; presumption that attorney performed duty and received full amount of judgment before filing satisfaction of judgment. Wherry v. Rambo (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 569, 571-572, 218 P.2d 142

Authority of attorney to receive property claimed in suit for claim and delivery; authority not limited by Code Civ. Proc. § 283(2) to receiving money on client's behalf. Ely v. Liscomb (1914) 24 Cal. App. 224, 228, 140 P. 1086

[11] Solicitation

Trial court properly enjoined attorney from mailing to public solicitations concerning homestead declarations without complying with Bus. & Prof. Code § 17537.6. People v. Morse (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 259, 269-270, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 816

E. Terminating The Attorney-Client Relationship

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.592

§ 72.592 Decisions

[1] Death or Incapacity of Client

Attorney loses authority to represent client on learning of incompetency of client. Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 192, 244 P. 343

Authority of attorney necessarily ceases with death of client. Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 528

[2] Discharge of Attorney

Code Civ. Proc. § 284 gives clients, beyond context of litigation, absolute power to discharge attorney, with or without cause. Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 555, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142

Right of client to discharge attorney at any time, with or without cause, and without incurring liability for breach of contract. Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790-791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9

Attorney's interest in counsel fees that client may be entitled to have awarded does not entitle attorney to prevent substitution. Meadow v. Superior Court (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 610, 617, 30 Cal. Rptr. 824, 381 P.2d 648

Attorney not subject to discharge when attorney has power coupled with interest in subject matter of litigation. Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 372, 90 P.2d 63 (dictum); Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 531, 271 P. 906 (dictum); Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 593, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45

Good cause for discharge of attorney consists of conduct seriously affronting dignity of profession respecting subject of employment, and improprieties clearly inconsistent with faithful, proper, and dignified discharge of duties as attorney and officer of court. Zurich G. A. & L. Ins. Co., Ltd. v. Kinsler (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 98, 102, 81 P.2d 913

Party's right to change attorney under Code Civ. Proc. § 284 at any time exists despite existence of contingent fee agreement or irrevocable power of attorney, and despite fact attorney has performed labor and expended money for and in behalf of client. Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 714, 36 P.2d 1069 (dictum); Gage v. Atwater (1902) 136 Cal. 170, 172-173, 68 P. 581

Clients have absolute power to discharge an attorney, with or without cause. Jones & Matson v. Hall (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1596, 1610, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872

Until client who is represented by attorney discharges attorney, court in civil case is not required to hear directly from client. In re Marriage of Lemen (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 769, 785, 170 Cal. Rptr. 642

[3] Removal of Attorney by Court

[a] In General

Vicarious disqualification of law firm does not automatically follow upon the personal disqualification of a former settlement judge, who has become a partner in the law firm, where timely and effective screening mechanisms have been created within law firm. In re County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 990, 997

Court is without authority to compel retained attorney to withdraw contrary to client's consent. Ingram v. Justice Court (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 832, 840, 73 Cal. Rptr. 410, 447 P.2d 650 ; Cloer v. Superior Court (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 143, 145-146, 76 Cal. Rptr. 217

Court is authorized, if satisfied attorney has acted for one party in former trial of cause, to prohibit attorney from acting for adverse party in later trial of same cause. Weidekind v. Water Co. (1887) 74 Cal. 386, 388, 19 P. 173

Lawyer is not disqualified solely because spouse worked for disqualified attorney's firm. Derivi Construction & Architecture, Inc. v. Wong (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1276, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329

Representation of multiple parties with potentially adverse interests by public, nonprofit corporation created to provide legal services in dependency court does not create conflict of interest within corporation and among its attorneys. Castro v. Los Angeles County Bd. of Supervisors (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1439-1446, 284 Cal. Rptr. 154

Superior court, acting on disqualification motion, lacks jurisdiction to disqualify law firm from representing party in related litigation in different superior court. In re Complex Asbestos Litigation (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 572, 600-601, 283 Cal. Rptr. 732

Recusal of entire law firm because of associate's previous activity as judicial officer who had heard earlier proceedings in action is not required if law firm screens associate from participation in matter so as to avoid appearance of impropriety. Higdon v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 1680, 278 Cal. Rptr. 588

Trial court's disqualification of attorney for conflict of interest was reversible error when defendant's delay in bringing motion to disqualify was so unreasonable and resulting prejudice so great that there was implied waiver of right to disqualify plaintiff's attorney; implied waiver of objection extends to cocounsel of disqualified attorney. River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33

Reservation of rights of noncoverage by plaintiff's insurer in undertaking to represent defendant, as driver of plaintiff's automobile, does not create conflict of interest justifying removal of insurer's attorney when reservation is based on issue extrinsic from defendant's liability for plaintiff's injuries. McGee v. Superior Court (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 221, 227-228, 221 Cal. Rptr. 421

Trial court in civil case is authorized to order disqualification of counsel when necessary for furtherance of justice, but court must weigh combined effect of party's right to counsel of choice, attorney's interest in representing client, financial burden on client of replacing disqualified counsel, and any tactical abuse underlying disqualification against principle favoring vigorous representation of parties by independent counsel unencumbered by conflicts of interest. William H. Raley Co. v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1042, 1048, 197 Cal. Rptr. 232

[b] Attorney as Trial Witness

Trial court retains discretion to order withdrawal of attorney serving as witness for plaintiffs in class action, despite amendment to former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-111(A)(4) (amendment allowed continued representation with client consent; now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-210), because of difficulty in literally applying amendment to class actions. Reich v. Club Universe (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 965, 972-973, 178 Cal. Rptr. 473

Trial court did not abuse discretion by disqualifying law firm on ground that attorneys were to be witnesses for client without weighing equities or noting amendment in governing former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-111(A)(4) (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 5-210). Lyle v. Superior Court (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 470, 479, 482-483, 175 Cal. Rptr. 918

Trial court was not authorized to order withdrawal on ground that attorney may be called as witness other than on behalf of client without showing that client will be prejudiced by testimony. Graphic Process Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 43, 50-52, 156 Cal. Rptr. 841

[c] Attorney Received Confidential Information

When a law firm retains an expert witness who was interviewed previously by opposing counsel and exposed to the opposing side's confidential information, a rebuttable presumption arises that the expert disclosed that confidential information to the law firm that subsequently hired the expert witness; however, the presumption does not apply when the expert witness remains a consultant for and in the employ of the party that originally retained the expert. Shandralina G. v. Homonchuk (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 395, 412-417, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 207

Attorney representing in-house counsel against her former client-employer was not disqualified for learning underlying confidences from in-house counsel. Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906

Law firm retained by defendant was disqualified for having retained as expert witness accounting firm previously interviewed by plaintiff's attorneys for same lawsuit and to which plaintiff's attorneys had imparted confidential information before deciding not to retain firm as expert witness. Shadow Traffic Network v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 1078-1088, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693

Attorney is disqualified if he or she becomes privy to opposing attorney's work product after discussing case with expert who had been withdrawn as opposing party's expert, but who remained as consultant for opposing party. County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 647, 657-658, 271 Cal. Rptr. 698

Disqualification of plaintiff's counsel, who had formerly been associated with law firm that had represented another person who also was suing defendant, was unwarranted when employment raised no present danger of continued disclosure of confidential information and when disqualification would not solve any perceived problem concerning other lawsuit. Bell v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 194, 198-199, 260 Cal. Rptr. 459

Disqualification of entire law firm was required when partner of firm was disqualified from representing client because of prior receipt of confidential information from adverse party and partner's firm made no attempt to screen partner from litigation. Klein v. Superior Court (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 894, 913-914, 244 Cal. Rptr. 226

Attorney was not disqualified from case when there was no evidence that while he was state employee he had responsibility or acquired confidential information on case in question, and when firm took measures to screen him from case. Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 902, 175 Cal. Rptr. 575

[d] Ex Parte Communication With Represented Adverse Party

Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, does not bar attorney from communicating directly with opposing party not represented by counsel of record, even if unrepresented party seeks advice from counsel who is not of record. McMillan v. Shadow Ridge at Oak Park Homeowner's Association (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965-968, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550

Trial court has authority to order disqualification of attorney for violation of former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 7-103 (former rule prohibiting attorney from communicating ex parte with represented adverse party; now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100), but was not authorized to disqualify attorney's entire law firm. Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 131-133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; Chronometrics, Inc. v. Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 607-608, 168 Cal. Rptr. 196

[e] Tort Liability for Unsuccessful Disqualification Motion

Motion to disqualify attorney for adverse party is insufficient basis for malicious prosecution action. Silver v. Gold (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 17, 23, 259 Cal. Rptr. 185

Motion to disqualify attorney for adverse party will not support claim of abuse of process when plaintiff fails to show that movant committed unauthorized or wrongful act. Silver v. Gold (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 17, 24-25, 259 Cal. Rptr. 185

[4] Substitution

[a] In General

Party is entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 284 to change attorney, whether engaged by party or appointed by court, and court is bound to order substitution on party's request. Woodbury v. Nevada Etc. Ry. Co. (1898) 121 Cal. 165, 166, 53 P. 450 ; Lee v. Superior Court (1896) 112 Cal. 354, 355, 44 P. 666

Local rule conferring authority on court in civil case to refuse to accept consensual substitution of attorneys is inconsistent with Code Civ. Proc. § 284(1) and void. Hock v. Superior Court (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 670, 673-674, 270 Cal. Rptr. 579

Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 286, in case in which attorney has apparently ceased to act as such, as applying only when attorney has died or ceased to be an attorney, not when he or she has ceased to act for client in a particular matter. Gion v. Stroud (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 277, 279, 12 Cal. Rptr. 540 (dictum explaining De Recat Corp. v. Dunn (1926) 197 Cal. 787, 242 P. 936)

Order granting substitution of attorneys as not appealable by discharged attorney who has no power coupled with interest. People v. Metrim Corp. (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 289, 295, 9 Cal. Rptr. 584

Main purpose for statutory procedure for substitution of attorney as that both court and opposing counsel may thereby know that they are dealing with attorney having power to bind party whom he purports to represent. Carrara v. Carrara (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 59, 62, 262 P.2d 591

Party appearing in propria persona as entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 284 to substitute attorney to appear for party. Warden v. Lamb (1929) 98 Cal. App. 738, 742, 277 P. 867

[b] Defective Substitution

Corporation as bound by notices served on it after notice of substitution by which corporation displaced attorney and appeared in propria persona, notwithstanding substitution is invalid for lack of capacity by corporation to appear in propria persona. Johnson v. Hayes Cal Builders, Inc. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 572, 577, 35 Cal. Rptr. 618, 387 P.2d 394

Party's failure to follow statutory procedure for substitution of attorney as subject to waiver by adverse party. Reynolds v. Reynolds (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 580, 585, 134 P.2d 251

Party who obtains substitution and then proceeds in action under new attorney as precluded thereafter from challenging validity of substitution order and having proceedings under new attorney set aside, even if order is invalid for lack of notice to original attorney. Gill v. Southern Pac. Co. (1916) 174 Cal. 84, 87, 161 P. 1153

Irregularity in substitution as not giving ground for complaint by party who in fact knew of substitution and acted consistently with that knowledge. Withers v. Little (1880) 56 Cal. 370, 372 ; Carrara v. Carrara (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 59, 62-63, 262 P.2d 591

Lack of formal substitution by party's new attorney prior to new attorney's filing and service of amended complaint as not making service of process with respect to such complaint invalid. Baker v. Boxx (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1303, 1308-1312, 277 Cal. Rptr. 409

Trial court as not abusing discretion in recognizing plaintiff's attorney despite failure to file formal substitution after split of law firm when defendant was not misled or prejudiced; objection as waived by appearance in response to attorney's notice of motion and proceeding to argue merits. Crocker National Bank v. O'Donnell (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 264, 268-269, 171 Cal. Rptr. 225

Procedural irregularity in substitution as not depriving court of jurisdiction in proceedings conducted by improperly substituted attorney. Carrara v. Carrara (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 59, 62, 262 P.2d 591

[c] Notice of Substitution

Attorney for party seeking substitution as only person entitled to notice of motion; attorney as entitled to object to substitution and have it set aside if obtained without due notice. Gill v. Southern Pac. Co. (1916) 174 Cal. 84, 87, 161 P. 1153 (suggesting that adverse party might also have substitution set aside on learning of lack of proper notice)

Language of Code Civ. Proc. § 285 that party must recognize adversary's former attorney until notified of substitution as not mandatory; defects in substitution procedure, including irregular notice or lack of notice, as subject to waiver; waiver as inferrable from party's actions. Livermore v. Webb (1880) 56 Cal. 489, 490 (acknowledgment of service of notice of appeal)

[d] Pending Appeal

Party as entitled to seek, and appellate court as authorized to order, substitution of attorney in pending appeal; such substitution as not effective as to matters pending in trial court. Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 717, 36 P.2d 1069 (scope of appellate court's order of substitution); Jacobus v. Jacobus (1929) 208 Cal. 562, 563, 282 P. 796 (trial court as lacking authority to substitute when appeal perfected)

[e] Power of Substituted Attorney

Attorney who is substituted for another as having no greater rights than predecessor; client's position as unchanged by substitution; substituted attorney as stepping into place of predecessor and as standing, with reference to case and other party, precisely as predecessor stood, and as able to repudiate or be relieved from agreement made by client only to same extent and in same manner as predecessor could. Smith v. Whittier (1892) 95 Cal. 279, 289, 30 P. 529

[5] Withdrawal

Attorney as having duty to client and to administration of justice to assume responsibility for effectuating consensual withdrawal and for presenting withdrawal to courts. In re Hickey (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 571, 580, 268 Cal. Rptr. 170, 788 P.2d 684

Requirement that attorney take steps to avoid prejudice to client prior to withdrawing, and to return all papers and properties to client, as applying when attorney ceases to provide services, even absent formation of intent to withdraw as counsel for client. Baker v. State Bar (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 804, 817 n.5, 263 Cal. Rptr. 798, 781 P.2d 1344

Attorney of record as not allowed to withdraw from representing party in pending litigation without leave of court. De Recat Corp. v. Dunn (1926) 197 Cal. 787, 791, 242 P. 936 (dictum)

Attorney is entitled to withdraw from case if withdrawal can be accomplished without undue prejudice to client's interests; attorney was entitled to withdraw from representing plaintiff after trial and before prosecuting appeal. Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 914-916

When attorney has filed brief in reviewing court, subsequent order by superior court directing attorney's withdrawal as insufficient, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.36, to also effect attorney's withdrawal in reviewing court. Optical Surplus, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 776, 780 n.2, 279 Cal. Rptr. 194

Attorney as having obligation to withdraw from case if client insists that attorney engage in bad faith litigation tactics or actions. Young v. Rosenthal(1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 127-128 . 260 Cal. Rptr. 369 , cert. denied, 108 L. Ed. 2d 941 (1990)

Attorney who voluntarily abandons contingent fee case without justifiable cause as not entitled to recover reasonable value of his or her services if client ultimately recovers in litigation. Estate of Falco (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1018-1020, 233 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Hensel v. Cohen (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 563, 564, 567-568, 202 Cal. Rptr. 85

Absent provision for payment of money, order ruling on attorney's motion to withdraw as nonappealable interim order reviewable only by way of petition for extraordinary writ, unless order provides for payment of money. Messih v. Lee Drug, Inc. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 312, 315, 220 Cal. Rptr. 43

Attorney as required to withdraw from representation of client who instructs attorney to pursue appeal that is frivolous or taken for purpose of delay. Cosenza v. Kramer (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1100, 1103, 200 Cal. Rptr. 18

Failure or refusal of client to pay or secure proper fees or expenses of attorney after being reasonably requested to do so as ground for attorney's withdrawal from case. People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406-407, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197

Attorney as prohibited from withdrawing as counsel for one of two clients with conflicting interests, rather than from case altogether, when conflict existed at beginning of proceedings and court finds events during proceedings have created no new conflict. Hodcarriers etc. Local Union v. Miller (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395, 52 Cal. Rptr. 251

Attorney as entitled to withdraw from case when client suspects and questions attorney's good faith, unless continuing representation compelled for good reason; court as authorized in appropriate case to condition withdrawal on waiver of compensation. Heple v. Kluge (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 461, 462, 231 P.2d 505

Attorney as generally allowed to withdraw from representing party in pending litigation but, since attorney is an officer of the court, as not allowed to withdraw when withdrawal would work injustice on third party. Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 725, 250 P. 880

Client's refusal to consent to increase in attorney's fee as insufficient excuse for attorney's refusal to proceed further in action and as not cause for allowing attorney to withdraw. Cassel v. Gregori (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 769, 771

§ 72.613 Decisions

[1] Account Stated

Attorney's bill for services as proper subject of account stated, but client's lack of objection to account on rendering as not creating liability where none existed before. Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 25-26, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 (dictum reporting rule)

[2] Arbitration

MFAA does not limit the ability of attorneys and clients to enter into binding contractual arbitration. Schatz v. Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 557, 564-575, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700, 198 P.3d 1109

If a party rejects an arbitration award by filing a request for a trial de novo, the party effectively repudiates that rejection by causing or permitting the action to be dismissed. Perez v. Grajales (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 596-603, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 784

When individual other than client agreed to be responsible for payment of attorney's fees or costs, notice under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201(a) must given to that individual. Wagner v. Mirzayance (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1187, 1190-1191, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 661

Statutory scheme created by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. cannot be contravened by private agreement between attorney and client to conduct their fee arbitration in outside forum, such as American Arbitration Association. Alternative Systems, Inc. v. Carey (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1034, 1041-1042, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567

Affirmance of trial court's judgment confirming arbitration award is, in effect, confirmance of arbitration award by appellate court so that attorney's fees may be awarded under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(c). Pacific Law Group: USA v. Gibson (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 577, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878

Client's filing of malpractice action within 30 days of notice of arbitration award is insufficient to constitute timely request for trial de novo under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(c) if malpractice complaint does not disclose intention to challenge arbitration award; relation back doctrine is inapplicable if client later amends complaint, after elapse of 30-day period, to include declaratory relief action regarding right to trial de novo. Shiver, McGrane & Martin v. Littell (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1041, 1045, 1047, 266 Cal. Rptr. 298

Nonbinding arbitration award is binding unless party seeks trial within 30 days of mailing of notice of award; if trial sought, limitation period for correcting award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.2 is tolled until plenary action resolved. Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 993-994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233

Purpose of mandatory fee arbitration to alleviate disparity in bargaining power is not defeated by trial court's refusal to terminate arbitration procedures. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney v. Lawrence (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1174-1175, 199 Cal. Rptr. 246

Trial court is within its discretion in deciding that party waived its right to return to trial court prior to end of arbitration, notwithstanding allegation of new cause of action. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney v. Lawrence (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1173-1174, 199 Cal. Rptr. 246

Arbitration panel has authority to determine jurisdiction, including decision concerning whether mandatory proceeding to determine fee dispute is terminated. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney v. Lawrence (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1165, 1171, 199 Cal. Rptr. 246

[3] Confession of Judgment

Use of confession of judgment by attorney to collect fees for legal services is improper. Hulland v. State Bar (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 440, 450, 105 Cal. Rptr. 152, 503 P.2d 608 (disciplinary action in which it was shown that attorney willfully failed to perform legal services for which he was retained and for which confession of judgment was executed)

[4] Contract for Employment

Reasonableness of fee agreement is to be judged not by hindsight but by situation as it appeared to parties when contract was made. Setzer v. Robinson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 213, 218, 18 Cal. Rptr. 524, 368 P.2d 124

Contract of employment drawn by attorney is construable strongly against attorney. Bennett v. Potter (1919) 180 Cal. 736, 740, 183 P. 156

Attorney who agreed that client will fix amount of fee is not entitled to sue for compensation in quantum meruit but required to stand on contract and allege either client repudiated contract or refused to perform obligation to fix fee. Roche v. Baldwin (1902) 135 Cal. 522, 525, 67 P. 903 ; Goldberg v. City of Santa Clara (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 857, 861, 98 Cal. Rptr. 862 (recognizing rule but holding facts did not show any agreement)

Attorney is required to abide by fee agreement and is not permitted to ignore contract price and sue for value of services. Reynolds v. Sorosis Fruit Company (1901) 133 Cal. 625, 630, 66 P. 21

Agreement for conveyance of one half of recovered lands as attorney's fee was not void; attorney was equitable owner of one half of all lands recovered; client was trustee for attorney for one half of settlement fund when client secretly compromised recovery action for payment of money. Hoffman v. Vallejo (1873) 45 Cal. 564, 572

Remaindermen who were children of deceased successful will contestant are not contractually liable for attorney's fees since they were not third party beneficiaries of contingent fee contract between attorneys and contestant. Estate of Ott (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 605, 612, 160 Cal. Rptr. 402

Contract to render legal services on behalf of minority shareholder and director in proxy fight by former counsel for corporation who holds corporate confidences and secrets that are relevant to proxy fight is illegal and void. Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 617, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253

Client is bound by fee stipulated in employment contract even if services prove to be less valuable than parties had in mind when contract was made. Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 637, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144

Attorney is entitled to bring action for amount of fee agreed on when measure of compensation is fixed by agreement. Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 577, 222 P.2d 314

[5] Financing of Lawsuit by Third-Party Investor

When plaintiff has entered agreement with third-party investors under which investors will finance plaintiff's lawsuit and share in plaintiff's recovery, defendant lacks standing to object to agreement on public policy grounds in underlying action when financing agreement was unrelated to underlying action; trial court lacks authority to void plaintiff's third-party financing agreement on defendant's motion in underlying action. Killian v. Millard (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1601, 1605-1607, 279 Cal. Rptr. 877

[6] Insolvency of Client

Attorney who is entitled to receive reasonable fee is allowed to take conveyance of client's property in controversy, when client has no other property, even though conveyance may render client insolvent. Hedden v. Waldeck (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 631, 638-639, 72 P.2d 114 ; see Hibernia Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Belcher (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 268, 273-274, 48 P.2d 681 (assignment of rents to pay fee upheld although client rendered insolvent)

[7] Interference With Contract

Attorney has cause of action against third person who intentionally interferes with contingent fee contractual relationship between client and attorney by unlawful means or by lawful means but without sufficient justification. Herron v. State Farm Mutual Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 202, 205-206, 14 Cal. Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310

Attorney whose client was induced unlawfully by third party to breach contractual obligation to pay attorney contingent fee is entitled to sue interfering party for damages without suing client for breach of contract. Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 857, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556

Notice of percentage constituting attorney's contingent fee is not necessary to establish cause of action against third party based on unlawful interference with contractual relationship when third party had notice that contingent fee contract existed. Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 859, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556

Client's absolute right to terminate attorney-client relationship at any time does not justify third party's inducing client not to pay contingent fee that has been earned. Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 862, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556

Damages in attorney's action against third party based on unlawful interference with contractual relationship need not be measured exactly by contingent fee that client was unlawfully induced not to pay; verdict for damages reasonable close to exact fee is proper. Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 866, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556 (fee $2,491.65, verdict $2,500 upheld)

[8] Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

Insurer and attorneys retained to defend insured are liable for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage of insured's discharged attorney where, after receiving notice of contractual lien for attorney fees and costs filed in case by discharged attorney, they pay over settlement or judgment funds to attorney's former client and client's new attorney with knowledge of lien. Levin v. Gulf Ins. Group (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287-1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228

[9] Intervention

Attorney is authorized to intervene in client's action, to settle dispute over fee, only when employment contract gives attorney specific present interest in subject matter of action that might be jeopardized by discharge. Kelly v. Smith (1928) 204 Cal. 496, 500, 268 P. 1057 ; Hendricks v. Superior Court (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 586, 588-589, 17 Cal. Rptr. 364

Attorney's compensation from client must be sought in independent action against client and not by application to court in which client's litigation is pending. Hendricks v. Superior Court (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 586, 589, 17 Cal. Rptr. 364

[10] Lien

Contract provision giving attorney lien on client's claim of a share in decedent's estate or any sum recovered by settlement establishes lien on estate assets when claim vindicated. Estate of Kerr (1966) 63 Cal. 2d 875, 48 Cal. Rptr. 707, 409 P.2d 931 (client was sole beneficiary)

Attorney's lien under contingent fee contract is security interest in proceeds of litigation and equitable right to have fees and costs due him or her for services in lawsuit secured to him or her out of judgment or recovery. Isrin v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 153, 158-159, 45 Cal. Rptr. 320, 403 P.2d 728 (dictum reporting rule)

Lien for payment of fees out of proceeds of judgment may be created by agreement between attorney and client. Haupt v. Charlie's Kosher Market (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 843, 845, 112 P.2d 627

Attorney does not have lien for compensation in absence of agreement with client. Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 373, 90 P.2d 63

Attorney's lien has priority over medical lien, regardless of which lien was first in time. Gilman v. Dalby (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 606, 616-620, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 231

Insurer and attorneys retained to defend insured are liable for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage of insured's discharged attorney where, after receiving notice of contractual lien for attorney fees and costs filed in case by discharged attorney, they pay over settlement or judgment funds to attorney's former client and client's new attorney with knowledge of lien. Levin v. Gulf Ins. Group (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228

Attorneys' contractual lien on settlement proceeds from tort claim is not governed by Article 9 of Uniform Commercial Code. Bluxome Street Associates v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1155-1156, 254 Cal. Rptr. 198

Contractual lien for attorney's fees and costs entered into prior to initiating legal action has priority over judgment creditor's lien created pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.410; fact that purpose of judgment creditor's lien was to reimburse state government for paying out client's child support arrearages does not justify new exception to "first in time, first in right" rule set forth in Civ. Code § 2897. Cappa v. F & K Rock & Sand, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 172, 175-176, 249 Cal. Rptr. 718

Attorney does not have standing to appeal judgment purporting to rule on attorney's Notice of Attorney's Lien when notice was filed in underlying action to which attorney was not a party. In re Marriage of Tushinsky (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 136, 143, 249 Cal. Rptr. 611

Associate attorney as not entitled to lien on any recovery from plaintiff based on attorney's agreement between associate and plaintiff's attorney for work on plaintiff's case. Trimble v. Steinfeldt (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 646, 650-651, 224 Cal. Rptr. 195

Although attorney's lien on client's recovery has priority over federal tax liens pursuant to I.R.C. § 6323(b)(8), court as properly refusing to uphold attorney's lien against judgment debtor when attorney failed to give judgment debtor sufficient notice of his lien before judgment debtor paid amount of judgment to Internal Revenue Service in response to government's tax levy. Bree v. Beall (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 650, 659-661, 171 Cal. Rptr. 73

Contingent fee contract containing no words as to lien, security, or assignment as not creating, as a matter of law, lien securing attorney's fees; question whether such contract creates a lien as one of fact depending on intention of parties. Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v. Shivener (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 364, 370, 105 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Wagner v. Sariotti (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 693, 697, 133 P.2d 430

Contingent fee agreement as sufficient to create lien on recovery in favor of attorney if fee is percentage of fund recovered, rather than percentage of amount (i.e., judgment) recovered. Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 865, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556 (dictum)

[11] Negligence

Effect of attorney's negligence on right to compensation and measure thereof. Estate of Kruger (1900) 130 Cal. 621, 626, 63 P. 31

Except for additur, recovery of attorney's fees as part of damages as unavailable after plaintiff stipulated that prevailing party should recover reasonable attorney's fees but failed to provide instructions and a form of verdict that would have assisted jury and jury's verdict did not include attorney's fees. Clark Equipment Co. v. Mastelotto, Inc. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 88, 98-99, 150 Cal. Rptr. 797

[12] Out-of-State Attorney

Practice before federal courts is not governed by state court rules and, as such, bankruptcy attorney admitted before federal district court could not be denied fees simply because attorney was not licensed to practice in state courts. In re Poole (9th Cir. 2000) 222 F.3d 618, 622

Attorney licensed in another state but not licensed in California who comes to California to advise client, but not to represent him, in bankruptcy proceeding pending in federal court in California, as not subject to regulation under State Bar Act in so doing and as entitled to recover from client, on basis of implied agreement to pay fee, reasonable value of his services rendered to client in California. Cowen v. Calabrese (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 870, 872-873, 41 Cal. Rptr. 441

[13] Pleading

Complaint in quantum meruit by discharged attorney as not required to allege contract, repudiation or rescission, but required simply to allege common count. Oliver v. Campbell (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 298, 305, 273 P.2d 15 (dictum in action by attorney to collect fee after discharge)

Award of attorney's fees in connection with petition for family allowance out of decedent's estate on behalf of minor child as proper. Estate of Filtzer (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 776, 781-782, 205 P.2d 377

Probate court as not authorized in absence of express statutory provision to order executors of decedent's estate to pay successful will contestant's attorney's fees out of contestant's distributive share; contestant who is beneficiary of testamentary trust as having no interest subject to lien for attorney's fees. Estate of Muhammad (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 726, 731-733, 94 Cal. Rptr. 856

Propriety of award of attorney's fees on petition for family allowance on behalf of minor child. Estate of Barkdull (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 729, 731, 80 Cal. Rptr. 317

[14] Reasonable Value

Attorney as entitled to reasonable value of services when fee agreement is invalid. Calvert v. Stoner (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 97, 105, 199 P.2d 297 (dictum)

Attorney as entitled to recover reasonable value of services rendered when contract of employment lacks any provision by which to measure compensation. Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549, 282 P. 791

Trial judge as empowered to use own experience and judgment concerning reasonable value of legal services with or without aid of testimony as to value. Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549-550, 282 P. 791 ; Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 241, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897

Minor client as entitled to disaffirm contract of employment with attorney on payment of reasonable value of services rendered to date of disaffirmance. Spencer v. Collins (1909) 156 Cal. 298, 308, 104 P. 320

Assignment by criminal defendant to attorney of all money and property seized by law enforcement officers after arrest as presumptively fraudulent when value of assignment was in excess of $200,000 and Franchise Tax Board and district attorney held claims against property. Franchise Tax Board v. Superior Court (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 970, 975, 215 Cal. Rptr. 36

Major factors to be considered in determining reasonableness of attorney's fees. Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 241, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897

Fixing of amount of allowable attorney's fees as resting in sound discretion of trial court. Kanner v. Globe Bottling Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 559, 569, 78 Cal. Rptr. 25 ; Scott v. Travelodge Corp. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 881, 887, 71 Cal. Rptr. 547

[15] Statute of Limitations

When attorney spelled out terms of fee agreement in letter to clients and clients orally accepted terms of agreement, four-year statute of limitations under Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1) as applicable in attorney's subsequent action against clients for breach of agreement. E.O.C. Ord, Inc. v. Kovakovich (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1194, 1199, 246 Cal. Rptr. 456

[16] Trust Funds

Possessory lien for attorney's fees, if such exists in California, as not attaching to property coming into attorney's hands as trustee. Hulland v. State Bar (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 440, 447, 105 Cal. Rptr. 152, 503 P.2d 608

Attorney as not permitted to unilaterally determine fee for services and withdraw such from trust funds held for client without showing that transaction is fair and regular and is agreed to by client voluntarily and with full knowledge of facts. Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 28, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648

[17] Undue Influence

Presumption of undue influence by attorney applicable to contracts with client securing attorney advantage from client, as not applicable to employment contract for services and compensation; confidential relationship as not existing until after such contract is made. Cooley v. Miller & Lux (1909) 156 Cal. 510, 524, 105 P. 981 ; Berk v. Twentynine Palms Ranchos, Inc. (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 625, 637, 20 Cal. Rptr. 144

Attorney as unable to recover fee from conservator when retainer and services connected with improper influence exerted by friend of conservatee. Conservatorship of Chilton (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41-43, 86 Cal. Rptr. 860

A. Terminating the Attorney-Client Relationship

7-72 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 72.630

§ 72.630 Attorney Withdrawal

Considerations for Attorney Contemplating Rejection or Withdrawal From Case or Employment:

☐ Attorney of record in action or proceeding: written consent filed with court or order based on noticed motion required [see § 72.372[1]].

☐ Attorney in transactional matters: consider whether notice to third parties is necessary in addition to notice to client, e.g., parties to contract or lease, to whom attorney has been identified as client's agent.

☐ Rejection of, or withdrawal from, employment or case should be confirmed by a certified letter to the client, return receipt requested, which should include the following:

- ☐ Clear statement that attorney's law firm is not taking or going to continue representing the client in that case.
- ☐ Statement advising client to seek other legal counsel as soon as possible to pursue his or her rights.
- ☐ Statement advising client of any critical time limits that must be adhered to in order to keep a claim viable.

☐ Avoid stating the exact legal reason for rejecting a claim, or the exacts legal reasons for concluding that the case lacks merit or that certain defendants are not liable.

[1] FORM Written Informed Consent by Former Client to Adverse Representation by Former Attorney [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)]

_____[Name of former client], former client of _____[name of attorney], Attorney, gives his/her informed consent to Attorney for Attorney to _____ [specify action to be taken by attorney that is potentially adverse to former client, e.g., represent _____'s (name of former client) wife in a dissolution action against _____ (name of former client)]. Attorney has fully informed _____[name of former client] of the potentially adverse nature of such representation because of the potential for the disclosure of confidential information concerning _____[name of former client], which was obtained by Attorney while Attorney represented _____[name of former client] [and _____ (name of any other parties represented with former client)], in that Attorney had access to information of a confidential nature by virtue of such representation.

_____[Name of former client] acknowledges that he/she has read the foregoing consent carefully, that he/she fully understands that the contemplated representation of _____[specify party to be represented by attorney] by Attorney is potentially adverse to _____[name of former client] for the foregoing reasons, and _____[name of former client] nevertheless knowingly and voluntarily consents to such representation by Attorney.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature of former client]
_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form of written consent is for use by an attorney to obtain the consent of a former client to a potentially adverse representation by the attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)]. For further discussion of when consent must be obtained, see the Introduction in Subpart E under Rule 3-310(E): Representation Adverse to Present or Former Client When Confidential Information Acquired--Overview of Rule et seq., and in Subpart F under Disclosing and Managing Conflicts Under Rule 3-310(E), above.

[1] FORM Disclosure and Consent to Joint Representation [Cal Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)]--Joint Representation of Defendants

Re: _____[identify lawsuit]

Dear _____[names of all clients]:

You have asked our firm to represent each of you in the lawsuit referenced above. Because we will be representing all of you in this matter, the California Rules of Professional Conduct require that we make certain disclosures to you and obtain your informed written consent to our representation of all of you together.

Absence of Conflicts of Interest. At this stage, it does not appear that there is a conflict of interest that would prevent us from representing you. Each of you shares the same defenses to the claims which have been alleged by the plaintiffs. Nevertheless, it is possible that a conflict of interest could arise in the future which would require us to withdraw.

Request for Common Instructions. One way in which a conflict of interest could occur is if we receive conflicting instructions from you. For example, if one of you instructs us to take certain actions on your behalf which another of you instructs us not to take, we would be placed in a position where we could not follow one of the instructions without violating the other. That situation, if unresolved, could create a conflict of interest that would require each of you to seek new attorneys. It is therefore important that we receive a common set of instructions from you that we can follow so that a conflict of interest does not arise that would require our withdrawal.

Pursuit of Common Objectives. Another way in which a conflict could arise is if in the course of litigation, you develop inconsistent defenses or objectives. For example, if one of you wants us to pursue a defense that could adversely affect the defenses of the rest, a conflict of interest would exist that could require us to withdraw as your counsel. It will therefore be important during the course of our engagement to make sure that we are pursuing common objectives and defenses for all of you so that we will not be required to withdraw later. At the same time, if any of you determine that pursuing a common objective is not in your best interests, we may be required to withdraw from representing you.

Indemnification Rights. You should be aware that each of you may have indemnification rights against the others. Because we are representing your common interest in this lawsuit, we cannot represent or advise you with respect to those claims. We strongly urge you to consult separate counsel with respect to any such claims. To the extent that you choose to assert claims against each other in this lawsuit, we again, may be required to withdraw.

Preventing Potential Conflicts From Becoming Real. At present it does not appear that any of these conflict of interest situations exist. Nevertheless, we cannot rule out the possibility that these conflicts could arise during the course of the representation. Since changing counsel in the midst of litigation can be expensive and detrimental to your interests, it is important that you are comfortable with us representing all of you together in light of these potential conflicts of interest. In addition, we will need you to work with us through the course of the litigation to keep these potential conflicts from becoming real.

Disclosure of Information to All Clients. In addition, because we represent all of you together, each of you has a right to learn the substance of the communications that we have with the rest of you. In other words, if one of you tells us something, that information may be disclosed to the rest of you. Although the attorney-client privilege will bar disclosure of our conversations with any of you to the outside world, the privilege does not bar disclosure to the rest of you of what any one of you tells us. Indeed, if the information is significant, we may have a duty to disclose information from or about one of you to the rest of you.

Comfort Zone. Here again, it is extremely important that you are comfortable with this arrangement. If each of you were separately represented, your lawyers would not be required to disclose your communications with them to the rest of you. Each of you needs to consider whether you will be as candid with us as you would be with a lawyer representing your interests alone. If you believe that you would not be comfortable with this arrangement or that there would be information that you would be unwilling to disclose to us, because you would not want to disclose to the others, you should obtain your own separate counsel.

Access to Case File. As you know, during the course of this lawsuit, we will be maintaining a file which will contain original correspondence, evidence, pleadings and other documentation. In the event we are required to withdraw from representing all of you, we will retain the original file until we receive a common set of instructions to transmit the file somewhere else. At your request, we will provide you or your new counsel with a copy of the file.

Costs and Attorneys Fees. As you know, _____[name of paying client] has agreed to pay our attorneys' fees and costs incurred in defending the rest of you in this action. The California Rules of Professional Conduct require us to obtain consent from the rest of you to this arrangement. The Rules are intended to allow the rest of you to consider whether the fact that _____[name of paying client] is paying our fees will interfere with our ability to represent the rest of you with the same degree of loyalty and independent judgment that you would expect from a lawyer you were paying. In other words, the rest of you should consider whether we would tend to favor the interests of _____[name of paying client] because _____[name of paying client] is paying our fees in this matter. While this risk exists, it is our intention to represent all of you without regard to which of you is paying our fees. Nevertheless, each of you must be comfortable with this arrangement.

Questions. Please forgive the relative length and formality of this letter. However, we want to be certain that you are fully informed about these important issues and that you are comfortable proceeding with our representation of all of you. Please do not hestitate to call if you have any questions about this letter. In addition, if you are having any trouble understanding the nature of the disclosures in this letter, you may want to consult with a separate lawyer.

Informed Consent. Once you had an opportunity to review this letter, kindly sign and date the enclosed copy of this letter where indicated below, and return the signed copy to me in the enclosed self-addressed and stamped envelope. By signing this letter, you are agreeing to our representing all of you jointly in light of the disclosures above.

Thanks for your cooperation in connection with this matter.

[2] Use of Form

This form of disclosure is for use by an attorney to obtain the written consent of a group of defendants to joint representation by the attorney [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)]. The form was provided by Stanley W. Lamport, Esq. Representing joint clients presents unique problems, and the attorney should carefully consider whether or not to do so. For further discussion of the factors involved, and of when consent must be obtained, and what disclosure are required, see §§ 72.111 and 72.132.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action to recover damages, or for injunctive relief, against an attorney who, as a broker for commission, has improperly sold financial products, including long-term insurance, life insurance, and annuities governed by the Insurance Code or its successors, to a client who is an elder or dependent elder in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175. The complaint may allege special physical, emotional or financial damages under the Second Cause of Action.

The complaint contains the following general allegations:

- The plaintiff's residence (Paragraph 1).
- The proper venue for the action, alleging the residence of an individual defendant or the principle place of business of a corporate defendant (Paragraph 3).
- An optional fictitious name allegation for use if multiple defendants are sued and plaintiff is unaware of their names and capacities (Paragraph 4).
- An optional agency allegation for use if multiple defendants are sued and liability is sought to be imposed on the basis of respondeat superior (Paragraph 5).

The complaint specifically alleges the following:

- Plaintiff is an elder or dependent adult as specified in Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175(c) (Paragraph 2).
- Defendant is an attorney at law (Paragraph 3).

- Defendant acted as a broker for a commission in selling plaintiff a financial product covered by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175 for a specific sum, including the plaintiff's commission or fee on the sale (Paragraph 6).

- The transaction or acquisition and the terms of defendant's sale of the financial product to plaintiff were not fair and reasonable to plaintiff, as required by law (Paragraphs 7, 8).

The various alternative versions of Paragraph 8 set forth the specific requirements under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175 that must be met by an attorney in the sale of financial products to elder and dependent elder clients, and specifically allege that those requirements have not been met. The attorney should select and include in the complaint only those requirements the defendant attorney has allegedly breached:

- The first Paragraph 8 specifically alleges that at the time defendant sold a financial product to the plaintiff, the plaintiff did not have, and had not had within the preceding three years, an attorney-client relationship with defendant, as required by law.

- The second Paragraph 8 specifically alleges that at the time defendant sold a financial product to defendant, the defendant did not provide a written disclosure to plaintiff as required by law.

- The third Paragraph 8 specifically alleges that at the time defendant sold a financial product to plaintiff, defendant did not provide, as required by law, a valid written disclosure to plaintiff because the disclosure did not meet one or more of the following legal requirements under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175.3:

  - That the disclosure be a separate document, appropriately entitled, in 12-point print with one inch of space on all borders.

  - That the disclosure be signed by the defendant or the plaintiff or the plaintiff's conservator, guardian, or agent under a valid durable power of attorney.

  - That the disclosure state that the lawyer, the defendant, will receive a commission and set forth the amount of the commission and the actual percentage rate of the commission (if any).

  - That the disclosure include the actual percentage rate of the commission or the alternate basis upon which the commission would be computed, including an example of how the commission would be calculated, where the actual amount of the commission could not be ascertained at the outset of the transaction.

  - That the disclosure identify the source of the commission and the relationship between the source of the commission and the person receiving the commission.

  - That the disclosure be presented to the client at or prior to the time the recommendation of the financial product was made.

  - That the disclosure advise the client, the plaintiff, that he or she could obtain independent advice regarding the purchase of the financial product and would be given a reasonable opportunity to seek that advice.

- That the disclosure contain a statement that the financial product may be returned to the issuing company within 30 days of receipt by the client, the plaintiff, for a refund as set forth in Ins. Code § 10127.10.

- That the disclosure contain a statement that if the purchase of the financial product is for the purposes of Medi-Cal planning, the client has been advised of other appropriate alternatives, including spend-down strategies, and of the possibility of obtaining a fair hearing or obtaining a court order.

- Plaintiff has suffered actual and substantial physical, emotional, or economic damage resulting from the defendant's conduct (Paragraph 9).

- Defendant knew or should have known that his or her conduct was directed to one or more senior citizens or disabled persons (Paragraph 10).

- Defendant's conduct caused one or more senior citizens or disabled persons, including plaintiff, to suffer one or more of the following (Paragraph 11):

  - Loss or encumbrance of a primary residence, principal employment, or source of income.

  - Substantial loss of property set aside for retirement, or for personal or family care and maintenance.

  - Substantial loss of payments received under a pension or retirement plan or a government benefits program.

  - Substantial loss of assets essential to the health or welfare of the senior citizen or disabled person.

- Plaintiff is substantially more vulnerable than other members of the public to the defendant's conduct because of one or more of the following (Paragraph 12):

  - Age

  - Poor health or infirmity

  - Impaired understanding

  - Restricted mobility, or disability.

Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175.4(b), the trier of fact must find that one or more of the factors set forth in Paragraphs 11-13, which restate the factors set forth in Civ. Code § 3345 [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175.4(b)], has occurred to be able to award the plaintiff damages under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6175.4.

[3] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action even for a limited civil case (amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 85.1, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases the caption must state whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000. When a limited civil case is brought in the superior court, the caption must also identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(8), (9)].

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case in the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

ATTORNEY-CLIENT FEE CONTRACT

This ATTORNEY-CLIENT FEE CONTRACT ("Contract") is entered into by and between _____[name of client] ("Client") and _____[name of law firm or attorney] ("Attorney").

1. CONDITIONS. This Contract will not take effect, and Attorney will have no obligation to provide legal services, until Client returns a signed copy of this Contract and pays the deposit called for under Paragraph 4.

2. SCOPE AND DUTIES. Client hires Attorney to provide legal services in connection with _____[describe matter in which attorney is to provide services]. Attorney shall provide those legal services reasonably required to represent Client, and shall take reasonable steps to keep Client informed of progress and to respond to Client's inquiries. Client shall be truthful with Attorney, cooperate with Attorney, keep Attorney informed of developments, abide by this Contract, pay Attorney's bills on time, and keep Attorney advised of Client's address, telephone number, and whereabouts.

[3. INSURANCE DISCLOSURE. Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6148.]

4. DEPOSIT. Client shall deposit $_____ by _____[date]. The sum will be deposited in a trust account to be used to pay _____[costs and expenses only or costs and expenses and fees for legal services]. Client hereby authorizes Attorney to withdraw sums from the trust account to pay the _____[costs and expenses or costs and expenses and fees] Client incurs. Any unused deposit at the conclusion of Attorney's services will be refunded.

5. LEGAL FEES. Client agrees to pay for legal services at the following rates: partners-_____/hour; associates-_____/hour; paralegals-_____/hour; law clerks- _____/hour; and for other personnel as follows, _____[specify rates to be paid to others providing services to client]. Attorney charges in minimum units of _____ hours.

6. COSTS AND EXPENSES. In addition to paying legal fees, Client shall reimburse Attorney for all costs and expenses incurred by Attorney, including but not limited to process servers' fees, fees fixed by law or assessed by courts or other agencies, court reporters' fees, long distance telephone calls, messenger and other delivery fees, postage, in-office photocopying at $_____ per page, parking, mileage at $_____ per mile, investigation expenses, consultants' fees, expert witness fees, and other similar items. Client authorizes Attorney to incur all reasonable costs and to hire any investigators, consultants, or expert witnesses reasonably necessary in Attorney's judgment, unless one or both of the clauses below are initialed by Client and Attorney.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before incurring any cost in excess of $_____.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before retaining outside investigators, consultants, or expert witnesses.

7. STATEMENTS. Attorney shall send Client periodic statements for fees and costs incurred. Client shall pay Attorney's statements within _____ days after each statement's date. Client may request a statement at intervals of no less than 30 days. On Client's request Attorney will provide a statement within 10 days.

8. LIEN. Client hereby grants Attorney a lien on any and all claims or causes of action that are the subject of Attorney's representation under this Contract. Attorney's lien will be for any sums due and owing to Attorney at the conclusion of Attorney's services. The lien will attach to any recovery Client may obtain, whether by arbitration award, judgment, settlement or otherwise.

9. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. Client may discharge Attorney at any time. Attorney may withdraw with Client's consent or for good cause. Good cause includes Client's breach of this Contract, Client's refusal to cooperate with Attorney or to follow Attorney's advice on a material matter, or any other fact or circumstance that would render Attorney's continuing representation unlawful or unethical.

10. CONCLUSION OF SERVICES. When Attorney's services conclude, all unpaid charges shall become immediately due and payable. After Attorney's services conclude, Attorney will, on client's request, deliver Client's file to Client, along with any client funds or property in Attorney's possession.

11. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this Contract and nothing in Attorney's statements to Client will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of Client's matter. Attorney makes no such promises or guarantees. Attorney's comments about the outcome of Client's matter are expressions of opinion only.

12. EFFECTIVE DATE. This Contract will take effect when Client has performed the conditions stated in Paragraph 1, but its effective date will be retroactive to the date Attorney first provided services. The date at the beginning of this Contract is for reference only. Even if this Contract does not take effect, Client will be obligated to pay Attorney the reasonable value of any services Attorney may have performed for Client.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a short hourly fee agreement for use in relatively small, routine litigation matters in which billing will be on an hourly basis. It is adopted from § 72.650 of the Sample Written Fee Agreement Forms approved by the State Bar Board of Governors. Use of the State Bar sample forms is not mandatory, and the forms enjoys no preferred status.

[3] When Written Agreement Is Required

A written agreement must be used when a non-contingency case involves a matter in which it is reasonably foreseeable that the total fees and expenses will exceed $1,000, and the client is not a corporation, under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148. When mandatory, the fee agreement must specify the basis of compensation, including, but not limited to, hourly rates, statutory or flat fees, and other standard rates, fees, and charges applicable to the case [see Paragraphs 5 and 6], the nature of the legal services to be provided [see Paragraph 2], the respective responsibilities of the attorney and client [see Paragraphs 1, 2, 4, 7-12], and if the attorney does not meet the criteria of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)(4), relating to errors and omissions insurance, a statement disclosing that fact [see Optional Paragraph 3; for discussion, see § 72.192[4][b]].

At the time the agreement is entered into, the attorney must provide a duplicate copy of the agreement, signed by both the attorney and the client (or the client's guardian or representative), to the client (or the client's guardian or representative) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148(a)].

For discussion of fee agreements in general, see § 72.192.

For a form of long agreement, see § 72.673. For contingent fee agreements, see §§ 72.675 and 72.676.

Any unused deposit at the conclusion of Attorney's services will be refunded.

5. LEGAL FEES. Client agrees to pay for legal services at the following rates: partners-_____/hour; associates-_____/hour; paralegals-_____/hour; law clerks-_____/hour; and for other personnel as follows, _____[specify rates to be paid to others providing other services to client]. Attorney charges in minimum units of _____ hours.

6. COSTS AND EXPENSES. In addition to paying legal fees, Client shall reimburse Attorney for all costs and expenses incurred by Attorney, including, but not limited to, fees fixed by law or assessed by public agencies, long distance telephone calls, messenger and other delivery fees, postage, in-office photocopying at $_____ per page, parking, mileage at $_____ per mile, investigation expenses, consultants' fees, and other similar items. Client authorizes Attorney to incur all reasonable costs and to hire any investigators or consultants reasonably necessary in Attorney's judgment, unless one or both of the clauses below are initialed by Client and Attorney.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before incurring any cost in excess of $_____.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before retaining outside investigators or consultants.

7. STATEMENTS. Attorney shall send Client periodic statements for fees and costs incurred. Client shall pay Attorney's statements within _____ days after each statement's date. Client may request a statement at intervals of no less than 30 days. On Client's request Attorney will provide a statement within 10 days.

8. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. Client may discharge Attorney at any time. Attorney may withdraw with Client's consent or for good cause. Good cause includes Client's breach of this Contract, Client's refusal to cooperate with Attorney or to follow Attorney's advice on a material matter, or any other fact or circumstance that would render Attorney's continuing representation unlawful or unethical.

9. CONCLUSION OF SERVICES. When Attorney's services conclude, all unpaid charges shall become immediately due and payable. After Attorney's services conclude, Attorney will, on client's request, deliver Client's file to Client, along with any client funds or property in Attorney's possession.

10. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this Contract and nothing in Attorney's statements to Client will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of Client's matter. Attorney makes no such promises or guarantees. Attorney's comments about the outcome of Client's matter are expressions of opinion only.

11. EFFECTIVE DATE. This Contract will take effect when Client has performed the conditions stated in Paragraph 1, but its effective date will be retroactive to the date Attorney first provided services. The date at the beginning of this Contract is for reference only. Even if this Contract does not take effect, Client will be obligated to pay Attorney the reasonable value of any services Attorney may have performed for Client.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT FEE CONTRACT

This ATTORNEY-CLIENT FEE CONTRACT ("Contract") is entered into by and between _____[name of client] ("Client") and _____[name of law firm or attorney] ("Attorney").

1. CONDITIONS. This Contract will not take effect, and Attorney will have no obligation to provide legal services until Client returns a signed copy of this Contract and pays the fixed fee and deposit called for under Paragraphs 4 and 6.

2. SCOPE AND DUTIES. Client hires Attorney to provide legal services in connection with _____[describe matter in which attorney is to provide services]. Attorney shall provide the following services: _____[state services to be provided]. Attorney's services will not include litigation of any kind, whether in court, in administrative hearings, or before government agencies or arbitration tribunals. Attorney shall take reasonable steps to keep Client informed of progress and to respond to Client's inquiries. Client shall be truthful with Attorney, cooperate with Attorney, keep Attorney informed of developments, abide by this Contract, pay Attorney's bills on time, and keep Attorney advised of Client's address, telephone number, and whereabouts.

[3. INSURANCE DISCLOSURE. Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6148.]

4. FIXED FEE. Client agrees to pay a fixed fee of $_____[amount] for Attorney's services under this Contract. The fixed fee is due by _____. Attorneys shall have no obligation whatsoever to provide services to Client until the fixed fee is paid in full. Unless the fee retained would be unconscionable and except as provided in Paragraph 8, the fixed fee will be earned in full and no portion of it will be refunded once any substantial services have been performed.

5. COSTS AND EXPENSES. In addition to the fixed fee, Client shall reimburse Attorney for all costs and expenses incurred by Attorney, including, but not limited to, fees fixed by law or assessed by public agencies, long distance telephone calls, messenger and other delivery fees, postage, in-office photocopying at $_____ per page, parking, mileage at $_____ per mile, investigation expenses, consultants' fees, expert witness fees, and other similar items. Client authorizes Attorney to incur all reasonable costs and to hire any investigators or consultants reasonably necessary in Attorney's judgment, unless one or both of the clauses below are initialed by Client and Attorney.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before incurring any cost in excess of $_____.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before retaining outside investigators or consultants.

6. DEPOSIT. In addition to the fixed fee Client shall deposit $_____ by _____. The sum will be deposited in a trust account, to be used to pay for costs and expenses. Client hereby authorizes Attorney to withdraw sums from the trust account to pay the costs Client incurs. Any unused deposit at the conclusion of Attorney's services will be refunded.

7. STATEMENTS. Attorney shall send Client periodic statements for costs incurred. Client shall pay Attorney's statements within _____ days after each statement's date. Client may request a statement at intervals of no less than 30 days. On Client's request Attorney will provide a statement within 10 days.

8. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. Client may discharge Attorney at any time. Attorney may withdraw with Client's consent or for good cause. Good cause includes Client's breach of this Contract, Client's refusal to cooperate with Attorney or to follow Attorney's advice on a material matter, or any other fact or circumstance that would render Attorney's continuing representation unlawful or unethical. If Attorney withdraws before completing Attorney's duties under this Contract, Client may be entitled to a refund of some or all of the fixed fee, depending on the facts and circumstances.

9. CONCLUSION OF SERVICES. When Attorney's services conclude, all unpaid charges shall immediately become due and payable. After Attorney's services conclude, Attorney will, on client's request, deliver Client's file to Client, along with any client funds or property in Attorney's possession.

10. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this Contract and nothing in Attorney's statements to Client will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of Client's matter. ATTORNEY-CLIENT FEE CONTRACT

This document (the "agreement") is the written fee contract that California law requires lawyers to have with their clients. We _____[name of law firm or attorney] will provide services to you _____[name of client] on the terms set forth below.

1. CONDITIONS. This agreement will not take effect, and we will have no obligation to provide legal services, until you return a signed copy of this agreement and pay the initial deposit called for under Paragraph 5.

2. SCOPE OF SERVICES. You are hiring us as your attorneys, to represent you in the matter described on the attached Rate Schedule. We will provide those legal services reasonably required to represent you. We will take reasonable steps to keep you informed of progress and to respond to your inquiries. If a court action is filed, we will represent you through trial and posttrial motions. After judgment we will not represent you on appeal or in execution proceedings. Unless you and we make a different agreement in writing, this agreement will govern all future services we may perform for you.

[3. INSURANCE DISCLOSURE. Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6148.]

4. CLIENT'S DUTIES. You agree to be truthful with us, to cooperate with us, to keep us informed of developments, to abide by this agreement, to pay our bills on time, and to keep us advised of your address, telephone number, and whereabouts.

5. MINIMUM FEE/DEPOSIT. You agree to pay us an initial deposit of $_____ by _____[date]. Of the initial deposit, $_____ will be our minimum fee, paid in exchange for our agreement to represent you. The minimum fee is nonrefundable, but our hourly charges will be credited against it. The remainder of the initial deposit, as well as any future deposit, will be held in a trust account. You authorize us to use that fund to pay the fees and other charges you incur.

Whenever your deposit is exhausted, we reserve the right to demand further deposits, each up to a maximum of $_____. Once a trial or arbitration date is set, we will require you to pay all sums then owing to us and to deposit the attorneys' fees we estimate will be incurred in preparing for and completing the trial or arbitration, as well as the jury fees or arbitration fees likely to be assessed. Those sums may exceed the maximum deposit.

You agree to pay all deposits after the initial deposit within _____ days of our demand. Except for the minimum fee, any unused deposit at the conclusion of our services will be refunded.

6. LEGAL FEES AND BILLING PRACTICES. You agree to pay by the hour at our prevailing rates for time spent on your matter by our legal personnel. Our current hourly rates for legal personnel (and other billing rates) are set forth on the attached Rate Schedule. The Rate Schedule also provides for periodic increases.

We will charge you for the time we spend on telephone calls relating to your matter, including calls with you, opposing counsel, or court personnel. The legal personnel assigned to your matter will confer among themselves about the matter, as required. When they do confer, each person will charge for the time expended. Likewise, if more than one of our legal personnel attends a meeting, court hearing, or other proceeding, each will charge for the time spent. We will charge for waiting time in court and elsewhere and for travel time, both local and out of town.

7. COSTS AND OTHER CHARGES.

(a) In General. We will incur various costs and expenses in performing legal services under this agreement. You agree to pay for those costs and expenses in addition to the hourly fees. The costs and expenses commonly include process servers' fees, fees fixed by law or assessed by courts and other agencies, court reporters' fees, long distance telephone calls, messenger and other delivery fees, postage, parking and other local travel expenses, photocopying and other reproduction costs, clerical staff overtime, word processing charges, charges for computer time, and other similar items. Except for the items listed on the Rate Schedule, all costs and expenses will be charged at our cost.

(b) Out of Town Travel. You agree to pay transportation, meals, lodging, and all other costs of any necessary out-of-town travel by our personnel. You will also be charged the hourly rates for the time legal personnel spend traveling.

(c) Experts, Consultants and Investigators. To aid in the preparation or presentation of your case, it may become necessary to hire expert witnesses, consultants, or investigators. We will not hire such persons unless you agree to pay their fees and charges. We will select any expert witnesses, consultants, or investigators to be hired.

8. BILLING STATEMENTS. We will send you periodic statements for fees and costs incurred. Each statement will be due within _____ days of its date. You may request a statement at intervals of no less than 30 days. If you do, we will provide one within 10 days.

9. LIEN. You hereby grant us a lien on any and all claims or causes of action that are the subject of our representation under this agreement. Our lien will be for any sums owing to us at the conclusion of our services. The lien will attach to any recovery you may obtain, whether by arbitration award, judgment, settlement or otherwise.

10. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. You may discharge us at any time. We may withdraw with your consent or for good cause. Good cause includes your breach of this agreement, your refusal to cooperate with us or to follow our advice on a material matter, or any fact or circumstance that would render our continuing representation unlawful or unethical.

When our services conclude, all unpaid charges will immediately become due and payable. After our services conclude, we will, on your request, deliver your file to you, along with any funds or property of yours in our possession.

11. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this agreement and nothing in our statements to you will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of your matter. We make no such promises or guarantees. Our comments about the outcome of your matter are expressions of opinion only.

12. EFFECTIVE DATE. This agreement will take effect when you have performed the conditions stated in Paragraph 1, but its effective date will be retroactive to the date we first performed services. The date at the beginning of this agreement is for reference only. Even if this agreement does not take effect, you will be obligated to pay us the reasonable value of any services we may have performed for you.

ATTORNEY-CLIENT CONTINGENT FEE CONTRACT

This ATTORNEY-CLIENT CONTINGENT FEE CONTRACT (the "Agreement") is the written fee contract that California law requires lawyers to have with their clients. It is between _____[name of law firm or attorney] ("Attorney") and you, _____[name of client] ("Client").

1. CONDITIONS. This Agreement will not take effect, and Attorney will have no obligation to provide legal services until Client returns a signed copy of this Agreement.

2. SCOPE AND DUTIES. Client is hiring Attorney to represent Client in the matter of your claims against _____[name of party], arising out of _____[specify], which occurred on or about _____[date]. Attorney will provide those legal services reasonably required to represent Client, and will take reasonable steps to inform Client of progress and to respond to Client's inquiries. Attorney will represent Client in any court action until a settlement or judgment, by arbitration or trial, is reached, and in connection with any appropriate posttrial motions.

After judgment Attorney will not represent Client on any appeal, or in any proceedings designed to execute on the judgment, without such additional compensation as Attorney and Client may agree on in a separate Agreement.

[3. INSURANCE DISCLOSURE. Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6147.]

4. CLIENT'S DUTIES. Client agrees to be truthful with Attorney, to cooperate, to keep Attorney informed of developments, to abide by this Agreement, to pay bills for costs (if any) on time, and to keep Attorney informed of Client's address, telephone number, and whereabouts.

5. LEGAL FEES, COSTS, AND BILLING PRACTICES. Attorney will be compensated for legal services rendered only if a recovery is obtained for Client. If no recovery is obtained, Client will be obligated to pay only for costs, disbursements, and expenses, as described below.

The fees to be paid by Client to Attorney will be _____ percent (_____%) of the net recovery, (the term "net recovery" means the total of all amounts received by settlement, arbitration award, or judgment, from which will be subtracted all unpaid costs and disbursements set forth in Paragraph _____[6 or 7]).

In the event of discharge or withdrawal of Attorney as provided in Paragraph _____[8 or 9], Client agrees that Attorney shall be entitled to be paid by Client, on payment of the settlement, arbitration award, or judgment in favor of Client, a reasonable fee for the legal services provided by Attorney to Client.

[EITHER]

6. NEGOTIABILITY OF FEES. The rates set forth above are not set by law, but are negotiable between Attorney and Client.

[OR, if underlying action is for medical malpractice]

6. NEGOTIABILITY OF FEES. The rates set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6146 are the maximum limits for a contingency fee agreement; the Attorney and Client may negotiate a lower rate.

[CONTINUE]

7. COSTS AND EXPENSES. All costs, disbursements, and litigation expenses are the responsibility of Client. Attorney will advance such costs and expenses. Client will reimburse attorney for such advance costs and expenses on settlement, arbitration award, or judgment. These items include, but are not limited to, court fees, service of process charges, photocopying services, notary fees, computer-assisted legal research, long distance telephone charges, messenger and delivery fees, postage, in-office photocopying at $_____ per page, facsimile charges, deposition costs, parking, mileage at $_____ per mile, investigation expenses, consultants' fees, expert witness fees, and other similar items. Client authorizes Attorney to incur all reasonable costs and to hire any investigators, consultants, or expert witnesses reasonably necessary in Attorney's judgment, unless one or both of the clauses below are initialed by the Attorney.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before incurring any cost in excess of $_____.

8. RELATED BUT UNKNOWN MATTERS. Client represents that Client does not know of any related legal matters that would require legal services to be provided under this Agreement. Such related matters might include, among other things, claims for property damage, workers' compensation, disputes with a health care provider about the amount owed for their services, or claims for reimbursement (subrogation) by any insurance company for benefits paid under an insurance policy. If such matters arise later, Client agrees that this Agreement does not apply to any such related legal matters, and a separate Agreement for provision of services and payment for those services will be required if Client desires Attorney to perform that additional legal work.

9. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. Client may discharge Attorney at any time, on written notice to us, and Attorney will immediately after receiving such notice cease to render additional services. Such a discharge does not, however, relieve Client of the obligation to pay any costs incurred prior to such termination, and Attorney has the right to recover from you the reasonable value of Attorney's legal services rendered from the effective date of the Agreement (Paragraph 13) to the date of discharge.

Attorney may withdraw from representation of Client (a) with Client's consent, (b) on court approval, or (c) if no court action has been filed, on reasonable notice to Client.

10. LIEN. Client hereby grants Attorney a lien on any and all claims or causes of action that are the subject of Attorney's representation under this Agreement. Attorney's lien will be for any sums owing to Attorney for any unpaid costs or attorneys fees under this Agreement. The lien will attach to any recovery Client may obtain, whether by arbitration award, judgment, settlement or otherwise.

11. CONCLUSION OF SERVICES. When Attorney's services conclude, other than by discharge or withdrawal, all unpaid charges will immediately become due and payable. After Attorney's services conclude, Attorney will, on client's request, deliver Client's file to Client, along with any client funds or property in Attorney's possession.

12. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this Agreement and nothing in Attorney's statements to Client will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of the Client's matter. Attorney makes no such promises or guarantees. There can be no assurance that Client will recover any sum or sums in this matter. Attorney's comments about the outcome of Client's matter are expressions of opinion only.

13. EFFECTIVE DATE. This Agreement will take effect when Client has performed the conditions stated in Paragraph 1, but its effective date will be retroactive to the date Attorney first performed services. The date at the beginning of this Agreement is for reference only. Even if this Agreement does not take effect, Client will be obligated to pay Attorney the reasonable value of any services Attorney may have performed for Client.

[2] Use of Form

This form is a short contingent fee agreement for use in litigation matters in which the attorney will recover fees only if a specified contingency occurs. It is adopted from the Sample Written Fee Agreement Forms approved by the State Bar Board of Governors. The form is intended to satisfy the basic requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147. For a form of long agreement, see § 72.676.

The State Bar sample forms are not mandatory, but contingency fee contracts must be in writing. The attorney must provide a duplicate copy of the contract at the time the contract is entered into to the client, or his or her guardian or representative [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)].

[3] Contents of Form

The contingency fee agreement must include statements regarding the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a); for discussion, see § 72.196[3][a], above]:

- The contingency fee rate [see Paragraph 5],
- The manner in which disbursements and costs incurred in connection with the claim will affect the contingency fee and recovery [see Paragraph 7],
- Whether the client could be required to compensate the attorney for related matters that are not covered by the fee agreement [see Paragraph 8],
- The negotiability of the fee [see Paragraph 6], and
- If the attorney does not meet the criteria of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a)(6), a statement to that effect [see Optional Paragraph 3].

It is recommended that statements addressing an attorney's lien, compensation in the event of discharge, and the provision regarding payment of a fee in the case of a structured settlement be included in a contingency fee agreement. For discussion of these provisions, see § 72.196[5].

For further discussion regarding contingency fee agreements in general, see § 72.192. Contingency fees are limited in some instances depending on the subject matter of the underlying litigation [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146(a) (medical malpractice)]. For discussion, see § 72.196[7][a].

ATTORNEY-CLIENT CONTINGENT FEE RETAINER AGREEMENT

This document (the "Agreement") is the written fee contract that California law requires lawyers to have with their clients. We, _____[name of law firm or attorney], will provide legal services to you, _____[name of client], on the terms set forth below.

1. CONDITIONS. This Agreement will not take effect, and we will have no obligation to provide legal services, until you return a signed copy of this Agreement and pay the initial deposit, if any, called for under Paragraph _____[4 or 5].

2. SCOPE OF SERVICES. You are hiring us as your attorneys to represent you in the matter of your claims against _____[name of party], arising out of _____[specify], which occurred on or about _____[date]. We will provide those legal services reasonably required to represent you. We will take reasonable steps to keep you informed of the progress of the matter, and to respond to your inquiries. If a court action is filed, we will represent you until a settlement or judgment, by way of arbitration or trial, is reached.

We will oppose any motion for a new trial or any other posttrial motions filed by an opposing party, or will make any appropriate posttrial motions on your behalf. After judgment we will not represent you on any appeal, or in any proceedings designed to execute on the judgment, without such additional compensation as we may agree on in a separate Agreement.

Unless we make a different Agreement with you in writing, this Agreement will govern all future services we may perform for you.

[3. INSURANCE DISCLOSURE. Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6147.]

4. CLIENT'S DUTIES. You agree to be truthful with us, to cooperate, to keep us informed of developments, to abide by this Agreement, to pay our bills for costs (if any) on time, and to keep us informed of your address, telephone number, and whereabouts. You agree to appear, if we so request, for all depositions and court appearances, and to generally cooperate fully with us in all matters related to the preparation and presentation of your claims.

5. DEPOSIT. You agree to pay us an initial deposit of $_____, to be returned with this signed Agreement. We will hold this initial deposit in a trust account. You hereby authorize us to use that deposit to pay the costs, disbursements, and other expenses incurred under this Agreement.

When your deposit is exhausted, we reserve the right to demand further deposits, each up to a maximum of $_____. Once a trial or arbitration date is set, we will require you to pay all sums then owing to us, and to deposit the costs we estimate will be incurred in preparing for and completing the trial or arbitration, as well as the jury fees or arbitration fees likely to be assessed. Those sums may exceed the maximum deposit.

You agree to pay all deposits required under this Agreement within 10 days of our demand. Any unused and unearned deposit at the conclusion of our services will be refunded.

6. LEGAL FEES, COSTS, AND BILLING PRACTICES. We will only be compensated for legal services rendered if a recovery is obtained for you. If no recovery is obtained, you will be obligated to pay only for costs, disbursements, and expenses, as described below.

(a) The fees to be paid to us will be a percentage of the net recovery, depending on the stage at which the settlement or judgment is reached (the term "net recovery" means the total of all amounts received by settlement, arbitration award, or judgment, from which will be subtracted all unpaid costs and disbursements set forth in Paragraph _____[7 or 8]):

(i) If settlement or judgment is reached before filing a lawsuit, then our attorneys' fees will be _____ percent (_____%) of the net recovery;

(ii) If settlement or judgment is reached prior to thirty (30) days before the first arbitration date (if the case is referred to arbitration) or prior to the date of the first Status or Trial Setting Conference where a trial date is set, whichever is earlier, then our attorneys' fees will be _____ percent (_____%) of the net recovery; and

(iii) If settlement or judgment is reached after the times set forth in (i) and (ii), above, then our attorneys' fees will be _____ percent (_____%) of the net recovery.

(b) We will incur various costs and expenses in performing legal services under this Agreement. You agree to pay for all costs, disbursements, and expenses paid or owed by you in connection with this matter, or that have been advanced by us on your behalf and that you have not previously paid or reimbursed to us.

(c) To aid in the preparation or presentation of your case, it may become necessary to hire expert witnesses, consultants, or investigators. We will not hire such persons unless you agree to pay their fees and charges. We will select any expert witnesses, consultants, or investigators to be hired.

(d) In the event of our discharge or withdrawal as provided in Paragraph 12, you agree that, on payment of the settlement, arbitration award or judgment in your favor in this matter, we shall be entitled to be paid by you a reasonable fee for the legal services provided by us to you. Such fee shall be determined by considering the following factors:

(1) the actual number of hours expended by us in performing legal services for you;

(2) our hourly rate of $_____;

(3) the extent to which our services have contributed to the result obtained;

(4) the amount of the fee in proportion to the value of the services performed;

(5) the amount of recovery obtained;

(6) time limitations imposed on us by you or by the circumstances; and

(7) the experience, reputation, and ability of our personnel performing the services.

[EITHER]

7. NEGOTIABILITY OF FEES. The rates set forth above are not set by law, but are negotiable between Attorney and Client.

[OR, if underlying action is for medical malpractice]

7. NEGOTIABILITY OF FEES. The rates set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6146 are the maximum limits for a contingency fee agreement; the Attorney and Client may negotiate a lower rate.

[CONTINUE]

8. COSTS AND LITIGATION EXPENSES. All costs, disbursements, and litigation expenses associated with this matter are your responsibility, including court fees, service of process charges, photocopy services, notary fees, computer-assisted legal research, long distance telephone charges, messenger and delivery fees, postage, in-office photocopying at $_____ per page, facsimile charges, deposition costs, parking, mileage at $_____ per mile, investigation expenses, consultants' fees, expert witness fees, and other similar items. All costs and expenses will be charged at our cost. You understand that, as set forth in Paragraph 5, above, you may be required to make a deposit for costs before the expenditure is made by _____[name of law firm].

Client authorizes Attorney to incur all reasonable costs and to hire any investigators, consultants or expert witnesses reasonably necessary in Attorney's judgment, unless one or both of the clauses below are initialed by Attorney.

_____ Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before incurring any cost in excess of $_____.

_____Attorney shall obtain Client's consent before retaining outside investigators, consultants, or expert witnesses.

In the event that an award of costs is sought on your behalf in this action, you understand that the amount that the court may order as costs is the amount the court believes the party is entitled to recover, and does not necessarily determine what costs _____[name of law firm] is entitled to charge its clients or that only the costs that were allowed were reasonable. You agree that, whether or not attorney's fees or costs are awarded by the court in this action, you remain responsible for the payment in full, of all attorney's fees and costs in connection with this matter.

9. BILLING STATEMENTS. We will send you periodic billing statements for costs, disbursements, and expenses incurred in connection with this matter. Each statement is to be paid in full within 15 days after the date of the statement. You may request a statement at intervals of no less than thirty days. Upon your request we will provide a statement within ten days.

10. APPROVAL NECESSARY FOR SETTLEMENT. We will not make any settlement or compromise of any nature of any of your claims without your prior approval. You agree that you will not make any settlement or compromise of any nature of any of your claims without prior notice to us.

11. LIMITATION OF REPRESENTATION. We are representing you only on the matter described in Paragraph 2. Our representation does not include independent or related matters that may arise, including, among other things, claims for property damage, workers' compensation, disputes with a health care provider about the amount owed for their services, defense of cross complaints on other matters, or claims for reimbursement (subrogation) by any insurance company for benefits paid under an insurance policy. If such matters arise later, you agree with us that this Agreement does not apply to any such related legal matters, and we will negotiate a separate Agreement if you wish to retain us for that additional legal work.

Unless we agree with each other by a separate Agreement, you will not be liable to compensate us for any such independent or related legal matter that is not specifically covered by this Agreement.

12. DISCHARGE AND WITHDRAWAL. You may discharge us at any time, on written notice to us, and we will immediately after receiving such notice cease to render additional services. Such a discharge does not, however, relieve you of the obligation to pay any costs incurred prior to such termination, and we have the right to recover from you the reasonable value of our legal services rendered from the effective date of this Agreement (Paragraph 17) to the date of discharge.

We may withdraw from representation of you (a) with your consent, (b) on court approval, or (c) if no court action has been filed, on reasonable notice to you.

13. CONCLUSION OF SERVICES. When our services conclude, all unpaid charges will immediately become due and payable. You authorize us to use any funds held in our trust account as a deposit against costs to apply to such unpaid charges. After our services conclude, we will, upon your request, deliver your file to you, along with any funds or property of your in our possession.

14. LIEN. You hereby grant us a lien on any and all claims or causes of action that are the subject of our representation under this Agreement. Our lien will be for any sums owing to us for any unpaid costs, or attorney's fees, at the conclusion of our services. The lien will attach to any recovery you obtain, whether by arbitration award, judgment,

15. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTEE. Nothing in this Agreement and nothing in our statements to you will be construed as a promise or guarantee about the outcome of your matter. We make no such promises or guarantees. There can be no assurance that you will recover any sum or sums in this matter. Our comments about the outcome of your matter are expressions of opinion only.

16. ATTORNEY'S AUTHORITY. In connection with the claims covered by this Agreement, you hereby give us the power and authority to execute any and all claims, deposits, orders, and other papers that you could properly execute, and to receive on your behalf any monies or other things of value to which you may be entitled because of any judgment recovered or any settlement received.

17. EFFECTIVE DATE. This Agreement will take effect when you have performed the conditions stated in Paragraph 1, but its effective date will be retroactive to the date we first performed services. The date at the beginning of this Agreement is for reference only. Even if this Agreement does not take effect, you will be obligated to pay us the reasonable value of any services we may have performed for Client.

RETAINER AGREEMENT

1. _____ [On execution of this agreement or Within _____ days of execution of this agreement], Client shall pay Attorney $_____ as a retainer to assure Attorney's availability for [a maximum of _____ hours during] the period from _____[date] to _____[date] to provide the following legal services: _____[describe services, e.g., to provide counsel and advice to Client by telephone or in person regarding the conduct of Client's business, including the answering of legal questions and tax questions, and the writing of any incidental correspondence on matters in connection with the conduct of Client's business]. This retainer shall not be refundable; it shall be earned by Attorney whether or not any legal services are actually performed.

2. If any of the services specified in Paragraph 1 are actually required to be performed during the retainer period, Attorney will _____ [agree with Client at that time on the fees to be paid for those services or be compensated as follows: _____ (specify rate of compensation, e.g., on an hourly basis at a fee of $_____ per hour)].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a standard retainer agreement to secure an attorney's availability to a client for a certain time period. It satisfies the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148 governing fee agreements. It is recommended that the agreement specify the amount of the retainer, whether the retainer has been paid or the date on which payment is due, and the length of time that the attorney's availability will be assured. For discussion of retainer agreements, see § 72.195[1].

EXPLORATORY FEE AGREEMENT

Client shall compensate Attorney at the rate of _____ [$_____ per hour or in the sum of $_____] for investigating and researching _____ [specify, e.g., whether or not Client has a cause of action against _____ (name of adverse party)] and for providing an opinion letter containing recommendations with respect to that matter. Attorney shall expend no less than _____ hours or more than _____ hours in completing this assignment. Client understands that Attorney may not within this time frame be able to completely investigate all of the facts or exhaustively research the applicable law. In either or both of these events, Attorney shall indicate what further investigation and/or research is recommended and its estimated cost. On completion of this investigation, research, and report, Attorney is not obligated to represent Client any further with respect to this matter. [Attorney does not meet any of the criteria for errors and omissions (malpractice) coverage set forth in Business and Professions Code Section 6148.]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use when a client desires a fixed fee arrangement and the attorney's knowledge of the facts or applicable law are insufficient to quote a fixed fee. The attorney and client can then agree that the attorney will work a certain number of hours at a set rate and then provide the client with an estimate of the necessary legal work and the fixed fee. This agreement satisfies the writing requirments of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6148. For discussion of this type of fee agreement, see § 72.195[3].

§ 72.682 Advance Payment Provision

[1] FORM Advance Payment Provision

ADVANCE PAYMENT OF FEES

Client shall pay to Attorney by _____[date], an advance of $_____ for legal services and of $_____ for related costs. Attorney shall deposit the advance payment in a non-interest bearing trust account.

Attorney shall provide Client by the _____ day of each month a statement identifying the following: (1) the persons who performed services for Client during the preceding month, (2) the number of hours worked, (3) the hourly rate of pay, and (4) the total of the charges for the services. Attorney shall also provide the following information in that statement: (1) the amount of any costs incurred during the preceding month, (2) what the costs were incurred for, and (3) the total amount of the costs. The Statement shall indicate the total amount of advance fees and costs to be withdrawn from the trust account and shall specify the date by which Client must contact Attorney if Client objects to the amount of costs and/or fees claimed in the statement. The date specified shall be no less than _____ calendar days from the date that the statement was mailed to Client. In addition, the statement shall specify the amount of the remaining unearned balance of advances for services and costs. If Client does not object to the costs and/or fees set forth in the statement by the date specified, the Attorney may assume that Client does not object and shall be entitled on the day after the specified date to withdraw from the trust account an amount equal to the total value of hourly services provided and costs expended, as specified in the statement.

Attorney shall provide Client _____ days after completion of the services with a final billing, and return to Client any unearned advances for fees or costs. [Attorney may apply any unearned advance for either fees or costs in this matter on an outstanding balance for fees and costs owed by Client in another matter.]

This provision may be used to require an advance payment for fees and costs before commencing legal work for a client to avoid the risk of providing services and not being paid. For discussion, see § 72.197[1][a].

This provision contemplates deposit of the advance payment in the attorney's trust account. While deposit in the trust account is not clearly required, an unofficial California State Bar publication recommends that advance fees be placed in the trust account and drawn periodically as earned [Handbook on Client Trust Accounting for California Attorneys, p. 14 (State Bar of California 1992); for discussion of trust accounts, see § 72.320 et seq.].

DISCLOSURE AND AGREEMENT TO FEE SPLITTING ARRANGEMENT

DISCLOSURE

1. On _____[date], Client and Attorney entered into a legal representation agreement, (hereafter "the agreement"), a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

2. Under the terms of the agreement, Attorney is to perform legal services on behalf of Client including: _____[description].

3. Under the terms of the agreement, Attorney is entitled to compensation as follows: _____[specify hourly, per diem, contingency, or other basis for fee].

4. Attorney desires to _____[associate or refer] this case to _____[name] to _____ [specify role of associating attorney, e.g., control litigation of the case because of his/her special knowledge of _____ (specify, e.g., malpractice litigation)].

5. Attorney at his/her own expense will pay _____[name of associated attorney] _____ [specify fee to be paid associated attorney, e.g., a fee of $_____ or _____ percent of the contingency fee fixed by the agreement] for these services.

6. This _____[association or referral] will not cause any increase in fees owed by Client, and the total fees charged by Attorneys will not be "unconscionable," as that term is defined in Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200 of the California Rules of Professional Conduct.

Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name of attorney]
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name of associated attorney]

CLIENT'S CONSENT TO FEE SPLITTING ARRANGEMENT

I understand that _____[name of associated attorney] is being associated on my case in order to _____ [specify role of associating attorney in case, e.g., control litigation of the case because of his/her special knowledge of _____ (specify, e.g., malpractice litigation)] and that Attorney will pay _____[name of associated attorney] on the basis of _____ [specify fee for associated attorney, e.g., a fee of $_____ or _____ percent of the contingency fee fixed by the agreement].

I have been advised that this association will not cause any increase in the fees to be paid by me and that the total fees charged by the Attorneys will not be "unconscionable" under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-200. I consent to this association of attorneys and splitting of the fee between _____[name of original attorney] and _____[name of associated attorney].
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This provision is for use when the attorney and client agree to associate outside counsel to accomplish the client's objective. An attorney has no implied authority to hire outside associates, assistants, or investigators on behalf of a client. If outside counsel is associated by the attorney, the client must consent in writing after full disclosure of the division of fees and the terms of the division. The total fee charged by all attorneys associated must not be increased solely by reason of the provision for division of fees under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-200. For discussion, see § 72.199[1].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a client seeking relief from a binding stipulation. For discussion, see § 72.221[4].

[3] Contents of Declaration

The declaration should show facts negating the attorney's authority, such as the client's express objections and, if applicable, that the opposing party was aware of these objections see Blanton v. Womancare, Inc. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d

396, 403-408, 212 Cal. Rptr. 151, 696 P.2d 645] .

For a form of order granting the motion, see § 72.687.

[4] Decisions

A party may ordinarily only be relieved from a stipulation by noticed motion to set aside made in trial court and supported by affidavit or declaration stating grounds for relief. Harris v. Spinali Auto Sales, Inc. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 447, 453, 49 Cal. Rptr. 610 ; L.A. City Sch. Dist. v. Landier Inv. Co. (1960) 177 Cal. App. 2d 744, 750, 2 Cal. Rptr. 662

Individual not a party to stipulation nor the person for whose benefit it was entered into may not seek to set stipulation aside. Estate of Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 544, 553, 299 P.2d 1005

CAUTION:
A supporting memorandum is required to be served and filed with the foregoing notice of motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1010; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)].

[2] Use of Form

This notice of motion is for use when defendant moves to strike an answer filed by an attorney without his authorization. Optional language is included if the defendant seeks to make a special appearance so as not to submit to the court's jurisdiction [see Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331 (affirming order allowing withdrawal of appearances except as to one defendant who had made a general appearance by personally signing an affidavit supporting a summary judgment motion in the action)].

Alternatively, the plaintiff may also move to strike the unauthorized answer [see People v. Honey Lake Valley Irr. Dist. (1926) 77 Cal. App. 367, 374, 246 P. 819 (dictum)].

For discussion, see § 72.220[6]. For a form of order granting the motion, see § 72.689.

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

_____[Name of associated attorney] hereby accepts the above association.
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form of association of counsel is for use when the attorney of record delegates responsibilities in the case to another attorney without an actual substitution of attorneys. The form is filed in the court in which the matter is pending. For discussion, see § 72.222.

For a form of notice of association of counsel to inform the other parties of the association, see § 72.694.

[3] Contents

There is no prescribed form of association of counsel and association need not even be effected formally [see Vaughn v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 698, 701-702, 108 Cal. Rptr. 806, 511 P.2d 1158] . Nevertheless, it is a good practice to file a formal association of counsel stating the name, address, and telephone number of the attorney associated, and showing his consent. It then becomes part of the record to explain the part of the associated attorney in the conduct of the case.

[4] Decisions

Duty of attorney of record to prepare associate counsel for trial proceeding at which associate substitutes for attorney of record. Vaughn v. State Bar (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 698, 701-702, 108 Cal. Rptr. 806, 511 P.2d 1158 (attorney disciplined for failure to prepare associate)

Associated attorney as not entitled to act as attorney of record without substitution but as entitled to designate himself as "one of the attorneys for" party when appearing for party in court. Wells Fargo & Co. v. City etc. of S.F. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 37, 43, 152 P.2d 625

[2] Use of Form

This form of association of counsel is for use when the client consents to the association and indicates consent on the paper itself. Although there is no authority requiring that a client consent to an association of counsel for the conduct of his case, it is a good practice to obtain the client's consent incident to his or her agreement to incur the expense of the associate's fees and costs [see Tasker v. Cochrane (1928) 94 Cal. App. 361, 366, 271 P. 503 (holding that the client is not liable for such fees or costs absent a special agreement)]. The agreement to pay an associate counsel's fees and costs should be expressly provided in the retainer agreement prior to employing the associate attorney. The client's consent is then obtained when the particular association is made.

For further discussion of appearance as counsel pro hac vice, including eligibility requirements, see § 72.223[1].

[3] Contents of Application

The application portion of the form includes those statements required by Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.2, and a declaration under penalty of perjury, which satisfies the requirement that the application be verified [Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.1; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1003, 2009, 2015.5].

[4] Proof of Service

The original application filed with the court must be accompanied by proof, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013a, of service by mail of a copy of theapplication and a notice of hearing on all parties who have appeared in the cause and on the State Bar at its San Francisco office [Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.3; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1014 (when defendant appears)]. For a form of proof of service by mail, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[5] Supreme Court or Court of Appeals

The form may be modified for use to apply for leave to appear as counsel pro hac vice in an appellate court under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54 [see Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.4]. The notice of hearing of the application may be omitted because notice of the hearing, if any, is given by the clerk of the appellate court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54(a), (b)]. All motions in a reviewing court are made by filing a typewritten motion, which must set forth the grounds of motion, the papers on which it is based (in this instance the verified application), and the relief sought. Each copy of the motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum and, if the motion is based on matters not appearing of record, by affidavits or supporting evidence [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.54(a)]. The original motion must be filed with proof of service on all parties who have appeared in the cause and on the State Bar at its San Francisco office [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.431; Cal. State Bar Rules, Counsel Pro Hac Vice Program, Rule 4.4].

[6] Decisions

Former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 983 (now see Rule 9.40), in limiting appearances pro hac vice to non-resident attorneys, excluding resident attorneys who are admitted to practice in foreign jurisdictions but not in California, is not unconstitutional violation of U.S. Const., art. IV, § 2 (privileges and immunities clause) or rights protected under U.S. Const., amend. I or XIV. Paciulan v. George (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 1226, 1227-1228, 1231

Trial judge abused discretion in denying permission for out-of-state attorney to appear on behalf of criminal defendant, when basis for decision was that judge was not familiar with or confident of attorney; proper basis for decision was whether appearance by out-of-state attorney would disrupt orderly proceeding so as to justify abridgment of defendant's right to retain counsel of choice. Magee v. Superior Court (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 949, 952-953, 106 Cal. Rptr. 647, 506 P.2d 1023

A trial court's inherent powers include the authority to revoke an attorney's pro hac vice status when that attorney has engaged in conduct that would be sufficient to disqualify a California attorney. Sheller v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1697, 1716, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 207

Former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 983(a) (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 9.40(a)) prohibition of appearance by out-of-state attorney in particular case when attorney regularly engages in business activities in California, does not apply to services rendered out-of-state for California client. Walter E. Heller Western, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 706, 711, 168 Cal. Rptr. 785

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice to a client that an attorney does not carry professional liability insurance, or no longer carries such insurance. Effective January 1, 2010, an attorney who knows or should know that he or she does not have professional liability insurance must inform a client in writing, at the time of the client's engagement of the attorney, that the attorney does not have professional liability insurance whenever it is reasonably foreseeable that the total amount of the attorney's legal representation of the client in the matter will exceed four hours [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-410(A)]. If an attorney does not provide this notice at the time of a client's engagement of the attorney, and the attorney subsequently knows or should know that he or she no longer has professional liability insurance during the representation of the client, the attorney must inform the client in writing within 30 days of the date that the attorney knows or should know that he or she no longer has professional liability insurance [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-410(B)]. For discussion, see § 72.192[11].

The disclosure obligation at the time of engagement applies with respect to both new clients and new engagements with returning clients [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-410(A)]. An attorney may include the language in a written fee agreement with the client or in a separate writing [Commission on the Revision of the Rules of Professional Conduct, Comment to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-410]. The disclosure in this form is a separate notice.

This form contains space for the client to acknowledge receipt. Although such acknowledgment is not required, it is recommended that such an acknowledgment be obtained and retained so that the attorney will have proof that the notice was given as required, and was received by the client.

[2] Use of Form

This form is an illustrative version of Cal. Judicial Council Form MC-051, Notice of Motion and Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, which must be used by an attorney to request permission to be relieved as counsel when factors have arisen that require withdrawal from employment in accordance with the provisions of the Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(B) [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(a)]. It is used when the client has not consented to counsel's withdrawal. For example, the client's refusal to cooperate with his or her attorney provides proper support for a motion to withdraw [see People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 403-404, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 (client's failure to pay attorney's fees)]. For related text, § 72.372. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents

A notice of motion to be relieved as counsel under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) must be directed to the client and made on the Judicial Council form Notice of Motion and Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, form MC-051 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(a)]. Notwithstanding any other rule of court, no memorandum is required to be filed or served with a motion to be relieved as counsel [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(b)].

The motion must be accompanied by a declaration on the Judicial Council form Declaration in Support of Attorney's Motion Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, form MC-052 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(c); see § 72.716]. The proposed order, prepared on the Judicial Council form Order Granting Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel--Civil, form MC-053 [see § 72.717], must be lodged with the court with the moving papers [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(e)].

[4] Service of Papers

The notice of motion and motion, the declaration, and the proposed order must be served on the client and on all other parties who have appeared in the case, by personal service or mail [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d)]. If the papers are served by mail, Code Civ. Proc. § 1011(b) (relating to service on a party) applies. However, it would appear that the intent of this rule is that if service by mail at the client's last known address is unsuccessful, then service may be made by delivery of the papers to the court clerk [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1011(b), 1012].

If the notice is served on the client by mail under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 (which relates to depositing the papers with the U.S. Postal Service), it must be accompanied by a declaration stating either (1) facts showing that the service address is the current residence or business address of the client,or (2) the service address is the last known residence or business address of the client and the attorney has checked with the county registrar of voters and has been unable to locate a more current address after making reasonable efforts to do so within 30 days before the filing of the motion to be relieved. For these purposes, "current" means that the address was confirmed within 30 days before the filing of the motion. Merely demonstrating that the notice was sent to the client's last known address and was not returned will not, by itself, be sufficient to demonstrate that the address is current [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d)].

[3] Notice of Withdrawal

Notice to the adverse party of a change of the attorney of record is required to be given by Code Civ. Proc. § 285. It may be given by service of the order itself or of a formal notice of withdrawal [see § 72.718] on the adverse party.

[4] Content of Order

The order must specify all hearing dates scheduled in the action or proceeding, including the date of trial, if known. If no hearing date is presently scheduled, the court may set one and specify the date in the order [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(e)].

[5] Service of Order

After the order is signed, a copy of the signed order must be served on the client and on all parties that have appeared in the case. The court may delay the effective date of the order relieving counsel until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(e)].

[2] Use of Form

This form is a notice to an adverse party of an attorney's withdrawal as attorney of record. It is served on the adverse party and filed with the court in which the action or proceeding is pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 285]. For a form for a notice of substitution of counsel under Code Civ. Proc. § 285, see § 72.722.

This form may be used when the withdrawal is by court order under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) [see §§ 72.715, 72.717]. However, service of the form does not appear to be strictly necessary, because the notice requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 285 are satisfied by service of the order itself as required under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362(d).

[1] Source of Form

This form is issued by the Judicial Council and intended for mandatory statewide use in civil actions. This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party in a civil action, his or her former attorney, and his or her new attorney (unless the party plans to represent himself or herself without an attorney). The form is filed with the court clerk [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(1)]. The form also serves as notice and proof of service of notice on all parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 285]. For related text, see §§ 72.392[1] and 72.592[4][c].

[3] Copies

The following copies of the form should be prepared:

- Original to be filed with the court clerk.
- One copy to be served as notice on each party.
- One copy for the former attorney's file (usually conformed with the court clerk's endorsement bearing date of filing).

- One office file copy.
- Other copies as desired.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

[Add memorandum of points and authorities supporting motion]

[2] Use of Form

The form is for use by a party to obtain court approval to substitute his or her new attorney for his or her present attorney [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]. The application is usually made when the attorney of record refuses or is unable to consent to substitution pursuant to the procedure in Code Civ. Proc. § 284(1) [see § 72.719]. For related text, see § 72.392[2].

Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) authorizes the client, rather than the new attorney, to make the motion for substitution. Without a formal substitution, the new attorney is not yet formally authorized to represent the client, or to file papers on the client's behalf [see In re Marriage of Park (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 337, 343, 165 Cal. Rptr. 792, 612 P.2d 882] . Due to the nature of the motion, however, it is probable that a court would accept papers signed by the new attorney, as is illustrated in the form above. Nevertheless, the client may wish to make the motion to assure the court of the client's consent to substitution.

[3] Copies

The following copies of the motion to substitute attorneys should be prepared:

(1) Original to be filed with the court;

(2) One copy to be served on the present attorney of record;

(3) One copy for the office file;

(4) Other copies as desired.

[4] California Points and Authorities

_____ [name], [and DOES I	)	[Amount demanded _____ (exceeds through_____,] Defendant(s).	)	or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff Alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract)

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, an attorney at law, duly admitted and practicing law in the State of California.

2. Defendant _____[name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident of _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence of defendant].

3. [Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues those defendants by fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of these fictitiously named defendants is legally responsible in some manner for the actions herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages were proximately caused by their conduct.)]

[4. Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the agent of defendant _____ (name) and in doing the things herein alleged was acting within the scope of his/her authority.]

5. On or about _____[date], at _____[address], California, plaintiff and defendant entered into _____[a written or an oral] contract (hereafter the "Contract"), [a copy of which is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit _____,] in which plaintiff agreed to _____[specify agreed legal services] and defendant agreed to pay the sum of $_____ as plaintiff's fee for such services and to reimburse plaintiff for all costs and expenses including _____[specify, e.g., taxable costs of litigation, travel expenses, and investigator's fees]. [The contract further provided that the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees necessitated by any legal action to enforce the terms of the agreement.]

6. Plaintiff has performed all the acts, services, and conditions required by the contract to be performed on his/her part[, except _____ (specify any nonperformance and excuse therefor)].

7. In rendering the services herein alleged, plaintiff has incurred costs and expenses on behalf of defendant in the sum of $_____.

8. Plaintiff has demanded from defendant payment of such compensation and reimbursement of costs and expenses in the amount of $_____, but defendant has not paid any part of that sum[, except the sum of $_____,] and there is now due and owing from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Common Count)

9. Plaintiff refers to and incorporates as though fully set forth herein Paragraphs 1-4 inclusive of this complaint.

10. On or about _____[date], at _____[address], California, defendant became indebted to plaintiff in the agreed sum of $_____ for legal services rendered and costs and expenses advanced by plaintiff at defendant's request.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Account Stated)

11. Plaintiff refers to and incorporates as though fully set forth herein Paragraphs 1-4 inclusive of this complaint.

12. Between _____[date], and _____[date], plaintiff performed legal services and advanced costs and expenses for defendant at defendant's request.

13. On or about _____[date], at _____[address], California, an account was stated in writing by and between plaintiff and defendant and, on the statement, a balance of $_____ was found due from defendant to plaintiff, and defendant agreed to pay that balance. A copy of the account is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and made a part hereof.

14. Neither the whole nor any part of that sum has been paid[, except the sum of $_____], although plaintiff has demanded payment, and there is now due and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For the sum of $_____ with interest thereon at _____ percent per year from _____[date].

2. For [reasonable attorney's fees and] costs of suit herein incurred.

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

I, _____[name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action to recover fees and costs for legal services, when the fees are fixed by agreement of the parties.

The First Cause of Action alleges a breach of a contract, the Second Cause of Action alleges a common count, and the Third Cause of Action alleges an account stated. Generally speaking, the First and Second Causes of Action will be alleged in all cases, the First to establish that a contract did in fact exist, and the Second to establish that recovery of the reasonable value of the services provided is appropriate even if there is some defense that precludes recovery of the entire contract amount. The Third Cause of Action may be used if the requirements for an account stated have been met.

[3] Allegations

The foregoing complaint sets forth three counts as a basis for recovery of compensation for legal services and reimbursement of costs advanced. The First Cause of Action specifically alleges (1) that plaintiff is an attorney at law (Paragraph 1), (2) the oral or written agreement for services providing for a fixed fee and reimbursement of costs (Paragraphs 5, 6, and 7), (3) that plaintiff performed in accordance with the agreement (Paragraph 8), (4) the costs advanced by plaintiff (Paragraph 9), and (5) that the fees and costs were demanded and are due, owing, and unpaid (Paragraph 10) [see Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576-577, 222 P.2d 314] . The elements of a cause of action to recover on a fixed fee agreement are discussed in § 72.450 et seq. The Second Cause of Action alleges a common count for indebtedness for services rendered [see § 72.450[2], and Ch. 121, Common Counts] and the Third Cause of Action alleges an account stated for legal services [see § 72.450[5][a], and Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts].

Paragraph 2 establishes the proper venue for the action, alleging the residence of an individual defendant or the principal place of business of a corporate defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395 (venue in contract actions), Code Civ. Proc. § 395.2 (venue in actions against partnerships), Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (venue in actions against corporations)].

Paragraph 3 contains an optional fictitious name allegation, for use if multiple defendants are sued and plaintiff is unaware of their names and capacities.

Paragraph 4 contains an agency allegation, for use if multiple defendants are sued and liability is sought to be imposed on the basis of respondeat superior.

If appropriate, Paragraph 7 may be used to allege that the written agreement contains a clause providing that in any future litigation concerning the fees the prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees and costs pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717. For discussion of the availability of fees and costs to an attorney acting pro se to recover fees, see § 72.431[9], above.

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446] and precludes a general denial in superior court and in some limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Copies

The following copies of the foregoing complaint should be prepared:

(1) Original to be filed with the court;

(2) One copy to be served with summons on the defendant;

(3) One copy for the office file;

(4) Other copies as desired.

[Caption. See § 72.740.]

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract)

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, an attorney at law, duly admitted and practicing law in the State of California.

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 72.740, Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 72.740, Paragraph 3.]

[4. Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 72.740, Paragraph 4.]

5. On or about _____[date] at _____[address], California, plaintiff and defendant entered into _____[a written or an oral] agreement whereby plaintiff agreed _____ [describe agreed services, e.g., to represent defendant in bringing an action against _____ (name) in the Superior Court of _____ County, California] and defendant agreed to pay plaintiff the reasonable value of such services.

6. Plaintiff has fully performed all acts, services, and conditions required by that agreement to be performed on his/her part, including _____[describe services].

7. The reasonable value of such services is the sum of $_____.

8. Plaintiff has demanded payment from defendant for that sum but neither the whole nor any part[, except the sum of $_____,] has been paid, and there is now due and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Common Count)

9. Plaintiff refers to and incorporates as though fully set forth herein Paragraphs 1-4 inclusive of this complaint.

10. During the period _____[date] until _____[date], at _____[city], California, plaintiff rendered services as an attorney at law to defendant at defendant's request and defendant agreed to pay plaintiff the reasonable value of such services.

11. The reasonable value of such services is the sum of $_____.

12. Plaintiff has demanded payment from defendant for that sum but neither the whole nor any part[, except the sum of $_____,] has been paid, and there is now due and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For the sum of $_____ with interest thereon at _____ percent per year from _____[date].

2. For [reasonable attorney's fees and] costs of suit herein incurred.

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action for recovery of attorney's fees based on the reasonable value of the services rendered. Generally speaking, both causes of action will be alleged in all cases, the First to establish that a contract did in fact exist, and the Second to establish that recovery of the reasonable value of the services provided is appropriate even if there is some defense that precludes recovery under the contract.

An additional cause of action may be included, if appropriate, for relief on the alternative theory of account stated [see §

72.740].

[3] Allegations

The foregoing complaint sets forth two counts as a basis for recovery of compensation based on the reasonable value of legal services rendered. The First Count sepcifically alleges (1) that plaintiff is an attorney at law (Paragraph 1), (2) the oral or written agreement for services and compensation based on the reasonable value thereof (Paragraphs 5 and 6), (3) plaintiff's performance under the contract in rendering the agreed services (Paragraph 7), (4) the reasonable value of those services (Paragraph 8), and (5) plaintiff's demand for the fees that are due and unpaid (Paragraph 9) [see Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549, 282 P. 791 (right to reasonable value of services absent agreement for fixed fee); Hardy v. San Fernando Valley C. of C. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 572, 576-577, 222 P.2d 314 (elements of action for attorney's fees)]. For discussion of the elements of the cause of action, see § 72.451[1]. The Second Count alleges a common count for the reasonable value of services rendered (quantum meruit) [see § 72.450[2], and Ch. 121, Common Counts].

[4] Decisions

Right of discharged attorney to recover reasonable value of services to time of discharge. Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9

Right to reasonable value of legal services when fee agreement is invalid. Calvert v. Stoner (1948) 33 Cal. 2d 97, 105, 199 P.2d 297 (dictum); see also Newman v. Freitas (1900) 129 Cal. 283, 288, 61 P. 907 (noting that trial court awarded attorney reasonable compensation when contingent fee agreement was unlawful)

Right to recover reasonable value of legal services when contract of employment lacks any provision by which to measure compensation. Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549, 282 P. 791

Trial judge as authorized to use own experience and judgment as to reasonable value of legal services with or without aid of testimony as to value. Elconin v. Yalen (1929) 208 Cal. 546, 549-550, 282 P. 791 ; Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 241, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897

Major factors to be considered in determining reasonableness of attorney's fees. Clejan v. Reisman (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 224, 241, 84 Cal. Rptr. 897

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action for recovery of the reasonable value of services rendered by an attorney under a contingent fee agreement, when the attorney was discharged or withdrew from the representation before the client obtained a recovery by judgment or settlement that satisfies the contingency in the agreement. If plaintiff was discharged by defendant, plaintiff can recover the reasonable value of services performed before the discharge, unless the discharge was for acts of impropriety inconsistent with the character of the legal profession and incompatible with the faithful discharge of professional duties [Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 9, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373 ; see § 72.451[2][b]]. If plaintiff withdrew from representing the client, he or she may recover the reasonable value of services performed before the withdrawal only if the withdrawal was justified [see Moore v. Fellner (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 330, 341, 325 P.2d 857 (recognizing rule); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(C) (setting forth when attorneys may permissively withdraw from case); see § 72.451[2][c]].

13. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that on or about _____[date], defendant _____[former client] and defendant _____[second attorney] entered into a settlement with _____ [specify, e.g., the insurance carrier(s) for _____ (party or parties)] in the amount of $_____, and have received that sum.

14. Plaintiff has demanded from defendant _____[former client] and defendant _____[second attorney] payment in the amount of $_____, which is the amount of plaintiff's lien, but defendants have refused to pay plaintiff that sum.

15. On or about _____[date], plaintiff became entitled to payment of his/her lien on the proceeds of the settlement between _____[name of former client] and _____[name(s) of party or parties to former client's suit], and plaintiff is still entitled to payment of his/her lien in the amount of $_____[state amount].

16. On or about _____[date], defendants _____[former client] and _____[second attorney] deprived attorney of his/her entitlement to his/her lien proceeds.

17. As a proximate result of defendants' conversion, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____.

[18. The aforementioned acts of defendants _____ (former client) and _____ (second attorney) were _____ (specify statutory basis for award of punitive damages and conduct of defendant(s) that constitute oppression, fraud, or malice, e.g., undertaken with the intent to defraud plaintiff or intended to cause injury to plaintiff or despicable conduct undertaken with a conscious disregard of the rights of others), and justify an award of punitive damages _____ (in the amount of $_____ or in an amount appropriate to punish defendants and set an example for others).]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Constructive Trust)

19. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action all of the allegations in Paragraphs 1 through 14 [and Paragraph 18] of the First Cause of Action as though set forth in full herein.

20. Between _____[date], and _____[date], a confidential relationship existed between plaintiff and defendant _____[former client].

21. Plaintiff is entitled to a lien in the amount of $_____[state amount] against the recovery obtained by defendant _____[former client].

22. At the time that defendant _____[former client] executed the contract, defendant _____[former client] represented that he/she would grant a lien on any recovery.

23. At the time that defendant _____[former client] made that representation, defendant _____[former client] knew that it was false.

24. In reliance on this representation by defendant _____[former client], plaintiff entered into the contract.

25. As a proximate result of plaintiff's reliance on the representation by defendant _____[former client], plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $_____[amount of lien].

26. By reason of the fraudulent manner in which defendant _____[former client] and defendant _____[second attorney] have acted with respect to this matter, defendant _____[former client] and defendant _____[second attorney] are involuntary trustees holding the lien amount of $_____ in constructive trust for plaintiff with the duty to pay plaintiff that sum of money.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Common Count)

27. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action all of the allegations in paragraphs 1 through 14 of the first cause of action as though set forth in full herein.

28. On or about _____[date], at _____, California, defendants became indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____[state amount] for money had and received by defendants for the use and benefit of plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action to enforce an attorney's charging lien based on a contingency fee agreement [see Civ. Code §§ 2224, 3336]. A charging lien created by a contingency fee agreement survives the attorney's discharge, and entitles the attorney to receive from any recovery by the client the reasonable value of services rendered prior to the discharge [Weiss v. Marcus (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 590, 598, 124 Cal. Rptr. 297] . The attorney's contractual charging lien on the client's recovery is not self-executing. It can only be enforced by an independent action against the client after the client's recovery in the main action [Bandy v. Mt. Diablo Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 230, 234, 126 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; see Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp. v. Reed (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1321-1323, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d. 244 ; In re Marriage of Tushinsky (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 136, 143, 249 Cal. Rptr. 611 ; but see Spires v. American Bus Lines (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 211, 215, 204 Cal. Rptr. 531 (allowing former attorney to intervene in settlement conference for purpose of asserting attorney's fee lien on client's settlement of case in which client was represented by subsequently hired attorneys)]. For discussion of the bases for these causes of action, see § 72.452.

This form is for use only if the contingency fee agreement includes a provision creating a charging lien on any recovery by plaintiff; if the agreement does not create a lien, counsel should instead use the complaint in § 72.742.

[3] Decisions

Charging lien must comply with Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-300. Fletcher v. Davis (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 61, 68-70, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 58, 90 P.3d 1216

Contract provision giving attorney lien on client's claim of a share in decedent's estate or any sum recovered by settlement establishes lien on estate assets when claim vindicated. Estate of Kerr (1966) 63 Cal. 2d 875, 48 Cal. Rptr. 707, 409 P.2d 931 (client was sole beneficiary)

Attorney's lien under contingent fee contract is security interest in proceeds of litigation and provides equitable right to have fees and costs due him or her for services in lawsuit secured to him or her out of judgment or recovery. Isrin v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 153, 158-159, 45 Cal. Rptr. 320, 403 P.2d 728 (dictum reporting rule)

Lien for payment of fees out of proceeds of judgment may be created by agreement between attorney and client. Haupt v. Charlie's Kosher Market (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 843, 845, 112 P.2d 627

Attorney does not have lien for compensation in absence of agreement for such with client. Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 373, 90 P.2d 63

Attorney's lien has priority over medical lien, regardless of which lien was first in time. Gilman v. Dalby (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 606, 616-620, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 231

Even if lien is invalid or otherwise unenforceable, underlying obligation remains valid. Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 1489, 1522-1524, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268

Attorney's lien on client's prospective recovery must be enforced in separate action, and any order or judgment granting attorney fees in the main action exceeds court's jurisdiction and is void. Cal-Western Reconveyance Corp. v. Reed (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1321-1323, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d. 244

Attorneys' contractual lien on settlement proceeds from tort claim was not governed by Article 9 of Uniform Commercial Code. Bluxome Street Associates v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1155-1156, 254 Cal. Rptr. 198

Contractual lien for attorney's fees and costs entered into prior to initiating legal action has priority over judgment creditor's lien created pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.410; fact that purpose of judgment creditor's lien was to reimburse state government for paying out client's child support arrearages does not justify new exception to "first in time, first in right" rule set forth in Civ. Code § 2897. Cappa v. F & K Rock & Sand, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 172, 175-176, 249 Cal. Rptr. 718

Although attorney's lien on client's recovery has priority over federal tax liens pursuant to I.R.C. § 6323(b)(8), court properly refused to uphold attorney's lien against judgment debtor when attorney failed to give judgment debtor sufficient notice of attorney's lien before judgment debtor paid amount of judgment to Internal Revenue Service in response to government's tax levy. Bree v. Beall (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 650, 659-661, 171 Cal. Rptr. 73

Contingent fee contract containing no words as to lien, security, or assignment does not create, as a matter of law, any lien securing attorney's fees; question whether such contract creates a lien is one of fact depending on intention of parties. Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v. Shivener (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 364, 370, 105 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Wagner v. Sariotti (1943) 56 Cal. App. 2d 693, 697, 133 P.2d 430

7. Plaintiff has performed all acts, services, and conditions required by such agreement to be performed on his part. _____ [Describe services and satisfaction of contingency, e.g., In so doing, plaintiff obtained a judgment in the amount of $_____ in such litigation in favor of defendant herein, and at defendant's request and for his benefit caused execution to be issued in such action and levied on certain real property, hereinafter described, belonging to the judgment debtor and caused the property to be sold by the Sheriff of _____ County, California, and at the sheriff's sale plaintiff purchased the said property for defendant for a portion of the sum then due on the judgment. Plaintiff thereafter negotiated, effected, and supervised certain releases and reconveyances of liens, encumbrances, and deeds of trust on such real property superior in right to defendant's rights as purchaser at the sheriff's sale, and negotiated, effected, and supervised a release by the judgment debtor of the right of redemption, and as a result thereof secured for defendant a fee simple title to the property, free and clear of liens and/or encumbrances. Thereafter plaintiff, for and on behalf of defendant, managed the real property, and negotiated, effected, and supervised the leasing and renting thereof and the collection of rents therefrom, and instituted and maintained two separate unlawful detainer suits to recover possession of the property for defendant from defaulting tenants, and performed various other valuable services in connection with the real property, its renting and prospective sale, all on behalf of said defendant, and at his special instance and request, from and after _____ (date), until on or about _____ (date).]

10. A controversy has arisen relating to the legal rights and duties of plaintiff herein, in that the defendant has claimed, and now claims, that plaintiff has no right, title, or interest to the real property, or its rents, income, and profits and that defendant is not indebted to plaintiff in any sum or amount whatsoever.

Contrary to defendant's contentions, plaintiff contends that under the contingent fee agreement between plaintiff and defendant herein described plaintiff is entitled to compensation in the sum of $_____ and that, as security therefor, plaintiff has a lien on all properties and monies collected by defendant as a result of plaintiff's services under the agreement.

11. It is necessary and proper for the court at this time to ascertain, determine, and declare plaintiff's rights as sought herein in that _____[specify].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That the court ascertain, determine, and declare the rights of the parties under the contingent fee contract herein alleged.

2. That the court declare that plaintiff is entitled to compensation for services rendered to defendant in the sum of $_____ and to a lien on all properties and monies collected by defendant for the purpose of securing plaintiff's compensation.

3. For [attorney's fees and] costs of suit herein incurred.

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an attorney to seek a declaratory judgment determining his or her right to compensation, and to a lien, under a contingent fee agreement. For discussion of the requisites for establishing a charging lien, see § 72.452[1].

[3] Allegations

A complaint for declaratory judgment alleges (1) the contract (Paragraphs 5, 6), (2) plaintiff's performance under the contract (Paragraph 7), (3) the property as to which he or she claims and seeks a declaration of rights (Paragraphs 8, 9), (4) the controversy between the parties (Paragraph 10), and (5) the necessity and propriety of the court's determination at the present time (Paragraph 11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see generally Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

Paragraph 6 should be used if the parties entered into a written compensation contract that included an attorney's fees clause pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 to recover fees in any future action based on the contract. Although it is not clear whether a declaratory relief action is an action on a contract, it is arguable that attorney's fees are recoverable under Civ. Code § 1717 in a declaratory action if the contractual clause does not limit the particular causes of action for which attorney's fees may be recovered, but instead provides for an award of attorney's fees in any action to determine the enforceability of the contract [see Star Pacific Investments, Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 462-463, 176 Cal. Rptr. 546 (parties to contract may provide for award of attorney's fees in any action to determine enforceability of contract)].

[4] Oral Contingency Fee Contracts May Be Voidable by Client

Contingency fee contracts are generally required to be in writing, although there are specific exceptions to this requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(c) (contingent fee contracts for workers' compensation benefits excluded from provisions of § 6147), Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147.5 (contingency fee contracts for recovery of claims between merchants excluded from provisions of § 6147); see discussion in Part II, Introduction, Subpart A]. If a contract that the statute requires to be in writing is oral, the contract is voidable at the option of the client; however, the attorney is entitled to recover a "reasonable fee" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6147(b)].

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by an attorney for tortious interference with a contract, based on the allegation that defendant induced the client to discharge plaintiff without cause from a contingent fee contract. For discussion of this cause of action, see § 72.453. For discussion and forms concerning interference with economic relations generally, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.130 et seq.

[3] Allegations

A complaint for tortious interference with a contractual relationship alleges (1) the contractual relationship between plaintiff and his client (Paragraph 5), (2) defendant's knowledge of such contract and his intent to induce the client to terminate such (Paragraph 7), and (3) the termination of the contract by plaintiff's client proximately caused by defendant's inducement and resulting damages to plaintiff (Paragraph 8) [see Herron v. State Farm Mutual Ins. Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 202, 205, 14 Cal. Rptr. 294, 363 P.2d 310 ; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 844, 861-862, 89 Cal. Rptr. 556] .

§ 72.748 Allegation in Answer to Complaint for Reasonable Attorney's Fee--That Defendant Tendered Full Amount of Reasonable Fee to Plaintiff Prior to Commencement of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1025]

[1] FORM Allegation in Answer to Complaint for Reasonable Attorney's Fee--That Defendant Tendered Full Amount of Reasonable Fee to Plaintiff Prior to Commencement of Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1025]

Defendant admits that plaintiff performed legal services to defendant in _____[specify services] and that the reasonable value of such services does not exceed the sum of $_____. Defendant tendered that amount to plaintiff prior to commencement of this action and on filing this answer deposits such sum in court for plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing allegation is for use by defendant in the answer to a complaint for the reasonable value of legal services. If the allegation is found to be true, plaintiff cannot recover costs of suit and defendant is entitled to recover costs against plaintiff [Code Civ. Proc. § 1025]. In addition, if the allegation is found to be true and the parties had entered into a written compensation contract that included an attorney's fees clause pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717, the defendant is deemed to be a party prevailing on the contract within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1717 and will therefore be entitled to recover attorney's fees in addition to costs incurred in the litigation [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2)].

[3] State Statutes

Attorney's fees clause in contract. Civ. Code § 1717

Tender and deposit as deeming defendant party prevailing on the contract for purpose of recovering attorney's fees pursuant to clause in contract. Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2)

Tender and deposit as relieving defendant of liability for plaintiff's costs of suit and entitling defendant to his costs of suit. Code Civ. Proc. § 1025

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, an attorney at law, duly admitted and practicing in the State of California, and residing in _____County, California.

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 72.740, Paragraph 3.]

[3. Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 72.740, Paragraph 4.]

4. On or about _____[date], at _____[address], California, plaintiff retained and employed defendant pursuant to _____[a written or an oral] contingent fee contract whereby defendant agreed to represent plaintiff in certain litigation for which plaintiff agreed to pay defendant _____ percent of any funds recovered for plaintiff if recovery was made [and to reimburse defendant for all taxable costs of suit advanced by defendant].

[5. Attorney's fees clause under Civ. Code § 1717, if appropriate. See § 72.740, Paragraph 7.]

6. In the course of such representation of plaintiff by defendant, defendant obtained a _____[settlement or judgment] in such litigation in the sum of $_____.

7. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that on or about _____[date] defendant received money for plaintiff in full payment of such _____[settlement or judgment] in the sum of $_____.

8. Plaintiff has performed all acts and conditions required by the agreement to be performed on his part [and has reimbursed defendant all taxable costs advanced].

9. Defendant's full compensation under the agreement is the sum of $_____, measured by _____ percent of the funds recovered, and plaintiff is entitled to the balance in the sum of $_____.

10. Plaintiff has made demand on defendant for payment of such sum but neither the whole nor any part thereof [except the sum of $_____] has been paid, and there is due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff the sum of $_____.

[Verification, if desired. See § 72.740.]

[2] Use of Form

The foregoing complaint is for use in an action by a client after discharge of his or her attorney, for return of fees and costs advanced. Depending on the exact provisions of the contract, the discharged attorney is entitled to recover the reasonable value of his or her services performed before the discharge, unless the discharge is based on the attorney's improper acts [see Jeffry v. Pounds (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 6, 9, 136 Cal. Rptr. 373 ; for further discussion, see § 72.451[2][b]]. This complaint should be used if the client has advanced money to the attorney in an amount greater than the attorney is entitled to under the circumstances (including the contractual language that is the basis for the attorney's entitlement to fees). For further discussion of the factors that can affect the amount of fees to which the attorney is entitled under given circumstances, see § 72.190 et seq. through § 72.240 et seq.

[1] FORM Complaint by Client for Declaratory Relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060] and Trial After Nonbinding Arbitration Regarding Compensation for Legal Services--No Action Pending

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF
_____ [name], Defendant(s).	)	[Amount demanded _____ (exceeds )	or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all times mentioned herein, defendant was, and now is, an attorney at law, duly admitted and practicing law in the State of California, and residing in _____ County, California.

2. On or about _____[date], _____ [set out essential facts of transaction giving rise to the adverse contentions of the parties, e.g., plaintiff was served with summons and complaint in a dissolution and child custody matter entitled In re Marriage of Jones, filed in the Paradise County Superior Court, Case No. 1000. On or about _____ (date), plaintiff and defendant entered into a written agreement, a copy of which is attached hereto and marked as Exhibit "A," in which defendant agreed to provide professional services to plaintiff in the above-described action, and plaintiff agreed to compensate plaintiff at the rate of $75.00 an hour. After final judgment, the court found that defendant had spent five hours on the matter, and ordered the petitioner in the dissolution action to pay $375.00 to defendant. Defendant then demanded that plaintiff pay to defendant a total sum of $7,500.00, less $375.00 paid to defendant by petitioner in the dissolution action and $200.00 paid to defendant by plaintiff.]

[3. The written agreement contains a clause that provides _____ (describe attorney's fees clause, e.g., that in any future litigation concerning the fee for defendant's services, the prevailing party is entitled to recover attorney's fees and costs incurred in that future litigation, pursuant to Section 1717 of the Civil Code).]

4. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant concerning their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that _____[set forth plaintiff's contentions, e.g., the total amount owed defendant for legal services rendered in the above-described action is $375.00, representing five hours of work]; whereas defendant disputes these contentions and contends that _____[set forth defendant's contentions, e.g., the total amount owed defendant is $7,500.00, representing 100 hours of work].

5. On or about _____[date], plaintiff and defendant entered into advisory arbitration pursuant to Business and Professions Code Sections 6200-6206 for determination of the disputed fee. The matter was heard by _____[one arbitrator or a panel of three arbitrators] pursuant to the rules of the State Bar of California [and _____ (name of bar association)], under case number _____. Notice of the Award and Findings of the Arbitrators was mailed to plaintiff by the _____[State Bar of California or name of bar association] on _____[date]. The award and findings were adverse to plaintiff and in favor of defendant in the sum of $_____.

6. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her/its rights and duties, and a declaration as to the amount, if any, he/she/it owes to defendant for legal services.

7. A judicial declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time under the circumstances in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her/its rights and duties under the written fee agreement.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. That the court ascertain, determine, and declare the rights of the parties under the fee agreement herein alleged;

2. That the court declare that plaintiff's total indebtedness to defendant under the fee agreement herein alleged is $_____;

3. For [attorney's fees and] costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For other and further relief as the court may deem proper.
Dated: _____.

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See § 72.740.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a client to obtain a trial after arbitration, by instituting an action to seek a judicial determination regarding the fee dispute that was decided in the attorney's favor in advisory arbitration [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6204(c); see generally Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6200-6206]. For forms for use by an attorney to seek recovery of fees and costs for legal services, see §§ 72.740 -72.746.

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges:

- The defendant's status as an attorney and the basis for venue (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395].

- The existence of a written fee agreement, and a description of the matter for which services were required (Paragraph 2).

- A statement of the controversy (Paragraph 4).

- The outcome of advisory arbitration (Paragraph 5) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq.].

- That the plaintiff desires a declaration of the parties' rights and duties under the circumstances and that a declaration is necessary and appropriate at the time (Paragraphs 6-7) [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1060, 1061; for a complete discussion of declaratory relief actions generally, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

The form includes an optional allegation that the contract included a clause providing that in any future litigation concerning the fees, the prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees and costs pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 (Paragraph 3). Although it is not clear whether a declaratory action is an "action on a contract" under Civ. Code § 1717, it is arguable that attorney's fees are recoverable in a declaratory action under a contract clause generally providing for the recovery of attorney's fees in the event of litigation [see Star Pacific Investments, Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 462-463, 176 Cal. Rptr. 546 (parties to contract may provide for award of attorney's fees in any action to determine enforceability of contract)]. For further discussion of attorney's fees and costs, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees , General Introduction.

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

Any person who desires a declaration of rights or duties with respect to another, or with respect to property may, in the cases of actual controversy relating to the legal rights and duties of the respective parties, bring an original action in the superior court, or in the superior court as a limited civil case to the extent allowed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 85 et seq., for a declaration of rights and duties in the premises, including a determination of any question of construction or validity arising under the contract [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]. The superior court has original jurisdiction in declaratory relief actions to conduct a trial after a nonbinding fee arbitration between an attorney and client, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., when the amount in controversy is $25,000 or less [Code Civ. Proc. § 85, 85.1, 86(a)(7)(B)].

In limited civil cases the caption must state the character of the action, whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000. When a limited civil case is brought in the superior court, the caption must also identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(8), (9)].

Except as otherwise provided by law and subject to the power of the court to transfer actions or proceedings, the county in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395].

[2] Use of Form

This for is a mandatory form for use when the attorney-client relationship is limited to a specific matter, and the attorney's duty to represent the client extends only to that matter. "Limited scope representation" is a relationship between an attorney and a person seeking legal services in which they have agreed that the scope of the legal services will be limited to specific tasks that the attorney will perform for the person [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.35(a)].

A party and an attorney may provide notice of their agreement to limited scope representation by serving and filing a Notice of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council Form MC-950) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(a)]. After the notice is received and until either a substitution of attorney or an order to be relieved as attorney is filed and served, papers in the case must be served on both the attorney providing the limited scope representation and the client.

This form is a mandatory form used to apply to be relieved as attorney on completion of limited scope representation. It must be directed to the client. The application must be filed with the court and served on the client and on all other parties or attorneys for parties in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(e)].

In addition, the client must also be served with a blank Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(e)]. If no objection is served and filed with the court within 15 days from the date that the application is served on the client, the attorney making the application must file an updated form MC-955 indicating the lack of objection, along with a proposed Order on Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-958) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)]. The clerk must then forward the order for judicial signature [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)].

If the client serves and files an objection to the application within 15 days, the clerk must set a hearing date on the Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)]. The hearing must be scheduled no later than 25 days from the date the objection is filed. The clerk must send the notice of the hearing to the parties and the attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)].

If no objection is served and filed and the court signs the proposed order, the attorney who filed the application must serve a copy of the signed order on the client and on all parties or the attorneys for all parties who have appeared in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)]. The court may delay the effective date of the order relieving the attorney until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)].

This form is a mandatory form used to object to the application to be relieved as attorney on completion of limited scope representation. A blank Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) must be served on the client along with the application [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(e)]. If no objection is served and filed with the court within 15 days from the date that the application is served on the client, the attorney making the application must file an updated form MC-955 indicating the lack of objection, along with a proposed Order on Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-958) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)]. The clerk must then forward the order for judicial signature [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)].

If the client serves and files an objection to the application within 15 days, the clerk must set a hearing date on the Objection to Application to Be Relieved as Attorney on Completion of Limited Scope Representation (Judicial Council form MC-956) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)]. The hearing must be scheduled no later than 25 days from the date the objection is filed. The clerk must send the notice of the hearing to the parties and the attorney [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(g)].

If no objection is served and filed and the court signs the proposed order, the attorney who filed the application must serve a copy of the signed order on the client and on all parties or the attorneys for all parties who have appeared in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)]. The court may delay the effective date of the order relieving the attorney until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)].

This optional form is used if no objection is served and filed with the court within 15 days from the date the application is served on the client. The attorney making the application must file an updated form MC-955 indicating the lack of objection, along with a proposed this form [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)]. The clerk must then forward the order for judicial signature [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(f)].

If no objection is served and filed and the court signs the proposed order, the attorney who filed the application must serve a copy of the signed order on the client and on all parties or the attorneys for all parties who have appeared in the case [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)]. The court may delay the effective date of the order relieving the attorney until proof of service of a copy of the signed order on the client has been filed with the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.36(h)].

Chapter 76 ATTORNEY PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY
PART I. SCOPE

7-76 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 76.01

AUTHOR: GEORGE M. LINDAHL

§ 76.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers [see § 76.10 et seq.]:

- General principles that govern the liability of an attorney to a former client, such as the requirements for establishing an attorney-client relationship, the duties arising from that relationship, and the effect that termination of the relationship has on the attorney's liability.

- Fiduciary duties owed to a current client and those owed to a former client.

- Conflicts of interest that may affect malpractice liability.

- Vicarious liability of attorneys such as those in a partnership or corporation for malpractice committed by associated counsel.

- Liability based on the misconduct of other employees or referral attorneys.

See also the following related discussions:

- An attorney's ethical duty to protect confidences and avoid any conflicts affecting current or former clients [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

- The creation and termination of the attorney-client relationship [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

This chapter also discusses an attorney's liability to a former client for negligence [see § 76.50 et seq.], including:

- Standard of care required of the attorney.

- Causation.
- Damages and costs that may generally be recovered.
- Requirement that actual damages be proven.
- Indemnification that the liable attorney may seek from other involved attorneys and from prior tortfeasors.
- Common acts of negligence that may result in liability, such as errors based on inadequate research or failure to meet required time limits.

The chapter also contains forms for complaints based on various types of negligent acts or omissions on the part of the attorney.

See also the following related discussions:

- An attorney's ethical duty to represent a client zealously and compentently [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .
- An attorney's ethical duty to protect confidences and avoid any conflicts affecting current or former clients [see Ch. 72, Attorneys Practice and Ethics .

This chapter also discusses theories under which an attorney may be liable to a former client for wrongdoing other than negligence [see § 76.150 et seq.], including:

- Breach of fiduciary duty.
- Improper representation of clients with adverse interests.
- Engaging in advantageous transactions with the client without taking proper safeguards to protect the client from undue influence.
- Infliction of emotional distress.
- Fraud.
- Breach of contract.

The analysis also contains forms for complaints based on these theories of liability.

See also the following related discussions:

- An attorney's ethical duty to protect confidences and avoid any conflicts affecting current or former clients [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .
- An attorney's fiduciary duties with respect to trust accounts [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

This chapter also discusses and contains [see § 76.170 et seq.]:

- Defenses that an attorney may invoke against a former client in a malpractice action, such as the lapse of the applicable statute of limitation or the client's comparative negligence.

- Doctrine of unclean hands.

- Lack of compliance with the Tort Claims Act, when attorney is a public employee.

- Collateral estoppel.

This chapter also discusses and contains [see § 76.200 et seq.]:

- Availability and scope of the liability of an attorney to nonclients, primarily to intended beneficiaries of the attorney's services.

- Circumstances under which liability may be extended to other than intended beneficiaries.

- Specific theories of liability, including negligence, breach of contract, malicious prosection, abuse of process, negligent misrepresentation, fraud, infliction of emotional distress, and civil conspiracies with a client.

This chapter also discusses and contains some of the more common affirmative defenses that an attorney may invoke in a malpractice claim brought by a nonclient, such as lapse of the statutes of limitation and the litigation privilege under Civ. Code § 47(b) [see § 76.220 et seq.].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

7-76 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 76.10

AUTHOR: GEORGE M. LINDAHL

§ 76.10 Nature of Malpractice

[1] Negligence

An attorney is bound to use ordinary skill and care in the course of his or her professional employment [Gambert v. Hart (1872) 44 Cal. 542, 552] . A breach of this duty can be the basis for a suit for legal malpractice. The elements of a cause of action for legal malpractice based on negligence are [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; see CACI No. 600]:

- The duty of the professional to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of the profession commonly possess and exercise.
- A breach of that duty.
- A proximate causal connection between the negligent conduct and the resulting injury.
- Actual loss or damage resulting from the professional's negligence.

It is only when these four elements coexist that an action for legal malpractice based on negligence will lie [see Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 175-176, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 (no cause of action stated when no breach or damages were established); Ventura County Humane Soc'y v. Holloway (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 897, 902, 115 Cal. Rptr. 464 (no negligence cause of action when defendant's duty of care not established)]. For further discussion of liability based on negligence, see § 76.50 et seq.

[2] Malpractice in Criminal Case

An additional element applies when the malpractice plaintiff was a criminal defendant in the underlying action. In these "criminal malpractice" actions, the plaintiff must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, his or her actual innocence of the criminal charges in order to recover in a civil malpractice action against his or her defense attorney [Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 545, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] . The Supreme Court's primary consideration in imposing this additional element was a concern that a criminal defendant who is factually guilty of the charged crime not be allowed to benefit in the form of civil damages recovered from a defense attorney [see Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 538-539, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] . Unless there exists no triable issue of fact, the question of factual innocence must be decided by the jury [Salisbury v. County of Orange (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 756, 764-766, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 831] .

The Supreme Court has subsequently added that an individual convicted of a criminal offense must obtain reversal of the conviction, or other exoneration by postconviction relief, to establish actual innocence in a criminal malpractice case [Coscia v. McKenna & Cuneo (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1194, 1201, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 25 P.3d 670] . An intact conviction, regardless of whether it results from a trial or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, bars proof of actual innocence in a legal malpractice action, even if ordinary collateral estoppel principles might not otherwise be controlling [Coscia v. McKenna & Cuneo (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1194, 1204-1205, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 25 P.3d 670 (postconviction relief may be in form of acquittal after retrial, reversal on appeal with directions to dismiss, reversal followed by refusal to continue prosecution, or grant of habeas corpus relief)].

The factual innocence requirement applies not just to the criminal charges actually brought against the criminal defendant, but also to lesser-included criminal offenses [Sangha v. LaBarbera (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 79, 88, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 640] . In one case, for example, the malpractice plaintiff sued his former attorney for convincing him to plead guilty to felony vandalism, which required destruction of property worth at least $400, and plaintiff argued that he need only show that he was factually innocent of felony vandalism. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that plaintiff was required to show that he was factually innocent of the lesser-included offense of misdemeanor vandalism, which applies when the property damage is less than $400 but is otherwise the same crime. The court noted that the factual innocence requirement is designed to limit malpractice damages to those criminal defendants who were factually innocent of any criminal conduct. Plaintiff conceded that he was guilty of misdemeanor vandalism, disputing only the value of the damage [Sangha v. LaBarbera (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 79, 88-89, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 640] . In a subsequent case, the court of appeal extended this reasoning, and thus the requirement of factual innocence and exoneration, to transactionally related offenses stemming from the same criminal event that do not necessarily qualify as lesser-included offenses [Wilkinson v. Zelen (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 37, 48, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779].

A plaintiff who was a criminal defendant is not required to prove actual innocence of the underlying criminal charges if the lawsuit against a former attorney is merely a fee dispute that challenges the attorney's billing practices and does not challenge the quality of the representation provided by the attorney [Bird, Marella, Boxer & Wolpert v. Superior Court (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 419, 421, 427-428, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (action for breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, and money had and received); see also Brooks v. Shemaria (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 434, 440-441, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430 (dispute as to terms of retainer agreement and return of unused portion of retainer)]. In addition, a plaintiff need not prove actual innocence in order to pursue a claim that the attorney committed negligence in failing to secure the return of plaintiff's property that had been seized in connection with the criminal arrest, at least when the relevant law enforcement authorities had concluded that the property should have been returned to plaintiff [Brooks v. Shemaria (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 434, 441-443, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430 (determination hinged on policy considerations underlying actual innocence requirement, rather than whether proceeding was labeled as "criminal" or "civil")].

[3] Breach of Contract

Because, in the usual case, the attorney undertakes to perform his or her duties pursuant to a contract with the client, the attorney's failure to exercise the requisite skill and care is also a breach of an express or implied term of that contract. Thus, legal malpractice may constitute both a tort and a breach of contract [Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 180-181, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] . Though the decisions dealing with legal malpractice have given little more than lip service to the breach of contract aspects, it has been pointed out that pleading both tort and contract will give rise to an election of remedies [see Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 182, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] . Further, the measure of damages in a malpractice action alleging breach of contract is governed by Civ. Code § 3300, applicable to contract actions generally, rather than by Civ. Code § 3333, which is applicable to breach of noncontract obligations [see Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 605, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544] . For further discussion of breach of contract actions, see § 76.155.

[4] Violation of Professional Ethics

An attorney's professional negligence may in some instances also constitute a violation of professional ethics, e.g., of the attorney's duty to represent his or her client zealously and competently [see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics].

§ 76.11 Malpractice Distinguished From Other Actions

While malpractice is essentially an action for damages caused by the attorney's breach of his or her duty to exercise ordinary skill and care in the course of his or her professional employment [see Gambert v. Hart (1872) 44 Cal. 542, 552] , other causes of action against an attorney may be occasioned by the attorney's breach of fiduciary duty to his or her client irrespective of negligence. The relation between attorney and client is a fiduciary relation of the very highest character [Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 189, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421 ; see § 76.176]. Thus, causes of action may arise for accounting [see Ch. 7, Accounting, Action for], for conversion [see Ch. 150, Conversion], for fraud [see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Tort)]; see also § 76.154], and for imposing a constructive trust [see Ch. 561, Trusts: Constructive Trusts]. Since the attorney-client relationship is also one of principal and agent, causes of action may also arise under agency law [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

§ 76.12 Common Areas of Liability

While a legal malpractice action can arise in any context, the most common source of legal malpractice claims is litigation activity. A study based on data compiled by the National Legal Malpractice Data Center between 1983 and 1985 found that 52.8 percent of all of the claims in the study arose out of litigation activities [see Gates, The Newest Data on Lawyers' Malpractice Claims, 70 A.B.A. J. 78 (April 1984) (statistics for the years 1981 through 1983)]. The study indicated that attorneys with the greatest risk of malpractice liability are those who represent plaintiffs in personal injury cases and clients in real estate matters; these areas accounted for 25 percent and 23 percent, respectively, of the total claims filed by area of law. Other common areas of malpractice by area of law were collection and bankruptcy (10 percent of all claims); family law (8 percent of all claims); and estate and probate (7 percent of all claims). Moreover, claims in the area of "corporations, business organizations" amounted to 5 percent of all claims.

§ 76.30 Attorney-Client Relationship

[1] Establishment of Relationship

The relationship of attorney and client is usually created by contract. The contract may be express or implied, and the general rules of agency apply [Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904 ; see also American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 590-591, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] . Under agency law, it is sufficient for the creation of an agency relationship that the conduct of the alleged principal (the client, in attorney-client cases) and agent (attorney) manifests acceptance of a relationship in which the agent acts for the principal [see Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 370, 232 P.2d 241 ; see also Civ. Code § 1550 (consent as essential element of contract)]. Although the existence of a contract is generally a question of law [see Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904] , establishing the circumstances that would create an attorney-client relationship is an issue of fact [Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22] .

In the typical case an attorney enters into a contract or retainer agreement with a client to perform services for a specific purpose. However, neither a retainer nor other formal agreement is required to establish the attorney-client relationship [Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534 ; Brandlin v. Belcher (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1001, 134 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; but see Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 954, 959, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532 (although formation of attorney-client relationship may be informal, such relationship does not exist merely because party believes that attorney is representing his or her interests)]. For example, an attorney-client relationship may be established when an attorney volunteers his or her services [see Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22 ; see also Wood v. Jamison (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 156, 163, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 (work performed by attorney in helping woman get loan was sufficient to support finding that attorney-client relationship existed)], or is appointed by the court to represent a given client [see Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904] . The relationship can also arise from a pattern of custom and practice between the attorney and client [Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534] . When the attorney-client relationship is limited to a specific matter, the attorney's duty to represent the client extends only to that matter [see Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343 (representation of incompetent client in one action as not constituting authorization for representation in unrelated action)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Documenting Limited Scope. It is advisable for the attorney to set forth the limited scope of his or her representation in a writing signed by the client at the outset of the legal representation. A defense to a legal malpractice action based on "limited representation" is difficult to establish when there is no such supporting documentation, and it is often met with skepticism by the court and jury under such circumstances.

Moreover, simply agreeing to investigate a case or providing legal advice to a prospective client may give rise to an attorney-client relationship and concomitant duties despite the absence of a fee arrangement [Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22] . For example, in Miller v. Metzinger [(1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22] the defendant had agreed to investigate a claim for wrongful death, but later informed the client that he could not handle the case and referred the client to other counsel who agreed to represent the plaintiff. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant in the plaintiff's subsequent malpractice action, apparently on the ground that no triable issue of fact existed regarding the alleged attorney-client relationship between plaintiff and defendant. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the facts that an attorney's role was purely investigatory, that he stated in his letter to the client that he did not agree to represent the plaintiff, and that he did not charge a fee for his services or secure a retainer, did not suffice to eliminate the existence of an attorney-client relationship as a matter of law [Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39-40, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22] .

If one attorney, as a courtesy to another attorney, appears on behalf of that other attorney's client at a court hearing, the attorney making the special appearance in court is associated to the attorney of record and owes a duty of care to the client. Therefore, although the precise scope of this duty is determined by the particular facts of the case, as a general rule the attorney providing the special appearance may be liable to the client for malpractice [Streit v. Covington & Crowe (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 441, 444-447, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] .

For further discussion of the creation of the attorney-client relationship, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

[2] Duty Arising From Relationship

The lawyer is classified with members of various other professions who are considered to possess knowledge, skill, or even intelligence superior to that of an ordinary person and is, as a consequence, held to a higher minimum standard of conduct; similar rules of law are applicable to lawyers as to doctors and dentists [Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 150, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864 ; see Ch. 209, Dentists , and Ch. 414, Physicians: Medical Malpractice . However, while an attorney has a clear duty to represent his or her client to the best of the attorney's ability, it has long been held that an attorney is not liable for every mistake that he or she may make in the course of practice [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621 , 530 P.2d; Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786, 171 P. 961 ; see BAJI No. 6.37.2]. Therefore, in the absence of an express agreement so providing, an attorney is not an insurer of the soundness of his or her opinions or of the validity of an instrument that the attorney has been retained to draft. Nor is an attorney liable for errors regarding questions of law on which reasonable doubt may be entertained by well-informed attorneys [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] .

An attorney is, however, expected to possess knowledge of the plain and elementary principles of law that are commonly known by well-informed attorneys. With respect to an unsettled area of the law, an attorney must undertake reasonable research and make an informed decision as to the proper course of conduct based on the particular problem at hand [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349 ; see also Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656] .

It is axiomatic that the existence of an attorney-client relationship is required to create an attorney's duty to act for a client [Daniels v. DeSimone (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 600, 607, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 (defendant was former partner of attorney retained to represent plaintiff, and no attorney-client relationship had ever been established with defendant); McGregor v. Wright (1931) 117 Cal. App. 186, 193, 3 P.2d 624] . In some circumstances, however, an attorney's duty extends to those other than his or her client. For example, an attorney retained by an insurance carrier owes duties to both the insurer and the insured [see, e.g., Zalta v. Billips (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 183, 187, 144 Cal. Rptr. 888] . For a duty to be owed to a third party beneficiary of a legal services agreement, the third party must show that the purchaser of the services intended to impose such a duty. For example, in the absence of any such showing, the appointment of defendants as bond counsel for a senior housing project was insufficient to create a professional relationship between a third party housing developer and defendants; thus, defendants were under no duty to provide correct information to plaintiff regarding the need to pay the prevailing wage on the project [B.L.M. v. Sabo & Deitsch (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 823, 832, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335] . An attorney owes no duty of care to an adverse third party in litigation. The third party's remedy, if any, is an action for malicious prosecution [Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 166, 181-183, 156 Cal. Rptr. 745] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Primacy of Insured's Interests. The attorney should always bear in mind the primacy of his or her duty to the insured [see American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 592, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] . When the interests of the insured and the insurer conflict, the attorney must defer to the insured's interests.

An attorney representing a corporation owes the same duties to the corporation as to an individual and can be liable to the corporation for legal malpractice to the same extent that the attorney would be liable to an individual [see Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 200 P.2d 7 (duty of ordinary care to corporation)]. In representing a corporation, an attorney must conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the corporation itself, acting through its highest authorized officer, employee, body, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-600(A)]. With the exception of potential exposure in the area of securities law, the types of legal malpractice claims asserted against corporate attorneys are not substantially different from those asserted against the attorney who primarily represents individuals. For discussion of liability imposed by the securities laws, see Marsh and Volk, Practice Under The California Securities Laws, Chapter 14 (Matthew Bender); Business Organizations, Volumes 11-11C (Matthew Bender).

[3] Termination of Relationship

Unless the agreement between the parties provides otherwise, the attorney-client relationship terminates once the task for which the attorney was retained is concluded [see Ruszovan v. Ruszovan (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 902, 906, 74 Cal. Rptr. 507 ; Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 677, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680 ; see also BAJI No. 6.37.3]. The cautious attorney, however, should communicate in writing with the client to confirm that the client understands that the relationship has terminated. The relationship may also end when an attorney is relieved either by the court or by the client [see Code Civ. Proc. § 284].

In the event that an attorney desires to unilaterally withdraw from representing a client, he or she must take reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to his or her client's rights. Thus, the attorney should give the client due notice of his or her intent to withdraw and a reasonable opportunity to employ new counsel [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(A)(2) (guidelines for withdrawal from employment); see ABA Model Code of Prof. Responsibility, DR 2-110(A)(2); BAJI No. 6.37.3 (defining the duration of professional responsibility)]. The attorney should also deliver to the client all files connected with the client's case on reasonable request [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700(D)

(guidelines for withdrawal from employment); see ABA Code of Prof. Responsibility, DR 2-110(A)(2); BAJI No. 6.37.3 (defining the duration of professional responsibility)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Pitfalls in Asserting Work Product. Although the attorney is entitled to withhold his or her work product after the attorney's employment is terminated, the failure to provide such material to the former client or to the client's new attorney is a frequent source of friction that can lead to legal fee disputes and even legal malpractice litigation. Therefore, the attorney should carefully determine whether any real purpose is to be served by asserting this privilege when the former client requests the case files.

In some instances, representation of a client may terminate by operation of law. For example, if a workers' compensation insurer hires an attorney to represent the insurer and the insured employer in a workers' compensation claim, the attorney's representation of the employer terminates by operation of Lab. Code § 3755 when the insurer notifies the injured employee and the workers' compensation appeals board that the insurer accepts liability for the claim [see Lab. Code § 3755]. At that moment, the employer is relieved of potential liability and dismissed from the claim. Thereafter, the insurer's attorney owes no duties to the employer [Canton Poultry & Deli, Inc. v. Stockwell, Harris, Widom & Woolverton (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1219, 1226-1228, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 (attorney had no duty to notify dismissed employer of claimant's stated desire to reach global settlement of both compensation claim and separate lawsuit brought against employer)].

Once the attorney-client relationship has been terminated, the attorney does not have a duty to represent the client in another matter [see Brandlin v. Belcher (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1001, 134 Cal. Rptr. 1] . Further, a substitution of attorney filed prior to the time when a client's right to sue is lost will relieve the substituted attorney from liability for damages arising from the loss of that right, as, for example, when a limitations period runs [Stuart v. Superior Court (1992) 14 Cal. App. 4th 124, 127-128, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (regarding limitations period for filing proof of service on complaint)]. However, as discussed under§ 76.31[2], an attorney's fiduciary obligations to a client may continue beyond termination of the attorney-client relationship.

For further discussion of the termination of the attorney-client relationship, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

§ 76.31 Fiduciary Relationship

[1] With Client

The relationship between an attorney and client is a fiduciary relation of the very highest character [Clancy v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 140, 146, 77 Cal. Rptr. 657, 454 P.2d 329 ; Cox v. Delmas (1893) 99 Cal. 104, 123, 33 P. 836] . In the role of fiduciary, an attorney must preserve all client confidences, unless disclosure is necessary to prevent a criminal act the attorney reasonably believes is likely to result in death or substantial bodily harm [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e); Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-100(A); Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386] , and must represent a client with undivided loyalty [see Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 715-716, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528] . In addition, an attorney is under a fiduciary obligation to disclose to a client all information bearing on the client's case. For example, an attorney must inform a client of any conflicts of interests and may be obligated to advise a client to seek independent legal advice on a given matter [Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 716, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 ; see also San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Soc'y, Inc. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 358, 375, 208 Cal. Rptr. 494 (attorney's duty to advise clients of conflict of interest as one basis for finding that insurer must furnish independent counsel to insured when latter's interest conflicts with insurer's); Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 901, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509 (attorney representing both parties to transaction as casting doubt on validity of transaction)]. Similarly, an attorney has a fiduciary duty to deposit client funds in a trust account [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100; T. & R. Foods, Inc. v. Rose (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1 (attorney's failure to comply with Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 4-100 was breach of fiduciary duty and professional negligence)].

In a case dealing with a conflict of interest between two clients, however, the California Supreme Court held that an attorney's duty of loyalty to his or her existing client, the target of contemplated litigation, requires that attorney to sever any professional relationship with the second client promptly on learning of the conflict. As a legal complement to that obligation, the attorney has no duty to provide any advice to the second client adverse to the interests of the first client, including advice respecting the statute of limitations governing, and the advisability of engaging alternative counsel to pursue, the second client's contemplated lawsuit against the first client [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 281, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950 (Court operated on assumption that second "client" might have taken on status as "client," and agreed with court of appeals that issues of fact material to that question remained in dispute, but disagreed that question of client status was material to dispositive issue raised by summary judgment motion)]. It should be noted that the Court limited its holding to cases in which an attorney is confronted with a mandatory and unwaivable duty not to represent the second client in light of an irremediable conflict with the existing client and acts promptly to terminate the relationship with the second client after learning of the conflict. The Court cautioned that, absent an irreducible conflict and mandatory duty to withdraw, an attorney's duty to advise a new or prospective client, once the nonengagement decision has been taken, may well be more extensive [see Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] .

The existence of a fiduciary relationship between an attorney and client means that all business dealings between an attorney and a client are closely scrutinized. Under Prob. Code § 16004(c), whose predecessor statute [see former Civ. Code § 2235 (creating presumption of insufficient consideration and undue influence)] was applied to contractual dealings between an attorney and his or her client during the existence of the attorney-client relationship [see Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 27, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 (interpreting former Civ. Code § 2235)], a transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary that occurs during the existence of the trust or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains, and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary, is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties, unless the transaction relates to the hiring or compensation of the trustee [Prob. Code § 16004(c)]. An attorney who violates a fiduciary duty to the client may be liable for either negligence in failing to uphold the duty owed to the client or, in some cases, for fraud [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1143, 1147, 1159, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89] .

[2] With Former Client

The fiduciary duties owed by an attorney to a client extend beyond the period of the actual attorney-client relationship. An attorney is not allowed to take any actions that would injure a former client in matters that are within the scope of the former representation, nor may the attorney use any information gained during the relationship against the former client [Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see People v. Thoi (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 689, 699, 261 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

§ 76.32 Conflicting Interests and Obligations

[1] Corporate and Securities Law

Conflicts of interest are among the most common grounds for legal malpractice actions against corporate and securities attorneys. The corporate attorney frequently represents the corporation, its officers and directors, and sometimes its shareholders in the same matter. The conflict issue arises most often in stockholder derivative actions when both the corporation and its directors and officers have been named as defendants. The limited California case authority suggests that the attorney's primary duty is to the corporation rather than to corporate management [see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290, 301 P.2d 10] .

Even if no actual or potential conflict of interest is apparent at the time the representation is undertaken, it may be argued that an attorney cannot represent both the corporation and corporate management without obtaining the written consent of all parties concerned [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 3-310(C), 3-600(E)]. However, it may be impractical if not impossible to obtain meaningful consent for such dual representation when the officers and directors seeking legal representation dominate the corporate board of directors, which must execute the conflict waiver on behalf of the corporation [see Messing v. FDI, Inc. (D.N.J. 1977) 439 F. Supp. 776, 782-784] . Therefore, an attorney who represents both the corporation and directors accused of wrongdoing may be subject to malpractice liability in an action brought by the shareholder(s) who prosecuted the derivative action.

For detailed discussion of the ethical duty to protect client confidences and avoid potential conflicts with current or former clients, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

[2] Family Law

Conflict of interests problems can arise in family law cases in the context of dual representation. Athough dual representation is strongly disfavored [see Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 526, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; see also Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 897-899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509 (pointing out ethical issues involved in representation of parties with adverse interests)], it may be acceptable under specified circumstances. For example, there may be dual representation at a hearing or trial if, at most, a potential (rather than an actual) conflict of interest exists between the parties, and full disclosure is made to and informed consent is obtained from both clients [Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] . However, if the dual representation is in conjunction with a trial or hearing in which there is an actual, present, existing conflict and the discharge of duty to one client conflicts with the duty to another, a purported consent would be neither informed nor intelligent as a matter of law [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Dual Representation Not Advisable. As a practical matter, it is difficult to conceive of any situation in which such dual representation would be advisable given the potential exposure of the attorney undertaking such representation to subsequent claims for legal malpractice, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud.

The duty of care imposed on an attorney representing parties with divergent interests was set forth in Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 . In that case, the court of appeal held that an attorney representing two parties with divergent interests must disclose all facts and circumstances that in the judgment of an attorney of ordinary skill and capacity are necessary to enable his or her client to make free and intelligent decisions regarding the subject matter of the representation [Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 528, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592] . It would seem that when there is an actual conflict, and no informed consent is possible [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] , an attorney who continues to represent both parties would breach the duty of care in doing so. It may be argued that dual representation is not negligent only when the proceeding is truly uncontested in that the parties have agreed to all substantive matters, and have agreed to the dual representation as well [see Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

[3] Trusts and Estates

An attorney practicing in the field of trusts and estates may try to represent parties with conflicting interests under a will or trust. It has been consistently held that an attorney should avoid representing more than one party involved in an estate proceeding or a trust instrument [see Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768 (representation of estate and joint tenant of testator); Morales v. Field, DeGoff, Huppert & MacGowan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 307, 313-317, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239 (representation of executor and unsecured creditor of testator in transaction settling creditor's claim against estate); Potter v. Moran (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 873, 878-879, 49 Cal. Rptr. 229 (representation of trustee and guardian of estate of minor beneficiary)]. Moreover, it also appears that an attorney cannot act in a fiduciary capacity as a trustee or estate representative and simultaneously represent estate claimants [see Richardson v. State Bar (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 707, 708-712, 122 P.2d 889 (disbarment of attorney who represented conflicting interests in guardianship and estate matters)]. These authorities seem to indicate that an attorney who represents parties with adverse interests in an estate should be held liable for any damages caused by the dual representation [see Potter v. Moran (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 873, 877-880, 49 Cal. Rptr. 229] .

It should be noted, however, that one case has held that an attorney could represent both the personal representative of an estate and an estate heir, depending on the circumstances, if the representation did not conflict with the interests of the estate [see Morales v. Field, DeGoff, Huppert & MacGowan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 307, 318-319, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239 (also holding that plaintiff could not object to representation when no objection was made at time of dispute)]. Thus, it appears that any imposition of liability based on dual representation depends on proof that the interests were actually in conflict.

[4] Existing Client as Potential Target of Action by New Client

Conflict of interests problems can arise when representation of a new client would conflict with the interests of an existing client. In such circumstances the California Supreme Court has held that an attorney who severs a relationship with a new or prospective client has no duty to advise that new client of the applicable statute of limitations or the need to seek other counsel [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 278-279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] . As stated by the Court, the attorney's duty of loyalty toward the existing client (the potential target of the new client's cause of action) precludes the attorney from rendering any advice to the new client that might harm the existing client in any way [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 278-279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] . The Court based its decision on the principles underlying the ethical prohibition of simultaneous representation of clients with conflicting interests. The Court also reasoned that the imposition of a duty to advise the new client would undermine the existing client's sense of trust and confidence in his or her attorney [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 282, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] .

Chapter 76 ATTORNEY PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Liability to Client
1. Bases of Liability

7-76 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 76.33

AUTHOR: GEORGE M. LINDAHL

§ 76.33 Vicarious Liability

[1] Partnerships

An attorney is vicariously liable under partnership law for the wrongful conduct of his or her actual or ostensible partners acting within the scope of their actual or ostensible authority [see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557-558, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 ; Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 453, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42] . Since the partnership and partners can be held jointly and severally liable for the wrongful conduct of the attorney who engaged in the wrongful conduct [Corp. Code §§ 15014, 15015; see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418] , it is customary for the partnership and partners to be included as defendants in a legal malpractice case.

However, a partner in a registered limited liability partnership that possesses a valid certificate of registration issued by the State Bar is not liable for the wrongful conduct of the partnership or another partner, except by agreement between the partners [Corp. Code § 16306(c),(d)]. Therefore, a partner in a limited liability partnership is not a proper party in a proceeding against a limited liability partnership unless the partner committed the tortious conduct, or the partners have agreed to assume the liabilities of the other partners [Corp. Code § 16306(g)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Naming Partners as Defendants. It is not essential that partners be named as defendants, however, because the partners or the firm's professional liability insurer will ultimately be required to satisfy any settlement or judgment in the legal malpractice action. Tactical considerations unique to each case should be carefully analyzed in deciding which, if any, of the defendant law firm's current or former partners should be sued. It is not unusual for a more effective and aggressive defense to be mounted in a legal malpractice case when partners are named individually and are thus more acutely interested in a favorable outcome of the case. Settlement prospects can also be affected by the inclusion of partners as defendants.

Ostensible authority is established in a legal malpractice action by showing that the partnership and its partners acted in a manner that caused third persons to believe that a partner had authority to act for the partnership in a given manner [Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418] . A partner is an agent of the partnership for the purpose of its business, and the partnership is bound by the act of a partner who is apparently carrying on the business of the partnership in the usual way [see Corp. Code § 16301(1); see also Civ. Code § 2317 (defining ostensible authority of agents generally)]. Thus, acts are presumed to have been within the scope of the partnership business when (1) the business done by the supposed agent, so far as it is open to the observation of third parties, is consistent with the existence of an agency, and (2) the third party was justified in believing that an agency existed regarding the transaction in question [see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418] .

In some cases, the issue is not whether the negligent attorney was acting under the authority of the partnership, but whether there is a partnership at all. The duties and liabilities that would be imposed on partners will also be imposed on parties whose conduct and dealings with the world lead third parties to deal with them as though a partnership existed [see Corp. Code § 16305(a); Westcott v. Gilman (1915) 170 Cal. 562, 568-569, 150 P. 777] . However, the factual showing required to establish what has been alternately called a partnership by "estoppel" or an ostensible partnership has not been clearly delineated by any reported cases in California [see Mallen, Apparent Partnership and Real Partnership Liability, 3 Prof. Liab. Rptr. 163 (1979)]. Nonetheless, the reasoning of Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42 , suggests that reference to "partners" or the use of a name that appears to be of a partnership on letterheads, business cards, pleadings, office space, and/or in communications with clients may support a finding of ostensible partnership sufficient to impose vicarious liability for the acts of attorneys with whom the attorney is sharing office space or is otherwise associated in a relationship that is not a partnership. The existence of a partnership by estoppel is typically a question of fact, and is only one of law when the evidence is not in conflict and is susceptible of only one reasonable inference [Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 455, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42] .

Although California case law in this area is sparse, it appears that a partner may be liable for the conduct of another partner that occurred before the creation of the partnership. An attorney may be liable for a partner's malicious prosecution when the partnership was created after the action alleged to have been malicious was filed, if some action was taken by a partner after the formation of the partnership. In such a situation, the partner acting on the maliciously-maintained action is the agent of the other partners [Lujan v. Gordon (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 260, 262, 138 Cal. Rptr. 654 ; see Corp. Code § 16305]. Arguably, if an attorney has undertaken to prosecute an action before joining a partnership and acts negligently while a member of the partnership, the other partners could be vicariously liable under a similar agency theory. However, such liability would apparently require a finding that some act that damaged the plaintiff took place after the formation of the partnership [see Lujan v. Gordon (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 260, 262-264, 138 Cal. Rptr. 654 (noting that continuation of malicious prosecution may cause additional damages to plaintiff; court apparently relied in part on that fact to hold partners liable)].

An attorney is liable for the wrongful conduct of his or her partners regarding matters for which the partnership was retained, even if the partnership is later dissolved, unless the contract between the attorney and the client has been performed or unless the other contracting party has expressly or impliedly agreed that the attorney need not so perform [see Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 453, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42] . Thus, when a partnership accepts a client's case, each partner may be held liable for the negligence of the partner handling the case unless the client agrees to release the non-representing partner(s) by leaving them out of the contract of employment. This is true even if the negligence of the former partner handling the case occurs after the dissolution of the partnership [see Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 453, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42] . However, a former partner who is held liable under such a theory may be entitled to indemnification from the negligent attorney [see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 943, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Pitfall in Limiting Liability. Care should be taken not to couch such an agreement as a release prospectively limiting the attorney's liability to the client for legal malpractice in violation of Cal. Rule of Prof. Conduct Rule 3-400(A).

[2] Professional Corporations

A professional corporation is vicariously liable for the wrongful conduct of the attorney "employee" to the same extent that the attorney would be liable if he or she were not incorporated [see Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 95-96, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486 , overruled in part by Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 (disapproved on other grounds in Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 514, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666 , attorney members of dissolved corporate law firm vicariously liable for malpractice of corporation committed prior to dissolution); see also State Bar Law Corp. Rules, Rule IV(B)(1) (requiring joint and several guarantee of payment of claims of clients arising out of the practice of law by the corporation)]. Presumably, the plaintiff may sue either the corporation or the negligent attorney, or both, under the theories generally applicable to vicarious liability situations. Further, if the corporation is insolvent, the shareholder attorneys, as guarantors of the debts of the corporation, are jointly and severally liable for the malpractice liability of the corporation [Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 95-96, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486 , overruled in part by Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) (disapproved on other grounds in Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 514, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666); see State Bar Law Corp. Rules, Rule IV(B)(1)].

[3] Employees

An attorney is liable for the wrongful conduct of attorneys, law clerks, paralegals, secretaries, detectives, or other employees and agents acting in the course and scope of their employment [see Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 663, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269 (private detective agency); see also Moore v. State Bar (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 74, 81, 41 Cal. Rptr. 161, 396 P.2d 577 (attorney who failed to supervise associate properly, leading to breach of duty to client, subject to discipline)]. Such liability can encompass the intentional torts of employees of the attorney or the law partnership [Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 663, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269] .

[4] Attorney Referrals

It is not clear whether, and the extent to which, an attorney may be held liable for the negligence of counsel to whom he or she has referred a client or potential client. Presumably, any such liability would depend on the existence of a duty of the referring attorney to investigate the qualifications of an attorney to whom he or she refers a client, and the extent of that duty (if any such duty exists) [see Tormo v. Yormark (D.N.J. 1975) 398 F. Supp. 1159, 1170-1172 (applying New Jersey law; court assumed that attorney had duty to exercise care in referring client to attorney to insure that latter was competent and trustworthy, and discussed nature of duty to investigate character of attorney to whom client was referred); but see Christensen, O'Connor, Garrison & Havelka v. State, Dep't of Revenue (1982) 97 Wn.2d 764, 649 P.2d 839, 842 (dictum that referring attorney cannot be liable for negligence of attorney to whom client was referred)]. Such liability would be inappropriate when the client independently selects the attorney who is substituted in as counsel [see Mallen and Smith, Legal Malpractice, Ch. 5 § 5.6 (3d ed. 1989)].

Two separate relationships appear to be relevant to this issue: that between the client and the attorney who is making the referral, and that between the attorneys. It would seem that the existence of an attorney-client relationship between the client and the referring attorney would make it likely that the attorney has a duty to make the referral with care, and would be liable for a breach of that duty causing damage to the client [see Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39-40, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22 (issues of fact existed regarding existence of attorney-client relationship between referring attorney and potential client who sought advice, and referring attorney's alleged breach of duty)]. Similarly, if there are any facts that support a finding that the attorneys have a principal-agent relationship, then the referring attorney may be liable as in an associated counsel case, as discussed under§ 76.33[5]. It appears, however, that an attorney who refers a client to another qualified attorney, when either no attorney-client relationship was created or any relationship that did exist was terminated by the parties, would not be vicariously liable for the wrongful conduct of the subsequent attorney, although no reported California case has discussed this issue. It seems that in such a case there would be no agency relationship, and assuming that the referral itself was not negligent, there does not appear to be any basis for holding the original attorney liable.

In those instances when a client needs legal assistance in an area beyond an attorney's expertise, the attorney is required to refer the client to a specialist, or, at a minimum, to obtain the help of a specialist [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see also Lewis v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 683, 687-688, 170 Cal. Rptr. 634, 621 P.2d 258 (failure to refer case to specialist when counsel had inadequate knowledge of field of law as violation of former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 6-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110)); BAJI No. 6.04]. It is open to question whether an attorney who has a duty to refer a case to a specialist may be liable if the person to whom the case is referred is negligent, and whether the duty to refer imposes any greater duty of care than would otherwise exist. The nature of any duty to investigate the qualifications of a specialist to whom a case is referred is also open to question.

[5] Associated Counsel

When associated counsel engages in wrongful conduct, the original attorney and associated counsel would seem to be jointly and severally liable to the client for the wrongful conduct [see Floro v. Lawton (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 657, 671, 10 Cal. Rptr. 98] . It appears that an attorney is liable for the acts of subordinate counsel under the doctrine of respondeat superior, whether the associate is brought from outside the principal's office or is the junior associate in a firm of attorneys [see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 943, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81] . The limited case law implies that courts will apply agency law principles, and if an agency relationship exists, the original attorney may be held liable for the negligence of the subordinate attorney, although the principal attorney will be entitled to indemnification from the negligent agent [see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 943, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81] .

Moreover, even if an attorney has little involvement in a case following retention of associated counsel, but does not terminate the attorney-client relationship and shares in the legal fee, the attorney is vicariously liable for the wrongful conduct of associated counsel [see Floro v. Lawton (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 657, 671, 10 Cal. Rptr. 98 (original attorney was still attorney of record along with negligent attorney, although he did not take an active part in the case after negligent attorney was retained)]. It is unclear whether such vicarious liability would still be imposed if the associated attorney was an independent contractor rather than an agent.

In some cases the distinction between referral and association may be difficult to draw, as when an attorney of record in an action associates new counsel and then withdraws as counsel. In such a case, the attorney is arguably liable for the negligence of the attorney brought into the case. Such liability could be justified by analogy to a principal attorney's liability for the negligence of associated counsel [see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 941, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81 (principal attorney who was held liable to client for malpractice as entitled to seek indemnification from culpable associate attorney)]. An even stronger case may be made that an attorney is also liable for the negligence of associated counsel retained without the client's consent. In one case, an attorney associated another law firm as counsel of record for the plaintiffs without informing plaintiffs. After the law firm failed to serve summons on the complaint within three years of the filing of the complaint, plaintiffs' action was dismissed pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc.§ 581a (now Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210). In reversing a summary judgment for the defendant law firm on statute of limitations grounds and allowing the action to proceed, the California Supreme Court implicitly held that the attorney was potentially liable for the negligence of the associated law firm [see Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 180, 193-194, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Pitfalls in Associating Counsel. The attorney who retains other counsel to effectively assume full responsibility for a lawsuit is generally better-advised to formally withdraw or substitute out as counsel of record rather than remain as associated counsel of record. As associated counsel, the attorney is exposed to joint and several liability for legal malpractice and also to malicious prosecution, abuse of process, and sanction claims, among others, based on the conduct of co-counsel over whom no control may exist.

§ 76.50 Governing Principles

[1] In General

An attorney's liability to his or her client for negligence will depend on whether the attorney has complied with the applicable standard of care. By accepting employment to give legal advice or to render other legal services, an attorney impliedly agrees to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as attorneys of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks that they undertake [see, e.g., Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 356]. An attorney has the duty to exercise that degree of learning and skill ordinarily possessed by other attorneys of good standing practicing in the same or similar locality and under similar circumstances [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 355 n. 3, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621 , 530 P.2d; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see BAJI No. 6.37]. Moreover, as discussed in detail under§ 76.51, an attorney who holds himself or herself out as a specialist or fails to refer a client to a specialist under certain circumstances must adhere to a higher standard of care and exercise the skill, prudence, and diligence exercised by other specialists of ordinary skill and capacity specializing in the same field [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see also Lewis v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 683, 687-688, 170 Cal. Rptr. 634, 621 P.2d 258 (attorney who undertook probate case without knowledge of field or reference to more experienced counsel violated former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 6-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110)); BAJI 6.].

Furthermore, it is an attorney's duty to follow the specific instructions of his or her client regarding subjects such as whether to file suit, as opposed to matters that involve the conduct of a case, which an attorney has the authority to decide [see Shelly v. Hansen (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 210, 215, 53 Cal. Rptr. 20 (attorney's negligence based on failure to file suit when instructed to do so by client)]. An attorney may be held liable for all losses that result from a failure to follow a client's instructions in a reasonably prompt and careful manner [Lally v. Kuster (19l8) 177 Cal. 783, 786 ; see Shelly v. Hansen (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 210, 215, 53 Cal. Rptr. 20] . Although the exact parameters of the distinction between matters that do and do not involve the conduct of a case have not been specified by California courts, it has been held that an attorney's failure to file a complaint when told to do so by a client constitutes actionable malpractice [Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786-787, 171 P. 961] . The distinction may parallel the distinction between procedural matters that an attorney is authorized to act on by virtue of the retainer, and acts impairing the client's substantive rights or the cause of action itself, which the attorney is not authorized to undertake without the specific authorization of the client [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276-280, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760] .

[2] Definition of Standard of Care

The creation of the attorney-client relationship imposes on the attorney a duty to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as attorneys of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks that they undertake [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 356, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621 , 530 P.2d; Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 180, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421 ; Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 523, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592] . An attorney is not liable, however, for every mistake that he or she may make in the practice of law. In the absence of an express agreement, an attorney is not an insurer of the soundness of his or her opinions, and an attorney is not liable for being in error as to a question of law on which reasonable doubt may be entertained by well-informed attorneys [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; see Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; see also BAJI No. 6.37.2]. Thus, it is established that an attorney cannot be held legally responsible for an honest and reasonable mistake of law, or an unfortunate selection of remedy or other procedural step [Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 613, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919] .

Under this general standard of care, an attorney is responsible for a knowledge of the law and is under an obligation to perform diligent research and exercise informed judgment when representing a client [see Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418-419, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . Additionally, an attorney's violation of an ethical duty owed to a client under the Rules of Professional Conduct may constitute negligence [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1147-1149, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 (attorney liable for failure to disclose adverse interest); see also § 76.53].

In defining the standard of care owed by an attorney to a client, courts have traditionally included references to the locality or community in which the attorney practices. For example, in one case, the court approved of a jury instruction that limited the standard of care to the same or similar locality [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 355 ; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 299A (referring to similar communities); BAJI No. 6.37 (referring to similar locality)]. The approved jury instruction for use in legal malpractice actions includes language referring to the "same or a similar locality and under similar circumstances" [see Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 355 ; BAJI No. 6.37]. While no California case has defined the geographical boundaries prescribed by the term "locality," courts of other jurisdictions have held that the standard of care should be determined within the boundaries of the state or relevant county [see, e.g., Hansen v. Wightman (1975) 14 Wash. App. 78, 538 P.2d 1238 (state); Cook v. Irion (Tex. Civ. App. 1966) 409 S.W.2d 475, 478 (county)]. The most persuasive view seems to be that the standard of care should be defined in terms of a statewide boundary. Unlike other professions, there is no reason to lower the standard of care for a member of the legal profession practicing in a rural area [see Restatement (Second) of Torts § 299A, cmt. g].

It would appear that the basic statement of the attorney's standard of care, to use the skill, prudence, and diligence commonly used by members of the profession [see, e.g., Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] , necessarily includes a working knowledge of local rules and practices. Therefore, an attorney would be required to be familiar with local rules and practices of the courts in any county in which he or she appeared, whether or not the attorney normally practiced in that county.

[3] Establishing Breach of Duty

Whether the applicable standard of care has been adhered to is generally a question of fact [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 998, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583] . In most cases, the attorney's exercise of due care in a given situation is not a matter of common knowledge, and expert testimony is required to establish a breach of the applicable standard of care [see Wilkinson v. Rives (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 641, 647-648, 172 Cal. Rptr. 254 (case involving duty of attorney in executing instrument affecting land as beyond common knowledge of jurors); Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810-811, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 (case involving defendant holding self out as specialist, with claim related to expertise as such; person knowledgeable in specialty required to define duty of care and opine whether standard was met)]. There are cases, however, in which reasonable minds cannot differ on whether the standard of care has been violated, and in those circumstances the question is one of law [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 9, 200 P.2d 7] .

§ 76.51 Specialists' Standard of Care

An attorney who represents to the public and the profession that he or she specializes in a specific area of the law must exercise the skill, prudence, and diligence exercised by other specialists of ordinary skill and capacity specializing in the same field [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 (maritime specialty); see also BAJI No. 6.37.1]. In addition, recognizing the modern trend towards specialization in the legal profession, at least one court has approved of a jury instruction stating that a general practitioner has a duty to refer a client to a specialist or recommend the assistance of a specialist if under the circumstances a reasonably careful and skilled practitioner would do so [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Specialist's Standard of Care. The plaintiff in a legal malpractice action should argue, whenever possible, that the defendant attorney is a specialist subject to the higher standard of care of a specialist. A frequent source of confusion and dispute in legal malpractice cases is whether an attorney is a specialist who should be held to the higher standard of care of a specialist, such that a jury should be instructed accordingly [see BAJI No. 6.37]. While California has certification standards for specialists in fields such as tax, criminal law, family law, and workers' compensation, there appears to be a trend to recognize what heretofore have been viewed as "subspecialties" as separate specialties for purposes of the applicable standard of care. It is unclear, though, under existing case law whether a litigation attorney handling a complex matter (e.g., patent infringement, intellectual property, antitrust) is to be held to a specialist's standard of care, as proscribed by the particular subject matter of the representation, or to a uniform standard of care generally applicable to the litigation attorney regardless of the subject matter of the representation.

It is not clear how the courts will define "specialty" and "specialist" for purposes of applying the higher standard of care. It has been asserted that most attorneys limit their practices to selected areas of the law; therefore, even absent official recognition, many attorneys have become specialists [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] . Clearly those attorneys who advertise themselves as specialists in an area of the law should be held to a specialist's standard of care. It remains unclear, however, when an attorney must refer a case to a specialist to avoid being held to a specialist's standard of care. In one case, for example, defendant attorney acknowledged that he needed expert assistance in a complicated tax matter and he knew that tax experts existed. Under these circumstances the court held that the defendant attorney should be held to a specialist standard of care for failing to make a referral to a tax expert [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see also Lewis v. State Bar (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 683, 687-688, 170 Cal. Rptr. 634, 621 P.2d 258 (attorney faced with matter beyond his competence, who failed to associate or consult experienced attorney, was in violation of former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 6-101 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-110))]. The court also indicated, however, that the mere fact that a specialty exists does not mean that every case within that specialty must be referred to a specialist, because in many cases, matters within a specialty may be handled by a general practitioner [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] .

§ 76.52 Expert Testimony

Expert testimony is admissible to establish both the applicable standard of care, and whether the attorney has adhered to the standard [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810-811, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 999, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583] . Moreover, when a legal specialist is charged with negligence relating to his or her specialty, only a person knowledgeable in that specialty can testify regarding the applicable standard of care and whether the standard was met [Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] .

When the question of an attorney's alleged breach of duty turns on legal technicalities beyond common knowledge, requiring the fine exercise of legal judgment, expert testimony will be required to establish the attorney's breach [see Wilkinson v. Rives (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 641, 647-648, 172 Cal. Rptr. 254 ; Lipscomb v. Krause (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 970, 976, 151 Cal. Rptr. 465 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . If the issue involved in the case is one that is not within the common knowledge of the average juror, the plaintiff has the burden of proving, by expert testimony, that the defendant has breached the applicable standard of care [see, e.g., Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 311, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 (extent to which attorney will advance funds to hire investigators and depose witnesses or perform tests on a client as not matter of common knowledge); Wilkinson v. Rives (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 641, 648, 172 Cal. Rptr. 254 (whether or not careful attorney would have client sign and verify optional affidavit to accompany homestead declaration as not matter of common knowledge); see also Lipscomb v. Krause (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 970, 975, 976, 151 Cal. Rptr. 465 (implying that expert testimony required in all legal malpractice actions)].

Although no cases have interpreted Evidence Code Section 720 [see Evid. Code § 720 (sets forth qualifications for testimony as an expert witness)] in the context of legal malpractice, a court of appeal has held that the law's treatment of medical malpractice is sufficiently analogous to legal malpractice for the standards regarding the qualifications of experts in medical malpractice cases to serve as a guide in appellate review of the admissibility of expert testimony in legal malpractice cases [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1438, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] . The court found that analogizing to expert qualifications in medical malpractice cases is both logical and appropriate because (1) legal specialists, like medical specialists, are reluctant to testify against one another [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1438-1439, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] ; (2) a broad standard of qualifications is as appropriate in the legal malpractice context as it is in the medical malpractice context [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1439-1440, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] ; and (3) private study of a subject and contact with other professionals in the field may qualify an attorney expert just as it may qualify a physician expert [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1440-1441, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] . One particular effect of analogizing to medical malpractice cases is that Evidence Code Section 720 is broadly interpreted to permit an expert to testify even though that person has never performed the specific legal procedure deemed to constitute the legal malpractice in a given case [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1441-1443, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] .

Under this broad interpretation of Evidence Code Section 720, the party offering the expert testimony must demonstrate that the expert's knowledge of the subject is sufficient. The determination of the sufficiency of the expert's knowledge of a subject is left to the sound discretion of the trial judge. The determinative issue of sufficiency and, by definition, admissibility, is whether the witness has sufficient skill or experience in the field such that his or her testimony would be likely to assist the jury in its search for the truth [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1442, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] . Once this threshold has been met, the testimony is admissible. The question of the degree of the witness' knowledge, therefore, goes to the weight of the testimony rather than to its admissibility [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1443, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] . Under this standard, the trial court will be deemed to have abused its discretion in refusing to admit the testimony if the witness has disclosed sufficient knowledge of the subject to entitle his or her opinion to go before the jury [Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1442-1443, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243] .

There are situations when expert testimony is not required. When the failure of an attorney's performance is clear without the aid of expert testimony, a jury finding of negligence will be upheld, notwithstanding the lack of expert testimony [Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 716, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 ; see also Wilkinson v. Rives (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 641, 647-648, 172 Cal. Rptr. 254 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . The California Supreme Court has affirmed a judgment in which the jury was allowed to determine, without the benefit of expert testimony, whether the attorney's conduct constituted negligence or satisfied the duty of care [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 355 n. 3, 361]. When an attorney's performance is clearly contrary to established procedures, the trier of fact may find professional negligence without expert testimony [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1146, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 ; see also David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 892, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 (cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty)].

Additionally, when reasonable minds cannot differ on the issue of whether an attorney's conduct satisfied the applicable standard of care, the issue is treated as one of law rather than as one of fact as it would be in any other negligence action. If that degree of certainty may be reached without the use of expert testimony, the liability or lack thereof will be established as a matter of law, notwithstanding the fact that expert testimony was not introduced [see Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 9, 200 P.2d 7] .

§ 76.53 Ethical Codes as Standards of Conduct

An attorney's violation of the California Rules of Professional Conduct may lead to consequences other than disciplinary proceedings before the State Bar. For example, an attorney's violation of a duty owed to a client under the Rules of Professional Conduct may constitute negligence [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1147-1149, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89] . Thus, an attorney who became involved in business interests with his clients was liable under a negligence theory for violating the rules related to conflicts of interest [Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1147-1149, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 ; see former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 4-7 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 3-300, 3-310)]. In addition, a client may interpose an attorney's unethical conduct as a defense in the attorney's action for unpaid legal fees [see Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 618, 623, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253 (attorney violated rule against accepting employment adverse to a former client, permitting client to avoid fees although client received benefit of attorney's knowledge)].

Although an ethical violation does not in itself establish a breach of duty, some courts have held that allegations that an attorney has violated an ethical rule may support a cause of action in tort. Thus, an allegation that an attorney violated the ethical rule against threatening criminal prosecution to obtain advantage in a civil action has been held sufficiently outrageous to support a complaint for intentional infliction of emotional distress [Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321] . However, the court of appeal has subsequently declined to follow the holding in that case that an attorney's violation of a rule of professional conduct is sufficient to support a finding that an attorney's conduct was outrageous. The court of appeal's decision not to follow that holding was based in part on the fact that the rules themselves now provide that a violation does not create a new civil cause of action [Ross v. Creel Printing & Publ'g Co. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 736, 746-747, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787] .

In addition, the court of appeal has rejected the plaintiff's argument that an attorney who was subject to disciplinary action for violating the rule against communicating directly with a party represented by counsel was subject to a civil action for damages, whether or not the attorney committed an established tort [see Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 658-659, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269 ; former Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 12 (now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100)].

Although the violation of an ethical rule as such is not a tort, the violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity may create a presumption of negligence pursuant to the provisions of Evidence Code section 669. A presumption arises under section 669 if particular factual and legal findings are made. First, the trier of fact must find that the defendant violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity and the violation proximately caused injury to person or property. Second, the court must find that the injury resulted from an occurrence the nature of which the rule violated was designed to prevent and that the person suffering the injury to his or her person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the rule was adopted [see Ames v. State Bar (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 910, 917, 106 Cal. Rptr. 489, 506 P.2d 625 (Rules of Professional Conduct intended to protect members of public)]. Although no California appellate court has yet addressed this issue, there does not appear to be any reason to preclude the imposition of the presumption to an attorney's violation of an ethical rule in an appropriate case. The practice of law in California is regulated by the State Bar and rules regulating that practice appear to come within the definition of "statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity" for the purposes of Evidence Code section 669. "Public entity" in that statute includes public agencies and "every form of public authority" [see Peterson v. City of Long Beach (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 238, 244-246, 155 Cal. Rptr. 360, 594 P.2d 477 (applying presumption of negligence to violation of police department regulations concerning use of firearms); Barton v. State Bar (1930) 209 Cal. 677, 680-681, 289 P. 818 (Rules of Professional Conduct adopted pursuant to delegation by legislature)].

Aside from the presumption of negligence, which applies to a statute, ordinance, or regulation [see Evid. Code § 669(a)(1)], there is a possibility that standards of conduct established by a professional organization (such as the American Bar Association) may be judicially noticed by a court under Evidence Code section 452(h) as evidence of the professional's duty of care [see Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 310, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 (relying on ABA rule to find "long-accepted standard of professional conduct"); Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 101 n.5, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 (court took judicial notice of criteria promulgated by National Association of Realtors to support finding regarding duty of real estate broker in action for negligence and negligent misrepresentation); Pepper v. Underwood (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 698, 714, 122 Cal. Rptr. 343 (canons of conduct adopted by realtors as rebuttable evidence of realtors' standard of care in action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation)]. It is not clear, however, what effect rules that do not have the effect of law would have in legal malpractice actions, given the extensive regulation by the California Rules of Professional Conduct and the extensive case law setting forth the standard of care that attorneys must meet.

PRACTICE TIP:

Admission of Ethical Rules. Regardless of the possible admissibility of ethical rules that do not have the effect of law or the legal presumptions flowing from the violation of ethical standards, the plaintiff in a legal malpractice case can typically present such rules and violations indirectly through an expert witness who will cite them as a basis for the expert's opinion on the standard of care.

§ 76.70 Proximate Cause

For a plaintiff to be able to state a cause of action for negligence against an attorney, the attorney's negligence must be the proximate cause of damage to the plaintiff [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433]. As long as the attorney's negligence was a cause in fact of the client's damage, it need not be the only proximate cause [see Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 178, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 1002, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583 ; see also John B. Gunn Law Corp. v. Maynard (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1565, 1573, 235 Cal. Rptr. 180 (BAJI No. 3.78, defining proximate cause in terms of a "substantial factor" contributing to injury, as proper jury instruction when plaintiff's injury could have been produced by either of two causes, and attorney defendant's conduct is one of those causes); but see McGregor v. Wright (1931) 117 Cal. App. 186, 196, 3 P.2d 624 (early case holding that attorney's negligence must be sole and proximate cause of a client's damages)]. Moreover, a subsequent attorney's negligence is not a superseding cause that absolves the prior attorney of liability for the attorney's own negligence [Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 179, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838 ; see BAJI No. 3.79 and Use Note].

Proximate cause is generally a factual issue to be determined by the trier of fact, except in those cases in which reasonable people cannot disagree and the court determines the issue as a matter of law [Zalta v. Billips (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 183, 191, 144 Cal. Rptr. 888 ; Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 153, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406] . The burden of proof on the issue of causation in a legal malpractice case is the same as in a standard negligence action. The plaintiff must establish proximate cause by a preponderance of the evidence [see Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 1002, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583 ; Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 153, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 ; see also BAJI No. 2.60 (defining "preponderance of evidence")]. In an appropriate case, however, the burden may be shifted to the defendant attorney to disprove causation. Shifting the usual burden of proof is justified on public policy grounds. However, it is reserved for cases in which a substantial probability exists that the defendant's negligence was a cause of the damage to the plaintiff, but the nature of the negligence also makes it practically impossible for the plaintiff to prove conclusively that the negligence was a proximate cause of damage to the plaintiff [cf. Thomas v. Lusk (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1709, 1717-1721, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 (error to shift burden to attorney to disprove causation when both plaintiff and attorney had equal access to evidence on causation in underlying products liability action, both parties were partially responsible for loss of evidence, and plaintiff failed to establish substantial probability of causal link between attorney negligence and damage)].

As discussed in § 76.71, a plaintiff in a malpractice action arising out of underlying litigation is required to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the plaintiff would have obtained a better result in the underlying litigation if not for the attorney's negligence [see, e.g., Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 153, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406] . A similar requirement applies if the alleged malpractice occurs when advice is given, or documents are being prepared for, a business transaction. Thus, unless the harm is caused by concurrent independent causes, a plaintiff complaining of malpractice in a transactional setting is required to prove that but for the malpractice, the plaintiff would more likely than not have obtained a more favorable result [Viner v. Sweet (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1232, 1240-1244, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 629, 70 P.3d 1046 ; see, e.g., Jalali v. Root (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1768, 1777-1779, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 689 (plaintiff who alleged that attorney gave incorrect advice as to tax consequences of litigation settlement failed to prove that advice actually caused any damages, because settlement terms were very generous, given relative weakness of case, and no evidence was presented that more favorable settlement was possible)].

In a malpractice action brought by a criminal defendant against his or her former defense attorney, the plaintiff must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she was factually innocent of the criminal charges in order to state a malpractice claim [Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 545, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] . Although the Supreme Court imposed this requirement as a separate element of the cause of action based on "policy and pragmatism" [see Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 534, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] , this requirement may be justified through the argument that proximate causation between the malpractice and the conviction cannot be proven since the original criminal action of a factually guilty defendant was the proximate cause of the criminal conviction. This argument had earlier been adopted in one court of appeal opinion and is consistent with language contained in the Supreme Court's decision [see Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 540, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983 ; Tibor v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1373, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 ; see also Salisbury v. County of Orange (2005)131 Cal. App. 4th 756, 764-766, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 831 (if triable issue of fact exists, question of factual innocence is for jury)]. The Supreme Court has subsequently added that an individual convicted of a criminal offense must obtain reversal of the conviction, or other exoneration by postconviction relief, to establish factual innocence [Coscia v. McKenna & Cuneo (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1194, 1201, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 25 P.3d 670] .

The factual innocence requirement applies not just to the criminal charges actually brought against the criminal defendant, but also to lesser-included criminal offenses [Sangha v. LaBarbera (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 79, 88, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 640], as well as to transactionally related offenses stemming from the same criminal event that do not necessarily qualify as lesser-included offenses [Wilkinson v. Zelen (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 37, 48, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 779].

Not all claims brought by a convicted criminal defendant against his or her former attorney are subject to the requirement that the claimant prove his or her actual innocence of the criminal charges, however. For example, a fee dispute between a convicted criminal and his or her attorney may be litigated without a showing of actual innocence by the client [Brooks v. Shemaria (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 434, 440-441, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430 (dispute as to terms of retainer agreement and return of unused portion of retainer); Bird, Marella, Boxer & Wolpert v. Superior Court (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 419, 432, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782 (allegations of fraudulent billing practices)]. In addition, a plaintiff need not prove actual innocence in order to pursue a claim that the attorney committed negligence in failing to secure the return of plaintiff's property that had been seized in connection with the criminal arrest, at least when the relevant law enforcement authorities had concluded that the property should have been returned to plaintiff [Brooks v. Shemaria (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 434, 441-443, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430 (determination hinged on policy considerations underlying actual innocence requirement, rather than whether proceeding was labeled as "criminal" or "civil")].

§ 76.71 "Case-Within-a-Case" Requirement

In a legal malpractice case arising out of underlying litigation, the plaintiff is required to prove by a preponderance of the evidence both that the attorney was negligent and that the plaintiff would have obtained a better result in the underlying case if the attorney had conformed to the standard of practice [see Barnard v. Langer (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1453, 1461-1463, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 175 ; Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 153, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 ; see also BAJI No. 6.37.5; but see Sukoff v. Lemkin (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 740, 745 n.4, 249 Cal. Rptr. 42 (noting that burden of proof may shift when necessary evidence is unavailable because of defendant's alleged negligence)]. This trial-within-a-trial burden also applies in negligence actions against other types of professionals [Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 820, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (malpractice action against accountant)]. The plaintiff must establish the elements of duty, breach, proximate cause, and damages in the negligence action against the attorney [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] .

To prove that the attorney's negligence in the underlying action proximately caused damage to the plaintiff, the plaintiff must essentially retry the underlying action to establish that he or she would have obtained a better result in the absence of the attorney's negligence [see, e.g., Kessler v. Gray (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 284, 290-291, 143 Cal. Rptr. 496 ; Walker v. Porter (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 174, 178, 118 Cal. Rptr. 468] . The evidence admissible in a trial of the "case-within-a-case" is the evidence that would have been admissible in the underlying action [Kessler v. Gray (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 284, 291, 143 Cal. Rptr. 496] . Counsel should note, however, that if the underlying action involved a client's criminal conviction, the client is collateral estopped from relitigating the issue of the proximate cause of his or her conviction in a subsequent malpractice action against the defense attorney [Weiner v. Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp (1980) 114 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48, 170 Cal. Rptr. 533] .

The "trial-within-a-trial" requirement calls for a determination of what an objectively reasonable judge and fact finder would have done in the underlying suit, rather than what the particular judge or fact finder in that underlying suit would probably have done [Mattco Forge, Inc. v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 820, 840, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (accountant malpractice case)]. The question of what would have happened if a negligent attorney had acted otherwise is a factual one, and the legal malpractice plaintiff has a constitutional right to have the "case-within-a-case" decided by a jury, even if the underlying claim would have gone to arbitration [Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 969-971, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88] . Because it is the role of the fact finder, usually a jury, to determine what would have happened in the underlying suit absent the malpractice, a trial court errs if it allows an expert to testify as to what the probable result would have been. Such testimony effectively allows the expert to decide the ultimate issue entrusted to the jury [Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 973-974, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88] .

If the liability of an attorney in a legal malpractice action is based on a failure to act, the plaintiff cannot recover even if the failure to act was negligent, unless the plaintiff shows that he or she would have received a favorable judgment if the attorney had performed the act [Kurinij v. Hanna & Morton (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 853, 866, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324 (causation is ordinarily a question of fact); Feldesman v. McGovern (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 566, 568, 112 P.2d 645 ; see United Cmty. Church v. Garcin (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 327, 334, 282 Cal. Rptr. 368 (if attorney's inaction resulted in entry of default judgment in underlying action against client, client must show that he or she would have had viable defense in underlying action); see also Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32] .

If an attorney's conduct is alleged to be negligent, evidence that the underlying court itself acted erroneously does not necessarily absolve the attorney of malpractice liability on the basis of superseding causation. To resolve the issue of causation on a malpractice claim, the proper inquiry is what a reasonable court should have done if the attorney had acted within the applicable standard of care, not what a reasonable court faced with the attorney's actual conduct should have done [Lombardo v. Huysentruyt (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 656, 668-669, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 691] . Moreover, because the relevant inquiry involves determination of what a reasonable court would have done in the underlying action, an attorney sued for malpractice is permitted to defend on the grounds that the court in the underlying case made an error and that had the court made a proper decision, the malpractice plaintiff would not have been damaged [Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1568, 1584-1585, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166] .

If the alleged malpractice involves the failure to preserve evidence that was critical to the success of the underlying lawsuit, the burden may be shifted to the attorney to prove that the attorney's negligence did not cause the malpractice plaintiff to lose a lawsuit that was otherwise meritorious. This shifting of the burden is justified on the grounds that it is more appropriate to hold the attorney liable for failing to preserve critical evidence than to deny the malpractice plaintiff's claim, because the underlying malpractice is the very reason that the plaintiff lost the evidence necessary to prove that the underlying claim was meritorious [Galanek v. Wismar (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1426-1427, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236] . The malpractice plaintiff must establish a prima facie case or substantial probability of causation as a condition precedent to shifting the burden of proof [Galanek v. Wismar (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1427, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236 (nonsuit was improper because malpractice plaintiff's opening statement alleged prima facie case against attorney for failing to preserve automobile critical to otherwise meritorious products liability suit)].

In addition to proving the viability of the underlying claim, in a legal malpractice case based on an attorney's negligent failure to obtain a judgment for the plaintiff, the plaintiff must prove the collectibility of the lost claim by establishing the solvency of the defendant in the underlying action [Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 787-788, 171 P. 961 ; Garretson v. Harold I. Miller (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-573, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 317 ; Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32] . It would seem that "solvency" in the strict sense is probably not required; if the defendant in the underlying action had insurance coverage that the plaintiff could have recovered, the plaintiff's proof of such insurance would seem to suffice for the purpose of establishing damages. This requirement is essentially a combination of causation and damage requirements in that the plaintiff must show that, but for the negligence of the attorney, the plaintiff could have recovered from the third party in the underlying action. Unless such proof is made, the plaintiff may not recover [see Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 787-788, 171 P. 961 ; Garretson v. Harold I. Miller (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-573, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 317 ; Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754-755, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 ; see also DiPalma v. Seldman (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1507-1511 (malpractice plaintiffs were required to show solvency of defendants in underlying lawsuit to support malpractice claim based on failure to enforce judgment, although evidence of solvency was not required to support claim for malpractice based on negligence in advising malpractice plaintiffs to sign quitclaim deed relinquishing interest in property)]. Actual damages are an essential element of a malpractice cause of action; nominal damages alone are insufficient to state a cause of action [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Solvency of Defendant in Underlying Action. The defendant in a legal malpractice action predicated on an allegedly mishandled lawsuit should determine through early investigation or discovery whether any judgment in the underlying action would have been collectible. Evidence occasionally can be developed that the defendant in the underlying case was an uninsured and defunct entity or bankrupt individual and thus "judgment-proof" at all relevant times, such that a sumary judgment motion can be made based on the absence of the essential element of damages. However, collectibility is an element of the plaintiff's case, and the defendant does not have the burden of pleading or proving that an underlying judgment would not have been collectible [Garretson v. Harold I. Miller (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-573, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 317; see also Hecht, Solberg, Robinson, Goldberg & Bagley LLP v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 579, 595-599, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 446 (allowing limited discovery of financial details, including assets and insurance coverage, of underlying defendant in order to show collectibility)] .

§ 76.90 Requirement of Actual Damages

Until a plaintiff has sustained actual damages as a result of the defendant attorney's wrongful conduct, no cause of action for legal malpractice accrues [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] . Actual damages may take the form of unresolved subsequent litigation. The fact that subsequent litigation has not been completed does not render an action for legal malpractice premature, if the malpractice alleged was the failure to prevent the lawsuit [Sindell v. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1460, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] .

Actual, provable damages are an essential element of a legal malpractice action, and a plaintiff is not entitled to recover nominal damages alone [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 176, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 (breach of professional duty causing only nominal damages, speculative harm, or threat of future harm--not yet realized--as insufficient to create cause of action for negligence)]. Consequently, a legal malpractice complaint is subject to a demurrer if actual damages are not alleged [Sisco v. Cosgrove, Michelizzi, Schwabacher, Ward & Bianchi (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1302, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647 (malpractice action by mother of boy who had been entitled to proceeds from structured settlement, against boy's attorneys for a failure to name her as his sole beneficiary in settlement documents); Kluge v. O'Gara (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 207, 209, 38 Cal. Rptr. 607] .

The court of appeal held in one case that a client had no malpractice action for failing to achieve a better result in underlying litigation because the statute of limitations had already expired on that underlying suit before the client first consulted the attorney about filing a lawsuit. Because the limitations period had expired, the court reasoned, the settlement recovery that the client obtained was a windfall to which the client was not legally entitled. Moreover, the client did not allege that a better settlement could have been obtained, only that a better result might have been obtained at trial. The court concluded under those circumstances that the client could not prove that she suffered any damages by failing to proceed to trial [Slovensky v. Friedman (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1518, 1527-1528, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 60] .

§ 76.91 Requirement of Certainty of Damages

Speculative damages are not recoverable in a legal malpractice action [see In re Easterbrook (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1544, 244 Cal. Rptr. 652 , overruled on other grounds, People v. Romero (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 728, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270, 883 P.2d 388 ; Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 942, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393 ; see also BAJI No. 14.60]. Thus, when an attorney's alleged negligence creates only a threat of future harm, no cause of action for malpractice has accrued [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 176, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; see Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1063, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250 (mere exposure to liability, not resulting in compensable detriment to plaintiff, does not constitute "actual damage")]. Speculative damages should not, however, be confused with damages that are merely difficult to prove. If damages are ascertainable, they are recoverable regardless of the difficulty in proving them [Brown v. Critchfield (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 858, 872, 161 Cal. Rptr. 342] . Even an imprecise estimate of damages is sufficient evidence to support a claim for legal malpractice [see Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 989-990, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 (malpractice plaintiff could seek recovery for lost commissions to extent supported by testimony providing reasonable basis for calculation); Ventura County Humane Soc'y v. Holloway (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 897, 907, 115 Cal. Rptr. 464 ; Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 606, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544] . However, the plaintiff must provide some competent evidence of all elements needed to support an award of damages [see Marshak v. Ballesteros (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1514, 1518-1519, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (summary judgment for defendant proper because plaintiff failed to provide evidentiary support for allegations that marital settlement valuations were incorrect, that ex-wife would have accepted less, or that judge would have entered more favorable judgment)].

The distinction between speculative damages and recoverable damages is often a difficult one for the trier of fact to draw. It is perhaps most succinctly described by the court in Brown v. Critchfield, which applied the general rule that, while a plaintiff must show with reasonable certainty that he or she has suffered damages by reason of the wrongful act of defendant, once the cause and existence of damages have been so established, recovery will not be denied because the damages are difficult to ascertain [Brown v. Critchfield (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 858, 872, 161 Cal. Rptr. 342 ; see also Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 126, 150, 62 Cal. Rptr. 714] .

[1] Generally

One who establishes malpractice on the part of an attorney in prosecuting or defending a lawsuit must also prove that careful management would have resulted in recovery of a favorable judgment and collection of the judgment or, in the case of a defense, that proper handling would have resulted in a judgment for the client [see, e.g., Kessler v. Gray (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 284, 290-292, 143 Cal. Rptr. 496] . There are no damages in the absence of these latter elements [see Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 ; see also Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 787-788, 171 P. 961 (damages for negligence in collection of note and mortgage as dependent on evidence of valid subsisting debt and solvency of debtor)]. Proving collectibility of the judgment in an underlying claim requires proving the solvency of the defendant in that action [DiPalma v. Seldman (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508-1511 (nonsuit in favor of attorney reversed when evidence showed that defendants in underlying suit had assets available to satisfy all or some portion of judgment)]. However, when the alleged malpractice by the attorney does not involve the prosecution of a lawsuit by the attorney, the solvency of another party in any underlying transaction is irrelevant to proving damages in the malpractice suit [DiPalma v. Seldman (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508 (when alleged malpractice was negligence in advising malpractice plaintiffs to sign quitclaim deed relinquishing interest in property, financial status of other party in underlying transaction was irrelevant to proving damages caused by attorney's negligence)].

The client is entitled to recover all damages directly and proximately caused by the negligence of the attorney [Civ. Code § 3333; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 362 , overruled on other grounds, In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; see Enriquez v. Smyth (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 691, 698, 219 Cal. Rptr. 267 (costs incurred in selling home properly recovered as damages proximately caused by defendant's negligence in persuading plaintiff to file for bankruptcy)]. Decisions of the California courts seem to support the view that an attorney is liable for all physical, mental, and emotional injuries, damage to reputation, and economic loss caused by the negligence of the attorney, and suggest that the trend is to broaden the consequential damages recoverable in a legal malpractice action.

In one case, for example, the court of appeal stated in dictum that an attorney is liable for any loss of reputation or increased medical malpractice insurance costs suffered by the plaintiff physician and caused by the attorney's negligence [Kirtland & Packard v. Superior Court (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 140, 146, 131 Cal. Rptr. 418] . Another case held that an attorney who negligently caused a client to file for bankruptcy, and who then valued the client's home on the bankruptcy petition at a figure substantially lower than was accurate without obtaining an appraisal, was liable to the client for the resultant costs of sale incurred by the client when he was forced to sell the home to satisfy creditors' claims [see Enriquez v. Smyth (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 691, 698-699, 219 Cal. Rptr. 267] .

One court of appeal opinion has held that Civ. Code § 1431.2, which limits liability for noneconomic damages to several liability only in actions for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death, does not apply to a malpractice claim against an attorney [Brandon G. v. Gray (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 29, 39, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 330 (action to recover monetary value of claim lost due to attorney's failure to press meritorious claim within requisite time period was not action for "personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death")]. A subsequent court of appeal opinion rejected such a broad rule, however, and held that Civ. Code § 1431.2 could be applied to an attorney malpractice action that seeks primarily noneconomic damages, such as damages for emotional distress caused when a criminal defense attorney's malpractice resulted in his client's criminal conviction [Ovando v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 42, 73-74, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415].

If a malpractice plaintiff received a larger damage award in the underlying action than the proof shows the claim should have actually been worth, then the malpractice plaintiff has suffered no damages by any negligence on the part of the attorney [Loube v. Loube (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 421, 425-427, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] . In one case, for example, the malpractice plaintiffs received $25,000 in compensatory damages and $200,000 in punitive damages following a default judgment and prove-up hearing in the underlying action, although their original award of compensatory damages had been reduced from $248,102 due to their attorneys' negligent failure to specify an amount of damages in the complaint. The plaintiffs argued that their attorneys' negligence cost them the additional amount of compensatory damages originally awarded. However, in the malpractice action, the trial court required a "trial within a trial" to ascertain the value of the underlying action, and the proof showed that had the underlying action gone to trial, the plaintiffs would have only been able to prove compensatory damages of $12,850 and no punitive damages. The trial court held, and the court of appeals agreed, that plaintiffs had not been damaged by their attorneys' negligence, since plaintiffs in the underlying action received an award vastly greater than the damages they actually sustained [Loube v. Loube (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 421, 425-427, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] . The court of appeal also noted that it was pure speculation that, but for the negligent failure to specify in the complaint the amount of damages sought, plaintiffs would have still received a default judgment awarding compensatory damages of $248,102 to each [Loube v. Loube (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 421, 426, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 ; see § 76.91].

[2] No Recovery for Lost Punitive Damages

Resolving a split in authority from the court of appeal, the California Supreme Court held that a legal malpractice plaintiff may not recover as compensatory damages the value of a claim for punitive damages that was lost in the underlying lawsuit due to the attorney's negligence [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1041, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] . The Court, recognizing the general rule that the measure of damages is the measure of the claim that is lost, concluded that policy considerations militated against recognizing the right to recover from a negligent attorney the value of a lost punitive damages claim [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1046-1051, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

The Court first held that allowing a recovery for a lost punitive damages claim would not further the purpose of punitive damages, which is to serve a societal interest by punishing the wrongdoer and deterring similar misconduct. A compensatory award of lost punitive damages would serve no societal interest, because the attorney had no control over the intentional misconduct justifying the underlying punitive damages claim, and the underlying tortfeasor would not be deterred. Moreover, the amount of an award of punitive damages is properly measured by the gravity of the wrongdoer's conduct and the wealth of the wrongdoer. An award "transferred" to the negligent attorney, however, bears no relation to the gravity of the attorney's misconduct, nor does it bear any relation to the attorney's ability to pay [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1046-1047, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

Second, the Court held that permitting recovery of a lost punitive damages claim would violate the public policy against speculative damages. Compensatory damages in a legal malpractice action are based on what a reasonable factfinder in the underlying action would have done, while punitive damages are based primarily on the moral outrage of the jury. Therefore, a jury in a legal malpractice action would be in the position of having to determine what level of moral outrage a reasonable jury would have felt in the underlying action, a standard that the Court concluded was too speculative [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1048-1049, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

Third, the Court held that the standard of proof applicable to such claims would be too unwieldy to apply. Compensatory damages are based on proof by a preponderance of the evidence, while punitive damages are awarded only on clear and convincing evidence. Therefore, a plaintiff in a malpractice action would have to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the jury in the underlying case would have found by clear and convincing evidence that the underlying defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1049, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

Fourth, the Court held that allowing the recovery of lost punitive damages would likely increase the cost of malpractice insurance and, at a minimum, encourage the practice of "defensive law" by the attorney trying to avoid malpractice claims at all cost [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1050, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

Because the issue came before the Supreme Court in the context of a class action lawsuit, the Court also noted that allowing the recovery of lost punitive damages in the class action context would hinder the ability of trial courts to manage and resolve mass tort suits by discouraging the use of mandatory, non-opt-out punitive damages classes, because attorneys using these classes would face the prospect of multiple malpractice lawsuits by dissatisfied class members [Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1049-1050, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965] .

This holding applies retroactively, even if the negligent attorney was retained prior to the date of the Supreme Court's decision [see Expansion Pointe Properties Limited Partnership v. Procopio, Cory, Hargreaves & Savitch, LLP (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 42, 56, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 166] .

[3] Lost Postjudgment Interest

If the client was entitled to recover postjudgment interest on any recovery in the underlying action, that interest is also recoverable as an element of damages in the legal malpractice action [Armstrong v. Adams (1929) 102 Cal. App. 677, 683, 283 P. 871] .

[4] Emotional Distress

Damages for emotional distress that are a proximate result of the defendant's legal malpractice may be recovered by a former client of the attorney [compare Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 717-718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 (emotional distress damages allowed when proximately caused by defendants' malpractice); with Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-11, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 (emotional distress damages not allowed when not proximately caused by defendant's malpractice)]. However, emotional distress damages are only appropriate in a particular case when the emotional shock to the plaintiff stems from an abnormal event and it was highly foreseeable that the defendant's actions would cause shock to the plaintiff [Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 168, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1 ; Pleasant v. Celli (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 841, 853-854, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (plaintiff's frustration at delay in resolution of underlying medical malpractice suit that followed death of plaintiff's infant daughter and anger at being misused by both doctors and lawyers does not meet requirements for recovery of emotional distress damages)].

Because physical injury is no longer a prerequisite for recovery of emotional distress damages [Molien v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 916, 929-931, 167 Cal. Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813] , the same conduct may be malpractice and constitute negligent infliction of emotional distress [see Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 717-718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528] . However, in those instances, double recovery of damages would not be permitted [see Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 576, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 (plaintiff not entitled to two alternative measures of damages for same injury)].

§ 76.93 Interest

A plaintiff in an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, and in every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, may be awarded interest in the discretion of the jury [Civ. Code § 3288]. However, prejudgment interest cannot be based on plaintiff's general damages, but only on plaintiff's damages based on economic loss [see Greater Westchester Homeowners Ass'n Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 103, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329] . There does not seem to be case law regarding the application of this provision in legal malpractice actions, but there is no reason to preclude its application when economic loss is an element of plaintiff's damages.

PRACTICE TIP:

Special Verdict on Damages. The legal malpractice plaintiff should request a special verdict on damages when economic loss is a significant element of plaintiff's damages, particularly if substantial time has passed since they were incurred. A special verdict specifying the amount and possibly the date of such economic loss would support a further award of prejudgment interest.

§ 76.94 Punitive Damages

Punitive damages may be awarded only if the plaintiff establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the attorney-defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice in the conduct on which the liability of the defendant is based [Civ. Code § 3294; see BAJI No. 14.71]. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages must make specific factual assertions in the complaint supporting a conclusion that the defendant acted with oppression, fraud, or malice. Unspecific allegations of fraud, malice, or oppression are subject to a motion to strike [see Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1041-1042, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133] . Punitive damages are not available if a jury finds the defendant guilty of malpractice but awards no compensatory damages to plaintiff [Jackson v. Johnson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1355-1358, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482] .

A cause of action frequently asserted in legal malpractice litigation is constructive fraud, pursuant to which the client usually seeks punitive damages. In a case outside the legal malpractice context, a court held that it was error to instruct that punitive damages can be awarded for constructive fraud, because the breach of a fiduciary duty alone without malice, fraud, or oppression does not permit an award of punitive damages [Delos v. Farmers Group Inc. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 642, 656-657, 155 Cal. Rptr. 843 ; see also Civ. Code § 3294(c) (defining oppression, fraud, and malice for purposes of awarding punitive damages)]. It therefore appears that, except when an attorney is liable to the client on a theory of actual fraud or for some other malicious or oppressive act (e.g., misappropriation of client's funds), punitive damages should not be recoverable in a legal malpractice action.

In one case, however, the court of appeal suggested that a client might be entitled to recover punitive damages if the client can establish that the attorney showed a "conscious disregard of petitioner's safety" in the course of the representation [Blegen v. Superior Court (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 959, 963, 178 Cal. Rptr. 470 (decided before 1987 amendment to Civ. Code § 3294 became effective); see Civ. Code § 3294(c)(1) (defining "malice" as conduct intended by defendant to cause injury to plaintiff, or despicable conduct carried on by defendant with willful and conscious disregard of rights or safety of others); Taylor v. Superior Court (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 890, 894-895, 157 Cal. Rptr. 693, 598 P.2d 854 (conscious disregard of others' rights as permissible basis for punitive damages award; decided before 1987 amendment to Civ. Code § 3294)]. In that case the attorney representing the plaintiff in the underlying medical malpractice case was also a physician. The defendant allegedly advised the plaintiff to delay necessary surgery to enhance the value of the medical malpractice action, even though the attorney knew that the plaintiff should undergo immediate surgery. The court found these contentions sufficient to establish "conscious disregard of petitioner's safety" and that the plaintiff was entitled to seek punitive damages [Blegen v. Superior Court (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 959, 963, 178 Cal. Rptr. 470 (decided before 1987 amendment to Civ. Code § 3294)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Pitfalls When Punitive Damages Sought. The defendant attorney should vigorously resist all efforts by the legal malpractice plaintiff to assert a punitive damage claim. Among other problems such a claim presents, it is not covered by the attorney's liability insurance as a matter of law [see Ins. Code § 533] and it frequently affords the plaintiff an opportunity to inflame the jury with evidence of the defendant's substantial wealth, should plaintiff meet the requirements of Civ. Code §§ 3294 and 3295 for the admissibility of such evidence.

§ 76.95 Recovery of Legal Fees and Costs Other Than for Bringing Malpractice Action

The legal fees incurred by the client in pursuing the legal malpractice action itself are not recoverable from the defendant attorney [see Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 112, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] . This is consistent with the longstanding rule that a litigant is not entitled to recover legal fees from the opposing party in the absence of an express statutory or contractual provision authorizing recovery [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021]. An exception to this general rule, however, provides that a party who has been required, through the tort of another, to protect an interest by bringing or defending an action against a third person, is entitled, in an action against the tortfeasor, to recover compensation for the reasonable necessary loss of time, attorney's fees, and other expenditures incurred thereby. These attorney's fees are damages caused by defendant's wrongful actions [Prentice v. North Am. Title Guar. Corp. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 618, 620-621, 30 Cal. Rptr. 821, 381 P.2d 645] .

This exception lends support to a claim in a legal malpractice case for attorney's fees attributable to further legal work necessitated by the wrongful conduct of the attorney. It has also been argued by one commentator that fees and costs that the plaintiff was required to pay to another party in the underlying litigation as a result of the attorney's negligence, or the legal expenses charged a client for unjustified or negligent legal work, are recoverable damages in a legal malpractice action [see Mallen & Smith, Legal Malpractice, Ch. 16 § 16.6 (3d ed. 1989)].

However, one court of appeal decision has specifically rejected the notion that a malpractice plaintiff dissatisfied by the quality of an attorney's services can generate recoverable tort damages merely by hiring new attorneys and incurring legal fees in attempting to challenge or overturn an earlier settlement or judgment. Similarly, the court found absurd the notion that a malpractice plaintiff can prove recoverable tort damages merely by seeking to recover the fees paid to the allegedly negligent attorney. According to the court, a contrary conclusion on either point would obviate the need to prove that in the absence of the attorney's negligence, the plaintiff would have achieved a better result [Orrick Herrington & Sutcliffe v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1052, 1058, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658] .

In the case before the court, the plaintiff brought a malpractice action against his former attorneys for alleged negligence in drafting a marital settlement agreement that the plaintiff claimed could expose him to future legal liabilities. However, the plaintiff failed to show that absent these alleged errors, the plaintiff's ex-wife would have accepted a lesser settlement, or that any legal claims had been filed against him because of the settlement deficiencies. Instead, the plaintiff argued that he suffered recoverable damages in the form of the fees that he paid his former attorneys for their inadequate representation, as well as the fees that he paid to other attorneys in his unsuccessful attempt to overturn the settlement agreement. The court of appeal rejected these as damages under the circumstances of the case. Because no claims had been made against the plaintiff because of the settlement, there was no compelling reason for him to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars attempting to overturn it, although the court recognized that if a claim had actually been filed against him, the plaintiff might be able to recover as tort damages the fees expended in defending that claim [Orrick Herrington & Sutcliffe v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1052, 1060, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658] . As for the fees paid to the attorneys for their allegedly deficient representation, the court concluded that these appeared to be contract, rather than tort, damages, and therefore that the plaintiff's only remedy was to try and prove a claim for breach of contract [Orrick Herrington & Sutcliffe v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1052, 1060-1061, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658] .

When a retainer agreement contains an attorney fee provision that substantially tracks the language of Civ. Code § 1717, allowing attorney fees to the prevailing party following an action "on the contract" or to enforce the contract, an action for legal malpractice is not an action "on the contract" for purposes of recovering attorney's fees [Loube v. Loube (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 421, 429, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906] .

§ 76.96 Damage Offsets

Defendants in legal malpractice actions sometimes assert offsets for either of the following:

- The fee, usually a contingency fee, that the defendant attorney would have earned in the underlying action.

- The amount ultimately obtained by the client through a settlement, judgment, or other resolution of the underlying matter.

Offsets based on the reasonable fees the attorney would have received for full performance in the underlying matter have not been allowed in the two reported California cases addressing this issue [Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 43-44, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534 ; Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 606, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544] . In one of these cases, the court of appeal held that the negligent attorney could not be credited with a fee he failed to earn because this not only would reward wrongdoing, but would also require the plaintiff to pay twice for the same service, presumably because the plaintiff will have a recovery in the malpractice action reduced by attorney's fees incurred in that action [Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 43-44, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534] . In the other case, the court held that because the defendant's negligent conduct effectively precluded a determination of the amount of the contingency fee the defendant attorney sought to offset against the client's damages, no offset could be allowed. The court based this conclusion on the possibility that the defendant could have discovered other damages had the investigation of the plaintiff's case been done with due care, and the possibility that the case could have been settled before trial, with a reduction in the amount of the contingent fee due to the defendant [Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 605-606, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544] .

Although there are no reported California cases bearing directly on the issue of whether the defendant attorney is entitled to an offset in the amount of the recovery ultimately obtained through a settlement, judgment, or other resolution of the underlying matter, one decision suggests that the offset is available. The California Supreme Court held in that case that when the client's damages were caused by her attorney's negligent failure to prosecute a mortgage foreclosure action, the damages should be reduced by the value, if any, of the barred note and mortgage [Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 791, 171 P. 961] . However, the court of appeal has used the collateral source rule to bar an attorney from obtaining an offset of damages to reflect insurance proceeds the client received for an injury from a source unrelated to the tortfeasor in the underlying action [Norton v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1758, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217] .

It has also been suggested that damages attributable to the negligent conduct of the client, rather than to the wrongful conduct of the attorney, can be offset against the plaintiff's damages [see Martin v. Hall (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 414, 428, 97 Cal. Rptr. 730] . However, this damage reduction should not be seen as based on a theory of offset, but rather on the comparative negligence of the client [see § 76.171].

§ 76.97 Mitigation of Damages

The plaintiff in a legal malpractice case has a duty to make a reasonable effort to avoid or mitigate damages [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 418, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 , overruled on other grounds, ITT Small Bus. Fin. Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965 ; see also CACI No. 3931]. However, the mitigation doctrine does not require the client to take measures that are unreasonable or impractical, that involve expenditures disproportionate to the loss sought to be avoided, or that may lie beyond the client's financial means [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 418, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 , overruled on other grounds, ITT Small Bus. Fin. Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965] . Whether a plaintiff has satisfied the duty to mitigate is usually a question of fact, which turns on whether the client made a reasonable effort to avoid damages [see Lewis v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 844, 853, 144 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; see generally Green v. Smith (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 392, 396-397, 67 Cal. Rptr. 796 (discussing general principles relating to mitigation of damages)].

If the client has a duty to mitigate damages and fails to do so, the client's damages will be reduced by the amount attributable to the failure [see Lewis v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 844, 853, 144 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 153, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864] . In Theobald v. Byers [(1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864] , the defendant attorneys were deemed negligent in their preparation of a note and chattel mortgage in connection with a loan that their clients were making. Because of the attorney's negligence, the plaintiffs obtained an invalid chattel mortgage and were ultimately relegated to the position of unsecured creditors who were unable to collect on their note. Evidence was produced at trial, however, that the plaintiffs had failed to file a claim in bankruptcy as general unsecured creditors of the individuals who executed the note in their favor. Had they done so, they would have recovered a percentage of their claim. The court held that the damages awarded to plaintiffs should be reduced by the amount that plaintiffs could have recovered in the bankruptcy proceeding [Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 153, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864] .

§ 76.110 Indemnification From Prior Tortfeasor

The limited California case law holds that the defendant attorney cannot seek indemnity on any basis from a prior tortfeasor because the prior tortfeasor and the negligent attorney are not joint tortfeasors [Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425-430, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; cf. Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 943, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393 (prior tortfeasor not entitled to indemnity from negligent attorney)]. Munoz v. Davis [(1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400] involved a cross complaint by an attorney who had been sued for malpractice for allowing the statute of limitations to expire on a personal injury claim. The attorney cross complained against the person alleged to have caused the damage to the attorney's client, seeking implied equitable indemnity. The attorney argued that the negligence of the cross defendant was the proximate cause of any damage suffered by the client. The trial court sustained the cross defendant's demurrer and dismissed the cross complaint, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court based its holding on two alternate grounds. First, the court held that a negligent attorney is not entitled to indemnity from a negligent driver because they are not jointly and severally liable to the injured party for the attorney's negligence. Second, as an independently sufficient ground, the court held that equitable and policy considerations render equitable indemnity unavailable to shift an attorney's malpractice liability to the tortfeasor whose actions happened to provide the attorney with the opportunity to commit malpractice [Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 422, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400] .

§ 76.111 Indemnification From Successor Attorney

When an attorney is hired to extricate a client from a situation that may be the result of another attorney's negligence, an issue may arise regarding whether the successor attorney may be held liable to the prior attorney for indemnification. Whether a successor attorney may be held liable for indemnity under these circumstances remains unclear in California. In some cases an attorney who has been sued for legal malpractice has attempted to cross complain against an attorney who substituted in as attorney of record for the client in the matter underlying the malpractice action. The cross complaint is usually based on the ground that the substituted attorney's negligence compounded or exacerbated the errors made by the original attorney, but courts have held that indemnity is not available under these circumstances [see, e.g., Held v. Arant (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 748, 750, 134 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; see also Lewis v. Purvin (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1208, 1214-1217, 256 Cal. Rptr. 827 (fact that "successor" attorney also represented plaintiffs before and during defendant's alleged malpractice did not permit indemnity action); Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 936, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247 (prohibition on cross complaints for indemnity against successor attorneys as not violating predecessor attorney's statutory right to contribution under Civ. Code § 1432)]. The rationale underlying this rule is that an attorney who represents a client whose potential or actual adversaries include both a private person and a previous attorney should not be subjected to the potential of being required to indemnify the prior attorney in the event that there is an action against the prior attorney. Such potential liability for indemnity could influence the attorney to the detriment of the attorney's duty of undivided loyalty to the client's interests [see, e.g., Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 933, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247 ; Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 355, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326 ; but see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 942-943, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81 (expressing disagreement with this policy in context of associated attorney's liability to principal attorney based on agency law)].

At least one California case, however, has held that a successor attorney may be liable on a cross complaint for indemnity. In that case [Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197] , the court of appeal held that the successor attorney could be liable for indemnity for failing to pursue an available remedy that required no exercise of professional judgment and would have furthered the best interest of the client [Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 767, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197] . The court noted the public policy considerations designed to keep successor attorneys from facing situations in which their duty of undivided loyalty to the client may be influenced by the potential liability to the first attorney [Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 760, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197] . The court held, however, that the public policy considerations did not apply when no exercise of judgment in choosing between alternative remedies was involved, and the possibility of a cross complaint for proportional indemnity could not have affected the exercise of any such judgment [Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 767, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197 (indemnity available when successor failed to advise client in dissolution action to seek division of spouse's vested military retirement benefits)]. Absent the possibility of an exercise of judgment by the attorney, there can be no conflict between the attorney and the client's best interests [Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 767, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197] . However, more recent court of appeal decisions have uniformly rejected this approach [see, e.g., Austin v. Superior Court (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1126, 1129, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644] .

The cases cited above all involved cross complaints for indemnity, however, and the courts might not prohibit indemnity if the defendant attorney brought a separate action for indemnity rather than a cross complaint. To highlight the significance of the cross complaint on the potential for creating a conflict of interest, some courts have mentioned the need for an attorney against whom a cross complaint is filed to withdraw from representation of the plaintiff in the malpractice action [see Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 352, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326].

Counsel should also note that a predecessor attorney can raise the issue of a successor attorney's comparative negligence by way of affirmative defense. Thus, an attorney may reduce his or her own exposure by the extent of the successor attorney's responsibility for the client's injury [see Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 929, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247 ; see discussion in*§ 76.171*].

PRACTICE TIP:

Tactical Advantage of Affirmative Defense. It is sometimes tactically advantageous that a successor attorney's comparative negligence can only be asserted by affirmative defense because the defendant has the proverbial "empty chair" defense and need not respond to a defense mounted by the successor attorney or to the associated "finger-pointing" which typically enhances plaintiff's case.

§ 76.112 Indemnification From Associate Attorney

Unlike courts adhering to the majority, "bright-line" rule that a successor attorney is not liable for indemnification of a predecessor attorney [see § 76.112], the California Supreme Court has ruled that the question of whether an attorney being sued for malpractice may recover indemnity from concurrent counsel must be decided on a case-by-case basis [Musser v. Provencher (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 274, 284, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 48 P.3d 408] . If the policy reasons justifying the rule preventing indemnification from a successor attorney do not apply, indemnification from concurrent counsel may be allowed. Thus, under the facts of the particular case, indemnification may be allowed if the claim creates no conflict of interest between the indemnifying attorney's duty to the client and the attorney's self-interest, and if there is no non-waived attorney-client privilege that will prevent the attorney from whom indemnity is sought from providing a defense [Musser v. Provencher (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 274, 284-285 (indemnity claim allowed because no conflict of interest was identified and client waived attorney-client privilege as to attorney from whom indemnity was sought)].

In cases decided before the Supreme Court's opinion in Musser v. Provencher, but which apply the case-by-case approach adopted by the Court in that case, the court of appeal has held that the policy concerns that bar an attorney from seeking indemnity from a client's successor attorney also bar an indemnity cross-complaint between two independent attorneys who concurrently represented a client, if one attorney represented the client as a defense counsel provided by an insurance company and the other attorney represented the client as independent counsel required because the insurer provided the client's defense under a reservation of rights provided in the insurance policy [Kroll & Tract v. Paris & Paris (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1540, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78 ; see also Shaffery v. Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 768, 777-778, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 419 (attorney representing insured could not seek indemnity from insurer's separate "monitoring counsel")]. For further discussion, see § 76.114.

§ 76.113 Indemnification From Predecessor Attorney

At least one court of appeal opinion held that, despite the policy concerns that might caution against allowing a predecessor attorney to seek equitable indemnity from a successor attorney [see § 76.111], those concerns seem inapplicable when a successor attorney seeks indemnity from a predecessor attorney. The court in that case concluded that a predecessor attorney was not subject to any conflict of interest and had no continuing privileged communications or work product to protect, and thus, a successor attorney could seek indemnity when the predecessor's negligence contributed to the injury for which the successor was liable [Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger, & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1545-1548, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94 ; but see Kroll & Tract v. Paris & Paris (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1544 n.4, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78 (unwilling to agree with Crouse opinion's sweeping statements suggesting that action for indemnity always exists against predecessor attorney)].

§ 76.114 Indemnification From Attorney Representing Insurance Claimant

If an insured party brings a bad-faith action against his or her insurer, the insurer may not obtain comparative equitable indemnity from the insured's attorney on the theory that the attorney's negligence at least partially caused the insured's damage [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 230-231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] . This rule is based on a policy rationale that seeks to prevent conflicts of interest for the insurance claimant's attorney. If the attorney represents either a first- or third-party claimant on an insurance policy, the interest of the client is necessarily adverse to that of the insurer, even though there may not be any underlying action against the insurer [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] . In such situations, there is a possibility that the conduct of the insurer may subject it to liability for bad faith [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] . That possibility in turn creates a potential conflict between the attorney's duty to pursue the client's claim vigorously, and the understandable desire to avoid conduct that may later be the basis for the attorney's personal liability in indemnity to the insurer [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] .

An attorney who believed that the insurer had engaged or was about to engage in bad-faith claims practices might well choose to avoid such liability by acting to shield the insurer, even though his or her client would be ill-served by such action [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] . Consequently, the public policy in favor of preserving the undivided loyalty of the attorney to the client dictates that the insurer may not obtain indemnity from the claimant's attorney [California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 230, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421] .

An attorney appointed by an insurer to provide a defense for an insured under a reservation of the insurer's rights under the insurance policy is barred from obtaining indemnity from the attorney who provided the insured with independent counsel in the same action [Kroll & Tract v. Paris & Paris (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1540, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78] .

Under these circumstances, the loyalties of the independent counsel representing the insured are to the insured, while the loyalties of the counsel provided by the insurer run to the insurer as well as to the insured and may conflict, given the insurer's reservation of rights under the policy. Therefore, the concern with protecting an attorney's undivided loyalty and the preservation of the attorney-client privilege cautions against allowing an action for indemnity between those attorneys, even if the client's independent counsel no longer represents the client [Kroll & Tract v. Paris & Paris (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1542-1545, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78] . For example, if the indemnity claim were allowed, the independent counsel would be put into the position of having to defend itself without revealing client confidences that may have been revealed during the representation, because revealing those confidences could violate the attorney-client privilege, which runs to the client rather than to the attorney [Kroll & Tract v. Paris & Paris (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1544, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 78] . For further discussion of the independent counsel requirement and its effects, see Ch. 308, Insurance .

§ 76.115 Indemnification of Expert Witness From Hiring Attorney

The court of appeal has adopted the Supreme Court's analysis of indemnification between concurrent counsel, as discussed in*§ 76.112*, in concluding that an expert witness, sued for negligence by the clients on whose behalf the expert was hired, could seek indemnity from the clients' former law firm, which hired the expert. Applying the same case-by-case approach promoted in Musser v. Provencher [Musser v. Provencher (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 274, 284, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 48 P.3d 408] , the court of appeal concluded that the law firm, which was not named as a defendant by the former clients, was a potential joint tortfeasor with the expert for negligent handling of the underlying lawsuit. Given that the indemnification issue centered on whether the expert witness was sufficiently knowledgeable to testify and whether the law firm properly guided the expert on the relevant legal issues, the court concluded that there was no danger, under these circumstances, that the law firm would be faced with conflicts of interest in defending the indemnity claim or that the law firm would be forced to reveal confidential communications made by the former clients [Forensis Group, Inc. v. Frantz, Townsend & Foldenauer (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 14, 34-40, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 622] .

§ 76.116 No Indemnification of Expenses and Fees From Corporate Plaintiff

Corp. Code § 317 generally provides a right to indemnification for a person who "was or is a party or is threatened to be made a party" to a legal proceeding "by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation" [see Corp. Code § 317(c),(d)]. However, although an outside attorney hired to represent a corporate client at trial is in part an agent of the corporation, this statute may not be used by an attorney who has represented a corporation in the capacity of outside counsel to recover the costs and attorney's fees incurred in successfully defending a malpractice action brought by the corporation [Channel Lumber Co. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1230-1232, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482 (Corp. Code § 317 not intended to be attorney's fee statute)].

§ 76.130 Error of Judgment Based on Inadequate Research

An attorney is responsible for a knowledge of the law and is under an obligation to perform diligent research and exercise informed judgment when representing a client [see Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418-419, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194] . For example, in one case, the client sued her divorce attorney for legal malpractice on the grounds that the attorney negligently failed to assert her community property interest in her husband's retirement benefits. Defendant attorney asserted at trial that the law defining the character of retirement benefits was uncertain at the time of his legal services to the plaintiff. Therefore he contended that he should have been held not negligent as a matter of law because all informed attorneys in the community entertained reasonable doubt as to the proper characterization of military retirement benefits at that time. The California Supreme Court stated that, although an attorney does not ordinarily guarantee the soundness of his or her opinions and is therefore not liable for every mistake he or she may make in his or her practice, an attorney is expected to possess knowledge of those plain and elementary principles of law commonly known by well informed attorneys and to discover those additional rules of law which, although not commonly known, may readily be found by standard research techniques. With respect to an unsettled area of the law, while an attorney will not be held responsible for failing to anticipate the manner in which the uncertainty will be resolved, an attorney must undertake reasonable research and make an informed decision as to the proper course of conduct based on the particular problem at hand [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359].

In a later case, the California Supreme Court found that if an attorney does not research an issue thoroughly, the attorney may be liable for malpractice for failing to assert a claim that would have been correct at a later time under a decision given in a subsequent case [Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418-421, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656] .

§ 76.131 Failure to Meet Time Limits

[1] Failure to Bring Action Within Statute of Limitations

A common basis for a legal malpractice action against the litigation attorney is the failure to institute a lawsuit or other proceeding in a timely manner. An attorney who fails to bring an action within the applicable statute of limitations may be held liable for such a failure [see Shelly v. Hansen (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 210, 214-215, 53 Cal. Rptr. 20 ; see also Bland v. Reed (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 445, 449, 67 Cal. Rptr. 859 (dictum)]. Apart from the numerous statutes of limitation embodied in the Code of Civil Procedure, the litigation attorney must also be conversant with the statutory filing deadlines applicable to claims against municipal, state, and federal government entities [see, e.g., 28 U.S.C. § 2401; Gov. Code § 911.2; see also Southland Mech. Constructors Corp. v. Nixen (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 417, 423-424, 173 Cal. Rptr. 917 , disapproved on other grounds, Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 (failure to file claim for additional moneys due under government contract)]. The attorney must also be prepared to move in a timely manner for trial preference in cases in which the client is at least 70 years old and has a substantial interest in the action as a whole, and the client's health is such that a preference is necessary to prevent prejudicing his or her interest in the litigation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 36(a); Granquist v. Sandberg (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 181, 186-187, 268 Cal. Rptr. 109 (attorney's failure to move for trial preference as basis of malpractice suit by client's personal administrator)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Precautions Regarding Preferential Trial Setting. Due to the attorney's potential exposure to a legal malpractice claim based upon a failure to seek a preferential trial setting under Code Civ. Proc. § 36 and the tactical considerations weighing against such action in some cases, the prudent attorney should advise the client in writing of his or her right to seek a trial preference and make a recommendation to the client as to whether that right should be exercised. The attorney should let the client make the final decision given the case law suggesting that this decision does not fall within the exercise of the attorney's judgment.

[2] Involuntary Dismissal of Action

A failure to serve and return the summons and complaint within three years [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250], or the failure to bring a case to trial within five years after it was filed [see Code. Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360], may spawn a legal malpractice action [see Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 405, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (party whose cause of action was dismissed because of attorney's failure to prosecute as limited to remedy against attorney)]. Although they are infrequently granted, motions to dismiss for failure to prosecute diligently and bring a case to trial within two years [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430] can be asserted by defendants in state court actions and, if successful, can expose a plaintiff's attorney to liability for legal malpractice [see Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 405, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (party whose cause of action dismissed because of attorney's failure to prosecute as limited to remedy against attorney)].

[3] Causing Default Judgment to be Entered Against Client

A defense attorney's actions may cause a default judgment to be entered against his or her client [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 585-587.5]. The entry of a default judgment typically occurs when the defense attorney fails to file a responsive pleading [see Code Civ. Proc. § 585]. It has been suggested that the failure to move to set aside a default judgment within the six-month period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is also negligence if the motion could have relieved the client of the default [cf. Bowen v. Cowett (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 766, 769, 31 Cal. Rptr. 184 (attorney's failure to set aside default caused no damage)].

[4] Failure to File Timely Appeal

An attorney is liable for negligence if he or she failed to take an appeal that would have succeeded [Drais v. Hogan (1875) 50 Cal. 121, 127-128] . There is no liability for failure to file a timely appeal from judgment absent proof that the appeal would have been successful [Kilmer v. Carter (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 81, 82, 78 Cal. Rptr. 800 ; see also Redante v. Yockelson (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1357, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 10 (criminal defense attorney not liable for choosing not to raise issues on appeal that attorney believed were not meritorious)]. The trial court must determine whether the appeal, if taken, would have resulted in reversal [Pete v. Henderson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 487, 491-492, 269 P.2d 78 ; see also Croce v. Sanchez (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 680, 683-684, 64 Cal. Rptr. 448 (in malpractice action, plaintiff had no entitlement to jury trial on issue of attorney's liability for failing to perfect appeal, as transcript revealed plaintiff's failure to establish liability or damage in action as to which appeal was dismissed)].

If the attorney decides an appeal is futile, too expensive, or that his or her compensation is not adequate, and decides against filing a notice of appeal, the attorney should consult with the client and if the client disagrees, the attorney may choose to withdraw. However, it is improper to allow the time for the appeal to lapse without advising the client of the danger of his or her loss of the right to appeal [In re Fountain (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 715, 719, 141 Cal. Rptr. 654] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Precautions Regarding Timely Appeal. While attorney-client retainer agreements frequently state that the legal representation will not encompass any appeal and that any appellate work must instead be the subject of a separte agreement, the attorney should nonetheless remind the client of this feature of the agreement in writing after a judgment is rendered and well before the deadline for noticing the appeal. The attorney's reliance on the original notice to this effect in the fee agreement could prove troublesome in defending a legal malpractice case based on a failure to timely file an appeal.

An appointed defense counsel in noncapital criminal appeals has no duty to investigate the possible bases for collateral attack on a judgment and no duty to file or prosecute an extraordinary writ that the client desires or thinks is appropriate by the client [Redante v. Yockelson (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1356, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 10] .

§ 76.132 Failure to Assert Meritorious Defense

A defense attorney may be liable for a failure to assert appropriate defenses in a lawsuit [see Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 198, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 (alleged negligence based on failure to plead a critical defense)]. However, the defendant must establish that the unasserted defense was not only legally cognizable but provable and that its assertion would have achieved a better result for the defendant [see Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32] .

§ 76.133 Failure to Join Claims

The issue of whether an attorney has a duty to cross complain was presented in Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919 , in which an attorney who had represented sellers of real property in an action against them was sued by his former clients for, inter alia, failing to cross complain in the action against codefendants and certain nonparties allegedly responsible for the damages. The court held that as a matter of law the attorney, in the reasonable exercise of his judgment, did not have a duty to bring the cross-complaints since they were permissive in nature, and a defendant cannot be negligent for failing to do what he had no duty to undertake [Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 612-613, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919] . By implication, failure to bring a compulsory counterclaim against an opposing party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 426.30] may constitute actionable negligence for purposes of a malpractice action [see Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 612, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919 (distinguishing between compulsory and permissive cross-complaints)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Insurance Defense Counsel; Compulsory Counterclaims. The insurance defense attorney must be particularly careful in identifying possible compulsory counterclaims. Typically, the insurer that has appointed defense counsel has no obligation to pay for the prosecution of any affirmative claims that the insured may have against the opposing party, and the appointed defense counsel is thus neither expected nor authorized to pursue such claims by the insurer. However, the insurance defense attorney is nonetheless obligated to give primacy to the interests of the insured [see American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 592, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] , and thus should, at a minimum, promptly alert the client to the existence of the compulsory counterclaim and advise the client to retain separate counsel to pursue it if the insurer will not pay to do so.

§ 76.134 Failure to Follow Client's Instructions

It would appear that while an attorney is not required to defer to the client's instructions on tactical or legal considerations beyond the client's knowledge, the attorney is under a duty to follow promptly and carefully the client's general instructions regarding the disposition of a lawsuit and is liable for all damages flowing from a failure to follow such instructions [see Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786-787, 171 P. 961 (attorney's delay in serving summons despite client's instruction to proceed at once as negligent; however, negligence did not cause damage to plaintiff)]. Although the exact parameters of the distinction between matters involving tactics and legal decisions on the one hand and matters on which the attorney must defer to the client's wishes on the other has not been specified by California courts, it has been held that an attorney's failure to file a complaint when told to do so by a client constitutes actionable malpractice [Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786-787, 171 P. 961] . The distinction may parallel the distinction between procedural matters that an attorney is authorized to act on by virtue of the retainer and acts impairing the client's substantive rights or the cause of action itself, which the attorney is not authorized to undertake without the specific authorization of the client [see Linsk v. Linsk (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 272, 276-280, 74 Cal. Rptr. 544, 449 P.2d 760] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Precautions Regarding Client's Instructions. The attorney's retention agreement with the client should clearly define the matters that involve tactics and legal decisions which are within the attorney's discretion and those more substantive matters on which the attorney must defer to the client. Absent such an agreement, clients can take issue with virtually everything the attorney does, and the attorney will be forced to rely on sparse case authority in defending an ensuing legal malpractice case on the ground that he or she was legitimately exercising his or her discretion.

ILLUSTRATION: Attorney's Discretion in Discovery. An attorney has taken numerous depositions > of witnesses whose testimony is critical to the defense of client's business litigation case, only to later learn from the client that this discovery has severely compromised the client's customer relations to its detriment. Query: Should the attorney have deferred to the client in this case concerning appropriate discovery?

However, an attorney is never required to follow a client's instructions to engage in illegal or unethical conduct. In one case, for example, the California Supreme Court held that when an attorney is confronted with a choice between advancing the client's case, which the attorney believes lacks merit, and the attorney's ethical obligations to pursue only those actions that appear meritorious, the attorney cannot be liable to the client for mistakenly withdrawing from the case unless the attorney's choice to honor the public obligation is so manifestly erroneous that no prudent attorney would have done so [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 309, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] .

AUTHOR: GEORGE M. LINDAHL

§ 76.135 Failure to Convey Settlement Offer or to Secure Client's Consent to Settlement

The most common problems relating to settlements occur when an attorney either fails to convey a settlement offer to a client or settles a lawsuit without the client's consent. California Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-510, requires an attorney to inform a client promptly of the amount, terms, and conditions of a written settlement offer, and the failure to convey any settlement offer may constitute negligence, if not an intentional tort such as deceit [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-510; see Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710]. By analogy to the rules relating to legal malpractice actions generally, which require the plaintiff to prove that he or she would have obtained a better result in the underlying case if the attorney had conformed to the standard of practice [see Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 136, 153, 65 Cal. Rptr. 406 ; Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 ; see also BAJI No. 6.37.5], it appears that to recover under this theory the plaintiff would have to establish (1) that he or she would have accepted the settlement offer had it been conveyed, and (2) that the settlement would have been more favorable to the client than the ultimate resolution of the case [cf. Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 758, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 (client failed to prove that offer would have been accepted)].

The settlement of a case without the client's consent also should constitute negligence. While there are no California cases directly addressing this issue, it seems clear that an attorney who settles a lawsuit without the client's authority is liable to the client for all resulting damages [see Bronson v. Borst (D.C. 1979) 404 A.2d 960, 962-963 ; Roberts v. Roberts (Mo. App. 1977) 552 S.W.2d 296, 297-298 (dictum)]. Presumably, the resulting damages would be the difference between the probable resolution of the case without the settlement (as proven in the "case-within-a-case") and the result under the settlement agreed to by the attorney. However, when a client is represented by the attorney under a contract of insurance or an indemnity agreement that does not give the client the right to consent to settlement, the attorney is not required to obtain the client's settlement consent [see, e.g., New Plumbing Contractors, Inc. v. Edwards, Sooy & Byron (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 799, 801-802, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 472 (attorneys hired by insurer not liable to insured for recommending settlement to insurer, who had contractual right to settle without approval from insured)].

A member of a plaintiff class in a class action cannot, after the class action has settled, sue class counsel for negligence on the grounds that counsel should have negotiated a different settlement notice procedure, at least when the trial court approved the final settlement and notice procedures after providing class members an opportunity to object. Under those circumstances, collateral estoppel will defeat any malpractice claim based on the alleged insufficiency of the settlement procedures [Martorana v. Marlin & Saltzman (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 685, 694-697, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 172]. In addition, class attorneys utilizing an approved procedure for providing mass notification of settlement claims procedures to class members have no additional duty to follow up with individual class members who do not respond before the deadline for doing so [Martorana v. Marlin & Saltzman (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 685, 697, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 172].

§ 76.150 Breach of Fiduciary Duty

The relationship between attorney and client is of the highest fiduciary character [see Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512 ; see § 76.31[1]]. If an attorney breaches the fiduciary duty owed to the client, the attorney may be held liable for the breach. For example, under case law interpreting the predecessor statute to Probate Code Section 16004(c) (which now creates a presumption of violation of trustee's fiduciary duties in specified circumstances) [see former Civ. Code § 2235 (presumption of insufficient consideration and undue influence in transaction between trustee and beneficiary)], if an attorney profits from a transaction with the client, the client may rescind the transaction on the grounds of undue influence and inadequate consideration unless the attorney establishes by clear and satisfactory evidence that the transaction was fair and equitable, and that the client was fully informed as to all matters relative to the transaction [see Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512 (interpreting former Civ. Code § 2235); see also Ball v. Posey (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1209, 1214, 222 Cal. Rptr. 746 (undue influence by attorney presumed when in all transactions forming basis of action for breach of fiduciary duty, attorney was agent for elderly client by reason of signed power of attorney, and never advised client to obtain separate counsel when his name appeared as joint tenant on her bank accounts)].

Although it is not clear at this point, it would seem that courts would extend application of the presumption under Prob. Code § 16004(c) to other situations founded on the principal-agent relationship [see Civ. Code § 2322(c) (agent not having authority to violate duty of trustee pursuant to Prob. Code §§ 16002, 16004, 16005, or 16009)], as with application of the presumption under the former statute. The client may also obtain other equitable remedies, including imposition of a constructive trust and restitution, as well as incidental damages [David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 894, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 (constructive trust imposed); Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 264, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512] .

An attorney is subject to liability for constructive fraud when the attorney breaches a fiduciary duty to the client [cf. American Box & Drum Co. v. Harron (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 370, 378, 112 P.2d 332 (court found no evidence of intent to defraud necessary for imposition of constructive trust)]. An attorney can also be liable to his or her client for actual fraud if the elements of fraud are proven [cf. Frost v. Hanscome (1926) 198 Cal. 550, 559, 246 P. 53 (no grounds for finding of extrinsic fraud on record); see also § 76.154].

Additionally, the fiduciary duties owed by an attorney to a client extend beyond the period of the actual attorney-client relationship. An attorney is not allowed to take any actions that would injure a former client in matters that are within the scope of the former representation, nor may the attorney use any information gained during the relationship against the former client [Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see People v. Thoi (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 689, 699, 261 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

§ 76.151 Adverse Representation

It is an attorney's duty to protect his or her client in every possible way, and it is a violation of that duty for the attorney to assume a position that is adverse or antagonistic to the client without the latter's free and intelligent consent given after full knowledge of the facts and circumstances [Anderson v. Eaton (1930) 211 Cal. 113, 116, 293 P. 788] .

As a general rule, an attorney may not simultaneously represent clients with conflicting interests, even if the subject matter of the two representations is unrelated [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 285, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] . The attorney's duty of loyalty toward an existing client places limitations upon the attorney's duty of care toward a new or prospective client whose interests might conflict with those of the existing client. Thus, when an attorney declined to represent a new client after learning that the new client wished to sue an existing client, the attorney had no duty to advise the new client about the applicable statute of limitations or the need to obtain alternate counsel [Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 278-279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950] .

If the attorney represents two clients with divergent interests, the loyalty owed to one client cannot consume that owed to the other [Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 526, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592] . A conflict of interest between jointly represented clients occurs whenever their common lawyer's representation of the one is rendered less effective by reason of his or her representation of the other [Bogard v. Employers Cas. Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 602, 609-610, 210 Cal. Rptr. 578 ; Spindle v. Chubb/Pac. Indem. Group (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 706, 713, 152 Cal. Rptr. 776] .

Provided there is full disclosure and consent, an attorney may undertake to represent dual interests. If the parties have divergent interests, the attorney owes the highest duty to make to each a full disclosure of all facts and circumstances necessary to enable the parties to make a fully informed decision regarding the subject matter of the litigation, including the areas of potential conflict and the possibility and desirability of seeking independent legal advice [Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 716, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 ; Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893,

Even though dual representation is acceptable under specified circumstances, it is nonetheless strongly disfavored [see Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 526-527, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 (citing condemnation by various bar associations and committees of dual representation in divorce suits even with the parties' consent, and raising questions about "ethical implications" of dual representation); see also Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 897-899, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509 (also pointing out ethical issues involved in representation of parties with adverse interests)]. For further discussion of the problems of dual representation and other conflicting interests that may lead to liability for malpractice in particular contexts, see § 76.32.

For detailed discussion and forms relating to an attorney's ethical duty to protect client confidences and avoid conflicts with current or former clients, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

§ 76.152 Advantageous Transactions With Client

All transactions between an attorney and his or her client during the existence of their fiduciary relationship, or while the influence acquired by the attorney remains, by which the attorney obtains any advantage from the client, are presumed to be entered into by the client without sufficient consideration and under undue influence [see Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 27, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 (former Civ. Code § 2235 (now see Prob. Code § 16004(c)) applicable to contractual dealings between attorney and client during existence of attorney-client relationship); Gleason v. Klamer (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 782, 787, 163 Cal. Rptr. 483 (account stated subject to presumption of undue influence when entered into between attorney and client during their fiduciary relationship); Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512 (contract between attorney and client for sale of real property to attorney); see also Prob. Code § 15003]. An advantage is obtained when the attorney enters into a transaction with the client whereby the attorney's position is improved, or he or she obtains a favorable opportunity or otherwise gains, benefits, or profits; it is not necessary to show that the advantage obtained was unfair or unjust in order for the presumption of undue influence to arise [see Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 27-28, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648] . The transaction is deemed voidable unless and until the attorney can establish full compliance with fiduciary obligations [see Gleason v. Klamer (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 782, 787, 163 Cal. Rptr. 483 ; see also Oliker v. Gershunoff (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1288, 1294-1295, 241 Cal. Rptr. 415 (presumption of undue influence successfully rebutted)], and the burden is on the attorney to show that the transaction was fair and regular and entered into voluntarily by the client with full knowledge of the facts [see Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 28, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 (no acquiescence in attorney's statement of account arose from client's failure to object to account for two years); Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512 (presumption of unfairness shifts burden of proof to attorney); Thompson v. Price (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 182, 188, 59 Cal. Rptr. 174 (trial court erred in requiring corporation to prove unfairness and unreasonableness of salaries and fees drawn by corporate director/counsel)].

When emotional distress has been suffered by the plaintiff, counsel may wish to allege a cause of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress in addition to alleging that the plaintiff suffered emotional distress as a result of the defendant's malpractice [see Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 (court instructed jury that damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress could be awarded in action alleging negligence by attorneys); see discussion in*§ 76.92[4]*]. However, a claim for recovery for emotional distress will only be appropriate in a particular case when the emotional shock to the plaintiff stems from an abnormal event and it was highly foreseeable that the defendant's actions would cause shock to the plaintiff [Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 168, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1 ; Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co., (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 (negligence of attorneys was a proximate cause of damage to plaintiff for emotional distress); Pleasant v. Celli (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 841, 853-854, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (plaintiff's frustration at delay in resolution of underlying medical malpractice suit that followed death of plaintiff's infant daughter and anger at being misused by both doctors and lawyers as not meeting requirements for recovery of emotional distress damages)].

As a general rule, when the harm to the plaintiff arising from a defendant attorney's unintentional, but negligent, conduct is solely economic, courts will disallow claims for emotional distress damages [see Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 (mere negligence does not support recovery for mental suffering when defendant's tortious conduct results in only economic injury); Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App 4th 1, 6-11, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 (affirming rejection of emotional distress damages when attorney's negligence resulted in loss of client-plaintiff's opportunity to recover damages in sexual harassment lawsuit); Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1037-1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 (no recovery of damages for emotional distress when plaintiff pleaded that attorney failed to adequately represent her and her property interests in a prior dissolution proceeding, resulting in loss of interests in certain assets)]. The courts, in following the general principle that damages for emotional distress arising out of acts that invade an interest protected by established tort law can be recovered only if the claimed emotional distress naturally ensues from the acts that are the basis for the complaint [Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1038, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 ; Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87] , have reasoned that the primary interest protected in legal malpractice actions is economic, and that serious emotional distress is not an inevitable consequence of the loss of money. Consequently, there should be no recovery of emotional distress damages when the plaintiff's injuries are solely economic [Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1038, 1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 ; Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87] .

By contrast, when an attorney's misconduct has resulted in injury to a plaintiff's interest in personal liberty, emotional distress damages may be available. For example, a client may recover emotional distress damages if his or her attorney's incompetence resulted in the client's improper confinement [see Holliday v. Jones (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 102, 112-120, 264 Cal. Rptr. 448 (client, whose conviction of involuntary manslaughter was reversed on grounds of incompetent representation, prevailed in subsequent malpractice action against former counsel for emotional distress damages relating to his confinement between initial conviction and acquittal on retrial)].

An attorney's misconduct may be actionable as intentional infliction of emotional distress if the attorney's conduct was outrageous, the attorney intended to cause emotional distress or had reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress, the client experienced severe emotional suffering, and the attorney's conduct actually and proximately caused emotional distress to the client [see McDaniel v. Gile (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 363, 372-374, 281 Cal. Rptr. 242 (action based on attorney's repeated sexual harassment of client, and attorney's conditioning of professional performance on provision of sexual favors by client); see also Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 946-947, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 (examples of outrageous behavior sufficient to support claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress)].

An attorney can be liable to his or her client for fraud if the elements of fraud are proven [cf. Frost v. Hanscome (1926) 198 Cal. 550, 559, 246 P. 53 (no grounds for finding of extrinsic fraud on record)]. to establish that an attorney is liable for fraud, the plaintiff must show a misrepresentation, knowledge of its falsity, intent to defraud, justifiable reliance, and resulting damage [Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] . Every element of the cause of action for fraud must be alleged in the proper manner, and the facts constituting the fraud must be alleged with sufficient specificity to allow the defendant to understand fully the nature of the charge made [see Wilhelm v. Pray, Price, Williams & Russell (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331-1332, 231 Cal. Rptr. 355 ; Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] .

The requirements for establishing and defending against an action for fraud are the same whether or not the plaintiff is a client or nonclient. A third party who is not a client may, however, have difficulty proving the element of justifiable reliance on an attorney's legal opinion [see B.L.M. v. Sabo & Deitsch (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 823, 835, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335 (housing developer did not establish justifiable reliance on legal opinion of attorneys appointed by city council as special counsel to housing project)]. The client also has the option of bringing an action for constructive fraud based on the attorney's breach of his or her fiduciary duties. Unlike an action for fraud, an action for constructive fraud does not require a showing of an intent to deceive [see Civ. Code § 1573; see also Strangman v. Arc-Saws, Inc. (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 620, 624625 (attorney liable for misrepresentation that induced client to invest in corporation of which attorney was an officer, even though there was nothing to indicate that attorney acted with dishonest motive)].

§ 76.155 Breach of Express or Implied Contract

An attorney typically undertakes to perform duties for a client pursuant to a contract. Consequently, an action for legal malpractice may sound in both tort and contract [Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 181, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421 ; Southland Mech. Constructors Corp. v. Nixen (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 417, 435, 173 Cal. Rptr. 917 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)]. In most cases, the broader range of damages awarded in tort actions will persuade counsel to pursue the tort cause of action [compare Civ. Code § 3300 (measure of damages for breach of contract) with Civ. Code § 3333 (measure of damages for tort)]. In rare cases, however, an attorney may have breached an express contractual promise, but without any negligence. In such a case, a breach of contract action may be the only available remedy.

Although there are no reported cases in California on the subject, other jurisdictions hold that neither an express nor implied warranty arises out of the attorney-client relationship [see, e.g., Corceller v. Brooks (La. App. 1977) 347 So. 2d 274, 277] . With the emergence of attorney advertising, however, some commentators have suggested that attorneys should be subject to warranty liability [see Steinberg & Rosen, Lawyer's Adverstising and Warranties: Caveat Advocatus, 64 A.B.A. J. 867, 870 (June 1978)].

[1] Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6: General Principles

Actions against attorneys based on professional practice have been covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 since its enactment effective January 1, 1978. Section 340.6 provides that an action against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission, other than for actual fraud, arising in the performance of professional services must be commenced within one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission, or four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission, whichever occurs first [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]. If the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal charge as an element of his or her malpractice claim [see § 76.70], the action must be commenced within two years after the plaintiff achieves postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]. An action for fraud is subject to a three-year statute of limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d); see Bustamante v. Haet (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 413, 416, 35 Cal. Rptr. 176] .

The court of appeal held that despite the use of the words "wrongful act or omission," Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 applies to actions in contract, as well as actions in tort [Southland Mech. Constructors Corp. v. Nixen (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 417, 173 Cal. Rptr. 917 , disapproved on other grounds, Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691] . The court concluded that the phrase "wrongful act or omission" should be interpreted to include both tortious and contractual wrongdoing, given the legislative history of Section 340.6 [Southland Mech.Constructors Corp. v. Nixen (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 417, 429-431, 173 Cal. Rptr. 917 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 does not apply to all professional services performed by an attorney, only to legal services. Therefore, a lawyer who provides administrative consulting services on behalf of a client sheds the protection of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 and is subject to the ordinary statute of limitations [Quintilliani v. Mannerino (1998) 62 Cal. App.

4th 54, 65, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359] .

It is unclear, however, whether the statute of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 applies in a legal malpractice action based on an attorney's breach of fiduciary duty. One court of appeal held that when a cause of action is based on an attorney's breach of fiduciary duties, the four-year catchall statute in Code Civ. Proc. § 343 applies, rather than Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 [David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 893, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 (1st Dist., Div. 4)] . However, another court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 does apply in legal malpractice actions based on breach of fiduciary duty [Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1363-1364, 1366-1369, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 (1st Dist., Div. 5)] .

Except for claims in which the plaintiff is required to establish his or her factual innocence for an underlying criminal conviction, the time for commencement of an action for legal malpractice cannot generally exceed four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission, although the period is tolled during the time that any of the following exist [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]:

- The plaintiff has not sustained actual injury;
- The attorney continues to represent the plaintiff regarding the specific subject matter in which the alleged wrongful act or omission occurred;
- The attorney willfully conceals the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission when such facts are known to the attorney, except that this provision tolls only the four-year limitation; and
- The plaintiff is under a legal or physical disability that restricts the plaintiff's ability to commence legal action.

In an action based on an instrument in writing, the effective date of which depends on some act or event of the future, the period of limitations provided for by Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 begins to run when the act or event occurs [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(b)].

When a legal malpractice plaintiff files a bankruptcy petition before the expiration of the limitations period under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, federal bankruptcy law preempts state law and defines the applicable limitations period for filing the malpractice action [California Aviation, Inc. v. Leeds (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 724, 734, 284 Cal. Rptr. 687] . In the case of a Chapter 11 bankruptcy, 11 U.S.C.S. § 108(a) applies to extend the applicable limitations period by two years [California Aviation, Inc. v. Leeds (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 724, 734, 284 Cal. Rptr. 687] .

The four-year outside limit in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 restricts malpractice actions based on actual injury that occurred prior to January 1, 1978 the effective date of the statute. Actions based on pre-1978 injury brought after January 1, 1982 are generally barred, unless statutory tolling is applicable [see Rubinstein v. Barnes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-282, 240 Cal. Rptr. 535] .

When an attorney brings suit against his or her client for fees, the client may, under specified circumstances, assert the defense of malpractice even when the statute of limitations on the claim has otherwise lapsed. However, this defense may be asserted only to the extent of offsetting the amount sought by the attorney's claim for payment [Safine v. Sinnott (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 614, 618-619, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70].

PRACTICE TIP:

Considerations in Suit for Fees. An attorney contemplating a fee collection action against a former client should consider deferring the filing of the action until more than one year after the legal representation of the client is terminated because any claims for legal malpractice that the client might be inclined to pursue in response to the collection action would then be time-barred. The principal benefit of this approach is that it eliminates the attorney's potential exposure in a legal malpractice action, as well as the attorney's need to report the claim to his or her professional liability insurer and to disclose the claim in subsequent professional liability insurance applications. An affirmative defense of offset in the fee collection action, based on alleged legal malpractice, should not be considered a legal malpractice claim for disclosure purposes.

[2] Discovery of Wrongful Act

[a] In General

Cases interpreting Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 have attempted to clarify the concepts of "discovery" and "occurrence" of the attorney's wrongful conduct. In one case, the court of appeal held that the question of when a plaintiff in a legal malpractice case discovered, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the wrongful act giving rise to the claim is usually a question of fact. The only exception to this general rule is when reasonable minds cannot differ, and the question then becomes a matter of law [Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 311, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510] .

The defendant in an attorney malpractice action bears the burden of proving when the plaintiff discovered, or through the use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the facts constituting the alleged malpractice [Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 1, 8-9, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273, 989 P.2d 701] . Although the burden of proving discovery usually falls on the plaintiff when applying other discovery rules, such as the common law discovery rule [see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions ., the burden when applying Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) falls instead on the defendant, primarily because this particular statutory discovery rule is technically an element of the affirmative statute of limitations defense, rather than an exception used by a plaintiff to argue for a delay in accrual of the applicable limitations period [Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 1, 8-9, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273, 989 P.2d 701 ; see Evid. Code § 500 (party generally has burden of proof as to each essential fact of claim or defense that party asserts)].

Under the discovery rule as it existed before the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, the client's failure to discover facts constituting fraud or misrepresentation by the attorney was often excused until the attorney-client relationship was terminated, because a client may not be able to recognize the negligence of his or her attorney when he or she sees it, and because a confidential relationship normally exists between attorney and client [see Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1166-1167, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89 (conduct predated effective date of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6)].

Discovery of one wrongful act committed by an attorney does not necessarily begin the running of the limitations period for a suit based on a related but separate act. The court of appeal reversed a summary judgment that was granted to defendant on the basis of the one-year provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a). The trial court had granted the motion for summary judgment on the ground that the defendant established that plaintiff had discovered some related acts of malpractice concerning certain community assets in a marital dissolution proceeding more than one year prior to suit. The court of appeal held that Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 provides that discovery of a wrongful act or omission starts the running of the statute of limitation as to that wrongful act or omission. The court rejected the defendant's contention that the discovery of a single wrongful act should commence the limitation period for a suit on a related but separate act [McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820-821, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703] .

The statute of limitations is not tolled by a belated discovery by the plaintiff of the legal theories, as distinguished from the facts, underlying a legal malpractice action. The test is whether or not the plaintiff has knowledge of circumstances, or a reasonable opportunity to have obtained the knowledge from available sources, sufficient to put a reasonable person on notice of a potential legal malpractice claim. If the client believes that damages were suffered because the attorney has done something wrong, this fact is sufficient notice to the plaintiff of the need for an investigation and the pursuit of a remedy [see Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1476, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; see also McGee v. Weinberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 798, 803, 159 Cal. Rptr. 86 (applying Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), formerly applicable to legal malpractice actions)].

[b] Accrual of Cause of Action

In enacting Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, the legislature appeared to follow the cases that held that a legal malpractice action did not accrue, and the statute of limitations therefore did not begin to run, until a plaintiff had sustained actual damage [Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; see Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 176, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136] . Subsequent case authority supports the view that the portion of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 providing for the tolling of the statute of limitations during the period that the plaintiff has not sustained "actual injury" [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1)] is a codification of this rule [see, e.g., Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 748-751, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062 ; Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 614-615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 ; Turley v. Wooldridge (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 586, 590-594, 281 Cal. Rptr. 441 ; Troche v. Daley (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 403, 410, 266 Cal. Rptr. 34] .

The Supreme Court has held that the test for actual injury under Section 340.6 is whether the plaintiff has sustained any damages compensable in a legal action, other than one for actual fraud, against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission arising in the performance of professional services. [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 751, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062.] The Court has also made clear that there is no "bright line" rule establishing when actionable harm occurs and a cause of action therefore accrues, and that the codification of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1) has not altered the well-settled principle that in legal malpractice actions, statute of limitiations issues, including injury, are at base factual inquiries [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 751, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062 ; Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 583, 588, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205] .

It is the fact of damage, rather than the amount, that is the critical factor when determining whether the malpractice plaintiff has sustained actual damage, although the legally cognizable damages that are sufficient to run the limitations period must be more than nominal damages [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 752, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] . However, neither difficulty in proving damages nor uncertainty as to the amount of damages will toll the limitations period [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 752, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] .

Actual injury may consist of the impairment or diminution of a right or remedy, as well as the total loss or extinction of a right or remedy [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 750, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062 ; Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 583, 590, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205] . Moreover, while no actual injury has been sustained merely because an attorney's error may have created a potential for harm in the future [see, e.g., Fritz v. Ehrmann (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 1383, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 670] , an actual injury may be sustained for limitations purposes even though future developments may remedy or reduce the amount of the damages suffered [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 754, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] . Thus, for cases in which the actual injury is sustained at the time of adjudication of an underlying lawsuit, there is no statutory or common-law requirement that the injury be irremediable, in terms of appellate finality or exhaustion, in order to be actual [Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617-620, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691] .

Actual injury refers only to the legally cognizable damage needed to assert the cause of action for legal malpractice. There is no requirement that an adjudication or settlement must first confirm a causal nexus between the attorney's error and the asserted injury. The determination of actual injury requires only a factual analysis of the alleged error and its consequences [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 752, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] . Thus, for example, if the alleged malpractice consists of negligent advice that prompts plaintiff to sign a contract he or she later seeks to rescind, actual injury may be sustained when the plaintiff hires a new attorney to pursue rescission, as plaintiff at that point incurs liability for legal fees due to the first attorney's malpractice [Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102, 114-115, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 811] .

Prior to the decision of the Supreme Court in Jordache Enterprises, the Supreme Court had held earlier in Laird v. Blacker that in cases in which the malpractice arises from litigation, actual injury occurs and the statute of limitations begins to run on entry of adverse judgment or final order of dismissal in the underlying action in which the malpractice occurred [Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 ; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2) (statutory period tolled while attorney continues to represent plaintiff regarding specific subject matter in which alleged wrongful act or omission occurred)]. Nothing in Jordache Enterprises expressly questions the continued viability of the holding in Laird, and it seems likely that the holding is still valid for straightforward cases in which the alleged malpractice occurred in the course of litigation while representing the malpractice plaintiff.

However, caution should be exercised, because under the appropriate set of facts, actual injury may arguably be sustained earlier. For example, in one case decided prior to the opinion in Jordache Enterprises, the court of appeal suggested that in cases in which the malpractice consists of failure to prosecute the underlying case, actual injury may be sustained prior to dismissal of the suit, for example, when there is a delay between expiration of the time period for prosecuting the action and actual dismissal of the suit and dismissal might have been avoided under the particular facts of the case [see Moss v. Stockdale, Peckham & Werner (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 494, 501-503, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 805 (expiration of five-year period for bringing case to trial as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 did not constitute actual injury as matter of law when dismissal did not occur until two months later and factual question existed as to whether provision tolling five-year period was applicable)].

While the continued viability of Laird may not be entirely clear, the Court in Jordache Enterprises did expressly overrule its earlier holding in ITT Small Business Finance Corp. v. Niles, in which the Court attempted to establish a bright-line rule that actual damages are sustained in transactional malpractice cases in which the adequacy of the documentation is the subject of the dispute upon entry of adverse judgment, settlement, or dismissal of the underlying action [see ITT Small Bus. Fin. Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 258, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965] . The ITT holding was overruled precisely for its attempt to establish a bright-line rule, which conflicted with the fact-specific approach subsequently utilized by the Supreme Court plurality in Adams v. Paul and adopted by the Court majority in Jordache Enterprises [Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 763, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062] . Given the Court's express overruling of ITT, extreme caution should be used before relying on court of appeal opinions decided after ITT and before Jordache Enterprises, at least to the extent that such cases rely on ITT's bright-line approach, rather than a more fact-specific analysis [compare Karno v. Biddle (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 622, 629, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318 (applying ITT, cause of action accrued when litigation was settled); with Sindell v. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1468-1471, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594 (distinguishing ITT, actual damages were sustained when plaintiffs were forced to incur attorney's fees and other costs)].

The California Supreme Court has held that the myriad of circumstances under which statute of limitations issues may arise in cases in which the attorney allegedly missed a statute of limitations in the underlying action illustrates the practicality of applying the prevailing "question-of-fact" rule to the determination of when actual injury occurred. The number of potential variables, which do not necessarily follow a set pattern, precludes defining the point of harm as a fixed point or event because reasonable application becomes too problematic. Thus, the issue may be resolved as a matter of law only if the facts are undisputed [Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 583, 588, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205] . The illustrative cases discussed below should therefore be read in light of this general deference to the trier of fact.

In the "classic" missed statute situation, in which the attorney negligently fails to file the underlying lawsuit within the applicable statutory period and does nothing further, actual injury for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 occurs when the client's underlying action becomes time-barred [Finlayson v. Sanbrook (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1444, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406] . After the underlying action becomes time-barred, plaintiff's attempts to remedy his or her injury do not delay commencement of the statute of limitations for attorney malpractice [Finlayson v. Sanbrook (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1443, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406 (plaintiff attempted to file third-party action after original action was time-barred)]. Similarly, when an attorney's alleged malpractice prevented a client from protecting its right to develop a parcel of property by exercising its right to automatically annex the property within a three-year time period, the statute of limitations began to run when the time limit for automatic annexation expired, rather than when the client later received an adverse judgment in litigation against a third party over its annexation rights [Foxborough v. Van Atta (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 217, 227, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525] .

If the attorney's negligence results in a judicial judgment or order causing harm to the client, the fact that the judgment or order could be remedied pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473 for six months after it is taken does not delay the accrual of the client's cause of action against the attorney [see Turley v. Wooldridge (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 586, 590-594, 281 Cal. Rptr. 441 (statute of limitations began to run on date judgment was entered, not six months thereafter); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) (relief from judgment or order taken by mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect)]. Similarly, if the attorney's negligence results in the entry of judgment in a dissolution action that causes harm to the client, the statutory provision giving the court in a separation, dissolution, or annulment action continuing jurisdiction to award to parties community assets or community liabilities that have not been previously awarded by a judgment in that action does not toll the running of the statute of limitations [Worton v. Worton (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1638, 1651-1652, 286 Cal. Rptr. 410 (malpractice action based on attorney's failure in dissolution action to discover and obtain evidence of client's spouse's excess assets, resulting in entry of judgment of dissolution that failed to divide the excess assets); see Fam. Code § 2556].

If an attorney commits two distinct acts of malpractice with two distinct injuries or potential injuries, the statute of limitations may accrue and run for one injury without affecting the limitations period for bringing suit for the other injury [Fritz v. Ehrmann (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 1386-1387, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 670] .

[c] Continuous Representation of Client

The limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 is tolled during the period that the negligent attorney continues to represent the plaintiff regarding the specific subject matter in which the allegedly wrongful act or omission occurred [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]. This tolling rule is justified because it avoids disrupting an ongoing attorney-client relationship with a malpractice claim against the attorney, while also providing the attorney time to correct or minimize his or her error. In addition, this tolling period prevents the attorney from defeating a malpractice action by continuing to represent the client until after the statute of limitations has expired [Gold v. Weissman (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1199, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480 ; Lockley v. Law Office of Cantrell, Green, Pekich, Cruz & McCort (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 875, 887, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877] .

The court of appeal held that an attorney who allows a statute of limitations to expire "continues to represent" the client regarding the "specific subject matter" in which the malpractice occurred as long as the attorney represents the client in a related action. In that case, the attorney had allowed the statute of limitations to expire on a personal injury claim against a nonemployer third-party tortfeasor, but continued to represent the plaintiff in a workers' compensation action arising out of the same accident. The court ruled that the "specific subject matter" of the representation included both the workers' compensation claim and the third-party action, and the attorney's continued representation of the plaintiff tolled the statute of limitations during the period of this representation [Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 309-310, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510 ; see also Nielsen v. Beck (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1054, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 435 (triable issue existed as to whether representation on bankruptcy matters was same subject matter as representation on unlawful detainer action); Gold v. Weissman (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1200-1201, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480 (attorney's efforts on behalf of client in preparing complaint against doctor for filing with California Board of Medical Quality Assurance constituted continued representation stemming from underlying medical malpractice claim)].

Similarly, an attorney continued to represent a client on the specific subject matter in which the alleged malpractice occurred, relating to the client's sale of a partnership interest, when the attorney's continued representation included assisting the client in restructuring the transaction and collecting on a new note that was created as a part of the restructuring [Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger, & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1528-1529, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94] .

In contrast, continuous representation was found not to exist when there was a four-year gap between an attorney's representation of a client in a real estate development matter and his subsequent acts of serving as a consultant and expert in litigation arising out of that transaction. That court opinion distinguished continuous, non-sporadic representation regarding a specific subject matter from the existence of a continuing attorney-client relationship. It concluded as a matter of law that the continuous representation requirement had not been met because of the client's retention of new counsel, the lack of contact between the attorney and the client during the four-year period, and the significant change in the attorney's role in the subsequent litigation [Foxborough v. Van Atta (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 217, 227, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525] .

However, at least one court of appeal opinion has held that if the case involves negligence in the preparation of transactional documents, the statute of limitations is tolled under the continued representation provision when the client comes to the attorney after the potential malpractice manifests itself, and before the limitations period has run, in an attempt to have the attorney rectify the problem or mitigate the damage. Under these circumstances, it does not matter if there is a gap in time, after the completion of the documents and until the client returns to the attorney with the problem, during which the attorney was not actually "continuing to represent" the client with respect to that specific subject matter [Fritz v. Ehrmann (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 1390-1391, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 670] .

Court of appeal opinions disagree on whether continuous representation is determined by an objective or subjective standard. At least one opinion has concluded that the determination of whether an attorney's representation is continuous is generally an objective determination and that the subjective beliefs of the parties are not dispositive [Worthington v. Rusconi (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1488, 1495-1499, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 . However, another court of appeal opinion has applied a more subjective standard and held that if an attorney unilaterally withdraws or abandons the client, the representation ends for these purposes when the client actually has or reasonably should have no expectation that the attorney will provide further legal services. Therefore, the representation may end when the attorney provides express notification to the client that the attorney will perform no further services, or, if the attorney remains silent, the end of the representation may be inferred from the circumstances of the case. The issue of whether the client actually and reasonably believed that the attorney would provide further legal services in the matter is predominantly a question of fact [Gonzalez v. Kalu (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 21, 30-31, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866 ; see also Hensley v. Caietti (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1172, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 (determination of when attorney-client relationship ends is based on client's perspective)].

In that case, for example, a triable issue existed as to whether the limitations period was tolled when the client had no contact with the attorney for two-and-a-half years after hiring the attorney to prosecute a sexual harassment claim against the client's employer. During that period, the limitations period had expired on both the underlying claims and the attorney malpractice claim. However, the plaintiff presented evidence that the attorney's office had told her that the claim would take a very long time and that the office would contact her, although the attorney never prosecuted the claim beyond filing an administrative claim and never contacted her. In addition, there was no evidence that the plaintiff had been advised as to the time frames within which specific actions would need to be taken. Under those circumstances, the court could not say as a matter of law that it was unreasonable for the plaintiff not to have known during the long period with no contact that the attorney was no longer representing her [Gonzalez v. Kalu (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 21, 31-33, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] .

Even if clients continue to retain attorneys whom they suspect have committed malpractice, the limitations period for filing a malpractice action is tolled, despite any lack of trust and confidence in the attorney-client relationship. "Trust and confidence" are not express requirements of the continued representation tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. §

340.6 [O'Neill v. Tichy (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 114, 120-121, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162] .

Execution of a substitution of attorney form does not necessarily dictate a finding that the attorney's representation of the client has ceased, at least if there is contrary evidence from which the trier of fact could conclude that the representation continued beyond that date [see Nielsen v. Beck (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1051, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 435 (triable issue existed when attorney provided, and billed for, phone advice solicited by client after substitution of attorney form was executed)].

If an attorney leaves a law firm and takes the representation of a particular client with him or her, the statute of limitations does not continue to toll under the continued representation exception on a malpractice action that the client may have against the attorney's former law firm or any of the other attorneys in that firm [Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 505, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666 (disapproving contrary conclusion of Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486); Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1538-1539, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94] . In so holding, the California Supreme Court concluded that this result was more consistent with the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, which extends this tolling exception to the period during ongoing representation by "the attorney" [Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 508-509, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] .

The Court also concluded that the purposes underlying the continued representation exception--to avoid disruption of the attorney-client relationship while providing the attorney an opportunity to correct or minimize any error, and to prevent an attorney from defeating a malpractice action by continuing to represent the client until the limitations period on the malpractice claim has expired--are only minimally implicated when the individual defendant attorney actually providing representation has left a defendant law firm. There is no longer any risk a defendant firm that is no longer providing representation to plaintiff will try to stall until the expiration period on the malpractice claim has expired by providing assurances to the plaintiff. Conversely, the law firm loses all ability to mitigate any potential damage to the client and there is no longer any attorney-client relationship to protect [Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 511-512, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] . Moreover, a contrary rule, according to the Court, would subject the former law firm to an indeterminate period of potential liability over which it has no control, frustrating one goal of the statute of limitations [Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 512, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] . The Court also noted that voluntary tolling agreements and stays of litigation could be used to reduce the impact of any lawsuit brought against the former employing firm, which when sued might counter with an indemnity suit against the individual attorney that continues to represent the client [Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 505, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666] .

[d] Concealment Rule

The statute of limitations is tolled during the time that the attorney willfully conceals the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission when such facts are known to the attorney, although this applies only to the four-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(3)].

[e] Tolling During Incapacities

The statute of limitations is tolled while the plaintiff is under a legal or physical disability that restricts the plaintiff's ability to commence legal action [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(4)]. Consequently, if the plaintiff is under the age of majority or insane, the statute of limitations will be tolled during the time that the incapacity exists [see Code Civ. Proc. § 352(a); Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 162, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428] . The statute of limitations is also tolled for up to two years for periods during which the claimant is imprisoned on a criminal charge [see Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1]. The statute would also be tolled during the time that other disabilities contained in Chapter 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure apply [Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 163, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428 ; see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 351, 353-356].

[f] Equitable Tolling and Equitable Estoppel

The equitable tolling doctrine, under which a plaintiff may be relieved of the effects of a statute of limitations to prevent a technical forfeiture and an unjustifiable deprivation of a trial on the merits, does not apply to attorney malpractice actions subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 [Gordon v. Law Offices of Aguirre & Meyer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 972, 979-980, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] . The courts have interpreted the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a), which provides that "in no event" shall the limitations period be tolled except under the circumstances specified in the statute, as evidence of a legislative intent to disallow tolling in any other circumstances [Gordon v. Law Offices of Aguirre & Meyer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 972, 979-980, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] . Thus, despite any lack of prejudice to the defendants, the court of appeal declined to apply the equitable tolling doctrine to a cause of action that was filed in an Arizona state court within the limitations period, dismissed due to lack of personal jurisdiction over the defendants, and then promptly refiled in a California court after expiration of the limitations period [Gordon v. Law Offices of Aguirre & Meyer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 972, 980, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] . However, in that case the court also suggested that the equitable tolling doctrine would not apply under the facts in any event, because trial on the merits was not denied due to an error of the trial court or through forces outside of the plaintiffs' control, but because the plaintiffs mistakenly filed suit in Arizona against California defendants [Gordon v. Law Offices of Aguirre & Meyer (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 972, 980 n.8, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119] .

Unlike equitable tolling, however, a defendant in a legal malpractice action may be equitably estopped from asserting the statute of limitations under the appropriate circumstances. Estoppel may be applied if: (1) the attorney renders legal advice to the client with knowledge of the effect this would have on the statute of limitations; (2) the attorney intends the client to rely on the advice, or the client has the right to believe the attorney so intended; (3) the client was unaware of the effect the advice would have on the statute of limitations; and (4) the client relies on the advice to the client's detriment [see Leasequip, Inc. v. Dapeer (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 394, 403-404, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782] .

In one case, for example, an attorney advised his corporate client that the failure to comply with corporate formalities would have no negative effect on the corporation's ability to pursue legal claims, and in reliance on that advice, the corporation failed to file required statements with the state and was suspended. While suspended, the corporation filed a malpractice suit against the attorney, but could not legally do so while its corporate powers were suspended, so the corporation was forced to wait until after its corporate powers were restored to prosecute the suit. By then, however, the statute of limitations had expired. The court of appeal held that the attorney was equitably estopped from asserting the statute of limitations, because the client's reliance on the attorney's advice was the cause of both the corporation's suspension and the expiration of the statute of limitations [Leasequip, Inc. v. Dapeer (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 394, 404-405, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782] . The court noted that although Section 340.6 may not be tolled for reasons not specified by the statute, estoppel is a distinct concept that does not seek to extend the limitations period, but comes into play only after the limitations period has expired to prevent a defendant from benefiting from the defendant's own wrongdoing [Leasequip, Inc. v. Dapeer (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 394, 406-407, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782] .

[g] Effect of Pursuing Administrative Remedies

If administrative remedies exist to rectify problems created by an attorney's malpractice, the statute of limitations is tolled while the plaintiff seeks those remedies [Robinson v. McGinn (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 66, 74, 77-78, 240 Cal. Rptr. 423 (disapproved in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 , to extent it conflicts with Laird's holding that claim accrues when actual injury occurs rather than when injury becomes irremediable)]. This is because actual injury occurs and the malpractice claim accrues when administrative remedies have been exhausted, without regard to potential judicial remedies [see Turley v. Wooldridge (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 586, 592, 281 Cal. Rptr. 441 ; see also Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 (citing Turley with approval and disapproving Robinson to extent it conflicts with Laird's holding that claim accrues when actual injury occurs rather than when injury becomes irremediable)].

[h] Effect of Attorney's Failure to Withdraw Formally

Failure to withdraw formally as a client's attorney of record, standing alone, will not toll the statute of limitations under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) [Shapero v. Fliegel (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 842, 846-849, 236 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; see Hensley v. Caietti (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1172, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 (action time-barred when filed more than one year after attorney-client oral disagreement, but less than one year after substitution of attorney)]. If the attorney-client relationship disintegrates, the statute will begin to run, regardless of the attorney's technical status [see Shapero v. Fliegel (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 842, 846-849, 236 Cal. Rptr. 696 (failure of divorce counsel formally to withdraw as counsel of record under Code Civ. Proc. § 285.1 does not satisfy "continued representation" provision of Code Civ. Proc. 340.6); see generally § 76.170[1][a]].

[i] Effect of Suspension and Revival of Plaintiff's Corporate Status

Suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment of corporate taxes can effectively bar a corporate plaintiff from bringing a malpractice action, and can also facilitate a defendant's pleading of the statute of limitations as an affirmative defense [ABA Recovery Servs., Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27] . In one case, the plaintiff corporation's charter was suspended on March 1, 1985, under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 for nonpayment of fees and taxes. Plaintiff discovered defendant attorney's negligence on March 19, 1985, and therefore had until March 19, 1986, to file its malpractice lawsuit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]. It filed its lawsuit on March 17, 1986, within the one-year period, but while its corporate powers were still suspended. Defendants moved for summary judgment, based on the statute of limitations, and prevailed in the trial court. The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the plaintiff had no capacity to prosecute a civil action during the suspension, and therefore could not bring its action within the one-year statutory period mandated by Civ. Code § 340.6 [ABA Recovery Servs., Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 (citing Welco Constr. Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 71, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 for proposition that corporation suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 lacks capacity to sue)]. Plaintiff argued that it obtained a certificate of revivor during pendency of the action and that therefore the trial court should have permitted it to maintain its action. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that when a substantive defense accrues during corporate suspension, a corporate revival will not prejudice that defense [ABA Recovery Servs., Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 (construing Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, which states that reinstatement of corporate status must be without prejudice to any defense that has accrued by reason of the original suspension)].

Although expiration of the statute of limitations would generally prevent a suspended corporate plaintiff from bringing a legal malpractice action, if the suspension is caused by the legal advice given by the attorney to the corporation, the attorney may be equitably estopped from asserting the statute of limitations [see § 76.170[2][e]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Ascertaining Plaintiff's Corporate Status. The defendant in a legal malpractice action instituted by a corporation should always ascertain the plaintiff's corporate status at the outset of the lawsuit in order to determine if a statute of limitations defense can be interposed based on the plaintiff's lack of capacity to sue during the relevant time period.

[j] Effect of Statute on Equitable Indemnity Actions

A tort defendant's equitable indemnity action is separate and distinct from the tort plaintiff's action against the defendant. The indemnity action is governed by its own limitations period, even though the tort plaintiff's direct action against the indemnitor may be barred by its own statute of limitations. Moreover, the indemnity action does not accrue for purposes of the statute of limitations until the defendant pays a judgment or settlement for which the defendant is entitled to indemnity [Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger, & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1541, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94] . Thus, Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 does not apply to claims for equitable indemnity brought by one liable attorney against other potentially liable attorneys [Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger, & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1542-1544, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94] .

[3] Bifurcation

In California the trial judge is given discretion to grant a trial of special defenses or of any issue or any part thereof before the trial of any other issue [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 597, 597.5], and in legal malpractice litigation counsel may wish to seek trial of the issue of the statute of limitations prior to a separate trial of the issue of the attorney's negligence.

PRACTICE TIP:

Considerations Regarding Separate Juries. Since there is a serious tactical disadvantage to a defendant of failing to prevail on a technical defense like the statute of limitations before the same jury that will subsequently hear the case on the merits, defendant's counsel should assess whether to abandon the defense if the court refuses to empanel separate juries for the trials of the statute of limitations and the case in chief, respectively. Busy trial judges typically do not empanel separate juries under these circumstances for reasons of judicial economy, and thus, it is often better for the defendant to abandon the statute of limitations defense unless it (1) has a strong chance of success, or (2) is the only viable defense that can be asserted and the case is apt to be lost on the merits.

Due to these concerns, it is almost invariably advisable for the defendant to most aggressively pursue any available statute of limitations defense through a summary judgment motion.

§ 76.171 Comparative Negligence

An attorney can assert the affirmative defense of comparative negligence to a cause of action for negligence in a legal malpractice case [see, e.g., Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 311, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 (plaintiff found 2.5 percent negligent but judgment reversed on other grounds); BAJI No. 3.50]. Prior to California's adoption of the comparative negligence doctrine in 1975 [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] , the defense of contributory negligence was held to apply to legal malpractice actions [Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 530, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 150, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864] . While the term "contributory negligence" has not been abolished, the former result, a bar to plaintiff's recovery, has [Wittenbach v. Ryan (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 712, 718, 134 Cal. Rptr. 47] . Presently, the contributory negligence of the person injured reduces the damages awarded in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] . Therefore, cases decided before the doctrine of comparative negligence was adopted should still be good law to the extent that they permit evidence of the plaintiff's negligence to reduce the plaintiff's recovery.

The defense of comparative negligence is often asserted in two general contexts in a legal malpractice case. The first is when the client fails to follow the advice of counsel and sustains damages as a result of this failure. In one case, the court of appeal suggested in dictum that a client's failure to follow the attorney's advice could support a contributory negligence defense [Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 150, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864] . The second context in which the comparative negligence defense may be appropriate is when the client has failed to cooperate with the attorney and damages result. This sometimes amounts to an actual obstruction of the attorney's representation. However, it typically falls into the category of a client's refusal or failure to act, such as the failure of a personal injury plaintiff to comply with court-ordered discovery, causing a dismissal of the underlying case. This arose in another context in a case in which the attorney had negotiated for the client, a criminal defendant, to receive psychiatric treatment instead of a prison sentence, but the client was sentenced to prison after failing to appear for his sentencing. In reversing the trial court, the appellate court held that the attorney should have been allowed to offer evidence that the client was imprisoned solely because he failed to follow the attorney's instructions to appear for sentencing [Martin v. Hall (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 414, 428, 97 Cal. Rptr. 730] . It should be noted, however, that the court deemed this evidence relevant on the issue of damages and did not consider whether it was also relevant evidence of contributory negligence [Martin v. Hall (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 414, 428, 97 Cal. Rptr. 730] .

It might be argued that a client's failure to cooperate with the attorney is technically not comparative negligence, but rather negates the allegation that the attorney was negligent. However, there is a fine line between these two concepts, and the prudent attorney defending a legal malpractice action should assert the affirmative defense of comparative negligence when there is evidence of a client's failure to cooperate in his or her legal representation.

When the plaintiff alleges an intentional tort, the defense of contributory negligence does not apply [see Godfrey v. Steinpress (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 154, 176, 180 Cal. Rptr. 95 (contributory negligence not applicable in fraud action when no negligence involved)]. There are also other situations in which the defense of contributory negligence has been unsuccessful. One such situation is when the client fails to oversee the work of the attorney, particularly the litigation attorney. The courts have held that a client is not under a duty to keep abreast of a lawsuit or other legal matter and actually oversee it [see Daley v. County of Butte (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 392-393, 38 Cal. Rptr. 693 ; Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 151, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864 ; see also Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 530, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 (plaintiff's failure to question defendant's actions as at most raising a jury issue regarding contributory negligence)].

Another basis on which the comparative negligence defense is sometimes improperly alleged is the failure of the plaintiff to mitigate damages. There are no reported cases discussing the client's failure to mitigate damages as comparative negligence. However, mitigation of damages should be considered a separate and distinct defense from comparative negligence [see Green v. Smith (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 392, 397398 ; see also BAJI Nos. 14.67, 14.68; see § 76.97].

§ 76.172 Good Faith and Error of Judgment

An attorney is not liable for every mistake he or she makes in his or her practice. The attorney does not insure the accuracy of his or her opinions or the validity of the document drafted for a client. Nor is the attorney liable for a mistake as to a legal question on which well-informed attorneys may entertain reasonable doubt [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359]. However, before this defense may be asserted successfully, it must be shown that the attorney has met his or her duty to undertake reasonable research in an effort to ascertain relevant legal principles and to make an informed decision as to a course of conduct based on an intelligent assessment of the problem [Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 ; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359]. Additionally, when an attorney does not have sufficient knowledge in a specific field of the law, he or she has a duty to refer a legal problem to a specialist, or be held to the standard of care required of a specialist in the problem area [Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714] .

If an attorney is faced with a problem concerning the manner in which a doubtful or debatable legal subject will be resolved, performing reasonable research in an effort to ascertain relevant legal principles and make an informed decision regarding a course of conduct will preclude liability for malpractice, even when the course of conduct selected is shown to be erroneous by subsequent events [see Davis v. Damrell (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 883, 888-889, 174 Cal. Rptr. 257] . If such reasonable research is not undertaken, however, an attorney will be held liable for the failure to exercise informed discretion regarding the rights of the client [Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359]. Such liability regarding a debatable point of law may be imposed even if the attorney's decision was subsequently vindicated [see Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 (despite fact that attorney's conclusion of law that military pensions were community property was subsequently vindicated by the United States Supreme Court in McCarty v. McCarty (1981) 453 U.S. 210, (superseded by statute as stated in In re Marriage of Smith (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1115, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 341), attorney held negligent for failure to thoroughly research law in area of community property treatment of military pensions when attorney had never considered doctrine of federal preemption)].

Although no case has directly so held, one court has suggested that if an attorney's research reveals several equally viable legal options, the attorney should advise the client of the options and the risks associated with each of them and afford the client the opportunity to decide which to pursue [see Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 416, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 (dictum)]. However, it is not at all clear that this dictum will serve as a basis for imposing malpractice liability.

While an attorney's duty regarding procedural steps is not completely clear, making a reasonable choice among permissible options will generally preclude negligence liability. In one case, it was alleged that an attorney negligently failed to notify the property insurers of a pending action against the insured sellers of the real property, and thus forced the sellers to defend the action themselves. The complaint also alleged that the attorney was negligent in failing to cross complain against other parties allegedly responsible for the damages in the underlying action. The court characterized the issue before it as whether or not the attorney had a duty to cross complain or notify the insurer of the action. The court also held that the existence of a particular duty was a question of law [Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 613, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919] . The court held as a matter of law that the attorney, in the reasonable exercise of his judgment, did not have a duty to cross complain or to notify the insurance carrier of the pending litigation. The court based its conclusion on the permissive nature of cross complaints, and the doubts that existed regarding the insurer's potential coverage of the incident that was the basis of the underlying action [Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 613-615, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919] .

Another area in which an attorney will not be held liable for a reasonable, good faith mistake is when the attorney believes that a proposed action lacks merit, and seeks to withdraw from representation [see Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308-311, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] . In one such case, the California Supreme Court has held that an attorney faced with an apparent conflict between the duty to the client and the public obligation to the judiciary not to pursue actions lacking in merit cannot be held liable for damages caused by the withdrawal from representation of the client unless the choice was so manifestly erroneous that no prudent attorney would have done so [Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 309-310, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935] .

§ 76.173 Release

Under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, a member of the State Bar of California may not contract with a client to prospectively limit the member's liability to the client for the member's professional malpractice [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-400(A)]. A member of the State Bar may not settle a claim or potential claim for malpractice unless the client is informed in writing that the client may seek the advice of an independent lawyer of the client's choice regarding the settlement and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek that advice [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-400(B); see also Donnelly v. Ayer (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 978, (agreement to settle was proper when executed after attorney-client relationship had been terminated and client had consulted several other attorneys)].

§ 76.174 Limited or Terminated Representation

The duty of an attorney to the client depends on the agreed scope of the attorney's representation. Consequently, the attorney may reduce his or her potential liability for legal malpractice by contractually limiting the representation in either its scope or duration [see, e.g., Kalmus v. Kalmus (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 405, 424-426, 230 P.2d 57 (attorney engaged only to secure a continuance had no duty to defend lawsuit and could withdraw as counsel)]. For example, a tax attorney may agree to undertake the representation of a client strictly in corporate tax matters pertaining only to a particular tax year.

The defense of limited representation is perhaps most frequently asserted when a client sues an attorney for failing to include an additional cause of action in a lawsuit or for neglecting to institute a separate lawsuit on a matter related to the subject matter of the original representation. It has been argued that when the attorney and client agree to limit the scope of representation, the attorney is under no duty to the client to pursue any cause of action outside the scope of the agreement [see Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 42, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534 (representation limited to collection action); Kalmus v. Kalmus (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 405, 424-426, 230 P.2d 57 (attorney engaged only to secure a continuance cannot be required to defend lawsuit and could withdraw as counsel)]. It appears that if an attorney clearly discloses the limited scope of the representation and the client knowingly agrees to it, the client cannot state a cause of action for legal malpractice based on the attorney's failure to represent the client beyond the limited scope of the agreed representation [see Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 42, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534] .

If an attorney represents the plaintiff class in a class action lawsuit, the certification of the class does not relieve the attorney from a duty to advise about other potential claims the plaintiffs may have that arise from the same facts that underlie the certified claims [Janik v. Rudy, Exelrod & Zieff (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 930, 934, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 751] . This does not mean that the attorney must include other related claims, because doing so may expand the scope of the lawsuit and create additional grounds for the defendant to challenge the propriety of the class as certified. A failure to actually include the additional claims in the lawsuit, however, goes to the issue of whether the attorney has breached the duty of care, and not to the issue of whether a duty of care exists to advise as to the potential claims [Janik v. Rudy, Exelrod & Zieff (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 930, 942-943, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 751] .

§ 76.175 Agreement to Arbitrate Claim

There are no published California appellate cases expressly upholding the enforceability of an agreement to arbitrate a legal malpractice claim [but see Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1507, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6 (denying enforcement of agreement on ground that it extended only to fee-related matters, not to legal malpractice)]. However, arbitration agreements frequently have been invoked by defendants in cases instituted by patients against their physicians, by patients against hospitals, and by customers against stock brokerage firms.

An agreement to arbitrate future claims is not effective unless the client is fully advised of the consequences of the agreement and is made aware that the agreement will apply to legal malpractice actions [Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1504-1508, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6] . In one case, for example, the client had signed a retainer agreement that contained an arbitration provision. This provision, which required arbitration of any dispute concerning "fees, costs, or any other aspect of [the] attorney-client relationship," was located in the retainer agreement after several clauses regarding resolution of fee and cost disputes. The client argued that the arbitration clause applied only to disputes over fees and costs. The client's attorneys, who drafted the agreement, alleged that they had intended the agreement to apply as well to future legal malpractice claims, but did not explain their interpretation of the agreement to the client before the client signed. Later, when the attorneys attempted to compel arbitration in a malpractice action brought by the client, the trial court refused to apply the arbitration agreement to the malpractice claim. The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the client never agreed to binding arbitration of her claims of legal malpractice [Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1504-1508, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

§ 76.176 Unclean Hands

If a plaintiff's injury was due in some degree to his or her own knowing misconduct, the plaintiff's legal malpractice action may be barred under the equitable doctrine of unclean hands [see Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1063-1064, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250] . This doctrine provides that when a party who seeks to set judicial machinery in motion and obtain some remedy has violated conscience, good faith, or other equitable principles in his or her prior conduct, the court will refuse to interfere on that party's behalf to afford him or her a remedy [see Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 620, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 (unclean hands defense as available in both actions for legal remedies and actions for equitable remedies)]. However, the rule is qualified by the requirement that the party against whom the doctrine is invoked has directly "infected" the actual cause of action before the court, and is not merely guilty of some unrelated improper past conduct [Pond v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 280, 289-290, 198 Cal. Rptr. 517] . The doctrine of "unclean hands" does not require the party seeking relief to be guilty of fraud; it is sufficient if he or she merely acted unconscientiously [DeRosa v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1390, 1396, 262 Cal. Rptr. 370] .

Application of the doctrine depends on the nature of the plaintiff's misconduct, and the relationship of the plaintiff's misconduct to the plaintiff's claimed injuries [Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1060, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250] . In a malpractice action based on allegations that a defendant, while acting as plaintiff's attorney in an underlying action, had led plaintiff to commit perjury in a civil action, resulting in damages to the client, a court of appeal held that the action was barred under the doctrine of unclean hands [Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1064, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250] . The court noted that the plaintiff's damages, if any, were attributable to the plaintiff's own knowing misbehavior, and the relationship of the misconduct to the harm was direct and not incidental [Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1063, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Unclean Hands Defense. The unclean hands defense frequently affords the defendant an opportunity to introduce otherwise inadmissible evidence prejudicial to plaintiff, thereby enhancing defendant's case even if the unclean hands defense itself is ultimately unsuccessful.

Although not relying on the equitable doctrine of unclean hands, the court of appeal in another case held that a plaintiff could not pursue a legal malpractice action if the receipt of bad legal advice led to the plaintiff's commission of a felony [Chapman v. Superior Court (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 261, 276-277, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852] . In that particular case, the plaintiff was a former public official attempting to pursue a legal malpractice action against counsel for the public board on which the plaintiff formerly served, based on the fact that counsel provided erroneous legal advice to the plaintiff about how to handle the plaintiff's conflicts of interest. As a result, the plaintiff had to plead guilty to a felony for having financial interests in public contracts made by the board, in willful violation of Gov. Code § 1090. The court of appeal held that public policy prohibited the plaintiff from seeking what would amount to indemnification from the public counsel and the public counsel's employer for the damages that the plaintiff sustained by virtue of his commission of a felony while a public official. The court noted that the plaintiff should have recognized the wrongfulness of his conduct when he entered into self-serving private financial contracts and failed to relinquish his seat on the board [Chapman v. Superior Court (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 261, 276-277, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852] .

§ 76.177 Defenses Provided by Tort Claims Act

A salaried public defender engaged in representing an assigned client is an employee acting in the scope of his or her employment within the meaning of the California Tort Claims Act [Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 618, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578 ; see Gov. Code §§ 810-996.6]. A client who sues such a defender for malpractice must file, as a precondition to suit, a Tort Claims Act claim against the employing public agency [Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 618, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578 ; see Gov. Code § 945.4]. Failure to allege compliance with the Tort Claims Act requirements in a malpractice complaint against a public defender will render the complaint demurrable [see Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 613, 619, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578] . In addition, failure to meet the claim requirements within statutory timeframes may result in a complete bar to the plaintiff's action [see Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 619, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578] .

Although the Tort Claims Act may be generally applicable to an action for professional negligence brought against a public defender, a deputy public defender is not immune from liability under Gov. Code § 820.2 for his or her acts or omissions in representing a criminal defendant [Barner v. Leeds (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 676, 679-680, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 13 P.3d 704] . The Tort Claims Act generally provides immunity to public employees for injuries caused by acts or omissions that are the result of the exercise of discretion granted to the employee, but case law has limited immunity under that statute to basic policy decisions and has not extended immunity to lower-level acts or omissions that are merely operational in nature [Barner v. Leeds (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 676, 685, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 13 P.3d 704] . Applying this distinction, the California Supreme Court has held that once the decision to provide legal services to a defendant is made, legal representation provided by a deputy public defender entails operational decisions that are incident to the normal functioning of the office of the public defender, rather than the type of policy decisions that are immunized from liability under Gov. Code § 820.2 [Barner v. Leeds (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 676, 689-690, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 97, 13 P.3d 704] .

§ 76.178 Attorney's Work Product Privilege

Ordinarily, the work product of an attorney is not discoverable unless the court determines that denial of discovery will unfairly prejudice the party seeking discovery in preparing that party's claim or defense or will result in prejudice [Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.030(b)]. In an action between an attorney and his or her client or former client, however, no work-product privilege exists if the work product is relevant to an issue of breach by the attorney of a duty to the attorney's client arising out of the attorney-client relationship [Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.080]. For purposes of the exception, a "client" is a person who directly or through an authorized representative, consults an attorney for the purpose of retaining the attorney or securing legal service or advice from him or her in his or her professional capacity, and includes an incompetent who personally consults the attorney or whose guardian or conservator personally consults the lawyer on behalf of the incompetent [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.020 (Evid. Code § 951 as defining term "client" for purposes of work-product exception); Evid. Code § 951 (defining "client" in context of evidentiary lawyer-client privilege)].

§ 76.179 Attorney-Client Privilege Prevents Proper Defense of Suit

A special problem may arise if the malpractice plaintiff is also an attorney and the alleged malpractice consists of negligence in providing faulty legal advice to the plaintiff while he or she was consulting the defendant in connection with the plaintiff's representation of a client. Proper resolution of the issues in the malpractice claim may require the defendant to reveal precisely what the malpractice plaintiff said to the defendant when the plaintiff sought legal advice, in order for the defendant to explain precisely why the particular legal advice was given to the plaintiff. However, if this would require revealing confidential information about the plaintiff's original client, and if that client has not consented to waive the attorney-client privilege, the plaintiff in the malpractice action is under an obligation to object to the introduction of that information as evidence. Absent an applicable statutory exception to the attorney-client privilege, the trial court is obligated to sustain the objection. Because the malpractice defendant in this situation is thus precluded from presenting all relevant evidence because of the plaintiff's disclosure of client confidences to the defendant, the malpractice action is subject to dismissal [Solin v. O'Melveny & Myers (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 451, 463, 467, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456 (clients intervened in suit to seek dismissal)].

However, dismissal for inability to present a defense due to client confidences should be reserved for rare cases, and the court must consider at least four factors before deciding to dismiss. First, the relevant evidence must be the client's confidential information and the client must be insisting that the information remain confidential. Second, the confidential information must be highly material to the defense. Third, the court must determine whether it is able to protect the information, and thus allow the action to proceed, through use of such measures as sealing or protective orders, limited admissibility or use orders, or in camera proceedings. Finally, the court should consider whether it would be fundamentally unfair to allow the action to proceed [Dietz v. Meisenheimer & Herron (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 771, 792-793, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464]. For example, it might be fundamentally unfair to allow a plaintiff to bring a claim which, by its very nature, necessitates a defense based on confidential information, when the plaintiff has directly supplied such information to the defendant or the plaintiff seeks to derivatively represent a third party who has supplied such information [see Dietz v. Meisenheimer & Herron (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 771, 793-794, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

(citing Solin v. O'Melveny & Myers (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 451, 463, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456 , and McDermott, Will & Emery v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 384, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622)].

In these cases, it is irrelevant whether the malpractice plaintiff needs to reveal confidential information to prove his or her case. The relevant question is whether the malpractice defendant needs to reveal confidential information to defend [see Solin v. O'Melveny & Myers (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 451, 462-463, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456] .

§ 76.180 Collateral Estoppel

The doctrine of collateral estoppel may be used as a defense by an attorney in a legal malpractice suit if the issue of the attorney's liability has already been decided in a prior action in favor of the attorney. Collateral estoppel bars relitigation of an issue decided at a prior proceeding if (1) the issue necessarily decided at the prior proceeding is identical to the one sought to be relitigated, (2) the previous proceeding resulted in a final judgment on the merits, and (3) the party against whom collateral estoppel is asserted was a party or in privity with a party at the prior proceeding [Mooney v. Caspari (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 704, 717, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728] . A party is in privity with another if the two share a mutual or successive relationship to the same rights of property, or if there is such an identification in interest of one person with another as to represent the same legal rights [Mooney v. Caspari (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 704, 718, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728] .

In one case, for example, a real estate developer and a real estate broker shared a common interest in pursuing a claim against the developer's former joint venture partner when their real estate venture broke down. When that claim failed, the developer brought a malpractice suit against his former attorney, and although he was not a party to the action, the real estate broker participated extensively in assisting the developer. However, judgment was reached on the merits in favor of the developer's former attorney. Before that judgment was reached, the real estate broker brought a malpractice claim of his own against the developer's current attorney for failing to file a malpractice action on the broker's behalf against the developer's former attorney. The court of appeal held that the broker's action was barred by the doctrine of collateral estoppel. The court concluded that because the developer's former attorney was found not to have been liable for malpractice, any action against the developer's current attorney based on failure to file a malpractice action against the former attorney would fail for lack of damages. Although the broker was not a party to the developer's malpractice action, the broker's interest in the litigation was interconnected with the developer's to such a close degree that he was in privity with the developer, and application of collateral estoppel was appropriate [Mooney v. Caspari (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 704, 718-721, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728] .

If a plaintiff's civil malpractice complaint is based on the same factual allegations of attorney neglect that were actually determined against the plaintiff after a full evidentiary hearing in a prior habeas corpus proceeding, the action is barred by collateral estoppel [Younan v. Caruso (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 401, 414, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103] . For further discussion, see Ch. 491, Res Judicata .

§ 76.200 Duty to Intended Beneficiaries and Other Third Parties

[1] When Duty Exists--In General

An attorney's duty of care may extend to third parties in situations in which public policy so demands. In determining whether the duty extends to third parties, courts will balance the following factors [Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 227, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161 ; Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 588, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; see also Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650-651, 320 P.2d 16 (liability of negligent notary to third party not in privity); cf. Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 324A]:

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff [see, e.g., Donald v. Garry (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 769, 772, 97 Cal. Rptr. 191 (attorney representing collection agency in debt collection action as liable to creditor for negligent failure to prosecute lawsuit diligently, since creditor was intended beneficiary of services of collection agency and its attorney in collection action)];

- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff;

- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury;

- The closeness of the connection between the attorney's conduct and the injuries suffered by the plaintiff; and

- The policy of preventing future harm.

An attorney may owe a duty to a nonclient if the attorney assumes a role that is something other than the role of an advocate. In one case, for example, an attorney who represented one party in a construction dispute agreed to act as a mediator between his client and the contractor. Although the court of appeal agreed that there was no attorney-client relationship between the attorney and the contractor, the court held that the attorney did owe a duty to the contractor based on the attorney's role as mediator, and that this duty extended at least to the duty to disclose fully all facts and circumstances that might reasonably have caused the contractor to believe that the attorney would not or could not be impartial [Furia v. Helm (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 945, 954-955, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357] . In another case, an attorney acting as an escrow holder was liable for conversion to a nonclient who placed property into escrow, because the attorney disposed of the property in a way that was not in accordance with the escrow instructions provided when the property was deposited [Virtanen v. O'Connell (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 688, 697-700, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 702] .

[2] Liability to Insurer for Negligent Representation of Insured

[a] In General

Under certain circumstances, an attorney may also be liable to a liability insurer who is not the attorney's client. When a conflict of interest necessitates that the insurer pay for separate counsel for the insurer and insured in defending an action brought by a third party, the insurer may sue the insured's counsel for negligence, but only for violating the statutory duties imposed on that attorney by Civ. Code § 2860. The fact that the attorney's client is the insured rather than the insurer offers only limited protection in those cases [Assurance Co. of Am. v. Haven (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 78, 83-84, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 (insured's separate counselis not liable to insurer for failing to investigate, prepare, assert, establish, or perform similar functions regarding complete defense to action against insured); see Civ. Code § 2860].

[b] Attorney Intends Advice to Influence Third Party

In a case concerning the liability of accountants performing audits, the California Supreme Court held that an auditor owes no general duty of care regarding the conduct of an audit to persons other than the client [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 376, 406, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] . The Court also held, however, that an auditor may be liable for negligent misrepresentations in an audit report to those persons who act in reliance on those misrepresentations in a transaction that the auditor intended to influence [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 376, 407-412, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] . This decision, if applied by analogy to attorneys, suggests that an attorney may be liable to third parties for negligent advice in situations in which the third party actually relied on the attorney's advice and in which the attorney actually intended his or her advice to influence the third party with respect to a specific transaction.

[3] When No Duty Owed

[a] In General

An attorney's exposure to legal malpractice extends only to the intended beneficiaries of the attorney's actions [see National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Atkins (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 562, 565, 119 Cal. Rptr. 618] . For example, an attorney is not liable for failing to notify the potential creditors of an estate of a client's death or of the pendency of probate proceedings, because the attorney's duties were to the client, and to the estate after the death of the client, rather than to the decedent's creditors. The creditor is not an intended beneficiary of the attorney's representation of the client [National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Atkins (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 562, 565, 119 Cal. Rptr. 618] . Conversely, an attorney employed by a collection agency may be held liable to a creditor if a collection proceeding is dismissed for lack of prosecution due to the attorney's negligence, on the ground that the creditor is clearly the intended beneficiary of the collection agency's retainer of the attorney to prosecute an action against the debtor [Donald v. Garry (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 769, 772, 97 Cal. Rptr. 191] .

An attorney is not liable to a third party, even if the attorney was negligent, if the attorney did not owe a duty to the third party. For example, the court of appeal held that an attorney representing an injured employee has no duty to the employer to institute an action against a third-party defendant so that the employer may recover its lien [Soliz v.

Spielman (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 70, 72, 118 Cal. Rptr. 127 ; see also Brian v. Christensen (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 377, 381-382, 110 Cal. Rptr. 688 (attorney has no duty to notify employer of employee's lawsuit)]. Similarly, an attorney representing a television writer-producer in negotiating a contract was held to owe no duty to the client's agent, because the agent was not a client of the attorney, was not an intended beneficiary of the legal services provided, and was even a potential adverse party on the issue of commission obligations owed to the agent under the negotiated contract [Major Clients Agency v. Diemer (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1132-1133, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 (cautioning against imposing duties on attorney owed to client's other advisors, unless others are clearly intended beneficiaries)].

The California Supreme Court has held as a matter of law that co-counsel do not owe one another a fiduciary duty to conduct their joint representation in a manner that does not diminish or eliminate the fees each expects to collect in the case, because recognition of such a duty could interfere with each attorney's undivided duty of loyalty to the client [Beck v. Wecht (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 289, 297-298, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 384, 48 P.3d 417] . Therefore, it appears that co-counsel may not bring a malpractice claim against one another.

An attorney also does not owe a duty to parties with whom his or her client deals at arm's length. Thus, the California Supreme Court held that a party who was damaged because an attorney's client relied on the attorney's negligent advice regarding a sale of stock could not recover from the attorney. The Court found that the attorney had no duty toward the third party under the circumstances, and could not be held liable absent fraud or malice [Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 344, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737] . An attorney therefore also owes no duty to an adversary in litigation [Morales v. Field, DeGoff, Huppert & MacGowan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 307, 318, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239 ; see also De Luca v. Whatley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 574, 576, 117 Cal. Rptr. 63 (client accused of crime is only intended beneficiary of defense attorney); but see Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1525, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (court noting, in dicta, that Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128 requires an attorney to deal honestly and fairly with adverse parties and counsel, and that violation of this statute would, in court's opinion, "impl[y] a breach of the duty of care" to adverse parties)].

An attorney who, on behalf of a client, signs a contract that contains a signature recital reading "approved as to form and content" does not by doing so make a representation to the attorney for the other contracting party that may form the basis for tort liability to that other attorney. In so holding, the court of appeal concluded that the signature recital simply means that the signing attorney is agreeing that he or she is the attorney for his or her client and that the document is in the proper form and embodies the deal made between the parties [Freedman v. Brutzkus (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1065, 1070, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371] .

[b] Specific Situations

[i] Real Estate Transactions

There are specific situations in which it has been determined that an attorney does not owe a duty of care to third parties. In the context of real estate transactions, for example, an attorney who represents a client in a transaction between the client and an unrepresented party generally owes no duty of care to the unrepresented party, at least if the attorney does not undertake to render legal advice to that party [Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 954, 959-962, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532] . Similarly, an attorney who represents a buyer of real property does not owe a duty of care to the escrow agent concerning the drafting and formation of the escrow instructions [St. Paul Title Co. v. Meier (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 948, 950-952, 226 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; see also Shawmut Bank, N.A. v. Kress Assocs. (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1477, 1505 (case remanded for adjudication of factual question of whether law firms representing bond underwriter and city in municipal bond transaction related to development project owed duty to trustee bank when drafting offering documents such that law firms could be liable to indemnify trustee, even though bank was represented by separate counsel during earlier transaction)]. Additionally, an attorney who represents a seller of real property is not held to the same duties of disclosure that a real estate broker is required to make. Specifically, the attorney is not required to disclose known defects to the buyer, at least when he or she did not attempt to persuade the buyer to purchase the property and made no effort to interfere with the buyer's attempts to inspect the property [Heliotis v. Schuman (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 646, 650-651, 226 Cal. Rptr. 509] .

[ii] Probate

Despite the general tendency toward finding a duty owed to intended beneficiaries of a will, a court of appeal has held that an attorney owes no duty to an intended beneficiary of a will for alleged negligence in ensuring that the will be executed prior to the death of the client. In that case, the decedent had indicated to the attorney a desire to consider the testamentary plan further and had sufficient opportunity to execute the will. Imposing a duty under such circumstances would, according to the court, compromise the attorney's undivided loyalty to the client by creating an incentive for the attorney to pressure the client to execute the document. Moreover, in this case the decedent's apparent indecision about executing the will was as much a cause of the plaintiff's alleged harm as any action of the attorney [Radovich v. Locke-Paddon (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 946, 954-966, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573] .

The court of appeal has held that an attorney preparing or amending a will for a testator owes no duty to the beneficiary of the will, or to the beneficiary of a previous will, to ascertain and document the testamentary capacity of the testator [Moore v. Anderson Zeigler Disharoon Gallagher & Gray (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1298, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] . In contrast to cases that have imposed a duty that runs to a will beneficiary, the court concluded that imposing a duty on the attorney to determine testamentary capacity that runs to third-party beneficiaries would compromise the duty of loyalty that the attorney owes to the client. The attorney who is persuaded of the client's testamentary capacity through personal observation fulfills his or her duty of loyalty to the client by drafting the will according to the client's wishes. By contrast, if a duty to third parties were recognized, the testator's attorney would face potential liability to either the beneficiaries disinherited if the attorney prepares the will, or to the potential beneficiaries of the new will if the attorney refuses to prepare it in accordance with the testator's stated desires. Not only would the attorney face potential conflicting duties between the client and the beneficiaries, but also conflicting duties between different sets of beneficiaries [Moore v. Anderson Zeigler Disharoon Gallagher & Gray (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1298-1299, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] . The court also recognized the difficulties that an attorney might have in properly evaluating a lack of testamentary capacity, as well as the problems of proving that a testator actually intended something other than what was in the final will, and noted that aggrieved beneficiaries are not left without a remedy, because they may challenge the testator's testamentary capacity in probate court [Moore v. Anderson Zeigler Disharoon Gallagher & Gray (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1287, 1300, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] .

Another court of appeal opinion held that an estate trust beneficiary could not state a claim against the testator's attorney based on the attorney's failure to modify the trust to increase the beneficiary's bequest, an increase that was allegedly in accordance with the decedent's wishes as expressed to both the beneficiary and the attorney in the final months before he died. After reviewing existing case law, the court concluded that attorney liability to third-party beneficiaries of estate documents was limited to instances in which the testator's intent was explicitly memorialized in a signed will or trust document, but negligence on the part of the attorney in drafting or executing the document caused the testator's stated intent to be frustrated [Chang v. Lederman (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 67, 81-82, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 758]. Conversely, in the case before the court, although the beneficiary was listed in the trust as a beneficiary of a stated bequest, there was no written document memorializing the change that the beneficiary argued the decedent intended to make. Recognizing a duty in such a case would, according to the court, impose an undue burden on the profession by exposing attorneys to potential liability that was almost limitless, as any potential beneficiary could argue that the now-deceased testator intended to change the estate plan but failed to do so due to the attorney's negligence [Chang v. Lederman (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 67, 82-86, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 758].

Under Prob. Code § 21350(a), certain persons are presumptively disqualified from receiving donative property transfers through instruments such as a will or trust, generally based on the potential for exerting self-serving and undue influence on the transferor. These presumptively disqualified persons include [Prob. Code § 21350(a)]:

- The person drafting the instrument.

- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, is a cohabitant with, or is an employee of, the person who drafted the instrument.

- Any partner or shareholder of any law partnership or law corporation in which the person drafting the instrument has an ownership interest, and any employee of that law partnership or law corporation.

- Any person who has a fiduciary relationship with the transferor, including, but not limited to, a conservator or trustee, who transcribes the instrument or causes it to be transcribed.

- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, is a cohabitant with, or is an employee of a person described in the paragraph immediately above.

- A care custodian of a transferor who is a dependent adult;

- A person who is related by blood or marriage to, is a domestic partner of, is a cohabitant with, or is an employee of, a person described in the paragraph immediately above.

However, a person is not subject to this presumption of disqualification if the transferor is related by blood or marriage to, is a cohabitant with, or is the registered domestic partner of, the transferee or the person who drafted the transfer instrument [Prob. Code § 21351(a)].

If a client seeks an attorney's services to effect a transfer to one of these beneficiaries, the attorney owes a duty of care that runs both to the client and to the intended beneficiary to advise the client that the proposed transfer, if challenged, would have a significant likelihood of failing unless steps are taken under Prob. Code § 21351 to exempt the transfer from this statutory presumption of disqualification. At a minimum, the attorney must recommend to the client that he or she seek independent counsel in an effort to obtain a Certificate of Independent Review as described in Prob. Code § 21351(b) [Osornio v. Weingarten (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 304, 334, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 246 ; see Prob. Code § 21351].

An attorney hired by the fiduciary representative of an estate to provide legal services for the estate may be sued for malpractice by the fiduciary to recover for damage caused to the estate, and this right to sue extends to successor fiduciaries who replace the original fiduciary who hired the attorney [Borissoff v. Taylor & Faust (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 523, 530, 15 Cal Rptr. 3d 735, 93 P.3d 337 (Probate Code specifically gives successor fiduciaries same powers and duties of their predecessors); see Prob. Code §§ 8524(c), 9820(a)].

[iii] Marital Dissolution Proceedings

In the context of marital dissolution proceedings, it appears that only one reported California case has considered whether an attorney should be held liable to a third party for professional negligence. In that case, the court of appeal held that an attorney who was retained by a husband to obtain a divorce from the husband's first wife owed no duty of care to the husband's second wife, and consequently had no liability to the second wife for professional negligence [Burger v. Pond (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 597, 607, 273 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

[iv] Child Support Proceedings

In child support proceedings, a district attorney representing a county in proceedings to establish, modify, and enforce support obligations owed to a custodial parent has no attorney-client relationship with, and owes no duty of care to, the custodial parent. Notwithstanding the collateral benefit to the custodial parent, the client in those proceedings is the county [Jager v. County of Alameda (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 294, 297, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293] .

[v] Insurance

In the insurance context, a lawyer hired by a primary insurer to defend a hospital and a nurse in a wrongful death suit has no attorney-client relationship with and owes no duty of care to the nurse's own liability insurer. The liability insurer neither retained defense counsel nor had anything to do with the services the firm rendered [Am. Cas. Co. v. O'Flaherty (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1070, 1075, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539] . However, when an insurer hires and compensates counsel to defend an insured, provided that the interests of the insurer and the insured are not in conflict, the retained attorney owes a duty of care to the insurer which will support its independent right to bring a legal malpractice action against the attorney for negligent acts committed in the representation of the insured [Unigard Ins. Group v. O'Flaherty & Belgum (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1229, 1235, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 ; see also Gulf Ins. Co. v. Berger, Kahn, Shafton, Moss, Figler, Simon & Gladstone (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 114, 129-133, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 (insurer's general reservation of rights does not automatically create conflict of interest preventing insurer from suing attorney hired to defend insured)].

An attorney for an insurer can be liable for fraud to claimants under an insurance policy who have obtained a judgment against the insured, if the attorney provides knowingly false information about the amount of coverage under the policy. Claimants under these circumstances are third-party beneficiaries under the policy, stand in the shoes of the insured, and are not considered to be an opposing party when discussing policy coverage with the attorney [Shafer v. Berger, Kahn, Shafton, Moss, Figler, Simon & Gladstone (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 54, 76, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777] .

If an insurer contracts with a reinsurer to obtain reimbursement coverage for some of the insurer's coverage liabilities, and the insurer subsequently hires an attorney to represent it when a claim is brought against its insured, the reinsurer on that claim does not become a client of the insurer's attorney in the absence of an express agreement between the retained attorney and the reinsurer [Zenith Ins. Co. v. O'Connor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1006-1007, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911] . In addition, the reinsurer is not a third-party beneficiary of the attorney's services given the potential, if not actual, conflict of interest between the insurer and the reinsurer [Zenith Ins. Co. v. O'Connor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 998, 1008-1009, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 911] .

[vi] Corporate Counsel; Nonclient Shareholders

It has been held that corporate counsel do not owe a professional duty of care to nonclient shareholders, at least in the absence of a personal relationship of trust and confidence between the shareholder and counsel [see Skarbrevik v. Cohen, England & Whitfield (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 692, 705-706, 707, 282 Cal. Rptr. 627 (counsel for close corporation held to owe no professional duty of care to minority shareholder)]. A corporate counsel's direct duty is to the client corporation, not to shareholders individually, even though the legal advice rendered by the corporation may affect the shareholders [Skarbrevik v. Cohen, England & Whitfield (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 692, 704, 282 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-600 (professional duties of attorney representing organization)]. In addition, a shareholder may not bring a derivative action for malpractice against outside counsel hired by the corporation. Because the corporation holds the attorney-client privilege, in the absence of a waiver of the privilege by the corporation, the attorney sued by shareholders would be prevented from mounting any meaningful defense to the malpractice claim for actions taken while representing the corporation [McDermott, Will & Emery v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 384-385, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Liability to Nonclients
1. Bases of Liability

7-76 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 76.201

AUTHOR: GEORGE M. LINDAHL

§ 76.201 Theories of Liability

[1] Negligence

In determining whether an attorney will be liable to a third party for negligence committed in the performance of a contract between an attorney and a client, courts will balance the following factors [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 588, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; see also Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650-651, 320 P.2d 16 (liability of negligent notary to third party not in privity); cf. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 324A]:

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff [see, e.g., Donald v. Garry (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 769, 772, 97 Cal. Rptr. 191 (attorney representing collection agency in debt collection action was liable to creditor for negligent failure to prosecute lawsuit diligently, because creditor was intended beneficiary of services of collection agency and its attorney in collection action)];

- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff;

- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury;

- The closeness of the connection between the attorney's conduct and the injuries suffered by the plaintiff; and

- The policy of preventing future harm.

The one context in which it is established that third parties may recover for an attorney's negligence is probate and estate planning. Specifically, intended beneficiaries of a will who lose their testamentary rights because of a negligent failure of the attorney who drew the will to properly carry out the testator's intent may recover on a tort theory for breach of duty owed directly by the attorney to the intended beneficiaries [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 588, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685] . The duty of care arises because, in undertaking to fulfill the testamentary instructions of the client, the attorney "realistically and in fact assumes a relationship not only with the client but also with the client's intended beneficiaries" [Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 228, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161 , disapproved on other grounds, Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691] . Intended beneficiaries of a will may also recover as third party beneficiaries of the contract between the attorney and the testator, based on the failure of the attorney who drew the will to properly fulfill his or her contractual obligations [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; see also Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768] .

The fact that a plaintiff's share of a decedent's estate was determined by settlement of probate proceedings rather than by judicial determination does not preclude a malpractice action against the attorney who drafted the will [see Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768] . However, the settlement is relevant to the malpractice action to the extent that it reduces the amount of damage sustained by the beneficiary as a result of the alleged negligence of the attorney [see Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768] .

[2] Breach of Contract

When the plaintiff is a nonclient, the California Supreme Court has held that a breach of contract action based on a third-party beneficiary theory is conceptually superfluous, because the third party cannot recover unless the attorney was negligent [Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 227, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161 , disapproved on other grounds, Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)]. Nevertheless, intended beneficiaries of a will may recover as third-party beneficiaries of the contract between the attorney and the testator, when the attorney who drew the will fails to properly fulfill his or her contractual obligations [Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; see Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768 ; see also § 76.201[1]].

[3] Malicious Prosecution

Although an attorney may owe no duty of care to an adverse third party in litigation [see § 76.200[3]], the attorney may be sued by the third party for malicious prosecution [Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 166, 178, 183-190, 156 Cal. Rptr. 745] . A cause of action for malicious prosecution requires that the plaintiff establish that the prior action (1) was commenced by or at the direction of the defendant and was pursued to a legal termination in plaintiff's favor; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was initiated with malice [Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 50, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 ; Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 166, 184, 156 Cal. Rptr. 745] .

The issue of whether an attorney has instituted an action without probable cause is determined by the court as a matter of law [Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 626, 636-637, 224 Cal. Rptr. 865] . The test for probable cause is whether any reasonable attorney would find the claim legally tenable [Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 885-886, 254 Cal. Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498] . In evaluating whether probable cause exists, a court is required to take into account the evolutionary potential of legal principles [Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 886]. Probable cause does not mean "legal cause," because if it did, then every plaintiff who failed to recover in his or her lawsuit would be liable in an action for malicious prosecution [Lucchesi v. Giannini & Uniack (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 777, 785, 205 Cal. Rptr. 62 ; Albertson v. Raboff (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 372, 385, 8 Cal. Rptr. 398] .

The court determines the issue of probable cause of the attorney to bring the action with regard to the theory on which the allegedly malicious civil action is actually based. The test for malicious prosecution is not whether the attorney had reasonable grounds to seek some kind of relief in the original action, but whether he or she had reasonable grounds for asserting the theory for relief contained in the complaint and tried to the fact finder. Thus, if an attorney has grounds for initiating a suit, but fails to prosecute the suit on those grounds and instead prosecutes the suit on untenable grounds, that attorney may be found liable for malicious prosecution [Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 626, 644, 224 Cal. Rptr. 865] .

[4] Abuse of Process

An action for abuse of process, like an action for malicious prosecution, is typically brought by one who was a party opposing the attorney's client in previous litigation. Abuse of process differs from malicious prosecution in that the tort is not committed by commencing an action or causing process to issue without justification, but rather by the misuse of process for a purpose other than the purpose that the process was designed to accomplish. Thus, in an abuse of process action, the plaintiff does not have to prove favorable termination or that process was commenced without probable cause [Clark Equip. Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 526, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874] .

The tort of abuse of process has two elements: (1) the employment of legal process for an ulterior purpose, and (2) a willful act in the use of process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceedings [Ion Equip. Corp. v. Nelson (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 868, 876, 168 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; Clark Equip. Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 524, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 ; Christensen v. Younger (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 613, 617-618, 120 Cal. Rptr. 923] . The improper purpose that forms the basis of an action for abuse of process usually takes the form of coercion to obtain a collateral advantage not properly involved in the proceeding itself, such as the surrender of property or the payment of money, by the use of the process as a threat or a club. The original commencement of an action may also constitute "process" if the other elements of the cause of action are present [see Umansky v. Urquhart (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 368, 371, 148 Cal. Rptr. 547] .

[5] Negligent Misrepresentation

In certain circumstances, an attorney may be liable for damages caused by his or her negligent misrepresentation to a third-party nonclient, with an important exception relating to the judicial proceeding privilege discussed in*§ 76.222* [see Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] . Negligent misrepresentation consists of the assertion as a fact of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true, made with intent to induce another to alter his or her position to his or her injury or risk [Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710(2); Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 407-408, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 ; Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] .

In one case, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant law firm negligently misrepresented that its client was a general partnership and thereby induced plaintiff to loan monies to its client. The trial court sustained the defendant law firm's demurrer and dismissed the action, but the court of appeal reversed the order of dismissal regarding the cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The court of appeal noted that an attorney may owe a duty to a third person who is not a client, and may be liable if the third person who was intended to be benefitted by the attorney's performance is injured by the negligent execution of that duty. The court of appeal held that when it is clearly foreseeable that harm to a third party may result from the issuance of a legal opinion intended to secure benefit for an attorney's client, the attorney must issue the opinion with due care. The failure to do so will constitute a breach of the duty owed to the third party that the attorney attempted or expected to influence on behalf of the client [Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] .

However, the California Supreme Court has distinguished this case and found no liability in a case in which there was no allegation that the advice to the client was communicated to the third party, and therefore no reliance on the allegedly negligent advice [see Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 343-344, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737] . In a footnote, the Court suggested that the result in Roberts depended on a duty of care created by the attorney's intent that the advice be relied on by the third party [see Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 343 n.4, 134

Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737] . In the absence of such an allegation, it seems unlikely that an attorney would be held liable for negligent advice to his or her client in an action brought by a third party. California courts have consistently required some manifestation on the part of a professional who offers an opinion, information, or advice that he or she is acting to benefit a third party or defined group of third parties in a specific and circumscribed transaction [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 411-412, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 (citing cases)].

Several court of appeals cases, following Roberts, have upheld the proposition that an attorney may be held liable to a nonclient third party for negligent misrepresentation [see Home Budget Loans, Inc. v. Jacoby & Meyers Law Offices (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1284-1285, 255 Cal. Rptr. 483 (liability to client's mortgage broker); Courtney v. Waring (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1443-1444, 237 Cal. Rptr. 233 (liability to client's franchisees); Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 210, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887 (liability to other attorney for misrepresentations made on behalf of client in connection with business transaction)].

In a case in which third-party nonclients sought to hold accountants liable for misrepresentations made in a client audit, the California Supreme Court expressly endorsed an approach to liability stated in Section 552 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts; under the Restatement, a supplier of information is liable for negligence to a third party only if he or she intends to supply the information for the benefit of one or more third parties in a specific transaction or type of transaction identified to the supplier [see Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 392, 408, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] . It seems possible that California appellate courts will follow this approach in future cases involving an attorney's negligent misrepresentation to nonclients in which liability is predicated on providing misinformation.

[6] Fraud

The requirements for establishing and defending against an action for fraud are the same whether or not the plaintiff is a client or nonclient [see § 76.154]. Thus, to establish that an attorney is liable for fraud, the plaintiff who is a nonclient must show misrepresentation, knowledge of its falsity, intent to defraud, justifiable reliance, and resulting damage [Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] . Every element of the cause of action for fraud must be alleged in the proper manner, and the facts constituting the fraud must be alleged with sufficient specificity to allow the defendant to understand fully the nature of the charge made [see Wilhelm v. Pray, Price, Williams & Russell (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331, 231 Cal. Rptr. 355 ; Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901] .

[7] Infliction of Emotional Distress

A nonclient may state a cause of action against an attorney for intentional infliction of emotional distress if the elements of that cause of action are alleged [see Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895-896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321] and the conduct of the attorney is not privileged [see Lerette v. Dean Witter Org., Inc. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 573, 579, 131 Cal. Rptr. 592 (privilege afforded attorney by former Civ. Code § 47(2) (now Civ. Code § 47(b)) as barring action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on privileged statement)]. The elements of a prima facie case for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress are: (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) the defendant's intention of causing or reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress; (3) the plaintiff's suffering severe or extreme emotional distress; and (4) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct [Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895-896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

An action for intentional infliction of emotional distress against an attorney was successfully pleaded when plaintiff alleged that the defendant attorney had threatened her with the filing of a criminal complaint in his efforts to collect a debt for his client [Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321 ; see also Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1524, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (action for intentional infliction of emotional distress successfully pleaded when plaintiff alleged that attorney, in an attempt to collect a debt from plaintiff, threatened plaintiff with arrest under nonexistent bench warrant)]. However, the court of appeal has subsequently declined to follow the holding of that case, in part because the rules of professional conduct themselves now provide that a violation does not create a new civil cause of action [Ross v. Creel Printing & Publ'g Co. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 736, 746-747, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787] .

In many cases, however, the attorney will be protected by the privilege granted by Civ. Code § 47(b). This privilege precludes actions for intentional infliction of emotional distress as well as actions for defamation [see Wallin v. Vienna Sausage Mfg. Co. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1056-1057, 203 Cal. Rptr. 375 ; Lerette v. Dean Witter Org., Inc. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 573, 579, 131 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; see also Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 626, 644-645, 224 Cal. Rptr. 865 (absolute privilege for filing malicious complaint, thus defeating claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress)]. For further discussion of this privilege, see § 76.222.

A nonclient's recovery of damages for emotional distress suffered as a result of the attorney's negligent conduct (as opposed to conduct constituting intentional infliction of emotional distress) seems possible only if the nonclient can establish that the attorney's negligence was a breach of a duty owed directly to the nonclient [see Pleasant v. Celli (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 841, 852, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (action for negligent infliction of emotional distress as requiring breach of duty of care owed to plaintiff)]. Such a duty arises under the circumstances described in§ 76.200[1] and may arguably arise in other situations. However, it is clear that the mere foreseeability that any negligence will cause emotional distress to one or more nonclients is not sufficient to create a duty, the breach of which can be the basis for a cause of action [see Holliday v. Jones (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 102, 111, 264 Cal. Rptr. 448] . Some sort of relationship between the nonclient and the defendant, or facts showing that the nonclient was a direct object of some aspect of the defendant's conduct, are required [see Holliday v. Jones (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 102, 105, 111-112, 264 Cal. Rptr. 448] .

[8] Civil Conspiracy With Client

A cause of action against an attorney based on a civil conspiracy with his or her client may not be included in a complaint or other pleading unless the court enters an order allowing the pleading to be filed. The party seeking to file the pleading must establish that there is a reasonable probability that he or she will prevail in the action. This showing may be made by filing a verified petition accompanied by (1) the proposed pleading and (2) supporting affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury) stating the facts on which liability is based. If the court rules favorably on the petition, it must permit the proposed pleading to be filed [Civ. Code § 1714.10; see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5; see also Castro v. Higaki (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 350, 356-359, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84 (denial of plaintiff's petition for leave to file complaint for conspiracy against defendant's attorneys on grounds plaintiff did not establish reasonable probability of prevailing as judgment on merits with res judicata effect in plaintiff's subsequent civil conspiracy action against same attorneys)].

A civil conspiracy is a combination of two or more persons to accomplish by concerted action a criminal or unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose by criminal or unlawful means [Parkinson Co. v. Bldg. Trades Council (1908) 154 Cal. 581, 593, 98 P. 1027 ; Peskin v. Squires (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 240, 246, 319 P.2d 405 ; see also Unruh v. Truck Ins. Exch.(1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 631, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 (noting that civil conspiracy in and of itself is not a tort)]. The elements of an action for civil conspiracy are the formation and operation of the conspiracy and damage resulting to the plaintiff from an act or acts done in furtherance of the common design [Mox Inc. v. Woods (1927) 202 Cal. 675, 677, 262 P. 302 ; Barney v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 966, 981, 230 Cal. Rptr. 215] .

§ 76.202 Legal Malpractice Action Not Assignable

A cause of action for legal malpractice is not assignable [Goodley v. Wank & Wank, Inc. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 389, 398, 133 Cal. Rptr. 83 ; see also Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1022-1023, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637 (involuntary assignment of attorney malpractice claim, made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.510, is unenforceable)]. One court based its conclusion that the cause of action is not assignable on the policy ground that attorneys would need to be more selective in accepting clients if a dissatisfied client could discount and sell a purported malpractice cause of action [Goodley v. Wank & Wank, Inc. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 389, 398, 133 Cal. Rptr. 83] .

Labelling an action as "constructive fraud," "fraud," or "breach of contract" does not turn an otherwise unassignable legal malpractice action into an assignable action [see Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1022-1023, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637 ; Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 336, 345-348, 258 Cal. Rptr. 454] . If an action involves injury suffered by reason of an attorney's professional negligence, the gravamen of the claim is legal malpractice, regardless of whether it is pled in tort or contract [see Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 336, 348-349, 258 Cal. Rptr. 454] . Similarly, a liability insurer cannot proceed as a subrogee in its insured's malpractice claim against the insured's attorney, since subrogation in those instances violates the public policy against assigning malpractice claims [Fireman's Fund Ins. v. McDonald, Hecht & Sol. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1383-1384, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 424] .

Public policy dictates that an assignment made outside of California is not enforceable in California courts, even if the law of the jurisdiction in which the assignment was made permits assignment of attorney malpractice actions [Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1027-1028, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637] .

In conformity with the rule in California, the trustee of a bankruptcy estate for a corporation may not assign a legal malpractice claim belonging to the estate to a creditor of the corporation or to any other person, including a person who had been the sole owner of the bankrupt corporation [Curtis v. Kellogg & Andelson (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 492, 505-506, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 (bankruptcy trustee had sole right to assert action belonging to bankrupt estate, and trustee could not assign legal malpractice action to debtor); Baum v. Duckor, Spradling & Metzger (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 54, 69, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703 (under federal law, bankruptcy estate may have right to legal malpractice claims arising under state law)].

However, unlike Chapter 7 bankruptcy proceedings, federal law governing Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings provides that a bankruptcy plan may permit the estate to retain claims enforceable by a representative other than the trustee, and in those instances, a legal malpractice claim retained by the estate may be brought by a representative authorized by the estate to do so [Office of Statewide Health Planning & Dev. v. Musick, Peeler & Garrett (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 830, 834-835, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] . In those Chapter 11 proceedings, the proceeds of the malpractice action still belong to the bankruptcy estate, although the representative is entitled to costs and expenses, subject to approval by the bankruptcy court [Office of Statewide Health Planning & Dev. v. Musick, Peeler & Garrett (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 830, 835, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705] .

The rule that a claim for legal malpractice is not assignable does not prevent the insurer of an attorney who is seeking indemnification from concurrent counsel from being subrogated to that indemnity claim [see generally § 76.112]. Under those circumstances, the party to whose rights the insurer seeks subrogation is not the client suing for malpractice, but rather one of the negligent attorneys, and the policy considerations that justify prohibiting the assignment of a malpractice claim do not apply [Musser v. Provencher (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 274, 285-287, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 48 P.3d 408] .

§ 76.220 Statute of Limitations

[1] Action Brought by Will Beneficiary

Ordinarily, an action against an attorney for a wrongful act or omission, other than for actual fraud, arising in the performance of professional services must be commenced within one year after the plaintiff discovers, or through the use of reasonable diligence sould have discovered, the facts constituting the wrongful act or omission, or four years from the date of the wrongful act or omission, whichever occurs first [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)]. In an action based on an instrument in writing, the effective date of which depends on some act or event of the future (such as the death of a testator), the period of limitations commences to run on the occurrence of the act or event [Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(b)].

In Heyer v. Flaig, the California Supreme Court rejected the argument that the limitations period for a malpractice action by an intended will beneficiary commences when the act of negligent drafting occurs [see Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161] . The Court held that the limitations period starts from the date that the cause of action accrues, namely, the date of the testator's death, when the negligent failure to perfect the requested testamentary scheme becomes irremediable and the impact of the injury occurs [see Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161] . Before that time, an intended beneficiary acquires no recognized legal rights under a will, and there can be no injury [Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 231, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161] . Only at the death of the testator does a remedy become available, and the cause of action accrue [see Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230-231, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161] .

Heyer was decided before the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, which now governs attorney malpractice actions [see Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 611, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 ("irremediable damage" requirement of Heyer recognized as rejected by 1977 statutory adoption of section 340.6)]. It might be argued that, under the present statute, the limitations period commences on probate of the will, rather than on the testator's death [see

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1),(b) (in action based on written instrument, effective date of which depends on future act or event, limitations period commences to run on occurrence of the act or event, although limitations period is tolled during time plaintiff has not sustained "actual injury"); see also Prob. Code §§ 8200-8272 (probate of wills)]. However, no court has yet addressed this issue, and the cautious attorney will proceed under the reasoning of Heyer and file an action as if the statute of limitations begins to run from the date of the testator's death. The beneficiary should therefore commence the action within the earlier of (1) one year after he or she discovered (or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered) the diminution of his or her testamentary interest because of the attorney's negligent drafting of the will, or (2) four years after the testator's death [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)].

[2] Action for Malicious Prosecution

The period of limitation for filing an action for malicious prosecution is two years (one year, prior to January 1, 2003) [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; Rutherford v. Johnson (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 316, 319, 58 Cal. Rptr. 546 ; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3); see also Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.14]. The limitation period begins to run on the date that the proceedings in the prior action were dismissed or terminated [Babb v. Superior Court (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 841, 846, 92 Cal. Rptr. 179, 479 P.2d 379] .

If after entry of judgment in the trial court, an appeal is filed from the underlying action that is alleged to be maliciously prosecuted, special rules govern the period of limitation. The period of limitation runs from the time of the entry of the judgment in the trial court until the notice of appeal is filed [see Gibbs v. Haight, Dickson, Brown & Bonesteel (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 716, 722, 228 Cal. Rptr. 398] . Once the notice of appeal is filed, the appeals process will toll the period of limitation until the process is exhausted [see Feld v. Western Land & Dev. Co. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1328, 1334, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 23 ; Gibbs v. Haight, Dickson, Brown & Bonesteel (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 716, 722, 228 Cal. Rptr. 398 ; see also Friedman v. Stadum (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 775, 778-779, 217 Cal. Rptr. 585 (relying in part on Restatement (Second) of Torts § 674, cmt. j, the element of favorable termination cannot exist until the appeal is resolved)]. When no review is sought beyond the California Supreme Court, the issuance of the remittitur in the underlying action exhausts the appellate process and recommences the running of the limitations period [Rare Coin Galleries, Inc. v. A-Mark Coin Co., Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 330, 338, 248 Cal. Rptr. 341] .

If the underlying action involves an appeal in federal appeals court, the statute of limitations for malicious prosecution is tolled until the court of appeals issues its mandate [Korody-Colyer Corp. v. General Motors Corp. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1152-1153, 256 Cal. Rptr. 658 ; see Berg v. Leason (N.D. Cal. 1992) 793 F. Supp. 930, 933 (limitations period in malicious prosecution action as not beginning to run until court of appeals issued mandate affirming trial court's dismissal of underlying action)]. A federal circuit court is required under the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure to issue its mandate within 21 days of entry of judgment [Fed. Rules App. Proc., Rule 41(a)]. However, if the court takes longer than 21 days to issue its mandate, tolling is not confined to the 21-day period [Korody-Colyer Corp. v. General Motors Corp. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1153, 256 Cal. Rptr. 658 (mandate issued 39 days after entry of judgment)].

[3] Action for Abuse of Process

The two-year (one-year prior to January 1, 2003) period of limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; see former Code Civ. Proc. § 340.1; see also Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions, § 345.14] applies to an action for abuse of process [Thornton v. Rhoden (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 80, 95, 53 Cal. Rptr. 706] . The period applies even when the plaintiff claims only property damage [McFaddin v. H.S. Crocker Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 585, 590-591, 33 Cal. Rptr. 389 (seizure of merchandise pursuant to provisional remedy of claim and delivery)]. The limitations period for an abuse of process claim usually begins to run when the abuse of process occurs [Cantu v. Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 857, 887, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151] . Thus, unlike with a malicious prosecution action, the limitations period can accrue while the proceedings at issue are in progress, since a claim for abuse of process can be raised before termination of the proceedings complained of, and even within the proceedings in which the wrongful process issued [White Lighting

Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 (claim for abuse of process based on excessive attachment properly raised as cross-complaint in action to recover money owed)]. However, if the injury to the plaintiff does not occur at the time the abuse of process occurs, the limitations period begins to run when the injury occurs [Kappel v. Bartlett (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1467-1469, 246 Cal. Rptr. 815] .

[4] Action for Fraud

Actions for relief on the ground of fraud must be commenced within three years after the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the fraud [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]. The statutory period applies regardless of whether the remedy sought is legal or equitable [see Security First Nat'l Bank v. Ross (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 424, 429-430, 29 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; see also Zastrow v. Zastrow (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 710, 714, 132 Cal. Rptr. 536 (action to vacate judgment obtained through fraud); Goodfellow v. Barritt (1933) 130 Cal. App. 548, 556-557, 20 P.2d 740 (action for reformation of contract on ground of fraud)].

Despite the statutory provision that an action for fraud does not accrue until the aggrieved party has "discovered the facts constituting the fraud" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)], many cases qualify this rule by requiring that the plaintiff use reasonable diligence to discover the true facts if he or she has reason to suspect fraud [see, e.g., Sun'N Sand, Inc. v. United Cal. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 701-702, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920] . The most frequently quoted language found in the cases is that the "statute commences to run only after one has knowledge of facts sufficient to make a reasonably prudent person suspicious of fraud, thus putting him on inquiry" [see, e.g., Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 437, 159 P.2d 958] . If the plaintiff has no reason to suspect fraud, the right of action will not accrue until actual discovery of the facts constituting the fraud [Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 439, 159 P.2d 958 ; see also Snow v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 120, 131-135, 211 Cal. Rptr. 271] .

In cases involving a fiduciary relationship, facts that would ordinarily require investigation may not excite suspicion, and therefore the same degree of diligence is not required [Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 439-440, 159 P.2d 958] . Ordinarily there will be no fiduciary relationship between an attorney and a nonclient, although such a relationship necessarily exists between an attorney and his or her client [see discussion in*§ 76.31[1]*].

§ 76.221 Unclean Hands

As in malpractice actions brought by former clients [see § 76.176], the doctrine of unclean hands may be invoked as a defense against liability to parties who are not former clients. This doctrine is used generally when a party who seeks to set judicial machinery in motion and obtain some remedy has violated conscience, good faith, or other equitable principles in his or her prior conduct, and may be useful in defending against claims such as those for malicious prosecution or abuse of process [see Unilogic, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 612, 620, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 (unclean hands defense as available in both actions for legal remedies and actions for equitable remedies)]. For example, in one case, an insurance agent brought a malicious prosecution action against an insurer based on an underlying action for indemnity. The defendant successfully raised the equitable defense of unclean hands, based on the plaintiff's failure to disclose critical evidence in the original action, which evidence might have changed the outcome of the indemnity action against the agent [Pond v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 280, 289-290, 198 Cal. Rptr. 517] .

§ 76.222 Litigation Privilege Under Civ. Code § 47(b)

As discussed in*§ 76.201[5]*, an attorney may be liable to a third-party nonclient for negligent misrepresentation of facts. However, if the attorney's alleged negligent misrepresentation (1) is made in connection with a legal proceeding, (2) had some connection or logical relation to the action, (3) was made to achieve the objects of the litigation, and (4) involved litigants or other participants authorized by law, it is absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b) [Bradley v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 818, 825, 106 Cal. Rptr. 718 ; see Tiedemann v. Superior Court (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 918, 924, 148 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; Friedman v. Knecht (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 455, 460, 56 Cal. Rptr. 540] . Such a statement may be absolutely privileged even though it was made outside the confines of a courtroom and was not directly related to any material issue before the court, provided that the alleged misrepresentation has some connection or logical relation to the underlying judicial proceedings [Bradley v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 818, 824, 106 Cal. Rptr. 718 ; see also Jordan v. Lemaire (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 622, 625, 35 Cal. Rptr. 337] . Moreover, an otherwise privileged communication need not have been made in the "interest of justice" to qualify for protection under Civ. Code § 47(b) [Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 218-219, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P. 2d 365] .

For example, in one case, the defendant attorneys were the attorneys of record for an insurance company that had been found liable to the plaintiff. At the time that the insurance company had been found liable, the defendant attorneys sought to avoid the filing of an appeal bond pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 917.1. Defendant attorneys assured plaintiff's counsel, both orally and by letter, that the insurance company was "financially as sound as a dollar," a representation that was later proved to have been false when it was made. This suit for negligent misrepresentation was then filed. The trial court granted defendant attorneys' motion for judgment on the pleadings on the basis that the representation was privileged pursuant to the judicial proceedings privilege [see Civ. Code § 47(b)]. The court of appeal affirmed on the basis that the alleged misrepresentation, although not relevant in a technical sense to any issue in the case, was absolutely privileged because it need only have some connection or relation to the legal proceedings [Portman v. George McDonald Law Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 988, 991, 160 Cal. Rptr. 505 ; see also Thornton v. Rhoden (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 80, 90, 53 Cal. Rptr. 706 (extending privilege to deponents)].

The privilege will not attach, however, when an attorney's alleged misrepresentation is also grounds for discipline of the attorney, and therefore cannot serve the purposes of the litigation [see Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1522-1523, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478 (attorney threatened plaintiff with nonexistent arrest warrant in attempt to deceive plaintiff and gain advantage over her, in apparent violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128 (deceit of party is misdemeanor)); but see Lerette v. Dean Witter Org., Inc. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 573, 576-579, 131 Cal. Rptr. 592 (threat of suit for securities law violations in letter sent before filing of action as privileged under former Civ. Code § 47(2) (now Civ. Code § 47(b)))].

§ 76.244 Decisions

[1] Declining Employment

Attorney who declines employment after consulting with potential client and investigating case as bound, if aware of facts, to advise when limitation period for commencing action will expire and what must be done to preserve right of action, particularly when attorney declines employment soon before limitation period will expire. Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 41-42, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22

[2] Duty

[a] In General

When attorney severs relationship with prospective client because target of contemplated litigation is existing client, attorney has no duty to provide any advice to prospective client adverse to interests of existing client, including advice respecting statute of limitations governing, and advisability of engaging alternative counsel to pursue, prospective client's contemplated lawsuit. Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 281, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950

Attorney's duty toward existing client negates any duty to give prospective new client advice when existing client is potential target of new client's cause of action; thus, when attorney severs relationship with new client under these circumstances, attorney has no duty to advise new client regarding applicable statute of limitations or need to seek other counsel. Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 278-279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950

Attorney as not insurer of soundness of own opinions or of validity of instruments drafted by attorney and as not liable for errors of law on questions subject to reasonable doubt among well informed lawyers. Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21

Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

With respect to unsettled area of law, attorney as required to undertake reasonable research and make informed decision as to proper course of conduct based on particular problem at hand. Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359 ; see also Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656

Attorney as not liable for every mistake that he or she may make in course of practice. Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621 , 530 P.2d; Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786, 171 P. 961

Duty of attorney to communicate to client information he or she acquires in relation to subject matter involved in transaction. Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 189-190

Attorney-client relationship as imposing fiduciary duties. Clancy v. State Bar (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 140, 146, 77 Cal. Rptr. 657, 454 P.2d 329 ; Cox v. Delmas (1893) 99 Cal. 104, 123, 33 P. 836

When attorney-client relationship is limited to specific matter, attorney's duty to represent client as extending only to that matter. See Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343

Existence of attorney-client relationship as required to create attorney's duty to act for client. Daniels v. DeSimone (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 600, 607, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615

Attorney as having duty to be aware of and knowledgeable about local court rules. Massie v. AAR W. Skyways, Inc. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 405, 408, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 654

Attorney as having duty to fully inform client of his or her rights and alternatives available under particular circumstances. Considine Co. v. Shadle, Hunt & Hagar (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 760, 765, 232 Cal. Rptr. 250

Attorney as required to represent client with undivided loyalty. see Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 715-716, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528

Attorney as under fiduciary obligation to disclose to client all information bearing on client's case. *Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 716, 201 Cal. Attorney as having as much right and duty to correct his or her mistakes as a judge has very considerable right and duty to grant new trial for his or her own errors. Gera v. Gera (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 492, 498, 77 Cal. Rptr. 336

Attorney's duty to protect client's interests as including duty to prepare judgment papers that opposing attorney was ordered to prepare if opposing attorney delays unreasonably in so doing, when client's interests call for prompt conclusion of lawsuit. Chavez v. Carter (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 577, 579-580, 64 Cal. Rptr. 350

Attorney as required to preserve client confidences. Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386

Attorney representing parties with divergent interests as required to disclose all facts and circumstances which, in judgment of lawyer of ordinary skill and capacity, are necessary to enable client to make free and intelligent decisions regarding subject matter of representation. Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 528, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592

Attorney as considered to possess knowledge, skill, and intelligence superior to that of ordinary person and, as consequence, held to higher minimum standard of conduct. Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 150, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864

[b] To Corporate Client

Corporate attorney's primary duty as owed to corporation rather than to corporate management. see Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290, 301 P.2d 10

Attorney representing corporation as owing same duties to corporation as to individual. See Moser v. Western Harness Racing Assn. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 200 P.2d 7

[3] Establishing Attorney-Client Relationship

Attorney-client relationship as usually created by express or implied contract. Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 166 Cal. Rptr. 904 (general rules of agency apply); see also American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 590-591, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561

Establishing attorney-client relationship as requiring neither retainer nor other formal agreement. Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534 ; Brandlin v. Belcher (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1001, 134 Cal. Rptr. 1 ; but see Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 954, 959, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532 (although formation of attorney-client relationship may be informal, such relationship does not exist merely because party believes that attorney is representing his or her interests)

Attorney-client relationship as arising from pattern of custom and practice between attorney and client. Kane, Kane & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 40, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534

Establishing circumstances that would create attorney-client relationship as issue of fact. Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22

Agreeing to investigate case or providing legal advice to prospective client as giving rise to attorney-client relationship and concomitant duties despite absence of fee arrangement. Miller v. Metzinger (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 31, 39-40, 154 Cal. Rptr. 22

Attorney handling labor grievance on behalf of union as not entering into attorney-client relationship with particular union member who is asserting underlying grievance. Peterson v. Kennedy (9th Cir. 1985) 771 F.2d 1244 ; see also Aragon v. Pappy, Kaplon, Vogel & Phillips (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 451, 463-464, 262 Cal. Rptr. 646 (retained counsel functioning as union agent in collective bargaining process as immune from malpractice suit by individual labor union member)

[4] Terminating Attorney-Client Relationship

Substitution of attorney filed prior to time when client's right to sue is lost as relieving substituted attorney from liability for damages arising from loss of right to sue. Stuart v. Superior Court (1992) 14 Cal. App. 4th 124, 127-128, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (limitations period expired)

Attorney-client relationship as terminating once task for which attorney was retained is concluded. see Ruszovan v. Ruszovan (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 902, 906, 74 Cal. Rptr. 507 ; Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 677, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680

Attorney as liable for wrongful conduct of attorneys, law clerks, paralegals, secretaries, detectives, or other employees and agents acting in course and scope of employment. see Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 663, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269

[b] Partners and Associates

Attorney's liability for acts of law partners as governed by Uniform Partnership Act [see Corp. Code §§ 15001-15046]. Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418

Former law partner as jointly and severally liable with second attorney who subsequently diverted plaintiff's trust funds for his own use; former law partner, in his capacity of cotrustee, as liable with plaintiff's attorney who misappropriated plaintiff's money deposited in firm's trust account when plaintiff had not been consulted about the transfer. Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 556-561, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418

Attorney who employs other attorneys as liable for their wrongful acts in same manner as principal is liable for agent's acts. Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 537, 549, 134 P.2d 217

Former shareholder attorneys of dissolved corporate law firm as vicariously liable for malpractice of corporation committed prior to dissolution of firm. Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 95-96, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486 , overruled in part by Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 (disapproved on other grounds in Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 514, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666)

Finding of ostensible partnership as sufficient to impose vicarious liability for acts of attorneys with whom attorney is sharing office space or is otherwise associated in relationship that is not partnership. Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 455, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42

Attorney as liable for partner's malicious prosecution when partnership was created after action alleged to have been malicious was filed, if some action was taken by partner after formation of partnership. Lujan v. Gordon (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 260, 262-264, 138 Cal. Rptr. 654

Attorney who substituted for original attorney as equally liable with original attorney for professional negligence in handling case when client consented to substitution, attorneys were to divide fee, if and when it was collected, and attorneys were each responsible to the client. Floro v. Lawton (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 657, 671, 10 Cal. Rptr. 98

[1] Causation

Attorney's negligence as proximate cause of damage to plaintiff in order to state cause of action. Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; see also John B. Gunn Law Corp. v. Maynard (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1565, 1570-1573, 235 Cal. Rptr. 180 ; Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 988, 1002, 92 Cal. Rptr. 583 (attorney's negligence need not be the only proximate cause)

In five of seven claims, plaintiffs presented no substantial evidence that they would have reached more favorable result if attorneys had not been negligent when drafting and negotiating agreement to sell plaintiffs' ownership interest in company. Viner v. Sweet (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 1218, 1226-1231, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 533

Malpractice plaintiff's allegation that she would have settled underlying lawsuit had attorney not provided negligent advice was sufficient allegation of causation to withstand demurrer; express allegation that plaintiff in underlying suit would have settled for $25,000, when that party was only seeking $19,000, was not required. Charnay v. Cobert (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 170, 180-181, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471

Subsequent attorney's negligence does not absolve prior attorney of liability for own negligence. Cline v. Watkins (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 174, 179, 135 Cal. Rptr. 838

[2] Compensation

Effect of attorney's negligence on his or her right to compensation and measure thereof. Estate of Kruger (1900) 130 Cal. 621, 626, 63 P. 31

[3] Damages

[a] In General

As matter of policy, malpractice plaintiff may not recover value of lost claim for punitive damages as compensatory damages from malpractice defendant. Ferguson v. Lieff, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1037, 1046-1051, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46, 69 P.3d 965 ; see also Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 979-983, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88

Actual damages is essential element of malpractice cause of action; nominal damages alone are insufficient to state cause of action. Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 176, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; Zalta v. Billips (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 183, 188-189, 144 Cal. Rptr. 888 ; Kirtland & Packard v. Superior Court (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 140, 144, 131 Cal. Rptr. 418

Measure of damages, when client sues attorney who negligently failed to prosecute lawsuit for collection of debt with result that lawsuit was dismissed, is amount that could have been recovered in dismissed action. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 791, 171 P. 961

Even if attorney provided by insurer breached duty in failing to disclose conflict of interest, attorney's fees and costs incurred by plaintiff did not constitute malprac tice damages when insurer was responsible for paying defense costs and plaintiff was not required to pay anything in satisfaction of underlying claim. Lazy Acres Market, Inc. v. Tseng (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1431, 1436, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 378

Collateral source rule bars attorney, who was sued for malpractice, from obtaining offset of damages to reflect insurance proceeds client received for injury from source unrelated to tortfeasor in underlying action. Norton v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1750, 1758, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217

Plaintiff is entitled to recover, as compensatory damages from legal malpractice defendant, punitive damages that plaintiff would have obtained from defendant in underlying action giving rise to malpractice claim. Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 12 ; but see Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 979-983, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88

Speculative damages are not recoverable in legal malpractice action. In re Easterbrook (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1544, 244 Cal. Rptr. 652 , overruled on other grounds, People v. Romero (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 728, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270, 883 P.2d 388 ; Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 942, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393 ; McGregor v. Wright (1931) 117 Cal. App. 186, 196-197, 3 P.2d 624

Award of damages that included costs of sale is proper in action by client against attorney who negligently caused client to file for bankruptcy and then undervalued client's home on bankruptcy petition, resulting in the forced sale of home to satisfy creditor's claims. Enriquez v. Smyth (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 691, 698-699, 219 Cal. Rptr. 267

Reduction of legal malpractice damages by amount of fees that attorney would have been paid had claim been competently handled is improper. Kane, Kane, & Kritzer, Inc. v. Altagen (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 36, 44, 165 Cal. Rptr. 534 ; Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 606, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544

Plaintiff in legal malpractice case has duty to make reasonable effort to avoid or mitigate damages. Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 418, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714 ; see also Lewis v. Superior Court (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 844, 853, 144 Cal. Rptr. 1 (failure to mitigate damages justifies reduction in client's damages); Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 153, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864

Fact that attorney's professional negligence would have resulted in less harm than client actually suffered, if client had cooperated in attorney's negligent handling of case, is relevant to issue of client's damages. Martin v. Hall (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 414, 428, 97 Cal. Rptr. 730

Damages awarded client in malpractice action against attorney based on attorney's failure to file personal injury action before it was barred by statute of limitations are not subject to reduction in amount of fee attorney would have earned if personal injury action had been timely filed and brought to judgment, since such fee cannot be ascertained with reasonable certainty. Benard v. Walkup (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 595, 605-606, 77 Cal. Rptr. 544 (contingent fee agreement involving two alternative contingencies)

Attorney is liable to client for all damages directly and proximately caused by his or her negligent failure to exercise due care in handling client's affairs and performing professional duties to best of his or her ability. Pete v. Henderson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 487, 489, 269 P.2d 78 (dictum)

[b] Emotional Distress

Emotional distress damages are only appropriate when emotional shock to plaintiff stems from abnormal event and it was highly foreseeable that defendant's actions would cause shock to plaintiff. Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 168, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1

Plaintiff's frustration at delay in resolution of underlying medical malpractice suit that followed death of plaintiff's infant daughter and anger at being misused by both doctors and lawyers does not meet requirements for recovery of emotional distress damages. Pleasant v. Celli (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 841, 853-854, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 ; overruled on other grounds, Adams v. Paul (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 583, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594, 904 P.2d 1205

When plaintiff alleges that interest invaded by legal malpractice is economic interest in recovering damages for antecedent tort of sexual battery, emotional distress is not inevitable consequence of economic loss, and court is required to balance policy considerations in deciding whether to award damages for emotional distress. Merenda v. Superior Court (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-11, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 (emotional distress damages not awarded)

In action by insured against attorney hired to defend her by insurer, award of money damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress is proper when evidence showed that attorneys neglected insured's interests in favor of insurer's, and insured suffered resulting shock and trauma when verdict far exceeding policy limits was rendered against her in underlying action. Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 717-718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528

[c] Joint Tortfeasors

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 877, plaintiff's medical malpractice damage award is reduced by amount received in settlement of related legal malpractice claim to avoid double recovery when plaintiff, in complaint, on appeal, and through continued prosecution of action against attorney, claimed attorney was liable for damages resulting from medical malpractice. Lafayette v. County of Los Angeles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 547, 554-556, 208 Cal. Rptr. 668

[d] Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are not available if jury finds defendant guilty of malpractice but awards no compensatory damages to plaintiff. Jackson v. Johnson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1355-1358, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482

Punitive damages are supported by allegations that attorney advised client to delay medical treatment in order to increase monetary value of medical malpractice case, knowing that delay would worsen client's condition, and that attorney misrepresented to client that valid cause of action existed after statute of limitations period expired. Blegen v. Superior Court (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 959, 962-963, 178 Cal. Rptr. 470

[4] Elements

Elements of cause of action in tort for professional negligence. Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 ; In re Easterbrook (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1544, 244 Cal. Rptr. 652

Attorney's negligence does not provide basis for cause of action for malpractice until client suffers appreciable harm as consequence; cause of action arises when any appreciable and actual harm flows from attorney's negligent conduct. Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200-201, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433

Cause of action based on professional negligence of attorney as not accruing until client knows, or should know, all material facts essential to show elements of cause of action. Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 190, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421

Professional negligence by attorney as consisting of failure to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as lawyers of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise in the performance of the tasks that they undertake. Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 180, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421 ; Kim v. Orellana (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1028, 193 Cal. Rptr. 827

Client suing attorney for alleged negligent failure to collect debt as required to allege and prove that claim was turned over to attorney for collection, that failure to collect was due to negligence, that claim was valid and subsisting, and that debtor was solvent. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 787-788, 171 P. 961

Complaint based on negligent failure to prosecute client's lawsuit as required to allege facts showing client has fulfilled all conditions precedent to right to commence such lawsuit. Bayly v. Lee (1916) 174 Cal. 137, 139, 162 P. 96

In malpractice action against former partner of attorney retained to represent plaintiff in medical malpractice action dismissed for lack of service, attorney-client relationship as nonexistent; summary judgment for defendant as proper based on absence of element of duty to plaintiff. Daniels v. DeSimone (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 600, 607-608, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615

Summary judgment in malpractice action based on failure to return proof of service within statutory time as upheld with regard to attorney who filed action and obtained service when another attorney was substituted in five months before the expiration date, and thus, first attorney did not represent plaintiff when right to pursue underlying action was lost. Stuart v. Superior Court (1992) 14 Cal. App. 4th 124, 127-128, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142

Plaintiff as required to plead specific facts affording inference that attorney's negligence caused injury if pleaded facts of negligence and injury do not naturally give rise to inference of causation. Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1066, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250

Client's exposure to liability because of attorney's misconduct as not constituting element of "actual damage" unless exposure actually resulted in compensable detriment. Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1063, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250

Plaintiff in attorney malpractice action as required to establish (1) attorney-client relationship or other basis for duty,

(2) negligent act or omission, (3) proximate causation of damages, and (4) measure of damages. Sukoff v. Lemkin (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 740, 744, 249 Cal. Rptr. 42

Attorney malpractice action as requiring proof that underlying case was meritorious in addition to other elements of duty, breach, proximate cause, and damages. Harris v. Smith (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104, 203 Cal. Rptr. 541

Elements of cause of action for malpractice as (1) duty to use such skill, prudence, and diligence as other members of bar commonly possess, (2) breach of that duty, (3) proximate causal connection between negligence and injury, and (4) actual damages. Purdy v. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 59, 76, 203 Cal. Rptr. 524 ; Bucquet v. Livingston (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 914, 920-921, 129 Cal. Rptr. 514

Complaint against attorney based on professional negligence as not required to allege negligence was sole cause of client's loss or to negate any other probable cause, but required to allege attorney's negligence was proximate cause of loss. Modica v. Crist (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 144, 147-148, 276 P.2d 614

[5] Implied Indemnity

Ordinary rules of comparative indemnity as inapplicable if claim for indemnity is made against attorney, is based on breach of attorney's duty to his or her client, and is brought by adverse party in litigation that is same or related to that in which alleged professional negligence occurred. California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 230-231, 270 Cal. Rptr. 421 (insurer sued by insured for bad faith as not entitled to obtain comparative equitable indemnity from insured's attorney on theory that attorney's negligence at least partially caused insured's damage)

Public policy considerations as precluding cross complaint for indemnity by attorney against subsequent attorney bringing legal malpractice action on behalf of client, even though subsequent attorney's alleged negligence occurred concurrently with defendant's in course of representation of client and not with regard to malpractice action. Lewis v. Purvin (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1208, 1214-1217, 256 Cal. Rptr. 827

Prohibition on cross complaints by defendant predecessor attorneys for equitable indemnity against successor attorneys as not inconsistent with or violative of right to contribution provided in Civ. Code § 1432. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 936, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

Court's refusal to allow attorney sued for attorney malpractice to cross complain against successor attorney for equitable indemnity as not denying attorney equal protection or due process. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 935, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

Attorney sued for malpractice by former client as barred from cross complaining for indemnity against successor attorney hired to assist client in limiting injury caused by original attorney; original attorney as having option, in lieu of seeking indemnity, of asserting successor attorney's negligence as affirmative defense. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 929-935, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

Attorney as liable for equitable indemnity when plaintiff restaurateur sued lessor in tort and contract for failure to provide outdoor dining area as promised in lease; although lessor and lessee retained attorney after lease was signed, attorney's negligent defense against third party's suit to enjoin construction of dining area as partly responsible for plaintiff's damages. Considine Co. v. Shadle, Hunt & Hagar (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 760, 767-768, 232 Cal. Rptr. 250

If two attorneys, not in privity, successively represented same client in prior action, first attorney sued for malpractice

as prohibited by public policy from maintaining claim for equitable, or partial equitable, indemnity against second attorney on alleged ground that client's damages were actually caused or exacerbated by second attorney. Goldfisher v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 21-23, 183 Cal. Rptr. 609

Attorney sued by former client for malpractice as permitted to cross complain for partial indemnity against client's second attorney whose negligence as a matter of law contributed to client's loss. Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 755-767, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197 (distinguishing prior cases holding attorney sued by former client for malpractice may not cross complain against client's successor attorney who is retained to extricate client from situation created by first attorney when second attorney's alleged negligence consisted of choice of alternative remedies requiring exercise of professional judgment)

Lawyer sued by former client for professional negligence as not permitted to cross complain for partial equitable indemnity against client's second lawyer who was retained to extricate client from situation created by alleged negligence of first lawyer; rule as applying whether or not person seeking indemnification was a lawyer. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 349, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326

Attorney whose malpractice (failure to advise client entering land-exchange transaction to obtain title insurance respecting parcel to be acquired) contributed to client's injury as not "joint" tortfeasor with title company (liable for negligent failure to report encumbrance on parcel client acquired), at least for purpose of title company's claim for equitable indemnity from attorney. Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 941-943, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393

[6] Nature of Action

Attorney's asserted failure to exercise requisite skill and care as possible basis for legal malpractice action grounded on breach of contract and tort, but failure of attorney as not furnishing basis for reversal of judgment entered against client in civil trial. Kim v. Orellana (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1028, 193 Cal. Rptr. 827

Similar rules regarding standard of care applied to doctors and dentists and members of other professions as applicable to lawyers. Theobald v. Byers (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 147, 150, 13 Cal. Rptr. 864

[7] Particular Errors and Omissions

[a] Appeal

Attorney who omits to take appeal that would not have been successful as not negligent. Hays v. Ewing (1886) 70 Cal. 127, 128, 11 P. 602

Attorney as negligent in failing to take appeal that would have succeeded, and choosing instead to secure order for new trial that was vacated as improperly granted; client's damage as including costs on appeal of order granting new trial when client had no reasonable hope of affirmance. Drais v. Hogan (1875) 50 Cal. 121, 127-128

If client is sanctioned for filing frivolous appeal, it does not mean that attorney is liable as matter of law for committing malpractice. Dawson v. Toledano (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 387, 390, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 689

Nonliability of attorney for malpractice for failing to file timely appeal from judgment absent proof that appeal would have been won. Kilmer v. Carter (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 81, 82, 78 Cal. Rptr. 800

Trial court as having authority in malpractice action based on allegedly negligent failure to take appeal in another case, to decide whether appeal, if taken, would have resulted in reversal. Pete v. Henderson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 487, 491-492, 269 P.2d 78

[b] Asserting Defenses

Defense attorney as liable for failure to assert appropriate defenses in lawsuit. See Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 198, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433 (alleged negligence based on failure to plead a critical defense); but see Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 (defendant as required to establish that unasserted defense was not only legally cognizable but provable and that its assertion would have achieved a better result for the defendant)

Complaint based on attorney's negligent failure to set up defense as required to allege that facts constituting defense existed and were susceptible of proof at trial by properly diligent attorney. Hastings v. Halleck (1859) 13 Cal. 203

Attorney's failure to assert viable defenses in criminal action as professional negligence. Martin v. Hall (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 414, 422-428, 97 Cal. Rptr. 730

[c] Client's Instructions

Attorney as liable for losses resulting to client from attorney's failure to follow client's instructions with reasonable promptness and care, except instructions as to details connected with conduct of lawsuit. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 786, 787, 171 P. 961

[d] Commencing Suit

Attorney as not liable for failure to file action prior to expiration of statute of limitations if he or she ceased to represent client before statute ran on client's action. Steketee v. Lintz, Williams & Rothberg (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 46, 57, 210 Cal. Rptr. 781, 694 P.2d 1153

Failure to file action for client within period of limitation as professional negligence. Shelly v. Hansen (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 210, 214-215, 53 Cal. Rptr. 20 ; Hege v. Worthington, Park & Worthington (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 670, 678-679, 26 Cal. Rptr. 132

[e] Cross Claims

Attorney as not having duty to file cross complaint, filing of which was not compulsory by law. Banerian v. O'Malley (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 604, 612-613, 116 Cal. Rptr. 919

[f] Dismissal of Criminal Charges Filed by Attorney

Court's dismissal of criminal charges as improper basis for legal malpractice action against attorney who caused charges to be filed; if charges were false and client asserting charges and malpractice action knew charges were false when made, attorney's conduct not proximate cause of damages. Tushinsky v. Arnold (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 666, 673, 241 Cal. Rptr. 103

[g] Enforcement of Judgment

Attorney who delayed executing on judgment debtor's property until judgment lien expired as not liable for professional negligence when debtor owned no property subject to execution. Siddall v. Haight (1901) 132 Cal. 320, 321-323, 64 P. 410

[h] Errors of Judgment

Attorney as not liable on account of every mistake made in practice of law; as not being insurer, in absence of express contrary agreement, of soundness of his opinions or validity of instruments he drafts; as not liable on account of error as to question of law on which reasonable doubt may be entertained by well informed laywers. Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 (invalidity of will resulting from attorney's misunderstanding rule against perpetuities not a basis for liability)

Attorney as not negligent in acting in reliance on decision of Supreme Court he reasonably believes establishes law in client's case and controls. Hastings v. Halleck (1859) 13 Cal. 203

Summary judgment in favor of defendant attorney in malpractice action as reversed when defendant attorney did not make rational professional judgment based on all available data; lack of professional judgment as indicated by attorney's failure to act based on incomplete reading of single case without appreciating vital factual difference between that case and client's situation. Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 419, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656

Attorney as not liable for malpractice in failing to obtain for client share of client's husband's military pension in property settlement because later U.S. Supreme Court case disallowed community property share of military pensions and was applied retroactively. Sharpe v. Superior Court (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 469, 472-473, 192 Cal. Rptr. 16

Attorney as not liable for lack of knowledge as to true state of law when doubtful or debatable point is involved, provided that he or she renders advice on basis of informed judgment; attorney as under no duty to advise client of unsettled state of law at time advice is rendered. Davis v. Damrell (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 883, 887-888, 889, 174 Cal. Rptr. 257

Attorney's lack of knowledge of correct rule of law involving matter open to doubt or debate, and his lack of sufficient prudence to file action promptly even though it reasonably appeared to him to be futile, as not constituting professional negligence. Sprague v. Morgan (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 519, 523, 8 Cal. Rptr. 347

[i] Failure to Advise

Attorney who signs application for adjudication of workers' compensation claim and attorney who accepts referral to prosecute workers' compensation claim as having duty of care to advise client about other available remedies such as third-party actions. Nichols v. Keller (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1672, 1687, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601

[j] Failure to Perform Adequate Research

Defendants had no duty in underlying case to consult and retain neuropsychologist to establish plaintiff's brain injury because none of three neurologists who examined plaintiff for purposes of diagnosis and treatment recommended that plaintiff see neuropsychologist. Bolton v. Trope (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1021, 1024-1026, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 637

[k] Filing Petition to Enjoin Suspected Child Abuse

Attorney's filing of petition for order to restrain non-client third party from abusing child as privileged conduct under Penal Code § 11172(a); attorney as immune from malpractice liability for such conduct unless attorney filed petition with knowledge that facts contained within petition were false. Tushinsky v. Arnold (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 666, 674, 241 Cal. Rptr. 103

[l] Prosecution of Suit

Cause of action based on attorney's negligent failure to prosecute lawsuit diligently as arising when lawsuit dismissed for want of prosecution; client as not required to refile lawsuit thereafter and await adverse judgment before suing attorney. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 791, 171 P. 961

[m] Sexual Exploitation of Client

Attorney's delay in rendering legal services, withholding of legal services, and provision of substandard legal services, due to client's refusal to grant attorney sexual favors, as falling below standard of care of members of legal profession. McDaniel v. Gile (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 363, 375, 281 Cal. Rptr. 242

[n] Wills

Complaint alleging negligence of attorney for executor based on failure to obtain all inclusive releases from will contestants (rather than releases as to single specified ground for contest) as required to allege contestants were willing to execute such releases and attorney failed to request that they do so. Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 594-595, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

[8] Pleading and Proof

In case based on attorney's negligent failure to obtain judgment for plaintiff, plaintiff as required to prove collectibility of lost claim by establishing solvency of defendant in underlying action. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 787-788, 171 P. 961 ; Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32

Nonsuit for attorney as improperly granted because malpractice plaintiff's opening statement alleged prima facie case against attorney for failing to preserve automobile critical to otherwise meritorious products liability suit and, under appropriate circumstances, burden of proving that attorney's negligence did not cause harm to plaintiff may be shifted to attorney if alleged malpractice makes it practically impossible for malpractice plaintiff to prove causation. Galanek v. Wismar (1999) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1426-1427, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236

Shifting burden to attorney of proving lack of causation reserved for cases in which substantial probability is demonstrated that defendant's negligence was cause of damage to plaintiff, but nature of negligence makes it practically impossible for plaintiff to prove conclusively that negligence was proximate cause of damage to plaintiff. Thomas v. Lusk (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1709, 1717, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265

Solvency of another party in underlying transaction is irrelevant to proving damages in malpractice suit when alleged malpractice by attorney does not involve prosecution of lawsuit by attorney. DiPalma v. Seldman (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1499, 1508

Standards regarding qualifications of experts in medical malpractice cases as being serviceable as guides for appellate review of qualifications of experts in legal malpractice cases. Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1432, 1438, 1441, 286 Cal. Rptr. 243

Proof of legal malpractice as requiring "trial within a trial" to establish that, but for attorney's negligence, client would have prevailed in underlying action. United Cmty. Church v. Garcin (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 327, 334, 282 Cal. Rptr. 368

Expert testimony on duty of care as unnecessary when failure of attorney's performance readily apparent from facts of case. Goebel v. Lauderdale (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1502, 1508, 263 Cal. Rptr. 275

Plaintiff's allegations that attorney conducted inadequate pretrial preparation in lawsuit as insufficient to establish attorney's malpractice; plaintiff as required to establish that, but for attorney's alleged negligence, plaintiff would have been successful in action. Sukoff v. Lemkin (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 740, 744, 249 Cal. Rptr. 42

Absence of allegation that defendant attorney failed to act properly with respect to disclosure of conflict of interest as fatal defect in pleadings and cause of action fails for lack of sufficient proximate cause. Purdy v. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 59, 78, 203 Cal. Rptr. 524

Establishing malpractice for attorney's failure to perform act as requiring expert testimony of standard of care and attorney's performance in relation to standard when significance of omitted act is not matter of common knowledge. Wilkinson v. Rives (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 641, 647-648, 172 Cal. Rptr. 254

Failure to grant judgment notwithstanding verdict in favor of defendant attorneys as improper when record lacks evidence from which it may be inferred that defendants' allegedly negligent acts caused any injury to plaintiffs. Sprigg v. Garcin (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 869, 874-875, 164 Cal. Rptr. 677 (any damages suffered by plaintiffs as caused by circumstances other than defendants' management of their litigation)

If question of malpractice is not one of law in which reasonable minds do not differ as to existence of duty, plaintiff's proof, being one of fact regarding the standard for members of the profession in the same or a similar locality under similar circumstances, as requiring expert testimony. Lipscomb v. Krause (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 970, 975-976, 151 Cal. Rptr. 465

Expert testimony as required to determine whether attorney's stipulation to dismiss action without client's consent constituted malpractice. Lipscomb v. Krause (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 970, 974-976, 151 Cal. Rptr. 465

Nonsuit as improper in action against attorney for allowing statute of limitations on personal injury action to run when plaintiff makes prima facie case that one or more of three potential defendants in personal injury action was legally responsible for accident. Walker v. Porter (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 174, 178, 118 Cal. Rptr. 468

Complaint based on attorney's professional negligence consisting in failure to commence client's lawsuit before it was barred by statute of limitations as not required to allege conclusion that lawsuit would have been successful but, rather, as required to allege facts from which court could deduce that client would have recovered judgment. Hege v. Worthington, Park & Worthington (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 670, 677, 26 Cal. Rptr. 132

Establishing malpractice in prosecuting or defending lawsuit as requiring proof that careful management would have resulted in recovery of judgment and collection of it or, in case of defense, proper handling would have resulted in judgment for client; absence of such proof as establishing lack of damage; client as having burden of proof. Hastings v. Halleck. (1859) 13 Cal. 203 ; Campbell v. Magana (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 751, 754, 8 Cal. Rptr. 32 (dictum)

Complaint based on attorney's alleged professional negligence as sufficiently alleging negligence by alleging facts of what was done and then alleging generally that it amounted to negligence. Modica v. Crist (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 144, 146, 276 P.2d 614

Client alleging professional negligence consisting of attorney's failure to file notice of appeal before time therefor expired as required to plead and prove that appeal, if taken, would have resulted in reversal. Pete v. Henderson (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 487, 490, 491, 269 P.2d 78

Complaint in action by client against attorney based on alleged negligence in failing to perform some act in client's behalf as required to specify act and specifically allege (and client as required to prove) that if attorney had performed act it would have resulted beneficially to client. Feldesman v. McGovern (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 566, 568-569, 112 P.2d 645 (dictum)

Complaint based on attorney's alleged professional negligence consisting of giving advice as required to allege that attorney-client relationship existed, that attorney gave advice, that client did something he would not otherwise have done, and that as proximate result thereof client suffered loss. McGregor v. Wright (1931) 117 Cal. App. 186, 193, 3 P.2d 624

[9] Res Judicata

Attorney malpractice action as barred by res judicata when factual issue determinative of proximate causation was resolved against plaintiff in prior action. Tushinsky v. Arnold (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 666, 673, 241 Cal. Rptr. 103

[10] Standard of Care

Attorney as responsible for knowledge of law and as under obligation to perform diligent research and exercise informed judgment when representing client. see Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418-419, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 ; Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 802, 809, 121 Cal. Rptr. 194

Attorney as liable for want of such skill, prudence, and diligence as lawyers of ordinary skill and capacity commonly possess and exercise. Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 355 (attorney as having duty to exercise degree of learning and skill ordinarily possessed by other attorneys of good standing practicing in same or similar locality under similar circumstances), disapproved on other grounds, In re Marriage of Brown (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 838, 851 n.14, 126 Cal. Rptr. 633, 544 P.2d 561 ; Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685 ; Gambert v. Hart (1872) 44 Cal. 542, 552-553 ; Sprague v. Morgan (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 519, 523, 8 Cal. Rptr. 347

[1] Damages--Emotional Distress

Emotional distress damages as only appropriate when emotional shock to plaintiff stems from abnormal event and it was highly foreseeable that defendant's actions would cause shock to plaintiff. Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 159, 168, 216 Cal. Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1

Plaintiff's frustration at delay in resolution of underlying medical malpractice suit that followed death of plaintiff's infant daughter and anger at being misused by both doctors and lawyers as not meeting requirements for recovery of emotional distress damages. Pleasant v. Celli (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 841, 853-854, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663

Damage to plaintiff that is solely economic as insufficient to support claim for emotional distress damages. see Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 (mere negligence does not support recovery for mental suffering when defendant's tortious conduct results in only economic injury)

Attorney's misconduct actionable as intentional infliction of emotional distress if conduct was outrageous, attorney intended to cause emotional distress or had reckless disregard of probability of causing emotional distress, client experienced severe emotional suffering, and attorney's conduct actually and proximately caused emotional distress to client. McDaniel v. Gile (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 363, 372-374, 281 Cal. Rptr. 242 (action based on attorney's repeated sexual harassment of client, and attorney's conditioning of professional performance on provision of sexual favors by client)

Attorney's incompetence resulting in client's improper confinement as supporting emotional distress damages. Holliday v. Jones (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 102, 112-120, 264 Cal. Rptr. 448

Emotional distress damages (after trial court remitted jury's verdict awarding $500,000) as supported by evidence of attorneys' conduct. Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 718, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528

[2] Duty

[a] Avoiding Adverse Representation

Attorney's assumption of positions that are adverse or antagonistic to client as violation of duty, absent free and intelligent consent given by client after full knowledge of facts and circumstances. Anderson v. Eaton (1930) 211 Cal. 113 ; see also Betts v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 715, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 ; Klemm v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 893, 901-902, 142 Cal. Rptr. 509

[b] Protecting Fiduciary Relationship

Attorney's duty toward existing client negates any duty to give prospective new client advice when existing client is potential target of new client's cause of action; thus, when attorney severs relationship with new client under these circumstances, attorney has no duty to advise new client regarding applicable statute of limitations or need to seek other counsel. Flatt v. Superior Court (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 275, 278-279, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 885 P.2d 950

Transactions between attorney and client during existence of fiduciary relationship, or while influence acquired by attorney remains, by which attorney obtains any advantage from client, as presumed to be entered into by client without sufficient consideration and under undue influence. See Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 17, 27, 69 Cal. Rptr. 568, 442 P.2d 648 (former Civ. Code § 2235 (now see Prob. Code § 16004(c)) applicable to contractual dealings between attorney and client during existence of attorney-client relationship)

Undue influence by attorney as presumed when in all transactions forming basis of action for breach of fiduciary duty, attorney was agent for elderly client by reason of signed power of attorney, and never advised client to obtain separate counsel when his name appeared as joint tenant on her bank accounts. Ball v. Posey (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1209, 1214, 222 Cal. Rptr. 746

Transaction between attorney and client as voidable unless and until attorney establishes full compliance with fiduciary obligations. See Gleason v. Klamer (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 782, 787, 163 Cal. Rptr. 483 ; see also Oliker v. Gershunoff (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1288, 1294-1295, 241 Cal. Rptr. 415 (presumption of undue influence successfully rebutted)

Attorney as not allowed to take actions that would injure former client in matters within scope of former representation and as not allowed to use any information gained during relationship against former client. Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see People v. Thoi (1989) 213 Cal. App.3d 689, 699, 261 Cal. Rptr. 789

Relationship between attorney and client as being of fiduciary character. See Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512

[3] Fraud

Attorney as liable to his or her client for fraud if elements of fraud are proven. Cf. Frost v. Hanscome (1926) 198 Cal. 550, 559, 246 P. 53 (no grounds for finding of extrinsic fraud on record)

Facts constituting fraud as required to be alleged with sufficient specificity to allow defendant to understand fully nature of charge. Wilhelm v. Pray, Price, Williams & Russell (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331-1332, 231 Cal. Rptr. 355

Elements of fraud action. Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901

Attorney as subject to liability for constructive fraud when attorney breaches fiduciary duty to client. Cf. American Box & Drum Co. v. Harron (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 370, 378, 112 P.2d 332 (court found no evidence of intent to defraud necessary for imposition of constructive trust)

[4] Nature of Malpractice

Legal malpractice as constituting both tort and breach of contract. Neel v. Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 176, 180-181, 98 Cal. Rptr. 837, 491 P.2d 421

Attorney's asserted failure to exercise requisite skill and care as possible basis for legal malpractice action grounded on breach of contract and tort, but failure of attorney as not furnishing basis for reversal of judgment entered against client in civil trial. Kim v. Orellana (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1028, 193 Cal. Rptr. 827

§ 76.304 Decisions

[1] Arbitration

Client's malpractice claim against attorney as not covered by prior arbitration agreement when context of agreement led client to believe, at time agreement was signed, that agreement would only apply to attorney-client fee disputes. Lawrence v. Walzer & Gabrielson (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1501, 1504-1508, 256 Cal. Rptr. 6

[2] Comparative Negligence

Contributory negligence of person injured as reducing damages awarded in proportion to amount of negligence attributable to person recovering. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Defense of comparative negligence as not applying when plaintiff alleges intentional tort. see Godfrey v. Steinpress (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 154, 176, 180 Cal. Rptr. 95 (contributory negligence not applicable in fraud action when no negligence involved)

[3] Good Faith Errors

In order to defend against malpractice suit on basis of good-faith error, attorney as required to undertake reasonable research to ascertain relevant legal principles and to make informed decision as to course of conduct based on intelligent assessment of particular problem. Aloy v. Mash (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 413, 418, 212 Cal. Rptr. 162, 696 P.2d 656 ; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358

Attorney as not required to insure accuracy of opinions or validity of document drafted for client, nor as liable for mistake as to legal question on which well-informed attorneys may entertain reasonable doubt. Kirsch v. Duryea (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 303, 308, 146 Cal. Rptr. 218, 578 P.2d 935 ; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 349, 358-359, 118 Cal. Rptr. 621 , 530 P.2d; Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

Failure of attorneys to prove they actually researched uncertain point of law before advising client precluded successful defense based on honest error in judgment. Village Nurseries v. Greenbaum (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 26, 38-39, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555

If reasonable research into how doubtful or debatable legal subject will be resolved is undertaken, fact that course of conduct selected is shown to be erroneous by subsequent events as not justifying negligence liability. see Davis v. Damrell (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 883, 888-889, 174 Cal. Rptr. 257

Attorney lacking sufficient knowledge in specific field of law as having duty to refer legal problem to specialist, or be held to standard of care required of specialist in problem area. Horne v. Peckham (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 404, 414-415, 158 Cal. Rptr. 714

[4] Immunity

Retained counsel functioning as union agents in collective bargaining process as immune, pursuant to Labor Management Relations Act (29 U.S.C. § 185(b)), from suit for malpractice. Aragon v. Pappy, Kaplon, Vogel & Phillips (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 451, 462-463, 262 Cal. Rptr. 646

Court-appointed attorney for indigent defendant in federal criminal trial who was later sued by defendant in state court for malpractice as not absolutely immune from suit. Ferri v. Ackerman (1979) 444 U.S. 193, 205, 100 S. Ct. 402, 62 L. Ed. 2d 355

[5] Public Defenders

Client who sues public defender for malpractice as required to file, as precondition to suit, claim against employing public agency pursuant to Tort Claims Act [see Gov. Code §§ 810-996.6]. Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 618, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578

[6] Statute of Limitations

[a] In General

Statute of limitations for legal malpractice as one year after plaintiff discovers or should have discovered facts constituting malpractice or four years from actual date of wrongful act, whichever occurs first. Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)

[b] Actual Injury

Test for actual injury under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 is whether plaintiff has sustained any damages compensable in legal action, other than one for actual fraud, against attorney for wrongful act or omission arising in performance of professional services, and inquiry is predominantly factual in nature. Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger &

Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 751, 763 (overruling "bright-line" rulemaking approach of ITT Small Bus. Fin. Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965)

Actual injury sufficient to trigger limitations period in malpractice action as occurring on entry of adverse judgment or final order of dismissal in underlying action in which malpractice occurred. Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 (appellate finality not required)

Actual injury for purposes of triggering statute of limitations in legal malpractice action was sustained when bankruptcy trustee questioned validity of plaintiff's liens asserted against estate in bankruptcy, because trustee's opinion about liens reduced settlement value of plaintiff's claims for payment; subsequent court declaration that liens were invalid was not required to begin limitations period. Village Nurseries v. Greenbaum (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 26, 41-42, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555

When attorney's malpractice prevented client from protecting its right to develop property by exercising its right to automatically annex property within three-year time period, statute of limitations began to run when time limit for automatic annexation expired, rather than when client later loses suit against third party. Foxborough v. Van Atta (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 217, 227, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525

When underlying action was dissolution proceeding and plaintiff alleged that attorneys were negligent in drafting unfair settlement agreement, actual injury as occurring no later than date plaintiff paid retainer fee to successor attorney hired to rectify alleged negligence of defendant attorneys. Bennett v. McCall (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 122, 126, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 268 ; see also Hensley v. Caietti (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1165, 1175-1176, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 (client alleging that attorney negligently induced her to enter into unfair marital settlement agreement suffered actual injury on date of entry in the agreement)

When attorney malpractice consists of not filing underlying action within applicable statute of limitations, actual injury as occurring when client's cause of action is proscribed. Finlayson v. Sanbrook (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1444, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406

In case alleging attorney's negligence in failing to properly advise physician regarding medical malpractice insurance, "actual harm" to plaintiff physician as occurring when plaintiff incurred attorney's fees in defending underlying medical malpractice action, not when action was settled. Sirott v. Latts (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 923, 928-930, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 206

In malpractice action based on attorney's failure in dissolution action to discover and obtain evidence of client's spouse's excess assets, actual injury as occurring on entry of judgment of dissolution when judgment failed to divide excess assets. Worton v. Worton (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1638, 1651-1652, 286 Cal. Rptr. 410

Fact that judgment could potentially be set aside, under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 or under court's general equitable powers, as not delaying accrual of actual injury. Turley v. Wooldridge (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 586, 588, 590-594, 281 Cal. Rptr. 441

In malpractice action based on attorney's alleged failure to introduce evidence that would have resulted in more favorable outcome in client's marital dissolution proceeding, actual harm, if any, as taking place no later than time of judgment of dissolution. Kabbe v. Miller (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 93, 97, 275 Cal. Rptr. 893

Dismissal of lawsuit due to attorney's negligence as constituting actual injury triggering limitations period. Troche v. Daley (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 403, 410, 266 Cal. Rptr. 34

Commencement of one-year limitation period concerning former attorney's misrepresentation of legal effect of stipulation provision as tolled under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1) until plaintiff suffered actual injury by seeking but failing to obtain court order giving effect to provision according to misrepresentation. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

[c] Continued Representation

If attorney leaves law firm and takes representation of particular client with him or her, statute of limitations does not continue to toll under continued representation exception on malpractice action that client may have against attorney's former law firm or any other attorneys in firm. Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 505, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666 (disapproving contrary conclusion of Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486)

Statute of limitations was not tolled due to continuous representation when attorney advised client in December 2005 about signing commercial lease document and provided no further services relating to lease thereafter, client hired new attorney in March 2006 to pursue litigation against landlord with respect to lease, and client did not file malpractice lawsuit against original attorney based on allegedly negligent advice concerning lease until September 2007. Truong v. Glasser (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 102, 116-117, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 811

Because law firm hired to represent client in workers' compensation claim advised client to sign compromise and release agreement between client and employer, claim and settlement agreement constituted same specific subject matter for purposes of tolling statute of limitations under continuous representation rule. Lockley v. Law Office of Cantrell, Green, Pekich, Cruz & McCort (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 875, 889, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877

Determination of whether attorney's representation was continuing is objective one based on evidence of ongoing mutual relationship and whether activities had been taken to further that relationship. Worthington v. Rusconi (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1488, 1498, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169

Attorney's conduct in acting as consultant and expert in litigation arising out of matter in which he had previously represented client as not tolling statute of limitations governing malpractice action arising from earlier representation. Foxborough v. Van Atta (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 217, 227, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525

When attorney continues to represent client regarding specific subject matter in which alleged negligence occurred, client's awareness of attorney's negligence as not interrupting tolling of limitations period under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6. O'Neill v. Tichy (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 114, 119-121, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162

Attorney-client relationship as terminated for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 when no court or administrative tribunal retains jurisdiction over matter and nothing remains to be done with regard to proceedings in which legal representation was rendered. Panattoni v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 1097, 250 Cal. Rptr. 390

Failure to formally withdraw as counsel "standing alone" as not constituting continued representation for purposes of tolling Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6; however, defendant attorneys as estopped from claiming that their representation of plaintiff did not continue when attorneys undertook to represent very parties they were hired by plaintiff to investigate, attorneys failed to obtain waiver from plaintiff, and attorneys did not formally terminate relationship with plaintiff. Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1475, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Defendant's failure to withdraw formally as attorney of record, standing alone, as not tolling statute of limitations under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2); period of limitation as commencing to run when attorney-client relationship terminates. Shapero v. Fliegel (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 842, 846-849, 236 Cal. Rptr. 696

Because client may not be able to recognize negligence of his or her attorney and because confidential relationship normally exists between attorney and client, client's failure to discover facts constituting fraud or misrepresentation by attorney as often excused until attorney-client relationship has been terminated. Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1166-1167, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89

Tolling of statute of limitations while attorney is employed by client under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2) as applying to both one-year and four-year provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 310, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Employment of attorney by client pursuant to retainer agreement as continuing to toll statute of limitations after cause of action that is subject of malpractice claim became barred by its own statute of limitations. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 309, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Attorney's status as pledgeholder under agreement for sale of business as not constituting continued representation under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 for purposes of tolling statute of limitations for malpractice in setting up sale. Von Rott v. Johnson (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d. 608, 612-613, 196 Cal. Rptr. 55

Unsettled matters tangential to case that are handled by attorney as manifestation of continuing representation under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2) so as to toll both the one-year and four-year provisions of statute of limitations. Gurkewitz v. Haberman (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 328, 333-336, 187 Cal. Rptr. 14

Statute of limitations for legal malpractice as tolled during time attorney continues to represent plaintiff regarding specific matter in which malpractice occurred. Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)

[d] Discovery of Malpractice

Defendant in attorney malpractice action alleging plaintiff's action is barred under one-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) bears burden of proving when plaintiff discovered, or through use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, facts constituting alleged malpractice. Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 1, 8-9, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273, 989 P.2d 701

Crucial time for determining "date of discovery" as time when plaintiff discovered or should have discovered that his or her lawyers acted negligently. Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1476, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Whether plaintiff reasonably should have discovered wrongful act or omission of attorney so as to trigger commencement of one-year limitation period under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) as depending on whether plaintiff had knowledge sufficient to put reasonable person on inquiry or had opportunity to learn of alleged malpractice from available sources. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 822, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Question of when plaintiff discovered or reasonably should have discovered attorney malpractice and suffered injury, within meaning of one-year limitation provision of Code Civ. Proc. 340.6(a) as generally one of fact. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Degree of diligence required of plaintiff in ferreting out negligence for purposes of determining belated discovery of cause of action as diminished in case of professional relationship; malpractice plaintiff who sought professional advice regarding existence of cause of action as entitled to rely on advice received. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 311, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Statute of limitations as tolled by belated discovery of facts but not by belated discovery of legal theories. McGee v. Weinberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 798, 803, 159 Cal. Rptr. 86

[e] Legal Disability

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(4), allowing tolling of period of limitation for legal disability that restricts ability to commence action, as intended to be interpreted in connection with general tolling provision for prisoners contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 352 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1], which defines legal disability as including time during which plaintiff is imprisoned on criminal charge. Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 166, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428

Statute of limitations for malpractice action against criminal attorney as tolled during time plaintiff was imprisoned on criminal charges; plaintiff as not required to prove that incarceration actually made filing lawsuit against attorney impossible. Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 160-166, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428

[f] Scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, rather than "catchall" statute of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 343, as applicable in cause of action against attorney based on attorney's breach of fiduciary duties. Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1366-1369, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; but see David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 893, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 (contra)

District Court as erring in applying one-year statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, to corporate complaint against attorney charging him with corporate waste, mismanagement, and breach of fiduciary duty; correct statute as being general four-year statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 343. Davis & Cox v. Summa Corp. (9th Cir. 1985) 751 F.2d 1507, 1520-1521

Renaming of attorney as defendant in amended complaint, following dismissal of attorney from lawsuit without prejudice, as required to be within period of statute of limitations; amended complaint as not relating back to date of filing of original complaint for purposes of statute. Troche v. Daley (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 403, 412, 266 Cal. Rptr. 34

"Catchall" statute of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 343, rather than Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, as applicable in cause of action against attorney based on attorney's breach of fiduciary duties. David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 893, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 ; but see Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1366-1369, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 (contra)

Four-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 as not barring attorney malpractice action when complaint was filed less than four years after the statute's effective date (January 1, 1978). Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1474, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Four-year outside limit in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 as restricting malpractice actions based on actual injury that occurred prior to January 1, 1978 (effective date of statute); actions based on pre-1978 injury brought after January 1, 1982, as generally barred, unless statutory tolling applicable. Rubinstein v. Barnes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-282, 240 Cal. Rptr. 535

One-year limitation period for attorney malpractice actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) as commencing to run only concerning those wrongful acts or omissions that plaintiff has or reasonably should have discovered, not as to other related but separate wrongful acts or omissions. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 819-822, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, providing for four-year limitation period with one-year discovery rule as operating prospectively; plaintiff as not barred from action for legal malpractice commenced many years after divorce action that attorney handled, but less than three years from effective date of statute and less than one year from date of discovery of facts constituting attorney's wrongful act or omission. Krusesky v. Baugh (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 562, 566-568, 188 Cal. Rptr. 57

Requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 that attorney malpractice suits commence within one year of discovery of alleged wrongful act or omission as applying to both breach of contract and tort malpractice actions. Southland Mech. Constructors Corp. v. Nixen (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 417, 425-431, 173 Cal. Rptr. 917 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)

[7] Suspension of Corporate Powers

Corporate plaintiff as precluded from bringing malpractice suit during suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment of taxes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301; plaintiff's malpractice action as barred when plaintiff's corporate powers were suspended for entire duration of one-year limitation period. ABA Recovery Servs., Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27

[8] Unclean Hands

Attorney malpractice action, based on allegation that attorney led client to knowingly commit perjury in civil action, as barred under doctrine of unclean hands. Blain v. Doctor's Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1048, 1063-1064, 272 Cal. Rptr. 250

§ 76.323 Decisions

[1] Abuse of Process

Elements of cause of action are (1) employment of legal process for ulterior purpose, and (2) willful act in use of process not proper in regular conduct of proceedings. Ion Equip. Corp. v. Nelson (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 868, 876, 168 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; Clark Equip. Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 524, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 ; Christensen v. Younger (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 613, 617-618, 120 Cal. Rptr. 923

[2] Assignment

Liability insurer precluded from proceeding as subrogee in insured's malpractice claim against insured's attorney, since subrogation in those instances violates public policy against assigning malpractice claims. Fireman's Fund Ins. v. McDonald, Hecht & Sol. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1383-1384, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 424

Cause of action for "constructive fraud," based on allegations of attorneys' inability and failure to accomplish their tasks using reasonable care and skill, is not assignable. Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1022-1023, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637

Involuntary assignment of malpractice action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 708.510 is invalid. Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1025, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637

Foreign assignment of malpractice claim is unenforceable, on public policy grounds, in California courts. Kracht v. Perrin, Gartland & Doyle (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1027-1028, 268 Cal. Rptr. 637

Cause of action for attorney malpractice is not assignable. Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 336, 341-344, 258 Cal. Rptr. 454

Fraud cause of action against attorney arising from services provided during attorney-client relationship is generally not assignable. Jackson v. Rogers & Wells (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 336, 345-349, 258 Cal. Rptr. 454

[3] Civil Conspiracy

Denial of plaintiff's petition for leave to file complaint for conspiracy against defendant's attorneys on grounds plaintiff did not establish reasonable probability of prevailing is judgment on merits with res judicata effect in plaintiff's subsequent civil conspiracy action against same attorneys. Castro v. Higaki (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 350, 356-359, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 84

Elements of action for civil conspiracy are formation and operation of conspiracy and damage resulting to plaintiff from act or acts done in furtherance of common design. Mox Inc. v. Woods (1927) 202 Cal. 675, 677, 262 P. 302 ; Barney v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 966, 981, 230 Cal. Rptr. 215 ; see also Parkinson Co. v. Building Trades Council (1908) 154 Cal. 581, 593, 98 P. 1027 (conspiracy defined)

[4] Duty to Third Persons

[a] In General

Law firms representing bond underwriter and city in municipal bond transaction related to development project may possibly owe duty to trustee bank when drafting offering documents such that law firms could be liable to indemnify trustee, even though bank was represented by separate counsel during earlier transaction. Shawmut Bank, N.A. v. Kress Assocs. (9th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1477, 1505

Attorney representing wife in prosecuting wrongful death action stemming from drowning of child did not owe duty to client's husband, who was never party in wrongful death action and never consulted with wife's attorney, because husband and wife were separated and potential conflict of interest existed due to husband, but not wife, being present at time of drowning. Hall v. Superior Court (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 706, 714, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806

Attorney as having duty to inform client's spouse of potential action for lack of consortium despite attorney's statements that attorney was representing client only. Meighan v. Shore (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1025, 1029, 1042-1043, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 744

When conflict of interest necessitates that insurer pay for separate counsel for insurer and insured in defending action brought by third party, insured's counsel is liable to insurer for negligence, but only for violating statutory duties imposed on that attorney by Civ. Code § 2860. Assurance Co. of Am. v. Haven (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 78, 83-84, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25

Attorney has no duty toward third party who was damaged because attorney's client relied on attorney's negligent advice regarding sale of stock, and is not liable to third party absent fraud or malice. Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 344, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737

Factors considered in determining whether attorney is subject to liability to persons other than clients for professional negligence. Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 588, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

Attorney representing county in proceeding to enforce child support for custodial parent owes no professional duty of care to custodial parent. Jager v. County of Alameda (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 294, 297, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293

Attorney for closely held corporation does not owe professional duty of care to nonclient minority shareholder. Skarbrevik v. Cohen, England & Whitfield (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 692, 707, 282 Cal. Rptr. 627

Scope of attorney's duty in representing client in criminal case does not include responsibility to client's family members, whom attorney does not represent, for emotional distress damages resulting from attorney's failure to perform competently on behalf of client. Holliday v. Jones (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 102, 105, 264 Cal. Rptr. 448

Attorney functioning as union agent in collective bargaining process has primary duty to protect collective interests of union, which may diverge from interests of individual union members; individual union member is only an indirect beneficiary of negotiated, enforced collective bargaining agreement. Aragon v. Pappy, Kaplon, Vogel & Phillips (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 451, 464, 262 Cal. Rptr. 646

Policy considerations generally shielding licensed attorneys from third-party suits does not immunize person from liability for unauthorized practice of law under Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8. McKay v. Longsworth (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1592, 1596-1597, 260 Cal. Rptr. 250

Attorney owes duty of care to client's mortgage broker when mortgage broker conditioned approval of client's loan on receipt of written verification that attorney explained loan to client, attorney was aware of this arrangement, and attorney drafted letter, addressed "to whom it may concern," stating that he had explained loan to client. Home Budget Loans, Inc. v. Jacoby & Meyers Law Offices (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1284-1285, 255 Cal. Rptr. 483

Attorney preparing franchise prospectus for franchisor owes duty towards prospective franchisees if attorney knows that prospectus will be shown to prospective franchisees and that information contained in prospectus will be used to induce the purchase of franchises. Courtney v. Waring (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1443-1444, 237 Cal. Rptr. 233

Attorney breaches duty to third party's attorney when affirmative misrepresentation of fact is made directly to attorney for purpose of influencing third party on behalf of client of attorney who made misrepresentation. Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 210, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887

Attorney representing buyer of real property does not owe duty of care to escrow agent concerning drafting and formation of escrow instructions. St. Paul Title Co. v. Meier (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 948, 950-952, 226 Cal. Rptr. 538

Attorney's liability to third persons not in privity depends on various factors, including extent to which transaction was intended to benefit third persons, foreseeability of harm, certainty that injury was suffered, and moral blame attached to attorney's conduct. Morales v. Field, DeGoff, Huppert & MacGowan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 307, 315, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239 ; see also Goodman v. Kennedy (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 335, 342-343, 134 Cal. Rptr. 375, 556 P.2d 737)

Lawyer who is sued by former client for professional negligence is not permitted to cross complain for equitable indemnity against second lawyer who was retained to extricate client from situation created by alleged negligence of first lawyer. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 349, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326

Attorney who procured attachment bond for plaintiff and who represented estate of plaintiff after plaintiff's death has no duty to bonding company to prosecute original action or to advise it of pending probate proceedings. National Auto. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Atkins (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 562, 564, 119 Cal. Rptr. 618

Attorney representing collection agency in action for collection of debt is liable to creditor on debt for negligent failure to prosecute lawsuit diligently, even though creditor was not attorney's client but was only third party for whose benefit client had employed attorney. Donald v. Garry (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 769, 772, 97 Cal. Rptr. 191

Attorney who gives advice solely in capacity as attorney is not liable to third party victims of client's torts when client acts on advice. Daly v. Smith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 592, 604, 33 Cal. Rptr. 920

Potential heirs have no cause of action against attorneys who represented wife in divorce action and negligently permitted dissipation of wife's estate. Haldane v. Freedman (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 475, 478-479, 22 Cal. Rptr. 445

[b] Intended Will and Trust Beneficiaries

Attorney who negligently fails to fulfill client's testamentary intentions is liable in tort for violating duty of care, arising from attorney-client agreement, owed directly to intended beneficiaries. Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 226-227, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161

Attorney who negligently drafts will that fails to provide estate plan that client intended has continuing duty to client's intended beneficiaries to advise client of defective will; such duty continues until attorney's negligence is made irremediable by client's death. Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161

Trust beneficiaries state cause of action against former trustees' attorneys for breach of fiduciary duty when complaint alleges attorneys' active participation in former trustees' breach of trust, including active concealment, misrepresentations to the court, and self-dealing for personal financial gain. Pierce v. Lyman (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1106, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236

Attorney for administrator of estate does not owe duty to legatees of estate when attorney's retention was not for primary purpose of providing benefit to legatees. Goldberg v. Frye (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1258, 1267-1268, 266 Cal. Rptr. 483

Attorney for trustee assumes relationship to beneficiary of trust akin to that between trustee and beneficiary, so that attorney of trustee owes duty to beneficiaries to disclose dual representation of trustee and of company to which trustee sought to execute loan guarantee. Morales v. Field, DeGoff, Huppert & MacGowan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 307, 316, 160 Cal. Rptr. 239

[c] Interested Parties Adverse to Client

Attorney retained by client to obtain divorce from first spouse owes no duty of care to client's second spouse when attorney never agreed to perform legal services intended directly to benefit second spouse. Burger v. Pond (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 597, 602-607, 273 Cal. Rptr. 709

Attorney who has been forced to defend lawsuit precipitated by negligence of adverse party's attorney is not entitled to recover from negligent attorney attorney's fees and costs incurred in defending lawsuit in absence of showing that negligent attorney owed attorney duty of care; duty of care is generally not owed between adverse parties in litigation or between parties dealing in arms'-length transaction. Sooy v. Peter (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1305, 1309-1314, 270 Cal. Rptr. 151

Attorney has duty to deal honestly and fairly with adverse parties and counsel. Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1525, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478

Attorney's acceptance of document from adverse party as implicit agreement to act with due care; attorney's failure to prevent client's unauthorized seizure and recordation of document held in escrow is breach of duty when document was entrusted to attorney by counsel for adverse party. Wasmann v. Seidenberg (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 752, 756-757, 248 Cal. Rptr. 744 (court noted that allegations of complaint did not support cause of action for legal malpractice, but did support cause of action for negligence)

Attorney has no duty to protect interests of adverse party or of party with whom client deals at arms' length. Schick v. Lerner (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1321, 1330, 238 Cal. Rptr. 902

Attorney representing client in transaction with unrepresented party owes no duty of care to unrepresented party, at least if attorney does not undertake to render legal advice to that party. Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 954, 959-962, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532

Attorney representing seller of real property is not required to disclose known defects to buyer. Heliotis v. Schuman (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 646, 650-651, 226 Cal. Rptr. 509

[5] Emotional Distress

Nonclient is entitled to state cause of action against attorney for intentional infliction of emotional distress if elements of cause of action are alleged. Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895-896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321 ; but see Lerette v. Dean Witter Org., Inc. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 573, 579, 131 Cal. Rptr. 592 (privilege afforded attorney by former Civ. Code § 47(2) (now Civ. Code § 47(b)) bars action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on privileged statement)

Elements of prima facie case for tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress are (1) outrageous conduct by defendant; (2) defendant's intention of causing or reckless disregard of probability of causing emotional distress; (3) plaintiff's suffering severe or extreme emotional distress; and (4) actual and proximate causation of emotional distress by defendant's outrageous conduct. Kinnamon v. Staitman & Snyder (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 893, 895-896, 136 Cal. Rptr. 321

[6] Malicious Prosecution

In malicious prosecution suit, when evaluating whether probable cause existed for underlying legal action, court is required to take into account evolutionary potential of legal principles. Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 886, 254 Cal. Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498

Elements of cause of action for malicious prosecution are that prior action (1) was commenced by or at direction of defendant and was pursued to legal termination in plaintiff's favor; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was initiated with malice. Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 50, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 ; Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 166, 183-184, 156 Cal. Rptr. 745

Finding of lack of probable cause such that malicious prosecution may be found is question of law. Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 626, 636-637, 224 Cal. Rptr. 865

[7] Misrepresentation and Fraud

Attorney is liable to nonclient third party for negligent misrepresentation. Home Budget Loans, Inc. v. Jacoby & Meyers Law Offices (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1284-1285, 255 Cal. Rptr. 483 (liability to client's mortgage broker); Courtney v. Waring (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1443-1444, 237 Cal. Rptr. 233 (liability to client's franchisees); Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 210, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887 (liability to other attorney for misrepresentations made on behalf of client in connection with business transaction)

Elements of action against attorney for fraud and misrepresentation are (1) misrepresentation, (2) knowledge of falsity, (3) intent to defraud, (4) justifiable reliance, and (5) resulting damages, each pleaded with sufficient factual specificity to allow defendant to understand charges. Roberts v. Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown & Baerwitz (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 104, 109, 128 Cal. Rptr. 901

[8] Particular Errors and Omissions--Wills

Intended beneficiaries of will who lose testamentary rights because of negligent failure of attorney who drew up will to properly carry out testator's intent have cause of action to recover on tort theory for breach of duty owed directly by attorney to intended beneficiaries. Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 228, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161

Contract between client and attorney for drafting of client's will is in part a contract for benefit of third parties, namely persons designated as beneficiaries in will. Lucas v. Hamm (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 583, 591, 15 Cal. Rptr. 821, 364 P.2d 685

When will-drafting attorney fails to fulfill obligations under contract with testator, intended beneficiaries of will, who lose their testamentary rights, are entitled to recover damages as third-party beneficiaries of contract and also on tort liability for breach of duty owed directly to beneficiaries. Garcia v. Borelli (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 24, 32, 180 Cal. Rptr. 768

Complaint attempting to allege negligence of attorney consisting of drafting valid will without instructions from testator and in ignorance of his wishes but failing to allege that will did not contain what testator intended at time he approved and executed it does not state cause of action based on negligence. Hiemstra v. Huston (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1046-1048, 91 Cal. Rptr. 269

§ 76.343 Decisions

[1] Litigation Privilege Under Civ. Code § 47(b)

Attorney threatening plaintiff with nonexistent arrest warrant in attempt to deceive plaintiff and gain advantage over her, in apparent violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 6128 (deceit of party is misdemeanor) as not privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b). Carney v. Rotkin, Schmerin & McIntyre (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1513, 1522-1523, 254 Cal. Rptr. 478

Otherwise privileged communication as not needing to have been made in "interest of justice" to qualify for protection under Civ. Code § 47(b). Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 218-219, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P. 2d 365

Oral and written statements by defendant attorneys, made in underlying litigation in which attorneys represented insurance company, that insurance company was "financially as sound as a dollar," although false when made, as privileged pursuant to judicial proceedings privilege. Portman v. George McDonald Law Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 988, 991, 160 Cal. Rptr. 505

Threat of suit for securities law violations in letter sent before filing of action as privileged under former Civ. Code § 47(2) (now Civ. Code § 47(b)). Lerette v. Dean Witter Org., Inc. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 573, 576-579, 131 Cal. Rptr. 592

Attorney's alleged negligent misrepresentation as absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b) if (1) made in connection with legal proceeding, (2) had some connection or logical relation to action, (3) made to achieve objects of litigation, and (4) involved litigants or other participants authorized by law. Bradley v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 818, 825, 106 Cal. Rptr. 718 ; see Tiedemann v. Superior Court (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 918, 924, 148 Cal. Rptr. 242 ; Friedman v. Knecht (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 455, 460, 56 Cal. Rptr. 540

[2] Statute of Limitations

[a] Abuse of Process Action

Limitations period in abuse of process action as accruing while proceedings at issue are in progress, since claim for abuse of process can be raised before termination of proceedings complained of, and even within proceedings in which wrongful process issued. White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 (claim for abuse of process based on excessive attachment properly raised as cross-complaint in action to recover money owed)

Cause of action for abuse of process as accruing, for statute of limitations purposes, when defendant's wrongful conduct actually injures plaintiff. Kappel v. Bartlett (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1457, 1467-1469, 246 Cal. Rptr. 815

One-year period of limitations in former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 (two-year period beginning in 2003)) as applying to action for abuse of process. Thornton v. Rhoden (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 80, 95, 53 Cal. Rptr. 706 ; see also McFaddin v. H.S. Crocker Co. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 585, 590-591, 33 Cal. Rptr. 389 (period applies even when plaintiff claims only property damage)

[b] Fraud Action

Despite statutory provision that action for fraud does not accrue until aggrieved party has "discovered the facts constituting the fraud" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)], plaintiff as required to use reasonable diligence to discover true facts if he or she has reason to suspect fraud. Sun'N Sand, Inc. v. United Cal. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 701-702, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 ; Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 437, 159 P.2d 958

If plaintiff has no reason to suspect fraud, right of action as not accruing until actual discovery of facts constituting fraud. Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 439, 159 P.2d 958 ; see also Snow v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 120, 131-135, 211 Cal. Rptr. 271

Statutory limitations period for fraud actions as applying to action to vacate judgment obtained through fraud. Zastrow v. Zastrow (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 710, 714, 132 Cal. Rptr. 536

Statutory limitations period for fraud actions as applying to action for reformation of contract on ground of fraud. Goodfellow v. Barritt (1933) 130 Cal. App. 548, 556-557, 20 P.2d 740

[c] Malicious Prosecution Action

Period of limitation for filing action for malicious prosecution as being one year pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 (two-year period beginning in 2003)]. Rutherford v. Johnson (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 316, 319, 58 Cal. Rptr. 546

Limitation period for malicious prosecution action as beginning to run on date that proceedings in prior action are dismissed or terminated. Babb v. Superior Court (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 841, 846, 92 Cal. Rptr. 179, 479 P.2d 379

If after entry of judgment in trial court, appeal is filed from underlying action that is alleged to be maliciously prosecuted, period of limitation as running from time of entry of judgment in trial court until notice of appeal is filed. Gibbs v. Haight, Dickson, Brown & Bonesteel (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 716, 722, 228 Cal. Rptr. 398 (once notice of appeal is filed, appeals process as tolling period of limitation until appeal process is exhausted)

If action underlying malicious prosecution action involves appeal in federal appeals court, statute of limitations for malicious prosecution action as tolled until court of appeals issues mandate pursuant to Fed. Rules App. Proc., Rule 41(a). Korody-Colyer Corp. v. General Motors Corp. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1152-1153, 256 Cal. Rptr. 658

[d] Malpractice Action

Limitations period for malpractice action by intended will beneficiary as starting from date of testator's death, when negligent failure to perfect requested testamentary scheme becomes irremediable and impact of injury occurs. Heyer v. Flaig (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 223, 230-231, 74 Cal. Rptr. 225, 449 P.2d 161 (decided before enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, which now governs attorney malpractice actions)

[3] Unclean Hands

In malicious prosecution action, plaintiff insurance agent's failure to disclose critical evidence in original indemnity action, which evidence might have changed outcome of indemnity action, as supporting equitable defense of unclean hands raised by defendant insurer. Pond v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 280, 289-290, 198 Cal. Rptr. 517

§ 76.360 Allegations of Agency Relationship Between Defendant Law Firm and Associated Counsel, Employee, or Other Agent

[1] FORM Allegations of Agency Relationship Between Defendant Law Firm and Associated Counsel, Employee, or Other Agent

[In a complaint for malpractice, if a partnership or law corporation is sued as a defendant, allege capacity and principal place of business (or other venue), such as the alternatives that follow.]

[EITHER]

Defendants _____ [names] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, partners engaged in the practice of law under the common name of _____ [name of partnership] (hereinafter called "Firm"), having their principal place of business at _____ [address], California, and are sued herein individually and by such common name.

[OR]

Defendant _____ [name] (hereinafter called "Firm") is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a professional corporation organized and existing under the laws of California, duly registered with the State Bar of California as a law corporation, with its principal place of business at _____ [address], California.

[If both a law firm and an individual attorney are sued, allege agency or employee status of individual defendant as follows.]

At all times herein mentioned defendant _____ (name of negligent attorney) was the agent and employee of defendant Firm and in doing the things herein alleged was acting within the scope of such agency.

[2] Use of Form

These allegations are for use in a complaint for malpractice to allege partnership or corporate status of a defendant law firm, and agency or employee status for individual members of the firm being sued. See*§ 76.381* for a general form of complaint for malpractice based on negligence.

[3] Allegations

If the negligent attorney's partners or law corporation is sued on the principle of respondeat superior, allegations should be made of such partnership or corporate capacity, along with the agency status of individual attorneys being sued [see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 (liability of partners); Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 537, 549, 134 P.2d 217 (liability of attorney for acts or omissions of negligent attorney employees)]. For a comprehensive discussion of these principles and related forms, see Ch. 160, Corporations: Capacity , Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties .which includes discussion of limited liability partnerships), and Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

PRACTICE TIP:

Naming Partners as Defendants. It is not essential that partners be named as defendants, however, because the partners or the firm's professional liability insurer will ultimately be required to satisfy any settlement or judgment in the legal malpractice action. Tactical considerations unique to each case should be carefully analyzed in deciding which, if any, of the defendants law firm's current or former partners should be sued. It is not unusual for a more effective and aggressive defense to be mounted in a legal malpractice case when partners are named individually and are thus more acutely interested in a favorable outcome of the case. Settlement prospects can also be affected by the inclusion of partners as defendants.

[4] Venue

For the purpose of establishing venue, the paragraphs allege the principal place of business of the partnership [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2, 395.5] or law corporation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]. The venue statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-404.8] do not expressly provide for venue in legal malpractice cases. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2 and 395.5 appear applicable when a partnership or corporate defendant is sued [see generally Ch. 571, Venue .

[7] State Statutes

Partner is agent of partnership. Corp. Code § 16301(1)

Joint and several liability of partners and partnership. Corp. Code §§ 16305, 16306

[8] Decisions

[a] Employees

Attorney is liable for wrongful conduct of attorneys, law clerks, paralegals, secretaries, detectives or other employees and agents acting in course and scope of employment. see Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 663, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269

[b] Partners and Associates

Attorney's liability for acts of law partners is governed by Uniform Partnership Act [Corp. Code §§ 15001-15046]. Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418

Former law partner was jointly and severally liable with second attorney who subsequently diverted plaintiff's trust funds for his own use; former law partner, in his capacity of cotrustee, was liable with plaintiff's attorney who misappropriated plaintiff's money deposited in firm's trust account when plaintiff had not been consulted about the transfer. Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 556-561, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418

Attorney who employs other attorneys is liable for their wrongful acts in same manner as principal is liable for agent's acts. Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 537, 549, 134 P.2d 217

Finding of ostensible partnership is sufficient to impose vicarious liability for acts of attorneys with whom attorney is sharing office space or is otherwise associated in relationship that is not partnership. Redman v. Walters (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 448, 455, 152 Cal. Rptr. 42

Attorney is liable for partner's malicious prosecution when partnership was created after action alleged to have been malicious was filed, if some action was taken by partner after formation of partnership. Lujan v. Gordon (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 260, 262-264, 138 Cal. Rptr. 654

Attorney who substituted for original attorney is equally liable with original attorney for professional negligence in handling case when client consented to substitution, attorneys were to divide fee, if and when it was collected, and attorneys were each responsible to the client. Floro v. Lawton (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 657, 671, 10 Cal. Rptr. 98

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Allege residence of negligent attorney as follows, if venue is to be based thereon.] Defendant _____ [name] resides in _____ County, California.

[2. Capacity of defendant law firm. See§ 76.360 .]

3. At all times herein mentioned defendant _____ [name of negligent attorney] was licensed to engage in the practice of law in the State of California and was practicing law at _____ [address], California.

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into _____ [a written or an oral] agreement providing that defendant would act as plaintiff's associated attorney for the purpose of representing _____ [name of former client] in _____ [specify nature of legal services, e.g., prosecuting a claim against _____ (describe party) for personal injuries], and in commencing and prosecuting an action based on this claim. [A true and correct copy of the agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof by reference.]

5. On or about _____ [date], a judgment was entered in the action entitled _____ vs. _____, Case No. _____ in the _____ Court against plaintiff requiring him/her to pay the sum of $_____ to _____ [name of former client], plaintiff in the underlying action. This judgment was based _____ [entirely or partially] on defendant's wrongful act in _____ [describe wrongful act of defendant that led to prior judgment against plaintiff, e.g., negligently failing to file the above-described complaint on behalf of _____ (name of former client) within the applicable statute of limitation)].

6. By reason of the foregoing, plaintiff is entitled to indemnity from defendant for _____ [all or part] of the aforesaid judgment, but defendant has not paid any part of this sum to plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant(s) [and each of them] as follows:

1. Indemnity from defendant in the sum of $_____;

2. Costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [firm name, if any]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in an action by an attorney seeking full or partial indemnification from an associated attorney whose wrongful act led or contributed to a malpractice judgment against the plaintiff attorney in favor of a former client. The form may also be adapted for use as a cross-complaint against the associated attorney in the original action against the attorney by the client, or as a complaint for declaratory relief for indemnity.

[3] Attorney's Fees

Under certain conditions, the successful plaintiff or cross-plaintiff in an action for implied indemnity may be awarded attorney's fees for defense or prosecution of the third-party action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6].

[4] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446] and precludes a general denial in superior court and in some limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[7] Decisions

Public policy considerations as precluding cross complaint for indemnity by attorney against subsequent attorney bringing legal malpractice action on behalf of client, even though subsequent attorney's alleged negligence occurred concurrently with defendant's in course of representation of client and not with regard to malpractice action. Lewis v. Purvin (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1208, 1214-1217, 256 Cal. Rptr. 827

Prohibition on cross complaints by defendant predecessor attorneys for equitable indemnity against successor attorneys as not inconsistent with or violative of right to contribution provided in Civ. Code § 1432. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 936, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

Court's refusal to allow attorney sued for attorney malpractice to cross complain against successor attorney for equitable indemnity as not denying attorney equal protection or due process. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 935, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

Attorney sued for malpractice by former client as barred from cross complaining for indemnity against successor attorney hired to assist client in limiting injury caused by original attorney; original attorney as having option, in lieu of seeking indemnity, of asserting successor attorney's negligence as affirmative defense. Holland v. Thacher (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 924, 929-935, 245 Cal. Rptr. 247

If two attorneys, not in privity, successively represented same client in prior action, first attorney sued for malpractice as prohibited by public policy from maintaining claim for equitable, or partial equitable, indemnity against second attorney on alleged ground that client's damages were actually caused or exacerbated by second attorney. Goldfisher v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 21-23, 183 Cal. Rptr. 609

Attorney sued by former client for malpractice as permitted to cross complain for partial indemnity against client's second attorney whose negligence as a matter of law contributed to client's loss. Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 755-767, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197

Lawyer sued by former client for professional negligence as not permitted to cross complain for partial equitable indemnity against client's second lawyer who was retained to extricate client from situation created by alleged negligence of first lawyer; rule as applying whether or not person seeking indemnification was a lawyer. Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 349, 352, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[Verification, if desired. See§ 76.380.]

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action against an attorney for malpractice.

[3] Allegations

A complaint for legal malpractice alleges the following:

- Duty to plaintiff (Paragraphs 5, 6)

- Breach of duty, alleged either generally or with reference to specific acts or omissions (as discussed in the NOTE, below) (Paragraph 7)

- Proximate cause (Paragraphs 8, 9); and

- Loss suffered by plaintiff (Paragraph 9) [see Budd v. Nixen (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 195, 200, 98 Cal. Rptr. 849, 491 P.2d 433] .

Negligence may be charged in general terms; that is, what was done being stated, it is sufficient to say that it was negligently done, without stating the particular omission that rendered the act negligent [Modica v. Crist (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 144, 146, 276 P.2d 614] .

NOTE:

General vs. Specific Allegation. The plaintiff bringing a legal malpractice action should weigh the tactical advantages of using a general allegation of malpractice with the potential risks involved with specifically alleging the particular omission(s) that rendered the defendant attorney's actions negligent. A general allegation of negligence will almost invariably withstand attack on demurrer as well as avoid the risk that a judge might limit the plaintiff's proof at trial to specific charging allegations in the complaint, despite a wealth of evidence and new contentions that surfaced after the complaint was filed. A general allegation is also usually less susceptible to a summary judgment/adjudication motion because the defendant will be unable to argue that the plaintiff has "narrowed" the issues by virtue of specific charging allegations in the complaint.

If the negligent attorney's partners or law corporation are sued on the principle of respondeat superior, allegations of such partnership or corporate capacity, together with an agency allegation, may be found in§ 76.360 [see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 557, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 (liability of partners); Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 537, 549, 134 P.2d 217 (liability of attorney for acts or omissions of negligent attorney employees)]. For purposes of establishing venue, the complaint alleges the residence of the negligent attorney (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. To allege the principal place of business of a partnership [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2, 395.5] or law corporation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5], see § 76.360. It should be noted that the venue statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-404.8] do not expressly provide for venue in legal malpractice cases. Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) appears applicable when an individual attorney is sued, and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2 and 395.5 appear applicable when a partnership or corporate defendant is sued [see generally Ch. 571, Venue .

A fictitious name allegation (Paragraph 3) is included for use when defendants are sued whose names are unknown at the time the complaint is filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

NOTE:

Malpractice Against Criminal Defense Attorney. When the malpractice plaintiff was a criminal defendant in the underlying action, the Supreme Court has held that the plaintiff must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, his or her actual innocence of the criminal charges in order to recover in a civil malpractice action against his or her defense attorney [Wiley v. County of San Diego (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 532, 545, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 966 P.2d 983] . Paragraph 8 contains an optional provision for use to allege actual innocence.

The Supreme Court has held that an individual convicted of a criminal offense must obtain reversal of the conviction, or other exoneration by postconviction relief, to establish actual innocence [Coscia v. McKenna & Cuneo (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1194, 1201, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 25 P.3d 670] . In cases in which innocence of the underlying criminal charges has already been established, those facts should also be included.

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

In any limited civil case that is subject to Civ. Code §§ 1812.10 and 2984.4, plaintiff must state facts in the complaint, verified by his or her oath or the oath of his or her attorney, or in an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury executed in California [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) of the plaintiff or of his or her attorney filed with the complaint, showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court for the trial of such action or proceeding, and showing that the action is or is not subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1812.10 (Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act) and Civ. Code § 2984.4 (Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales Finance Act). When the affidavit (declaration) is filed with the complaint, a copy must be served with the summons. If such complaint or affidavit (declaration) is not so filed, unless the court on such terms as may be just permits the affidavit (declaration) to be filed after the complaint is filed, the action must be dismissed without prejudice [Code Civ. Proc. § 396a; see also Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; see generally Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , and Ch. 500, Sales and Secured Transactions .

Jurisdiction of the subject matter of a legal malpractice action is based on the amount in controversy set forth in the complaint [see Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10 (residual jurisdiction of superior court); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1) (jurisdictional limit of $25,000 on limited civil cases)].

[5] Verification

Verification of this complaint is not required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446] and precludes a general denial in superior court and in some limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[6] Copies

The following copies of this complaint should be prepared:

- Original to be filed with the court;
- One copy together with a copy of the summons to be served on each defendant;
- One copy for the office file;
- Other copies as desired.

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Residence of negligent attorney. See§ 76.380, Paragraph 1.]

[2. Capacity and principal place of business of law firm. See§ 76.360 .]

[3. Fictitious name allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.381, Paragraph 3.]

[4. Agency allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.360 .]

[5. Professional status of defendant. See§ 76.380, Paragraph 3.]

6. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [address], California, plaintiff retained and employed defendant _____ [name of attorney] [and defendant Firm] to defend plaintiff in action filed in the _____ [court, e.g., Superior Court of California, County of _____], entitled _____ [name] vs. _____ [name] and identified as No. _____, wherein plaintiff was named, and served on _____ [date], as a defendant therein. At such time and place defendant(s) accepted such employment and agreed to represent plaintiff in defending such action.

7. Plaintiff had a meritorious and sufficient defense to such complaint and informed defendant _____ [name of attorney] of the facts comprising such defense within sufficient time for him/her to assert and maintain such defense by filing an appropriate answer or other responsive pleading.

8. Defendant(s) [and each of them] failed to exercise reasonable care and skill in representing plaintiff and in defending such action, and failed and neglected to file an answer or any responsive pleading within the time required by law and negligently permitted a default judgment to be entered against plaintiff.

9. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that if defendant(s) had exercised due care and skill in representing plaintiff, judgment would have been rendered in plaintiff's favor in such action.

10. As a proximate result of such negligence, a default judgment was entered against plaintiff on _____ [date] in the sum of $_____ as prayed for in such action.

11. _____ [Allege other special damages, if any, e.g., On learning of the default judgment taken against plaintiff in such action, plaintiff immediately retained the services of another attorney to obtain relief from default. [2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in a malpractice action based on an attorney's neglect in filing a responsive pleading and in permitting a default judgment to be entered against his or her client.

NOTE:

General vs. Specific Allegation. The plaintiff bringing a legal malpractice action should weigh the tactical advantages of using a general allegation of malpractice [see § 76.381] with the potential risks involved with specifically alleging the particular omission(s) that rendered the defendant attorney's actions negligent. A general allegation of negligence will almost invariably withstand attack on demurrer as well as avoid the risk that a judge might limit the plaintiff's proof at trial to specific charging allegations in the complaint, despite a wealth of evidence and new contentions that surfaced after the complaint was filed. A general allegation is also usually less susceptible to a summary judgment/adjudication motion because the defendant will be unable to argue that the plaintiff has "narrowed" the issues by virtue of specific charging allegations in the complaint.

[3] Decisions

In malpractice action based on attorney's failure to file timely responsive pleading, plaintiff as required to show that he or she would have had valid affirmative defense in underlying action. United Cmty. Church v. Garcin (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 327, 334, 282 Cal. Rptr. 368

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action against an attorney for malpractice based on his or her failure to file an action within the period of the applicable statute of limitations, causing the action to become barred.

NOTE:

General vs. Specific Allegation. The plaintiff bringing a legal malpractice action should weigh the tactical advantages of using a general allegation of malpractice [see also § 76.381] with the potential risks involved with specifically alleging the particular omission(s) that rendered the defendant attorney's actions negligent. A general allegation of negligence will almost invariably withstand attack on demurrer as well as avoid the risk that a judge might limit the plaintiff's proof at trial to specific charging allegations in the complaint, despite a wealth of evidence and new contentions that surfaced after the complaint was filed. A general allegation is also usually less susceptible to a summary judgment/adjudication motion because the defendant will be unable to argue that the plaintiff has "narrowed" the issues by virtue of specific charging allegations in the complaint.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in a malpractice action against an attorney for his or her failure to bring an action to trial within the period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360 and for permitting the action to be dismissed thereunder.

NOTE:

General vs. Specific Allegation. The plaintiff bringing a legal malpractice action should weigh the tactical advantages of using a general allegation of malpractice [see § 76.381] with the potential risks involved with specifically alleging the particular omission(s) that rendered the defendant attorney's actions negligent. A general allegation of negligence will almost invariably withstand attack on demurrer as well as avoid the risk that a judge might limit the plaintiff's proof at trial to specific charging allegations in the complaint, despite a wealth of evidence and new contentions that surfaced after the complaint was filed. A general allegation is also usually less susceptible to a summary judgment/adjudication motion because the defendant will be unable to argue that the plaintiff has "narrowed" the issues by virtue of specific charging allegations in the complaint.

[3] Decisions

Permitting action to be dismissed for lack of prosecution under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360] after statute of limitations has barred new action on claim as negligent malpractice. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 785-791, 171 P. 961

Measure of damages in action for malpractice based on failure to prosecute action and permitting it to be dismissed as amount that could have been recovered, less actual value, if any, of barred claim to client. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 791, 171 P. 961

Failure to appeal dismissal of action and failure to institute new action on barred claim after dismissal as not constituting valid defenses to negligent malpractice action based on attorney's failure to prosecute action. Lally v. Kuster (1918) 177 Cal. 783, 790-791, 171 P. 961

Complaint based on negligent failure to prosecute client's lawsuit as required to allege facts showing client has fulfilled all conditions precedent to right to commence such lawsuit. Bayly v. Lee (1916) 174 Cal. 137, 139, 162 P. 96

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action against an attorney for malpractice based on his or her negligent advice to a client.

[3] Allegations

A complaint for legal malpractice based on negligent advice should allege (1) existence of the attorney/client relationship (Paragraph 6); (2) negligent advice given in the course of such relationship (Paragraph 7); (3) reliance on such advice by the client (Paragraph 8); and (4) loss and damage suffered by the client as a proximate result thereof (Paragraph 9) [Modica v. Crist (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 144, 145-146, 276 P.2d 614 ; cf. Ishmael v. Millington (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 520, 529, 50 Cal. Rptr. 592 (client's reliance as not a fixed condition of recovery in legal malpractice cases)].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action against an attorney for negligence in prosecuting a claim for workers' compensation.

NOTE:

General vs. Specific Allegation. The plaintiff bringing a legal malpractice action should weigh the tactical advantages of using a general allegation of malpractice with the potential risks involved with specifically alleging the particular omission(s) that rendered the defendant attorney's actions negligent. A general allegation of the defendant's negligence in the handling of a workers' compensation matter (identified by its Workers' Compensation Appeal Board case number) will almost invariably withstand attack on demurrer as well as avoid the risk that a judge might limit the plaintiff's proof at trial to specific charging allegations in the complaint, despite a wealth of evidence and new contentions that surfaced after the complaint was filed. A general allegation is also usually less susceptible to a summary judgment/adjudication motion because the defendant will be unable to argue that the plaintiff has "narrowed" the issues by virtue of specific charging allegations in the complaint.

6. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [address], California, plaintiff retained and employed defendant _____ [name of attorney] [and defendant Firm] to represent plaintiff in a transaction wherein plaintiff loaned money in the sum of $_____ to a certain person, hereinafter called "the Debtor," repayment of which was to be secured by certain personal property owned by the Debtor. Defendant(s) [and each of them] accepted such employment and agreed to represent plaintiff in such transaction.

7. In the course of representing plaintiff, defendant _____ [name of attorney] prepared the necessary papers for the loan transaction, including _____ [specify, e.g., a promissory note, security agreement, and financing statement]. Such papers were signed and executed by plaintiff and the Debtor and the loan funds in the sum of $_____ were delivered by plaintiff to the Debtor on _____ [date]. Defendant _____ [name of attorney] assured plaintiff at that time that he/she would take all necessary steps to perfect and complete plaintiff's security interest in the items of personal property specified in the security agreement and in the financing statement and that he/she would immediately cause the financing statement to be filed with the Secretary of State of California.

8. At all times herein mentioned, the personal property of the Debtor securing payment of plaintiff's loan to the Debtor was of a value exceeding $_____.

9. Defendant _____ [name of attorney] failed to exercise reasonable care, skill, and diligence in causing plaintiff's security interest in the personal property to become perfected and complete and negligently failed to cause the financing statement to be filed with the Secretary of State of California prior to _____ [date].

10. On or about _____ [date], the Debtor defaulted on the loan with a balance then due and unpaid in the sum of $_____.

11. On or about _____ [date], the Debtor was adjudged a bankrupt and plaintiff for the first time learned that plaintiff's security interest in the personal property of the Debtor was not perfected or valid as to the Debtor's other creditors. The Debtor was discharged of all financial obligations remaining unpaid after the bankruptcy proceedings including the balance alleged herein owed by the Debtor to plaintiff.

12. Had defendant _____ [name of attorney] exercised due care, skill, and diligence in causing plaintiff's security interest to be perfected and the financing statement to be duly filed, plaintiff would have recovered the full amount of the balance of the funds loaned to the Debtor in the sum of $_____ from the security.

13. As a proximate result of the negligence herein alleged, plaintiff was deprived of and lost his security interest, was not treated as a secured creditor of the Debtor in the bankruptcy proceedings, and only recovered the sum of $_____ from such bankruptcy proceedings, all to plaintiff's damage.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in an action against an attorney brought by a former client alleging that the attorney breached the fiduciary duties that an attorney owes to former clients even after the representation has been terminated.

This form alleges that the attorney breached a fiduciary duty by using confidential information acquired during a former attorney-client relationship with the plaintiff, to the detriment of the plaintiff [see, e.g., David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 891, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339] . The fiduciary duties owed by an attorney to a client extend beyond the period of the actual attorney-client relationship. An attorney is not allowed to take any actions that would injure a former client in matters that are within the scope of the former representation, nor may the attorney use any information gained during the relationship against the former client [Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 ; see People v. Thoi (1989) 213 Cal. App.3d 689, 699, 261 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress brought against an attorney by a former client for actions that occurred during the attorney's representation of the plaintiff.

PRACTICE TIP:

Emotional Distress Claim Considerations. Intentional infliction of emotional distress claims against lawyers are rarely legitimate. However, such claims are often thoughtlessly asserted with the apparent hope that they will enhance the plaintiff's leverage in settlement negotiations. In fact, they are often taken lightly by defendants and their insurers and frequently serve only to complicate settlement negotiations because these claims are not covered by malpractice insurance and can expose the plaintiff and plaintiff's counsel to a subsequent malicious prosecution action even when the plaintiff has an otherwise meritorious legal malpractice claim. Thus, it is better practice for the plaintiff not to pursue such a claim except in the unusual situation when the defendant attorney's conduct truly warrants it.

[3] Allegations

A complaint for intentional infliction of emotional distress must allege the following:

- Outrageous conduct by the defendant

- An intention on the part of the defendant to cause, or a reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress

- Severe emotional suffering on the part of the plaintiff, and

- An actual and proximate causal connection between the outrageous conduct and the emotional suffering [McDaniel v. Gile (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 363, 372-374, 281 Cal. Rptr. 242 (sexual harassment of client and withholding of legal services when sexual advances rebuffed as outrageous conduct supporting claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress); see also Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 946-947, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 (examples of outrageous behavior sufficient to support claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress)].

Damage to plaintiff that is solely economic as insufficient to support claim for emotional distress damages. see Smith v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 (mere negligence does not support recovery for mental suffering when defendant's tortious conduct results in only economic injury)

§ 76.430 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:
[EITHER]

The [_____ (specify number of cause of cause of action, e.g., first)] cause of action alleged in the complaint herein is barred by the provisions of Section 340.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure in that the complaint herein was filed more than _____ [four years after the alleged date of or one year after plaintiff _____ (discovered or, through the use of reasonable diligence, should have discovered) the facts constituting] the alleged wrongful _____ [act or omission], and no facts are alleged to show that the period should be tolled as provided in Section 340.6(a)(1)-(4) of the Code of Civil Procedure.
[OR, FOR ACTIONS AGAINST CRIMINAL DEFENSE ATTORNEYS]

The [_____ (specify number of cause of action, e.g., first)] cause of action alleged in the complaint herein is barred by the provisions of Section 340.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure in that the complaint herein was filed more than two years after the plaintiff achieved postconviction exoneration in the form of a final judicial disposition of the criminal case upon which the cause of action is based, and no facts are alleged to show that the period should be tolled as provided in Section 340.6(a)(1)-(4) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint for legal malpractice when the cause of action is barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, governing the periods of limitation for actions brought against attorneys for wrongful acts or omissions. For a discussion of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, see the discussion in the § 76.170[1].

Tolling of limitation period. Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1)-(4)

Period of limitation as running from date of occurrence of future act of event when action based on written instrument, effective date of which depends on such act of event. Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(b)

[6] Decisions

[a] Statute of Limitations--In General

Statute of limitations for legal malpractice as one year after plaintiff discovers or should have discovered facts constituting malpractice or four years from actual date of wrongful act, whichever occurs first. Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)

[b] Statute of Limitations--Discovery of Wrongful Act

[i] Actual Injury

Test for actual injury under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 is whether plaintiff has sustained any damages compensable in legal action, other than one for actual fraud, against attorney for wrongful act or omission arising in performance of professional services, and inquiry is predominantly factual in nature. Jordache Enters., Inc. v. Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 739, 751, 763, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749, 958 P.2d 1062 (overruling "bright-line" rulemaking approach of ITT Small Bus. Fin. Corp. v. Niles (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 245, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 885 P.2d 965)

Actual injury sufficient to trigger limitations period in malpractice action as occurring on entry of adverse judgment or final order of dismissal in underlying action in which malpractice occurred. Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691 (appellate finality not required)

When attorney malpractice consists of not filing underlying action within applicable statute of limitations, actual injury as occurring when client's cause of action is proscribed. Finlayson v. Sanbrook (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1444, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 406

In case alleging attorney's negligence in failing to properly advise physician regarding medical malpractice insurance, "actual harm" to plaintiff physician as occurring when plaintiff incurred attorney's fees in defending underlying medical malpractice action, not when action was settled. Sirott v. Latts (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 923, 928-930, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 206

In malpractice action based on attorney's failure in dissolution action to discover and obtain evidence of client's spouse's excess assets, actual injury as occurring on entry of judgment of dissolution when judgment failed to divide excess assets. Worton v. Worton (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1638, 1651-1652, 286 Cal. Rptr. 410

In malpractice action based on attorney's alleged failure to introduce evidence that would have resulted in more favorable outcome in client's marital dissolution proceeding, actual harm, if any, as taking place no later than time of judgment of dissolution. Kabbe v. Miller (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 93, 97, 275 Cal. Rptr. 893

Dismissal of lawsuit due to attorney's negligence as constituting actual injury triggering limitations period. Troche v. Daley (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 403, 410, 266 Cal. Rptr. 34

Commencement of one-year limitation period concerning former attorney's misrepresentation of legal effect of stipulation provision as tolled under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(1) until plaintiff suffered actual injury by seeking but failing to obtain court order giving effect to provision according to misrepresentation. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

[ii] Continued Representation

If attorney leaves law firm and takes representation of particular client with him or her, statute of limitations does not continue to toll under continued representation exception on malpractice action client may have against attorney's former law firm or any other attorneys in that firm. Beal Bank, SSB v. Arter & Hadden, LLP (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 503, 505, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52, 167 P.3d 666 (disapproving contrary conclusion of Beane v. Paulsen (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 89, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486)

Determination of whether attorney's representation was continuing is objective one based on evidence of ongoing mutual relationship and whether activities had been taken to further that relationship. Worthington v. Rusconi (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1488, 1498, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169

Attorney-client relationship as terminated for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 when no court or administrative tribunal retains jurisdiction over matter and nothing remains to be done with regard to proceedings in which legal representation was rendered. Panattoni v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 1097, 250 Cal. Rptr. 390

Failure to formally withdraw as counsel "standing alone" as not constituting continued representation for purposes of tolling Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6; however, defendant attorneys as estopped from claiming that their representation of plaintiff did not continue when attorneys undertook to represent very parties they were hired by plaintiff to investigate, attorneys failed to obtain waiver from plaintiff, and attorneys did not formally terminate relationship with plaintiff. Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1475, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Defendant's failure to withdraw formally as attorney of record, standing alone, as not tolling statute of limitations under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2); period of limitation as commencing to run when attorney-client relationship terminates. Shapero v. Fliegel (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 842, 846, 848-849, 236 Cal. Rptr. 696

Because client may not be able to recognize negligence of his or her attorney and because confidential relationship normally exists between attorney and client, client's failure to discover facts constituting fraud or misrepresentation by attorney as often excused until attorney-client relationship has been terminated. Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1166-1167, 217 Cal. Rptr. 89

Tolling of statute of limitations while attorney is employed by client under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2) as applying to both one-year and four-year provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 310, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Employment of attorney by client pursuant to retainer agreement as continuing to toll statute of limitations after cause of action that is subject of malpractice claim became barred by its own statute of limitations. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 309, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Attorney's status as pledgeholder under agreement for sale of business as not constituting continued representation under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 for purposes of tolling statute of limitations for malpractice in setting up sale. Von Rott v. Johnson (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d. 608, 612-613, 196 Cal. Rptr. 55

Unsettled matters tangential to case that are handled by attorney as manifestation of continuing representation under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(2) so as to toll both the one-year and four-year provisions of statute of limitations. Gurkewitz v. Haberman (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 328, 333-336, 187 Cal. Rptr. 14

Statute of limitations for legal malpractice as tolled during time attorney continues to represent plaintiff regarding specific matter in which malpractice occurred. Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (disapproved on other grounds in Laird v. Blacker (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 606, 617, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 550, 828 P.2d 691)

[iii] Discovery of Malpractice

Defendant in attorney malpractice action alleging plaintiff's action is barred under one-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) bears burden of proving when plaintiff discovered, or through use of reasonable diligence should have discovered, facts constituting alleged malpractice. Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 1, 8-9, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273, 989 P.2d 701

Crucial time for determining "date of discovery" as time when plaintiff discovered or should have discovered that his or her lawyers acted negligently. Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1476, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Whether plaintiff reasonably should have discovered wrongful act or omission of attorney so as to trigger commencement of one-year limitation period under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) as depending on whether plaintiff had knowledge sufficient to put reasonable person on inquiry or had opportunity to learn of alleged malpractice from available sources. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 822, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Question of when plaintiff discovered or reasonably should have discovered attorney malpractice and suffered injury, within meaning of one-year limitation provision of Code Civ. Proc. 340.6(a), as generally one of fact. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 824, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Degree of diligence required of plaintiff in ferreting out negligence for purposes of determining belated discovery of cause of action as diminished in case of professional relationship; malpractice plaintiff who sought professional advice regarding existence of cause of action as entitled to rely on advice received. Baright v. Willis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 303, 311, 198 Cal. Rptr. 510

Statute of limitations as tolled by belated discovery of facts but not by belated discovery of legal theories. McGee v.

Weinberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 798, 803, 159 Cal. Rptr. 86

[iv] Legal Disability

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a)(4), allowing tolling of period of limitation for legal disability that restricts ability to commence action, as intended to be interpreted in connection with general tolling provision for prisoners contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 352 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 352.1), which defines legal disability as including time during which plaintiff is imprisoned on criminal charge. Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 166, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428

Statute of limitations for malpractice action against criminal attorney as tolled during time plaintiff was imprisoned on criminal charges; plaintiff as not required to prove that incarceration actually made filing lawsuit against attorney impossible. Bledstein v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 152, 160-166, 208 Cal. Rptr. 428

[v] Scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, rather than "catchall" statute of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 343, as applicable in cause of action against attorney based on attorney's breach of fiduciary duties. Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1366-1369, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; but see David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 893, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 (contra)

Renaming of attorney as defendant in amended complaint, following dismissal of attorney from lawsuit without prejudice, as required to be within period of statute of limitations; amended complaint as not relating back to date of filing of original complaint for purposes of statute. Troche v. Daley (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 403, 412, 266 Cal. Rptr. 34

"Catchall" statute of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 343, rather than Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, as applicable in cause of action against attorney based on attorney's breach of fiduciary duties. David Welch Co. v. Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 884, 893, 250 Cal. Rptr. 339 ; but see Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1366-1369, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 (contra)

Four-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 as not barring attorney malpractice action when complaint was filed less than four years after the statute's effective date (January 1, 1978). Johnson v. Haberman & Kassoy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1474, 247 Cal. Rptr. 614

Four-year outside limit in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 as restricting malpractice actions based on actual injury that occurred prior to January 1, 1978 (effective date of statute); actions based on pre-1978 injury brought after January 1, 1982, as generally barred, unless statutory tolling applicable. Rubinstein v. Barnes (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 276, 279-282, 240 Cal. Rptr. 535

District Court as erring in applying one-year statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, to corporate complaint against attorney charging him with corporate waste, mismanagement, and breach of fiduciary duty; correct statute as being general four-year statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 343. Davis & Cox v. Summa Corp. (9th Cir. 1985) 751 F.2d 1507, 1520-1521

One-year limitation period for attorney malpractice actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6(a) as commencing to run only concerning those wrongful acts or omissions that plaintiff has or reasonably should have discovered, not as to other related but separate wrongful acts or omissions. McCann v. Welden (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 814, 819-822, 200 Cal. Rptr. 703

Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, providing for four-year limitation period with one-year discovery rule as operating prospectively; plaintiff as not barred from action for legal malpractice commenced many years after divorce action that attorney handled, but less than three years from effective date of statute and less than one year from date of discovery of facts constituting attorney's wrongful act or omission. *Krusesky v. § 76.435 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Doctrine of Unclean Hands

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Action Barred by Doctrine of Unclean Hands

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

The plaintiff is not entitled to the relief requested in the complaint in this action because the plaintiff does not come to court with clean hands.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense, alleging that the plaintiff's action is barred because the plaintiff comes to the action with unclean hands, is for use in an answer to a complaint for legal malpractice.

PRACTICE TIP:

General Affirmative Defense. A general "unclean hands" affirmative defense is preferable to one that specifies the facts giving rise to the defense. A specific affirmative defense is unnecessary and may only serve to limit the scope of the defense to the specific charging allegations regardless of more extensive supporting facts that develop later.

[3] Decisions

§ 76.450 Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] by Intended Beneficiary for Attorney's Negligent Preparation of a Testamentary Instrument--Failure to Include Provision for Post-Testamentary Marriage

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] by Intended Beneficiary for Attorney's Negligent Preparation of a Testamentary Instrument--Failure to Include Provision for Post-Testamentary Marriage

[Caption. See§ 76.381.]

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Residence of negligent attorney. See§ 76.380, Paragraph 1.]

[2. Capacity and principal place of business of law firm. See§ 76.360 .]

[3. Fictitious name allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.381, Paragraph 3.]

[4. Agency allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.360 .]

[5. Professional status of defendant. See§ 76.380, Paragraph 3.]

6. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [address], California, _____ [name of testator], hereinafter called "the Decedent," engaged the legal services of defendant _____ [name of attorney] [and defendant Firm] to prepare his/her _____ [will or revocable trust].

7. The decedent instructed defendant _____ [name of attorney] that his/her intention was to leave all of his/her estate to plaintiff.

8. Prior to preparing the Decedent's _____ [will or revocable trust], defendant _____ [name of attorney] knew that the Decedent _____ [either was engaged or intended] to become married. In spite of such knowledge, defendant _____ [name of attorney] negligently and carelessly failed to advise the Decedent of the consequences of a post-testamentary marriage and negligently and carelessly prepared the Decedent's _____ [will or revocable trust] and failed to include therein any provision as to the intended marriage.

9. On _____ [date], at _____ [address], California, the Decedent, at the instruction and advice of defendant _____ [name of attorney], executed his/her _____ [will or revocable trust] providing that all of his/her estate was to go to plaintiff, but failing to provide any mention of or provision for the Decedent's intended spouse. Defendant negligently and carelessly advised the Decedent that his/her testamentary intention of leaving his/her entire estate to plaintiff would be effected by such instrument in the form presented.

10. On or about _____ [date], after executing his/her _____ [will or revocable trust], the Decedent married _____ [name]. In spite of defendant's knowledge of such marriage, and at all times thereafter until _____ [date of death], defendant _____ [name of attorney] negligently and carelessly failed to advise the Decedent that as a result of such marriage his/her testamentary intentions to leave his/her entire estate to plaintiff would not be effective if his/her spouse should survive him/her, by virtue of Section 21610 of the Probate Code.

11. On _____ [date] the Decedent died and his/her aforementioned spouse survived him/her. At the time of such death, the Decedent left an estate valued at $_____.

12. As a proximate result of such negligence, the Decedent's _____ [will or revocable trust] herein described was ineffective in carrying out the Decedent's intention to leave his/her entire estate to plaintiff and plaintiff was only entitled thereunder to receive a portion of the estate valued at $_____, all to plaintiff's damage.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action brought by a beneficiary against an attorney for negligence in failing to account for the effect of Prob. Code §§ 21610-21612 in preparing a testamentary instrument and advising his or her client. Under Prob. Code § 21610, if a testator who dies on or after January 1, 1998, fails to provide in a testamentary instrument for his or her surviving spouse who married the testator after the execution of all decedent's testamentary instruments, the omitted spouse shall receive a share in the estate consisting of the following property in the estate: (1) the one-half of the the community property that belongs to the testator under Prob. Code § 100 (disposition of community property on death); (2) the one-half of the quasi-community property that belongs to the testator under Prob.

Code § 101 (disposition of quasi-community property on death); and (3) a share of the separate property of the testator equal in value to that which the spouse would have received if the testator had died intestate, but in no event is the share to be more than one-half the value of the separate property in the estate [Prob. Code §§ 21610 (application of prior law, former Prob. Code § 6560, if decedent died prior to January 1, 1998)]. However, the spouse does not receive a share of the estate under Prob. Code § 21610 if any of the following facts is established [Prob. Code § 21611]:

- The testator's failure to provide for the spouse in decedent's testamentary instruments was intentional, and that intention appears from the decedent's testamentary instruments;

- The testator provided for the spouse by transfer outside decedent's testamentary instruments, and the intention that the transfer be in lieu of a testamentary provision is shown by statements of the testator or from the amount of the transfer or by other evidence; or

- The spouse made a valid agreement waiving the right to share in the testator's estate.

Prob. Code §§ 21610-21612, enacted in 1997 [Stats. 1997, ch. 724], apply the omitted spouse provisions for wills of former Prob. Code §§ 6560-6562 to all of decedent's testamentary instruments, including revocable trusts [Prob. Code §§ 21610-21612].

6. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [address], California, _____ [name of testator], hereinafter called "the Decedent," engaged the legal services of defendant _____ [name of attorney] [and defendant Firm] to prepare his/her Last Will and Testament.

7. The Decedent informed defendent _____ [name of attorney] that his/her assets exceeded the value of $_____ and that it was his/her intention to transmit a specified portion of his/her estate incident to testamentary transfer to plaintiff.

8. Notwithstanding the Decendent's instructions, defendant _____ [name of attorney] negligently and carelessly prepared the Decedent's Last Will and Testament and included therein the following provisions relative to plaintiff's share: _____ [set forth provisions of will]. At all times herein mentioned such provisions were ineffective to transfer such portion of the Decedent's estate to plaintiff in that _____ [specify defect].

9. On _____ [date] the Decedent executed such Last Will and Testament at _____ [address], California, at which time and place defendant _____ [name of attorney] negligently and carelessly instructed and advised the Decedent in the execution thereof, and negligently and carelessly advised the Decedent that such Last Will and Testament, in the form presented, would effectively fulfill the Decedent's testamentary intentions as to disposition of the specified portion of the Decedent's estate to plaintiff, and negligently and carelessly failed to advise the Decedent that the provisions relative to plaintiff's share were legally ineffective to fulfill such testamentary intentions.

10. The Decedent died on _____ [date], leaving the aforementioned instrument as his/her Last Will and Testament which was admitted to probate on _____ [date] in the Superior Court of California, County of _____, in a proceeding entitled _____ [specify], No. _____.

11. Thereafter plaintiff was advised by _____ [name of attorney] that the provision was invalid and that plaintiff, although designated a beneficiary thereunder, would be deprived of the entire inheritance to which he/she would have been entitled had the said provision been valid, unless plaintiff agreed with _____ [specify class or persons involved in settlement, e.g., the Decedent's heirs or the Decedent's surviving spouse or named devisees] to a compromise settlement whereunder plaintiff would receive a lesser inheritance than that provided by the testator pursuant to the terms and provisions of his/her Last Will and Testament.

12. Thereafter, and as the proximate result of the negligence of defendant _____ [name of attorney] as aforesaid, plaintiff did then enter into a settlement agreement, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof, under the terms of which plaintiff agreed to accept a lesser share of the estate of the Decedent, thereby reducing his/her inheritance. The settlement agreement was thereafter executed by all necessary parties designated therein, offered in evidence in the probate proceedings, and, predicated thereon, the court duly made and entered its decree determining heirship in probate proceedings whereunder plaintiff received an aggregate inheritance of less than the sum which would have been received by plaintiff pursuant to the provision of the testamentary instruments had such provision been drafted in such a manner as to be valid, all to plaintiff's damage.

6. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of attorney] instituted a civil action against plaintiff, as counsel of record for [defendant] _____ [name of plaintiff in former action] in the _____ Court of _____ County, California. The complaint claimed damages for _____ [specify nature of cause of action]. The action was entitled _____ vs. _____, No. _____.

[EITHER, if judgment based on evidence was entered in favor of plaintiff]

7. On _____ [date], a judgment in favor of plaintiff in this action was rendered by _____ [a jury or the trial judge] _____ [specify basis for judgment, e.g., after a trial on the merits or pursuant to a motion for summary judgment]. This judgment was entered by the court on _____ [date][, and became final on _____ (date)].

[OR, if underlying action was dismissed]

7. On _____ [date], the above-mentioned action was dismissed _____[with prejudice or without prejudice] _____ [specify basis for dismissal, e.g., pursuant to defendant's motion for voluntary dismissal or for failure to prosecute the action pursuant to Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure]. The _____ [Notice of Entry of Voluntary Dismissal was filed or Order of Dismissal was entered] on _____ [date].

[CONTINUE]

[EITHER, if lack of probable cause is based on untenability of claim or failure to reasonably research the law]

8. Defendant acted without probable cause in bringing the above-mentioned action against plaintiff because _____ [as a matter of law no reasonable attorney would regard as tenable the prosecution of the claim or he/she unreasonably neglected to research the law in making his/her determination to proceed against plaintiff in that _____ (specify facts known to plaintiff constituting defendant attorney's neglect in researching the law)].

[OR, if lack of probable cause is based on knowledge of falsity of claim or failure to reasonably investigate the facts asserted to support the claim]

8. Defendant acted without probable cause in bringing the above-mentioned action against plaintiff because the claims asserted against plaintiff were false and _____ [defendant knew of their falsity at the time he/she determined to proceed against plaintiff or defendant unreasonably neglected to investigate the facts in making his/her determination to proceed against plaintiff] in that _____ [specify facts known to plaintiff, if any, constituting defendant attorney's knowledge of falsity of claim or failure to reasonably investigate the facts].

[CONTINUE]

9. Defendant acted maliciously in bringing the above-mentioned action against plaintiff because _____ [specify basis for asserting malice, e.g., defendant instituted proceedings against plaintiff knowing that the claims asserted against plaintiff were false and/or the proceedings were begun primarily because of hostility and ill will on the part of the defendant toward the plaintiff and/or the proceedings were initiated solely for the purpose of depriving the plaintiff of the beneficial use of his/her property and/or the proceedings were initiated for the purpose of forcing plaintiff to enter into a settlement with _____ (name), (codefendant in this action and) the plaintiff in the former action].

10. As a proximate result of the defendant's instituting the above-mentioned action against plaintiff, plaintiff has been damaged.

11. As a further proximate result of the action initiated by defendant, plaintiff incurred costs as attorney's fees in defending against the action and court costs.

[12. At all times herein mentioned, defendant knew that the claims asserted against plaintiff in the above-mentioned action were _____ (false or legally untenable). Notwithstanding this knowledge, defendant subjected plaintiff to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights in that _____ (specify facts showing oppressive or cruel and unjust treatment by defendant, e.g., defendant abetted and encouraged his/her client, _____ (name), to file fabricated claims against plaintiff to coerce plaintiff into settling so that defendant could reap substantial profits as his/her contingency fee). [2] Use of Form

This form is for use as a complaint for malicious prosecution against the attorney who represented the former plaintiff in the underlying action. Note that in many cases the former plaintiff will be joined as a codefendant with the attorney.

PRACTICE TIP:

Naming Defendants. It is generally advisable for the plaintiff in a malicious prosecution action to name both the attorney and the former plaintiff in the underlying action as defendants in order to capitalize on any conflict that may exist between them and also to improve the prospects for satisfying any judgment, particularly when malicious prosecution liability cannot be covered by insurance as a matter of law [see Ins. Code § 533].

[3] Elements

To establish a cause of action for malicious prosecution of a civil proceeding, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the prior action was (1) commenced by or at the direction of the defendant and was pursued to a legal termination in favor of the plaintiff who was a defendant in the prior action, (2) brought without probable cause, and (3) initiated with malice [see Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 50, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 ; Pond v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 280, 288, 198 Cal. Rptr. 517] .

[5] California Torts

For discussion of the cause of action for malicious prosecution, see California Torts, Ch. 43 (Matthew Bender)

[6] Decisions

In malicious prosecution suit, when evaluating whether probable cause existed for underlying legal action, court as required to take into account evolutionary potential of legal principles. Sheldon Appel Co. v. Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 Cal. 3d 863, 886, 254 Cal. Rptr. 336, 765 P.2d 498

Elements of cause of action as being that prior action (1) was commenced by or at direction of defendant and was pursued to legal termination in plaintiff's favor; (2) was brought without probable cause; and (3) was initiated with malice. Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 50, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608 ; Pond v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 280, 288, 198 Cal. Rptr. 517 ; Weaver v. Superior Court (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 166, 183-184, 156 Cal. Rptr. 745

Finding of lack of probable cause such that malicious prosecution may be found as question of law. Williams v. Coombs (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 626, 636-637, 224 Cal. Rptr.865

The action was entitled _____ vs. _____, No. _____.

7. Defendant misused the _____ [describe process] by _____ [state way in which process misused, e.g., willfully filing the complaint in the improper venue to discourage an appearance by plaintiff].

8. The ulterior motive and purpose of defendant in so misusing the process in the above-described manner was to obtain the following collateral advantage over the plaintiff: _____ [describe collateral advantage sought by defendant, e.g., to force a default and obtain a default judgment pursuant to which plaintiff would be required to pay money disputed by plaintiff to be due defendant].

9. As a proximate result of defendant's above-described actions, plaintiff has suffered general damages.

[10. [2] Use of Form

This form is a complaint for damages for use in an abuse of process action. With appropriate modification, this form may be used as a cross-complaint in the same action in which the abuse of process occurred [see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 347, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 (claim for abuse of process based on excessive attachment properly raised as cross-complaint in action to recover money owed)].

[3] Elements

To establish a cause of action for abuse of process, a plaintiff must plead and prove (1) an ulterior purpose on the part of the defendant, and (2) a willful act in the use of the process not proper in the regular conduct of the proceedings [Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 103-104, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 ; Templeton Feed & Grain v. Ralston Purina Co. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 461, 465-466, 72 Cal. Rptr. 344, 446 P.2d 152] . In an action for abuse of process, unlike in an action for malicious prosecution, it is unnecessary for the plaintiff to prove either that the proceeding has terminated in his or her favor or that it was obtained without probable cause or in the course of a proceeding begun without probable cause [Clark Equip. Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 526, 154 Cal. Rptr.

874] .

[3. Fictitious name allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.381, Paragraph 3.]

[4. Agency allegations, if appropriate. See§ 76.360 .]

[5. Professional status of defendant. See§ 76.380, Paragraph 3.]

6. Defendant _____ [name], as attorney for plaintiff in a prior action, obtained a judgment in the approximate amount of $_____ against plaintiff; the consideration for the debt that is the basis of that judgment is _____ [specify consideration, e.g., attorney's fees due defendant herein]. The prior judgment is action No. _____ in the _____ [specify] Court, _____ County, California.

7. Thereafter, plaintiff called on defendant and offered to pay the amount of that prior judgment and costs at the rate of $_____ per _____ [stipulate period], which offer was rejected.

8. The defendant at all times mentioned herein has been aware that plaintiff is the head of a household, that he/she is the sole support of _____ [number] children living in the same house, and that all earnings of plaintiff are necessary for the support of plaintiff and dependent children and are exempt pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 706.051. Despite this knowledge, defendant has caused a garnishment of plaintiff's wages to be made by execution on the prior judgment on or about _____ [date].

9. The garnishment was caused to be issued by defendant, despite such knowledge, with malice and the intent to cause plaintiff embarrassment with his/her employer, and to cause such a relationship with that employer as to wrongfully force plaintiff to pay that judgment out of the proceeds of his/her wages to avoid discharge from employment because of the harassment and inconvenience to the employer resulting from the garnishment.

10. As a proximate result of the conduct set forth above, plaintiff suffered mental distress and became highly nervous and unable to properly perform his/her duties at his/her place of employment, thus jeopardizing his/her job. Plaintiff has thereby been damaged in his/her place of employment.

11. In doing the aforementioned acts, the defendant acted maliciously, willfully, and with specific intent to damage plaintiff and endanger his/her employment. By reason thereof, plaintiff is entitled to exemplary and punitive damages.

12. Only $_____ of plaintiff's wages are subject to garnishment each week. Unless restrained by the court, each week defendant will attempt to garnish all of plaintiff's wages in an effort to collect the entire judgment of $_____. This will necessitate the repeated filing by plaintiff of exemption claims and thus cause plaintiff and plaintiff's employer further annoyance and harassment and, consequently, further endanger plaintiff's employment.

13. Plaintiff has no defense to these practices, has no adequate remedy at law, and would suffer permanent and unconscionable damages by their continuance unless the defendant is enjoined and restrained from continuing the practice of garnishing the wages of the head of a family for a debt not incurred for a necessary of life.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

1. For a temporary injunction staying garnishments during the pendency of this action until this matter is decided and for a temporary restraining order staying such garnishments until a hearing may be had on the application for such temporary injunction.

2. For a permanent injunction against defendant restraining him/her from garnishing by writ of exeution the wages due defendant.

3. For general damages.

4. For punitive damages.

5. For costs of suit herein incurred.

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use if the plaintiff alleges abuse of process as a result of the defendant's garnishment of wages exempt under Code Civ. Proc. 706.051, and seeks to recover damages and to enjoin the defendant from continuing the practice.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a defendant to object to a complaint for abuse of process when the objection that plaintiff has failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action appears on the face of the complaint or from matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)]. This objection is based on the fact that the action complained of was not taken pursuant to judicial authority and thus was not "process" as contemplated by the tort of abuse of process [see Meadows v. Bakersfield Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 749, 753, 59 Cal. Rptr. 34] . With appropriate modifications, the form may be used in response to a cross-complaint.

§ 76.461 Allegation in Fraud Action [Civ. Code § 1710]--Excuse for Late Discovery of Fraud

[1] FORM Allegation in Fraud Action [Civ. Code § 1710]--Excuse for Late Discovery of Fraud

The plaintiff did not learn of the aforesaid facts constituting the defendant's fraud until _____ [date], when _____ [describe circumstances under which plaintiff actually discovered the fraud].

The plaintiff lacked the means of obtaining knowledge of the aforesaid fraudulent acts prior to the above date because _____ [specify].

[2] Use of Form

This form may be used by the plaintiff in a fraud action when it is apparent from the face of the pleading that the three-year statute of limitations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)] has run since the facts constituting fraud occurred, and the plaintiff claims that a late discovery exception excuses his or her failure to learn of the fraud within the statutory period.

[3] Reasonable Diligence Requirement

Despite the statutory provision that an action for fraud does not accrue until the aggrieved party has "discovered the facts constituting the fraud" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)], many cases qualify this rule by requiring that the plaintiff use reasonable diligence to discover the true facts if he or she has reason to suspect fraud [see, e.g., Sun'N Sand, Inc. v. United Cal. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 701-702, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920] . For further discussion, see § 76.200[4].

[4] California Torts

For discussion of the cause of action for fraud or deceit, see California Torts, Ch. 40 (Matthew Bender)

[5] State Statutes

Three-year statute of limitations for bringing suit for fraud. Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)

[6] Decisions

Plaintiff as required to use reasonable diligence to discover true facts if having reason to suspect fraud. Sun'N Sand, Inc. v. United Cal. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 701-702, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 ; Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 437, 159 P.2d 958

If plaintiff has no reason to suspect fraud, right of action as not accruing until actual discovery of facts constituting fraud. Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 439, 159 P.2d 958 ; see also Snow v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 120, 131-135, 211 Cal. Rptr. 271

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date]
_____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a petitioner to obtain judicial authorization to file a complaint or other pleading when the pleading includes a cause of action based on an alleged conspiracy between an attorney and that attorney's client [see Civ. Code § 1714.10].

[3] Attachments

The petition must be accompanied by the proposed pleading and supporting affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) stating the facts on which the attorney's liability is based [Civ. Code § 1714.10].

[4] Response

The court must order service of the petition on the party against whom the action is proposed to be filed and permit that party to submit opposing affidavits prior to making its determination [Civ. Code § 1714.10].

[5] Limitations Tolled

The filing of the petition, proposed pleading, and accompanying affidavits tolls the running of any applicable statute of limitations until the final determination of the matter by the court [Civ. Code § 1714.10].

[6] State Statutes

Court order required to file pleading alleging civil conspiracy between attorney and client. Civ. Code § 1714.10

§ 76.481 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] to Malicious Prosecution Action--Waiver of Action by Request for Defense Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1038

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] to Malicious Prosecution Action--Waiver of Action by Request for Defense Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1038

AS A SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, DEFENDANT ALLEGES:

Plaintiff waived his/her right to seek damages for malicious prosecution by requesting defense costs pursuant to Section 1038 of the Code of Civil Procedure on or about _____ [date], which costs were incurred in opposing a prior proceeding _____ [under the California Tort Claims Act, Government Code Sections 810-996.6, or for indemnity or for contribution] claimed by plaintiff to have been brought in bad faith and without reasonable cause.

[2] Use of Form

This form may be used by the defendant in a malicious prosecution action to assert the affirmative defense that, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1038(c), the plaintiff waived his or her right to seek damages for malicious prosecution by requesting defense costs incurred in opposing a prior proceeding brought under the California Tort Claims Act [see Gov. Code §§ 810-996.6] or for indemnity or contribution in any civil action that the plaintiff claimed had been brought in bad faith and without reasonable cause.

This chapter covers voluntary sales at auction. Other chapters in this publication that cover specific types of involuntary and voluntary auctions are listed in § 77.02.

This chapter discusses the general principles governing auctions [see § 77.10 et seq.] and provides the following forms:

- A complaint damages for wrongful sale based on conversion [see § 77.40] and an affirmative defense based on estoppel to assert title [see § 77.41].

- A complaint damages for misrepresentation of the price property is expected to bring [see § 77.42].

- A complaint for restitution based on rescission for fraud because of an unlawful agreement not to bid at an auction [see § 77.43].

- A complaint by the seller against the buyer for damages for failure to pay for property bought at auction [see § 77.44].

- A complaint damages for breach of warranty [see § 77.50].

- A complaint for restitution based on rescission or reformation because of bidding by or on behalf of the seller without notice [see § 77.51] and an affirmative defense to such an action [see § 77.52].

- A complaint for by the auctioneer against the buyer for the price of goods sold [see § 77.60].

- A complaint for by the auctioneer against the seller for breach of contract [see § 77.61].

§ 77.10 Governing Statutes

Bonding and other requirements for auctioneers and auctions of goods are governed by Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. Any waiver of those provisions is contrary to public policy, and is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1812.609].

Conduct of auction sales of goods is also governed by Com. Code § 2328.

The statutory authority of an auctioneer is set out in Civ. Code §§ 2362 and 2363.

The practice of mock auctions is prohibited by Penal Code § 535.

Some statutes governing auction sales in particular circumstances are listed in the Research Guide, § 77.31.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.11

§ 77.11 Definitions

[1] "Auction"; "Goods"

"Auction" is defined by Civ. Code § 1812.601(b) as a sale transaction conducted by means of oral or written exchanges (which include exchanges made in person or through electronic media) between an auctioneer and the members of the auctioneer's audience, which exchanges consist of a series of invitations for offers for the purchase of goods made by the auctioneer and offers to purchase made by members of the audience and culminate in the acceptance by the auctioneer of the highest or most favorable offer made by a member of the participating audience. This statutory definition of auction does not include a sale of real estate or a sale in any sequence of real estate with personal property or fixtures or both in a unified sale pursuant to Com. Code § 9604(a)(1)(B) [Civ. Code § 1812.601(b); for discussion of unified sales, see Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions].

This definition of auction is consistent with prior case law, under which the auctioneer's putting up of the property is not an offer to sell the property (which the bidders can accept), but rather a solicitation of offers to purchase the property from those present [Estate of Lynch (1923) 62 Cal. App. 687, 689-690, 217 P. 807 ; 10 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 177, 178 (1947)] .

"Goods" means any goods, wares, chattels, merchandise, or other personal property, including domestic animals and farm products [Civ. Code § 1812.601(g); cf. Com. Code §§ 2105(1), 9102(a)(44) (for discussion, see § 77.22[2][c])].

More broadly, auction has been defined as a sale of property to the highest bidder, with freedom for competitive bidding. Although the phrase "public auction" is frequently used in statutes relating to auctions and auctioneers, at least one writer has questioned whether the word "public" adds anything to the force of the expression, since "auction" itself imports publicity. However, the terms "public auction" and "private auction" may be distinguished on the basis that any person may attend and bid at a public auction, whereas at a private auction only certain persons, or a certain class of persons, may attend and offer bids [see Black's Law Dictionary (4th ed)].

[2] "Auction Company"

"Auction company" means any person who arranges, manages, sponsors, advertises, accounts for the proceeds of, or carries out auction sales at locations, including, but not limited to, any fixed location, including an auction barn, gallery place of business, sale barn, sale yard, sale pavilion, and the contiguous surroundings of each [Civ. Code § 1812.601(c); see Civ. Code § 1812.601(h) (defining "person"; discussed under [4], below)].

[3] "Auctioneer"

"Auctioneer" means any individual who is engaged in, or who by advertising or otherwise holds himself or herself out as being available to engage in, the calling for, the recognition of, and the acceptance of, offers for the purchase of goods at an auction [Civ. Code § 1812.601(d)].

[4] "Employee"; "Employer"

"Employee" means an individual who works for an employer, is listed on the employer's payroll records, and is under the employer's control [Civ. Code § 1812.601(e)]. "Employer" means a person who employs an individual for wages or salary, lists the individual on the person's payroll records, and withholds legally required deductions and contributions [Civ. Code § 1812.601(f); see Civ. Code § 1812.601(h) (defining "person" as individual, corporation, partnership, trust, including business trust, firm, association, organization, or any other form of business enterprise)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.12

§ 77.12 Bonding Scheme Replaces Licensing

Between 1983 and July 30, 1993, auctioneers were regulated under a licensing scheme administered by the California Auctioneer Commission [see former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5730 et seq.], although there were also local licensing programs. On July 30, 1993, because of lack of funding for the Auctioneer Commissioner, former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5730 et seq. were suspended and became inoperative [Stats. 1993, ch. 255]. On October 11, 1993, former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5730 et seq. was repealed and replaced with a system set forth in Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. that does not provide for licensing, but sets forth statutory duties and violations and requires an auctioneer to maintain a $20,000 bond with the Secretary of State for the benefit of any person or persons damaged by the acts or omissions described in Civ. Code § 1812.600(b) [Stats. 1993, ch. 1170; for further discussion, see § 77.13].

In enacting Stats. 1993, ch. 1170, the Legislature intended to completely occupy the field of auctioneer licensing to preempt any local regulation affecting auctioneer licensing. Nevertheless, the fines authorized by Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. are to be paid to the county treasurer in the jurisdiction in which the fine or penalty is levied to be used exclusively for the benefit of the district attorney of that county [Stats. 1993, ch. 1170, § 4; but see, e.g., Food & Agric. Code §§ 21731-21740, 21749, 21750 (licensing of public cattle salesyards)].

Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. only governs auction sales of personal property, not real property [see Civ. Code § 1812.601(b) (so defining auction)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.13

§ 77.13 Bond

[1] Required as Condition of Doing Business

Before an auctioneer or auction company can conduct business, it must have a current surety bond in the amount of $20,000, issued by a surety company admitted to do business in California in favor of, and payable to, the people of the State of California for the benefit of any person or persons damaged by the acts or omissions described in Civ. Code § 1812.600(b) [see [2], below], and must have filed a copy of the bond with the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.600(a), (b), (c)(1)]. The surety must send written notice of the cancellation or termination of the bond to both the auctioneer or auction company and the Secretary of State 30 days prior to the cancellation or termination of the bond, identifying the bond and the date of cancellation or termination [Civ. Code § 1812.600(c)(2)]. An auctioneer or auction company that fails to obtain a new bond and file a copy of that bond with the Secretary of State by the effective date of the cancellation or termination of the former bond must cease to conduct any business unless and until a new bond is obtained and a copy of that bond is filed with the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.600(c)(3)].

Alternatively, the auctioneer or auction company may file a deposit in lieu of a bond as set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 995.710[Civ. Code § 1812.600(a), (d)]. Any cash security in lieu of the surety bond formerly required and authorized by former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5700 et seq. must be transferred to, and maintained by, the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.600(n)].

[2] Beneficiaries

The bond is for the benefit of any person or persons damaged by any fraud, dishonesty, misstatement, misrepresentation, deceit, unlawful acts or omissions, or failure to provide the services of the auctioneer or auction company in performance of the auction by the auctioneer or auction company or its agents, representatives, or employees while acting within the scope of their employment [Civ. Code § 1812.600(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 995.850 (enforcement of bond)]. For discussion and forms for use in obtaining payment under the bond, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings, § 538.40 et seq.

[3] Claims Against Deposit in Lieu of Bond

When a deposit is made in lieu of the bond, a person asserting a claim against the deposit establishes the claim by furnishing evidence to the Secretary of State of a money judgment entered by a court together with evidence that the claimant is a person described in Civ. Code § 1812.600(b) [Civ. Code § 1812.600(d)(1)]. Approval and payment of claims by the Secretary of State is done in accordance with Civ. Code § 1812.600(e)-(k), which provides for approval of claims and accumulation of approved claims for payment by the Secretary of State every 240 days (beginning on the date of approval of the first claim) [Civ. Code § 1812.600(f), (g)]. If there are insufficient funds remaining in the deposit on the payment day, each approved claim is paid a pro rata share of the deposit [Civ. Code § 1812.600(f)].

A deposit made in lieu of the bond is not subject to attachment, garnishment, or execution with respect to an action or judgment against the auctioneer or auction company, other than as to that amount that is no longer needed or required for the purpose of Civ. Code § 1812.600 which otherwise would be returned to the auctioneer or auction company by the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.600(i)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 77.14 Enforcement, Penalties, and Attorney's Fees

The Secretary of State enforces the provisions governing the filing and maintenance of bonds [Civ. Code § 1812.600(p)]. However, if an auctioneer fails to perform any of the duties specifically imposed on him or her by Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., any person may maintain an action for enforcement of the duties or to recover a civil penalty in the amount of $1,000, or for both enforcement and recovery [Civ. Code § 1812.600(l); see also § 77.23, below]. The prevailing plaintiff in an action under Civ. Code § 1812.600(l) is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs, in addition to the civil penalties provided under Civ. Code § 1812.600(e) [Civ. Code § 1812.600(m)].

Except as otherwise provided by a specific provision of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., any person who violates any provision of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. is guilty of a misdemeanor, which is punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment in a county jail for not more than one year, or by both that fine and imprisonment. If a person is convicted of any violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., or of any crime related to the conduct of an auctioneer [see, e.g., Penal Code §§ 436, 535], the court may issue an injunction prohibiting that person from acting as an auctioneer or an auction company in California, in which case the court must inform the Secretary of State of that action [Civ. Code § 1812.604].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 77.15 Auctioneer as Agent

An auctioneer is an agent for the transmission of property from the principal to another [see Rogers v. Huie (1852) 2 Cal. 571, 573] . The principal need not be the owner, but may be someone other than the owner, such as the holder of a mortgage [see Williams v. Corker (1904) 144 Cal. 468, 470, 77 P. 1004 ; see also Civ. Code § 1861.608(d) (discussed under Auctioneer's Contract With Seller, Auctioneer, below)]. An auctioneer to whom the buyer has paid a deposit becomes a stakeholder for both buyer and seller, pending an examination of the seller's title [Montgomery v. Pacific C.L. Bureau (1892) 94 Cal. 284, 290, 29 P. 640 (auction sale of real property); see also Civ. Code § 1812.607(l), (m) (discussed in § 77.20[3], below)].

There is no statute expressly designating an auctioneer as an agent; however, in describing an auctioneer's authority to make warranties, Civ. Code § 2362(3) uses the language "in like manner with other agents to sell" (emphasis added). This language indicates that auctioneers are, at least, special agents [see Civ. Code § 2297 ("An agent for a particular act or transaction is called a special agent.")].

§ 77.16 Auctioneer's Liability for Acts of Its Agents, Employees

Every auctioneer who operates his or her own auction company as a sole proprietor, and every auction company, together with its owners, partners, and officers, that employs an auctioneer, is responsible for all violations committed by the auctioneer or by any company employee in the conduct of auction business. An auctioneer who is employed by an auctioneer or auction company is responsible for all violations of the title governing Auctioneers and Auction Companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) committed by him or her in the conduct of auction business [Civ. Code § 1812.606].

It is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. for any auctioneer or auction company, or the company's owners, partners, and officers, to direct or knowingly permit any violation of that title by any auctioneer employed by or under contract with that auctioneer or auction company, or by any owner, partner, officer, agent, or employee of the auction company [Civ. Code § 1812.606; see also Civ. Code § 1861.608(e) (contract with employed auctioneer)].

§ 77.17 Auctioneer's Statutory Authority

An auctioneer, in the absence of special authorization or usage to the contrary, has authority from the seller only as follows [Civ. Code § 2362]:

- To sell by public auction to the highest bidder.
- To sell for cash only, except such articles as are usually sold on credit at auction.
- To warrant, in like manner with other agents to sell, according to Civ. Code § 2323. Authority to sell personal property includes authority to warrant the title of the principal, and the quality and quantity of the property [Civ. Code § 2323].
- To prescribe reasonable rules and terms of sale [see Civ. Code § 1861.607(c),(k) (discussed in § 77.21[2], below)].
- To deliver the thing sold, on payment of the price.
- To collect the price.
- To do whatever else is necessary, or proper and usual, in the ordinary course of business, for effecting these purposes.

An auctioneer has authority from a bidder at the auction, as well as from the seller, to bind both by memorandum of the contract, "as prescribed in the title on sale," which now refers to Division 2 of the Commercial Code [Civ. Code § 2363].

In conducting the business of auctioneering, each auctioneer and auction company, and the company's owners, partners, officers, agents, and employees, are required to do all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.605]:

- Follow all lawful requests of the owner or consignor of the goods being sold at auction with regard to the sale of those goods.

- Perform his or her duties so that the highest or most favorable offer made by a member of his or her audience is accepted, except to the extent that any item or sale is offered with reserve or subject to confirmation.

- Truthfully represent the goods to be auctioned.

- Otherwise perform his or her duties in accordance with California law.

§ 77.19 Auctioneer's Contract With Seller

Before an auctioneer or auction company may sell goods at auction, the auctioneer or auction company must first entered into a written contract with the owner or consignor of the goods. The contract must set forth the terms and conditions on which the auctioneer or auction company accepts the goods for sale, and it is required to include all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d); see also Civ. Code § 1812.606 (auctioneer or auction company responsible for acts of employees)]:

- The auctioneer's or auction company's name, trade or business name, business address, and business telephone number.

- An inventory of the item or items to be sold at auction.

- A description of the services to be provided and the agreed consideration for the services. This description must explicitly state which party will be responsible for advertising and other expenses.

- The approximate date or dates when the item or items will be sold at auction.

- A statement as to which party will be responsible for insuring the item or items against loss by theft, fire, or other means.

- A disclosure that the auctioneer or auction company has a bond on file with the Secretary of State.

Failure to enter into the required contract before selling goods at auction is a violation of the title governing auctioneers and auction companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)], as are failure to reduce to writing all amendments or addenda to the contract with an owner or consignor or an auctioneer [Civ. Code § 1812.608(f)], and failure to abide by the terms of any required written contract [Civ. Code § 1812.608(g)].

An auctioneer or auction company must also enter into a written contract with the auctioneer who is to conduct the auction before goods may be sold at auction without violating Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. [see Civ. Code §

1812.608(e)].

§ 77.20 Auctioneer's Duties Regarding Records and Funds

[1] In General

Every auctioneer and auction company is required to keep and maintain, at the auctioneer's or auction company's address of record, complete and correct records and accounts pertaining to the auctioneer's or auction company's activity for a period of not less than two years. Those records are required to include all of the following [Civ. Code § 1812.607(g)]:

- The name and address of the owner or consignor and of any buyer of goods at any auction sale engaged in or conducted by the auctioneer or auction company.
- A description of the goods.
- The terms and conditions of the acceptance and sale of the goods.
- All written contracts with owners and consignors.
- Accounts of all moneys received and paid out, whether on the auctioneer's or auction company's own behalf or as agent, as a result of those activities.

Failure to keep the foregoing records is a violation of the title governing auctioneers and auction companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1812.607(g)].

Every auctioneer and auction company is required to maintain the funds of all owners, consignors, buyers, and other clients and customers, separate from his or her personal funds and accounts. Failure to segregate funds is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1812.607(j)].

[2] Accounting and Payment of Proceeds to Seller

Within 30 working days after the sale transaction, an auctioneer or auction company must provide, or cause to be provided, an account to the owner or consignor of all goods that are the subject of an auction engaged in or conducted by the auctioneer or auction company. Failure to provide this accounting is a violation of the title governing auctioneers and auction companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1812.607(h)].

Also within 30 working days after a sale transaction of goods, an auctioneer or auction company must pay or cause to be paid, all moneys and proceeds due to the owner or the consignor of all goods that were the subject of an auction engaged in or conducted by the auctioneer or auction company, unless delay is compelled by legal proceedings or the inability of the auctioneer or auction company, through no fault of his or her own, to transfer title to the goods or to comply with any provision of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., the Commercial Code, the Code of Civil Procedure, or any other applicable provision of law. Failure to pay over proceeds as required is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1812.607(i)]. A federal court interpreting the predecessor provision, former Bus. & Prof. Code § 5775(m), held the provision to make the auctioneer only a debtor of the owner, not a bailee of the proceeds, reasoning that the auctioneer is not required to turn over the actual proceeds from the auctioned property, but only to remit the amount of the proceeds within 30 working days [U.S. v. Lawson (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1991) 925 F.2d 1207, 1209-1210 (use of proceeds to pay other consignors of auctioneer does not constitute conversion or theft of government property)].

[3] Return of Buyer's Deposit

Within two working days after an auction sale, an auctioneer or auction company must return the blank check or deposit of each buyer who purchased no goods at the sale. Failure to return a check or deposit is a violation of the title governing auctioneers and auction companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) [Civ. Code § 1812.607(l)].

If a buyer made a deposit that exceeds the cost of goods her or she purchased, the auctioneer or auction company is required, within 30 working days of any auction sale, to refund that portion of the deposit of each buyer that exceeds the cost of the goods purchased, unless delay is compelled by legal proceedings or the inability of the auctioneer or auction company, without fault, to transfer title to the goods or to comply with any provision of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., the Commercial Code, the Code of Civil Procedure, or other applicable provisions of law, or unless the buyer violated the terms of a written agreement that he or she take possession of purchased goods within a specified period of time. Failure to return an excess deposit is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1812.607(m)].

Chapter 77 AUCTIONS AND AUCTIONEERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.21

§ 77.21 Conduct of Auction Sale

[1] Statutes Governing Common Types

An auction sale of goods is governed by Com. Code § 2328, Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., and Penal Code § 535 [see Civ. Code § 1812.607(a)-(m); Com. Code §§ 2102 (applicability of Division 2 of the Commercial Code), 2105(1) (definition of goods), 2107(1) (goods includes minerals to be severed from realty), 2107(2) (goods includes growing crops, timber, and other severable things); cf. Civ. Code § 1812.601(g) (Civil Code definition of "goods"); see also Civ. Code § 658(4) (emblements and severable things on realty are to be treated as goods for purpose of sale)]. Any waiver of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. is contrary to public policy, and is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1812.609].

There is no statute governing auction sales of real property in general. However, bidding rules are established by statute for sales by a trustee under a power of sale in a deed of trust [see Civ. Code § 2924h]. Sales under execution, and sales that are required to be conducted in the manner of sales under execution (such as sales by receivers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 568.5]), are subject to some statutory regulation [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 701.510-701.830]; but it is generally required simply that they "shall be made at auction to the highest bidder" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 701.570(b)].

The rules set out in Com. Code § 2328 appear to conform to widely prevailing rules applicable to auctions generally, whether the property sold is real or personal, goods or not. By its statutory language, Com. Code § 2328 applies only to sales of goods; but unless a statute or decision requires some other rules in a particular case, it seems safe to assume that the rules set out in Com. Code § 2328, may be applied in cases of sales of real property at auction.

[2] Required Announcements

An auctioneer, in an auction of goods, is required to post or distribute to the audience the terms, conditions, restrictions, and procedures whereby the goods will be sold at the auction, and to announce any changes to those terms, conditions, restrictions, and procedures prior to the beginning of the auction sale [Civ. Code § 1812.607(c)]. Immediately prior to offering any item for sale, the auctioneer must also disclose to the audience the existence and amount of any liens or other encumbrances on the item, unless the item is sold as free and clear. For the purposes of this provision, an item is "free and clear" if all liens and encumbrances on the item are to be paid prior to the transfer of title [Civ. Code §

1812.607(k); see also Civ. Code §§ 2323, 2362(3) (auctioneer's authority to warrant seller's title and the quality and quantity of property)].

Except in the case of a forced sale, if the seller has reserved the right to bid, or to have persons bid on his or her behalf, that fact must be announced to the audience [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(h)(2); Com. Code § 2328(4)]. Presumably, an announcement of the seller's intent to bid on the goods, made before the auctioneer calls for bids, would constitute sufficient notice [see Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 151 n.5, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077 (dictum)]. For discussion of buyer's remedies and a complaint for use, when there has been bidding by the seller or on the seller's behalf without prior announcement to the audience, see § 77.51.

In the absence of special authorization or usage to the contrary, the auctioneer has authority from the seller to prescribe reasonable rules and terms of sale [Civ. Code § 2362(4)].

[3] Auction With or Without Reserve

An auction sale is with reserve unless the goods are in explicit terms put up without reserve. An auction with reserve is the normal procedure. In an auction with reserve, the auctioneer may withdraw the goods at any time until he or she announces completion of the sale [Com. Code § 2328(3)]. An announcement by the auctioneer at the outset of an auction that any property subject to liens will be sold only if bids on that property exceed the liens against the property is an auction with reserve [In re El Camino Press (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1983) 31 Bankr. 340, 343] .

In an auction without reserve, after the auctioneer calls for bids on an article or lot, that article or lot cannot be withdrawn unless no bid is made within a reasonable time [Com. Code § 2328(3)]. In either case (with or without reserve), a bidder may retract his or her bid until the auctioneer's announcement of completion of the sale, but a bidder's retraction does not revive any previous bid [Com. Code § 2328(3); see In re El Camino Press(Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1983) 31 Bankr. 340, 343 (bidder's right to withdraw bid)].

The crucial point for determining the nature of an auction is the putting up of the goods. Before the goods are actually put up, they may be withdrawn, regardless of whether the auction is advertised as one without reserve, without liability on the part of the auctioneer to the persons who are present. This is subject to any peculiar facts which might bring the case within the "firm offer" principle of Com. Code § 2205, but an offer to persons generally would require unmistakable language in order to fall within that section. The prior announcement of the nature of the auction either as with reserve or without reserve will, however, enter as an "explicit term" in the putting up of the goods, and conduct thereafter must be governed accordingly [see Uniform Commercial Code Comment 2 to Com. Code § 2328].

[4] Sale of Lots

In a sale by auction, if goods are put up in lots, then each lot is the subject of a separate sale [Com. Code § 2328(1)]. "Lot" means a parcel or a single article which is the subject matter of a separate sale or delivery, whether or not it is sufficient to perform the contract [Com. Code § 2105(5); see Flint v. Giguiere (1920) 50 Cal. App. 314, 320, 195 P. 85 (agreement to buy cattle at $1 per head, that did not specify number of head, as sale by lot and not subject to statute of frauds)].

[5] Putting Up Property; Bidding

The auctioneer's putting up of the property is not an offer to sell it which bidders can accept but a solicitation from those present of their offers to purchase the property, except in an auction without reserve, which constitutes the seller's voluntary relinquishment of the right to withdraw the property from sale and makes the putting up of the property in effect an offer to sell [see Com. Code § 2328(3) (with and without reserve); Estate of Lynch (1923) 62 Cal. App. 687, 689-690, 217 P. 807 ; 10 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 177, 178 (1947)] . Bids made in response to the auctioneer's presentation of an article for sale are offers to buy, which may be revoked by bidders prior to their acceptance the by auctioneer, and create no power of acceptance in bidders [In re El Camino Press (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1983) 31 Bankr. 340, 343] .

[6] Completion of Sale and Passage of Title

A sale by auction is complete when the auctioneer so announces by the fall of the hammer or in any other customary manner [Com. Code § 2328(2); Young v. Patterson (1908) 9 Cal. App. 469, 471, 99 P. 552] . However, the fall of the hammer may not complete the sale if the sale is with reserve, in accordance with an announcement that property subject to liens will be sold only if bids on it exceed liens and that the sale is also conditioned on the secured parties' consent [In re El Camino Press (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1983) 31 Bankr. 340, 343] . The foregoing interpretation of Com. Code § 2328(2) serves the Commercial Code's purpose of encouraging expansion of commercial practices rather than fettering the business community with artificial formalities [In re El Camino Press (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1983) 31 Bankr. 340, 344] .

If a bid is made while the hammer is falling in acceptance of a prior bid, the auctioneer has discretion to either (a) reopen the bidding, or (b) declare the goods sold under the bid on which the hammer was falling [Com. Code § 2328(2)]. The recognition of a bid of this kind does not mean a closing in favor of that bidder, but only that the bid has been accepted as a continuation of the bidding. If recognized, that bid discharges the bid on which the hammer was falling when it was made [see Uniform Commercial Code Comment 1 to Com. Code § 2328].

Under the Commercial Code, the completion of an auction sale is not determinative of when title passes [but see Gentillalli v. County of San Diego (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 456, 458, 49 Cal. Rptr. 705 (dicta, comparing result at tax sale under former Rev. & Tax. Code § 2918, now Rev. & Tax. Code § 2960)]. The Commercial Code abolished the concept of when title passes for the allocation of risk between buyer and seller, but provides that when the concept of title is material, and no other provision refers to the passage of title in a particular situation, the provisions of Com. Code § 2401 control. Under Com. Code § 2401, title from auctions most often passes either under Com. Code § 2401(2), when the goods are physically delivered to the buyer, or under Com. Code § 2401(3)(a), when the documents of title are delivered [In re Western States Wire Corp. (9th Cir. 1974) 490 F.2d 1065, 1068 (determined under California law, finding that title to vessel sold at auction had not passed to buyer prior to delivery of keys or certificate of ownership)]. Title passes at the time and place of contracting when the goods are already identified at the time of contracting, delivery is to be made without moving the goods, and no documents of title are to be delivered [Com. Code § 2401(3)(b)].

Chapter 77 AUCTIONS AND AUCTIONEERS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.22

§ 77.22 Statute of Frauds

[1] Agreement Between Seller and Auctioneer

Two aspects of auction sales are affected by the statute of frauds: (1) the contract between the seller and the auctioneer and (2) the sales contract. With respect to the contract between the seller and the auctioneer, if real property is being sold, probably the agreement engaging the auctioneer has to be in writing. An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate, or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate, for compensation or a commission, is invalid unless the same, or some note or memorandum thereof, is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by his or her agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. Although there does not appear to be any reported case construing Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4) in the context of an auctioneer engaged to sell real property, that provision is not confined to those who make a business of buying and selling real estate for others, but includes every person who in any case comes within it [Dolan v. O'Toole (1900) 129 Cal. 488, 490, 62 P. 92] . It also applies to any person who aids or assists in the purchase or sale of real estate on a contract for compensation, either by commission or by salary, even if that person was not the sole and exclusive medium through which the purchase or sale was made [Hooper v. Mayfield (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 802, 806, 251 P.2d 330] .

Requiring the auctioneer's contract with the seller of real property to comply with Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4) serves the primary purpose of the statute of frauds, which is to protect real property owners against unfounded claims for compensation by brokers and agents [see Pac. etc. Dev. Corp. v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 62, 67, 301 P.2d 825 ; but see Brand v. Mantor (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 126, 131, 44 P.2d 390 (broker estopped to assert statute of frauds when sued by seller for illicit profits in sale of real property)].

With respect to the contract between a seller of personal property and an auctioneer, written authority from the seller is not required to validate the contract, even if a sale of the property is invalid under an applicable statute of frauds [see Sunset-Sternau Food Co. v. Bonzi (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 834, 838-839, 36 Cal. Rptr. 741, 389 P.2d 133 (holding "equal dignities" rule of Civ. Code § 2309 inapplicable to actions based on contracts between principal and agent); see also Craig v. Godfroy (1851) 1 Cal. 415, 416 (describing auctioneer as agent)]. However, failure to have a written contract is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)].

[2] Memorandum of Sale at Auction

[a] Auctioneer's Authority to Make

The auctioneer's memorandum of the sale has been held to be a sufficient substitute for a contract reduced to writing and signed by the parties [Craig v. Godfroy (1851) 1 Cal. 415, 415-416] . In making the memorandum of sale, the auctioneer has authority to bind both buyer and seller [see Civ. Code § 2363 (personal property)].

[b] Sale of Real Property

The contract or memorandum of sale must be in writing if the subject matter is real property, and even then, if it is signed by an agent whose authority is not in writing, it will be invalid [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3); see People v. White (1856) 6 Cal. 75, 75 (sale of real property as void when no note or memorandum of sale was made by auctioneer and no writing existed between parties)]. For additional discussion and a general form of affirmative defense based on this statute of frauds, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds .

[c] Sale of Goods

If the subject matter of the auction sale is goods sold for a price of $500 or more, the contract is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless there is a writing sufficient to indicate that a contract of sale has been made between the parties and is signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or his or her authorized agent [see Com. Code § 2201(1)]. "Goods" are all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than money in which the price is to be paid, investment securities, and things in action. "Goods" also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops and other identified things attached to realty as described in Com. Code § 2107 [Com. Code § 2105(1); cf. Civ. Code § 1812.601(g) (Civil Code definition of goods, discussed in § 77.11[1]]. There are some exceptions to the writing requirements of Com. Code § 2201(1) [see also Com. Code § 2201(3)(a) (specially manufactured goods)]:

- Between merchants, a written confirmation sent within a reasonable time will satisfy this statute of frauds unless the party receiving it objects in writing within 10 days after its receipt [Com. Code § 2201(2)].

- A contract is enforceable to the extent of the quantity of goods admitted if the party to be charged admits in his or her pleading, testimony, or otherwise in court that a contract was made [Com. Code § 2201(3)(b)].

- A contract for the sale of goods for which payment has been made and accepted or which have been received and accepted is enforceable [Com. Code § 2201(3)(c)].

In addition, if the auction sale is by lot, at a price of less than $500 per lot, this statute of frauds will not apply [see Flint v. Giguiere (1920) 50 Cal. App. 314, 320, 195 P. 85 (agreement to buy cattle at $1 per head, that did not specify number of head, as sale by lot and not subject to statute of frauds)].

For additional discussion and a form of affirmative defense based on failure to comply with Com. Code § 2201, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds .

[d] Sale of Other Personal Property

If the subject matter of the auction sale is personal property other than goods [see Com. Code § 2201], securities [see Com. Code § 8113], or security agreements [see Com. Code §§ 9201, 9203], the contract is not enforceable by way of action or defense beyond $5,000 in amount or value of remedy unless there is a writing that (1) indicates a contract for sale has been made between the parties at a defined or stated price, (2) reasonably identifies the subject matter, and (3) is signed by the party against whom enforcement is sought or his or her authorized agent [Civ. Code § 1624.5]. If the subject matter of the auction sale is a qualified financial contract [see Civ. Code § 1624(b)(2) (definition)], this statute of frauds may (or may not) apply, depending on the circumstances [see Civ. Code § 1624.5(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.23

§ 77.23 Enjoining Violations; Granting Restitution

If a person has engaged in, or is about to engage in any act that constitutes a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., any person may file a petition in the superior court for the county in which that act occurred or is about to occur; and the superior court may issue an injunction or other appropriate order restraining the violative conduct. Proceedings under this section are governed by the provisions applicable to injunctions generally (Code Civ. Proc. § 525 et seq.), except that no undertaking is required [Civ. Code § 1812.602].

When a petition is filed by any person in the superior court for the county in which any person has engaged in any act that constitutes a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., the court may order the person who committed the violation to make restitution to any person injured as a result of the violation [Civ. Code § 1812.603(a); for a form for a complaint, see § 77.51].

The court may order any person against whom an injunction or restraining order, or an order requiring restitution, is directed, to reimburse the petitioner for expenses incurred in the investigation related to its petition [Civ. Code § 1812.603(b)]. These remedies are in addition to, and not a limitation on, the authority provided for in any other section of the Civil Code [Civ. Code § 1812.603(c); see also § 77.14].

§ 77.40 Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3336] Based on Conversion--By Owner Against Auctioneer--Wrongful Auction Sale

[1] FORM Complaint for Damages [Civ. Code § 3336] Based on Conversion--By Owner Against Auctioneer--Wrongful Auction Sale

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name], [and DOES I	)	(Conversion)
through _____],	)	[Amount demanded _____
Defendant(s).	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of auctioneer] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence], and doing business as an auctioneer, and in that capacity conducted the auction out of which this action arises.

[2. Defendant _____ (state venue facts as appropriate, e.g., is a resident of _____ County, California).]

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOE I through DOE _____ and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to insert their true names when the same are ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of these fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged below.)]

[4. At all times herein mentioned defendants DOES I through _____ were the agents, servants, and employees of their codefendants, and in doing the things hereinafter alleged were acting in the scope of their authority as such agents, servants, and employees, and with the permission and consent of their codefendants.]

5. On or about _____ [date of auction sale], plaintiff was, and plaintiff still is, _____ [the owner or entitled to the possession] of certain personal property, to wit: _____ [describe particularly, e.g., an antique silver candelabrum stamped on the base with the hallmark of Paul Revere and the date "1780"].

6. On or about _____ [date of auction sale], the _____ [e.g., candelabrum] had a value of $_____.

7. On or about _____ [date of auction sale], the _____ [e.g., candelabrum] was in the possession of defendant, and on that date defendant sold it at auction at _____ [location], without plaintiff's consent, as a proximate result of which plaintiff has sustained injury through loss of the value of the _____[e.g., candelabrum].

[8. Between the time of the wrongful sale of the _____ (e.g., candelabrum) and the filing of this action, plaintiff _____ (describe time and money properly expended in pursuit of converted property), to plaintiff's further damage in the sum of $_____.]

[9. Allege facts to support claim for exemplary and punitive damages, e.g., At the time of the wrongful sale of the _____ (e.g., candelabrum), defendant was fully aware that the _____(e.g., candelabrum) was the property of plaintiff and that plaintiff was entitled to the possession thereof, and notwithstanding that knowledge defendant wrongfully, maliciously, and with intent to injure plaintiff sold it as hereinabove alleged, by reason whereof plaintiff is entitled to exemplary and punitive damages.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____[value of converted property at time of conversion].

2. For interest thereon at the legal rate from and after _____ [date of conversion].

3. [For damages for time and money expended in pursuit of the _____ (e.g., candelabrum) in the sum of $_____.]

4. [For interest thereon at the legal rate from and after _____ (date of conversion).]

5. [For exemplary and punitive damages.]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred.

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the plaintiff in this action. I have read this complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters which are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe them to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [typed name]

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used by an owner of property to obtain damages based on conversion from an auctioneer, who sold plaintiff's property without plaintiff's consent [Civ. Code § 3336]. Unless there are facts to support a defense based on estoppel [see § 77.41], an auctioneer who sells property which his or her principal has no right to sell is liable to the owner for damages for conversion, even though the auctioneer may have acted in the good faith belief that the principal was the owner [see Swim v. Wilson (1891) 90 Cal. 126, 130-131, 27 P. 33 ; Rogers v. Huie (1851) 1 Cal. 429 (stolen property); Development Co. v. Seaboard D.C. Corp. (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 121, 129, 34 P.2d 139 (auction sale of livestock subject to prior conditional sale contract under which plaintiff was seller retaining title as security)].

If the property is still in the auctioneer's possession, counsel may prefer an action for recovery of the property in which an alternative judgment for the value of the property and damages for detention may be had [see Code Civ. Proc. § 667]. For discussion and suitable forms of complaints, see Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery .

[3] Allegations

[a] Defendant's Identity and Capacity

If defendant is not a natural person, the complaint should allege defendant's identity as an existing entity against which the court's judgment will operate [see Civ. Code § 1812.601(h) (defining "person," discussed in § 77.11[4]); Tanner v. Best (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 442, 445, 104 P.2d 1084] , such as a corporation, a partnership, an unincorporated association, or a governmental agency (Paragraph 1) [see § 77.12].

[b] Venue Facts

For purposes of venue, conversion is not considered an injury to person or property as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), which would provide for venue in the county where the conversion took place [Spangenberg v. Spangenberg (1932) 123 Cal. App. 387, 391, 11 P.2d 408] . Thus, venue is proper in the county of defendant's residence (if defendant is a person) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); Haurat v. Superior Court (1966) 241 Cal. App.2d 330, 333, 50 Cal. Rptr. 520] or principal place of business [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2, 395.5].

[c] Fictitiously Named Defendants

When the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, he or she must state that fact in the complaint, and that defendant may be designated in any pleading or proceeding by any name, and when his or her true name is discovered, the pleading or proceeding must be amended accordingly [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. If plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a person he or she knows exists and against whom the plaintiff believes he or she has a cause of action, then Paragraph 3 should be inserted.

For discussion and alternative forms involving fictitiously named defendants, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used .

[d] Agency Allegation

Counsel may use the standard agency allegation of optional Paragraph 4, or particularize it for use when an employee, agent, or partner of an auctioneer or auction company has violated some provision of the title governing governing Auctioneers and Auction Companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.). Every auctioneer and every auction company, together with its owners, partners, and officers, is responsible for all violations of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. committed by employees, agent, and partners of the auctioneer or auction company [see Civ. Code § 1812.606 (discussed in § 77.16]. The conversion alleged in this complaint arguably constitutes a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.605(d), which requires an auctioneer to perform his or her duties in accordance with California law.

[e] Plaintiff's Identity and Capacity

This complaint does not contain an allegation as to plaintiff's identity or capacity, but if plaintiff is not a natural person, then the complaint should allege plaintiff's identity as an existing legal entity entitled to come into court; and if plaintiff brings the action in a special capacity, then the complaint should allege this capacity to show that plaintiff is, if other facts are true, entitled to relief [see Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 351, 254 P.2d 6 (distinguishing standing and capacity to sue)].

[f] Allegations for Conversion

The allegations relating to conversion are:

- Plaintiff's interest in and right to possession of certain identified personal property (Paragraph 5) [see Lowe v. Ozmun (1902) 137 Cal. 257, 260-261, 70 P. 87 ; Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 127, 249 P.2d 558] .

- The value of the property at the time of the conversion (Paragraph 6) [see Civ. Code § 3336; United States Rubber Co. v. Union Bank & Trust Co. (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709, 15 Cal. Rptr. 385] .

- Defendant's conversion and proximate injury to plaintiff (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3336; Jordan v. Talbot (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 597, 610, 12 Cal. Rptr. 488, 361 P.2d 20] .

For discussion, alternative forms, including allegations that plaintiff demanded return of the item, which is necessary if defendant acquired the property lawfully, and a procedural checklist, see Ch. 150, Conversion .

General damages for conversion (Paragraph 6) are measured either by the value of the converted property at the time of the conversion, with the interest from that time (as in this complaint), or by an amount sufficient to indemnify the party injured for the loss which is the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of and which a proper degree of prudence on his part would not have averted [Civ. Code § 3336; see Wong v. Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 17, 20-21, 24 Cal. Rptr. 821 (alternative measure of damages in Civ. Code § 3336 for conversion (indemnification for loss) gives plaintiff the burden of proving unavoidability of loss)]. In addition, plaintiff may recover a fair compensation for the time and money properly expended in pursuit of the property (Paragraph 8) [Civ. Code § 3336] with interest, in the discretion of the jury [see Civ. Code § 3288; see also Waterhouse-Wilcox Co. v. Betz & Mabrey (1925) 73 Cal. App. 236, 243, 238 P. 763 (interest properly awarded on damages for time and money spent in pursuit of property)]. The maximum legal rate of such interest is 10 percent per year [see Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a); see also Beverly Finance Co. v. American Casualty Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 259, 265, 78 Cal. Rptr. 334] .

Exemplary and punitive damages may be recovered in an action for damages based on conversion, given the requisite showing of malice, fraud, or oppression (Paragraph 9) [Civ. Code § 3294; Haigler v. Donnelly (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 674, 681, 117 P.2d 331] . No claim for exemplary damges may state an amount or amounts [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For further discussion, alternative forms for damage allegations, and the procedure for determining the amount of punitive damages being claimed, see Ch. 177, Damages .

[4] Verification

Verification of the complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect that verifying a complaint has on the answer, see Ch. 26, Answers .

PART IV. FORMS

7-77 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 77.41

§ 77.41 Affirmative Defense to Owner's Conversion Complaint Against Auctioneer--Plaintiff Estopped to Assert Title

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Owner's Conversion Complaint Against Auctioneer--Plaintiff Estopped to Assert Title

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

Plaintiff is estopped to assert title to the _____[describe property, e.g., candelabrum] which is the subject of the complaint because of the following:

1. Defendant received the _____ [e.g., candelabrum] from _____ [name of apparent owner, and any status that would clothe that person with apparent authority, e.g., a reputable dealer in antiques], who identified himself/herself to defendant as owner of the _____[e.g., candelabrum], _____ [continue with additional facts inducing defendant's reliance, e.g., and produced certificates of authenticity and provenance] and who engaged defendant to sell it at auction.

2. By transferring possession of the _____[e.g., candelabrum] to _____ [name of apparent owner] [and placing it in the stream of commerce as for immediate sale] [_____ (continue with other indicia of ownership, e.g., along with the certificates of authenticity and provenance)] plaintiff knowingly clothed _____ [name of apparent owner] with apparent authority in a way that defendant could, and reasonably did, rely on those indicia of ownership in agreeing to sell and selling the _____ [e.g., candelabrum].

3. Defendant did not know [until after the _____(e.g., candelabrum) had been sold and the proceeds had been paid over to _____ (name of apparent owner)] that _____ [name of apparent owner] was not the owner [and had _____ (specify any acts of fraud or wrongdoing on the part of the apparent owner, e.g., fraudulently obtained possession of the _____(e.g., candelabrum and certificates) from plaintiff by misrepresenting his/her intention only to establish its value)].

4. Defendant accepted the _____ [e.g., candelabrum] in the ordinary course of business and relied on the customary indicia of ownership. Defendant conducted the auction sale and accounted for the proceeds in the ordinary course of business and in accordance with custom.

[2] Use of Form

The defense in [1], above, may be pleaded by an auctioneer in answer to a complaint against him or her by the true owner for conversion if the plaintiff enabled defendant's principal to appear to be the owner of the property in question, and defendant acted in good faith on the principal's purported ownership [see Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 436-437, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

[3] Nature of Defense

The general rule is that an auctioneer who sells stolen property at auction in good faith and without knowing that it is stolen, is nonetheless liable to the owner for the value of the property [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 436, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] . Similarly, an auctioneer who sells property on behalf of a principal who obtained the property from the owner by fraud and knows of the principal's fraud is liable to the owner [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 437, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] . Other jurisdictions have resorted to such doctrines as consent or waiver to protect an innocent auctioneer who sells without notice of the fraud of his or principal. In California, an innocent auctioneer may rely on the doctrine of equitable estoppel to deny recovery to the true owner if the auctioneer can establish the following [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 437, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; see also Civ. Code § 3543; Crestline Mobile Homes Mfg. Co. v. Pacific Finance Corp. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 773, 778, 8 Cal. Rptr. 448, 356 P.2d 192 (criteria for estoppel in another context)]:

- That plaintiff/true owner knew the facts.
- That plaintiff/true owner intended that his or her conduct would be acted on, or acted in a manner that the defendant auctioneer could reasonably believe that the true owner intended his or her conduct to be acted on.
- That defendant auctioneer was ignorant of the true state of the facts.
- That defendant auctioneer relied on the conduct to his or her injury.

Jessup involved cattle that were consigned to defendant's auction yard with shipping orders and a brand inspector's certificate, which under Food & Agric. Code § 16522(b) was evidence of ownership. Those facts were known to both parties, and were held to establish the first requirement [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 438, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] . Plaintiff/true owner parted with possession (to its buyer, who had them delivered to the auction yard) in return for a draft that was payable at a later date, but which could not be paid when presented, a fact not known to either party. Because the true owner was in a better position than defendant to ascertain the true facts, the court held that the true owner had placed the cattle in the stream of commerce for immediate sale, and in doing so acted in a manner that the auctioneer could reasonably believe indicated the true owner intended its conduct to be acted on [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 438, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

Although the evidence was conflicting regarding defendant/auctioneer's ability to determine whether its principal's draft was good, there were findings by the trial judge that defendant acted in good faith and without culpable knowledge of the facts, so the third requirement was met [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 438-439, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] . The fourth requirement was met on the basis of evidence that defendant/auctioneer accepted the cattle in the usual course of business, and in reliance on its principal's possession, the brand certificates, and the shipping orders, sold the cattle at auction, and paid the proceeds to its principal [Jessup v. Cattle Center, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 434, 439, 66 Cal. Rptr. 361] .

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of auctioneer] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence], and doing business as an auctioneer.

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 77.40[1], Paragraph 3.]

3. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [place, e.g., defendant's place of business], defendant represented to plaintiff that certain _____ [real or personal] property owned by plaintiff, to wit: _____[describe], could not reasonably be sold at auction for more than $_____, and that defendant was willing to buy the property from plaintiff for a price of $_____.

4. Defendant's representation was false. In fact, the property could reasonably have been sold at auction for at least $_____ [and was sold by defendant for that price on _____ (date)].

5. Defendant knew that his/her representation was false, and defendant made the representation with the intent to defraud plaintiff by inducing plaintiff to sell the property for an unreasonably low price.

6. Plaintiff believed defendant's representation and was ignorant that it was false. Plaintiff believed that defendant was possessed of greater and special knowledge regarding the auction business and the prices items would bring at auction sales. In reliance on defendant's representations, plaintiff was induced to, and did, sell the property in question to defendant for a price of $_____. If plaintiff had known the true facts, plaintiff would not have sold the property for such a low price.

7. In consequence of the sale of the property, on _____ [date], plaintiff delivered the property to defendant [along with a _____ (deed or bill of sale)]. To the date of commencement of this action, plaintiff has received from defendant, in payment of the price, the sum of $_____.

8. The actual value of the property at the time plaintiff parted with it was $_____.

9. As a proximate result of defendant's fraud, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, which is the difference between the actual value of the property with which plaintiff parted and the sum which plaintiff received.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____.

[2. For interest thereon at the legal rate from and after _____ (date).]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred.

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by a plaintiff who was induced to sell property to an auctioneer, rather than have it put up for sale at auction, to obtain damages from the auctioneer based on fraud [see Civ. Code § 1709]. The form is loosely based on Bedell Engineering Co. v. Rouse (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 734, 135 P.2d 404 , which involved the auctioneer's intentional misrepresentation of the price which the property would be likely to bring if sold at auction, a misrepresentation the auctioneer made in order to buy the property at a low price and reap profits on resale. Statutorily, an auctioneer has a duty to truthfully represent goods to be auctioned [Civ. Code § 1812.605(c)].

Alternatively, a person in plaintiff's position could seek rescission [see Kaluzok v. Brisson (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 760, 763, 167 P.2d 481 ; Campbell v. McClure (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 806, 811, 227 Cal. Rptr. 450] . For discussion of application of the doctrine of election of remedies, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

[3] Allegations

The allegations of a complaint for damages based on fraud in the sale or purchase of property are:

- Defendant's representation of a material fact (Paragraph 3) [see Cooper v. Leslie Salt Co. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 627, 636, 75 Cal. Rptr. 766, 451 P.2d 406 (facts constituting fraud must be specifically pleaded)].

- The falsity of the representation (Paragraph 4).

- Defendant's knowledge of the falsity (Paragraph 5).

- Defendant's intent to deceive (Paragraph 5) [see Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 811, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964] .

- Plaintiff's actual and justifiable reliance on the truth of the representation (Paragraph 6) [see Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 489, 275 P.2d 15 ; Pacesetter Homes, Inc. v. Brodkin (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 211, 85 Cal. Rptr. 39 (expression of opinion as actionable when expressed by party with superior knowledge to that of plaintiff)].

- Plaintiff's proximately resulting injury (Paragraphs 7-9) [see Vogelsang v. Wolpert (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 102, 109-110, 38 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; see also Civ. Code § 1710 (elements of actionable fraud)].

For alternative forms of allegations, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

If partners, employees, or agents may have committed any of the acts alleged, counsel should incorporate the agency allegation in Paragraph 4 of § 77.40[1] [see generally § 77.40].

[4] Measure of Damages

The measure of damages for fraud in the sale or purchase of property (Paragraph 9) is specified in Civ. Code § 3343 and is basically the difference between the actual value of that with which the defrauded person parted (Paragraph 8) and the actual value of that which he or she received (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 3343(a); see also Civ. Code § 1709 (liability of one who willfully deceives another for damages)]. In an appropriate case, the measure of damages may be broader [see Civ. Code § 3343(a)(1)-(4); Pat Rose Associates v. Coombe (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 19-20, 275 Cal. Rptr. 1 (recovery of lost profits; disapproved on other grounds in Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 105, 115-116, 284 Cal. Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348)], but the defrauded person may not recover any amount measured by the difference between the value of the property as represented and the actual value thereof [see Civ. Code § 3343(b)(1); but see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 432-433, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 (allowing Com. Code § 2721 "benefit of bargain" remedy to defrauded buyer)].

In every case of oppression, fraud, or malice, interest may be given, in the discretion of the jury [Civ. Code § 3288; see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 434, 264 Cal.Rptr. 779 ; Pacific-Southern Mortgage Trust Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 703, 716, 212 Cal. Rptr. 754] . This complaint contains an optional prayer for interest, which may be included if the evidence can be expected to persuade the jury to award interest. Interest may be awarded in a fraud action [Vogelsang v. Wolpert (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 102, 125, 38 Cal. Rptr. 440] .

Exemplary and punitive damages may be awarded in an action for fraud, and may properly be awarded whether or not interest is awarded [see Vogelsang v. Wolpert (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 102, 125, 38 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; see also Civ. Code § 3294 (exemplary damages)]. This complaint does not contain an allegation of or a prayer for exemplary and punitive damages. If plaintiff wishes to claim such damages, an appropriate allegation and a prayer should be inserted into the complaint. For forms, see Ch. 177, Damages , Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , and Ch. 420, Prayers .

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used by a seller of goods at auction to obtain restitution of the property sold when the auction price was artificially depressed as the result of an agreement between the buyer and other persons at the sale to stifle competition in bidding, if that agreement constitutes a fraud on the seller [see Hammond v. Wallace (1890) 85 Cal. 522, 530-531, 24 P. 837 ; Jenkins v. Frink (1866) 30 Cal. 586, 591-592 ; see also Roberts v. Salot (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 294, 299, 333 P.2d 232 (sale under trust deed)]. As explained below, the seller's right to rescind the sale and have restitution probably is limited to cases of forced sales or voluntary sales in which the property is put up without reserve.

The form assumes a voluntary sale without reserve. If the sale was forced, plaintiff's attorney should allege the circumstances of the forced sale and the reasons why plaintiff was unable to assure a sale at a fair price by bidding himself or herself, most likely, lack of adequate funds with which to bid. For discussion and forms relating to judicial and execution sales generally, see Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments .

[3] Allegations

The allegations of a complaint for restitution based on unilateral rescission for cause are:

- The capacities and residences of the parties (Paragraphs 1 and 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (gravamen of action for relief based on rescission as fraud, or transitory; proper venue as county of defendant's residence)].

- The existence and relevant terms of the contract (Paragraph 4) [see California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268, 272, 101 P.2d 74] , and, if the contract is for the sale of goods of a value of $500 or more, a written memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds [Com. Code § 2201(1)].

- The extent to which the agreement is executed (Paragraphs 5, 6) [see Civ. Code § 1692].

- The ground for rescission (Paragraph 7) [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)].

If appropriate, allegations naming fictitious defendants and alleging an agency relationship between defendants, which are Paragraphs 3 and 4, respectively, of § 77.40[1], may be added as Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this complaint.

[4] Agreements by Bidders Not to Bid

An agreement between or among bidders at an auction sale to the effect that one or more of the parties will not bid is not necessarily illegal or fraudulent. For example, if several buyers unite to pool their funds and permit one of their group to bid on behalf of all, if the quantity of goods offered to a single bidder is more than any one wants to buy, the agreement not to bid is lawful [Jenkins v. Frink (1866) 30 Cal. 586, 592-593] . However, if the purpose of the agreement is to stifle competitive bidding and, through a lack of bidders, to depress the price below a fair market value for the property, then the agreement is void as being illegal [Russell v. Soldinger (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 633, 641-642, 131 Cal. Rptr. 145 (probate sale, court found only inference was that agreement was to suppress price);

Jenkins v. Frink (1866) 30 Cal. 586, 591-592] and contrary to public policy [Crawford v. Maddux (1893) 100 Cal. 222, 225, 34 P. 651 ; Packard v. Bird (1870) 40 Cal. 378, 383] .

Such an agreement has been held to be a fraud on the rights of the seller, making the sale voidable on the seller's rescission in a timely and proper manner [Hammond v. Wallace (1890) 85 Cal. 522, 530-531, 24 P. 837 ; see Jenkins v. Frink (1866) 30 Cal. 586, 592 ; see also Roberts v. Salot (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 294, 299, 333 P.2d 232 (sale under trust deed)]. Additionally, a party to an agreement not to bid is unable to enforce an agreement against a buyer, and, as between them, the agreement is illegal, void, and and unenforceable [Russell v. Soldinger (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 633, 641-642, 131 Cal. Rptr. 145] .

In the case of a sale of property put up with reserve, the seller's power to withdraw the property before the sale has been completed [see Com. Code § 2328(3)] would seem an adequate protection against the property's selling for too low a price.

In forced sales, although the seller theoretically has the power to assure a sale at a fair price because he or she may bid [see Com. Code § 2328(4) (exempting forced sales from the prohibition against the seller bidding)], more likely, the seller (debtor) will not have adequate funds with which to make a good faith bid near the fair market value of the property. In that case, the debtor would be in the same situation as a voluntary seller who puts up goods without reserve: there would be no opportunity for self protection by bidding or by withdrawing the goods [see Com. Code § 2328(3)].

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by a seller of property at auction to recover damages from a buyer who breached the contract of sale. Whether the seller or the auctioneer should bring the action depends on the terms of the contract between them [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(d) (violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. for auctioneer to sell goods without first entering into contract with seller)]. In the absence of a contract or usage to the contrary, the auctioneer is authorized to collect the price [Civ. Code § 2362(6)]. Assuming the subject matter of the contact is goods, the seller will have the rights and remedies of a seller under Division 2 of the Commercial Code, which are discussed in § 77.60, generally.

[3] Allegations

This form of complaint alleges:

- The capacity and residence of defendant (Paragraphs 1, 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (discussed in [4], below].

- The date, place, terms, subject matter, and announcements at the auction (Paragraph 3) [see Civ. Code § 1812.607(c) (auctioneer as required to post or distribute terms prior to sale); Civ. Code § 1812.607(k) (required announcement regarding liens on property being auctioned)].

- The sale to defendant as the highest bidder (Paragraph 4);

- The execution of a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code § 2363 (auctioneer's authority to bind both seller and bidder by memorandum); Craig v. Godfroy (1851) 1 Cal. 415, 415-416 (auctioneer's memorandum of sale as substitute for written contract of parties); see discussion in § 77.22[2]].

- Plaintiff's performance (Paragraph 6).

- Defendant's breach (Paragraph 7).

- Damages as measured by Com. Code § 2709(1)(a) (Paragraph 8) [see also § 77.60].

- An optional allegation for incidental damages (Paragraph 9) [Com. Code § 2710].

The rate of interest on damages for breach of contract will be either the legal rate of 10 percent per year [see Cal.

Const., art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a)], any legal rate of interest stipulated by contract, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [see Civ. Code § 3289(a)], or the rate of 10 percent per annum after a breach, if a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, does not stipulate a legal rate of interest [see Civ. Code § 3289(b)].

[4] Venue in Contract Actions

Unless the contract is one for the sale of goods intended primarily for personal, family, or household use or one governed by Civ. Code § 1812.10 or 2984.4 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b)], if a defendant has contracted to perform an obligation in a particular county, either that county or the county in which the contract was entered into or the county in which the defendant, or any defendant, resides at the time of the commencement of the action is the proper venue for an action on the contract. The county in which the obligation was incurred is deemed the county in which it is to be performed, unless there is a contract in writing to the contrary [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of seller] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence].

2. [Defendant _____ (name of auctioneer) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California (or allege other capacity and residence), and doing business as an auctioneer, and in that capacity conducted the auction out of which this action arises (If venue is sought in county where auction was conducted, add: in _____County, California).]

3. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [place], California, defendant [_____ (name of seller)] put up certain property, to wit: _____ [describe, e.g., a herd of cattle], for sale at auction, and plaintiff then and there offered the highest bid and bought the property for a price of $_____. [A copy of the memorandum of sale executed by (defendant) _____ (name of auctioneer), as auctioneer, is attached to this complaint marked Exhibit "A" and incorporated by reference.] Defendant [_____ (name of seller)] subsequently _____ [describe defendant's performance, e.g., caused the herd to be delivered to plaintiff along with a bill of sale].

4. In connection with the sale, [defendant] _____[name of auctioneer], the auctioneer at the sale, made certain representations, as defendant [_____ (name of seller)]'s agent, concerning _____ [defendant's title to or the quantity of or the quality of] the property, to wit: _____ [describe representations, e.g., that the herd consisted of two hundred head, more or less]. These representations were made _____ [describe how, e.g., both orally at the time of sale and in writing in a catalog distributed before the sale].

5. Plaintiff believed these representations to be true and relied on that belief in bidding on and buying the property. If plaintiff had known that the representations were not true, then plaintiff would not have bought the property for the price that plaintiff paid.

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff discovered that the property was not as represented, in that _____[describe how property fails to conform to warranty, e.g., the herd consisted of only 53 head]. [If property is goods, add: Plaintiff immediately thereafter gave defendant [_____ (name of seller)] notice, as required by Commercial Code Section 2607.] [A copy of that written notice is attached to this complaint marked Exhibit "B" and incorporated herein by reference.]

7. If the property had been as represented, it would have had a fair market value of $_____.

8. The actual value of the property at the time plaintiff received it was $_____.

9. As a consequence of defendant [_____(name of seller)]'s breach of warranty hereinabove alleged, plaintiff has sustained damages in the sum of $_____.

[10. Special damages, if any. See § 77.51[1], Paragraph 9.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For damages in the sum of $_____.

2. For interest thereon at the legal rate from and after _____ [date].

3. [Special damages, if any.]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used by a buyer to obtain damages based on the failure of property bought at auction to conform to warranties made on behalf of the seller by the auctioneer [Civ. Code § 3281; Com. Code § 2714], who is the seller's agent for purposes of warranties with respect to the title of the principal and the quality and quantity of the property unless there is some agreement or usage to the contrary [Civ. Code §§ 2323, 2362(3)]. If an auctioneer is authorized to sell and convey real property, then that authority includes authority to give "the usual covenants of warranty" [see Civ. Code § 2324]. In addition, the seller may become bound by a warranty stated in his auctioneer's catalog if there is no agreement or understanding to the contrary [see Dugan v. Phillips (1926) 77 Cal. App. 268, 275, 246 P. 566] .

This action for breach of warranty is akin to an action in tort for fraud (deceit) but lacks the element of intent to deceive [see § 77.42]. An action for breach of warranty is appropriate if the buyer wants to affirm the sale contract and seek damages.

[3] Auctioneer as Defendant

The form provides optional allegations to join the auctioneer as defendant. The auctioneer may be joined as a defendant on the ground that he or she is liable for breach of warranty if he or she makes misrepresentations about the property [see Spaulding v. O'Connor (1927) 87 Cal. App. 82, 84-85, 261 P. 766] . An early case held the auctioneer liable for misrepresentation of the quantity of goods sold, on the ground that the buyer presumably relied on the representation and changed his position because of it, as where he made contracts for resale [Burgoyne et al. v. Middleton et al. (1854) 4 Cal. 64, 66-67] .

However, no breach of warranty claim arises from an auctioneer's sale of used machinery "as is" when title passed directly from seller to buyer and uncontradicted evidence of custom was that the term "as is" means that the auctioneer did not modify, alter, inspect or operate the item sold [Brejcha v. Wilson Machinery, Inc. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 630, 641, 206 Cal. Rptr. 688] . Additionally, no cause of action for strict liability may be stated against an auctioneer of second-hand machinery when it is sold "as is" [Brejcha v. Wilson Machinery, Inc. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 630, 639, 206 Cal. Rptr. 688 ; Tauber-Arons Auctioneers Co. v. Superior Court (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 268, 283-284, 161 Cal. Rptr. 789] .

[4] Other Remedies Available to Buyer

If the auctioneer knowingly misrepresented the nature of any item, including, but not limited to, its age, authenticity, value, condition, or origin, the buyer may return the item to the auctioneer or auction company within five days after the date of the auction sale and receive a refund within 24 hours of return [Civ. Code § 1812.608(i)].

A buyer injured by nonconformity of goods purchased at auction also has other options under the Commercial Code. If the nonconformity is discovered before the buyer accepts the goods, or in time for the buyer to revoke acceptance, the buyer may cancel the contract and recover the purchase price, purchase substitute goods and recover damages [see Com. Code § 2711]. With respect to whether a sale of goods is accompanied by any express or implied warranties, the Commercial Code does not distinguish between a sale at auction and a sale by any other method [see Com. Code §§ 2106(1) ("sale" defined), 2312-2315 (warranties), together with Official Comments].

A buyer injured by a material misrepresentation concerning the goods may also rescind in accordance with Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1) [see § 77.51].

[5] Allegations and Measure of Damages

This complaint alleges:

- The capacities and residences of the defendants (Paragraphs 1, 2).

- The conduct of the auction sale and existence of a memorandum of sale (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (venue); Com. Code § 2201(1) (statute of frauds if goods of value of $500 or more are involved); for discussion, see 77.22[2]].

- The representations and warranties (Paragraph 4).

- Plaintiff's reliance on the representations (Paragraph 5).

- Plaintiff's discovery of the breach of the warranty and issuance of notification (Paragraph 6) [Com. Code § 2607(3)(A); see Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 116, 135-136, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 (buyer has burden of proving reasonable notice; question whether notice was properly given must be determined from particular circumstances, and when but one inference can be drawn from undisputed facts, issue may be determined as matter of law)].

If appropriate, allegations naming fictitious defendants and alleging an agency relationship between defendants, which are Paragraphs 3 and 4, respectively, of § 77.40[1], may be added between Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this complaint. It is not necessary to allege the agency relationship established by Civ. Code §§ 2323, 2362(3) [see § 77.50[2]].

A buyer who has accepted goods and given notification in accordance with Com. Code § 2607(3), may recover as damages for nonconformity the loss resulting in the ordinary course of events from the seller's breach, as determined in any manner that is reasonable [Com. Code § 2714(1)].

The measure of damages for breach of warranty under the Commercial Code is the difference (Paragraph 9) at the time and place of acceptance between the value of the goods accepted (Paragraph 8) and the value they would have had if they had been as warranted (Paragraph 7), unless special circumstances show proximate damages of a different amount [Com. Code § 2714(2)]. The buyer may also recover incidental (Paragraph 10) and consequential damages [Com. Code §§ 2714(3), 2715]. Incidental damages include expenses reasonably incurred in inspection, receipt, transportation and care and custody of the goods (Paragraph 10) [Com. Code § 2715(1)]. Consequential damages in this context arise from the particular needs of the buyer of which the seller was aware at the time of contracting, and which could not be mitigated by cover or otherwise, as well as any injury to property or person resulting from the breach of warranty [Com. Code § 2715(2)].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of seller] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence].

2. [Defendant _____ (name of auctioneer) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a California corporation with its principal place of business in _____ County, California (or allege other capacity and residence), and doing business as an auctioneer, and in that capacity conducted the auction out of which this action arises (If venue is sought in county where auction was conducted, add: in _____ County, California).]

3. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [place], California, certain property then owned by defendant [_____ (name of seller)], to wit: _____ [describe, e.g., a 1995 General Motors trailer and two John Deere backhoes], was put up for sale at auction and was then and there bought by plaintiff, as highest bidder, for a price of $_____ [continue if multiple items were purchased, e.g., $10,000 for the trailer, and $6,100 and $8,600, respectively, for the backhoes]. The terms of the sale were as follows: _____ [state terms]. [A copy of the memorandum of sale executed by (defendant) _____ (name of auctioneer), as auctioneer, is attached to this complaint marked Exhibit "A" and incorporated herein by reference.]

4. _____ [Describe extent to which item(s) have been delivered to plaintiff, e.g., On or about _____ (date), plaintiff took delivery of the trailer and backhoes].

5. _____ [Describe extent of payment(s) made by plaintiff, e.g., Plaintiff paid a $7,000 down payment to (defendant) _____ (name of auctioneer) at the time of the auction and has since paid the balance of the $24,700 to defendant _____ (name of seller)].

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff discovered that defendant _____ [name of seller] had engaged in secret bidding for the sole purpose of increasing the bid on the item(s) sold by _____ [making or procuring] bids at the sale on defendant's own behalf, in competition with plaintiff's bids. No notice was given at the sale or before that defendant _____ [name of seller] reserved the right to so bid.

[7. If auctioneer knew of the secret bidding, describe extent of auctioneer's knowledge and participation: On or about _____ (date), plaintiff discovered that defendant _____ (name of auctioneer) knew of the secret bidding by seller (and on seller's behalf) and (agreed to allow and receive those bids and) knowingly allowed and received those bids without giving notice to plaintiff or the audience that defendant seller was bidding.]

[EITHER, if plaintiff has given notice of rescission or has restored or offered to restore all consideration received]

8. _____ [Describe, e.g., On or about _____ (date), plaintiff notified defendant _____ (name of seller) of plaintiff's rescission of the sale and _____ (restored to defendant or offered to restore to defendant the _____ (describe property, e.g., trailer and backhoes), on condition that defendant restore to plaintiff the $_____ paid thus far by plaintiff to defendant under the contract.]

[OR, if plaintiff has not given notice of rescission but has received something of value]

8. Plaintiff intends service of the summons and complaint in this action to serve as notice of rescission of the auction sale and hereby offers to restore to defendant _____ [name of seller] the _____ [describe property, e.g., trailer and backhoes], on condition that defendant restore to plaintiff the $_____ paid thus far by plaintiff to defendant under the contract.

[CONTINUE]

[9. As a result of the purchase at auction of the goods described in this complaint and the secret bidding engaged in at that auction, plaintiff has incurred expenses in addition to the payment alleged above. Those expenses include, without limitation _____ (describe additional expenses, e.g., inspection and vehicle license and registration fees, insurance, repair, and storage costs). Plaintiff has paid (or incurred) a total of $_____ for those expenses.]

[10. Defendant(s) intentionally and maliciously (agreed to engage in and) engaged in the secret bidding herein alleged, without giving notice to plaintiff or other bidders, and without any intention that those bids be accepted, but for the sole purpose of injuring plaintiff and artificially raising the price plaintiff had to pay for the goods. (Defendant _____ (name of auctioneer) knowingly allowed and received those bids with knowledge that their sole purpose was to artificially raise the price.)]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment [against defendants, and each of them,] as follows:

1. That this court declare that the auction sale and resultant contract are rescinded and that defendant(s) be ordered return to plaintiff the $_____ paid by plaintiff as/towards the purchase price with interest thereon at the legal rate from the date of rescission, or, in the alternative, that the contract be reformed by reduction of the purchase price to an amount equal to the last good faith bid plaintiff made before the first secret bid made by defendant seller or on his/her/its behalf and that defendant(s) be ordered to return to plaintiff the excess paid by plaintiff as/towards the purchase price with interest thereon.

2. For damages in that amount of $_____ with interest.

[3. For exemplary damages.]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by a buyer who purchased goods at an auction at which, without notice to the buyer or the audience, bids were made by the seller or on the seller's behalf. This practice, sometimes referred to as "by-bidding," entitles the buyer to rescission and restitution [see Civ. Code §§ 1689(b)(1), 1812.603, 1812.608(h)(2)], or, in the alternative, to reform the sale contract by having the sale price reduced to the amount of the last good faith bid prior to the completion of the sale. However, this option does not apply in the case of a forced (e.g., execution) sale [Com. Code § 2328(4)].

The auctioneer does not need to be made a party unless the buyer seeks restitution of consideration that the auctioneer has, or the auctioneer was culpable and the buyer seeks to recover damages from the auctioneer [see Civ. Code §§ 1812.603, 1812.608(h)(2); Com. Code § 2328(4); but see Hartman Ranch Co. v. Associated Oil Co. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 232, 262-265, 73 P.2d 1163 (every party to contract to be rescinded must be joined in action)].

The form also contains an allegation for punitive damages, as approved in Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077 , which involved an agreement between the seller and the auctioneer that the owner would bid on the items to increase the price. No claim for exemplary damges may state an amount or amounts [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

[3] Bases of Action

[a] Common Law

At common law, the employment by the seller of so-called "by-bidders" or "puffers" to bid at a sale by auction, without the knowledge of the buyer, and without an intention on the part of the bidder to buy, is a fraud against the public, and in particular, on the buyer, which entitles the buyer to rescind the purchase [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1); Haley v. Bloomquist (1928) 204 Cal. 253, 257, 268 P. 365 ; Dealey v. East San Mateo Land Co. (1913) 21 Cal. App. 39, 41, 130 P. 1066] .

[b] Commercial Code

Except in the case of a forced sale, if the auctioneer knowingly receives a bid on the seller's behalf or the seller makes or procures such a bid, and no notice was given that the seller reserved the right for such bidding, the buyer has the option of either avoiding the sale or taking the goods at the price of the last good faith bid prior to the completion of the sale [Com. Code § 2328(4); see Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 151-153, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077 (sale by lessor/owner after repossessing goods from lessee was not forced sale)].

[4] Civil Code Remedy

As an alternative, the seller could file a petition for restitution in the superior court of the county in which the auction occurred [Civ. Code § 1812.603; for discussion, see § 77.23]. Civ. Code § 1812.603 provides for restitution to any person injured by a violation of the title governing auctioneers and auction companies (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.). It is a violation of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq. for an auctioneer to cause or allow anyone, usually the owner, consignor, or an agent of either, to bid solely for the purpose of increasing the bid without disclosing to the audience that the owner, consignor, or agent has reserved the right to so bid [Civ. Code § 1812.608(h)(2)].

[5] Allegations

[a] Basic Allegations

The allegations of a complaint for restitution based on unilateral rescission for cause are:

- The capacities and residences of the defendants (Paragraphs 1 and 2) [see discussion in [7], below].

- The existence and relevant terms of the contract (Paragraph 3) [see California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268, 272, 101 P.2d 74] , and, if the contract is for the sale of goods of a value of $500 or more, a written memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds [Com. Code § 2201(1); for discussion, see § 77.22[2]].

- What money or other thing is owing plaintiff as a consequence of the rescission (Paragraphs 4, 5) [see Civ. Code § 1692].

- The ground for rescission (Paragraph 6) [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)].

If appropriate, allegations naming fictitious defendants and alleging an agency relationship between defendants, which are Paragraphs 3 and 4, respectively, of § 77.40[1], may be added between Paragraphs 2 and 3 of this complaint.

If the auctioneer knew of the seller's bidding and plaintiff seeks restitution or damages from the auctioneer, optional Paragraph 7 should be used to allege the auctioneer's part in the transaction.

Optional Paragraph 9 is for use to allege any other damages plaintiff may need to be made whole [see Civ. Code § 1692 (rescission and restitution)].

[b] Allegations for Punitive Damages

Optional Paragraph 10 is for use to allege the basis for an award of punitive damages [see Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 153, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077] . The Court in Nevada National Leasing found the record contained substantial evidence to establish malice in fact based on findings that the auctioneer and the seller conspired to fraudulently raise the prices by making secret fictitious bids and that their intent in making those bids was to defraud and injure the successful bidder, that seller's bids were made solely to raise the sales price, and that the seller had no intention of paying the purchase price if it was the successful bidder [Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 153, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077] .

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount or amounts [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

[c] Allegations for Rescission

If plaintiff is seeking restitution rather than reformation, one of the alternative optional Paragraphs 8 should be used to allege the status of the unilateral rescission [see Civ. Code § 1691]. Subject to an exception discussed below, to effect a rescission a party to the contract must, promptly on discovering the facts which entitle him or her to rescind if he or she is free from duress, menace, undue influence, or disability, and is aware of his or her right to rescind, give notice to the party as to whom he or she rescinds and restore to the other party everything of value which he or has received from that party under the contract or offer to restore the same on condition that the other party do likewise, unless the latter is unable or positively refuses to do so. When notice of rescission has not otherwise been given or an offer to restore the benefits received under the contract has not otherwise been made, the service of a pleading in an action or proceeding that seeks relief based on rescission shall be deemed to be such notice or offer or both [Civ. Code § 1691].

An exception to the rule requiring notice is that when relief based on rescission is claimed in an action or proceeding, relief shall not be denied because of delay in giving notice of rescission unless that delay has been substantially prejudicial to the other party. A party who has received benefits by reason of a contract that is subject to rescission and who in an action or proceeding seeks relief based on rescission shall not be denied relief because of a delay in restoring or in tendering restoration of benefits before judgment unless that delay has been substantially prejudicial to the other party; but the court may make a tender of restoration a condition of its judgment [Civ. Code § 1693].

[6] Price Reduction Example

The award affirmed under Com. Code § 2328(4) in Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 150-151, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077 was based on the difference between plaintiff/buyer's winning bids on each of the three items purchased and the last bid plaintiff made for each item before seller's sham bid on that item.

Plaintiff/buyer's last bids were $10,000, $6,100, and $8,600, respectively on the three items purchased. Plaintiff's last bids before seller's sham bids were $6,000, $3,500, and $500, respectively, thus, showing inflation of $4,000, $2,600, and $8,100 on each of the three items, for a total reduction of $14,700 [Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 150, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077] .

[7] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action [see Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10]. Actions to cancel or rescind a contract are limited civil cases when the relief is sought in connection with an action to recover money not exceeding $25,000, or property of a value not exceeding $25,000 paid or delivered under or in consideration of the contract. Actions to revise a contract are limited civil cases if the relief is sought in an action upon the contract if the action otherwise is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 86(a)(3)]. In this regard, an action will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85(a), 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

An action for reformation of a contract is properly brought in the county in which any defendant resides at the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (action against corporation is properly brought in county of defendant's principal place of business)].

If the gravamen of the action for relief based on rescission is fraud, the action is considered transitory, and the proper venue is the county of defendant's residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

§ 77.52 Affirmative Defense to Complaint to Enforce Auction Sale--Bidding By or On Behalf of Seller Without Notice [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1); Com. Code § 2328(4)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Complaint to Enforce Auction Sale--Bidding By or On Behalf of Seller Without Notice [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1); Com. Code § 2328(4)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

The auction sale referred to in the complaint is a fraud on the public, against public policy, and cannot be the basis for the relief sought by plaintiff because defendant's winning bid and the resultant sale were artificially and fraudulently inflated by the auctioneer's acceptance of bids by plaintiff [and on plaintiff's behalf], which bids were made without notice that plaintiff reserved the right for such bids and for the sole purpose of creating artificial bidding competition, with no intention on the part of [either] plaintiff [or those bidding on plaintiff's behalf] to purchase the property at the prices bid. [Defendant is informed and believes and on such information and belief alleges that his/her last good faith bid before sham bids by or on behalf of plaintiff was in the amount of $_____.]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an affirmative defense that may be pleaded by a buyer in answer to a complaint by the seller to collect the purchase price. If the plaintiff in the main action is the auctioneer, the defense may be used, but this form will have to be modified to reflect that the seller, not the plaintiff, was doing the secret bidding, and whether the auctioneer knew of or agreed to the secret bidding [see § 77.51].

[3] Nature of Defense

The employment by the seller of so-called "by-bidders" or "puffers" to bid at a sale by auction, without the knowledge of the buyer, and without an intention on the part of the bidder to buy, is a fraud against the public, and in particular, on the buyer [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(h)(2); Haley v. Bloomquist (1928) 204 Cal. 253, 257, 268 P. 365 ; Dealey v. East San Mateo Land Co. (1913) 21 Cal. App. 39, 41, 130 P. 1066] . A buyer who purchased property based on such an artificially inflated bid has the option of either avoiding the sale or taking the goods at the price of the last good faith bid prior to the completion of the sale [Com. Code § 2328(4); see Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 151-153, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077] . The optional language in this form assumes the buyer prefers to keep the goods, but seeks a reduction in price.

An agreement between the seller of property sold at auction and an auctioneer, by which the auctioneer is allowed to use by-bidders at the sale, is contrary to public policy as the perpetration of a fraud, and the auctioneer cannot recover compensation on the basis of such an agreement. Older cases denied the auctioneer any recovery whether or not any buyer exercised his or her or right to rescind a sale on the ground of the fraudulently inflated price [see § 77.51], and regardless of how or when the fraudulent nature of the agreement was brought to the attention of the court. The basis for the denial of relief is that the court will not allow itself to be used to settle a controversy arising from an agreement to perpetrate a fraud [Dealey v. East San Mateo Land Co. (1913) 21 Cal. App. 39, 41-42, 130 P. 1066 (citing former Civ. Code § 1797, but noting that similar rule prevailed at common law)]. More recently, auctioneers who agreed to such secret bidding have been held liable for punitive damages [see Nevada National Leasing Co. v. Hereford (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 146, 153, 203 Cal. Rptr. 118, 680 P.2d 1077 (discussed in § 77.51)].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all relevant times mentioned in this complaint, plaintiff was doing business as an auctioneer at _____ [street address, city, and county], California, and had posted and maintained with the Secretary of State the _____ [bond or deposit in lieu of bond] required by Civil Code Section 1812.600.

2. Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident of _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence of defendant].

[3. Fictitious defendants, if appropriate. See § 77.40[1], Paragraph 3.]

4. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], California, plaintiff and _____ [owner of property sold at auction] entered into a written contract under the terms of which _____ [owner] employed plaintiff as an auctioneer to conduct a public auction sale of _____ [describe property sold at auction, e.g., a 1986 John Deere tractor with plow attachment]. A copy of the contract is attached as Exhibit "A" and incorporated by reference.

5. On or about _____ [date], at a public auction conducted by plaintiff, as auctioneer, at plaintiff's place of business, and pursuant to the contract, plaintiff sold the above-described property to defendant, who was the highest bidder, for $_____. [If goods, as defined in Com. Code § 2105(1), were sold for more than $500, or if other personal property, not consisting of securities, was sold for more than $5,000, add: Promptly after the sale was completed, plaintiff wrote out a memorandum of the sale, which was signed by plaintiff _____ (and defendant or for himself/herself and as agent of seller and of defendant, as buyer). A copy of the memorandum is attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated by reference.]

[EITHER]

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff delivered _____ [the goods or specify other documents of title or means of delivery, e.g., the certificate of ownership and keys to the tractor] to defendant.

[OR]

6. [Plaintiff's tender and performance. See § 77.44[1], Paragraph 6.]

[CONTINUE]

[7. Defendant wrongfully _____ (specify defendant's breach, if any, in addition to nonpayment, e.g., refused to accept delivery of the goods).]

8. Plaintiff has duly demanded of defendant the sum of $_____ but defendant has failed, and continues to fail, to pay plaintiff that sum or any part of it.

[9. Plaintiff has made a reasonable effort to resell the goods described in Paragraph 4 at a reasonable price but has been unable to do so.]

[10. Circumstances reasonably indicate that any attempt by plaintiff to resell the goods described in Paragraph 4 would be impracticable in that _____ (specify).]

[11. Plaintiff has incurred expenses of $_____ for storage and maintenance of the property sold to defendant and will continue to incur storage expenses at the rate of $_____ per month.]

12. The market value of the goods at the time and place for tender was $_____. As a direct and proximate result of defendant's conduct, plaintiff has suffered damages in the sum of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For the sum of $_____, with interest thereon at the legal rate from _____ [date of sale].

2. For incidental damages in the amount of $_____.

3. For costs of suit herein incurred.

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by an auctioneer to bring an action against the highest bidder when the defendant bidder failed to pay the price when it became due. Whether the seller or the auctioneer should bring the action depends on the terms of the contract between them [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(d) (violation of title governing Auctioneers and Auction Companies, Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., for auctioneer to sell goods without first entering into contract with seller)]. In the absence of a contract or usage to the contrary, the auctioneer is authorized to collect the price [Civ. Code § 2362(6); see also Walter J. Warren Ins. Agency v. Surpur Timber Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 99, 104, 58 Cal. Rptr. 143 (agent who is liable to principal for price of thing sold may institute action for price in own name)].

[3] Commercial Code Remedies

Under Com. Code § 2709, the measure of damages will be the contract price, less any amount recovered on resale. That measure of damages is applicable if (1) the goods have been accepted by the buyer, (2) the goods have been lost or damaged within a commercially reasonable time after risk of loss has passed to the buyer, or (3) the seller is unable after reasonable effort to resell the goods at a reasonable price or the circumstances reasonably indicate that such effort will be unavailing [see Com. Code § 2709(1),(2), see Civ. Code § 2362(6); Com. Code § 2328].

If the buyer has not accepted the goods and the auctioneer cannot or does not wish to attempt resale or prove that resale efforts are likely to be unavailing, the measure of damages is the difference between the market price at the time and place for tender and the unpaid contract price, together with any incidental damages, less expenses saved in consequence of the buyer's breach [Com. Code § 2708(1); see Com. Code § 2709(3) (after buyer has wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of goods, has failed to make payment, or has repudiated, seller who is held not to be entitled to price under Com. Code § 2709 will be awarded damages for nonacceptance under Com. Code § 2708)].

One who sues for the price under Com. Code § 2709 must hold for the buyer any goods identified in the contract that are still in his or her control, except that if resale becomes possible, the plaintiff may resell the goods at any time prior to collection of the judgment. The net proceeds of resale must be credited to the buyer. Payment of the judgment entitles the buyer to any goods not resold [Com. Code § 2709(2)].

A "sale" consists in the passing of title from the seller to the buyer for a price [Com. Code § 2106(1)]. For further discussion concerning when an auction sale is complete and when title passes, see § 77.21.

[4] Allegations

The form alleges the license and capacity of plaintiff auctioneer (Paragraph 1) [see former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5730-5747, 5772.6; see also § 77.12].

This form also alleges:

- The capacity and residence of the defendant (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) (venue for individual defendant), Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (venue for corporate defendant); see also § 77.44].

- The formation of the contract between plaintiff and the seller (Paragraph 4) [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(d) (requirements of contract with seller)].

- The auction sale to defendant, and if necessary, the making of a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code §§ 1624.5(a), 2363 (sale of personal property other than goods for more than $5,000"--auctioneer's authority to sign memorandum of sale as agent of buyer and seller); Com. Code § 2201 (goods); for discussion, see § 77.22[2][a]].

- Either plaintiff's delivery of the goods to defendant or plaintiff's tender, if necessary, and performance (alternative Paragraphs 6) [see Com. Code § 2709(1)(a) (accepted goods); see also Walnut Creek Pipe Distributors, Inc. v. Gates Rubber Co. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 810, 817-818, 39 Cal. Rptr. 767 (decided under former Civ. Code § 1783(3) (now see Com. Code § 2709), under which seller is required to establish tender, or waiver of tender, and ability to perform)].

- Any breach by the defendant in addition to the failure to pay for the goods (Paragraph 7).

- Plaintiff's demand and defendant's failure to pay (Paragraph 8).

- Plaintiff's attempts at resale (Paragraph 9) or that resale is likely to be commercially impracticable (Paragraph 10) [see Com. Code § 2709(1)(b)].

- The market value of the goods at the time and place for tender and plaintiff's damages (Paragraph 12).

Paragraph 12 is added in the event plaintiff is unable to prove all elements necessary to recover under Com. Code § 2709. Defendant is given credit for any resale proceeds and any payments under the contract [see Com. Code §§ 2708, 2709(2); see also [2], above]. Optional Paragraph 3 alleges the existence of fictitious defendants, and optional Paragraph 11 alleges incidental damages [see Com. Code §§ 2708(2), 2709(1)]. If agency allegations are appropriate, incorporate § 77.40[1], Paragraph 4.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used by an auctioneer to obtain damages based on breach of contract from a seller who failed to pay the auctioneer the compensation due him or her.

[3] Allegation Regarding License and Bond

Under former Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 5772.6, 5772.7 (repealed in 1993) [see § 77.12], an auctioneer could not recover compensation for services without alleging and proving that he or she was duly licensed at all times during the performance of the act or service. Without a license, the auctioneer was not entitled to receive any money or consideration in payment of an act or service that required a license. The current provisions (Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq.) do not contain any specific requirements for maintenance of actions for compensation.

The current provision regulating the terms of the contract between the auctioneer and the seller require disclosure that the auctioneer or auction company has a bond on file with the Secretary of State [Civ. Code § 1812.608(d)(6)]. Presumably general principles of public policy would deny compensation to an auctioneer who was not in compliance with that section or the bonding requirements of Civ. Code § 1812.600 et seq., discussed in § 77.13[1].

[4] Contract Allegations

The essential allegations of a complaint for damages based on breach of contract are:

- The existence of the contract (Paragraph 4) [see Civ. Code § 1812.608(d), discussed in §§ 77.19, 77.22[1]].

- The performance of all conditions on plaintiff's part or an excuse for nonperformance (Paragraph 5).

- Defendant's breach (Paragraph 6).

- Plaintiff's consequent damage (Paragraph 7) [Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; Lortz v. Connell (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 286, 290, 78 Cal. Rptr. 6] .

The detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest thereon [Civ. Code § 3302]. The rate of interest will be either the legal rate of 10 percent per year [see Cal. Const. art. XV, § 1; Code Civ. Proc. § 685.010(a)], any legal rate of interest stipulated by contract, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [see Civ. Code § 3289(a)], or the rate of 10 percent per annum after a breach, if a contract entered into after January 1, 1986, does not stipulate a legal rate of interest [see Civ. Code § 3289(b)].
