Preface

CEB's aim is to create exceptional practice materials for members of the California bar, and to keep those materials current. In 1957, CEB published the pioneer California Civil Procedure Before Trial, a one-of-a-kind resource for California trial attorneys. After nearly 50 years in print, this title still endeavors to offer litigators the reliable information they need to survive, and perhaps even thrive, in today's fast-paced pretrial environment.

The original one-volume edition was replaced by two casebound volumes in 1977 and 1978, with separate softcover updates published annually, until the Third Edition appeared in three looseleaf volumes in 1990. This Fourth Edition, also produced in three volumes, entirely replaces the earlier edition; similarly, an interleafed update that captures new legislation, cases, and court rules as they develop will be available to practitioners on a yearly basis.

The new edition has been reorganized and improved, with some chapters streamlined and combined with other chapters or rewritten from the standpoint of present-day law and practice. Material derived from chapters in the previous editions and new topics not discussed in former editions have been integrated into the current volumes. The sequence and content of chapters have been changed to reflect the ever-changing rules that govern the litigation process and to communicate them as clearly and as simply as possible.

For example, chap 40 fuses several earlier chapters on court-controlled status conferences into a new chapter on court management of civil cases. During the life of the previous edition, continually changing court rules implementing the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act of 1990 (Govt C §§68600-68620)—first as county "fast-track" programs and now as statewide differential case management rules—have had a significant impact on the landscape in which attorneys practice law. Because the trial courts have been under increasing pressure to dispose of most of their cases within one year after the filing date (see Cal Rules of Ct 209; App Div I §2), corresponding time constraints have been imposed on attorneys. Vigorous efforts by California trial judges to eliminate backlog and reduce delay have resulted in a barely perceptible swing toward individualized case management. Recent amendments to court rules are beginning to articulate the trial court's responsibility to apply disposition time goals in a fair and flexible manner and to consider each case on its merits. Litigators can expect this chapter to evolve in future years as CEB attorneys engage in the rather formidable task of updating this remarkable book.

Opening sections of this edition focus on managing the attorney-client relationship, avoiding conflicts, handling jurisdictional issues, and drafting court papers properly. Preparing and serving complaints, evaluating the variety of responses possible to challenge the pleadings, and dealing with injunctions and other provisional remedies are at the heart of the book. Whether to initiate or to oppose procedures that may terminate an action without trial are covered in such chapters as summary judgment and dismissal. Because today's advocates must be as skilled in nonadversarial approaches as in litigation procedures, an extensive group of chapters on various models for settling cases and for negotiating resolution of disputes concludes the book.

Discovery methods under the California Discovery Act, such as depositions, interrogatories, demands for inspection, and exchange of expert witness information, are thoroughly discussed in CEB's companion book, California Civil Discovery Practice. For cases that are likely to end in a trial, see California Trial Practice: Civil Procedure During Trial.

This publication is also available through CEB's Web-based product, OnLAW, which enables litigators to conduct word searches and to immediately view the exact language of citations through online links. For more information, go to www.ceb.com.

CEB has a long tradition of relying on advice drawn from the experience of experts, and to this end wishes to thank Palmer Brown Madden, who practices as an ADR neutral, for his contributions to chap 45 on alternative dispute resolution. CEB is deeply indebted to Jill A. Sperber, Director of the State Bar Office of Mandatory Fee Arbitration, for her invaluable work in rewriting chap 5.

CEB gratefully acknowledges the following authors whose chapters in A Litigator's Guide to Effective Use of ADR in California (Cal CEB 2005) were used as the basis for rewriting chapters 37, 45, and 46 in this publication: Hiro N. Aragaki, Simao J. S. Avila, Denise M. Howell, Peter J. Kennedy, Guy O. Kornblum, James C. Martin, Martin Quinn, William A. Robinson, and John S. Warnlof.

Finally, CEB gratefully acknowledges the countless California attorneys and judges who wrote commentary for previous editions, and who in effect continue to serve as consulting editors of this edition. The chapter authors of this title, as it emerged in 1957, 1978-1978, and 1990, are listed on page xvii.

Linda Compton was the project manager of this edition. CEB Attorneys Robin Kojima, Elizabeth Allen, and Julie Hammel Brook performed legal editing. Andy Rosner provided legal research analysis. Robert W. Burke and Kathryn Te Selle wrote the index. Cinda Ely handled copyediting and production. Grier Thornburg designed the book. Composition was performed by CEB's Electronic Publishing staff.

June 2010 Update

CEB Attorney Editors Karen Frasier-Kolligs (Managing Editor) and David Saunders and Legal Editors Beth Johnson, Diane Stanton, Karen Nutter, and Enrique DeAnda contributed to this update. Joseph Curran handled copyediting and production. Administrative support was provided by Kenya Denman and Nila Kanzaria. Kathryn Te Selle and Robert W. Burke updated the index. Composition was performed by CEB's Electronic Publishing staff.

About This Book

The amount of information in a book on California civil procedure before trial is necessarily vast, yet this title is designed to make the essential details easily retrievable. This Fourth Edition includes many features to help litigators find and use the specific information they need, including:

Chapter Outlines. The headings set out at the beginning of each chapter list the section numbers where explanations of particular items can be found. The outline also serves as a conceptual guide to the procedure covered in the chapter, how the parts fit into the whole, and the steps necessary to implement it.

Scope of Chapter. Each chapter begins with a brief introduction describing the topics covered and referencing where to find related matters.

Governing Law. A second introductory section cites the legal authorities on which a civil litigation procedure is based and provides the governing framework for the chapter's discussion.

Practice Tips, Examples, and Notes. Practice advice that attorneys and judges have contributed to chapters, examples that amplify points under discussion, and other matters that bear special notice are highlighted in a different format to call attention to the material.

Diagnostic Questions. A series of questions is often useful in suggesting how and when a procedure may be used. Chapters that include diagnostic questions alert practitioners to the characteristics and requirements of the procedure under consideration.

Checklists. Many chapters contain a checklist setting out the steps for initiating or responding to the procedure covered in the chapter. Cross-references after each item identify the sections that offer detailed explanations. An attorney familiar with a procedure may find that the checklist makes reference to the text unnecessary, while ensuring that all requisite measures are taken.

Forms. Forms used to implement the procedures discussed in this book, including mandatory and optional Judicial Council forms, are grouped at the end of each chapter. Model attorney-drafted forms are useful to litigators when adapted appropriately to a particular case or situation. See the table of forms for a complete list of the forms printed in the three volumes. These forms may also be accessed electronically on the CD-ROM containing the book's forms.

Tables. The table of cases and the table of statutes, regulations, and rules that appear before the index are indispensable research tools for finding where a particular case or provision is discussed. The table of forms lists the title and location of each form reproduced in the book.

Index. A comprehensive index allows the reader to locate information by topic.

Online. This publication is available electronically. For information about OnLAW, CEB's Web-based product that provides online links to the authorities cited, go to www.ceb.com.

Authors in Previous Editions

Some members of the trial bar attribute this publication's longevity to the information it contains that cannot be found by reading cases, statutes, or rules. Although there is no substitute for legal research and analysis or the exercise of professional judgment in a particular case, problems endemic to the litigation process continually arise. The authors of this book have addressed many of the difficulties found in trial practice and have suggested strategies and viewpoints that attorneys may adopt to deal with them. The clarity of thought brought to these problems by gifted lawyers, whether from the past or the present, does not seem to go out of style. In this sense, current practitioners stand on the shoulders of the best from the past, and CEB's role is simply to communicate some of the timeless standards that litigators may decide to apply in an actual situation.

CEB's Fourth Edition builds on the excellent work of previous editions. Innumerable California attorneys and judges contributed to those editions, including the chapter authors named below:

Selected Developments

June 2010 Update

Avoiding conflicts of interest. An attorney's possible liability to a third party for negligence in, e.g., drafting a will, does not create an attorney-client relationship between the attorney and the third party. Baker Manock & Jensen v Superior Court (2009) 175 CA4th 1414, 1422, 96 CR3d 785. See §2.10.

In Meza v H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 CA4th 969, 98 CR3d 422, the court disqualified a law firm from representing the plaintiff in lawsuit when the firm's associate had formerly represented one of several defendants in the same lawsuit. See §§2.21, 2.28.

Representation agreements. Attorneys practicing in California who know or should know that they do not have professional liability insurance must inform clients of this fact in writing at the time of engagement. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-410. See §3.19.

An attorney's lien has priority over a medical lien, regardless of which was first in time. Gilman v Dalby (2009) 176 CA4th 606, 619, 98 CR3d 231. See §3.20A.

In Dietz v Meisenheimer & Herron (2009) 177 CA4th 771, 99 CR3d 464, the court upheld the trial court's rejection of defendant law firm's argument that a referring attorney's suit to recover the promised referral fee based on a share of any contingent recovery should be dismissed because it might require disclosure of attorney-client communications regarding the fee agreement. See §3.35.

Client Fee Dispute Arbitration. For a recent case on arbitration of Cumis counsel fees, see Compulink Mgmt. Ctr., Inc. v St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2008) 169 CA4th 289, 87 CR3d 72 in §5.11.

On client waiver of the right to MFAA fee arbitration, see Fagelbaum & Heller LLP v Smylie (2009) 174 CA4th 1351, 1361, 95 CR3d 252 in §5.20.

A party that rejects a fee award after an MFAA arbitration and files a complaint that is involuntarily dismissed for failure to prosecute effectively repudiates its previous rejection of the arbitration award and its request for trial de novo. Perez v Grajales (2008) 169 CA4th 580, 605, 86 CR3d 784, in §5.37.

California Jurisdiction. Although subject matter jurisdiction is vested in the superior court as a whole, as a matter of convenience the superior court is divided into departments and the legislature may require certain matters to be heard in a particular department. Estate of Bowles (2008) 169 CA4th 684, 695, 87 CR3d 122. See §6.11.

For a recent case holding that an action for breach of a patent-licensing agreement arises under state, not federal, law, see Applera Corp. v MP Biomedicals, LLC (2009) 173 CA4th 769, 93 CR3d 178 in §6.41.

On appeal of a denial of a class certification motion after the representative plaintiff has settled his or her individual suit, see Watkins v Wachovia Corp. (2009) 172 CA4th 1576, 1591, 92 CR3d 409, criticizing Larner v Los Angeles Doctors Hosp. Assoc. (2008) 168 CA4th 1291, 1300, 86 CR3d 324. See §6.46.

Federally recognized Indian tribes and their for-profit business entities operating on their behalf are immune from suit in state court. See Ameriloan v Superior Court (2008) 169 CA4th 81, 84, 86 CR3d 572, in §6.52.

If a statute requires a particular class of controversy to be submitted first to an administrative agency, and the parties reasonably dispute whether the controversy comes within that class, then the agency has the power before judicial relief is obtained, to determine whether the controversy comes within the agency's statutory grant of jurisdiction. Blanks v Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 CA4th 336, 362, 89 CR3d 710. See §6.54.

Plaintiffs lack standing to bring action under Unfair Competition Law or Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 (Lab C §§2698-2699.5) if they have not suffered injury in fact; associations suing under these statutes are not exempt from standing requirement. See Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v Superior Court (2009) 46 C4th 993, 1005, 95 CR3d 605, in §6.57A.

A California court cannot refuse to take jurisdiction of a claim arising in California solely because the plaintiff is a nonresident. See Epic Communications, Inc. v Richwave Technol., Inc. (2009) 2009 Ca. App. Lexis 1834, *2 in §6.62.

Consent to jurisdiction may be implied by a party's actions. See Szynalski v Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 1, 9, 90 CR3d 683, discussed in §6.78.

Neither general nor specific jurisdiction existed over a defendant insurer that issued a policy to its insured in Florida, then continued to accept premiums from her and process her claims after she moved to California. Elkman v Nat'l States Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 1305, 1318, 93 CR3d 768 in §6.95.

For a recent case on state court jurisdiction over a parent company based on activities of its subsidiary, see HealthMarkets, Inc. v Superior Court (2009) 171 CA4th 1160, 1169, 90 CR3d 527, in §6.102.

Federal jurisdiction. For a recent case on "prudential standing," see City of Los Angeles v County of Kern (9th Cir 2009) 581 F3d 841, in §7.9.

A litigant who is forced into state court but seeks to preserve his or her federal claims should make a reservation of federal claims. See England v Louisiana State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs (1964) 375 US 411, 11 LEd2d 440, 84 S Ct 461; Los Altos El Granada Investors v City of Capitola (9th Cir 2009) 583 F3d 674, discussed in §7.12.

Before granting a petition to compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) (9 USC §§1-16), the federal court must "look through" the petition and determine whether (based on the plaintiff's own statement of the cause of action and not on defendant's defenses or counterclaims), but for the existence of the arbitration agreement, the court would have had jurisdiction over the substantive conflict between the parties. Vaden v Discovery Bank (2009) ___US___, 173 LEd2d 206, 129 SCt 1262 in §7.17.

State-law based counterclaims do not qualify a case for federal question jurisdiction, even if those counterclaims would be completely preempted by federal law. Vaden v Discovery Bank (2009) ___US___, 173 LEd2d 206, 219, 129 S Ct 1262, in §7.21. Also in §7.21, see Yarick v PacifiCare of California (2009) 179 CA4th 1158, 1167, 102 CR3d 379 for analysis of how doctrine of conflict preemption led the court to reject a plaintiff's common law duty claims against a health insurer.

Under the "act of state doctrine," the federal court has subject matter jurisdiction over claims challenging the validity of a foreign state's conduct within its own borders. Provinicial Gov't of Marinduque v Placer Dome, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 582 F3d 1083, in §7.26.

A party that asserted subject matter jurisdiction in its petition for removal is not foreclosed from raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction on appeal. International Union of Operating Eng'rs v County of Plumas (9th Cir 2009) 559 F3d 1041, 1043, in §§7.14, 22.92.

On the effect of a district court dismissal without prejudice, see Guevara v Ventura County Community College Dist. (2008) 169 CA4th 167, 87 CR3d 50, in §§7.33, 7.41.

There is a split among the circuits as to whether intervention as of right under Fed R Civ P 24(a) must be supported by an independent ground of federal jurisdiction; the Ninth Circuit has not addressed this issue. Perry v Proposition 8 Official Proponents (9th Cir 2009) 2009 US App Lexis 25430, n 2. See §7.45.

The Ninth Circuit has held that a federal district court can take diversity jurisdiction over an appeal from a state administrative agency decision even when the review requires deferential, on-the-record review. BNSF Ry. Co. v O'Dea (9th Cir 2009) 572 F3d 785. See §7.48.

Federal removal jurisdiction extends to "mass actions," which are any civil actions in which 100 or more people propose to be treated jointly and the other jurisdictional requirements are met. See Tanoh v Dow Chem. Co. (9th Cir 2009) 561 F3d 945, in §§7.67, 22.29A.

Venue. As long as the case arises from a consumer transaction specified in the statute, CCP 395(b) governs venue regardless of whether the consumer is a plaintiff or a defendant or whether one of the defendants is an individual. Fontaine v Superior Court (2009) 175 CA4th 830, 96 CR3d 607, in §8.25.

Prelitigation claims, notices, and petitions for guardians ad litem. The 1-year limitations period of CCP 366.2 is not tolled during the minority of plaintiffs and applies to an action on the liability of a deceased person without regard to the location of decedent's personal representative or estate. Farb v Superior Court (2009) 174 CA4th 678, 94 CR3d 586, in §9.40.

Noticed Motions. In exercising its power to exclude or permit oral testimony at the hearing on a motion, the trial follows the principal that constitutional due process entitles the parties to notice and hearing appropriate to the case. See Marriage of Nadkarni (2009) 173 CA4th 1483, 1499, 93 CR3d 723, in §12.44.

On electronic service under CCP 1010.6(a)(6) of a file-stamped copy of the judgment, see InSyst, Ltd. v Applied Materials, Inc. (2009) 170 CA4th 1129, 1138, 88 CR3d 808, in §12.73.

A trial court that grants reconsideration on its own motion does so because, based on the evidence originally submitted, its earlier decision was wrong; the court does not have inherent power to grant a new trial, i.e., to take new evidence and hold a new hearing. Marriage of Herr (2009) 174 CA4th 1463, 95 CR3d 464, in §12.119.

A motion for reconsideration must be valid to extend the time to appeal. Branner v Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 175 CA4th 1043, 1048, 96 CR3d 690, in §12.113.

A motion for mandatory relief from default based on attorney error under CCP §473 was not a motion for reconsideration under CCP §1008 even though the party had already sought reconsideration of the default judgment, because the first, unsuccessful motion had been based on mistake of law. See Standard Microsystems Corp. v Winbond Elec. Corp. (2009) 179 CA4th 868, 890, 102 CR3d 140, in §12.120.

Ascertaining, joining, and naming parties. It has been held that CCP 474 implicitly requires the plaintiff to amend the complaint to add the true names of the Doe defendants within a reasonable period of time after learning of their identity. A.N. v County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 CA4th 1058, 1066, 90 CR3d 293, in §§14.13 and 16.14.

Plaintiffs who designate defendants by fictitious names must take care that the summons on such defendants include notice that they have been sued under a fictitious name; if they are not notified, any default judgment against them may be vacated. See Carol Gilbert, Inc. v Haller (2009) 179 CA4th 852, 101 CR3d 843, in §14.13.

A corporation that is under suspension for failure to comply with Rev & Tax C 23305 suffers a legal disability, but when the corporation comes back into compliance and its corporate powers are revived, the procedural litigation steps it took during the suspension period are validated retroactively. Center for Self-Improvement & Community Dev. v Lennar Corp (2009) 173 CA4th 1543, 1554, 94 CR3d 74, in §§14.20, 23.30.

Complaints. On adequate pleading in a public nuisance case, see Birke v Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 CA4th 1540, 1548, 87 CR3d 602, in §15.26.

For a case discussing pleading sufficient facts to invoke equitable tolling doctrine when facts of complaint show statute of limitations has run, see Tarkington v California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 172 CA4th 1494, 1502, 92 CR3d 131, in §15.26.

Service of summons. For a new case on proper service on a foreign corporation's "general manager in the state" under Corp C §2110(a), see Yamaha Motor Co., LTD v Superior Court (2009) 174 CA4th 264, 94 CR3d 494. See §17.19.

A prisoner may be served with summons by serving the sheriff or jailer who has custody of the prisoner. Sakaguchi v Sakaguchi (2009) 173 CA4th 852, 858, 92 CR3d 717, in §§17.25A, 17.35, 38.30.

Plaintiff serving fictitiously named defendant must comply with requirements both for endorsement of summons and recitals in proof of service. See Pelayo v J.J. Lee Mgmt. Co., Inc. (2009) 174 CA4th 484, 496, 94 CR3d 784, in §17.61.

Motions to stay or dismiss for inconvenient forum. For a recent case holding that China was a convenient forum to litigate claims arising from an air crash in China, see Guimei v General Elec. Co. (2009) 172 CA4th 689, 696, 702, 91 CR3d 178. See §21.7.

For recent federal cases upholding dismissals on forum non conveniens grounds, see Loya v Starwood Hotels & Resorts Worldwide, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 583 F3d 656, 666 and Vivendi SA v T-Moblie USA, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 209 US App lexis 23982, *12, in §21.12.

Removal to federal court. Unless the plaintiff's failure to state a cause of action against the nondiverse defendant is obvious according to the settled law of the state, remand should be ordered. See Hunter v Philip Morris USA (9th Cir 2009) 582 F3d 1039, discussed in §22.19.

The 30-day time limit does not apply to a remand motion based on a forum selection clause specifying state court as the appropriate forum. Kamm v Itex Corp. (9th Cir 2009) 568 F3d 752, 757, in §22.92.

Demurrers. On demurrer, it is not the court's role to decide that the complaint is false in whole or in part; rather, a demurrer admits the truth of all material facts properly pleaded. William v Southern Cal. Gas Co. (2009) 176 CA4th 591, 600, 98 CR3d 258, in §§23.3, 23.18.

On judicial notice of documents on demurrer, see C.R. v Tenet Healthcare Corp. (2009) 169 CA4th 1094, 1103, 87 CR3d 424, discussed in §23.18.

On sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend because the plaintiff failed to carry the burden of demonstrating the reasonable possibility that amendments could cure defects, see Hoffman v Smithwoods RV Park (2009) 179 CA4th 390, 407, 102 CR3d 72, in §23.53.

Cross-complaints. An employer who sued its former employee for breach of contract and patent conversion should have raised the claims at the time of the employee's cross-complaint against the employer for wrongful termination, because they were logically related to the cross-complaint. See Align Tech., Inc. v Tran (2009) 179 CA4th 949, 959, 102 CR3d 343, in §26.7.

A cross-complaint for equitable indemnity is not subject to dismissal solely because apportionment of fault is available through the assertion of an affirmative defense in the main action. Paragon Real Estate Group of San Francisco, Inc. v Hansen (2009) 175 CA4th 177, 187, 100 CR3d 234, in §§26.18, 26.27.

Security for Costs. A security statute is not the same as an attorney fee liability statute; under Corp C §800, the prevailing defendant is entitled to recover only the amount of bond posted by plaintiffs as compensation for litigation expenses, not full amount of attorney fees. See West Hills Farms, Inc. v RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 CA4th 710, 88 CR3d 458, in §29.31.

For an example of a vexatious litigant subject to a prefiling order, see In re R.H. (2009) 170 CA4th 678, 88 CR3d 650, in §29.55; plaintiff, challenging dependency court decisions in propia persona, filed 13 unsuccessful appeals and writ petitions within 7 years.

Intervention. Trial court did not abuse its discretion to strike insurer's complaint in intervention because insurer's denial of coverage and refusal to defend insured left insurer with no direct and immediate interest in litigation, even though insurer ultimately might be required to pay judgment. See Hinton v Beck (2009) 176 CA4th 1378, 98 CR3d 612, in §31.17.

A party seeking to intervene must file a complaint in intervention; a motion to intervene was denied. See Sutter Health Uninsured Pricing Cases (2009) 171 CA4th 495, 513, 89 CR3d 615, in §31.51.

Injunctions. If the moving party cannot establish probability of success on the merits, there is no need for the court to consider whether irreparable injury would result if an injunction does not issue. See Nelson v Avondale Homeowners Ass'n (2009) 172 CA4th 857, 861, 91 CR3d 726, in §32.35.

When deciding whether an injunction should issue, the court may balance conveniences if the defendant is merely negligent and not a wrongdoer. See Linthicum v Butterfield (2009) 175 CA4th 259, 266, 95 CR3d 538, in §32.117. When deciding whether to modify or vacate an injunction, it was no abuse of discretion to deny a motion to terminate domestic violence restraining order when there had been no material changes in the law or facts and the movant had not established that termination would serve the interests of justice. See Loeffler v Medina (2009) 174 CA4th 1495, 95 CR3d 343, in §32.124.

A preliminary injunction should not issue if a movant has no reasonable likelihood of prevailing on merits at trial. See Millennium Rock Mort., Inc. v T.D. Serv. Co. (2009) 179 CA4th 804, 812, 102 CR3d 544, in §32.129.

A motion for an injunction need not have been filed frivolously or in bad faith for a defendant to recover costs and fees as a prevailing party. See Krug v Maschmeier (2009) 172 CA4th 796, 91 CR3d 452, in §32.146.

Declaratory Judgment. No actual controversy existed when declaratory judgment concerning contractual remedies had no current practical consequences, given that no dispute had yet arisen between the parties and continuation of parties' contractual relationship did not depend on resolution of questions presented. See Meyer v Sprint Spectrum L.P. (2009) 45 C4th 634, 646, 88 CR3d 859, in §35.15.

The moving party must comply with provisions of §437c(b)(1), and if it fails to do so, the court must deny summary judgment motion. Teselle v McLoughlin (2009) 173 CA4th 156, 168, 92 CR3d 696. See §36.63. In contrast, it was no error to grant summary judgment when defendants made prima facie showing of entitlement to judgment and plaintiffs failed to file a separate statement. Kojababian v Genuine Home Loans, Inc. (2009) 174 CA4th 408, 94 CR3d 288. See §§36.76, 36.109, 36.110.

It does not follow from the fact that summary judgments are reviewed de novo that the parties may stipulate that a summary judgment would have been granted, when none has been made, and when case law, statutes, and court rules provide otherwise, and seek review of the so stipulated "judgment." See Magana Cathcart McCarthy v CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2009) 174 CA4th 106, 116, 94 CR3d 109, in §§36.8, 36.62, 36.197.

Because judicial admissions may be made only in a pleading, by stipulation, or in response to a request for admission, facts accepted as true for the purpose of summary judgment and included in the separate statement of facts cannot be characterized as judicial admissions. See Myers v Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2009) 178 CA4th 735, 746, 100 CR3d 658, in §§36.62, 36.132.

Defendant's 764 objections to the plaintiff's evidence deemed waived because the court did not expressly rule on individual objections. See Nazir v United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 CA4th 243, 254, 100 CR3d 296, in §§36.19, 36.84, 36.94, 36.175, and 36.197.

Default. For a case striking amount of attorney fees from judgment because they were not alleged in body of complaint or prayer for relief, see Hearn v Howard (2009) 177 CA4th 1193, 1208, 99 CR3d 642, in §§38.9, 38.82.

It was no error to deny defendants' motion to set aside entry of default and default judgment, based on defendants' claim that an incorrect zip code was used on affidavits of mailing and that they did not receive notice. See Rodriguez v Henard (2009) 174 CA4th 529, 94 CR3d 313, in §38.37.

A movant "substantially complied" with the requirement that a motion for relief from entry of default or default judgment under CCP §473(b) must be accompanied by a copy of the answer or other pleading that is proposed to be filed, when it proffered an answer at a motion hearing. See Carmel, Ltd. v Tavoussi (2009) 175 CA4th 393, 401, 95 CR3d 694, in §§38.79, 38.83.

It was error to deny defendant's motion for relief from default judgment, because facts establishing attorney fault entitled defendant to mandatory relief under CCP §473(b). See Standard Microsystems Corp. v Winbond Elec. Corp. (2009) 179 CA4th 868, 102 CR3d 140, in §38.83.

A trial court lacked jurisdiction to grant a motion for relief from entry of default and default judgment, filed more than 9 years after entry of default, based on mistake, surprise, and excusable neglect. See Manson, Iver & York v Black (2009) 176 CA4th 36, 42, 97 CR3d 522, in §§38.85, 38.87, 38.90, 38.92.

A judgment was not void, but voidable, and therefore could not be set aside under CCP §473(b) 12 years after entry of default and default judgment. See Johnson v E-Z Ins. Brokerage, Inc. (2009) 175 CA4th 86, 95 CR3d 782, in §38.95.

Examples of void default judgments that were set aside include Manson, Iver & York v Black (2009) 176 CA4th 36, 43, 97 CR3d 522 (default judgment void because party was misnamed in complaint, service and judgment; party had no notice that ex parte order substituted her name for incorrect name, 6 years after entry of judgment); and David S. Karton, a Law Corp. v Dougherty (2009) 171 CA4th 133, 149, 89 CR3d 506 (default judgment void because it exceeded amount specified in complaint). See §38.96.

Dismissal. CCP §474 implicitly requires the plaintiff to amend the complaint to add the true names of Doe defendants within a reasonable period of time after learning of their identity. A.N. v County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 CA4th 1058, 1066, 90 CR3d 293, citing Barrows v American Motors Corp. (1983) 144 CA3d 1, 192 CR 380. See §39.11.

A voluntary dismissal filed 1 day after defendant filed motion to enforce settlement was timely; the trial court had issued no tentative ruling, and ruling in defendant's favor was not inevitable. See Lewis C Nelson & Sons, Inc. v Lynx Iron Corp. (2009) 174 CA4th 67, 76, 94 CR3d 468, in §39.104.

To recover court costs after the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses an action, the defendant need not file a proposed judgment together with its costs memorandum. See Fries v Rite Aid Corp. (2009) 173 CA4th 182, 92 CR3d 523, in §39.121.

It was error to award §128.7 sanctions for frivolous motion to vacate when the court denied the motion to vacate only 19 days after service of the §128.7 motion; the plaintiff was denied full 21-day safe harbor period). See Li v Majestic Indus. Hills LLC (2009) 177 CA4th 585, 99 CR3d 334, in §39.124. Similarly, an order granting sanctions was reversed because the notice of motion for sanctions failed to state the date of the motion hearing; this rendered the notice fatally defective, and deprived the plaintiff of the safe harbor period. See Galleria Plus, Inc. v Hanmi Bank (2009) 179 CA4th 535, 537, 101 CR3d 803 in §39.124.

Case Management Conferences. A sanction award against a non-party insurer whom trial court believed acted in bad faith at policyholder's settlement conference was reversed, because the conduct of insurer was not sanctionable under any statute or rule or court. See Vidrio v Hernandez (2009) 172 CA4th 1443, 92 CR3d 178, in §40.85.

Alternative Dispute Resolution. There was no jurisdictional authority for arbitrator when agreement did not clearly and unmistakably provide for it, and merely incorporated by reference American Arbitration Association rules, which when the agreement was executed did not permit arbitrators to decide jurisdiction. See Gilbert Street Developers, LLC v La Quinta Homes, LLC (2009) 174 CA4th 1185, 94 CR3d 918, in §45.27.

For recent cases discussing whether or not parties agreed to arbitrate, see §45.27 for Rodriguez v Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1461, 98 CR3d 728 (in medical malpractice action in which patient signed arbitration agreement 4 days prior to surgery and then died during CCP §1295(c)'s 30-day recision period, agreement unenforceable against patient's heir and no order compelling arbitration could be issued); and Goldman v KPMG, LLP (2009) 173 CA4th 209, 92 CR3d 534 (defendant nonsignatory to agreement containing arbitration clause may not compel arbitration under equitable estoppel theory unless claims against nonsignatory rely on or are inextricably bound up with contractual obligations of agreement).

Expensive fees associated with a requirement that disputes be heard before a panel of three arbitrators, and a prohibition on joinder of claims, were unconscionable as not being within the reasonable expectations of investors. See Parada v Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1554, 98 CR3d 743, in §45.28. Further, a new dispute resolution policy was held procedurally unconscionable in part because an inaccurate policy description necessarily made the workers' agreement uninformed. See Olvera v El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 CA4th 447, 454, 93 CR3d 65 in §45.28. However, an arbitration agreement was not substantively unconscionable for beginning with the phrase "I agree"; the phrase did not make agreement unilateral under the circumstances. See Roman v Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 1462, 1471, 92 CR3d 153 in §45.28.

Because an arbitration agreement contained an invalid class arbitration waiver and prevented plaintiff from acting as private attorney general, the entire agreement was held unenforceable. See Franco v Athens Disposal Co. (2009) 171 CA4th 1277, 90 CR3d 539, in §45.28. Similarly, the terms included in an arbitration agreement to discourage or prevent customers from vindicating their rights were unconscionable and were not severable; the arbitration provisions were unenforceable in their entirety. See Parada v Superior Court (2009) 176 CA4th 1554, 98 CR3d 743, 1586, in §45.30.

The arbitration of hate crime claims must meet Armendariz requirements. See D.C. v Harvard-Westlake School (2009) 176 CA4th 836, 98 CR3d 300, in §45.29.

It is no abuse of discretion to deny a motion to compel arbitration when all criteria of CCP §1281.2(c) have been satisfied. See Birl v Heritage Care, LLC (2009) 172 CA4th 1313, 91 CR3d 777, in §45.35.

An arbitration panel's good faith misinterpretation of governing law and factual errors are insufficient grounds to vacate an award under Federal Arbitration Act. See Bosack v Soward (9th Cir 2009) 573 F3d 891, in §45.48.

A provision stating merely that arbitrator "shall render an award in accordance with substantive California law" does not provide basis for judicial review. See Christensen v Smith (2009) 171 CA4th 931, 935, 90 CR3d 57, in §45.48.

The trial court properly vacated an arbitrator's award when the arbitrator's exclusion of material evidence substantially prejudiced a party and undermined "fundamental principle" of CCP 1286.2(a)(5). See Burlage v Superior Court (2009) 178 CA4th 524, 530, 100 CR3d 531, in §45.48.

When a petition to vacate is not timely opposed, the allegations of the petition are deemed admitted. However, this does not mean that the court must grant the petition; the court must draw its own conclusions from the allegations and confirm, correct, or vacate the award as appropriate. Taheri Law Group, A.P.C. v Sorokurs (2009) 176 CA4th 956, 98 CR3d 634, in §45.49.

When one party failed to petition trial court to confirm award and other party petitioned court to correct award, it was error to simply deny the petition; the court was required under CCP §1286 to confirm initial award if it did not correct, vacate or dismiss it. See Law Offices of David S. Karton v Segreto (2009) 176 CA4th 1, 97 CR3d 329, in §45.49.

Negotiation and Settlement. Code of Civil Procedure Section §664.6 does not apply after a judgment has become final. See Walton v Mueller (2009) 180 CA4th 161, 102 CR3d 165, in §46.46.

A party who discussed and agreed to terms of settlement agreement in court chambers stipulated to agreement "before the court" even though he was not present when his attorney later consented to the agreement on the record. See 1538 Cahuenga Partners, LLC v Turmeko Prop., Inc. (2009) 176 CA4th 139, 97 CR3d 552, in §46.46.

Offers to Allow Judgment. If multiple defendants are found liable for a judgment under CCP §998, they are jointly and severally responsible for the prejudgment interest; plaintiffs are not entitled under CC §3291 to collect prejudgment interest on the total judgment from each defendant. See Cadlo v Metalclad Insulation Corp. (2009) 172 CA4th 1040, 1046, 91 CR3d 653, in §47.7.

If defendant's first settlement offer lapses and defendant later withdraws a second offer before the statutory period expires, the first offer is the relevant figure for §998 cost-shifting analysis if the plaintiff is awarded less than first offer at trial. See One Star, Inc. v STAAR Surgical Co. (2009) 179 CA4th 1082, 1089, 102 CR3d 195, in §47.23.

Submitted Case and Consent Judgment. A consent decree providing for class injunctive and declaratory relief and attorney fees for claims under Americans with Disabilities Act did not preclude an individual claim for damages under California's Disabled Persons Act. See Louie v BFS Retail & Commercial Operations, LLC (2009) 178 CA4th 1544, 101 CR3d 441, in §48.18.

On the facts of the case, a plaintiff was permitted to appeal from the consent judgment she requested after the court indicated adverse rulings on motions in limine. See Villano v Waterman Convalescent Hosp., Inc. (2010) 181 CA4th 1189, __CR3d __, in §48.19.

Good Faith Settlement. In a case involving several defendants and nearly $8 million in a global settlement, it was an abuse of discretion to hold physicians' $200,000 settlement to be in good faith when evidence at the time of settlement showed they shared in more than nominal liability and they timed offer to escape liability from other defendants, and the offer represented only 10 percent of their insurance policy limit. See Long Beach Mem. Med. Ctr. v Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 865, 91 CR3d 494, in §50.13.

§1.1 I. SCOPE OF CHAPTER

This chapter covers matters that an attorney must attend to before and shortly after accepting a new civil case, including the rules of professional conduct that may apply. On considerations before taking a case, see §§1.2-1.11. Other topics are the initial interview (see §§1.12-1.16), case investigation (see §§1.17-1.19), and office management and procedures (see §§1.20-1.31).

This chapter also covers developing and using a case management system (see §§1.32-1.44), time- and recordkeeping (see §§1.45-1.47), and client questionnaire forms (see §§1.48-1.49).

On conflicts of interest that may require the client's written waiver or may make it necessary to decline to represent a potential client or another person, see chap 2. Representation agreements are covered in chap 3. On claims, notices, or demands that must be filed before suit is filed, see chaps 9-10.

On opening a law office, see also the State Bar's California Young Lawyers Association publication, Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

II. BEFORE TAKING CASE

§1.2 A. Determine Objectives of Litigation

An attorney has no explicit legal duty to accept employment in a civil matter. Counsel has an obligation to "maintain such actions, proceedings, or defenses only as appear to be legal or just, except the defense of a person charged with a public offense." Bus & P C §6068(c). However, an attorney has a duty not to reject for any personal considerations "the cause of the defenseless or oppressed." Bus & P C §6068(h).

Employment should not be undertaken if counsel knows or should know that the client's objective is (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-200):

- To bring an action, conduct a defense, assert a position, or take an appeal without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring someone; or
- To present a claim or defense in litigation not warranted under existing law unless based on a good faith argument for a change in the law.

An attorney who, after accepting a case, discovers conditions that are prohibited by the California Rules of Professional Conduct or other laws, has a duty to withdraw from the employment. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100 (rules not exclusive). Violation of these standards may give rise to the attorney's liability for damages (see §1.3) or sanctions (see §§1.6-1.7).

§1.3 B. Avoid Future Claims of Malicious Prosecution or Abuse of Process

An attorney generally owes no duty to adverse parties to conduct a reasonable investigation of the facts and law before filing a complaint against them, and, consequently, cannot be liable to them for malpractice under a negligence theory if the suit proves to have no basis in law or fact. See Weaver v Superior Court (1979) 95 CA3d 166, 156 CR 745. This immunity from liability for negligence does not protect the attorney against a suit for malicious prosecution if the elements of that cause of action are present.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.4 1. Malicious Prosecution

An attorney may be held jointly liable with a client for the tort of malicious prosecution under circumstances showing that:

- The prior litigation terminated in favor of the defendant;
- The attorney lacked probable cause to represent the plaintiff; and
- The attorney acted maliciously.

See Zamos v Stroud (2004) 32 C4th 958, 12 CR3d 54; Tool Research & Eng'g Corp. v Henigson (1975) 46 CA3d 675, 120 CR 291, disapproved on other grounds in Sheldon Appel Co. v Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 C3d 863, 254 CR 336).

NOTE: A public entity may not sue for malicious prosecution. See Clark v Optical Coating Lab., Inc.(2008) 165 CA4th 150, 182, 80 CR3d 812.

An attorney evaluating whether to initiate legal proceedings may generally rely on information provided by the client. Morrison v Rudolph (2002) 103 CA4th 506, 509, 126 CR2d 747. The attorney may be liable for malicious prosecution, however, if he or she initiates a lawsuit properly, but then continues to prosecute it after discovering it is not supported by probable cause. Zamos v Stroud (2004) 32 C4th 958, 12 CR3d 54 (attorney liable for malicious prosecution for continuation of suit after receipt of court transcripts containing statements by plaintiff that directly contradicted plaintiff's fraud allegations). See also Hardy v Vial (1957) 48 C2d 577, 581, 311 P2d 494 (applying cause of action to administrative proceedings). In Zamos, the California Supreme Court held that the standard for an attorney's actions is whether "any reasonable attorney" would agree those actions are totally and completely without merit in the initiation or in the continuation of a lawsuit. Zamos, 32 C4th at 970. See 26 CEB Civ Litigation Rep 127 (June 2004) for Comment discussing the implications of Zamos.

The California Supreme Court clarified the relationship between the role of research into the legal and factual basis for bringing the suit and liability for malicious prosecution in Sheldon Appel Co. v Albert & Oliker (1989) 47 C3d 863, 881, 254 CR 336. The court held that the state of the defendant's knowledge of the facts may be submitted to a jury to determine what facts the defendant knew, but the question of probable cause is to be decided by the trial court under an objective test, i.e., whether the trial court thinks that there was probable cause to file the suit. If the court finds that probable cause did not exist, the amount of research may be relevant to the element of malice. 47 C3d at 883. See Sangster v Paetkau (1998) 68 CA4th 151, 80 CR2d 66 (after Sheldon, proper inquiry is whether prior action was objectively reasonable; in this case, there was sufficient undisputed evidence in defendants' possession when they filed complaint in underlying action to independently establish probable cause).

PRACTICE TIP: Apart from avoiding liability to opposing parties, the attorney should do sufficient research to fulfill the professional obligation to adequately represent the client competently. Under Sheldon, mere lack of research will not support an action for malicious prosecution unless the court finds that the action was not legally tenable. The more likely it is that a particular action might be considered legally untenable, the more an attorney should research the matter and document that research.

§1.5 2. Abuse of Process

An attorney may be held liable with (or without) the client for the tort of abuse of process. See Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 C3d 94, 104, 101 CR 745 (knowingly and willfully filing collection actions in wrong county under statutorily inadequate pleadings with ulterior purpose of impairing individuals' rights to defend suits and coerce inequitable settlements). See also CCP §128.7 (court may order party or attorney to pay costs, including attorney fees, incurred by other party as a result of bad faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay; however, court may not award sanctions against represented party for frivolous legal arguments). Merely filing or continuing a lawsuit, even for an improper purpose, is not a proper basis for an abuse of process proceeding. Oren Royal Oaks Venture v Greenberg, Bernhard, Weiss & Karma, Inc. (1986) 42 C3d 1157, 1169, 232 CR 567.

C. Safeguard Against Sanctions

§1.6 1. For Litigation of Matter Unwarranted by Law

In addition to possible civil liability for the tort of malicious prosecution, counsel who takes a position in litigation that is unwarranted by existing law or not based on a good faith argument for a change of law may be subject to court-imposed sanctions. See CCP §128.7. See also Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-200; discussion in §1.2.

Code of Civil Procedure §128.7 generally adopts revised Fed R Civ P 11. Hart v Avetoom (2002) 95 CA4th 410, 413, 115 CR2d 511. Section 128.7 permits the court, in certain situations, to impose appropriate sanctions on attorneys, law firms, or parties who violate the duty to conduct a reasonable inquiry into the law and facts before signing a pleading, written motion, or other paper filed or submitted to the court. By presenting (whether by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating) a pleading, written motion, or other paper, the attorney is certifying to the best of his or her belief that the paper is "warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for [its] extension, modification, or reversal." CCP §128.7(b)(2). The court may award reasonable expenses and attorney fees for pleadings or other papers that are "presented primarily for an improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation" or for legal contentions that are unwarranted "by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law." CCP §128.7(b)-(c).

The motion must be served on the opposing party before the conclusion of the case. Hart v Avetoom (2002) 95 CA4th 410, 413, 115 CR2d 511; Barnes v Department of Corrections (1999) 74 CA4th 126, 135, 87 CR2d 594. Under the safe harbor provision of the statute, a motion for sanctions may not be filed with the court unless, within 21 days after service of the motion, the challenged pleading or conduct is not withdrawn or corrected. To comply with this provision, a party seeking sanctions must proceed in two steps. First, the party must file a notice of motion for sanctions on the offending party at least 30 days before filing the motion with the court. The notice must describe the offending conduct specifically. CCP §128.7(c)(1); 74 CA4th at 130. Second, if the offending party does not withdraw the pleading or correct the objectionable conduct, then the motion may be filed with the court. 74 CA4th at 130. See also Eichenbaum v Alon (2003) 106 CA4th 967, 131 CR2d 296 (sanctions still available after voluntary dismissal of complaint following timely filing of motion for §128.7 sanctions). Sanctions under CCP §128.7 are improper if the motion that is filed is different from the motion that is served, thus violating the "safe harbor" requirements of the sanctions statute. Hart v Avetoom, supra.

A trial court may bring a motion for sanctions on its own initiative. CCP §128.7(c)(2). To comply with the safe harbor provisions, however, the court must bring the motion before it has ruled on a dispositive issue or on the merits of the case, e.g., a summary judgment motion. Malovec v Hamrell (1999) 70 CA4th 434, 82 CR2d 712. An order sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend does not bar a motion for CCP §128.7 sanctions unless the order is reduced to a judgment before the sanctions motion is served and filed. Banks v Hathaway, Perrett, Webster, Powers & Chrisman (2002) 97 CA4th 949, 118 CR2d 803.

If brought for "an improper purpose," the motion for sanctions is itself subject to a motion for sanctions. CCP §128.7(h).

NOTE: Section 128.7 applies to complaints filed, or proceedings initiated, after December 31, 1994. CCP §128.7(i). However, CCP §128.5 applies only to complaints filed, or proceedings initiated, on or before December 31, 1994. Olmstead v Arthur J. Gallagher & Co. (2004) 32 C4th 804, 11 CR3d 298.

§1.7 2. For Bad Faith Appeal

An appellate court may impose penalties on parties or attorneys for "[t]aking a frivolous appeal or appealing solely to cause delay." Cal Rules of Ct 8.276(a). The reviewing court "may add to the costs on appeal such damages as may be just." CCP §907. See Summers v City of Cathedral City (1990) 225 CA3d 1047, 1080, 275 CR 594 (attorney sanctioned for prosecuting appeal without having adequately researched its merits). See also Cosenza v Kramer (1984) 152 CA3d 1100, 200 CR 18 (court affirmed judgment in plaintiff's favor and awarded sanctions greater than judgment against both lawyer petitioning for appeal and his client).

§1.8 D. Check for Conflicts

Before accepting a new case, counsel should make sure that no conflict of interest exists. Conflicts occasionally arise when not every attorney in the firm is aware of the identity of all the firm's present or former clients, or of all the matters in which the firm is or was involved. Some small firms circulate lists of new clients and matters among their attorneys in an effort to avoid representation of conflicting interests and to record the firm's inquiry into this question. In most firms, this procedure is not an adequate means of avoiding conflicts, and attorneys clear a new matter through a conflicts screening system, e.g., a firmwide check of the names of past and present clients and the type of matter handled by the firm.

Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310, an attorney cannot agree to represent conflicting interests without all affected past and present clients' informed written consent. A check for any conflicting interests that the attorneys themselves may personally have in the present matter should also be included. For discussion of conflicts of interest generally, see chap 2.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/1 Accepting Cases and Implementing Office Procedures/ §1.9 E. Know Rules of Professional Competence

§1.9 E. Know Rules of Professional Competence

The attorney must have the ability to perform legal services competently. "Ability" is defined as the quality or state of having sufficient learning and skill and being mentally, emotionally, and physically able to perform legal services. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110.

Thus, an attorney whose workload or activities will preclude the time, care, or effort that the case is likely to require should decline the representation. Similarly, an attorney should not accept a case that will present substantial difficulty, given the level of experience and skills required and the opportunity for obtaining self-education, assistance, and advice during the progress of the case. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110.

The State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct can be found at www.calbar.ca.gov/state/calbar/calbar_home.jsp under Attorney Resources, Rules & Regulations, Rules of Professional Conduct.

§1.10 F. Ascertain Circumstances of Referral

Before accepting a matter previously handled by other counsel, the attorney should inquire into the reasons for and circumstances of the party's decision to seek new representation. Frequent changes in counsel can be a sign that the client or matter is for some reason undesirable. For example, the party may

- Be disputing fees owed to the former attorney;
- Have unreasonable expectations about the case or otherwise be difficult to work with; or
- Be involved in a matter that has little merit or other major weaknesses.

The attorney should inspect correspondence and litigation files to verify any applicable deadlines and confirm the party's perception of the status of the litigation. If a referral was made for an innocuous or even flattering reason, these inquiries will enable the attorney to acknowledge the favor. On changes in representation, see chap 4.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/1 Accepting Cases and Implementing Office Procedures/ §1.11 G. Consider Economic Feasibility and Other Matters

§1.11 G. Consider Economic Feasibility and Other Matters

An important preliminary factor to consider is whether the cost of litigation to the client is likely to outweigh the gain. Even if a party is willing to pay a fee, the attorney may be of better service by declining to represent a client in litigation until other means of resolution have been evaluated. On settlement generally, see chap 46. On alternative dispute resolution, see chap 45.

Each new matter will raise different concerns, but a few of the more common practical problems the plaintiff's attorney should consider before accepting employment are:

- Liability. Is liability clear? The evidence supporting each element of each cause of action, and the strength of anticipated affirmative defenses, should be evaluated. The credibility of and empathy likely to be given the prospective client and any known witnesses should be taken into account, if possible.
- Damages. Assuming success on one or more theories of liability, what damages can realistically be projected as the client's recovery? The attorney should assess whether any causes of action will support claims for punitive damages or multiple (e.g., treble) damages, and whether any statutory limitations on damage awards exist (e.g., CC §1431 limits liability for general damages to that allocated to a joint tortfeasor; CC §§3333.2 limits general damages in medical malpractice actions).
- Attorney fees. Is there a possibility of recovering attorney fees if the action is successful? Besides contractual clauses covering attorney fees, California and federal statutes provide for attorney fee awards to a successful litigant; there are also statutory limitations on attorney fees that may apply. See California Attorney Fee Awards (2d ed Cal CEB 1994).
- Case management. To what extent would the attorney have to streamline service in order to make the litigation economically feasible? The attorney should consider whether it is possible to cut back on case preparation sufficiently to make the litigation economically practicable while meeting professional obligations and maintaining professional standards, particularly if an opposing party escalates the litigation by requiring responses to various discovery methods. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110. If case preparation will be curtailed in order to allow the client a day in court, this fact should be fully and frankly disclosed to the prospective client, and the attorney-client understanding put into writing. Note that, while the scope of services to be performed may be defined, no agreement can be made to prospectively limit the attorney's liability to a client for malpractice. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-400.
- Costs. How expensive will it be to prove actual damages? In addition to the costs of discovery, the attorney should consider (1) in a business case: the cost of analyzing and tabulating lost profits; the time involved in locating, organizing, and analyzing documents; the fees of an expert, if needed, to analyze and testify to losses; and (2) in a personal injury case: the cost of obtaining medical and employment records; the fees of medical and other experts.
- Confidentiality/Publicity. Will the proof of injury or lost profits entail discovery of sensitive personal or business information? The attorney should ascertain whether information—even if protected by court order from disclosure outside the litigation—will cause embarrassment or competitive disadvantage to the client.
- Enforcing judgment. Even if the prospective plaintiff's case on liability and damages appears solid, is there a good chance of recovering an award from the target defendant? The attorney should determine whether, e.g., the prospective defendant is solvent or has insurance coverage for the type of claims contemplated, or whether the plaintiff will have to pierce the corporate veil or pursue another theory of vicarious liability in order to reach sufficient assets.

Before accepting a case, the attorney who is considering representation of the defendant should evaluate such factors as:

- The prospective client's prior litigation experience or sophistication in legal matters, and the client's ability to commit to a lengthy litigation course, if necessary;

- The monetary and other costs of litigation, including the possibility of adverse publicity;
- The client's ability to pay the fees;
- Whether the costs of defense are likely to surpass the dollar exposure (i.e., largest judgment that could be awarded against the defendant at trial);
- The existence of insurance policies that may provide for a defense paid by the carrier (and except in a conflict situation usually handled by carrier's attorney), as well as coverage; and
- The relative ease or difficulty of communicating with the prospective client, especially about important decisions that must be made with a client's input during the course of litigation.

For further discussion of these factors as they can be determined during the attorney's initial interview with the prospective client, see §§1.12-1.16.

III. INITIAL INTERVIEW

§1.12 A. Obtain Facts

The attorney ordinarily obtains the basic information about the prospective client and the legal issues in the initial interview. Questionnaires filled out by the prospective client or the attorney may assist in gathering personal data or other facts. See sample questionnaires in §1.48 (for individuals) and §1.49 (for businesses).

In conducting the initial interview, the attorney should record the client's version of the facts that give rise to the claims or defenses. Usually, it will be appropriate to ascertain:

- The dates of relevant transactions or events. Even a rough chronology is useful at the outset.
- The correct names of all parties or potential parties. This list may include the names of parent and subsidiary companies, and, if applicable, their attorneys. This step is important in checking for conflicts of interest. See §1.8.
- Whether the claim may be barred by the running of a statute of limitations. If so, the attorney should find out whether there are facts that might show that the statute was tolled or that the potential defendant is estopped to assert this defense.
- Whether there is any other claim-filing requirement before initiating the lawsuit. For example, the plaintiff's attorney should promptly learn whether any potential defendants are public entities for purposes of meeting governmental claims requirements; see chap 9.
- The identity and location of witnesses. The attorney should inquire into the likelihood of witnesses becoming unavailable due to age, ill health, or relocation.
- The location of important documents and records. Any written contract involved in the dispute should be examined for legal issues, including attorney fees provisions or other clauses expanding or limiting the parties' remedies.
- The existence of insurance coverage. The defense attorney should investigate the available insurance coverage (e.g., homeowner's, business, title, and umbrella liability insurance) and whether the insurer has been given written notice of the claim against a prospective defendant.
- The existence of written statements. Counsel should find out whether anyone has investigated the matter or has possession of any written reports (e.g., the party's own statements given to claims adjusters and the like) and should arrange to obtain copies.
- Whether efforts have been made to resolve the matter informally. The attorney should inquire into any efforts the prospective client and other parties have made to resolve the dispute informally.
- The prospective client's financial condition. The initial interview is the time to determine ability to pay the attorney fees and costs of handling the litigation.

§1.13 B. Establish Good Working Relationship

The initial interview is important because the attorney and client form the first impressions of one another at this time. A lawyer can use this opportunity to inspire client confidence and show concern for the client as a person apart from the possible litigation. Observing a client's manner may also give the attorney insight about personality traits that could affect the litigation and may suggest ways to prepare the client later for direct and cross-examination at depositions and trial.

The attorney should explain the ground rules of the attorney-client relationship and the nature of representation in the initial interview, including:

- Attorney-client privilege. Counsel should emphasize that full disclosure to the attorney ensures that proper advice is given, and that the privilege protects an initial interview even if it does not result in representation. See Sullivan v Superior Court (1972) 29 CA3d 64, 69, 105 CR 241. Counsel should explain that even the client's partial disclosure of confidential information to outsiders may cause the privilege to be waived, but that communication with the law firm's staff to whom "disclosure is reasonably necessary" for the "accomplishment of the purpose for which the lawyer is consulted," is permissible. See Evid C §952.
- Fee arrangement. The requirement that a representation agreement be written, and the terms that must be included (e.g., attorney fee and costs) should be explained and a clear understanding reached with the prospective client. See chap 3. See also §1.15.
- Roles of attorney and client in litigation process. The attorney should inform the prospective client of the existence of various professional obligations, e.g., Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-210 (restricting ability of lawyer to pay expenses for client) and 3-510 (communication of any settlement offers).
- Attorney's office procedures. Most law offices have customary practices regarding client status reports, the returning of client telephone calls, the use of legal assistants and associate attorneys, and items included in billing; see chap 3 (representation agreements). See also §§1.32-1.44 (case management system).
- Conflict of interest rules. The attorney should communicate the intention to determine immediately whether there are any conflicts that could preclude the attorney from accepting a case. See §1.8.

§1.14 C. Outline Possible Results, Risks, Costs, Timing, and Alternatives

Based on the information given by the prospective client, the attorney should provide an initial assessment of the matter and the available alternatives. That is, even though it is rarely possible or wise to give a firm, unqualified opinion as to the likelihood of success, or even to recommend a particular course of action at the first meeting, the attorney should be prepared to describe generally:

- What the attorney sees as the significant legal or factual issues in the case and which way the issues (or some of them) might be resolved, assuming the facts as stated.
- If litigation is undertaken, what the attorney envisions in the way of:
- Any steps that should be taken immediately (e.g., to prevent the running of a statutory deadline or to preserve evidence);
- Legal research and factual investigation;
- Possible pleadings (including cross-complaints), motions, and discovery likely to be undertaken by the parties;
- The likely duration and expense of the litigation; and
- The range of recovery or exposure for the client if reasonably based on the information provided in the first interview and known to the attorney.
- Whether the claim or defense could be considered unmeritorious and could present ethical or other problems if vigorous litigation is undertaken (see §§1.3-1.7).
- The possibility of early settlement and the feasibility of a minimal cost approach to the litigation. Depending on the client's legal sophistication, the attorney might explain that:
- The vast majority of lawsuits do not go to trial;
- The expenses of a lawsuit, if taken all the way to trial (or appeal), weighed against the potential outcome, may be prohibitive;
- Some cases settle quickly when concessions are made and a conciliatory stance is taken at the appropriate time; and
- The other parties may nonetheless undermine settlement efforts, escalate discovery, and force the case to trial.
- The possibility of doing nothing or seeking to resolve the matter short of litigation if:
- Liability is weak or too expensive to prove, or the chance of recovering damages from the prospective defendant is slim; or
- Seeking a legal solution could escalate an already difficult situation, causing disclosure of confidential personal or business information, unflattering or intrusive publicity, or the setting of an adverse precedent arising from the case.

PRACTICE TIP: It may be advisable in the initial interview to caution the client that litigation should be viewed as a last resort or the least desirable option, often taxing family or a business resources emotionally and financially. Risks to be weighed include the possibility of having to pay the costs and fees of the adverse party if the suit is not successful, or having to defend against a cross-complaint. The attorney might suggest that further negotiations be attempted, either by the attorney or another person, before any legal action is taken or that the client consider other means, e.g., arbitration or mediation. See chap 45.

Most clients will appreciate, and some will expect, the attorney's written assessment of the issues and concerns outlined above within a reasonable time after the attorney is retained. Sophisticated clients may ask for an initial written analysis, plan, and proposal from prospective counsel. Any written assessment should include a recitation of the pertinent facts known and assumed by the attorney to be true.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/1 Accepting Cases and Implementing Office Procedures/ §1.15 D. Discuss Fee Agreements

§1.15 D. Discuss Fee Agreements

The attorney should be sure to discuss legal fees, costs, and expenses at the first client contact and should reach an agreement with the client on these matters. With some exceptions, all fee agreements must be in writing. Bus & P C §§6146, 6148. Business and Professions Code §6147 governs contingent fee matters and Bus & P C §6148 governs all other matters when the expense to the client will be greater than $1000.

Exceptions to Bus & P C §6148 include:

- The client is a corporation.
- Services are rendered in an emergency.
- The client presents a written waiver.
- The attorney has represented the client on a similar matter.

See Bus & P C §§6147, 6148(a), (d)(1)-(3).

On written fee agreements, see chap 3.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.16 E. Draft Engagement or Retainer Letter

After the attorney decides to accept the client, he or she should send a letter outlining the terms of the engagement or nonengagement. A major area of malpractice liability arises from misunderstandings between a client and an attorney regarding whether the attorney-client relationship was formed as a result of the first interview. The client may assume that the attorney is representing him or her, and the attorney may assume that no such relationship was formed. The engagement or retainer letter should define specifically the terms of the representation. Business and Professions Code §§6147-6148 require written retainer agreements with very specific information about fees. See §1.15. The engagement letter should also outline the terms of the representation. If the attorney declines representation, the letter should state that an attorney-client relationship was not formed, and the person should continue to seek an attorney.

IV. CASE INVESTIGATION

§1.17 A. Confirm Client's Facts; Resources

Although it is usually appropriate to enter into a representation agreement before undertaking extensive investigations, the attorney often cannot assess the merits of litigation without preliminary factual investigation and legal research. If the results of investigation and research show that a client's or prospective client's perception or recollection of facts was faulty and do not constitute a meritorious cause of action or defense, the attorney must consider professional ethical obligations. See, e.g., CCP §128.7 (sanctions for violating duty to conduct a reasonable inquiry into law and facts before submitting pleading, written motion, or other paper to court for complaints or petitions filed after December 31, 1994); Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-200 (prohibition against taking position in litigation without probable cause or that is unwarranted by law). It is important to communicate clearly with the party on these points, and if necessary provide explicit written notice of nonengagement or of nonrepresentation, or if the lawyer has already become the attorney of record, to file a substitution of attorneys on motion to withdraw from the case. See chap 4 (changes in representation).

The methods, breadth of, and budget for legal and factual investigation will differ from case to case, but usually the attorney uses the same general resources, i.e., the client's own files, other relevant documents obtained from witnesses, experts, public and private agencies and entities, opposing counsel, unrepresented parties, and, given the facts and issues known, appropriate research of the law. Many attorneys may find it beneficial to telephone opposing counsel, explaining they are now representing the client, and ask for information about the case. Sometimes key points known to the opposing party and eagerness to settle suggested by such a conversation can help attorneys evaluate and plan the strategy of the case at an early stage.

If the merits of a case turn on a technical point, the attorney should hire an expert consultant to help evaluate the client's position. The consultant's opinion can generally be shielded as the attorney's work product. See discussion of this privilege in California Civil Discovery Practice §§3.52-3.66 (4th ed Cal CEB 2006). In some cases (e.g., medical malpractice suits), the attorney is required to consult an expert. See chap 9.

Other useful resources include:

- Legal research databases, e.g., CEB (www.ceb.com), Lexis (www.lexisnexis.com), Westlaw (www.westlaw.com), which have online data of analytical and primary source material, as well as major periodicals, e.g., The Wall Street Journal, The Patent Quarterly.
- Government Internet sites, e.g., Judicial Council (www.courtinfo.ca.gov) for local rules, jury instructions, and Judicial Council forms, EDGAR (www.sec.gov/edgar.shtml) for SEC filings and forms.
- Government document repositories (e.g., the Public Affairs Service Department at UCLA University Research Library and the document libraries at UC Berkeley and UC San Diego), where legislative and executive reports on topics of public interest and a multitude of statistical and demographic information can be found.
- Court files showing pleadings and other public records filed in similar actions involving the same parties or the same industry.
- Plaintiffs' and defendants' attorney associations with central repositories of information on experts, trial witnesses, and legal issues.
- Trade associations, which may be fruitful sources of industry standards and referrals to technical experts.
- Large accounting and securities brokerage firms, which may be able to supply published analyses of certain companies and industry trends.

§1.18 B. Organize Research of Issues

Early and well-thought-out organization of a case is important in achieving an economically advantageous result for the client, whether through summary judgment, settlement, or trial. The initial interview should provide a basis for the attorney to develop a rough chronology of events and an outline of the general categories of legal and factual issues. Many attorneys start with jury instructions to assist in outlining the proof that will be necessary for each element of a cause of action or defense. For the Judicial Council Official Jury Instructions, see www.courtinfo.ca.gov. See also chap 41.

As the case progresses, a filing system can be set up to designate evidence pertaining to each element.

EXAMPLE: The issues for a breach of contract cause might be set up as follows:

1.1. Existence of enforceable contract
1.1.1. Written agreement signed 1/1/2004
1.1.2. Terms
1.1.3. Modified on 3/1/2004 in writing
1.1.4. Consideration for modification
1.2. Contract not illegal restraint of trade
1.3. Plaintiff performed
1.4. Defendant breached
1.4.1. Defendant's breach not excused
1.4.2. Supplier's strike not excused
1.5. Plaintiff took mitigation steps
1.6. Plaintiff suffered damages
1.6.1. Out-of-pocket mitigation expenses
1.6.2. Lost profits
1.6.3. Prejudgment interest
1.6.4. Attorney fees per contract

A legal assistant summarizing deposition transcripts can assign a number to each relevant portion of the testimony that corresponds to the issue outline. Files containing copies of important court decisions, draft jury instructions, legal research memorandums, and notes on the nature and location of evidence can also be assigned corresponding numbers. The issue outline then becomes the framework for organizing the law and evidence gathered in the case and will be available to assist in the preparation of trial briefs and declarations for summary judgment or other motions as well as be useful in an arbitration or at trial itself.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.19 C. Plan Discovery

An outline of the legal and factual issues will enable the attorney to identify the evidence needed to prove the client's claims or defenses in the litigation. The attorney can then develop a discovery plan tailored to the subject and budget of the case. The timing of various discovery methods and the priorities for establishing key facts can be formulated, taking into account any applicable local court rules designed to speed the resolution of litigation under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act. See chap 40. On creating and executing discovery plans, see California Civil Discovery Practice, chaps 1-2 (4th ed Cal CEB 2006).

Depending on the nature of the case and the relationship of the parties, it may be less costly and more effective tactically to conduct informal discovery on certain topics. Informal discovery and the initial investigation of the case often overlap, but the attorney should not overlook the advisability of proceeding informally at a later time in the litigation.

It is often useful to forgo formal discovery methods when attempting to locate nonparty witnesses or when checking into background information (e.g., to assist in effective cross-examination, or to establish patterns of prior conduct, the competitive position of a party in a particular market, intent, conspiracy, or alter ego). When the defendant's solvency is in doubt, the attorney should obtain updates on the original asset search so that informed decisions may be made periodically about whether to continue the litigation.

V. OFFICE MANAGEMENT AND PROCEDURES

§1.20 A. Establish Procedures and Controls

In past years attorneys, like doctors and dentists, had the reputation of being undisciplined about their business practices. Foremost among new developments demanding sound business practices are increasing economic pressures, court-mandated time limitations under delay reduction processing rules, and malpractice concerns.

The legal profession has become more competitive, requiring attorneys to carefully scrutinize their business practices. The high cost of legal services prevents most attorneys and firms from increasing their fees sufficiently to cover the costs of increased overhead for rent, malpractice insurance, salaries, computer equipment, and other basic items. The result is that, in order to maintain profits while remaining competitive, lawyers are forced to practice law in a more efficient manner. Doing so may be facilitated by adopting and implementing specific office procedures and controls.

The same procedures and controls that increase efficiency also increase effectiveness. They also minimize instances in which the clients' interests are endangered and they protect the attorneys' interests by reducing their exposure to malpractice claims. Undoubtedly, the increase in legal malpractice claims over recent years is at least partly a result of the public's perception that clients' interests are not being protected. In a survey of claims handled by one legal malpractice insurer, the four most common causes of claims arising from negligent attorney behavior, accounting for more than 80 percent of such claims, were (Blumberg, Avoiding Malpractice, 7 Cal Law 65, 66 (June 1987)):

- Failure to properly calendar a matter;
- Failure to be clear about the attorney's intention to take or withdraw from a case;
- Failure to monitor client payments, resulting in a suit for fees that prompts a client's cross-complaint for malpractice; and
- Inadequate knowledge of the law or investigation of the facts.

The first two of these (and, to a lesser extent, the third) are likely products of inadequate office procedures and controls and, therefore, their incidence can be reduced by improvement in these areas.

For discussion of establishing procedures and controls, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 5 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

§1.21 1. Client Intake Forms and Procedures

When a new matter is taken into the office, the first action taken should be to open a new file. The process of opening a new file should provide in one step all the information necessary for the various case management functions. Standardized client information necessary for case management includes:

- The client's name; address, including e-mail; telephone (office and cellular), and fax numbers;
- Information relating to the opposing party and the opposing party's counsel;
- Information identifying the file, the client, and the means of contacting the client and the opposing counsel; and
- Information on the manner in and rate at which the client will be billed.

For corporate clients, it is helpful to include information on a contact person for billing issues or questions.

Most offices that handle a significant volume of any particular type of case use client intake forms or questionnaires. Completion of the form may be performed by the client before the attorney interview, by a paralegal before or after the attorney interview, or by the attorney as the interview is conducted. Some of the advantages associated with the use of such forms are:

- The attorney interview process may be shortened.
- The information that experience has shown to be necessary for the specific type of case is obtained, thus minimizing omissions during the interview process.
- The location of information for similar matters is consistent from case file to case file, thus facilitating retrieval for discovery and other purposes.

Among the disadvantages of standardized client intake forms are:

- Completion of the forms may interfere with the client's need to "tell the story."
- The first and most important impression the client receives from the attorney may be one suggesting a depersonalized approach to the client's problems.
- The forms may require the client to provide more information than is reasonably necessary for the client's case or may omit information because of the unique nature of the client's problem.

If standardized client information forms are used, care should be taken to ensure that the representation is not too depersonalized in the process of obtaining necessary information. If a paralegal or staff person other than the attorney conducts the initial intake, the client should be informed at the outset that a few questions need to be asked before the client meets with the attorney so that the attorney can better respond to questions and assist with legal problems. If additional information or documentation is required, the client should be provided with a written list of what is needed and the date by which it will be provided should be agreed on.

The attorney should introduce the client to other staff members who will be assisting the attorney on the matter. Frequently, these individuals will have more day-to-day contact with the client than the attorney will have, and an early introduction can make the contacts more personal and pleasurable for everyone.

§1.22 2. Office Procedures

Law offices, like other service businesses, require written procedures to assist employees in understanding and meeting their employers' expectations. Although office manuals often cover a multitude of subjects, including communications systems, employee benefits, employee compensation, office organization, office security, and personnel policies, the focus here is on litigation procedures. Among topics in this area that might appropriately be covered in an office manual are calendaring, client intake forms and procedures, closing files, confidentiality, document processing, forms manuals, opening files, "tickler" system, and timekeeping.

In many respects, the office manual sets the tone for the firm. Such manuals may be very detailed and extensive or may be brief and cover only areas of special concern to the firm. Each employee should receive an individual copy of the manual when their employment commences. An office copy should remain available in the library or similar location where it can be easily consulted by all employees.

All attorneys and the staff should be made aware of the manual and should strive to apply its procedures in uniformly and consistently. Procedures that are not working should be deleted or changed. The manual should be updated regularly to avoid confusion and its revision date should be indicated whenever any part of the manual is revised and updated.

NOTE: Like all employers, law firms should consider having an employment attorney review the office manual for personnel policies, such as "at will" employment and other issues. See generally Advising California Employers and Employees (Cal CEB 2005).

§1.23 3. Forms Manuals

Attorneys performing many different tasks for many different clients have learned the benefit of maintaining forms. There is no attorney who does not recognize the value of having an example of a previously drafted complaint, contract, or will. Rather than develop forms manuals, however, attorneys too often seek to recall a particular case or client matter previously handled when they are faced with a client who has a similar problem or requires similar work performed. The task of creating a document can be greatly simplified by maintaining work product files and developing forms manuals.

One approach to developing a forms manual is to classify work produced on behalf of clients generally by the area of law in which it falls, e.g., personal injury, family law, criminal law. As greater numbers of documents are collected, they are then classified more specifically within the subject areas of the law, e.g., complaints, interrogatories, demand letters. As the number of documents in each classification grows, a large percentage of the same clauses will appear in each similar document. These basic clauses are then adopted as the basic form. Variations of the basic common clauses should be maintained.

The forms manual should be periodically updated as changes in the law occur or as more desirable formats are developed. The forms manual can be an excellent training device for new associates and staff and can be a significant timesaver because it does not rely on the attorney's ability to recall the names of old files containing similar work.

B. Use of Contract Attorneys and Paralegals

1. Contract Attorneys

§1.24 a. Advantages and Disadvantages

Contract attorneys are usually hired to perform specific tasks or to work on specific cases. When the work is completed, the attorney's services are terminated or a new contract is entered into for other services needed by the firm. This type of arrangement can provide considerable savings to the firm through lower billing rates, salaries, and employment benefits. Savings may also result if the contract attorney works out of a local law library or from home, thereby obviating any need for the firm to provide office space. The disadvantages most often encountered with contract attorneys are frequent turnover and lack of familiarity with the law office or the client matter involved.

For discussion of staffing and contract attorneys, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.25 b. Need for Written Contract

In hiring contract attorneys, it is imperative that the relationship between the firm and the attorney be defined by a written contract. In addition to defining the relationship between the contract attorney and the firm, the employment contract may help to avoid later disputes between them over a malpractice claim by the client or entitlement to profits, bonuses, or court-ordered attorney fees.

Before using contract attorneys, a firm should contact its malpractice carrier to determine the effect that using contract attorneys may have on malpractice coverage.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.26 c. Depositions and Court Appearances

Care should be taken to ensure that a contract attorney who is hired for a deposition or court appearance is thoroughly versed about the case and the specific assignment. If there will be direct contact between the contract attorney and the client, the client should be advised and, if possible, introduced personally or by telephone to the contract attorney. After the deposition or court appearance has been completed, the contract attorney should provide a thorough written report of the proceedings.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.27 2. Paralegals

In most law firms, salaries are the largest part of overhead. As pressure to increase salaries and related employment benefits continues to rise, law firms are becoming increasingly creative in developing ways of controlling such expenses.

Over the years, firms have turned more frequently to paralegals to assist with various tasks performed for clients, e.g., preparing or responding to discovery requests, summarizing documents and deposition testimony, and trial preparation responsibilities. With proper training and supervision, a paralegal may do much of the work otherwise performed by attorneys. The advantages of using paralegals are twofold: First, the billing rate for paralegals is considerably less than for attorneys, resulting in a smaller bill for the client. Second, the work performed by paralegals on client matters normally results in significant savings of attorney time, allowing the attorney to devote greater time to matters requiring legal attention.

For discussion of staffing and paralegals, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

§1.28 a. Definition and Permitted Activities

Legislation defines the term "paralegal," sets educational and training standards, describes and sets limits on their permissible activities, defines their professional responsibilities, and provides a remedy for consumers injured by their unauthorized activities. Bus & P C §§6450-6456. Under Bus & P C §6450, a paralegal is an individual who holds him- or herself out to be a paralegal, who is qualified by education, training, or work experience, who either contracts or is employed by a lawyer, law firm, corporation, governmental agency, or other entity, and who performs "substantial legal work" under the direction and supervision of an attorney. The work must be "specifically delegated" to the paralegal by the attorney. Bus & P C §6450(a). Permissible activities for a paralegal may include, but are not limited to (Bus & P C §6450(a)):

> case planning, development, and management; legal research; interviewing clients; fact gathering and retrieving information; drafting and analyzing legal documents; collecting, compiling, and utilizing technical information to make an independent decision and recommendation to the supervising attorney; and representing clients before a state or federal administrative agency if that representation is permitted by statute, court rule, or administrative rule or regulation.

§1.29 b. Prohibited Activities

A paralegal may not provide legal services directly to a consumer of legal services except as performed under the direction and supervision of the lawyer, law firm, corporation, government agency, or other entity that employs or contracts with the paralegal. Bus & P C §6451. In addition, the following activities are specifically prohibited (Bus & P C §6450(b)):

- Giving legal advice;
- Representing a client in court;
- Selecting, explaining, drafting, or recommending the use of any legal document to or for anyone other than the paralegal's supervising attorney;
- Acting as a runner or capper (see Bus & P C §§6151-6152);
- Engaging in the unlawful practice of law;
- Contracting with or accepting employment as a paralegal for any individual who is not an attorney;
- In connection with providing paralegal services, inducing a person to enter into an allegedly profit-making or income-producing transaction; and
- Setting the fees that will be charged to the client for the paralegal's services, unless the client is an attorney (or organization authorized to employ or contract with paralegals) contracting for the paralegal's services.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/1 Accepting Cases and Implementing Office Procedures/ §1.30 c. Education and Training Requirements

§1.30 c. Education and Training Requirements

A paralegal must have one of the following (Bus & P C §6450(c)):

- A certificate of completion of a paralegal program approved by the American Bar Association;
- A certificate of completion or a degree from an accredited postsecondary institution that requires successful completion of at least 24 semester units in law-related courses; or
- A bachelor's or advanced degree in any subject, plus one year of law-related experience under the supervision of a qualified attorney, and a written declaration from the supervising attorney that the paralegal is qualified to perform paralegal tasks.

An individual with a high school or general equivalency diploma, three years of law-related experience under the supervision of a qualified attorney, and a written declaration from the supervising attorney that the paralegal is qualified to perform paralegal tasks, may become a paralegal but only if the experience portion of the qualification requirements was completed by December 31, 2003. Bus & P C §6450(c).

Paralegals must also meet the following continuing legal education requirements (Bus & P C §6450(d)):

- Four hours of continuing education in legal ethics every 2 years; and
- Four hours of continuing education in general law or a specialized area of law every 2 years.

The supervising attorney has responsibility for certifying that the paralegal has met the continuing education requirements. The paralegal must keep a record of the certifications. Bus & P C §6450(d).

NOTE: A "legal document assistant" (see Bus & P C §6400(c)) who has a registered business name that includes the word "paralegal" may continue to use that name until the time for renewing the registration. Bus & P C §6450(f).

§1.31 3. Delegation and Supervision

The chances of obtaining the desired finished product will be increased if tasks are clearly assigned. Although some attorneys have great success, others continue to have problems with those assisting them in matters relating to their clients. A few helpful hints to follow when working with support staff are:

- Provide background information. Most individuals understand an assignment better if they are able to appreciate how the assignment fits into the overall case and objectives.
- Describe the result expected. It is frequently helpful, for example, to provide a copy of a similar product, preferably one that was completed to the attorney's satisfaction, pointing out strong and weak aspects.
- Provide time guidelines. The employee should be told how much time to devote to the assignment. If the guideline is only an estimate, that should be indicated. The employee should be directed to inform the attorney if significantly more time is required than was initially anticipated.
- Set priorities. The employee should be informed about the relative importance of the assignment and whether it should be placed ahead of or behind other matters previously assigned. If there is a conflict with an assignment received from another attorney in the office, that attorney should be contacted so that the priority between the two projects can be worked out.
- Set a date for completion.
- Direct the employee to potential resources. These resources should include other attorneys and files that have addressed similar problems.
- Delineate the employee's responsibilities. The division of decisionmaking between the attorney and the employee should be made clear.
- Discuss the assignment. The employee should be given sufficient detail to ensure an understanding of the assignment and an opportunity to raise any questions.
- Keep in contact. The employee should be informed at the outset how and when the attorney will check on progress.

It is often helpful to provide the employee with a written assignment sheet containing much of the information suggested above.

For discussion of duties regarding delegation and supervision, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

§1.32 VI. CASE MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

Ideally, every law office would be staffed with experienced personnel who have the knowledge, skill, and time to handle competently all matters that cross their desks. But even when those attributes are present, such things as vacations, illness, forgetfulness, and procrastination sometimes prevent the accomplishment of tasks in an appropriate manner. An effective case management system helps to prevent tasks from being overlooked, which would expose clients and attorneys to potentially serious consequences. A case management system should:

- Organize client information for effective filing, retrieval, and use;
- Facilitate workflow by providing sufficient notice to accomplish specific tasks in a timely manner;
- Generate information for billing, budgeting, and other financial purposes; and
- Provide data for decisionmaking about growth and marketing.

Even in a small law office, there may be a multitude of documents that must be filed, retrieved, and utilized over the years. A good filing system should be in place and ready for the first client, and, once established, will likely outlast particular attorneys and staff. The system should be designed to withstand the departure of a key employee as well as the breaking up of the firm. It should provide the ability to easily locate and retrieve every active and inactive file.

A. Filing System

1. Case Files

§1.33 a. Numbering

Although many attorneys initially use an alphabetical filing system, the system invariably fails when the office accumulates a large number of cases. Files can easily be misfiled and become difficult to locate. Serious problems also develop when an alphabetical system becomes decentralized and more than one attorney begins sharing the same 26 letters of the alphabet.

A numerical filing system is clearly preferable to an alphabetical one. When the numbers are reused, a numerical filing system provides a quick check for missing files. Because billing and client information systems are usually based on client numbers, a numerical system facilitates a highly computerized office. In some instances, a computer billing system may require that a particular type of numerical system be used.

An example of a simple numerical system is one in which each client matter is assigned a four-digit number that follows the year in which the file was opened. The first case opened in 1999 would be assigned 99-0001 as a file number, the second 99-0002, and so forth. The system can be modified when there is more than one attorney in the office. Each attorney sharing the system may be assigned an interval of numbers. For example, Attorney A might have numbers 1000 through 1999, Attorney B 2000 through 2999, and Attorney C 3000 through 3999. Additional files for a single client matter may be identified by adding a letter following the number. Thus, if the first case opened in 1999 eventually requires three files, they might be numbered 99-0001, 99-0001A, and 99-0001B.

Alternatively, when an attorney handles several matters for a single client, the client may be assigned a number, to ensure that all matters relating to the same client are filed in the same location. Subsequent matters handled for the same client are then added in sequence to the client number. For example, client 1500 may have matters numbered 1500-1, 1500-2, and so forth. This approach is also helpful for the person responsible for billing, in producing a single client statement for all matters being handled.

The number for any particular file can be ascertained by reference to the appropriate client directory file (see §1.38) or a master open-file list. On numbering closed files, see §1.37.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.34 b. Individual File Organization

Each client file should be organized in the same manner. This method will greatly enhance office efficiency because all personnel will know where to locate particular items. The specific organizational approach may vary among offices.

Each side of the folder (or each section when folders with multiple dividers are used) should be designated for particular items. With standard folders, for example, pleadings and court documents are commonly placed on the right and correspondence, notes, and other items on the left. More complex approaches should be developed for cases requiring large numbers of file items. For example, separate subfiles might be maintained for:

- Correspondence;
- Pleadings;
- Discovery documents;
- Memorandums and research; and
- Notes and drafts.

Within each side or subfile, the most recent item should appear on top.

Some attorneys keep an envelope in each file for storing small notes and telephone messages.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.35 c. Location

When there is a single attorney in the practice, all files may be kept in a single, centralized location. If there are more attorneys, however, a centralized filing system may not be desirable because each attorney may wish to have easy access to the files for the cases he or she is handling. Consideration should also be given to the needs of paralegals, clerical staff, and others who regularly work on client matters and require access to the files.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.36 d. Document Management and Evidence Retrieval

At the initial interview, most attorneys take a few pages of notes, review the relevant documents in the client's possession, and place the notes and documents in the file along with the retainer agreement. As the matter progresses, photographs may be taken, witness statements obtained, and deposition transcripts, medical records, and other documents received. Every document received should be date-stamped. In complicated matters involving multiple documents, many offices have developed procedures to facilitate identifying the source and page numbers as well as the description of the document. For example, in a case with one plaintiff and four defendants, each party might be designated by a letter, e.g., the plaintiff as "A" and the defendants as "B" through "E," respectively. At the time of receipt, each page of a document will be given a sequential number prefaced with the letter of the party from whom it is received. Thus, A0037 and D0103 represent, respectively, page 37 of a document received from plaintiff and page 103 of a document received from defendant "D."

This system is especially useful in responding to discovery requests by opposing counsel. When responding to requests for inspection of documents, both the document itself and its identifying numbers are provided. This procedure helps to avoid a party later claiming they failed to receive specific documents. For example, if memorandums identified as D0329 to D0372 were provided in a discovery response, a claim at trial that this is the first time counsel has seen document D0350 may reasonably be met with suspicion. An additional advantage to this system is that the attorneys may agree to use the same numerical designations throughout the litigation, including deposition and trial proceedings, if permitted by the court.

With this type of retrieval system, it is necessary to maintain an index or log of documents received. The major drawback to this procedure is the time and expense associated with numbering and logging each document received. For large quantities of documents, use of numerical rotating stamps is clearly preferable to numbering by hand.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.37 e. Closing Files

Although most resolved client matters stay resolved, almost all lawyers have had cases that seem never to die. Also, it may occasionally be necessary to retrieve documents even on matters that do stay resolved. Attorneys who fail to establish a system for closed files too often find themselves wasting hours or even days searching for files out of the past. It is important to develop a system for retrieving "closed" files should they be needed in the future.

When a matter is completed, the file should be closed in accordance with a standard procedure established by the office. It may be helpful to have a closing checklist, including such items as a check for any unfinished work, removal of any duplicate copies of documents, return to the client of original documents provided to the firm, and a closing letter to the client.

Like open files, every closed file should be assigned a closed file number at the time of closing. The numbers may be a simple sequence or begin with a "C" for "closed" and then follow a format similar to the open file numbering system (e.g., C99-0001 to designate the first file closed in 1999).

The assigned closed file number then replaces the open file number, which is then removed from the "open" client directory file (see §1.38) and placed in a "closed" client directory file. If a master closed-file list is also maintained, the new closed file should be added to it.

Unless closed files are to be maintained forever, a policy should be developed for when files are destroyed and any preparatory steps to be taken beforehand.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.38 2. Client Directory Files

Each attorney should maintain a client directory file, containing a list of each open case file being handled by the attorney. At a minimum, the list should show each client's name, the matter being handled, and the open case file number.

It is also advisable to include other information that may be helpful if the case file is unavailable. Possible items include the client's address and telephone numbers; opposing counsel's name, address, and telephone number; the court case number, if any; and information necessary to contact other persons involved with the case (e.g., experts, adjusters, mediators).

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.39 3. Conflicts File

A conflicts file contains information required to determine whether a potential client matter presents a conflict. The conflicts file should always be checked before any actual consultation with the potential client. See chap 2.

For every matter handled, the name of the client and each opposing party, if any, should be filed in the conflicts file with a reference to the client file number.

§1.40 B. Evaluating Services Rendered

Every member of the staff serves the client and should reflect positively on the firm. To ensure the quality of professional services rendered, employees should be made to feel that they are part of a team and not simply employees. Their work should be evaluated and they should be given constructive criticism when improvement is necessary. Clients should be asked about the treatment they receive from employees.

§1.41 C. Calendaring and Docket Control

Missed deadlines caused by failure to properly calendar matters are the most significant cause of malpractice claims against attorneys. Without a good docket control system, even the most knowledgeable practitioner may fail to meet deadlines or may not have enough time to properly prepare. A good docket control system not only aids in avoiding serious losses to clients, but it provides the attorney with substantial peace of mind. Most, if not all, malpractice insurers require a docket control system.

A basic calendaring and docket control system has three components:

- A master calendar;
- Secondary calendars; and
- A "tickler" system.

For discussion of calendaring and docket control, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.4-5.20 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.42 1. Master Calendar

All activity associated with client matters is entered on the master calendar. It should include all deadlines, court appearances, and other dates associated with litigation, such as statute of limitations filing deadlines (entered in red or another bright color); due dates for filing pleadings or other documents; discovery deadlines and due dates; and expiration dates for judgments requiring renewal.

There should be only one master calendar for the entire office. It is very important that a specific individual be designated to calendar matters in the master calendar. The person should review all incoming pleadings to determine the appropriate response date, consistent with established office guidelines. Once this has been accomplished, the pleading should be initialed or stamped in a manner verifying that calendaring has occurred. Each attorney should also review dates calendared and add any necessary additional dates. To avoid the failure to calendar a matter properly, no pleading should be filed unless it bears the stamp or initials of the person responsible for calendaring.

Some law firms also keep a statute book that is a centrally located 10-year diary. Entries are made in the statute book with (1) the date that the statute of limitations runs on each matter, and (2) after suit is filed, the date of any delay reduction deadline or any other crucial procedural deadline.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.43 2. Secondary Calendars

Each attorney should have a secondary calendar, which should be reviewed daily and updated with the matters added to the master calendar (see §1.42) that relate to cases handled by the particular attorney. On the secondary calendar, the attorney may also include appointments and other professional matters requiring attention. As the name implies, a secondary calendar serves as a backup to the master calendar and allows the individual attorney to focus on matters for which he or she is responsible.

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.44 3. "Tickler" System

A "tickler" system that is tied to the master calendar is designed to give those responsible for specific tasks adequate time to perform them and to ensure that files are reviewed on a regular basis so that no file or required task is overlooked. Some offices use the tickler system both to ensure timely file review and to remind the attorney responsible to report regularly to clients on the progress of the case.

VII. TIMEKEEPING AND RECORDING

§1.45 A. Importance of Accurate Recordkeeping

Many attorneys, especially those in small offices, limit their timekeeping efforts to cases that are billed on an hourly basis. By limiting their timekeeping efforts in this manner, these attorneys lose valuable information that could otherwise be used for planning. Accurate records of time spent on cases are also essential when a positive result is obtained and a court award of attorney fees is sought. Judges are generally more inclined to award fees for time that has been contemporaneously recorded and maintained throughout the course of the litigation than for time reconstructed near the conclusion.

Accurate time tracking is equally important in contingency fee cases, even though the compensation may not be related to the actual number of hours on the case. If the attorney's services are discharged before a recovery, a question will arise as to what the measure of the attorney's compensation will be. Time records become important because it is recognized that the attorney is, in that case, no longer entitled to the contingency fee amount, but the reasonable value of his or her services. Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 100 CR 385. The best way to establish the reasonable value of the attorney's services is by submitting time records that were maintained, even though the attorney was working on a contingency basis.

Daily time records should not only be kept on all work performed, whether by attorneys, paralegals, or other such support staff and whether involving billable or nonbillable time, but work should also be recorded at the time it is performed and not at the end of the day or week. This practice provides accurate and complete time records. The attorney may decide later not to charge for certain tasks, or to reduce excessive time, but this decision should be made when the client's statement is prepared, not when the time is logged.

For discussion of timekeeping and billing, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 5 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

© The Regents of the University of California

§1.46 B. Timekeeping Systems

The specific manner in which the time is recorded is not particularly important as long as it is consistent and concurrent with the work performed. The essential data include the client's name, the matter, the file number, the task performed, and the amount of time spent. Most attorneys log time by the tenth or quarter hour.

There are many commercial time recording systems; some have codes for the type of work done, and many produce time slips that can be organized by client and matter, as well as master time sheets that record all billed time chronologically. Many of the suppliers of time and billing software may allow the attorney to test the system before purchasing it. The attorney should consider the cost of the system, the ease of use, the ability to record certain costs, such as long distance phone call charges and photocopying costs.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/1 Accepting Cases and Implementing Office Procedures/ §1.47 C. Review of Office Productivity

§1.47 C. Review of Office Productivity

To ensure that a law firm remains in business, office productivity must be frequently scrutinized and evaluated. Use of daily time records will assist the firm, including the sole practitioner, to make many business decisions designed to keep the firm solvent and productive. Among the kinds of data that may be developed from complete and accurate time records on all cases are the following:

- A comparison of the hourly rate of return on contingent fee cases and cases in which fixed fees are charged with that in hourly fee matters;
- The percentages of the overall time spent and the hourly rates of return on cases in different areas of the law (e.g., family law, personal injury, criminal law);
- The number of nonbillable hours worked per week or other given period;
- The percentage of attorney time spent on marketing activity, pro bono work, or other such activities, and the returns received at later dates; and
- A comparison of time spent by paralegals and other nonattorneys on various types of cases.

I. INTRODUCTION

§2.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter examines conflicts of interest problems that arise in civil practice. It discusses governing law (see §§2.2-2.4) and avoiding conflicts situations (see §§2.5-2.10). It discusses the following types of conflicts:

- Attorney's adverse pecuniary interest (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300) (see §2.11);
- Attorney's acceptance of compensation from a nonclient (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(F)) (see §2.12);
- Attorney's use of confidential information against present or former client (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E)) (see §§2.13-2.24);
- Attorney or firm currently representing divergent client interests (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C)) (see §§2.25-2.34);
- Conflicts arising from relationships with other persons (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B), 3-320) (see §§2.35-2.42);
- Conflicts involving attorneys representing corporations (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600) (see §§2.43-2.47); and
- Conflicts arising in the insurance context, including the insurer's duty to provide Cumis counsel (see San Diego Navy Fed. Credit Union v Cumis Ins. Soc'y (1984) 162 CA3d 358, 364, 208 CR 494) (see §§2.48-2.51).

This chapter also discusses:

- Limitations on an attorney acting as witness (see §§2.52-2.55);
- Client's consent to and waiver of conflicts (see §§2.56-2.58); and
- Attorney withdrawal and disqualification (see §§2.59-2.72).

It also includes forms of letter to client: adverse representation (see §2.73) and letter to corporate officer: dual representation (see §2.74).

B. Governing Law

§2.2 1. Statutes, Rules, and Professional Standards

The California standards for professional conduct are set forth in the State Bar Act (Bus & P C §§6000-6238), the Rules of Professional Conduct, and local rules. Rules governing conflicts of interest in the California Rules of Professional Conduct are as follows:

- Attorney's adverse interests. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300 (adverse pecuniary interest), 3-310(F) (accepting compensation from nonclient). See §§2.11-2.12.
- Attorney's representation of adverse interests. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) (use of confidential information) (see §§2.13-2.24), 3-310(C) (conflicting concurrent representation) (see §§2.25-2.34).
- Relationship with other party's lawyer. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-320. See §2.36.
- Organization as a client. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600. See §§2.43-2.47.

NOTE: An attorney who provides short-term, noncontinuing legal representation to a client, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a court, nonprofit, law school or other organization, is not subject to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 unless the attorney knows that representation involves a conflict of interest. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-650. The attorney has an imputed conflict of interest only if the attorney knows that another lawyer associated with the attorney at a law firm would have a conflict of interest under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310.

These rules apply to attorneys licensed to practice in California and to those litigating in California state courts. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100(D)(1)-(2). The rules also apply to lawyers representing clients in federal district courts in California whenever the district's local rules so provide. See, e.g., Local Rules for the United States District Courts, ND Cal Local R 11-4 (members of the bar of the court and any attorney permitted to practice in the court must be familiar and comply with standards of professional conduct required of members of State Bar of California).

The American Bar Association also promulgates the ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond and the ABA Code of Prof Resp. Both are available on their website at www.abanet.org/cpr/mrpc/mrpc_home.html. The ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, however, do not establish ethical standards in California, because they have not been adopted in California and have no legal force of their own. Hetos Inv., Ltd. v Kurtin (2003) 110 CA4th 36, 46, 1 CR3d 472. Nevertheless, they are frequently cited in court opinions for guidance. See, e.g., Hetos Inv., Ltd. v Kurtin, supra.

§2.3 2. Ethics Opinions

Attorneys are also bound by opinions of California courts, and although not binding, opinions of ethics committees in California should be consulted by members for guidance on proper professional conduct. Attorneys may also consider ethics opinions and rules and standards promulgated by other jurisdictions and bar associations. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100(A). The ethics opinions of the State Bar Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct are set forth in www.calbar.ca.gov under Attorney Resources, Ethics Information, Ethics Opinions.

The State Bar and various local bar associations will assist attorneys in resolving ethical issues, including conflicts of interest questions. The State Bar maintains an "Ethics Hotline" during business hours at (800) 238-4427 (toll free within California) and (415) 538-2150 (outside California).

§2.4 3. Rationale for Rules

The specific rules prohibiting conflicting representation flow from affirmative duties owed by the attorney and are designed to protect clients, attorneys, and the legal system. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100 (purpose for regulating professional conduct is "to protect the public and to promote respect and confidence in the legal profession"). An attorney's duties include the obligation to:

- Represent the client competently (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110);
- Keep the client informed about significant developments (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-500);
- Preserve the client's confidences and secrets (Bus & P C §6068(e)); and
- Act with undivided loyalty on the client's behalf.

California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1984-83; Commercial Standard Title Co. v Superior Court (1979) 92 CA3d 934, 945, 155 CR 393. See ABA Code Prof Resp EC 5-14 to 5-18, discussing the problematic impact of conflicts on the attorney's obligation to exercise independent judgment on the client's behalf.

Further, the relationship between attorney and client creates a fiduciary duty that limits the attorney's ability to take on the representation of clients whose interests may be at odds with those of existing clients, former clients, the attorney, or the attorney's firm. Neel v Magana, Olney, Levy, Cathcart & Gelfand (1971) 6 C3d 176, 189, 98 CR 837. See ABA Code Prof Resp EC 5-1.

Conflicts of interest arise when the attorney's performance of these duties is inhibited. See, e.g., Trone v Smith (9th Cir 1980) 621 F2d 994, 998 (commitment of attorney to use skill and expend energy and resources in exercise of independent professional judgment on client's behalf would be endangered if attorney could switch sides later in a substantially related matter); Yorn v Superior Court (1979) 90 CA3d 669, 675, 153 CR 295.

The rules against representing conflicting interests also prevent attorneys from being placed in the untenable position of trying to reconcile the conflicts themselves, instead of devoting their full efforts to the enforcement of the interest that alone should be represented. Anderson v Eaton (1930) 211 C 113, 116, 293 P 788; Woods v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 931, 936, 197 CR 185; Yorn v Superior Court, supra.

II. AVOIDING CONFLICTS SITUATIONS

§2.5 A. Creating a Conflicts Check System

A conflicts check system allows the attorney to identify potential conflicts problems before agreeing to accept employment. The system should provide a means of checking for names of current and former clients, corporate parents and affiliates of current and former clients, principal officers and directors, fictitious business names, persons who have consulted with your firm, current or former adversaries, nonclients who have a substantial economic relationship with your firm (e.g., CPAs), and companies or institutions for whom attorneys in the firm have served or are serving as directors, officers, or trustees. Many attorneys also include opposing counsel in pending matters on the conflict list. See §2.47 (attorneys serving as corporate directors).

NOTE: Find out whether a conflict or potential conflict exists during your initial telephone contact and before the initial interview.

Without a conflicts check system, the attorney might obtain confidential information from a potential new client that would disqualify him or her from continuing to represent an existing client, even if the attorney decides not to accept representation of the new client. Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 36 CR2d 537; Truck Ins. Exch. v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 CA4th 1050, 8 CR2d 228 (attorney cannot prevent disqualification by ending representation of less favored existing client).

PRACTICE TIP: Several manual systems as well as computer software packages are available for tracking potential conflicts among existing and former clients. There are also periodicals and other publications that offer suggestions on this aspect of law office management.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.6 B. Alternatives for Resolving Conflicts

Conflicts problems can be resolved in various ways, depending on the stage of recognition and the manner in which they are handled, including:

- Declining to accept representation of a prospective client whose interests may be adverse to another client.
- Full disclosure to the client (or former client) and the client's (or former client's) written consent to the employment despite the conflict or potential conflict (see §§2.56-2.58).
- The attorney's voluntary withdrawal (see §2.59).
- The attorney's forced withdrawal, i.e., disqualification, if the court finds a conflicts situation and grants the motion for disqualification (see §§2.60-2.72).

PRACTICE TIP: When in doubt about the ethics of a potential conflict of interest, consider requesting information from the California State Bar's Ethics Hotline (see §2.2) or obtaining an opinion letter from private counsel specializing in legal ethics. Seeking an opinion from the county bar association ethics committee or from the State Bar Committee on Professional Responsibility and Conduct is another option, although this approach may take many months. An attorney's documented effort to obtain guidance from counsel or an ethics committee for an interpretation of a rule of conduct as it applies to a particular fact situation—and the attorney's subsequent compliance with that advice—will create a record showing that the attorney made a good faith effort to comply with professional standards, thus minimizing the chances of being disciplined for "willful breach" of the rules. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100.

See §§2.2-2.3 for governing law on conflicts of interest.

C. Effect of Breaching Conflicts Rules

§2.7 1. Disqualification

An accusation of conflict of interest may cause embarrassment and damage to an attorney's reputation. A finding of a conflict of interest may result in disqualification (i.e., forced withdrawal from further representation of the client in the particular matter) and may jeopardize the client's interests. See, e.g., Thomas v Municipal Court (9th Cir 1989) 878 F2d 285 (criminal client denied effective assistance of counsel owing to defense counsel's conflict of interest; ruling for retrial).

WARNING: Even the attorney who persuades the court that continued representation is appropriate may have to invest considerable time and expense in contesting a motion for disqualification by opposing counsel. Further, the situation could strain the relationship between the attorney and the client, especially if the client had not been informed previously of the conflicting or potentially conflicting interests in the case. A belated disclosure of adverse interests may damage the attorney-client relationship and may make the client or former client more likely to refuse to consent to the conflict. Finding new counsel midstream in the litigation is not only expensive, but also could substantively jeopardize the client's interests and expose the original attorney to tort liability.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.8 2. State Bar Discipline

Willful breach of any of the rules against conflicts of interest may subject the attorney to State Bar disciplinary sanctions. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100, 1-110. See also Bus & P C §§6077-6078; Cal Rules of Ct 9.19. See generally 1 Witkin, California Procedure, Attorneys §558 (5th ed 2008). However, not every violation of the disciplinary rule necessarily results in disqualification, and not every disqualification supports the finding of an ethical breach. See Official Discussion to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.9 3. Refunding Attorney Fees

The attorney or firm found to have breached conflict of interest rules can be required to return or forgo fees. See Jeffry v Pounds (1977) 67 CA3d 6, 136 CR 373 (law firm not entitled to fees for services rendered after date of firm's violation of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-102(B) (now see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C)), but entitled to compensation for services preceding the breach). See also Anderson v Eaton (1930) 211 C 113, 293 P 788 (contingency fee contract void as against public policy because of violation of duty of loyalty and duty to avoid conflict). The general rule is that an attorney disqualified for violating an ethical obligation is not entitled to fees. A. I. Credit Corp. v Aguilar & Sebastinelli (2003) 113 CA4th 1072, 1079, 6 CR3d 813.

Similarly, a retainer agreement may be voidable for public policy reasons if the attorney violates the rules proscribing representation adverse to a former client and disclosure of confidences. An attorney may not recover for services rendered if those services are rendered in contradiction to the requirements of professional responsibility. Goldstein v Lees (1975) 46 CA3d 614, 618, 120 CR 253. See Birbrower, Montalbano, Condon & Frank v Superior Court (1998) 17 C4th 119, 70 CR2d 304 (fees disallowed when attorney-client fee agreement was illegal because of violation of Bus & P C §6125). See also David Welch Co. v Erskine & Tulley (1988) 203 CA3d 884, 250 CR 339.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.10 4. Tort Liability

An attorney who undertakes representation in violation of the conflict of interest rules may, in certain circumstances, be held liable in tort to pay the loss or additional expenses incurred as a proximate result of the improper conduct. See Lysick v Walcom (1968) 258 CA2d 136, 150, 65 CR 406 (attorney's breach of ethical obligations toward client was breach of duty of care owed by attorney). But see Wilhelm v Pray, Price, Williams & Russell (1986) 186 CA3d 1324, 1333, 231 CR 355 (fact that attorney engages in conduct that violates former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 7-103, concerning contact with represented party (see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-100), does not automatically give rise to civil cause of action).

One lawyer's breach of ethical duties of disclosure in a dual representation case (an uncontested divorce) justified allowing a claim by one client against the lawyer to recoup the loss of property a wife allegedly suffered owing to the attorney's failure to act diligently on her behalf. Ishmael v Millington (1966) 241 CA2d 520, 50 CR 592. See also Klemm v Superior Court (1977) 75 CA3d 893, 901, 142 CR 509 (dicta; attorney will be liable to client who suffers loss from lack of disclosure by attorney who undertakes to represent parties with divergent interests).

NOTE: An attorney's possible liability to a third party for negligence in, e.g., drafting a will, does not create an attorney-client relationship between the attorney and the third party. Baker Manock & Jensen v Superior Court (2009) 175 CA4th 1414, 1422, 96 CR3d 785 (attorney who drafted will was not bound to beneficiary of will by duties of attorney to client).

III. AVOIDING ADVERSE INTERESTS OR REPRESENTATION OF ADVERSE INTERESTS (CAL RULES OF PROF COND 3-300, 3-310)

§2.11 A. Attorney's Adverse Pecuniary Interest (Rule 3-300)

Conflicts rules apply when an attorney enters into a business transaction with a client or acquires some other pecuniary interest that may be adverse to the client's interest. A member shall not enter into a business transaction with a client, or knowingly acquire an ownership, possessory, security, or other pecuniary interest adverse to a client, unless each of the following requirements has been satisfied (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300):

- The transaction or acquisition and its terms are fair and reasonable to the client and are fully disclosed and transmitted in writing to the client in a manner that the client should reasonably have understood;
- The client is advised in writing that the client may seek the advice of an independent lawyer of the client's choice and is given a reasonable opportunity to do so; and
- The client thereafter consents in writing to the terms of the transaction or the terms of the acquisition.

PRACTICE TIP: The mandatory disclosure and written consent requirements imposed by Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300 apply to all transactions in which an attorney acquires the ability to extinguish a current client's interest in property. This is true even if the attorney's motive is to assist the client. The rule does not require that the client actually consult with independent counsel, but rather that the client be advised in writing that he or she has the right to do so, and is given a reasonable opportunity to decide whether to seek that advice.

In one case, an attorney entered into a transaction with clients that was fair and reasonable. However, because the attorney failed to advise the clients to seek the advice of an independent lawyer, the attorney violated former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-101 (now see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300). Ritter v State Bar (1985) 40 C3d 595, 602, 221 CR 134; see Brockway v State Bar (1991) 53 C3d 51, 278 CR 836 (attorney took deed to property worth more than fee owed by client); Sugarman v State Bar (1990) 51 C3d 609, 274 CR 246 (attorney received loan from client in lieu of fee); Connor v State Bar (1990) 50 C3d 1047, 269 CR 742 (to help client avoid foreclosure, attorney took title to client's property and made false statements to lender); Rose v State Bar (1989) 49 C3d 646, 663, 262 CR 702 (attorney's statement implied that consultation with other counsel not needed).

NOTE: Counsel must consider the foregoing and be cautious in making arrangements with clients regarding attorney fees. The California Supreme Court has held that an attorney who secures payment of hourly fees through a charging lien against a client's future recovery has acquired an interest adverse to the client and must comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300. The attorney must explain the transaction fully, offer fair and reasonable terms, provide a copy of the agreement, give the client the opportunity to seek independent counsel, and secure the client's written consent. Fletcher v Davis (2004) 33 C4th 61, 14 CR3d 58. See §3.25 for a sample Attorney's Lien Agreement. See also Hawk v State Bar (1988) 45 C3d 589, 598, 247 CR 599 (payment of attorney fees by note secured by deed of trust on client's property constituted attorney acquiring interest adverse to client; attorney disciplined). If the client gives informed consent to a fair transaction, the attorney should either insist that the client obtain independent legal advice, or document that, having been given a reasonable opportunity, the client has declined to do so.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/2 Avoiding Conflicts of Interest/§2.12 B. Attorney Accepting Compensation From Nonclient (Rule 3-310(F))

§2.12 B. Attorney Accepting Compensation From Nonclient (Rule 3-310(F))

An attorney may not accept compensation for representing a client from anyone other than the client unless (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(F)):

- There is no interference with the attorney's independence of professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship;
- Information relating to representation of a client is protected as required by Bus & P C §6068(e); and
- The attorney obtains the client's informed written consent, as long as no disclosure or consent is required if:
- Such nondisclosure is otherwise authorized by law; or
- The member is rendering legal services on behalf of any public agency that provides legal services to other public agencies or the public.

PRACTICE TIP: Whether the nonclient payor of attorney fees is a relative, friend, or business affiliate of the client, Rule 3-310(F) requires disclosure and written consent from the client. It is wise to include in the disclosure that a nonclient is paying the attorney's fee both in the written fee agreement and in a separate writing. Even when consent to the payment of fees is given by the client, confidentiality must otherwise be strictly maintained.

Counsel should also consider Rule 3-310(F) before accepting dual representation of:

- An organization and its constituents when the organization would be paying the attorney fees and costs (see §2.12);
- A constituent alone when the organization would be paying the lawyer's fees and costs; and
- An insured when the insurer would be paying attorney fees and costs.

In each case, counsel should consider whether his or her independent judgment on behalf of the client whose representation is being paid for by another may be compromised or otherwise affected by the financial arrangement.

C. Attorney's Use of Confidential Information Against Present or Former Client (Rule 3-310(E))

§2.13 1. Simultaneous Versus Successive Representation

Different standards have evolved for conflicts arising from simultaneous representation of clients with potentially adverse interests and for conflicts arising from successive representation of clients with adverse interests. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 CA4th 1832, 1839, 43 CR2d 327. When the representation is successive, i.e., when an attorney is engaged to represent a party's interests that are adverse to a former client of the attorney's, courts have recognized that the chief fiduciary value jeopardized is that of client confidentiality. In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 C4th 145, 159, 84 CR3d 597; Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 283, 36 CR2d 537; Metro-Goldwyn Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra. The test for disqualification in those instances is whether there is a "substantial relationship" between the subjects of the former and current representations. In re Charlisse C., supra; Flatt v Superior Court, supra; Metro-Goldwyn Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra. See §§2.14-2.24.

However, when the potentially conflicting parties are simultaneously represented by the same attorney, the primary value at stake is the attorney's duty—and the client's legitimate expectation—of loyalty, rather than confidentiality. In re Charlisse C., supra; Flatt v Superior Court, supra; Metro-Goldwyn Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra. On conflicting concurrent representation, see §§2.25-2.34.

§2.14 2. Power to Disqualify Attorney

The court has the power, on a party's motion, to disqualify an opposing attorney from participating in a trial when, e.g., the attorney improperly seeks to proceed against a former client. City Nat'l Bank v Adams (2002) 96 CA4th 315, 323, 117 CR2d 125. This prohibition is grounded in State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct and case law. Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) an attorney shall not, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client or former client when, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the attorney has obtained confidential information material to the employment. Additionally, the supreme court has held that an attorney, after severing a relationship with a client, may not do anything that will injuriously affect a former client in any matter in which he or she formerly represented him or her, nor may the attorney at any time use against the former client knowledge or information acquired by virtue of the previous relationship. People ex rel Deukmejian v Brown (1981) 29 C3d 150, 155, 172 CR 478; Yorn v Superior Court (1979) 90 CA3d 669, 675, 153 CR 295.

An attorney who accepts employment in violation of these rules is subject to disqualification on the motion of the former client. Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 113, 14 CR2d 184.

§2.15 3. Confidential Information Defined

The focus of the prohibition in Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) is on the potential misuse of confidential information. See Bus & P C §6068(e); Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1331, 104 CR2d 116. "Confidential information" probably includes both confidences and secrets. See Bus & P C §6068(e). The duty to maintain client "secrets" in confidence is broader than the evidentiary privileges in Evid C §§950-962. Thus, Rule 3-310(E), like Bus & P C §6068(e), appears to protect more than the communications protected by the attorney-client privilege. See Goldstein v Lees (1975) 46 CA3d 614, 621 n5, 120 CR 253. See also California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1976-37.

Although confidential information need not be disclosed, the general nature of the conflict must be described. In a case involving an attorney's motion to withdraw as counsel based on an assertion of conflict, it was held that a trial court has a duty to inquire about the nature of the conflict, and counsel has a duty to respond to the court's inquiry within the confines of the privilege. Manfredi & Levine v Superior Court (1998) 66 CA4th 1128, 78 CR2d 494.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.16 a. When No Confidential Information Given

The fact that the opposing party is the attorney's former client is not in itself sufficient to bar the attorney from accepting or continuing the case against that party if no confidential information relevant to the new case was given to the attorney, or if the former representation is so far in the past that any confidential information obtained would no longer be relevant. See Johnson v Superior Court (1984) 159 CA3d 573, 579, 205 CR 605.

Some nonjudicial ethics opinions suggest that even the possibility of using confidential information is a factor to be considered by the attorney in deciding whether to accept or continue representation. See, e.g., California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1980-52 (criminal defense counsel may not properly represent a defendant when a previous client of the attorney's office is a witness against the new client, and it is reasonably foreseeable that the former client's confidences may be, or may appear to be, used). However, case law holds that appearances of impropriety alone are not sufficient to require the attorney's withdrawal. See §2.72.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.17 b. Information Not Confidential

Not all client disclosures to an attorney are made in confidence, and some courts applying the predecessor to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E), former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-101, or its counterparts in other codes declined to disqualify attorneys or firms when the person or entity complaining of an alleged violation of the Rule had no legitimate expectation that the lawyer would preserve confidentiality or not use the information to another's benefit or against the disclosing person or entity. Decisions have applied this reasoning when the lawyer previously served two clients in a matter. See, e.g., Allegaert v Perot (2d Cir 1977) 565 F2d 246 (no expectation of confidentiality of information); Trinity Ambulance Serv. v G & L Ambulance Serv. (D Conn 1984) 578 F Supp 1280 (disqualification denied when it was unreasonable to assume that information shared among counsel for coparties in litigation would not be shared with clients). See also Cornish v Superior Court (1989) 209 CA3d 467, 476, 257 CR 383 (disqualification inappropriate when petitioner did not establish attorney-client relationship or that communications were made in confidence with expectation of nondisclosure to other party). For further discussion on representing corporations, see §§2.43-2.47.

§2.18 c. Confidential Information Given to Nonattorney

The rules on possession of confidential information and automatic disqualification do not apply to nonlawyer clients who may have access to privileged matters. Rather, cases have held that a client's mere exposure to confidential information of the opposing party does not require disqualification of his or her attorney. Thus, an attorney, who represents a plaintiff in an existing suit, but is later retained by a former legal secretary for the defendant, is not disqualified from continuing to represent the plaintiff. The legal secretary had been fired for accessing a computer file containing information related to plaintiff's discrimination suit, and the trial court disqualified the attorney from representing the plaintiff based on its finding that the legal secretary likely shared confidential information with him. Neal v Health Net, Inc. (2002) 100 CA4th 831, 840, 123 CR2d 202.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.19 d. Disclosures of Confidences Made by Attorney's Client

Disclosures of confidences of the adverse party made by the attorney's client do not support disqualification. "A party cannot 'improperly' disclose information to its own counsel in the prosecution of its own lawsuit." Strasbourger Pearson Tulcin Wolff, Inc. v Wiz Technol., Inc. (1999) 69 CA4th 1399, 1410, 82 CR2d 326 (citing In re Complex Asbestos Litig. (1991) 232 CA3d 572, 283 CR 732).

§2.20 e. Disclosure Necessary to Prevent Criminal Act

Despite Bus & P C §6068(e)(1), an attorney may, but is not required to, reveal confidential information relating to the representation of a client to the extent that the attorney reasonably believes the disclosure is necessary to prevent a criminal act that the attorney reasonably believes is likely to result in death of, or substantial bodily harm to, an individual. Bus & P C §6068(e)(2).

4. The "Substantial Relationship" Test

§2.21 a. Test Defined

The substantial relationship test was adopted by California courts in a line of cases beginning with Global Van Lines, Inc. v Superior Court (1983) 144 CA3d 483, 192 CR 609, which held that when a substantial relationship has been shown to exist between the former representation and the current representation, and when it appears by virtue of the nature of the former representation or the relationship of the attorney to his former client confidential information material to the current dispute would normally have been imparted to the attorney or to subordinates for whose legal work he was responsible, the attorney's knowledge of confidential information is presumed. This is the rule by necessity, for it is not within the former client's power to prove what is in the attorney's mind. 144 CA3d at 489. The substantial relationship test as announced in Global Van Lines found wide acceptance among California courts. See, e.g., Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 80, 209 CR 159; Dill v Superior Court (1984) 158 CA3d 301, 304, 205 CR 671.

Another court noted, however, that problems might arise if courts inflexibly adhere to the conclusive presumption of the exchange of confidential information. The prophylactic approach to disqualification embodied in the substantial relationship test is "overinclusive[, and] may impose a significant hardship on the current client. It may unfairly limit the employment opportunities of lawyers. And, finally, it may stifle development of expertise in complex areas of law." H. F. Ahmanson & Co. v Salomon Bros. (1991) 229 CA3d 1445, 1453, 280 CR 614. The Ahmanson court established a "pragmatic approach, which focuses on the nature of the former representation," and does not compel disqualification "when there is no realistic chance that confidences were disclosed" in the prior representation. 229 CA3d at 1455. This pragmatic approach examines the similarities between the two factual situations, the legal questions posed, and the nature and extent of the attorney's involvement with the cases. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. v Salomon Bros., supra.

Several years after the Ahmanson decision, the Supreme Court adopted the substantial relationship test, stating that, when a former client seeks to have a previous attorney disqualified from serving as counsel to a successive client in litigation adverse to the interests of the first client, the governing test requires that the client demonstrate a "substantial relationship" between the subjects of the antecedent and current representations. When the requisite substantial relationship between the subjects of the prior and the current representations can be demonstrated, access to confidential information by the attorney in the course of the first representation (relevant, by definition, to the second representation) is presumed and disqualification of the attorney's representation of the second client is mandatory; indeed, the disqualification extends vicariously to the entire firm. In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 C4th 145, 159, 84 CR3d 597; Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 283, 36 CR2d 537. See People ex rel Dep't of Corps. v SpeeDee Oil Change Sys. (1999) 20 C4th 1135, 86 CR2d 816 (reaffirming Flatt). See also Meza v H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 CA4th 969, 98 CR3d 422 (entire law firm disqualified from representing plaintiff in lawsuit when firm's associate formerly represented one of several defendants in same lawsuit). But see Goldberg v Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 752, 23 CR3d 116 (presumption is rebuttable; attorney's former firm disqualified only if evidence showed attorney had actually passed on confidential information about plaintiff to members of former firm).

Another court stated that the question of whether an attorney should be disqualified turns on two variables:

- The relationship between the legal problem involved in the former representation and the legal problem involved in the current representation; and
- The relationship between the attorney and the former client with respect to the legal problem involved in the former representation.

Jessen v Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. (2003) 111 CA4th 698, 709, 3 CR3d 877. In assessing lawyer disqualification in successive representation cases, the court must find out whether the lawyer's placement in former representation was direct and personal, in which event the only remaining question is whether the representations are connected. If they were not direct and personal, the court must assess whether the lawyer's position in the first case made it likely that he or she acquired confidential information relevant to current representation, given any similarities between the two. Jessen v Hartford Cas. Ins. Co., supra.

In assessing whether there is a substantial relationship between the subject matter of the two representations, the issue is not whether the attorney performed the same specific tasks or services in the former representation, but rather the similarities between the legal problem involved in the former representation and that involved in the current case, i.e., whether there is a substantial risk that the present representation will involve the use of confidential information that was obtained during the prior representation. Farris v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2004) 119 CA4th 671, 681, 14 CR3d 618.

If no substantial relationship exists between the subject matter of two representations, disqualification should not be ordered. Health Maintenance Network v Blue Cross (1988) 202 CA3d 1043, 1062, 249 CR 220 (rule does not apply when attorney accepts employment adverse to former client if matter bears no relationship to confidential information acquired by attorney as result of former attorney-client relationship). See also Western Continental Operating Co. v Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 CA3d 752, 759, 261 CR 100 (stating proposition); Elliott v McFarland Unified Sch. Dist. (1985) 165 CA3d 562, 572, 211 CR 802.

§2.22 b. Case Law Refinements of Test

Analysis of case law involving successive representation of clients boils down as follows: First, if the nature of the representation is such that confidences could have been exchanged between the lawyer and the client, courts will conclusively presume they were exchanged, and disqualification will be required. Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1331, 104 CR2d 116; Rosenfeld Constr. Co. v Superior Court (1991) 235 CA3d 566, 574, 286 CR 609; H. F. Ahmanson & Co. v Salomon Bros. (1991) 229 CA3d 1445, 1454, 280 CR 614; Global Van Lines, Inc. v Superior Court (1983) 144 CA3d 483, 489, 192 CR 609.

Second, there is a limited exception to this conclusive presumption in the instance in which the former attorney-client relationship was peripheral or attenuated. In such a situation, a "modified substantial relationship test" has been applied to determine whether it was "reasonably likely that [the attorney] would have acquired confidential information" material to the current representation. Faughn v Perez (2006) 145 CA4th 592, 610, 51 CR3d 692. See also H. F. Ahmanson & Co. v Salomon Bros. (1991) 229 CA3d 1445, 1455, 280 CR 614 (disqualification not required when there is no realistic chance that confidences were disclosed between lawyer and client); Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1340, 104 CR2d 116 (attorney who switches law firms has burden of proving he or she had no exposure to confidential information relevant to current action while a member of firm representing current client's adversary); Goldberg v Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 752, 23 CR3d 116 (attorney's former firm disqualified only if evidence showed attorney had actually passed on confidential information about plaintiff to members of former firm); Fremont Indem. Co. v Fremont Gen. Corp. (2006) 143 CA4th 50, 49 CR3d 82 (no reasonable probability that confidential information had been obtained in previous legal malpractice action involving issues and circumstances unrelated to present insurance litigation).

Third, the limited exception is not available when the lawyer's former and current employment are on opposite sides of the same matter or when the current matter involves the work the lawyer performed for the former client. When the lawyer switches sides in an ongoing dispute, the nature of the former representation will always be such that the exchange of relevant confidences must be presumed. See Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 80, 209 CR 159 (county counsel may not represent county on precisely same matter as to which it previously advised county's adversary); Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 115, 14 CR2d 184 (rule requiring disqualification of entire law firm is especially true when attorney's disqualification arose from his prior representation of opposing side in same lawsuit); Dill v Superior Court (1984) 158 CA3d 301, 306, 205 CR 671 (lawyer's former personal involvement on opposite side in identical action is compelling reason to disqualify entire law firm).

This rule springs from the fact that all attorney-client communications are presumptively confidential (Evid C §§917, 952) and any communications between the lawyer and the client in the first representation must necessarily have been material to ongoing matter in which the lawyer has switched sides. Grove v Grove Valve & Regulator Co. (1963) 213 CA2d 646, 653, 29 CR 150. This case involved the lawyer's duty of loyalty as well as confidentiality. The prohibition is in the disjunctive: The lawyer may not use information or do anything that will injuriously affect his or her former client. When the lawyer switches sides and represents the former client's adversary in the same matter, everything the lawyer does for the new client necessarily will injuriously affect the former client. People ex rel Deukmejian v Brown (1981) 29 C3d 150, 156, 172 CR 478.

NOTE: The "substantial relationship" test under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) prohibits an attorney from serving as an expert witness against a former client. Brand v 20th Century Ins. Co./21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 124 CA4th 594, 602, 21 CR3d 380 (attorney who had been retained by insurance company to give opinions regarding coverage and bad faith claims could not serve as plaintiff's expert witness in bad faith lawsuit against former client).

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.23 c. Rationale for Test

There are sound reasons why the substantial relationship test continues to apply in disqualification proceedings. The test and presumption were developed in litigation over disqualification, rather than by application of the Rules of Professional Conduct, which are used to discipline attorneys. The standard applied to disqualification rulings is abuse of discretion. In re Complex Asbestos Litig. (1991) 232 CA3d 572, 585, 283 CR 732. A greater showing is required in disciplinary proceedings, which require clear and convincing evidence to a reasonable certainty. See generally Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100. See also Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 303, 254 CR 853 ("disciplinary rules promulgated by bar associations are not intended to be used as procedural weapons in disqualification cases").

The State Bar has cautioned that the rules are "not intended to supersede existing law relating to members in non-disciplinary contexts." Official Discussion to Rule 1-100. There is a difference in the objectives of the court-made disqualification procedures and the State Bar's Rules of Professional Conduct. In disciplinary proceedings potentially affecting a lawyer's right to continue to practice law, the threshold showing of impermissible conduct may rationally be higher than in litigation affecting a lawyer's right to continue to represent a particular client in a particular matter.

In motions to disqualify opposing counsel, the substantial relationship presumption narrows the scope of inquiry, conserving court resources. If a party moving to disqualify opposing counsel were required to reveal the privileged material in order to prove that opposing counsel had in fact received material confidential information, the goal of preserving confidences would necessarily be impaired—even were the disclosure (i.e., the evidentiary showing in support of the motion) to be made to the court in camera. See Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 79, 209 CR 159 (actual confidential matters should not be revealed to court). See also Trone v Smith (9th Cir 1980) 621 F2d 994, 999. But see Cornish v Superior Court (1989) 209 CA3d 467, 479, 257 CR 383 (Evid C §915 does not prohibit court from referring disclosure of confidences issue to referee for in camera inspection).

Before an attorney may be disqualified from representing a party in litigation because his representation of that party is adverse to the interest of a current or former client, it must first be established that the party seeking the attorney's disqualification was or is "represented" by the attorney in a manner giving rise to an attorney-client relationship. Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 76, 209 CR 159. See In re Lee G. (1991) 1 CA4th 17, 32 n10, 1 CR2d 375.

In a variety of settings, courts have upheld a putative "client's" expectation of confidentiality of communications with a lawyer even when no formal attorney-client relationship existed between them. See Trone v Smith (9th Cir 1980) 621 F2d 994, 1002 (fiduciary obligations and professional responsibilities may warrant disqualification of counsel even without strict contractual attorney-client relationship). A person who consults with an attorney, but does not formally retain that attorney, may be considered a "client" for purposes of Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) to protect the prospective client's expectation of confidentiality even in such preliminary discussions. Galardi v State Bar (1987) 43 C3d 683, 238 CR 774 (attorney may be disciplined for breach of fiduciary duty to nonclient); Yorn v Superior Court (1979) 90 CA3d 669, 153 CR 295 (act of consultation is key to finding whether attorney-client relationship had existed for purposes of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-101). See also Comment, Developments in the Law—Conflicts of Interest in the Legal Profession, 94 Harv L Rev 1244, 1321 (1981) (test: Is person divulging confidences to attorney with intent to secure legal advice?).

The payment of attorney fees alone, however, does not determine an attorney-client relationship. When parties contract that attorney fees be borne by a particular person, the attorney is not necessarily in an attorney-client relationship with the payor. Strasbourger Pearson Tulcin Wolff, Inc. v Wiz Technol., Inc. (1999) 69 CA4th 1399, 82 CR2d 326.

EXAMPLE: A person had consulted an attorney several years previously about a potential lawsuit against Company. The attorney declined the representation. Under California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1984-84, the attorney may not now represent Company in a suit against the person who consulted previously, because the person is considered a "former client" for purposes of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-101 (now see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E)), unless the attorney is "wholly satisfied that by virtue of the passage of time or the nature of the confidential information in his possession there is no reasonably foreseeable likelihood that the confidential information might be usable to the detriment of the Inquirer." But see Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 36 CR2d 537, in which the attorney was found to owe no duty to the prospective client, in light of the duty of loyalty to the current client, against whom the prospective client sought advice in consulting with the attorney.

It follows that the more remote in time the consultation was, the more likely it is that the attorney no longer has "confidential information" harmful to the person interviewed. See Johnson v Superior Court (1984) 159 CA3d 573, 579, 205 CR 605 (passage of time may lessen significance of any confidential information given); Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v Kerr-McGee Corp. (7th Cir 1978) 580 F2d 1311, 1322 (no abuse of discretion in denying disqualification when 10 years had passed and the matters were not substantially related).

PRACTICE TIP: Before consulting initially with a prospective client, the attorney should ascertain the names of all parties involved or potentially involved from the prospective client and do a firm check of these names for conflicts. See §2.5. Otherwise, there is a risk that one attorney within the firm will learn relevant confidential information in the course of the initial interview, only to find out later that the firm already represents a party or prospective party to the dispute, which could require the firm to withdraw from its current representation and bar the firm from representing either the existing client or the new client in the matter.

D. Same Attorney or Firm Currently Representing Divergent Client Interests (Rule 3-310(C))

§2.25 1. Rule Against Conflicting Concurrent Representation

An attorney may not, without the informed consent of each client (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C); see also ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 1.7):

- Accept representation of more than one client in a matter in which the interests of the clients potentially conflict (In re Celine R. (2003) 31 C4th 45, 56, 1 CR3d 432);
- Accept or continue representation of more than one client in a matter in which the clients' interests actually conflict (Carroll v Superior Court (2002) 101 CA4th 1423, 1428, 124 CR2d 891); or
- Represent a client in a matter and at the same time in a separate matter accept as a client a person or an entity whose interest in the first matter is adverse to the client in the first matter (Hernandez v Paicius (2003) 109 CA4th 452, 465, 134 CR2d 756); Abbott v IRS (9th Cir 2005) 399 F3d 1083 (no adverse client relationship existed when attorney who represented taxpayer client in estate proceeding against IRS had formerly represented IRS as a tax consultant in a totally unrelated matter).

Thus, Rule 3-310(C) states that, at the outset, an attorney may not accept representation if there is a potential conflict; it does not require an actual conflict. See In re Celine R. (2003) 31 C4th 45, 56, 1 CR3d 432.

In general, courts have interpreted Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C) to prohibit an attorney from accepting any case from a new client, Client A, in which the attorney would have to oppose another current client, Client B, in a lawsuit, unless both clients consent, whether or not the lawsuit is substantially related to the matter on which the attorney had represented or was currently representing Client B. See, e.g., Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 36 CR2d 537; Jeffry v Pounds (1977) 67 CA3d 6, 10, 136 CR 373; In re California Canners & Growers (Bankr ND Cal 1987) 74 BR 336, 342.

When a client engages a lawyer's services in a given piece of business, he is entitled to feel that, until that business is finally disposed of in some manner, he has the undivided loyalty of the one on whom he looks as his advocate and his champion. The feeling of loyalty is necessarily destroyed if the lawyer accepts representation hostile to his client's interests. Because a lay client is likely to doubt the loyalty of a lawyer who undertakes to oppose him in an unrelated matter, the decisions condemn acceptance of employment adverse to a client even when the employment is unrelated to the existing representation. Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 286, 36 CR2d 537; see Hernandez v Paicius (2003) 109 CA4th 452, 465, 134 CR2d 756. That is, in the litigation context, courts often apply the prohibition against representation adverse to a current client based on the duty of undivided loyalty to an existing client, without reference to or inquiry into potential breaches of confidentiality. Jeffry v Pounds (1977) 67 CA3d 6, 10, 136 CR 373.

In addition to the Rules of Professional Conduct, the duty of loyalty has been recognized in the common law: The scope of an attorney's fiduciary duty may be determined as a matter of law based on the Rules of Professional Conduct which, together with statutes and general principles relating to other fiduciary relationships, all help define the duty component of the fiduciary duty that an attorney owes to his or her client. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 CA4th 1832, 1839, 43 CR2d 327; Stanley v Richmond (1995) 35 CA4th 1070, 1086, 41 CR2d 768. For discussion of concurrent representation of an organization and its constituents, see §2.47.

When the duty of loyalty applies, it requires an automatic disqualification in all but a few instances. In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 C4th 145, 159, 84 CR3d 597; Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 284, 36 CR2d 537; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 CA4th 1832, 1840, 43 CR2d 327. The reason for the per se rule is evident, even or perhaps especially to the nonattorney. A client who learns that his or her lawyer is also representing a litigation adversary, even with respect to a matter wholly unrelated to this one for which counsel was retained, cannot long be expected to sustain the level of confidence and trust in counsel that is one of the foundations of the professional relationship. All legal technicalities aside, few if any clients would be willing to suffer the prospect of their attorney's continuing to represent them in such circumstances. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra.

Something seems radically out of place if a lawyer sues one of the lawyer's own present clients in behalf of another client. Even if the representations have nothing to do with each other, so that no confidential information is apparently jeopardized, the client who is sued can obviously claim that the lawyer's sense of loyalty is askew. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra. It is for that reason, and not out of concerns rooted in the obligation of client confidentiality, that courts and ethical codes alike prohibit an attorney from simultaneously representing two client adversaries, even when the substance of the representations are unrelated. In re Charlisse C., 45 C4th at 159; Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 285, 36 CR2d 537; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra.

The Flatt opinion notes in a footnote that there are exceptions to this rule—for example, when corporate clients whose interests are adverse "as to unrelated matters" if full disclosure is made and both agree in writing to waive the conflict. Flatt, 9 C4th at 285 n4; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp., supra. See §2.29.

§2.28 4. Existence of Attorney-Client Relationship

Before an attorney may be disqualified from representing a party in litigation because his representation of that party is adverse to the interest of a current or former client, in most cases it must first be established that the party seeking the attorney's disqualification was or is "represented" by the attorney in a manner giving rise to an attorney-client relationship. Koo v Rubio's Restaurants, Inc. (2003) 109 CA4th 719, 727, 135 CR2d 415. A trial court abused its discretion when it disqualified a law firm based on an attorney's misleading statement implying that he represented parties on both sides of a litigation, in absence of any evidence that the statement was true. Koo v Rubio's Restaurants, Inc., supra. California Rules of Professional Conduct 3-310(C), however, does not require an attorney-client relationship with both the current and former clients, and an attorney who acted as a Fed R Civ P 30(b)(6) representative for a party with interests adverse to a former client breached its fiduciary duty to that former client. American Airlines, Inc. v Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2002) 96 CA4th 1017, 1032, 117 CR2d 685.

A party seeking disqualification of an attorney need not always be a current or former client of that attorney. In Meza v H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 CA4th 969, 980, 98 CR3d 422, for example, attorneys representing various defendants shared confidential work product under a case management order that preserved the protections of the work product doctrine. When the attorney for one of the defendants (later dismissed from the case by plaintiff) joined the law firm representing plaintiff, the remaining defendants had standing to seek to disqualify the attorney and his firm. The court granted disqualification to protect the confidentiality of the work product created during defense counsels' joint defense efforts.

§2.29 5. Multiple Representation Permitted in Transactional Matters

There are many instances in which a lawyer may properly serve multiple clients having potentially differing interests in matters not involving litigation. ABA Code Prof Resp EC 5-15. For example, dual representation of parties to a business transaction, e.g., a lease or conveyance of property, establishing a business venture, a gift or a loan, is ordinarily not prohibited if it is "done in utmost good faith and with the full consent of all parties concerned." Lessing v Gibbons (1935) 6 CA2d 598, 606, 45 P2d 258.

A conflict of interest is not created merely because two clients seek to accomplish a common end and hire a single attorney to represent the joint enterprise. Buehler v Sbardellati (1995) 34 CA4th 1527, 41 CR2d 104. The Official Discussion to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 offers other examples of transactions, common enterprises, or legal relationships in which the parties may prefer to hire a single attorney "for the sake of convenience or economy": formation of a partnership for several partners or a corporation for several shareholders, preparation of an antenuptial agreement, joint or reciprocal wills for a husband and wife, or the resolution of an uncontested marital dissolution. All clients' informed written consent must be obtained. See, e.g., Marriage of Friedman (2002) 100 CA4th 65, 71, 122 CR2d 412.

The Official Discussion to Rule 3-310 also emphasizes the requirement of full disclosure of the possible adverse consequences of joint representation. See Day v Rosenthal (1985) 170 CA3d 1125, 1148, 217 CR 89 (need for full disclosure). Full disclosure in this context requires the lawyer to inform parties of the areas of potential conflict, the option of seeking independent legal advice, and any potential adverse aspects of such multiple representation. See, e.g., Evid C §962 (when clients have retained lawyer on matter of common interest, none may claim attorney-client privilege in any future lawsuit against each other). Attorneys should inform clients who enter into a transactional matter with potentially conflicting interests of their right to seek independent separate counsel. See Ishmael v Millington (1966) 241 CA2d 520, 50 CR 592.

§2.30 6. When Dispute Later Arises From Transaction

The attorney representing both sides to a transaction is likely to be precluded from representing one of the parties to the deal against the other if a dispute about the deal develops later. Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 81, 209 CR 159. See Western Continental Operating Co. v Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 CA3d 752, 261 CR 100. The attorney is likely to have obtained valuable information from each party, and may face a Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) problem. The type of advance disclosure and consent suggested in §§2.56-2.58 (and in the form in §2.73) may help solve this problem. See, e.g., Zador Corp. v Kwan (1995) 31 CA4th 1285, 37 CR2d 754 (disqualification inappropriate when former client agreed in writing to joint representation and to attorney's continued and future representation of corporate client even if conflict existed); Cornish v Superior Court (1989) 209 CA3d 467, 257 CR 383 (in accepting defense of contractor on behalf of bonding company, law firm reserved right to continue representation of bonding company if bonding company and contractor became adversaries in future litigation). An argument can be made that, if the parties each knew that their information would be shared with the other and if each knew or had reason to know of the effect of Evid C §962 (neither of two clients may claim a privilege regarding communication with his common lawyer), the lawyer should not be disqualified under Rule 3-310(E) from later representing one against the other.

§2.31 7. Nonapplicability of Substantial Interest Test; Scope of Consent

As noted above, the substantial relationship test determines whether client confidences were likely disclosed. Under the test, if there is a substantial relationship between the pending suit and the prior representation, then such disclosure is presumed. At this point, disqualification is justified. Zador Corp. v Kwan (1995) 31 CA4th 1285, 1292, 37 CR2d 754.

However, when the prior representation involves joint clients, and the subsequent action relates to the same matter, the substantial relationship test adds nothing to disqualification analysis. This is because a substantial relationship between the former representation and the subsequent action is inherent in such situations. In other words, clients A and B are jointly represented by C until C discovers a conflict between the legal position of A and B. Client B retains separate counsel. Client A then sues Client B. In these circumstances, a substantial relationship will always exist between C's prior representation of B and the litigation between A and B. Accordingly, in this situation, the substantial relationship test does not "test" anything. It should not determine whether C should be disqualified from representing A. Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra.

In addition, although the substantial relationship test determines whether confidences were likely disclosed, in a joint client situation, confidences are necessarily disclosed. In fact, the joint client relationship is an exception to the attorney-client privilege. When two or more clients have retained or consulted a lawyer on a matter of common interest, none of them, nor the successor in interest of any of them, may claim a privilege under this article as to a communication made in the course of that relationship when such communication is offered in a civil proceeding between one of such clients (or his or her successor in interest) and another of such clients (or his or her successor in interest). Evid C §962; Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra.

In California, the "joint client" or "common interest" exception to the attorney-client privilege applies only when two or more clients have retained or consulted a lawyer on a matter of common interest, in which event neither may claim the privilege in an action by one against the other. Rockwell Int'l Corp. v Superior Court (1994) 26 CA4th 1255, 1267, 32 CR2d 153. See also Hecht v Superior Court (1987) 192 CA3d 560, 567, 237 CR 528.

Accordingly, in such circumstances, the propriety of disqualification does not depend on the substantial relationship test. Rather, it generally turns on the scope of the clients' consent. Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra; see Klemm v Superior Court (1977) 75 CA3d 893, 899, 142 CR 509 (court approved dual representation, based on informed written consent, in uncontested divorce, but noted that if wife should later change her mind about child support, attorney would be precluded from representing either spouse in future contested hearings on that issue).

8. Exceptions

§2.32 a. Written Consent

If an attorney represents in other matters two or more clients whose interests may or do conflict regarding a new matter in which one of those clients proposes to retain the attorney, before taking on the representation the attorney must obtain the client's informed, written consent and should ensure that the matters are sufficiently separate factually so that no confidence of either client will be violated. The attorney should fully disclose the potential conflict and its possible effect to each client to enable the client to make free and intelligent decisions on the subject matter of the representation. Day v Rosenthal (1985) 170 CA3d 1125, 1149, 217 CR 89 (quoting Lysick v Walcom (1968) 258 CA2d 136, 147, 65 CR 406). Representation in the new matter may be undertaken only if the affected clients give their informed, written consent. See form in §2.73.

If it is clear from the outset that a potential conflict is not remote but is likely to ripen into actual conflict, e.g., the facts indicate that one codefendant is more culpable than another codefendant, or that one codefendant may need to confide in counsel and expect counsel to keep that information from the other codefendant, the attorney should probably not represent both clients even if they are willing to sign a waiver. See Klemm v Superior Court (1977) 75 CA3d 893, 898, 142 CR 509 ("common sense dictates that it would be unthinkable to permit an attorney to assume a position at a trial or hearing where he could not advocate the interests of one client without adversely injuring those of the other").

California law does not require that every possible consequence of a conflict be disclosed for a consent to be valid. Zador Corp. v Kwan (1995) 31 CA4th 1285, 1292, 37 CR2d 754. Waiver of the consequences of potential conflict was not inadequate simply because neither the court nor the agreement undertook the impossible burden of explaining separately every conceivable ramification. Maxwell v Superior Court (1982) 30 C3d 606, 622, 180 CR 177, disapproved on other grounds in People v Doolin (2009) 45 C4th 390, 421 n22, 87 CR3d 209; Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra.

The State Bar of California reached a similar conclusion. In California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1989-115, the issue was whether a blanket waiver of the client's right to disqualify was ethically proper. The committee decided that such blanket waivers were not per se improper. The nature of the subsequent conflict of interest may range from simply representing two clients in entirely unrelated matters to actually representing both sides in the same dispute. Although a court would doubtless preclude a lawyer from representing both sides simultaneously, the committee believed that in this situation, if the original waiver was informed, local counsel could withdraw from its representation of lead counsel's client and continue to represent its own client even if otherwise confidential information would be used against that client. California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No 1989-115, p 2. See Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra.

§2.33 b. Possible Exceptions to or Limits on Rule 3-310(C)

The court found no disqualifying conflict when the plaintiff's lawyer had discontinued representing the defendant on all related matters but still performed some services for the defendant in a separate field. There had been complete disclosure that the representation was dual, that there was no potential for disclosure of confidential information, and, most significant, that the defendant was estopped to complain by virtue of having initially provided the attorney's services to the plaintiff. Health Maintenance Network v Blue Cross (1988) 202 CA3d 1043, 1062, 249 CR 220. See also Forrest v Baeza (1997) 58 CA4th 65, 67 CR2d 857 (attorney's continuing representation of individual shareholder clients in derivative action permissible when functioning of corporation so intertwined with individual clients that any distinction between them is fictional). See also Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 285 n4, 36 CR2d 537 (corporate clients whose interests are adverse "as to unrelated matters" if full disclosure is made and both agree in writing to waive the conflict).

§2.34 c. Client's Consent May Be Inadequate When Actual Conflict Exists in Litigation

If an actual conflict develops during the course of representation, the attorney must immediately disclose the problem, explain the options to both clients and obtain their written consent to the attorney's continued representation. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C). See Official Discussion to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 ("if the potential adversity should become actual, the member must obtain the further informed written consent of the clients").

Although Rule 3-310(C) applies in litigation as well as in other kinds of representation, it should come as no surprise that many courts disapprove of the practice of representing adverse parties in litigation, even when both parties consent. See, e.g., Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 285 n4, 36 CR2d 537; Klemm v Superior Court (1977) 75 CA3d 893, 898, 142 CR 509.

Although withdrawal from representing one client may solve the dilemma of divided loyalties, it may not adequately protect the other client's right to confidentiality. In this situation, the attorney should withdraw from representation of both clients. Klemm v Superior Court, supra. See §2.59.

NOTE: Seldom, if ever, is it a good idea to continue representing either client in litigation after the discovery of an actual conflict of interest. First, the attorney may not be the best person to judge the magnitude of the conflict. Second, it is a situation ripe for further conflict, including malpractice litigation if one of the parties becomes disgruntled and decides that his or her consent was not truly informed.

Objections to an attorney's conflict of interest in litigation can come not just from the attorney's clients or former clients but from an opponent in the litigation. Gilbert v National Corp. for Hous. Partnerships (1999) 71 CA4th 1240, 84 CR2d 204 (trial court disqualified attorney because of perceived conflict of interest arising from representation of another employee who entered into confidential settlement agreement with defendant). But see McPhearson v Michaels Co. (2002) 96 CA4th 843, 117 CR2d 489 (appellate court reversed trial court's disqualification of plaintiff's attorney based on conflict of interest arising from attorney's prior representation of another employee who had entered into confidential settlement agreement with defendant in similar discrimination and sexual harassment action).

IV. CONFLICTS ARISING FROM RELATIONSHIPS WITH OTHER PERSONS (RULES 3-310(B), 3-320)

§2.35 A. Interest in Subject Matter or Relationship With Another Party (Rule 3-310(B))

An attorney shall not accept or continue representation of a client without providing written disclosure to the client if:

- The attorney has a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a party or witness in the same matter (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(1));
- The attorney knows or reasonably should know that he or she (1) previously had a legal business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a party or witness in the same matter, and (2) the previous relationship would substantial affect the attorney's representation (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(2));
- The attorney has or had a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with another person or entity the attorney knows or reasonably should know would be affected substantially by resolution of the matter (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(3)); or
- The attorney has or had a legal, business, financial, or professional interest in the subject matter of the representation (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(4)).

Rule 3-310(B) is a rule of disclosure only. No written consent from the client is required. Following full disclosure, the client decides whether to continue the attorney's engagement.

"Disclosure" is defined as "informing the client … of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences to the client of the attorney's relationship to a party or witness in the client's particular matter." Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(A).

Rule 3-310(B)(1) applies when the lawyer currently has any of five specified kinds of relationship with another party or a witness in the same matter in which the client has engaged the lawyer. In the litigation context, it is fairly easy to determine what is meant by "party" and "witness." Outside the litigation context, the definition of "witness" and a "party" is more difficult. In transactional matters, "parties" and "witnesses" may include the persons and entities most closely connected with or participating in the matter. There is little authority applying Rule 3-310(B) in either the litigation or transactional context.

Rule 3-310(B)(2) requires disclosure of the attorney's past legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationships with the party or witness when the previous relationship would substantially affect the current representation. The standard is whether the lawyer knows or reasonably should know about the prior relationship and its effect on the current representation. Disclosure is required only to the existing client, not the former client. Consent is not required from either the current or former client unless confidential information material to the new employment was received in the former matter. Rule 3-310(E).

Disclosure to the client is also required under Rule 3-310(B)(3) when the lawyer has or had one of five specified kinds of relationships with another person the lawyer knows or reasonably should know would be substantially affected by a resolution of the matter. This rule applies to relationships with any person or entity, not only parties and witnesses.

Rule 3-310(B)(4) requires disclosure when the lawyer currently has or in the past had a legal, business, financial, or professional interest in the subject matter of the representation. This requirement "seeks to remove the possibility of 'self-dealing' that may arise when the lawyer has an interest in the subject matter of employment." California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1987-92.

§2.36 B. Relationship With Other Party's Lawyer (Rule 3-320)

An attorney's personal relationships sometimes raise conflicts issues. An attorney shall not represent a client in a matter in which another party's lawyer is a spouse, parent, child, or sibling of the attorney, lives with the attorney, is a client of the attorney, or has an intimate personal relationship with the attorney, unless the attorney informs the client in writing of the relationship. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-320. The Official Discussion to Rule 3-320 states that it is not intended to apply when the other lawyer is "merely a partner or associate in the same law firm as the adverse party's counsel, and who has no direct involvement in the matter." See also Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B), discussed in §2.35.

NOTE: Written disclosure, not consent, is required.

The subject matter of intimate personal relationships was not specifically addressed in former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-101, the predecessor to Rule 3-320. Courts had, however, attempted to deal with such factual situations. In one case, an attorney, after the suit commenced, began dating opposing counsel's secretary. The evidence presented, however, did not show that the attorney discussed the substance of the case with the secretary. The court found that this relationship did not run afoul of former Rule 4-101, former Rule 7-103 (prohibiting ex parte contact with the opposing party), or the work product rule (CCP §§2018.010-2018.080): "[I]t is one thing to say [the attorney's] conduct was unprofessional and showed bad judgment and quite another to say … that it warrants his disqualification." Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 309, 254 CR 853.

NOTE: Rule 3-320 does not expressly require the client's consent to the conduct it purports to regulate.

§2.37 C. Relationship With Successor Counsel and Co-counsel

Because it would violate the duty of undivided loyalty to clients, as a matter of public policy, a successor attorney owes no duty to predecessor counsel. There is no fiduciary relationship between successor and predecessor counsel representing the same client. See Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v Superior Court (1979) 94 CA3d 347, 156 CR 326 (first lawyer has no right of indemnity, as defendant in malpractice action, against client's second, current lawyer).

The California Supreme Court has held that co-counsel do not owe a fiduciary duty to each other to protect the other's prospective interest in a contingency fee. Recognition of such a duty would be inconsistent with an attorney's overriding duty to the client, which should not be diluted by a duty owed to another person, such as another attorney. Co-counsel should not be obligated to conduct their joint representation so as not to diminish or eliminate the fees the other attorney expects to collect. Beck v Wecht (2002) 28 C4th 289, 290, 121 CR2d 384 (disapproving Pollack v Lytle (1981) 120 CA3d 931, 175 CR 81, which recognized fiduciary duty among co-counsel). See also Saunders v Weissburg & Aronson (1999) 74 CA4th 869, 874, 87 CR2d 405.

§2.38 D. Relationship With Nonclients

Because a licensed attorney must conform to the highest professional standards in whatever capacity he or she may be acting (Baron v City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 C3d 535, 542, 86 CR 673), an attorney's personal relationship may give rise to charges of violating conflict of interest prohibitions, such as Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B) (attorney has relationship with another party interested in representation or interest in its subject matter) or even Rule 3-310(E) (attorney who received confidential material information from or about one client may not use it in subsequent representation of adverse party-client). Whenever an attorney undertakes a position of trust and confidence with a party, even if no attorney-client relationship exists, the attorney will be held to similar high standards of conduct. Sodikoff v State Bar (1975) 14 C3d 422, 121 CR 467.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.39 1. Nonclient Family Members

An attorney did not owe a duty to a client's husband in a wrongful death action arising from the death of their daughter. Hall v Superior Court (2003) 108 CA4th 706, 708, 133 CR2d 806. A young girl drowned in a pool at the home of the paternal grandmother while the father and grandmother were present at the house, but the mother was not. The mother retained a lawyer to represent her in a wrongful death action against the grandmother, her husband's mother. The father never consulted with his wife's lawyer about the case against his own mother. Only after the mother recovered a settlement in that lawsuit did the father sue his now estranged spouse for half the recovery and her lawyer for malpractice and breach of fiduciary duty. Hall v Superior Court, supra.

The court held that the attorney faced a potential conflict of interest if he sought to represent the husband and the wife in this action because the husband was present when the daughter drowned. Further, the husband and wife did not consult the attorney together; the wife met with the attorney to discuss her own rights. Hall v Superior Court, supra (distinguishing Meighan v Shore (1995) 34 CA4th 1025, 40 CR2d 744 (husband and wife consulted attorney about injury to husband; attorney agreed to represent husband and failed to advise wife about her right to recover for loss of consortium)). The court noted that in Ruttenberg v Ruttenberg (1997) 53 CA4th 801, 62 CR2d 78, the court held that heirs who file a wrongful death action have a mandatory duty to join all omitted heirs in the action. Assuming that the husband in Hall v Superior Court should have been named as a nominal defendant in the wrongful death action, the duty imposed by Ruttenberg falls on the other heirs, not on their attorney. Thus the husband's claim is not against the attorney but against his wife. If he recovers against his wife for her failure to name him, she may be entitled to indemnity from her attorney. Hall v Superior Court, supra.

NOTE: Correspondingly, an attorney does not owe a duty to beneficiaries under a will to evaluate and ascertain the testamentary capacity of a client seeking to amend a will or make a new will. An attorney's duty of loyalty to a client may be compromised by imposing such a duty to the beneficiaries. Moore v Anderson Zeigler Disharoon Gallagher & Gray (2003) 109 CA4th 1287, 135 CR2d 888. California law has long permitted suits by intended beneficiaries who lose their testamentary rights as a result of attorney negligence. Lucas v Hamm (1961) 56 C2d 583, 15 CR 821. See Osorino v Weingarten (2004) 124 CA4th 304, 337, 21 CR3d 246 (attorney who failed to advise client that making her care custodian sole beneficiary under will would likely fail absent certificate of independent review breached duty of care owed to both client and care custodian).

§2.40 2. Attorney as Public Officer

A conflict may arise if the attorney has served as a public office holder, or a corporate officer or director, and the public entity or corporation is now being sued by the attorney's firm. Fiduciary duties may arise in favor of nonclients because the attorney, by his or her actions or status, e.g., as public servant or director, may be deemed to owe duties of trustworthiness, fealty, and honesty to a nonclient, even though an actual attorney-client relationship does not exist. See William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 1046, 197 CR 232.

In Oaks Mgmt. Corp. v Superior Court (2006) 145 CA4th 453, 51 CR3d 561, attorneys in a firm representing plaintiffs had previously acted as lenders to the defendant; the defendant sought to disqualify the firm under Raley. The court held that Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 is inapplicable if there is no attorney-client relationship, and that there is no fiduciary relationship between a borrower and a lender. 145 CA4th at 465. Without an attorney-client relationship, exposure to confidential information alone is not sufficient to disqualify an attorney. 145 CA4th at 467. The moving party must show that a genuine likelihood exists that the status or misconduct of the attorney will affect the outcome of the proceedings. 145 CA4th at 467.

American Bar Association Code of Professional Responsibility Canon 9 concerns the lawyer's obligation to avoid even the appearance of impropriety, and ABA Code Prof Resp DR 9-101(B) provides that a lawyer shall not accept private employment in a matter for which he or she had substantial responsibility while a public employee. Chambers v Superior Court (1981) 121 CA3d 893, 898, 175 CR 575. Similarly, California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1981-63 states that the law firm of a city council member cannot ethically represent tort claimants against the city, even with the council's informed consent.

As California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1981-63 indicates, the principles of ABA Code Prof Resp EC 9 ("lawyer should avoid even the appearance of professional impropriety") may be even more important for attorneys who are public office holders than for nonpublic-servant lawyers. William H. Raley Co., 149 CA3d at 1047 n2 (suggesting that cases involving lawyers who are or have been public officials are among the few in which appearance of impropriety is considered as basis for disqualification).

PRACTICE TIP: It is good practice to include in a conflicts check (see §2.5) the names of corporations, public entities, commissions, and boards to which the firm's attorneys have been elected or appointed. Whether the attorney is currently serving or served in the remote past is a factor that should be weighed in assessing potential conflicts and any appearance of impropriety. Consider requesting an ethics opinion from the State Bar or the appropriate county bar association committee in a close case.

There are also ethical rules uniquely applicable to the lawyer who serves in government for a period and then leaves to enter private law practice, and vice versa. See generally the Ethics in Government Act (18 USC §§207-208); ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 1.11.

§2.41 3. Attorney as Arbitrator

The State Bar Ethics Committee determined that an attorney who was currently representing a client on other legal matters could accept the client's nomination to serve on a three-member panel of arbitrators that, by agreement, was to be composed of two partisan (i.e., party-chosen) arbitrators and a third "neutral" arbitrator. The Ethics Committee cautioned, however, that the attorney-client relationship must be fully disclosed to the other participants. See California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1984-80.

According to the American Bar Association, an arbitrator who is selected as a partisan of a party in a multimember arbitration panel may later represent that party in another matter. See ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 1.12(d).

In one case, however, a law firm that hired a retired judge who had presided over settlement proceedings in a still-pending action was disqualified from further representation of its client. Indeed, disqualification was ordered despite strict screening of the retired judge from any contact in the matter, based on the fact that confidences had actually been transmitted to the judge by the opposing party. Cho v Superior Court (1995) 39 CA4th 113, 45 CR2d 863 (distinguishing cases such as Higdon v Superior Court (1991) 227 CA3d 1667, 278 CR 588, which suggested that screening would suffice as long as the judicial officer had not actually received any confidential information).

§2.42 4. Attorney as Trustee, Executor, Corporate Director, or Other Fiduciary

If an attorney acting in a nonlawyer capacity has a fiduciary relationship with a nonclient, the conflict of interest rules may apply when there is a question of divulgence of confidential information to the possible detriment of the nonclient. In one case, a law firm was disqualified from representing a plaintiff because one of its partners was currently serving on the board of directors of a bank that acted as trustee for the defendant and on the committee that oversaw the trusts administered by the bank. The court of appeal ruled that the defendant had a legitimate expectation that the lawyer, as director of (but not counsel for) a corporate trustee, owed the defendant a duty of fidelity and that it was error for the trial court not to have disqualified the law firm representing the plaintiff. William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 197 CR 232.

NOTE: An attorney may be disciplined by the State Bar for breach of a fiduciary duty owed to a nonclient. Galardi v State Bar (1987) 43 C3d 683, 238 CR 774.

V. CONFLICTS INVOLVING LAWYERS REPRESENTING CORPORATIONS (CAL RULES OF PROF COND 3-600)

§2.43 A. Organization Is Attorney's Client

An attorney who represents corporations and other entities sometimes faces conflicts questions owing to differing interests of influential persons associated with the entity. In representing an organization, a member shall conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the organization itself, acting through its highest authorized officer, employee, body, or constituent overseeing the particular engagement. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(A). Thus, shareholders, officers, and other "constituents" of a corporation are not considered "clients" for purposes of the Rules of Professional Conduct. See also Meehan v Hopps (1956) 144 CA2d 284, 301 P2d 10; In re King Resources Co. (D Colo 1982) 20 BR 191, 200 (lawyer for corporation or similar entity "owes his allegiance to the entity and not to the stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative or other person connected with the entity").

© The Regents of the University of California

B. Different Types of Conflicts

§2.44 1. Between Client Corporation and Parent Corporation

A parent corporation is not automatically considered the client of an attorney for a subsidiary. The attorney's duty of loyalty to a corporate client does not prevent the attorney from representing an interest adverse to the client's parent corporation unless their interests are sufficiently united that the parent is the alter ego of the subsidiary. Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners v Superior Court (1997) 60 CA4th 248, 70 CR2d 419. The attorney, however, may be deemed to be "representing" both entities when:

- The attorney's representation of a corporate client results in the disclosure of confidences relating to the affiliate of the client;
- The management of the two entities is so intertwined that they effectively operate as a single entity; or
- Other facts exist to demonstrate that the two entities have "unity of interest."

See Morrison Knudsen Corp. v Hancock, Rothert & Bunshoft (1999) 69 CA4th 223, 81 CR2d 425.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.45 2. Between Client Corporation and Partnership

Whether an attorney who represents a partnership also represents individual partners depends on the nature and extent of the contacts between the attorney and the partners. Johnson v Superior Court (1995) 38 CA4th 463, 45 CR2d 312.

The conclusion may be different in the close corporation and general partnership context; i.e., depending on the particular situation, the lawyer may be deemed to represent the "constituents" of a close corporation or a general partnership. Whether an attorney-client relationship exists depends on finding an express or implied agreement that the attorney also represents the partners. Responsible Citizens v Superior Court (1993) 16 CA4th 1717, 20 CR2d 756 (remanded to determine whether attorney-client relationship between attorney and individual partners was implied from totality of circumstances). The court distinguished Woods v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 931, 936, 197 CR 185, in which the court held that an attorney for a family-owned corporation may not represent the husband in a divorce proceeding when the corporation is a primary focus of dispute in the divorce. In such a situation, the attorney represents both spouse-shareholders and therefore should not take sides in a controversy over the control of the corporation.

Although representation of a partnership does not per se result in representation of each of the partners, when the partners are the intended beneficiaries of the attorney's services, a duty to the partners may arise. Johnson v Superior Court (1995) 38 CA4th 463, 45 CR2d 312. An attorney who breaches a duty owed to the intended beneficiary partner may be liable for damages for the breach.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.46 3. Between Client Corporation and Its Constituents

A separate problem arises when, in the course of representing the corporation or other organization, the attorney discovers that a conflict or potential conflict exists between the interests of the organization and one or more of its directors, officers, employees, or other agents. See Forrest v Baeza (1997) 58 CA4th 65, 67 CR2d 857. For example, the attorney might learn that a high-ranking officer has engaged in conduct that could expose the company to litigation and liability. When dealing with directors, shareholders, officers, employees, or other "constituents" of an organization, an attorney must explain the identity of the client for whom the attorney acts, whenever it is or becomes apparent that the organization's interests are or may become adverse to those of the constituents with whom the attorney is dealing. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(D). See also Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(A).

There are ethical limitations on the organization's attorney's freedom to communicate with or obtain information or help for the organization from the constituent if there is a potential or actual conflict. The attorney shall not mislead such a constituent into believing that the constituent may communicate confidential information to the attorney in a way that will not be used in the organization's interest if that is or becomes adverse to the constituent. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(D). Thus, in dealings with a constituent whose interests are or may be adverse to the entity, the attorney should inform the constituent of the attorney's representation of the organization, and, depending on the situation, the existence of a potential or actual conflict, the fact that the conversation may not be privileged, and the fact that the constituent may need to consult his or her own attorney. See Comment to ABA Model Rule 1.13 (when the interests of the organization and one or more of its agents come into conflict, the attorney for the organization should remind the agent that the attorney represents the organization, not the agent, and specifically advise the agent that communications between them may be outside of the attorney-client privilege).

NOTE: In Meehan v Hopps (1956) 144 CA2d 284, 290, 301 P2d 10, the court refused to order disqualification of the lawyer from representing the corporation in an action by one of its officers and expressly approved the corporation's lawyer's use of information previously gained from the officer because the officer was duty-bound to relay that information to the organization's attorney. If the lawyer in Meehan had misled the officer, Rule 3-600(D) may have changed the outcome if it had been in effect at that time.

§2.47 C. Dual Representation of Organization and Constituent

California Rules of Professional Conduct 3-600(E) permits the dual representation of an organization and any of its officers, directors, employees, members, shareholders, or other "constituents," subject to the provisions of Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 relating to conflicting interests. Thus, the nature of the attorney's existing and past relationship to the organization must be disclosed in order to receive the informed written consent of a constituent-client. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B), 3-600(D).

If an organization's consent to dual representation is required by Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C), consent must be given by the shareholders or organization members, or by an appropriate constituent of the organization who is not one of the officers to be represented. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(E). See, e.g., Forrest v Baeza (1997) 58 CA4th 65, 67 CR2d 857 (directors who are defendants in derivative action may not consent to dual representation in their capacity as shareholders or directors). But see California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1999-153 (in case other than derivative action, one of two shareholders in closely held corporation may provide consent on behalf of corporate entity to concurrent representation of both corporation and that shareholder). See also Pringle v La Chapelle (1999) 73 CA4th 1000, 87 CR2d 90 (attorney fee award upheld even though officer executed fee agreement on his own behalf and on behalf of corporation despite potential conflict of interest, when there was no evidence attorney had seriously violated Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600(E)). The attorney must fully disclose the nature and extent of any conflict or potential conflict to all those affected. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(A)-(C).

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney who is considering dual representation of an organization and its constituents in litigation when their interests potentially conflict should proceed with great caution. It is good practice for the attorney to put all important disclosures to the organization's officers or employees in writing. Unlike Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300 regarding transactions between lawyer and client (see §2.11), Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600 does not require that the client-constituent be advised in writing of the right to seek independent legal advice. But under circumstances that could give rise to a conflict, the attorney should at least consider advising the constituent in writing to seek independent counsel and wait until the constituent has had an opportunity to do so before proceeding with the dual representation.

For an example of a disclosure/engagement letter when the attorney is asked to represent both the entity and its officers in a situation in which their interests potentially conflict, see §2.73.

VI. CONFLICTS ARISING IN INSURANCE CONTEXT

§2.48 A. Dual Representation of Insurer and Insured

Most liability insurance policies state that the insurer will provide a defense for covered claims. When a covered claim arises and proceeds to litigation, the insurer typically hires counsel of its choosing to represent the insured. Thus, in the usual tripartite relationship existing between insurer, insured, and counsel, there is a single common interest shared among them. Dual representation by counsel is beneficial since the shared goal of minimizing or eliminating liability to a third party is the same. San Diego Navy Fed. Credit Union v Cumis Ins. Soc'y (1984) 162 CA3d 358, 364, 208 CR 494.

In such circumstances, the lawyer retained by the insurer has two clients and owes a fiduciary duty to both the insured and the insurer. Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150; Purdy v Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. (1984) 157 CA3d 59, 76, 203 CR 524; American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1974) 38 CA3d 579, 591, 113 CR 561. The defense counsel retained by the insurance company owes the same unqualified loyalty to the insured as if he or she had been personally retained by the insured. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v Superior Court, supra.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.49 B. Conflicts Between Insurer and Insured

When some allegations in the suit against the insured fall outside the scope of the insurance coverage, the standard insurance company practice is to defend under a reservation of rights, whereby the insurer promises to defend but states that it may not indemnify the insured if liability is found, depending on a subsequent determination of the coverage issued. San Diego Navy Fed. Credit Union v Cumis Ins. Soc'y (1984) 162 CA3d 358, 364, 208 CR 494. In that situation, a conflict of interest usually exists between the insurer and the insured, because it is in the insurer's interest for the third party action to establish that liability, if any, is outside the coverage of the policy, while it is in the insured's interest to show the opposite.

EXAMPLE: If an insurance policy covers damage from unintentional but not intentional acts, it is in the insurer's interest that the third party action find either no liability or liability based on an intentional act, while it is in the insured's interest that either no liability or liability based on an unintentional act be found. In such situations, the duty to preserve a client's confidences (see Bus & P C §6068(e)) may pose a substantial dilemma for the lawyer.

In handling the ethical dilemma facing counsel hired by the insurer to defend the insured, the Cumis court found that counsel must explain to both the insured and the insurer (162 CA3d at 375; see also Executive Aviation, Inc. v National Ins. Underwriters (1971) 16 CA3d 799, 809, 94 CR 347):

- The full implications of joint representation in situations in which the insurer has reserved its rights;
- That if the insured does not then consent to joint representation, counsel must withdraw; and
- That the insurer must pay the reasonable cost of independent counsel (selected by the insured) for the insured.

In another case, attendance of counsel for insurer that had a conflict of interest of which it was unaware, at depositions for Cumis counsel's firm, was an insufficient basis for extending vicarious disqualification of counsel to Cumis counsel; disqualification would require double imputation of knowledge of confidential information—first from one member of insurer's law firm to another member of that firm, and second from the latter attorney to a different law firm. Frazier v Superior Court (2002) 97 CA4th 23, 118 CR2d 129.

§2.50 1. Insurer's Duty to Provide Independent Counsel to Insured (Cumis Counsel)

Civil Code §2860, sometimes called the Cumis statute, defines conflict of interest in the context of insurance defense and sets forth an insurer's obligations in defending an insured when a conflict arises. It provides that:

- A conflict of interest "creates a duty on the part of the insurer to provide independent counsel" unless a written waiver is obtained from the insured (CC §2860(a));
- A conflict of interest may exist when the insurer has reserved the right to litigate the issue of coverage and the outcome of the coverage issue can be controlled by the attorney first retained by the insurer (CC §2860(b));
- A conflict of interest does not exist
- As to allegations or facts in the litigation for which the insurer denies coverage;
- As to claims for punitive damages; or
- Solely because of a claim for damages in excess of policy limits (CC §2860(b));
- The insurer may insist on minimum qualifications for independent counsel (CC §2860(c));
- The insurer's liability for the attorney fees of independent counsel is limited to the rates it actually pays to attorneys it retains to defend similar actions in the community in which the dispute arose (CC §2860(c));
- Disputes over setting a standard respecting rates, and other disputes over fees of independent counsel, must be arbitrated (CC §2860(c));
- Independent counsel has a duty to disclose all relevant information to the insurer except privileged information on coverage issues (CC §2860(d));
- Both sets of counsel—independent/insured's and insurer's—are entitled to participate in all aspects of the litigation and must cooperate in the exchange of information "consistent with each counsel's ethical and legal obligation to the insured" (CC §2860(f)); and
- The insured may waive the right to independent counsel by signing the waiver statement included in the statute (CC §2860(e)).

NOTE: When a dispute exists about the insurer's duty to provide independent counsel (e.g., the scope of coverage, the existence of a conflict of interest, the insurer's duty to defend), §2860 does not apply. See Handy v First Interstate Bank (1993) 13 CA4th 917, 16 CR2d 770 (trial court could not order arbitration of foundational issues of conflict of interest or duty to defend under §2860); Truck Ins. Exch. v Dynamic Concepts, Inc. (1992) 9 CA4th 1147, 11 CR2d 873 (absent contractual agreement to arbitrate, §2860 did not require arbitration of dispute over whether its provisions applied). See §5.11 on the Cumis exception to applicability of the California mandatory fee arbitration law.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.51 2. Independent Counsel Owes Fiduciary Duty to Insured

Apart from the express obligations imposed on counsel by CC §2860, independent counsel, retained when there is a conflict or potential conflict between the insured and the insurer, owes a fiduciary duty only to the insured and does not represent the insurer. See Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150, 1157 (independent counsel may ethically represent insured in coverage action against insurer, and insurer need not pay for lawyer's work in coverage action). See San Diego Navy Fed. Credit Union v Cumis Ins. Soc'y (1984) 162 CA3d 358, 374, 208 CR 494; Executive Aviation, Inc. v National Ins. Underwriters (1971) 16 CA3d 799, 809, 94 CR 347 (independent counsel may also represent insured in coverage action against insurer).

The "counsel provided by the insurer," however, who has a right to participate in the litigation under CC §2860, has a dual duty to both the insurer and the insured. CC §2860(c); Employers Ins. of Wausau, 692 F Supp at 1160 n14. The insurance company may retain its own counsel to solely represent its interests, and that counsel owes no duty of fidelity to the insured. 692 F Supp at 1160 (emphasizing importance of disclosing identity of party to whom attorney owes duty of loyalty). See also Bogard v Employers Cas. Co. (1985) 164 CA3d 602, 614, 210 CR 578; Executive Aviation, Inc. v National Ins. Underwriters, supra; Lysick v Walcom (1968) 258 CA2d 136, 149, 65 CR 406. But such counsel cannot be the same as the counsel provided by the insurer referred to in CC §2860(a), (f). Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co., supra.

In light of the dual fiduciary duties owed by appointed insurance defense counsel to both insured and insurer, appointed counsel must scrupulously avoid taking any action adverse to the insured. For example, if a coverage dispute arises after representation has commenced, or if the insured reveals that a noncovered act has occurred, appointed counsel is precluded from breaching confidentiality by disclosing the information to the carrier. If a conflict arises between the interests of the insured and the insurer, appointed counsel may be ethically compelled to withdraw from further representation of both and to maintain the information in complete confidence. See California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1995-139.

Similarly, counsel owes fiduciary duties to an insurer arising from representation of an insured that preclude concurrent acceptance of employment adverse to the insurer in a completely separate matter, absent written consent. See State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Federal Ins. Co. (1999) 72 CA4th 1422, 86 CR2d 20.

VII. LIMITATIONS ON ATTORNEY ACTING AS WITNESS (RULE 5-210)

§2.52 A. When Attorney May Serve as Witness

An attorney acting as advocate can serve as a witness before a jury without the client's informed, written consent if (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210):

- The testimony relates to an uncontested matter;
- The testimony relates to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case; or
- The attorney has the client's informed, written consent (see Smith, Smith & Kring v Superior Court (1997) 60 CA4th 573, 580, 70 CR2d 507).

An attorney acting as both advocate and witness in a client's case is tolerable. Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210 a law firm may act as both advocate and witness because the firm obtained the client's consent and the fact that the client has consented to the dual capacity must be given great weight. Smith, Smith & Kring v Superior Court, supra.

The rule on the attorney-advocate serving as a witness applies only to jury trials, not to trials before a judge or to nonadversarial proceedings, e.g., hearings before a legislative body. See Official Discussion following Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210.

The principal rationale for the attorney-advocate not serving as a witness in a jury trial is that any damage to the attorney's credibility in the role of witness may reflect on the cause the attorney is representing. See People ex rel Younger v Superior Court (1978) 86 CA3d 180, 197, 150 CR 156 (describing various reasons underlying prohibition of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-111(A)(4)). Combining the roles of advocate and witness can prejudice the tribunal and the opposing party. It may not be clear whether a statement by an advocate-witness should be taken as proof or as an analysis of the proof. See Comment to ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 3.7.

NOTE: An attorney should use caution in such situations: He or she should fully disclose the drawbacks to continuing the representation and should give the client an opportunity to seek the advice of independent counsel. The attorney should also consider withdrawing.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.53 B. Informed, Written Consent

If the client gives informed, written consent to having the attorney testify, the court retains discretion to grant a motion for disqualification made by the opposing party only when it is clear that important interests must be protected from palpable prejudice. Lyle v Superior Court (1981) 122 CA3d 470, 482, 175 CR 918 (in balancing interests, trial court in close cases should favor client's right to attorney of choice, even if this means less effective representation, unless there is convincing demonstration of detriment to opponent or injury to integrity of judicial process). See also Comment to ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 3.7 (rule calls for balancing interests of client and opposing party; even if there is risk of prejudice to opposing party, "due regard must be given to the effect of disqualification on client").

If the attorney represents a governmental entity, the consent must be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the attorney is employed and must be consistent with principles of recusal (i.e., disqualification). Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210. See also ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 3.7 (lawyer as witness).

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.54 C. Another Attorney in Firm as Witness

Under the present rule, neither withdrawal nor the client's consent is necessary when a partner or an associate in the attorney-advocate's firm serves as a witness, presumably because a person other than the trial attorney is testifying, which is less likely to confuse a jury or impair the client's representation. See Official Discussion following Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210. See also ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 3.7 (lawyer may act as advocate in trial in which another lawyer in the lawyer's firm is likely to be called as a witness). Before former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-111 was amended in 1979, an attorney was obliged to withdraw, unless the client's informed, written consent was obtained, when the attorney became aware that he or she, or another lawyer in the firm, "ought" to be called as a witness on behalf of the client. See Comden v Superior Court (1978) 20 C3d 906, 913, 145 CR 9.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.55 D. Attorney as Witness for Opposing Party

California Rules of Professional Conduct 5-210 does not explicitly cover the situation in which a trial attorney is called to be a witness against the client. Former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-111(A)(5) stated that an attorney may continue to represent a client after it is obvious that the attorney may be called as a witness other than on behalf of the client until it is apparent that the attorney's testimony may be prejudicial to the client. Case law supports this view. See, e.g., Graphic Process Co. v Superior Court (1979) 95 CA3d 43, 156 CR 841 (counsel called to testify by adverse party is not disqualified unless it is established that client will be prejudiced by testimony); Brown v De Rugeris (1979) 92 CA3d 895, 155 CR 301 (attorney called to testify during trial by adverse party under Evid C §776 was not disqualified from continuing to represent client when testimony was in no way prejudicial to client). See Comment to ABA Model Rules of Prof Cond 3.7 (similar problem can arise "whether the lawyer is called as a witness on behalf of the client or is called by the opposing party").

VIII. CLIENT'S CONSENT TO AND WAIVER OF CONFLICTS

§2.56 A. Consent Must Be Informed, in Writing

Consenting to an attorney's acceptance of adverse employment means that the client or former client knowingly waives "the right to object." Health Maintenance Network v Blue Cross (1988) 202 CA3d 1043, 1064, 249 CR 220. To be valid, a client's consent to a conflict must be informed and in writing. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(A). See sample client consents in §§2.73-2.74.

An "informed written consent" is a client's agreement that follows a written disclosure by the attorney; "disclosure" means informing the client or former client of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences; and "written" means any writing described in Evid C §250. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(A). The attorney's disclosure must be sufficient to enable the client to make free and intelligent decisions regarding the representation. Day v Rosenthal (1985) 170 CA3d 1125, 1149, 217 CR 89.

PRACTICE TIP: Consent should always be obtained in writing, even when not specifically required. It is important to document the attorney's disclosure of conflicting interests in writing, e.g., by a letter to the client. The writing should set forth the facts and concerns and the implications of the attorney's representing potentially conflicting interests. It should rarely be necessary or appropriate to obtain a sworn consent. The client's or former client's authorized, signed acknowledgment of the salient facts and agreement to the representation at issue should be sufficient. See forms in §§2.73-2.74.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.57 B. Complete Disclosure

The attorney should explain the conflict and disclose fully all facts relevant to the client's decision on whether to waive the conflict. In doing so, the attorney must be careful not to disclose any confidences gained from the attorney's relationship with the other party/client. The length and scope of the explanation and disclosure needed to adequately inform the client will vary, depending on the circumstances. For example, sophisticated in-house counsel for a client company may require a less thorough discourse on the significance of the conflict than does an individual who has rarely encountered lawyers or litigation. A meeting or a teleconference in which the attorney can offer necessary explanations and the client can ask questions can be helpful.

The courts generally construe waivers strictly and place the burden on the attorney to demonstrate that all relevant facts have been disclosed and explained. Civil Serv. Comm'n v Superior Court (1984) 163 CA3d 70, 209 CR 159. In one case, the court found the waiver to be valid when the client was advised of the conflict and the right to seek independent counsel by a detailed written disclosure, reviewed the document for 20 minutes, and consented to the attorney's continued representation of the corporate client "notwithstanding any adversity that may develop." Zador Corp. v Kwan (1995) 31 CA4th 1285, 1301, 37 CR2d 754. When adversity did develop, the former client reaffirmed his consent to the continued representation. 31 CA4th at 1301. See also Health Maintenance Network v Blue Cross (1988) 202 CA3d 1043, 249 CR 220 (consent to attorney's adverse employment may be implied from conduct).

Not every possible consequence of a conflict must be disclosed for the consent to be valid. Maxwell v Superior Court (1982) 30 C3d 606, 180 CR 177, disapproved on other grounds in People v Doolin (2009) 45 C4th 390, 421 n22, 87 CR3d 209; Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra. Waiver of the consequences of potential conflict is not inadequate simply because neither the court nor the agreement undertake the impossible burden of explaining separately every conceivable ramification. 30 C3d at 622. Courts have recognized, however, that it is impossible to predict "every possible consequence of a conflict," and knowing waivers will be upheld even if certain adverse ramifications of the waiver were not enumerated. Maxwell v Superior Court, supra; Zador Corp. v Kwan, supra.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.58 C. Implied Waiver and Consent

Although both former and present professional rules in California require that the client's or former client's written consent be given, some courts have found an implied waiver and consent to an attorney's acceptance of adverse employment when there is a lengthy and unreasonable delay by the client or former client in raising such an objection. See, e.g., River West, Inc. v Nickel (1987) 188 CA3d 1297, 1309, 234 CR 33 (inordinate delay in making motion to disqualify, together with other factors, held to constitute waiver of right to object to representation). See also Trust Corp. v Piper Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir 1983) 701 F2d 85, 87; Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150, 1165 (delay and prejudice led to denial of disqualification motion). But see State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v Federal Ins. Co. (1999) 72 CA4th 1422, 1435, 86 CR2d 20 (client cannot impliedly consent to conflicted representation with other current clients of attorney in that burden to avoid conflict is on attorney, not client).

IX. ATTORNEY WITHDRAWAL AND DISQUALIFICATION

§2.59 A. Withdrawal

The California Rules of Professional Conduct require that an attorney who knows or should know that continued representation will result in a violation of the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act must withdraw from representation. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(B)(2) (mandatory withdrawal). The Rules allow the attorney to withdraw (subject to the possible need for court approval) when continued representation is likely to result in a violation of another rule or of the Act. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(2) (permissive withdrawal).

The duty to withdraw, thus terminating the attorney-client relationship, may arise whenever counsel for a party to an action has reason to believe that discharge of his or her duties to that party will conflict with discharge of his or her duties to a third party. The same duty arises when an attorney is faced with the situation of representing inconsistent claims of two parties because the attorney must be capable of devoting his or her entire energies in the client's interests and on the client's behalf. Health Maintenance Network v Blue Cross (1988) 202 CA3d 1043, 1063, 249 CR 220, citing Hammett v McIntyre (1952) 114 CA2d 148, 249 P2d 885.

In effect, the reasons for not accepting a case because of actual or potential conflicting interests are the same reasons for which the attorney may have a duty to withdraw. For further discussion on mandatory and permissive withdrawal under the California Rules of Professional Conduct, as well as the procedures concerning motions to withdraw, see chap 4 (changes in representation). See also Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

The right of a party to be represented in litigation by the attorney of his or her choice is a significant right, and disqualification of that attorney will not be required merely because that attorney has represented the opposing party in the past. Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1334, 104 CR2d 116. Violation or threatened violation of one of the ethical rules must be shown. Johnson v Superior Court (1984) 159 CA3d 573, 578, 205 CR 605.

Most disqualification motions are brought on the ground that the "tainted" attorney has obtained knowledge of otherwise confidential information that could be used unfairly to the disadvantage of the moving client or former client. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E). There is precedent for seeking disqualification for alleged violation of other ethical rules, e.g., the rule limiting an attorney's ability to testify at a hearing or trial on behalf of his or her client: Comden v Superior Court (1978) 20 C3d 906, 145 CR 9 (motion granted under former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-111(A)(4)); Lyle v Superior Court (1981) 122 CA3d 470, 175 CR 918 (motion denied under revised version of former Rule 2-111(A)(4)) and the rule restricting an attorney's ability to communicate directly with a party represented by counsel: Mills Land & Water Co. v Golden W. Ref. Co. (1986) 186 CA3d 116, 136, 230 CR 461 (motion granted); Chronometrics, Inc. v Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 CA3d 597, 168 CR 196 (motion granted). See Smith, Smith & Kring v Superior Court (1997) 60 CA4th 573, 70 CR2d 507.

§2.61 1. Motions for Disqualification or Recusal in General

A motion for disqualification may be made by a person who would be affected by the representation at any time while the action is pending. Earl Scheib, Inc. v Superior Court (1967) 253 CA2d 703, 709, 61 CR 386. The parties moving for disqualification must have standing. See Machado v Superior Court (2007) 148 CA4th 875, 880, 55 CR3d 902 (nonnamed party may move to disqualify attorney if named party seeks to avoid prior disqualification order). In DCH Health Servs. Corp. v Waite (2002) 95 CA4th 829, 115 CR2d 847, a hospital, a foundation related to the hospital, and concerned individuals brought an action against a citizens group and an individual. The individual plaintiffs sought to disqualify the individual defendant's attorney because his wife formerly served on the foundation's board. The appellate court held that the motion for attorney disqualification was erroneously granted because the plaintiffs lacked standing to bring the motion. The attorney's wife may have owed a duty of confidentiality to the foundation, but she did not owe a duty to the individual plaintiffs. Only a party with an expectation of confidentiality can disqualify an attorney. 95 CA4th at 832.

§2.62 a. Delay in Filing Motion

The motion will not be denied merely because the former client has delayed in filing the motion. Earl Scheib, Inc. v Superior Court (1967) 253 CA2d 703, 709, 61 CR 386 (4-month delay) (criticized in River West, Inc. v Nickel (1987) 188 CA3d 1297, 1305, 234 CR 33, to the extent that Earl Scheib states a rule that laches is irrelevant to a motion to disqualify). However, waiver of the right to disqualify counsel may be implied when inexcusable delay in bringing the motion causes substantial prejudice to the current client. River West, Inc. v Nickel, supra (47-month delay). In determining whether a delay is unreasonable, the court will consider:

- How long the former client has known of the potential conflict;
- Whether the former client has been represented by counsel since it discovered the potential conflict;
- Whether anyone stopped the former client from filing the motion earlier, and if so, how; and
- Whether an earlier motion would have been inappropriate or futile and why.

§2.63 b. Effect of Making Motion Close to Trial

Courts are sensitive to the burden of changing counsel during litigation, as well as to the tactical motivations for an opposing party making the motion and are therefore more likely to deny disqualification motions made close to trial. The length of the delay in bringing a motion to disqualify is important but not dispositive. It is also appropriate to consider such factors as when the movant learned of the conflict; whether the movant was represented by counsel during the delay; why the delay occurred and in particular whether the motion was delayed for tactical reasons; and whether disqualification would result in prejudice to the nonmoving party. See Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150, 1165. The judge may properly consider the possibility that the disqualification motion was brought as tactical device to delay litigation. Comden v Superior Court (1978) 20 C3d 906, 915, 145 CR 9. See also Western Continental Operating Co. v Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 CA3d 752, 763, 261 CR 100; Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v Consortium Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 443, 450, 212 CR 497.

§2.64 c. Review by Appeal or Writ of Mandate

The party aggrieved by an erroneous ruling on a motion to disqualify opposing counsel may petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., Klein v Superior Court (1988) 198 CA3d 894, 905, 244 CR 226) or may directly appeal the ruling as soon as it is entered (see, e.g., Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v Consortium Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 443, 445, 212 CR 497; Jacuzzi v Jacuzzi Bros. (1963) 218 CA2d 24, 32 CR 188).

Appellate courts defer to the trial judge's ruling absent an abuse of discretion. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer v Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 CA4th 1832, 43 CR2d 327; Klein v Superior Court (1988) 198 CA3d 894, 908, 244 CR 226; Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v Consortium Co. (1985) 166 CA3d 443, 450, 212 CR 497. 2. Imputed or Vicarious Disqualification of Attorney's Firm

§2.65 a. In General

When an attorney is disqualified from representation because of an ethical conflict, the disqualification extends to the entire firm, i.e., the firm is vicariously disqualified (In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 C4th 145, 159, 84 CR3d 597; Flatt v Superior Court (1994) 9 C4th 275, 286, 36 CR2d 537; Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 114, 14 CR2d 184), at least when an effective ethical screen has not been established (People ex rel Dep't of Corps. v SpeeDee Oil Change Sys. (1999) 20 C4th 1135, 1151, 86 CR2d 816). The rule of vicarious disqualification is based on the doctrine of imputed knowledge; the knowledge by any member of a law firm is knowledge by all attorneys in the firm, partners as well as associates. Rosenfeld Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 235 CA3d 566, 575, 286 CR 609.

Courts have based this rule on the practical impossibility of a private law firm's creating an "ethical wall" around an attorney who has been exposed to confidential information about the former client by screening him off from the firm's representation of the former client's adversary. See Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 115, 14 CR2d 184. Therefore, once the attorney is shown to have had probable access to former client confidences, the court will impute such knowledge to the entire firm, prohibiting all members of the firm from participating in the case. 11 CA4th at 117; Galbraith v State Bar (1933) 218 C 329, 332, 23 P2d 291; Dill v Superior Court (1984) 158 CA3d 301, 305, 205 CR 671.

Despite the increased willingness of California courts to use a flexible approach to vicarious disqualification in the public sector context (see §§2.67-2.68), including the use of an "ethical wall," the rule of vicarious disqualification has often been strictly applied in the private sector. See, e.g., Hitachi, Ltd. v Tatung Co. (ND Cal 2006) 419 F Supp 2d 1158, 1164 (vicarious disqualification is "the established law in California"; disqualification of firm was warranted because two actions were nearly identical, firm's intellectual property department was small, and there was substantial contact between associate and firm's attorney handling present case).

NOTE: In some instances, the problem can be avoided by obtaining informed, written consent. See Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(A), 3-310(E). See §2.56.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.66 b. Exceptions to Imputed Disqualification Rule

Because the rationale for imputed disqualification rests on the danger of shared confidences, disqualification of a whole firm is generally unnecessary if only one attorney in a firm has violated an ethical rule that does not pertain to potential breach of client confidences. See, e.g., Mills Land & Water Co. v Golden W. Ref. Co. (1986) 186 CA3d 116, 230 CR 461 (individual lawyer, not firm, disqualified for violation of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 7-107 (now see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-100 (communication with represented party)). But see Papanicolaou v Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A. (SD NY 1989) 720 F Supp 1080, 1086 (attorney's conduct warranted disqualification of entire firm).

NOTE: The Official Discussion to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210 (lawyer as witness) states that it is not intended to apply to the situation in which a partner or associate in the advocate's firm will be a witness. Nor is an attorney obligated "to advise the client of a relationship with another member who is merely a partner or associate in the same law firm as the adverse party's counsel, and who has no direct involvement in the matter." See Official Discussion to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-320 (attorney's relationship with other party's lawyer).

In addition, the imputed disqualification doctrine raises substantial difficulties in today's environment of increased attorney mobility. If the presumptions discussed above—(1) that relevant, confidential information was disclosed if the two matters are "substantially related," and (2) that all lawyers in a firm share their clients' confidences—are construed as conclusive, an associate's (or a partner's) change of employment could necessitate withdrawal by the new firm if the new firm and old firm are on opposite sides of a lawsuit, even if the circumstances do not evidence any significant risk of improper disclosure of confidential information.

Recognizing the harshness of presuming the existence of a conflict even when no conflict actually exists, in Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1333, 104 CR2d 116, the appellate court declined to require automatic disqualification of the plaintiff's attorney, who was formerly associated with a law firm that had represented the defendant, even though the subject matter of the former representation was substantially related to the subject matter of the lawsuit. Noting that "[d]isqualification based on a conclusive presumption of imputed knowledge derived from a lawyer's past association with a law firm is out of touch with the present day practice of law" (86 CA4th at 1336), the court remanded the case to the trial court to ascertain "whether confidential information material to the current representation would normally have been imparted to the attorney during his tenure at the old firm." 86 CA4th at 1340. See also Goldberg v Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 CA4th 752, 23 CR3d 116 (attorney's former firm disqualified only if evidence showed attorney had actually passed on confidential information about plaintiff to members of former firm); Rhaburn v Superior Court (2006) 140 CA4th 1566, 1581, 45 CR3d 464 (courts should use flexible approach that considers the totality of circumstances to determine whether confidential information has been obtained).

There is also precedent for seeking disqualification of a firm when nonlawyers employed by counsel on one side switch jobs to work on the staff of the opposing counsel. See In re Complex Asbestos Litig. (1991) 232 CA3d 572, 283 CR 732, in which a paralegal who worked closely with lawyers defending asbestos manufacturers switched jobs to work with an asbestos plaintiffs' attorney firm. The court disqualified the second firm in those cases in which the paralegal had access to confidential material, declining to apply the substantial relationship rule to a nonlawyer but holding that disqualification was proper because the evidence showed that the paralegal possessed confidential attorney-client information materially related to the proceedings and had not been carefully isolated from work on the matters. See Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 302, 254 CR 853 (social relationship between attorney and opposing lawyer's secretary, without evidence that confidential information was passed, did not require disqualification of attorney; secretary could, however, be deposed).

§2.67 c. Building an Ethical Wall

A law firm may seek to avoid an imputed disqualification by "building an ethical wall" or erecting a screen between the newly acquired attorney (whose former connection with another firm gives rise to the possibility of a conflict) and all other lawyers in the new firm who might learn something from the new attorney that could harm a client of either firm. Typical elements of such an ethical wall are physical, geographic, and departmental separation of attorneys; prohibitions against and sanctions for discussing confidential matters; established rules and procedures preventing access to confidential information and files; procedures preventing a disqualified attorney from sharing in the profits of the representation; and continuing education in professional responsibility. Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 116 n6, 14 CR2d 184.

The California Supreme Court, though it has not expressly altered the established rule of vicarious disqualification, appears to have signaled its willingness to consider relaxing the rule of automatic disqualification if a law firm can show that it has built an effective ethical wall around the attorney with the conflict. See People ex rel Dep't of Corps. v SpeeDee Oil Change Sys. (1999) 20 C4th 1135, 1151, 86 CR2d 816; Adams v Aerojet-General Corp. (2001) 86 CA4th 1324, 1333, 104 CR2d 116.

Courts of appeal have not been receptive to the argument that, by sequestering the "tainted" attorney from the other lawyers in the firm, a firm can escape imputed disqualification. See Henriksen, 11 CA4th at 115 (ethical wall concept inapplicable when attorney moves from firm that represents one litigant to firm that represents opponent in pending litigation matter; entire second firm disqualified). See also Klein v Superior Court (1988) 198 CA3d 894, 912, 244 CR 226 ("aside from two limited exceptions… no California case appears to have permitted disqualification of the individual attorney for a conflict without disqualifying his law firm"); William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 197 CR 232 (disqualification of firm required even though attorney had tried, in apparent good faith, to isolate himself entirely from case that presented conflict).

NOTE: Federal courts have been more willing than have California courts to recognize ethical walls to avoid disqualification of the entire firm. See, e.g., Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150, 1164; U.S. v Titan Pac. Constr. Corp. (WD Wash 1986) 637 F Supp 1556, 1564.

§2.68 (1) Public Sector and Junior Attorneys

The ethical wall concept has had limited acceptance in California as a method to avoid what might be the unduly harsh result of vicarious disqualification of an entire firm. That acceptance generally has been in the arena of former government attorneys who go into private practice, and the former government attorney has not had access to confidential information on the subject matter of the litigation (see, e.g., Chambers v Superior Court (1981) 121 CA3d 893, 903, 175 CR 575). Henriksen v Great Am. Sav. & Loan (1992) 11 CA4th 109, 112, 14 CR2d 184.

The acceptance of an ethical wall has also occurred in the reverse situation as well, e.g., that of former private attorneys now working for the government. City of Santa Barbara v Superior Court (2004) 122 CA4th 17, 23, 18 CR3d 403. In City of Santa Barbara, the court held that vicarious disqualification of the entire city attorney's office was not required if the city attorney, who had worked as a private attorney on a previous case against the city, was not involved in the case and had no managerial duties, and the office constructed an ethical wall to prevent disclosure of confidential information.

The California Supreme Court reached the opposite conclusion, though, in City & County of San Francisco v Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2006) 38 C4th 839, 43 CR3d 771. In that case, the city was in litigation with a company that the city attorney had previously represented while in private practice, and the current litigation was substantially related to the prior representation. Under these circumstances, the court found an ethical screen was insufficient; there was no reason to believe that the city attorney knew of the company's alleged kickback scheme but, as head of the government law office, the city attorney's entire office had to be disqualified.

Courts appear more willing to accept the ethical wall solution in situations involving junior attorneys and government lawyers to avoid unduly restricting their career mobility. Higdon v Superior Court (1991) 227 CA3d 1667, 278 CR 588 (court of appeal approved use of evidence of ethical walls to rebut presumption of shared confidence that might otherwise have resulted in disqualification of law firm that recently hired former court commissioner who had heard case). See Chambers v Superior Court, supra (disqualification of plaintiff's firm, which had hired attorney formerly employed by defendant government agency, not warranted absent evidence that attorney had acquired confidential information on case or had any responsibility over relevant matters). See also In re Complex Asbestos Litig. (1991) 232 CA3d 572, 283 CR 732 (ethical wall solution, termed "cone of silence," appropriate for transferring paralegals).

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.69 (2) Wall Must Be Erected When Conflict Is Discovered

The "ethical" mechanism cannot adequately protect against disclosure of material confidences unless the "wall" is erected as soon as the potential conflict is or should have been discovered and before any potential transfer of confidences. See Atasi Corp. v Seagate Technol. (Fed Cir 1988) 847 F2d 826, 831. See also Klein v Superior Court (1988) 198 CA3d 894, 913, 244 CR 226. Although noting that California decisions to date have followed the rule of automatic vicarious disqualification fairly consistently, the Klein decision suggests the development of an exception to allow the firm to continue representation when the conflict problem arises only because one attorney at the firm had a previous association with a firm representing the other side and the attorney can demonstrate that he or she was not substantially involved in the matters at issue while at the other firm.

© The Regents of the University of California

§2.70 (3) Remoteness of Attorney's Contact With Subject Matter

The more remote the attorney's contact with the subject matter while employed at the first firm, the more willing courts should be to validate the "ethical wall" solution. See §2.67. See Kesselhaut v U.S. (Ct Cl 1977) 555 F2d 791 (test of whether screening device will suffice is whether individual attorney had any responsibility over matters related to instant action). But see Atasi Corp. v Seagate Technol. (Fed Cir 1988) 847 F2d 826, 829 (under Ninth Circuit law, although attorney's minimal personal involvement in matter while at first firm would not disqualify entire second firm, significant involvement—drafting brief and conducting part of fact investigation—would).

§2.71 3. Balancing Test on Disqualification for Possible Improper Use of Confidential Material Information

California decisions are divided on the question of whether, once the court finds that a conflict of interest exists, the court should or is even permitted to weigh that conflict (and the risks it poses) against other factors, e.g., the burden imposed by switching lawyers, in deciding whether to disqualify counsel. The court must weigh the combined effect of a party's right to counsel of choice, an attorney's interest in representing a client, the financial burden on a client of replacing disqualified counsel, and any tactical abuse underlying a disqualification proceeding against the fundamental principle that the fair resolution of disputes within our adversary system requires vigorous representation of parties by independent counsel unencumbered by conflicts of interest. William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 1048, 197 CR 232. See also Oaks Mgmt. Corp. v Superior Court (2006) 145 CA4th 453, 468, 51 CR3d 561 (attorneys in firm representing plaintiffs previously acted as lenders to defendant; disqualification was improper).

However, another court stated that the "substantial relationship" test is a strict, prophylactic rule. Therefore, if a timely motion to disqualify is made, the trial court should not enlarge its inquiry by balancing the parties' competing interests under its equity jurisdiction. If a substantial relationship is established, the discussion should ordinarily end. The rights and interests of the former client will prevail. Conflict will be presumed; disqualification will be ordered. River West, Inc. v Nickel (1987) 188 CA3d 1297, 1308, 234 CR 33.

PRACTICE TIP: An appropriate balancing test should protect against conflicts of interest while protecting the right to choose counsel. When imputed or vicarious disqualification is sought based on one lawyer's past representation of another party, a balancing test should measure, first, the probability that the "tainted" lawyer previously acquired from Client A confidential information that is material to the dispute with Client B, and, second, the risk that the "tainted" lawyer will disclose or use that confidential, material information adversely to Client A. Relevant factors to consider include the closeness of the connection between the two matters, the nature of the "tainted" lawyer's work on the matters, and the adequacy of an "ethical wall" as a means of protecting against prohibited disclosure.

After thus assessing the likelihood of improper use of confidential, material information, the court may consider whether the complaining client is estopped or has impliedly waived the right to complain by, for example, delaying for such a long time in bringing the motion that the other side would face an unreasonable burden or hardship in retaining and training new counsel. The greater the risk of improper use of confidential, material information, the less likely that the challenged representation should be allowed to continue.

California courts have declined to hold that the "appearance of impropriety" alone is a basis for disqualification. See Hetos Inv., Ltd. v Kurtin (2003) 110 CA4th 36, 40, 1 CR3d 472. One court observed that "there is no California case in which an attorney has been disqualified solely on this basis." Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 306, 254 CR 853. See William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 1047 n2, 197 CR 232 (suggesting that concerns for appearance of impropriety apply in California only to situations involving lawyers who are or were public officials and lawyers who will be called as witnesses).

The court should presume that, unless proven otherwise, lawyers will act ethically, and the court should not assume that they will violate confidences merely because they are in a marital relationship. DCH Health Servs. Corp. v Waite (2002) 95 CA4th 829, 834, 115 CR2d 847 (trial court erroneously granted motion for disqualification to avoid appearance of impropriety arising from "unique nature of the marital relationship" of two attorneys). See also Addam v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 368, 371, 10 CR3d 39 (sibling relationship between lawyer and opposing party's physician is insufficient, standing alone, to preclude lawyer from representing client); Derivi Constr. & Architecture, Inc. v Wong (2004) 118 CA4th 1268, 1273, 14 CR3d 329 (attorney should not be disqualified from case solely because he is married to attorney at another firm that was previously disqualified in same case).

By contrast, ABA Code Prof Resp Canon 9 sets forth a duty to avoid even the appearance of professional impropriety. A few courts applying California law have taken that duty into account in ordering disqualification in civil cases. See, e.g., Woods v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 931, 936, 197 CR 185 (court upheld disqualification in part based on appearance of impropriety).

In another case, however, the court of appeal criticized the lawyer for poor judgment in initiating a social relationship with the secretary of the opposing lawyer's partner, but the court found no violation of former Cal Rules of Prof Cond Rules 4-101 and 7-103 (now see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(E) and 2-100) and declined to apply ABA Code of Prof Resp Canon 9 to require disqualification for two reasons: First, precedent showed only that Canon 9 has been applied by California courts when a violation of one of the California Rules of Professional Conduct also existed. Second, the "appearance of impropriety" test "is too imprecise to furnish a reliable judicial guideline" because it is unclear as to whom the conduct must appear improper, and it is difficult for judges to measure the views of any particular group on the question. Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 307, 254 CR 853. See People v Lopez (1984) 155 CA3d 813, 823, 202 CR 333 ("appearance of impropriety … is a malleable factor having the chameleon-like quality of reflecting the subjective views of the percipient" and is therefore not a sound basis for decisionmaking); Chambers v Superior Court (1981) 121 CA3d 893, 902, 175 CR 575 (notion of appearance of impropriety is "too vaporous" to support disqualification order).

Re: _ _[Case name]_ _
Dear _ _[name of officer of XYZ Corp.]_ _:

As you know, this firm ("Firm") represents XYZ Corp. in a civil suit brought by ABC Co. currently pending in the Superior Court, County of Los Angeles (ABC Co. v XYZ Corp., et al., CV 00-000 XXX). I have been the attorney at Firm in charge of that representation since its inception.

One of Firm's other long-time and important clients, STU Corp., has recently been named a defendant in a suit brought by XYZ Corp. in the Superior Court, County of Los Angeles (XYZ Corp. v STU Corp., et al., CV 00000 YYY). STU Corp. has asked Firm to represent it in that proceeding. As you may know, XYZ Corp. is represented by the law firm of Smith & Jones in that case. It is my understanding that the XYZ Corp. v STU Corp. litigation concerns _ _[specify]_ _, and arises from events that occurred _ _[date]_ _. That suit is thus totally unrelated to the matter of ABC Co. v XYZ Corp. Still, this Firm's representation of STU Corp. in the Superior Court action might raise an apparent conflict with our representation of XYZ Corp. in the Superior Court action in that Firm would be representing XYZ Corp. in one action and representing a client adverse to XYZ Corp. in another.

This letter will confirm our conversation of _ _[date]_ _, in which you advised that XYZ Corp. waives the conflict described above, and has no objection to Firm's representation of STU Corp. in the Superior Court action. Please sign the duplicate original of this letter in the place indicated below and return it in the enclosed stamped, addressed envelope at your earliest convenience. Thank you for your courtesy and cooperation in this matter.

Very truly yours,

Re: _ _[Case name]_ _
Dear _ _[name of officer of XYZ Corp.]_ _:

This letter concerns this firm's representation of you and XYZ Corp. in connection with _ _[describe specific nature of litigation, e.g., a claim by HIJ Co. under a contract dated _ _ _ _ _ _]_ _. We understand, as you do, that the activities of XYZ during 2001 relating to this matter in which you may have been involved, or may have obtained knowledge as an officer of XYZ Co., are, along with other events, subjects of the HIJ lawsuit now pending.

We know of no conflict of interest between you and XYZ that would disqualify us from representing both you and XYZ. Based on the information we have, we believe that your interests and XYZ's interests are united in this matter. If we learn of facts that establish a conflict, or if we are convinced that such a conflict is imminent, we will advise you immediately and suggest that you retain separate counsel. We do not think it likely, based on what we know now, that such a conflict will develop.

You should understand that information disclosed by you relating to this matter may be shared by this firm with XYZ. If it later develops that your and XYZ's interests conflict in this matter, such disclosed information might be used in a way that would assist XYZ.

[Optional]

If such a conflict should develop, XYZ has authorized us, based on the facts we know, to tell you that XYZ will pay the reasonable fees and expenses of competent counsel hired to represent you separately. This firm would continue to represent XYZ.

[Continue]

At your and XYZ's request, and without expense to you, because XYZ will pay all of our fees and moneys expended in your behalf, we have agreed to represent both you and XYZ in connection with this litigation on the foregoing terms.

If the foregoing is acceptable, we are pleased to represent you and ask that you sign and return a copy of this letter to us at your earliest convenience. A return envelope is enclosed for that purpose.

Very truly yours,

I. INTRODUCTION

§3.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses representation agreements between attorneys and clients. Attorney fees are an integral part of representation agreements and warrant special care and attention.

Because of the great body of law involving fee agreements, the chapter concentrates on the rules applicable to various fee arrangements. See §§3.3-3.21. Listed briefly in checklist form are the types of optional matters that the attorney may wish to include in a client's representation agreement. See §3.21. The major fee types (e.g., contingent, fixed, retainer, hourly) are discussed in §§3.22-3.36.

Except when there are statutory restrictions, attorneys may negotiate a combination of fee types in a single agreement. See §§3.37-3.43 (limitations on ability to negotiate fees). The forms in §§3.44-3.47 illustrate different types of representation agreements. For additional forms, see Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007). For discussion of fee disputes when either the attorney or the client is alleged to have breached the representation agreement, see chap 5. On changes in representation, see chap 4.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.2 B. Governing Law

The general rule for fee agreements is that, absent statutory constraint, the measure and mode of an attorney's compensation is left to the agreement, express or implied, of the parties. CCP §1021. However, statutes substantially limit this general rule, as do case law, ethics, public policy, and rules of professional conduct.

In particular, most agreements between California attorneys and their clients are governed by Bus & P C §§6146-6149. Other statutes also limit the fee arrangements in certain types of cases. See §§3.37-3.43 (limitations on ability to negotiate fees).

II. FEE AND REPRESENTATION AGREEMENTS

§3.3 A. Basic Rules

Generally, contract law governs the validity and enforceability of written, oral, or implied fee agreements. Certain contracts, however, entered into when the attorney's ability to negotiate fees is restricted by statute or ethical rule, can be repudiated by the client, leaving the attorney without an action for damages and entitled only to recover in quantum meruit. Bus & P C §6147(b). See §§3.37-3.43. Practitioners vary in their methods for setting fees, measuring fees, and determining when fees are payable and in what amounts, and in the conditions that must be met in order to make a fee payable.

Although the terms "fee agreements" and "representation agreements" are often used interchangeably, representation agreements must also meet other statutory requirements in addition to specifying the fee arrangement agreed on by attorney and client (e.g., a written description of the general nature of the legal services to be provided).

For discussion of fee agreements, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.29-5.31, 6.40 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

1. When Written Agreement Required

§3.4 a. Contingent Fees

Contingent fee agreements must normally be in writing to be enforceable, except those for the recovery of workers' compensation benefits or certain merchants' claims. Bus & P C §§6147-6147.5. Now, Bus & P C §6147 covers all clients, not just plaintiffs. Before §6147 was amended, the court in Franklin v Appel (1992) 8 CA4th 875, 10 CR2d 759, had construed it to apply only to plaintiffs in litigation matters.

In addition to a description of the contingencies entitling the attorney to a fee, the agreement must specify such matters as the fee rate agreed on, how the costs will affect the fee and the client's recovery, and a statement that the fee is negotiable. Bus & P C §6147. Additional requirements must be met for a medical malpractice claim. See Bus & P C §§6146-6147. See §§3.20A-3.20C, 3.23-3.24.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.5 b. Other Types of Fees

With limited exceptions (see §§3.7-3.13), representation agreements for noncontingent fee agreements must be in writing and contain any bases of compensation, including hourly rates, statutory fees, or flat fees, and other standard rates, including fees and charges applicable to the case. Bus & P C §6148(a)(1). See §3.29 (billing requirements).

PRACTICE TIP: Counsel should be sure to have a written agreement with a client. If a fee dispute arises over terms, an oral agreement is dependent on the memories of the parties and the accuracy with which they describe them. When a dispute involves a written fee agreement, even though the care with which it was drafted and its applicability to the services rendered may be tested, the original expectations of the parties are more likely to be protected. In multiparty cases, a written agreement also serves the function of identifying the client whom the attorney is representing.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.6 c. Effect of Failure to Have Written Agreement

The failure to have a written fee agreement when required by Bus & P C §6147 (contingent fee agreements) or Bus & P C §6148 (all other written fee agreements) renders the fee agreement voidable at the client's option. If the agreement is voided by the client, the attorney is entitled to collect a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §§6147(b), 6148(c). Furthermore, an oral agreement is subject to a 2-year statute of limitations (CCP §339), as opposed to the 4-year limitation period applicable to written instruments (CCP §337). See Iverson, Yoakum, Papiano & Hatch v Berwald (1999) 76 CA4th 990, 90 CR2d 665.

In a lawsuit over fees or fee arbitration, the attorney's proof will generally support the argument that the fees agreed on were recognized by both parties as reasonable. A presumption of undue influence often arises, however, in a dispute between attorney and client over fees when the agreement is entered into during the fiduciary relationship. The proof then requires an independent showing that the transaction was fair and entered into voluntarily by the client with full knowledge of the facts. See Gleason v Klamer (1980) 103 CA3d 782, 787, 163 CR 483. Failure to overcome a presumption of undue influence requires an independent showing of a reasonable fee to which the attorney is entitled. See chap 5.

§3.7 a. Total Costs and Fees Under $1000

When it is reasonably foreseeable that the total expense to the client, adding fees and costs, will not exceed $1000, a written fee agreement is not required. Bus & P C §6148(a).

§3.8 b. Claims Between Merchants

Claims between merchants (as described in Com C §2104) arising from the sale or lease of goods, services rendered, or money lent for use in conducting a business or profession do not require written fee agreements if the merchant contracting for the services employs ten or more individuals. Fees for these services, in the absence of a written fee agreement, are limited to those in Bus & P C §6147.5. Generally, these fees range from 13 to 20 percent of the amount collected.

§3.9 c. Emergencies

When foreseeable prejudice to the rights or interests of a client present an emergency need for legal services, or when a writing is otherwise impracticable, the requirement of a written fee agreement does not apply. Bus & P C §6148(d)(1).

§3.10 d. Similar Services Paid for by Client

When an agreement on fees can be implied by the fact that the attorney previously rendered services of the same general kind and the client paid for them, a written fee agreement is not required. Bus & P C §6148(d)(2).

§3.11 e. Client's Written Waiver of Bus & P C §6148

If, after full disclosure of Bus & P C §6148, the client knowingly states in writing that a written fee agreement is not required, the requirement is dispensed with. Bus & P C §6148(d)(3).

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.12 f. Agreements Made Before January 1, 1987

If an oral fee agreement was entered into before January 1, 1987, and was otherwise enforceable, it remains so. See Bus & P C §6148(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.13 g. Corporation as Client

It is not necessary to have a written fee agreement with a corporate client. Bus & P C §6148(d)(4). This fact does not excuse the requirement of a written fee agreement if the attorney accepts work on a contingency fee basis. Bus & P C §6147.

PRACTICE TIP: Be cautious in assuming that a particular case falls under a recognized exception. Have a written fee agreement to simplify later disputes. If it is impossible to begin the case with a written agreement, put the fee arrangement in writing as soon as practicable.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.14 B. Confidentiality

A written fee agreement is deemed a confidential communication between client and attorney. Bus & P C §6149. The attorney has a duty, even "at every peril to himself or herself to preserve the secrets, of his or her client." Bus & P C §6068(e)(1). Despite §6068(e)(1), an attorney may, but need not, reveal confidential information relating to the representation of a client to the extent that the attorney reasonably believes the disclosure is necessary to prevent a criminal act that is likely to result in death of, or substantial bodily harm to, an individual. Bus & P C §6068(e)(2).

The agreement is privileged against disclosure in evidence (Evid C §952) unless it is relevant to the issue of a breach by the attorney or client of a duty arising from their relationship (Evid C §958).

© The Regents of the University of California

C. Form of Agreement

§3.15 1. Contract or Letter

A fee agreement can be put in letter form, confirming the understanding between attorney and client. This approach makes for an informal tone and may be suited to a client for whom many matters are handled or to one who might be intimidated by a lengthy or complicated contract. The client must date and sign the letter to show concurrence with its terms.

The agreement between attorney and client may be a contract tailored to the individual client through the inclusion (or omission) of separable paragraphs. These paragraphs can be assembled into one document shortly before the document is signed. Many attorneys who prefer the contract form feel it impresses the client with the seriousness of the relationship and can be useful later in resolving any client dissatisfaction or misunderstanding. See sample form in §§3.44-3.45.

Some attorneys prefer a preprinted contract, particularly in contingent fee cases, so that it is clear to the client that all clients are being treated similarly. It is usually considered good practice to leave blanks for the contingent fee percentages to be filled in before the client signs the contract, to help demonstrate, if necessary in a later fee dispute, that the rates were negotiated rather than set by the attorney. See Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007) for examples of preprinted contracts.

§3.16 2. General Nature of Legal Services

The general nature of the legal services to be provided to the client (Bus & P C §6148(a)(2)) and the respective responsibilities of the attorney and client in performing the agreement (Bus & P C §6148(a)(3)) must also be in writing.

§3.17 3. Duplicate Copy of Signed Contract

At the time the contract is entered into, the attorney must give the client or the client's guardian or representative a duplicate copy of the signed contract. Bus & P C §6148(a).

§3.18 4. Develop Written Forms That Can Be Adapted

To give attorney-client agreements the attention they require, the practitioner should develop a variety of appropriate forms and procedures in advance. Agreement forms should be readily adaptable to the majority of the cases the attorney is likely to handle. Whether the attorney prefers the agreement to be in letter or contract form, the terms may be thought out and drafted beforehand for the law practice as a whole. It is then merely a matter of choosing the proper combination of clauses or filling in the blanks as appropriate for the particular client and case. For attorneys whose practices lend themselves to preprinted forms, several variations may also be prepared ahead of time. See samples of terms and agreement forms in Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007).

§3.19 D. Disclosure of Professional Liability Insurance

Attorneys practicing in California who know or should know that they do not have professional liability insurance must inform clients of this fact in writing at the time of engagement. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-410. Disclosure is required whenever it is reasonably foreseeable that the attorney's legal representation of the client will exceed 4 hours. This disclosure must be made to both new clients and returning clients who have new matters to address.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/3 Representation Agreements/§3.20 E. Income Tax Issues

§3.20 E. Income Tax Issues

The United States Supreme Court has held that when a litigant's recovery constitutes income, the litigant's income includes the portion of the recovery paid to the attorney as a contingent fee. Commissioner v Banks (2005) 543 US 426, 160 L Ed 2d 859, 866, 125 S Ct 826. See also Sinyard v Commissioner (9th Cir 2001) 268 F3d 756; Benci-Woodward v Commissioner (9th Cir 2000) 219 F3d 941; Coady v Commissioner (9th Cir 2000) 213 F3d 1187. In Banks, the Supreme Court agreed with the Commissioner that a contingent fee agreement "should be viewed as an anticipatory assignment to the attorney of a portion of the client's income from any litigation recovery." Banks, 160 L Ed 2d at 869. Anticipatory assignments are ineffective as exclusions from income. See Lucas v Earl (1930) 281 US 111, 114, 74 L Ed 731, 50 S Ct 241; Helvering v Horst (1940) 311 US 112, 85 L Ed 75, 61 S Ct 144; Commissioner v Sunnen (1948) 333 US 591, 604, 92 L Ed 898, 68 S Ct 715. Although in Banks the plaintiff brought his claims under federal statutes that authorize fee awards, he settled his case and paid his attorneys according to a private contingent fee contract, thus the Supreme Court declined to address court-awarded fees or attorney fees awarded under a fee-shifting statute.

Even if the taxpayer reports the fees as income, they are usually deductible as miscellaneous itemized deductions. IRC §67(b). In Sinyard, however, the income from the judgment made the plaintiff-taxpayers subject to the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) provisions of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC §§55-59). Because miscellaneous deductions are not allowable in computing AMT liability (IRC §56(b)(1)(A)(i)), the taxpayers had to pay tax on the entire amount of their recovery, including fees and costs, with no offsetting deduction. Sinyard v Commissioner (9th Cir 2001) 268 F3d 756, 759.

The Sinyards were members of a class age-discrimination action in which the class members agreed to pay their lawyers one-third of their recovery. The case settled with a lump-sum recovery of $35 mil lion, allocated one-third to taxable wage loss, one-third to nontaxable personal injury recovery, and one-third to attorney fees. The Ninth Circuit, citing the fee-shifting provisions of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA) (29 USC §§621-634), which holds that the right to attorney fees belongs to the client, not the attorney, held that the fees were taxable income to the Sinyards, even though the check was paid directly to the attorneys. Sinyard, 268 F3d at 757.

A California Supreme Court case, Flannery v Prentice (2001) 26 C4th 572, 575, 110 CR2d 809, may offer a counterargument in certain circumstances not addressed by the Banks opinion. In Flannery, the California Supreme Court held that, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary between attorney and client, the attorney owns any fee awarded under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (Govt C §§12900-12996). Flannery v Prentice, supra; Govt C §12965(b). Because the client has no ownership interest in attorney fees awarded under a California fee-shifting provision, an argument can be made that the fee award is not income to the client. See IRC §61(a). For further discussion, see Pearl, Flannery v Prentice*: Shifting Attitudes Toward Fee Agreements and Fee Shifting Statutes*, 23 CEB Civ Litigation Rep 220 (Nov. 2001).

It may therefore be advisable for the plaintiff's attorney to:

- Ascertain whether a new or prospective client's claim will result in a taxable recovery;
- Ascertain whether an attorney fees award will have undesirable tax consequences for the client, e.g., if the AMT will apply to the client's financial situation; and
- Advise the client of the importance of obtaining advice on the matter from a tax practitioner. For example, it may be advantageous to explore the possibility of a structured settlement that may spread the recovery over more than one tax year or to allocate portions of the settlement recovery to nonincome items such as injunctive relief or damages for physical injury, if possible.

It is uncertain whether the issues in federal court tax cases can be resolved by contract or even by a dispositive ruling on state law. Flannery does suggest a contractual solution to the attorney fee issue at least for fees awarded under a California fee-shifting statute. Thus, the attorney might include a clause in the fee agreement stating that any statutory fees belong to the attorney. In Banks, however, the Supreme Court stated that the attorney-client relationship is fundamentally that of principal-agent, thus the portion of the recovery paid to the attorney is not excludable from the client's gross income despite language in the attorney-client contract or any state laws that purport to confer special rights or to provide the attorney with a security interest in a contingency fee. Banks, 160 L Ed 2d at 871.

This possible solution, however, does not resolve the problem of lump-sum settlements. One approach might be to have the lump-sum settlement deposited into the client's trust fund account and the attorney to pay himself or herself the amount of the fees, while paying the remainder to the client. This method may not avoid income taxation of the attorney fees, however, because Sinyard involved attorney fees that were paid directly from the defendants to the attorneys. Sinyard involved a federal fee-shifting statute that stated that the right to claim attorney fees belonged to the clients, not the attorneys, which may not be the case with fees awarded under a California fee-shifting statute similar to the situation in Flannery v Prentice, supra. See Sinyard, 268 F3d at 757. Commissioner v Banks, supra, does not address fee-shifting statutes.

F. Attorney's Lien

A lien is a charge imposed on specific property to make it security for the performance of an act. CC §2872. An attorney's lien on the client's recovery in a lawsuit can be created by express contract or implied from retainer agreement provisions showing that the attorney is to look to the recovery to pay his or her fees and costs. Gilman v Dalby (2009) 176 CA4th 606, 616 n1, 98 CR3d 231.

The attorney may file a notice of lien in the pending action (Hansen v Jacobsen (1986) 186 CA3d 350, 355, 230 CR 580), which the parties and the subsequent attorney should honor. If they do not, the attorney must ordinarily bring an independent action to establish the amount of the lien and to enforce it. Brown v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 320, 9 CR3d 912. See Gilman v Dalby (2009) 176 CA4th 606, 619, 98 CR3d 231 (attorney's lien had priority over medical lien, regardless of which was first in time); Waltrip v Kimberlin (2008) 164 CA4th 517, 525, 79 CR3d 460 (attorney lien had priority over bank lien). See also Siciliano v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1976) 62 CA3d 745, 133 CR 376 (attorney stated cause of action against insurer for interference with prospective economic advantage, when an insurer paid money to attorney's former client with knowledge of attorney's contractual lien).

When the client is a minor or a person with a disability (as defined in Prob C §3603), the attorney need not file a notice of lien or bring another action to enforce his or her lien. See Prob C §§3600-3605 (regulating actions involving minors and persons with disabilities). Under Prob C §3601(a), the court making judgment or approving a settlement in such an action is required to order the payment of reasonable attorney fees (and other expenses) from the money or other property that is to be paid to the minor or person with a disability in the action. Thus, when the client is a minor and former counsel files a lien in the underlying action, it is proper for the court making judgment or approving a settlement to determine the reasonable amount of attorney fees. Curtis v Estate of Fagan (2000) 82 CA4th 270, 276, 98 CR2d 84.

An attorney who abandons a case has no right to a lien. Hensel v Cohen (1984) 155 CA3d 563, 202 CR 85 (attorney withdrew without good cause and thus was not entitled to lien or fees in contingency fee case).

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.20B 2. Agreeing to Lien

The attorney may negotiate additional clauses in any fee agreement in an attempt to provide for alternative arrangements for fees and costs if the client discharges the attorney before recovery. See, e.g., Fee Agreement Forms Manual §1.38 (2d ed Cal CEB 2007) (attorney's lien on recovery); Weiss v Marcus (1975) 51 CA3d 590, 124 CR 297 (lien survives attorney's discharge by client; attorney entitled to reasonable value of services rendered before discharge).

A lien may also be implied in the absence of a formal lien clause when the fee agreement indicates that the attorney fees will be paid out of any judgment obtained in the case. See Gilman v Dalby (2009) 176 CA4th 606, 616 n1, 98 CR3d 231; Hansen v Jacobsen (1986) 186 CA3d 350, 230 CR 580; Cetenko v United Cal. Bank (1982) 30 C3d 528, 531, 179 CR 902. No lien can be claimed, however, if a valid contract does not exist (see Isrin v Superior Court (1965) 63 C2d 153, 45 CR 320) or because the attorney performed services in the case. Trimble v Steinfeldt (1986) 178 CA3d 646, 224 CR 195 (lawyer who was never attorney of record and had no contract with client not entitled to lien).

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney who has been discharged should file a notice of lien in the pending action. Doing so will usually prevent the plaintiff from bypassing the lien securing a former attorney's fees because the defendant or insurer, once put on notice of the lien, will generally make a settlement payment payable to the client and the present attorney as well as the former attorney. See Siciliano v Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1976) 62 CA3d 745, 756, 133 CR 376 (money should be held until agreement reached on how it should be divided or until one party brings independent action for declaratory relief).

§3.20C 3. Ethical Requirements

An attorney's lien creates a right adverse to the client and, as such, is subject to the requirements of Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300, which requires that an attorney who wants to obtain a lien must explain the transaction fully, offer fair and reasonable terms, provide a copy of the agreement, give the client the opportunity to seek independent counsel, and secure the client's written consent. Fletcher v Davis (2004) 33 C4th 61, 14 CR3d 58. Although Fletcher involved an hourly fee agreement and the court did not address whether its holding applies to contingent fee cases, there is no reason to suppose it will not.

To comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300, the attorney's lien may be a separate paragraph in the representation agreement, which attorney and client both sign, or it may be a separate document, in which case it should be dated and signed by both attorney and client. See §§3.44-3.45 for examples of lien clauses integrated into fee agreements and §3.48 for an example of a separate lien agreement document.

§3.21 G. Optional Terms

Drafting a fee agreement offers an opportunity to reach an understanding on matters that might eventually prove troublesome. Many of the optional terms that can be incorporated into a representation agreement require information that assists in establishing good client relations. Drafted samples of such optional terms can be found in Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007).

The following lists possible additional provisions that the attorney might incorporate into a representation agreement:

- Attorney's right to withdraw (see chap 4);
- Client's right to discharge attorney (see chap 4);
- Client's fee obligation on discharge of attorney (see §3.24);
- Right to reasonable notice of discharge or withdrawal (see chap 4);
- Mandatory arbitration of fee disputes under Bus & P C §§6200-6206 (see chap 5);
- Solicitation of prompt correction of billing errors (see §3.29);
- Events that might affect the contingent fee agreement (e.g., recovery on settlement or after trial) (see §3.22);
- Right to withdraw trust funds held for fee/cost payments (see §3.27);
- Payment of forwarding or referral fee (see §3.35); and
- Late charges, interest, or discounts (see §3.34).

III. TYPES OF FEES

§3.22 A. Contingent Fee

Contingent fee agreements call for payment of attorney fees only on the happening of a specific event. Commonly, the event is the recovery of damages for a client in a personal injury matter, but a contingency could be agreed on for other types of claims unless barred on public policy grounds (e.g., family law cases; see §3.40).

Because a contingent fee payment is uncertain as to the time and amount of payment, and because there is no certainty of payment, the agreement may call for greater compensation than would ordinarily be considered reasonable. Estate of Raphael (1951) 103 CA2d 792, 796, 230 P2d 436.

Contingent fee agreements take many forms. For example, different percentages may apply to different parts of the recovery (a lower percentage on amounts above $100,000) or at the point in which recovery is obtained (a higher percentage after the case has gone to trial, a lower percentage if recovery is the result of settlement negotiations). An agreement may also combine an hourly fee to a maximum amount or a contingency fee, whichever is greater. The agreement may obligate the client, the attorney, or both to pay costs (client up to a certain amount, then attorney to advance costs). See sample form in §3.44.

A contingent fee agreement to represent a client that must be in writing (see §3.4) must contain, in addition to a description of the contingencies entitling the attorney to a fee:

- The fee agreed on;
- A statement of the client's obligation, if any, to pay fees for related matters not covered by the contingent fee agreement; and
- If not a medical malpractice claim, a statement that the fee is not set by law, but is negotiable (see §3.4) (if a medical malpractice claim, see §3.23).

A duplicate copy of the contingent fee agreement must be provided to the client at the time the agreement is made, signed by both attorney and client or the client's guardian or representative. Bus & P C §6147.

PRACTICE TIP: Specify in the fee agreement whether the client is to pay costs, and that, in the event of withdrawal or discharge by the client, costs are payable "on demand," if the attorney has agreed to advance costs.

For discussion of attorney fees, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.29-5.38 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

§3.23 1. Medical Malpractice Cases

The fee agreement for a plaintiff's medical malpractice claim must state that the rates in Bus & P C §6146 are maximum fee rates, which are subject to negotiation for lower rates. Bus & P C §6147(a)(5). The maximum limits are 40 percent for the first $50,000 recovered, 33-1/3 percent of the next $50,000, and 25 percent for the next $500,000. Attorney fees are limited to 15 percent for any amounts recovered exceeding $600,000. These limitations apply whether recovery is by settlement, arbitration, or judgment.

Special rules apply to the method of calculating the fee in a medical malpractice case in which periodic payments are awarded to the client. See Bus & P C §6146(b) (court must take total value of periodic payments based on plaintiff's projected life expectancy to compute total award from which attorney fees are calculated).

In a case that joins claims that are and are not based on medical malpractice, the limitations under §6146 apply only to the recovery attributable to the medical malpractice. If the case is settled without specifying the theory of recovery, the §6146 limitations do not apply at all. Waters v Bourhis (1985) 40 C3d 424, 437, 220 CR 666.

A client may not waive the §6146 fee limits (Fineberg v Harney & Moore (1989) 207 CA3d 1049, 255 CR 299), and the court may not award extraordinary fees exceeding those limits (Hathaway v Baldwin Park Community Hosp. (1986) 186 CA3d 1247, 231 CR 334). An attorney who charges an unlawful fee by obtaining a waiver of the §6146 limits may be liable for malpractice (Schultz v Harney (1994) 27 CA4th 1611, 33 CR2d 276) and may be subject to disciplinary proceedings (see, e.g., In re Harney (1955) 3 Cal State Bar Ct Rep 266).

PRACTICE TIP: Attach a copy of Bus & P C §6146 to any fee agreement involving a medical malpractice claim. In the event of a fee dispute, this will ensure that strong evidence can be offered to prove that the client was informed that the rates were maximum limits that could be negotiated.

§3.24 2. "Reasonable Fee" If Agreement Voided

Failure to comply with any provision of Bus & P C §6147 renders the agreement voidable at the client's option. If the client chooses to void the agreement, the attorney will be entitled to collect a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §6147(b); Alderman v Hamilton (1988) 205 CA3d 1033, 252 CR 845. See Martino v Denevi (1986) 182 CA3d 553, 227 CR 354 (expert opinion by other lawyers as to what is "reasonable fee" may be presented, but attorney's own testimony as to time worked is sufficient evidence to support award of attorney fees).

There is a measure of fragility inherent in a contingent fee agreement because it must comply with all the provisions of Bus & P C §6147 and because the client can repudiate the agreement and seek other counsel before the contingency occurs. Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 790, 100 CR 385 (attorney-client relationship requires that employment be terminable at will of client, with or without cause; such discharge is not a breach of contract). See discussion in chap 4.

The attorney is entitled to a "reasonable fee" when the contingency occurs, however, in either the case of noncompliance with the fee agreement statute (Bus & P C §6147(b)) or the client's discharge of the attorney (6 C3d at 792). An attorney who abandons a case is not entitled to a fee. See Hensel v Cohen (1984) 155 CA3d 563, 202 CR 85 (attorney withdrew without good cause and was thus not entitled to lien or fees in contingency fee case).

B. Retainer

§3.26 1. Nonrefundable, Not Credited on Fee

A retainer fee is generally considered to be the act by which a client engages an attorney to manage the client's cause and to secure the attorney's services. See Hart v Spaulding (1850) 1 C 213.

A true retainer is a nonrefundable payment to commit an attorney to represent a client in a specific matter or series of matters; it does not compensate the attorney for services to be rendered. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(D)(2); Knight v Russ (1888) 77 C 410, 412, 19 P 698, 699.

For discussion of retainers and attorney fees, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.29-5.38 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.27 2. Refundable, Less Fees Earned

Many retainer fees are in reality deposits to secure payment for present and future fees earned on an hourly or other basis. In this sense, a retainer is generally considered a fund held in trust by the attorney.

The attorney deposits such a retainer in the client trust account, paying him- or herself as the fees are earned. If the fees charged do not exhaust the "retainer," the client is entitled to a return of the remaining funds. The right to withdraw fees as earned from the attorney's trust account is most likely implied but is best covered in the representation agreement.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.28 3. Nonrefundable: Minimum Fee

The nonrefundable minimum fee is a variation of the refundable retainer. This retainer prepays a certain agreed-on series of services, but if there is no need for all the services contemplated, the attorney is nevertheless entitled to the full retainer.

If, however, the fee for services exceeds the agreed-on amount, the client agrees to replenish the retainer or pay additional fees as earned and billed.

Nonrefundable minimum fees have been criticized because they might restrain the client's absolute right to discharge counsel (see chap 4) by imposing an impermissible economic burden on a client who wishes to do so.

C. Hourly or Other Noncontingent Fees

§3.29 1. Billing Requirements

The fee agreements statute requires that in any case not coming within the contingent fee provisions of Bus & P C §6147, any basis of compensation, including hourly rates, statutory fees, or flat fees, and other standard rates, fees, and charges applicable to the case must be detailed in the written representation agreement. A signed copy of the agreement must be given to the client. Bus & P C §6148.

When specific hourly rates are quoted, unilateral changes in those rates during representation are not permitted under an agreement that provides for payment of the firm's "regular hourly rates" without prior notice of the increased rates. Severson & Werson v Bolinger (1991) 235 CA3d 1569, 1 CR2d 531.

A bill must be furnished to the client within 10 days following the client's request, although the attorney need send a bill no more often than every 31 days. Bus & P C §6148(b). All bills for services rendered to a client must "clearly state the basis thereof," including:

- The amount, rate, basis for calculation, or other method of determining the attorney fees and costs; and
- The amount and nature of costs and expenses. Bus & P C §6148(b).

The extent to which one must go in order to "clearly state the basis thereof" has not been clarified by the courts. The more informative the billing, however, the less likely for it to fail to comply with the statute. The amount of any charges, e.g., for copying, office staff overtime, that are passed on to the client for more than actual cost should be specified. A suggested model of a fee agreement based on an hourly rate appears in §3.45.

Failure to comply with the billing requirements of the statute renders the representation agreement voidable at the election of the client. The attorney is then entitled to collect a reasonable fee for legal services. Bus & P C §6148(c).

For discussion of attorney fees, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.29-5.38 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

§3.30 2. Description of Legal Services

In addition to billing requirements (see §3.29), the representation agreement must describe the general nature of the legal services to be provided to the client. Bus & P C §6148(a)(2).

EXAMPLE: Compliance in some agreements will be ensured by a simple agreement, e.g., "Legal advice, including client conferences and telephone calls; research and drafting of partnership agreement for accountants."

When complex litigation is contemplated, there are no guidelines to the extent of description a reviewing court would find necessary in the event of a fee dispute. A reasonably informative description, however, referring to research, drafting of pleadings, matters of law, litigation, discovery, trial, negotiations in all aspects of the matter, and other acts necessary to manage the case properly would appear to constitute compliance. See sample agreements in Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007).

Attorney fees for services not contemplated when the representation agreement was executed may not be recoverable except on a quantum meruit basis. Bus & P C §6148(c). If the agreement calls for a flat or fixed fee, the unanticipated services are probably not compensable. If it becomes apparent that unanticipated attorney fees are necessary, the attorney should notify the client of the intent to bill for the services before they are rendered. See Lavenson v Wise (1901) 131 C 369, 375, 63 P 622; Baldie v Bank of America (1950) 97 CA2d 70, 73, 217 P2d 111. The attorney can prepare a letter agreement that describes the unexpected need for additional legal services and makes all necessary disclosures, along with the request that the client sign and return the letter if in agreement.

Failure to comply with the description provision of the statute renders the fee agreement voidable at the client's election. If declared void by the client, the attorney is nevertheless entitled to a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §6148(c).

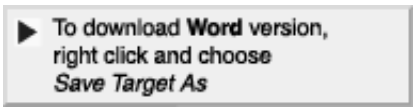
© The Regents of the University of California

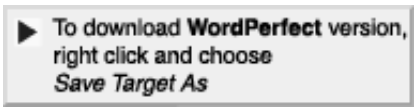
§3.31 3. Attorney's Responsibilities

The fee agreements statute requires that the attorney's responsibilities be described in writing. Bus & P C §6148(a)(3). It is advisable to itemize services that are not within the scope of the representation agreement and are specifically excluded, e.g., investigations, motions for new trial, appeals, retrial. See sample forms of agreement in §§3.44-3.45.

© The Regents of the University of California

§3.32 4. Client's Responsibilities





The fee agreements statute also requires a written description of the client's responsibilities. Bus & P C §6148(a)(3). The attorney can effectively use this requirement as an opportunity to impress on the client the importance of full and responsive cooperation.

A representation agreement might include the language:

Client shall be responsible for fully and accurately disclosing to attorney all facts necessary for a proper representation of client, keeping all appointments or promptly notifying attorney of the inability to do so, promptly responding to any inquiry from attorney, notifying the attorney of any changes in residence address, employment, or telephone numbers, paying all billings for fees and costs as agreed, promptly communicating with attorney, correcting errors in billing, or factual errors made by attorney that client is aware of, and attending all court appearances when requested.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/3 Representation Agreements/§3.33 D. Fixed or Flat Fee

§3.33 D. Fixed or Flat Fee

When the attorney agrees to represent a client in handling a matter for a single specified sum of money, without adjustment because of unanticipated ease or difficulty in the representation, the fee is generally referred to as a fixed or flat fee.

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney without experience in a specific area should be cautious of agreeing to flat fees. The task may take longer than anticipated; unexpected legal work may be necessary. Attorneys with practices limited to a certain type of case can sometimes handle them successfully on a flat fee basis, assuming that complicated cases will be offset by those that run smoothly. When agreeing to perform legal services for a flat fee, the attorney should carefully specify the scope of representation, spelling out the services to be performed and those not covered under the contract.

For discussion of attorney fees, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §§5.29-5.38 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/3 Representation Agreements/§3.34 E. Advance on Fees, Balance in Installments

§3.34 E. Advance on Fees, Balance in Installments

Special care should be taken in drafting a representation agreement that calls for an initial payment toward the fee and provides for installment payments of the balance. If the services to be rendered are consumer related (i.e., not for commercial or business purposes), and call for more than four installments, or for any interest or finance charge, or for a lower price if paid in cash, or with any bonus for cash, compliance with the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act will be required. See CC §§1801.1-1812.20. The Federal Truth in Lending Act (15 USC §§1601-1693) should be studied if a consumer-related credit transaction not falling within the state statute is attempted. See 15 USC §1666j(b).

Compliance with these provisions is so complex that most practitioners do not attempt to charge interest or finance charges in such cases. Similarly, late charges or delinquency charges can be troublesome. See CC §1803.6.

Agreements to provide services for commercial or business purposes payable in installments are subject to general contract and usury laws, but they may pose ethical considerations if interest, finance charges, or discounts are involved.

§3.35 F. Forwarding or Referral Fee

For a time, the practice of paying a referring attorney a forwarding or referral fee was considered to be contrary to public policy and agreements to make such payments were unenforceable. See Moran v Harris (1982) 131 CA3d 913, 916, 182 CR 519. Such agreements, although not actually encouraged, are no longer prohibited. 131 CA3d at 922. See form in §3.46. See also Dietz v Meisenheimer & Herron (2009) 177 CA4th 771, 798, 99 CR3d 464 (upholding trial court's rejection of defendant law firm's argument that referring attorney's suit to recover promised referral fee based on a share of any contingent recovery should be dismissed because it might require disclosure of attorney-client communications regarding fee agreement).

Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-200, an attorney cannot divide a fee for legal services with a lawyer who is not a partner, associate, or shareholder with the attorney unless:

- The client has given written consent after full disclosure stating that a division of fees will be made and giving the terms of the division; and
- The total fee charged by all attorneys is not unconscionable and not increased due to the fee-dividing provision.

The last sentence of Rule 2-200(B) reads:

> A member's offering of or giving a gift or gratuity to any lawyer who has made a recommendation resulting in the employment of the member or the member's law firm, shall not of itself violate this rule, provided that the gift or gratuity was not offered in consideration of any promise, agreement, or understanding that such a gift or gratuity would be forthcoming or that referrals would be made or encouraged in the future.

In Moran v Harris, supra, the court said:

> Our expressed views should not be interpreted as an encouragement of referral fee agreements. Nevertheless, there is considerable distance between prohibition and encouragement. That distance may be the "breathing space" necessary to accommodate both the public nature of the legal profession and commercial milieu within which it must survive.

A fee-sharing agreement that does not comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-200 is unenforceable. Margolin v Shemaria (2000) 85 CA4th 891, 102 CR2d 502. In Mink v Maccabee (2004) 121 CA4th 835, 17 CR3d 486, the court held that Rule 2-200 requires only that the client's written consent be obtained before any division of fees. Thus, although it is preferable that written consent be obtained early in the process, the rule does not invalidate a written consent as long as it is obtained before any division of fees. Further, Rule 2-200 does not require that any fee-splitting agreement between attorneys be in writing. 121 CA4th at 838.

Rule 2-200 is not limited to fees paid to a referring attorney, but applies also to an agreement between attorneys who actually worked on a case. If the attorneys do not obtain their client's written consent to their fee-sharing agreement, it is not enforceable; however, an attorney may be entitled to quantum meruit. Huskinson & Brown, LLP v Wolf (2004) 32 C4th 453, 9 CR3d 693 (in absence of valid written client consent to share fees, law firm may still recover in quantum meruit for reasonable value of services rendered); Chambers v Kay (2002) 29 C4th 142, 148, 126 CR2d 536.

§3.36 G. Fees to Associate Counsel

California Rules of Professional Conduct 2-200 imposes client written disclosure and consent requirements when an agreement divides a fee with an attorney who is not a partner, associate, or shareholder of the client's attorney. See §3.36. In some cases, the applicability of the written disclosure and consent requirements may turn on whether an outside attorney is an "associate" of the attorney sharing the fee. Rule 2-200 does not define "associate." Courts, however, have looked for interpretation to Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-100(B)(4), which defines an associate as "an employee or fellow employee who is employed as an lawyer." Sims v Charness (2001) 86 CA4th 884, 890, 103 CR2d 619, disapproved on other grounds in Chambers v Kay (2002) 29 C4th 142, 154 n7, 126 CR2d 536.

In Sims, the court noted that there was nothing in the history of Rule 2-200 indicating it was targeted at compensation arrangements made on a nonreferral basis, involving outside lawyers functioning on a particular matter essentially on the same basis as an employee of a law office. The California Supreme Court reached a contrary conclusion, however, in Chambers v Kay, supra, holding that Rule 2-200(A)(1) was binding on an attorney who sought to divide contingent fees from the successful prosecution of a client's lawsuit against third parties without written client consent. The supreme court acknowledged that the primary aim of Rule 2-200 is to address concerns over referral fees, but found that the rule, as interpreted by California State Bar Formal Ethics Opinion No. 1994-138, is not limited to such arrangements. 29 C4th at 154.

A fee-sharing agreement that does not comply with Rule 2-200 is unenforceable. Margolin v Shemaria (2000) 85 CA4th 891, 102 CR2d 502. An attorney, however, may be entitled to a recovery in quantum meruit against another attorney with whom the fee-sharing agreement was made. Huskinson & Brown, LLP v Wolf (2004) 32 C4th 453, 9 CR3d 693. If the client did not request services from the attorney, the attorney may not recover in quantum meruit from the client. Strong v Beydoun (2008) 166 CA4th 1398, 1403, 83 CR3d 632.

IV. LIMITATIONS ON ABILITY TO AGREE ON FEES

§3.37 A. Fees Set or Limited by Statute

In many instances the ability to negotiate attorney fees is prohibited or limited by statute. Examples include:

- Probate proceedings. Attorney fees in a probate proceeding are strictly statutory and do not arise from contract. Estate of Lee (1981) 124 CA3d 687, 693, 177 CR 229. See Prob C §§10800, 10810, 13660, and, with respect to estate administrations begun before July 1, 1991, former Prob C §§900, 910. An attorney may agree to charge, or to receive, less than the amount permitted by statute.
- Indigent defendants. Attorney fees for counsel assigned to represent indigent criminal defendants are set by the trial court (Pen C §987.2) or by the court of appeals in appellate matters (Pen C §1241).
- Judicial foreclosures. Attorney fees in judicial foreclosure matters are set by the trial court, regardless of any contrary provision in the mortgage or deed of trust. CCP §730.
- Workers' compensation. Attorney fees for representation in Workers' Compensation Appeals Board matters are set by the Appeals Board (Lab C §5801) and by the Court or Appeals Board in third party matters (Lab C §3860(f)). However, fee agreements for a reasonable amount will be enforced if the amount agreed on coincides with the Appeals Board's determination of a reasonable fee. Lab C §4906.
- Contingent fees under federal law. A representation agreement with a plaintiff under the Federal Tort Claims Act calling for a contingent fee in excess of 20 percent of any compromise, award, or settlement, or more than 25 percent of any judgment is not only void, but is an offense punishable by a fine of $2000 and/or one year in jail. 28 USC §2678. See also, e.g., 42 USC §406 (maximum fee for representing plaintiff in Social Security Administration proceedings is 25 percent of past due benefits; attempt to collect fee in excess of maximum is misdemeanor).
- Contingent fees in medical malpractice cases. Maximum fee limits have been set under Bus & P C §6146. See discussion in §3.23.

NOTE: Numerous statutes limit attorney fees, and it is beyond the scope of this chapter to describe all situations in which fee agreement restrictions exist. When accepting employment in an unfamiliar area of law, attorneys should investigate possible limitations on the ability to negotiate fees.

For discussion of statutory attorney fees, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business §5.38 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/3 Representation Agreements/§3.38 B. Fees Subject to Court Approval

§3.38 B. Fees Subject to Court Approval

Court approval of fee agreements is required in some instances, e.g., the compromise of the claim of a minor or a person with a disability (as defined by Prob C §3603). Prob C §3601(a). Attorney fees for representing a special administrator are fixed by the court (Prob C §8547) as are fees for extraordinary services rendered by a special administrator (Prob C §8547(d)).

Court approval or Appeals Board approval of an attorney fee agreement is also required in workers' compensation third party actions (Lab C §3860(f)), while workers' compensation matters require the approval of the Appeals Board as to any fee agreement between attorney and client (Lab C §5801).

NOTE: These examples of fee agreements requiring approval of some tribunal or governing body are not exhaustive, but merely illustrative of fee agreements that are enforceable only after review and approval.

C. Illegal Fee Contracts

§3.39 1. Against Public Policy or Violate Ethical Standards

Fee agreements that are prohibited generally fall in the area of con tracts that are against public policy or that violate ethical standards or rules. Fee agreements that are contrary to public policy, even if not explicitly in violation of an ethical canon or rule, will not be enforced. See, e.g., Moran v Harris (1982) 131 CA3d 913, 919, 182 CR 519.

Fee agreements that violate California State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct are not enforceable. The Rules include prohibitions against:

- Charging an unconscionable fee (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-200);
- Advising a client to violate the law (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-210);
- Communicating with jurors before trial (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-320(A));
- Failing to act competently (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110);
- Agreeing to share fees between an attorney and a nonattorney (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 1-320) (McIntosh v Mills (2004) 121 CA4th 333, 17 CR3d 66);
- Limiting liability to a client (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-400); and
- Representing an interest adverse to a client or former client (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300, 3-310).

The attorney may recover fees earned before the violation of a rule of conduct, the amount to be determined by the court, most likely on a quantum meruit basis. Jeffry v Pounds (1977) 67 CA3d 6, 12, 136 CR 373. Even if a client benefits from representation that violates a rule of conduct or that is unethical, the client can successfully resist payment for that representation under the fee agreement. Goldstein v Lees (1975) 46 CA3d 614, 618, 120 CR 253.

Attorneys should be alert to the many examples of "illegal" and thus unenforceable fee agreements, in family law dissolution and child custody cases, as well as other areas.

§3.40 2. Family Law Cases

Contingent fees in family law matters were formerly prohibited as offering "a strong inducement … to induce and advise the dissolution of the marriage." Newman v Freitas (1900) 129 C 283, 292, 61 P 907. This relatively simple evaluation has been modified by later judicial examinations of the public policies involved: "There should not be a dogmatic condemnation of every contingent fee in a divorce action regardless of distinguishable circumstances." Krieger v Bulpitt (1953) 40 C2d 97, 100, 251 P2d 673.

Each family law contingent fee agreement is now individually scrutinized, using guidelines similar to those in Krieger v Bulpitt, supra. Although no longer universally condemned, "the contingency fee contract is still considered a problematic area for the family law practitioner." Martin, Contingency Fees and Family Law, 5 Cal Law 23 (July 1985). Payment of fees of 45 percent of the amount of child support collected contingent on obtaining a child support award in a paternity action has been held to be contrary to public policy and the agreement unenforceable. Kyne v Kyne (1943) 60 CA2d 326, 329, 140 P2d 886. It was not only the large amount of the fee in Kyne that caused disapproval of the contingent fee agreement; the major deciding factor was the concept of paying the fee out of the money not specifically awarded as attorney fees but designated by the court as the amount required to support the child. 60 CA2d at 331.

§3.41 3. Other Examples

A void contingent fee agreement calling for an unconscionable fee cannot be made enforceable by the client's ratification. Blattman v Gadd (1931) 112 CA 76, 86, 296 P 681. A contingent fee agreement with the personal representative of a decedent's estate was ruled contrary to public policy and unenforceable in Estate of Hastings (1952) 108 CA2d 713, 717, 239 P2d 684 (superseded by Prob C §10811(c)). A representation agreement for professional services secured by any attorney in California through the services of a runner or capper is void. Bus & P C §6154.

§3.42 D. Representation Agreements Acquiring an Adverse Interest

Fee agreements for services adverse to a former client are unenforceable. Goldstein v Lees (1975) 46 CA3d 614, 618, 120 CR 253. The rule is designed to protect the former confidential relationship. When the attorney's employment is adverse to a former client but bears no relationship to confidential information acquired by the attorneys from that relationship, the rule does not apply. Ward v Superior Court (1977) 70 CA3d 23, 34, 138 CR 532; In re Charles Willie L. (1976) 63 CA3d 760, 763, 132 CR 840. For further discussion, see generally chap 2 (conflicts of interest).

The rule applies not only when an attorney will be called on to use confidential information obtained from a former client, but also when the attorney could be called on to use the information. Ward, 70 CA3d at 31. Similarly, the attorney is deemed to have an interest adverse to the client when the attorney has reason to believe that the duties owed to the client will conflict with duties owed to a third person. Hammett v McIntyre (1952) 114 CA2d 148, 153, 249 P2d 885.

All dealings between an attorney and a client that are beneficial to the attorney will be closely scrutinized. Hawk v State Bar (1988) 45 C3d 589, 598, 247 CR 599. For example, the securing of a debt owed for attorney fees by the delivery to the attorney of a deed of trust to the client's property is the acquisition of an interest adverse to the client. Ames v State Bar (1973) 8 C3d 910, 918, 106 CR 489. The ability to summarily extinguish the client's interest in property makes the acquisition adverse. Hawk v State Bar (1988) 45 C3d 589, 599, 247 CR 599. Similarly, an attorney who secures payment of hourly fees through a charging lien against client's future recovery has acquired an interest adverse to the client and must comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300. The attorney must explain the transaction fully, offer fair and reasonable terms, provide a copy of the agreement, give the client the opportunity to seek independent counsel, and secure the client's written consent. Fletcher v Davis (2004) 33 C4th 61, 14 CR3d 58. See §3.48 for a sample Attorney's Lien Agreement.

When an attorney negotiates a separate settlement of damages and attorney fees, there is an inherent conflict of interest between the client's and the attorney's interests. Such a settlement must be approved by an impartial tribunal, which is required to decide whether the settlement negotiations reflect a fair and reasonable balancing of the conflicting interests. Ramirez v Sturdevant (1994) 21 CA4th 904, 26 CR2d 554. The settlement can be reviewed by the court at a settlement conference or on the motion of a party.

Whenever the issue of a possible conflict is raised, there will be a presumption of injury to the former client from the attempted representation of conflicting interests. Earl Scheib, Inc. v Superior Court (1967) 253 CA2d 703, 709, 61 CR 386. Consent to an attorney representing interests adverse to a former client will not be presumed merely from the client's delay in raising the objection. Kraus v Davis (1970) 6 CA3d 484, 85 CR 846. Nor does absence of injury to the client preclude a determination that the attorney violated the rule against acquiring an adverse interest. Ames v State Bar (1973) 8 C3d 910, 106 CR 489. On rules for mandatory and permissive withdrawal, and factors that must be considered for protecting the client, see chap 4.

§3.43 E. Unconscionable Fees

California Rules of Professional Conduct 4-200 prohibits agreeing to, charging, or collecting an unconscionable fee. The rule defines an unconscionable fee, and sets forth 11 areas of inquiry to determine whether a fee is unconscionable. Former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-107(B) defined an unconscionable fee as "so exorbitant and wholly disproportionate to the services performed as to shock the conscience of lawyers of ordinary prudence practicing in the same community." The factors to be considered under the present rule (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-200) include:

- The amount of the fee in proportion to the value of the services performed;
- The relative sophistication of the attorney and the client;
- The novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill needed to render proper legal service;
- If apparent to the client, the likelihood that the attorney's acceptance of employment will preclude other employment;
- The amount involved and the results obtained;
- The time limitations imposed by the client or the circumstances;
- The nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;
- The experience, reputation, and ability of the attorney performing the service;
- Whether the fee is fixed or contingent;
- The time and labor required; and
- Whether the client gave informed consent to the fee agreement.

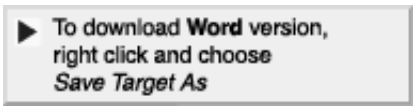
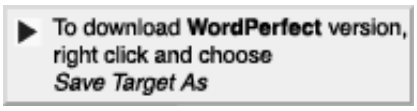
V. FORMS

§3.44 A. Form: Sample Contingent Fee Agreement





LEGAL SERVICES AGREEMENT

1. IDENTIFICATION OF PARTIES. This agreement, executed in duplicate with each party receiving an executed original, is made between JEAN R. ROGERS, hereafter referred to as "Attorney," and MARIA GONZALES, hereafter referred to as "Client."

This agreement is required by Business and Professions Code §6147 and is intended to fulfill the requirements of that section.

2. LEGAL SERVICES TO BE PROVIDED. The legal services to be provided by Attorney to Client are as follows: Representation of Client with respect to her claim for damages for personal injuries arising out of the automobile accident of September 15, 1992.

3. LEGAL SERVICES SPECIFICALLY EXCLUDED. Legal services that are not to be provided by Attorney under this agreement specifically include, but are not limited to, the following: Representation with respect to (a) any claim for property damage arising out of the accident, (b) any dispute with a medical care provider about amounts owed by Client for services received, or (c) any appeal in which Client is an appellant from a court judgment on Client's personal injury claim (i.e., Attorney's obligation to represent Client under this agreement extends to an appeal only if Client is a respondent).

If Client wishes that Attorney provide any legal services not to be provided under this agreement, a separate written agreement between Attorney and Client will be required.

4. RESPONSIBILITIES OF ATTORNEY AND CLIENT. Attorney will perform the legal services called for under this agreement, keep Client informed of progress and developments, and respond promptly to Client's inquiries and communications. Client will be truthful and cooperative with Attorney and keep Attorney reasonably informed of developments and of Client's address, telephone number, and whereabouts.

5. ATTORNEY FEES. The amount Attorney will receive for attorney fees for the legal services to be provided under this agreement will be:

(a) _ _ percent of the net recovery if the recovery is obtained before the filing of a lawsuit;

(b) _ _ percent of the net recovery if the recovery is obtained after the filing of a lawsuit but before the arbitration hearing, settlement conference, or trial, whichever occurs first;

(c) _ _ percent of the net recovery if the recovery is obtained at or after the arbitration hearing, settlement conference, or trial, whichever occurs first, but before the filing of Client's brief in an appeal from a court judgment; and

(d) _ _ percent of the net recovery if the recovery is obtained after the filing of Client's brief in an appeal from a court judgment.

"Net recovery" means the amount remaining after the total amount received (whether by settlement, arbitration award, or court judgment) has been reduced by the sum of all "costs," as defined in Paragraph 7 of this agreement.

If payment of all or any part of the amount to be received will be deferred (such as in the case of an annuity, a structured settlement, or periodic payments), the "total amount received," for purposes of calculating the attorney fees, will be the initial lump-sum payment plus the present value, as of the time of the settlement, final arbitration award, or final judgment, of the payments to be received thereafter. The attorney fees will be paid out of the initial lump-sum payment. If the payment is insufficient to pay the attorney fees in full, the balance will be paid from subsequent payments of the recovery before any distribution to Client.

Client is informed that this Attorney fee is not set by law but rather is negotiable between the Attorney and the Client.

If there is no net recovery, Attorney will receive no attorney fees.

Any attorney fees awarded from the other party are the property of the attorney and should be paid directly to the attorney.

6. DIVISION OF ATTORNEY FEES. Attorney will divide the attorney fees received for the legal services provided under this agreement with Margaret Andover. The terms of the division are as follows: Attorney will pay to Margaret Andover one third of all attorney fees received. Client is informed that, under the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California, such a division may be made only with the Client's written consent after a full disclosure to the Client in writing that a division of fees will be made and of the terms of such division. Client hereby expressly consents to the division.

7. COSTS. Attorney will advance all "costs" in connection with Attorney's representation of Client under this agreement. Attorney will be reimbursed out of the recovery before any distribution of fees to Attorney or any distribution to Client. If there is no recovery, or the recovery is insufficient to reimburse Attorney in full for costs advanced, Attorney will bear the loss. Costs include, but are not limited to, court filing fees, deposition costs, expert fees and expenses, investigation costs, long-distance telephone charges, messenger service fees, photocopying expenses, and process server fees. Items that are not to be considered costs, and that must be paid by Client without being either advanced or contributed to by Attorney, include, but are not limited to, Client's medical expenses and other parties' costs, if any, that Client is ultimately required to pay.

8. REPRESENTATION OF ADVERSE INTERESTS. Client is informed that the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California require the Client's informed written consent before an Attorney may begin or continue to represent the Client when the attorney has or had a relationship with another party interested in the subject matter of the Attorney's proposed representation of the client. Attorney is not aware of any relationship with any other party interested in the subject matter of Attorney's services for Client under this agreement. As long as Attorney's services for Client continue under this agreement, Attorney will not agree to provide legal services for any such party without Client's prior written consent.

9. SETTLEMENT. Attorney will not settle Client's claim without the approval of Client, who will have the absolute right to accept or reject any settlement. Attorney will notify Client promptly of the terms of any settlement offer received by Attorney.

10. ATTORNEY'S LIEN. By signing and returning this fee agreement to Attorney, Client grants Attorney a lien for all unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced on all claims and causes of action that are the subject of Attorney's representation of Client under this agreement and on all proceeds of any recovery obtained, whether by settlement, award, order, or judgment.

Client is aware, and acknowledges, that this lien may significantly impair Client's interest because Attorney may be able to delay payment of any recovery or settlement funds to Client until any disputes with Attorney about unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced have been resolved. Client acknowledges that Client has been advised to seek independent legal advice about granting Attorney this lien and has had a reasonable opportunity to do so. By signing this fee agreement and returning it to Attorney, Client represents that Client has either obtained legal advice about this lien or has decided that it was unnecessary to do so.

11. DISCHARGE OF ATTORNEY. Client may discharge Attorney at any time by written notice effective when received by Attorney. Unless specifically agreed by Attorney and Client, Attorney will provide no further services and advance no further costs on Client's behalf after receipt of the notice. If Attorney is Client's attorney of record in any proceeding, Client will execute and return a substitution-of-attorney form immediately on its receipt from Attorney. Despite the discharge, Client will be obligated to pay Attorney from the recovery a reasonable attorney fee for all services provided and to reimburse Attorney from the recovery for all costs advanced. If there is no recovery, or the recovery is insufficient to reimburse Attorney in full for costs advanced, Attorney will bear the loss.

12. WITHDRAWAL OF ATTORNEY. Attorney may withdraw at any time as permitted under the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California. The circumstances under which the Rules permit such withdrawal include, but are not limited to, the following: (a) The client consents, and (b) the client's conduct renders it unreasonably difficult for the attorney to carry out the employment effectively. Despite Attorney's withdrawal, Client will be obligated to pay Attorney from the recovery a reasonable attorney fee for all services provided, and to reimburse Attorney from the recovery for all costs advanced, before the withdrawal. If there is no recovery, or the recovery is insufficient to reimburse Attorney in full for costs advanced, Attorney will bear the loss.

13. RELEASE OF CLIENT'S PAPERS AND PROPERTY. At the termination of services under this agreement, Attorney will release promptly to Client on request all of Client's papers and property. "Client's papers and property" include correspondence, deposition transcripts, exhibits, experts' reports, legal documents, physical evidence, and other items reasonably necessary to Client's representation, whether Client has paid for them or not.

14. DISCLAIMER OF GUARANTY. Although Attorney may offer an opinion about possible results regarding the subject matter of this agreement, Attorney cannot guarantee any particular result. Client acknowledges that Attorney has made no promises about the outcome and that any opinion offered by Attorney in the future will not constitute a guaranty.

15. ENTIRE AGREEMENT. This agreement contains the entire agreement of the parties. No other agreement, statement, or promise made on or before the effective date of this agreement will be binding on the parties.

16. SEVERABILITY IN EVENT OF PARTIAL INVALIDITY. If any provision of this agreement is held in whole or in part to be unenforceable for any reason, the remainder of that provision and of the entire agreement will be severable and remain in effect.

17. MODIFICATION BY SUBSEQUENT AGREEMENT. This agreement may be modified by subsequent agreement of the parties only by an instrument in writing signed by both of them or an oral agreement to the extent that the parties carry it out.

18. ARBITRATION OF FEE DISPUTE. If a dispute arises between Attorney and Client regarding attorney fees under this agreement and Attorney files suit in any court other than small claims court, Client will have the right to stay that suit by timely electing to arbitrate the dispute under Business and Professions Code §§6200-6206, in which event Attorney must submit the matter to such arbitration.

19. ATTORNEY FEES AND COSTS IN ACTION ON AGREEMENT. The prevailing party in any action or proceeding to enforce any provision of this agreement will be awarded reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred in that action or proceeding or in efforts to negotiate the matter.

20. EFFECTIVE DATE OF AGREEMENT. The effective date of this agreement will be the date when, having been executed by Client, one copy of the agreement is received by Attorney, as long as the copy is received on or before February 1, 2009, or Attorney accepts late receipt.

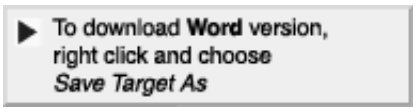
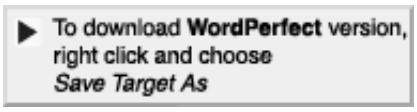
§3.45 B. Form: Sample Fee Agreement Based on Hourly Rate for Services





LEGAL SERVICES AGREEMENT

1. IDENTIFICATION OF PARTIES. This agreement, executed in triplicate with each party receiving an executed original, is made between LAW OFFICES OF LYN SMITH, hereafter referred to as "Law Firm," and ARTHUR C. LEWIS and BARBARA K. LEWIS, hereafter referred to as "Clients."

This agreement is required by Business and Professions Code §6148 and is intended to fulfill the requirements of that section.

2. LEGAL SERVICES TO BE PROVIDED. The legal services to be provided by Law Firm to Clients are as follows: Representation of Clients through judgment in Blew v Redd, et al., Green County Superior Court No. 12345.

3. RESPONSIBILITIES OF LAW FIRM AND CLIENTS. Law Firm will perform the legal services called for under this agreement, keep Clients informed of progress and developments, and respond promptly to Clients' inquiries and communications. Clients will be truthful and cooperative with Law Firm; keep Law Firm reasonably informed of developments and of Clients' address, telephone numbers, and whereabouts; and timely make any payments required by this agreement.

4. ATTORNEY FEES. Clients will pay Law Firm for attorney fees for the legal services provided under this agreement at the respective hourly rates of the individuals providing the services. The rates fall within the following ranges: $_ _ _ _ _ _ to $_ _ _ _ _ _ per hour for partners, $_ _ _ _ _ _ to $_ _ _ _ _ _ per hour for associates, $_ _ _ _ _ _ to $_ _ _ _ _ _ per hour for law clerks, and $_ _ _ _ _ _ to $_ _ _ _ _ _ per hour for paralegals. Law Firm will charge in increments of one tenth of an hour, rounded off for each particular activity to the nearest one tenth of an hour. The minimum time charged for any particular activity will be one tenth of an hour.

Law Firm will charge for all activities undertaken in providing legal services to Clients under this agreement, including, but not limited to, the following: conferences, court sessions, and depositions (preparation and participation); correspondence and legal documents (review and preparation); legal research; and telephone conversations. When two or more of Law Firm's personnel work on the matter at the same time, such as in conferences between them, the hourly rate of each will be charged.

If, while this agreement is in effect, Law Firm increases the hourly rates being charged to clients generally for attorney fees, that increase may be applied to fees incurred under this agreement, but only with respect to services provided 30 days or more after written notice of the increase is mailed to Clients. If Clients choose not to consent to the increased rates, Clients may terminate Law Firm's services under this agreement by written notice effective when received by Law Firm, as long as Clients execute and return a substitution-of-attorney form immediately on its receipt from Law Firm if Law Firm is Clients' attorney of record in any proceeding.

Clients acknowledge that Law Firm has made no promises about the total amount of attorney fees to be incurred by Clients under this agreement.

5. COSTS. Clients will pay all "costs" in connection with Law Firm's representation of Clients under this agreement. Costs will be advanced by Law Firm and then billed to Clients unless the costs can be met out of client deposits that are applicable toward costs. Costs include, but are not limited to, court filing fees, deposition costs, expert fees and expenses, investigation costs, long-distance telephone charges, messenger service fees, photocopying expenses, and process server fees.

6. DEPOSIT FOR FEES. Clients will pay to Law Firm an initial deposit of $_ _ _ _ _ _, to be received by Law

Firm by _ _[date]_ _, and to be applied against attorney fees incurred by Clients. Of this amount, $_ _ _ _ _ _ is nonrefundable and $_ _ _ _ _ _ is refundable. The nonrefundable portion will be applied against attorney fees first. The refundable portion will be deposited by Law Firm in an interest-bearing trust account. Clients authorize Law Firm to withdraw the principal from the trust account to pay attorney fees in excess of the nonrefundable portion as they are incurred by Clients. Any interest earned will be paid to Client. If, at the termination of services under this agreement, the total amount incurred by Clients for attorney fees is less than the amount of the initial deposit, the difference, to a maximum of the refundable portion of the deposit, will be refunded to Clients.

Law Firm will notify Clients whenever the full amount of any deposit has been applied to attorney fees incurred by Clients. Within 15 days after each notification is mailed, Clients will pay to Law Firm an additional deposit in the same amount as the initial one. Deposit of such additional amounts and payment of any interest earned will be made in the same manner as for the refundable portion of the initial deposit. Clients authorize Law Firm to withdraw the principal from the trust account to pay attorney fees as they are incurred by Clients. Such additional deposits will be fully refundable. If, at the termination of services under this agreement, there have been two or more deposits and the total amount incurred by Clients for attorney fees is less than the total amount of all deposits, the difference will be refunded to Clients.

7. DEPOSIT FOR COSTS. Clients will pay to Law Firm an initial deposit of $_ _ _ _ _ _, to be received by Law Firm by _ _[date]_ _, and to be applied against costs incurred by Clients. This amount will be deposited by Law Firm in an interest-bearing trust account. Clients authorize Law Firm to withdraw the principal from the trust account to pay costs as they are incurred by Clients. Any interest earned will be paid to Clients. The initial deposit is refundable. If, at the termination of services under this agreement, the total amount incurred by Clients for costs is less than the amount of the initial deposit, the difference will be refunded to Clients.

Law Firm will notify Clients whenever the full amount of any deposit has been applied to costs incurred by Clients. Within 15 days after each notification is mailed, Clients will pay to Law Firm an additional deposit in the same amount, and to be applied in the same manner, as the initial one. Deposit of such additional amounts and payment of any interest earned will be made in the same manner as for the initial deposit. Clients authorize Law Firm to withdraw the principal from the trust account to pay costs as they are incurred by Clients. Such additional deposits will also be refundable. If, at the termination of services under this agreement, the total amount incurred by Clients for costs is less than the total amount of all deposits, the difference will be refunded to Clients.

8. STATEMENTS AND PAYMENTS. Law Firm will send Clients monthly statements indicating attorney fees and costs incurred and their basis, any amounts applied from deposits, and any current balance owed. If no attorney fees or costs are incurred for a particular month, or if they are minimal, the statement may be held and combined with that for the following month. Any balance must be paid in full within 30 days after the statement is mailed.

9. ATTORNEY'S LIEN. By signing and returning this fee agreement to Attorney, Client grants Attorney a lien for all unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced on all claims and causes of action that are the subject of Attorney's representation of Client under this agreement and on all proceeds of any recovery obtained, whether by settlement, award, order, or judgment.

Client is aware, and acknowledges, that this lien may significantly impair Client's interest because Attorney may be able to delay payment of any recovery or settlement funds to Client until any disputes with Attorney about unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced have been resolved. Client acknowledges that Client has been advised to seek independent legal advice about granting Attorney this lien and has had a reasonable opportunity to do so. By signing this fee agreement and returning it to Attorney, Client represents that Client has either obtained legal advice about this lien or has decided that it was unnecessary to do so.

10. EFFECTIVE DATE OF AGREEMENT. The effective date of this agreement will be the date when it is executed by the third of the parties to do so.

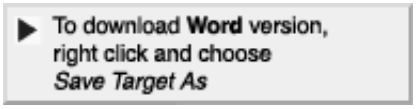
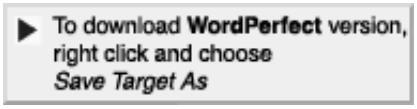
§3.48 E. Form: Attorney's Lien Agreement





ATTORNEY'S LIEN AGREEMENT

By signing and returning this lien agreement to Attorney, Client grants Attorney a lien for all unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced on all claims and causes of action that are the subject of Attorney's representation of Client under the written fee agreement executed between Client and Attorney on _ _[date]_ _ and on all proceeds of any recovery obtained, whether by settlement, award, order, or judgment.

Client is aware, and acknowledges, that this lien may significantly impair Client's interest because Attorney may be able to delay payment of any recovery or settlement funds to Client until any disputes with Attorney about unpaid attorney fees and costs advanced have been resolved. Client acknowledges that Client has been advised to seek independent legal advice about granting Attorney this lien and has had a reasonable opportunity to do so. By signing this lien agreement and returning it to Attorney, Client represents that Client has either obtained legal advice about this lien or has decided that it was unnecessary to do so.

The foregoing is agreed to by:

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ _____
Client

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ _____
Client

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ _____
LAW OFFICES OF _ _[name of law firm]_ _
By _ _[name of attorney]_ _

Copies: Duplicate signed copies for attorney and client.

Comment: For discussion of attorney's liens, see §3.20A. To comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-300, the attorney's lien may be a separate paragraph in the representation agreement, which attorney and client both sign, or it may be a separate document, in which case it should be dated and signed by both attorney and client. See §§3.44-3.45 for attorney lien clauses integrated into contingent and hourly fee agreement forms.

I. INTRODUCTION

§4.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses changes in representation, with and without the client's consent, in civil proceedings in California courts. Becoming an attorney of record, substitution, and association of attorneys are discussed in §§4.3-4.18. The rules on permissive and mandatory withdrawal are discussed in §§4.19-4.35. Abandonment of client is discussed in §4.36. Changes in attorneys of record after the death, suspension, or disability of the former attorney are included in §§4.37-4.51, and motions for disqualification are discussed in §§4.52-4.54. For discussion of rules governing attorneys' conflicts of interest with clients, see chap 2.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.2 B. Governing Law

Substitution of attorneys is governed by CCP §284 (trial court), and by Cal Rules of Ct 8.36 (supreme court or court of appeal). An attorney's withdrawal is governed by Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700. Notice of cessation of law practice is governed by Bus & P C §6180, and the court's power to disqualify an attorney is based on CCP §128.

II. BECOMING ATTORNEY OF RECORD

§4.3 A. Initial Appearance in Action or Proceeding

In civil litigation, the attorney-client relationship is usually created by mutual agreement. See chap 3 (representation agreements). Often, however, the relationship is established by an insurer, employer, or other person or organization selecting and compensating the client's attorney. But see Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310 (prohibiting interference with attorney's independence or attorney-client relationship if compensation is received from anyone other than client).

In a lawsuit or legal proceeding, there are many points at which a lawyer will become the new "attorney of record" (e.g., after the death or disability of the original attorney). The act of becoming the attorney of record usually occurs when the attorney files the first pleading, petition, or notice of appearance for the client in a legal proceeding before a court, governmental body, administrative agency, or insurance company. If the former attorney had already initiated the action, the substitution of attorneys (see form in §4.55) is usually the document by which a subsequent attorney becomes the attorney of record.

However arranged, becoming the attorney of record establishes a relationship between court, client, and attorney. Once established, it is subject to control by the court, limiting in some circumstances the client's right to discharge the attorney, and modifying the attorney's right to withdraw from representation. It vests the attorney with presumed authority over the client's affairs to an extent the client may not have contemplated. See CCP §283 (attorney has authority to bind client in any step of action or proceeding and to receive money claimed by client).

A client's written delegation of authority to become the attorney of record in California courts is not generally required. "In the absence of statutory requirement that the authority shall be evidenced by writing, it is always presumed that an attorney appearing and acting for a party to a cause has authority to so do." Pacific Paving Co. v Vizelich (1903) 141 C 4, 8, 74 P 352.

Practice before certain tribunals may require a special declaration of appearance. For example, to practice before the Treasury Department, the Internal Revenue Service often requires a written declaration with specified information. See Treas Reg §§601.502(c), 601.503.

NOTE: An attorney who is unfamiliar with an agency or tribunal should inquire about any requirements that must be met in order to represent a client.

§4.4 B. Client's Right to Change Attorneys

The client has the absolute right and power to discharge the attorney at any time, with or without cause. CCP §284 (attorney in any action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before or after judgment or final determination). The client may hire another attorney or appear in propria persona. Because the attorney-client relationship is terminable at the will of the client, such a discharge is not a breach of contract. Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 791, 100 CR 385. On notice to other parties of a substitution of attorneys, see §4.6. On attorney's recovery of reasonable value of services rendered up to the time of discharge, see §4.13. For discussion of attorney's duties on termination of attorney client relationship, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

Thus, for example, although the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620) permits courts to impose procedural requirements in addition to those authorized by statute, it does not authorize a court to make rules that interfere with this right. See Hock v Superior Court (1990) 221 CA3d 670, 270 CR 579 (local court rule that prohibited consensual withdrawal or substitution of counsel after trial-setting conference without leave of court was void because it infringed on client's absolute right to discharge attorney under CCP §284(1)). On the trial delay reduction rules generally, see chap 40.

When the attorney is employed as in-house counsel, the employer's right to terminate the attorney-client relationship at will still exists, but exercising that right may subject the employer to liability for wrongful discharge. General Dynamics Corp. v Superior Court (1994) 7 C4th 1164, 32 CR2d 1. An in-house attorney may pursue a "just cause" contract claim in the same way as a nonattorney employee. A tort claim for retaliatory discharge may also be pursued, unless it cannot be established without breaching the attorney-client privilege. 7 C4th at 1170.

Government attorneys who exercise their employee rights under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (MMBA) (Govt C §§3500-3510) are exempt from the general rule that a client may discharge an attorney at will. Santa Clara County Counsel Attorneys Ass'n v Woodside (1994) 7 C4th 525, 28 CR2d 617. An attorney may not be terminated for engaging in protected activity under the MMBA.

III. SUBSTITUTION OF ATTORNEY

A. Substitution With Counsel's Consent

§4.5 1. Procedures

When both attorney and client agree to substitute another attorney, their consent must be filed with the clerk of the court in which the proceeding is pending or entered in the court's minutes. CCP §284.

This consent is a three-party agreement, in which the client substitutes the new attorney for the former attorney, the new attorney agrees to represent the client, and the former attorney consents to the substitution. The written substitution of attorney is often phrased as both a notice of substitution of attorney as well as the agreement and consent to the substitution, thus reducing the number of documents required. See forms in §§4.55-4.56.

A substitution of attorneys in the California Supreme Court or in a court of appeal is governed by the California Rules of Court. It is accomplished by filing and serving a stipulation in the reviewing court signed by the party represented and the new attorney. See Cal Rules of Ct 8.36(b). In all appeals and original proceedings related to a superior court proceeding, the party must also serve the superior court. Cal Rules of Ct 8.36(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.6 2. Notice to Other Parties

Notice of the substitution of attorneys must be sent to the "adverse party" (CCP §285) as well as any other attorneys of record and unrepresented parties (see CCP §1010).

It is not necessary to prepare a separate, formal notice. Notice of substitution is usually served by mailing a copy of the substitution. CCP §§1012-1013(a). The substitution should be titled so that its purpose is clear (e.g., substitution of plaintiff's attorney). See attorney-drafted form in §4.55. The optional Judicial Council Form MC-050 (Substitution of Attorney—Civil (Without Court Order)) in §4.56 may also be used.

If a party to the proceeding has not appeared, that party may have to be served personally or another method of service may have to be found. See, e.g., CCP §1011; discussion in chap 17 (service of process). When a party's default for failure to appear has been entered, no notice is required. CCP §§1010, 1014.

The original substitution must be filed with the court clerk along with a proof or acknowledgment of service on the other parties. If the substitution was made by oral consent entered in the minutes of the court, written notice must be served and filed, with proof of service on the parties. See CCP §§284-285, 1010.

Until notice of a change in representation is given, the adverse party must recognize the former attorney. CCP §285. However, the notice requirement is for the adverse party's benefit and may be waived by that party, either in writing or implicitly through the party's conduct. See Withers v Little (1880) 56 C 370, 372 (notice of substitution filed but not served on adverse party, whose acknowledgment of receipt of notice of appeal, signed by substituted attorney, waived objection to substitution). See also Livermore v Webb (1880) 56 C 489, 490.

NOTE: Irregularity in the substitution of attorney does not deprive the court of jurisdiction. Carrara v Carrara (1953) 121 CA2d 59, 62, 262 P2d 591.

B. Substitution Without Counsel's Consent

1. Client's Motion for Substitution

§4.7 a. Motion Generally Granted

If the attorney of record refuses to consent to a substitution of attorneys, the client must apply to the court for an order after giving notice of the motion to the attorney of record. CCP §284. Note that the attorney's failure to execute or explain nonexecution of a request for substitution of attorney is a factor considered by the State Bar in deciding whether disciplinary action is warranted. See, e.g., Conroy v State Bar (1991) 53 C3d 495, 280 CR 100.

A client's motion to discharge a former attorney and substitute a new attorney, with rare exceptions, is granted. A client has an absolute right to change attorneys (see §4.4), and "in the absence of any relation of the attorneys to the subject matter of the action," it is necessary only "to request such change in order to justify the court in making an order therefor." Scott v Superior Court (1928) 205 C 525, 527, 271 P 906.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.8 b. Denial Because Trial Imminent

When a party requests substitution of counsel at a time or under circumstances that will delay the trial, the court may deny the request. See CCP §128; Flynn v Fink (1923) 60 CA 670, 673, 213 P 716. See also Berger v Mantle (1936) 18 CA2d 245, 249, 63 P2d 335 (plaintiff and defendant not the only interested parties; court itself as arm of government in service to public can demand orderly and prompt disposition of case).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.9 c. Denial Because Attorney's Power Coupled With an Interest

In rare situations, when an attorney has a power coupled with an interest, the court will refuse to permit substitution. This inability of a client to discharge an attorney who has a power coupled with an interest in the subject matter of the litigation arises from agency law. See CC §2356. The interest in the action must be other than that arising from the attorney's employment. O'Connell v Superior Court (1935) 2 C2d 418, 421, 41 P2d 334 (contract created an interest only for reimbursement and compensation; attorney's interest was thus not "beneficial" with respect to subject matter of litigation and agency or power was revocable).

An attorney's interest in the fee, or a "lien" on the action for the attorney fee, or an assignment by the client of the cause of action to secure payment of the attorney fee, is not the sort of interest that bars discharge of the attorney. The mere expression "a power coupled with an interest" does not necessarily render the power irrevocable. Todd v Superior Court (1919) 181 C 406, 419, 184 P 684. However, "[t]he case would be quite different if, in addition to providing for reimbursements and compensation, the contract vested in the attorney in fact a definite share in ownership of the legacies." 181 C at 420.

It would be difficult for an attorney to create a power coupled with an interest in the client's cause unless it predates the attorney-client relationship or exists independently of the representation. For example, in Redevelopment Agency v Superior Court (1961) 195 CA2d 591, 16 CR 45, the San Francisco City Attorney was retained by the Redevelopment Agency to condemn land in San Francisco. The Redevelopment Agency's later motion to substitute counsel was denied because of the city's ongoing interest and financial involvement in the redevelopment project. Noting that the interest of the municipality preexisted the litigation, thus precluding the substitution of its attorney, the court stated that "the interest of the attorney necessary to preclude substitution must contain three elements: (1) the interest must be specific; (2) the interest must be in the subject matter of the litigation; and (3) the interest must be beneficial." 195 CA2d at 595.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.10 2. Former Counsel's Failure to Deliver Files

Occasionally, after being discharged, an attorney may refuse or fail to deliver the client's files to the client or the succeeding attorney of record. Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(D)(1), an attorney whose employment has terminated must at the client's request, subject to any protective order or nondisclosure agreement, promptly release the client's papers and property.

Rule 3-700(D)(1) defines "client papers and property" to include correspondence, pleadings, deposition transcripts, exhibits, physical evidence, experts' reports, and other items reasonably necessary to the client's representation, whether the client has paid for them or not. The work product of an attorney is the client's property whether or not the client has paid the attorney for his or her services. Weiss v Marcus (1975) 51 CA3d 590, 599, 124 CR 297. The physical file generated or maintained by the attorney is also treated as the client's property. Academy of Optometrists v Superior Court (1975) 51 CA3d 999, 1005, 124 CR 668.

For further discussion of attorney's duties upon termination of attorney client relationship, see Opening a Law Office: A Handbook for Starting Your Own Business, chap 6 (6th ed Cal CEB 2002).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.11 a. Retaining Lien Void

A possessory lien on the physical file or the work product generated or maintained by the former attorney is generally void. Such a lien is described in case law as a "retaining lien." For example, in Academy of Optometrists v Superior Court (1975) 51 CA3d 999, 124 CR 668, the attorney had a specific contract giving him the right to hold the client's file, including pleadings, depositions, and correspondence, until all fees were paid. The file material had no pecuniary value except for the information and exhibits necessary to prosecute the case. The court held that if the subject matter of an attorney's retaining lien is of no economic value, but is used only to extort disputed fees from the client, the lien is void and the files must be delivered to the client forthwith. 51 CA3d at 1006. A concurring opinion disagreed with the distinction, turning on the pecuniary value of the liened property, and relied instead on the attorney's ethical obligation to preserve the client's rights. 51 CA3d at 1007.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.12 b. Unearned Fees

The former attorney must also refund any unearned part of a fee paid in advance. However, a true retainer fee paid solely to ensure the attorney's availability need not be refunded. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(D)(2). For further discussion, see chap 3.

NOTE: The official discussion following Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700 states that the rule is intended neither to prohibit an attorney at his or her own expense from making and retaining copies of papers released to the client nor to prohibit a claim to recover the attorney's expenses in any subsequent legal proceeding. It is unclear what subsequent legal proceedings are intended by this discussion, but a lawsuit to recover attorney fees would be an example of a proceeding in which the attorney may seek recovery of the costs of duplicating the client's file.

C. Former Counsel's Right to Fees

§4.13 1. Reasonable Fees to Time of Discharge

An attorney who has been discharged by a client may still be entitled to reasonable fees up to the time of discharge. Salopek v Schoemann (1942) 20 C2d 150, 153, 124 P2d 21. An attorney employed under a contingent fee agreement who is discharged by the client may recover:

- A reasonable fee, based on quantum meruit, for time spent pursuing a recovery for the client, when the contingency occurs;
- The entire fee stated in the agreement if the attorney is discharged after the contingency has occurred or so near to its occurrence that the entire fee was the reasonable value of the services (as when the client fires the attorney on the courthouse steps then immediately enters into a settlement); or
- No fee if the attorney withdraws, having done no more than spend the time needed to reach a conclusion that the case is not worth pursuing.

See Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 787, 100 CR 385 (client's right to discharge attorney at any time); Joseph E. Di Loreto, Inc. v O'Neill (1991) 1 CA4th 149, 156, 1 CR2d 636 (attorney fired after verdict for client entitled to entire fee). See also Cal Pak Delivery, Inc. v United Parcel Serv. (1997) 52 CA4th 1, 16, 60 CR2d 207 (even attorney who is disqualified for offering to sell out his client may be able to recover attorney fees for services rendered before his misconduct). See generally chaps 3 (contingent fee agreements) and 5 (proving agreement and services performed; effect of attorney's unjustified withdrawal) and §4.36 (attorney's abandonment of client).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.14 2. Charging Lien Valid

In contrast to a "retaining lien" (see §4.9), a "charging lien" is a nonpossessory equitable right to satisfy the attorney's expenses and fees from the judgment recovered. Academy of Optometrists v Superior Court (1975) 51 CA3d 999, 1003, 124 CR 668. A charging lien may be freely created by contract on a cause of action, judgment, settlement, or amount due or to become due or paid, for fees and costs, and prevails over the subsequent attachment of a client's creditor. Haupt v Charlie's Kosher Mkt. (1941) 17 C2d 843, 845, 112 P2d 627.

The rationale for validating a charging lien is that a party should not be allowed to appropriate the entire judgment in his or her favor without paying for the attorney's services in obtaining the judgment. See Tracy v Ringole (1927) 87 CA 549, 551, 262 P 73 (attorney is equitable assignee of judgment even though action in which judgment was obtained was for a tort in itself unassignable).

The client's discharge of the attorney does not dissolve the lien, which continues to exist in order to secure payment of a fee. The lien may be enforced by an independent action, but only to the extent of the reasonable value of the services rendered. Weiss v Marcus (1975) 51 CA3d 590, 598, 124 CR 297.

Although permissible, it is not necessary to file a notice of lien in the pending action. Hansen v Jacobsen (1986) 186 CA3d 350, 358, 230 CR 580. A notice of lien does not change the rule that an independent action is necessary to enforce the lien, nor does it empower the court to award or decide a fee in the client's action. Hendricks v Superior Court (1961) 197 CA2d 586, 17 CR 364. But see Curtis v Estate of Fagan (2000) 82 CA4th 270, 276, 98 CR2d 84 (Prob C §3601(a) authorizes court to determine and award fee in action on behalf of minor or person with disability as defined in Prob C §3603).

The lien's priority is generally determined by the time of its creation, e.g., the date of the original contract, taking precedence over liens created later. CC §2897; Cetenko v United Cal. Bank (1982) 30 C3d 528, 531, 179 CR 902. If the ultimate recovery is insufficient to pay both the discharged and current attorneys, proportional recovery may be appropriate. Hansen v Jacobsen (1986) 186 CA3d 350, 356, 230 CR 580; Spires v American Bus Lines (1984) 158 CA3d 211, 216, 204 CR 531.

The mere fact that the representation agreement grants the attorney a one-third "lien" on a recovery, without expressly stating the fee, does not necessarily establish the fee to which the attorney is entitled. See, e.g., Gostin v State Farm Ins. Co. (1964) 224 CA2d 319, 326, 36 CR 596 (retrial necessary for evidence to resolve ambiguity about fee attorney was to receive). For further discussion of attorney's lien and sample language, see chap 3.

NOTE: The term "lien" is not absolutely necessary. In some instances, the existence of a lien may be a triable issue of fact, despite the absence of words such as "lien," or "assignment." See Gelfand, Greer, Popko & Miller v Shivener (1973) 30 CA3d 364, 105 CR 445.

IV. ASSOCIATION OF ATTORNEY

§4.15 A. Authority; Client's Consent Not Required

Once employed by a client, the attorney can associate other attorneys in handling the matter with or without the client's express authority. Raskin v Superior Court (1934) 138 CA 668, 33 P2d 35 (judicial notice taken of custom approved by California courts that attorneys employ other attorneys "to assist in legal work placed in their care, including appearances in court without the formality of being made attorneys of record").

If the attorney of record associates another attorney, it is up to them to divide the duties of conducting the case; unless the associated attorney claims to act as the sole attorney, no substitution of attorneys is necessary. Wells Fargo & Co. v City & County of San Francisco (1944) 25 C2d 37, 43, 152 P2d 625.

The association can be either a joint venture between the attorneys sharing the fees or an employment relationship, but not both. Bunn v Lucas, Pino & Lucas (1959) 172 CA2d 450, 465, 342 P2d 508. See also Ford v Freeman (1919) 40 CA 221, 227, 180 P 545.

WARNING: If a fee-splitting agreement between attorneys is made, the client must consent in writing after full written disclosure of the division of fees, which division may, but need not, be in proportion to the services performed by the attorneys, and the total fee charged must not be increased solely because of the fee division. See forms in chap 3.

The attorney's agreement with associated counsel for compensation does not obligate the client to payment without the client's authorization or ratification of the agreement to be obligated. Porter v Elizalde (1899) 125 C 204, 207, 57 P 899. For discussion of applicable rules of professional conduct and the problems involved in referral-participation fees, see chap 3.

Although the client's consent is not required, the attorney-client relationship may be better if counsel discusses the associated attorney's role in the case, particularly if work will be done over a long period of time by someone outside the immediate law firm.

§4.16 B. Notice of Association

If the associated counsel will take a substantial role in conducting the litigation, it is good practice, although not necessary, to file a notice of association. The notice should contain the name, mailing address, and telephone number of the associate counsel, and should be filed with the court and served on all attorneys of record.

Because the client's consent is not required, only the attorney of record need sign the notice. See form of association in §4.61.

C. Court Appearance by Out-of-State Attorney

§4.17 1. Procedures for Appearing as Counsel Pro Hac Vice

An attorney licensed to practice in another state, territory, or insular possession of the United States or in any United States federal court, but not licensed to practice in California, may apply to a California court for permission to represent a client in a pending matter. Cal Rules of Ct 9.40. See Daybreak Group, Inc. v Three Creeks Ranch (2008) 162 CA4th 37, 41, 75 CR3d 365 (Rule 9.40 only applies to persons, not law firms). If the application is granted, the out-of-state attorney is called counsel pro hac vice, who may appear in court "for this turn," i.e., for a particular occasion.

Rule 9.40 governs the procedures required to appear as counsel pro hac vice. For example, a verified application and notice of hearing must be filed in the court in which the matter is pending and served on all parties and the State Bar at its San Francisco office. The application must include specific information about the applicant's professional standing. See Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(d). A filing fee paid to the State Bar in an amount up to $50 is also required. Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(e).

An application addressed to the California Supreme Court or a court of appeal must comply with Cal Rules of Ct 8.54 (procedures for motions in the reviewing court). Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(c). However, the Supreme Court or a court of appeal may permit an attorney who is not a member of the State Bar, but who is licensed to practice in another jurisdiction and possesses special expertise in the particular field affected by the proceeding, to present argument without applying to appear as counsel pro hac vice. Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(g). See form in §4.62.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.18 2. Association of California Counsel as Attorney of Record Required

Counsel pro hac vice must have an active member of the State Bar associated as attorney of record. Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(a). See People v Cooks (1983) 141 CA3d 224, 290, 190 CR 211 ("the California attorney has a legal and ethical responsibility for seeing that the defendant, in a criminal case, is effectively represented. A perfunctory association, with no regular appearance at trial, would not fulfill that obligation").

A person is not eligible to appear as counsel pro hac vice if he or she is:

- A California resident;
- Regularly employed in California; or
- Regularly engaged in substantial business, professional, or other activities in California.

Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(a).

Without special circumstances, the application must be denied to anyone who has repeatedly appeared as counsel pro hac vice. Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(b). See Walter E. Heller W., Inc. v Superior Court (1980) 111 CA3d 706, 168 CR 785 (one previous appearance was not cause to deny counsel's application). See also Cal Rules of Ct 9.40(d)(5) (application must list court and action in which applicant has filed similar application in preceding 2 years and state whether application was granted).

V. ATTORNEY'S WITHDRAWAL

§4.19 A. Duties to Client

An attorney must not withdraw from employment until:

- Reasonable steps have been taken to avoid reasonably foreseeable prejudice to the client's rights;
- Sufficient time has been given to the client to employ other counsel; and
- The withdrawing attorney has complied with all applicable laws and rules.

Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(A)(2).

The official discussion to Rule 3-700 adds: "What such [reasonable] steps would include, of course, will vary according to the circumstance. Absent special circumstances, 'reasonable steps' do not include providing additional services to the client once the successor counsel has been employed and rule 3-700(D) has been satisfied."

An attorney who has agreed to represent a client must withdraw from that representation in certain circumstances and may withdraw without the client's consent in other circumstances. See §§4.33-4.35 (grounds for withdrawal). Absent these circumstances, an attorney who discontinues representation of a client without the client's consent or without a court order relieving the attorney as counsel does so at the risk of liability to the client for any loss or injury caused by failure to act competently. See Lane v Storke (1909) 10 CA 347, 101 P 937. Abandonment of a client's interests or failure to act on the client's behalf are also grounds for disciplining the attorney. See §4.36 (attorney's abandonment of client).

Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(D), an attorney whose employment has been terminated must, subject to any protective order or nondisclosure agreement, promptly release to the client, at the client's request, any unearned fee advance as well as all client papers and property, including correspondence, pleadings, experts' reports, and the like. See discussion in §4.10.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.20 B. Withdrawal With Client's Consent

If a client consents to the attorney's withdrawal, a substitution of attorney is served and filed in the same manner as a substitution of attorney initiated by the client. See applicable discussion in §4.5. On notice requirements, see §4.6. Forms of notice and substitution appear in §§4.55-4.56.

Except for corporate clients, the client may be substituted in propria persona in the attorney's place, or another attorney may be substituted for the withdrawing attorney. On special rules for attorney's withdrawal when representing a corporation, see §4.32.

C. Attorney's Withdrawal Without Client's Consent

§4.21 1. Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel

If the client refuses to join with the attorney in signing a substitution of attorney form, substituting either another attorney or the client in propria persona, the withdrawing attorney must file a motion in the court in which he or she is attorney of record for an order to be relieved as counsel. CCP §284(2).

Although an attorney may not abandon a client or act in a way that prejudices a client's interest, an attorney is entitled to withdraw from representation without cause, with or without client consent. Ramirez v Sturdevant (1994) 21 CA4th 904, 915, 26 CR2d 554. In a pending matter, counsel's motion to withdraw over the client's objection requires court approval, but the court should not prevent counsel from withdrawing from the case if withdrawal can be accomplished without undue prejudice to the client. 21 CA4th at 915. But see Hodcarriers, Bldg. & Common Laborers Local v Miller (1966) 243 CA2d 391, 395, 52 CR 251 (trial court's authority under CCP §128 to oversee conduct and order of its proceedings permitted it to deny counsel's motion to withdraw because withdrawal would have prejudiced opponent).

NOTE: An attorney who withdraws as counsel over clients' opposition and without sufficient justification may not assert a quantum meruit claim against any settlement eventually obtained by the former clients. Rus, Miliband & Smith v Conkle & Olesten (2003) 113 CA4th 656, 672, 6 CR3d 612.

In Mossanen v Monfared (2000) 77 CA4th 1402, 1406, 92 CR2d 459, the trial court, aware that plaintiff (a minor) had not yet obtained substitute counsel, allowed counsel to withdraw on the same day that defendant filed a motion for summary judgment. This error (among others) left the plaintiff with no attorney to oppose a motion for summary judgment and required reversal of the judgment for the defendant. 77 CA4th at 1410. See related discussion in §4.8 (denial of motion for substitution due to imminence of trial).

On grounds for withdrawal from representation, see §§4.33-4.35 (mandatory, conditionally mandatory, and permissive withdrawal).

§4.23 (1) Notice of Motion

A notice of motion and motion to be relieved as counsel must be directed to the client. Counsel must use Notice of Motion and Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel—Civil (Judicial Council Form MC-051), reproduced in §4.64. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(a). A supporting memorandum is not required. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.24 (2) Declaration of Counsel

The motion to be relieved as counsel must be accompanied by a declaration stating in general terms, and without compromising the confidentiality of the attorney-client relationship, why counsel was unable to obtain the client's consent to the attorney's withdrawal. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(c). The Judicial Council has issued a mandatory form, Declaration in Support of Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel—Civil (Judicial Council Form MC-052), for the required declaration, which is reproduced in §4.65.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.25 (3) Service of Notice and Declaration

The notice of motion, the motion, the declaration, and the proposed order must be served on the client and on all other parties who have appeared in the case. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(d). The motion may be personally served or served by mail. See CCP §1013. If, however, the client is served by mail, the motion must be accompanied by a declaration showing that the service address is either the current or last known residence or business address of the client.

NOTE: In this context, a "current address" is one that has been confirmed within the last 30 days; a showing that the notice was sent to the client's last known address and was not returned by the post office is not sufficient to show that the address is current. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(d).

If the motion is sent to the client's last known address, the accompanying declaration must state that within 30 days after serving the motion the attorney made reasonable efforts to locate a more current address for the client but was unsuccessful. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(d).

When service is by mail, CCP §1011(b) (providing for various methods of serving the client if the address is unknown or the client cannot be located) applies. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(d). See also Cal Rules of Ct 3.252 (service on clerk when party's address is unknown). On service by mail, express mail, or, when permitted, by facsimile transmission, see chap 18.

§4.26 (4) Proposed Order

The proposed order must be prepared on the Order Granting Attorney's Motion to Be Relieved as Counsel (Judicial Council Form MC-053), reproduced in §4.66. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(e).

The proposed order must be lodged with the court and served on the client along with the moving papers. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.27 (5) Order

If the order is signed, a copy must be served on the client and on all parties who have appeared in the litigation. See CCP §285. The court may delay the effective date of the order until counsel files proof of service on the client with the court. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1362(e).

NOTE: Counsel must also comply with any applicable local rules of court that have not been preempted by the California Rules of Court (e.g., delay reduction rules). See Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, 2.100(a), discussed in chap 11. An attorney has a professional responsibility to be aware of such local rules. Moyal v Lanphear (1989) 208 CA3d 491, 256 CR 296.

§4.28 b. Appeals Pending in Superior Court Appellate Division

Withdrawal or substitution of attorneys in appeals pending in the superior court appellate division is effected by serving and filing a stipulation in the reviewing court, signed by the client, the withdrawing attorney, and any substituted attorney. Cal Rules of Ct 8.814.

If the client refuses to agree to the attorney's withdrawal, the attorney must apply to the reviewing court for an order to be relieved as counsel. Unless the court orders otherwise, service of the motion need be made only on the party and the attorneys directly affected by the motion. Cal Rules of Ct 8.814(c)(1).

The reviewing court clerk must notify the trial court of any withdrawal of attorneys. Cal Rules of Ct 8.814(c)(3).

Otherwise, following the procedures for a motion to be relieved as counsel in a trial court under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1326 should satisfy most reviewing courts. See §4.22 and forms in §§4.64-4.66. Attorneys should check local court rules for any additional requirements not preempted by Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, 2.100(a), discussed in chap 11.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/4 Changing Representation During Suit/§4.29 c. Matters Pending in Court of Appeal and Supreme Court

§4.29 c. Matters Pending in Court of Appeal and Supreme Court

Withdrawal or substitution of attorneys in appeals pending in the California Supreme Court or a court of appeal is accomplished by serving and filing a stipulation in the reviewing court, signed by the party represented and the new attorney. See Cal Rules of Ct 8.36(b). In all appeals and original proceedings related to a superior court proceeding, the party must also serve the superior court. Cal Rules of Ct 8.36(b). Otherwise, a motion for withdrawal or substitution must be made in the reviewing court as provided in Cal Rules of Ct 8.54, 8.57. Unless the reviewing court orders service on additional persons, service of the motion need be made only on the party represented and the attorneys directly affected by the motion. Cal Rules of Ct 8.36. The proof of service need not include the address of the party represented. But if the court grants the motion, the withdrawing attorney must promptly provide the court and the opposing party with the party's current or last known address and telephone number. Cal Rules of Ct 8.36(c)(2). See Cal Rules of Ct 8.54, 8.57 for additional filing and format requirements for the motion.

The motion is disposed of without further hearing after filing of opposition or expiration of the time for filing opposition. The reviewing court may, however, set the matter for hearing on its own motion or at the request of any party. Cal Rules of Ct 8.54(b). Failure of the adverse party to oppose a motion may be deemed a consent to the granting of the motion. See Cal Rules of Ct 8.54(c).

The reviewing court clerk must notify the trial court clerk, or the appellate court clerk in the case of review by the supreme court, of any substitution or withdrawal of attorney. Cal Rules of Ct 8.36. Counsel should review and comply with any applicable appellate court local rules not preempted by Cal Rules of Court 3.20, 2.100(a), (b), discussed in chap 11.

§4.30 d. Withdrawal When Publicly Funded Representation Reduced

Code of Civil Procedure §285.2 provides for a special situation in which there is a reduction in public funding of legal services to indigent clients. If the reduction materially impairs the agency attorney's ability to represent the client, the court, on its own motion or on the motion of the client or attorney, must permit the attorney's withdrawal if it is shown that:

- Public funding is inadequate;
- No alternative representation can be found; and
- All reasonable steps have been taken to reduce legal prejudice to the client.

If the motion for withdrawal is granted, the court may toll the running of any statute of limitations, filing requirement, mandatory dismissal statute, notice of appeal, or discovery requirement for up to 90 days. CCP §285.3. The court may also appoint any attorney, law firm, or professional corporation to represent the indigent client according to the guidelines in CCP §285.4.

§4.31 e. Withdrawal From Dissolution of Marriage Action

The attorney of record for a party in a dissolution of marriage case may withdraw after entry of final judgment without the client's consent or a court order. CCP §285.1. This section reflects the continuing nature of dissolution matters and offers the attorney a simple means of terminating an otherwise continuing responsibility. See Reynolds v Reynolds (1943) 21 C2d 580, 134 P2d 251.

Withdrawal can be effected in this situation by filing a notice of withdrawal, mailing a copy to the client at the client's last known address, and serving the notice on the adverse party. The notice must give the date of entry of the final decree or judgment, the client's last known address, and state that the attorney withdraws as attorney of record. CCP §285.1. For form, see §4.67.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.32 f. Withdrawal From Representation of Corporation

Counsel attempting to withdraw from representing a corporation may experience difficulties if no attorney will be substituted in his or her place. Except in small claims court, a corporation cannot appear in propria persona in civil litigation. See CCP §116.540(b); Paradise v Nowlin (1948) 86 CA2d 897, 195 P2d 867.

Withdrawal of counsel may be permitted when the corporation is unwilling or uncooperative, which has the effect of forcing the corporation to choose between forfeiting its rights or obtaining new counsel. Counsel facing this situation should be prepared to show that the corporation has been unwilling or uncooperative in obtaining new counsel.

Counsel seeking to be relieved from representation of a corporation must use the mandatory forms adopted by the Judicial Council. For discussion, see §4.22. The Judicial Council's mandatory form for notice of motion and motion to be relieved as counsel (MC-051) is reproduced in §4.64. The Judicial Council's mandatory form for declaration in support of attorney's motion to be relieved as counsel (MC-052) is reproduced in §4.65. The Judicial Council's mandatory form for proposed order granting attorney's motion to be relieved as counsel (MC-053) is reproduced in §4.66. Judicial Council forms MC-051 and MC-053 both contain a notice to corporations and other entities that are not permitted to appear without counsel (e.g., guardians, personal representatives, unincorporated associations), warning them that the failure to obtain counsel may have serious consequences and advising them to obtain legal advice.

D. Grounds

§4.33 1. Mandatory Withdrawal

An attorney must withdraw from employment and from representation before a court or tribunal in any of the following circumstances:

- Harassing litigation. When the attorney knows or should know that the client is bringing an action, conducting a defense, asserting a position in litigation, or taking an appeal without probable cause and for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring any person. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(B)(1).
- Unethical conduct. When the attorney knows or should know that continued employment will result in violation of the California Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(B)(2).
- Health of attorney. When the attorney's mental or physical condition makes it unreasonably difficult to conduct the case effectively. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(B)(3).
- Sexual relations with client. When attorney-client sexual relations cause the attorney to perform legal services incompetently. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-120.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/4 Changing Representation During Suit/§4.34 2. Conditionally Mandatory Withdrawal

§4.34 2. Conditionally Mandatory Withdrawal

An attorney may be required to withdraw from representing a client in the following circumstances unless the attorney can meet the requirements for written disclosure to the client and for obtaining the informed written consent of affected persons that are detailed in Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310:

NOTE: Other aspects of Rule 3-310, including circumstances in which an attorney must decline to accept employment and aggregate settlements as well as the following situations, are discussed more fully in chap 2.

- Relationship with party or witness in same matter. The attorney (1) has a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a party or witness in the same matter or (2) knows or should know of a previous such relationship and that it would substantially affect the representation. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(1)-(2).
- Relationship with person likely to be affected. The attorney has (or had) a legal, business, financial, professional, or personal relationship with a person or entity that the attorney should know would be affected substantially by the resolution of the matter. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(3).
- Interest in subject matter. The attorney has, or had, a legal, business, financial, or professional interest in the subject matter of the representation. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(B)(4).
- Two or more clients' interests conflict. The attorney learns that the interests of two clients in the same matter actually conflict or that the interests of a client in one matter are adverse to a client in a separate matter. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(C)(2)-(3).
- Organizational representation. When an attorney represents an organization, and when an agent, real or apparent, of the organization "acts or intends or refuses to act in a manner that is or may be a violation of law reasonably imputable to the organization" or that is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the attorney must take whatever action appears to be in the organization's best interests, including arguing for reconsideration or referring the matter to a higher authority in the organization. If the highest authority that can act in the organization persists in conduct that is a violation of law and is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, the attorney may, and in some circumstances must, resign and withdraw. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-600.
- Witness in jury trial. The attorney may not act as an advocate before a jury that will hear testimony from the attorney unless the testimony relates to an uncontested matter or to the nature and value of legal services rendered in the case or unless the attorney has the client's informed, written consent. If the attorney represents a governmental entity, the consent must be obtained from the head of the office or a designee of the head of the office by which the attorney is employed and must be consistent with principles of recusal. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210. Reasons for not acting both as trial counsel and witness are discussed in Lyle v Superior Court (1981) 122 CA3d 470, 480, 175 CR 918. These include:
- The impeachment of the witness for bias because the witness has an interest in the outcome of the trial;
- The disadvantage to opposing counsel in impeaching the witness and attacking the witness's credibility;
- The difficulty of trial counsel arguing for his or her own credibility as a witness;
- The inconsistency between the roles of advocate and witness; and
- The possible appearance of impropriety.

- The client should be informed of the possible adverse effects of the attorney's dual role as advocate and witness and have an opportunity to seek independent counsel.
- As indicated in the official discussion, Rule 5-210 is not intended to apply when a lawyer in an advocate's firm will be a witness, nor does it apply to any proceeding other than a jury trial. This is a clear departure from Comden v Superior Court (1978) 20 C3d 906, 145 CR 9 (decided under a former rule of professional conduct), requiring disqualification of the entire law firm of an attorney who knows or should know that a lawyer in his firm ought to testify as a witness on the client's behalf, even though that attorney-witness was not representing the client as an advocate at trial. See form of client's consent to continued representation in §4.63.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.35 3. Permissive Withdrawal

If no grounds exist for mandatory withdrawal or for conditionally mandatory withdrawal, the grounds on which an attorney may withdraw without the client's written consent are:

- Unwarranted claim or defense. The client insists on presenting a claim or defense that is not warranted under existing law and cannot be supported by good faith argument for extension, modification, or reversal of existing law. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(a).
- Client's illegal course of conduct. The client seeks to pursue an illegal course of conduct. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(b).
- Attorney's illegal or prohibited conduct. The client insists that the attorney pursue a course of conduct that is illegal or that is prohibited under the California Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(c).
- Unreasonable difficulty in serving as attorney. The client by other conduct makes it unreasonably difficult for the attorney to carry out the employment effectively. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(d).
- Client's failure to follow advice. The client insists, in a matter not pending before a tribunal, that the attorney engage in conduct contrary to the attorney's judgment and advice but not prohibited under the California Rules of Professional Conduct or the State Bar Act. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(e).
- Failure to pay as agreed. The client breaches an agreement or obligation to the attorney on expenses or fees. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(1)(f).
- Violation of rules likely. The continued employment is likely to result in a violation of the California Rules of Professional Conduct or of the State Bar Act. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(2).
- Inability to work with co-counsel. An inability to work with co-counsel indicates that the client's best interests will likely be served by withdrawal. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(3).
- Mentally or physically unable to serve. The attorney's mental or physical condition makes it difficult for the attorney to carry out the employment effectively. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(4).
- Client assents to withdrawal. The client knowingly and freely assents to termination of the employment. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(5).
- Other good cause for withdrawal. The attorney believes, in good faith, in a proceeding pending before a tribunal, that the tribunal will find the existence of other good cause for withdrawal. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-700(C)(6).

§4.36 VI. ATTORNEY'S ABANDONMENT OF CLIENT

Neglecting or disregarding a client's interests, whether owing to carelessness, willfulness, or dishonesty, is grounds for disciplining an attorney. Stanley v State Bar (1990) 50 C3d 555, 566, 268 CR 183; Simmons v State Bar (1970) 2 C3d 719, 729, 87 CR 368. See King v State Bar (1990) 52 C3d 307, 276 CR 176 (inadvertent neglect is punishable). Under Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-110, an attorney may not repeatedly fail to perform legal services competently. To perform "competently" under the rule is "diligently to apply the learning and skill necessary to perform the attorney's duties arising from employment and representation." See Arden v State Bar (1987) 43 C3d 713, 239 CR 68 (failure of long duration may be deemed willful).

The protection offered by CCP §286, requiring notice to the client to appear in person or appoint an attorney when the client's attorney "ceases to act as such," does not apply when the attorney had ceased to act for a client in a particular case. California Water Serv. Co. v Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 CA2d 715, 734, 37 CR 1; Gion v Stroud (1961) 191 CA2d 277, 279, 12 CR 540.

The client's remedy for abandonment is to move under CCP §284 for an order removing the attorney and substituting the client or another attorney. On client's motion for substitution, see §§4.7-4.9.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.37 VII. CLIENT'S DEATH OR INCAPACITY

Depending on the representation agreement between attorney and client, the attorney-client relationship may be terminated by the client's death (see Swartfager v Wells (1942) 53 CA2d 522, 527, 128 P2d 128) or incapacity (see Sullivan v Dunne (1926) 198 C 183, 244 P 343). See CC §2356.

The attorney's representation is not terminated when there is a special contract of employment, e.g., a contract to conduct a suit to final judgment or a fee agreement for the entire case. Estate of Mallory (1929) 99 CA 96, 278 P 488. In addition, a notice of appeal may be filed by the attorney of record for a decedent in the court in which judgment was rendered. CCP §903.

VIII. CESSATION OF LAW PRACTICE

§4.38 A. Attorney's Death, Incapacity, or Suspension

Suspension and disbarment of an attorney by the State Bar terminates the right to practice law. Bus & P C §§6006, 6126. The attorney-client relationship is terminated under the usual rules of agency by the attorney's death, removal, or incapacity, or when the attorney ceases to practice. See CCP §286; 1 Witkin, California Procedure, Attorneys §66 (5th ed 2008).

Death, suspension, or incapacity of an attorney does not automatically terminate a law firm's employment when the representation agreement was not made with that particular attorney. See Little v Caldwell (1894) 101 C 553, 36 P 107 (if representation agreement is with partnership, option to terminate agreement rests with client, not surviving partners).

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.39 1. Procedures for Finding of Incapacity

Incapacity of an attorney generally refers to one who has, for any reason (e.g., excessive use of alcohol or drugs, or physical or mental illness), become incapable of devoting the necessary time and attention to the practice of law and providing the quality of service necessary to protect a client's interest. Bus & P C §6190. Jurisdiction over an incapacitated attorney's law practice lies in the superior court of the county in which the attorney maintains or has most recently maintained his or her principal law office or the county in which the attorney lives. Bus & P C §6190.1(a).

Only the State Bar may apply for the court's assumption of jurisdiction over an attorney's practice unless the attorney consents to the assumption of jurisdiction. If the attorney consents to the court's assumption of jurisdiction over the attorney's practice, any interested person or entity, a client, or the State Bar may apply. Bus & P C §6190.1(b)-(c).

For contents of application, see Bus & P C §6190.2; for necessary court findings, see Bus & P C §6190.34.

§4.40 2. Demand That Party Appoint Attorney or Appear

When the attorney-client relationship is terminated by the attorney's death, suspension, or other incapacity, the unrepresented client is protected by the requirement that, before any further proceedings can be conducted against him or her, the adverse party must give written notice to appoint another attorney or to appear in person. CCP §286. See form of demand to the unrepresented party to appoint an attorney or make a personal appearance in §4.68.

The client can waive the right to this notice, or the client's conduct may estop him or her from raising the issue of lack of notice. California Water Serv. Co. v Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 CA2d 715, 736, 37 CR 1. The notice requirement applies only when an attorney has ceased to practice law, not when the attorney merely withdraws from a particular matter. De Recat Corp. v Dunn (1926) 197 C 787, 242 P 936. An attorney's cessation to act means "died or ceased to be an attorney." California Water Serv. Co. v Edward Sidebotham & Son (1964) 224 CA2d 715, 734, 37 CR 1. This protection afforded a client does not prevent the running of time limits. Larkin v Superior Court (1916) 171 C 719, 724, 154 P 841. The adverse party's failure to give the notice under CCP §286 as required may foreclose proceedings against the unrepresented client. Aldrich v San Fernando Valley Lumber Co. (1985) 170 CA3d 725, 216 CR 300.

In McMunn v Lehrke (1915) 29 CA 298, 307, 155 P 473, the defendant discharged his attorneys, but no substitution of attorneys was prepared or filed. The court held that the defendant's attorneys had ceased to act as attorneys and that CCP §286 applied. This language and holding was disapproved in De Recat Corp. v Dunn (1926) 197 C 787, 794, 242 P 936.

§4.41 3. Party's Appointment of Attorney

A party's appointment of attorney is usually a two-party document reciting the death, suspension, or disability of the former attorney, the party's appointment of the successor attorney, and the successor attorney's consent to serve.

As with the more customary three-party substitution of attorneys (see form in §4.55), notice of an attorney's substitution by the client's appointment of attorney must be given to the other parties. CCP §§285, 1010. The original document (and notice, if a different document) must be filed with the court clerk. CCP §284.

§4.42 B. Notice of Cessation of Law Practice

A notice of cessation of law practice is required when an attorney dies, resigns, becomes an inactive member of the State Bar, is disbarred, or is suspended from the active practice of law. Bus & P C §6180.

The notice must contain any other information required by the order of suspension, disbarment, or acceptance of the attorney's resignation, as well as any information required by a rule of the California Supreme Court, Judicial Council, or State Bar or by a court order. It must be mailed to all clients, to opposing counsel, to courts and agencies in which the attorney has pending matters (describing those matters sufficiently to identify them), to any errors and omissions insurer, to the Chief Trial Counsel of the State Bar, and to any other person or entity that has reason to be informed of the cessation of practice. Bus & P C §6180.1.

On the death or incompetence of an attorney, notice must be given by the attorney's personal representative or conservator; if none, notice must be given by the person having custody of the attorney's files and records. Bus & P C §6180.1.

§4.43 C. Application for Court Jurisdiction Over Practice

Any interested person or entity, including the State Bar, a client of the attorney, or the superior court on its own motion, may apply to the court in the county of the attorney's residence or principal office for a limited assumption by the court of jurisdiction over a terminated practice. Bus & P C §6180.2.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.44 1. Contents of Application

The application must (1) be verified, (2) recite facts disclosing the death, suspension, disbarment, resignation, or inactive status of the attorney and the existence of pending matters in which clients are unrepresented, and (3) state the belief that supervision is warranted and that the interests of one or more clients or interested persons or entities will be prejudiced if jurisdiction is not assumed. Bus & P C §6180.3.

§4.45 2. Hearing

If it appears to the court that the application will be granted and that delay will result in substantial injury to others, the court may make appropriate interim orders, pending a hearing on the application. Bus & P C §6180.8. The court must set the application for hearing after notice to the attorney and to the conservator or personal representative or the person having custody of the files and records, and to the State Bar, if the State Bar is not the applicant. Bus & P C §6180.4.

§4.46 3. Appointment of Attorney

Based on its findings, the court may make an order assuming jurisdiction over the attorney's practice and appoint one or more attorneys to mail the notice of cessation of law practice (see §4.42), to examine the files and records, to notify the clients of the attorney's status, and to advise them to seek other counsel. The appointed attorney may apply for extensions of time for this purpose and, with the client's consent, file motions and pleadings when jurisdictional time limits are involved. The appointed attorney may secure papers and records, appoint receivers, and take other appropriate actions. Bus & P C §6180.5.

§4.47 4. Limited Judicial Powers

A court assuming jurisdiction over a law practice does not have authority to conduct the practice, and neither appointed attorneys nor their partners or associates may, without the court's consent, accept legal employment by the unrepresented clients, except to the limited extent, until other counsel is obtained, of applying for extensions of time and, with the client's consent, filing papers needed to meet jurisdictional time limits. IX. MOTION FOR DISQUALIFICATION

§4.52 A. Adverse Party's Motion for Disqualification

The court's power to disqualify an attorney is based on statutory authority and on the court's inherent authority to control the officers who appear before it. CCP §128; Klemm v Superior Court (1977) 75 CA3d 893, 901 n4, 142 CR 509. See Trust Corp. v Piper Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir 1983) 701 F2d 85, 87.

When an adverse party challenges the authority of opposing counsel to prosecute or defend an action, the court has jurisdiction to entertain the motion: "It has … been held that the court may require an attorney to show special authority, upon the application of the opposite party, when justice demands it." Clark v Willett (1868) 35 C 534, 540.

Although a motion to disqualify counsel is usually made by an opposing party, it may be made by a person (e.g., a current or former client) who would be affected by the representation at any time while the action is pending. Earl Scheib, Inc. v Superior Court (1967) 253 CA2d 703, 709, 61 CR 386.

Because eliminating another party's attorney could have a detrimental effect on that party's case, the courts are sensitive to an opposing party's making the motion for tactical reasons. See White v Superior Court (1979) 98 CA3d 51, 55, 159 CR 278 (party seeking to challenge counsel's qualifications to represent adversary party must proceed at first reasonable opportunity or, in effect, waive opportunity; trial court abuses its discretion if motion for disqualification later granted). For further discussion in the context of conflicts of interest rules, see chap 2.

© The Regents of the University of California

§4.53 B. Grounds; Procedure

The grounds of a motion for disqualification often involve a conflict situation in which the attorney is alleged by virtue of the current representation to be violating one or more of the ethical prohibitions of the California Rules of Professional Conduct. On rules prohibiting attorneys' conflicts of interest generally, see chap 2.

Thus, the grounds for challenging an attorney's representation of a party are the same grounds by which an attorney may seek withdrawal from representation. See §§4.21-4.35. For example, a party may seek disqualification on the ground that the attorney acquired confidential information from a former representation in violation of Cal Rules of Prof Cond 3-310(D). The moving party must then make some showing, perhaps by way of declaration, of "the nature of the communications [and] how they relate to the current representation." See Elliott v McFarland Unified Sch. Dist. (1985) 165 CA3d 562, 572, 211 CR 802 (confidential information allegedly received by challenged attorney must be based on "substantial relationship"). For further discussion, see chap 2.

Without such a showing, the court will not disqualify counsel. For example, in Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 305, 254 CR 853, the court of appeal criticized the lawyer's lack of judgment in initiating a social relationship with the secretary of the partners on the other side of a lawsuit, but it found no showing that confidential information had passed in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct.

§4.54 C. Court's Ruling

Even with the client's informed, written consent to representation by an attorney with potential conflicts, the court has the discretion to grant the opposing party's motion for disqualification. See, e.g., Lyle v Superior Court (1981) 122 CA3d 470, 175 CR 918 (in balancing interests under former Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-111(A)(4) (lawyer as witness), trial court in close cases should favor client's right to attorney of choice, even if less effective representation results, unless detriment to opponent or injury to integrity of judicial process is convincingly demonstrated). For further discussion of conflicts involved when the attorney is a witness, see chap 2.

Some California decisions recognize a balancing test, weighing the interests of the party opposing disqualification against the interest of avoiding conflicts, such that if the nonmoving party would suffer a great burden by disqualification of its counsel, the ethical considerations may be overcome. William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 1048, 197 CR 232; Elliott v McFarland Unified Sch. Dist. (1985) 165 CA3d 562, 567, 211 CR 802 (citing Raley with approval). See also Mills Land & Water Co. v Golden W. Ref. Co. (1986) 186 CA3d 116, 230 CR 461 (citing Raley with approval and allowing attorney to continue representation). The court stated that exercise of the power to disqualify counsel "requires a cautious balancing of competing interests." 186 CA3d at 126.

The Raley court outlined three principal types of "prejudice" that may serve to avoid "imputed" disqualification (i.e., when entire law firm of attorney having conflict is disqualified as counsel):

- The party opposing the motion would suffer a great financial loss in the litigation if counsel were disqualified;
- Disqualification would result in burdensome delay of the litigation (see also Chambers v Superior Court (1981) 121 CA3d 893, 175 CR 575); and
- Disqualification would deprive the party of counsel uniquely qualified to represent the client.

These exceptions have rarely been applied in the reported cases, and Raley has been criticized on this issue. See, e.g., River West, Inc. v Nickel (1987) 188 CA3d 1297, 1307, 234 CR 33; Employers Ins. of Wausau v Albert D. Seeno Constr. Co. (ND Cal 1988) 692 F Supp 1150, 1163 n16.

But see Gregori v Bank of America (1989) 207 CA3d 291, 301, 254 CR 853 (disqualification usually imposes hardship on innocent client; court upheld denial of motion to disqualify because it was unclear whether any prohibited conflict existed); Dill v Superior Court (1984) 158 CA3d 301, 306, 205 CR 671 (parties' right to counsel of their choice "must be balanced against the need to maintain high ethical standards of professional responsibility"; trial court upheld disqualification).

NOTE: The trial court's decision on disqualification of counsel will not be disturbed on appeal except for abuse of discretion. Elliott v McFarland Unified Sch. Dist., supra. See William H. Raley Co. v Superior Court (1983) 149 CA3d 1042, 1049, 197 CR 232 (abuse of discretion found). On appeal, any conflicts in testimony or declarations must be resolved in the prevailing party's favor. Chronometrics, Inc. v Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 CA3d 597, 603, 168 CR 196.

I. INTRODUCTION

§5.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses California law regulating fee disputes between attorneys and clients. The focus is on arbitrations conducted by the State Bar under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206), although litigating a fee action is also discussed. The MFAA is set forth in §§5.3-5.12. Procedures before arbitration are discussed in §§5.13-5.24, the hearing in §§5.25-5.34, and postarbitration procedures in §§5.35-5.40. Litigating a fee collection action is covered in §§5.41-5.48.

The State Bar forms used in arbitration proceedings appear at the end of the chapter. See §§5.49-5.60. Except for the "Notice of Client's Right to Arbitration" and the "Notice of Your Rights After Fee Arbitration," which are mandatory, these forms used by the State Bar to conduct its arbitration matters are included for illustrative purposes only; local bar associations issue their own forms for arbitration matters.

PRACTICE TIP: To avoid fee disputes, the attorney should reach a clear understanding about fees with prospective clients before a written representation agreement is signed. For guidance in drafting representation agreements, see chap 3. See also Fee Agreement Forms Manual (2d ed Cal CEB 2007). If a dispute over fees does develop, the practitioner may refer to this chapter for the respective rights and responsibilities of attorneys and clients under the MFAA.

§5.2 B. Governing Law

Mandatory fee arbitration is governed by Bus & P C §§6200-6206 and the State Bar Rules of Procedure for Fee Arbitrations and the Enforcement of Awards by the State Bar of California (referred to in this chapter as "State Bar Rules"). These rules are on the State Bar website at www.calbar.ca.gov under the heading "Attorney Resources." Local bar associations have adopted their own rules of procedure for fee arbitrations. For discussion, see §5.4.

NOTE: Mandatory fee arbitration, which is described in this chapter, differs from judicial arbitration (CCP §§1141.10-1141.31). See chap 37. For discussion of contractual arbitration (CCP §§1280-1297.337) and other forms of alternative dispute resolution, see chap 45.

II. MANDATORY FEE ARBITRATION ACT

§5.3 A. Purpose

The purpose of the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206) is to provide clients with access to a speedier and less costly method of resolving attorney-client fee disputes than civil litigation. Fee arbitration is mandatory only for the attorney, at the client's option (Bus & P C §6200(c)), unless the parties have a written agreement requiring them to submit fee disputes to mandatory fee arbitration. Before its enactment, the typical method of fee collection by attorneys was the commencement of an action against a former client. See §§5.41-5.48. This aggressive method of fee dispute resolution often triggered a cross-complaint for professional negligence, sometimes coupled with other causes of action.

NOTE: The MFAA includes a system for voluntary mediation. Under Bus & P C §6200(a), the State Bar may establish, maintain, and administer a mediation system for disputes about fees, costs, or both. Any mediation system that is adopted must be voluntary for both attorney and client. Bus & P C §6200(c). Mediation is an extension of the negotiated settlement process and is based on direct negotiation between attorney and client. Bus & P C §6200(h). Like settlement discussions, mediation proceedings may not be disclosed in any subsequent arbitration or other proceeding. Bus & P C §6200(h).

Since 1979 tens of thousands of fee dispute arbitrations have taken place in California through the State Bar and approved local programs. See §5.4. Currently, there are some 43 State Bar-approved fee arbitration programs. The hundreds of California attorneys and laypersons who have volunteered their time to conduct these arbitrations have acquired a great deal of experience, not only in receiving and weighing evidence and making awards, but in learning the most probable causes of attorney-client fee disputes.

The source of most fee disputes is poor communication between attorney and client, which is often the result of an incomplete, ambiguous, unwritten, or absent fee agreement. As a rule, clients do not object to paying a reasonable fee. Paralleling this, most attorneys seek only the fee that they believe was agreed on. Care should be given, however, to ensure that the billing statement clearly reflects the work undertaken.

PRACTICE TIP: To minimize the possibility of a fee dispute between attorney and client, careful attention at the start of the relationship should be given to the retainer agreement and the requirements for billing statements. For guidance in drawing up its terms and conditions as well as information on the statutes and ethical rules applicable to fee agreements, see chap 3.

§5.3A B. Duty to Notify Client

Under Bus & P C §6201(a), an attorney who brings a court action against a client for the recovery of attorney fees must notify the client of the right to arbitrate the dispute before or at the time of service of summons, using the most current version of the approved State Bar form, titled "Notice of Client's Right to Arbitration." See §5.13. Although either party may request arbitration, the attorney must arbitrate if the client initiates arbitration or responds to an attorney's suit for fees by requesting arbitration. The client's participation in arbitration is optional unless the client has agreed in writing to arbitrate fee disputes. See Bus & P C §6200(c). Business and Professions Code §§6200-6206 permits the parties to an attorney fee dispute to agree that arbitrators may decide the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Glassman v McNab (2003) 112 CA4th 1593, 1600, 6 CR3d 293.

Although the attorney's primary duty under the statute consists in the obligation to give the client written notice of the right to arbitration, it is advisable from a practical standpoint to cooperate in the arbitration, making the experience as informative and constructive as possible. The arbitration process is confidential, usually informal, relatively speedy, and less expensive than litigation. Although the award is not binding unless the parties agree that it is binding, it can still be educational in the sense that it expresses to the parties the neutral's evaluation of the merits, which may inform the parties of their likelihood of prevailing in court.

Some parties are wary about subjecting their claims for fees to "nonbinding" arbitration, expecting it to be merely an unnecessary prelude to litigation. See §5.24. Experience, however, shows that the vast majority of nonbinding fee arbitrations become binding by operation of law. Failure to file an action requesting trial de novo within 30 days after service of notice of a nonbinding award results in a binding award. See Bus & P C §6203(b). Because most fee disputes result from poor communication between attorney and client, many arbitrations result in awards satisfactory to both sides because, for the first time, both parties are exposed the other's position and to an analysis of the issues presented.

§5.4 C. State Bar and Local Programs

The attorney fee arbitration provisions provide that both the State Bar of California (Bus & P C §6200(a)) and local bar associations (Bus & P C §6200(c)) may sponsor and administer programs to arbitrate fee disputes. The State Bar has adopted "Rules of Procedure for Fee Arbitrations and the Enforcement of Awards" (cited in this chapter as "State Bar Rules"), which apply when the State Bar arbitrates fee disputes. See State Bar Rules 1.0-52.0. A local bar must obtain approval for its own rules of procedure from the State Bar Board of Governors.

In carrying out its supervisory responsibilities, the State Bar Board of Governors has adopted "Guidelines and Minimum Standards for the Operation of Mandatory Fee Arbitration Programs," applicable to arbitration programs sponsored and administered by local bar associations. The procedural rules adopted by these associations may vary from those of the State Bar, but they must be reviewed by the State Bar Board of Governors or a committee designated by the Board to ensure that they are consistent with the State Bar's guidelines and minimum standards for the operation of mandatory fee arbitration programs. Bus & P C §6200(d). Local procedures and fee provisions must provide for a fair, impartial, and speedy hearing and award. Bus & P C §6200(d). Local bar programs that obtain such approval are entitled to the statutory immunity provided by Bus & P C §6200(f). See §5.8.

The great majority of fee dispute arbitrations are conducted through local bar associations. For example, in 2003, the State Bar dealt with 102 fee arbitration requests, while local bar associations processed about 2000 such requests. The State Bar's jurisdiction is limited to certain situations set forth in §5.7. Although both lawyers and lay people serve as arbitrators without compensation, fee arbitration programs incur substantial administrative costs, which are met at least in part by the filing fees paid by the parties participating in the arbitration. The State Bar also reimburses the local bar programs a prorata amount to help offset some of these costs.

The number of clients requesting fee arbitrations varies from year to year and from program to program. According to informal surveys conducted after arbitration, the clients and attorneys both express confidence that fee arbitration programs provide a fair method for resolving fee disputes.

Although local arbitration rules are mentioned from time to time for illustrative purposes, this chapter concentrates on the State Bar Rules and includes forms used in fee arbitrations conducted by the State Bar. See §§5.49-5.60.

WARNING: Except for the State Bar's mandatory form for notifying the client of the right to arbitration (see §5.13), and the notice of rights after arbitration, State Bar forms are not used in arbitrations conducted by local bar associations. Local bar associations have developed their own rules and forms for administration of their own programs, and will supply copies to clients and attorneys participating in their fee arbitrations.

§5.5 1. State Bar Website

The State Bar's website, located at www.calbar.ca.gov, has a section on mandatory fee arbitration that can be found on the main menu under the heading "Attorney Resources." The website has a great deal of useful information about attorney fee arbitration, including:

- The text of the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206);
- State Bar Rules of Procedure for Fee Arbitrations and the Enforcement of Awards;
- Addresses and telephone numbers of local bar associations with approved fee arbitration programs and a brief description of each approved program, including filing fees; and
- Notice of Right to Arbitration form.

In addition, the State Bar Committee on Mandatory Fee Arbitration issues "Arbitration Advisories," which discuss and analyze for fee arbitrators recurring legal questions, e.g., determining a reasonable fee, mandatory and recommended disclosures that arbitrators should make to parties, and arbitration issues involved in contingency fee agreements. These advisories, which are indexed according to title, may be useful to the parties and are available on the State Bar website.

WARNING: These advisories have not been adopted or endorsed by a court of law and constitute only the official opinion or policy of the State Bar Committee on the questions they address. They are advisory only.

§5.6 2. Filing Fees and Costs

A filing fee is usually charged to the party requesting the arbitration (usually the client). The amount of the fee charged is sometimes stated as a percentage (e.g., 5 percent) of the amount in dispute with a minimum fee when little money is in dispute and a maximum fee when greater amounts are disputed. Some bar associations have adopted sliding fee scales based on both fixed amounts and percentages of the amount in dispute.

In arbitrations conducted by the State Bar, a party may file an application for a filing fee waiver on the approved State Bar form. State Bar Rule 17.0. The presiding arbitrator may grant the fee waiver or order a reduced fee for good cause shown. Fee waivers are not available to business entities, including partnerships and corporations. State Bar Rule 17.0. Local bar association rules may also provide for waiver of fees. The filing fee and other costs of arbitration may be reallocated or redistributed between the parties by the arbitrator in the award. Arbitration Advisory 03-03 provides a guideline on how program filing fees may be awarded.

PRACTICE TIP: Although an attorney may not require the client to arbitrate a fee dispute unless there is a written agreement to arbitrate fee disputes entered into before the fee dispute arose, the attorney should seriously consider arbitration rather than litigation if the client is receptive to the idea. See §5.3 (cross-complaints for professional negligence commonly filed in response to actions for recovery of legal fees).

§5.7 3. Jurisdiction

Ordinarily, jurisdiction lies with the local bar associations or lawyers' referral services that have adopted arbitration rules of procedure approved by the State Bar Board of Governors. However, State Bar Rule 12.1 provides that a matter must be accepted by the State Bar for arbitration if:

- There is no approved local bar association program with jurisdiction over the dispute;
- A party declares under penalty of perjury that a fair hearing cannot be obtained with the local bar association program; or
- The matter is not within the jurisdiction of a local bar association program.

NOTE: State Bar Rule 11.5 permits local programs to accept jurisdiction over arbitration matters from other local programs on the parties' written consent.

A local bar association may, by procedural rule, define its own jurisdiction. Jurisdiction is limited, however, to disputes between an attorney and a client when requested by the client or when agreed to by the attorney and the client in writing, and the client must be one to whom the attorney has rendered professional services. Legal malpractice claims are not covered by the program. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v Stites Prof. Law Corp. (1991) 235 CA3d 1718, 1727, 1 CR2d 570 (insurance company paying fees of Cumis counsel for insured is not proper party in fee arbitration covered by Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206); see §5.11). For discussion of disputes that are not covered by the MFAA, see §§5.7, 5.9-5.12. An arbitrator's finding that a particular fee dispute is arbitrable will stand unless it is shown not to be a rational construction of the law. Manatt, Phelps, Rothenberg & Tunney v Lawrence (1984) 151 CA3d 1165, 1171, 199 CR 246.

A presiding arbitrator may, for good cause, assign a matter to a hearing panel to take evidence and to decide whether jurisdiction should be accepted. State Bar Rule 11.2.

NOTE: Attorneys and clients who are contemplating participation in a fee dispute arbitration should consult with the local bar association or lawyers' referral service to ascertain whether a local fee arbitration program has been established in their county. The State Bar at its San Francisco office can furnish the names and addresses of the local bar association having jurisdiction over fee arbitrations in a given geographical area. This information is also available on the State Bar's website (www.calbar.ca.gov).

§5.8 4. Arbitral and Mediation Immunity

The State Bar and local bar associations conducting arbitrations or mediations under approved procedural rules, and arbitrators and mediators, as well as the arbitrating or mediating associations' directors, officers, and employees, have the same immunity that attaches in judicial proceedings. Bus & P C §6200(f).

Generally, arbitrators may not be held liable for damages or be compelled to testify at postarbitration proceedings. Evidence Code §703.5 provides: "No person presiding at any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding, and no arbitrator or mediator, shall be competent to testify, in any subsequent civil proceeding." Exceptions include, e.g., when a statement or conduct during the prior proceeding could give rise to contempt, constitute a crime, be the subject of investigation by the State Bar or Commission on Judicial Performance, or give rise to disqualification proceedings under CCP §170.6. Evid C §703.5.

§5.9 D. Statutory Exceptions to Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act

There are several exceptions to the mandatory fee arbitration provisions. Statutory exceptions include:

- Statute of limitations. A client may not compel arbitration if the same relief sought by a civil action would be barred by a statute of limitations. Bus & P C §6206.
- No office or services in state. The Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206) does not apply if the attorney is also (or is only) admitted to practice in another jurisdiction, maintains no office in California, and no material portions of the services were rendered in California. Bus & P C §6200(b)(1). See State Bar Rule 4.1.
- Claims for affirmative relief against attorney. The client cannot compel mandatory fee arbitration of a claim against the attorney for damages or for other affirmative relief for alleged malpractice or professional misconduct. Bus & P C §6200(b)(2). See State Bar Rule 4.2. Under Bus & P C §6201(d), a client's right to maintain arbitration under the mandatory fee arbitration provisions is waived if the client seeks affirmative relief against the attorney based on allegations of professional malpractice. Aguilar v Lerner (2004) 32 C4th 974, 989, 12 CR3d 287. Evidence relating to claims of malpractice and professional misconduct is admissible in fee arbitrations, but only to the extent that such evidence bears on the amount of compensation to which the attorney is entitled. Arbitrators may not award affirmative relief in the form of damages, offset or otherwise, for injuries underlying any such claim. Bus & P C §6203(a). The client, however, may be entitled to a refund for unearned fees and costs previously paid to the attorney or for fees incurred after an ethical violation occurred. Bus & P C §6203(a).
- Fees determined by statute or court. When the fees in dispute are determined or are determinable by a statute or by a court order, the client may not compel arbitration. Bus & P C §6200(b)(3). See State Bar Rule 4.3.

© The Regents of the University of California

E. Nonstatutory Exceptions

§5.10 1. Person or Entity Other Than Client Disputing Attorney Fees

State Bar Rule 1.5 defines a client as: "A person who directly or through an authorized representative consults, retains, or secures legal services or advice from a lawyer in the attorney's professional capacity." But see Wager v Mirzayance (1998) 67 CA4th 1187, 79 CR2d 661 (upholding dismissal of attorney fee collection action because attorney had failed to notify client's father, who had retained attorney and had agreed to pay bills, of right to arbitrate).

However, the personal representative of a deceased client or the guardian or conservator of a person with a disability may be substituted in an arbitration conducted by the State Bar. See State Bar Rule 29.0. In addition, in State Bar arbitrations, the client "for good cause shown" may include as a party to the arbitration a person or entity who "may be liable for or entitled to a refund of the attorney fees and/or costs." In these circumstances, the arbitration request must be signed both by the client and that party. State Bar Rule 15.4.

§5.11 2. "Cumis" Insurance Disputes Not Subject to Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act

In certain situations involving conflicts of interest between an insurer and its insured, the insurance company is obligated to provide the insured with independent counsel at its own expense. San Diego Navy Fed. Credit Union v Cumis Ins. Soc'y (1984) 162 CA3d 358, 208 CR 494. See discussion in §2.50. This independent counsel (Cumis counsel) is the attorney for the insured, not for the insurance company, and thus a fee dispute between an insurance company and Cumis counsel is not subject to the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206), which applies only to fee disputes between attorneys and their clients. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v Stites Prof. Law Corp. (1991) 235 CA3d 1718, 1728, 1 CR2d 570.

Civil Code §2860, which codifies the holding in Cumis, has its own provision for mandatory and binding arbitration of attorney fee disputes that have not been resolved under policy provisions. See CC §2860(c) (when any dispute concerning attorney fees is not resolved under policy provisions, it must be resolved "by final and binding arbitration by a single neutral arbitrator selected by the parties to the dispute"). See also Compulink Mgmt. Ctr., Inc. v St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2008) 169 CA4th 289, 87 CR3d 72 (CC 2860 mandates arbitration of amount of fees owed to Cumis counsel, even though complaint may contain other, nonarbitrable issues); Gray Cary Ware & Friedenrich v Vigilant Ins. (2004) 114 CA4th 1185, 1192, 8 CR3d 475 (CC §2860 mandates arbitration of disputes between insurer and Cumis counsel over attorney fees, but not over expenses incurred by Cumis counsel while representing insured).

§5.12 3. Separate Negotiation of Damages and Attorney Fees

When an attorney negotiates a separate settlement of damages and attorney fees, the settlement can be reviewed by the court at a settlement conference or on the motion of a party to determine whether the settlement negotiations reflect a fair and reasonable balancing of the client's and the attorney's interests. Ramirez v Sturdevant (1994) 21 CA4th 904, 26 CR2d 554.

III. PROCEDURES BEFORE ARBITRATION

§5.13 A. Notice of Client's Right to Arbitration; Service

With limited exceptions (see §§5.9-5.12), when an attorney initiates any fee collection proceeding other than mediation or arbitration under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206), the attorney must notify the client in writing of the client's right to arbitration under the MFAA. Bus & P C §6201(a). Notice must be given before or at the time of service of the summons in a lawsuit or before or at the commencement of any other proceeding. Bus & P C §6201(a). To avoid filing an action when the client may ultimately request arbitration, most attorneys notify the client of the right to arbitration before bringing suit. Failure to provide the client with timely notice of the right to arbitration is grounds for dismissal of the action or other proceeding. Bus & P C §6201(a).

NOTE: The MFAA applies to all attempts to collect costs and fees through court action, including attorney-initiated fee actions filed in small claims court or any other proceeding, such as private arbitration. See Bus & P C §6201(b). Judicial Council Forms SC-100 and SC-101 are provided for litigation of attorney-client fee disputes in small claims court. See CCP §116.220(a)(4).

The State Bar requires attorneys to use the most current version of its notice form. Bus & P C §6201(a). Local bar associations that have been authorized by the State Bar to conduct fee arbitrations have a supply of these forms, as does the State Bar. See State Bar form, "Notice of Client's Right to Arbitration," in §5.49. The notice form is also available on the State Bar's website at www.calbar.ca.gov.

Although §6201(a) merely requires the attorney to "forward" the written notice of right to arbitration to the client, the attorney should serve the notice if for no other reason than to document the service and to form an approximate time line since the client has 30 days after "receipt" of the notice to request fee arbitration. On service of papers generally, see chap 18. State Bar Rule 51.0 provides that papers may be served by personal delivery, United States mail, or by deposit in a business facility used for collection and processing of correspondence for mailing under CCP §1013a.

Service of the notice, which under the State Bar Rules is complete at the time of deposit (State Bar Rule 51.4), will perhaps avoid dispute about the timeliness of a request for arbitration if the client elects to arbitrate. The client has 30 days after receipt of the notice of the right to arbitration to request arbitration. Bus & P C §6201(a). See §5.17. Furthermore, proof of service on the client protects the attorney from any subsequent motion to dismiss a fee collection action for failure to notify the client. See chap 18 on proof of service.

NOTE: In Wager v Mirzayance (1998) 67 CA4th 1187, 79 CR2d 661, the court adopted for the notification requirement a broader definition of "client" than that given in State Bar Rule 1.5, upholding the trial court's dismissal of an attorney fee collection action because the attorney had failed to notify the client's father, who had retained the attorney and had agreed to pay the attorney's bills, of the right to arbitrate.

§5.14 B. Request for Arbitration; Service on Respondent

Arbitration is initiated by filing a written request for arbitration form with the appropriate fee arbitration program and paying the filing fee. For arbitrations conducted by the State Bar, see State Bar Rule 15.0. On filing fees, see §5.6. The fee arbitration program will serve the request for arbitration form on the respondent. See, e.g., State Bar Rule 15.0.

§5.15 1. Attorney's Response

If the client has requested State Bar arbitration, the respondent (usually the attorney) must file a reply with the State Bar within 30 days after service of the request. State Bar Rule 18.1. The attorney may obtain an extension of time to reply under State Bar Rule 18.1.

The State Bar request and reply forms give the parties an opportunity to explain the facts of the fee dispute and to agree to binding arbitration. See §§5.50-5.51. If the amount in dispute exceeds $15,000, the parties are entitled to three arbitrators. State Bar Rule 22.1. No filing fee is required of the respondent attorney, but the arbitrator may reallocate part of or all of the filing fee to be paid by the respondent as part of the award. See §5.6.

If the attorney fails to respond to a request for arbitration or refuses to participate, the arbitrator will proceed with the arbitration as scheduled and a decision will be rendered on the basis of the evidence presented. State Bar Rule 32.2.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.16 2. Client's Response

When the request to arbitrate is made by the attorney, arbitration may proceed only if the client files a written consent to participate with the program within 30 days after service of the request, unless the client has already consented to arbitration (e.g., written agreement to arbitrate). See, e.g., State Bar Rule 18.2; §5.53.

C. Client's Loss of Right to Compel Arbitration

§5.17 1. Failure to Request Arbitration Within 30 Days After Receipt of Notice

If the client does not request arbitration within 30 days after receipt of the notice, the client's right to arbitration will be deemed waived. Bus & P C §6201(a). See, e.g., State Bar Rule 8.3. The attorney is then entitled to proceed with a fee collection action. See §§5.41-5.48. The parties may stipulate, however, to set the waiver aside and proceed with arbitration. Bus & P C §6201(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.18 2. Attorney's Small Claims Action

The Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206) applies to all attempts to collect costs and fees through court action, including attorney-initiated fee actions filed in small claims court. See Bus & P C §6201(b). Judicial Council Forms SC-100 and SC-101 are provided for litigation of attorney-client fee disputes in small claims court. See CCP §116.220(a)(4).

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.19 3. Client's Answer to Complaint for Fees

A client, who has received notice of the right to arbitration but files an answer to an attorney's complaint for fees without requesting arbitration, is deemed to have waived the right to arbitration. Bus & P C §6201(b). See State Bar Rule 8.2. See form of notice in §5.49. The parties may stipulate, however, to set the waiver aside and proceed with arbitration. Bus & P C §6201(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.20 4. Client's Filing of Action or Pleading Seeking Judicial Resolution of Dispute or Affirmative Relief Based on Malpractice

The client waives the right to arbitration by commencing any action or filing any pleading seeking judicial resolution of a fee dispute that would otherwise be amenable to resolution under the MFAA. Bus & P C §6201(d)(1). See, e.g., State Bar Rule 8.2, applicable to arbitrations conducted by the State Bar.

The client also waives the right to arbitrate by filing an action or pleading seeking affirmative relief against the attorney for damages or other relief based on alleged malpractice or professional misconduct. Bus & P C §6201(d)(2); Aguilar v Lerner (2004) 32 C4th 974, 12 CR3d 287. See Fagelbaum & Heller LLP v Smylie (2009) 174 CA4th 1351, 1361, 95 CR3d 252 (in cross-demand for non-MFAA arbitration, client's request for affirmative relief based on alleged attorney malpractice waived client's right to MFAA arbitration).

The parties may stipulate, however, to set the waiver aside and proceed with arbitration. Bus & P C §6201(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

D. Effect of Requesting Arbitration

§5.21 1. Proceedings Stayed

When a client files and serves a timely request for arbitration, any pending court action or other proceeding brought by the attorney to collect fees is automatically stayed without the need for a court order. Bus & P C §6201(c). To obtain an automatic stay, the client should file with the court clerk a copy of the request for arbitration and the original of the arbitration program's form for staying a court action and serve copies of both on the arbitration program and the other party. The court may impose additional requirements by local rule (see, e.g., State Bar Rule 9.0). See form of Notice of Stay of Proceedings (Judicial Council Form CM-180) in §5.58. For requirements for filing a notice of stay, see Cal Rules of Ct 3.650.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.22 2. Vacating Stay: Exception for Certain Provisional Remedies

Service and filing of a rejection of an arbitration award (see §5.37) automatically vacates any stay under Bus & P C §6201. A court order is not necessary. Bus & P C §6204(b). Moreover, the court may vacate a stay in whole or in part if, after a hearing duly noticed by any party or by the court, it finds that the matter, or some aspect of it, is not appropriate for arbitration under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206). Bus & P C §6201(c); Fagelbaum & Heller LLP v Smylie (2009) 174 CA4th 1351, 1362, 95 CR3d 252; Loeb & Loeb v Beverly Glen Music, Inc. (1985) 166 CA3d 1110, 1116, 212 CR 830.

In Loeb, the client's request for fee arbitration stayed the law firm's action to attach the assets of the client's music recording company for failure to pay for legal services rendered. The trial court then granted the law firm's motion to order the stay inapplicable to the attachment proceedings. The court ruled that the attachment remedy was not amenable to arbitration, noting that the law firm was not attempting to resist the arbitration procedure but was merely using the attachment remedy to protect against dissipation of assets during the pendency of the nonbinding arbitration and any subsequent civil trial.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.23 3. Time Tolled for Filing Civil Action

The time for filing a civil action seeking judicial resolution of a dispute subject to arbitration under the mandatory fee arbitration statute is tolled from the time an arbitration is initiated in accordance with rules adopted by the State Bar Board of Governors until the earlier of (Bus & P C §6206):

- 30 days after receipt of the findings and award of the arbitrators; or
- Receipt of notice that the arbitration is otherwise terminated.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.24 4. Agreement to Binding Arbitration

Arbitration under the MFAA is not binding, and either party is entitled to trial after the arbitration. The parties may agree in writing, however, to be bound by the award, but only after a fee dispute has arisen. Bus & P C §6204(a). A written agreement to make the arbitration binding may be made at any time before the actual taking of evidence at the hearing. State Bar Rules 5.1-5.2.

Thus, a provision in a retainer agreement requiring binding arbitration does not prevent the client from exercising his or her rights to nonbinding arbitration under the MFAA. Aguilar v Lerner (2004) 32 C4th 974, 989, 12 CR3d 287. If the client fails to invoke his or her rights under the MFAA, any agreement for binding arbitration is enforceable against the client. 32 C4th at 989.

In Schatz v Allen Matkins Leck Gamble & Mallory LLP (2009) 45 C4th 557, 575, 87 CR3d 700, the supreme court held that the MFAA does not prevent enforcement of a valid agreement to arbitrate under the California Arbitration Act (CAA) (CCP §§1280-1294.2). If nonbinding arbitration does not resolve the matter, an agreement for binding contractual arbitration may be enforced over the client's request for a trial de novo. 45 C4th at 572.

NOTE: A binding award may be corrected, vacated, or confirmed by the civil court, but only on the very limited grounds set forth in CCP §§1286.2 and 1286.6. See §5.36.

IV. THE HEARING

§5.25 A. Preliminary Matters

Arbitrations conducted by the State Bar are heard by its Fee Arbitration Department under rules of procedure established for conducting mandatory fee arbitrations. Local bar associations have their own rules of procedure. These rules must be approved by the State Bar Board of Governors or a committee designated by the Board and comply with the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206) and the Guidelines and Minimum Standards established by the State Bar under Bus & P C §6200(d) (see §5.4). Because local procedural variations are permitted, attorneys and clients participating in a local arbitration program should consult the particular rules from the sponsoring county bar association.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.26 1. Appointment of Arbitrators; Disqualification

Arbitrators are selected by the program that is conducting the arbitration. The program's rules establish whether the dispute will be heard by a single arbitrator or a panel of three. Under State Bar Rule 22.1, a single arbitrator hears disputes of $15,000 or less; a three-member panel hears larger disputes unless the parties stipulate to a single arbitrator. Local variations set by procedural rules are listed on the State Bar website at www.calbar.ca.gov under Approved Programs.

A single arbitrator must be an attorney. A panel of three arbitrators must be composed of two attorneys and one lay person. Bus & P C §6200(e). The client has the option of specifying that the single arbitrator or, for a three member panel, one of the attorney arbitrators, be a civil or criminal practitioner, depending on the nature of the representation. Bus & P C §6200(e). For example, when the representation involves a civil matter, the client may request that at least one attorney arbitrator be a civil practitioner; when the representation involves a criminal matter, the client may request that at least one attorney arbitrator be a criminal practitioner. Bus & P C §6200(e).

Under State Bar Rule 23.0, parties are given notice of the appointment of the arbitrator(s) within 60 days after a response has been filed or the time for responding has expired. If one of the panel members does not appear at the hearing, the parties may stipulate in writing to having the panel chair act as the sole arbitrator, but the hearing may not proceed with two arbitrators or with one lay arbitrator. State Bar Rule 32.5. Local rules occasionally vary.

Either party may request disqualification of an arbitrator or mediator without cause. Bus & P C §6204.5(a). The State Bar allows each party, within 15 days after receipt of notice of the assignment of an original or substitute arbitrator, to file a written disqualification of the arbitrator. Each party may disqualify one arbitrator without cause, and each has unlimited challenges to disqualify arbitrators for cause. State Bar Rule 24.0.

Code of Civil Procedure §1281.9(a)(1) requires arbitrators to disqualify themselves "on any ground specified in [CCP §]170.1" for disqualification of a judge. Arbitrators are under the same duty as judicial officers to render decisions free from any influence or consideration of the parties' race, ethnic origin, or gender. Betz v Pankow (1993) 16 CA4th 919, 20 CR2d 834. Arbitrators must disclose "even sporadic business relationships with a party to the arbitration." Kaiser Found. Hosp. v Superior Court (1993) 19 CA4th 513, 23 CR2d 431. See also Cal Rules of Ct 3.816 (arbitrator in judicial arbitration has duty to determine whether any cause exists for disqualification under CCP §170.1 governing disqualification of judges). Legislation requiring written disclosures by private contractual arbitrators (CCP §1281.85) does not apply to fee arbitration under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Program.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.27 2. Issuing Subpoenas

Parties to the arbitration may request the arbitrator to issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents pertaining to the proceedings. Bus & P C §6200(g)(3).

In State Bar arbitrations, the State Bar mails blank subpoenas to the party who requested them, who is then responsible for obtaining the arbitrator's signature and serving the subpoenas. A request for subpoenas must be received by the State Bar at least 10 days before the hearing date. The requesting party is responsible for any witness fees and any costs of serving the subpoenas. State Bar Rule 31.0. Local rules may vary.

Although arbitrators have the power to issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents by subpoena (Bus & P C §6200(g)(3)), they have no authority to impose sanctions for failing to comply with a subpoena, although the party seeking to compel compliance should be given the opportunity to bring a contempt proceeding in superior court under Bus & P C §6051.

The State Bar arbitration program encourages agreements between the parties as to the issues not in dispute and the voluntary exchange of documents prior to the hearing. State Bar Rule 33.0.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.28 3. Clarification of Issues and Exchange of Documents

The Panel Chair may request that the parties clarify the issues, submit additional documentation, and exchange documents in advance of the hearing. The hearing panel may, in its discretion, decline to admit into evidence at the hearing a party's documents that were required to be exchanged in advance, but were not. State Bar Rule 36.0.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.29 4. Waiver of Personal Appearance; Right to Counsel

Under State Bar procedures, a party may waive personal appearance at the arbitration hearing by filing a waiver of appearance with the State Bar at least 10 days before the hearing. State Bar Rule 28.4. The waiver may be accompanied by (State Bar Rule 28.4):

- One or more declarations under penalty of perjury; and/or
- A written designation of a representative, who need not be an attorney.

Although the statute is silent, the State Bar Rules explicitly provide that either party, at his or her own expense, may be represented by an attorney or, if unable to attend the hearing, designate a nonlawyer representative. State Bar Rule 28.2.

NOTE: The rules of procedure of each local bar association may differ in procedures regarding nonattendance and declarations, and should be reviewed when preparing for hearing.

B. Testimony

§5.30 1. Administering Oath; Transcripts

Arbitrators are empowered to administer oaths and affirmations and take testimony. Bus & P C §6200(g)(1)-(2). See State Bar Rule 35.0 (State Bar arbitrators must administer an oath).

The attendance of a certified shorthand reporter is permitted at State Bar arbitrations at the party's expense. Each party is entitled to a copy of the reporter's transcript on written request and payment of the expense of copying. State Bar Rule 39.0.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.31 2. Evidence

Generally, formal rules of evidence do not apply to fee arbitrations. The State Bar permits any relevant evidence, regardless of the existence of a common law or statutory rule to the contrary, if it is the kind of evidence "on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs." State Bar Rule 35.0.

The arbitrators are responsible after the hearing for returning any exhibit or documents to the parties who submitted them. State Bar Rule 41.9.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.32 a. Discovery Generally Not Permitted

In furtherance of its goal of providing relatively speedy hearing and award, the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206) discourages formal discovery as it is currently practiced in civil actions.

In State Bar arbitrations, no discovery other than the issuance of subpoenas is allowed. State Bar Rule 30.0, 31.0. Some local rules (e.g., Los Angeles and San Mateo) permit limited discovery on written request for a showing of good cause.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.33 b. Attorney-Client Communications and Work Product; Confidentiality

The attorney-client privilege (Evid C §952) and protection for an attorney's work product (CCP §§2018.010-2018.080) do not prohibit the disclosure of any communication relevant to:

- An arbitration hearing under the MFAA;
- A trial after arbitration; or
- Judicial confirmation, correction, or vacation of an arbitration award.

Such disclosure is not construed as a waiver of the confidential character of these matters for any other purpose. Bus & P C §6202.

The State Bar program requires that all arbitration hearings be closed to the public, except for persons (e.g., witnesses) necessary to conduct the hearing. Under State Bar Rule 27.2, the client may be accompanied by another person, and the panel may permit additional persons to attend. These persons are subject to the confidentiality of the arbitration proceedings. Although the arbitration award is public, the arbitration case file, exhibits, and any transcripts of the hearing remain confidential. See State Bar Rule 27.3.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.34 C. Award; Contents

The award must be in writing and signed by the concurring arbitrators and must include a determination of all questions necessary to determine the controversy. Bus & P C §6203(a). In arbitrations by the State Bar, "[a]rbitrators are encouraged, where appropriate, to include findings of fact with their awards." State Bar Rule 41.2.

The award should clearly state the fee, costs, or both that the arbitrator determines were paid by the client to the attorney, and the amount, if any, due the attorney from the client, or the amount to be refunded to the client by the attorney. Bus & P C §6203(a). State Bar Rule 41.2 requires that the name of each responsible attorney be included in the award. See Bus & P C §6203(d) (attorney who has not complied with award may be placed on involuntary inactive status until award has been paid). See also §5.40.

The arbitration filing fee costs may be awarded or reallocated. See, e.g., State Bar Rule 41.8 (filing fee and any fee client paid to file stay with court may be allocated). However, no other costs, including attorney fees for preparation and appearance at the arbitration, may be awarded, even if the parties have a contract that provides for an award of attorney fees to the prevailing party. Bus & P C §6203(a).

Under the statute, evidence of malpractice or professional misconduct is admissible, but the award may not give affirmative relief for such claims. Bus & P C §6203(a).

An original declaration of service of the award must be served on each party with the award. Bus & P C §6203(a). The award must also be served with the "Notice of Your Rights After Fee Arbitration" form (Bus & P C §6204.5(b)). See §5.49. In a State Bar arbitration, the arbitrator sends the original and four copies of the findings and award to the State Bar, which then serves the award on the parties to the arbitration. The State Bar Rules and most, if not all, local rules of procedure provide for service of the award by mail. See, e.g., State Bar Rule 41.9. The original award remains in the possession of the arbitrating association.

© The Regents of the University of California

V. POSTARBITRATION PROCEDURES

§5.35 A. Notice of Postarbitration Rights to Judicial Relief

The State Bar, or the local bar association that conducted the arbitration, must notify the parties of their rights to judicial relief after the arbitration proceeding. Bus & P C §6204.5(b). The State Bar-approved form, "Notice of Your Rights After Fee Arbitration," is served with the award. See, e.g., State Bar Rule 41.9; §5.60.

Any party may reject a nonbinding award within 30 days after notice of it is served by (1) initiating a court proceeding by filing an action or (2) rejecting the award and requesting trial in the court where an action is already pending. Bus & P C §6204(b)-(c). If no party acts to reject the award within 30 days after service of notice, the arbitration award becomes binding on the parties by operation of law. Bus & P C §6203(b). On agreement to binding arbitration, see §5.24.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.36 B. Confirmation, Correction, or Vacation of Award

An award made under a mandatory fee arbitration program may be confirmed, corrected, or vacated in the same manner as arbitration awards generally. Bus & P C §6203(b). See CCP §§1285-1294.2. Judicial proceedings after mandatory fee arbitration are governed by the amount-in-controversy rules applicable to civil actions generally. Bus & P C §6203(b). See chap 6. Matters involving less than $5000 may be brought in small claims court. CCP §116.220(a)(4).

With a focus on mandatory fee dispute arbitrations, some of the major requirements for confirming, correcting, or vacating an arbitration award are highlighted in the following paragraphs.

Contents of petition. A petition to confirm, correct, or vacate an arbitration award must set forth the substance of the agreement to arbitrate unless the petitioner denies the existence of such an agreement. CCP §1285.4. Because mandatory fee arbitration is not dependent on an agreement, attaching a copy of the request for arbitration will probably satisfy this requirement. In addition, the names of the arbitrators and a copy of the award and opinion, if any, must be attached or set forth in the petition. CCP §1285.4.

Grounds. Grounds for vacating an arbitration award include, e.g., that the arbitrators acted in excess of their powers or that the arbitrators' misconduct substantially prejudiced a party's rights. See CCP §1286.2(a). See also chap 45. On grounds for correcting an award (e.g., award is imperfect in form or there was an evident miscalculation of figures), see CCP §1286.8.

Service. If an action was already pending before the arbitration, a petition and notice of hearing to confirm, vacate, or correct an award is served by mail or in any other manner permitted by statute on all parties who have appeared. See CCP §§1003-1020. Otherwise, service is governed by the arbitration statute. See CCP §§1285-1294.2; Bus & P C §6203(b).

Timing. For time limits on filing petition to vacate or correct arbitration award, see CCP §1288 (100 days after date of service of signed copy of award on petitioner). Note that if a party is filing a petition to confirm an award, the time limit is 4 years after the date of service of the award.

Response to petition. The response to the petition may request the court to dismiss the petition or to confirm, correct, or vacate the award. CCP §1285.2. The response must be filed within 10 days after service of the petition within California; otherwise the allegations of the petition are deemed to be admitted. CCP §§1290, 1290.6. If served outside California, the response must be filed within 30 days after service. CCP §§1290.4(b)(2), 1290.6.

Rehearing. If the award is vacated, the court may order a rehearing before new arbitrators. If the award is vacated on the grounds that, e.g., the arbitrators exceeded their powers or prejudicially refused a continuance to a party, with the consent of the parties, the court may order a rehearing before the original arbitrators. CCP §1287.

Confirmation of award. If the award is confirmed, judgment must be entered in conformity with the award. CCP §1287.4. It may then be enforced in the same manner as any other civil judgment.

NOTE: Because of the unusually short time to respond to a petition to confirm, vacate, or correct an arbitration award that is served in California, prompt attention to filing a response is essential.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.37 C. Rejection of Award and Trial After Arbitration

If the arbitration was not made binding by the parties' written agreement (see §5.24), either party within 30 days after the mailing of notice of the arbitration award may file a rejection of the award and a request for trial after arbitration. On service and filing of the rejection of the award, any stay of a pending action entered under Bus & P C §6201 is vacated without necessity of court order. Bus & P C §6204(b).

If no action is pending, the trial after arbitration must be initiated by filing an action within 30 days after service of notice of the award in the court having jurisdiction over the amount of money in controversy. Bus & P C §6204(c).

PRACTICE TIP: Small claims Judicial Council forms are available for requesting a trial de novo in that forum.

Service. Service of the rejection of the arbitration award and the request for trial after arbitration may be made by mail on any party who appeared in a pending action. Otherwise, service must be in the same manner as on parties who have not yet appeared in original civil proceedings. Bus & P C §6204(b). See chaps 17 (service of process), 18 (service in pending actions).

Arbitration award inadmissible at trial. Except as necessary to decide who the prevailing party is in order to fix attorney fees and costs after the trial (see §5.39), the arbitration award and the arbitrators' determinations are inadmissible at a trial after arbitration. The arbitration award cannot operate as collateral estoppel or res judicata in any action or proceeding. Bus & P C §6204(e).

NOTE: A client who loses a binding fee arbitration conducted under the mandatory fee arbitration statute may file a subsequent action against the attorney based on the same allegations of misconduct or breach of contract as the fee dispute, but the client may not seek to recover as damages any part of the fee that the arbitrator awarded the attorney. Liska v The Arns Law Firm (2004) 117 CA4th 275, 281, 12 CR3d 21.

Failure to appear at arbitration hearing. A party who failed to appear at an arbitration hearing may lose the right to a trial after arbitration. A party who failed to appear at the arbitration has the burden of proving to the court that the failure to appear was not willful. The court may consider the arbitrators' findings, if any, on the party's failure to appear. Bus & P C §6204(a).

Repudiation of rejection of award and request for trial. A party that rejects a fee award after an MFAA arbitration and files a complaint that is later involuntarily dismissed for failure to prosecute effectively repudiates its previous rejection of the arbitration award and its request for trial. Perez v Grajales (2008) 169 CA4th 580, 605, 86 CR3d 784 (attorney rejected MFAA award in favor of client and filed complaint that was dismissed for failure to prosecute). Under such circumstances, the opposing party is entitled to request an order confirming the arbitration award and entering judgment on such confirmation. Perez v Grajales, supra.

D. Attorney Fees and Costs

§5.38 1. After Award Confirmed, Corrected, or Vacated

A court confirming, correcting, or vacating an award may give the prevailing party reasonable fees and costs incurred in obtaining confirmation, correction, or vacation of the award, including (if applicable) fees or costs of appeal. Bus & P C §6203(c). Neither party, however, may recover costs or attorney fees incurred in the underlying fee arbitration proceeding, except the filing fee paid under Bus & P C §6203(a). Bus & P C §6203(c).

The prevailing party is the party obtaining judgment confirming, correcting, or vacating the award. Bus & P C §6203(c). A party who did not appear at the arbitration hearing and did not follow the procedures provided for waiving personal appearance (see §5.29), however, is not entitled to attorney fees or costs on confirmation, correction, or vacation of the award. Bus & P C §6203(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.39 2. After Postarbitration Trial; Prevailing Party Defined

At the court's discretion, the prevailing party may be entitled to reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred as a result of the trial after arbitration. In fixing the attorney fees, the court must consider the earlier arbitration award, the determinations of the arbitrators, and any other relevant evidence. Bus & P C §6204(d).

The party seeking trial after arbitration is the prevailing party if that party obtains a judgment more favorable than that provided by the arbitration award. In all other cases, the other party is the prevailing party. Bus & P C §6204(d).

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.40 E. State Bar Enforcement

When an attorney is required—by a binding arbitration award (or one that became binding by operation of law) that is final, by a judgment, or by an agreement reached after mediation—to refund fees or costs to the client and fails to do so, the State Bar may obtain an order from the State Bar Court placing the attorney on involuntary inactive status in order enforce the award, judgment, or agreement. Bus & P C §6203(d). See State Bar Rules 45.2, 46.3. The award, judgment, or agreement must be enforced if the State Bar shows that the attorney failed to satisfy a binding fee arbitration award, judgment, or agreement, and has not reached a payment plan acceptable to the client or the State Bar. Bus & P C §6203(d)(2).

The award, judgment, or agreement will not be enforced if the attorney proves that he or she lacks the financial ability to pay the refund or lacks personal responsibility for making or ensuring payment of the award. Bus & P C §6203(d)(2). State Bar Rules 47.0-47.5. The State Bar may require an attorney who violates this section to pay an administrative penalty, reasonable costs, or both. The maximum administrative penalty is the greater of 20 percent of the award or $1000. Bus & P C §6203(d)(3). Unpaid penalties and costs are added to the attorney's bar dues for the following calendar year. Bus & P C §6203(d)(4); State Bar Rule 48.0.

The client must make the request for enforcement within four years after the date the award was mailed, the judgment entered, or the agreement signed. In an arbitrated matter, the request for enforcement may not be made earlier than 100 days after the date of service of a signed copy of the award. Bus & P C §6203(d)(5); State Bar Rule 44.1. The State Bar may move the State Bar Court to enforce an unpaid award by placing the attorney on involuntary inactive status until the refund is paid. See State Bar Court Rules of Procedure 700-711. When the award is appealed, a request for enforcement must be made after 100 days from the date the award became final. Bus & P C §6203(d)(5).

VI. LITIGATING A FEE COLLECTION ACTION

§5.41 A. Pleading Service of Notice of Right to Arbitrate Fee Dispute

Litigation of a fee collection suit is procedurally similar to other civil suits with the following exception: Failure to give the client defendant written notice of the right to arbitrate a dispute for fees, costs, or both is grounds for dismissing an action to collect fees and costs charged for professional services covered by the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA) (Bus & P C §§6200-6206). Bus & P C §6201(a).

Because service of the notice of the client's right to arbitration is necessary to avoid dismissal, pleading it is advisable. Failure to serve the required notice is not jurisdictional, however. The burden is on the client to move for dismissal on the ground that the statutory notice was not given. Aheroni v Maxwell (1988) 205 CA3d 284, 294, 252 CR 369.

§5.42 B. Overcoming Presumption of Undue Influence

A preliminary consideration in approaching the collection of a disputed fee is determining whether there is a presumption of undue influence on the part of the attorney in the making of the fee agreement at a time when a fiduciary relationship with the client existed. Fee agreements made while the attorney-client relationship exists are subject to the presumption of undue influence. Gleason v Klamer (1980) 103 CA3d 782, 787, 163 CR 483. Fee agreements entered into before the attorney-client relationship is established, however, are not subject to a presumption of undue influence. Walton v Broglio (1975) 52 CA3d 400, 404, 125 CR 123.

In the context of the attorney-client relationship, the presumption of undue influence is designed to implement the public policy in favor of the security of those who entrust themselves or their property to the administration of others. See Evid C §605; Rebmann v Major (1970) 5 CA3d 684, 688, 85 CR 399 (effect of presumption is to shift burden of proof and impose burden of proof as to nonexistence of presumed undue influence on attorney; trial judge must determine whether evidence offered showed, by preponderance of evidence, that there was no undue influence).

If a fee agreed on before the attorney-client relationship was established is later reduced to a promissory note or an account stated at a time while the fiduciary relationship existed, it is conceivable the promissory note or the account stated would be subject to the presumption of undue influence, whereas the original agreement would not. See Gleason v Klamer, supra (account stated held not to be result of undue influence, because fiduciary relationship had ceased and client had new attorney).

To overcome the presumption that a fee agreement entered into during the fiduciary relationship was not the result of undue influence, the attorney must fully disclose and explain the circumstances surrounding the agreement to the client. Trafton v Youngblood (1968) 69 C2d 17, 28, 69 CR 568 (in any business transaction between attorney and client, client must be able to act meaningfully, voluntarily, and with full legal advice).

§5.43 C. Compliance With Fee Agreement Statute

Although there are exceptions, written fee agreements are usually required. If no valid written fee agreement exists when one is required, the agreement is voidable at the option of the client and the attorney is entitled only to a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §§6147(b), 6148(c).

A contingent fee agreement with a merchant who employs ten or more employees to recover a claim against another merchant need not be in writing. Bus & P C §6147.5. If the agreement is not in writing, however, attorney fees are limited to the amounts set forth in that section.

Bills for an attorney's services must comply in many instances with Bus & P C §6148. Failure to comply renders the fee agreement voidable at the client's election, but the attorney may still be entitled to a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §6148(c).

A fee-sharing agreement that does not comply with Cal Rules of Prof Cond 2-200 (financial arrangements among attorneys) is unenforceable. Chambers v Kay (2002) 29 C4th 142, 148, 126 CR2d 536; Margolin v Shemaria (2000) 85 CA4th 891, 102 CR2d 502.

For further discussion, see chap 3.

§5.44 D. Proving Fee Agreement

An attorney's right to enforce a fee agreement—subject as it is to many statutory, ethical, regulatory, and presumptive tests—is otherwise similar to the enforcement of any contract. An action to enforce a fee agreement requires proof of the fee agreement, performance of the attorney's contractual obligations, the occurrence of the contingencies if it is a contingent fee agreement, and proof of the fee due.

Generally, the client's prevention of the attorney's performance of the fee agreement cannot be successfully used by the client to bar the attorney's recovery of a fee. Stone v Carpenter (1963) 211 CA2d 491, 496, 27 CR 203 (contingent fee when client refused to sign necessary documents).

Contingent fees. When there is a valid written contingent fee agreement and the client has changed attorneys before the contingency has been satisfied, the former attorney is entitled to a reasonable fee based on quantum meruit after the contingency has occurred. Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 792, 100 CR 385. If a fee dispute arises, the value of services rendered will be determined in light of the actual award. See Spires v American Bus Lines (1984) 158 CA3d 211, 216, 204 CR 531 (when reasonable fee in contingent fee case would exceed amount of recovery realized in action, prorata distribution of fee is required).

Business records. To be admissible at a trial on a fee dispute, time records must be kept in a manner that satisfies the business record exception to the hearsay rule. See Evid C §§1270-1271 (e.g., writing must be shown to have been made in the regular course of business).

§5.45 E. Determining Reasonable Attorney Fees in Absence of Fee Agreement; Guidelines

When a written fee agreement is required and there is none, or it is defective, the attorney may still be entitled to a reasonable fee. Bus & P C §§6147(b), 6148(c). To prove the reasonable value of the services rendered, expert testimony is admissible. See Spencer v Collins (1909) 156 C 298, 307, 104 P 320. A plaintiff's attorney is usually qualified to express an opinion on the reasonableness of the fee, but that opinion is not likely to be as persuasive as an independent expert's opinion. See Freese v Pennie (1895) 110 C 467, 469, 42 P 978 ("[a]ttorneys are inclined to place a very high estimate upon the value of their services when rendered in important litigation").

JUDICIAL PERSPECTIVE: Although the court has the discretion to determine for itself the reasonableness of a fee (see 110 C at 470), it is difficult to see how it can conscientiously do so in complicated cases without the aid of expert testimony on the subject. The economics of law practice, the billing procedures in various specialties, and the reasonableness of fees charged in certain cases can be complex problems in which judges may be inclined to seek enlightenment from expert witnesses.

Some guidelines in determining the reasonableness of a fee appear in Cal Rules of Prof Cond 4-200. This rule is designed to set a standard by which unconscionable fees can be judged, and it lists factors that bear on the size of fees that would be found acceptable. The fees charged by other practitioners in the geographical area involved can also be used as a guide to the reasonableness of a fee. Matthiesen v Smith (1936) 16 CA2d 479, 483, 60 P2d 873. For further discussion, see chap 3 (representation agreements). In addition, the State Bar has issued an advisory on the topic of reasonable fees in the context of fee arbitrations. See Arbitration Advisory 98-03 (filed June 23, 1998; available on the State Bar website at www.calbar.ca.gov).

When an attorney is entitled to fees, the separately itemized services performed by the attorney's paralegal that are not included in the overhead component of the attorney's hourly rate may be included in deter mining the reasonableness of the fee. Guinn v Dotson (1994) 23 CA4th 262, 28 CR2d 409 (attorney fees as sanctions under CCP §411.35). See also Missouri v Jenkins (1989) 491 US 274, 105 L Ed 2d 229, 109 S Ct 2463; Sundance v Municipal Court (1987) 192 CA3d 268, 237 CR 269.

F. Client's Defenses to Action for Fees

§5.46 1. Attorney's Unjustified Withdrawal

An attorney's voluntary withdrawal from a contingent fee agreement on the ground that the attorney-client relationship has broken down may be sufficient to defeat an attorney's right to fees after the client's claims are settled by negotiation. See Estate of Falco (1987) 188 CA3d 1004, 1018, 233 CR 807 (court held clients' refusal to settle was within their rights and was not good cause for attorneys' withdrawal). On rules for attorney's permissive and mandatory withdrawal, see chap 4. See chap 4 on entitlement to fees.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.47 2. Illegal Fee Agreements

In various circumstances it is illegal to agree to a fee for services, or the fee is limited by law, and the client may thus repudiate the fee agreement. For discussion of situations in which fee agreement is illegal, see chap 3.

© The Regents of the University of California

§5.48 3. Discharge of Attorney

Historically, an attorney who was discharged for cause by the client was still entitled to a fee, but it might not be the fee agreed on. The attorney's recovery for fees was the reasonable value of the services rendered up to the time of discharge. Salopek v Schoemann (1942) 20 C2d 150, 153, 124 P2d 21. See §5.45. In Fracasse v Brent (1972) 6 C3d 784, 792, 100 CR 385, the California Supreme Court held that an attorney discharged, with or without cause, is "entitled to recover the reasonable value of his services rendered to the time of discharge." The discharged attorney is also entitled to fee recovery whether or not the contract is divisible. Fracasse v Brent, supra; Estate of Falco (1987) 188 CA3d 1004, 233 CR 807.

NOTE: The supreme court in Fracasse concluded that discharge of an attorney, with or without cause, is not treated as a breach of the representation contract by the client. Fracasse, 6 C3d at 790. On client's right to discharge attorney, see chap 4.

Notice of Your Rights After Fee Arbitration

(Revised October 5, 2001)

Your arbitration of attorney's fees has been decided. The arbitrator's award is enclosed. Please read the award carefully.

This notice will explain the rights you may have now that the arbitration is completed. To understand your rights, you must determine whether the award is binding or non-binding, which should be stated in the award.

If you are not satisfied with the award, you should follow the instructions below to protect your rights. If you are satisfied with the award, please see Part 1E below if your award is non-binding or Part 2C and D if your award was binding or has become binding. If you are unsure of your rights or have questions after reading this pamphlet, you should consult an attorney.

PART 1 - Rights After Non-Binding Arbitration

If the arbitration award is non-binding, you may have a right to a trial in court. However, if you did not appear at your fee arbitration hearing, you will have to prove to the court that you had a good reason for not being there. If the court determines that your failure to appear was willful, you may not be entitled to a trial after arbitration.

A. HOW LONG DO I HAVE TO ACT?

If you want a trial in court, you must act within 30 days after the date the arbitration award was served on you.

The date the arbitration award was served is printed on the Proof of Service attached to the award.

B. HOW DO I GET A TRIAL IN COURT?

You must file documents in the proper court within the 30 day limit.

C. WHAT DOCUMENTS MUST I FILE? IN WHAT COURT MUST I FILE THEM?

That depends upon whether a lawsuit about the fees has already been filed.

(1) Yes - lawsuit already filed.

If a lawsuit about the fees has already been filed, then you must file a "Rejection of Arbitration Award and Request for Trial" with the same court. The bar association does not provide this document. If the lawsuit was filed in Superior Court, you may need a lawyer's help to file your

"Rejection of Arbitration Award and Request for Trial." If the lawsuit was filed in Small Claims Court, you may discuss this with a Small Claims Court Advisor. The Small Claims Court has Judicial Counsel forms to use, (forms SC-100 and SC-101) for this purpose.

(2) No - lawsuit not yet filed.

If no lawsuit about the fees has been filed yet, then you must file your own lawsuit in the proper court.

(a) Proper Court.

The Small Claims Court is the proper court if the amount in dispute is $5,000 or less, otherwise, the Superior Court is the proper court.

(b) How to file a lawsuit.

A lawsuit is brought by filing a "complaint" with the court. A complaint is a legal document that tells the court what you want and why you are entitled to it. The bar association does not have such forms. You may need a lawyer's help to file your complaint if you are filing in the Superior Court. To reject an award, you still must file a complaint, even if you are not seeking monies from the other party.

D. DO I RISK ANYTHING BY FILING FOR A TRIAL IN COURT?

Yes. The "losing party" in court may be ordered to pay the prevailing party's attorney's fees and costs. You will be the "losing party" if you do no better in court than you did in the arbitration.

E. WHAT IF I AM SATISFIED WITH THE AWARD?

If you are satisfied with the award, wait 30 days. The award will become binding automatically if the other party does not file for a trial in court within the 30 day period after service of the award. Once the award becomes binding, see Part 2C and D to find out what to do next.

PART 2 - Rights After Binding Arbitration

A. WHAT ARE MY RIGHTS IF THE ARBITRATION AWARD IS BINDING?

If the arbitration award is binding, you must abide by it. There is no appeal from a binding award. Even so, a binding award can be corrected or "vacated" (overturned) by a court, but only on limited grounds as set forth in Code of Civil Procedure section 1286.2 (see attached excerpts of the statute).

B. WHAT IF I AM DISSATISFIED WITH A BINDING AWARD?

A court has the power to "vacate" (overturn) an arbitration award, but only on very narrow grounds. A court can also correct obvious mistakes in the award, such as an arithmetic error.

If you think you are entitled to correct or vacate the arbitration award, please follow the instructions below to protect your rights.

(1) What must I do to vacate or correct a binding arbitration award?

You must file a petition in the proper court.

(2) How long do I have to act?

(a) If you want to correct or vacate the award, you must file a petition within 100 days after the date the arbitration award was served. The date of service is on the proof of service attached to the award.

(b) However, if you wish to petition to vacate or correct the award but receive notice that the other side has filed a petition to confirm the award, you no longer have 100 days to file your petition. You must then respond by filing, in a timely manner, your opposition to the petition to confirm the award and your petition to vacate/correct the award.

(3) What is a petition?

A petition is a legal document that tells the court what you want and why you are entitled to it. The bar association does not provide forms for these petitions. You may need a lawyer's help to prepare your petition.

(4) In what court do I file my petition?

That depends upon whether a lawsuit about the fees has already been filed.

(a) Yes - *lawsuit already filed.

If a lawsuit about the fees has already been filed, you will file your petition to vacate or correct the award with that same court.

(b) No - *lawsuit not yet filed.

If no lawsuit about the fees has been filed, then you will file your petition with the court that has jurisdiction over the amount of the arbitration award. The Small Claims Court is the proper court if the amount of the arbitration award is $5,000 or less, otherwise, the Superior Court is the proper court.

Print

(5) Do I risk anything by petitioning the court to correct or vacate the award?

Yes. If you lose, the court may order you to pay the prevailing party's attorney's fees and costs.

C. WHAT IF I AM SATISFIED WITH THE ARBITRATION AWARD AND AM OWED MONEY?

If the arbitration award grants you a refund, you should write the other party a letter and demand payment. If you are not paid, and you are the client, you have the right to ask the State Bar to assist you in enforcing the award. If you want the State Bar to assist you and:

(1) 100 days have passed from service of the award and the award is binding, or

(2) the award has become a final judgment following a trial after arbitration or a petition to vacate, correct or confirm the award, and

(3) The award was served less than four years ago, you may request a form for enforcement of the award by contacting the following office:

The State Bar of California
Mandatory Fee Arbitration Program
180 Howard Street, 6th Floor
San Francisco, CA 94105
(415) 538-2020

You will be required to complete a State Bar "Client's Request for Enforcement of an Arbitration Award" form. The attorney on the other side will be given an opportunity to respond to your request and agree to a payment plan. He or she will also be able to ask for an opportunity to prove that he or she is not responsible for paying you or is financially unable to pay the award.

The State Bar Court may place the opposing attorney on involuntary inactive status until the award is paid. An attorney on inactive status is not entitled to practice law. (Business and Professions Code section 6203(d)). Any party may contact the State Bar at the address above for a copy of the rules that govern this procedure.

Any party who is owed money has the right to request court orders allowing that party to take property or money from the other party's paycheck, and/or bank accounts. To get those court orders, you must first obtain a judgment confirming the arbitration award.

(1) How do I obtain a judgment confirming the arbitration award?

To obtain a judgment confirming the arbitration award, whether it was the result of a hearing or a stipulated agreement, you must petition for confirmation with the proper court.

Print

(a) What is a petition for confirmation?

A petition for confirmation is a legal document that tells the court what you want and why you are entitled to it. The bar association does not have forms for these petitions. You may need a lawyer's help to prepare your petition.

(b) What is the proper court?

That depends on the amount you are owed. If it is $5,000 or less, the Small Claims Court is the proper court, otherwise, the Superior Court is the proper court.

(2) How long do I have to file my petition for confirmation?

You must file your petition for confirmation within four years of the date the arbitration award is served on you. That date appears on the proof of service attached to the award.

(3) What are my rights after the arbitration award is confirmed?

When the arbitration award is confirmed, it becomes a judgment of the court. Once you have a judgment, as a judgment creditor, you have a right to "execute" the judgment. That means you may be entitled to court orders allowing you to collect your money by garnishing the other party's paycheck or bank accounts, and/or placing a lien on his or her property. The court has forms to use when you execute. The bar association has no such forms.

D. WHAT IF I AM SATISFIED WITH THE ARBITRATION AWARD AND I OWE MONEY?

If you owe money, pay it. If you do not pay the award, the other party has a right to obtain a judgment confirming the award and collect the judgment.

Attached are excerpts from the California Business and Professions Code and the California Code of Civil Procedure. The first excerpt, from the Business and Professions Code, is the law that governs fee arbitrations between attorneys and their clients, as well as the authority to request a trial following non-binding arbitration . The second excerpt, from the Code of Civil Procedure, sets forth the law on confirming, vacating or correcting arbitration awards.

You can find further information at your county law library or online at www.calbar.org.

WATCH THOSE DEADLINES!

The deadlines we have explained in this notice are important. You can lose certain rights if you do not act before the deadlines pass.

Comment: The State Bar Board of Governors has approved this form for mandatory use in arbitrations it conducts and in arbitrations conducted by local bar associations. It must be served at the same time as the arbitrator's award. See Bus & P C §6204.5(b); §5.35.

I. INTRODUCTION

§6.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses subject matter jurisdiction over the action and personal jurisdiction over the defendant. Service of process is discussed in chap 17.

Subject matter jurisdiction (i.e., whether a California court is competent to hear and determine a particular type of civil action) is discussed in §§6.4-6.39. The relationship between state and federal subject matter jurisdiction is discussed in §§6.40-6.51, limitations on subject matter jurisdiction are discussed in §§6.52-6.57, and challenging subject matter jurisdiction is discussed in §§6.58-6.59.

Personal jurisdiction (i.e., whether a California court may make a ruling affecting a particular individual in a civil action) is covered in §§6.60-6.106. In rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction are discussed in §§6.107-6.110. Diagnostic questions are provided in §6.111. On challenging jurisdiction over the parties, see chap 19.

Personal jurisdiction should be distinguished from service of process, which is discussed in chap 17.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.2 B. Governing Law

Subject matter jurisdiction of California courts (i.e., competence of a court to adjudicate a particular civil action) is governed by the state constitution and regulated by statute. See Cal Const art VI, §§11-12 (Supreme Court); Cal Const art VI, §§10-11 (courts of appeal); Cal Const art VI, §10 (superior courts); see generally §§6.4-6.39. Limited civil cases are governed by CCP §§85-89; in particular, unlimited civil cases are defined by CCP §88. Economic litigation for limited civil cases is governed by CCP §§90-100. Jurisdiction of small claims court is governed by CCP §116.220.

Personal jurisdiction is governed by CCP §410.10.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.3 C. Related Issues

Concurrently with the questions of subject matter and personal jurisdiction, the attorney should consider several related questions before filing a California civil action. These are (1) the appropriate venue for the action, i.e., the geographical location of the court in which the action can be tried (see generally CCP §§392-403; see also chap 8); (2) the steps that must be followed to effect proper service of process in the action, without which the court does not acquire jurisdiction (CCP §412.20; see §17.4); and (3) if the action arises from events that occurred in more than one state or country, the applicable substantive law (see, e.g., Hurtado v Superior Court (1974) 11 C3d 574, 114 CR 106; Reich v Purcell (1967) 67 C2d 551, 63 CR 31).

Venue is ordinarily not jurisdictional, i.e., an otherwise valid judgment is not rendered void when the court is not located in the proper county for trial of the action. Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 C3d 94, 119, 101 CR 745. Venue is jurisdictional, however, when a statute specifies a place of trial as part of a grant of subject matter jurisdiction. For discussion of venue, see chap 8.

II. SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

§6.4 A. General Principles

A threshold question for an attorney preparing to institute or defend a California civil action is whether a court has jurisdiction to hear the action against the proposed defendant. In its strict sense "jurisdiction" means a court's power to hear or determine the case, i.e., its authority over the subject matter and the parties. If the court lacks authority over either, it lacks jurisdiction in the strict sense. Abelleira v District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 C2d 280, 288, 109 P2d 942. See also Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 C3d 94, 120 n24, 101 CR 745.

§6.5 1. Conferred by California Constitution

Subject matter jurisdiction of California courts (i.e., competence of a court to adjudicate a particular civil action) is conferred by the state constitution and regulated by statute. See Cal Const art VI, §§11-12 (Supreme Court); Cal Const art VI, §§10-11 (courts of appeal); Cal Const art VI, §10 (superior courts).

Once subject matter jurisdiction and jurisdiction over the parties attach, the court has jurisdiction over all subsequent proceedings until final judgment is entered. CCP §410.50(b); Riley v Superior Court (1957) 49 C2d 305, 316 P2d 956; Serrano v Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 1014, 1031, 76 CR3d 559 (transcript fee dispute). A court may be divested of subject matter jurisdiction, however, by statutory enactment. Ball v Tolman (1902) 135 C 375, 67 P 339.

§6.6 2. Consent, Waiver, or Estoppel

Unlike personal jurisdiction, subject matter jurisdiction cannot be conferred on a court by consent of the parties (Sampsell v Superior Court (1948) 32 C2d 763, 197 P2d 739, disapproved on other grounds in Robinson v Superior Court (1950) 35 C2d 379, 218 P2d 10), by waiver (Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Theatrical Stage Employees Union, Local 16 (1968) 69 C2d 713, 73 CR 213), or by estoppel (Summers v Superior Court (1959) 53 C2d 295, 1 CR 324).

§6.7 3. Judgment Void If Court Lacks Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A judgment rendered by a court that does not have subject matter jurisdiction is void and unenforceable (Kee v Becker (1942) 54 CA2d 466, 129 P2d 159) and may be attacked anywhere, directly or collaterally, by parties or by strangers to the judgment (Davis v Myre (1964) 228 CA2d 616, 39 CR 682).

§6.8 4. Exclusive Concurrent Jurisdiction

The established rule of "exclusive concurrent jurisdiction" provides that, when two or more courts possess concurrent subject matter jurisdiction over a cause, the court that first asserts jurisdiction assumes it to the exclusion of all others, thus rendering "concurrent" jurisdiction "exclusive" with the first court. Scott v Industrial Acc. Comm'n (1956) 46 C2d 76, 81, 293 P2d 18; Franklin & Franklin v 7-Eleven Owners for Fair Franchising (2000) 85 CA4th 1168, 1175, 102 CR2d 770.

This rule does not apply when two courts are not of the same sovereignty, such as when one court is in California and another in Minnesota. Advanced Bionics Corp. v Medtronic, Inc. (2002) 29 C4th 697, 128 CR2d 172. When two courts in different states have concurrent jurisdiction over a case, although California has the power to restrain persons within the state from prosecuting actions in other domestic or foreign jurisdictions (Speckels v Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co. (1897) 117 C 377, 378, 49 P 353), this power should be used sparingly. 29 C4th at 705. A TRO may be appropriate to prevent a conflict between different California state courts, but the possibility of potentially inconsistent adjudications does not outweigh the deference due to independent foreign proceedings. Thus, California's strong interest in protecting its employees from noncompetition agreements did not justify a TRO restricting pursuit of a Minnesota action. Advanced Bionics Corp. v Medtronic, Inc., supra.

§6.9 B. Supreme Court

The California Supreme Court has original jurisdiction to issue extraordinary writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus. Cal Const art VI, §10. The supreme court has indirect powers to review civil judgments and orders of all lower state courts and administrative agencies. It may, for example, transfer to itself before decision a case pending in a court of appeal. Cal Const art VI, §12(a). It may also, before decision, transfer a cause from itself to a court of appeal or from one court of appeal or division to another. The court to which the cause is transferred has jurisdiction. Cal Const art VI, §12(a). The supreme court may, after a decision in the court of appeal, review that decision in any matter. Cal Const art VI, §12(b); Cal Rules of Ct 8.512(c). On the grounds for granting review, see Cal Rules of Ct 8.500(b).

The California Supreme Court has direct appellate jurisdiction only in criminal cases when judgment of death has been pronounced. Cal Const art VI, §11. The court has exclusive jurisdiction to review final decisions (except in complaint or enforcement proceedings) of the Public Utilities Commission pertaining to water corporations (Pub Util C §1756(f)), and disciplinary recommendations of the California State Bar (Cal Rules of Ct 9.13). For further discussion, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Courts §§333-334 (5th ed 2008); California Civil Appellate Practice §1.7 (3d ed Cal CEB 1996).

§6.10 C. Courts of Appeal

The California courts of appeal have appellate jurisdiction over all civil actions in which the superior courts have original jurisdiction in causes of a type within the appellate jurisdiction of the courts of appeal on June 30, 1995, and in other causes as prescribed by statute, except for limited civil cases. See Cal Const art VI, §11(a)-(b) (appellate division of superior court has jurisdiction in appeal of limited civil cases). The courts of appeal have original jurisdiction over all petitions for extraordinary writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus. Cal Const art VI, §10.

For further discussion, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Courts §§335-338 (5th ed 2008); California Civil Appellate Practice §1.8 (3d ed Cal CEB 1996).

§6.11 D. Superior Courts

The California Constitution sets the jurisdiction for the California Supreme Court and the courts of appeal and states that the superior courts "have original jurisdiction in all other causes." Cal Const art VI, §10.

NOTE: Thus, the superior court is a court of general jurisdiction, and consequently has original subject matter jurisdiction over all causes of action arising in California, except for matters in which the California legislature has limited its jurisdiction (e.g., governmental immunity, failure to exhaust administrative remedies) and matters involving federal law in which Congress has conferred exclusive jurisdiction on the federal courts.

The superior courts have original jurisdiction to issue extraordinary writs, i.e., mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus. Cal Const art VI, §10. Although the constitution also gives original jurisdiction in writ proceedings to the courts of appeal and the California Supreme Court, application must first be made to the superior court unless a sufficient showing is made to justify an initial application to an appellate court. Cal Rules of Ct 8.486(a)(1). Superior courts may not issue extraordinary writs, however, in cases in which subject matter jurisdiction is vested exclusively in other tribunals, e.g., writs directed to the Public Utilities Commission (see Pub Util C §1759).

Although subject matter jurisdiction is vested in the superior court as a whole, as a matter of convenience the superior court is divided into departments (e.g., the probate department), and the legislature may require certain matters to be heard in a particular department. Estate of Bowles (2008) 169 CA4th 684, 695, 87 CR3d 122 (probate department had original jurisdiction over Prob C 17000 action and concurrent jurisdiction over civil complaint; local rule determines whether civil action should be assigned to probate department).

For further discussion, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Courts §§210-216 (5th ed 2008).

§6.12 1. Trial Court Unification

The superior court has subject matter jurisdiction over civil matters formerly within the municipal court's jurisdiction, which are classified as "limited civil cases." CCP §§85-85.1 (defining "limited civil cases" as all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000). See also CCP §88 (unlimited civil cases). Except for procedures specifically designed to lower litigation costs in limited civil cases, the rules of procedure generally applicable to civil actions also apply to limited civil cases. CCP §90. See, e.g., Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119 (form and format of papers), 3.1100-3.1312 (civil law and motion rules).

Procedural distinctions that have been preserved include:

- Limited pleadings (CCP §92);
- Limited discovery (CCP §§93-96);
- Admissibility of affidavits in lieu of live testimony (CCP §98);
- Lower filing fees (compare, e.g., Govt C §70611 (initial filing fee in civil action) with Govt C §70613 (initial filing fee in limited civil action)); and
- Appeal to appellate division of superior court (CCP §904.2).

Judicial arbitration in unlimited and limited civil cases is governed by CCP §1141.11.

Statutes providing for telephonic trial-setting conferences in superior court also apply to cases formerly within the municipal court's jurisdiction. See CCP §367.5(b)(2).

2. Unlimited Civil Cases

§6.13 a. Amount in Controversy Exceeds $25,000

Actions in law in which the amount in controversy exceeds $25,000 are "unlimited civil cases." See CCP §88. See also CCP §§85-85.1 (defining "limited civil cases" as all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000); Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 130, 129 CR2d 275.

§6.14 b. Unlimited Civil Cases by Statute

In addition, there are a number of actions that by statute that are considered unlimited civil cases regardless of the amount in controversy or the nature of the relief sought. These include:

- Guardianship, conservatorship, and probate proceedings (Prob C §§2200, 7050);
- Adoption proceedings (Fam C §§200, 8500-9206);
- Juvenile court proceedings (Welf & I C §245);
- Actions under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (Fam C §§200, 4900-4976);
- Eminent domain proceedings (CCP §1250.010);
- Escheat proceedings (CCP §1410);
- Corporate dissolution proceedings (Corp C §§1800, 1904, 2000);
- Support actions under the Family Code (Fam C §200);
- Proceedings under the Family Conciliation Court Law (Fam C §§1800-1842; see Fam C §1810); and
- Marital dissolutions and other proceedings under the Family Code (see Fam C §200).

3. Limited Civil Cases

§6.15 a. Amount in Controversy Does Not Exceed $25,000

Limited civil cases include all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000, and in which the relief sought is of the type that can be granted in limited civil cases. CCP §85. See CCP §85(c) for specific examples of types of relief that can be granted in limited civil cases. Absent an amendment to a complaint in a limited civil case to conform to proof, the plaintiff may not be awarded damages in excess of the amount plaintiff claimed he sustained as stated in the complaint. Wozniak v Lucutz (2002) 102 CA4th 1031, 126 CR2d 310, disapproved on other grounds in Le Francois v Goel (2005) 35 C4th 1094, 29 CR3d 249.

The first document filed in a limited civil case must identify the case as such and must state whether the amount in controversy is greater or less than $10,000. CCP §422.30(b); Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9)-(10). See Govt C §70613 (filing fee lower when amount in controversy under $10,000). The clerk will classify the case accordingly. CCP §422.30(b). The existence of a statute relating to the court's authority in a limited civil case does not, by itself, imply that the same authority does or does not exist in an unlimited civil case. CC §89(a). Similarly, the existence of a statute relating to the court's authority in an unlimited civil case does not, by itself, imply that the same authority does or does not exist in a limited civil case. CC §89(b).

§6.16 b. Limited Civil Cases by Statute

The following proceedings are among those that have been designated by statute as limited civil cases:

- Value of property does not exceed $25,000. An action at law in which the demand or the value of the property in controversy amounts to $25,000 or less, exclusive of interest, unless the case involves the legality of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine. CCP §86(a)(1).
- Partnership dissolution when assets are under $25,000. An action for partnership dissolution when the partnership assets do not exceed $25,000; interpleader actions when the amount of money or the value of property interpleaded does not exceed $25,000. CCP §86(a)(2).
- Canceling or rescinding contract in connection with action to recover under $25,000. An action to cancel or rescind a contract in connection with an action to recover money not exceeding $25,000, or property of a value not exceeding $25,000, paid or delivered under, or in consideration of, the contract, and actions to revise a contract when the relief is sought in an action on the contract if the action is otherwise a limited civil action. CCP §86(a)(3).
- Unlawful detainer claim under $25,000. A proceeding in forcible entry or forcible or unlawful detainer when the amount of the claim is $25,000 or less. CCP §86(a)(4).

- Mechanics' lien under $25,000. An action to enforce and foreclose, or a petition to release, a mechanics' lien or an assessment lien on a common-interest development (e.g., condominium project) when the amount of the lien is $25,000 or less. But note that, when the total amount of the liens on the property exceeds $25,000, the action is not a limited civil case. CCP §86(a)(6).
- Declaratory relief in limited circumstances. An action for declaratory relief (1) concerning a right of indemnity with respect to the relief demanded in an action that is otherwise a limited civil case, or (2) concerning the right to conduct a trial after a nonbinding attorney fee arbitration award for $25,000 or less under Bus & P C §§6200-6206. CCP §86(a)(7).
- Temporary restraining orders. An action to issue a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, or to take an account, when necessary to preserve the property or rights of any party; to enforce a judgment; to appoint a receiver; or to determine title to personal property seized in a limited civil case. CCP §86(a)(8).
- Recovery of interest in personal property under $25,000. An action for recovery of an interest in personal property or to enforce the liability of the debtor of a judgment debtor, when the value of the interest or debt does not exceed $25,000. CCP §86(a)(9).
- Arbitration agreement when amount in controversy under $25,000. A petition related to an arbitration agreement (see CCP §§1292-1293.2), in which the amount in controversy (or the award, if filed after the award is final) is $25,000 or less. CCP §86(a)(10).
- Confirming, correcting, vacating attorney fee arbitration award under $25,000. A petition brought to confirm, correct, or vacate a binding attorney fee arbitration award that does not exceed $25,000 (see Bus & P C §§6200-6206). CCP §86(a)(10).
- Title to personal property under $25,000. An action to try title to personal property when the amount involved does not exceed $25,000. CCP §86(b)(1).
- Limited civil cases when equitable defense is made. An action that meets other requirements for classification as a limited civil case in which an equitable defense is put forward. CCP §86(b)(2).
- Action to vacate judgment. An action brought to vacate a judgment or an order in a limited civil case. CCP §86(b)(3).
- Action under Long-Term Care, Health, Safety, and Security Act of 1973 (Health & S C §§1417-1439.8). An action brought under this Act if civil penalties are not sought or amount to $25,000 or less. CCP §86.1.

§6.17 c. Appellate Jurisdiction in Limited Civil Cases

The appellate divisions of the superior courts have appellate jurisdiction in limited civil cases. Cal Const art VI, §11(b); CCP §904.2. See also CCP §77; Cal Rules of Ct 8.800-8.936 and 10.1100-10.1108.

§6.18 4. Small Claims Courts

Each superior court in the state must have a small claims division. The small claims division may be known as the "small claims court." CCP §116.210.

For statutes governing small claims courts, see CCP §§116.210-116.950. For additional rules concerning plaintiffs incarcerated in a Department of Corrections facility or a Youth Authority facility, see CCP §116.220(e)-(g).

§6.19 a. Jurisdiction Derived From Statute

Small claims courts derive their jurisdiction solely from statute. CCP §§116.110-116.950. Under CCP §116.220(a), the subject matter jurisdiction of small claims courts is limited to:

- Recovery of money under $5000. Actions seeking recovery of money when the amount claimed does not exceed $5000 (on determining amount in controversy, see §6.25) (CCP §116.220(a)(1));
- Personal property taxes under $5000. Actions to enforce payment of delinquent unsecured personal property taxes in an amount that does not exceed $5000, as long as the legality of the tax is not contested (CCP §116.220(a)(2));
- Writs of possession when amount does not exceed $5000. Proceedings for issuance of a writ of possession under CC §§1861.5 and 1861.10 when the amount of the demand does not exceed $5000 (CCP §116.220(a)(3));
- Confirming, correcting, vacating arbitration awards under $5000. Actions to confirm, correct, or vacate an arbitration award for attorney fees that do not exceed $5000, and de novo hearings after nonbinding arbitration of a fee dispute between an attorney and client involving $5000 or less (CCP §116.220(a)(4)); and
- Injunctions or other equitable relief. Actions for an injunction or other equitable relief only when a statute expressly authorizes a small claims court to award that relief (CCP §116.220(a)(5)).

Jurisdiction over a defendant guarantor required to respond based on the default, actions, or omissions of another is limited to demands that do not exceed $2500, if the guarantor does not charge a fee for its guarantor or surety services. If the defendant guarantor charges for its guarantor or surety services, the limit increases to $4000 for an action brought by a natural person, and $6500 for an action brought by an entity other than a natural person. CCP §116.220(c).

§6.20 b. Attorney Assistance to Litigants

Attorneys are not permitted to take part in the conduct or defense of small claims except as litigants. CCP §116.530(a)-(b). An attorney may, however, provide advice to a litigant, testify to matters of which he or she has personal knowledge, represent a party in an appeal to the superior court, and represent a party in connection with enforcement of a judgment. CCP §116.530(c). Representatives of insurers and "other experts" are also permitted to assist litigants, except in the conduct of the case, and to testify to matters on which they are competent witnesses. CCP §116.541. The court may permit another individual (not an attorney) to assist a party who does not speak English well enough to proceed without assistance. CCP §116.550(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.21 c. Equitable Relief

In any actions seeking relief authorized by CCP §116.220(a)(1)-(a)(4), a small claims court may grant equitable relief in the form of rescission, restitution, reformation, or specific performance in lieu of, or in addition to, money damages. CCP §116.220(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.22 d. Appeals of Small Claims Cases

Appeals of small claims cases continue to be heard in the superior court. In small claims appeals, the superior court tries the action de novo, before a judicial officer other than the judicial officer who heard the action in the small claims division. CCP §116.770(a). A defendant may appeal only on a plaintiff's claim and not on any cross-claim, whereas a plaintiff may appeal only on a cross-claim. CCP §116.710(b); Skaff v Small Claims Court (1968) 68 C2d 76, 65 CR 65.

The superior court's judgment in small claims appeals is final and not appealable. CCP §116.780(a). A superior court hearing a small claims appeal has no jurisdiction to consider a motion to vacate a judgment under CCP §473, a motion for a new trial, a motion to vacate judgment under CCP §663, or a petition for rehearing under Cal Rules of Ct 8.889. ERA-Trotter Girouard Assoc. v Superior Court (1996) 50 CA4th 1851, 58 CR2d 381; Eloby v Superior Court (1978) 78 CA3d 972, 144 CR 597. The court in ERA-Trotter Girouard Assoc. assumed that the court could entertain a motion to vacate or reconsider based on fraud on the court or void acts in excess of the court's jurisdiction. ERA-Trotter Girouard Assoc., 50 CA4th at 1857.

The appellate division of the superior court has jurisdiction over appeals from small claims court postjudgment enforcement orders. General Elec. Capital Auto. Fin. Servs. v Superior Court (2001) 88 CA4th 136, 105 CR2d 552.

§6.22A e. Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel Effect of Small Claims Judgments

It is well established that the claim preclusion aspect of the doctrine of res judicata applies to small claims judgments. Allstate Ins. Co. v Mel Rapton, Inc. (2000) 77 CA4th 901, 92 CR2d 151.

In general, however, small claims judgments are not accorded any collateral estoppel issue preclusion effect because of the informality of the proceedings in small claims court. Sanderson v Niemann (1941) 17 C2d 563, 571, 110 P2d 1025. In Perez v Bruno (1980) 27 C3d 875, 168 CR 114, the supreme court revisited Sanderson, holding that a superior court judgment issued in an appeal from a small claims judgment may have a collateral estoppel effect. The court in Perez distinguished an appellate judgment in a small claims matter from the original judgment by finding that the appellate proceeding in superior court had, in fact, afforded the defendant the formalities of a normal trial. 27 C3d at 885.

Subsequently, the court of appeal considered small claims court procedures enacted after Perez was decided and found that the trial de novo proceedings in superior court on appeal from a small claims court judgment "are now virtually indistinguishable from original proceedings in the small claims court." Rosse v De Soto Cab Co. (1995) 34 CA4th 1047, 1052, 40 CR2d 680. Therefore, the Rosse court found that Perez no longer applies and that Sanderson's holding of no collateral estoppel effect extends to superior court appeals proceedings as well as to the original judgment in small claims court. 34 CA4th at 1052.

A small claims judgment may have a collateral estoppel effect to prevent relitigation of an issue expressly decided against the plaintiff (in contrast to an issue decided against the defendant) in a small claims court action. See Pitzen v Superior Court (2004) 120 CA4th 1374, 1385, 16 CR3d 628. In Pitzen, the court held that "[f]undamental fairness dictates that such a plaintiff, having chosen to litigate in an informal setting by bringing an action in small claims court, cannot cite the informality of that forum to gain a second chance to litigate a previously decided issue in a related matter." 120 CA4th at 1385.

5. Classification of Case as Limited or Unlimited

§6.23 a. Importance of Correct Classification

The jurisdictional classification of a case means its classification as a limited civil case or unlimited civil case. CCP §32.5. Important procedural differences exist between limited civil cases (e.g., lower court costs, simplified discovery) and other matters. Thus, it is necessary to classify actions correctly.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.24 b. Classification by Party Initiating Case

The party initiating the action must classify the case as a limited or unlimited civil case in the first instance, depending on the nature of the action, e.g., actions in law that are designated as unlimited civil cases by statute (see §6.14), or because the amount in controversy exceeds $25,000. See CCP §88. See also CCP §§85-85.1 (defining "limited civil cases" as all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000). On defining a limited civil case, see CCP §85, discussed in §§6.15-6.17.

NOTE: The caption of every pleading filed in a limited civil case must contain the words "Limited Civil Case." CCP §422.30(b); Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(10). In addition, on the complaint, petition, or application filed in a limited civil case, below the character or the action or proceeding, the amount demanded must be stated as follows: "Amount demanded exceeds $10,000" or "Amount demanded does not exceed $10,000." Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9). See §11.26.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/6 California Jurisdiction/§6.25 (1) Determining Amount in Controversy

§6.25 (1) Determining Amount in Controversy

The following guidelines for determining the amount in controversy seem likely to be of continued use in determining how a case should be classified or reclassified under CCP §§403.010-403.090:

- In computing the amount in controversy, claims for interest are excluded. CCP §85(a); Christian v Superior Court (1898) 122 C 117, 54 P 518 (interest on note cannot be added to principal to determine amount in controversy even when parties stipulated in note that unpaid interest would be treated as principal and itself bear interest).
- A complaint that states only that damages are "in excess of $25,000" is sufficient; a specific figure is not required. See Engebretson & Co. v Harrison (1981) 125 CA3d 436, 444, 178 CR 77 (upholding superior court's subject matter jurisdiction based on complaint seeking damages "in excess of $5,000," which was jurisdictional amount at that time). The demand must be in good faith. Sellery v Ward (1942) 21 C2d 300, 131 P2d 550.
- A court hearing a complaint properly classified as an unlimited civil case should also be able to entertain a cross-complaint arising from the same transaction, even if it seeks damages of $25,000 or less. Sullivan v California Realty Co. (1904) 142 C 201, 75 P 767.
- Costs are not included in computing the amount in controversy. CCP §85(a); Henigan v Ervin (1895) 110 C 37, 42 P 457.
- Attorney fees are not included in determining the amount in controversy. CCP §85(a).
- A plaintiff may not state any amount for punitive damages in a claim. CC §3295(e).

NOTE: It may be that a plaintiff could allege, in order to establish unlimited superior court jurisdiction, that the total amount of damages sought, including punitive damages, exceeds $25,000; but no published decision has yet addressed the issue.

PRACTICE TIP: The way the complaint is framed can make a difference in determining the amount in controversy. Careful drafting may enable an attorney to prosecute a case in a court more advantageously to his or her client than might initially appear possible. Consider, for example, an action based on the loss of personal property resulting from the defendant's wrongful acts. If the complaint seeks recovery of the property, the value of the property determines the amount in controversy. If damages for loss of use are also sought, they may not be included in computing the amount in controversy. Holm v Davis (1935) 8 CA2d 328, 47 P2d 537. If, however, the complaint seeks damages for conversion, the total demand of the complaint, not simply the value of the personal property, determines the amount in controversy. Hall v Cline (1920) 45 CA 616, 188 P 295.

The following principles relating to aggregation of damages appear likely to be of continued use in determining how a case should be classified or reclassified under CCP §§403.010-403.090:

- When one plaintiff alleges multiple claims against a single defendant in a complaint, all claim demands are aggregated to establish the amount in controversy. Hammell v Superior Court (1932) 217 C 5, 17 P2d 101; Strahan v Rodney (1950) 97 CA2d 448, 217 P2d 711.
- When one plaintiff has separate claims against several defendants, aggregation is not permitted. Myers v Sierra Valley Stock & Agric. Ass'n (1898) 122 C 669, 55 P 689; Heavilin v Westchester Fire Ins. Co. (1936) 12 CA2d 695, 56 P2d 252.
- When the plaintiff has only one claim but alleges different theories of recovery, aggregation is not permitted. Perry v Farley Bros. Moving & Storage (1970) 6 CA3d 884, 86 CR 397.
- When several plaintiffs have joint claims against one defendant, the claims are aggregated. Frost v Mighetto (1937) 22 CA2d 612, 71 P2d 932.
- When two or more plaintiffs join separate claims under CCP §378 (permissive joinder), aggregation is not permitted. Winrod v Wolters (1903) 141 C 399, 74 P 1037; Colla v Carmichael U-Drive Autos, Inc. (1930) 111 CA Supp 784, 294 P 378. However, if one of the claims is for more than $25,000, the entire action is properly classified as an unlimited civil action. Emery v Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1937) 8 C2d 663, 67, P2d 1046; All-Cool Aluminum Awning Co. v Superior Court (1964) 224 CA2d 660, 36 CR 769. On joinder of causes of action generally, see chap 14.

For further discussion of aggregating claims, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §§37-43 (5th ed 2008).

NOTE: The provisions for determining the jurisdictional classification of civil cases in superior court do not apply to small claims. See §6.18.

6. Reclassification

§6.27 a. Changing Jurisdictional Classification

After the initiation of a cause of action, a party or the court may change its jurisdictional classification in the following ways (CCP §§403.010-403.090):

- By amended initial pleading. See CCP §403.020. See §6.28.
- By cross-complaint. See CCP §403.030. See §6.29.
- By a party on a noticed motion. See CCP §403.040(a)-(b). See §6.30.
- By stipulation. See CCP §403.050. See §6.31.
- By court. See CCP §403.040(a). See §6.32.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/6 California Jurisdiction/§6.28 (1) By Amended Initial Pleading

§6.28 (1) By Amended Initial Pleading

A party filing an amended initial pleading (complaint, cross-complaint, petition), which changes the jurisdictional classification of the case from limited to unlimited, must at the time of filing the pleading pay the applicable reclassification fee, and the clerk must promptly reclassify the case. If the amendment changes the jurisdictional classification from unlimited to limited, no reclassification fee is required, and the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case. CCP §403.020. For reclassification fees, see CCP §403.050. See also §§6.35-6.36.

If a case is reclassified by an amended complaint, cross-complaint, amended cross-complaint, or other pleading under CCP §403.020 (reclassification by filing amended complaint or other initial pleading) or §403.030 (reclassification by filing cross-complaint), the caption must indicate that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this pleading. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(11).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.29 (2) By Cross-Complaint

A party to a limited civil case filing a cross-complaint that causes the case to exceed the amount-in-controversy limitation or that requests relief unavailable in a limited civil case may reclassify the case by stating in the caption that the action is a limited civil case to be reclassified by cross-complaint, or words to that effect. The party at the time of filing the cross-complaint must pay the reclassification fees, and the clerk must promptly reclassify the case. CCP §403.030. For reclassification fees, see CCP §403.050. See also §§6.35-6.36.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.30 (3) By Noticed Motion

If a case has been mistakenly classified, any party may make a motion to have it reclassified. See CCP §403.040(a). A plaintiff, cross-complainant, or petitioner may file a motion for reclassification within the time allowed for that party to amend the initial pleading. CCP §403.040(a). A defendant or a cross-defendant may file a motion for reclassification within the time allowed for that party to respond to the initial pleading. CCP §403.040(a)-(b). The motion for reclassification does not extend the moving party's time to amend or answer or otherwise respond. The court must grant the motion, regardless of any fault or lack of fault, if case has been classified in an incorrect jurisdictional classification. CCP §403.040(a).

If the motion is filed after the deadline for amending the party's initial pleading or for filing a responsive pleading, the court must grant the motion and enter an order for reclassification, but only if both of the following conditions are met:

- The case is incorrectly classified.
- The party shows good cause for not seeking reclassification earlier.

CCP §403.040(b).

Whether a party makes a motion or the court raises the jurisdictional issue on its own motion under §403.040(a), the court must provide "sufficient opportunity to respond and offer reasons why [reclassification] should or should not be ordered." Even if no hearing is held, before ordering reclassification, the court must give the parties an opportunity to contest reclassification. Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 231, 129 CR2d 275.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.31 (4) By Stipulation

The parties to the action or proceeding may stipulate to reclassification of the case within the time allowed to respond to the initial pleading. CCP §403.050(a). If the stipulation for reclassification changes the jurisdictional classification of the case from limited to unlimited, the reclassification fee provided in CCP §403.060 must be paid at the time the stipulation is filed. CCP §403.050(b). On filing the stipulation and, if required under CCP §403.050(b), the payment of the reclassification fee, the clerk must promptly reclassify the case. CCP §403.050(c).

If a case is reclassified by stipulation under CCP §403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or words to that effect. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(11). For a sample caption, see §11.26.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.32 (5) By Court

The court may reclassify a case at any time on its own motion. CCP §403.040(a). A court contemplating ordering reclassification on its own motion must also provide notice to the parties. Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 231, 129 CR2d 275.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/6 California Jurisdiction/§6.33 b. When Reclassification Is Not Required

§6.33 b. When Reclassification Is Not Required

Reclassification is not required in the following circumstances:

- The judgment actually rendered in a case not classified as a limited civil case is one that could have been rendered in a limited civil case. CCP §403.040(e).
- The plaintiff in a case that is misclassified as a limited civil case solely because the demand in the complaint exceeds the amount-in-controversy limitation remits the excess. CCP §403.040(f).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.34 c. Hearing to Obtain Information on Reclassification

A trial court has authority to conduct a pretrial hearing to obtain information on whether the amount of the judgment will require reclassification. The requirements for determining the amount in controversy formerly applied to the "transfer" of a case from superior to municipal court, and continue to apply when a court makes a determination of the amount in controversy for purposes of "reclassification." Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 230, 129 CR2d 275.

© The Regents of the University of California

d. Reclassification Fees

§6.35 (1) Determination of Fees

If the court grants a motion for reclassification, the payment of the reclassification fee shall be determined, unless the court orders otherwise, as follows (CCP §403.040(c)):

- If a case is reclassified as an unlimited civil case, the party whose pleading causes the action or proceeding to exceed the maximum amount in controversy for a limited civil case or otherwise fails to meet the requirements of a limited civil case shall pay the reclassification fee provided in CCP §403.060 and Govt C §70619.
- If a case is reclassified as a limited civil case, no reclassification fee is required.

The fee for reclassification of a case from a limited civil case to an unlimited civil case is specified by statute. CCP §403.060(a) ($140 as provided in Govt C §70619). This reclassification fee is in addition to any other fee due for that appearance or filing in a limited civil case. No additional amounts are charged for appearance or filing fees paid before reclassification. After reclassification, the fees ordinarily charged in an unlimited case are charged. CCP §403.060(a).

No fee is charged for reclassification of a case from an unlimited civil case to a limited civil case. The fees ordinarily required for filing or appearing in a limited civil case are charged at the time of filing a pleading that reclassifies the case. Parties are not entitled to a refund of the difference between any fees previously paid for appearance or filing in an unlimited civil case and the fees charged in a limited civil case. After reclassification, the fees ordinarily charged in a limited civil case are charged. CCP §403.060(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.36 (2) Reclassification Dependent on Payment of Fees

If the court grants an order for reclassification of an action or proceeding, the reclassification shall proceed as follows:

- If the required reclassification fee is paid under CCP §403.060 (reclassification fees) or if no reclassification fee is required, the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case. CCP §403.040(d)(1).
- An action that has been reclassified under CCP §403.040 shall not be further prosecuted in any court until the required reclassification fee is paid. If that fee has not been paid within five days after service of notice of the order for reclassification, any party interested in the case, regardless of whether that party is named in the complaint, may pay the fee, and the clerk shall promptly reclassify the case as if the fee had been paid as provided in CCP §403.060. The fee shall then be a proper item of costs of the party paying it, which is recoverable if that party prevails in the action or proceeding. Otherwise, the fee shall be offset against and deducted from the amount, if any, awarded to the party responsible for the fee, if that party prevails in the action or proceeding. CCP §403.040(d)(2).
- If the fee is not paid within 30 days after service of notice of an order of reclassification, the court on its own motion or the motion of any party may order the case to proceed as a limited civil case, dismiss the action or cross-action without prejudice on the condition that no other action or proceeding on the same matters may be commenced in any other court until the reclassification fee is paid, or take such other action as the court may deem appropriate. CCP §403.040(d)(3). If a reclassification fee is required and not paid at the time an amended complaint or other initial pleading, a cross-complaint, or a stipulation for reclassification is filed under CCP §403.020, §403.030, or §403.050, the clerk shall not reclassify the case, and it shall remain and proceed as a limited civil case. CCP §403.060(b).

§6.37 e. Abuses of Discretion in Reclassification

Based on case law decided before court unification, it could be argued that a court should not reclassify a case as a limited civil case over the plaintiff's objection unless it determines that the matter will necessarily result in a verdict of $25,000 or less. Walker v Superior Court (1991) 53 C3d 257, 262, 279 CR 576 (trial court abused discretion by transferring two cases to municipal court despite settlement recommendation of $25,000 in one and arbitration award of $25,000 in the other). In addition, reclassification is improper when plaintiffs have no notice and no opportunity to contest reclassification and when evidence does not meet the requirement that matter will "necessarily" result in verdict below jurisdictional minimum. Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 231, 129 CR2d 275.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.38 f. Review of Trial Court's Reclassification Order

Review of the superior court's order reclassifying (or declining to reclassify) a case is by petition for writ of mandate in the court of appeal for the appellate district in which the superior court is located. The petitioner must serve a copy of the petition on the trial court immediately after filing it in the court of appeal. CCP §403.080.

The deadline for filing the petition is 20 days after service of the order. The superior court may extend the deadline by 10 days on application for extension within the initial 20 days, showing good cause for the extension. CCP §403.080.

The court of appeal may stay proceedings in the trial court pending resolution of the writ petition. CCP §403.080. See also form in §5.58 (Notice of Stay of Proceedings (Judicial Council Form CM-180)).

§6.39 7. Transfer of Case Mistakenly Filed in Superior Court

The superior court cannot dismiss an appeal or petition mistakenly filed there instead of in the appropriate appellate court. CCP §396(a). An appeal or petition that is erroneously filed in the superior court must be transferred to the appropriate appellate court. CCP §396(b).

III. RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN STATE AND FEDERAL SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

§6.40 A. Scope of Discussion

In many instances, subject matter jurisdiction of federal courts is concurrent with that of California courts. Consequently, attorneys must recognize the areas of concurrent jurisdiction (see §6.41) and the factors involved in choosing one forum over another when filing an action (see §§6.42-6.51). On federal jurisdiction generally, see chap 7.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.41 B. Exclusive and Concurrent Federal Court Jurisdiction

California courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts in civil actions unless a federal statute provides that federal court jurisdiction is exclusive. Brown v Pitchess (1975) 13 C3d 518, 119 CR 204 (federal statute conferring "original jurisdiction" on federal district courts does not mean such jurisdiction is exclusive). See also Coan v State (1974) 11 C3d 286, 113 CR 187 (Economic Stabilization Act of 1970 (Pub L 91-379, 84 Stat 796) did not give federal courts exclusive jurisdiction over actions to compel state officials to pay wage increases authorized by state but challenged by federal Cost of Living Council created by that Act); Miller v Municipal Court (1943) 22 C2d 818, 850, 142 P2d 297 (state court had concurrent jurisdiction in actions arising under Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 (50 USC App §§901-946)).

The primary areas of exclusive federal court jurisdiction are:

- Admiralty, maritime, and prize cases (28 USC §1333) (but jurisdiction may be concurrent in related nonmaritime cases, e.g., municipal ordinances relating to oil spillage from ships (Mobil Oil Corp. v Town of Huntington (Sup Ct 1972) 339 NYS2d 139));
- Bankruptcy proceedings (28 USC §1334) (but state courts have jurisdiction to decide whether the bankruptcy automatic stay of 11 USC 362(a) applies to a proceeding pending before it, over which the court otherwise has jurisdiction (Lockyer v Mirant Corp. (9th Cir 2005) 398 F3d 1098));
- Patent, trademark, and copyright cases (28 USC §1338; Loew's, Inc. v Superior Court (1941) 18 C2d 419, 115 P2d 983; see also Adkins v Lear, Inc. (1967) 67 C2d 882, 64 CR 545, vacated on other grounds in Lear, Inc. v Adkins (1969) 395 US 653, 23 L Ed 2d 610, 89 S Ct 1902 (state courts have jurisdiction in actions to enforce or cancel patent-licensing agreements); Lockwood v Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2009) 173 CA4th 675, 93 CR3d 220 (state court lacked jurisdiction over case that alleged malpractice by attorneys practicing before U.S. Patent & Trademark Office and that involved substantial questions of federal patent law); Holiday Matinee, Inc. v Rambus Inc. (2004) 118 CA4th 1413, 1426, 13 CR3d 766 (state court lacks jurisdiction over questions of patent validity or enforceability, even without allegations of patent infringement or fraud on U.S. Patent Office); but see Applera Corp. v MP Biomedicals, LLC (2009) 173 CA4th 769, 93 CR3d 178 (action for breach of patent-licensing agreement arises under state law); Linear Technol. Corp. v Applied Materials (2007) 152 CA4th 115, 126, 61 CR3d 221 (claims based on purchase contracts did not involve substantial question of patent law);
- ERISA claims (29 USC §1132) (Totten v Hill (2007) 154 CA4th 40, 47, 64 CR3d 357); and
- Flood coverage claims arising from flood insurance policies issued under the National Flood Insurance Program (42 USC §4072) (McCormick v Travelers Ins. Co. (2001) 86 CA4th 404, 103 CR2d 258).

For additional areas of exclusive federal court subject matter jurisdiction, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §§78-80 (5th ed 2008).

Although not essential to a state court's authority to assert concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts, a specific statement of concurrent jurisdiction is provided in some federal statutes, e.g., naturalization proceedings (8 USC §1421) and actions under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) (45 USC §56).

Even when state court jurisdiction is concurrent with federal courts, a defendant in a state action may be able to have the matter removed to federal court. For discussion, see chap 22.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.42 C. Factors in Determining Choice of Forum

Both the plaintiff's attorney, who may choose between filing a civil action in a California state court and a federal district court in California, and the defendant's attorney, who may have a California state court action removed to federal court under 28 USC §§1441-1452, must consider numerous differences between the two systems and weigh their importance in the particular case. Although an in-depth discussion of these factors is beyond the scope of this chapter, significant differences will be noted. There are apparently no uniform conclusions in comparing California and federal courts, and the attorney's decision ultimately depends on comparison of a particular California court with a particular federal district court.

For further discussion of factors to consider in determining choice of forum, see chap 22.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.43 1. Geographic Considerations

In deciding whether to file suit in a state or a federal court, or whether to remove an action from a state to a federal court, the attorney should remember that the distances that parties, witnesses, and attorneys must travel to attend trial or pretrial motions and conferences may favor one side in terms of expense and convenience. The difference is more significant in rural than urban areas because, although there is a state superior court in each county, federal district courts in California almost always sit only in San Diego (Southern District), Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino, and Santa Ana (Central District), Sacramento and Fresno (Eastern District), and San Francisco, Oakland, and San Jose (Northern District). See 28 USC §84.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.44 2. Venue and Transfer

A consideration for both plaintiffs' and defendants' attorneys in selecting a California state court or federal court is the possibility of transfer in federal court to a more convenient forum under 28 USC §1404(a). Although a California state court may change venue within California under CCP §§396-402 (see chap 20), it cannot transfer a case to a court outside the state. A federal court may, however, transfer a case to a federal court in any other federal district in the United States on grounds of convenience (28 USC §1404(a)) or when venue is improper in the district in which the action is brought (28 USC §1406(a)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.45 3. Applicable Substantive Law

Federal courts must apply state substantive law in determining any issue or claim that has its source in state law. Erie R.R. v Tompkins (1938) 304 US 64, 82 L Ed 1188, 58 S Ct 817. As between federal and California courts, this rule normally presents no advantage in filing an action in, or removing it to, one forum or the other. A federal court is bound, however, by the decision of an intermediate state appellate court, whereas a suit in a state court may result in a contrary appellate decision by another intermediate court or a higher state court.

PRACTICE TIP: When there is an intermediate state court decision that is adverse to the plaintiff's position, the plaintiff should probably file in state court, if at all, and anticipate litigating that issue on appeal.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.46 4. Applicable Procedural Law

Diversity cases. Federal courts must follow state law in actions based on diversity of citizenship "if required by the federal interest in uniform procedure and the state interest in uniformity of result." Byrd v Blue Ridge Rural Elec. Corp. (1958) 356 US 525, 2 L Ed 2d 953, 78 S Ct 893; see also Erie R.R. v Tompkins (1938) 304 US 64, 82 L Ed 1188, 58 S Ct 817. Federal courts in diversity cases must apply, e.g., the statutes of limitations (Guaranty Trust Co. v York (1945) 326 US 99, 110, 89 L Ed 2079, 65 S Ct 1464) and the conflict of laws rules (Klaxon Co. v Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co. (1941) 313 US 487, 85 L Ed 1477, 61 S Ct 1020) of the state in which the district court is located. When the applicability of a federal rule of civil procedure is at issue, however, the Erie rule does not apply and a federal court is usually free to follow the federal rule. Hanna v Plumer (1965) 380 US 460, 14 L Ed 2d 8, 85 S Ct 1136.

Class actions. In most cases, differences between California and federal procedural rules are not significant. One area in which the respective procedural rules differ widely, however, is class actions. Compare, e.g., Eisen v Carlisle & Jacquelin (1974) 417 US 156, 40 L Ed 2d 732, 94 S Ct 2140 (plaintiff must give individual notice at own cost to all class members whose names and addresses are ascertainable with reasonable effort), with Cartt v Superior Court (1975) 50 CA3d 960, 974, 124 CR 376, cited with approval in Archibald v Cinerama Hotels (1976) 15 C3d 853, 126 CR 811 (individual notice not required if unfeasible as long as notice given has reasonable chance of reaching substantial percentage of class members). Similarly, although federal law prohibits immediate appeal of a denial of a class certification motion, California law does not. Watkins v Wachovia Corp. (2009) 172 CA4th 1576, 1591, 92 CR3d 409 (representative plaintiff who settles after denial of class certification is no longer a class member and cannot appeal the denial), criticizing Larner v Los Angeles Doctors Hosp. Assoc. (2008) 168 CA4th 1291, 1300, 86 CR3d 324 (representative plaintiff who settles after denial of class certification motion may appeal the denial if plaintiff reserves right to appeal).

PRACTICE TIP: Because the federal rules are more restrictive than the California rules, a plaintiff's attorney who is considering filing a class action will often do better filing it in a California state court, if possible, than in a federal district court.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.47 5. Juries

There are several important differences in the jury systems of the federal courts and California state courts that the attorney should consider in deciding which forum would be better for the client. A jury in federal district court is usually composed of six persons, but may consist of as many as 12 jurors, depending on how many the judge determines are needed (see, e.g., Fed R Civ P 48), whereas in California it is composed of 12 persons unless the parties stipulate to a smaller number (CCP §220).

In federal court, the jury verdict must be unanimous, unless the parties stipulate to accept a verdict rendered by a lesser majority (Fed R Civ P 48); in California a verdict by three-fourths of the jury is sufficient (CCP §§613, 618). In federal court, jury voir dire under Fed R Civ P 47 is conducted primarily or entirely by the judge; in California state courts, the attorneys have a more active role in asking questions in civil cases (see Cal Rules of Ct 3.1540).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.48 6. Calendar Congestion and Management

The relative calendar congestion in federal and state courts is a matter for the attorney's consideration in determining which forum is preferable. The degree of delay varies with the locality. Generally, federal courts move cases faster than state courts, particularly superior courts in large counties. This may be changing, however, with the implementation of delay reduction rules under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620), enacted to speed up civil litigation at the trial court level. See chap 40.

In federal court, the practice of assigning cases to a particular judge at the time of filing can result in differences in the usual time to trial before one judge and another. Regardless of the particular judge assigned, however, it is often possible to obtain an early setting because the same judge retains control of the case for motions, pretrial, setting, and trial. The same practice provides a federal district court judge with the opportunity to become intimately acquainted with a case, which can be an advantage in complex litigation.

Except for the coordination provisions of CCP §§403-404.9, the master calendar system in some California state courts has not provided these advantages. In master calendar courts, cases are assigned to trial to a court department that is ready and able to hear the case, usually on the day the case is ready for trial. Grant v Superior Court (2001) 90 CA4th 518, 524, 108 CR2d 825. Other courts, such as those in the central district of Los Angeles, are "direct calendar" courts, that is, they follow the federal system in assigning one judge for all purposes, including trial. Zilog, Inc. v Superior Court (2001) 86 CA4th 1309, 1320, 104 CR2d 173; see, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 7.3(i). Thus, some attorneys have traditionally felt that federal courts are better equipped than California master calendar courts to adjudicate large, complex cases in which many pretrial motions are anticipated. However, under the delay reduction rules, a state case may be assigned to a single judge for all purposes.

On delay reduction programs generally, see chap 40.

§6.49 7. Caliber of Judiciary and Opposing Counsel

In some areas, the caliber of the local state court judiciary as compared with federal district court judges is a consideration for attorneys in determining whether to file an action in, or remove one to, federal court. Many attorneys also consider the caliber and experience of opposing counsel. When federal court jurisdiction exists, some attorneys might remove a case filed in state court to federal court when the opposing attorney is unfamiliar with federal court procedures.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.50 8. Attitude of Judiciary

The attorney should consider the respective attitudes of federal and state appellate court judges toward a particular type of case in deciding which court is the more advantageous forum. For example, many California attorneys prefer to file a class action in state court rather than federal court, in part because of the unfavorable attitude toward class actions expressed by the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. See, e.g., In re Hotel Telephone Charges (9th Cir 1974) 500 F2d 86, 90; Kline v Coldwell, Banker & Co. (9th Cir 1974) 508 F2d 226, 236 (concurring opinion of Duniway, J.).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.51 9. Disqualification of Judge

The ease with which an attorney may disqualify a judge in federal or California courts is a factor to consider in choosing the forum. Generally, there is more flexibility in disqualification in California courts than in federal district courts. Although 28 USC §144 might appear on its surface to provide for disqualification in terms that are analogous to the automatic disqualification in CCP §170.6, the federal provision has been narrowly construed. See, e.g., Duplan Corp. v Deering Milliken, Inc. (D SC 1975) 400 F Supp 497.

IV. LIMITATIONS ON SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

§6.52 A. Governmental Immunity

Government Claims Act. The Government Claims Act (formerly known as the Tort Claims Act) (Govt C §§810-998.3), which governs the circumstances under which a government entity may be held liable for monetary damages in tort, provides that a government entity is liable for injuries only when the entity consents to suit, e.g., by contract (see Govt C §814) or when a statute imposes liability (see Govt C §815). For discussion of the history of the Government Claims Act and its relation to the common law doctrine of sovereign immunity, see, e.g., Flournoy v State (1964) 230 CA2d 520, 41 CR 190. For discussion of the substantive law of government tort liability and immunity, see California Government Tort Liability Practice (4th ed Cal CEB 1999). For procedural requirements for filing suit against a government entity imposed under the Government Claims Act, see chap 9.

Governmental immunity to a claim seeking monetary relief is a jurisdictional bar to the action. County of Sacramento v Superior Court (1972) 8 C3d 479, 481, 105 CR 374; Gates v Superior Court (1995) 32 CA4th 481, 509, 38 CR2d 489. Thus, it is appropriate to raise the defense of governmental immunity in the trial court by demurrer (32 CA4th at 487) or by a motion to dismiss (Gould v Executive Power of State (1952) 112 CA2d 890, 247 P2d 424). A writ of mandate or prohibition will lie from the trial court's failure to dismiss the action. See County of Sacramento v Superior Court (1972) 8 C3d 479, 486, 105 CR 374; Gates v Superior Court (1995) 32 CA4th 481, 487, 38 CR2d 489.

Tribal sovereign immunity. Absent congressional authorization or the Indian tribe's consent, a federally recognized Indian tribe is immune from any suit in state court, even if the activity that is the subject of the lawsuit is purely commercial or occurs on nontribal lands. Ameriloan v Superior Court (2008) 169 CA4th 81, 84, 86 CR3d 572. Under the "arms of the tribe" doctrine, the immunity also protects the tribe's for-profit business entities when they operate on behalf of the tribe. Faced with a tribal sovereign immunity challenge to its jurisdiction, a trial court may engage in limited factual and legal pretrial determinations to satisfy itself that it has the authority to hear the case. 169 CA4th at 97.

§6.53 B. Action Barred by Time Limitations

Although a statute of limitation ordinarily provides only a defense to a civil action and does not divest a court of subject matter jurisdiction, some time limitations have the latter effect. For example, CCP §583.210 requires service of the summons and complaint within 3 years after the complaint has been filed and return of the summons or other proof of service within 60 days after the deadline for service. Unless the plaintiff can take advantage of specific exceptions provided in CCP §§583.220-583.240, failure to meet the statutory deadline for service requires dismissal. CCP §583.250. Courts strictly construe service requirements because a defendant is entitled to adequate notice of the action in order for defendant to take necessary steps to preserve evidence. Bishop v Silva (1991) 234 CA3d 1317, 285 CR 910 (plaintiff's failure to effect service on grounds of impossibility not persuasive under CCP §583.240 when the failure to discover relevant facts was not a cause "beyond plaintiff's control").

The strict construction of the service requirements of CCP §583.240 is in contrast to time requirements for trial under CCP §§583.310-583.360. Under the latter sections, a plaintiff's failure to bring a case to trial within the prescribed time is liberally construed because, unlike service, bringing a case to trial is not necessarily within the plaintiff's control. Bishop v Silva, supra; 17 Cal L Rev Comm Reports 905 (1984). For further discussion, see 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Juris §91 (5th ed 2008).

§6.54 C. Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies

California courts do not have subject matter jurisdiction to review the decision of an administrative agency unless all administrative remedies have been exhausted. See, e.g., U.S. v Superior Court (1941) 19 C2d 189, 120 P2d 26 (review of order under Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937 (50 Stat 246)); Abelleira v District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 C2d 280, 109 P2d 942 (proceedings under California Unemployment Insurance Act (Stats 1935, ch 352)); Anderson v Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1958) 159 CA2d 413, 324 P2d 24 (proceedings under Alcoholic Beverage Control Act (Bus & P C §§23000-25762)).

A litigant must exhaust all administrative remedies whenever the relief that plaintiff seeks could have been obtained through administrative procedures unless the remedy is ineffective. See, e.g., Glendale City Employees' Ass'n v City of Glendale (1975) 15 C3d 328, 343, 124 CR 513; Morton v Superior Court (1970) 9 CA3d 977, 88 CR 533. In Caliber Bodyworks, Inc. v Superior Court (2005) 134 CA4th 365, 36 CR3d 31, the court held that the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over plaintiff's causes of action seeking recovery of civil penalties for violations of Lab C §2699.5 because plaintiff failed to comply with required administrative procedures before filing suit under Lab C §2699.3.

If a statute requires a particular class of controversy to be submitted first to an administrative agency as a prerequisite to judicial consideration, and the parties reasonably dispute whether the controversy comes within that class, then the agency has the power before judicial relief is obtained to determine whether the controversy comes within the agency's statutory grant of jurisdiction. Blanks v Seyfarth Shaw LLP (2009) 171 CA4th 336, 362, 89 CR3d 710 (actions colorably arising under Talent Agencies Act (see Lab C 1700.44)) must first be presented to the Labor Commissioner).

§6.55 D. Appellate Jurisdiction Invoked

Once an appeal has been perfected or a reviewing court has issued either a writ or an order to show cause why a writ should not issue, a trial court ordinarily loses jurisdiction over the subject matter of the decision under review, and the appellate court has exclusive jurisdiction over the matter until it returns the case to the trial court. See CCP §§916, 1104. See also Lerner v Superior Court (1952) 38 C2d 676, 242 P2d 321; Sacks v Superior Court (1948) 31 C2d 537, 190 P2d 602; Serrano v Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2008) 162 CA4th 1014, 1030, 76 CR3d 559.

NOTE: When the subject matter of the appeal from an order or judgment is child custody or visitation or the temporary exclusion under the Family Code (e.g., Fam C §§6321, 6340) of any party from a dwelling, the trial court does not lose jurisdiction. CCP §917.7. See also Mancini v Superior Court (1964) 230 CA2d 547, 41 CR 213.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.56 E. Voluntary Dismissal

Unless a defendant has filed a cross-complaint seeking affirmative relief (see chap 26) or has moved for a change of venue under CCP §396b (see chap 20), a California court loses subject matter jurisdiction of the case when the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses an action. CCP §581(b)(1), (h); Roski v Superior Court (1971) 17 CA3d 841, 95 CR 312. A lower court order setting aside the dismissal may be vacated by a writ of prohibition. Simpson v Superior Court (1945) 68 CA2d 821, 158 P2d 46.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.57 F. Order Changing Venue

When a California court issues an order changing the venue of an action on any ground specified in CCP §397, the transferring court loses subject matter jurisdiction over the action and the receiving court exercises jurisdiction as if the action had begun there. CCP §399(c). Prohibition is available to prevent trial of the case in the transferring court. Chase v Superior Court (1908) 154 C 789, 99 P 355. The transferring court may consider a motion under CCP §473 to vacate the order. Badella v Miller (1955) 44 C2d 81, 86, 279 P2d 729. For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §916 (5th ed 2008). See also chap 20.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.57A G. Standing

As is the case with federal jurisdiction, the requirement that a party must have standing to seek relief is a limitation on California subject matter jurisdiction. For example, in the Internet context, third parties who were not defendants in the underlying lawsuit lacked standing to challenge, on First Amendment grounds, a discovery order that sought the identity of anonymous posters of allegedly defamatory postings on Internet message boards. Matrixx Initiatives, Inc. v Doe (2006) 138 CA4th 872, 42 CR3d 79. Statutes often address whether a plaintiff has standing to seek relief. See, e.g., In re Tobacco II Cases (2009) 46 C4th 298, 93 CR3d 559 (standing requirements in class action under Unfair Competition Law (Bus & P C §§17200-17210) apply only to class representatives and not to all absent class members); Meyer v Sprint Spectrum L.P. (2009) 45 C4th 634, 641, 88 CR3d 859 (Consumers Legal Remedies Act (CLRA) (CC §§1770-1784) requires damage from exposure to unlawful practice); Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 1756 v Superior Court (2009) 46 C4th 993, 1005, 95 CR3d 605 (plaintiffs lack standing to bring action under Unfair Competition Law or Labor Code Private Attorneys General Act of 2004 (Lab C §§2698-2699.5) if they have not suffered injury in fact; associations suing under these statutes not exempt from standing requirement); Reycraft v Lee (2009) 177 CA4th 1211, 99 CR3d 746 (California Disabled Persons Act (CC 54.3) requires that plaintiff must have suffered an actual denial of equal access); Farber v Bay View Terrace Homeowners Ass'n (2006) 141 CA4th 1007, 46 CR3d 425 (former property owner lacked standing to enforce condominium association's CC&Rs under CC §1354(a)).

V. CHALLENGING SUBJECT MATTER JURISDICTION

§6.58 A. Timing and Procedures

A defendant may, before judgment, challenge the assertion of subject matter jurisdiction by a demurrer or answer (CCP §430.10(a)) or by a motion to dismiss (see Estate of Crisler (1948) 83 CA2d 431, 188 P2d 772). A demurrer for lack of subject matter jurisdiction cannot be used to enforce a forum selection clause. Miller-Leigh LLC v Henson (2007) 152 CA4th 1143, 1149, 62 CR3d 83. Unlike a challenge to personal jurisdiction, an attack on subject matter jurisdiction is not waived by a failure to make it initially and may be made for the first time at any stage of the litigation, including appeal. CCP §430.80(a); Consolidated Theatres, Inc. v Theatrical Stage Employees Union, Local 16 (1968) 69 C2d 713, 721, 73 CR 213; Applera Corp. v MP Biomedicals, LLC (2009) 173 CA4th 769, 781, 93 CR3d 178; Keithley v Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 CA3d 443, 448, 89 CR 809.

When a trial court rejects a challenge to its subject matter jurisdiction, the challenging party may obtain appellate review before judgment by seeking a writ of mandate or prohibition. Ordinarily, such writs are available only after relief has been denied in the trial court. But see WCAB v Small Claims Court (1973) 35 CA3d 643, 645 n3, 111 CR 6 (writ of prohibition to challenge subject matter jurisdiction available in superior court without first seeking relief in small claims court because no procedures exist for challenging in that court).

When subject matter jurisdiction has been challenged unsuccessfully in the trial court before judgment, the party challenging the ruling may, after judgment, attack the ruling directly by, e.g., an appeal (CCP §§904.1(a)(1), 904.2(a)) or a motion to set aside a default and default judgment (CCP §473).

A court's assertion of jurisdiction is also subject to collateral attack after judgment, e.g., by action to prevent enforcing the judgment. However, Evid C §666 provides that, when a court's act is under collateral attack, there is a presumption that the court acted within its jurisdiction.

PRACTICE TIP: Although procedures exist in both trial and appellate courts for challenging a court's assertion of jurisdiction after judgment has been rendered, the most effective methods of challenge are those that raise the issue as early as possible in the litigation.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.59 B. Jurisdiction to Determine Jurisdiction

When a party challenges a California court's assertion of subject matter jurisdiction in a particular case, that court has jurisdiction to determine the issue. Scott v IAC (1956) 46 C2d 76, 293 P2d 18. See Abelleira v District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 C2d 280, 302, 109 P2d 942. If the court decides it has jurisdiction and orders that the action proceed, the question then becomes whether a court without jurisdiction is proceeding to exercise it, which is a matter of appellate review, e.g., by writ of prohibition. Rescue Army v Municipal Court (1946) 28 C2d 460, 171 P2d 8; Abelleira v District Court of Appeal, supra.

When a court's decision in favor of asserting subject matter jurisdiction has become final, either by appellate review or by failure to seek review, the decision is, with some exceptions, res judicata and no longer open to attack. See Chicot County Drainage Dist. v Baxter State Bank (1940) 308 US 371, 84 L Ed 329, 60 S Ct 317; Estate of Estrem (1940) 16 C2d 563, 107 P2d 36. Factors that may be sufficient to create exceptions to this rule and allow collateral attack are set out in Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §97 (1971):

- The lack of subject matter jurisdiction is clear.
- The jurisdictional issue is one of law rather than fact.
- The court is one of limited rather than general jurisdiction.
- The issue of jurisdiction was not actually litigated.
- The policy in favor of res judicata is outweighed by the policy against allowing a court to act without jurisdiction.

VI. PERSONAL JURISDICTION

A. Introduction

§6.60 1. Statutory Basis; Legislative Intent

A court's authority over the parties depends in turn on whether the court may exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant and on whether the defendant has been properly served. See §17.4.

Personal jurisdiction in California courts is governed by CCP §410.10, which provides that a court may exercise jurisdiction "on any basis not inconsistent with the Constitution of this state or of the United States." In its Comment to CCP §410.10 ("General Principles of Judicial Jurisdiction"), the Judicial Council summarized the criteria for California's exercise of personal jurisdiction as follows:

> [A] state has power to exercise judicial jurisdiction over a person (including a natural person, a partnership, an unincorporated association, and a corporation) if the person's relationship to the state is such as to make the exercise of such jurisdiction reasonable under contemporary standards. [Citations omitted.] This relationship includes all physical and nonphysical circumstances which may serve to link a person with a state.

See International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154. For further discussion of legislative intent, see Gorfinkel & Lavine, Long-Arm Jurisdiction in California Under New Section 410.10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 21 Hastings LJ 1163 (1970).

2. Constitutional Limitations on Nonresidents

§6.61 a. Due Process Clause

As mentioned in §6.60, California courts may exercise jurisdiction over nonresidents on any basis not inconsistent with the constitution of this state or of the United States. CCP §410.10. The statute manifests an intent to exercise the broadest possible jurisdiction limited only by constitutional considerations. Sibley v Superior Court (1976) 16 C3d 442, 445, 128 CR 34; Integral Dev. Corp. v Weissenbach (2002) 99 CA4th 576, 583, 122 CR2d 24.

The Due Process Clause protects an individual's liberty interest in not being subject to the binding judgments of a forum with which he or she has established no meaningful contacts, ties, or relations. By requiring that individuals have fair warning that a particular activity may subject them to the jurisdiction of a foreign sovereign, the Due Process Clause gives a degree of predictability to the legal system that allows potential defendants to structure their primary conduct with some minimum assurance as to where that conduct will and will not render them liable to suit. Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen (2002) 96 CA4th 152, 162, 116 CR2d 542 (quoting Burger King Corp. v Rudzewicz (1985) 471 US 462, 85 L Ed 2d 528, 105 S Ct 2174).

The constitutional touchstone remains whether the defendant purposefully established "minimum contacts" in the forum state. Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen, supra. See §6.62.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.62 b. "Minimum Contacts"

The federal Constitution permits a state to exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant if the defendant has sufficient "minimum contacts" with the forum such that the "maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 316, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154.

The application of that rule will vary with the quality and nature of the defendant's activity, but it is essential in each case that there be some act by which the defendant purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws. Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen (2002) 96 CA4th 152, 162, 116 CR2d 542 (citing Hanson v Denckla (1958) 357 US 235, 253, 2 L Ed 2d 1283, 78 S Ct 1228).

This purposeful availment requirement ensures that a defendant will not be hauled into a jurisdiction solely as a result of random, fortuitous, or attenuated contacts, or of the unilateral activity of another party or a third person. Jurisdiction is proper, however, when the contacts proximately result from actions by the defendant himself that create a substantial connection with the forum state. Thus when a defendant has deliberately engaged in significant activities within a state, or has created continuing obligations between himself and residents of the forum, he or she manifestly has availed him- or herself of the privilege of conducting business there, and because those activities are shielded by the benefits and protections of the forum's laws it is presumptively not unreasonable to require him or her to submit to the burdens of litigation in that forum as well. Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen, supra (citing Burger King Corp. v Rudzewicz (1985) 471 US 462, 471, 85 L Ed 2d 528, 105 S Ct 2174).

The substantial connection between the defendant and the forum state necessary for a finding of minimum contacts must come about by an action of the defendant purposefully directly toward the forum state. Asahi Metal Indus. Co. v Superior Court (1987) 480 US 102, 112, 94 L Ed 2d 92, 107 S Ct 1026.

If the defendant has sufficient contacts with the forum state for it to exercise its specific jurisdiction, the court must consider these contacts in conjunction with other factors to decide whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with "fair play and substantial justice." Such factors include the burden on the defendant of litigating the matter in the forum state, the forum state's interest in adjudicating the claim, the plaintiff's interest in convenient and effective relief within the forum, judicial economy, and the shared interest of the several states in furthering fundamental substantive social policies. Pedus Bldg. Servs., 96 CA4th at 164.

NOTE: A California court cannot refuse to take jurisdiction of a claim arising in California solely because the plaintiff is a nonresident; the main question is whether subjecting the nonresident defendant to the jurisdiction of the California court comports with fair play and substantial justice. Epic Communications, Inc. v Richwave Technol., Inc. (2009) 179 CA4th 314, 317, 101 CR3d 572 (jurisdiction over Taiwan corporate defendants proper based on minimum contacts even though principal corporate plaintiff also resided in Taiwan).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.63 c. General and Specific Jurisdiction

Personal jurisdiction may be either "general" or "specific." Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 C4th 434, 445, 58 CR2d 899; Integral Dev. Corp. v Weissenbach (2002) 99 CA4th 576, 583, 122 CR2d 24. A nonresident defendant is subject to the forum's general jurisdiction if defendant's contacts are "substantial … continuous and systematic." Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc., supra (quoting Perkins v Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1952) 342 US 437, 445, 96 L Ed 485, 72 S Ct 413). In that situation, the cause of action need not be related to the defendant's contacts. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc., supra; Cornelison v Chaney (1976) 16 C3d 143, 147, 127 CR 352. Such a defendant's contacts with the forum are so wide-ranging that they take the place of physical presence in the forum as a basis for jurisdiction. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc., supra. Stated another way, general jurisdiction results when the defendant's contacts with the forum state are so systematic and so continuous as to make it consistent with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice to subject the defendant to the jurisdiction of the forum, even when the cause of action is unrelated to the contacts. VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 228, 236, 121 CR2d 1.

Even if the nonresident defendant does not have substantial and systematic contacts with the forum state, the defendant may be subject to that state's specific jurisdiction. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc., 14 C4th at 446.

Specific jurisdiction arises when (1) the defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits with result to the matter in controversy, (2) the controversy is related to or arises from the defendant's contacts with the forum, and (3) the exercise of jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice. Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 269, 127 CR2d 329; VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc., supra. In such cases, the defendant has availed him- or herself of the privilege of conducting business in the forum, and because his or her activities are shielded by the benefits and protections of the forum's laws it is presumptively not unreasonable to require the defendant to submit to the burdens of litigation in that forum as well. Tri-West Ins. Servs. v Seguros Monterrey Aetna, S.A. (2000) 78 CA4th 672, 677, 93 CR2d 78.

For discussion of general and specific jurisdiction with corporate defendants, see §§6.94-6.95.

§6.64 d. Forum Non Conveniens

The litigants' convenience is a factor for California courts to consider in determining whether it is reasonable under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to subject a nonresident defendant to personal jurisdiction in California. International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 317, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154; Stangvik v Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 C3d 744, 750, 1 CR2d 556. More specifically, in deciding whether to assume personal jurisdiction in a close case, a court may consider (1) whether rejection of jurisdiction will lead to a multiplicity of actions or will deny a California resident a convenient forum in which to litigate a claim (see Buckeye Boiler Co. v Superior Court (1969) 71 C2d 893, 906, 80 CR 113) and (2) the availability of evidence and the relative burden of the defense and prosecution of an action in one forum as compared with another (see Fisher Governor Co. v Superior Court (1959) 53 C2d 222, 1 CR 1*,* explained in Martin v Detroit Lions, Inc. (1973) 32 CA3d 472, 108 CR 23).

In determining whether to grant a motion based on forum non conveniens, a court must first determine whether the alternate forum is a "suitable" place for trial. A suitable forum is one in which the action can be brought, even if it cannot be won there. Roman v Liberty Univ., Inc. (2008) 162 CA4th 670, 683, 75 CR3d 828 (Florida was suitable forum even though plaintiff's negligence was complete bar to recovery under Florida law). Comparative law questions are irrelevant in forum non conveniens analysis unless the alternative forum does not provide any remedy. Stangvik v Shiley, Inc. (1991) 54 C3d 744, 764, 1 CR2d 556.

If the alternative forum is suitable, the court considers the litigants' private interests and the public interest in retaining the action for trial in California. 54 C3d at 751. No single factor predominates in weighing the private and public interests. Roman, 162 CA4th at 684.

The private interest factors are those that make trial and the enforceability of the ensuing judgment expeditious and relatively inexpensive, such as the ease of access to sources of proof, the cost of obtaining attendance of witnesses, and the availability of a compulsory process for the attendance of unwilling witnesses. Piper Aircraft Co. v Reyno (1981) 454 US 235, 259, 70 L Ed 2d 419, 437, 102 S Ct 252; Stangvik v Shiley Inc., supra.

The public interest factors include avoidance of overburdening local courts with congested calendars, protecting the interests of potential jurors so that they are not called on to decide cases in which the local community has little concern, and weighing the competing interests of California and the alternate jurisdiction in the litigation. Piper Aircraft Co., 454 US at 259; Stangvik v Shiley, Inc., supra.

PRACTICE TIP: The convenience of litigants as a factor in determining whether a court has personal jurisdiction over a defendant must be distinguished from the doctrine of forum non conveniens (or inconvenient forum). Although the respective analyses are similar, the contexts are different. Rather than challenge a court's personal jurisdiction, a motion to dismiss on grounds of forum non conveniens concedes jurisdiction and asks the court to use discretion in declining to exercise jurisdiction because it is more convenient to litigate the action in a forum outside California. On motions to dismiss for forum non conveniens generally, see chap 21.

Also to be distinguished from the convenience of litigants as a factor in determining whether a court has personal jurisdiction is the convenience of witnesses as a ground for a change of venue. A motion for a change of venue concedes personal jurisdiction but seeks to transfer the matter from one California court to another. For further discussion of convenience of witnesses as it relates to motions to change venue, see chap 20.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.65 3. Motion to Quash; Burden of Proof

When a defendant moves the trial court to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff has the initial burden of proving that sufficient contacts exist between the defendant and California to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 C4th 434, 449, 58 CR2d 899; Malone v Equitas Reinsurance Ltd. (2000) 84 CA4th 1430, 1435, 101 CR2d 524. If that burden is met, the burden shifts to the defendant to demonstrate that the assumption of jurisdiction would be unreasonable. Malone v Equitas Reinsurance Ltd., supra.

A petition for writ of mandate is the appropriate method to challenge an order denying a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction. McCorkle v City of Los Angeles (1969) 70 C2d 252, 256, 74 CR 389; Hunt v Superior Court (2000) 81 CA4th 901, 905, 97 CR2d 215.

On whether a motion to quash service of summons on grounds of lack of personal jurisdiction constitutes a general appearance, see §6.72.

B. Jurisdiction Over Individuals

§6.66 1. Introduction

The California Judicial Council has recognized the following bases for exercise by a California court of personal jurisdiction over an individual:

- Presence in the state;
- Domicile;
- Residence;
- Citizenship;
- Consent;
- Appearance in an action;
- Doing business in the state;
- Doing an act in the state;
- Doing an act elsewhere that causes an effect in the state;
- Ownership, use, or possession of a thing in the state; and
- Other relationships to the state that make the exercise of jurisdiction reasonable.

See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals").

PRACTICE TIP: In considering these bases, the attorney should keep in mind the distinction between general and specific jurisdiction over a person (see §6.63) because not all bases of jurisdiction confer the same degree of judicial power. Because the principles governing personal jurisdiction are flexible and fluid, the facts of a particular case must be compared with those of published decisions before the attorney can develop an informed opinion on personal jurisdiction. The guiding principle is always whether jurisdiction is reasonable in light of contemporary standards. See Comment to CCP §410.10.

California courts may exercise general jurisdiction (see §6.63) over an individual who is domiciled in California, even though the person is absent from the state when process is served. Milliken v Meyer (1940) 311 US 457, 85 L Ed 278, 61 S Ct 339; Allen v Superior Court (1953) 41 C2d 306, 311, 259 P2d 905. Jurisdiction over an individual is proper if he or she is domiciled in or a resident of the state when the action is commenced or when process is served. Allen v Superior Court, supra. Jurisdiction is also proper if the individual is a domiciliary or resident when the cause of action arises, as long as the action arises from his or her activities in the state. Owens v Superior Court (1959) 52 C2d 822, 345 P2d 921; Soule v Soule (1961) 193 CA2d 443, 14 CR 417.

Domicile is the place of a person's settled connection and where he or she intends to make a home. DeYoung v DeYoung (1946) 27 C2d 521, 165 P2d 457; Estate of Glassford (1952) 114 CA2d 181, 249 P2d 908. Although a person may maintain more than one residence, no one has more than one domicile at a time. Johnson v Johnson (1966) 245 CA2d 40, 44, 53 CR 567. When a person maintains more than one residence, the person's place of domicile is determined by his or her intentions, as manifested by acts and declarations (Chambers v Hathaway (1921) 187 C 104, 200 P 931; Marriage of Leff (1972) 25 CA3d 630, 102 CR 195), e.g., where he or she registers to vote and files tax returns.

A state has power to exercise jurisdiction over an individual who is a resident of the state unless the individual's relationship to the state is so attenuated that it makes exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(3) Residence"), quoting Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §30, Comment a (1971). A person's residence is the place where the person lives or has settled for a time, even if he or she has no intention of making that location a permanent home. Smith v Smith (1955) 45 C2d 235, 239, 288 P2d 497. For jurisdiction to attach, however, the residence must create a close relationship between the individual and the state. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(3) Residence").

Among the factors to be considered are:

- The amount of time the individual spends in the state;
- The nature of his or her place of abode in the state;
- His or her objective attitude of mind toward the state; and
- The things he or she does in the state.

For a state to have judicial jurisdiction over an individual on the basis of residence, it is necessary, at the least, that the individual spend a considerable portion of his or her time there. The nature of his or her place of abode, if any, in the state is important. He or she is more likely to have the required relationship to a state where he or she has a fixed dwelling place than in one where he or she lives only in hotels or boarding houses. He or she is also more likely to have the required relationship to the state if the state is one to which he goes of his own free choice and not on account of economic or other necessity. What the individual does in the state is significant. The greater his or her activity in the state, the closer is his or her relationship to the state and therefore the better the reason for holding that the state has judicial jurisdiction over him or her. See Soule v Soule (1961) 193 CA2d 443, 14 CR 417. See also Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(3) Residence").

A state has power to exercise jurisdiction over an individual who is a citizen of the state unless the nature of the individual's relationship to the state makes the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(4) Citizenship"). Under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, a person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen of the United States and of the state in which he or she resides. A state may exercise general jurisdiction over a United States citizen who is domiciled in the state on grounds of citizenship as well as domicile. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(4) Citizenship"). See also, e.g., Skiriotes v Florida (1941) 313 US 69, 85 L Ed 1193, 61 S Ct 924.

The factors to be considered in determining whether jurisdiction can be exercised based on citizenship are generally the same as for jurisdiction based on residence. See §6.68. Jurisdiction based on state citizenship is, as a practical matter, superfluous because it rests on the same basis as jurisdiction based on domicile. 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §138 (5th ed 2008). National citizenship, however, can in itself provide the basis for exercising jurisdiction over a defendant who resides or is domiciled outside the United States. See Blackmer v U.S. (1932) 284 US 421, 76 L Ed 375, 52 S Ct 252.

§6.70 5. Physical Presence in State

A California court may ordinarily exercise general jurisdiction (see §6.63) over an individual who is physically present in the state, as long as he or she is properly served with process at that time. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(1) Presence"); see Pennoyer v Neff (1878) 95 US 714, 722, 24 L Ed 565. Presence for any period of time has been deemed sufficient. See, e.g., Grace v MacArthur (ED Ark 1959) 170 F Supp 442 (service on nonresident in airplane over state held valid). But such extreme applications may no longer be valid. See 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §122 (5th ed 2008). Proper service requires adherence to California laws on service of process. See CCP §§412.10-417.40, discussed in chap 17.

Although physical presence in the state as a basis for the exercise of personal jurisdiction has been criticized (see, e.g., Ehrenzweig, The Transient Rule of Personal Jurisdiction: The "Power" Myth and Forum Conveniens, 65 Yale LJ 289 (1956)), it clearly remains a viable and frequently used basis for asserting jurisdiction over an individual. Courts may impose limitations, however, designed to safeguard the rights of the person served. When, for example, physical presence is not voluntary, but rather the result of force or fraud, a court may decline to exercise jurisdiction. Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §82 (1971); see Guardianship of Smith (1957) 147 CA2d 686, 691, 306 P2d 86.

In the past, immunity from service of process has been granted to witnesses (Russell v Landau (1954) 127 CA2d 682, 274 P2d 681) and parties (Gerard v Superior Court (1949) 91 CA2d 549, 205 P2d 109) who come to California to participate in legal proceedings, as well as to legislators and diplomatic officers under certain circumstances (see 3 Witkin, Procedure, Actions §§979-980). Its availability for attorneys who come to California to appear as attorneys of record was left open in Tadge v Byrnes (1918) 179 C 275, 176 P 439. The court in Severn v Adidas Sportschuhfabriken (1973) 33 CA3d 754, 109 CR 328, however, cast doubt on the continued vitality of the immunity doctrine. In that case, the California law of immunity from service of process was reviewed in light of CCP §413.10. The court held that a resident of France who appeared in Florida for a deposition in an action pending there was not immune from California process. The court concluded that the immunity rule exists solely for the court's convenience and extends no rights to the nonresident witness and held that the rule is no longer the law in this state (33 CA3d at 762). For further discussion, see Note, Severn v Adidas Sportschuhfabriken: California's Long-Arm Powers and Immunity From Service of Process for Nonresidents, 26 Hastings LJ 512 (1974). For a case extending Severn to nonresident parties, see Silverman v Superior Court (1988) 203 CA3d 145, 149, 249 CR 724.

§6.71 6. Appearance in Judicial Proceeding

California courts may exercise jurisdiction over an individual who brings an action as a plaintiff or enters an appearance as a defendant in a legal action. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(6) Appearance"); CCP §1014; Olcese v Justice's Court (1909) 156 C 82, 103 P 317; Knoff v City & County of San Francisco (1969) 1 CA3d 184, 81 CR 683. By bringing an action, a plaintiff submits to the court's jurisdiction not only on the cause of action but also on any cross-complaint a defendant may assert. Adam v Saenger (1938) 303 US 59, 67, 82 L Ed 649, 58 S Ct 454. By making a general appearance, a defendant submits, however, to the court's jurisdiction only on the cause of action and any related proceedings. In re Indiana Transp. Co. (1917) 244 US 456, 61 L Ed 1253, 37 S Ct 717; The Cadle Co. v Fiscus (2008) 163 CA4th 1232, 1241, 78 CR3d 238 (nonresident defendant required to submit to California's jurisdiction in revival action). See CCP §410.50.

The effect of a general appearance in an appellate court by a party not properly served at trial is that the trial court, on remand, will have personal jurisdiction over the person without further service being required. In re Alyssa F. (2003) 112 CA4th 846, 851, 6 CR3d 1.

§6.72 a. Acts Constituting General Appearance

The attorney who wishes to challenge a court's jurisdiction over his or her client must be careful to avoid acts that a court might construe as constituting a general appearance. A general appearance occurs when a party, either directly or through counsel, participates in an action in some manner that recognizes the court's authority to proceed. It does not require any formal or technical act. Mansour v Superior Court (1995) 38 CA4th 1750, 1756, 46 CR2d 191. Under CCP §1014, a defendant makes a general appearance when he or she answers, demurs, files a notice of motion to strike or a notice of motion to transfer under CCP §396b, moves for reclassification under CCP §403.040, gives the plaintiff written notice of an appearance, or has an attorney give such notice for him or her. The statutory list of acts constituting a general appearance, such as filing an answer, demurrer, or motion to strike, is not exclusive, however; rather, the term may apply to various acts which, under the circumstances, are deemed to confer jurisdiction of the person. Hamilton v Asbestos Corp. (2000) 22 C4th 1127, 1147, 95 CR2d 701.

What is determinative is whether the defendant takes a part in the particular action which in some manner recognizes the authority of the court to proceed. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v Titzer (2001) 93 CA4th 1301, 1307, 113 CR2d 769, disapproved on other grounds in Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 278 n8, 127 CR2d 329; Sanchez v Superior Court (1988) 203 CA3d 1391, 1397, 250 CR 787. The appearance will be considered general in nature if the defendant acts in a manner showing a purpose of obtaining any ruling or order of the court going to the merits of the case. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v Titzer, supra; California Overseas Bank v French Am. Banking Corp. (1984) 154 CA3d 179, 184, 201 CR 400. For example, in Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v Sparks Constr. Co. (2004) 114 CA4th 1135, 8 CR3d 446, defendants filed their answers, cross-complaints, and a motion for summary judgment. Although defendants later learned they had never been properly named or served with the action, the court held they had made a general appearance, subjected themselves to the court's jurisdiction, and become parties to the action.

A motion to quash service of summons on grounds of lack of personal jurisdiction does not constitute a general appearance. CCP §418.10(d). A defendant or cross-defendant may make a motion under CCP §418.10 (to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction, to stay or dismiss on ground of inconvenient forum, or to dismiss for delay in prosecution) and simultaneously answer, demur, or move to strike the complaint or cross-complaint. CCP §418.10(e). Despite CCP §1014, no act by a party that makes a motion under CCP §418.10, including filing an answer, demurrer, or motion to strike, constitutes an appearance, unless the court denies the motion made under §418.10. See, e.g., Roy v Superior Court (2005) 127 CA4th 337, 25 CR3d 488 (defendant who asserted lack of personal jurisdiction as affirmative defense, but did not file motion to strike and subsequently participated in litigation, waived objection to jurisdiction). If the court denies the motion under §418.10, the defendant or cross-defendant is not deemed to have generally appeared until entry of the order denying the motion. CCP §418.10(e)(1).

§6.73 b. Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction does not constitute a general appearance. Goodwine v Superior Court (1965) 63 C2d 481, 47 CR 201. A special appearance only to contest subject matter jurisdiction does not also constitute a challenge to personal jurisdiction. See Jantzen v WCAB (1997) 61 CA4th 109, 116, 71 CR2d 260 (defendant waived any objection to personal jurisdiction by making special appearance solely to contest subject matter jurisdiction). See also Greener v WCAB (1993) 6 C4th 1028, 1037 n11, 25 CR2d 539 (moving party who seeks relief on any basis other than lack of personal jurisdiction makes general appearance).

§6.74 c. Motion for Attorney Fees

A party who brings a motion for attorney fees in connection with a combined motion to quash for lack of personal jurisdiction and to dismiss on the ground of inconvenient forum does not make a general appearance. Berard Constr. Co. v Municipal Court (1975) 49 CA3d 710, 122 CR 825. The court has the inherent power to rule on a motion for attorney fees even following a successful motion to quash. Shisler v Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2008) 167 CA4th 1, 6, 83 CR3d 771.

A party makes a general appearance if that party brings a motion for attorney fees after a case has been dismissed for reasons unrelated to personal jurisdiction. Dial 800 v Fesbinder (2004) 118 CA4th 32, 12 CR3d 711. In Dial 800, two defendants in an interpleader action, an Israeli citizen and a foreign corporation, had contested personal jurisdiction. After the court dismissed the interpleader action sua sponte for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the defendants filed a motion for attorney fees, claiming that they were the prevailing party under the terms of the contract that had been at issue in the interpleader action. The court found that in seeking attorney fees as the prevailing party, defendants were requesting affirmative relief by asking the court to determine rights under the contract. As a result, the court held that defendants had made a general appearance and were subject to California jurisdiction in the interpleader action. 118 CA4th at 44.

§6.75 d. Filing Status Conference Questionnaire

A defendant's actions in filing the status conference questionnaire and appearing at the status conference do not constitute a general appearance. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v Titzer (2001) 93 CA4th 1301, 1307, 113 CR2d 769, disapproved on other grounds in Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 278 n8, 127 CR2d 329.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.76 e. Filing Answer

A defendant who makes a general appearance by filing an answer in an action submits to the court's jurisdiction even if the answer includes a clause attempting to disclaim the submission or to limit the appearance. Neihaus v Superior Court (1977) 69 CA3d 340, 137 CR 905. Similarly, even if the defendants were never properly named or served with an action, when they filed their answers, cross-complaints, and a motion for summary judgment, they had made a general appearance, subjected themselves to the court's jurisdiction, and become parties to the action. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v Sparks Constr. Co. (2004) 114 CA4th 1135, 8 CR3d 446.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.77 f. Service of Notice of Taking Deposition

A party serving a notice of taking of a deposition and for production of documents subjects him- or herself to jurisdiction, even though the appearance is designated as special and the notice is never filed with a court. Creed v Schultz (1983) 148 CA3d 733, 196 CR 252.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.78 7. Consent to Jurisdiction

A California court may exercise jurisdiction over a person who has consented to the exercise of jurisdiction (National Equip. Rental, Ltd. v Szukhent (1964) 375 US 311, 315, 11 L Ed 2d 354, 84 S Ct 411), as long as he or she is competent to give consent (Harrington v Superior Court (1924) 194 C 185, 228 P 15). See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(5) Consent").

In Nobel Farms, Inc. v Pasero (2003) 106 CA4th 654, 656, 130 CR2d 881, a nonresident plaintiff who filed suit in California against particular parties consented to jurisdiction in California when those same parties later sued him in a related action. See also General Contracting & Trading v Interpole, Inc. (1st Cir 1991) 940 F2d 20, 22 (reaching similar conclusion). Thus, a Mexican attorney who had previously sued his former clients in California for unpaid legal fees consented to personal jurisdiction in California in a legal malpractice suit by those former clients arising from the same transaction. Nobel Farms, Inc., 106 CA4th 654. In contrast, a defendant does not imply consent to personal jurisdiction by previously having waived jurisdiction as a defendant in litigation brought by a different plaintiff in the same court. See Dow Chem. Co. v Calderon (9th Cir 2005) 422 F3d 827. In Dow Chem., the Ninth Circuit agreed "there is nothing unfair or violative of due process about requiring a party that has affirmatively sought the aid of our courts… to submit to jurisdiction in the same forum as a defendant with regard to the same transaction with the same party." 422 F3d at 835. Having only defended against two separate actions, the Nicaraguan defendants in Dow Chem. had made no "affirmative decision to seek relief" and, thus, there could be "no imputation of a conscious decision to settle all aspects of a dispute in our courts." 422 F3d at 836.

Consent to jurisdiction may be implied by a party's actions. For example, in Szynalski v Superior Court (2009) 172 CA4th 1, 9, 90 CR3d 683 a nonresident California class action plaintiff obtained court approval of the action's settlement; retained and benefitted from the services of a court-appointed settlement administrator; agreed to pay the administrator's fees; and understood that the court retained jurisdiction to adjudicate issues arising from the settlement agreement. By these actions, the nonresident plaintiff consented to jurisdiction and had sufficient minimum contacts for specific jurisdiction in the administrator's suit against him for its fees. That the plaintiff attempted in the settlement agreement to reserve his objection to personal jurisdiction could not alter the personal jurisdiction conferred by minimum contacts or consent. 172 CA4th at 11.

§6.79 8. Forum Selection Clauses

Parties to a contract may agree that any action on the contract will be brought in a particular state. National Equip. Rental, Ltd. v Szukhent (1964) 375 US 311, 315, 11 L Ed 2d 354, 84 S Ct 411 (New York had jurisdiction over Michigan residents who consented in lease agreement to be sued in New York); Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 491, 131 CR 374; see Cal-State Bus. Prod. & Serv. v Ricoh (1993) 12 CA4th 1666, 16 CR2d 417 (California dealer bound by clause in agreement with New York distributor). This consent rule no longer applies in the context of passenger tickets. See 46 USC App §183c.

There is no public policy reason to deny enforcement of a forum selection clause in a contract that the parties freely made. Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc., 17 C3d at 495; see Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v Titzer (2001) 93 CA4th 1301, 1312, 113 CR2d 769, disapproved on other grounds in Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 278 n8, 127 CR2d 329.

A forum selection clause may be mandatory or permissive. A distinction has been drawn, however, between a mandatory and a permissive forum selection clause for purposes of analyzing whether the clause should be enforced. A mandatory clause is ordinarily given effect without any analysis of convenience; the only question is whether enforcement of the clause would be unreasonable. In contrast, when the clause merely provides for submission to jurisdiction and does not expressly mandate litigation exclusively in a particular forum, then the traditional forum non conveniens analysis applies. Intershop Communications AG v Superior Court (2002) 104 CA4th 191, 195, 127 CR2d 847.

A forum selection clause may not be enforceable if the clause fails to provide adequate notice to the defendant that he was agreeing to the jurisdiction cited in the contract. Hunt v Superior Court (2000) 81 CA4th 901, 908, 97 CR2d 215 (clause in contract of adhesion, giving jurisdiction over disputes to "applicable forum" without clearly naming California as applicable forum, did not give adequate notice to Maryland resident that dispute over contract would be tried in California). To be valid, a forum selection clause "must be clear and unambiguous in designating a forum as exclusive and mandatory." CQL Original Prods. v National Hockey League Players' Ass'n (1995) 39 CA4th 1347, 1358, 46 CR2d 412. See also Berg v MTC Electronics Technols. Co. (1998) 61 CA4th 349, 71 CR2d 523 (clause that provided for personal jurisdiction in California but did not specify that named forum was exclusive found to be "permissive" forum selection clause).

The forum selection clause must also bind the parties to the instant proceeding, as opposed to third parties. For example, in one action, a Hong Kong-based corporation brought an action against a Yahoo user who posted allegedly defamatory statements on a Yahoo bulletin board. The Yahoo user, a nonresident of California, had consented to Yahoo's terms-of-service agreement, which contained a California forum selection clause. The forum selection clause governed litigation between registered users and Yahoo, not registered users and third parties. Accordingly, the fact that the defendant may have agreed to the terms of service cannot, by itself, justify subjecting him to California jurisdiction for purposes of the present lawsuit. Nam Tai Electronics, Inc. v Titzer (2001) 93 CA4th 1301, 1313, 113 CR2d 769, disapproved on other grounds in Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 278 n8, 127 CR2d 329.

9. Acts Done in State

§6.80 a. Doing Business in State

A state has the power to exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident individual who does business in the state with respect to a cause of action arising from that business. See McGee v International Life Ins. Co. (1957) 355 US 220, 2 L Ed 2d 223, 78 S Ct 199; see Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(7) Doing Business in State"). If the defendant has availed him- or herself of the privilege of conducting business in the forum, and if his or her activities are thus shielded by the benefits and protections of the forum's laws, it is presumptively not unreasonable to require the defendant to also submit to the burdens of litigation in that forum. Burger King Corp. v Rudzewicz (1985) 471 US 462, 471, 85 L Ed 2d 528, 105 S Ct 2174; Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen (2002) 96 CA4th 152, 163, 116 CR2d 542.

Stated otherwise, if the nonresident defendant does not have sufficient contacts with the forum state to subject him or her to its general jurisdiction, he or she still may be subject to the specific jurisdiction of the forum, if the defendant has purposely availed him- or herself of forum benefits, and the controversy is related to or arises from a defendant's contacts with the forum. Jewish Defense Org. v Superior Court (1999) 72 CA4th 1045, 1054, 85 CR2d 611. The three-part test for specific jurisdiction is then applied. See Pedus Bldg. Servs., 96 CA4th at 164; Jewish Defense Org. v Superior Court, supra. For the three-part test, see §6.63.

"Doing business" has been defined as doing a series of similar acts for the purpose of realizing a pecuniary benefit, or otherwise accomplishing an object, or doing a single act for this purpose with the intention of initiating a series of such acts. Titus v Superior Court (1972) 23 CA3d 792, 804, 100 CR 477; Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws §35, Comment a (1971). For example, a former regional manager, who lived in Texas, availed himself of the privilege of doing business in California. During a nine-year tenure with the plaintiff, a California corporation, the defendant made numerous business trips to California, and after he resigned he met with his superior in California and negotiated a noncompetition and separation agreement, which were to be governed by California law. Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen, supra.

If the defendant has sufficient contacts with the forum state for it to exercise its specific jurisdiction, the court must consider these contacts in conjunction with other factors to decide whether the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice. Such factors include the burden on the defendant of litigating the matter in the forum state, the forum state's interest in adjudicating the claim, the plaintiff's interest in convenient and effective relief within the forum, judicial economy, and the several states' shared interest in furthering fundamental substantive social policies. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 C4th 434, 446, 58 CR2d 899; Pedus Bldg. Servs. v Allen (2002) 96 CA4th 152, 163, 116 CR2d 542.

For discussion of nonresident corporations that have been held to be doing business in California, see §6.93.

§6.81 b. Tort Actions

California courts have jurisdiction over an individual who has done, or has caused to be done, an act in the state with respect to any tort action arising from the act, unless the nature of the act of the individual's relationship to the state make the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. The principal factors to be considered are the nature and quality of the act or omission, the extent of the relationship of the state to the defendant and to the plaintiff, and the degree of inconvenience that would result to the defendant by being forced to stand suit in the estate on the particular cause of action. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(8) Doing an Act in State"); Rosenblatt v American Cyanamid Co. (Goldberg, Cir J, 1965) 15 L Ed 2d 39, 86 S Ct 1. See also Hess v Pawloski (1927) 274 US 352, 71 L Ed 1091, 47 S Ct 632 (automobile accident); Owens v Superior Court (1959) 52 C2d 822, 345 P2d 921 (ownership and possession of biting dog); National Life of Fla. Corp. v Superior Court (1971) 21 CA3d 281, 98 CR 435 (fraud).

Without other contacts with the forum state, a defendant's commission of an out-of-state intentional tort that is directed at a California resident may provide sufficient minimum contacts to support the exercise of personal jurisdiction over the nonresident defendant. West v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 1167, 11 CR3d 145; Integral Dev. Corp. v Weissenbach (2002) 99 CA4th 576, 586, 122 CR2d 24 (citing Calder v Jones (1984) 465 US 783, 79 L Ed 2d 804, 104 S Ct 1482); Data Disc, Inc. v Systems Technol. Assocs., Inc. (9th Cir 1977) 557 F2d 1280. c. Contract Actions

California's jurisdiction over an individual defendant in an action for breach of contract has been approved, e.g., when the contract was to be performed in the state (Ault v Dinner for Two, Inc. (1972) 27 CA3d 145, 103 CR 572), when it was substantially negotiated in the state (Beirut Universal Bank v Superior Court (1969) 268 CA2d 832, 74 CR 333), and when it was entered into and to be performed in the state (Long v Mishicot Modern Dairy, Inc. (1967) 252 CA2d 425, 60 CR 432).

The place where the contract is formed may be important in determining whether California may exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant; a contract is formed where the last act in its execution is performed. See Michelin Tire Co. v Coleman & Bentel Co. (1919) 179 C 598, 603, 178 P 507; Stone v Texas (1999) 76 CA4th 1043, 1048, 90 CR2d 657 (signing of contract as "accepted" did not form contract when plaintiff sent counteroffer; contract formed when plaintiff signed memorandum of appointment in Texas). In any event, the place of contracting is not dispositive. Burger King Corp. v Rudzewicz (1985) 471 US 462, 478, 85 L Ed 2d 528, 105 S Ct 2174. The place where a contract is executed is far less important than where the consequences of performing that contract come to be felt. Dunne v Florida (1992) 6 CA4th 1340, 1345, 8 CR2d 483; see Stone v Texas, supra.

§6.83 (2) Minimum Contacts Required

The plaintiff must show that the requisite minimum contacts exist; in particular, he or she must meet the "purposeful availment" prong of the two-prong minimum contacts test. "Purposeful availment" requires that the defendant have performed some type of affirmative conduct that allows or promotes the transaction of business in the forum state.

A contract with an out-of-state party does not automatically establish purposeful availment in the other party's home forum. Rather, a court must evaluate the contract terms and the surrounding circumstances to determine whether the defendant purposefully established minimum contacts in the forum. Relevant factors include prior negotiations, contemplated future consequences, the parties' course of dealings, and the contract's choice-of-law provision. D&P Design, LLC v Med-1 Ptnrs, LLC (SD Cal, Oct 7, 2009) 2009 US Dist Lexis 94700 at *17 (discussing factors contributing to finding that Maryland defendant contracting with California plaintiff, for work in India, did not purposefully avail itself of California law); Stone v Texas (1999) 76 CA4th 1043, 1048, 90 CR2d 657; Goehring v Superior Court (1998) 62 CA4th 894, 907, 73 CR2d 105 (citing Burger King Corp. v Rudzewicz (1985) 471 US 462, 478, 85 L Ed 2d 528, 105 S Ct 2174). An out-of-state defendant's use of e-mail and telephone may also establish sufficient minimum contacts with California to permit the court to exercise jurisdiction. Hall v LaRonde (1997) 56 CA4th 1342, 1344, 66 CR2d 399. But see Shisler v Sanfer Sports Cars, Inc. (2006) 146 CA4th 1254, 1261, 53 CR3d 335 (Florida automobile dealer's use of website did not create sufficient minimum contacts with California).

Due process requires a "substantial connection" between the contract at issue and the forum state. McGee v International Life Ins. Co. (1957) 355 US 220, 223, 2 L Ed 2d 223, 78 S Ct 199 (California had jurisdiction when life insurance policy was delivered in California, the premiums were mailed from here, and the insured remained a resident here until his death; California has manifest interest in providing effective means of redress for its residents when their insurers refuse to pay claims). To hold that a foreign corporation has subjected itself to the judicial jurisdiction of California by the simple act of employing a California resident to perform services not within the State of California would be totally inconsistent with both the state and federal constitutions. Stone v Texas, supra; Stanley Consultants, Inc. v Superior Court (1978) 77 CA3d 444, 451, 143 CR 655.

§6.84 (3) Employment Agreements

A court may have personal jurisdiction over an out-of-state defendant if the defendant's forum-related activities create ongoing obligations to California residents. For example, in Martin v Detroit Lions, Inc. (1973) 32 CA3d 472, 475, 108 CR 23, a nonresident defendant recruited the plaintiff in California to play professional football for it, but the court's exercise of jurisdiction was also based on the required performance of the contract in California and the defendant's substantial economic activity here.

In another case, such obligations were created when Oregon State University recruited a California resident to play basketball and he suffered a fatal stroke while playing a game in California. The nonresident defendants' forum-related activities created ongoing obligations to California residents. Oregon v Superior Court (1994) 24 CA4th 1550, 1557, 29 CR2d 909, disapproved on other grounds in Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 C4th 434, 465, 58 CR2d 899.

In a third case, the partial execution of a contract in California did not give the state jurisdiction over an out-of-state employer regarding an employment contract wholly performed in Texas. See Stone v Texas (1999) 76 CA4th 1043, 90 CR2d 657.

§6.85 (4) Contracts Involving Purchase of Goods

When an out-of-state resident's only contact with California is a single purchase from a California vendor of goods for delivery out of state, this contact is insufficient to establish personal jurisdiction even if the California vendor supplies financing to the buyer. Futuresat Indus., Inc. v Superior Court (1992) 3 CA4th 155, 159, 4 CR2d 74. Although regular purchasing activities in this state may be a basis for jurisdiction over an out-of-state buyer, the predominant rule in federal courts (see Borg-Warner Acceptance Corp. v Lovett & Tharpe, Inc. (11th Cir 1986) 786 F2d 1055) and in California is that a nonresident making a one-time purchase of goods from a seller in the forum state cannot be constitutionally subject to the exercise of personal jurisdiction by the courts of the seller's state. Hunt v Superior Court (2000) 81 CA4th 901, 906, 97 CR2d 215; Cornell Univ. Med. College v Superior Court (1974) 38 CA3d 311, 315, 113 CR 291. Some of the factual situations in which California could not exercise personal jurisdiction include:

- Out-of-state purchaser when her only contact with California was use of California corporation to process, approve, and supply financing for the purchase, which occurred in Maryland between Maryland residents. Hunt v Superior Court (2000) 81 CA4th 901, 906, 97 CR2d 215.
- Out-of-state buyer bought goods from California seller when buyer maintained no economic presence and did no business in California, documentation for the purchase was executed outside of California, and California seller provided financing to nonresident buyer. Futuresat Indus., Inc. v Superior Court (1992) 3 CA4th 155, 160, 4 CR2d 74.
- Nonprofit New York medical college whose only contact with state in relation to cause of action was ordering equipment by mail from California producer. Cornell Univ. Med. College v Superior Court (1974) 38 CA3d 311, 113 CR 291.
- Nonresident purchaser in breach of contract action brought by California seller when defendant's only contacts with California were its dealings with plaintiff through plaintiff's out-of-state agents and by interstate mail and telephone. Interdyne Co. v SYS Computer Corp. (1973) 31 CA3d 508, 107 CR 499.
- Out-of-state purchasers of phonograph records from California corporation by mail order and telephone. Tiffany Records, Inc. v M.B. Krupp Distribs. (1969) 276 CA2d 610, 81 CR 320.

§6.86 10. Act Done Outside State Causing Effect in State

California has jurisdiction over a person whose act outside the state was intended, or reasonably could have been expected, to cause an effect in the state, with respect to causes of action arising from the effect, unless the nature of the effect and of the individual's relationship to the state makes the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(9) Causing Effect in State by Act or Omission Elsewhere").

Courts utilize an "effects test" to determine whether a defendant's out-of-state conduct has resulted in sufficient in-state effects to give rise to personal jurisdiction, regardless of whether the defendant is a corporation or an individual. See, e.g., Calder v Jones (1984) 465 US 783, 79 L Ed 2d 804, 104 S Ct 1482. The focus of inquiry under the effects test, however, has changed over time. Historically, the test emphasized whether, in causing the effect, the nonresident had invoked the benefits and protections of the forum state. See, e.g., Sibley v Superior Court (1976) 16 C3d 442, 128 CR 34 (jurisdiction not proper (1) unless the nonresident has invoked the benefits and protections of the forum state's laws in causing the effect, (2) unless the forum state has enacted special legislation relating to the subject matter of the action, or (3) whether it was foreseeable that the out-of-state acts would cause injury to residents of California); Buckeye Boiler Co. v Superior Court (1969) 71 C2d 893, 80 CR 113 (nonresident manufacturer of an allegedly defective pressure tank that caused injury in California, when the manufacturer knew, or reasonably should have anticipated, that its products would be resold in the state, was subject to California jurisdiction).

In Calder v Jones, supra, the U.S. Supreme Court articulated the effects test to determine whether California had jurisdiction over defendant National Enquirer and other defendants domiciled in Florida that published an allegedly libelous magazine story about actress Shirley Jones, a Florida resident whose television career was centered in California. The Supreme Court held that, under the circumstances presented, California had jurisdiction over the defendants because they had not engaged in mere negligence; rather their "intentional and allegedly tortious actions were expressly aimed at California." 465 US at 789.

Courts have struggled to apply the effects test of Calder. Courts have required a defendant's actions to be "expressly aimed" at the forum state for there to be effects jurisdiction. See, e.g., Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 127 CR2d 329; In re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II (2005) 135 CA4th 100, 37 CR3d 258; DVI, Inc. v Superior Court (2002) 104 CA4th 1080, 128 CR2d 683; Yahoo! Inc. v La Ligue Contre Le Racisme et L'Antisemitisme (9th Cir 2006) 433 F3d 1199; Schwarzenegger v Fred Martin Motor Co. (9th Cir 2004) 374 F3d 797. But see*, e.g., Jewish Defense Org. v Superior Court* (1999) 72 CA4th 1045, 85 CR2d 611 (nonresident defendant's act of making Internet website available to users in forum state can be basis for asserting specific jurisdiction if plaintiff can show that risk of injury from site was foreseeable); Brayton Purcell LLP v Recordon & Recordon (ND Cal 2005) 361 F Supp 2d 1135 (plaintiff satisfied effects test by showing that defendant willfully infringed copyrights owned by it and that defendant knew plaintiff's principal place of business was in California); Zippo Mfg. Co. v Zippo Dot Com, Inc. (WD Pa 1997) 952 F Supp 1119 (likelihood of personal jurisdiction proportionate to nature of commercial activity conducted over Internet).

The Ninth Circuit has concluded that "express aiming" under Calder means "something more" than merely a foreseeable effect. Pebble Beach Co. v Caddy (9th Cir 2006) 453 F3d 1151, 1156 (in trademark infringement action, defendant's passive website and domain name alone did not satisfy Calder's effects test to establish jurisdiction in California).

In Pavlovich v Superior Court, supra, plaintiff California corporation alleged that defendant Texas resident misappropriated the corporation's source code by posting it on his Internet website. The site had no interactive features and was not targeted at California. Applying Calder, the supreme court held that defendant's knowledge that tortious conduct may harm industries centered in California was insufficient to establish "express aiming" at California. 29 C4th at 268. See also Yahoo! Inc. v La Ligue Contre Le Racisme et L'Antisemitisme (9th Cir 2006) 433 F3d 1199, holding that under the effects test, "defendant must have (1) committed an intentional act, (2) expressly aimed at the forum state, (3) causing harm that the defendant knows is likely to be suffered in the forum state."

The effects test has been applied in a variety of contexts but primarily in intentional tort and business tort cases, including the following:

- Jurisdiction was not proper over an Ohio car dealership that had allegedly used for advertising purposes a photograph of Arnold Schwarzenegger, a California resident, without his authorization. Defendant's intentional act of creating and publishing the advertisement was aimed at Ohio, not California, so defendant had neither availed itself of the privilege of conducting activities in California nor purposefully directed its activities at California. Schwarzenegger v Fred Martin Motor Co. (9th Cir 2004) 374 F3d 797.
- In a suit alleging fraudulent inducement to lease warehouse space in the Netherlands on unfavorable terms, defendants, who were citizens and residents of European countries, were subject to specific personal jurisdiction because their actions were "expressly aimed" at the forum state. Defendants knew that plaintiff's principal place of business was in California, knew that plaintiff's decision makers were in California, and communicated directly with those California decision makers. Dole Food Co. v Watts (9th Cir 2002) 303 F3d 1104.
- Jurisdiction over out-of-state defendant was proper under contract that was partially negotiated and formed in California when defendant made certain misrepresentations inducing plaintiff to sell its goods. Data Disc, Inc. v Systems Technol. Assocs., Inc. (9th Cir 1977) 557 F2d 1280.
- Plaintiff California consumers presented no evidence that defendant nonresident trade association expressly aimed its allegedly tortious conduct at California consumers. In re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II (2005) 135 CA4th 100, 37 CR3d 258.
- Jurisdiction was proper over an out-of-state telemarketer who initiated a sale to a California customer who had called to buy another product. The telemarketer purposefully availed itself of the privilege of doing business in California and was subject to California jurisdiction for a fraud claim that arose out of that transaction. West Corp. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 1167, 1178, 11 CR3d 145.
- Jurisdiction was proper when evidence showed that Milwaukee archdiocese sought to rid itself of priest by sending him to California, knowing that he was a pedophile and had been convicted in Wisconsin of sexual abuse against a boy. Archdiocese was subject to specific personal jurisdiction in California for that priest's molestation of California resident under "effects" test of Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 127 CR2d 329. Archdiocese of Milwaukee v Superior Court (2003) 112 CA4th 423, 425, 5 CR3d 154.
- Jurisdiction was proper over defendant German citizen, hired by California plaintiff to manage its German subsidiary, for misappropriation of trade secrets and unfair competition that caused harm to the corporation, its customers, and its business revenues in California. Integral Dev. Corp. v Weissenbach (2002) 99 CA4th 576, 585, 122 CR2d 24.

§6.87 11. Ownership, Use, or Possession of Property in State

California courts have jurisdiction over a person who has owned, used, or possessed real property in the state with respect to any cause of action arising from the property during the ownership, use, or possession. The courts have similar jurisdiction over a person who has owned, used, or possessed personal property in the state, unless the nature of the property and of the person's relationship to the state make the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(10) Ownership, Use or Possession of Thing in State").

Because real property and fixtures within a state's borders are permanently situated, the state's interest is clear. With respect to personal property, however, which may be moved from state to state, the state's interest is strong when the property is potentially dangerous to life or property (e.g., mechanized equipment) and less substantial when it is not. Therefore, as to nondangerous personal property, the state must have a closer relationship to the defendant to permit exercise of jurisdiction than would be necessary with dangerous personal property. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(10) Ownership, Use or Possession of Thing in State").

Ownership of personal property alone is usually insufficient to permit the exercise of jurisdiction unless the defendant can be considered responsible for its presence in the state. Thus, jurisdiction may not be exercised over the owner when the property has been brought into the state without his or her knowledge or consent, until the owner learns of its presence and has had a reasonable opportunity to reclaim it. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(10) Ownership, Use or Possession of Thing in State").

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.88 12. Other Bases

A state has power to exercise judicial jurisdiction over an individual in other situations when the individual has such a relationship to a state that it is reasonable for the state to exercise its jurisdiction. These situations include that of an executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, conservator, trustee, or other legal representative who is appointed or qualified under the laws of this state or has consent to such jurisdiction, or has engaged in conduct that would subject that party to jurisdiction. It is sufficient in these situations if an individual has such a status when the action is commenced or when process is served. In addition, other bases of jurisdiction may be developed in the future that satisfy the basic requirement of reasonableness (see International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154). See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Individuals," "(11) Other Relationships").

PRACTICE TIP: If a plaintiff's attorney encounters a situation that does not fall within any of the bases for jurisdiction described in the Comment to CCP §410.10 or in prior judicial decisions, the attorney should consider citing the Judicial Council Comment and presenting to a court all facts from which the court may conclude that to subject the proposed person to jurisdiction in the state "does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 316, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154 (quoting Milliken v Meyer (1940) 311 US 457, 463, 85 L Ed 278, 61 S Ct 339).

C. Jurisdiction Over Corporations

§6.89 1. Introduction

In California, a party may obtain personal jurisdiction over a corporation if any of the bases for jurisdiction discussed below are found to exist. These bases apply whether the corporation is incorporated under the laws of a particular state or under those of a foreign country. See, e.g., Malone v Equitas Reinsurance Ltd. (2000) 84 CA4th 1430, 101 CR2d 524 (United Kingdom).

In analyzing the various bases for acquiring jurisdiction over a corporation, the lawyer must keep in mind the distinction between general and specific jurisdiction. See §§6.94-6.95.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.90 2. Incorporation in State

California courts have general jurisdiction (see §6.94) over a corporation incorporated here, even though it does no business in the state. International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 316, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(1) Incorporation in State—Domestic Corporations").

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/6 California Jurisdiction/§6.91 3. Appointment of Agent in State to Accept Service of Process

§6.91 3. Appointment of Agent in State to Accept Service of Process

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that has authorized an agent or public official to accept service of process in actions brought in California against the corporation. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(3) Appointment of Agent—Foreign Corporations"); Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. v Gold Issue Mining & Milling Co. (1917) 243 US 93, 61 L Ed 610, 37 S Ct 344; Gray Line Tours v Reynolds Elec. & Eng'g Co. (1987) 193 CA3d 190, 194, 238 CR 419. For definition of "foreign corporation," see Corp C §171. Foreign corporations that "transact intrastate business" (see Corp C §191 for definition) in California must designate an agent for service of process here and must consent to service on the California Secretary of State if the agent cannot be found with reasonable diligence. Corp C §2105(a); see Buckner v IAC (1964) 226 CA2d 619, 624, 38 CR 332.

The jurisdiction conferred, however, is specific, not general. See §6.95. A foreign corporation's authorizing of an agent or public official to accept service of process does not in itself establish California's jurisdiction over the corporation with respect to causes of action not arising from business done in California. Some other basis for jurisdiction will be required in these instances. See Gray Line Tours v Reynolds Elec. & Eng'g Co., supra.

Similarly, Corp C §31420 does not create an independent basis for personal jurisdiction for claims arising under the Franchise Investment Law (FIL). Section 31420 is a service of process statute providing that the nonresident consents to appointment of the Commissioner of Corporations as the attorney to receive service of process of a complaint brought under FIL and, despite §31420, grounds for exercising personal jurisdiction over the nonresident defendant must exist. Thomson v Anderson (2003) 113 CA4th 258, 268, 6 CR3d 262.

4. Doing Business in State

§6.92 a. Basic Rule

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that does business in the state with respect to causes of action arising from such business (i.e., "specific" jurisdiction). McGee v International Life Ins. Co. (1957) 355 US 220, 2 L Ed 2d 223, 78 S Ct 199; International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154. For definition of "doing business," see §6.93. A foreign corporation is subject to jurisdiction on causes of action not related to intrastate business (i.e., "general" jurisdiction) if the intrastate business is so continuous and substantial as to make the exercise of such jurisdiction reasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(5) Doing Business in State—Foreign Corporations"); see Perkins v Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1952) 342 US 437, 96 L Ed 485, 72 S Ct 413. For discussion of general and specific jurisdiction, see §§6.94-6.95.

The attorney faced with a problem of acquiring jurisdiction over a foreign corporation should also consider whether specific jurisdiction might be based on the business activities in the state of a corporate subsidiary or parent. See §§6.102-6.103.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.93 b. "Doing Business" Defined

A foreign corporation is doing business in the state if, as a matter of "commercial actuality" (Empire Steel Corp. v Superior Court (1961) 56 C2d 823, 834, 17 CR 150), it engages in economic activity in the state (Buckeye Boiler Co. v Superior Court (1969) 71 C2d 893, 901, 80 CR 113; see International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154). In determining whether a corporation is doing business in the state, courts consider the type of business the corporation conducts. If, e.g., the corporation is a manufacturer, the court will consider whether the company realizes gross income from the purchase or use of its products in the state and either sends its products into the state or reasonably should anticipate that its products will be used there. Buckeye Boiler Co. v Superior Court (1969) 71 C2d 893, 902, 80 CR 113. If its products are sold in the state, the corporation can be subjected to jurisdiction even if sales are made only by independent sales representatives. Cosper v Smith & Wesson Arms Co. (1959) 53 C2d 77, 346 P2d 409.

If the corporation performs services rather than manufactures products, the court will consider whether the corporation is performing its normal activities in the state. See, e.g., Harris Rutsky & Co. Ins. Servs. v Bell & Clements Ltd. (9th Cir 2003) 328 F3d 1122 (London-based insurance broker had sufficient contacts with California); Malone v Equitas Reinsurance Ltd. (2000) 84 CA4th 1430, 101 CR2d 524 (foreign insurers who sold policies to California residents lacked sufficient contacts to establish personal jurisdiction); Martinez v Perlite Inst. (1975) 46 CA3d 393, 120 CR 120 (New York trade association held to be doing business in California by promoting use of perlite ore in California and deriving income from its promotion); McClanahan v Trans-America Ins. Co. (1957) 149 CA2d 171, 307 P2d 1023 (insurance company held to be doing business in California by retaining doctors, investigators, and others necessary to handle claims and litigate cases there, even though no policies were written and no offices maintained in state).

An issue that sometimes arises when jurisdiction is asserted over a foreign corporation on a cause of action arising from intrastate business done by the corporation is the contention that the action is wholly unrelated to the defendant's intrastate activities. The test is whether the action is sufficiently connected with the defendant's intrastate activities that it cannot be said to be "entirely distinct" from the activities. In resolving this issue, courts consider among other factors whether the defendant's economic activity put in motion the events that gave rise to the cause of action, i.e., whether the cause of action would not have arisen but for the economic activity. Ratcliffe v Pedersen (1975) 51 CA3d 89, 95, 123 CR 793.

§6.94 c. Test for General Jurisdiction

General jurisdiction results when the defendant's contacts with the forum state are so systematic and so continuous as to make it consistent with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice to subject the defendant to the jurisdiction of the forum, even when the cause of action is unrelated to the contacts. Vons Cos. v Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 C4th 434, 445, 58 CR2d 899; VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 228, 238, 121 CR2d 1.

The standard for establishing general jurisdiction is fairly high. Elkman v Nat'l States Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 1305, 1315, 93 CR3d 768; Bancroft & Masters, Inc. v Augusta Nat'l Inc. (9th Cir 2000) 223 F3d 1082, 1086 (applying the law of California regarding personal jurisdiction). The contacts with the forum state must be of a sort that "approximate physical presence." Bancroft & Masters, Inc. v Augusta Nat'l Inc., supra. Factors to be taken into consideration are whether the defendant makes sales, solicits or engages in business in the state, serves the state's markets, designates an agent for service of process, holds a license, or is incorporated there. Bancroft & Masters, Inc. v Augusta Nat'l Inc., supra. The court will focus on the economic reality of the defendants' activities rather than use a mechanical checklist. Gates Learjet Corp. v Jensen (9th Cir 1984) 743 F2d 1325, 1331. Even if substantial, or continuous and systematic, contacts exist, the assertion of general jurisdiction must be reasonable. Amoco Egypt Oil Co. v Leonis Navigation Co., Inc. (9th Cir 1993) 1 F3d 848, 852.

In applying the "substantial" or "continuous and systematic" contacts test, courts have focused primarily on two areas. First, they look for some kind of deliberate "presence" in the forum state, including physical facilities, bank accounts, agents, registration, or incorporation. See Perkins v Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1952) 342 US 437, 96 L Ed 485, 72 S Ct 413 (finding general jurisdiction when president of Philippines-based corporation maintained office, kept company files, held directors' meetings, distributed salaries, and conducted other company business in forum state). In addition, courts have looked at whether the company has engaged in active solicitation toward and participation in the state's markets, i.e., the economic reality of the defendant's activities in the state. Compare Theo. H. Davies & Co. v. Republic of the Marshall Islands (9th Cir 1998) 174 F3d 969, 974 (finding general jurisdiction over two foreign corporations engaged in substantial commercial activity in the United States, including purchase and solicitation of bids for generators in Hawaii), with Gates Learjet Corp. v Jensen (9th Cir 1984) 743 F2d 1325, 1331 (finding no general jurisdiction where defendant solicited distributorship in state, made several visits to state, agreed to state choice of law and forum selection clauses in contract, purchased parts from state, and sent numerous letters and telexes to state).

Whether a foreign corporate defendant's business in the state is so "continuous and substantial" to subject it to California jurisdiction when plaintiff's claim did not arise from business done in the state is determined according to the facts of each case. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(5) Doing Business in State—Foreign Corporations"); Watson's Quality Turkey Prods. v Superior Court (1974) 37 CA3d 360, 366, 112 CR 345.

Cases in which intrastate business activities were sufficient to sustain jurisdiction include:

- Perkins v Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1952) 342 US 437, 448, 96 L Ed 485, 72 S Ct 413 (continuous and systematic business carried on in Ohio, even though none of company's mining properties located there);
- Tuazon v R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (9th Cir 2006) 433 F3d 1163 (North Carolina-based corporation operated in Washington state for over 50 years, generated millions of dollars in net sales each year, and held 29-31 percent market share of cigarettes sold in state, which taken together constituted "continuous and substantial" in-state business to justify general jurisdiction); and
- Taisho Fire & Marine v The Vessel Montana (ND Cal 1971) 335 F Supp 1238 (jurisdiction valid when (1) corporation's sole owner came to California to discuss business; (2) sole owner also had wholly owned company in California that engaged in business similar to that of defendant corporation; (3) vice president of California company solicited business for defendant corporation; and (4) corporation placed advertisements in California trade journals holding itself out as practicing in California).

Cases in which the requirements for general jurisdiction were not met include:

- Fisher Governor Co. v Superior Court (1959) 53 C2d 222, 225, 1 CR 1 ("more contacts are required for the assumption of [general] jurisdiction than sales and sales promotion within the state by independent nonexclusive sales representatives");
- Malone v Equitas Reinsurance Ltd. (2000) 84 CA4th 1430, 1441, 101 CR2d 524 (defendant did not "purposefully avail itself of the privilege of conducting business within forum State, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws"); and
- Watson's Quality Turkey Prods. v Superior Court (1974) 37 CA3d 360, 366, 112 CR 345 (foreign corporation not doing sufficiently "continuous and substantial" business in state to justify general jurisdiction when California business amounted to less than 1 percent of total business in period during which cause of action arose).

§6.95 d. Test for Specific Jurisdiction

Specific jurisdiction results when the defendant's contacts with the forum state, though not enough to subject the defendant to the general jurisdiction of the forum, are sufficient to subject the defendant to suit in the forum on a cause of action related to or arising from those contacts. Specific jurisdiction exists if (Snowney v Harrah's Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 35 C4th 1054, 1062, 29 CR3d 33; Pavlovich v Superior Court (2002) 29 C4th 262, 127 CR2d 329; VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 228, 236, 121 CR2d 1):

- The defendant has purposefully availed itself of forum benefits with respect to the matter in controversy;
- The controversy is related to or arises from the defendant's contacts with the forum; and
- The assertion of jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice.

California may assert specific jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that directs a separate person or entity to engage in forum contacts on its behalf. Anglo Irish Bank Corp. v Superior Court (2008) 165 CA4th 969, 989, 81 CR3d 535. But see Aquila, Inc. v Superior Court (2007) 148 CA4th 556, 576, 55 CR3d 803 (general allegations of interconnectedness between parent and subsidiary companies are not sufficient to establish specific jurisdiction).

Specific jurisdiction found. In VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc., supra, the court held that even though a Philippine corporation lacked sufficient California contacts to subject it to general jurisdiction, California was entitled to exercise specific jurisdiction over it concerning a breach of contract claim that arose from or was related to its California based activities. 99 CA4th at 236. See also Luberski, Inc. v Oleficio F. LLI Amato S.R.L. (2009) 171 CA4th 409, 89 CR3d 774 (court had specific jurisdiction over Italian company because negotiations took place in California and Italy, shipment to California was required, and amount of order was substantial).

Specific jurisdiction was also found in Bridgestone Corp. v Superior Court (2002) 99 CA4th 767, 773, 121 CR2d 673 (California courts had specific jurisdiction over tire manufacturer that purposefully availed itself of benefits of conducting activities in California and obtained benefits and protections of California's laws by selling its products in Japan to California distributor for resale in California in case stemming from tire explosion) and West Corp. v Superior Court (2004) 116 CA4th 1167, 11 CR3d 145 (California may assert jurisdiction over nonresident telemarketing corporation when California resident calls to buy product, but telemarketer then initiates sale of separate product and allegedly makes misrepresentations during sales pitch for separate product).

Specific jurisdiction not found. In contrast, the court in Elkman v Nat'l States Ins. Co. (2009) 173 CA4th 1305, 1318, 93 CR3d 768 found neither general nor specific jurisdiction over a defendant insurer that issued a policy to its insured in Florida, then continued to accept premiums from her and process her claims after she moved to California. The insurer did not solicit business in California or purposely avail itself of the privilege of doing business in California; it was the insured who chose to move to California. Similarly, in Carretti v Italpast (2002) 101 CA4th 1236, 1246, 125 CR2d 126, an Italian manufacturer that sold products in Italy to a distributor with an office in California did not have sufficient minimum contacts with California to support specific jurisdiction in California under a "stream of commerce" theory. Although there are divergent lines of authority on the proper interpretation of the stream of commerce theory (see Asahi Metal Indus. Co. v Superior Court (1987) 480 US 102, 94 L Ed 2d 92, 107 S Ct 1026; World-Wide Volkswagen Corp. v Woodson (1980) 444 US 286, 62 L Ed 2d 490, 100 S Ct 559), the circumstances did not amount to the kind of "purposeful contact" with the forum that would justify exercise of specific jurisdiction over the defendant. Carretti v Italpast (2002) 101 CA4th 1236, 1246, 125 CR2d 126.

A defendant whose California activities are shown to be sufficiently purposeful under a stream of commerce theory may nevertheless not be subject to specific jurisdiction because the requisite connection between the defendant and the allegations of the lawsuit is missing. For example, in In re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II (2005) 135 CA4th 100, 37 CR3d 258, plaintiffs alleged that defendant car manufacturers and distributors, among others, had conspired unlawfully to prevent the export of Canadian cars into California to increase the price of the same vehicles in state. Plaintiffs established that certain parent manufacturers had purposefully put their product in the "stream of commerce" because they made substantial earnings from their American subsidiaries' sales of vehicles in California. The court held that the three parent manufacturers were nevertheless not subject to specific jurisdiction because plaintiff presented no evidence connecting the parent manufacturers to the alleged conspiracy; there was no showing that these defendants had even monitored export activity from Canada to California. 135 CA4th at 123.

§6.95A e. Internet Activity

Increasingly, California courts have addressed personal jurisdiction in the Internet context. In Snowney v Harrah's Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 35 C4th 1054, 1062, 29 CR3d 33, the supreme court concluded that defendant Nevada hotels were subject to specific jurisdiction in California because they had purposefully established a substantial connection with California through their Internet activities; their website emphasized the proximity of their hotels to California and provided driving directions from California to their hotels. 35 C4th at 1065.

In Boschetto v Hansing (9th Cir 2008) 539 F3d 1011, 1017, the court found that the temporary listing for the sale of an item through eBay was a "one shot affair" that did not create minimum contacts with California. But see Cybersell, Inc. v Cybersell, Inc. (9th Cir 1997) 130 F3d 414, 419 (approving of sliding scale analysis under Zippo Mfg. Co. v Zippo Dot Com, Inc. (WD Pa 1997) 952 F Supp 1119 to determine jurisdiction).

Similarly, jurisdiction was also lacking in Pebble Beach Co. v Caddy (9th Cir 2006) 453 F3d 1151 (owner of lodging establishment had worked in California, but did not demonstrate "individual targeting" of state; website was passive); Phillips v Worldwide Internet Solutions (ND Cal, June 20, 2006, No. C 05-5125 SBA) 2006 US Dist Lexis 44152 (Canadian corporation had not performed forum-related activity of directly or indirectly sending "spam" e-mails); and Clarus Transphase Scientific, Inc. v Q-Ray, Inc. (ND Cal, Aug. 16, 2006, No. C 06-3450 JF (RS)) 2006 US Dist Lexis 60824 (although general jurisdiction was proper over defendant corporation with "virtual store," specific jurisdiction was lacking over its CEO and sole shareholder regarding claim involving another product with no meaningful contacts with California).

§6.96 f. Past Business

A California court may exercise jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that has done business in the state in the past but has withdrawn from or surrendered its right to do business here when the action is commenced, but only with respect to actions arising from such business. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(5) Doing Business in State—Foreign Corporations"); see Corp C §2114; Detsch & Co. v Calbar, Inc. (1964) 228 CA2d 556, 39 CR 626. Likewise, California has jurisdiction over the surviving corporation in a merger if the merger occurred in this state. See Comment to CCP §410.10; Corp C §1107; Jackson v Continental Tel. Co. (1963) 212 CA2d 510, 28 CR 1.

§6.97 5. Appearance in Judicial Proceeding

California courts may exercise jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that appears in an action as either a plaintiff or a defendant. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(4) Appearance—Foreign Corporations"). The rules governing appearance as a basis for jurisdiction over a corporation are the same as those for individuals. See §§6.71-6.77.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.98 6. Consent to Jurisdiction

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that consents to the jurisdiction. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(2) Consent—Foreign Corporations"). The rules governing consent as a basis for jurisdiction over a corporation are the same as those for individuals. See §6.78. The most common form of consent by a corporation is appointment of an agent in the state to receive service of process. For discussion, see §6.91.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.99 7. Act Done in State

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation with respect to any tort action arising from any act the corporation has done, or caused to be done, in the state, and with respect to any nontort action arising from such an act unless the nature of the act and of the corporation's relationship with the state makes the exercise of jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(6) Doing an Act in State—Foreign Corporations"). The rules governing jurisdiction over corporations based on acts done in the state are the same as those governing jurisdiction over individuals. See §§6.80-6.85.

For example, a foreign tire manufacturer, that regularly sold a large volume of tires to a California distributor, one of which allegedly failed and caused injury, purposefully availed itself of the benefits of conducting activities in California and obtained the benefits and protections of California's laws by selling its products to a California distributor for resale in California. Bridgestone Corp. v Superior Court (2002) 99 CA4th 767, 771, 121 CR2d 673. Conversely, an Italian manufacturer that sold pasta machines in Italy to a distributor with an office in California did not have sufficient minimum contacts with California to support specific jurisdiction in California under a "stream of commerce theory." The pasta machine had jammed and injured a restaurant worker. Carretti v Italpast (2002) 101 CA4th 1236, 125 CR2d 126.

§6.100 8. Act Done Outside State Causing Effect in State

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation that has done an act outside the state that was intended, or reasonably could have been expected, to cause an effect in the state, with respect to causes of action arising from the effect, unless the nature of the effect and of the individual's relationship to the state makes the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(7) Causing Effects in State by Act Done Elsewhere—Foreign Corporations"). The rules governing this basis for acquiring jurisdiction over corporations are the same as those governing jurisdiction over individuals (see §6.86).

Courts utilize an "effects test" to determine whether a defendant's out-of-state conduct has resulted in sufficient in-state effects to give rise to personal jurisdiction, regardless of whether the defendant is a corporation or an individual. See, e.g., Calder v Jones (1984) 465 US 783, 79 L Ed 2d 804, 104 S Ct 1482; *Pavlovich v Superior Cour*t (2002) 29 C4th 262, 127 CR2d 329. For discussion of the effects test, see §6.86.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/6 California Jurisdiction/§6.101 9. Ownership, Use, or Possession of Property in State

§6.101 9. Ownership, Use, or Possession of Property in State

California courts have jurisdiction over a foreign corporation with respect to any cause of action arising from the ownership, use, or possession of:

- Real property in the state; or
- Personal property in the state unless the nature of the personal property and of the corporation's relationship to the state makes the exercise of such jurisdiction unreasonable.

See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(8) Ownership, Use or Possession of Thing in State—Foreign Corporations"). The rules governing this basis for acquiring jurisdiction over corporations are the same as those governing jurisdiction over individuals. See §6.87.

§6.102 10. Parent Corporation's Ownership or Control of Subsidiary in State

A parent company's ownership or control of a subsidiary corporation does not, without more, subject the parent corporation to the jurisdiction of the state where the subsidiary does business. HealthMarkets, Inc. v Superior Court (2009) 171 CA4th 1160, 1169, 90 CR3d 527 (no specific jurisdiction over parent unless it deliberately directs its activities at the forum state by causing the subsidiary to engage in contacts in the forum state). A parent holding company may be subject to general jurisdiction only in limited circumstances. These circumstances may include an alter ego relationship or the parent's exercise of such a degree of control of the subsidiary as to "reflect the parent's purposeful disregard of the subsidiary's independent corporate existence." DVI, Inc. v Superior Court (2002) 104 CA4th 1080, 1087, 128 CR2d 683; see VirtualMagic Asia, Inc. v Fil-Cartoons, Inc. (2002) 99 CA4th 228, 236, 121 CR2d 1. See also Sammons Enters. v Superior Court (1988) 205 CA3d 1427, 253 CR 261.

If the nonresident defendant does not have substantial and systematic contacts with the forum state, the defendant may be subject to specific jurisdiction if:

- The defendant has purposefully availed itself of forum benefits with respect to the matter in controversy.
- The controversy is related to or arises out of the defendant's contacts with the forum.
- The exercise of jurisdiction would comport with fair play and substantial justice.

DVI, Inc. v Superior Court (2002) 104 CA4th 1080, 1090, 128 CR2d 683. See §6.95.

PRACTICE TIP: For a comprehensive discussion of three theories (alter ego, agency, and purposeful availment) that have been used to establish jurisdiction over a foreign parent for the acts of its wholly owned subsidiary, see Sonora Diamond Corp. v Superior Court (2000) 83 CA4th 523, 99 CR2d 824 (held that California did not have jurisdiction over parent corporation).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.102A 11. Subsidiary or Affiliate Entity Providing Representative Services in State

The "representative services" doctrine, a species of agency, supports the exercise of jurisdiction when a local subsidiary performs a function that is compatible with and assists the parent in the pursuit of the parent's own business (see Sonora Diamond Corp. v Superior Court (2000) 83 CA4th 523, 99 CR2d 824), or the grandparent in the pursuit of parent's business (see Dorel Indus., Inc. v Superior Court (2005) 134 CA4th 1267, 36 CR3d 742). The representative services doctrine applies even when the entities involved do not have a parent-subsidiary relationship, but are affiliates. Paneno v Centres for Academic Programmes Abroad, Ltd. (2004) 118 CA4th 1447, 13 CR3d 759. In Paneno, the court found that a British company was subject to general jurisdiction in California when its U.S. affiliate functioned as the sales, marketing, and predeparture administration arm for the British company so that the British company could provide international educational programs to California residents. If the U.S. affiliate had not performed these functions, the British company would have had to perform them itself. 118 CA4th at 1456.

Regardless of whether the relationship is one of affiliate or subsidiary, a plaintiff must present strong evidence of "pervasive control" by the parent entity to warrant application of the representative services doctrine. See In re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II (2005) 135 CA4th 100, 37 CR3d 258 (parent manufacturers did not exercise any day-to-day operations over their local subsidiaries and, thus, plaintiffs' evidence fell far short of excessive control needed for application of representative services doctrine).

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.103 12. Foreign Subsidiary Having Parent in State

A state court may not acquire jurisdiction over a foreign corporate subsidiary solely because its parent does business in the state. Jurisdiction over the subsidiary can be exercised, however, if (1) the parent does an act or causes an effect in the state at the direction of the subsidiary or (2) the parent so controls and dominates the subsidiary as in effect to disregard the latter's independent corporate existence. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(9) Other Relationships—Foreign Corporations"). For a case finding sufficient control by the parent to justify jurisdiction over the foreign subsidiary, see Mathes v National Util. Helicopters Ltd. (1977) 68 CA3d 182, 137 CR 104.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.104 13. Corporate Officers

When assessing minimum contacts for jurisdictional purposes, each defendant's contacts with the forum state must be assessed individually. Calder v Jones (1984) 465 US 783, 790, 79 L Ed 2d 804, 104 S Ct 1482. Thus, an officer or director is not automatically immune from jurisdiction simply because he or she is acting in an official capacity. At the same time, mere status as an officer or director will not subject an individual to personal jurisdiction for alleged wrongs committed by a corporation. Rather, a plaintiff must demonstrate some activity by each individual officer and director that would both subject him or her to personal liability and create sufficient contacts with the state to satisfy the minimum contacts doctrine. See Seagate Technol. v A. J. Kogyo Co. (1990) 219 CA3d 696, 701, 268 CR 586.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.105 14. Other Bases

A state has power to exercise judicial jurisdiction over a foreign corporation in situations other than those traditionally recognized when the foreign corporation has such a relationship to the state that it is reasonable for the state to exercise that jurisdiction. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Corporations," "(9) Other Relationships—Foreign Corporations").

PRACTICE TIP: As with personal jurisdiction over individuals, California attorneys faced with novel fact situations should present to the court all the facts from which they can argue that it is reasonable under contemporary standards to subject a foreign corporation to jurisdiction in California.

© The Regents of the University of California

§6.106 D. Jurisdiction Over Partnerships and Other Unincorporated Associations

For jurisdictional purposes, California treats partnerships and other unincorporated associations the same as corporations. See Comment to CCP §410.10 ("Bases of Judicial Jurisdiction over Partnerships or other Unincorporated Associations"); International Aerial Tramway Corp. v Konrad Doppelmayr & Sohn (1969) 70 C2d 400, 74 CR 908; Simons v Steverson (2001) 88 CA4th 693, 708, 106 CR2d 193 (out-of-state law firm, an LLP, that employed attorney licensed in California who performed legal services under California law for California residents); Checker Motors Corp. v Superior Court (1993) 13 CA4th 1007, 17 CR2d 618 (out-of-state-partnership and general contractor); Lewis Mfg. Co. v Superior Court (1956) 140 CA2d 245, 295 P2d 145. Thus, if a partnership or other unincorporated association is subject to suit in California, a California court may exercise jurisdiction over the partnership or association as long as it could have exercised jurisdiction over a corporation under similar circumstances. On the bases for asserting jurisdiction over corporations, see §§6.89-6.105.

A California court may exercise personal jurisdiction over an out-of-state law firm employing an attorney licensed in California who performed legal services under California law for California resident plaintiffs. Although the attorney denied ever traveling to California to conduct business, his presence or absence in the state is not determinative; the practice of law can occur even if the attorney is not physically present, by his advising a California client on a California legal dispute by phone, fax, or other technological means. Simons v Steverson (2001) 88 CA4th 693, 713, 106 CR2d 193.

Although a judgment against a partnership or an association will bind joint property or assets, a personal judgment cannot be rendered against an individual partner or against an individual member of an unincorporated association unless the court has personal jurisdiction over the person and he or she has been properly served with process. CCP §369.5 (former CCP §388(b)). See Comment to CCP §410.10. On the bases for asserting jurisdiction over individuals, see §§6.66-6.88.

VII. IN REM AND QUASI IN REM JURISDICTION

§6.107 A. Nature of Proceeding

An action or proceeding in rem seeks to affect the interests of all persons in certain real or personal property. 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §243 (5th ed 2008); see Title & Document Restoration Co. v Kerrigan (1906) 150 C 289, 306, 88 P 356. Proceedings that are classified as in rem include:

- Probate proceedings, e.g., will contests (Estate of Baker (1915) 170 C 578, 585, 150 P 989) and heirship proceedings (Estate of Radovich (1957) 48 C2d 116, 120, 308 P2d 14);
- Proceedings to enforce forfeiture of property used in violation of law (see, e.g., Moore v Purse Seine Net (1941) 18 C2d 835, 839, 118 P2d 1);
- Escheat proceedings (U.S. v Klein (3d Cir 1939) 106 F2d 213, 215); and
- Federal bankruptcy proceedings (Wells v California Tomato Juice, Inc. (1941) 47 CA2d 634, 636, 118 P2d 916).

An action or a proceeding quasi in rem is most commonly one in which the plaintiff has a claim against the defendant but, because of an inability to obtain jurisdiction over the defendant and thereby obtain a valid judgment against him or her personally, the plaintiff seeks to satisfy the claim from the defendant's property within the state. 2 Witkin, Procedure, Juris §246; see Hanson v Denckla (1958) 357 US 235, 246 n12, 2 L Ed 2d 1283, 78 S Ct 1228. Another type of quasi in rem action is that in which the plaintiff asserts an interest in the subject property as against particular defendants, e.g., an action to foreclose a mortgage or other lien (see Lee v Silva (1925) 197 C 364, 369, 240 P 1015). 2 Witkin, Procedure, Juris §252; see Hanson v Denckla, supra. This type of action should be distinguished from in rem actions, which seek to affect the interests of all persons in the subject property. Quasi in rem jurisdiction attaches only to the extent of the defendant's interest in the property, i.e., a court can award a judgment only to the extent of the defendant's interest in the property. Goodwine v Superior Court (1965) 63 C2d 481, 483, 47 CR 201.

Both in rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction depend on a seizure of the property before judgment. Lee v Silva (1925) 197 C 364, 368, 240 P 1015 (in rem); Goodwine v Superior Court, supra (quasi in rem). Unless the property is seized, e.g., by use of a provisional remedy such as attachment (see §32.5) or receivership (see chap 33), the judgment is void and the action must be dismissed against the defendant. See First Nat'l Bank v Eastman (1904) 144 C 487, 77 P 1043; Longfellow v Presidente Miguel Aleman (1974) 36 CA3d 508, 512, 111 CR 643.

A detailed discussion of in rem and quasi in rem jurisdiction is beyond the scope of this chapter. For further discussion, see 2 Witkin, Procedure, Juris §§243-269.

§6.108 B. "Minimum Contacts" Required

In Shaffer v Heitner (1977) 433 US 186, 53 L Ed 2d 683, 97 S Ct 2569, the United States Supreme Court reexamined the proposition, derived from Pennoyer v Neff (1878) 95 US 714, 24 L Ed 565, that the presence of property in a state gives that state jurisdiction to determine rights in the property regardless of the relationship of the property owner and the underlying dispute to the state. The Court in Shaffer noted (433 US at 212):

> The fiction that an assertion of jurisdiction over property is anything but an assertion of jurisdiction over the owner of the property supports an ancient form without substantial modern justification. Its continued acceptance would serve only to allow state-court jurisdiction that is fundamentally unfair to the defendant.

The Court therefore concluded that all assertions of state court jurisdiction, whether personal, in rem, or quasi in rem, must be evaluated according to the minimum contacts standard delineated in International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154. 433 US at 212.

The Court acknowledged that the presence of property in a state, although not necessarily establishing the existence of jurisdiction over the owner of the property, "may bear on the existence of jurisdiction by providing contacts among the forum State, the defendant, and the litigation." 433 US at 207. Thus, when claims to the property itself are the source of the underlying controversy between the plaintiff and the defendant, it will be unusual for the state where the property is located not to have jurisdiction. 433 US at 207. The presence of property in a state will also favor jurisdiction in cases, such as suits for injuries suffered on the land of an absentee owner, in which the defendant's ownership is conceded but the cause of action is otherwise related to rights and duties growing out of that ownership. 433 US at 208.

When, however, the property that serves as the asserted basis for state court jurisdiction is completely unrelated to the plaintiff's cause of action and there are no other ties among the defendant, the state, and the litigation, the presence of the property alone will not support the state's jurisdiction. 433 US at 208.

Thus the Court in Shaffer held that Delaware could not obtain jurisdiction over nonresident defendants in a shareholder's derivative suit simply by sequestering their stock in a Delaware corporation, even though a Delaware statute provided that the situs of all stock in Delaware corporations is considered to be in that state. The stock certificates were not physically present in Delaware and the sequestration was effected by the placing of a "stop transfer" order on the company's books. The Court also rejected Delaware's assertion of jurisdiction based on the nonresident defendants' status as officers in a Delaware-chartered corporation.

The United States Supreme Court subsequently held, following Shaffer, that a plaintiff may not obtain quasi in rem jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant in an action for damages arising from an automobile accident that occurred in another state by attaching the contractual obligation of the defendant's insurer, which was doing business in the plaintiff's forum, to defend and indemnify him in connection with the suit. Rush v Savchuk (1980) 444 US 320, 62 L Ed 2d 516, 100 S Ct 571.

§6.109 C. Notice Requirements

Fourteenth Amendment due process requirements on notice and an opportunity to be heard, like those for personal jurisdiction, apply to proceedings in rem and quasi in rem. Mullane v Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. (1950) 339 US 306, 94 L Ed 865, 70 S Ct 652; Page v W. W. Chase Co. (1904) 145 C 578, 583, 79 P 278.

Personal service of process in the state is not always necessary, and a state may authorize constructive notice, e.g., by mail, publication, or posting, but the type of notice given must be reasonably calculated under the circumstances to give the person interested in the property knowledge of a pending action affecting the property. Mullane v Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., supra. See Estate of Davis (1902) 136 C 590, 69 P 412. The Supreme Court held in Mullane, for example, that it was a violation of due process, even though authorized by statute, to publish notice in a newspaper for persons whose names and addresses were known, when notice could have been given by mail. See also Jones v Flowers (2006) 547 US 220, 164 L Ed 2d 415, 126 S Ct 1708 (due process requires that additional reasonable steps be taken to notify property owners of sale of their property when notice of tax sale was returned unclaimed). On the types of notice authorized in California (CCP §§410.10-418.11) and other specific statutory provisions, see chap 17.

§6.110 D. Form of Action and Judgment

A true proceeding in rem is an action against property seized and sought to be held for the satisfaction of an asserted charge against it without regard to the title of individual claimants to the property. Lee v Silva (1925) 197 C 364, 368, 240 P 1015. Thus, the action is actually a suit against the property itself and the judgment directly affects the property, e.g., by forfeiture or sale. See, e.g., People v One 1941 Chevrolet Coupe (1951) 37 C2d 283, 231 P2d 832 (statutory forfeiture of automobile used in narcotics offense); Longfellow v Presidente Miguel Aleman (1974) 36 CA3d 508, 111 CR 643 (action against ship to recover damages for personal injuries allegedly sustained while working on ship). In contrast, an action quasi in rem is personal in form although the judgment also affects property (see, e.g., Lee v Silva, supra (quiet title action)) or may be satisfied from the sale of property (see, e.g., Goodwine v Superior Court (1965) 63 C2d 481, 47 CR 201 (action for separate maintenance with attachment levied on defendant's real property in contemplation of sale to satisfy judgment)).

If a defendant in an in rem or quasi in rem proceeding makes a general appearance (see §6.72), he or she submits to the court's jurisdiction and the action is converted, as to that defendant, into an action in personam. See, e.g., Farmers & Merchants Nat'l Bank v Superior Court (1945) 25 C2d 842, 846, 155 P2d 823 (probate proceeding). A defendant in a quasi in rem proceeding may not defeat the court's jurisdiction by a special appearance to quash service of summons (Turner v Evers (1973) 31 CA3d Supp 11, 15, 107 CR 390, disapproved on other grounds in Javorek v Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 629, 641, 131 CR 768), but an appearance to contest the plaintiff's claim on the merits submits the defendant to the court's jurisdiction. In this situation, a defendant can protect his or her property from an unfounded claim only by contesting the claim, and there is authority that this may be done without risking a judgment against the defendant personally (31 CA3d Supp at 16).

§6.111 VIII. DIAGNOSTIC QUESTIONS

Answers to the following questions may assist counsel in evaluating jurisdictional issues in a particular case:

1. Which California state court has original subject matter jurisdiction over the action?
2. Is the action subject to federal jurisdiction?
3. If so, is the federal jurisdiction exclusive or concurrent?
4. If concurrent, which court system (state or federal) is more advantageous for the client?
5. Are there any other limitations on state court subject matter jurisdiction (e.g., governmental immunity, failure to exhaust administrative remedies) that apply?
6. Does California have personal jurisdiction over the defendant(s)?
7. Is the jurisdiction general or specific?
8. If the action is in rem or quasi in rem, does California have jurisdiction over it?

I. INTRODUCTION

§7.1 A. Scope of Chapter

Before adjudicating a case or controversy, a court must have subject matter jurisdiction over the case and personal jurisdiction over the litigants. This chapter discusses federal court subject matter jurisdiction. Specifically, it discusses general principles (see §§7.3-7.14), federal question jurisdiction (see §§7.15-7.32), supplemental jurisdiction (see §§7.33-7.47), and diversity jurisdiction (see §§7.48-7.81).

For further discussion, see 15 Moore & Coquillette, Moore's Federal Practice, chaps 102-103 (3d ed 1997); 13-14A Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§3521-3712 (3d ed 1998). See chap 6 on personal jurisdiction. See chaps 6, 22 on whether to proceed in state or federal court when there is concurrent jurisdiction. See chap 22 on removing cases from state to federal court.

§7.2 B. Governing Law

Subject matter jurisdiction involves the authority vested in the courts to decide a particular type of lawsuit. Federal courts are courts of limited, rather than general, jurisdiction. They derive their power only as authorized under Article III of the United States Constitution and particular statutes enacted under that Article. Bender v Williamsport Area Sch. Dist. (1986) 475 US 534, 541, 89 L Ed 2d 501, 511, 106 S Ct 1326.

Article III, §1 of the United States Constitution provides that "[t]he judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." Article III, §2 of the Constitution provides:

> The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority; to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Counsels; to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction; to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party; to Controversies between two or more States; between a State and Citizen of another State; between Citizens of different States; between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

On limitation of actions against a state, see US Const amend XI.

Thus, aside from the Supreme Court, which derives its jurisdiction directly from the Constitution, the Constitution does not itself confer jurisdiction on the lower federal courts. Rather, it gives the lower federal courts the capacity to take jurisdiction over the cases enumerated in US Const art III, §2, but an act of Congress is required to confer it. Kline v Burke Constr. Co. (1922) 260 US 226, 234, 67 L Ed 226, 232, 43 S Ct 79; People v Bruce (9th Cir 1942) 129 F2d 421, 423.

The two general federal jurisdiction statutes are 28 USC §1331, which establishes federal question jurisdiction (see §§7.15-7.32), and 28 USC §1332, which creates diversity jurisdiction. As discussed in §§7.48-7.81, diversity jurisdiction exists under 28 USC §1332 when there is complete diversity and in excess of $75,000 in controversy. Section 1331 (federal question jurisdiction) is not self-effectuating; rather, it is dependent on other specific grants of federal jurisdiction contained in individual federal statutes.

On Congress's power to give, withhold, and restrict lower court jurisdiction subject to the Fifth Amendment due process and just compensation clause, see Battaglia v General Motors Corp. (2d Cir 1948) 169 F2d 254.

II. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

A. Limitations on Federal Court's Subject Matter Jurisdiction

§7.3 1. Case or Controversy Requirement

Article III, §2 of the United States Constitution limits the jurisdiction of the federal courts to the adjudication of "cases" or "controversies." Thus, the issues presented must be justiciable, i.e., they must present a real and present controversy rather than one that is hypothetical or abstract. Western Mining Council v Watt (9th Cir 1981) 643 F2d 618, 623; Stewart v M.M.&P. Pension Plan (9th Cir 1979) 608 F2d 776, 785. The controversy must also "unequivocally call for the adjudication of rights." Western Mining Council v Watt, supra.

EXAMPLE: A plaintiff alleged that the trustees of his pension plan were violating the pension plan rules by limiting the benefits he would receive at retirement. The plaintiff sought a declaratory judgment that the trustees could not deny him these pension benefits. Because the plaintiff's claim was that he might be affected at some future time, it was held invalid. The controversy was remote and hypothetical rather than real and present, as is constitutionally required. Stewart v M.M.&P. Pension Plan, supra. On the Declaratory Judgment Act generally, see §7.31.

§7.4 a. Advisory Opinions

In light of the case or controversy requirement of US Const art III, §2 (see §7.3), a federal court may not render advisory opinions. Sierra Club v Morton (1972) 405 US 727, 732 n3, 31 L Ed 2d 636, 641 n3, 92 S Ct 1361; Norvell v Sangre de Cristo Dev. Co. (10th Cir 1975) 519 F2d 370, 375.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.5 b. Mootness

If the controversy no longer exists at the time of adjudication, the controversy is moot; no case or controversy exists under US Const art III, §2 (see §7.3), and the court has no jurisdiction. California v San Pablo & Tulare R.R. (1893) 149 US 308, 313, 37 L Ed 747, 748, 13 S Ct 876; Pomerantz v County of Los Angeles (9th Cir 1982) 674 F2d 1288, 1292.

Generally, a case is not made moot by the voluntary cessation of allegedly illegal conduct. The defendant is free to return to his or her old way and the court may hear and determine the case. U.S. v W.T. Grant Co. (1953) 345 US 629, 632, 97 L Ed 1303, 1309, 73 S Ct 894. A case, however, may become moot because (1) the alleged violation cannot reasonably be expected to recur, and (2) "interim relief or events have completely and irrevocably eradicated the effects of the alleged violation." County of Los Angeles v Davis (1979) 440 US 625, 631, 59 L Ed 2d 642, 649, 99 S Ct 1379. In such instances, jurisdiction properly acquired will abate. County of Los Angeles v Davis, supra.

EXAMPLE: Blind plaintiffs sought declaratory relief and an injunction against the County Jury Commissioner for excluding all blind persons from jury service solely because they were blind. Three weeks after the suit was filed, a State Senate Bill making the blind eligible for jury service was passed, and the Jury Commissioner ceased disqualifying the blind from jury lists. With compliance of the Jury Commissioner with the plaintiffs' demands, the plaintiffs' claims were moot, and there was no jurisdiction over them. Pomerantz v County of Los Angeles, supra.

When a case presents several issues and only one issue becomes moot, the constitutional requirement of a case or controversy is supplied by the remaining live issues. Powell v McCormack (1969) 395 US 486, 497, 23 L Ed 2d 491, 503, 89 S Ct 1944. On exception to mootness principle, see §7.7.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.6 (1) On Appeal

The case or controversy requirement of US Const art III, §2 applies not only in the lower federal courts but also in the appellate courts, including the United States Supreme Court. See Honig v Doe (1988) 484 US 305, 317, 98 L Ed 2d 686, 703, 108 S Ct 592; Cox v McCarthy (9th Cir 1987) 829 F2d 800. See also Williams v Alioto (9th Cir 1977) 549 F2d 136, 140. If, at the time the plaintiff's claim reaches the appellate court, there is no longer any case or controversy, the case must be dismissed as moot (assuming repetition-evasion exception does not apply; see §7.7). County of Los Angeles v Davis (1979) 440 US 625, 634, 59 L Ed 2d 642, 651, 99 S Ct 1379; Center for Biological Diversity v Lohn (9th Cir 2007) 511 F3d 960 (killer whale listed as endangered species during appeal); Cox v McCarthy, supra.

EXAMPLE: Plaintiffs challenged the constitutionality of the California Penal Code statute permitting the imposition of additional periods of incarceration for misconduct committed inside the penitentiary by parole violators. Before the appellate court's decision, the plaintiffs had surpassed the maximum periods of incarceration permitted under the challenged statute. They had completed their extra period of incarceration and could not be subject to the penalties of the statute again. The court determined, therefore, that the plaintiffs' claims were moot and that the court lacked jurisdiction. Because it was impossible for the plaintiffs to be subjected to an application of the statute again, the capable-of-repetition doctrine (see §7.7) did not apply. The court indicated, however, that a method to avoid mootness and obtain review was available through a habeas corpus class action (see §7.8). Cox, 829 F2d at 804.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.7 (2) Repetition-Evasion Exception

There is an exception to the mootness principle known as "the capable of repetition, yet evading review" doctrine that allows a plaintiff to pursue a claim despite the lack of a present controversy. See Weinstein v Bradford (1975) 423 US 147, 46 L Ed 2d 350, 96 S Ct 347; Williams v Alioto (9th Cir 1977) 549 F2d 136, 142. A court's jurisdiction is not defeated if (a) the challenged law or conduct is capable of repetition and (b) the duration of the challenged action before its cessation or expiration was too short to be fully litigated. See Williams v Alioto, supra. This doctrine is applicable, however, only when there is "a reasonable expectation that the same complaining party would be subjected to the same action again" (Weinstein v Bradford (1975) 423 US 147, 149, 46 L Ed 2d 350, 353, 96 S Ct 347; Cox v McCarthy (9th Cir 1987) 829 F2d 800, 803), although the court has the power to make an exception to this requirement (Cox v McCarthy, supra). A mere speculative possibility rather than a reasonable expectation of repetition is insufficient for the mootness exception to apply. Williams, 549 F2d at 143.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.8 (3) Class Actions

When the plaintiff brings the suit as a class action and litigates in a representative capacity, the fact that the named plaintiff's claim has become moot subsequent to the filing of the action does not require dismissal of the case, as long as there might be members of the class whose claims are still valid. Sosna v Iowa (1975) 419 US 393, 42 L Ed 2d 532, 95 S Ct 553. The requirement of a case or controversy under US Const art III, §2 (see §7.3) is satisfied if the named plaintiff has a case or controversy at the time the complaint is filed and at the time the class is certified under Fed R Civ P 23, and a live controversy exists thereafter between a class member and a named defendant, even though the named plaintiff's claim has become moot. See 419 US at 402, 42 L Ed 2d at 542 (inquiry shifts to ability of named representative to fairly and adequately protect class interests). See also La Duke v Nelson (9th Cir 1985) 762 F2d 1318, 1325, modified at 796 F2d 309; Kuahulu v Employers Ins. of Wausau (9th Cir 1977) 557 F2d 1334, 1336. Such a live controversy is also required for appellate review. See Sosna v Iowa, supra. On the effect if controversy involving named plaintiffs becomes moot before district court rules on certification motion, see 419 US at 402 n11, 42 L Ed 2d at 542 n11.

EXAMPLE: The plaintiff in Sosna brought an action seeking injunctive and declaratory relief against the enforcement of an allegedly un-constitutional statutory requirement of one year's residency in the state prior to the filing of a divorce petition. The District Court upheld the statute. Long before the case reached the Supreme Court, the plaintiff had satisfied the one-year residency requirement and had obtained a divorce in a different state. Had she brought the action only on her behalf, her claim would have been moot and required dismissal. However, because the claim was brought as a class action and because the state continued to enforce the statute against persons in the represented class, the appeal was not moot. As the Court said: "the case before us is one in which state officials will undoubtedly continue to enforce the challenged statute and yet, because of the passage of time, no single challenger will remain subject to its restrictions for the period necessary to see such a lawsuit to its conclusion." 419 US at 400.

§7.9 2. Standing

A plaintiff must have standing to assert his or her claims. A complaining party cannot invoke the power of the federal court in the absence of standing. Schlesinger v Reservists Comm. To Stop War (1974) 418 US 208, 215, 41 L Ed 2d 706, 715, 94 S Ct 2925; American Jewish Congress v Vance (DC 1978) 575 F2d 939, 943. The focus of standing is on the party seeking to get his or her complaint before the court, not on the issue to be adjudicated. Simon v Eastern Kentucky Welfare Rights Org. (1976) 426 US 26, 37, 48 L Ed 2d 450, 460, 96 S Ct 1917.

The standing doctrine has three requirements: (1) plaintiff must have suffered an injury in fact; (2) the injury must be fairly traceable to the challenged action by the defendant; and (3) it must be likely that the injury will be redressed by a favorable court decision. Lujan v Defenders of Wildlife (1992) 504 US 555, 560, 119 L Ed 2d 351, 112 S Ct 2130.

"Injury in fact" is "an invasion of a legally protected interest which is (a) concrete and particularized… and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical." 504 US at 560. See also Davis v FEC (2008) ___ US ___, 171 L Ed 2d 737, 128 S Ct 2759 (injury in fact focuses on circumstances existing when suit is filed); Massachusetts v EPA (2007) 549 US 497, 167 L Ed 2d 248, 267, 127 S Ct 1438 (agency's refusal to regulate greenhouse gases presented risk of actual and imminent harm to state); DaimlerChrysler Corp. v Cuno (2006) 547 US 332, 164 L Ed 2d 589, 126 S Ct 1854 (taxpayers' alleged injury on basis of corporation's credit against franchise tax was conjectural and hypothetical); Gest v Bradbury (9th Cir 2006) 443 F3d 1177 (election signature collectors who experienced "frustration" failed to show injury in fact in action challenging rules for evaluating circulator certifications); Beeman v TDI Managed Care Serv., Inc. (9th Cir 2006) 449 F3d 1035 (procedural injuries to California pharmacies, concerning failure of pharmacy benefit managers to comply with statutory rules for reporting drug pricing, established injury in fact).

A credible threat of harm is sufficient to constitute actual injury for standing purposes, whether or not a statutory violation has occurred. Central Delta Water Agency v U.S. (9th Cir 2002) 306 F3d 938 (plaintiff alleged that planned action by federal government would result in higher salinity levels in plaintiff's water source).

Even when the constitutional boundaries for standing have been met, a plaintiff may not have standing based on prudential limitations imposed by the court to avoid having to decide "questions of broad social import where no individual rights would be vindicated and to limit access to the federal courts to those litigants best suited to assert a federal claim." See Sprint Communications Co. v APCC Servs. (2008) ___ US ___, 171 L Ed 2d 424, 436, 128 S Ct 2531 (assignees of claims may assert their own legal rights); Warth v Seldin (1975) 422 US 490, 45 L Ed 2d 343, 95 S Ct 2197 (challenge to exclusionary zoning practices); City of Los Angeles v County of Kern (9th Cir 2009) 581 F3d 841 (plaintiffs lacked "prudential standing" when they sought to protect rights to intra, not interstate commerce); Western Mining Council v Watt (9th Cir 1981) 643 F2d 618.

The facts demonstrating standing must be clearly alleged in the complaint. Western Mining Council v Watt (9th Cir 1981) 643 F2d 618, 624. The Ninth Circuit requires that the plaintiff allege: "(a) a particularized injury (b) concretely and demonstrably resulting from defendants' action (c) which injury will be redressed by the remedies sought." People v Andrus (9th Cir 1979) 608 F2d 1247, 1249, quoting Bowker v Morton (9th Cir 1976) 541 F2d 1347, 1349.

EXAMPLE: Individuals with chronic health problems and an organization representing homeless and low-income county residents who rely on county health care system had standing to challenge the closure of a county treatment facility in Harris v Board of Supervisors (9th Cir 2004) 366 F3d 754, 760.

EXAMPLE: Plaintiffs sought a declaratory judgment that a federal Act establishing a system of land use planning and management for lands and mines owned by the United States was unconstitutional. Because plaintiffs, who were miners and owners of mining claims, failed to allege that the Act had been applied or threatened to be applied to them, or that they suffered any real or threatened injury under the statute's authority, plaintiffs lacked standing to challenge the Act. Western Mining Council v Watt, supra. On Declaratory Judgment Act, see §7.31.

If the issue of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, the court must assume the truth of the allegations in the complaint, unless the undisputed facts in the record controvert the allegations. Warren v Fox Family Worldwide, Inc. (9th Cir 2003) 328 F3d 1136, 1139; Cattie v Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (SD Cal 2007) 504 F Supp 2d 939, 944.

When the constitutionality of a statute is challenged on First Amendment grounds as facially overbroad, the standing requirement may be satisfied by plaintiff's claim of either

- Specific present objective harm; or
- A threat of specific future harm.

See Bigelow v Virginia (1975) 421 US 809, 815, 44 L Ed 2d 600, 608, 95 S Ct 2222; Dombrowski v Pfister (1965) 380 US 479, 486, 14 L Ed 2d 22, 28, 85 S Ct 1116. See also Red Bluff Drive-In, Inc. v Vance (5th Cir 1981) 648 F2d 1020, 1033 n18 (standing requirement of injury in fact relaxed in case of facial overbreadth challenges because of danger of tolerating existence of penal statute susceptible of sweeping and improper application in area of First Amendment freedoms). Moreover, "actual harm to individual values of an abstract or esoteric nature can provide the basis for standing." O'Hair v White (5th Cir 1982) 675 F2d 680, 687 (atheist's action challenging provision of state constitution requiring acknowledgment of existence of supreme being in order to be public office holder). For detailed discussion of injury in fact and standing generally in federal court, see 13 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§3531-3531.10 (3d ed 1998).

§7.10 3. Ripeness

A court may dismiss a case if it is not ripe for adjudication. The purpose of the ripeness doctrine is to prevent the courts from entangling themselves in "abstract disagreements." Association of Am. Med. Colleges v U.S. (9th Cir 2000) 217 F3d 770, 779.

The ripeness doctrine presupposes a case or controversy and hence jurisdiction under US Const art III, §2. Brown v Ferro Corp. (6th Cir 1985) 763 F2d 798, 801. It precludes a federal court from adjudicating a hypothetical request for an advisory opinion. Thomas v Anchorage Equal Rights Comm'n (9th Cir 2000) 220 F3d 1134, 1141. It does not prohibit a "pre-enforcement review" of a statute. Buono v Kempthorne (9th Cir 2008) 527 F3d 758, 774.

Even if a case or controversy is present, the courts analyze the "prudential considerations." The doctrine requires the court to exercise its discretion in determining whether judicial resolution would be desirable under all circumstances. Brown v Ferro Corp., supra. The court is directed to evaluate two criteria under the doctrine:

- Whether the issues are fit for judicial decision; and
- The hardship to the parties if the court withholds consideration.

Abbott Labs. v Gardner (1967) 387 US 136, 148, 18 L Ed 2d 681, 87 S Ct 1507, overruled on other grounds in Califano v Sanders (1977) 430 US 99, 51 L Ed 2d 192, 97 S Ct 980; Brown v Ferro Corp., supra.

NOTE: Although the same facts may sometimes be relevant to both the issue of standing and the issue of ripeness, the two doctrines differ. The standing doctrine is concerned with who may bring the action, i.e., whether the plaintiff is an appropriate party to assert the claim (see §7.9), whereas the ripeness doctrine is concerned with a timing issue, i.e., when in time the court can appropriately take up a matter. Action Alliance of Senior Citizens of Greater Philadelphia v Heckler (DC Cir 1986) 789 F2d 931, 940. Whether the jurisdictional inquiry is one of standing or ripeness, the analysis is generally the same. Thomas, 220 F3d at 1138 (ripeness inquiry often coincides with injury-in-fact prong of standing analysis).

§7.11 4. Political Questions

A federal court will not adjudicate a case involving a political question. Schlesinger v Reservists Comm. To Stop War (1974) 418 US 208, 215, 41 L Ed 2d 706, 715, 94 S Ct 2925; Powell v McCormack (1969) 395 US 486, 518, 23 L Ed 2d 491, 515, 89 S Ct 1944. Such questions are not justiciable primarily because of the doctrine of separation of powers. Powell v McCormack, supra. See American Jewish Congress v Vance (DC 1978) 575 F2d 939, 943 (presence of political question precludes federal court, under US Const art III, from hearing or deciding case).

§7.12 5. Abstention

Although a federal court may have jurisdiction, it may refrain from exercising such jurisdiction in narrowly limited special situations under the doctrine (sometimes called doctrines) of abstention. Zwickler v Koota (1967) 389 US 241, 248, 19 L Ed 2d 444, 450, 88 S Ct 391. The doctrine may be applied, e.g., to avoid (a) "a premature and perhaps unnecessary decision of a serious federal constitutional question," or (b) "the hazard of unsettling some delicate balance in the area of federal-state relationships." 389 US at 255, 19 L Ed 2d at 454 (concurring opinion, Harlan, J.).

The doctrine is often invoked when a state statute in question has not been interpreted by state courts and could perhaps be interpreted narrowly by a state court so as to avoid all constitutional questions. See, e.g., Red Bluff Drive-In, Inc. v Vance (5th Cir 1981) 648 F2d 1020, 1035. See also Garfinkle v Wells Fargo Bank (9th Cir 1973) 483 F2d 1074, 1077 (abstention appropriate when precise constitutional question not finally settled by California courts; in court's opinion, one existing state intermediate appellate opinion not dispositive of all issues that might be presented).

Younger* abstention. The doctrine of "Younger abstention" developed following the Supreme Court's decision in Younger v Harris (1971) 401 US 37, 27 L Ed 2d 669, 91 S Ct 746, a case that involved the institution of a federal proceeding while a state court criminal prosecution was pending. The Supreme Court held that, except in exceptional circumstances, fundamental policy forbids a federal court from staying or enjoining pending state court criminal proceedings. 401 US at 53. As explained in Hicks v Miranda (1975) 422 US 332, 349, 45 L Ed 2d 223, 95 S Ct 2281, "the rule in Younger is designed to permit state courts to try state cases free from interference by federal courts."

Although Younger involved potential interference with a state criminal case, the Supreme Court has extended the doctrine to federal cases that would interfere with state civil cases and administrative proceedings. Ohio Civil Rights Comm'n v Dayton Christian Sch., Inc. (1986) 477 US 619, 627, 91 L Ed 2d 512, 106 S Ct 2718. See also Hawaii Hous. Auth. v Midkiff (1984) 467 US 229, 81 L Ed 2d 186, 104 S Ct 2321 (Younger abstention appropriate in civil proceedings involving state land reorganization because abstention required whenever federal claims "have been or could be presented" in ongoing state judicial proceedings); San Jose Chamber of Commerce Political Action Comm. v City of San Jose (9th Cir 2008) 546 F3d 1087 (abstention required because city's election commission held proceeding to investigate activities of local political action committee).

A federal court may abstain only after three elements are found:

- There is an ongoing state proceeding.
- The proceeding implicates an important state interest.
- The state proceeding provides the plaintiff an opportunity to litigate its federal claims.

Middlesex County Ethics Comm. v Garden State Bar Ass'n (1982) 457 US 423, 432, 73 L Ed 2d 116, 125, 102 S Ct 2515; M&A Gabaee v Community Redev. Agency (9th Cir 2005) 419 F3d 1036, 1039. After these elements are found, the court must abstain if the court's action would have the practical effect of enjoining the ongoing state proceeding. AmerisourceBergen Corp. v Roden (9th Cir 2007) 495 F3d 1143, 1148.

Under Younger, abstention may be compelled regardless of the state court proceedings stage, or whether the state action was filed first. See M&A Gabaee, 419 F3d at 1039 (abstention proper even when redevelopment agency's state court eminent domain proceeding was filed after property owners brought federal action and another state action had not yet reached dispute). See also San Jose Chamber of Commerce Political Action Comm., 546 F3d at 1092 (state administrative agency proceeding was continuing because fine had not been assessed).

In the Ninth Circuit, a decision based on Younger abstention is subject to de novo review. Gilbertson v Albright (9th Cir 2004) 381 F3d 965, 982 n19. In Gilbertson, the court of appeals held that the Younger abstention doctrine applies to actions for damages under 42 USC §1983; when damages are at issue, federal courts should not dismiss federal proceedings but stay them until state proceedings are complete. See also Equity Lifestyle Props., Inc. v County of San Luis Obispo (9th Cir 2008) 548 F3d 1184, 1197 n3 (Gilbertson does not require stay of writ for administrative mandamus or of damages claims that otherwise would be dismissed as untimely or meritless).

Other abstention doctrines. Younger abstention is one of many abstention doctrines, including the "Colorado River," "Burford," and "Pullman" doctrines. See Colorado River Water Conserv. Dist. v U.S. (1976) 424 US 800, 47 L

Ed 2d 483, 96 S Ct 1236; Burford v Sun Oil Co. (1943) 319 US 315, 87 L Ed 1424, 63 S Ct 1098; Railroad Comm'n v Pullman Co. (1941) 312 US 496, 500, 85 L Ed 971, 974, 61 S Ct 643.

Courts exercise their discretion to abstain only "within the narrow and specific limits prescribed by the particular abstention doctrine involved." C-Y Dev. Co. v City of Redlands (9th Cir 1983) 703 F2d 375, 377. For example, there must be concurrent or pending state court proceedings for Colorado River Water Conserv. Dist. abstention. Kirkbride v Continental Cas. Co. (9th Cir 1991) 933 F2d 729.

For Burford abstention to apply, courts require that:

- The state has concentrated suits involving the local issue in a particular court.
- The federal issues are intertwined with complicated state law issues over which state courts may have special competence.
- Federal review might disrupt state efforts to establish a coherent policy.

Poulos v Caesar's World, Inc. (9th Cir 2004) 379 F3d 654, 671. Pullman abstention is appropriate when:

- The complaint requires resolution of a sensitive federal constitutional law.
- The constitutional question could be avoided by a definitive ruling on the state law issues.
- The possibly determinative issue of state law is unclear.

Spoklie v Montana (9th Cir 2005) 411 F3d 1051.

On abstention generally, see Moore v Sims (1979) 442 US 415, 60 L Ed 2d 994, 99 S Ct 2371. For detailed discussion of the abstention doctrine and circumstances in which it is applied, see 17A Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§4241-4248 (3d ed 1998).

Reservation of federal claims. A litigant who is forced into state court but seeks to preserve his or her federal claims and avoid the possible preclusive effects of an adverse state judgment should make a reservation of federal claims informing the state court of the existence of federal questions and the intent not to litigate them in the state action. See England v Louisiana State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs (1964) 375 US 411, 11 LEd2d 440, 84 S Ct 461; Los Altos El Granada Investors v City of Capitola (9th Cir 2009) 583 F3d 674 (litigant's two reservations of claims preserved its right to return to federal court even though state court struck its reservation of rights from complaint and district court abstained under Younger).

§7.13 B. Pleading Requirement

In federal district court, under Fed R Civ P 8(a), a pleading that sets forth a claim for relief, whether it be an original claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third party claim, must contain, among other allegations, "a short and plain statement of the grounds upon which the court's jurisdiction depends unless the court already has jurisdiction and the claim needs no new grounds of jurisdiction to support it." Following Fed R Civ P 86 is an appendix of forms. Form 2 contains jurisdictional allegations for jurisdiction based on diversity of citizenship, federal question, or the admiralty or maritime character of the claim.

NOTE: A complaint based on diversity of citizenship under 28 USC §1332 may be dismissed if the plaintiff alleges residency rather than citizenship in pleading diversity jurisdiction. See generally Strain v Harrelson Rubber Co. (5th Cir 1984) 742 F2d 888, 889. Moreover, the plaintiff must allege the amount in controversy against each defendant unless defendants' liability is joint. Welker v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (CD Cal 1980) 502 F Supp 268, 271 (discussed in §7.74). On alleging both state of incorporation and principal place of business as to each corporate party, see §§7.57-7.58.

Under 28 USC §1653, "[d]efective allegations of jurisdiction may be amended, upon terms, in the trial or appellate courts." For the section to be applicable, the jurisdictional allegation must be defective. The section does not permit an allegation to be amended retroactively to create jurisdiction when such jurisdiction has not previously existed. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v Hillman (5th Cir 1986) 796 F2d 770, 775 (diversity case). See Rockwell Int'l Credit Corp. v United States Aircraft Ins. Group (9th Cir 1987) 823 F2d 302, 304, overruled on other grounds in Partington v Gedan (9th Cir 1991) 923 F2d 686, 688 (removal based on diversity; proposed amendment under §1653 not acceptable because it attempted to create jurisdiction when none existed). On plaintiffs being barred from amending allegation under §1653 to assert federal question jurisdiction retroactively when it did not previously exist, see Boelens v Redman Homes, Inc. (5th Cir 1985) 759 F2d 504, 511 (§1653 limited to curing technical defects).

Although normally a federal district court resolves the question of subject matter jurisdiction before reaching the issue of personal jurisdiction, federal courts have discretion to resolve a straightforward question of personal jurisdiction first, to avoid reaching a difficult or novel question of subject matter jurisdiction. A district court may dismiss a case based on lack of personal jurisdiction without ever reaching subject matter jurisdiction. Ruhrgas AG v Marathon Oil Co. (1999) 526 US 574, 143 L Ed 2d 760, 119 S Ct 1563. Similarly, a district court may dispose of an action based on a defendant's forum non conveniens claim without first addressing issues of subject matter jurisdiction or personal jurisdiction. Sinochem Int'l Co. v Malaysia Int'l Shipping Corp. (2007) 549 US 422, 167 L Ed 2d 15, 22, 127 S Ct 1184.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.14 C. Nonwaivability of Defense

Lack of subject matter jurisdiction cannot be waived. A party at any time may raise it by motion or in a responsive pleading, or the trial or reviewing court may raise it sua sponte. International Union of Operating Eng'rs v County of Plumas (9th Cir 2009) 559 F3d 1041, 1043 (party that asserted subject matter jurisdiction in its petition for removal not foreclosed from raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction on appeal); Emrich v Touche Ross & Co. (9th Cir 1988) 846 F2d 1190, 1194 n2; Athens Community Hosp. v Schweiker (DC Cir 1982) 686 F2d 989, 992. See Dyer v Greif Bros. (9th Cir 1985) 766 F2d 398, 401 (sua sponte by court). See also Fed R Civ P 12(h)(3).

When lack of jurisdiction is raised for the first time on appeal, the court of appeals will determine whether exercise of jurisdiction in the district court was proper, as well as whether jurisdiction in the court of appeals is proper. See Bender v Williamsport Area Sch. Dist. (1986) 475 US 534, 541, 89 L Ed 2d 501, 511, 106 S Ct 1326. See also First Nat'l Bank v U.S. (9th Cir 1986) 792 F2d 954 (district court); In re Exennium, Inc. (9th Cir 1983) 715 F2d 1401, 1402 (court of appeals). Furthermore, the parties cannot obtain federal subject matter jurisdiction by consent, waiver, estoppel, or stipulation. Sullivan v First Affiliated Secs., Inc. (9th Cir 1987) 813 F2d 1368, 1374; First Nat'l Bank v U.S., supra. Jurisdiction may never be created by agreement of the parties. See California v La Rue (1972) 409 US 109, 112 n3, 34 L Ed 2d 342, 348 n3, 93 S Ct 390.

III. FEDERAL QUESTION JURISDICTION

§7.15 A. Statutory Authority

The federal question jurisdiction statute, 28 USC §1331, provides:

> The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

While the statute's "arising under" language parallels that of Article III, §2 of the Constitution (see §7.2), it has been interpreted differently from this same phrase in the Constitution. Although the "arising under" language of US Const art III, §2 has been construed as permitting Congress to extend federal jurisdiction to any case in which federal law potentially "forms an ingredient," the "arising under" language in 28 USC §1331 is interpreted more narrowly. Franchise Tax Bd. v Construction Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 US 1, 8 n8, 77 L Ed 2d 420, 430 n8, 103 S Ct 2841; Verlinden B.V. v Central Bank (1983) 461 US 480, 494, 76 L Ed 2d 81, 92, 103 S Ct 1962. Thus, Congress has conferred on the federal district courts only a limited measure of the judicial power available under the Constitution. Article "III 'arising under' jurisdiction is broader than federal-question jurisdiction under §1331." 461 US at 495.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.16 B. When Cases Arise Under Federal Law

Perhaps the most well accepted of the tests for determining whether a case "arises under" federal law for the purposes of 28 USC §1331 is that enunciated by Justice Holmes in American Well Works Co. v Layne & Bowler Co. (1916) 241 US 257, 260, 60 L Ed 987, 989, 36 S Ct 585: "A suit arises under the law that creates the cause of action." Therefore, the mere involvement of a federal question in a case does not mean the action must be, or even can be, commenced in federal court. Courts have been careful to accept jurisdiction based on federal question jurisdiction only within certain judicially prescribed limitations.

"Arising under" has been more particularly defined by courts in a variety of ways. The court will not have jurisdiction under this section unless the lawsuit "really and substantially involves a dispute or controversy respecting the validity, construction, or effect" of the federal law. Shulthis v McDougal (1912) 225 US 561, 569, 56 L Ed 1205, 1211, 32 S Ct 704. The federal question must be a "substantial" and "essential" element of the cause of action. Demarest v U.S. (9th Cir 1983) 718 F2d 964; Smith v Grimm (9th Cir 1976) 534 F2d 1346, 1350. "The right or immunity created must be such that it will be supported if the Constitution or laws of the United States are given one construction or effect, and defeated if they receive another." *Gully v First Nat'l B*ank (1936) 299 US 109, 112, 81 L Ed 70, 72, 57 S Ct 96. The Ninth Circuit generally uses the test that the claim arises under federal law if the result "turns on" the federal question. Mobil Oil Corp. v City of Long Beach (9th Cir 1985) 772 F2d 534, 539; Scope Indus. v Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom (CD Cal 1983) 576 F Supp 373, 375.On effect of a federal defense and complete preemption doctrine, see §§7.20-7.21.

§7.17 C. The Well-Pleaded Complaint Rule

The presence or absence of federal question jurisdiction is governed by the "well-pleaded complaint rule." Under this rule, whether a case arises under the Constitution or a law or treaty of the United States for jurisdictional purposes is determined from plaintiff's statement of plaintiff's claim contained in the complaint "unaided by anything alleged in anticipation or avoidance of defenses which it is thought the defendant may interpose." Taylor v Anderson (1914) 234 US 74, 75, 58 L Ed 1218, 1219, 34 S Ct 724; Provinicial Gov't of Marinduque v Placer Dome, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 582 F3d 1083, 1091; Bright v Bechtel Petroleum, Inc. (9th Cir 1986) 780 F2d 766, 769. A complaint is not well pleaded and does not invoke federal jurisdiction if the federal question "can be raised properly only as an anticipated defense." Mobil Oil Corp. v City of Long Beach (9th Cir 1985) 772 F2d 534, 539. See Franchise Tax Bd. v Construction Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 US 1, 10, 77 L Ed 2d 420, 431, 103 S Ct 2841. See also §7.20. The face of the complaint must disclose the federal question unaided by the answer (Phillips Petroleum Co. v Texaco, Inc. (1974) 415 US 125, 127, 39 L Ed 2d 209, 212, 94 S Ct 1002) or by any counterclaims. Holmes Group, Inc. v Vornado Air Circulation Sys., Inc. (2002) 535 US 826, 153 LEd2d 13, 122 S Ct 1889.

NOTE: Jurisdiction under 28 USC §1331 (see §7.15) is not automatically conferred on anyone who pleads that his or her constitutional rights have been violated. A well-pleaded federal question must appear in the plaintiff's complaint. The plaintiff's complaint must state a cause of action under the particular statute relied on by the plaintiff or there will be no federal question in the case. McIntosh v Garofalo (WD Pa 1973) 367 F Supp 501, 506. See Warrington Sewer Co. v Tracy (3d Cir 1972) 463 F2d 771, 772 ("[a] bare allegation of violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is not sufficient to confer federal jurisdiction").

On artful pleading doctrine as a limitation on the well-pleaded complaint rule, see §7.19.

Petition to compel arbitration. Before granting a petition to compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) (9 USC §§1-16), the federal court must "look through" the petition and determine whether (based on the plaintiff's own statement of the cause of action and not on defendant's defenses or counterclaims), but for the existence of the arbitration agreement, the court would have had jurisdiction over the substantive conflict between the parties. Vaden v Discovery Bank (2009) ___US___, 173 LEd2d 206, 129 S Ct 1262. In Vaden, a credit card company sued a customer in state court to collect a debt and the customer counterclaimed pleading usury and other state law claims. Because these counterclaims were admittedly preempted by federal law, the bank petitioned the federal court to enforce an arbitration agreement between the parties. The Supreme Court held that the district court in Vaden lacked federal question jurisdiction to decide the arbitration petition; under the well-pleaded complaint rule, the controversy did not arise under federal law and could not have been litigated in federal court. See 173 LEd2d 206 at 224, 129 SCt 1262 at 1278.

§7.18 1. Plaintiff as Master of Complaint

Although the facts concerning a plaintiff's case may support both state and federal claims, the plaintiff may decide to confine his or her claims to those based on state law and proceed in state court. Connecticut v Levi Strauss & Co. (D Conn 1979) 471 F Supp 363. See Fair v Kohler Die & Specialty Co. (1913) 228 US 22, 25, 57 L Ed 716, 33 S Ct 410 (party bringing suit is master of what law party will rely on, and therefore determines whether to bring suit arising under laws of United States by party's declaration or bill). Thus, the plaintiff is often called the "master" of his or her complaint, and is free to choose the forum in which to bring the action. Bright v Bechtel Petroleum, Inc. (9th Cir 1986) 780 F2d 766, 769; Schroeder v Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir 1983) 702 F2d 189, 190, overruled on other grounds in Moore-Thomas v Alaska Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 553 F3d 1241, 1246.

On limitations to the master of the complaint rule, see §7.19.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.19 2. Artful Pleading Doctrine

Despite the well-pleaded complaint rule (see §7.17), courts will not allow a plaintiff "to conceal the true nature of the complaint through 'artful pleading.'" Bright v Bechtel Petroleum, Inc. (9th Cir 1986) 780 F2d 766, 769. Thus, if a court determines that a plaintiff in its complaint has attempted to state an essentially federal claim in terms of state law merely to avoid the proper federal forum, the court will recharacterize the plaintiff's state law claim as a federal claim. Hunter v United Van Lines (9th Cir 1984) 746 F2d 635, 640.

The Ninth Circuit, calling the artful pleading doctrine a "minefield," has cautioned that the doctrine may be invoked only in limited circumstances because it "raises difficult issues of state and federal relationships and often yields unsatisfactory results." Lippitt v Raymond James Fin. Serv. (9th Cir 2003) 340 F3d 1033, 1041.

Only two categories of cases apply to the artful pleading doctrine: (1) complete preemption cases and (2) substantial federal question cases, i.e., claims that are "necessarily federal in character." Lippitt, 340 F3d at 1042. See also Hall v North Am. Van Lines, Inc. (9th Cir 2007) 476 F3d 683, 687 (49 USC §14706 was exclusive basis for contract claims alleging losses to property shipped interstate); McMaster v Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Cal. (ND Cal 2005) 392 F Supp 2d 1107 (state claim was not artfully pled because it was not equivalent to federal tax refund suit and potential need to interpret IRC and IRS regulations did not present federal question).

For additional discussion of the artful pleading doctrine in the context of federal removal, see §22.10.

§7.20 3. Federal Defense Insufficient

The plaintiff's complaint will not provide the basis for federal jurisdiction if it merely goes beyond a statement of the plaintiff's cause of action and (a) "anticipates or replies to a probable defense" (Phillips Petroleum Co. v Texaco, Inc. (1974) 415 US 125, 128, 39 L Ed 2d 209, 212, 94 S Ct 1002) or (b) asserts a claim "in the nature of a defense to a threatened or pending action" (United Air Lines v Division of Indus. Safety of Dep't of Indus. Relations (9th Cir 1980) 633 F2d 814, 817). Furthermore, the face of the complaint must disclose the federal question unaided by the answer. See Phillips Petroleum Co. v Texaco, Inc. (1974) 415 US 125, 127, 39 L Ed 2d 209, 212, 94 S Ct 1002. Federal question jurisdiction depends on the contents of the complaint and may not be based on counterclaims. Holmes Group, Inc. v Vornado Air Circulation Sys., Inc. (2002) 535 US 826, 153 LEd2d 13, 122 S Ct 1889.

EXAMPLE: A plaintiff sought a declaratory judgment in federal district court that a state court judgment awarding part of his future military retirement pay to his ex-wife as part of the community property settlement was no longer enforceable based on a recent Supreme Court ruling. Although interpretation of federal law was the only issue to be resolved, federal question jurisdiction was held lacking because "[a] case does not arise under federal law … when the federal question is merely an anticipated defense to a state lawsuit." Armstrong v Armstrong (9th Cir 1983) 696 F2d 1237, 1238. The plaintiff's federal law issues had "vitality only as defenses to enforcement of the state court judgment." Armstrong v Armstrong, supra. On causes of action under the Declaratory Judgment Act generally, see §7.31.

The above rules also apply concerning removal of jurisdiction. See chap 22; Powers v South Cent. United Food & Commercial Workers Unions & Employers Health & Welfare Trust (5th Cir 1983) 719 F2d 760, 763. On federal question jurisdiction based on the complete preemption doctrine, see §7.21.

NOTE: Even when the only issue to be resolved is whether a federal law preempts a state law, when the plaintiff's claim is based on state law, and federal law is invoked by way of defense, federal jurisdiction under the well-pleaded complaint rule is lacking. Hunter v United Van Lines (9th Cir 1984) 746 F2d 635, 640; Guinasso v Pacific First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n (9th Cir 1981) 656 F2d 1364. See §7.21 and chap 22 on complete preemption doctrine.

§7.21 D. Complete Preemption Doctrine

Although federal question jurisdiction may generally not be based on the defense of federal preemption (see §7.20), an exception exists when the substantive state law relied on by a plaintiff has been entirely displaced by the enactment of federal legislation. "Once an area of state law has been completely preempted, any claim purportedly based on that preempted state law is considered, from its inception, a federal claim, and therefore arises under federal law." Caterpillar Inc. v Williams (1987) 482 US 386, 393, 96 L Ed 2d 318, 328, 107 S Ct 2425. The statute's extraordinary preemptive force converts the state law complaint into one asserting a federal claim for the purpose of the well-pleaded complaint rule (see §7.17). Caterpillar Inc. v Williams, supra. This is known as the complete preemption doctrine. Caterpillar Inc. v Williams, supra. For further discussion of the complete preemption doctrine, see chap 22. State-law based counterclaims do not qualify a case for federal question jurisdiction, even if those counterclaims would be completely preempted by federal law. Vaden v Discovery Bank (2009) ___US___, 173 LEd2d 206, 219, 129 S Ct 1262.

NOTE: State law claims brought in federal court also may be dismissed under the complete preemption doctrine. See e.g., Coughlin v United Van Lines (CD Cal 2005) 362 F Supp 2d 1166 (court granted defendant's motion to dismiss state law claims for damages to household goods against interstate motor carrier because claims were preempted by the Carmack Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act (49 USC §14706)).

Federal statutes may also preempt state law claims under the doctrine of conflict preemption. Conflict preemption preempts common law causes of action that would impede or thwart Congressional objectives. See Yarick v PacifiCare of California (2009) 179 CA4th 1158, 1167, 102 CR3d 379 (rejecting plaintiff's common law duty claims against health insurer because to permit damages under common law would deprive federal authorities of regulatory power over health plan at issue).

§7.22 E. Federal Claim Must Be Substantial

The principle that a "substantial" federal question is necessary to support jurisdiction is a further limitation on the powers of the federal courts. Federal courts have no jurisdiction over claims otherwise within their jurisdiction if they are "so attenuated and unsubstantial as to be absolutely devoid of merit … or no longer open to discussion." Hagans v Lavine (1974) 415 US 528, 536, 39 L Ed 2d 577, 587, 94 S Ct 1372, quoting from Newburyport Water Co. v City of Newburyport (1904) 193 US 561, 579, 48 L Ed 795, 801, 24 S Ct 553, and McGilvra v Ross (1909) 215 US 70, 80, 54 L Ed 95, 101, 30 S Ct 27. See Hannis Distilling Co. v Mayor of Baltimore (1910) 216 US 285, 288, 54 L Ed 482, 483, 30 S Ct 326 (question obviously frivolous or plainly insubstantial because (1) it is manifestly devoid of merit, or (2) the subject has been foreclosed by earlier decisions that "leave no room for the inference that the questions sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy").

EXAMPLE 1: Plaintiffs sought compensation from the county water district for a "taking" under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments because the district's construction of a sand dike failed to prevent flooding to their property. Earlier decisions foreclosed relief in those circumstances. Thus, it was held that the court lacked jurisdiction of the claim. PDTC Owners Ass'n v Coachella Valley County Water Dist. (CD Cal 1978) 443 F Supp 338, 341.

EXAMPLE 2: Plaintiffs challenged the validity of a New York welfare regulation under the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and the supremacy clause. Because the Supreme Court was not aware of any cases in its Court that specifically dealt with this or any similar regulation and settled the matter one way or the other, the claim was held not to be either frivolous or insubstantial and was thus within the district court's jurisdiction. Hagans v Lavine (1974) 415 US 528, 539, 39 L Ed 2d 577, 589, 94 S Ct 1372.

§7.23 F. Private Right of Action

A private right of action may be created even though the federal statute relied on does not explicitly provide for it. Kipperman v Academy Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1977) 554 F2d 377, 380. Traditionally, courts applied certain factors to determine whether a private right of action existed; however, courts are now reluctant to find a private cause of action. Under the current approach, federal courts will create a private right of action only if there is "affirmative evidence of Congress' intent to create a private right of action." Touche Ross & Co. v Redington (1979) 442 US 560, 61 L Ed 2d 82, 99 S Ct 2479; Adler v Taylor (CD Cal, Feb. 2, 2005, No. 04-8472) 2005 US Dist Lexis 5862.

Congress' intent in enacting the federal statute is the focal point in determining whether the federal statute confers a private cause of action, and the above factors, together with other tools of statutory construction, are guides to discerning that intent. Thompson v Thompson (1988) 484 US 174, 179, 98 L Ed 2d 512, 519, 108 S Ct 513. "[T]he essential predicate for implication of a private remedy simply does not exist" if the congressional intent cannot be inferred from the statutory language, the statutory structure, or from some other source. Northwest Airlines, Inc. v Transport Workers Union (1981) 451 US 77, 94, 67 L Ed 2d 750, 765, 101 S Ct 1571.

EXAMPLE: Chilkat Indian Village brought an action seeking return of artifacts and monetary damages for their removal, alleging a violation of the federal statute prohibiting embezzlement and theft from Indian tribal organizations. To determine the intent of Congress, the court looked to the legislative history of the statute, which suggested that Congress was concerned with criminal rather than civil objectives. "The clear congressional emphasis seems to have been upon replacing a defective tribal criminal penalty with an effective federal one; a civil remedy cannot be fit easily into the picture." Chilkat Indian Village v Johnson (9th Cir 1989) 870 F2d 1469, 1472. In the absence of a basis for inferring congressional intent to create a private remedy, the Court dismissed the village's federal claim. Chilkat Indian Village v Johnson, supra.

In Kipperman v Academy Life Ins. Co., supra, the court indicated that a limited private right of action to secure restitutionary relief under 39 USC §3009 (which makes mailing of unsolicited merchandise a per se unfair trade practice actionable by the Federal Trade Commission) would be appropriate, but held injunctive relief inappropriate because it would interfere with the Federal Trade Commission's power to enforce the section. See also Musick, Peeler & Garrett v Employers Ins. of Wausau (1993) 508 US 286, 124 L Ed 2d 194, 113 S Ct 2085 (right to contribution in suit based on implied private right of action under Securities Exchange Act §10(b) and Rule 10b-5 of SEC).

§7.24 G. Cause of Action Under Federal Common Law

Under 28 USC §1331, a district court has jurisdiction over actions that arise under the "laws" of the United States. The word "laws" has been construed to include laws created by judicial decisions as well as by federal statute. Illinois v City of Milwaukee (1972) 406 US 91, 31 L Ed 2d 712, 92 S Ct 1385. Thus, despite the famous declaration in Erie R.R. v Tompkins (1938) 304 US 64, 78, 82 L Ed 1188, 1194, 58 S Ct 817, that there exists "no federal general common law," claims that arise under federal common law provide a basis for federal court jurisdiction under §1331. Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc. (1981) 451 US 630, 641, 68 L Ed 2d 500, 509, 101 S Ct 2061; Janakes v United States Postal Serv. (9th Cir 1985) 768 F2d 1091, 1094. Instances when the court may formulate federal common law, however, are few. Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc., supra. There are essentially two categories of cases in which courts may have the authority to formulate federal common law (see Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc. (1981) 451 US 630, 640, 68 L Ed 2d 500, 509, 101 S Ct 2061; National Audubon Soc'y v Department of Water & Power (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 1409, 1413):

- Those in which the courts have been given power by Congress to develop substantive law (see §7.25), and
- "[T]hose in which a federal rule of decision is necessary to protect uniquely federal interests" (see §7.26).

§7.25 1. Development of Federal Common Law

Perhaps the most frequent basis for the creation of federal common law is explicit congressional authorization. This seems to be a contradiction, but it is actually not. When Congress wishes to establish a comprehensive regulatory scheme, but does not wish itself to fully regulate in the area, it may empower the federal courts to develop a body of federal common law to supplement the statutory scheme and to define and develop the standards that the statute sets out in general terms. Menhorn v Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (9th Cir 1984) 738 F2d 1496, 1499. For example, Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 (LMRA) §301 has been treated as congressional authorization for the federal courts to develop a federal common law concerning the construction and enforcement of collective bargaining agreements, including "fashioning a remedy that will effectuate [the statute's] policy." Textile Workers Union v Lincoln Mills (1957) 353 US 448, 457, 1 L Ed 2d 972, 981, 77 S Ct 912. Similarly, in Menhorn v Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., supra, the court concluded that Congress intended for the courts "to formulate a nationally uniform federal common law to supplement the explicit provisions and general policies" in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). 738 F2d at 1500.

NOTE: Except as indicated in §7.26, the fact that a federal court is vested with jurisdiction does not in and of itself give the court authority to formulate federal common law in the absence of congressional authorization for the court to formulate substantive rules of decision. Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc. (1981) 451 US 630, 640, 68 L Ed 2d 500, 509, 101 S Ct 2061.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.26 2. Application of Federal Common Law

Federal common law will be applied when a uniform national rule is necessary to further the interests of the federal government (see Miree v DeKalb County (1977) 433 US 25, 29, 53 L Ed 2d 557, 562, 97 S Ct 2490), i.e., when a federal rule of decision is required to protect uniquely federal interests (Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc. (1981) 451 US 630, 640, 68 L Ed 2d 500, 509, 101 S Ct 2061). Such federal interests generally exist only in the limited areas concerned with:

- The rights and obligations of the United States;
- "[I]nterstate and international disputes implicating the conflicting rights of States or our relations with foreign nations"; and
- Admiralty and maritime cases.

451 US at 641, 68 L Ed 2d at 509.

In the above instances, the court will not allow state law to be applied to resolve the controversy because either (a) "the authority and duties of the United States as sovereign are intimately involved" or (b) it is inappropriate for state law to control because of the controversy's interstate or international nature. Texas Indus. v Radcliff Materials, Inc., supra. See, e.g., Clearfield Trust Co. v U.S. (1943) 318 US 363, 367, 87 L Ed 838, 842, 63 S Ct 573, in which the plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount of a check drawn on the Treasurer of the United States, which had been paid on a forged endorsement. The court fashioned the controlling federal rule of law without selecting state law as the federal rule. If state law were applied to issuance of commercial paper by the United States, the duties and obligations of the United States would be subjected to great uncertainty. The identical transaction would be subject to the vagaries of each state's laws thereby leading to great diversity in results. Thus, a uniform federal common law was required and applied. Clearfield Trust Co. v U.S., supra. Post-Clearfield decisions establish, however, that uniform federal law "need not always be applied in government litigation." Empire Healthchoice Assur., Inc. v McVeigh (2006) 547 US 677, 165 L Ed 2d 131, 126 S Ct 2121 (reimbursement claim under Federal Employee Health Benefits Act (FEHBA) not within federal jurisdiction when right to reimbursement arose from contract, not from FEHBA, and claim raised only state law issues).

With regard to interstate disputes concerning air pollution, see National Audubon Soc'y v Department of Water & Power (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 1409, 1416, in which the court indicated that a federal common law nuisance claim based on such activity is recognized only in a very limited context. The court noted that "[i]t appears that the Court considers only those interstate controversies which involve a state suing sources outside of its own territory because they are causing pollution within the state to be inappropriate for state law to control, and therefore subject to resolution according to federal common law." 858 F2d at 1417.

Under the "act of state doctrine," the federal court has subject matter jurisdiction under 28 USC 1331 over claims challenging the validity of a foreign state's conduct within its own borders. Provinicial Gov't of Marinduque v Placer Dome, Inc. (9th Cir 2009) 582 F3d 1083, 1088 (district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction under act of state doctrine when validity of foreign government's actions was not essential element of any of plaintiff's claims).

§7.27 3. Whether to Adopt State Law as Federal Rule

Once a court has determined that federal common law will provide the rule of decision, the court must determine whether that law is to be a uniform federal common law, or whether relevant state law may be incorporated as the federal rule of decision. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. v U.S. (ED Cal 1978) 462 F Supp 1193, 1201. As a general rule, state law will provide the rule of decision unless an overriding federal interest in uniformity exists. Great Southwest Life Ins. Co. v Frazier (9th Cir 1988) 860 F2d 896, 899.

In determining whether to adopt state law or fashion a nationwide federal rule, a court will consider:

- Whether application of state law would frustrate specific federal objectives; and
- The extent to which commercial relationships predicated on state law would be disrupted by application of a federal rule.

U.S. v Kimbell Foods, Inc. (1979) 440 US 715, 728, 59 L Ed 2d 711, 724, 99 S Ct 1448; Great Southwest Life Ins. Co. v Frazier, supra. See Yunis v U.S. (CD Cal 2000) 118 F Supp 2d 1024, 1033 for an example of a situation in which the district court concluded that it was required to fashion a federal rule because application of state law would frustrate the intent of Congress.

§7.28 H. Private Cause of Action Under International Treaties

Under 28 USC §1331, federal district courts have jurisdiction over actions that arise under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States. Courts rarely find private claims to be so closely connected with a treaty of the United States as to "arise under" the treaty as required by §1331. Without authorizing legislation, a treaty's provisions may be enforced by an individual only when the treaty is self-executing, i.e., when a private right of action is expressly or impliedly provided for in the treaty. Handel v Artukovic (CD Cal 1985) 601 F Supp 1421, 1425; Dreyfus v Von Finck (2d Cir 1976) 534 F2d 24, 30. In determining whether a treaty is self-executing, the following factors are considered (People of Saipan v United States Dep't of Interior (9th Cir 1974) 502 F2d 90, 97):

> the purposes of the treaty and the objectives of its creators, the existence of domestic procedures and institutions appropriate for direct implementation, the availability and feasibility of alternative enforcement methods, and the immediate and long-range social consequences of self- or non-self-execution.

EXAMPLE: Plaintiffs brought a class action for compensatory and punitive damages against the defendant for his alleged involvement in deprivations of life and property suffered by Jews in Yugoslavia during World War II. Plaintiffs based their claims on the Hague Convention and the Geneva Convention. Because the Geneva Convention provided for enforcement of its provisions under the domestic laws of the signatory countries, and because recognition of a private remedy under the Hague Convention would potentially interfere with foreign relations and pose serious problems of fairness in enforcement, the court concluded that the treaties were not self-executing and provided no private cause of action. Handel v Artukovic, supra.

§7.29 I. Concurrent State and Federal Jurisdiction

State and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction over suits that arise under the Constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States except when Congress has restricted jurisdiction over such suits to the federal courts. Grubb v Public Utils. Comm'n (1930) 281 US 470, 476, 74 L Ed 972, 978, 50 S Ct 374; Cohen v Kar Prods., Inc. (In re Repair & Maintenance Parts Corp.) (Bankr ND Ill 1982) 19 BR 575. A state court, however, in deciding a federal question case over which there is concurrent jurisdiction, must apply federal law. See League To Save Lake Tahoe v B.J.K. Corp. (9th Cir 1976) 547 F2d 1072, 1075 n7.

Although a state and a federal court may have concurrent jurisdiction over a case involving a federal question, if suit is instituted in state court, generally the defendant may have such a case removed to a federal district court unless removal of the particular case is prohibited by a statute. On removal generally, see chap 22.

PRACTICE TIP: In certain instances, if an action over which a state and federal court have concurrent jurisdiction is filed initially in state court, the action cannot be removed to federal court. For such actions, see chap 22. Thus, a plaintiff, by filing such a case initially in state court, can control the forum by precluding the case from being heard in federal court if the plaintiff so desires.

Below is a list of statutes on which claims are often based over which state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction. The list is not meant to be exhaustive.

NOTE: Some of these statutes are listed here because it appears from their language that concurrent jurisdiction exists. Counsel must, however, check case law, as there may be no Ninth Circuit case directly on point.

- Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) (29 USC §§621-634)—creates a federal cause of action for age discrimination. See Mathis v Allied Wholesale Distrib., Inc. (MD Ga 1988) 680 F Supp 1545, 1547; Jacobi v High Point Label, Inc. (MD NC 1977) 442 F Supp 518.
- 42 USC §1981—protects individuals against discrimination in the making and enforcement of contracts. See De Horney v Bank of America Nat'l Trust & Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir 1989) 879 F2d 459.
- 42 USC §1983—gives individuals who are deprived of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution or laws a right of action against any person acting under color of state law who deprives them of such rights. See Kutzik v Young (4th Cir 1984) 730 F2d 149; Long v District of Columbia (DC Cir 1972) 469 F2d 927.
- 42 USC §1985—gives individuals who are injured in their person or property, or who are deprived of any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, an action for damages against any one or more of those who interfere with his or her civil rights. See Bennum v Board of Governors (D NJ 1976) 413 F Supp 1274, 1279.
- Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) (42 USC §§2000(e)-2000(e)(17))—permits suits against employers for employment discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Donnelly v Yellow Freight Sys. (1990) 494 US 820, 108 L Ed 2d 834, 110 S Ct 1566.
- Consumer Leasing Act of 1976 (15 USC §§1667-1667e)—establishes a claim for relief concerning a consumer lease against any lessor who fails to make required lease disclosures or fails to comply with provisions governing a lessee's liability on expiration or termination of the lease. See 15 USC §1667d(c).
- Electronic Fund Transfer Act (15 USC §§1693-1693r)—creates a claim for damages against any person who fails to comply with provisions under this subchapter governing electronic fund transfers. See 28 USC §1693m(g).
- Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 USC §§1691-1691f)—gives an aggrieved credit applicant a right of action against any creditor who fails to comply with prohibitions in this subchapter against racial discrimination. See 15 USC §1691e(f).
- Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 USC §§1681-1681t)—gives any consumer a claim against any consumer reporting agency or user of information which willfully fails to comply with fair and accurate credit reporting practices

(§1681n) or negligently fails to comply with the requirements under this subchapter (§1681o). See 15 USC §1681p; Haun v Retail Credit Co. (WD Pa 1976) 420 F Supp 859 (removal allowed); Ruth v Westinghouse Credit Co. (DC Okla 1974) 373 F Supp 468 (removal denied).

- Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (15 USC §§1692-1692o)—provides a claim against any debt collector who fails to comply with provisions of this subchapter prohibiting abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices. See 28 USC §1692k(d); Peterson v United Accounts, Inc. (8th Cir 1981) 638 F2d 1134.
- Fair Labor Standards Act (29 USC §§201-219)—allows actions by employees against employers for unpaid compensation. See 29 USC §216.
- Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) (45 USC §§51-60) (railroads)—gives a right of action to railroad employees who suffer on-the-job injuries due to the railroad's negligence. See 45 USC §56.
- Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act (15 USC §1701-1720)—allows any purchaser or lessee to bring an action against a developer or agent if an interstate sale or lease of property was made in violation of §1703(a) of this title prohibiting misrepresentations or material omissions in connection with the sale or lease of any lot. See 15 USC §1719.
- Jones Act (46 USC §688)—provides that any seaman who suffers personal injuries in the course of his employment may maintain an action for damages. See Baptiste v Superior Court (1980) 106 CA3d 87, 164 CR 789.
- Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act (RICO) (18 USC §§1961-1968)—provides that anyone injured in his or her business or property by reason of "racketeering activity" may sue to recover treble damages. 18 USC §1964; Lou v Belzberg (9th Cir 1987) 834 F2d 730.
- Securities Act of 1933 (15 USC §§77a-77aa)—provides a claim against any purchaser or seller of a security who makes untrue statements of material fact or who omits to state material facts necessary in order to make other statements not misleading. See 15 USC §77v. On exclusive federal jurisdiction under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, see §7.30.
- Small Business Act (15 USC §§631-650)—gives small businesses a claim against the Administrator of the Small Business Administration for failure to assist and protect, insofar as is possible, the interest of small business concerns. See 15 USC §634(b)(1).
- Truth in Lending Act (15 USC §§1601-1646)—establishes a civil cause of action by consumers against creditors who fail to make required financial disclosures or fail to comply with fair and accurate credit billing practices. See 15 USC §1640(e).

On the United States as a plaintiff, see 28 USC §1345. See also 14A Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§3651-3653 (3d ed 1998).

NOTE: A state court must apply federal law in an action filed in state court that involves a federal question over which there is concurrent jurisdiction. League To Save Lake Tahoe v B.J.K. Corp. (9th Cir 1976) 547 F2d 1072, 1075 n7. See Monessen Sw. Ry. v Morgan (1988) 486 US 330, 100 L Ed 2d 349, 108 S Ct 1837 (proper measure of damages under Federal Employers' Liability Act inseparably connected with right of action and is therefore issue of substance that must be decided under federal law; improper for state to characterize its rule on awarding prejudgment interest as mere local rule of procedure). On federal common law, see §§7.24-7.27.

§7.30 J. Exclusive Federal Court Jurisdiction

Some federal statutes provide for exclusive federal jurisdiction of claims arising under them. Under such statutes, a plaintiff can bring federal claims only in federal court; state courts lack subject matter jurisdiction over these matters. Some of these statutes are listed below (although counsel should check case law to determine if any exceptions apply):

- Admiralty and maritime (28 USC §1333)—creates exclusive federal jurisdiction over maritime and admiralty cases, except as provided in the "saving to suitors" clause contained in 28 USC §1331(1). For discussion of the "saving to suitors" clause, see 14 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3672 (3d ed 1998). A suit arising from the sale of a vessel, however, does not give rise to admiralty jurisdiction. Herman Family Revocable Trust v Teddy Bear (9th Cir 2001) 254 F3d 802, 804.
- Bankruptcy matters (28 USC §1334).
- Consuls and vice consuls of foreign states (28 USC §1351)—provides for exclusive federal district court jurisdiction for actions or proceedings against such persons.
- Certain ERISA actions (Employee Retirement Income Security Act (29 USC §§1001-1461)).
- Federal Tort Claims Act (28 USC §§2671-2680)—authorizes claims against the United States for the negligent or wrongful acts or omissions of employees of the federal government while acting within the scope of their authority. See 28 USC §1346(b).

NOTE: Claims arising in foreign countries cannot be brought under this Act. Smith v U.S. (1993) 507 US 197, 122 L Ed 2d 548, 113 S Ct 1178 (Antarctica held to be foreign country).

- Fine, penalty, or forfeiture, pecuniary or otherwise, incurred under Act of Congress (28 USC §1355)—provides for exclusive jurisdiction in district courts for action or proceeding to recover or enforce such fine, penalty, or forfeiture.
- Patents, copyrights, and trademarks (28 USC §1338)—provides for federal jurisdiction over actions relating to patents, trademarks, copyrights, and related matters, e.g., unfair competition.
- Labor Management Relations Act (29 USC §185)—permits suits by both unions and individual union members seeking to vindicate rights (e.g., wages, hours, overtime pay, wrongful discharge, fair representation) arising out of a collective bargaining agreement. See K.V. Mart Co. v United Food & Commercial Workers Int'l Union (9th Cir 1999) 173 F3d 1221 (29 USC §185 does not confer jurisdiction over all suits by or against covered unions, but is limited to suits for breach of contract identified in that section, such as breaches of collective bargaining agreements).
- Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 USC §§78a-78kk)—allows for a right of action against persons using instrumentalities of interstate commerce to engage in various manipulative or deceptive acts with respect to the purchase or sale of securities. See 15 USC §78aa.
- Seizure of property under United States law (28 USC §1356)—provides for exclusive jurisdiction in the federal district courts for any seizure under any United States law on land or on "waters not within admiralty and maritime jurisdiction."
- Sherman Antitrust Act (15 USC §§1-37a)—provides treble damages for injury caused by monopolization or contracts, combinations, or conspiracies in restraint of trade. See 15 USC §§4, 15.
- Tucker Act (28 USC §§1346(a)(2), 1491)—provides that in addition to recovery of any internal revenue tax or penalty as specified in 28 USC §1346(a)(1), the district court has original jurisdiction concurrent with the United States Claims Court, for any action or claim against the United States not exceeding $10,000, founded on the Constitution, congressional Act, or executive department regulation, or on an express or implied contract with the United States, or for liquidated or unliquidated damages in nontort cases. Under 28 USC §1346(a)(2), however, the district court does not have jurisdiction for actions or claims against the United States based on any express or implied contract with the United States or for liquidated or unliquidated damages in nontort cases that "are subject to sections 8(g)(1) and 10(a)(1) of the Contract Disputes Act of 1978." Jurisdiction for claims exceeding $10,000 is vested in the United States Claims Court. See 28 USC §§1346(a)(2), 1491. For further discussion of the Tucker Act, see 14 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3657 (3d ed 1998).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/7 Federal Jurisdiction/§7.31 K. Causes of Action Under Declaratory Judgment Act

§7.31 K. Causes of Action Under Declaratory Judgment Act

The Declaratory Judgment Act (28 USC §2201) enlarges the range of remedies available in the federal courts. However, it is a procedural device only and does not enlarge federal jurisdiction. Skelly Oil Co. v Phillips Petroleum Co. (1950) 339 US 667, 671, 94 L Ed 1194, 1199, 70 S Ct 876; Aetna Life Ins. Co. v Haworth (1937) 300 US 227, 240, 81 L Ed 617, 621, 58 S Ct 454.

Use of the Declaratory Judgment Act does not confer jurisdiction by itself; there is no jurisdiction if it would not exist on the face of a well-pleaded complaint brought without the use of the Act. Janakes v United States Postal Serv. (9th Cir 1985) 768 F2d 1091, 1093. There must be an independent basis for jurisdiction. Stock West, Inc. v Confederated Tribes of Colville Reservation (9th Cir 1989) 873 F2d 1221, 1225.

Under the well-pleaded complaint rule (see §7.17), a plaintiff's declaratory judgment complaint does not present a federal question (and, thus, federal jurisdiction will be lacking) if, without the declaratory judgment procedure, the federal issue would arise only as a defense to a state-created action. Franchise Tax Bd. v Construction Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 US 1, 16, 77 L Ed 2d 420, 435, 103 S Ct 2841. See Janakes v United States Postal Serv., supra (declaratory judgment that plaintiff's complaint will not assert a federal question "if, but for the declaratory judgment procedure, that question would arise only as a federal defense to a state law claim brought by the declaratory judgment defendant in state court"). On the other hand, a federal court has jurisdiction, notwithstanding the assertion of a federal defense by the declaratory judgment plaintiff, if the declaratory judgment defendant could have brought a well-pleaded coercive action arising under federal law in federal court to enforce its rights. Franchise Tax Bd., 77 L Ed 2d at 437; Janakes v United States Postal Serv., supra. See Mobil Oil Corp. v City of Long Beach (9th Cir 1985) 772 F2d 534, 539 (dispositive issue is whether federal issue would appear as necessary element of well-pleaded complaint filed by any proper party in coercive action to enforce rights in dispute). The coercive action cannot "be based merely on diversity of citizenship or another, nonsubstantive jurisdictional statute," but must arise under federal law. Janakes v United States Postal Serv., supra.

EXAMPLE: Plaintiff mail carrier was injured while delivering mail and was paid his normal salary under the Federal Employees Compensation Act (FECA) (5 USC §§8101-8193) during the period in which he was unable to perform his duties. The United States Postal Service then notified the plaintiff that he would be required to reimburse the Service for payments received during his injury if he recovered from a third party tortfeasor. The plaintiff filed a declaratory judgment action seeking interpretation of FECA, specifically §§8131 and 8132. The plaintiff's claim was made in anticipation of the Service's action to collect its reimbursement, and thus was an assertion of a federal defense, which does not confer subject matter jurisdiction. However, the court held that 5 USC §8132 creates a right of action on which the defendant Postal Service could base a coercive suit for reimbursement in federal court under 28 USC §1331, and thus the federal court had jurisdiction over the plaintiff's declaratory judgment action. Janakes v United States Postal Serv. (9th Cir 1985) 768 F2d 1091, 1094.

The test is not whether all claims brought by the declaratory judgment defendant to resolve the matter in dispute necessarily arise under federal law, but rather whether the defendant has at least one claim that would arise under federal law. Thus, a declaratory judgment defendant need only have one claim arising under federal law that the defendant could have brought by a coercive suit in federal court to resolve the issue to confer federal question jurisdiction and thus enable the plaintiff to maintain the declaratory judgment action in federal court. See 768 F2d at 1095. Furthermore, the federal court has jurisdiction over the declaratory judgment action even though the declaratory judgment defendant has not actually brought the coercive action on which federal jurisdiction is based. See generally 768 F2d at 1094 (if hypothetical suit could be brought by defendant, plaintiff's declaratory judgment action supported by jurisdiction).

NOTE: A state declaratory judgment action that raises a question of federal law is not removable to federal court unless the federal court could have taken jurisdiction of the declaratory judgment complaint had it been filed with it under 28 USC §2201. Franchise Tax Bd., 77 L Ed 2d at 436. On removal generally, see chap 22. On state declaratory relief actions, see chap 35.

A district court has discretion on whether to exercise jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act. See, e.g., Brillhart v Excess Ins. Co. (1942) 316 US 491, 86 L Ed 1620, 62 S Ct 1173. The district court did not abuse its discretion in remanding a removed state court action and declining jurisdiction when it considered the Brillhart factors and determined that avoiding duplicative litigation and avoiding forum shopping favored neither party, and that state court would be the preferable forum because both the federal and state actions involved the same purely state law issue. Huth v Hartford Ins. Co. (9th Cir 2002) 298 F3d 800.

§7.32 L. Jurisdiction to Proceed on Merits When Jurisdiction Attacked

A complaint that fails "to state a proper cause of action calls for a judgment on the merits and not for a dismissal for want of [subject matter] jurisdiction." Bell v Hood (1946) 327 US 678, 682, 90 L Ed 939, 943, 66 S Ct 773. Generally, a jurisdictional determination must be made before any determination on the merits of a claim. However, "if the attack on jurisdiction requires the court to consider the merits of the case, the court has jurisdiction to proceed to a decision on the merits." Thornhill Publ'g Co. v General Tel. & Elec. Corp. (9th Cir 1979) 594 F2d 730, 734.

Some statutes provide the basis for both federal court subject matter jurisdiction and the plaintiff's substantive claim. Under such a statute, the jurisdictional issue and the issue of whether a claim was stated are intertwined. In those instances, a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Fed R Civ P 12(b)(1) rather than for failure to state a claim under Fed R Civ P 12(b)(6) is proper only if the allegations of the complaint are frivolous. Timberlane Lumber Co. v Bank of America (9th Cir 1976) 549 F2d 597, 602 (Rule 56 treatment rather than speaking motion under Rule 12(b)(1) appropriate). See Thornhill Publ'g Co. v General Tel. & Elec. Corp., supra (Rule 56 summary judgment proper; less rigorous standards apply under Rule 12(b)(1) than under Rule 56). Moreover, in certain instances when the jurisdictional question "is dependent on decision of the merits, a party is entitled to have the jurisdictional issue submitted to the jury, rather than have the court resolve factual issues." 594 F2d at 735.

IV. SUPPLEMENTAL JURISDICTION

The term "supplemental jurisdiction" applies to civil actions begun in federal court on or after December 1, 1990, the date that 28 USC §1367 was enacted. It is an exception to the rule that every claim against every party in a federal pleading must be asserted under a specific federal statutory grant of subject matter jurisdiction. The exercise of supplemental jurisdiction permits a federal district court to resolve in one lawsuit a claim over which federal statute gives it jurisdiction and a related claim over which it would not otherwise have subject matter jurisdiction. It permits a plaintiff who can allege a valid federal statutory cause of action against a defendant to assert, in the same federal court lawsuit, related claims that arise under state law. It permits a defendant who is sued in federal court to assert counterclaims and cross-claims that would otherwise be outside the district court's jurisdiction.

In enacting 28 USC §1367, Congress legislatively overruled the Supreme Court's holding in Finley v U.S. (1989) 490 US 545, 104 L Ed 2d 593, 109 S Ct 2003, which required the plaintiff to pursue a wrongful death action both in federal court (against a federal agency that could only be sued there) and in state court (against other defendants). The statute, a legislative response to a perceived tendency in the federal courts to restrict the circumstances under which they would exercise jurisdiction over related state law claims, defines supplemental jurisdiction broadly (28 USC §1367(a)) and places strict limits on the court's discretion to decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction (28 USC §1367(c)).

Under 28 USC §1367(a), a federal district court has supplemental jurisdiction over any claim asserted in the action (including claims that involve the joinder or intervention of additional parties) that is so related to a claim over which the court has original jurisdiction (i.e., a federal statutory claim) that the claims form part of the same case or controversy under US Const art III. See, e.g., City of Chicago v International College of Surgeons (1997) 522 US 156, 139 L Ed 2d 525, 118 S Ct 523 (if state law claims are part of same case or controversy involved in federal question, nothing in text of 28 USC §1367 indicates exception for supplemental jurisdiction on ground that resolution of state law claims requires deferential (on-the-record) review of state administrative agency's ruling). See also Guevara v Ventura County Community College Dist. (2008) 169 CA4th 167, 87 CR3d 50 (28 USC 1367(d) tolled plaintiff's deadline to refile administrative mandamus and federal civil rights claims in state court after federal district court dismissed claims without prejudice); Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v Ferrante (9th Cir 2004) 364 F3d 1037 (district court lacked supplemental jurisdiction over attorney fee claim that was not related to litigation before court).

Supplemental jurisdiction, predicated on original federal court jurisdiction as opposed to diversity-of-citizenship jurisdiction, cannot exist without the presence of at least one federal statutory claim. Thus, if a district court determines that it had no original federal subject matter jurisdiction, it has no authority to adjudicate supplemental claims under 28 USC §1367. Herman Family Revocable Trust v Teddy Bear (9th Cir 2001) 254 F3d 802, 803 (suit arising from sale of vessel did not give rise to admiralty jurisdiction, and thus, district court could not adjudicate state law claims purportedly under its supplemental jurisdiction). This situation is distinguishable from one in which a district court dismisses on the merits a federal claim over which it did have jurisdiction. It then has discretion to retain jurisdiction over any state law claims. 254 F3d at 806; Kohler v Inter-Tel Technols. (9th Cir 2001) 244 F3d 1167.

Supplemental jurisdiction, as defined in 28 USC §1367, subsumes the concepts of "pendent" and "ancillary" jurisdiction, which were developed in decisional law. These terms remain useful because courts continue to use them to differentiate circumstances under which federal courts may exercise (or refuse to exercise) jurisdiction over state law claims.

Pendent jurisdiction allows a plaintiff who has stated at least one federal statutory claim to allege closely related nonfederal claims in the same lawsuit if:

- The federal claim has sufficient substance to confer subject matter jurisdiction on the court.
- The federal and nonfederal claims derive from a "common nucleus of operative fact."
- The claims are such that a plaintiff would "ordinarily be expected to try them all" in one judicial proceeding.

United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 725, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 228, 86 S Ct 1130. See §§7.37-7.42.

Ancillary jurisdiction allows a defendant to

- Assert a cross-claim against an existing party even though that claim is not itself within the court's federal statutory jurisdiction; or
- Add new parties in claims for, e.g., contribution and indemnity.

The defendant must show that the new claim bears "a logical relationship to the aggregate core of operative facts which constitute the main claim over which the court has an independent basis of federal jurisdiction." Revere Copper & Brass Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (5th Cir 1970) 426 F2d 709, 714. See also Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515, 521. See §§7.43-7.47.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.34 1. Limited Supplemental Jurisdiction in Diversity Cases

Supplemental jurisdiction is also available when federal court jurisdiction is based on diversity under 28 USC §1332 (see §§7.48-7.81). Supplemental jurisdiction is not allowed, however, if joinder of another party or claim would destroy diversity. 28 USC §1367(b); U.S. ex rel Morongo Band of Mission Indians v Rose (9th Cir 1994) 34 F3d 901, 908 n6. See, e.g., Wisconsin Dep't of Corrections v Schacht (1998) 524 US 381, 389, 141 L Ed 2d 364, 372, 118 S Ct 2047 (presence of nondiverse party defeats federal jurisdiction; parties may not waive or consent to jurisdiction without diversity, and court may not ignore defect). See 28 USC §1332.

As long as there is complete diversity and at least one named plaintiff satisfies the amount-in-controversy requirement, 28 USC §1367 permits supplemental jurisdiction in diversity-of-citizenship jurisdiction cases over claims of other plaintiffs that are less than the jurisdictional amount. Exxon Mobil Corp. v Allapattah Servs., Inc. (2005) 545 US 546, 162 L Ed 2d 502, 125 S Ct 2611.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/7 Federal Jurisdiction/§7.35 2. When Exercise of Supplemental Jurisdiction May Be Declined

§7.35 2. When Exercise of Supplemental Jurisdiction May Be Declined

Before December 31, 1990, federal courts had broad discretion to dismiss pendent and ancillary claims. This discretion is curtailed by 28 USC §1367(c), which states that a district court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction if:

- The claim raises a novel or complex issue of state law;
- The claim substantially predominates over the claim or claims over which the district court has original jurisdiction;
- The district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction; or
- In exceptional circumstances, there are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction.

NOTE: Because 28 USC §1367(c) permits the court to decline jurisdiction for reasons not specifically enumerated in the statute only if those reasons are compelling and only in "exceptional circumstances," it provides a basis for arguing that some reasons that were considered decisive under prior law, such as "jury confusion," are no longer grounds for refusing to exercise federal jurisdiction.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.36 3. Statute of Limitations Tolling

In 28 USC §1367(d), Congress has provided that the statutory limitations period is tolled from the time a claim is asserted as being within the district court's supplemental jurisdiction until 30 days after the court dismisses it or the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses it, unless state law provides a longer tolling period. See, e.g., Guevara v Ventura Community College Dist. (2008) 169 CA4th 167, 170, 87 CR3d 50. Thus, if this provision is binding on state courts, a plaintiff will have time to seek a state remedy after a finding by the district court that a claim is not within its supplemental jurisdiction.

© The Regents of the University of California

B. Pendent Jurisdiction

§7.37 1. Defined; Discretionary Doctrine

"Pendent jurisdiction" arises when a complaint alleges, in addition to a federal claim (see §§7.15-7.32), one or more state claims, and the relationship between the claim arising under the federal Constitution, laws, or treaties and the state claim permits the conclusion that the entire action comprises one constitutional case. United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 725, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 228, 86 S Ct 1130. "The state and federal claims must derive from a common nucleus of operative facts." United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs, supra.

NOTE: Pendent jurisdiction concerns state claims joined in the same complaint with federal claims by the original plaintiffs against the original defendants. Ancillary jurisdiction (see §§7.43-7.47) concerns claims brought by a defendant or another person whose rights might be irretrievably lost if the claim is not raised in the action. Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515, 521.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.38 2. Derivative Nature of Pendent Jurisdiction

The federal court must have acquired jurisdiction over the federal claim(s) for pendent jurisdiction to attach to the nonfederal claim(s), i.e., federal court jurisdiction over nonfederal claim(s) is entirely derivative of its jurisdiction over the federal claim(s). Aragon v Federated Dep't Stores (9th Cir 1985) 750 F2d 1447, 1457; Hunter v United Van Lines (9th Cir 1984) 746 F2d 635, 649. Thus, e.g., when the federal claim is time barred, there is no independent claim conferring subject matter jurisdiction in the federal court and therefore the federal court has no basis for asserting pendent jurisdiction over the state claim. Aragon v Federated Dep't Stores, supra. Similarly, pendent jurisdiction cannot be created by aggregating the amount of the plaintiff's state law claim (even if it does arise out of the same nucleus of operative facts) with his or her claim under federal law to meet a jurisdictional amount required under a federal statute to establish federal jurisdiction. The federal court must independently acquire jurisdiction over the federal cause of action before pendent jurisdiction can attach. Hunter v United Van Lines, supra.

NOTE: For a case in which pendent state claims were dismissed after trial when on appeal it was determined that there never existed a federal claim sufficient to invoke federal jurisdiction, see Tully v Mott Supermarkets, Inc. (3d Cir 1976) 540 F2d 187, 195. On a party being able to aggregate all claims over which a federal court would independently have jurisdiction to satisfy a jurisdictional amount requirement, see Hunter, 746 F2d at 650.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.39 3. Pendent Jurisdiction Determined by Pleadings

Ordinarily, the court's jurisdiction over pendent claims is resolved on the pleadings. See United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 727, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 229, 86 S Ct 1130. Initially, federal question jurisdiction is determined by issues pleaded in the complaint. See generally Tully v Mott Supermarkets, Inc. (3d Cir 1976) 540 F2d 187, 196. On the well-pleaded complaint rule, see §7.17.

NOTE: Although a court's jurisdiction over pendent claims is ordinarily resolved on the pleadings, the issue of whether the court properly assumed jurisdiction remains open throughout the litigation. Pretrial procedures or even the trial may reveal factors that could not have been anticipated at the pleading stage, which may make it appropriate for the court at that time to dismiss the pendent claims. United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs, supra. On the court deciding pendent claims dispositive of the case first to avoid having to reach the federal question, see Hagans v Lavine (1974) 415 US 528, 546, 39 L Ed 2d 577, 593, 94 S Ct 1372.

§7.40 4. Factors That Court Considers

The justification for pendent jurisdiction "lies in considerations of judicial economy, convenience and fairness to litigants." United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 726, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 228, 86 S Ct 1130. Factors that the courts have considered in deciding whether to exercise pendent jurisdiction include:

- Whether federal or state claims predominate. If state issues substantially predominate, whether as to proof, the comprehensiveness of the remedy sought, or the scope of the issues raised, the court may decline to exercise pendent jurisdiction and dismiss the state claims without prejudice. United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs, supra.
- Whether the state claim implicates the federal doctrine of preemption. If it does, this factor weighs in favor of pendent jurisdiction. United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 727, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 86 S Ct 1130; Federman v Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2d Cir 1979) 597 F2d 798, 809.
- Whether a jury is likely to be confused by divergent theories of relief. If so, this factor weighs in favor of the court not exercising pendent jurisdiction. United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs, supra.
- Whether a jury is likely to be confused by potential differences in the levels of proof. If so, the exercise of pendent jurisdiction may be denied. See Happy Inv. Group v Lakeworld Prop. (ND Cal 1975) 396 F Supp 175, 189.
- Whether there is a possibility of double liability, duplicate recovery of damages, or inconsistent judgments. If so, the court may exercise pendent jurisdiction. See In re Nucorp Energy Sec. Litig. (9th Cir 1985) 772 F2d 1486, 1491 (double liability); Sparks v Hershey (3d Cir 1981) 661 F2d 30, 33 (duplicate damages); Contemporary Servs. Corp. v Universal City Studios, Inc. (CD Cal 1987) 655 F Supp 885 (inconsistent judgments).
- Whether the plaintiff's state claim will be time barred if dismissed. If so, the court may exercise pendent jurisdiction. See Federman v Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co., supra; Henson v Columbus Bank & Trust Co. (5th Cir 1981) 651 F2d 320, 325.
- Whether the state claim involves issues that are unsettled under state law. If so, the court may refuse to exercise pendent jurisdiction. See Moor v County of Alameda (1973) 411 US 693, 716, 36 L Ed 2d 596, 613, 93 S Ct 1785; United Mine Workers of Am. v Gibbs (1966) 383 US 715, 726, 16 L Ed 2d 218, 228, 86 S Ct 1130.

NOTE: The foregoing factors do not necessarily apply to determinations of supplemental jurisdiction.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.41 5. Effect of Dismissal of Federal Claim

Generally, dismissal of the federal claim before trial dictates dismissal of the state claims. Schultz v Sundberg (9th Cir 1985) 759 F2d 714, 718. See Ellingson v Burlington N., Inc. (9th Cir 1981) 653 F2d 1327, 1331; Hogan v U.S. (SD Cal 1986) 642 F Supp 813.

In certain instances, however, a federal court may in its discretion retain jurisdiction over state law claims even if the federal claim ultimately fails and is dismissed. Tritchler v County of Lake (9th Cir 2004) 358 F3d 1150; Albinga Versicherungs A.G. (9th Cir 2003) 344 F3d 931; Aydin Corp. v Loral Corp. (9th Cir 1983) 718 F2d 897, 904. For example, when considerable court time has been expended on the pendent state claims before dismissal of the federal claim, the district court may retain jurisdiction over the pendent claims. Aydin Corp. v Loral Corp., supra; Meyer v California & Hawaiian Sugar Co. (9th Cir 1981) 662 F2d 637, 640. But see Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515 (dismissal of state claims even after 3½ years of discovery not an abuse of discretion).

Similarly, a federal court may retain jurisdiction over pendent claims when a state statute of limitations would bar suit on those claims in state court. See O'Brien v Continental Ill. Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. (7th Cir 1979) 593 F2d 54, 63 (abuse of discretion for district court to have dismissed pendent state claims that would be time barred if pursued in state court). This situation, however, may not arise that frequently in California when the federal action containing the pendent claims is commenced before the California statute of limitations period has expired because of application in state court of the doctrine of equitable tolling of the state statute of limitations. See Addison v State (1978) 21 C3d 313, 146 CR 224 (plaintiffs, anticipating adverse ruling on defendant's motion to dismiss in federal court, filed state court action; federal court granted motion to dismiss eight days later; doctrine of equitable tolling of state statute of limitations held to apply; defendants' demurrer in state court based on late filing of plaintiff's complaint overruled); Guevara v Ventura County Community College Dist. (2008) 169 CA4th 167, 87 CR3d 50 (when plaintiff filed timely administrative mandamus and federal civil rights claims in federal court and claims were dismissed without prejudice, state doctrine of equitable tolling kept his claims alive in state court); Nichols v Canoga Indus. (1978) 83 CA3d 956, 148 CR 459 (federal action with pendent claims filed in federal court within California statute of limitations period; on dismissal of federal and pendent claims in federal court, state cause of action not barred in state court because of equitable tolling of state statute of limitations). On California's equitable tolling doctrine generally, see Bacon v City of Los Angeles (9th Cir 1988) 843 F2d 372, 374; Donoghue v County of Orange (9th Cir 1987) 828 F2d 1432, 1436.

§7.42 6. Pendent Party Jurisdiction

Pendent jurisdiction has usually involved a state claim between the same parties that arose out of a common nucleus of operative facts as the federal question action. See Ayala v U.S. (9th Cir 1977) 550 F2d 1196, 1198. A concept known as "pendent party jurisdiction" has been held, in circuits other than the Ninth, to give jurisdiction to a federal district court when the state claim appended to the federal question action requires for its resolution the joinder of an additional party not named as a defendant in the federal question action. See, e.g., North Dakota v Merchants Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. (8th Cir 1980) 634 F2d 368, 370; Bowers v Moreno (1st Cir 1975) 520 F2d 843, 846.

The Ninth Circuit has rejected the pendent party jurisdictional theory. Blake v Pallan (9th Cir 1977) 554 F2d 947, 957 (joinder of claims rather than joinder of parties is object of doctrine of pendent jurisdiction); Ayala v U.S. (9th Cir 1977) 550 F2d 1196, 1199 (rejecting pendent party jurisdiction even though federal court had exclusive jurisdiction over plaintiff's federal claim). In the Ninth Circuit, it has been held that an independent ground of jurisdiction (e.g., diversity of citizenship or a federal question) must exist over the claims against any additional parties for the claim against them to be properly joined. Blake v Pallan, supra; Ayala v U.S. (9th Cir 1977) 550 F2d 1196, 1198. See Safeco Ins. Co. v Guyton (9th Cir 1982) 692 F2d 551, 555 (independent jurisdictional base required to add parties; pendent party jurisdiction will not substitute for complete diversity or federal question); Adolph Coors Co. v Sickler (DC Cal 1985) 608 F Supp 1417, 1424 (because court lacked independent jurisdictional base for state claims asserted against defendants not named in federal claim, court could not exercise jurisdiction over claims against them).

C. Ancillary Jurisdiction (Cases Begun Before December 1, 1990)

§7.43 1. Defined; Discretionary Doctrine; Effect

"Ancillary jurisdiction"—which has been superseded by supplemental jurisdiction with respect to cases commenced on or after December 1, 1990 (see §7.33)—has been invoked to give a federal district court jurisdiction over claims that are brought, after the original complaint has been filed, by a defendant or another person whose rights might be irretrievably lost if the claim is not raised in the action. Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515, 521. Ancillary claims are claims asserted after the original complaint is filed that arise out of the same transactions that are the subject of the federal cause of action. U.S. v City of Twin Falls (9th Cir 1986) 806 F2d 862, 867. The ancillary claim must bear "a logical relationship to the aggregate core of operative facts which constitutes the main claim over which the court has an independent basis of federal jurisdiction." Revere Copper & Brass Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (5th Cir 1970) 426 F2d 709, 714. A logical relationship to the original claim exists when (1) the same aggregate of operative facts serves as the basis of both the ancillary and original claim, or (2) the aggregate core of facts on "which the original claim rests activates additional legal rights in a party defendant that would otherwise remain dormant." 426 F2d at 715.

Ancillary jurisdiction, like pendent jurisdiction (see §§7.37-7.42), is a discretionary doctrine. Danner, 858 F2d at 523. The effect of exercising ancillary jurisdiction is to expand the scope of federal courts by permitting parties to litigate claims in a federal forum despite the absence of diversity of citizenship or of a federal question concerning the ancillary claims. See U.S. v City of Twin Falls, supra; U.S. ex rel Payne v United Pac. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1973) 472 F2d 792, 794. The rationale for ancillary jurisdiction is that because the court already has jurisdiction over the original claim between the plaintiff and defendant, "convenience, economy, and fairness dictate that it should be able to resolve all other claims arising out of the same transaction or occurrence, or that relate to the property that is the subject matter of the principal action." Danner, 858 F2d at 521. See U.S. ex rel Payne v United Pac. Ins. Co., supra.

§7.44 2. Claims Against Existing Parties: Counterclaims; Cross-Claims

A compulsory counterclaim under Fed R Civ P 13(a) is within the ancillary jurisdiction of the federal courts because it necessarily arises out of the same transaction or occurrence as the original claim, and no independent basis for federal jurisdiction is required. Revere Copper & Brass Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (5th Cir 1970) 426 F2d 709, 714; Consolidated Freightways Corp. v Coast Freightways, Inc. (CD Cal 1986) 628 F Supp 894, 897. For the same reasons, cross-claims under Fed R Civ P 13(g) are considered ancillary, and no independent basis for federal jurisdiction is required for the federal courts to have jurisdiction over such claims. Childress v Cook (5th Cir 1957) 245 F2d 798, 802.

In contrast, a permissive counterclaim under Fed R Civ P 13(b) does not arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the original claim and would require an independent ground of federal jurisdiction for a federal court to have ancillary jurisdiction over the claim (Consolidated Freightways Corp. v Coast Freightways, Inc., supra; Camper & Nicholsons, Ltd. v Yacht "Fontainebleau II" (SD Fla 1968) 292 F Supp 734), except when a setoff is involved. Revere Copper & Brass, Inc. v Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., supra.

NOTE: Joinder of additional cross-defendants under Fed R Civ P 13(h) raises the problem of pendent party jurisdiction.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.45 3. Claims Involving New Parties: Impleader; Intervention

It has been held that an impleader action (i.e., third party complaint) under Fed R Civ P 14(a), e.g., for indemnity, is ancillary to the original claim and need not be supported by an independent ground of federal jurisdiction if the third party "claims arise out of the subject matter of the original action and involve the same persons and issues … or if they arose out of the same 'transaction or occurrence'." U.S. ex rel Payne v United Pac. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1973) 472 F2d 792, 794. See Burke v Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (9th Cir 1979) 592 F2d 542 (court had ancillary jurisdiction over third party complaint seeking recovery against third party defendant for liability that might result from original action).

Similarly, it appears that intervention as of right under Fed R Civ P 24(a) would be deemed ancillary to the original claim and need not be supported by an independent ground of federal jurisdiction. There is a split among the federal circuit courts on this issue, which has not been addressed by the Ninth Circuit. Perry v Proposition 8 Official Proponents (9th Cir 2009) 2009 US App Lexis 25430, n 2. See Curtis v Sears, Roebuck & Co. (8th Cir 1985) 754 F2d 781, 783 (court had jurisdiction over claim although claim did not involve statutory jurisdictional amount). But see 7C Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure §1917 (3d ed 1998) ("independent jurisdictional grounds now may be required in some cases in which intervention is of right under amended Rule 24(a)(2)"). On the effect of intervention of a nondiverse indispensable party on diversity jurisdiction, see §7.71.

NOTE: Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 13-14 and 18 provide for liberal joinder of claims, counterclaims, cross-claims and third party claims. Those rules, however, do not confer jurisdiction on the federal courts. Thus, the jurisdictional requirement (i.e., federal question, supplemental (for cases begun before December 1, 1990, pendent or ancillary), or diversity jurisdiction) must be satisfied for a federal court to have jurisdiction over the claim. See Fed R Civ P 82; U.S. ex rel Payne v United Pac. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1973) 472 F2d 792, 794 n5.

When a main action has been dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, ancillary claims will also be dismissed absent independent grounds of jurisdiction. See Ferreira v Sawayama-Kisen KK (SD NY 1959) 171 F Supp 96. Similarly, when a district court has dismissed the main claim before trial, the court will usually dismiss the ancillary claim. See Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515, 523; Joiner v Diamond M Drilling Co. (5th Cir 1982) 677 F2d 1035, 1043.

However, like pendent jurisdiction (see §§7.37-7.42), ancillary jurisdiction has been called a discretionary doctrine. Danner v Himmelfarb, supra. Thus, dismissal of the federal claim would not necessarily require dismissal of the ancillary claims; to avoid undue prejudice, the court might as a matter of discretion proceed with the ancillary claims even though the main action had been settled or otherwise disposed of. Joiner v Diamond M Drilling Co., supra (rule stated but under facts of case held improper for district court to have retained and adjudicated third party action); U.S. ex rel Payne v United Pac. Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1973) 472 F2d 792, 794 n4 (settlement of federal claim does not terminate power of court to decide ancillary third party claims). Thus, e.g., a court might retain jurisdiction of the ancillary claim if the statute of limitations would bar recovery on the claim if it were asserted in a new action. See Southern Milling Co. v U.S. (5th Cir 1959) 270 F2d 80 (dismissal of third party complaint when statute of limitations would bar recovery on claim if asserted in new action held to constitute an abuse of discretion). For other examples, see Moore v New York Cotton Exch. (1926) 270 US 593, 70 L Ed 750, 46 S Ct 367 (original action dismissed; jurisdiction over counterclaim retained); U.S. v City of Twin Falls (9th Cir 1986) 806 F2d 862 (retention of ancillary claims after settlement of federal claim was not abuse of discretion, given voluminous third party action). See generally Danner v Himmelfarb (9th Cir 1988) 858 F2d 515, 525 (cases cited upholding retention of jurisdiction over state claims after federal claim dismissed because of lengthy pretrial proceedings).

§7.47 5. Limits on Use by Plaintiffs

In Owen Equip. & Erection Co. v Kroger (1978) 437 US 365, 57 L Ed 2d 274, 98 S Ct 2396, the Supreme Court expressly limited a plaintiff's use of ancillary jurisdiction. In this diversity case, the court held that in the absence of an independent basis for jurisdiction, a plaintiff against whom no counterclaim is asserted may not assert a state law claim against a third party defendant who is a citizen of the same state under the guise of ancillary jurisdiction and thereby defeat the complete diversity requirement (see §7.50) for diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. The court stated that neither the convenience of litigants nor considerations of judicial economy can suffice to justify the circumvention of the complete diversity requirement under 28 USC §1332. 437 US at 377. The court noted that the plaintiff's nonfederal claim against the third party defendant was not an ancillary claim, but was new and independent, entirely separate from the plaintiff's original claim against the defendant. 437 US at 376. Furthermore, ancillary jurisdiction typically involves claims brought by a defendant or another whose rights may be irretrievably lost if action is not taken. The plaintiff voluntarily brought the action in federal court and was thus bound by its limitations. 437 US at 376.

When defendants have asserted a counterclaim against the plaintiff, however, unlike the situation in the Owen case, it has been held that the plaintiff may file a third party complaint for indemnity under Fed R Civ P 14 against a new party who is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff. Brown & Caldwell v Institute for Energy Funding, Ltd. (CD Cal 1985) 617 F Supp 649, 651. Such a third party complaint would be within the court's ancillary jurisdiction. 617 F Supp at 650. The third party complaint in this instance is dependent in part on resolution of the counterclaim. The plaintiff in essence is impleading a new party as part of the plaintiff's defense to the counterclaim. 617 F Supp at 651.

V. DIVERSITY JURISDICTION

§7.48 A. Statutory Authority

The United States Constitution article III, §2 extends the federal judicial power to controversies "between Citizens of different States … and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects." Congress has conferred such jurisdiction on the federal district courts (see §7.2) through the diversity jurisdiction statute, 28 USC §1332. Under 28 USC §1332(a), the district courts have original jurisdiction in all civil actions with an amount in controversy exceeding $75,000 (excluding interest and costs) between:

- Citizens of different states;
- Citizens of a state and citizens or subjects of a foreign state;
- Citizens of different states in actions in which citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties; and
- A foreign state (as plaintiff) and citizens of a state or states.

The courts have construed the congressional grant of diversity jurisdiction strictly. See City of Indianapolis v Chase Nat'l Bank (1941) 314 US 63, 76, 86 L Ed 47, 54, 62 S Ct 15 (strict construction intended to relieve federal courts of suits properly belonging in state courts and to avoid offense to state sensitiveness). See also Kantor v Wellesley Galleries, Ltd. (9th Cir 1983) 704 F2d 1088, 1092 (congressional grant of diversity jurisdiction to be strictly construed).

NOTE: The Ninth Circuit has held that a federal district court can take diversity jurisdiction over an appeal from a state administrative agency decision even when the review requires deferential, on-the-record review. BNSF Ry. Co. v O'Dea (9th Cir 2009) 572 F3d 785, applying City of Chicago v International College of Surgeons (1997) 522 US 156, 139 L Ed 2d 525, 118 S Ct 523 (nothing in text of 28 USC §1367 indicates exception for supplemental jurisdiction on ground that resolution of state law claims requires deferential (on-the-record) review of state administrative agency's ruling).

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.49 B. Purpose of Diversity Jurisdiction

The purpose of diversity jurisdiction is to prevent local prejudice by providing a neutral forum for out-of-state litigants. See Betar v De Havilland Aircraft, Ltd. (7th Cir 1979) 603 F2d 30, 35; Lewis v Time, Inc. (ED Cal 1979) 83 FRD 455, 461. See also Asher v Pacific Power & Light Co. (ND Cal 1965) 249 F Supp 671 (policy behind diversity jurisdiction is to provide federal forum if defendant decides that defendant cannot receive fair trial in state court due to local prejudice).

It has been argued by some that the validity of such a basis for burdening federal courts with what are really state court matters has diminished as the country has evolved into a much more urban society and therefore diversity jurisdiction should be abolished. Although Congress has rejected arguments to abolish diversity jurisdiction, Congress has placed restrictions on such jurisdiction, e.g., through the amount in controversy requirement (see §§7.73-7.80).

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.50 C. Complete Diversity Requirement

Diversity jurisdiction does not exist unless each defendant is a citizen of a different state from each plaintiff. Owen Equip. & Erection Co. v Kroger (1978) 437 US 365, 373, 57 L Ed 2d 274, 282, 98 S Ct 2396 (complete diversity of citizenship required under 28 USC §1332(a)(1)). See Johnsen v Rogers (CD Cal 1982) 551 F Supp 281, 289 (no diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332 unless complete diversity of citizenship among all adverse parties exists). For purposes of establishing complete diversity, a defendant need not negate the existence of a potential real party in interest who was not named or joined as a defendant but whose presence would, if joined, destroy diversity. Lincoln Prop. Co. v Roche (2005) 546 US 81, 163 L Ed 2d 415, 126 S Ct 606. The Supreme Court's decision in Lincoln Prop. Co. settled a division among circuit courts on this issue. Compare Roche v Lincoln Prop. Co. (4th Cir 2004) 373 F3d 610 (removal disallowed because an entity affiliated with defendant should have been joined as a co-defendant whose presence would have destroyed diversity) with Simpson v Alaska State Comm'n for Human Rights (9th Cir 1979) 608 F2d 1171, 1173 (removal upheld when Alaska plaintiff sued a Rhode Island defendant but did not join potentially liable Alaska subsidiary, and the parties did not collude to create diversity jurisdiction). On rules pertaining to citizenship, see §§7.51-7.68.

When aliens are involved, it has been held that the presence of aliens on both sides of a controversy, i.e., as a plaintiff and a defendant, destroys diversity jurisdiction. See Trans-Continental Inv. Corp. v Bank of Commonwealth (CD Cal 1980) 500 F Supp 565, 569; Giannakos v M/V Bravo Trader (5th Cir 1985) 762 F2d 1295, 1298. See also Guinto v Marcos (SD Cal 1986) 654 F Supp 276, 278 (for diversity jurisdiction to exist under 28 USC §1332(a)(1)-(2), at least one litigant must be a citizen of a state). With passage of the Judicial Improvements and Access to Justice Act in 1988, however, an alien who is admitted to the United States for permanent residence is deemed a citizen of the state where the alien is domiciled for the purpose of 28 USC §1332. Therefore, such an alien is treated as a citizen for diversity purposes and, if another alien is a party on the other side of the controversy, it now appears that there is diversity jurisdiction unless jurisdiction in this instance is held to exceed the grant of judicial power contained in US Const art III, §2. See Siegel, Commentary on 1988 Revision, 28 USCA §1332. On jurisdiction concerning aliens, see §§7.63-7.64.

1. Citizenship

§7.51 a. Individuals

To be a citizen of a state, a person must generally be both a citizen of the United States and domiciled (see §7.52) in a particular state. Kantor v Wellesley Galleries, Ltd. (9th Cir 1983) 704 F2d 1088, 1090; Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1180.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.52 (1) Domicile

A person is "domiciled" in a state where he or she has established a fixed habitation in a particular place and intends to remain indefinitely. Lew v Moss (9th Cir 1986) 797 F2d 747, 749; Prakash v American University (DC Cir 1984) 727 F2d 1174, 1180. See Mas v Perry (5th Cir 1974) 489 F2d 1396 (domicile is determined by physical presence in state plus intent to remain indefinitely). A person's domicile is not lost until the person acquires a new domicile by being physically present at a new location with the intent to remain there indefinitely. Lew v Moss (9th Cir 1986) 797 F2d 747, 750.

For diversity purposes, domicile is synonymous with state citizenship. Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1180; Jong v General Motors Corp. (ND Cal 1973) 359 F Supp 223, 225. See Hawes v Club Ecuestre El Commandante (1st Cir 1979) 598 F2d 698, 701 (state citizenship is equivalent of domicile for purpose of diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(1)). Thus, a United States citizen who is domiciled abroad is not a citizen of a state and hence cannot sue (or be sued) in federal court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(1). Sadat v Mertes, supra. See Berhalter v Irmisch (WD NY 1977) 75 FRD 539, 541 (no jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a); United States citizen who had moved to Canada with his family, was employed there, and allegedly applied for immigrant status there, intended Canada to be domicile and thus was not citizen of any state). On "stateless person" doctrine generally, see §7.55.

Moreover, "an American citizen domiciled abroad is not by virtue of that fact alone a citizen [or subject] of a foreign state." Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1183. Accordingly, until such a person acquires citizenship in a foreign country, that person is neither a citizen of a state nor a citizen or subject of a foreign state and therefore cannot sue on the basis of diversity jurisdiction in federal courts under 28 USC §1332(a)(2). Van der Schelling v U.S. News & World Report, Inc. (ED Pa 1963) 213 F Supp 756, aff'd per curiam (3d Cir 1963) 324 F2d 956 (word "subject" equated with "citizen"). See Haggerty v Pratt Inst. (ED NY 1974) 372 F Supp 760 (no renunciation of U.S. citizenship and acquiring of foreign citizenship). See also Smith v Carter (5th Cir 1977) 545 F2d 909, 911 (citizen and subject have equivalent meaning; only difference relates to form of government under which one lives; those owing allegiance to republican government are citizens; those owing allegiance to monarch are subjects). On effect of dual citizenship, see Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1182. On jurisdiction concerning aliens generally, see §§7.63-7.64.

The issue in most cases in determining domicile revolves around the intent requirement. Intent is a state of mind that is "evaluated through the circumstantial evidence of a person's manifested conduct." Berhalter v Irmisch (WD NY 1977) 75 FRD 539, 541. In gauging intent, federal courts have looked to a number of factors, including "current residence, voting registration and voting practices, location of personal and real property, location of brokerage and bank accounts, location of spouse and family, membership in unions and other organizations, place of employment or business, driver's license and automobile registration, and payment of taxes." Lew v Moss (9th Cir 1986) 797 F2d 747, 750, quoting 13B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3612 (3d ed 1998). See Bruton v Shank (8th Cir 1965) 349 F2d 630, 631 n2 (factors include "declarations, exercise of civil and political rights, payment of taxes, obtaining of licenses, location of business or occupation, and ownership of property").

On residency not being synonymous with domicile, see §7.54.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.53 (2) Domicile by Operation of Law

Certain presumptions exist to govern the domicile of particular persons. Courts generally hold that the domicile of a minor or of a person with a disability is determined by the domicile of his or her parent or guardian. See Arredondo v Brockette (5th Cir 1981) 648 F2d 425. See also Dunlap v Buchanan (8th Cir 1984) 741 F2d 165, 167 (domicile remained in Arkansas, state of parents' domicile, despite removal of incompetent minor to special care home in Texas).

Similarly, students attending school out of state are usually presumed to lack intention necessary to establish a new domicile. See Shishko v State Farm Ins. Co. (ED Pa 1982) 553 F Supp 308, 310. See also Scoggins v Pollock (11th Cir 1984) 727 F2d 1025 (former domicile maintained until new domicile acquired; plaintiff moved to South Carolina as student with no intent to return to former domicile but was undecided about future plans); Holmes v Sopuch (8th Cir 1981) 639 F2d 431, 434 (no new domicile established; plaintiff intended to remain in new state for as long as studies required rather than for indefinite period). Prisoners incarcerated in a state other than their domicile will also generally continue to retain their preincarceration domicile, and may not claim a change of domicile by virtue of their incarceration. Jones v Hadican (8th Cir 1977) 552 F2d 249, 250; Wright v Redding (ED Pa 1975) 408 F Supp 1180, 1182.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.54 (3) Residence Distinguished

Although domicile and citizenship are synonymous for diversity purposes (see §7.50), residency is not synonymous with either. See Jeffcott v Donovan (9th Cir 1943) 135 F2d 213 (resident of state might be citizen of that state or another state). An individual may have several residences, but can be domiciled in only one state at any one time. Janzen v Goos (8th Cir 1962) 302 F2d 421, 425; Pitts v Black (SD NY 1984) 608 F Supp 696, 710. Thus, mere residence in a state is not sufficient to show domicile. Mantin v Broadcast Music, Inc. (9th Cir 1957) 244 F2d 204; Jong v General Motors Corp. (ND Cal 1973) 359 F Supp 223, 225. But see Slaughter v Toye Bros. Yellow Cab Co. (5th Cir 1966) 359 F2d 954, 956 (in absence of other evidence, a party's residence is presumed to be party's domicile).

NOTE: A complaint may be dismissed when the plaintiff alleges residency rather than citizenship in pleading diversity jurisdiction. See generally Strain v Harrelson Rubber Co. (5th Cir 1984) 742 F2d 888, 889 (dismissal not necessarily required; under 28 USC §1653, defective jurisdictional allegations may be amended on terms in trial or appellate court).

§7.55 (4) Stateless Persons

Under the "stateless person" doctrine, a person who is a citizen of the United States, but not a state citizen (i.e., not domiciled within a state; see §7.52), cannot sue or be sued in federal district court based on diversity of citizenship jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(1). See Willis v Westin Hotel Co. (SD NY 1986) 651 F Supp 598, 602. Similarly, a United States citizen who is domiciled abroad is neither a citizen of a state nor a citizen or subject of a foreign state and therefore cannot sue on the basis of diversity jurisdiction in federal courts under 28 USC §1332(a)(2) unless that person has acquired citizenship in the foreign country. See Van der Schelling v U.S. News & World Report, Inc. (ED Pa 1963) 213 F Supp 756, aff'd per curiam (3d Cir 1963) 324 F2d 956 (word "subject" equated with "citizen"). See also §7.52. On jurisdiction concerning aliens, see §§7.63-7.64.

Usually the cases that have applied the "stateless person" doctrine to preclude diversity jurisdiction have been cases involving a United States citizen domiciled abroad. See Willis v Westin Hotel Co., supra. Generally, courts have refused to apply the "stateless person" doctrine to a person who is both a citizen and a resident of the United States. Accordingly, a person living in hotels in various states has been held to retain the citizenship of the state she was domiciled in before the adoption of such transient living. Willis v Westin Hotel Co., supra. Moreover, it has been held that a person born to migratory parents is presumed a citizen of the state of birth, despite the fact that parents were not domiciled there at the time of birth. Gregg v Louisiana Power & Light Co. (5th Cir 1980) 626 F2d 1315.

§7.56 b. Governmental Bodies

The United States is not deemed to be a "citizen of a state" for the purpose of diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332. Darling v U.S. (ED Cal 1972) 352 F Supp 565, 567 (also immunity of United States from suit not waived by 28 USC §§1331, 1340; no jurisdiction over United States unless Congress has consented by statute); TM Sys. v U.S. (D Conn 1979) 473 F Supp 481 (United States not citizen of any state; diversity destroyed unless United States not indispensable party to suit). Moreover, federal officers sued in their official capacity are not considered "citizens of a state" and cannot be sued on the basis of diversity of citizenship under 28 USC §1332. Ajay Nutrition Foods, Inc. v FDA (D NJ 1974) 378 F Supp 210 (court, however, had jurisdiction over individual defendants under 28 USC §1331 to grant equitable relief, i.e., an injunction).

Similarly, a state is not a "citizen of a state" within the meaning of 28 USC §1332 (Ronwin v Shapiro (9th Cir 1981) 657 F2d 1071, 1073), and thus can neither sue nor be sued in federal courts on the basis of diversity jurisdiction. See State Highway Comm'n v Utah Constr. Co. (1929) 278 US 194, 73 L Ed 262, 49 S Ct 104 (court has no jurisdiction unless suit arises out of Constitution, laws, or treaties of United States; on federal question jurisdiction, see §§7.15-7.32); Rieser v District of Columbia (DC Cir 1977) 563 F2d 462, 470 n43 (state and state agencies are not citizens, but municipal corporations are).

Because actions against state officials in their official capacity are treated as suits against the state, such actions cannot be maintained on the basis of diversity jurisdiction. See DeLong Corp. v Oregon State Highway Comm'n (D Or 1964) 233 F Supp 7, 10, aff'd (9th Cir 1965) 343 F2d 911 (diversity jurisdiction determined by looking at real party in interest rather than named parties in pleading; if state, although unnamed, is real party in interest, no diversity jurisdiction exists). Moreover, individual state officers or agencies cannot be named in lieu of the state in order to establish diversity jurisdiction. Ronwin, 657 F2d at 1073.

NOTE: The Eleventh Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits suits in federal court by a private citizen, or a subject of a foreign country, against a state. The issue of diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332 is separate and distinct from the issue of immunity under the Eleventh Amendment. See Ronwin v Shapiro, supra; DeLong Corp. v Oregon State Highway Comm'n, supra. Furthermore, there are numerous instances when "state officials cannot invoke state sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment simply because they committed a tort in the course of their employment." Ronwin, 657 F2d at 1074.

WARNING: By choosing to invoke federal jurisdiction, the removing party waives immunity to which it might otherwise be entitled under the Eleventh Amendment. Lapides v Board of Regents of Univ. Sys. of Ga. (2002) 535 US 613, 152 L Ed 2d 806, 122 S Ct 1640; Embury v King (9th Cir 2004) 361 F3d 562.

Counsel who desire to proceed in federal court with a claim against the United States, a state, a federal or state agency, or a federal or state officer in his or her official capacity, must ascertain whether there is any statutory basis other than diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332 that will enable counsel to proceed with the suit in federal court and whether any sovereign immunity exists.

c. Corporations

§7.57 (1) General Rule

Under 28 USC §1332(c)(1), a corporation is "deemed a citizen of any State by which it has been incorporated and of the State where it has its principal place of business." Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't (9th Cir 2001) 236 F3d 495, 499. The overriding purpose of this "dual citizenship" requirement is to restrict the availability of diversity jurisdiction in cases involving corporations. J.A. Olson Co. v City of Winona (5th Cir 1987) 818 F2d 401, 406; Burton v United States Olympic Comm. (CD Cal 1983) 574 F Supp 517, 519.

As a result of corporate dual citizenship, a diversity action cannot be maintained if an opposing party is a citizen of either the state of incorporation or principal place of business. See Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't, supra; Bank of Cal. v Twin Harbors Lumber Co. (9th Cir 1972) 465 F2d 489; Leuhrs v Utah Home Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir 1971) 450 F2d 452, 454 n2. See also Cook v Avi Casino Enters., Inc. (9th Cir 2008) 548 F3d 718, 723 (corporation organized under Indian tribal law in California was not created by state and did not create diversity).

Moreover, if a plaintiff fails to allege both the state of incorporation and the principal place of business for each corporate party, plaintiff risks dismissal of plaintiff's complaint. Naartex Consulting Corp. v Watt (DC Cir 1983) 722 F2d 779. See Casio, Inc. v SM&R Co. (7th Cir 1985) 755 F2d 528.

An incorporated entity is a corporation for purposes of diversity citizenship even when the corporation acts as an unincorporated association or other "unconventional corporation." Kuntz v Lamar Corp. (9th Cir 2004) 385 F3d 1177, 1183 (cooperative to be treated as corporation simply because it is incorporated under Idaho law regardless of cooperative's individual structure, purpose, operations, or name).

On citizenship of an alien corporation, see Windert Watch Co. v Remex Elecs., Ltd. (SD NY 1979) 468 F Supp 1242. On jurisdiction concerning aliens generally, see §§7.63-7.64.

§7.58 (2) Principal Place of Business

For diversity jurisdiction purposes, "every corporation has one and only one principal place of business." J.A. Olson Co. v City of Winona (5th Cir 1987) 818 F2d 401, 406. When a corporation is engaged in multistate operations, several factors determine its principal place of business.

Federal courts generally use one of two tests to determine a corporation's principal place of business. First, the "place of operations test" locates a corporation's principal place of business in the state which "contains a substantial predominance of corporate operations." Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't (9th Cir 2001) 236 F3d 495, 500; Industrial Techtonics, Inc. v Aero Alloy (9th Cir 1990) 912 F2d 1090, 1092. Second, the "nerve center test" locates a corporation's principal place of business in the state where the majority of its executive and administrative functions are performed. Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't, supra; Co-Efficient Energy Sys. v CSL Indus. (9th Cir 1987) 812 F2d 556, 558 (under nerve center test, corporation's principal place of business is where its executive and administrative functions are performed).

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has directed when each test should apply: if a majority of a corporation's business activity takes place in one state, then that state is the corporation's principal place of business, even if the corporate headquarters are located in a different state. The "nerve center" test should be used only when no state substantially predominates the corporation's business activities. Thus, the Ninth Circuit applies the place of operations test unless the plaintiff shows that its activities do not substantially predominate in any one state. Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't, supra.

The determination of substantial predominance does not require the majority of a corporation's total business activity to be located in the state; only the amount of the corporation's business activity in one state must be significantly larger than any other state in which the corporation conducts business. Tosco Corp. v Communities for a Better Env't, supra. Because the corporation's employees, refineries, lubricant facilities, convenience stores, income, sales, and inventories were all in California, the Ninth Circuit applied the place of operations test and held that its principal place of business was in California. 236 F3d at 502.

For discussion of removing actions to federal court, see chap 22.

NOTE: For venue purposes, a corporate defendant is considered a resident of every state in which it is doing business, not merely of the state in which it has its principal place of business. 28 USC §1391(c).

§7.59 (3) Federal Corporations

In contrast to corporations organized under state laws (see §7.57), federally chartered corporations organized to do business throughout the states are viewed as having national citizenship only. Diversity jurisdiction over such federally chartered corporations is thus precluded, unless Congress enacts a specific statutory provision that provides for citizenship of such a corporation in a particular state (Bankers Trust Co. v Texas & Pac. Ry. (1916) 241 US 295, 309, 60 L Ed 1010, 1016, 36 S Ct 569), "or the federal statute incorporating the entity characterized it as a 'body corporate' of a particular state." Burton v United States Olympic Comm. (CD Cal 1983) 574 F Supp 517, 519 (diversity jurisdiction precluded because terms of federal charter and, as a result of multi-state activities, United States Olympic Committee cannot be considered "localized" in particular state); Hancock Fin. Corp. v FSLIC (9th Cir 1974) 492 F2d 1325, 1329 (diversity precluded because Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is not a citizen of any particular state).

For diversity purposes, national banks or other national banking associations are citizens of the states in which they are respectively "located." 28 USC 1348. Under 28 USC §1348, "located" means the state where the national bank's main office is located, as set forth in its articles of association. Wachovia Bank, Nat'l Ass'n v Schmidt (2006) 546 US 303, 163 L Ed 2d 797, 126 S Ct 941.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.60 d. Unincorporated Associations

The citizenship of an unincorporated association for diversity purposes is determined by the citizenship of each and every member of that association. See Navarro Sav. Ass'n v Lee (1980) 446 US 458, 461, 64 L Ed 2d 425, 429, 100 S Ct 1779. See also United Steelworkers of Am. v Bouligny (1965) 382 US 145, 15 L Ed 2d 217, 86 S Ct 272 (unincorporated labor organization). In order to invoke diversity jurisdiction, all members of an unincorporated association must be diverse from the opposing party. Rockwell Int'l Credit Corp. v United States Aircraft Ins. Group (9th Cir 1987) 823 F2d 302, overruled on other grounds in Partington v Gedan (9th Cir 1991) 923 F2d 686, 688; Baer v United Servs. Auto. Ass'n (2d Cir 1974) 503 F2d 393, 395.

§7.61 e. Partnerships

For diversity purposes, a partnership is deemed a citizen of each state of which a general partner is a citizen. Lewis v Odell (2d Cir 1974) 503 F2d 445. See Cote v Wadel (7th Cir 1986) 796 F2d 981; Village Fair Shopping Ctr. v Sam Broadhead Trust (5th Cir 1979) 588 F2d 431, 433 n1. However, in the case of a partnership consisting of both general and limited partners, circuits are in conflict as to whether a limited partner's citizenship should be counted in determining whether diversity jurisdiction exists. Compare, e.g., Mesa Operating Ltd. Partnership v Louisiana Interstate Gas (5th Cir 1986) 797 F2d 238 (only citizenship of general partners relevant to determination of diversity jurisdiction) and Colonial Realty Corp. v Bache & Co. (2d Cir 1966) 358 F2d 178 (citizenship of limited partner not to be considered and does not destroy diversity) with New York State Teachers Retirement Sys. v Kalkus (4th Cir 1985) 764 F2d 1015 (for purpose of diversity jurisdiction, citizenship of limited partnership determined by considering citizenship of both general and limited partners), Elston Inv. Ltd. v David Altman Leasing Corp. (7th Cir 1984) 731 F2d 436 (citizenship of both general and limited partners considered), and Carlsberg Resources Corp. v Cambria Sav. & Loan Ass'n (3d Cir 1977) 554 F2d 1254 (citizenship of both general and limited partners considered).

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has not dealt with this exact issue, although district courts in California, Hawaii, and Arizona have considered the issue and held that a limited partner's citizenship is relevant for diversity purposes and is to be considered along with a general partner's citizenship in establishing diversity jurisdiction. See Finalco Equip. Invs. X, LP v Welch (ND Cal 1989) 718 F Supp 1446; Sage Investors v Group W Cable, Inc. (D Ariz 1986) 666 F Supp 186, 188; Windward City Ctr. v Trans-America Occidental Life Ins. Co. (D Haw 1985) 613 F Supp 1216, 1219.

§7.62 f. Assignees

When there has been a bona fide assignment of a claim, the assignee's citizenship is determinative for diversity purposes. See, e.g., R.C. Hedreen Co. v Crow Tribal Hous. Auth. (D Mont 1981) 521 F Supp 599, 607. Under 28 USC §1359, however, a federal district court does not acquire diversity jurisdiction if an assignment, or other device, is collusively or improperly made to create or manufacture federal diversity jurisdiction. See Kramer v Caribbean Mills, Inc. (1969) 394 US 823, 826, 23 L Ed 2d 9, 13, 89 S Ct 1487. See also Amar v Garnier Enters. (CD Cal 1966) 41 FRD 211 (shareholder derivative action).

"[A]ssignments of causes of action between [parent companies] and subsidiaries are presumptively ineffective to create diversity jurisdiction." Simpson v Providence Wash. Ins. Group (9th Cir 1979) 608 F2d 1171, 1174. See also Prudential Oil Corp. v Phillips Petroleum Co. (2d Cir 1976) 546 F2d 469, 475 (no diversity when subsidiary's sole purpose for existence was to prosecute assigned claim). But see Drexel, Burnham Lambert Group, Inc. v Galadari (2d Cir 1985) 777 F2d 877, 881 (assignment not collusive when facially valid business purpose existed).

For further discussion of assignments, see 14 Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3639 (3d ed 1998). On disregarding nominal or formal parties and looking to the real party in interest in determining diversity jurisdiction, see §7.66.

g. Aliens

§7.63 (1) Jurisdiction Generally

For there to be diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(1), the controversy must involve citizens of different states. See §7.50. Except for aliens admitted to the United States for permanent residence, aliens are not deemed citizens of a state and no diversity jurisdiction attaches by virtue of 28 USC §1332(a)(1). On state citizenship being equivalent to domicile, see §7.52.

However, under 28 USC §1332(a)(2), diversity jurisdiction (sometimes called alienage jurisdiction, see Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1182) exists when the controversy is between state citizens "and citizens or subjects of a foreign state" and the requisite jurisdictional amount (see §§7.73-7.80) is involved. The word "subject" is equated with the word "citizen" of a foreign state within the meaning of 28 USC §1332(a)(2). Van der Schelling v U.S. News & World Report, Inc. (ED Pa 1963) 213 F Supp 756, aff'd per curiam (3d Cir 1963) 324 F2d 956.

Thus, alienage jurisdiction will not lie if the suit is between a citizen of a state and an alien with no nationality, i.e., a "stateless" alien. See Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1183. On stateless persons generally, see §7.55. Moreover, an American citizen does not become a citizen of a foreign state solely by virtue of being domiciled abroad. See Sadat v Mertes, supra. Until such a person acquires citizenship in a foreign country, that person is neither a citizen of a state nor a citizen or subject of a foreign state and therefore cannot sue on the basis of diversity jurisdiction in federal court under 28 USC §1332(a)(2). Smith v Carter (5th Cir 1977) 545 F2d 909, 911 (American citizen who was permanent resident of Canada was not citizen of Canada and therefore could not invoke diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2)); Haggerty v Pratt Inst. (ED NY 1974) 372 F Supp 760 (no renunciation of U.S. citizenship and acquiring of foreign citizenship). A citizen of the United States who is domiciled abroad (i.e., is not a state citizen; see §7.52) also cannot maintain a suit under 28 USC §1332(a)(1) because the controversy under that subsection must be between state citizens. Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1180. On effect of dual citizenship on alienage jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2), see 615 F2d at 1182.

A foreign state within the meaning of 28 USC §1332(a)(2) has generally been held to be "a political entity that is recognized by the United States as a free and independent sovereign." Windert Watch Co. v Remex Elecs., Ltd. (SD NY 1979) 468 F Supp 1242, 1244 (no jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2) over action by California corporation against two Hong Kong corporations; Hong Kong was, at time of case, crown colony of United Kingdom, and not recognized by United States as independent state, de facto or otherwise). See 13B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3604 (3d ed 1998) (generally held "that a foreign state is one formally recognized by the executive branch of the United States government"). But see Bank of Hawaii v Balos (D Haw 1988) 701 F Supp 744 (Republic of Marshall Islands deemed de facto a foreign state; substance over form governed); Tetra Fin. (HK) Ltd. v Shaheen (SD NY 1984) 584 F Supp 847 (Windert decision rejected in other jurisdictions; hypertechnical to preclude Hong Kong corporation from federal court because not recognized by United States as foreign sovereign in its own right; commercial and cultural realities dictate that diversity jurisdiction "be granted to certain governmental entities that have not been formally recognized"). See also Iran Handicraft & Carpet Export Ctr. v Marjan Int'l Corp. (SD NY 1987) 655 F Supp 1275, 1281, aff'd (2d Cir 1988) 868 F2d 1267 (Iran recognized as foreign state although current government not recognized; 28 USC §1332(a)(2) requires court "only to determine whether the foreign state, of which the party claims citizenship, is recognized by the United States as an international juridical person"; once entity recognized by United States as sovereign state, later withdrawal of recognition of its government does not effect change in underlying recognition of state as "international juridical entity").

The presence of alien parties on both sides of a controversy has been held to destroy diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2). See, e.g., Giannakos v M/V Bravo Trader (5th Cir 1985) 762 F2d 1295, 1298; Trans-Continental Inv. Corp. v Bank of Commonwealth (CD Cal 1980) 500 F Supp 565, 569. See also Guinto v Marcos (SD Cal 1986) 654 F Supp 276, 278 (for diversity jurisdiction to exist under 28 USC §1332(a)(1) or (2), at least one of litigants must be citizen of state). Planning & Investing Co. S. A. v Hemlock (SD NY 1970) 50 FRD 48 (court dismissed alien's action against two alien corporations who were not indispensable parties but retained action against non-alien individual defendants). Since 1989, however, aliens admitted to the United States for permanent residence under 28 USC §1332(a) are now deemed citizens of the state in which they are domiciled for the purpose of 28 USC §§1332, 1335, and 1441 (on removal to federal court, see chap 22) and the presence of such an alien on one side of the controversy, depending on the circumstances, may not defeat diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2).

An alien corporation is considered "a citizen of the entity under the laws of which it is incorporated." Windert Watch Co. v Remex Elecs., Ltd. (SD NY 1979) 468 F Supp 1242, 1244. There appears to be a split of authority as to whether the dual citizenship provision of 28 USC §1332(c) applies to alien corporations, i.e., whether an alien corporation may also be deemed a citizen of a state where it has its principal place of business for purposes of 28 USC §1332(c). Compare, e.g., Salomon Englander Y Cia, Ltd. v Israel Discount Bank, Ltd. (SD NY 1980) 494 F Supp 914 (§1332(c) does not apply to alien corporations; if §1332(c) were applied to alien corporations, it might create jurisdiction as often as it destroys it) with Richmond Constr. Corp. v Hilb (MD Fla 1980) 482 F Supp 1201 (§1332(c) applies to alien corporations; defendant alien corporations had principal place of business in Florida and were considered citizens of Florida for diversity purposes, thereby defeating diversity jurisdiction).

Under 28 USC §1332(a)(3), a district court has jurisdiction when the matter in controversy is between citizens of different states and "citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties." Thus, when there is a legitimate controversy between completely diverse citizens and an alien is added as an additional party, diversity jurisdiction is not defeated. See Transure, Inc. v Marsh & McLennan, Inc. (9th Cir 1985) 766 F2d 1297. Similarly, when a controversy is between completely diverse citizens and aliens are added on both sides of the controversy, diversity jurisdiction is not defeated. 28 USC §1332(a)(3); Transure, Inc. v Marsh & McLennan, Inc., supra (alien corporations on both sides of controversy).

NOTE: When a client has a claim against an alien defendant and there is no basis for jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332 or any federal statute or treaty, the plaintiff will have to proceed in state court with the claim against the alien defendant (assuming that in personam jurisdiction exists over the alien defendant in the particular state court).

For further discussion of jurisdiction concerning aliens generally and alien corporations, see 13B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§3604, 3628 (3d ed 1998); 14 Wright, Miller & Cooper §§3661-3662 (3d ed 1998). On foreign states' being subject to federal diversity jurisdiction as the plaintiff or defendant, see §7.65.

§7.64 (2) Aliens Admitted for Permanent Residence

Under the Judicial Improvements and Access to Justice Act, for the purposes of 28 USC §§1332, 1335, and 1441 (on removal to federal court, see chap 22), an alien admitted to the United States for permanent residence is deemed a citizen of the state in which he or she is domiciled. 28 USC §1332(a). Thus, e.g., it appears that if an alien admitted to the United States for permanent residence who is domiciled in California sues or is sued by a citizen of another state, diversity jurisdiction exists under 28 USC §1332(a)(1) unless such grant of jurisdiction is held to violate US Const art III, §2 (see §7.2). See generally Siegel, Commentary on 1988 Revision, 28 USCA §1332. Similarly, if such an alien sues or is sued by a citizen of a foreign state who does not have permanent residence in the United States, it appears that there is federal diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2) unless such grant of jurisdiction is also held to violate US Const art III, §2. See Siegel, Commentary on 1988 Revision, 28 USCA §1332.

Conversely, if an alien admitted to the United States for permanent residence who is domiciled in California sues or is sued by a California citizen, diversity jurisdiction appears to be lacking under 28 USC §1332(a).

On effect of dual citizenship on alienage jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332(a)(2), see Sadat v Mertes (7th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 1176, 1182.

§7.65 h. Foreign States

A district court has jurisdiction when the matter in controversy is between a foreign state, as defined in 28 USC §1603(a), "as plaintiff and citizens of a State or of different States" and the jurisdictional amount (see §§7.73-7.80) is satisfied. 28 USC §1332(a)(4). For a case in which formal recognition of a foreign country was not required for the foreign country to gain access to federal court, see National Petrochemical Co. v M/T Stolt Sheaf (2d Cir 1988) 860 F2d 551 (plaintiff was foreign corporation wholly owned by Iran). But see Iran Handicraft & Carpet Export Ctr. v Marjan Int'l Corp. (SD NY 1987) 655 F Supp 1275, 1277, aff'd (2d Cir 1988) 868 F2d 1267 (cites cases, including Second Circuit cases, denying unrecognized government access to federal courts).

Furthermore, a district court has jurisdiction of any nonjury civil action, without regard to any amount in controversy, against a foreign state as defined in 28 USC §1603(a) concerning "any claim for relief in personam with respect to which the foreign state is not entitled to immunity either under [28 USC §§1605-1607] or under any applicable international agreement." 28 USC §1330(a).

Except as used in 28 USC §1608, a foreign state is defined in 28 USC §1603(a) to include "a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in" 28 USC §1603(b). An agency or instrumentality of a foreign state is defined in §1603(b) to mean an entity that is:

- A separate legal person, corporate or otherwise;
- An organ of a foreign state or political subdivision of such a foreign state "or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof"; and
- "[N]either a citizen of a state of the United States as defined in [28 USC §1332(c), (e)] nor created under the laws of any third country."

See, e.g., Bolkiah v Superior Court (1999) 74 CA4th 984, 88 CR2d 540 (family members of Sultan of Brunei were not "foreign states" or "agents or instrumentalities of foreign states" within meaning of 28 USC §1603(a)-(b) when they failed to show they held government positions or governmental power by birthright).

The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 is the exclusive means of exercising jurisdiction over foreign sovereigns. 74 CA4th at 992. On the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 generally, see 28 USC §§1330, 1602-1611. On foreign states being immune from jurisdiction of federal or state courts except as provided in 28 USC §§1605-1607, or by existing international agreements to which the United States is a party at the time of enactment of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, see 28 USC §1604.

§7.66 i. Legal Representative

Under the Judicial Improvements and Access to Justice Act, the legal representative of a decedent's estate is deemed a citizen only of the same state as the decedent. 28 USC §1332(c)(2). Similarly, the legal representative of an infant or of a person with a disability is deemed a citizen only of the same state as the infant or person with a disability. 28 USC §1332(c)(2). Thus, the citizenship of only the decedent, infant, or person with a disability, rather than that of the legal representative, is looked at for diversity purposes and earlier cases to the contrary no longer control. See generally Siegel, Commentary on 1988 Revision, 28 USCA §1332.

§7.67 j. Class Action

In a class action suit, diversity is determined only by the citizenship of the named representatives. See Supreme Tribe of Ben Hur v Cauble (1921) 255 US 356, 65 L Ed 673, 41 S Ct 338; Friedman v Meyers (2d Cir 1973) 482 F2d 435, 436 n1; Calagaz v Calhoon (5th Cir 1962) 309 F2d 248, 253.

When jurisdictional elements are otherwise satisfied and the claim of at least one named class member meets the jurisdictional amount requirement in a diversity case, 28 USC §1367 permits supplemental jurisdiction over other class members whose claims are less than the jurisdictional minimum. See Exxon Mobil Corp. v Allapattah Servs., Inc. (2005) 545 US 546, 162 L Ed 2d 502, 125 S Ct 2611. The United States Supreme Court in Exxon Mobil, in a 5-4 decision, concluded that Congress' enactment of 28 USC §1367 overruled its holding in Zahn v International Paper Co. (1973) 414 US 291, 300, 38 L Ed 2d 511, 518, 94 S Ct 505, that unnamed class members could not aggregate their separate and distinct claims for jurisdictional purposes.

In Exxon Mobil, numerous fuel dealers brought a class action alleging that Exxon Mobil had intentionally overcharged them for fuel they had purchased. The Supreme Court held that when a court has "original jurisdiction over a single claim in the complaint, it has original jurisdiction over a 'civil action' within the meaning of §1367(a)," and the presence of other claims in the complaint over which the court may lack original jurisdiction "is of no moment." Exxon Mobil Corp. v Allapattah Servs., Inc., supra. Exxon Mobil settled a split among the circuit courts over the interpretation of 28 USC §1367 and the viability of Zahn. Compare Stromberg Metal Works, Inc. v Press Mechanical, Inc. (7th Cir 1996) 77 F3d 928, 930 (§1367 overrides supreme court cases that required each joined plaintiff to meet independently the amount-in-controversy requirement), with Leonhardt v Western Sugar Co. (10th Cir 1998) 160 F3d 631, 641 (28 USC §1367 does not alter the historical rules disallowing the aggregation of claims in diversity class actions).

Congress' enactment of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 (CAFA) (Pub L 109-2, 119 Stat 4) amended 28 USC §1332 and eased the diversity jurisdiction requirements for certain class action suits. See Richina v Maytag Corp. (ED Cal, Oct. 26, 2005, No. 05-1281) 2005 US Dist Lexis 25294. CAFA confers diversity jurisdiction over class actions when the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $5 million and at least one plaintiff is a citizen of a state or foreign state different from that of any defendant. 28 USC §1332(d)(2)(A)-(C). CAFA also abrogates, similar to 28 USC §1367, the rule against aggregation of claims. CAFA applies only to class actions commencing after February 17, 2005, that otherwise meet its requirements (Richina v Maytag Corp., supra; Pub L 109-2, §9, 119 Stat 4) and has no impact on the interpretation of 28 USC §1367. Exxon Mobil Corp. v Allapattah Servs., Inc., supra; see also Berry v American Express Publ'g Corp. (CD Cal 2005) 381 F Supp 2d 1118 (remand granted when plaintiff's class action for injunctive relief did not meet $5 million minimum requirement under CAFA).

CAFA also extended federal removal jurisdiction to "mass actions," which are any civil actions in which 100 or more people propose to be treated jointly and the other jurisdictional requirements are met, e.g., the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $5 million and at least one plaintiff is a citizen of a state or foreign country different from any defendant. 27 USC 1332(d)(11); Tanoh v Dow Chem. Co. (9th Cir 2009) 561 F3d 945. See §22.29A.

On aggregation of claims generally, see §7.80.

§7.68 k. Special Rule for Direct Actions Against Insurer

For the purposes of 28 USC §§1332 and 1441 (on removal to federal court, see chap 22) in any direct action against an "insurer of a policy or contract of liability insurance … to which action the insured is not joined as a party-defendant," such insurer is deemed a citizen of

- The state in which the insured is a citizen;
- Any state by which an insurer has been incorporated; or
- The state where it has its principal place of business.

28 USC §1332(c).

The purpose of this provision of §1332(c) is to eliminate the availability of diversity jurisdiction for "tort claims in which both the injured party and the tortfeasor are local residents, but which, under state 'direct action' statutes, are brought against the tortfeasor's foreign insurance carrier without joining the tortfeasor as a defendant." Beckham v Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir 1982) 691 F2d 898, 901; Blake By & Through Blake v National Cas. Co. (CD Cal 1984) 607 F Supp 189, 190.

§7.69 2. Time of Filing of Complaint Controls

Diversity of citizenship is determined by the citizenship of the parties at the time the complaint is filed, not by their citizenship either at the time the cause of action arose or after commencement of the action. Grupo Dataflux v Atlas Global Group, LP (2004) 541 US 567, 158 L Ed 2d 866, 874, 124 S Ct 1920 (post-filing change in citizenship of one party does not cure defect in diversity); Co-Efficient Energy Sys. v CSL Indus. (9th Cir 1987) 812 F2d 556, 557 (diversity of citizenship determined as of filing of complaint); Mann v City of Tucson Dep't of Police (9th Cir 1986) 782 F2d 790, 794 (diversity determined at time complaint filed, not time events giving rise to complaint occurred). For example, a district court properly analyzed diversity of the parties as of the time a case was filed in state court and then removed. Because the defendant corporation carried its burden of establishing that diversity of citizenship existed at that time, the fact that the corporation's predecessor, an unincorporated association, was named as a defendant was irrelevant because that association ceased to exist before the suit was filed. Strotek Corp. v Air Transp. Ass'n (9th Cir 2002) 300 F3d 1129.

Subsequent events cannot destroy jurisdiction if the jurisdictional requirements have been met at the time the action is filed. Hill v Rolleri (9th Cir 1980) 615 F2d 886, 889 (federal jurisdiction over ancillary third party claim survived settlement of main action on which diversity jurisdiction depended); Alaska Airlines v U.S. (ND Cal 1975) 399 F Supp 906, 912 (multidistrict litigation; settlement of all but three cases did not affect court's jurisdiction over third party claims). See In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig. (ED NY 1985) 611 F Supp 1290, aff'd (2d Cir 1987) 818 F2d 210 (diversity jurisdiction not later divested by change in domicile).

On removal based on subsequent events that create diversity jurisdiction, see chap 22.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.70 3. Court's Duty to Realign Parties

The court is responsible for aligning (or realigning) parties according to their interests in the litigation, irrespective of how they may be named in the complaint (City of Indianapolis v Chase Nat'l Bank (1941) 314 US 63, 69, 86 L Ed 47, 50, 62 S Ct 15). In aligning the parties, the court disregards nominal or formal parties and rests jurisdiction only on the citizenship of real parties to the controversy. Navarro Sav. Ass'n v Lee (1980) 446 US 458, 461, 64 L Ed 2d 425, 429, 100 S Ct 1779. The parties must be realigned for jurisdictional purposes even if this destroys diversity jurisdiction. Dolch v United Cal. Bank (9th Cir 1983) 702 F2d 178, 182.

Thus, just as nominal parties cannot destroy diversity jurisdiction in the removal context, they also cannot destroy (or create) such jurisdiction in original diversity actions. For further discussion, see chap 22.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.71 4. Effect of Intervenors

Intervention of a nondiverse party who is not an indispensable party when the complaint is filed does not destroy diversity jurisdiction. American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v Bailey (7th Cir 1984) 750 F2d 577, 582 (distinction between intervention as of right under Fed R Civ P 24(a) and permissive intervention under Fed R Civ P 24(b) not discussed); Harris v Illinois-California Express, Inc. (10th Cir 1982) 687 F2d 1361, 1366 (permissive intervention under Fed R Civ P 24(b)); CRI, Inc. v Watson (8th Cir 1979) 608 F2d 1137, 1140 (intervention as of right under Fed R Civ P 24(a)(2)). It appears, however that if the intervenor was an indispensable party when the complaint was filed, diversity jurisdiction is destroyed. See American Nat'l Bank & Trust Co. v Bailey, supra; Travelers Indem. Co. v Dingwell (D Me 1988) 691 F Supp 503, 508, aff'd (1st Cir 1989) 884 F2d 629. See also 7C Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure §1917 (3d ed 1998). But see Omni Devs. v Porter (D Fla 1978) 459 F Supp 930, 932 (claim brought under Fed R Civ P 24(a)(2) is appropriate for exercise of ancillary jurisdiction). On ancillary jurisdiction as relating to intervention, see §7.45.

§7.72 5. Exception for Statutory Interpleader

An exception to the complete diversity requirement (see §7.50) is found in the interpleader statute, 28 USC §1335. That statute allows a person holding property (whose value exceeds $500) that is claimed by two or more claimants to bring an interpleader action depositing the property with the court. The statute applies when there are "two or more adverse claimants, of diverse citizenship." 28 USC §1335(a)(1). This subsection has been construed to require only "minimal diversity," i.e., diversity of citizenship between any two claimants is sufficient to invoke federal jurisdiction notwithstanding that other rival claimants may be co-citizens. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v Tashire (1967) 386 US 523, 530, 18 L Ed 2d 270, 275, 87 S Ct 1199. See Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v Schmitt (ND Cal 1977) 441 F Supp 440, 443 (§1335 requires that there be at least two claimants with adverse citizenship; total diversity not necessary).

In contrast, interpleader actions authorized under Fed R Civ P 22 require complete diversity of citizenship, i.e., diversity of citizenship between the plaintiff (stakeholder) and all of the defendants (claimants) notwithstanding that "among themselves the claimants are not citizens of different states." Travelers Ins. Co. v First Nat'l Bank of Shreveport (5th Cir 1982) 675 F2d 633, 637 n9; Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v Ahrens (SD Tex 1976) 414 F Supp 1235, 1253. Furthermore, it appears that the amount-in-controversy requirement of 28 USC §1332 must also be satisfied. See Travelers Ins. Co. v Harville (SD Ala 1985) 622 F Supp 68 (decided when jurisdictional amount was $10,000). See also 7 Wright, Miller & Kane, Federal Practice and Procedure §1703 (3d ed 1998).

§7.73 D. Jurisdictional Amount in Controversy Requirement

In addition to satisfying the diversity of citizenship requirements (see §§7.48-7.72), a party must also satisfy the jurisdictional amount in controversy requirement. The matter in controversy must exceed "the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs." 28 USC §1332(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.74 1. Determined by Pleadings

The amount in controversy for federal diversity jurisdiction "is normally determined from the face of the pleadings." Pachinger v MGM Grand Hotel—Las Vegas, Inc. (9th Cir 1986) 802 F2d 362, 363. See St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v Red Cab Co. (1938) 303 US 283, 288, 82 L Ed 845, 848, 58 S Ct 586.

The amount claimed in good faith by the plaintiff controls, unless it appears to a legal certainty that the claim is really for less than the jurisdictional amount. St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v Red Cab Co., supra. See Morris v Hotel Riviera, Inc. (9th Cir 1983) 704 F2d 1113 (state statute limiting hotel's liability to $750 established with legal certainty that plaintiff could not meet jurisdictional amount requirement); Diefenthal v CAB (5th Cir 1982) 681 F2d 1039 (to a legal certainty, suit claiming damages for humiliation and distress caused by alleged brusque treatment by stewardess was trivial and did not meet jurisdictional amount requirement). See also Hatcher v Emergency Med. Specialty Servs. (D NJ 1986) 643 F Supp 1124 (state law limiting nonprofit hospital's liability to $10,000 precluded diversity jurisdiction). But see Zacharia v Harbor Island Spa, Inc. (2d Cir 1982) 684 F2d 199, 202 (even if defendant's liability limited to $1000 by state law, existence of valid defense does not deprive federal court of jurisdiction).

It has been stated that "when the issue of the jurisdictional amount is intertwined with the merits of the case, courts should be careful not to decide the merits, under the guise of determining jurisdiction." Continental Cas. Co. v Department of Highways (5th Cir 1967) 379 F2d 673, 675. See Etheridge v Piper Aircraft Corp. (8th Cir 1977) 559 F2d 1027 (improbability of recovery is not basis for denial of jurisdiction). See also St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v Red Cab Co., supra (plaintiff's inability to recover amount adequate to give court jurisdiction does not show bad faith or oust court's jurisdiction). Nevertheless, the court may examine the claim to determine if to a legal certainty the claim is for less than the jurisdictional amount causing the court to lack subject matter jurisdiction. See, e.g., Morris v Hotel Riviera, Inc., supra. See also Christensen v N.W. Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir 1980) 633 F2d 529 (claimed damages not made in good faith, but solely for purpose of obtaining federal court jurisdiction; to legal certainty, plaintiff's unliquidated tort claim could not reach jurisdictional amount); Nelson v Keefer (3d Cir 1971) 451 F2d 289 (to find claim lacking in good faith, must find to legal certainty that plaintiff cannot recover above jurisdictional amount).

For discussion of the amount in controversy requirement concerning tort claims for unliquidated damages, see 14B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3707 (3d ed 1998).

§7.75 2. Determined as of Time Action Commenced

The amount in controversy is determined as of the time of commencement of the action. Sellers v O'Connell (6th Cir 1983) 701 F2d 575, 578. As a result, once a bona fide allegation of damages in excess of the jurisdictional minimum is made, "the court's power is not conditional on a later award of at least that amount." Adolph Coors Co. v Movement Against Racism & Klan (11th Cir 1985) 777 F2d 1538, 1544. See St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v Red Cab Co. (1938) 303 US 283, 289, 82 L Ed 845, 848, 58 S Ct 586 (plaintiff's inability to recover amount adequate to give court jurisdiction does not show bad faith or oust court's jurisdiction). See also Griffin v Red Run Lodge, Inc. (4th Cir 1979) 610 F2d 1198 (no single claim over jurisdictional amount but aggregate amount of claims over jurisdictional amount; plaintiff entitled to damages though less than jurisdictional amount). The federal courts, however, are authorized by 28 USC §1332(b) to impose costs on plaintiffs who are ultimately awarded less than the jurisdictional amount.

Federal courts may be divested of subject matter jurisdiction when plaintiff amends the initial complaint to reduce the amount in controversy to less than the jurisdictional minimum. See 28 USC §1447(c) ("if at any time before final judgment… the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the case shall be remanded"); Villano v Kohl's Dep't Stores, Inc. (SD NY 2005) 362 F Supp 2d 418. In Villano, plaintiff's initial complaint in state court alleged damages of $500,000 arising from an infant's cut to her finger in defendant's store. After defendant removed the case to federal court in New York, plaintiff amended his complaint to reduce the amount in controversy to $74,000. The court, relying on Congress' amendment of 28 USC §1447(c) in 1988, granted plaintiff's motion for remand because plaintiff no longer met the amount in controversy requirement. 362 F Supp 2d at 421.

On aggregation of claims, see §7.80.

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.76 3. Punitive Damages

In determining the jurisdictional amount for purposes of diversity jurisdiction, federal courts must consider claims for punitive as well as actual damages unless it is apparent to a legal certainty that punitive damages are not recoverable. Holley Equip. Co. v Credit Alliance Corp. (11th Cir 1987) 821 F2d 1531, 1535; Kahal v J.W. Wilson & Assocs. (DC Cir 1982) 673 F2d 547. See Sellers v O'Connell (6th Cir 1983) 701 F2d 575, 579 (punitive damages must be included unless barred under state law).

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.77 4. Attorney Fees

Attorney fees may also be included in determining the amount in controversy if a statute authorizes them to a successful litigant. Goldberg v CPC Int'l, Inc. (9th Cir 1982) 678 F2d 1365, 1367. See Rosack v Volvo of Am. Corp. (ND Cal 1976) 421 F Supp 933, 937 (attorney fees that may be awarded to the prevailing party may be considered in determining jurisdictional amount). See also Clark v National Travelers Life Ins. Co. (6th Cir 1975) 518 F2d 1167, 1168 (statutory penalty and statutory attorney fees may be considered in determining jurisdictional amount).

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.78 5. Exclusion of Interest and Costs

Under 28 USC §1332(a), costs and interest are excluded from consideration in determining the amount in controversy. For example, interest on cash death benefits of life insurance policies (i.e., accrued interest) from the date of an insured's death until the date of payment had to be excluded in determining the jurisdictional amount. Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co. v Juntunen (7th Cir 1988) 838 F2d 942 (jurisdiction held lacking). But see Bailey Employment Sys. v Hahn (2d Cir 1981) 655 F2d 473 (interest that accrued on note before maturity considered). See also Sarnoff v American Home Prods. Corp. (7th Cir 1986) 798 F2d 1075, 1078 ("prejudgment interest may sometimes count toward the jurisdictional minimum").

© The Regents of the University of California

§7.79 6. Relief Other Than Monetary Damages

When a plaintiff seeks specific relief other than money damages, the value of the "matter in controversy" must still exceed the jurisdictional amount requirement (see §7.73) specified in 28 USC §1332(a). Thus, e.g., in an action for specific performance to convey real property, "the value of the property involved … determines the jurisdictional amount." Porter v Hollander (D Del 1980) 494 F Supp 151, 152 n1.

Similarly, the minimum jurisdictional "amount must be present in actions seeking only injunctive and declaratory relief, regardless of the difficulty of valuation." United States Jaycees v Superior Court (DC DC 1980) 491 F Supp 579, 581. In such cases, in the Ninth Circuit, it appears that the amount in controversy is "the value of the right to be protected or the extent of the injury to be prevented." Jackson v American Bar Ass'n (9th Cir 1976) 538 F2d 829, 831 (federal question case under 28 USC §1331; case decided before 1976 and 1980 amendments to §1331 striking out minimum amount in controversy requirement). See Hunt v Washington State Apple Advertising Comm'n (1977) 432 US 333, 347, 53 L Ed 2d 383, 396, 97 S Ct 2434 (decided under former amount-in-controversy requirement of 28 USC §1331; for injunctive or declaratory relief, amount in controversy measured by value of the object of the litigation); United States Jaycees v Superior Court, supra ("assessment must be made of the value of the right plaintiff seeks to protect, or of the cost to defendant of correcting the alleged wrong"). See also Burns v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co. (8th Cir 1987) 820 F2d 246, 248 (diversity case; for injunction, amount in controversy is the value to plaintiff of the right to be enforced); Oklahoma Retail Grocers Ass'n v Walmart Stores, Inc. (10th Cir 1979) 605 F2d 1155, 1160 (diversity case; impact on defendant, including the cost of the injunction, proper to consider in determining amount in controversy). Diversity jurisdiction will not lie, however, when the right sought to be enforced is entirely speculative and lacks the capability of being translated into monetary value. Jackson v American Bar Ass'n, supra.

Moreover, a monetary value can be accorded to intangible rights to determine the amount in controversy requirement. Handsome v Rutgers Univ. (D NJ 1978) 445 F Supp 1362, 1364 (decided under former amount-in-controversy requirement of 28 USC §1331; value of right to college education held to exceed former jurisdictional amount of $10,000); CCCO-Western Region v Fellows (ND Cal 1972) 359 F Supp 644, 647 (decided under former amount-in-controversy requirement of 28 USC §1331; fundamental constitutional rights, including freedom of speech, worth more than former jurisdictional amount of $10,000).

For further discussion, see 14B Wright, Miller & Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §§3702, 3708 (3d ed 1998).

§7.80 7. Aggregation of Claims

When a plaintiff has multiple claims against a single defendant that are properly joined, the aggregate amount of those claims is deemed the amount in controversy for diversity jurisdiction purposes. Stone v Stone (4th Cir 1968) 405 F2d 94, 96; Alberty v Western Sur. Co. (10th Cir 1957) 249 F2d 537. See Diefenthal v CAB (5th Cir 1982) 681 F2d 1039, 1053 n15 (tort and contract claims may be aggregated to satisfy amount-in-controversy requirement). Similarly, when a plaintiff has properly joined multiple claims against two or more defendants jointly liable, the aggregate amount of those claims is deemed the amount in controversy for diversity jurisdiction purposes. Alberty, 249 F2d at 538; Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v Graves (WD La 1974) 381 F Supp 1159, 1163.

On the other hand, when a single plaintiff has multiple claims against two or more defendants and the claims are separate and distinct as to each defendant (i.e., their liability is several), the general rule is that aggregation is not permitted. "'[T]he test of jurisdiction is the amount of each claim, not their aggregate.'" Jewell v Grain Dealers Mut. Ins. Co. (5th Cir 1961) 290 F2d 11, 13, quoting Cornell v Mabe (5th Cir 1953) 206 F2d 514, 516.

When there are multiple plaintiffs (such as in a class action) and the claim of at least one plaintiff meets the jurisdictional amount-in-controversy requirement, the court has supplemental jurisdiction over other plaintiffs whose claims arose from the same case or controversy even if they do not meet the jurisdictional minimum. Exxon Mobil Corp. v Allapattah Servs., Inc. (2005) 545 US 546, 162 L Ed 2d 502, 125 S Ct 2611. In Exxon Mobil, the Supreme Court held that Congress's enactment of 28 USC §1367 overruled the holding in Zahn v International Paper Co. (1973) 414 US 291, 300, 38 L Ed 2d 511, 518, 94 S Ct 505, that unnamed class members could not aggregate their separate and distinct claims for jurisdictional purposes. "If a court has original jurisdiction over a single claim in the complaint, it has original jurisdiction over a 'civil action' within the meaning of §1367(a)," and the presence of other claims in the complaint over which the court may lack jurisdiction is of no moment. Exxon Mobil Corp., 545 US at 549. Exxon Mobil settled a split among the circuit courts over the interpretation of 28 USC §1367 and the viability of Zahn.

When two or more plaintiffs "unite to enforce a single title or right, in which they have a common and undivided interest," however, they may aggregate their claims to satisfy the jurisdictional amount requirement. Troy Bank v Whitehead & Co. (1911) 222 US 39, 40, 56 L Ed 81, 82, 32 S Ct 9. See Snyder v Harris (1969) 394 US 332, 338, 22 L Ed 2d 319, 89 S Ct 1053. See Eagle v American Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir 1985) 769 F2d 541, 545 (class action on behalf of minority shareholders; claims common and undivided; individual minority shareholders' claims aggregated).

NOTE: To properly plead diversity jurisdiction under 28 USC §1332, the plaintiff must allege the amount in controversy "against each defendant unless the plaintiff's claims against the defendants are common and undivided so that the defendants' liability is joint and not several." Welker v Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (CD Cal 1980) 502 F Supp 268, 271.

For further discussion, see 14B Wright, Miller & Cooper §§3704-3705 (3d ed 1998).

§7.81 E. Exceptions for Domestic Relations and Probate

Exceptions to diversity of citizenship subject matter jurisdiction exist in the areas of domestic relations (see Csibi v Fustos (9th Cir 1982) 670 F2d 134, 136) and probate (see Giardina v Fontana (2d Cir 1984) 733 F2d 1047, 1050). If one of these exceptions applies, the federal court lacks subject matter jurisdiction notwithstanding that the diversity of citizenship (see §§7.48-7.72) and amount in controversy requirements (see §§7.73-7.80) have been satisfied. Giardina v Fontana, supra; Csibi v Fustos, supra. The rationale behind the domestic relations exception is that state courts have a greater interest and expertise in this area, which involves uniquely nonfederal issues. Csibi v Fustos, supra. The rationale behind the probate exception appears to be judicial economy, a desire to promote legal certainty concerning transfer of property at death and state expertise. See Dragan v Miller (7th Cir 1982) 679 F2d 712.

The Ninth Circuit has narrowly construed the domestic relations exception and applies a primary issue test to determine if it applies. Csibi v Fustos (9th Cir 1982) 670 F2d 134, 137. Under this test, if "the primary issue concerns the status of parent and child or husband and wife," the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction. Csibi v Fustos, supra. Thus, a federal court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to "grant a divorce or annulment, determine support payments, or award custody of a child." Csibi v Fustos, supra. See Bennett v Bennett (DC Cir 1982) 682 F2d 1039, 1042 (no federal jurisdiction to issue injunction to enjoin defendants from interfering with plaintiff's custody rights).

Under the probate exception, a federal court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to probate a will or administer an estate. Markham v Allen (1946) 326 US 490, 494, 90 L Ed 256, 259, 66 S Ct 296. See Dragan v Miller, supra. Moreover, under this exception it has been held that a federal court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over a will contest to set aside a will "when the remedy to set aside afforded by the state law is a mere continuation of the probate proceeding; that is to say, merely a method of procedure ancillary to the original probate, allowed by the state law for the purpose of giving to the probate its ultimate and final effect." O'Callaghan v O'Brien (1905) 199 US 89, 110, 50 L Ed 101, 111, 25 S Ct 727.

The Supreme Court addressed the scope of the probate exception in Marshall v Marshall (2006) 547 US 293, 164 L Ed 2d 480, 126 S Ct 1735. In Marshall, the Court held that the probate or annulment of a will, the administration of a decedent's estate, and disposing of property that is in the custody of a state probate court are matters reserved solely for state probate courts; federal courts are not precluded from adjudicating matters outside those confines, however, such as the present widow's counterclaim against decedent's son in her federal bankruptcy proceedings.

Federal courts may adjudicate certain independent claims that arise out of probate matters. For example, an action to determine whether a custody decree has been violated, and, if so, the appropriate damages, does not fall within the domestic relations exception to diversity jurisdiction. McIntyre v McIntyre (9th Cir 1985) 771 F2d 1316 (exception inapplicable to action for tortious interference with custody rights). See Giardina v Fontana, supra (fraud claim involving interest in estate does not fall under probate exception). But see Jagiella v Jagiella (5th Cir 1981) 647 F2d 561, 564 (domestic relations exception extended to damage action for alienation of children's affection and resultant infliction of mental anguish status); Dragan v Miller, supra (cannot circumvent probate exception by calling a will contest a tort; probate exception applied).

On when the abstention doctrine may be applicable to cases not within the domestic relations or probate exceptions, but on the verge, see McIntyre, 771 F2d at 1319 (domestic relations exception; under facts abstention improper); Giardina, 733 F2d at 1051 (probate exception; under facts abstention improper). On abstention doctrine generally, see §7.12.

I. INTRODUCTION

§8.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses venue of civil actions. Specifically, it discusses preliminary matters (see §§8.4-8.9), venue in transitory actions (see §§8.10-8.30), venue in local actions (see §§8.31-8.47), venue in mixed actions (see §§8.48-8.54), special rules for corporations, associations, and partnerships (see §§8.55-8.64), and special rules for governmental entities (see §§8.65-8.78).

§8.2 B. Governing Law

The statutes governing proper venue of civil actions generally are found in CCP §§392-395.5, 401. In a few situations, proper venue is dictated by statutes outside the Code of Civil Procedure. See, e.g., the jurisdictional venue statutes cited in §8.3. The statute empowering courts to transfer venue at their discretion is CCP §397(c). On venue in federal cases, see 28 USC §§1391-1407. On change of venue, see chap 20.

Unless particular rules require trial in another county, under the general rule of venue set forth in CCP §395(a) venue is proper in the county of residence of any defendant. II. PRELIMINARY MATTERS

§8.4 A. Venue Defined

Venue is defined as the proper county for trial of a civil action. Milliken v Gray (1969) 276 CA2d 595, 600, 81 CR 525. The purpose of the basic venue rule is to give the defendant the right to have actions tried in the county of his or her residence. Kaluzok v Brisson (1946) 27 C2d 760, 167 P2d 481; Vickerson v Wehr (1941) 42 CA2d 678, 109 P2d 743.

With a few exceptions in which venue is considered "jurisdictional," jurisdiction relates to a court's power to act whereas venue does not. A court having jurisdiction may render a binding judgment with res judicata effect even though venue is improper, i.e., when the case was not brought in the proper county for trial. Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 C3d 94, 119, 101 CR 745; Newman v County of Sonoma (1961) 56 C2d 625, 15 CR 914.

When venue is jurisdictional, i.e., when a statute specifies a particular place for trial as part of a grant of subject matter jurisdiction, a judgment rendered in an action tried in an improper county is void and subject to collateral attack. Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n, supra. See, e.g., Van Zanten v Superior Court (1963) 214 CA2d 510, 29 CR 625, in which the court held that venue is jurisdictional in a proceeding under former Pen C §6502 to commit a person as a narcotics addict. See also Comment to CCP §1250.020 (venue in eminent domain proceedings), discussed in §8.39.

Venue should be distinguished from subject matter jurisdiction issues, e.g., whether the case is a limited or unlimited civil case. Actions in law in which the amount in controversy exceeds $25,000 are "unlimited civil cases." See CCP §88. See also CCP §§85-85.1 (defining "limited civil cases" as all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000); Stern v Superior Court (2003) 105 CA4th 223, 130, 129 CR2d 275. In addition, there are a number of actions that by statute that are considered unlimited civil cases regardless of the amount in controversy or the nature of the relief sought. See, e.g., Prob C §§2200, 7050 (guardianship, conservatorship, probate proceedings); Fam C §§200, 8500-9206 (adoption proceedings); Welf & I C §245 (juvenile court proceedings). For discussion of limited and unlimited civil cases after trial court unification, see chap 6.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.5 B. Nature of Action: Transitory, Local, or Mixed

§8.5 B. Nature of Action: Transitory, Local, or Mixed

Venue is based on:

- Classifications of actions as transitory (see §§8.10-8.30), local (see §§8.31-8.47), or mixed (see §§8.48-8.54); and
- Classifications of the parties involved (see §§8.55-8.64 (special rules for corporations, associations, and partnerships), §§8.65-8.78 (special rules for government entities)).

PRACTICE TIP: Although proper venue is easy to determine in many cases, the classifications are crucial if many different causes of action or types of relief are sought or if a party involved in the action belongs to a group governed by special venue statutes. In such situations, it is often unclear how actions will be classified or what rules will be applied.

§8.6 C. Importance of Complaint

The attorney should carefully draft the complaint allegations and the demand to support the choice of venue. Venue determinations are generally based on the plaintiff's theory of the action set forth in the complaint on file when the motion to change venue is made. Brown v Superior Court (1984) 37 C3d 477, 482, 208 CR 724. This is true even if the complaint is subsequently amended to dismiss the cause of action initially providing the basis for venue. Armstrong Petroleum Corp. v Superior Court (1981) 114 CA3d 732, 170 CR 767.

Proper venue is determined by the allegations in the complaint, and no party can challenge venue later based on allegation in a cross-complaint. K.R.L. Partnership v Superior Court (2004) 120 CA4th 490, 498, 15 CR3d 517 (cross-defendant is not entitled to seek change of venue under CCP §396b based on compulsory cross-complaint).

Careful drafting of the complaint is also important because public policy favors trial in the county where the defendant resides, and the complaint will be construed strictly against a plaintiff who seeks venue in another county. Neet v Holmes (1942) 19 C2d 605, 612, 122 P2d 557; Haurat v Superior Court (1966) 241 CA2d 330, 334, 50 CR 520; Bybee v Fairchild (1946) 75 CA2d 35, 170 P2d 54.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.7 D. Importance of Trial Court Delay Reduction Act in Choosing Venue

§8.7 D. Importance of Trial Court Delay Reduction Act in Choosing Venue

The programs developed under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620) dramatically alter the pace of litigation. Counsel should consider the effects of these programs in choosing venue, because although all counties have adopted the Act, local practice in its implementation may vary from county to county. Thus, careful consideration of local rules and practices may be particularly important in choosing between venue in different counties, and counsel is advised to consult local rules before making a decision.

§8.8 E. Effect of Contractual Venue Agreements

A contractual provision specifying the county where an action on that contract will be brought is void. General Acceptance Corp. v Robinson (1929) 207 C 285, 277 P 1039. In this case, the court relied on a series of out-of-state decisions holding that the rules determining where actions may be brought are based on general convenience and expediency and that agreements of the parties should not be allowed to interfere with these considerations. See also Alexander v Superior Court (2003) 114 CA4th 723, 730, 8 CR3d 111 (following General Acceptance Corp. to hold contractual venue selection clause is invalid to extent it is inconsistent with statutory venue scheme).

Although venue selection provisions are void, a contractual provision specifying the state in which an action must be brought is enforceable in the absence of a showing that enforcement would be unreasonable. Smith, Valentino & Smith, Inc. v Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 491, 131 CR 374 (court declined to follow General Acceptance Corp.). Similarly, a contractual provision mandating arbitration to settle contract-related disputes that specifies the state in which the arbitration must be held is also enforceable if it is consistent with the parties' reasonable expectations and not unduly oppressive or unconscionable. Bos Material Handling, Inc. v Crown Controls Corp. (1982) 137 CA3d 99, 186 CR 740.

In some circumstances, the prohibition against venue selection provisions may be avoided by, e.g., specifying in writing where performance of a contract will take place. See §8.23. But see §8.28 for discussion of the invalidity of provisions in consumer installment sales contracts purporting to waive the venue provisions of the governing statutes.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.9 F. Effect on Venue of Coordination Statutes

Conventional venue principles may be overridden when civil actions sharing common questions of fact or law are pending in different courts or in different divisions of the superior court of the same county. CCP §§403-404. Such multicourt litigation may be ordered coordinated under the procedures specified in CCP §§403-404.9 and Cal Rules of Ct 3.500-3.550, which are based in part on procedures developed by federal district courts for handling complex and multidistrict litigation under 28 USC §1407. Once a case has come under the coordination procedure, the place of trial must be determined by the coordination judge unfettered by the narrow perspective of the venue statutes. Keenan v Superior Court (1980) 111 CA3d 336, 342, 168 CR 561.

When coordination has been ordered, the trial judge may hear and determine the coordinated actions in the site or sites he or she finds appropriate (CCP §404.3) and may order any coordinated action or severable claim in that action transferred from the court where it is pending to another court for a specified purpose or for all purposes (Cal Rules of Ct 3.543(a)). For further discussion, see 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§352-374 (5th ed 2008).

For full discussion of coordination, see chap 43.

III. VENUE IN TRANSITORY ACTIONS

§8.10 A. General Rule: County of Defendant's Residence

In a transitory action, the events giving rise to the action might have taken place anywhere, and the general rule of venue in CCP §395(a) is that venue is proper in the superior court in the county where any defendant resides at the commencement of the action except as otherwise provided by law and subject to the court's power to transfer actions or proceedings. CCP §395(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.11 1. Residence Defined

Under Govt C §244(a), a residence is the place where a person remains and to which he or she returns in "seasons of repose." It is similar to a domicile (see Burt v Scarborough (1961) 56 C2d 817, 17 CR 146), i.e., the place where a person normally resides and intends to remain permanently (Enter v Crutcher (1958) 159 CA2d Supp 841, 323 P2d 586). On meaning of "domicile," see §6.67. On corporate residence, see §8.57. For venue purposes, a person can have only one place of residence. Burt v Scarborough, supra.

Although a stated intent to remain at the location is an important factor in determining residence (Johnston v Benton (1925) 73 CA 565, 239 P 60), a court may disregard this statement of intent when a person's acts indicate a contrary intention (Briggs v Superior Court (1947) 81 CA2d 240, 183 P2d 758). For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§818-820 (5th ed 2008).

2. Effect of Multiple Defendants

§8.12 a. Residence of Any Defendant

If there are several properly joined defendants to a civil action and the complaint is filed in the county of residence of one of them, venue is proper and the plaintiff is entitled to have the action brought where it was filed. CCP §395(a). See, e.g., Monogram Co. v Kingsley (1951) 38 C2d 28, 237 P2d 265 (venue proper in county of one defendant, even though he was joined with numerous nonresident defendants against whom most causes of action were alleged and even though he consented to transfer). The same rule applies when venue is proper with respect to one of several cross-defendants; the cross-complainant is entitled to its venue choice even if all cross-defendants were to join in seeking a change to the county in which another of them resides. See Tutor-Saliba-Perini Joint Venture v Superior Court (1991) 233 CA3d 736, 742, 285 CR 1 (cross-defendant public entity that was sued for breach of contract, indemnity, and contribution sought change of venue to county where it was located). If a defendant is dismissed from the action at a later time, the remaining defendants have no right to compel a change of venue. Ferguson v Koerber (1924) 69 CA 47, 230 P 476.

Even when none of the named defendants reside in the county where the action was commenced, venue is proper in that county if, at any time before hearing on a motion for change of venue, the plaintiff amends the complaint in good faith to include the true name of a fictitiously named defendant who resides there. Gutierrez v Superior Court (1966) 243 CA2d 710, 52 CR 592. See also Bachman v Cathry (1896) 113 C 498, 45 P 814.

For discussion of venue when at least one of multiple defendants is a business entity, see §8.63. When one of multiple defendants is a government entity, see §8.77.

b. Improper Joinder of Defendants

§8.13 (1) Statutory Authority: CCP §395(a)

Code of Civil Procedure §395(a) states:

> If any person is improperly joined as a defendant or has been made a defendant solely for the purpose of having the action tried in the superior court in the county where he or she resides, his or her residence shall not be considered in determining the proper place for the trial of the action.

Under the language of §395(a), when a plaintiff has a cause of action against a defendant who is a necessary party under the rules governing joinder of parties (see chap 14), that defendant is not considered a party joined "solely for the purpose" of obtaining venue. Freeman v Dowling (1933) 219 C 213, 25 P2d 980; Hellman v Logan (1905) 148 C 58, 82 P 848. When the issue is raised whether a defendant has been properly joined or joined solely for the purpose of establishing venue, the California Supreme Court has stated the question as "whether plaintiff, in joining the resident defendant as a party, had reasonable grounds for the belief in good faith that plaintiff had a cause of action against the resident defendant." Peiser v Mettler (1958) 50 C2d 594, 603, 328 P2d 953.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.14 (2) Case Examples

Courts have found that a defendant was improperly joined or joined solely for the purpose of obtaining venue in the following situations:

- No cause of action exists against the resident defendant. See, e.g., Minyard v Superior Court (1967) 248 CA2d 633, 56 CR 801; South v Wishard (1954) 123 CA2d 642, 267 P2d 827.
- Allegations of the complaint do not sufficiently connect the defendant with the action. Norins Realty Co. v Consolidated Abstract & Title Guar. Co. (1947) 80 CA2d 879, 182 P2d 593.
- An unwilling plaintiff is named as a nominal defendant under CCP §382 even if this is not done solely to establish venue. The main factor is whether the defendant is actually a plaintiff rather than a defendant. See Donohoe v Wooster (1912) 163 C 114, 124 P 730.
- A defendant is named who is simply a stakeholder with no personal interest in the controversy. Hays v Cowles (1943) 60 CA2d 514, 519, 141 P2d 26. If, however, a defendant who is primarily a stakeholder asserts a claim for fees or compensation out of the fund in question, venue is proper in that defendant's county of residence because the court will consider that defendant to be a necessary party. See Independent Iron Works v American President Lines (1950) 35 C2d 858, 221 P2d 939.
- The alleged county of residence of a fictitiously named defendant may not be used to lay venue in that county. Kallen v Serretto (1932) 126 CA 548, 14 P2d 917.

© The Regents of the University of California

B. Special Residence Problems

§8.15 1. Residence Outside State or Unknown

Although generally venue in transitory actions is proper in the county of residence of any defendant, the action may be tried in the superior court in any county the plaintiff designates in the complaint when:

- No defendant resides in the state; or
- Defendants reside in the state but, after a diligent search (Thurber v Thurber (1896) 113 C 607, 45 P 852), the county of residence is unknown to the plaintiff.

CCP §395(a).

The plaintiff's reasons for choosing a particular county are immaterial. Hamilton v Superior Court (1974) 37 CA3d 418, 112 CR 450. Under the nonresidence clause of §395(a), all defendants must reside outside the state. If any reside in the state, they are entitled to change venue to the county where one defendant resides. Banta v Wink (1897) 119 C 78, 51 P 17.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.16 2. Imminent Departure From State

Another exception to the general rule in transitory actions is that, when a defendant is about to depart from the state, a transitory action may be tried "in the superior court in any county where either of the parties reside or service is made." CCP §395(a). To "depart" within the meaning of §395(a) means to leave without intending to return or with no reasonable likelihood of an early return. Polk v Bradbury (1932) 127 CA 383, 15 P2d 865.

§8.17 C. Particular Transitory Actions With Greater Venue Choice

In many types of transitory actions (e.g., those discussed below involving contracts (see §§8.18-8.28), personal injury or wrongful death (see §8.29), and injuries to personal property (see §8.30)), venue is proper either in the county of a defendant's residence or in other specified counties.

1. Contract Actions

§8.18 a. Statutory Provisions

Contract actions are governed by a number of different venue provisions, depending on the nature of the contract. The overall statutory framework is as follows:

- CCP §395(a) (general provision in contract cases);
- CCP §395(b) (consumer obligations generally);
- CC §1812.10 (retail installment sales contracts generally); and
- CC §2984.4 (retail motor vehicle installment sales contracts).

Code of Civil Procedure §395(a) provides that, except for actions founded on consumer obligations (see §§8.25-8.28), an action against an individual defendant founded on a contract to perform an obligation in a particular county may be tried in the superior court in the county where:

- The obligation will be performed;
- The contract in fact was entered into; or
- The defendant resides at the commencement of the action.

See §8.57 for the rule when defendant is corporation or association. On determining the county where the contract was entered into, see §§8.23-8.24. For discussion of individual defendant's county of residence, see §8.11.

The county in which the obligation is incurred is considered to be the county where it is to be performed unless there is a "special contract in writing to the contrary." CCP §395(a). For discussion, see §§8.23-8.24.

Actions based on consumer obligations are generally governed by the venue provisions of CCP §395(b). Venue provisions in actions on retail installment sales contracts generally are governed by the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (CC §§1801-1812.20). CC §1812.10. Those regarding motor vehicles are governed by the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (CC §§2981-2984.6). CC §2984.6. For discussion, see §§8.25-8.28.

b. Contract Actions Governed by CCP §395(a)

§8.19 (1) Types of Actions

In addition to express contracts, the venue options provided by CCP §395(a) in actions founded on breach of contract apply to the following:

- Actions on implied in fact contracts (see International Inv. Co. v Chagnon (1959) 170 CA2d 441, 339 P2d 147);
- Actions on implied in law contracts (Fitzhugh v University Realty Co. (1920) 46 CA 198, 188 P 1023);
- Actions to recover statutory penalties declared by the legislature to be collectible in the same manner as contract obligations (People v Zegras (1946) 29 C2d 67, 172 P2d 883);
- Actions for partnership dissolutions (see Rudnick v Delfino (1956) 140 CA2d 260, 294 P2d 983); and
- Actions for rescission and restitution (Fitzhugh v University Realty Co., supra).

Although there are no California authorities directly on point, it is arguable that an action on a judgment, other than one to establish and enforce a foreign judgment or court order for child support, is an action on a contract within the scope of CCP §395(a). For discussion of venue in child support enforcement action governed by CCP §395(a), see §8.41.

(2) Determining Where Contract Is Entered Into

§8.20 (a) Last Act Necessary: Acceptance

The county in which the contract in fact is entered into is the county where the last act necessary to make the contract binding takes place. Bank of Yolo v Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 C 314, 74 P 855; Mitchell v Superior Court (1986) 186 CA3d 1040, 231 CR 176. Usually, the last act is the act of acceptance. Mitchell v Superior Court, supra.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.21 (b) Illustrative Cases

§8.21 (b) Illustrative Cases

Courts have determined where the contract was entered into in the following typical situations:

- When acceptance is by telephone, the contract is made at the place where the acceptance is spoken. Wilson v Scannavino (1958) 159 CA2d 369, 324 P2d 350. See Bank of Yolo v Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 C 314, 74 P 855 (dictum).
- When acceptance is by mail, the contract is made at the place where the letter is mailed. Bank of Yolo v Sperry Flour Co., supra. Similarly, a contract that is within the statute of frauds is made at the place of oral acceptance, even if a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the statute is subsequently executed elsewhere. Taylor v J.B. Hill Co. (1945) 67 CA2d 581, 154 P2d 926.
- When the contract is not binding until occurrence of a condition precedent, the contract is made at the place where the condition is satisfied. Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v Zachary (1943) 60 CA2d 560, 141 P2d 8; Limited Mut. Compensation Ins. Co. v Curtis (1941) 45 CA2d 507, 114 P2d 404.
- When minor errors such as typographical errors are corrected, the contract is made in the county where the agreement was originally made, not where the corrections were made. Standard Mach. Co. v Coleman (1956) 140 CA2d 748, 296 P2d 89.
- When substantive contract provisions are modified in another county, the place where the contract was originally made determines venue unless the litigation arises from the modification. Joe Lowe Corp. v Rasmusson (1942) 53 CA2d 490, 127 P2d 1002.
- When an oral agreement is subsequently integrated into a written contract, the writing supersedes the oral agreement and venue is proper in the county where the writing is executed. Hale v Bohannon (1952) 38 C2d 458, 241 P2d 4.

For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§837-840 (5th ed 2008).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.22 (c) Effect of Contract Provisions

§8.22 (c) Effect of Contract Provisions

Under CCP §395(a), venue in a contract action is proper in the superior court in the county where the contract was "in fact" made. Thus, when an attestation clause recites that the contract was executed in a particular county, parol evidence is permitted to prove that execution in fact occurred elsewhere. Taylor v Lundblade (1941) 43 CA2d 638, 111 P2d 344. For the same reason, parties to a contract executed in one county may not stipulate that it was made in another county to support venue in the other county. See generally Taylor v Lundblade, supra.

(3) Determining Place of Performance

§8.23 (a) Statutory Definitions

Venue in an action on a contract is proper in the superior court in the county where the contractual obligation is to be performed only if the agreement specifies in writing the place of performance. CCP §395(a); Mitchell v Superior Court (1986) 186 CA3d 1040, 231 CR 176. Otherwise, under §395(a) the county where the obligation is incurred is considered to be the county of performance. This provision substantially limits the plaintiff's option to lay venue in the county of performance.

If the defendant in a contract action is a corporation, venue is governed by CCP §395.5, which provides that venue is proper in the place of performance of the contract and contains no requirement that the writing specify the place. For discussion, see §8.58.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.24 (b) Illustrative Cases

Although the "special contract in writing" required by CCP §395(a) need not be separate and distinct, the place of performance cannot be implied from the contract (see Caffrey v Tilton (1952) 38 C2d 371, 240 P2d 273) or shown by parol evidence (Mitchell v Superior Court (1986) 186 CA3d 1040, 231 CR 176). But see Inglewood Thrift & Loan v Colby (1961) 188 CA2d Supp 857, 10 CR 814 (fact that parol evidence was necessary to identify place of payments made no difference). The contract must specifically state the place of performance. Mitchell v Superior Court, supra; Armstrong v Smith (1942) 49 CA2d 528, 122 P2d 115.

In the following situations, courts have found contractual provisions for place of performance sufficiently specific for venue purposes:

- When the contract specified performance at the promisee's office in a city or county, even though it did not set forth the office address, venue may be laid there. Stute v Burinda (1981) 123 CA3d Supp 11, 177 CR 102; Morthrift Plan v Fischer (1961) 196 CA2d Supp 865, 17 CR 607. But see Fidelity Thrift & Loan Ass'n v Hall (1960) 186 CA2d Supp 895, 9 CR 596 (when office address not stated, venue improper at place of performance).
- When a promissory note recited that it was payable "at Santa Rosa, California," venue was held to be proper in Santa Rosa even though the note was executed in San Francisco and the defendants resided there. Causley v Superior Court (1968) 267 CA2d 757, 73 CR 585.
- Venue was held to be proper in Santa Clara County when the contract, written on the plaintiff's letterhead, simply specified performance at the plaintiff's business, but the letterhead showed an office address in Santa Clara County. Wathen v Superior Court (1963) 212 CA2d 125, 27 CR 840.

For further examples and discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§841-844 (5th ed 2008).

c. Consumer Obligations and Installment Sales

§8.25 (1) Consumer Obligations (CCP §395(b))

In actions based on the sale of goods or services or for loans or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household uses, venue is proper (subject to the court's power to transfer) in the superior court of the county where the buyer:

- In fact signed the contract;
- Resided when the contract was signed; or
- Resides when the action is commenced.

CCP §395(b). See Leonard v Slade (1975) 55 CA3d Supp 1, 127 CR 309 (action for medical services rendered is founded on obligation of defendant for services intended primarily for personal use within meaning of §395(b)).

The proper court location for trial of a case is the location where the court tries that type of case that is nearest or most accessible to where the buyer or lessee resides, where the buyer or lessee in fact signed the contract, where the buyer or lessee resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the buyer or lessee resides at the commencement of the action. Otherwise, any location of the superior court designated as the proper court under CCP §395(b) is a proper court location for the trial. The court may specify by local rule the nearest or most accessible court location where the court tries that type of case. CCP §395(b). As long as the case arises from a consumer transaction specified in the statute, CCP 395(b) governs venue regardless whether the consumer is a plaintiff or a defendant or whether one of the defendants is an individual. Fontaine v Superior Court (2009) 175 CA4th 830, 96 CR3d 607.

§8.26 (2) Installment Sales Contracts (CC §§1812.10, 2984)

Actions on installment sales contracts are specifically excluded from the venue provisions of CCP §395(b) and, except for motor vehicle installment sales purchases governed by CC §2984.4, are governed by the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (CC §§1801-1812.20). Under CC §1812.10(a)-(b), venue in such actions is proper in the superior court nearest or most accessible to where:

- The buyer in fact signed the contract;
- The buyer resided when the contract was made;
- The buyer resides when the action is commenced; or
- The goods purchased have become affixed to and part of real property.

The court may specify by local rule the nearest or most accessible court location where the court tries that type of case. CC §1812.10(b).

Venue in motor vehicle installment sales purchases, which is specifically excluded from CCP §395(b), is governed by the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (CC §§2981-2984.6). Under CC §2984.4(a)-(b), venue in these actions is proper in the superior court in the county where:

- The buyer in fact signed the contract or purchase order;
- The buyer resided when the contract or purchase order was entered into;
- The buyer resides when the action is commenced; or
- The vehicle is permanently garaged.

§8.27 (3) Pleading Requirements

In actions brought under CC §§1812.10 and 2984.4, the plaintiff must file with the complaint an affidavit stating facts showing that venue is proper, or may state such facts in the verified complaint, but not on information and belief. Failure to include these facts may result in dismissal without prejudice, although the court may permit the subsequent filing of the affidavit "on such terms as may be just." CC §§1812.10(c), 2984.4(c).

In addition to the pleading requirements in CC §§1812.10 and 2984.4, similar requirements may be found in CCP §396a. Under §396a, in cases relating to consumer contracts for personal, family, or household use that are subject to CCP §395(b) or CC §1812.10 or §2984.4, or in unlawful detainer proceedings as defined in CCP §1161, the complaining party must state facts in a verified complaint or affidavit verified under oath by either the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney, showing that the action is in superior court, which is a proper court for trial, and that the action is subject to one of the foregoing provisions. Failure to file the verified complaint or affidavit requires dismissal of the action without prejudice, although the court may permit the subsequent filing of the affidavit "on such terms as may be just." CCP §396a(a).

Furthermore, in contrast to the rules governing unlimited civil cases, if it appears from the plaintiff's pleadings that the court in which the action is filed does not have venue, the case must be transferred to a proper court unless the defendant consents to keep the action in the court where the action was commenced. CCP §396a(b). For discussion of requirements for valid consent, see §8.28.

The intentional and mass filing of such complaints in the wrong county is both an abuse of process and an unlawful business practice, which may be enjoined under CC §3369. Barquis v Merchants Collection Ass'n (1972) 7 C3d 94, 101 CR 745. See Yu v Signet Bank (1999) 69 CA4th 1377, 82 CR2d 304 (mass filing of complaints against debtors in wrong jurisdiction is "distant forum abuse" and even more egregious than practice in Barquis).

§8.28 (4) Consent to Improper Venue

A provision of an obligation for consumer goods covered by CCP §395(b) waiving the venue provisions of those subdivisions is void and unenforceable. CCP §395(c). In addition, both the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (CC §1804.1) and the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (CC §2983.7) provide that the parties may not by contract agree to venue in a county other than as specified above.

If any of the above actions is brought as a limited civil case (see chap 6), however, the defendant may consent in writing or in open court to keep the action in a court without proper venue, but only if he or she is represented by counsel at the time the consent is given. CCP §396a(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.29 2. Personal Injury and Wrongful Death Actions

Except as otherwise provided by law and subject to the court's power to transfer, actions for injury to a person or for wrongful death arising from negligence are triable either in the superior court in the county where any defendant resides or in the county where the injury or injury causing death occurs. CCP §395(a).

The term "injury to person," as used in §395(a), is narrowly construed to mean actual bodily physical injuries. Cubic Corp. v Superior Court (1986) 186 CA3d 622, 231 CR 18. Not included in the definition of this term are actions for:

- Intentional infliction of emotional distress (Cubic Corp. v Superior Court, supra; Carruth v Superior Court (1978) 80 CA3d 215, 145 CR 344);
- Injury to reputation (Carruth v Superior Court, supra);
- False imprisonment (Monk v Ehret (1923) 192 C 186, 219 P 452);
- Libel (Graham v Mixon (1917) 177 C 88, 169 P 1003); and
- Malicious prosecution and false arrest (Plum v Forgay Lumber Co. (1931) 118 CA 76, 4 P2d 804).

The actions listed above may be considered actions for personal injury for pleading purposes, but they are not personal injury actions for purposes of venue. See Carruth v Superior Court, supra.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.30 3. Actions for Injury to Personal Property

Except as otherwise provided by law and subject to the court's power to transfer, actions for injury to personal property arising from negligence are triable in the superior court in the county where any defendant resides or the injury occurred. CCP §395(a).

The phrase "injury to … personal property" is narrowly construed to mean physical injury. Nonphysical injuries to property are triable only in the county of a defendant's residence. Actions for conversion of personal property, for example, are not considered actions for injury to personal property within the meaning of §395(a). Spangenberg v Spangenberg (1932) 123 CA 387, 11 P2d 408; Mason v Buck (1929) 99 CA 219, 278 P 461.

IV. VENUE IN LOCAL ACTIONS

§8.31 A. Local Action Defined

The traditional definition of a local action is one in which the events giving rise to the action must have taken place in a particular locality. Ophir Silver Mining Co. v Superior Court (1905) 147 C 467, 473, 82 P 70. A local action must be tried in the particular locality regardless of the defendant's county of residence. The most common example of a local action is one directly and exclusively affecting real property, and it is triable only in the county where the property is located. See §§8.32-8.37.

© The Regents of the University of California

B. Local Actions Involving Real Property

1. Real Property Actions (CCP §392)

§8.32 a. Types of Actions

In the following types of real property actions (subject to the court's power to transfer), venue under CCP §392 is proper in the superior court in the county where the real property or part of it is situated:

- Recovery of real property or of estate or interest in real property (CCP §392(a)(1); see §8.33);
- Determination in any form of right or interest in real property (CCP §392(a)(1); see §8.34);
- Injury to real property (CCP §392(a)(1); see §8.35);
- Foreclosure of liens or mortgages on real property (CCP §392(b); see §8.36); and
- Unlawful detainer proceedings (CCP §392(b); see §8.37).

- Action to recover damages for physical injuries. See Stauffer Chem. Co. v Superior Court (1968) 265 CA2d 1, 71 CR 202 (damage to soil and growing crops); Wolfe v Wallace (1957) 154 CA2d 523, 316 P2d 697 (damages for value of trees cut down and for diminution in value of land).
- Action to recover damages for nonphysical or consequential injuries. See Coley v Hecker (1928) 206 C 22, 272 P 1045 (slander of title); Wick v Mattison (1962) 207 CA2d 608, 24 CR 677 (malicious prosecution resulting in injury to real property); Strosnider v Pomin (1939) 32 CA2d 103, 89 P2d 179 (fraudulent inducement to dismiss quiet title action resulting in interference with easement).
- Declaratory relief action that involves determination of liability for damage to real property. See Standard Brands v Bryce (1934) 1 C2d 718, 37 P2d 446.
- Inverse condemnation action brought by landowner when there is no agreement or consent to entry, even if damages are sought by landowner. See Williams v Merced Irrig. Dist. (1935) 4 C2d 238, 48 P2d 664. This rule may not apply if the landowner expressly consents to the entry and taking with the understanding that compensation will be negotiated later. In such a case, the action may be viewed as an action on a contract and, therefore, transitory. See Gallup v Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. (1915) 171 C 71, 151 P 1142. Inverse condemnation actions against the state by a landowner for taking or damaging private property for public use are also governed by Govt C §955, which provides that such actions are triable in the county where the property is located. See §8.66. For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§800, 803, 879 (5th ed 2008).

§8.36 (4) Foreclosure of Liens and Mortgages on Real Property

An action to foreclose on a mechanics' lien is a local action governed by CCP §392(b). See Case v Kirkwood (1931) 119 CA 207, 6 P2d 110. Even if a plaintiff seeks a money judgment on the original obligation in a mechanics' lien action, venue is proper in the county where the property or some part of it is located. It is immaterial whether the lien is created by contract or by statute. Case v Kirkwood, supra.

Under CC §3144, a mechanics' lien will not bind property for longer than 90 days after the lien claim is recorded unless within that time an action to foreclose the lien is filed in a proper court. In Douglas v Donner Pines, Inc. (1977) 73 CA3d 268, 140 CR 839, the court held that an action to foreclose a mechanics' lien must be filed in or transferred to the county where the property is situated within 90 days after the lien claim is recorded. Transfer to the proper county after 90 days is insufficient to permit the plaintiff to maintain the action. Douglas v Donner Pines, Inc., supra.

§8.37 (5) Unlawful Detainer Proceedings

In unlawful detainer actions as defined in CCP §1161, venue is proper in the superior court in the location where the court tries that type of proceeding that is nearest or most accessible to where the real property that is the subject of the action, or some part of it, is situated. Otherwise, any location of the superior court designated as the proper court in CCP §372(a) (see §8.32) is a proper court location for the trial. The court may specify by local rule the nearest or most accessible court location where the court tries that type of case. CCP §372(b).

§8.38 2. Partition (CCP §872.110)

Subject to the court's power to transfer, venue in actions for partition of real property is proper in the county where the property or some part of it is situated. CCP §872.110. See Hecker v Ross (1960) 183 CA2d 30, 6 CR 438.

§8.39 3. Eminent Domain Proceedings (CCP §1250.020)

Under CCP §1250.020, eminent domain proceedings for the taking of private property for public use must be brought in the county where the property to be taken is located. If the property is located in more than one county, any of those counties may be selected. CCP §1250.020(b). These provisions are jurisdictional (see §8.4) and a judgment in any proceeding not brought in compliance with CCP §1250.020 is void. See Comment to CCP §1250.020.

The general change of venue provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure apply to eminent domain proceedings. For discussion of the applicability of CCP §394 to eminent domain proceedings, see §8.76. See also Condemnation Practice in California §8.23 (3d ed Cal CEB 2005) for discussion of venue in condemnation (i.e., eminent domain) proceedings.

For discussion of venue in inverse condemnation actions brought by a landowner for injury to real property under CCP §392(a)(1), see §8.35. For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§800, 803, 879 (5th ed 2008). Counsel should keep in mind that, if the state is the defendant in an action for taking or damaging private property for public use, Govt C §955 provides that venue is proper in the county where the property is located. See §8.66.

§8.40 4. Property Situated in More Than One County

In actions governed by CCP §§392 and 872.110, venue is proper in the county where the land or some part of it is situated. If the property is situated in more than one county, the action may be brought in any of those counties. PG&E v Scott (1938) 10 C2d 581, 75 P2d 1054. If the action affects several parcels of property in different counties, venue is proper in any county where part of the property or any parcel is situated. Appel v Hubbard (1957) 155 CA2d 639, 318 P2d 164.

Like CCP §§392 and 872.110, CCP §1250.020(b) provides that, when property sought to be taken in an eminent domain proceeding is situated in more than one county, the action may be brought in any one of those counties.

C. Local Actions Not Involving Real Property

§8.41 1. Marital Dissolution Proceedings

Code of Civil Procedure §395(a) provides that marital dissolution proceedings must be tried in the superior court in the county in which either the petitioner or the respondent resided for three months immediately before commencement of the proceeding. See Fam C §2320. Annulment or legal separation proceedings may be brought in the county in which either the petitioner or the respondent resides at the commencement of the proceeding. CCP §395(a).

If the respondent is a resident of another county in the state when the proceedings commence, the court on motion may change the place of trial to the county of the respondent's residence if it promotes the ends of justice. CCP §397(e). See Henson v Superior Court (1963) 218 CA2d 327, 32 CR 404.

§8.42 2. Determination of Parental Relationship or to Enforce Support

In proceedings to enforce obligations of child support under Fam C §3900, the superior court in the county in which the child resides is the proper court for trial. CCP §395(a).

In actions to determine the existence or nonexistence of a parental relationship under Fam C §§7630-7634, the proper county for trial is the county where the child resides or is found; if the child is the subject of a pending or proposed adoption, either any county where an adoption agency to which the child has been or will be relinquished is located, or the county in which an office of the department or agency investigating the petition is located; or, if the father is deceased, where proceedings for probate of his estate have been or could be commenced. Fam C §7620(b); CCP §395(a).

Section 395(a) also provides that the county in which the child resides is the proper county for the trial of a proceeding to establish and enforce a foreign judgment or court order for the support of a minor child.

§8.43 3. Adoption

In proceedings for the adoption of a minor child, venue is proper in the county where the adopting parent resides or in the county in which the child was freed for adoption. Fam C §8714.

§8.44 4. Actions Against Public Officers

Subject to the court's power to transfer, actions against a "public officer or person especially appointed to execute the duties of a public officer, for an act done by the officer of person in virtue of the office; or against a person who, by the officer's command or in the officer's aid, does anything touching the duties of the officer," must be tried in the county where the cause, or some part of it, arose (i.e., where the act is enforced and has impact on the plaintiff). CCP §393(b). See Tharp v Superior Court (1982) 32 C3d 496, 186 CR 335; Cecil v Superior Court (1943) 59 CA2d 793, 140 P2d 125 (cause arose where business located when agency action affected right to carry on business). See also Stoneham v Rushen (1982) 137 CA3d 729, 188 CR 130 (cause arose in county where prison located because director's actions have effect there).

Section 393(b) applies only to affirmative acts that directly interfere with a plaintiff's personal or property rights, including writ proceedings against state officials and agencies (Tharp v Superior Court, supra). It does not apply to omissions or neglect of official duty (State Comm'n in Lunacy v Welch (1908) 154 C 775, 99 P 181; Comment to CCP §393) or to actions to prevent contemplated future acts (Bonestell, Richardson & Co. v Curry (1908) 153 C 418, 95 P 887; Harris v Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 197 CA2d 759, 18 CR 151). See Tharp v Superior Court, supra; Regents of Univ. of Cal. v Superior Court (1970) 3 C3d 529, 91 CR 57. Section 393(b) also applies to actions that seek to vindicate public rights. California State Parks Found. v Superior Court (2007) 150 CA4th 826, 833, 58 CR3d 715.

In an action against a state agency, department, institution, or other public entity for an official action, the entity itself is a "public officer" within the meaning of CCP §393(b) unless an administrative or enforcement officer is designated by statute. Tharp v Superior Court, supra; Regents of Univ. of Cal. v Superior Court, supra. See Sutter Union High Sch. Dist. v Superior Court (1983) 140 CA3d 795, 190 CR 182. For discussion of actions by or against state or local entities, see §§8.65-8.78.

§8.45 5. Actions for Recovery of Penalty or Forfeiture

Subject to the court's power to transfer, actions to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute must be tried in the county where the cause, or some part of it, arose. CCP §393(a). If the penalty is based on an offense committed on a lake, river, or other stream of water situated in two or more counties, the action also may be tried in a county bordering the body or stream of water "and opposite to the place where the offense was committed." CCP §393(a). This provision apparently precludes venue in a county significantly upstream or downstream from the place where the infraction occurred.

§8.46 6. Actions Against Executor, Administrator, Guardian, Conservator, or Trustee

Except as provided in Prob C §17005 (on trusts), when a defendant is sued in an official capacity as executor, administrator, guardian, conservator, or trustee on a claim for payment of money or recovery of personal property, the proper county for trial is the county with jurisdiction over the estate. CCP §395.1. Other actions against such persons are governed by normal venue rules. See Ramos v Cypher (1955) 137 CA2d 648, 290 P2d 585.

Actions involving living trusts must be brought in the county where the principal place of administration is located. Prob C §17005(a)(1). If the living trust has no trustee, the proper venue for bringing an action to appoint a trustee is the county where the trust property or some portion of it is located. Prob C §17005(b). The proper venue for actions involving testamentary trusts is the county where the decedent's estate is being administered or the county where the principal place of administration of the trust is located. Prob C §17005(a)(2). In cases not covered by Prob C §17005(a)-(b), the general rules governing venue apply. Prob C §17005(c).

§8.47 7. Actions for Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation

Actions seeking involuntary dissolution of a corporation must be brought in the superior court in the county where the corporation has its principal executive office. Capp Care, Inc. v Superior Court (1987) 195 CA3d 504, 241 CR 741. If the corporation has no such office in the state, the action must be brought in Sacramento. Corp C §§177, 1800.

V. VENUE IN MIXED ACTIONS

§8.48 A. When Situation Arises

Venue problems in civil actions frequently arise in the following situations:

- The complaint states a single cause of action but demands different types of relief, one regarded as local and the other as transitory, e.g., an action seeking damages and cancellation of a real property deed on the ground that it was procured by fraud.
- The complaint demands only one type of relief but the action contains both local and transitory elements, e.g., an action for damages for removal of fixtures from real property.

For discussion of these problems, see §§8.49-8.54.

The issue of venue can also be complicated when transitory and local causes of action are joined in one complaint (see §8.52), when public policy considerations determine venue (see §8.54), or when conflicting venue provisions apply to different causes of action in one complaint (see §8.53).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.49 B. Main Relief Rule

In a mixed action involving a single cause of action seeking different types or elements of relief, or in a case involving a demand for one type of relief containing both local and transitory elements, the court determines whether for venue purposes the action is local or transitory by examining the main relief sought or the "principal object" of the action.

Determining the main relief sought in a mixed action may be the most difficult analytical problem in the law of venue. Appellate decisions are not always consistent on the rules to follow or their application. Compare, e.g., Peiser v Mettler (1958) 50 C2d 594, 328 P2d 953 (action for damages for wrongful removal of fixtures from real property held transitory because severance of fixtures changed character of property from real to personal), with Wolfe v Wallace (1957) 154 CA2d 523, 316 P2d 697 (action for damages for destruction of scenic trees on plaintiff's land held local). Therefore, the attorney preparing a complaint in a mixed action and to whom venue is important should draft the complaint as carefully as possible to support the choice of venue.

§8.50 1. Main Relief Affects Rights in Ownership or Use of Real Property: Local

When the main relief sought by the complaint affects rights in ownership or use of real property, which is local in character (see §§8.31-8.40), the action is considered local even though the complaint also seeks incidental personal relief, i.e., damages. The following are examples of mixed actions in which courts have found that the main relief sought was local:

- Declaratory relief action regarding liability for injury to real property. See Standard Brands v Bryce (1934) 1 C2d 718, 37 P2d 446.
- Action to recover possession of land and for rents and profits. See State v Royal Consol. Mining Co. (1921) 187 C 343, 202 P 133.
- Action for negligence, breach of contract, and breach of warranty regarding sale of weed killer causing physical injury to land. See Stauffer Chem. Co. v Superior Court (1968) 265 CA2d 1, 71 CR 202.
- Action for damages and to quiet title to easement to roadway, all based on defendant's fraudulent misrepresentations that plaintiff would be permitted to use it. See Strosnider v Pomin (1939) 32 CA2d 103, 89 P2d 179.
- Complaint for declaratory judgment, incidentally seeking damages, for reformation of deed of trust. See Massae v Superior Court (1981) 118 CA3d 527, 173 CR 527.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.51 2. Main Relief Affects Personal Rights: Transitory

When the main relief sought affects personal (i.e., transitory) rights (see §§8.10-8.30), the action is transitory even though title or possession of real property is incidentally involved. An action involving real property will not automatically be considered local for venue purposes under the main relief rule. The following are examples of mixed actions in which courts have found that the main relief was transitory even though real property was involved:

- Allegedly fraudulent land sale in which plaintiff/buyer elected to affirm contract, retain land, and sue for damages even when buyer sought to have damages set off against purchase price of property. See Kaluzok v Brisson (1946) 27 C2d 760, 167 P2d 481.
- Action for money judgment for labor and materials furnished on construction site and to foreclose mechanics' lien. See Central Bank v Superior Court (1973) 30 CA3d 913, 106 CR 696.
- Action to set aside real property conveyances as having been made to defraud creditors. See Los Angeles City Sch. Dist. v Redwood Empire Title Co. (1962) 206 CA2d 398, 23 CR 662.
- Action by vendor for specific performance of land sale contract. See Work v Associated Almond Growers (1926) 76 CA 708, 245 P 790. But see Santa Barbara Lodge No. 605 v Penzner (1951) 104 CA2d 494, 231 P2d 595 (action is local if brought by vendee).
- Action for money due under contract of sale or under lease of real property (not considered local because interest in real property not at issue). See Hammon v American Exploration & Mining Co. (1962) 203 CA2d 306, 21 CR 409; Marcacci v Continental Baking Co. (1962) 202 CA2d 224, 20 CR 567.
- Action with primary purpose to cancel note and deed of trust on ground of fraud. See Nelson v Crocker Nat'l Bank (1975) 51 CA3d 536, 124 CR 229.
- Action on four counts, each seeking damages for removal of fixtures in violation of lease. See Peiser v Mettler (1958) 50 C2d 594, 328 P2d 953.
- Action by judgment creditor to set aside fraudulent transfer of real property (held not local under "main relief rule" because gist of action was fraud and setting aside conveyance was only incidental to establishing fraud). See Los Angeles City Sch. Dist. v Redwood Empire Title Co., supra.

C. Joinder of Causes of Action

§8.52 1. Transitory and Local

As a general rule in mixed actions, when two or more inconsistent venue provisions appear to apply to the same case, a motion for change of venue must be granted on the entire complaint if the defendant is entitled to a change of venue on any one cause of action. Capp Care, Inc. v Superior Court (1987) 195 CA3d 504, 241 CR 741. This general rule has been applied to allow a defendant to have the entire action transferred to his or her own county of residence when a local cause of action is joined with a transitory one. Peiser v Mettler (1958) 50 C2d 594, 328 P2d 953; Campbell v Nichols (1959) 167 CA2d 329, 334 P2d 618; Keithly v Lacey (1946) 77 CA2d 339, 175 P2d 235. The result in these cases is consistent with the historical purpose of the basic venue rules giving the defendant the right to have an action tried in the county of his or her residence. See §8.4.

The general rule has also been applied to permit transfer of the entire action when transitory causes of action were joined with a local cause of action for dissolution of a corporation governed by a specific venue provision. Capp Care, Inc. v Superior Court, supra. The court in Capp Care concluded that the local action was an exception to the general rule of preference for the county of a defendant's residence and allowed the defendant corporation to force a change of venue from the county of another defendant's residence to the county where venue was proper for dissolution of a corporation.

§8.53 2. Two Transitory Causes of Action

When the plaintiff unites in one complaint two transitory causes of action, one giving the defendant a right to trial in his or her county of residence while the other does not:

- A change of venue motion must be granted on the entire action if the defendant is entitled to a change of venue on any one cause of action.
- The defendant is entitled to have venue changed to his or her county of residence.

International Inv. Co. v Chagnon (1959) 170 CA2d 441, 339 P2d 147; Crofts & Anderson v Johnson (1950) 101 CA2d 418, 225 P2d 594. For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§882-888 (5th ed 2008). Even if there is only one cause of action but two counts stated, one giving the defendant the right to have the case tried in his or her county of residence, the court need not analyze the case under the "mixed action, main relief" rules, but as a case involving one transitory and one local cause of action. See, e.g., Johnson v Superior Court (1965) 232 CA2d 212, 42 CR 645.

When tort and contract causes of action are joined in one complaint, counsel must be aware of several possible venue problems. For example, if a defendant, either individual or corporate, has a right to a change of venue on the contract causes of action, the entire action can be transferred. Jhirmack Enters. v Superior Court (1979) 96 CA3d 715, 158 CR 192. Courts have not been consistent in characterizing actions as arising from tort or contract for venue purposes. Compare Williamson v Pacific Greyhound Lines (1944) 67 CA2d 250, 153 P2d 990 (tort action), with Justis v Atchison, T. & S.F. Ry. (1910) 12 CA 639, 108 P 328 (contract action). In Williamson, the court indicated that the test for venue is whether the gravamen of the action as determined by the complaint arises from the tort or from the contract. Williamson v Pacific Greyhound Lines (1944) 67 CA2d 250, 252, 153 P2d 990. Venue in such cases may be controllable through careful drafting of the complaint. See L.B. Labs. v Mitchell (1952) 39 C2d 56, 244 P2d 385. For further discussion, see §8.6.

§8.54 D. Public Policy Considerations

Public policy considerations relating to a special venue statute may override the general mixed action rules (providing for venue preference in the county of the defendant's residence and for transfer of the entire action if the defendant is entitled to transfer of any one cause of action) and require that a mixed action containing causes of action governed by conflicting venue provisions be maintained at the venue provided in the special statute. For example, in a mixed action alleging (1) claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Govt C §§12900-12996) and (2) claims for wrongful discharge and intentional infliction of emotional distress (governed by the general venue statute providing for venue in the county of the defendant's residence), the supreme court held that venue was controlled by the special FEHA venue provision of Govt C §12965(b). Brown v Superior Court (1984) 37 C3d 477, 208 CR 724. For discussion of Brown, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §886 (5th ed 2008).

VI. SPECIAL RULES FOR CORPORATIONS, ASSOCIATIONS, AND PARTNERSHIPS (CCP §395.5)

§8.55 A. Purpose of Statute

The purpose of the corporation venue statute is to give a plaintiff a wider choice of venue in suits against corporations than is permitted in suits against individuals. Smith v Stanford Research Inst. (1963) 212 CA2d 750, 28 CR 481 (discussing former Cal Const art XII, §16).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.56 B. Entities Governed by CCP §395.5

The provisions of CCP §395.5 apply to:

- Domestic corporations;
- Foreign corporations that have complied with the filing requirements of Corp C §2105 for corporations doing business in the state (Easton v Superior Court (1970) 12 CA3d 243, 90 CR 642); and
- Partnerships and unincorporated associations that have filed a statement with the Secretary of State listing their principal office in the state under Corp C §18200 (unincorporated associations) or Corp C §15800 (partnerships) (CCP §395.2; see Carruth v Superior Court (1978) 80 CA3d 215, 145 CR 344).

An association or a partnership may file a statement with the Secretary of State designating its principal place of business in California after the action is filed but before or simultaneously with filing a motion for change of venue and still come within the protection of CCP §395.5. San Francisco Found. v Superior Court (1984) 37 C3d 285, 208 CR 31 (referring to CCP §395.2).

The purpose of CCP §395.2 is to provide unincorporated associations with the same protection from forum shopping provided to corporations by limiting the plaintiff's venue choices. See Comment to CCP §395.2. CCP §395.2; 37 C3d at 297. If an unincorporated association or partnership fails to comply with CCP §395.2 and Corp C §18200 (unincorporated associations) or Corp C §15800 (partnerships), the plaintiff may forum shop and bring suit against the unincorporated association or partnership in any county in which any member of the association resides. See Comment to CCP §395.2.

The Corporate Filing Division, Corporate Status Section of the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento will state on the telephone whether a foreign corporation, partnership, or unincorporated association has filed a statement designating its principal office in the state.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.57 C. Entities and Actions Not Governed by CCP §395.5

§8.57 C. Entities and Actions Not Governed by CCP §395.5

A foreign corporation that has not filed a statement designating its principal office within the state as required by Corp C §2105 is not governed by CCP §395.5, and it may be sued in any county. Easton v Superior Court (1970) 12 CA3d 243, 90 CR 642.

An unincorporated association or partnership that has not filed a statement under Corp C §18200 (unincorporated associations) or Corp C §15800 (partnerships) is not governed by CCP §395.5, and it may be sued in the county of residence of any member of the association. Carruth v Superior Court (1978) 80 CA3d 215, 145 CR 344 (discussing former Corp C §24003, now Corp C §18200).

In both types of cases, the business entity may avoid the possibility of venue shopping by the plaintiff by filing a statement with the Secretary of State and thus coming under CCP §395.5. Note that although the filing requirements of Corp C §2105 (foreign corporations) and Corp C §15800 (partnerships) are mandatory, those of Corp C §18200 (unincorporated associations) are permissive.

An action seeking involuntary dissolution of a corporation is a local action governed by the specific venue statutes in Corp C §§177 and 1800, not by the general venue rules of CCP §395.5. Such an action must be brought in the county in which the corporation has its principal executive office. Capp Care, Inc. v Superior Court (1987) 195 CA3d 504, 241 CR 741.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.58 D. Where Plaintiff May Bring Action

§8.58 D. Where Plaintiff May Bring Action

Under CCP §395.5, corporations and associations may be sued in any of the following counties, subject to the court's power to change the place of trial:

- Where the contract is made or to be performed (see §8.59);
- Where the obligation or liability arises (see §8.61); or
- Where the principal place of business of the corporation or association is situated.

The principal place of business of a corporation is considered to be its residence for venue purposes. Hale v Bohannon (1952) 38 C2d 458, 472, 241 P2d 4; Hardin v San Jose City Lines (1951) 103 CA2d 688, 230 P2d 31.

See also Corp C §105 (corporations and associations may be sued as provided in the Code of Civil Procedure).

1. Contract Actions

§8.59 a. Where Contract Is Made

In actions against a corporation or an association based on a contract, the language of CCP §395.5 that permits venue "in the county where the contract is made" has the same effect as the language in CCP §395(a) that permits a contract action against an individual to be brought in the superior court in the county where the contract was entered into (see §§8.20-8.22). See 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §854 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.60 b. Where Contract Is to Be Performed

Unlike contract actions against individuals (see §§8.23-8.24), when venue in a contract action against a corporation or association is laid "in the county where the contract is to be performed," it is not necessary that the contract specify the place of performance. Anaheim Extrusion Co. v Superior Court (1985) 170 CA3d 1201, 216 CR 815. In Anaheim, an action for failure to pay for goods sold and delivered, the contract did not specify place of performance. The court held that payment was due at the place of performance. Extrinsic evidence of the intended place of performance will support a choice of venue in that place. Hale v Bohannon (1952) 38 C2d 458, 241 P2d 4. See Gallo v Boyle Mfg. Co. (1939) 35 CA2d 168, 94 P2d 1010 (action on contract calling for delivery "f.o.b. Modesto" held triable in Stanislaus County). For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§855-880 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.61 2. Tort Actions

Under CCP §395.5, tort actions may be brought in the county where the "obligation or liability arises," meaning the place where the wrongful act or breach of duty takes place. Mission Imports, Inc. v Superior Court (1982) 31 C3d 921, 184 CR 296. This venue rule is broader than that covering tort actions against individuals, which covers only tort actions for physical injury to persons or property, and death. See §8.29. Venue rules covering tort actions against corporations, on the other hand, extend also to actions for nonphysical injury. See, e.g., Sea World, Inc. v Superior Court (1970) 13 CA3d 100, 91 CR 336 (false imprisonment); Buck v James McClatchy Publ'g Co. (1930) 105 CA 248, 287 P 364 (libel).

When an action against a corporation or an association for personal injury or wrongful death is pleaded on an implied warranty theory, the courts consider the action to be a contract action for venue purposes. Thus, the plaintiff may have a broader choice of venue when the complaint is so framed than when it is framed as a tort action. Compare Pacific Air Lines, Inc. v Superior Court (1965) 231 CA2d 587, 42 CR 68 (tort theory), with Smith v Stanford Research Inst. (1963) 212 CA2d 750, 28 CR 481 (contract theory), both concerning wrongful death actions arising from airplane crashes.

§8.62 E. When and Where Defendant May Transfer Action

Under the venue options provided to a plaintiff by CCP §395.5, the plaintiff's choice is presumptively correct and the defendant corporation, association, or partnership has the burden of showing that it is improper on any ground. Mission Imports, Inc. v Superior Court (1982) 31 C3d 921, 184 CR 296; Shida v Japan Food Corp. (1960) 185 CA2d 443, 8 CR 271. If, for example, the complaint fails to allege that the suit is on a contract made or to be performed in another county or that the obligation or liability arose or the breach occurred in another county, a defendant governed by CCP §395.5 is entitled to have an action against it transferred. Lake v Wyatt Earp Enters. (1962) 210 CA2d 366, 26 CR 683; Clary v Basalt Rock Co. (1950) 99 CA2d 458, 222 P2d 24.

The defendant is limited, however, to having venue transferred only to its county of residence and not to another county where it could have been sued under CCP §395.5. Beutke v American Sec. Co. (1955) 132 CA2d 354, 282 P2d 201. The court in Beutke noted that former Cal Const art XII, §16, now CCP §395.5, is "for the benefit of the plaintiff and does not give the defendant corporation the same rights." 132 CA2d at 361.

§8.63 F. Multiple Defendants

When an individual and a corporation, association, or partnership governed by CCP §395.5 are joined as defendants and the plaintiff sues in a county where neither defendant resides but that is one of the places in which a corporation or association may be sued under §395.5, the individual defendant may obtain a change of venue to the county where he or she resides. Carruth v Superior Court (1978) 80 CA3d 215, 145 CR 344 (partnership). If an individual defendant and a business entity are joined as defendants and the action is brought in the county where an individual defendant resides, venue is proper and none of the defendants is entitled to a change of venue. See Buran Equip. Co. v Superior Court (1987) 190 CA3d 1662, 236 CR 171.

If, however, the suit is brought in the county of residence of the defendant entity governed by CCP §395.5, the preference for venue at the defendant's place of residence is met and an individual defendant cannot change venue to the county of his or her residence. See Mosby v Superior Court (1974) 43 CA3d 219, 226, 117 CR 588 (dictum). Furthermore, a §395.5 defendant does not have standing to assert the right of a codefendant individual to change venue to the county of the individual defendant's residence. Easton v Superior Court (1970) 12 CA3d 243, 90 CR 642.

For general discussion of transitory actions triable in county of any defendant's residence when there are multiple defendants, see §8.12. For discussion of venue when business entity and governmental entity are joined as defendants, see §8.77.

§8.64 G. Multiple Causes of Action: Mixed Action Rule Applies

Just as in actions against individual defendants (see §8.63), if venue is not proper as to all causes of action, a CCP §395.5 defendant may have the action transferred. Jhirmack Enters. v Superior Court (1979) 96 CA3d 715, 158 CR 192 (Shasta County corporation, sued in Santa Barbara County in complaint containing contract and tort causes of action, entitled to have entire action transferred to Shasta, where contract was made, to be performed, and breached, even though tort occurred in Santa Barbara).

VII. SPECIAL RULES FOR GOVERNMENT ENTITIES (CCP §394, Govt C §955)

A. State as Defendant

§8.65 1. Venue in Sacramento County

With certain statutory exceptions (discussed in §§8.66-8.70), when the state is a defendant it has a right to have the action brought in or transferred to Sacramento County. Govt C §955. If the action is not brought in Sacramento County, the Attorney General may, by written demand made on or before answering, force the action to be transferred to Sacramento County. Govt C §955. The types of actions governed by Govt C §955 include actions on contracts or for torts other than those for injury to person or property that are governed by Govt C §955.2.

2. Exceptions to Applicability of Govt C §955

§8.66 a. Inverse Condemnation

In actions against the state for taking or damaging private property for public use, the proper county for trial is the county where the property is situated. Govt C §955. See §8.35 on venue of actions for inverse condemnation for injury to real property under CCP §392(a)(1).

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.67 b. Personal Injury or Death; Injury to Property

The proper county for trial of actions against the state for injury or death to any person or personal property is the county where the injury occurred or the injury causing death occurred. Govt C §955.2. If the action is filed in a different county, the court must grant the state's motion to change venue to the county where the injury or injury causing death occurred. This is true even if there are multiple defendants and only one of them is the state or a state agency. State v Superior Court (Fuller) (1967) 252 CA2d 637, 60 CR 653; State v Superior Court (Vincent) (1965) 238 CA2d 691, 48 CR 156. If, however, the action is brought initially in the county where the injury occurred, the court in that county has discretion to transfer the action only "under the same circumstances as the place of trial may be changed where an action is between private parties." Govt C §955.2. See State v Superior Court (Clark) (1987) 193 CA3d 328, 238 CR 315.

In addition to the discretionary change of venue when the action is brought in the county where the injury occurred under Govt C §955.2, special venue provisions in other statutes may control over §955.2. See, e.g., Hatcher v California State Univ. (1983) 146 CA3d Supp 1, 194 CR 756 (venue provision (CC §1798.49) in Information Practices Act of 1977 (CC §§1798-1798.78), which permits action in county in which complainant resides, controls over Govt C §955.2, which is limited to "certain" tort actions (see Comment to Govt C §955.2)).

§8.68 c. Action by City, County, or Local Agency Against State

When a city, county, or local agency is the plaintiff in an action against the state, the action may be tried in any city or county where the local entity is situated. Govt C §955.3. Before answering, however, the Attorney General may move to change venue to Sacramento County under CCP §397. Govt C §955.3. For discussion of CCP §397, see chap 20.

§8.69 d. State Agency Considered Public Officer

In some instances, a state agency is considered a "public officer" within the meaning of CCP §393(b), and actions against it are therefore triable where the cause of action or some part of it arose. Regents of Univ. of Cal. v Superior Court (1970) 3 C3d 529, 91 CR 57. See Tharp v Superior Court (1982) 32 C3d 496, 186 CR 335. For discussion of venue in actions against public officers, see §8.44.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.70 e. Actions Against State or State Agency

§8.70 e. Actions Against State or State Agency

To alleviate the hardship that can result from Govt C §955 and other statutes providing that actions against the state or a state agency may or must be brought in Sacramento County, CCP §401(1) provides that such actions against the state or a state agency may be brought in any county or city and county in which the Attorney General has an office, i.e., Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego. The courts have broadly construed the language of CCP §401(1) that the proceeding may or must be brought in Sacramento "[w]henever it is provided by any law of this State" to mean that the proceeding may be brought where the Attorney General has an office. See, e.g., discussion in Harris v Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Bd. (1961) 197 CA2d 759, 18 CR 151.

The effect of CCP §401 is that in actions against the state or a state agency other than for inverse condemnation or personal and property injury and wrongful death, the question is whether the state may "by any law" (CCP §401(1)) remove the action to Sacramento. If it can, §401(1) provides that venue is proper wherever the Attorney General maintains an office, i.e., Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego. If it cannot, venue is governed by the statutory provisions governing other parties.

Unlike CCP §401(1), Govt C §955 applies only to actions against the state and not to those against state agencies. Therefore, unless some other provision of law permits or requires trial in Sacramento (see, e.g., Rev & T C §9173 relating to actions against State Board of Equalization to recover use fuel tax refunds), venue options granted to the plaintiff by CCP §401(1) do not apply to actions against state agencies. Venue in such cases is governed by ordinary venue rules. Regents of Univ. of Cal. v Superior Court (1970) 3 C3d 529, 91 CR 57. The residence of a state agency is the county in which the agency's principal office is situated. Gallup v Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. (1915) 171 C 71, 151 P 1142. A state agency that is considered a public officer for venue purposes is governed by CCP §393(b). See §8.44.

§8.71 B. State or State Agency as Plaintiff

Whenever the state or a state agency may bring an action in Sacramento County, under any applicable venue statute, the court must, on the motion of any defendant, transfer the action to the county where the Attorney General has an office nearest to the county in which the defendants or some of them reside or have their principal office in the state. CCP §401(2).

C. City, County, or Local Agency

§8.72 1. The Removal Statute (CCP §394)

Actions by or against a city, county, or local agency are governed by CCP §394, which is not a venue statute but a removal statute designed mainly to avoid local prejudice by permitting the transfer of those actions to a neutral county for trial. Garrett v Superior Court (1974) 11 C3d 245, 113 CR 152. See Colusa Air Pollution Control Dist. v Superior Court (1991) 226 CA3d 880, 889, 277 CR 110, which notes that §394 cannot be used to obtain removal to the county in which a defendant local agency "resides" and that CCP §395(a) does not authorize a nonresident defendant to obtain a change of venue even if a resident defendant joins in the motion. On the definition of "local agency," see Golden Gate Bridge Highway & Transp. Dist. v Superior Court (2004) 125 CA4th 177, 22 CR3d 558 (Golden Gate Bridge District is local agency under CCP §394); Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 259, 131 CR 231 (Bay Area Rapid Transit District is "local agency" under §394); Garrett v Superior Court, supra (county flood control and water conservation district is "local agency" under §394). See also Marin Community College Dist. v Superior Court (1977) 72 CA3d 719, 140 CR 310 (community college district is local agency within county for purposes of determining venue under §394).

When an action or a proceeding is one in which there is no right to a jury, or when the right to a jury is waived, in lieu of transferring the matter, the court may ask the chair of the Judicial Council to assign a disinterested judge from a neutral county to hear the case. CCP §394(a). In Brennan v Superior Court (1994) 30 CA4th 454, 35 CR2d 693, the court ruled that assigning a neutral judge satisfies CCP §394 even if a plaintiff other than the governmental entity has a right to a jury trial. Other plaintiffs are subject to the general rule setting venue in the defendant's county of residence, and their right to a jury trial is irrelevant under CCP §324. Brennan v Superior Court, supra.

The provisions of CCP §394 are not jurisdictional and may be waived by failure to move for a change of venue in a reasonable time. Ventura Unified Sch. Dist. v Superior Court (2001) 92 CA4th 811, 814, 112 CR2d 260 (defendant did not waive right to change venue by filing change of venue motion within 30 days after second public entity defendant, which was in different county, settled out of the case). However, a party's right to request removal under CCP §394 cannot be waived by contract. Arntz Builders v Superior Court (2004) 122 CA4th 1195, 19 CR3d 346 (clause containing express waiver of rights under CCP §394 not enforceable). If the county is a sole defendant and moves timely, transfer is mandatory. Delgado v Superior Court (1977) 74 CA3d 560, 141 CR 528.

The removal statute operates only after an action is filed in a proper county under ordinary venue rules. A plaintiff suing a city, county, or local agency may not initially elect to file the complaint in a neutral county. County of Riverside v Superior Court (1968) 69 C2d 828, 73 CR 386; County of San Bernardino v Superior Court (1994) 30 CA4th 378, 35 CR2d 760; Sutter Union High Sch. Dist. v Superior Court (1983) 140 CA3d 795, 797, 190 CR 182.

Although the courts are split on whether CCP §394 applies to cross-complainants and cross-defendants, the majority favor a more liberal interpretation of CCP §394. In City of Chico v Superior Court (1979) 89 CA3d 187, 152 CR 380, the First District Court of Appeal held that §394 does not apply when a city is named only as a cross-defendant in a cross-complaint seeking indemnity and contribution, because the statute only uses the words "plaintiff" and "defendant," not "cross-complainant" and "cross-defendant." The Third District Court of Appeal concluded that City of Chico was incorrectly decided and held that §394 should be liberally construed to promote its policy of guarding against local prejudices, and that the terms "plaintiff" and "defendant" include "cross-complainant" and "cross-defendant." Ohio Cas. Ins. Group v Superior Court (1994) 30 CA4th 444, 35 CR2d 771.

In Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc. v Superior Court (2000) 80 CA4th 948, 954, 95 CR2d 817, the First District Court of Appeal also declined to follow City of Chico (decided by another division of the first district), concluding that Ohio Cas. Ins. Group was more consistent with the court's view that §394 "should receive a liberal construction that will promote rather than frustrate the policy behind the law." Finally, in Metropolitan Transit Sys. v Superior Court (2007) 153 CA4th 293, 296, 62 CR3d 517, the Fourth District Court of Appeal followed both Ohio Cas. Ins. Group and Kennedy/Jenks Consultants, Inc., and held that a cross-defendant may bring a motion under CCP §394 after a local agency has brought a compulsory cross-complaint against plaintiff.

§8.73 a. Exception: Injury to Person or Property

An action by a private plaintiff against a city, county, or local agency for negligent injury to person or property occurring in the city or county where the agency is located must be tried in that city or county. CCP §394. See County of Orange v Superior Court (1999) 73 CA4th 1189, 86 CR2d 923 (defendant entitled to change of venue to county where actual injuries occurred when plaintiff, mistakenly arrested on bench warrant and imprisoned in one county, sued second county, which had only issued the bench warrant).

A plaintiff may defeat this rule, however, by joining with the governmental defendant an individual defendant who resides in another county and by bringing suit in that county. Channell v Superior Court (1964) 226 CA2d 246, 38 CR 13. In Delgado v Superior Court (1977) 74 CA3d 560, 141 CR 528, however, in which a local entity was one of many defendants, including a business entity defendant, the court concluded that transfer under CCP §394 was mandatory and that the general venue provisions of CCP §395, as amended after the decision in Channell, applied only if no other venue statute applied. Delgado was followed in Central Contra Costa Sanitary Dist. v Superior Court (1978) 84 CA3d 702, 148 CR 801. Both Delgado and Central Contra Costa questioned the Channell decision. Code of Civil Procedure §394 does not require removal to the county of the public entity's location of a cross-claim against the entity for breach of contract, indemnity, or contribution. Tutor-Saliba-Perini Joint Venture v Superior Court (1991) 233 CA3d 736, 743, 285 CR 1.

© The Regents of the University of California

b. Effect of Removal Provisions of CCP §394: Specific Situations

§8.74 (1) Action Commenced Where Plaintiff Resides or Does Business

When a nonnegligence action against a city, county, or local agency is commenced in the county where a plaintiff resides or is doing business, CCP §394 requires a transfer to a neutral county on motion by a defendant. See Finance & Constr. Co. v City of Sacramento (1928) 204 C 491, 269 P 167. The transferee county may be stipulated to by the parties. CCP §394(a).

In contrast, if the action is improperly commenced in a neutral county, the defendant local entity may have the case removed to the defendant's county of residence or to another county proper under the general venue statutes. Skidmore v County of Solano (1954) 128 CA2d 391, 275 P2d 613. The result is anomalous: A plaintiff who wants a trial in a neutral county should commence the action in the plaintiff's own county and not in a neutral county or in a county proper under the general venue statutes.

§8.75 (2) Entity Sues Individual Nonresidents or Corporation Not Doing Business Within County

Although a city, county, or local agency may sue its residents in the city or county (County of Nevada v Phillips (1952) 111 CA2d 428, 244 P2d 495), under CCP §394 an action against a nonresident defendant must be transferred to a neutral county on motion of either party. McCarthy v Superior Court (1987) 191 CA3d 1023, 236 CR 833; City of Oakland v Darbee (1951) 102 CA2d 493, 227 P2d 909 (each nonresident defendant has right to transfer, even if action must be severed). This is true even if suit is filed in the proper county under a specific venue statute.

Corporate defendants who are not "doing business" in the county where suit is filed may obtain a transfer to a neutral county under CCP §394. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v Superior Court (1976) 17 C3d 259, 131 CR 231. A corporation is "doing business" within the meaning of §394 only if its activities "are substantial enough that the corporation can reasonably be viewed as being intimately identified with the affairs or closely associated with the people of the community." 17 C3d at 271.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/8 Venue/§8.76 (3) Condemnation Proceedings

§8.76 (3) Condemnation Proceedings

Code of Civil Procedure §394 modifies ordinary venue rules in condemnation proceedings. The following are examples of situations in which §394 applies:

- The defendant's land is located in the county of the private defendant's residence; the plaintiff county or city may remove the case to a neutral county. City of Stockton v Ellingwood (1926) 78 CA 117, 121, 248 P 272.
- A city sues to condemn land in its own county; the private defendant may remove the case to a neutral county. City of Long Beach v Lakewood Park (1953) 118 CA2d 596, 258 P2d 538.

For further discussion, see 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §879 (5th ed 2008).

§8.77 2. Multiple Defendants

There is some uncertainty about the applicability of CCP §394 when multiple defendants are sued and only one is a local entity. The court in Channell v Superior Court (1964) 226 CA2d 246, 38 CR 13, (1) applied the general rule under CCP §395 that, when there are multiple defendants, venue is proper in the county of any defendant's residence, and (2) held that this rule is not altered by §394. In Delgado v Superior Court (1977) 74 CA3d 560, 141 CR 528, however, in which a local entity was one of many defendants, including a business entity defendant, the court concluded that transfer under CCP §394 was mandatory and that the general venue provisions of CCP §395, as amended after the decision in Channell, applied only if no other venue statute applied. Delgado was followed in Central Contra Costa Sanitary Dist. v Superior Court (1978) 84 CA3d 702, 148 CR 801. Both Delgado and Contra Costa questioned the Channell decision.

© The Regents of the University of California

§8.78 3. Multiple Causes of Action

A defendant who has a right to change venue to a neutral county under CCP §394 as to one cause of action but not to other causes of action may have the entire action removed to a neutral county. Morrison v Superior Court (1980) 100 CA3d 852, 161 CR 169. The court in Morrison relied on the settled rule that a motion for change of venue must be granted on all causes of action if the defendant is entitled to a change of venue on any one.

- Claims that must be presented to public entities before governmental agencies or their employees may be sued. See §§9.3-9.30.
- Notices, certificates, and applications that are required before bringing a lawsuit against a professional. See §§9.31-9.37.
- Claims against decedents' estates that may be a prerequisite to suit. See §§9.38-9.51.
- The need for, and procedures to appoint, guardians ad litem. See §§9.52-9.75.
- Forms for use under these procedures. See §§9.76-9.95.

On notice of suit that must be given by an employee to the employer and by an employer to an employee when either sues a third party whose fault caused the employee to be injured on the job, see California Workers' Damages Practice §§3.30-3.31 (2d ed Cal CEB 2001).

Creditor's claims and suits on claims are discussed in greater detail in 1 California Decedent Estate Practice, chap 12 (Cal CEB 1986).

§9.2 B. Governing Law

Claims for monetary damages against public entities are governed by the Government Claims Act (formerly known as the Tort Claims Act) (Govt C §§810-998.3). City of Stockton v Superior Court (2007) 42 C4th 730, 741, 68 CR3d 295. Statutes governing suing certain professionals are the following:

- Notice to health care provider before filing a medical malpractice suit. CCP §364.
- Certificates of merit in professional negligence suit against architect, engineer, or land surveyor. CCP §411.35.
- Leave to sue unpaid officer or director of nonprofit corporation. CCP §425.15.

Claims against estates are governed by CCP §§377.20 and 377.40-377.43. Guardians ad litem are governed by CCP §372.

II. CLAIMS AGAINST PUBLIC ENTITIES

A. Presenting Claim as Prerequisite to Suit

§9.3 1. Requirements; Definition of Public Entity

A California public entity may sue or be sued. Govt C §945. With limited exceptions, no suit for money or damages may be brought against a public entity unless a timely claim has been presented to the entity and has either been acted on by the entity's governing board or rejected by operation of law. Govt C §945.4. The claims presentation requirement applies to both contracts and torts. City of Stockton v Superior Court (2007) 42 C4th 730, 740, 68 CR3d 295. See Govt C §905.2(a)(3).

The purpose of the claims statute is to allow public entities to investigate claims while the facts are fresh and to decide whether to settle them or incur the cost of litigation. Jenkins v County of Contra Costa (1985) 167 CA3d 152, 213 CR 126.

The term "public entity" includes the state of California, the Regents of the University of California, a county, city district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision or public corporation of California. Govt C §811.2.

Detailed discussion of liability, immunities, defenses, and procedures can be found in California Government Tort Liability Practice (4th ed Cal CEB 1999) and California Tort Guide, chap 8 (3d ed Cal CEB 1996).

§9.4 2. Exceptions

Certain claims are exempted by Govt C §§905-905.6 (e.g., claims by public employees for wages). A claim exempted by Govt C §905 that is not expressly governed by any other statutes or regulations is governed by procedures prescribed in charters, ordinances, or regulations adopted by the local public entity. Govt C §935.

A state agency or local public entity can create its own claims procedures in any written agreement to which it is a party. Contractual claims procedures are limited to claims "arising out of or related to the agreement" (Govt C §§930, 930.2); they supersede the claims procedures of the Government Claims Act and provide the exclusive claims procedures for applicable claims (Govt C §930.4). See Antz Builders v City of Berkeley (2008) 166 CA4th 276, 82 CR3d 605.

Certain statutory causes of actions that have their own unique exhaustion requirements, such as those under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Govt C §§12900-12996) may also be exempt from the filing requirements of the Government Claims Act (formerly known as the Tort Claims Act). Snipes v City of Bakersfield (1983) 145 CA3d 861, 193 CR 760.

The Government Claims Act does not apply to causes of action arising under federal law, and compliance with the claims statutes is not required. Williams v Horvath (1976) 16 C3d 834, 842, 129 CR 453. Although a plaintiff seeking relief under 42 USC §1983 is not required to comply with the state claims procedures as a condition of asserting the federal claims, when state and federal causes of action are pendently joined, the state claims procedures must be followed to avoid dismissal of the state claims.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.5 3. Effect of Failure to Comply

The claims statutes are in effect statutes of limitation. A civil action filed against a public entity without compliance with applicable claims requirements is subject to dismissal or to a motion for summary judgment. See Lewis v City & County of San Francisco (1971) 21 CA3d 339, 98 CR 407 (action dismissed after failure to amend complaint following sustained demurrer); Petersen v City of Vallejo (1968) 259 CA2d 757, 66 CR 776 (motion for summary judgment granted); Ruffino v City of Los Angeles (1964) 226 CA2d 67, 37 CR 765 (motion for summary judgment granted).

Compliance with the claims statutes must be alleged in the complaint as well as proved at trial. A complaint against a public entity that fails to affirmatively allege compliance with claim presentation requirements does not state a cause of action and is demurrable. State v Superior Court (Bodde) (2004) 32 C4th 1234, 1243, 13 CR3d 534 ("plaintiff must allege facts demonstrating or excusing compliance with the claim presentation requirements. Otherwise, his complaint is subject to a general demurrer for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.").

§9.6 4. Claims Against Public Employees

Simply being a public officer or employee, whether elected, appointed, or hired, does not insulate a person from suit. Govt C §820. On public employees' liability generally, see Govt C §§820-822.2.

NOTE: Restrictions on the civil liability of public employees do not apply to persons who were acting as independent contractors. Govt C §810.2. See Govt C §815.4.

A cause of action against a public employee for injury resulting from an act or omission in the scope of employment is barred if an action against the employing public entity would have been barred because of the plaintiff's failure to present a written claim or failure to commence the action within the time specified in Govt C §945.6. Govt C §950.2. A cause of action against a public employee is not barred, however, if the plaintiff pleads and proves that he or she did not know or have reason to know the identity of the employee within the period for the presentation of a claim. Govt C §950.4.

A person wishing to maintain an action against a public officer or employee must:

- Present a timely claim against the public entity even though the entity may be immune from liability and plead the claim's presentation and rejection (Govt C §950.2);
- Plead and prove that he or she did not know or have reason to know that the injury was caused by an act or omission of a public entity or employee (Govt C §950.4); or
- Be prepared to show that the act causing the injury was not within the scope of the defendant's public employment (Hopper v Allen (1968) 266 CA2d 797, 72 CR 435 (defamation action dismissed for failure to show that defendant police chief was acting beyond scope of authority); Miller v Hoagland (1966) 247 CA2d 57, 55 CR 311 (demurrer sustained in action for fraudulent misrepresentations because complaint on its face showed that defendant city attorney was acting within scope of employment).

§9.7 5. Claims Against Judicial Branch Entities or Judges

The Judicial Council may act on the claim against a judicial branch entity or a judge of one of those entities, as defined (Govt C §900.3), in accordance with the procedures that it will provide by rule of court (Govt C §912.7). As such, the Judicial Council may adjust and pay any claim arising from the activities of a judicial branch entity or judge. Govt C §935.8. A "judicial branch entity" is a public entity and means any superior court, court of appeal, the California Supreme Court, the Judicial Council, or the Administrative Office of the Courts. Govt C §900.3. There are specified means of presentation and service of a claim. See Govt C §915(c)-(d).

In addition to its power in acting on claims, the Judicial Council is authorized to settle, adjust, or compromise any pending action arising from the activities of a judicial branch entity or judge. Govt C §948.1; see Govt C §§965(c), 965.6(c). Special provisions govern service. See Govt C §955.9. The Controller is authorized to draw a warrant for payment of any final judgment or settlement based on claims arising from the activities of a judicial branch entity. Govt C §965.2(b). The Administrative Officer of the Courts must report to the Judicial Council any action that the Administrative Office of the Courts takes or proposes to take to prevent future occurrences similar to those on which the claim was based. Govt C §965.65(b).

§9.8 B. Identifying Public Entity

A plaintiff's attorney must determine whether any potential defendant is a public entity (see §9.3 for definition) or was acting as a public entity employee. Under Govt C §53051, a public agency, any public entity other than the state, a city, a county, or a city and county (Govt C §53050) is required, within 70 days after its establishment, to file its name and address and the names and addresses of its governing board members with the Secretary of State and the county clerk of each county in which the agency maintains an office. Changes must be filed within 10 days. The Secretary of State must maintain this information as a public record. Govt C §53051(c). If the public agency does not file this information, a claimant's noncompliance with the claims requirement is not a bar or defense to a suit against that public entity. See §9.5.

WARNING: Counsel must be wary of the potential defendant that is a subdivision of a public entity. In Hovd v Hayward Unified Sch. Dist. (1977) 74 CA3d 470, 141 CR 527, the court held that a vocational skills center was not a public agency within the meaning of Govt C §§53050-53051 but rather was a subdivision of a public entity. Thus, the center was not required to comply with §53051; the plaintiff's action was barred for failure to file a timely claim with the entity.

C. Drafting the Claim

§9.9 1. Contents

A written claim may be prepared by filling in a printed form, if one is provided by the public entity, or by drafting a paper that contains all the elements required by Govt C §910 (see attorney-drafted form in §9.76):

- The claimant's name and post office address;
- The post office address to which the person presenting the claim desires notices to be sent;
- The date, place, and circumstances giving rise to the claim;
- A general description of the indebtedness, obligation, injury, damage, or loss claimed as of the date of the claim;
- The name(s) of the public employee(s) responsible for the loss;
- If the claim is under $10,000, the amount claimed for current and prospective damages and the method of computation; and
- If the claim exceeds $10,000, no dollar amount need be stated; however, the claim must indicate whether it would be a limited civil case (on limited civil cases, see chap 6).

WARNING: A complaint against a public entity may be demurrable if the facts alleged in the complaint do not substantially correspond to those stated in the "date, place, and circumstances" portion of the claim form. See Loehr v Ventura County Community College Dist. (1983) 147 CA3d 1071, 195 CR 576. Similarly, failure to adequately describe the nature of the injury or loss claimed can preclude recovery for the specific loss. For example, a claim for diminution in property value was held to be insufficient to support a claim for physical injury or emotional distress in State ex rel Dep't of Transp. v Superior Court (1984) 159 CA3d 331, 205 CR 518. But see Connelly v County of Fresno (2006) 146 CA4th 29, 40, 52 CR3d 720 (claim that alleged "Unspecified Medical, Lost Income, future Medical" substantially complied with claim presentation requirement).

The document submitted as a claim should be identifiable as a claim on its face.

WARNING: Submitting a letter requesting damages and threatening suit does not constitute compliance with the claims statute. Loehr, 147 CA3d at 1083. Similarly, counsel cannot rely on such papers as, e.g., a notice of intention to sue for medical negligence (see §§9.31-9.32) to constitute the filing of a claim. In Lutz v Tri-City Hosp. (1986) 179 CA3d 807, 813, 224 CR 787, the court held that a notice of intention to commence an action against a local hospital district based on the district's alleged professional negligence did not constitute the filing of a claim against the hospital district. Conversely, presenting a claim to a public hospital does not satisfy the "notice of intention to sue" requirements of CCP §364 and does not extend the 1-year statute of limitations for defendant physicians or health care providers who are not employees of the public entity.

§9.10 2. Printed Forms Provided by Entities

Some public entities supply printed claim forms. The California Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board (formerly known as State Board of Control), for example, supplies forms that must be used for claims against the state or a judicial branch entity. Use of the forms is not optional; a claimant must use the form supplied by the board in order for the claim to meet the requirements of Govt C §910 (content of claim) and §910.2 (signature on claim). Govt C §910.4.

PRACTICE TIP: Claimants should be careful to use required forms; a claim against the state or a judicial branch entity that is submitted without using the required form may be returned, although the claim may be resubmitted using the proper form. See Govt C §910.4.

See also the attorney-drafted form in §9.76.

D. Time and Mode of Presentation

§9.11 1. Deadline for Filing Claim

Claims for death or injury to persons, personal property, or growing crops must be presented to the public entity within 6 months after the cause of action accrues; all other claims must be filed within 1 year. Govt C §911.2. There are special rules for determining the commencement date of a claim presented to the California Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board. See Govt C §911.2(b). See California Government Tort Liability Practice §6.13A (4th ed Cal CEB 1999).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.12 2. Accrual of Cause of Action

A claim against a public entity is deemed to accrue on the date that would otherwise be used in determining the timeliness of a cause of action of the same type under the applicable statute of limitations, except that a claim for equitable indemnity accrues on the date the defendant is served with the complaint giving rise to the claim for equitable indemnity against the public entity, rather than on the date on which an adverse judgment is entered. Govt C §901.

NOTE: If the date on which the cause of action accrued is in dispute, the entity cannot, by rejecting the claim as untimely without considering the merits, deny a claimant the right to a jury trial on the disputed issue. When the claim on its face alleges facts that, if true, indicate that the claim was filed in a timely fashion, the public entity's rejection must be treated as a rejection on the merits and not as a denial of permission to file a late claim. Scott v County of Los Angeles (1977) 73 CA3d 476, 140 CR 785.

An injured employee's timely filing of a claim against a public entity is sufficient to satisfy the claim requirement for the employer or workers' compensation carrier that seeks reimbursement for benefits paid to the employee. The carrier may intervene in the employee's suit without filing a separate claim against the public entity. San Diego Unified Port Dist. v Superior Court (1988) 197 CA3d 843, 243 CR 163.

No additional claim is required to be filed by an insurance carrier that is subrogated to the rights of its insured if the insured has properly complied with the claims procedures. Smith v Parks Manor (1987) 197 CA3d 872, 243 CR 256.

§9.13 3. Amended Claims

A claim may be amended any time before expiration of the period designated in Govt C §911.2 (see §9.11) or before final action on it is taken by the public entity, whichever is later. If the claim as amended relates to the same transaction or occurrence that gave rise to the original claim, the amended claim is considered part of the original claim for all purposes. Govt C §910.6.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.14 4. Presenting the Claim: Method; Date

A claim is "presented" to a local public entity by delivery or mail to the clerk, secretary, or auditor of the entity, or to the governing board at its principal office, and to the state by delivery or mail to the State Board of Control. Govt C §915. There are, however, special requirements for presenting a claim against a judicial branch entity. See Govt C §915(c)-(d). The time of presentation is the date of mailing, not of receipt. See Govt C §915.2.

Any period of notice and any duty to respond after receipt of service of a claim, amendment, application, or notice is extended 5 days on service by mail, if the place of address is within the state of California, 10 days if the place of address is within the United States, and 20 days if the place of address is outside the United States. Proof of mailing may be made in the manner prescribed by CCP §1013a. Govt C §915.2.

PRACTICE TIP: Because disputes can arise over issues of mailing, counsel often prefer to present a claim by delivery or certified mail.

To determine the appropriate address of the entity, consult the Roster of Public Agencies maintained by the Secretary of State or the county clerk. See Govt C §53051.

WARNING: Delivering or mailing a claim to the wrong entity is not substantial compliance with the claims statute. A claimant who has otherwise been diligent should request relief under the late claim provisions of the Government Claims Act (formerly known as the Tort Claims Act). See Govt C §§911.3-912.2, 946.6. Bettencourt v Los Rios Community College Dist. (1986) 42 C3d 270, 228 CR 190. See Draper v City of Los Angeles (1990) 52 C3d 502, 276 CR 864.

§9.15 5. Claimant Charged With Crime

Persons charged with criminal offenses are prohibited from bringing civil actions against public entities or employees for money damages while their charges are pending. The time for filing suit following the denial of the claim is tolled. Any applicable statute of limitations for filing and prosecuting these actions is tolled during the period that the charges are pending before a superior court. However, the time for filing a claim is not extended. Govt C §945.3.

E. Entity Responses to Claims

§9.16 1. Acceptance; Denial; Rejection; Return; No Action

A public entity has 45 days to either accept or reject a claim. See Govt C §912.4. The entity may:

- Accept and pay the claim;
- Deny the claim on its merits (Govt C §913);
- Reject and return the claim as untimely (Govt C §911.3);
- Return the claim for failure to comply with the requirements of Govt C §910; or
- Allow 45 days to elapse without giving notice of action on the claim, in which case it is deemed to have been rejected (Govt C §914.4(c)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.17 2. Notice of Rejection

The entity is required to give written notice of the rejection of a claim, warning the claimant of the 6-month statute of limitations on filing suit after rejection and advising that the claimant may seek an attorney. Govt C §913(b). An entity's failure to deliver or mail a timely notice of rejection has the effect of extending the statute of limitations for filing suit against the entity to 2 years after the date on which the cause of action accrued. Govt C §945.6(a)(2).

A notice by the entity indicating that it is not ruling on the claim, but is denying leave to present a late claim, is not a notice of rejection. See Wheeler v County of San Bernardino (1978) 76 CA3d 841, 143 CR 295, in which the plaintiff presented a timely claim, and the county, instead of ruling on that claim, rejected it as untimely. The county was estopped from relying on the plaintiff's failure to file an action within 6 months. Even if the notice were construed to be a notice of rejection, the county's consistent and erroneous contention that the plaintiff had failed to file a timely claim encouraged the plaintiff to file a petition for late claim relief, instead of filing suit. "If the county had acknowledged the claim as having been timely presented and sent a notice expressly rejecting the claim, we have no reason to doubt that suit would have been filed within six months." 76 CA3d at 848.

In another case, the claim rejection letter did not specify the date on which it was mailed. An allegation that the rejection was mailed "on or about" a date 6 months and 1 day before the filing of the complaint raised an issue of proof regarding the 6-month period that could not be resolved on demurrer. Childs v State (1983) 144 CA3d 155, 192 CR 526.

§9.18 3. Notice of Insufficiencies

If the entity believes that the claim fails to comply substantially with Govt C §910, §910.2, or §910.4, it may, within 20 days after presentation, give notice of the insufficiency, stating with particularity the nature of the defect or omission. The board may not take action on the claim for 15 days after such notice is given. Govt C §910.8. See §9.19 on waiver for failure to give notice.

4. Waiver; Estoppel

§9.19 a. Failure to Give Notice of Insufficiency

A public entity that fails to give notice of an insufficiency in the claim waives any defense based on a defect in the claim except when the claim fails to provide an address for the claimant or an address to which the claimant desires notices to be sent. Govt C §911.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.20 b. Misleading Claimant

An entity is estopped from asserting the protection of the claims statute if its employees have actually misled the claimant. See DeYoung v Del Mar Thoroughbred Club (1984) 159 CA3d 858, 862, 206 CR 28, which lists four elements that the claimant must prove to establish an estoppel for misleading:

- The entity knew the true facts;
- The entity intended that its conduct should be acted on (or acted so that the claimant had a right to believe that its conduct was intended to be acted on);
- The claimant was ignorant of the true facts; and
- The claimant actually relied on the conduct and was injured.

§9.21 c. Failure to Give Notice That Claim Was Late

The entity must give a specified notice within 45 days after the claim is presented to any claimant who files late. Failure to give this notice constitutes a waiver of the defense of noncompliance with the time limit for presenting the claim. Govt C §911.3. No notice is required, and the defense is not waived if the claim fails to state either an address to which the person presenting the claim desires notices to be sent or an address of the claimant. Govt C §911.

§9.22 d. Failure to File Identifying Information

If the public entity fails to file the identifying information required by Govt C §53051 (see §9.35), the claimant's noncompliance with the claims requirement is not a bar or a defense to a suit against that public entity. Govt C §946.4. Likewise, if the entity fails to identify itself as a public entity in its dealings with the public, written application for leave to file a late claim "shall be granted" if the claimant acted with reasonable diligence. Ins C §11583.

§9.24 f. Failure to Give Notice of Denial of Application to File Late Claim

The claimant has 6 months after the date that an entity denies the claimant's application for leave to present a late claim to petition the court for late claim relief. See §9.27. Although the 6-month period runs from the date on which the application is denied, a significant delay in notifying the claimant of that denial may estop the entity from objecting to the timeliness of the suit. *Rason v Santa Barbara City Hous. F. Applying to Entity for Leave to Present Late Claim

§9.25 1. Procedure; Contents of Application

A claimant who has failed to file a timely claim (when the time to present such a claim is 6 months) may apply to the entity in writing for leave to present the claim with the application. Govt C §911.4. The application is presented in the same way that claims are presented (see §9.3), and the proposed claim must be attached to the application.

The written application need not be in any particular form but must state the reasons for the delay in presenting the claim. See form in §9.77.

A timely application must be granted if the claimant shows that (Govt C §911.6(b)):

- The failure to present a timely claim arose from mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect and that the entity was not prejudiced in its defense by the delay;
- The person who sustained the injury or loss was a minor throughout the 6-month claim period;
- The person was mentally incapacitated throughout that period and failed to present a timely claim because of that disability; or
- The person died before the period expired.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.26 2. Time Limits on Presenting Application

A claimant who failed to present a timely claim must apply to the entity for leave to present a late claim "within a reasonable time not to exceed one year after the accrual of the cause of action." Govt C §911.4(b).

The minority of the claimant does not toll the 1-year period for applying for leave to file a late claim. Govt C §911.4(c). Conversely, the time during which the minor is a dependent of the juvenile court does toll the period if:

- The minor is in custody of the agency to which the claim is to be presented; and
- The agency fails to make a required report of injury, abuse, or neglect to either the juvenile court or the minor's attorney within the time required by statute.

The tolling period starts on the date when the public agency becomes aware of the injury, neglect, or abuse. Govt C §911.4(c)(2)(A)-(B). The time shall not be counted during which a minor is adjudged a dependent of the juvenile court if the minor is without a guardian ad litem or conservator for purposes of filing civil actions. Govt C §911.4(c)(3).

Mental incapacity tolls the period for applying for leave to file a late claim until a guardian or conservator is appointed for the claimant (Govt C §911.4(c)), unless the claimant is a minor.

WARNING: The time during which the claimant is mentally incapacitated and does not have a guardian or a conservator is not counted. Govt C §911.4(c)(1). However, in Hernandez v County of Los Angeles (1986) 42 C3d 1020, 1025, 232 CR 519, the court held that the tolling provisions for mental incapacity of the claimant do not apply to minors. The parents or guardians of mentally incapacitated minors have no more than one year after the cause of action accrues to apply for leave to present a late claim.

G. Petitioning Court for Late Claim Relief

§9.27 1. Procedure; Time to File Petition

After a public entity has denied a claimant's application for leave to file a late claim, the claimant may, within 6 months, petition the court in which suit against the entity is to be brought for permission to file suit against the entity despite the failure to present a timely claim. Govt C §946.6.

WARNING: The court does not order the entity to accept a late claim, but allows the claimant to file the lawsuit within 30 days after the court's order granting relief. Tuolumne Air Serv. v Turlock Irrig. Dist. (1978) 87 CA3d 248, 150 CR 809. In Tuolumne, the trial court's order purported to allow the plaintiff to file a late claim. The plaintiff subsequently presented a claim and did not actually file a complaint until 105 days after the trial court's order. Despite the court's order, the plaintiff's suit was deemed time barred.

The 6-month period in which to petition the court for relief runs from the date the application is denied (Govt C §946.6(b)), not from the date notice of denial is mailed or delivered to claimant.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.28 2. Grounds for Late Claim Relief

A trial court must relieve the petitioner from the provisions of Govt C §945.4 if the court finds that (1) the application for leave to file a late claim (see §9.25) was made within a reasonable time (not to exceed 1 year after the date of accrual of the cause of action) and was denied or deemed denied under Govt C §911.6, and (2) one or more of the following apply (Govt C §946.6):

- The failure to present the claim was through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, and the entity would not be prejudiced by the granting of relief. The burden of proof is on the entity to establish prejudice. Govt C §946.6(c)(1); Ramariz v County of Merced (1987) 194 CA3d 684, 239 CR 774. The showing required of the claimant is the same as under CCP §473. Ebersol v Cowan (1983) 35 C3d 427, 435, 197 CR 601.
- The claimant was a minor throughout the claim period. Govt C §946.6(c)(2).
- The claimant died before expiration of the claim period. Govt C §946.6(c)(4).
- The claimant was mentally or physically incapacitated throughout the claim period and for that reason failed to present a claim. Govt C §946.6(c)(3); see Draper v City of Los Angeles (1990) 52 C3d 502, 276 CR 864 (plaintiff who was unconscious during claim-filing period not bound by claim filed by attorney with wrong agency).

Requirements for service of the petition and notice of hearing are set forth in Govt C §946.6(d). There are special provisions for service and notice of hearing for claims brought against a judicial branch entity. Govt C §946.6(d)(1)-(4). The court must make an independent determination of the merits of the petition based on supporting and opposing declarations and any evidence received at the hearing. Govt C §946.6(e). If the court makes an order relieving the petitioner from Govt C §945.4, suit on the cause of action must be filed with the court within 30 days. Govt C §946.6(f).

Government Code §946.6 is a remedial statute intended "to provide relief from technical rules that otherwise provide a trap for the unwary claimant" and is to be construed in favor of relief whenever possible. Bettencourt v Los Rios Community College Dist. (1986) 42 C3d 270, 275, 228 CR 190. However, when a plaintiff seeking relief under §946.6 fails to present anything to the trial court to support a finding of legally cognizable mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, the trial court has no evidentiary basis on which to grant relief. El Dorado Irrig. Dist. v Superior Court (1979) 98 CA3d 57, 159 CR 267. See Department of Water & Power v Superior Court (2000) 82 CA4th 1288, 99 CR2d 173 (late claim relief unavailable because information available at time of accident, e.g., wet road, police accident report indicating nearby DWP work caused flooding and naming DWP crew supervisor, gave petitioner ample notice of DWP's potential liability); Spencer v Merced County Office of Educ. (1997) 59 CA4th 1429, 69 CR2d 750 (late claim relief unavailable when plaintiff's counsel served claim on wrong public entity; counsel had received file from plaintiff's former counsel containing documents listing correct public entity).

H. Filing Suit

§9.29 1. Filing After Claim Rejected

A claimant who has received no response to a timely claim may file suit 45 days after the claim was presented; the claim is deemed to have been rejected on the 45th day. Govt C §912.4.

Suit must be filed within 6 months after the entity has given a Govt C §913 written notice that the claim is rejected, entirely or partially, expressly or by operation of law. Govt C §945.6(a). If the entity fails to give the required notice, suit must be filed within 2 years after the date of accrual of the cause of action. Govt C §945.6(a).

WARNING: The 6-month period runs from the date of mailing or delivery of the notice of rejection. Govt C §945.6(a)(1). There is no extension of time to file suit under CCP §1013(a), which extends some time periods when a paper is served by mail. Cole v Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1986) 177 CA3d 1, 222 CR 426; Edgington v County of San Diego (1981) 118 CA3d 39, 173 CR 225. Note also that in Edgington, the plaintiff contended that Govt C §915.2 permits notice to be served only by first-class mail, but the court held that certified mail with return receipt requested may also be used.

The language of Govt C §910.6 suggests that if claimant files an amended claim after a previous claim is rejected and the amended claim is also rejected, the 6-month period runs from the date of the first rejection, because an amended claim relates back to the first claim. Sofranek v County of Merced (2007) 146 CA4th 1238, 1247, 53 CR3d 426. It has also been held that if a defective claim and an amended claim have been timely presented, and the entity has rejected both claims, the time to sue runs from the rejection of the amended claim. Norwood v Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 164 CA3d 741, 211 CR 6.

The 6-month limitation period for filing a lawsuit following denial of a claim (Govt C §945.6) is suspended by the filing of an action in a United States District Court unless it is subsequently held that the district court lacks jurisdiction over the action. Addison v State (1978) 21 C3d 313, 146 CR 224. This doctrine of "equitable tolling" also requires timely notice and lack of prejudice to the defendant and reasonable and good faith conduct by the plaintiff. Note that a public entity must be actually named as a defendant within the 6-month period. Chase v State (1977) 67 CA3d 808, 136 CR 833.

§9.30 2. Filing Suit After Obtaining Court Permission to Sue

Under Govt C §946.6(f), a suit against a public entity must be filed within 30 days following the court's granting of a petition for relief from the claim-filing requirements. The time period begins to run on the entry of a minute order unless a formal order is required, in which case the time period begins to run on the entry of the formal order. County of Nevada v Superior Court (1986) 183 CA3d 806, 228 CR 447.

PRACTICE TIP: In County of Nevada, the minute order did not require the preparation of a formal order, but the court of appeal held that a formal order was required by local court rules unless otherwise ordered. Counsel should take the cautious approach and file the suit within 30 days after entry of any minute order granting relief from the claim-filing requirements.

The provisions of CCP §1013, which extend the time to act when service is by mail, do not apply to the 30-day limitation period in Govt C §946.6(f) for commencement of suit following the superior court's grant of a petition for relief from the claim requirements. Fritts v County of Kern (1982) 135 CA3d 303, 308, 185 CR 212. The court of appeal pointed out that CCP §1013 is inapplicable because Govt C §946.6(f) does not require mailed notice.

The limitation period for filing an action against a public entity is not tolled by the plaintiff's minority. See Todd v County of Los Angeles (1977) 74 CA3d 661, 141 CR 622.

III. SUING PROFESSIONALS

A. Notice to Health Care Provider Before Filing Medical Malpractice Suit

§9.31 1. Notice Requirement

The attorney for a plaintiff who seeks damages for medical malpractice must, before filing suit, give 90 days' notice of intention to sue to every known defendant. CCP §364. Failure to comply with CCP §364 does not bar the plaintiff's action, but an attorney who fails to comply is subject to disciplinary action by the State Bar. CCP §365. The notice requirement applies to any action based on a "health care provider's professional negligence," as defined in CCP §364(f)(1)-(2). CCP §364(a). It does not apply to a defendant whose name is unknown to the plaintiff at the time the complaint is filed and who is sued by a fictitious name. CCP §364(e).

NOTE: The Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act (MICRA) (Stats 1975, 2d Extra Sess, ch 1-2), which includes CCP §§364-365, does not say why this notice of intent to sue is required, although its purpose may be to give health care providers and their insurers an opportunity to offer a settlement before a lawsuit, with its attendant publicity and expense, is filed.

A significant benefit of giving the required notice is that the statute of limitations is tolled for 90 days when the plaintiff gives notice of intent to sue in the last 90 days of the applicable statute of limitations. CCP §364(d); Russell v Stanford Univ. Hosp. (1997) 15 C4th 783, 64 CR2d 97 (construing §364(d) as "tolling" rather than "extending" 3-year statute of limitations); Woods v Young (1991) 53 C3d 315, 279 CR 613 (construing §364(d) as "tolling" rather than "extending" 1-year statute of limitations, but running of statutory period not otherwise affected by service of notice). See also Kaplan v Mamelak (2008) 162 CA4th 637, 641, 75 CR3d 861 (tolling under CCP §351 of prelitigation notices in medical malpractice cases).

The statute of limitations is tolled only if the original notice is served within the last 90 days. Bennett v Shahhal (1999) 75 CA4th 384, 390, 89 CR2d 272 (second CCP §364 notice served within last 90 days of limitations period without knowledge that another attorney had previously served 90-day notice did not toll statute of limitations). The tolling provisions apply to an equitable indemnity action that is based on a health care provider's professional negligence, even though the action is governed by a non-MICRA statute of limitations, such as CCP §335.1. Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v Reiswig (1999) 21 C4th 208, 87 CR2d 187.

PRACTICE TIP: There appears to be no requirement or reason for a complaint filed in the medical malpractice action to contain an allegation that notice of intention to commence the action was duly given.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.32 2. Form and Contents of Notice

No particular form of notice of intention to sue is required by CCP §364(b), but the notice should be written so that it can be served in the manner prescribed by CCP §§1010-1020. CCP §364(c). See form in §9.81.

The notice of intention to sue must notify defendant "of the legal basis of the claim." CCP §364(b). There is no express requirement that the notice state details such as dates or places of alleged professional negligence, the specific acts or omissions, or the amounts claimed. See CCP §§364-365. See also Edwards v Superior Court (2001) 93 CA4th 172, 181, 112 CR2d 838 (plaintiff's failure to allege specific factual basis of each cause of action in CCP §364 90-day notice did not prevent alleging omitted injury in lawsuit filed against medical practitioner).

NOTE: The phrase "legal basis of the claim," is not defined. The form in §9.81 seeks to satisfy this requirement with the phrase "negligently diagnosed and treated [the plaintiff(s) or decedent] causing bodily injury [and death,]" which may be read to encompass any act or omission by the defendant in rendering professional services that may be the basis for recovery. Other phrases, such as "negligently rendered professional services to [plaintiff(s) or decedent] causing bodily injury [and death]" or more detailed statements, may also be effective.

The notice must also inform the defendant of the "type of loss sustained, including with specificity the nature of the injuries suffered." CCP §364(b).

NOTE: The quoted phrase is not defined. Although "bodily injury" or "death" are probably sufficient to state type of loss, the form in §9.81 shows a listing of elements for which damages for injury or death may be claimed. See California Tort Damages (2d ed Cal CEB 2002) for discussion of these elements.

It is unclear whether a statement of the amounts claimed for separate elements of damages is either necessary or proper, but the total amount of damages sought must be stated except in personal injury or wrongful death cases. See, e.g., CCP §425.10(b) (complaints in superior courts seeking recovery of money or damages must state amount; complaints in personal injury or wrongful death cases, however, should not state amount of recovery sought but they must comply with CCP §422.30 (caption requirements) and Govt C §70613(b) (requirements for first paper of limited civil case)). For further discussion of limited civil cases, see chap 6.

NOTE: If a purpose of giving notice is to encourage settlement, it seems appropriate to give some indication of past and future damages. Failure to list an injury apparently does not preclude the plaintiff from recovering damages from that injury. See CCP §365.

B. Certificate of Merit in Professional Negligence Suit Against Architect, Engineer, or Land Surveyor

§9.33 1. Requirement

An attorney who files a professional negligence action against an architect, engineer, or land surveyor for damages or indemnity must, under CCP §411.35, also file and serve a certificate showing that the attorney:

- Has reviewed the facts, consulted with and received an opinion from at least one professional in the defendant's discipline who is not a party to the litigation as to whether the defendant was negligent in performing the professional services, and concluded on the basis of this review and consultation that there is a reasonable and meritorious cause for filing the action (see form in §9.82); or
- Has been unable to obtain the required consultation
- in time to prevent impairment of the action by a statute of limitations (see form in §9.84); or
- because none of at least three professionals contacted agreed to consult (see form in §9.85); or
- Intends to rely on limited theories (see below).

The certificate of intention to rely on limited theories need not state that consultation with a professional was sought or that there is reasonable and meritorious cause for filing the action, but it must state that the reason the attorney is not filing and serving a certificate of merit or of inability to obtain consultation is that the attorney intends to rely:

- Solely on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as defined in Evid C §646;
- Exclusively on a failure to inform of the consequences of a procedure; or
- On both these theories.

See form in §9.83.

NOTE: The requirement applies whether the action is commenced by complaint or cross-complaint and even if the words "professional" or "negligence" are not used. CCP §411.35(i). It is good practice to serve the complaint or cross-complaint with the certificate attached.

An attorney who files a certificate showing the impending expiration of the statute of limitations has 60 days after filing the complaint in which to file a certificate of merit. CCP §411.35(b)(2). Presumably, the attorney could file, within 60 days after filing the complaint, a certificate of inability to obtain the required consultation (see CCP §411.35(b)(3)) in lieu of a certificate of merit.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.34 2. Procedures After Certificate Filed

After a plaintiff's attorney has filed and served a required certificate of merit, both the attorney and a professional consultant have a privilege to refuse to disclose the identity of the consultant and the content of the consultation unless the defendant architect, engineer, or surveyor prevails. If the attorney has been unable to find a consultant after three attempts, the court may require the attorney to divulge the names of the persons refusing to consult. CCP §411.35(e).

A defendant who prevails, or the court, may require disclosure of the consultants' names and addresses in an in camera proceeding from which the prevailing professional is excluded. Failure of the plaintiff's attorney to comply permits the court to order the attorney, the client, or both to pay the defendant's reasonable costs, including attorney fees. CCP §411.35(h).

Failure to comply with CCP §411.35 is grounds for a demurrer to the complaint (see chap 23) and may constitute unprofessional conduct and grounds for discipline against the attorney. CCP §411.35(f)-(g).

C. Leave to Sue Unpaid Officer or Director of Nonprofit Corporation

§9.35 1. Requirement

An attorney who wants to include in a complaint or cross-complaint a cause of action against a person serving without compensation as an officer or director of a nonprofit corporation for negligent acts or omissions committed by that person within the scope of his or her duties must first apply for and obtain a court order allowing the pleading to be filed. CCP §425.15(a). See generally Corp C §5047.5. See Corp C §24001.5 on damages immunity for uncompensated director or officer of a nonprofit medical association.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.36 2. Form and Contents of Application; Service

An application for leave to sue the director or officer of a nonprofit corporation must be in the form of a "verified petition" to which are attached any supporting declarations stating the facts on which liability is based and the proposed complaint or cross-complaint. CCP §425.15(a). The petition may be verified by the plaintiff's attorney using the form in chap 15.

NOTE: Before the court decides whether to grant the requested leave, it must order the petition (and, presumably, supporting affidavits and proposed pleading) to be served on the defendant, who must be given an opportunity to submit opposing declarations.

§9.37 D. Leave to Sue Attorney for Civil Conspiracy

A procedure similar to that described in §§9.35-9.36 must be followed by a party who files a pleading that states a cause of action against an attorney for civil conspiracy with his or her client. Civil Code §1714.10 requires that the party must obtain a court order, following the court's determination that a reasonable probability exists that the party will prevail, before the party may file a complaint or other pleading that contains such a cause of action. See generally Pavicich v Santucci (2000) 85 CA4th 382, 102 CR2d 125.

The party may file and present to a judge a verified petition requesting an order that the pleading may be filed, and the judge may allow the filing on the basis of that petition and supporting declarations that state the facts on which the liability is based. See Evans v Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro (1998) 65 CA4th 599, 76 CR2d 679, in which the court of appeal directed the trial court to strike a civil conspiracy cause of action against an attorney for the plaintiffs' failure to obtain a prefiling order. See generally Howard v Superior Court (1992) 2 CA4th 745, 3 CR2d 575 (cause of action for attorney's "aiding and abetting" client was equivalent to cause of action for civil conspiracy); Villa Pac. Bldg. Co. v Superior Court (1991) 233 CA3d 8, 284 CR 227 (§1714.10 is not jurisdictional but is an objection that must be timely made).

Civil Code §1714.10 was upheld against constitutional challenges on due process and equal protection grounds in Hung v Wang (1992) 8 CA4th 908, 11 CR2d 113. The court also held that §1714.10 does not require factual determinations by the court that violate the right to a jury trial. 8 CA4th at 926.

An order under CC §1714.10 authorizing or denying authorization for a civil conspiracy suit against an attorney is appealable as a final judgment. CC §1714.10(d).

IV. CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATES

A. Filing Claim as Prerequisite to Suit

§9.38 1. Situations Requiring Claims

A person's death does not normally bar prosecution of a cause of action that existed against that person. CCP §§377.20, 377.40-377.43. An action may be maintained or continued against a decedent's personal representative for all damages that might have been recovered against the decedent had the decedent lived, except for punitive damages (CC §3294) or other damages imposed primarily for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant (CCP §377.42). However, no action may be maintained against a decedent's estate and no lawsuit pending against the decedent at time of death may be continued against the estate unless the plaintiff has complied with the claims requirements of the Probate Code and has filed a timely creditor's claim in the probate proceeding. Prob C §§9002, 9351.

The estate claims procedure applies to all liabilities of the decedent, arising in contract, tort, or otherwise. Prob C §9000(a)(1). The procedure covers demands for payment that are not yet due or accrued, or are contingent or unliquidated as well as fixed, accrued liabilities. Prob C §9000(a).

The claims procedures have their own time limits, which supersede the otherwise applicable statutes of limitations. CCP §366.2(b)(2); Prob C §9100. See §9.44.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.39 2. Situations Not Requiring Prior Claims

Specific statutes exempt certain lawsuits from Probate Code claims filing requirements. For example:

Title to property. The Probate Code claims procedure does not apply to a dispute regarding title of a decedent to specific property alleged to be included in the decedent's estate. Prob C §9000(b).

Claims covered by insurance. To the extent a decedent was protected by insurance, an action to establish the decedent's liability may be brought or continued and a judgment enforced against the insurer without filing a claim under the Probate Code. Prob C §9390(a). The complaint may be served on the liability insurer or someone designated by it. Recovery is limited to the insurance proceeds unless a probate claim has been timely filed and the personal representative joined as a defendant. Prob C §§550-555, 9390(b).

WARNING: Specific limits on, and requirements for, proceeding on claims covered by liability insurance are set out in Prob C §§550-555. In addition, it may be useful to state in the complaint that the plaintiff is proceeding under those sections and Prob C §9390 and that a claim has not been filed.

Secured claims. An action may be brought by the holder of a mortgage or lien on property belonging to the decedent's estate to enforce the lien or mortgage without first filing a creditor's claim, when recourse against all other property of the estate is expressly waived in the complaint. Prob C §9391.

Execution liens. If property of the decedent is subject to an execution lien at the time of the decedent's death, enforcement may proceed. Any remaining balance is payable in the course of the administration of the estate, and any excess must be returned to the estate. Prob C §9303.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.40 3. Statute of Limitations

If a potential defendant in a lawsuit dies before expiration of the applicable limitations period and the cause of action survives death, any action must be brought within 1 year after the date of death. CCP §366.2. Section 366.2 specifically excludes from its operation:

- Claims against a decedent's estate covered by Prob C §§9000-9399 (i.e., the claims discussed in this chapter);
- Claims relating to liabilities of a deceased settlor of a revocable trust (Prob C §§19000-19403) (see Levine v Levine (2002) 102 CA4th 1256, 126 CR2d 255); and
- Certain petitions by beneficiaries concerning the construction and applicability of a "no contest" clause in a will or other instrument (Prob C §§21300-21322).

WARNING: Code of Civil Procedure §366.2 sets the limitations period at 1 year after death even if the otherwise applicable period would not expire until later than 1 year after death. In Collection Bureau v Rumsey (2000) 24 C4th 301, 99 CR2d 792, the supreme court held the 1-year limitations period applicable to an attempt to collect a debt incurred by the decedent from the decedent's surviving spouse. Thus, the plaintiff's claim, which would have been timely as an open book account if the debtor spouse had not died, was time-barred by operation of former CCP §353 (the predecessor to CCP §366.2).

The 1-year limitations period of CCP §366.2 is not tolled during the plaintiff's minority and applies to an action on the liability of a deceased person without regard to the location of decedent's personal representative or estate. Farb v Superior Court (2009) 174 CA4th 678, 94 CR3d 586.

In addition, Prob C §551 extends the statute of limitations for an action brought to establish a liability for which the decedent was protected by insurance to 1 year after the expiration of the limitations period that otherwise would be applicable.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.41 4. Effect of Failure to Present Claim; Waiver

A claim that is not filed or presented as required by statute is barred (Prob C §9002), and a complaint that fails to allege compliance with the claims statutes fails to state a cause of action (Chahon v Schneider (1953) 117 CA2d 334, 256 P2d 54).

In some circumstances, compliance with the claim requirement may be excused by pleading and proof of a waiver by the personal representative. Satterfield v Garmire (1967) 65 C2d 638, 56 CR 102. But see Segovia v Superior Court (1976) 55 CA3d 464, 127 CR 501 (estate representative's knowledge of claim, without further showing, is insufficient to establish waiver or estoppel). See also Clark v Kerby (1992) 4 CA4th 1505, 6 CR2d 440 (questioning whether, under procedure for 1988 death, personal representative gave adequate notice and whether former claims statutes met constitutional due process standards).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.42 5. Claims of Public Entities

With limited exceptions, a claim by a public entity is barred unless the claims procedures are followed. Prob C §9200(a). But if the claim of the public entity arises under a law, act, or code listed in Prob C §9201(b), the claim is barred only if written notice or a request to file a claim is given to the public entity and the entity fails to file a claim before expiration of the period provided in the applicable section.

Probate Code §9202 requires that, when a deceased person has received health care or was the surviving spouse of a person who received health care under Welf & I C §§14000-14499.77, the heirs or personal representative must give the Director of Health Services notice of the death within 90 days after the date of death. The director has four months after notice is given to perfect claims against the estate or, if the assets of the estate have been distributed to the heirs, against the heirs to the full extent of the director's claim or the distributed assets, whichever is less.

The publication of notice under Prob C §8121 and the giving of notice to creditors of administration of the estate of the decedent under Prob C §§9050-9054 are not sufficient to comply with the notice to public entities requirements in Prob C §§9200-9205. Prob C §9001(b).

If estate property is distributed before expiration of the time allowed a public entity to file a claim, the public entity will have a claim against the distributees to the full extent of the entity's claim or each distributee's share, whichever is less. Prob C §9203. The entity's claim will include interest to the extent provided in Prob C §9203(b).

The claims procedure applicable to public entities does not apply to liability for the restitution of amounts illegally acquired through the means of a fraudulent, false, or incorrect representation or a forged or unauthorized endorsement. Prob C §9205.

B. Procedure for Filing Claim

§9.43 1. Notice to Creditors

A personal representative must, except in a few specified instances, give notice of the administration of the estate in conformity with Prob C §9052 and as provided in Prob C §1215 to the known or reasonably ascertainable creditors of the decedent. Prob C §9050(a); Tulsa Prof. Collection Servs. v Pope (1988) 485 US 478, 99 L Ed 2d 565, 108 S Ct 1340; Clark v Kerby (1992) 4 CA4th 1505, 6 CR2d 440. The giving of notice is in addition to publication of notice under Prob C §8120. Prob C §9050(b).

The notice must be given within the later of the 4-month period after the date letters are first issued or 30 days after the personal representative first has knowledge of the existence of the creditor. Prob C §9051.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.44 2. Time Limits on Filing

A creditor is required to file a claim within the later of four months after the date letters are first issued to a general personal representative (Prob C §9100(a)(1)) or 60 days after the date notice of administration is mailed or personally delivered to the creditor, if notice is given at least 60 days before expiration of the CCP §366.2 statute of limitations (1 year after the date of death) (Prob C §9100(a)(2)).

Failure to file a creditor's claim does not destroy the court's jurisdiction. If the defendant does not raise the defect until after the judgment has become final, the defect is waived. Rogers v Hirschi (1983) 141 CA3d 847, 190 CR 575.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.45 3. Petition to File Late Claim

On petition by a creditor or the personal representative, the court may allow a claim to be filed after the time to file a claim provided in Prob C §9100 if the creditor establishes either of the following conditions (Prob C §9103(a)):

- The personal representative failed to send proper and timely notice of estate administration to the creditor, and the petition is filed within 60 days after the creditor has actual knowledge of the estate administration; or
- The creditor had no knowledge of facts reasonably giving rise to the existence of the claim more than 30 days before expiration of the Prob C §9100 deadline, and the petition is filed within 60 days after the creditor has actual knowledge of facts giving rise to the existence of the claim and administration of the estate.

The claim cannot be allowed after the court makes the final order of distribution or more than 1 year after letters are first issued to the decedent's general personal representative. Prob C §9103(b).

The court has broad discretion to deny the claim, or limit or condition the allowance on terms that are just and equitable. Prob C §9103(c). Payments made or properly distributed before the claim is filed are not subject to the claim.

NOTE: The late claim statute has been made largely irrelevant by amendments to Prob C §9100. Stats 1996, ch 862. Under Prob C §9100(a)(2), a claim is timely if it is given within 60 days after notice of administration is mailed or personally delivered to a creditor. A major problem with the amended statute is that this time limit never runs unless the creditor has been given notice. If the creditor does not receive notice, the claim is not late. Even a creditor who has actual knowledge of the proceedings may delay filing a claim for almost a year, because the California laws barring late claims by persons having actual knowledge of the proceeding are all contained in the now-irrelevant late claim statute.

§9.46 4. Amending Claims

Although a claim properly filed may be amended or revised, an amendment may not be made to increase the amount of the claim after the time for filing a claim has expired. An amendment may not be made for any purpose after the court makes the final order of distribution or more than one year after letters are first issued to the decedent's general personal representative. Prob C §9104.

§9.47 5. Place to File; Method

The claim must be filed with the court in which the decedent's estate is being administered, and a copy of the claim must be served on the decedent's personal representative. Failure to file the claim with the court and serve a copy on the personal representative invalidates the claim. Prob C §9150.

§9.48 C. Contents of Claim

The creditor's claim must be supported by a declaration of the claimant or a person on his or her behalf, as well as other documents required by Prob C §§9150-9153. The supporting declaration must state (see Creditor's Claim (Probate) (Judicial Council Form DE-172) in §9.87):

- That the debt is a just claim (Prob C §9151(a)(1));
- If the claim is due, the facts supporting the claim, the amount of the claim, and that all payments on and offsets to the claim have been credited (Prob C §9151(a)(2));
- If the claim is not due or contingent, or the amount is not yet ascertainable, the facts supporting the claim (Prob C §9151(a)(3)); and
- If the affidavit is made by a person other than the creditor, the reason it is not made by the creditor (Prob C §9151(a)(4)).

If the claim is based on a written instrument, the original or a copy of the instrument with all endorsements must be attached to the claim and the original made available to the personal representative or the court on demand. If the original is lost, this fact must be stated on the face of the claim. Prob C §9152(a).

If the claim or part of the claim is secured by a recorded trust deed or similar lien, it is sufficient to describe the security and supply the book and page number where recorded. Prob C §9152(b).

A written demand for payment made within 4 months after the date letters are first issued may be accepted by the personal representative as a claim. Formal defects are waived if the personal representative pays the amount demanded within 30 days after expiration of the 4-month time limit and it is determined that

- The debt was in fact due and was paid in good faith;
- The amount paid was the true amount owed over and above all payments and offsets; and
- The estate is solvent.

Prob C §9154.

§9.49 D. Rejection of Claim

If the personal representative fails to act on the claim, the creditor has the option to treat the claim as rejected 30 days after filing. Prob C §9256. If the claim is allowed or rejected, written notice must be given to the creditor in compliance with Prob C §9250.

If the personal representative is unauthorized to act under the Independent Administration of Estates Act (Prob C §§10400-10600), or if the representative or his or her attorney is a creditor of the estate, judicial review and approval of the claim is required. Prob C §§9251-9252.

E. Suit Following Rejection of Claim

§9.50 1. In General

Suit on a rejected claim is barred unless the claimant files suit in a proper court within the following time periods:

- If the claim is due, 3 months after the notice of rejection (Prob C §9353(a)(1)); or
- If the claim is not due at the time the notice is given, 3 months after it becomes due (Prob C §9353(a)(2)).

WARNING: See Independent Bankers Trust Co. v Superior Court (1982) 138 CA3d 238, 188 CR 14. After denial of his claim by decedent's executor, plaintiff filed suit in a timely manner and filed notice in the probate action of the pendency of the suit but did not serve summons or complaint on decedent's executor until after discharge by probate court. The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate ordering the trial court to quash service of summons on the executor.

§9.51 2. Action Pending on Date of Death

An action or a proceeding against the decedent pending at the time of death cannot be continued unless the plaintiff presents a proper and timely claim against the estate (Prob C §9370(a)(1)), the claim is rejected in whole or in part (Prob C §9370(a)(2)), and the plaintiff applies to the court in which the action or proceeding is pending for an order to substitute the personal representative in the action (Prob C §9370(a)(3), which also provides that the time limit applies only if the notice of rejection contains a statement that the plaintiff has three months within which to apply for an order for substitution).

Substitution of a decedent's personal representative as party defendant in place of the decedent does not obviate the need to file or present a formal creditor's claim. Wood v Brown (1974) 39 CA3d 232, 114 CR 63.

After a claim is presented, the proper procedure is to file a supplemental complaint alleging the defendant's death and due presentation of the claim. Wood v Brown (1974) 39 CA3d 232, 240, 114 CR 63. The plaintiff's failure or inability to prove compliance with the claim requirement is a complete defense to the action against the estate. Prob C §9370(b); Wood v Brown, supra (motion for summary judgment granted).

V. APPOINTING GUARDIANS AD LITEM

A. When Available

§9.52 1. Defined

A minor is a person under 18 years of age. Fam C §6500. See Fam C §6601 on minor's right to enforce rights by civil action or other legal proceedings.

The legislature has replaced the term "incompetent person" with the phrase "person with a disability" as defined in Prob C §3603. A "person with a disability" includes (Prob C §3603):

- A person for whom a conservator may be appointed (Prob C §1801);
- A person who meets the definition of disability under 42 USC §1382c(a)(3) (Title II of the Social Security Act (42 USC §§401-434)) and 20 CFR §416.905;
- A person who meets the definition of disability under 42 USC §423(d)(1), (2), and (3) (Title II of the Social Security Act (42 USC §§401-434)) and 20 CFR §404.1505;
- A minor who meets the definition of disability under 20 CFR §416.906; and
- A person with a developmental disability under Welf & I C §4512.

See also Sarracino v Superior Court (1974) 13 C3d 1, 118 CR 21 (incompetency may exist independently of judicial determination); In re Sara D. (2001) 87 CA4th 661, 667, 104 CR2d 909 (Prob C §1801 is not exclusive standard for determining when adult is incompetent in Welf & I C §300 proceeding).

NOTE: If an adult has the capacity under Prob C §812 to consent to an order and does not have a conservator with such authority, a court may not make an order or give a judgment under Prob C §§3600, 3601, 3610, or 3611 without the express consent of that person. Prob C §3613.

At common law, the person appointed or informally admitted to the court to prosecute a lawsuit for a minor or person with a disability as a plaintiff was called a "next friend." The appointee for a minor or person with a disability as a defendant was called a "guardian ad litem." Although these distinctions have disappeared, there are still procedural differences between appointments for minors or persons with a disability who are plaintiffs (CCP §373(a)) and those who are defendants (CCP §373(b)).

A guardian ad litem is not a party to the litigation, but the representative of a party. See Dixon v Gries (1895) 106 C 506, 39 P 857; Estate of Cochems (1952) 110 CA2d 27, 242 P2d 56. The guardian's duties are limited to matters involving prosecution and defense of the action involving the ward (see CCP §372(a)); the guardian ad litem does not have the powers of a general guardian over the ward's estate. See §9.68.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/9 Prelitigation Claims, Notices, and Petitions for Guardians Ad Litem/§9.53 2. Situations in Which Appointment of Guardian Is Required or Desirable

§9.53 2. Situations in Which Appointment of Guardian Is Required or Desirable

Appointment of a guardian ad litem must be obtained before filing suit on behalf of or against any minor or person with a disability for whom a guardian or conservator of the estate has not already been appointed (CCP §372(a)), unless that necessity is dispensed with by a specific exception, as in suits relating to emancipation (Fam C §§7000-7143) or in proceedings to obtain a protective order

- To prohibit harassment (CCP §527.6);
- Against violence or a credible threat of violence in the workplace (CCP §527.8);
- Under the Domestic Violence Prevention Act (Fam C §§6200-6389); or
- Under Fam C §7710 or §7720 (CCP §372(b)).

NOTE: A guardian ad litem need not be appointed for a minor whose parents settle a disputed claim without court action, as long as the settlement is approved by the superior court of the county in which the minor resides. Prob C §3500.

Even when the minor or person with a disability has a guardian of the estate, the court has the power to appoint a guardian ad litem if the court deems it expedient. CCP §372(a). However, if an adult has the capacity under Prob C §812 to consent to an order and does not have a conservator with such authority, a court may not make an order or give a judgment under Prob C §§3600, 3601, 3610, or 3611 without the express consent of that person. Prob C §3613. For federal practice, see Fed R Civ P 17(c).

EXAMPLE: Appointment of a guardian ad litem may be sought for a minor or a person with a disability who has a general guardian if that guardian has neglected or refused to represent the ward or has an adverse interest in the litigation. Conflict of interest situations can arise when the general guardian is also the executor or administrator of an estate in which the minor or person with a disability has an interest, either as an heir or a legatee. Sometimes the trustee of a trust is also an income beneficiary of the trust and guardian of a minor who is a remainderman of the trust.

The court may appoint a guardian ad litem for an unborn person or an unascertained person in a designated class who may become legally or equitably interested in real or personal property that may be affected by a lawsuit or proceeding. CCP §373.5.

3. Effect of Failure to Appoint

§9.54 a. Right to Disaffirm Judgment

A judgment against a minor or a person with a disability who has not been represented by a general guardian or guardian ad litem is voidable and may be disaffirmed by the ward after having attained capacity, or by a guardian subsequently appointed on the ward's behalf. Field v Hughes (1933) 131 CA 144, 20 P2d 990 (minor); Winslow v McCarthy (1918) 39 CA 337, 178 P 720 (incompetent). See also Olivera v Grace (1942) 19 C2d 570, 122 P2d 564 (default judgment against incompetent person set aside because plaintiff, who knew defendant to be incompetent even though she had not been so adjudicated, failed to request appointment of a guardian ad litem).

WARNING: Disaffirmance must be sought within a reasonable time after attaining majority or competency. Failure to do so may result in waiver of the right to disaffirm. See §9.55.

If a complaint alleges an appointment when in fact none was made, the defendant may file a demurrer under CCP §430.10(b) on grounds of lack of capacity to sue (see chap 23) or move to strike the complaint under CCP §435 (see generally chap 24).

Failure to appoint a guardian ad litem as required by CCP §372 is not a jurisdictional defect. Johnston v Southern Pac. Co. (1907) 150 C 535, 89 P 348; Hughes v Quackenbush (1934) 1 CA2d 349, 37 P2d 99. But see Keane v Penha (1946) 76 CA2d 693, 173 P2d 835.

A minor or a person with a disability serving as a plaintiff who is unrepresented by a guardian ad litem may disaffirm a judgment. In some instances, a defendant may disaffirm a judgment after learning that a required guardian ad litem had not been appointed for the plaintiff, on the theory that the judgment does not bind any party if it does not bind all parties. See Johnston v Southern Pac. Co., supra.

The usual procedure for disaffirmance is to make a noticed motion to vacate or set aside the judgment. See, e.g., Gouanillou v IAC (1920) 184 C 418, 193 P 937; Garbutt v Campbell (1955) 130 CA2d 167, 278 P2d 508. For a form for notice of motion to vacate judgment, see California Civil Litigation Forms Manual §46.6 (Cal CEB 1980).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.55 b. Waiver of Right to Disaffirm

A minor or a person with a disability who did not have a guardian ad litem as required by CCP §372(a) may waive the right to disaffirm a judgment. A voluntary waiver may occur by, e.g., expressly affirming a favorable judgment after having attained majority. See Johnston v Southern Pac. Co. (1907) 150 C 535, 89 P 348 (affirmance pending defendant's appeal cured defect). An involuntary waiver may occur, e.g., under the doctrine of laches, for failing to seek disaffirmance promptly. See Cikuth v Loero (1936) 14 CA2d 32, 57 P2d 1009 (court refused to grant motion to vacate made more than a year after entry of judgment). Waiver (or estoppel to disaffirm) also may result from conduct that is inconsistent with disaffirmance.

EXAMPLE: See, e.g., Hughes v Quackenbush (1934) 1 CA2d 349, 37 P2d 99 (minor defendant who attains majority before trial and who continues to participate at trial through counsel may not speculate on outcome and seek to disaffirm if result is unfavorable); King v Wilson (1931) 116 CA 191, 2 P2d 833 (minor defendant sat through trial without disclosing minority to attorney or court until after unfavorable judgment rendered); Childs v Lanterman (1894) 103 C 387, 37 P 382 (defendant, who attained majority shortly before adverse judgment rendered against him, moved for new trial and appealed on merits before moving to disaffirm on grounds of minority almost 3 years later). See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §85 (5th ed 2008).

B. Petitioning for Appointment

1. Selecting Petitioner

§9.56 a. General Qualifications

Generally, no statute or rule specifies who may be appointed as a guardian ad litem. One exception is Fam C §2332(b), which provides that in certain circumstances the district attorney or county counsel may be appointed guardian ad litem for an insane spouse in a marital dissolution proceeding.

The statutes suggest, however, that appointment of a "relative or friend" of the minor or the person with a disability is proper. See CCP §373. In practice, courts routinely accept petitions for appointment of parents or other relatives, general guardians, or attorneys. Parents of a minor may have preferential status for appointment. State v Superior Court (Waring) (1978) 86 CA3d 475, 482, 150 CR 308, disapproved on other grounds in Hernandez v County of Los Angeles (1986) 42 C3d 1020, 1027, 232 CR 519. But see D. G. v Superior Court (1979) 100 CA3d 535, 545, 161 CR 117 (no order of preference). A parent does not have the primary right to select the appropriate guardian ad litem. Williams v Superior Court (2007) 147 CA4th 36, 48, 54 CR3d 13.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.57 b. Serving Ward's Best Interest; Avoiding Conflict

The paramount consideration in selecting a guardian ad litem is protecting the best interest of the minor or the person with a disability, and it is the court's duty to determine that best interest. Because the guardian's principal duty is to represent the minor or the person with a disability in litigation, the person selected should have sufficient ability, experience, time, and interest in the ward's welfare to do this successfully.

The court may consider the parent's wishes, but they are not controlling. The court may also consider the preference of a minor 14 or older who has the right to nominate (see §9.58).

Before seeking the appointment of a parent as a minor's guardian ad litem, care must be taken to identify possible generational conflicts. If a potential conflict exists between the minor and a parent (or other relative, when there is no parent), someone else should be appointed.

EXAMPLE: Conflicts of interest that may occur between a minor and a parent include:

- Life tenant versus remainderman of property;
- Income beneficiary versus remainderman of a trust; and
- Heir not mentioned in a will versus legatee or devisee under the will.

The attorney for a plaintiff may petition for appointment of a guardian ad litem for a defendant, but may wish to refrain from nominating a specific person, to avoid any appearance of conflict.

© The Regents of the University of California

c. Eligible Petitioners

§9.58 (1) For Minor Plaintiff

When the minor is a plaintiff, the petition for appointment must be made by the minor if 14 or older and by a relative or friend if younger. CCP §373(a). It is error to appoint a guardian ad litem for a 14-year-old on the petition of the guardian alone, and any subsequent judgment may be disaffirmed by the minor when he or she attains majority. See Johnston v Southern Pac. Co. (1907) 150 C 535, 89 P 348; see §§9.54-9.55 on disaffirmance and waiver of the right to disaffirm.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.59 (2) For Minor Defendant

When the minor is a defendant, and is 14 or older, the petition for appointment may be made by the minor within 10 days after service of the summons. If the minor is under 14, or has failed to apply within 10 days, the petition may be made by a relative, a friend, or any other party to the action, or the court may appoint a guardian ad litem on its own motion. CCP §373(b). Even if the minor is 14 years or older, appointment of a guardian on petition of the guardian alone is not error, and a resulting judgment cannot be disaffirmed. See Estate of Corotto (1954) 125 CA2d 314, 270 P2d 498.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/9 Prelitigation Claims, Notices, and Petitions for Guardians Ad Litem/§9.60 (3) For Person With a Disability

§9.60 (3) For Person With a Disability

Code of Civil Procedure §373 does not distinguish between persons with a disability on the basis of party status. For both plaintiffs and defendants, the petition for appointment is made by a relative or friend or any other party to the action, and the court may appoint on its own motion. CCP §373(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

2. Time to File Petition

§9.61 a. For Minor Plaintiff

When a minor is a plaintiff, the petition for appointment of guardian ad litem is filed and presented to a judge before, or at the same time as, the complaint is filed and the appointment must be made before a summons is issued. CCP §373(a). This requirement is not jurisdiction al, however, and appointment after summons issues cures the defect. Estate of Cahill (1887) 74 C 52, 15 P 364.

PRACTICE TIP: Filing the petition for appointment of a guardian ad litem at the same time the complaint is filed enables the pleader to (1) anticipate the appointment and allege it in the complaint, thus precluding a demurrer for lack of capacity to sue (see CCP §430.10(b)), and (2) use the same caption on the petition that is used on the complaint, thus avoiding confusion over filing fees, which can arise when different captions are used. See §9.88 for a petition form.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.62 b. For Minor Defendant

The petition to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant should not be filed until after a summons has been served. See CCP §373(b). The court has no jurisdiction to appoint a guardian before the summons has been served on the minor (Johnston v San Francisco Sav. Union (1883) 63 C 554, 562; Weisfeld v Superior Court (1952) 110 CA2d 148, 242 P2d 29), and a judgment against the minor in that situation may be disaffirmed (see §9.54) unless the right to do so has been waived (see §9.55).

PRACTICE TIP: If the minor is 14 or older, petitioning within 10 days after service of summons forestalls the plaintiff from petitioning for appointment of a guardian for the defendant. See §9.59.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.63 c. For Person With a Disability

Although the Code of Civil Procedure does not say so, it appears that the rules on timing minor plaintiffs' and defendants' petitions for appointment of guardians ad litem (see §§9.61-9.62) apply to petitions to appoint guardians ad litem for persons with a disability. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §75 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.64 3. Form and Content of Petition

Appointment of a guardian ad litem is sought by "application" (CCP §373), usually in the form of a written petition to the court. See Emeric v Alvarado (1884) 64 C 529, 594, 2 P 418. No notice is required for the petition and no form is prescribed. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §76 (5th ed 2008).

NOTE: Local rules or practice may preclude oral or informal application except in rare instances.

The written petition should be verified and prepared in the form of a declaration under penalty of perjury so that the statements it contains can be taken as evidence supporting the ex parte issuance of the appointment. For verification of pleadings, see chap 15. The petition should show:

- The birthdate (or age) of the ward (i.e., whether younger or older than 14 years);
- The nature of any disability or of any determination of disability (see Sarracino v Superior Court (1974) 13 C3d 1, 118 CR 21), whether a guardian of the estate was appointed, and reasons the latter should or should not be appointed guardian ad litem (including any failure or refusal of general guardian to act);
- The ward's desire to sue, or the date on which the ward was served with summons;
- The nature of the claim on which the action is based;
- The status of the petitioner (e.g., minor age 14 or older, parent, relative, guardian of the estate, party needing to have guardian appointed for the defendant);
- The identity, status, and competence to serve of the nominated guardian (e.g., parental, other relationship; time and place of appointment as guardian of ward's estate);
- The consent of a 14-year-old or of a person with a disability who is capable of consenting (see Sarracino v Superior Court, supra; Prob C §3613); and
- The consent of the nominee.

See forms, Petitions for Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem, in §§9.88-9.89.

§9.65 4. Filing and Serving Petition and Proposed Order

A petition for appointment of guardian ad litem must be filed with the court in which the action or proceeding is to be prosecuted or is pending. CCP §372(a). The court clerk with whom the petition is filed can tell the attorney when and how it should be taken to a judge of the court to obtain the judge's signature on the attached order.

It has been held that a guardian ad litem is duly appointed simply by entry of a minute order. See Foley v Northern Cal. Power Co. (1913) 165 C 103, 130 P 1183. The better practice, however, is to prepare and file with the petition a written order for the judge to sign.

The order issues without conditions; notice to opposing parties is not required (Granger v Sherriff (1901) 133 C 416, 65 P 873; but see In re Sara D. (2001) 87 CA4th 661, 104 CR2d 909 (in Welf & I C §300 proceeding, parent's right to due process requires notice and opportunity to be heard before guardian ad litem appointed)), and the guardian ad litem need not take an oath (see Jones v Alameda (1927) 85 CA 607, 259 P 976), furnish a bond, or receive letters of guardianship (Estate of Hathaway (1896) 111 C 270, 43 P 754).

The petition and the order need not, but may, be served on other parties. It is customary to allege in the pleading that a guardian ad litem has been duly appointed.

C. Powers and Duties of Guardian Ad Litem

§9.66 1. Introduction; Ethical Considerations

The powers of guardians ad litem are more restricted than are those of a general guardian and are limited strictly to matters connected with the proceedings in which they are appointed. See Walters v Superior Court (1933) 129 CA 19, 18 P2d 343. Their power to appear for the ward and manage the suit is exclusive. In re Price (1923) 61 CA 592, 215 P 710. Guardians ad litem are agents with limited powers, however, and their acts with reference to matters outside the litigation are void.

The guardian should be active and diligent in marshaling all facts regarding the ward's case, and should make certain that these facts are presented in a manner that best protects the ward's interests. See Leonardini v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (1955) 131 CA2d 9, 280 P2d 81. The guardian should not perform requisite duties in a perfunctory or inconclusive manner, or merely file an appearance and then stand by inactive. Wogman v Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co. (1954) 123 CA2d 657, 267 P2d 423.

WARNING: If a trial court decision favorable to the ward is appealed, it seems clear that the guardian has a duty to oppose the appeal. It is less clear whether the guardian has the duty to appeal an adverse trial court decision. See Guardianship of Walters (1949) 93 CA2d 208, 208 P2d 713. The guardian and attorney should weigh this matter carefully, keeping in mind that the real party in interest (the minor incompetent) cannot authorize an appeal or agree to pay fees and costs.

The guardian ad litem owes a high degree of loyalty to the ward and should not have any interest even slightly adverse to the ward or any divided loyalties. See §9.57. When actions of the guardian ad litem are fraudulent, the minor or person with a disability is not bound by the guardian's actions and consent to judgment. Newport v Hatton (1924) 195 C 132, 231 P 987.

As an appointee and agent of the court, a guardian ad litem may have benefit of quasi-judicial immunity for acts taken within the scope of this authority. Ward v San Diego County Dep't of Soc. Servs. (ND Cal 1988) 691 F Supp 238; D. G. v Superior Court (1979) 100 CA3d 535, 161 CR 117.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.67 2. Power to Employ Attorney

Guardians ad litem have authority to employ an attorney to prosecute or defend a ward's case, but not the power to bind the minor or the person with a disability to a contract or agreement to pay a specified fee to the attorney. See Fam C §6602 (attorney contract for legal services rendered to minor void unless approved by court). This rule applies to persons with a disability as well as minors. Stafford v Superior Court (1934) 1 C2d 321, 34 P2d 998.

When the minor or person with a disability is a plaintiff, the practice is simply for the guardian to employ counsel at a fee to be set by the court. The court ordinarily approves the fee and deducts it from the plaintiff's recovery at the close of litigation. See §9.75.

When the minor or person with a disability is a defendant, however, and the cost of employing counsel is to be charged to the ward's estate, the practice is to petition for an order authorizing employment of an attorney at a reasonable fee. A contingent fee contract also requires court approval. See, e.g., In re Price (1923) 61 CA 592, 215 P 710. Prob C §2644. For a petition form, see §9.91.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.68 3. Power to Conduct Litigation

The primary duty of a guardian ad litem is to represent the ward in the subject litigation. Morris v Standard Oil Co. (1923) 192 C 343, 348, 219 P 998. The guardian's powers to direct, manage, and control the litigation are exclusive (In re Price (1923) 61 CA 592, 215 P 710), but limited. The guardian has the power to bind the ward in procedural steps of the litigation (Cloud v Market St. Ry. (1946) 74 CA2d 92, 168 P2d 191), but may not, without court approval, admit or stipulate matters that adversely affect the ward's interest (Berry v Chaplin (1946) 74 CA2d 652, 169 P2d 442).

In Regency Health Servs. v Superior Court (1998) 64 CA4th 1496, 76 CR2d 95, the trial court ruled that only the actual party was required to sign answers to interrogatories and that, because the plaintiff was incompetent, she was exempt from responding. The court of appeal held that the guardian ad litem had the responsibility to facilitate compliance with the ward's discovery obligations, including conducting a reasonable investigation to obtain and furnish responsive information and to verify the responses.

A minor's statements to a guardian ad litem in response to questions asked at the request of the minor's attorney, either for the purpose of preparing answers to interrogatories or to assist the attorney in preparation for trial, are protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege. De Los Santos v Superior Court (1980) 27 C3d 677, 166 CR 172. The court in De Los Santos held that the guardian was "reasonably necessary" for the transmission of the information to the lawyer for the accomplishment of the purpose for which the lawyer was consulted.

The failure of the guardian ad litem of a minor (who was rendered permanently incompetent through another's fault) to commence litigation within 1 year after the guardian's appointment will not prevent commencement of a lawsuit when the minor reaches majority. Tzolov v International Jet Leasing, Inc. (1991) 232 CA3d 117, 283 CR 314.

4. Power to Compromise Claim

§9.69 a. Statutory Authority

Code of Civil Procedure §372(a) provides that on approval of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending, the guardian ad litem may:

- Compromise the claim or demand;
- Agree to entry of an order or judgment for or against the ward;
- Satisfy any order or judgment in favor of the ward; or
- Release or discharge any claim of the ward under a compromise.

See also CCP §373.5 (guardian ad litem for unborn or unascertained persons).

On the right of a parent or guardian to compromise a claim in favor of the minor or person with a disability before suit is brought, see Prob C §3500.

b. Procedures

§9.70 (1) Contents of Petition

Under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1384(a), a petition for court approval to compromise the claim of a minor or a person with a disability under CCP §372(a) or Prob C §3500 must comply with Cal Rules of Ct 7.950-7.952. The petition must be verified and must contain a full disclosure of all information that has any bearing on the reasonableness of the compromise, covenant, settlement, or disposition. Cal Rules of Ct 7.950 (petition must be prepared on Judicial Council Form MC-350, Petition to Approve Compromise of Disputed Claim or Pending Action or Disposition of Proceeds of Judgment for Minor or Person with a Disability).

California Rules of Court 7.951 requires that, when the plaintiff is represented by counsel, the petition must also disclose the attorney's interest in the petition to compromise a claim. Rule 7.951 further lists the information that the petition must disclose.

In certain circumstances, an expedited petition may be submitted for approval. Cal Rules of Ct 7.950.5 (petitioner must fully complete Judicial Council Form MC-350EX, Expedited Petition to Approve Compromise of Disputed Claim or Pending Action or Disposition of Proceeds of Judgment for Minor or Person With a Disability).

When the case involves a personal injury claim, it is good practice, and required by some courts, to attach to the petition a copy of a recent medical report. The petition should be verified or in the form of a declaration. See form in §9.92.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.71 (2) Hearing

Although not required (Burge v City & County of San Francisco (1953) 41 C2d 608, 262 P2d 6), an ex parte hearing on the petition for approval of compromise is commonly held by the court. If a hearing is held, both the guardian ad litem (or, for a compromise under Prob C §3500, the person representing the minor or person with a disability) and the minor or person with a disability must be present, unless excused for good cause. The court may require evidence on the merits of the claim and, in a personal injury compromise, evidence on the nature and extent of injury, care, treatment, and hospitalization, as well as the presence and testimony of the attending physician. Cal Rules of Ct 7.950; Judicial Council Form MC-350.

The court must determine an expedited petition without a hearing unless the petitioner requests one at the same time that:

- The plaintiff files the expedited petition;
- An interested party files an objection; or
- The court schedules a hearing, either on its own motion or because it decides not to grant the expedited petition in full.

Cal Rules of Ct 7.950.5(c).

§9.72 (3) Distribution of Award

Any money awarded to a minor or a person with a disability under a court-approved settlement or judgment must be paid in accordance with Prob C §§3600-3612. CCP §372(a). See also CCP §373.5 (stating that distribution of funds from settlements or judgments in favor of unborn or unascertained persons are also governed by Prob C §§3600-3612). These sections provide that from the total award the court shall order paid such reasonable expenses (medical or otherwise, including reimbursement to a parent or guardian), costs, and attorney fees as the court approves.

If the settlement or judgment does not exceed $20,000, and there is no general guardian, the court may (Prob C §3611):

- Require that the balance of the funds be deposited in an insured account in a financial institution in California, or with a county treasurer (under certain conditions), or in a single premium deferred annuity, subject to withdrawal only on court order;
- Require appointment of a general guardian to receive the funds or property;
- Require that the balance of any money be paid to a special needs trust;
- Prescribe other conditions that the court considers are in the best interests of the ward;
- Require that the remaining balance be deposited with the county treasurer;
- In the case of a minor, require that the money be transferred to a custodian for the benefit of the minor under the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act (Prob C §§3900-3925);
- In the case of a minor, require that the property or money be placed in a trust revocable by the minor on reaching age 18; or
- Require that the remaining balance or other property be delivered to the person with a disability.

If the funds or property exceed $20,000, the court must adopt one of the above procedures. In either event, the court may prescribe such other conditions as it considers to be in the best interests of the ward.

When settlement or judgment does not exceed $5000, the court may order payment directly to a parent of the minor or the person with a disability on terms and conditions specified in Prob C §§3400-3402. Prob C §3611(e).

Funds deposited subject to withdrawal on court order may be withdrawn on ex parte petition by the trustee of the account. The court in which the action is pending normally retains jurisdiction over the funds until the minor reaches age 18 (Prob C §3612) or until the person with a disability attains capacity and the court terminates jurisdiction. Prob C §3612. Some counties have printed forms for withdrawal requests.

D. Terminating Appointment; Compensation

§9.73 1. Procedures

When the litigation ends, the guardian ad litem's duties automatically terminate. The duties do not include collection of funds, or custody of money or property of the ward. These duties are performed by a guardian or conservator of the estate, whom the court may appoint specifically for this purpose, or as otherwise ordered by the court. CCP §372(a); Prob C §3601. See also In re Price (1923) 61 CA 592, 215 P 710.

Termination may also occur during litigation on petition by (1) the guardian or some other interested person (e.g., on grounds of conflict of interest; see §9.57) or (2) the minor or person with a disability who has since attained capacity and wishes to personally conduct the litigation (see §9.74).

A petition to terminate a guardianship should be set for hearing with notice of the hearing given to all persons as provided in Prob C §1460(b)(5). See Prob C §1601.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.74 2. Termination When Ward Attains Majority or Competence

When a guardian is appointed solely because of a person's minority, the guardianship is terminated by adoption or emancipation of the minor or by the minor's having attained majority (18 years of age). Prob C §1600. Although §1600 implies that termination of the minor's guardianship is automatic on emancipation or attainment of majority, the better practice is to petition the court for an order of termination. See §§9.73 (text), 9.94 (form).

Conservatorships continue until terminated by the court or until the death of the conservatee. Prob C §1860.

© The Regents of the University of California

§9.75 3. Compensation

Code of Civil Procedure §372(a), which provides for appointment and duties of guardians ad litem generally, is silent on the subject of compensation.

Code of Civil Procedure §373.5, which permits appointment of a guardian ad litem to represent a class of unascertained or unknown persons or persons not in being who may have an interest in property under a written agreement, provides that the guardian is entitled to reasonable compensation for services rendered and to reimbursement for expenses reasonably incurred. Compensation is paid either from the property or by the plaintiff or petitioner, as ordered by the court. If paid by the plaintiff or petitioner, execution may issue on behalf of the guardian. CCP §373.5.

PRACTICE TIP: A guardian ad litem might ask for compensation and reimbursement under the provisions of the Probate Code for compensating guardians generally. See Prob C §2623 and Prob C §2640 on procedure and compensation, including the unavailability of compensation in certain circumstances. The amount would be determined by the facts of each case and be within the discretion of the court. Estate of Schluter (1930) 209 C 286, 286 P 1008. See also Guardianship of Ewing (1941) 42 CA2d 629, 109 P2d 748; Guardianship of Forthmann (1931) 118 CA 332, 5 P2d 472.

I. INTRODUCTION

§10.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses applications to waive court fees and costs when a litigant cannot afford them. It covers the nature of relief and the persons entitled (see §§10.9-10.8), and waiver at the trial level (see §§10.9-10.38). See forms in §§10.39-10.45. On waiver of fees and costs at the appellate level, see California Civil Appellate Practice, Chap 7 (3d ed Cal CEB 1996).

NOTE: Proceeding without paying court fees and costs is also known as proceeding "in forma pauperis" (in the manner of a poor person).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.2 B. Governing Law

Fee waiver applications are governed by Govt C §§68630-68641. Applicants must use the procedures and forms specified by the Judicial Council for fee waiver applications. See Govt C §68633(a)-(c); Cal Rules of Ct 3.50-3.58. The forms are contained in Cal Rules of Ct App A.

California Rules of Court 3.55-3.58 specify several types of fees that must or may be waived. The list, however, is not exclusive, and a request for waiver of fees not specifically covered may be based on common law principles, on other statutory authorities, and on constitutional principles.

A number of other specific statutory sections afford relief to indigent litigants in particular contexts. See, e.g., CCP §§995.240, 1029.5-1029.6 (codifying right to waiver of various bonds and undertakings); CCP §1094.5(a) (providing transcripts for indigents seeking review of agency decisions through administrative mandamus); Govt C §15421 (providing for appointment of appellate counsel to indigents in capital cases and specified noncapital appeals); Welf & I C §366.26(f)(2) (providing for appointment of counsel to indigents in proceedings to terminate parental rights). See also Bus & P C §§8030.2, 8031 (shorthand reporting services).

II. NATURE OF RELIEF; PERSONS ENTITLED

§10.3 A. Persons Eligible for Fee Waiver

Under Govt C §68632, there are three ways in which an applicant is eligible for an initial fee waiver. See §§10.8-10.6. The standards apply at both the trial and appellate stages. The manner in which an applicant qualifies can affect the scope of relief available.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.4 1. Receipt of Specified Government Benefits

The court must grant a fee waiver to an applicant who receives benefits under one of the following governmental programs:

- Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and State Supplemental Payments (SSP) programs (Welf & I C §§12200-12205);
- California Work Opportunity and Responsibility to Kids Act (CalWORKs) (Welf & I C §§11200-11526.5) (formerly AFDC);
- Federal Tribal Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (Tribal TANF) (Welf & I C §10553.2);
- Food Stamp program (7 USC §§2011-2029);
- California Food Assistance Program (Welf & I C §§18930-18935);
- County Relief, General Relief, or General Assistance programs (Welf & I C §§17000-17501);
- Cash Assistance Program for Aged, Blind, and Disabled Legal Immigrants (CAPI) (Welf & I C §§18937-18943);
- In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS) (Welf & I C §§12300-12317.2);
- Medi-Cal (Welf & I C §§14000-14029.5).

See Govt C §68632(a).

The above list of government benefit programs is exclusive; receipt of other types of aid, e.g., retirement or disability social security income, and veterans benefits, does not automatically confer a right to fee waiver. Applicants receiving aid from programs other than those named above must qualify for fee waiver by meeting the criteria discussed in §§10.5-10.6.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.5 2. Income Near Poverty Level

The court must also grant an initial fee waiver to an applicant whose income is no more than 125 percent of the current official poverty guidelines. Govt C §68632(b). The federal poverty guidelines, which are geared to family size and geographic location, are published annually in the Federal Register by the Department of Health and Human Services. The monthly equivalents of these annual guidelines are published by the Judicial Council on the Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001), reproduced in §10.36.

PRACTICE TIP: Because Judicial Council revision and publication of the Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001) sometimes lag behind changes in the federal guidelines, counsel should be sure that the form is both current and consistent with the latest federal guidelines.

The income levels reflected on the Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001) refer to the combined monthly gross income of the family, not just the income of the individual applicant. Although "family" is not defined, it presumably refers only to residential family members sharing household expenses; the income of relatives not providing support to the applicant or the applicant's household should not affect the applicant's right to fee waiver. See current Department of Health and Human Services poverty guidelines in the Federal Register.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.6 3. Common Necessaries of Life

The court must grant an initial fee waiver to a litigant who, as individually determined by the court, "cannot pay court fees without using moneys that normally would pay for the common necessaries of life for the applicant and the applicant's family." Govt C §68632(c). The applicant must complete a financial statement on the application form showing (Govt C §68633(c)(2)):

- Monthly income and expenses; and
- A summary of assets and liabilities.

For Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001), see §10.39.

The applicant need not show that he or she is entirely destitute but must show more than that payment of the fee would be burdensome or inconvenient. Ferguson v Keays (1971) 4 C3d 649, 94 CR 398. The applicant is not required to save funds for a period of months, simply to pay the fees. Earls v Superior Court (1971) 6 C3d 109, 117, 98 CR 302.

PRACTICE TIP: If eligibility seems likely to be questioned, counsel should provide an attachment to the application, citing any relevant authorities to show the client's inability to pay costs without sacrificing some other necessity. Factors taken into account when establishing eligibility for free legal services or for governmental benefit programs may provide useful analogies for arguing indigency. See, e.g., 45 CFR §1611.5.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.7 B. Special Rules for State and County Inmates

A person sentenced to a state prison or confined in a county jail must pay the full amount of trial court filing fees and costs. Govt C §68635(b). Although inmates with the means to pay must do so, no inmate may be prohibited from filing or appealing a civil action because of the inability to pay the filing fee. Govt C §68635(h). He or she must follow the procedures designed to ensure that prison labor income is applied to waived court fees. Govt C §68635.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.8 C. Indigent Litigant Suing on Behalf of Nonindigent Real Party in Interest

A representative indigent litigant, suing or defending for the benefit of a nonindigent real party in interest, e.g., an executor or administrator suing on behalf of an estate or a guardian on behalf of a ward, is not allowed to waive fees. See Isrin v Superior Court (1965) 63 C2d 153, 156, 45 CR 320.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.9 D. Waivable Fees and Costs

California Rules of Court 3.55 and 3.56 set forth two categories of costs that must or may be waived for litigants entitled to an initial fee waiver. These categories may be roughly characterized as:

- Those necessary for or incidental to early prosecution or defense of the action (Cal Rules of Ct 3.55); and
- Those incurred in bringing the action to trial (Cal Rules of Ct 3.56).

NOTE: The initial waiver of court fees and costs may be granted at any stage of the proceedings and includes the fees and costs specified in both Cal Rules of Ct 3.55 and 3.56. Govt C §68631; Cal Rules of Ct 3.50(b). The term "initial" fee waiver is used because this waiver may later be modified, withdrawn, or retroactively denied if the court determines that the applicant was not or is no longer eligible for a fee waiver. See Govt C §68631; Cal Rules of Ct 3.50(a).

Separate Judicial Council forms are provided for seeking waiver of each category of costs. Cal Rules of Ct 3.51. Requests for relief other than waiver of court costs and fees, such as waiver of a bond or appointment of counsel, are usually addressed by noticed motion.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.10 1. Fees Waivable at Initial Application

To establish the right to initial fee waiver, a litigant must file an application on Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001), reproduced in §10.39. Cal Rules of Ct 3.51. Granting the application automatically waives the following costs and fees (Cal Rules of Ct 3.55):

- Filing fees;
- Clerk's fees for reasonably necessary certifications and copying;
- Clerk's fees for issuance of process and certificates;
- Clerk's fees for transmittal of papers;
- Court-appointed interpreter's fees for parties in small claims actions;
- Sheriff's and marshal's fees as provided for in Govt C §§26720-26750, which include fees for service of process and levies;
- Reporter's fees for attendance at hearings and trials held within 60 days of the date of the order granting the application;
- Court fees for telephone appearances under Govt C §367.5; and
- Clerk's fees for preparing, copying, certifying, and transmitting clerk's transcript on appeal.

The list of fees in Cal Rules of Ct 3.55 is not exclusive. For example, in Villa v Superior Court (1981) 124 CA3d 1063, 177 CR 752, the court of appeal held that the portion of a filing fee representing a $7 library fee amounted to "clerk's fees for filing papers" and was within the class of fees and costs that was waivable. In addition, an indigent pursuing a mandamus action in superior court may be entitled to a free transcript of the administrative proceedings. Board of Med. Quality Assur. v Superior Court (1988) 203 CA3d 691, 250 CR 182.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.11 2. Fees Waivable on Additional Application

If a waiver of fees and costs other than those provided for in Cal Rules of Ct 3.55 is needed, a Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-002), reproduced in §10.41, must be used. Cal Rules of Ct 3.51, 3.56. The additional fees and costs that may be waived under Cal Rules of Ct 3.56 include:

- Jury fees and expenses;
- Court-appointed interpreter's fees for witnesses;
- Witness fees for peace officers whose attendance is reasonably necessary;
- Reporter's fees for attendance at hearings and trials held more than 60 days after the date of the order granting the original application;
- Witness fees of court-appointed experts; and
- Other fees and expenses itemized in the application. Cal Rules of Ct 3.56.

The court has discretion under Cal Rules of Ct 3.56 to approve only the additional costs and fees it finds necessary. If the court has not previously granted an initial fee waiver, a Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001) should be submitted along with the Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-002) to provide the court with the information necessary to determine the applicant's financial eligibility for waiver of costs and fees.

PRACTICE TIP: When preparing a Request to Waive Additional Court Fees, counsel may attach a memorandum to support waiver for extraordinary items.

Waiver of costs and fees covered by a Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-002) may be had even if the party has paid initial filing fees.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.12 3. Bonds and Undertakings

A plaintiff who has been granted in forma pauperis status has the right to a waiver of an undertaking. Alshafie v Lallande (2009) 171 CA4th 421, 434, 89 CR3d 788. A bond requirement can be waived without a formal fee waiver application, even if the litigant is able to pay initial court fees. See Conover v Hall (1974) 11 C3d 842, 852, 114 CR 642 (preliminary injunction bond).

Relief from the requirement to post a bond is usually addressed in the context of a motion to require, or a hearing to set, the amount of the bond or undertaking. If an initial fee waiver has not already been granted, a Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001) (see §10.39) should be submitted in connection with the motion proceedings requesting waiver of the bond so that the court may determine financial eligibility.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.13 4. Appointed Counsel

In limited situations, due process may entitle an indigent civil litigant to appointed counsel. Salas v Cortez (1979) 24 C3d 22, 154 CR 529. When there is no statutory provision for payment of fees, some courts have held that counsel may be called on to serve without compensation. County of Tulare v Ybarra (1983) 143 CA3d 580, 192 CR 49; County of Los Angeles v Superior Court (1980) 102 CA3d 926, 162 CR 636; County of Fresno v Superior Court (1978) 82 CA3d 191, 196, 146 CR 880.

PRACTICE TIP: Judicial Council forms are not suited for requesting appointment of counsel, and the request should probably be made by way of a specially prepared ex parte application or motion. If initial fee waiver has not already been established, a Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001), see §10.39, should be submitted with the request for appointment of counsel.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.14 5. No Waiver of Third Party Fees

The right to fee waiver relieves a party only from "public exactions." County of Sutter v Superior Court (1966) 244 CA2d 770, 772, 53 CR 424. Private persons, e.g., an opposing party or official court reporter, are not required to pay out their own money or its equivalent to provide free services. Roberts v Superior Court (1968) 264 CA2d 235, 239, 70 CR 226. Nor, in most cases, is the county required to pay third party fees. See Rucker v Superior Court (1930) 104 CA 683, 286 P 732.

III. PROCEDURE FOR APPLYING FOR FEE WAIVER

A. Applying for Waiver

§10.15 1. Mandatory Application Forms

A litigant must use the mandatory fee waiver application forms adopted by the Judicial Council. See Request to Waive Court Fees (Judicial Council Form FW-001), reproduced in §10.36; Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-002), reproduced in §10.41. The clerk must provide these forms to an applicant free of charge. Govt C §68633(d); Cal Rules of Ct 3.51. No applicant is required to complete any form as part of his or her application under Cal Rules of Ct 3.50-3.58 other than forms adopted by the Judicial Council (see Govt C §§68633(d)), except as authorized by Govt C §68635(c) (inmate's statement of account).

NOTE: At the time of application, the applicant is not required to provide documents proving income, dependents, or expenses. Govt C §68633(c)(2). The applicant is also not required to provide evidence of identity, to submit to interviews regarding financial circumstances, or to be physically present when filing the application. Govt C §68633(c)(2). The court may later require proof of benefits or financial information to verify eligibility. Govt C §68633(e).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.16 2. Attorney Advancing Litigation Costs

If the applicant is represented by an attorney under an agreement that counsel will advance litigation costs, the applicant must indicate that agreement in the application. Govt C §68633(g). The court must set a hearing to determine whether or not the applicant is able to pay the court fees without using moneys that normally would pay for the common necessaries of life. Govt C §68633(g). Applicants represented by a qualified legal services project do not need to include this information in their application. Govt C §68633(g). The fact that the applicant is represented by counsel under a contingent fee contract is not a ground for denying relief. Garcia v Santana (2009) 174 CA4th 464, 471, 94 CR3d 299.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.17 3. Attaching Order Form

When submitting either application for initial waiver, the applicant should also submit a proposed Order on Court Fee Waiver (Judicial Council Form FW-003), reproduced in §10.37. The caption and items 1-3, showing the name and address of the applicant, the applicant's lawyer, if the applicant has one, and the date on which the application was filed, should be filled in; the remainder will be filled in by the court when it acts on the application.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.18 4. Confidentiality

The application and the information in it must be kept confidential; only specified court personnel and persons authorized by the applicant or by court order are given access to the form, and they may disclose information in it only as provided by law or court order. Govt C §68633(f); Cal Rules of Ct 3.54(a). Access may be sought by noticed motion supported by a declaration showing good cause for release of the confidential information. Cal Rules of Ct 3.54(b). A court order granting access may limit the persons who may access the information and the use of information after it has been released. Cal Rules of Ct 3.54(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.19 B. When and Where to File

The application for initial fee waiver should be filed at the time, or before, the indigent's first pleading is filed at the superior court. The clerk must accept the application for initial fee waiver for filing; if the applicant submits an incomplete application, the clerk may request that the applicant supply the omitted information, but the clerk still must file the application. Govt C §68634(b). The clerk cannot request that the applicant furnish information that is not required on the application form, or provide documents to support the information other than those required under Govt C §68633. Govt C §68634(b). If the application is presented with the initial pleading, the clerk must file the pleading, without charging any fee. See Govt C §68634(c).

PRACTICE TIP: Because some clerks are unaware of these obligations, it is useful to take a copy of the court rules and statutory provisions when filing pleadings for which a fee waiver has been requested.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.20 C. Court Review and Determination

The court may delegate to the clerk the authority to grant applications that meet the eligibility and application requirements of Govt C §§68632 and 68633, but the clerk may not deny or partially grant an application. Govt C §68634(d). The application must be considered and determined without regard to the substance of the pleadings filed. Govt C §68634(e). After reviewing the application, the court will issue an order granting or denying the request for initial fee waiver. Govt C §68634(e); Cal Rules of Ct 3.54.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.21 1. Application Granted

The court must grant the application if the information provided establishes that the applicant meets the eligibility criteria and application requirements of Govt C §§68632 and 68633. Govt C 68634(e)(1); Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(1). The order granting an application must be made on Order on Court Fee Waiver (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-003) (see §10.42) (Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(2)) or, prior to January 1, 2013, on a substantially identical electronically generated court order (Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(6)). The order must be accompanied by a blank Notice of Improved Financial Situation or Settlement (Judicial Council Form FW-010), which is reproduced in §10.41 (see §10.30).

The application is deemed granted unless the court gives notice of action on the application within 5 days after it is filed. Govt C §68634(f); Cal Rules of Ct 3.53. If the application is deemed granted, the court clerk must prepare and serve a Notice: Waiver of Court Fees (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-005) (see form in §10.38) 5 court days after the application is filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.53.

PRACTICE TIP: Once an initial fee waiver is granted, it is good practice to obtain certified copies of the order to present when filing subsequent pleadings, when requesting a sheriff or marshall to serve process, or when requesting subsequent relief. Having these copies in hand will eliminate the need to obtain the court file each time proof of fee waiver is in issue. The cost of a reasonable number of certified copies is waived by grant of the application. Cal Rules of Ct 3.55(2).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.22 2. Partial Payments and Installments

After notice and an opportunity to be heard, the court may require an applicant seeking waiver of fees under the common necessaries of life to pay a portion of court fees, or to pay court fees over a period of time or under some other equitable arrangement. Govt C §68634(e)(5).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.23 3. Application Denied

If the court denies the application in whole or in part, the applicant has 10 days after the date that notice is given by the clerk in which to pay fees and costs already incurred, unless the applicant submits a new application or requests a hearing within that time. Govt C §68634(g). If the applicant does not pay within 10 days, the clerk must void the papers that were filed without payment of the court fees and costs. Govt C §68634(g).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.24 a. Application Is Incomplete

The court may deny the application if the application is incomplete. Govt C §68634(e)(2). The court must give the applicant notice of the specific reason for denial and a reasonable opportunity to submit a revised application. Govt C §68634(e)(2). The order denying an application must be made on Order on Court Fee Waiver (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-003) (see §10.42) (Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(2)) or, prior to January 1, 2013, on a substantially identical electronically generated court order (Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(6)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.25 b. Information Conclusively Establishes Applicant Is Ineligible for Fee Waiver

The court may deny the application if the information provided on the application conclusively establishes that the applicant is not eligible for an initial fee waiver under Govt C §68632 on the grounds requested. Govt C §68634(e)(3). The court must give the applicant notice of the specific reason for denial and a reasonable opportunity to request a hearing. Govt C §68634(e)(3). See Cruz v Superior Court (2004) 120 CA4th 175, 14 CR3d 917 (trial court must hold hearing before denying applicant's fee waiver request when there is substantial evidentiary conflict). The order (see form in §10.42) must be accompanied by a blank Request for Hearing About Fee Waiver Order (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-006), reproduced in §10.44. Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(5). The applicant may submit additional information at the hearing. Govt C §68634(e)(3).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.26 4. Eligibility Hearings

The court may set an eligibility hearing to determine whether the applicant may receive a fee waiver. At an eligibility hearing the court cannot require information unrelated to the eligibility criteria or application requirements in Govt C §§68632 and 68633. Govt C §68634(e).

The court must give a written statement of reasons if it denies an application in whole or in part. Govt C §68634(e)(5).

An order determining an application after a hearing must be made on Order on Court Fee Waiver After Hearing (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-008), reproduced in §10.40. Cal Rules of Ct 3.52(3).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.27 a. Veracity of Statements in Application

The court may set an eligibility hearing if it has good reason to doubt the veracity of the factual statements in the application. Govt C §68634(e)(4). The court must give the applicant 10 days notice of the hearing and the specific reason that it doubts the veracity of the factual statements. Govt C §68634(e)(4). The court may require that the applicant provide specified, reasonably available, additional information concerning the truthfulness of the factual statements in the application. Govt C §68634(e)(4).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.28 b. Information Does Not Conclusively Establish Applicant Is Eligible for Fee Waiver

The court may also set an eligibility hearing if the information provided on the application does not establish that the applicant meets the requirements but that information does not conclusively establish that the applicant is not eligible for an initial fee waiver on the grounds requested. Govt C §68634(e)(5). The court must give the applicant 10 days notice of the hearing and the specific reason why the court has not granted the application. Govt C §68634(e)(5). The court may require that the applicant provide specified, reasonably available, additional information. Govt C §68634(e)(5).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.29 5. Applicant Request for Hearing

If an application is denied in whole or in part, the applicant may request a hearing under Govt C §68634(e). Govt C §68634(g). An applicant who wishes to challenge an adverse ruling or who has additional information bearing on the grounds for denial may seek reconsideration of the application from the judge or commissioner who made the order. A final order denying fee waiver relief is not appealable but may be reviewed by writ of mandate. Haglund v Superior Court (1982) 139 CA3d 256, 188 CR 627. See CCP §1085.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.30 IV. CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES

A litigant who received an initial fee waiver relief must notify the court within 5 days of any changes in financial condition, including receipt or the promised payment of moneys in settlement, that affect his or her ability to pay costs and fees that were initially waived. Govt C §68636(a). See Notice to Court of Improved Financial Situation or Settlement (Judicial Council Form FW-010), reproduced in §10.41.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.31 A. Before Final Disposition of the Case

If before final disposition of the case the court obtains information suggesting that the litigant is not entitled or is no longer entitled to a fee waiver, the court may order the person to appear for an eligibility hearing. Govt C §68636(b). The court must provide the litigant 10 days written notice of the hearing and the specific reasons why the initial fee waiver might be reconsidered. Govt C §68636(b). See Notice to Appear for Reconsideration of Fee Waiver (Judicial Council Form FW-011), reproduced in §10.48. The court may require the litigant to provide reasonably available evidence, including financial information, to support his or her eligibility for the fee waiver, but it cannot require information unrelated to the eligibility criteria. Govt C §68636(b). The court can only conduct such a hearing once every 6 months. Govt C §68636(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.32 B. At Final Disposition of the Case

At the time of final disposition of the case, the court may give notice that a litigant whose fees and costs were initially waived is required to appear at a court hearing by giving the applicant no less than 10 days written notice of the hearing. Govt C §68636(c). See Notice to Appear for Reconsideration of Fee Waiver (Judicial Council Form FW-011), reproduced in §10.48. The court may require the litigant to provide reasonably available evidence, including financial information, to support his or her eligibility for the fee waiver, but it cannot require information unrelated to the eligibility criteria. Govt C §68636(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.33 C. Retrospective Application of Fees

If the court determines that the litigant was not entitled to the initial fee waiver at the time it was granted, the court may order the waiver withdrawn retroactively. Govt C §68636(d). The court may order the litigant to pay to the court immediately, or over a period of time, all or part of the fees that were initially waived. Govt C §68636(d). The court must give the litigant at least 10 court days to begin paying the fees. Govt C §68636(d). See Order on Court Fee Waiver After Reconsideration Hearing (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-012), reproduced in §10.49.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.34 D. Prospective Application of Fees

If the court determines that the litigant's financial circumstances have changed since the grant of the initial fee waiver or partial initial fee waiver, the court may order the fee waiver withdrawn prospectively from the time that the litigant no longer was eligible for a fee waiver. Govt C §68636(e). The court may also order the litigant to pay to the court immediately, or over a period of time, all or part of the fees that were waived since the time that the litigant was no longer eligible for a fee waiver. Govt C §68636(e). The court may order the litigant to begin paying all or part of the court fees assessed for future activities in the case. Govt C §68636(e). The court must give the litigant at least 10 court days to begin paying the fees. Govt C §68636(e). See Order on Court Fee Waiver After Reconsideration Hearing (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-012), reproduced in §10.49.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.35 E. Bad Faith

If the court obtains information that suggests that a litigant whose fees and costs were initially waived is obtaining court services in bad faith, for an improper purpose (e.g., harassment), or to needlessly increase the costs of litigation, the court may give notice that the litigant is required to appear at a court hearing to consider whether limitations should be placed on court services for which fees were initially waived. Govt C §68636(f). See Notice to Appear for Reconsideration of Fee Waiver (Judicial Council Form FW-011), reproduced in §10.42; Order on Court Fee Waiver After Reconsideration Hearing (Superior Court) (Judicial Council Form FW-012), reproduced in §10.49.

© The Regents of the University of California

V. REIMBURSEMENT OF FEE WAIVER

§10.36 A. Judgment in Favor of Party Granted Waiver

If a party granted a waiver is the prevailing party under CCP §1032, the court must issue an order that the party against whom the judgment or dismissal is entered is required to pay to the court the amount of the waived fees and costs. Govt C §68637(b)(1). A satisfaction of judgment may not be obtained until the order has been satisfied. Govt C §68637(b)(1). This rule does not apply to unlawful detainer or certain family law cases, or if the nonprevailing party was also initially awarded a fee waiver. Govt C §68637(b)(3).

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.37 B. Settlement Recovery of $10,000 or More

If the party granted a waiver recovers $10,000 or more from a settlement, compromise, mediation, arbitration award, or other recovery, the waived fees and costs must be paid to the court out of the recovery. Govt C §68637(c). The court has a lien on the recovery in the amount of the waived fees and costs. Govt C §68637(c)(1). The party must first pay the waived fees and costs to the court before the party receives anything of value out of the recovery. Govt C §68637(c)(2). The court may refuse to enter a petition for dismissal in the case until the lien is satisfied. Govt C §68637(c)(4).

An initial fee waiver expires 60 days after the judgment, dismissal, or other final disposition of the case. Govt C §68639.

© The Regents of the University of California

§10.38 VI. Sanctions and Costs Against Party Granted Waiver

Fee waiver litigants are held to the same standard of conduct as are other litigants and may be sanctioned for discovery abuses or frivolous litigation. Midwife v Bernal (1988) 203 CA3d 57, 249 CR 708.

An indigent who has had fees waived is liable for costs as a nonindigent. See Fuller v State (1969) 1 CA3d 664, 670, 82 CR 78 (dictum); County of Sutter v Superior Court (1966) 244 CA2d 770, 772, 53 CR 424 (dictum).

PRACTICE TIP: Counsel may ask the court not to assess costs against an indigent party. It appears to be the practice of some courts in some situations not to do so.

In a trial de novo held after arbitration, costs may be awarded against an indigent only as an offset to awarded damages. CCP §1141.21(b), (c). When appropriate, counsel may object to imposition of costs on a fee waiver litigant through a motion to tax costs.

§10.40 B. Form: Information Sheet on Waiver of Superior Court Fees and Costs (Judicial Council Form FW-001-INFO)

INFORMATION SHEET ON WAIVER OF SUPERIOR COURT FEES AND COSTS

If you have been sued or if you wish to sue someone, or if you are filing or have received a family law petition, and if you cannot afford to pay court fees and costs, you may not have to pay them in order to go to court. If you are getting public benefits, are a low-income person, or do not have enough income to pay for your household's basic needs and your court fees, you may ask the court to waive all or part of your court fees.

1. To make a request to the court to waive your fees in superior court, complete the Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). If you qualify, the court will waive all or part of its fees for the following:
   - Filing papers in superior court (other than for an appeal in a case with a value of over $25,000)
   - Making and certifying copies
   - Sheriff's fee to give notice
   - Court fees for telephone hearings
   - Giving notice and certificates
   - Sending papers to another court department
   - Having a court-appointed interpreter in small claims court
   - Reporter's daily fee (for up to 60 days after the grant of the fee waiver, at the court-approved daily rate)
   - Preparing, certifying, copying, and sending the clerk's transcript on appeal.

2. You may ask the court to waive other court fees during your case in superior court as well. To do that, complete a Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (form FW-002). The court will consider waiving fees for items such as the following, or other court services you need for your case:
   - Jury fees and expenses
   - Fees for court-appointed experts
   - Reporter's daily fees (beyond the 60-day period after the grant of the fee waiver, at the court-approved daily rate)
   - Fees for a peace officer to testify in court
   - Court-appointed interpreter fees for a witness
   - Other necessary court fees

3. If you want the Appellate Division of Superior Court or the Court of Appeal to review an order or judgment against you and you want the court fees waived, ask for and follow the instructions on Information Sheet on Waiver of Appellate Court Fees, Supreme Court, Court of Appeal, Appellate Division (form APP-015/FW-015-INFO).

IMPORTANT INFORMATION!

- You are signing your request under penalty of perjury. Please answer truthfully, accurately, and completely.
- The court may ask you for information and evidence. You may be ordered to go to court to answer questions about your ability to pay court fees and costs and to provide proof of eligibility. Any initial fee waiver you are granted may be ended if you do not go to court when asked. You may be ordered to repay amounts that were waived if the court finds you were not eligible for the fee waiver.
- If you receive a fee waiver, you must tell the court if there is a change in your finances. You must tell the court within five days if your finances improve or if you become able to pay court fees or costs during this case. (File Notice to Court of Improved Financial Situation or Settlement (form FW-010) with the court.) You may be ordered to repay any amounts that were waived after your eligibility came to an end.
- If you receive a judgment or support order in a family law matter: You may be ordered to pay all or part of your waived fees and costs if the court finds your circumstances have changed so that you can afford to pay. You will have the opportunity to ask the court for a hearing if the court makes such a decision.
- If you win your case in the trial court: In most circumstances the other side will be ordered to pay your waived fees and costs to the court. The court will not enter a satisfaction of judgment until the court is paid. (This does not apply in unlawful detainer cases. Special rules apply in family law cases. (Government Code, section 68637(d), (e).)
- If you settle your civil case for $10,000 or more: Any trial court waived fees and costs must first be paid to the court out of the settlement. The court will have a lien on the settlement in the amount of the waived fees and costs. The court may refuse to dismiss the case until the lien is satisfied. A request to dismiss the case (use form CIV-110) must have a declaration under penalty of perjury that the waived fees and costs have been paid. Special rules apply to family law cases.
- The court can collect fees and costs due to the court. If waived fees and costs are ordered paid to the trial court, the court can start collection proceedings and add a $25 fee plus any additional costs of collection to the other fees and costs owed to the court.
- The fee waiver ends. The fee waiver expires 60 days after the judgment, dismissal, or other final disposition of the case or earlier if a court finds that you are not eligible for a fee waiver.
- If you are in jail or state prison: Prisoners may be required to pay the full cost of the filing fee in the trial court but may be allowed to do so over time.

I. INTRODUCTION

§11.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the form and formatting requirements for court papers, i.e., written documents that are to be filed in a trial court in connection with a lawsuit. "Form" in this context refers to the physical properties of the paper; "format" refers to the arrangement of statements and entries that appear on the pages of the paper. These form and format requirements are discussed in §§11.6-11.26. Preprinted and local forms are discussed in §§11.27-11.32. Responding to the clerk's refusal to file is discussed in §11.33. A checklist of procedure for preparing court papers is set forth in §11.34, and a sample first-page format of a court paper is in §11.35.

§11.2 B. Governing Rules

Form and format requirements, set forth in Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119, apply generally to all court papers, unless specified otherwise. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.2. Additional content and format requirements that apply to particular kinds of papers (e.g., complaints and answers, demurrers, motions, petitions) are discussed in the chapters covering the specific papers or pleadings, or the proceedings in which such papers are used. See, e.g., chap 12 on noticed motions.

§11.3 C. Role of Judicial Council; Local Rule Preemption

The Judicial Council, an appointive body headed by the Chief Justice and composed of judges, members of the bar, and legislators, is entrusted under the California Constitution with the authority to make rules "for court administration, practice, and procedure." Cal Const art VI, §6. The Judicial Council has carried out this mandate by adopting the California Rules of Court. Although the Rules of Court may "not be inconsistent with statute" (Cal Const, art VI, §6), they have the force of law once adopted. See Cal Rules of Ct, Introductory Statement.

The Judicial Council has preempted the rule-making authority for all California courts in the following areas (Cal Rules of Ct 3.20):

- Pleadings;
- Demurrers;
- Ex parte applications;
- Motions;
- Discovery;
- Provisional remedies; and
- Form and format of papers.

Rule 3.20(a) provides that

> No trial court, or any division or branch of a trial court, may enact or enforce any local rule concerning these fields. All local rules concerning these fields are null and void unless otherwise permitted or required by a statute or a rule in the California Rules of Court.

The preemption does not apply in the following specific areas (Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(b)):

- Trial and posttrial proceedings (including in limine motions);
- Certain requests for restraining orders and injunctive relief (see CCP §§527.6-527.8);
- Matters governed by the Probate Code, the Family Code, or the Welfare and Institutions Code;
- Criminal matters;
- Eminent domain proceedings; and
- Local rules adopted under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620; see chap 40).

California Rules of Court 10.900 provides that each court must adopt a case management and calendaring system for general civil cases that will advance the goals set forth in Cal Rules of Ct, Standards of J Admin 2.1 (Judicial Administration).

For further discussion of Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, see chapters on specific subjects covered by the rule (e.g., chap 12 (motions); chaps 32-34 (provisional remedies)).

§11.4 D. Trial Court Unification

The superior court has subject matter jurisdiction over civil matters formerly within the municipal court's jurisdiction that are classified as "limited civil cases." CCP §§85-85.1 (defining "limited civil cases" as all actions or special proceedings in which the amount in controversy, exclusive of attorney fees, interest, and costs, does not exceed $25,000). See also CCP §88 (unlimited civil cases). Except for procedures specifically designed to lower litigation costs in limited civil cases, the rules of procedure generally applicable to civil actions also apply to limited civil cases. CCP §90. See, e.g., Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119 (form and format of papers), 3.1100-3.1312 (civil law and motion rules). Rules 2.100-2.119 govern the form of papers filed in limited civil cases in the unified superior court. For further discussion of trial court unification, see chap 6.

§11.5 E. Electronic Access to Court Records

The Rules of Court provide for electronic access to trial courts' electronic records. Cal Rules of Ct 2.500-2.506. "Electronic access" means computer access to court records available to the public through both public terminals at the courthouse and remotely, unless otherwise specified in the Rules of Court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.502(d). An "electronic record" is a computerized court record, regardless of the manner in which it has been computerized. It includes a document that has been filed electronically and an electronic copy or version of a record that was filed in paper form. The term does not include a court record that is maintained only on microfiche, paper, or any other medium that can be read without the use of an electronic device. Cal Rules of Ct 2.502(b).

All electronic records must be made reasonably available to the public in some form, whether in electronic or in paper form, except those that are sealed by court order or are made confidential by law. Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(a). A court that maintains the following records in electronic form must provide electronic access to them, both remotely and at the courthouse to the extent it is feasible to do so (Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(b)):

- Register of actions (as defined in Govt C §69845), calendars, and indexes in all cases (Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(b)(1)); and
- All records in civil cases, except those listed in Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(c)(1)-(8) (courthouse access only) (Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(b)(2)).

A court that maintains the following records in electronic form must provide electronic access to them at the courthouse, to the extent feasible to do so, but may provide remote electronic access only to the records governed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(b) (Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(c)):

- Any proceeding under the Family Code, including, but not limited to, dissolution, legal separation, and nullity of marriage proceedings; child and spousal support proceedings; and child custody proceedings;
- Any record in a juvenile court proceeding;
- Any record in a guardianship or conservatorship proceeding;
- Any record in a mental health proceeding;
- Any record in a criminal proceeding;
- Any record in a civil harassment proceeding under CCP §527.6;
- Any record in a workplace violence prevention proceeding under CCP §527.8; and
- Any record in an elder or dependent adult abuse prevention proceeding under Welf & I C §15657.03.

The requirement that the court provide electronic access to its electronic records "to the extent it is feasible to do so" means that a court must provide electronic access to the extent it has the resources and technical capacity to do so. Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(d). A court may grant electronic access to an electronic record when the record is identified by the case number, the caption of the case, or the name of a party, and only on a case-by-case basis. This case-by-case limitation does not apply to a calendar register, actions, or index. Cal Rules of Ct 2.503(f).

Unless electronically certified by the court, a trial court record available by electronic access does not constitute the official record of the court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.504(b). Additionally, the rules provide that the court may impose fees for the cost of providing public access to its electronic records. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.506.

§11.6 II. FORM AND FORMAT

California Rules of Court 2.100-2.119 prescribe the form and format of papers filed in California trial courts in minute detail, from the size of type that can be used to the weight of the paper. Complying with its requirements is important: Cal Rules of Ct 2.118(a) directs court clerks not to file or accept for filing any paper that does not comply, except the clerk must not reject a paper for filing solely on the ground that

- It is handwritten or hand printed or that the handwriting or hand printing is in a color other than blue-black or black (Cal Rules of Ct 2.118(a)); or
- The party's or attorney's fax or e-mail address is not listed on the first page (Cal Rules of Ct 2.118(b)).

For good cause shown, the court may permit the filing of papers that do not comply with Rules 2.100-2.119 (Cal Rules of Ct 2.118(c)).

A. Physical Form

§11.7 1. Paper: Quality, Weight, and Size

Documents to be filed in the trial court must be on opaque, unglazed, standard quality, white or unbleached paper. The paper must be at least 20-pound weight, and 8½ by 11 inches in size (letter size). Cal Rules of Ct 2.103.

Recycled paper is required for:

- All original papers and forms filed with the court, and all copies of papers, documents, and exhibits, whether filed with the court or served on other parties; and
- The original record on appeal from a limited civil case, any brief filed with the court in a matter to be heard in the appellate division, and all copies of such documents, whether filed with the court or served on other parties.

Cal Rules of Ct 2.101(a)(1)-(2). Whenever the use of recycled paper is required by the California Rules of Court, the attorney, party, or other person filing or serving a document certifies, by the act of filing or service, that the document was produced on paper purchased as recycled. Cal Rules of Ct 2.101(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.8 2. Font; Printed Copies

Papers presented for filing must be typewritten, printed, or prepared by a photocopying or other duplication process that produces clear and permanent copies "equally legible to printing." Cal Rules of Ct 2.104. The print must be black or blue-black (Cal Rules of Ct 2.106) and the typeface the equivalent of Courier, Times Roman, or Helvetica (Cal Rules of Ct 2.105) and in a type not smaller than 12 points (Cal Rules of Ct 2.104).

NOTE: Some law offices save clerical time by photocopying, printing, or otherwise duplicating frequently used court papers, leaving blank spaces and blank lines so that particulars can be typed in when the paper is prepared. The completed forms are accepted for filing as original pages if each signature is an original.

Papers prepared on electronic equipment should be printed on a letter-quality or laser printer. A court clerk may reject papers printed on some ink jet printers if the typeface is not as legible as that produced by a letter quality or laser printer.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.9 3. Lines: Spacing, Numbering

The information typed or printed on court papers must be either double spaced or one-and-one-half spaced, and the lines must be numbered consecutively, except that (Cal Rules of Ct 2.108):

- Descriptions of real property may be single spaced; and
- Footnotes, quotations, and printed forms of corporate surety bonds and undertakings may be single spaced, and lines need not be numbered if they comply generally with the space requirements for first-page format.

Although one-and-one-half spacing permits more lines per page, it does not leave room for interlineation if the typist misses a word or phrase, and it is more difficult to read. See §11.12.

Line numbers must be placed at the left margin and separated from the text of the paper by a vertical column of space at least one-fifth inch in width or a single or double vertical line. Cal Rules of Ct 2.108(4). Each line number must be aligned with a line of type, or the line numbers must be evenly spaced vertically on the page. Line numbers must be consecutively numbered beginning with the number 1 on each page. There must be at least three line numbers in each vertical inch on the page. Cal Rules of Ct 2.108(4).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.10 4. Pages: One-Sided, Margins

Only one side of each page may be used. Cal Rules of Ct 2.102. There must be at least a one-inch left margin and at least a half-inch right margin. Because Rule 2.107 specifies that line numbers must be placed at the left margin, separated from the text by a vertical line or a vertical column of space (see §11.9), each line of text actually begins more than an inch from the left edge of the page.

Although Rules 2.100-2.119 do not specify top and bottom margins, Rule 2.111 states that, at least for the first page, the first line of typing or printing must begin one inch from the top of the page with line number 1. The last numbered line might be a similar distance from the bottom, leaving room for the page number and the footer containing the paper's title below the page number. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.109-2.110; §11.11.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.11 5. Pages: Numbering, Footer, Fastening, Prepunched Holes

The pages of the paper presented for filing must be numbered consecutively at the bottom. Cal Rules of Ct 2.109. All pages of a paper must be full-size original pages without riders. Cal Rules of Ct 2.113.

Except for exhibits, each paper filed with the court must bear a footer in the bottom margin of each page, below the page number and divided from the rest of the page by a printed line. The footer must contain the title of the paper (e.g., "Complaint," "XYZ Corp.'s Motion for Summary Judgment") or some clear and concise abbreviation, printed in at least 10-point type. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1110. See sample from in §11.35.

The pages of a paper must be "firmly bound together at the top." Cal Rules of Ct 2.113. Each paper presented for filing must contain two "pre-punched normal-sized" holes, centered 2½ inches apart, 5/8 of an inch from the top of the paper. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1115.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/11 Pleadings and Court Papers/§11.12 6. Corrections and Changes

§11.12 6. Corrections and Changes

Additions, deletions, or interlineations must be initialed by the clerk or judge at the time of filing. All copies served must conform to the original filed version, including the numbering of lines, pagination, additions, deletions, and interlineations. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1116.

WARNING: The court clerk has authority under Cal Rules of Ct 2.1118 to reject the whole paper that does not comply with Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119.

After a pleading (i.e., complaint, answer, demurrer, cross-complaint; see CCP §422.10) has been filed, a court may permit it to be corrected or amended by alterations on its face. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(d).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.13 7. Unused Lines

The rules do not require that all the numbered lines of a page be used. Some may be left blank. For example, the last line of a typed page may be left blank to start a new paragraph on the next page, or a space on a printed form may be left blank when the material to be inserted does not fill the blank provided for it.

NOTE: Many attorneys insert asterisks, a pair of front slashes, or other marks to show that the line was purposely not used and to prevent unwanted information from being inserted.

© The Regents of the University of California

8. Exhibits

§11.14 a. Attaching; Numbering

Exhibits such as contracts, declarations, or memorandums can be attached to pleadings and other papers. If the exhibit is smaller or larger than the pages of the court paper, it should be fastened to 8½ by 11 inch sheets. If the exhibit was prepared by a machine-copying process, it must be equal to typewritten material in legibility and permanency of image. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1114. If an attached exhibit is illegible, the attorney should also attach a double-spaced typed version. Exhibits written in a foreign language must be accompanied by an English translation, certified under oath by a qualified interpreter. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(g).

Each exhibit must be separated by a hard 8½ by 11 inch sheet with hard paper or plastic tabs that extend below the bottom of the page and that identify the exhibit. An index to the exhibits must be provided. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(f). Exhibits are usually identified by letter (e.g., EXHIBIT A) and pages by number (e.g., EXHIBIT A, page 8 or A-8). Pages from a single deposition and associated exhibits must be designated as a single exhibit. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(f).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.15 b. Incorporation by Reference: Form of Allegation

A statement in a paper that an attached document is incorporated by reference makes that document a part of the pleading or paper as if it were written out in full ("pleaded in haec verba") in the paper. See Holly Sugar Corp. v Johnson (1941) 18 C2d 218, 225, 115 P2d 8. The document must be attached to the paper if practicable; mere reference to it and prayer that it be incorporated do not make it part of the paper. Legg v United Benefit Life Ins. Co. (1960) 182 CA2d 573, 578, 6 CR 73. If a paper refers to an exhibit that cannot practicably be attached because of its physical nature or bulk, that fact should be stated in the paper. This is required when the paper is a complaint for infringement of a literary, artistic, or intellectual production and the production or alleged infringing production is not attached. CCP §429.30(b).

The reference and incorporation clause should directly and clearly show that recitals in the document are part of the allegations of the pleading or paper. See Holly Sugar Corp. v Johnson, supra; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §428 (5th ed 2008). For example:

On _ _[date]_ _, plaintiff and defendant entered into a written agreement, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.16 9. Copies

Usually, the original of each court paper is filed by the court clerk in the folder maintained for the case, a copy is served on each other party or his or her attorney of record, and at least one copy is kept by the person or office that prepared the paper.

All copies served must conform to the original that is filed, including the numbering of lines, pagination, additions, deletions, and interlineations. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1117.

NOTE: Although electronic word-processing equipment can produce numerous duplicates, each looking like an original, possible error and confusion may be avoided by producing one easily recognizable original from which photocopies can be made. Some attorneys stamp or attach a "stick-on" on the front page of each document designating whether it is an original or a copy.

B. First-Page Format

§11.17 1. Name, State Bar Number, Address, Telephone Number, Fax, and E-mail; Representation

The first page of a court paper must show the name, address, and telephone number and State Bar number of the attorney for the party in whose behalf the paper is presented, or the name, address, and telephone number of the party if he or she appears in propria persona. The attorney's address must be the office address or, if the attorney has none, the residence address. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1). This information must appear in the space beginning on the first numbered line, one inch from the top of the page and to the left of the center of the page. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1).

The attorney may also provide a fax number and/or an e-mail address. Their inclusion is optional and does not constitute consent to service by fax or e-mail, unless otherwise provided by law. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1).

NOTE: Parties may file documents by fax in any court that has adopted a local rule permitting fax filing. Cal Rules of Ct 2.304. In addition, parties may agree in writing to accept service by fax. Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(a). For discussion of filing and serving documents by fax, see chap 18.

Below the attorney identification lines is a line identifying the person or entity that the attorney represents.

A party who will appear in person without an attorney can be advised to add words such as "In Propria Persona," "In Pro. Per.," or "For Himself" or "For Herself" after his or her name or on a line below the telephone number.

Typing or print on lines one through seven must be kept to the left of the center of the page, leaving the space on the right for the clerk's use. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(2). See sample form in §11.35.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.18 a. Firm Names; Law Corporations

For each paper filed, Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1) requires the name "of the attorney" for the party on whose behalf the paper is presented and the attorney's State Bar membership number to be specified in the upper-left corner of the first page. This wording seems to preclude the former practice of listing only a firm name without the name of an individual attorney. However, when a law firm name is printed on the first page, in addition to an individual attorney's name and State Bar number, the court will then permit any attorney from that firm (who is a California State Bar member) to appear for the named client without the need to file a form of association or substitution of attorneys. See chap 4.

If the law firm is a professional corporation, the first page of the paper should state the name and State Bar number of an individual attorney who is

- A member of the corporation;
- Admitted to the bar of the court; and
- Principally charged with the litigation's conduct.

The firm name should be followed by words such as "A Professional Corporation," or some other designation that indicates its incorporated status. For example:

Center, CA 99999

If attorneys from different offices are associated in representing the party in whose behalf the paper is presented, all names can be listed beginning on the first line of the first page so that it is clear that all can appear for the party. The first name listed, and the address and telephone number given, should be those of the attorney who is to receive papers served on the party and who can answer inquiries about the case. §11.20 2. Caption

Code of Civil Procedure §422.30 requires every pleading (i.e., every complaint, cross-complaint, answer, or demurrer; see CCP §422.10) to contain a caption setting forth

- The name of the court and county in which the action is brought; and
- The title of the action.

CCP §422.30(a). California Rules of Court 2.111 requires this information to be included on the first page of every paper presented for filing, along with the number of the case, the nature of the paper, and (if the paper is a complaint or petition) the character of the action or proceeding. In a limited civil case, the caption must state that the case is a limited civil case, and the clerk must classify the case accordingly. CCP §422.30(b). See Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9); sample form in §11.35.

§11.21 a. Name of Court

The name or title of the court must be placed no higher than line eight on the first page (no higher than three and one-third inches from the top). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(3). The title of the court is usually centered on the page in capital letters.

No statute or statewide rule requires the title or the name of the superior court to be stated in any particular style. A defect in naming the court will be disregarded in every stage of the action unless it affects a substantial right of a party. CCP §475; Ex parte Fil Ki (1889) 79 C 584, 21 P 974 ("Supreme Court … for the County of Yuba").

California Judicial Council printed forms use the following format:

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF ALAMEDA

An example of a more concise style is:

ALAMEDA COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT

San Francisco lawyers customarily refer to their court as the "Superior Court for the City and County of San Francisco," but "San Francisco County Superior Court" is sufficient.

A Judicial Council form (see §11.27) that is preprinted with the name and address of one court, or with the name of that court's clerk, may be used in another court if the new name is legibly substituted for the old (e.g., by crossing out the old name and typing or printing the new one above it). Such a modification is not a ground for refusal to file the form. Cal Rules of Ct 1.42.

Every pleading filed in a limited civil case must state in the caption that the case is a limited civil case as in the example below. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9)-(10). See §11.27 and sample form in §11.35.

ALAMEDA COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT

LIMITED CIVIL CASE

§11.22 b. Title of Action (Names of Parties)

The title of the case must be placed below the title of the court and to the left of the center of the page. In the title of the case on each initial complaint or cross-complaint, the name of each party must commence on a separate line beginning at the left margin of the page. On any subsequent pleading or paper, it is sufficient in the title of the case to state:

- The name of the first party on each side, with appropriate indication of other parties; and
- That a cross-action is, or cross-actions are, involved, if applicable.

Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(4). For a typical arrangement, see sample form in §11.35.

In the complaint, the names of all parties must be included in the title of the action. In subsequent papers, only the name of the first party on each side need be stated, followed by an appropriate indication of other parties, e.g., "et al." or "and others." CCP §422.40. A cross-complaint should show both the abbreviated title of the action as originally filed and the names of all parties to the cross-action. See chap 26.

The names used should be sufficiently correct and complete to distinguish the parties named from other people whose names may be listed in plaintiff and defendant indexes, and to permit service under the names given. First names and middle initials are customarily stated, if known; if the party's name is common, his or her full middle name may be given. See chap 15 on the effect of misnaming parties in complaints, and chap 14 on stating names of particular types of parties.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.23 c. Number of Case

The number of the case must be placed to the right of and opposite the title of the case. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(5). On the first paper presented for filing in the action, only "No." is typed on the paper with a blank space left for the clerk to stamp or write in the number assigned to the case. See sample form in §11.35. That number is then entered on all subsequent papers.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.24 d. Nature of Paper and Character of Action; Judge's Name and Department

The nature of the paper and, on all complaints and petitions, the character of the action or proceeding must be set forth in the space immediately below the number of the case. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(6). The rules do not define "nature of the paper" or "character of action," but the requirement is satisfied by key words, e.g., "STIPULATION EXTENDING TIME TO ANSWER; ORDER"; "COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES—PERSONAL INJURY." See sample form in §11.35.

If the case includes multiple parties, any answer, response, or opposition must specifically identify the complaining, propounding, or moving party and the complaint, motion, or other matter being answered or opposed, e.g., "DEFENDANT ABC's OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL FURTHER ANSWERS TO INTERROGATORIES." Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(6).

NOTE: The title of the paper must also appear as a footer at the bottom of each page, printed in at least 10-point type. Cal Rules of Ct 2.1110. See §11.11. In a limited civil case, whether or not the amount demanded exceeds $10,000 must appear below the words indicating the character of the action. See §11.27 and sample form in §11.35.

The first pages of each paper must also include, below the nature of the paper or the character of the action or proceeding, the name of the judge and department, if any, to which the case is assigned. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(7).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.25 e. Referee's Name

If the paper is to be filed in a case pending before a referee appointed under CCP §§638-639, below the nature of the paper or the character of the action or proceeding, the word "Referee," followed by the name of the referee, must be included. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(8).

NOTE: A file-stamped copy of the paper (which was filed with the court clerk) must also be provided by the filing party to the referee (or to the private judge). Cal Rules of Ct 2.400(b). See chap 45 on use of referees and private judges.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/11 Pleadings and Court Papers/§11.26 f. Limited Civil Case

§11.26 f. Limited Civil Case

Every pleading and every other paper filed in a limited civil case must state in the caption that the case is a limited civil case as required by CCP §422.30(b). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(10). See CCP §422.10(b) (pleadings in civil actions are complaints, demurrers, answers, and cross-complaints). As a practical matter, attorneys may carry over to the first page of subsequent court papers the caption that appeared on their initial pleadings.

The complaint, petition, or application in a limited civil case must state, immediately below the words indicating the character of the action or proceeding (see §11.24), the amount demanded as follows: "Amount demanded exceeds $10,000" or "Amount demanded does not exceed $10,000," as required by Govt C §70613 (filing fees for first paper in limited civil case). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9). This amount must be specified because it affects the amount of the filing fee. See Govt C §70613.

Section 70613 sets the fee for filing a first paper in a civil case. Thus, the information on the amount demanded may be required only in a complaint, petition, or application that is the first paper in a limited civil case, so that the clerk can set the appropriate amount of fees. At the time of this printing, the fee for the first paper in a limited civil case is $330, but is lowered to $205 when the amount demanded, excluding attorney fees and costs, is $10,000 or less. See Govt C §70613. It then follows that the requirement that one state the "amount demanded" does not appear to apply to captions for papers that are not the first paper in a civil case, such as declarations, stipulations, or orders.

See also the example of the name of the court in §11.21 and the sample form in §11.35.

If a case is reclassified by an amended complaint, cross-complaint, amended cross-complaint, or other pleading under CCP §403.020 (reclassification by filing amended complaint or other initial pleading) or §403.030 (reclassification by filing cross complaint), the caption must indicate that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this pleading. If a case is reclassified by stipulation under CCP §403.050, the title of the stipulation must state that the action or proceeding is reclassified by this stipulation. The caption or title must state that the case is a limited civil case reclassified as an unlimited civil case, or an unlimited civil case reclassified as a limited civil case, or words to that effect. III. PREPRINTED FORMS

A. Judicial Council Forms

§11.27 1. Mandatory and Optional Forms

The Judicial Council has provided preprinted fill-in forms for many commonly used court papers. See Govt C §68511 (authorizing Judicial Council to "prescribe" certain forms). Some Judicial Council forms are mandatory; others are optional. Each mandatory form has the phrase "Form Adopted for Mandatory Use" or "Mandatory Form" in the lower left corner of the first page. Whenever applicable, they must be used by all parties and must be accepted for filing by all the courts. Cal Rules of Ct 1.31.

Optional forms bear the words "Form Approved for Optional Use" or "Optional Form" in the lower left corner of the first page. See Cal Rules of Ct 1.35. The court may not require the use of an altered optional form in place of the Judicial Council form. Cal Rules of Ct 1.35(e).

The court may not require that any mandatory or optional Judicial Council form be printed on any other color paper other than white. Cal Rules of Ct 1.31(f), 1.35(f).

The list of Judicial Council legal forms is published in an appendix to the California Rules of Court. See Cal Rules of Ct App A (list of forms; mandatory forms are indicated by asterisks). Cal Rules of Ct 1.31(b), 1.35(b). It is also available at the Judicial Council's website at www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms. Cal Rules of Ct 1.31(b), 1.35(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.28 2. Contents of Form; Requirements

The references to statutes and rules on the lower right corner of Judicial Council forms are advisory only. The presence or absence of a particular reference is not a ground for rejecting a form otherwise applicable in the action or proceeding for the purpose presented. Cal Rules of Ct 1.40.

Proofs of service are included on some Judicial Council forms solely for the convenience of the parties. A party may use an included proof of service or any other proper proof of service. Cal Rules of Ct 1.41.

If a Judicial Council form is longer than one page, the form may be filed on sheets printed on only one side even if the original form has two printed sides to a sheet. If a form is filed on a sheet printed on two sides, the reverse side must be rotated 180 degrees (printed head to foot). Cal Rules of Ct 2.134(a)-(b).

Any Judicial Council form filed must be a true copy of the original form and must be as legible as a printed form. Cal Rules of Ct 1.43.

A party or attorney may file a duplicate of a Judicial Council form produced by a computer and a printer or similar device with a resolution of at least 300 dots per inch. The device must print, in a contrasting typestyle equivalent to that produced by a typewriter, text that otherwise would have been entered by a typewriter or word processor. Cal Rules of Ct 1.44.

A party or attorney who files a Judicial Council form certifies by filing the form that it is a true and correct copy of the form. Cal Rules of Ct 2.132.

All forms and copies of forms filed with the court must use recycled paper as defined in Cal Rules of Ct 1.6. Cal Rules of Ct 2.131.

All forms presented for filing must be firmly bound at the top and must contain two prepunched normal-sized holes, centered 2½ inches apart and 5/8 inch from the top of the form. Cal Rules of Ct 2.133.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.29 3. Pleading Forms

The forms listed under the "Pleading" heading on the list of Judicial Council forms in Cal Rules of Ct App A are approved by the Judicial Council. Cal Rules of Ct 1.45(a).

Any approved cause of action form may be attached to any approved form of complaint or cross-complaint. Cal Rules of Ct 1.45(b).

A cause of action for which no form has been approved may be prepared in the format prescribed by Cal Rules of Ct in Ch 1 of Div 2 of Title 2 and attached to any approved form of complaint or cross-complaint. Each paragraph within a cause of action must be numbered consecutively, beginning with 1. Each paragraph number must be preceded with one or more identifying letters derived from the title of the cause of action. Cal Rules of Ct 1.45(c).

§11.30 4. Filing

A court must not reject for filing a Judicial Council form for any of the following reasons (Cal Rules of Ct 1.42):

- The form lacks the preprinted title and address of the court or the clerk's preprinted name;
- The form is printed by a publisher or another court;
- The preprinted title and address of another court or its clerk's name is legibly modified;
- The form lacks the name of the clerk;
- The form lacks the court's local form number;
- The form lacks any other material added by a court, unless the material is required by the Judicial Council;
- The form is imprinted with the name or symbol of the publisher, unless the name or symbol replaces or obscures any material on the printed form; or
- The form is legibly and obviously modified to correct a code section number or to comply with the law under which the form is filed.

The clerk must not reject for filing or refuse to file any Judicial Council or local court form solely on the ground that it is completed in handwritten or hand-printed characters or that the handwriting or hand printing is in a color other than blue-black or black. Cal Rules of Ct 2.135.

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.31 5. Obtaining Forms

Judicial Council forms can also be found on the Internet sites of the Judicial Council (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms) and many courts, and may be printed from those websites. Although the forms cannot be completed on screen at the Judicial Council's web page, software is available from commercial providers, such as CEB's SmartLaserä CD-ROM, which allows the user to view, print, and save the forms electronically. See Cal Rules of Ct Appendix A (introduction to list of forms).

The attorney who subscribes to a service that reproduces and updates Judicial Council forms (such as California Judicial Council Forms Manual (Cal CEB 1981)) may photocopy the forms included in the manual.

§11.32 B. Local Court Forms

Many individual courts have adopted, and furnish, preprinted versions of commonly used court papers that have not been adopted or approved by the Judicial Council. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.119, 10.614. Clerks in these courts have sometimes insisted that the local preprinted form be used and refuse to accept a typed version of the paper or a preprinted form from another county. Many of these local practices may disappear as a result of the adoption of Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, 2.100(a), preempting local rules in many areas of procedure. See §11.3. See also Cal Rules of Ct 1.42 (prohibits rejection for Judicial Council forms for various listed reasons).

© The Regents of the University of California

§11.33 IV. RESPONDING TO CLERK'S REFUSAL TO FILE

If a court clerk has rejected a paper submitted for filing, asserting that it does not comply with court rules, the wisest course in most situations is to redraft the paper. This is true even when the clerk's objection to filing the paper seems overly technical or a misinterpretation of the applicable rule or when counsel believes the court's local requirements conflict with provisions of the California Rules of Court. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(a) (Judicial Council rules of court preempt local rules relating to form and format of papers and other specified matters), discussed in §11.3. See also Cal Rules of Ct 1.35 (court may not require use of altered optional Judicial Council form in place of Judicial Council form), 1.42 (court clerk may not reject Judicial Council form because, e.g., it lacks preprinted title or address of court or is printed by publisher or another court), discussed in §11.33, and Carlson v State Dep't of Fish & Game (1998) 68 CA4th 1268, 80 CR2d 601 (superior court clerk may not reject complaint that complies with state requirements on ground that it does not comply with local rules).

A complaint is not filed if it is rejected by the clerk's office and the clerk's rejection of a filing does not operate to extend the time limit for filing papers. Liang v San Francisco Residential Rent Stabilization & Arbitration Bd. (2004) 124 CA4th 775, 21 CR3d 715; Duran v St. Luke's Hosp. (2003) 114 CA4th 457, 8 CR3d 1 (complaint properly dismissed because plaintiffs did not submit full amount of filing fee before statute of limitations had run).

NOTE: It is usually no service to the client to battle with the court on issues that are unimportant to the litigation.

Occasionally, however, circumstances may arise in which it is difficult or impossible to comply with the rules in the first instance or to redraft a paper that was rejected. The rules of court permit a judge to order the clerk to file a document that does not comply with the rules of court "for good cause shown." Cal Rules of Ct 2.118(c). Good cause might exist, e.g., when the need to file the paper arises unexpectedly when the attorney is away from the office, when the attorney discovers in the clerk's office that the offered paper is not in compliance, when it is impractical to have the paper redone and the deviation will not seriously inconvenience the court or another party.

PRACTICE TIP: The request to a judge for an order directing the clerk to file a paper may be made ex parte, even orally, in emergency situations.

See §11.12 on correcting defects by handwritten changes.

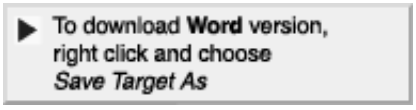
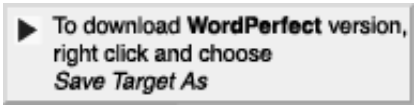
§11.34 V. CHECKLIST: PROCEDURE FOR PREPARING COURT PAPERS





- Identify nature of paper (see §11.24)
- Determine whether preprinted form (Judicial Council, local court, or other) is available

For mandatory preprinted Judicial Council form

- Obtain copy from court clerk, download from Judicial Council's website (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/forms), or photocopy from California Judicial Council Forms Manual (Cal CEB 1981), and
- Enter necessary information and signatures, or
- Draft form using electronic form drafting software, such as CEB's SmartLaserä CD-ROM, and high-quality printer

For optional preprinted Judicial Council form

- Decide whether to obtain and fill out preprinted form (see above) or to prepare paper on pleading paper (see below)

To prepare form on pleading paper

- Ascertain whether court has adopted local form or format requirements for all papers or for particular paper
- Follow Rules of Court for format of paper, such as Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119
- Type form on pleading paper, or use computer and printer to produce paper that conforms to form and format requirements discussed in §§11.6-11.26.

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

1. Plaintiff does not know the true names of the defendants sued as Doe 1 through Doe 10.

2. On July 1, 2002, plaintiff entered into a contract with defendants Joseph D. Medwick, Andrew Barlow, and Does 1 through 5 under which these defendants agreed to supply plaintiff with 8,000 switches on the first day of each month to be used as components in products manufactured and sold by plaintiff. the clerk must be served on each party in the litigation. Counsel should retain a file-stamped copy of the papers for the case file. See chaps 17 (service of process) and 18 (service of papers).

Comment: A format similar to the one illustrated here may be used for all court papers for which the Judicial Council has not adopted a mandatory form. Note that, in addition to its mandatory forms, the Judicial Council has approved optional forms for many commonly-used court papers. See §11.27.

For additional requirements, see Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119. For example, the title of the court must appear on line 8 as shown. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111. See §11.21.

As illustrated, all pleadings and every other paper filed in limited civil cases must contain the words "Limited Civil Case" in the caption. Every complaint, petition, or application filed in a limited civil case must indicate whether the amount demanded is greater or less than $10,000. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9)-(10); §11.26.

I. INTRODUCTION

§12.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers general aspects of the noticed motion procedure. Specific format and timing requirements applicable to particular motions are noted in the other chapters of this book that discuss those motions. This chapter discusses tactical objectives and client consultation (see §§12.5-12.6), the notice of motion (see §§12.7-12.29), supporting documents (see §§12.30-12.59), time for making motion and shortening and extension of time (see §§12.60-12.68), service and filing (see §§12.69-12.77), opposing the motion (see §§12.78-12.94), the reply (see §§12.95-12.96), hearings (see §§12.97-12.103), rulings and orders (see §§12.104-12.120), sanctions (see §12.121), sealing of court records (§§12.122-12.139), and forms (see §§12.140-12.153).

Chapter 13 discusses ex parte applications for orders. Summary judgment motions are discussed in chap 36. Motions to disqualify a judge under CCP §170.6 are discussed in California Trial Practice: Civil Procedure During Trial (3d ed Cal CEB 1995). Motions regarding discovery are discussed in California Civil Discovery Practice (4th ed Cal CEB 2006).

Rules adopted by the Judicial Council may not be inconsistent with statute. Cal Const art VI, §6. To comply with the requirement of consistency, a rule of court may not conflict with the intent of a statute. People v Hall (1994) 8 C4th 950, 35 CR2d 432; Trans-Action Commercial Investors, Ltd. v Firmaterr, Inc. (1997) 60 CA4th 352, 70 CR2d 449. See also California Court Reporters Ass'n v Judicial Council (1997) 59 CA4th 959, 69 CR2d 529.

§12.4 3. Local Court Rules and Policies

The Judicial Council has adopted Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, which preempts local court rules relating to "pleadings, demurrers, ex parte applications, motions, discovery, provisional remedies, and the form and format of papers." Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(a). It does not, however, apply to certain proceedings, such as those in family law, probate, or criminal proceedings, and it does not preempt local rules adopted under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620). Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(b). See also Volkswagen v Superior Court (2001) 94 CA4th 695, 703, 114 CR2d 541 (local rules that manage complex litigation are not preempted). On preemption of local rules generally, see §11.2.

PRACTICE TIP: Because trial courts still have authority to make rules in areas that potentially affect motion practice (e.g., management of fast-track cases), counsel should continue to check local rules before filing a motion. See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 7.12(h) (counsel should attempt to resolve issue with opponent before filing motion). In addition, some courts also have policy or procedure manuals on motions and particular kinds of proceedings, and occasionally individual judges or departments issue policy statements. Although Cal Rules of Ct 3.20 preempts local rule-making, it does not specifically mention local policies and guidelines. Thus, it is unclear what impact it will have. But see Lokeijak v City of Irvine (1998) 65 CA4th 341, 76 CR2d 429 (trial court's "guideline" on summary judgment motions invalidated; guideline was actually rule that conflicted with CCP §437c).

Many law libraries maintain collections of local rules and policy manuals from their own and other counties, and selected court rules are published by some legal newspapers. It is also sometimes advisable to consult with the local court clerk to locate applicable court rules. Local rules can also be found on the court's website. For a listing of local rules websites, see www.courtinfo.ca.gov/rules/localrules.htm.

§12.5 C. Tactical Objectives

Motions are tactical tools, and the attorney's decision to seek an order should be made in the context of the party's overall litigation plan. Making a motion entails time, effort, and expense for the moving party.

An attorney deciding whether to make a motion, or what motion to make, may engage in a kind of "cost-benefit" analysis: Does the anticipated benefit (after being discounted for the possibility of losing the motion and the disadvantage of educating the adversary) outweigh the expense (in time and money) of making the motion? How does that differential compare with those produced by a similar analysis of alternatives to the motion?

Factors to be evaluated include:

- The significance of a successful motion to the ultimate outcome of the case.
- The likelihood of success.
- The danger of alerting the adversary to issues that may not have surfaced until later.

EXAMPLE: There may be an advantage to taking a deposition before making a motion. In some cases, an early motion may save the moving party effort and expense. In others, it is better to delay filing a motion until after investigation and discovery or after an adversary is committed to a position. Some motions can be postponed until it is too late for the adverse party to correct the defect that the motion exposes.

- The favorable and permitted time to make the motion. Delay may create the risk that adversaries will oppose the motion on grounds of laches (see Benjamin v Dalmo Mfg. Co. (1948) 31 C2d 523, 531, 190 P2d 593; Corcoran v City of Los Angeles (1957) 153 CA2d 852, 856, 315 P2d 439), or that the judge who rules on the motion will see the delay as intended to gain an advantage or create an inequity.
- The degree to which the motion will help or interfere with settlement possibilities.
- The cost of making the motion, in terms of money, effort, time, and continued amicability among counsel.
- Less costly measures that might achieve an acceptable result. For example, the objective might be achieved by simply discussing the matter with, and obtaining the agreement of, opposing counsel.

  NOTE: Many local court rules require the parties to "meet and confer" to try to resolve disputes before making a motion. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.724; Los Angeles Ct R 7.9(b)(1).

- The overall effect of the motion on the judge's view of the case. If the case is assigned to a single judge, the view of a case that a particular judge receives from hearing and ruling on a series of motions can affect that judge's overall perception of the merits or lack of merits of the case as a whole.

§12.6 D. Consultation With Client

It is usually good practice, and often good protection for counsel, to discuss with the client the possibility of making a motion. Some factors to be evaluated in deciding whether to make a motion or what motion to make involve matters that are not strictly legal evaluations about which the client may have strong feelings, e.g., the costs involved. See generally §12.5. In any event, the client who is involved in the litigation decision-making process is more likely to feel well represented.

II. NOTICE OF MOTION

§12.7 A. Motion Defined; OSC Compared

A motion is an "application for an order," which is a direction of a court or judge, made or entered in writing and not included in a judgment. CCP §1003. "Making a motion" is the process of applying for an order. A motion is deemed to have been made, and to be pending before the court, on all the grounds stated in the notice of motion on due service and filing of the notice of motion. CCP §1005.5. In some circumstances, custom or statute may dictate that the order to show cause procedure be used (see chap 13), but the effect of these two procedures is the same. See Marriage of Nadkarni (2009) 173 CA4th 1483, 1499, 93 CR3d 723 (order to show cause constitutes notice of motion).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.8 B. Necessary Papers

The motion papers to be served and filed include a notice of motion, a supporting memorandum, and, if appropriate, the presentation of evidence by declarations (or affidavits) or other means. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112. These papers may be filed as separate documents or combined in one or more documents. If items are combined, they must be listed separately in the caption. See, e.g., form in §12.140.

Certain motions may require additional papers. See, e.g., CCP §437c(b)(1) (summary judgment or summary adjudication motions).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.9 C. Notice of Motion

The notice of motion is the formal statement that identifies the time, date, and place of the hearing, the nature of the order being sought, the grounds for the motion, and the documents and other items that support the motion. CCP §1010.

NOTE: Under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112, a "motion" that is largely duplicative of the notice of motion must be filed in addition to the notice of motion, even though CCP §1005.5 provides that a motion is deemed made on serving and filing of the notice of motion, and many of the specific statutes authorizing the filing of a motion only require the filing of a notice of motion. See, e.g., CCP §418.10 (defendant may file "notice of motion" to quash service of summons or to stay or dismiss action on inconvenient forum ground) and CCP §435 (any party may file "notice of motion" to strike pleading). It therefore appears that the notice of motion and motion may be combined in a single document titled "Notice of Motion and Motion."

The "Notice of Motion and Motion" must conform to the general form and format requirement that apply to all court papers. See chap 11.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.10 1. Paper, Print, Spacing, and Margins

§12.10 1. Paper, Print, Spacing, and Margins

California Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119 generally sets for the format rules for forms. The paper must be recycled (Cal Rules of Ct 2.101(a), and opaque, unglazed, white or unbleached (Cal Rules of Ct 2.103). Only one side of the paper may be used. Cal Rules of Ct 2.102.

The type must be 12-point with typeface equivalent to Courier, Times Roman, or Helvetica, and the color of print must be blue-black or black. Cal Rules of Ct 2.104.

The lines must be one and one-half spaced or double spaced and numbered consecutively. Cal Rules of Ct 2.108(1), (4). The left margin must be at least one inch and right margin must be at least ½ inch. Cal Rules of Ct 2.107.

Additions, deletions, or interlineations must be initialed by the clerk or judge at the time of filing. All copies served must conform to the original filed, including the numbering of lines, pagination, additions, deletions, and interlineations. Cal Rules of Ct 2.110.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.11 2. Binding

The pages of each document and exhibit must be attached at the top in a way that allows the pages to be turned easily and the entire page to be read. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(e). The pages must be top-punched and firmly bound together at the top. Cal Rules of Ct 2.113, 2.115.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.12 3. Footer

Documents bound together must be consecutively paginated. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(c). Pages must be consecutively numbered at bottom. Cal Rules of Ct 2.109. Except for exhibits, each paper filed with the court must bear a footer, printed in at least 10-point type, in the bottom margin of each page, below the page number and divided from the rest of the page by a printed line, that contains the title of the paper (e.g., "Defendant ABC Corp.'s Motion for Summary Judgment") or some clear and concise abbreviation. Cal Rules of Ct 2.110.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.13 4. Attorney Information

The first page of the notice must state the name, address, telephone number, fax number (optional), e-mail address (optional), and State Bar number of the attorney or of the party if he or she is appearing in propria persona. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.14 5. Title of Court

The attorney information should be followed by the title of the court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(3). Below the title of the court, the caption in every pleading in a limited civil case must state "Limited Civil Case." See Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.15 6. Telephone Appearance

The line "Telephone Appearance" should be added below the title of the moving papers by a moving party who wishes to attend the hearing by telephone. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(g)(a). See CCP §367.5. Counsel generally has the option of appearing by telephone in any hearing or conference at which witnesses are not expected to be called to testify. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(b)-(c) (rule applicable to general civil cases, unlawful detainer cases, and probate proceedings). See also Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(d) (exceptions). Local rules may provide procedures for appearance by telephone. See Cal Rules of Ct, Standards of J Admin 3.1(d).

© The Regents of the University of California

7. Caption

§12.16 a. Title of Case

Below the title of the court, in the space to the left, the motion should state the title of the case. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(4). Motion papers may include the "short caption" of the case, i.e., the name of the first party on each side. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(4), 2.111(4).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.17 b. Nature of Paper

To the right of the case name, the caption should include a statement of the nature of the paper, i.e., a brief description of the nature of the order sought, e.g., "Notice of Motion and Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings." Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(6).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.18 c. Date, Time, Location of Hearing

Below the identification of the document, the caption should show the date, time, and location (if ascertainable) of any scheduled hearing, the name of the hearing judge (if ascertainable), the date of filing of the action, and the trial date, if one is set. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.19 (1) Date and Time

§12.19 (1) Date and Time

The notice of motion must state "when" the motion will be made. CCP §1010. The date set for hearing the motion and the time when the hearing calendar for that day will be called must be included in the caption. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b). Failure to specify a date and time renders the notice ineffective. Bohn v Bohn (1913) 164 C 532, 536, 129 P 981.

PRACTICE TIP: When drafting a notice of motion, counsel can determine the hearing date to specify in it by (1) deciding when the notice will be served (i.e., the date of delivery or mailing to adverse counsel); (2) computing the minimum notice time required (unless an order shortening time is obtained) and any maximum time; and (3) if appropriate or necessary, telephoning the court clerk or law and motion calendar clerk to learn the first available convenient calendar date within the period. See §12.60-12.62 on computing notice time, and §§12.63-12.68 on shortening and extending time.

Local rules should also be consulted for determining the days and times for hearings.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.20 (2) Location

"Location" is shown by specifying the department in which the hearing is to take place in the caption. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b). It is unclear whether "location" also means the address of the courthouse or building where the motion will be heard. Attorneys may add the address at the end of the first paragraph of the notice.

Motions must be made in the court in which the action is pending. CCP §1004. The place for the hearing is usually either (1) the courtroom of the judge assigned to the case if the case is subject to the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620) or (2) the law and motion or other department or division established for such hearings. If there is any doubt as to where a motion should be noticed for hearing, counsel should review the local rules or consult the appropriate court clerk. See, e.g., San Francisco Ct R 8.2 (law and motion calendar).

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.21 d. Name of Hearing Judge

§12.21 d. Name of Hearing Judge

The notice of motion, immediately below the case number, must specify the name of the hearing judge, if that is ascertainable. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(7), 3.1110(b).

PRACTICE TIP: When law and motion matters are assigned to a particular department, the notice of motion should specify the name of the judge who normally sits in that department. If the case has been assigned to one judge for all purposes, that judge's name should be specified.

The notice of motion should also note whether the proceeding is pending before a referee appointed under CCP §638 or §639. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.22 e. Attachments

The first page, immediately below the number of the case, must also state the nature of any attached document, other than an exhibit. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b). When other papers, e.g., a memorandum or declarations, are attached to the notice of motion, these papers should be named in the caption. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.23 8. Body of Motion

The motion must identify the party bringing the motion, name the parties to whom it is addressed, briefly state the basis for the motion and the relief sought, and if a pleading is being challenged, the portion being challenged must be specified. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112(d).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.24 a. Introductory Line

No statute or rule requires an introductory line, but attorneys sometimes place below the caption of a notice of motion, e.g., "To each of the parties herein and to their attorneys of record," or "To each party and attorney."

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.25 b. Nature of Order Sought

The opening paragraph of the notice must state the nature of the order being sought. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(a), 3.1112(d). If monetary sanctions are sought, whether against the party or a party and its counsel, the notice of motion must identify every person, party, and attorney against whom the sanction is sought. See, e.g., Blumenthal v Superior Court (1980) 103 CA3d 317, 163 CR 39 (case predated CCP §2023.040 but is probably still applicable under present statutes). See also Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112(d).

PRACTICE TIP: It is sometimes useful to begin the process of motion drafting by starting with a draft of the order being sought, which may help focus the research and drafting of the other motion papers.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.26 c. Grounds for Issuance of Order

The opening paragraph of the notice of motion must state the grounds on which the motion is made. CCP §1010; Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(a), 3.1112(d). The statement should define the issues for the adverse party and the court. Hernandez v National Dairy Prods. Co. (1954) 126 CA2d 490, 493, 272 P2d 799. It is good practice to specify the code section or rule that provides for the order sought.

A failure to state grounds for the motion may lead the judge to deny the motion or an appellate court to vacate an order granting the motion. See Traders' Credit Corp. v Superior Court (1931) 111 CA 663, 665, 296 P 99 (dismissal vacated). Some courts, however, have granted motions, or upheld orders, even though no grounds were stated in the notice of motion, if the grounds clearly appeared from other papers filed with the notice. See §12.27.

Courts also differ on whether grounds not stated in the notice of motion will be considered in support of the motion. Compare Taliaferro v Riddle (1959) 167 CA2d 567, 570, 334 P2d 950 (reversal of order not supported by either ground specified in notice), Hernandez v National Dairy Prods. Co., supra (if new matter could be argued at hearing, purpose of notice of motion would be only to advise time and place), and Westphal v Westphal (1943) 61 CA2d 544, 550, 143 P2d 405 (when motion made on ground that case should be dismissed under mandatory 5-year dismissal statute, party cannot argue on appeal that court properly exercised discretion to dismiss for lack of diligent prosecution), with Tarman v Sherwin (1961) 189 CA2d 49, 51, 10 CR 787 (affidavits, supporting memorandums, and other documents in court file, when referred to in the Notice, can be considered in amplification of grounds). See also Josephson v Superior Court (1963) 219 CA2d 354, 362, 33 CR 196 (statements in affidavits disregarded; leave needed to base motion on grounds not enumerated).

These disparate holdings can be reconciled, as at least one court has done, by stating that

> As a general rule, the trial court may consider only the grounds stated in the notice of motion. [Citations.] An omission may be overlooked if the supporting papers make clear the grounds for relief sought. [Citations.] The purpose of these requirements is to cause the moving party to "sufficiently define the issues for the information and the attention of the adverse party and the court." [Citation.]

Luri v Greenwald (2003) 107 CA4th 1119, 1125, 132 CR2d 680.

PRACTICE TIP: The best practice is to state the grounds in the notice of motion.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.27 9. Supporting Papers

A notice of motion must state the papers, if any, on which it is to be based. CCP §1010. It is customary to also state that the motion will be based on "all pleadings, papers, and records filed in the action." This statement may persuade the judge at the hearing to consider a document in the case file, the significance of which was not recognized when the motion papers were filed. However, if counsel knows that part of a pleading or other paper supports the motion, or provides basis for argument, it is good practice to identify that part in the memorandum or declaration accompanying the notice, or to attach a copy to the moving papers as an exhibit.

It is routine to refer to the attached "memorandum in support of the motion" that must be filed with the motion. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112. See §§12.30-12.42. Similarly, the evidence on which a motion is based is usually presented to the judge in the form of affidavits or declarations (see §§12.43-12.53) and the notice of motion should refer to each such document. For example: "the attached affidavit of Walter Johnson," or "the attached declarations of Walter Johnson, Charles Able, and George Smith." When a declaration in support of a motion is required by statute or rule, the notice should refer to the attached declaration. See, e.g., CCP §1008(b) (when similar motion has been made, declaration must state what motion was made before) and CCP §2025.480(b) (discovery motion). To the extent practicable, all supporting memorandums, declarations, and affidavits must be attached to the notice of motion. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(j).

Reference to papers previously filed with the court must be by date of execution and title. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(d). All references to exhibits or declarations in supporting or opposing papers must refer to the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and if applicable, the paragraph or line number. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(k).

WARNING: Some attorneys also routinely conclude the listing of papers on which a motion is based with a clause such as "and such oral and documentary evidence as may be presented at the hearing on this motion." This reference may aid a later argument that testimony or a new exhibit should be admitted. However, most judges resist taking new evidence at the hearing. See §12.103. The court must be notified of a need to present evidence at the hearing by a written statement setting forth the nature and extent of the proposed evidence. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(a). Any request for leave to present evidence should be supported by a declaration of facts and reasons. If the need is known at the time the notice of motion is filed, the nature of the evidence should be specified in the notice and the reasons for its introduction stated in the attached declarations and memorandum. The notice or statement should also state how much hearing time presentation of the evidence will require. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(a).

If the notice of motion mentions a paper that has not yet been served on adverse parties, a copy of that paper must be served and filed with the notice. CCP §1010.

§12.28 10. Date; Signature

The date that a notice of motion is served is normally shown on an attached proof of service form. See §§12.69-12.73. Thus, although customary, it is not necessary to type a date on the notice. If the notice is served by mail, and is not accompanied by a certificate of mailing, the date and place of mailing must be typed or written on the notice of motion itself. CCP §1013(b).

A notice of motion should be signed by the party's attorney of record, not the party. See Jansson v National S.S. Co. (1917) 34 CA 483, 486, 168 P 151. A subscription by the attorney's associate or office is normally sufficient. See Caldwell v Geldreich (1955) 137 CA2d 78, 82, 289 P2d 832 (vacationing attorney's name signed by associate). See also Buell v Buell (1891) 92 C 393, 396, 28 P 443 (newly employed attorney signed notice; no general statute or rule requires that notices of motion be signed; absence of signature does not ordinarily vitiate notice).

III. SUPPORTING DOCUMENTS; JUDICIAL NOTICE

A. Memorandum in Support of Motion

§12.30 1. When Memorandum Required

All motions and demurrers must be supported by a memorandum that complies with Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112(a), 3.1113. A demurrer or written notice of motion under CCP §1005, except for a motion listed in Cal Rules of Ct 3.1114 (applications, motions, and petitions not requiring a memorandum), must be accompanied by supporting memorandum. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(a). The absence of the memorandum may be construed by the court as an admission that the motion or special demurrer is not meritorious and cause for its denial and, in the case of a demurrer, as a waiver of all grounds not supported. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(a).

PRACTICE TIP: The supporting memorandum is used to convince the judge who hears the motion that the law and facts support issuance of the order sought. Persuasion is the object of the memorandum. Even though counsel may have a chance to present argument and cite authorities at the hearing on the motion (see §§12.102-12.103), some courts issue a tentative ruling based on the motion and response papers alone (see §§12.104-12.110), and in other courts the judge will come to the hearing with a ruling already in mind. The written memorandum should be the best argument for the motion that can be made; only in rare and unusual situations should a persuasive argument or point be held back for later use.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.31 2. Memorandum Not Required

§12.31 2. Memorandum Not Required

Civil motions, applications, and petitions filed on Judicial Council forms that do not require a supporting memorandum include the following (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1114(a)):

- Application for appointment of guardian ad litem in a civil case;
- Application for an order extending time to serve pleading;
- Motion to be relieved as counsel;
- Motion filed in small claims case;
- Petition for change of name or gender;
- Petition for declaration of emancipation of minor;
- Petition for injunction prohibiting harassment;
- Petition for protective order to prevent elder or dependent adult abuse;
- Petition of employer for injunction prohibiting workplace violence;
- Petition for order prohibiting abuse (transitional housing);
- Petition to approve compromise of a claim of a minor or an incompetent person; and
- Petition for withdrawal of funds from a blocked account.

Despite Cal Rules of Ct 3.1114(a), if it would further the interests of justice, a party may submit, or the court may order the submission of, a memorandum in support of any motion, application, or petition. The memorandum must comply with Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1114(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.32 3. Contents of Memorandum

A memorandum must contain (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(b)):

- A statement of facts;
- A concise statement of the law;
- The evidence and argument relied on; and
- A discussion of the statutes, cases, and textbooks cited in support of the position being advanced.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.33 4. Organization of Memorandum

§12.33 4. Organization of Memorandum

The typical organization of a supporting memorandum begins with an introductory section, includes one or more separate sections focusing on particular aspects of the motion, and ends with a concluding summary. The function of each of these portions of the memorandum is discussed separately in §§12.37-12.41.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.34 5. Format and Style

A case citation must include the official report volume and page number and year of decision. No other citations may be required. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(c).

The style used in a memorandum shall be that set forth in the California Style Manual, or that stated in the most recent edition of The Bluebook: Uniform System of Citation, at the option of the party filing the document. The same style shall be used consistently throughout the memorandum. Cal Rules of Ct 1.200.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.35 6. Length of Memorandum

An opening or responding memorandum may not exceed 15 pages, except in a summary judgment or a summary adjudication motion, where they are limited to 20 pages. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(d). A reply may not exceed 10 pages. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(d). The page limit does not include exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, or the proof of service. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(d).

Permission to file memorandums of greater than the specified number of pages can be sought by ex parte application at least 24 hours before the memorandum is due. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(e). The application must state the reasons the argument cannot be made within the page limits. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(e).

PRACTICE TIP: Some judges require that the memorandum be al ready prepared and presented to the court at the ex parte hearing so that the court can assess the true "need." Applications for permission to file memorandums exceeding the specified number of pages may be granted by a judge, but rarely as a matter of course.

The memorandum should be concise and not unduly detailed or repetitive. Most judges hearing motions have very limited time available for reading papers and they appreciate well-written, to-the-point papers.

A memorandum that exceeds the page limits of Rule 3.1113(d) is filed and treated the same as a late-filed paper. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(g).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.36 7. Table of Contents; Table of Authorities

If the memorandum exceeds 10 pages, it must include a table of contents and a table of authorities. If it exceeds 15 pages, it must also include an opening summary of argument. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(f). See §12.38.

If the memorandum includes a table of contents and table of authorities, the caption page or pages must not be numbered; the pages of the tables must be numbered consecutively, using lower-case Roman numerals starting on the first page of the tables; and the pages of the text must be numbered consecutively using Arabic numerals starting on the first page of the text. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(h).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.37 8. Introductory Statement; Introduction

After the case caption, the memorandum usually begins with an introductory sentence that identifies the moving party or parties and the motion being supported. This can be done with a statement such as:

Defendant Pan-Pacific Machinery and Foundry, Inc., hereafter "Pan-Pacific," submits the following memorandum in support of its motion requiring Plaintiff Kimberly Wilson to furnish security for costs.

This is often an easy way to establish the shorthand reference to the moving party or parties used later in the memorandum (e.g., as "Plaintiff," "Defendant," or by a last name or abbreviated name).

PRACTICE TIP: It is generally good practice to include, following the introductory statement, a section labeled "Introduction," whose purpose is to very briefly define the nature of the motion being made and its context. Doing so usually requires a brief description of the lawsuit and of the motion and its purpose. This introduction should be succinct and should convey to the judge reading the motion the importance of the motion to the case. If a separate summary of the argument is not included (see §12.38), the introductory section can also briefly summarize or state why the motion should be granted.

© The Regents of the University of California

9. Argument

§12.38 a. Summary of Argument

Any memorandum that exceeds 15 pages must contain an "opening summary of argument." Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(f). This is rare, because memorandums may not usually exceed 15 pages. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(d). If appropriate, the summary of argument should be relatively short, and it is best to have a separate heading identifying it as a summary of the argument.

NOTE: For the footer requirements, see Cal Rules of Ct 2.110 and §12.12.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.39 b. Concise and Persuasive Argument

After the introductory section or sections, the memorandum should include one or more separate sections dealing with the specifics of the arguments being made. The arguments should be divided into separate sections, with captions, each dealing with a specific issue or point. Each section should be relatively short. If the argument on one topic must be lengthy, it is often good practice to divide it into subsections with subheadings. Separate sections and separate subheadings allow for the judge reading the motion to more easily follow the arguments and points being made and also to more easily return to a specific argument if the judge wishes to reread a particular point.

The captions or subcaptions for separate argument sections should be descriptive, and accurately identify the argument being made, and be as brief and concise as possible. Phrase the captions and subcaptions in an argumentative manner, i.e., as an assertion in favor of the moving party (e.g., "The facts demonstrate that there was no privity between plaintiff and defendant" rather than simply "Privity" or "Lack of privity"). Sometimes, however, especially with subheadings, short subject matter captions are sufficient.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.40 c. Applicable Statutes and Cases

§12.40 c. Applicable Statutes and Cases

The memorandum must contain both a concise statement of the law and a discussion of the applicable statutes and cases. As a rule, counsel should look first to the statutes applicable to the legal issue involved in the motion. Those may include statutes defining the standards or requirements for the motion (e.g., CCP §437c for summary judgments) or the substantive legal standards involved in the case itself (e.g., the applicable statute of limitations).

Next, counsel should research the applicable case law, both for the legal point or issue addressed in the motion and for the standards applicable for the type of motion being made.

Each point or statement should be supported by citation to a statute, court rule, or reported decision. If these are not available, other authority may include textbooks or law review articles. Generally, it is more effective to cite one statute or case, and point out its specific applicability, than to support a point with "string" citations. A California Supreme Court opinion carries more weight than a court of appeal opinion unless the latter is more on point or more recent. Often, one Supreme Court citation and the latest court of appeal case provide all the support needed for a point unless it is important to show how a rule has been applied in a variety of factual settings. On citation format, see §12.34.

JUDICIAL PERSPECTIVE: The supporting memorandum should clearly identify the important controlling cases and separate them from cases cited for preliminary or foundational matters. Cases believed to bear strongly on the particular matter should be discussed at length, commencing with California cases.

It is better practice to set forth a brief summary or quotation of the relevant substance of the cited authority and to point out in what way it bears on the matter before the court than to provide a plethora of citations. A single case in point may be sufficient. The value of points made and the legal authorities supporting them lies in their current relevancy and not in their quantity. Each case cited for other than preliminary or elementary matters should be discussed in terms of its relationship to the case at bar.

Counsel may not misquote authorities or cite statutes that have been repealed or held unconstitutional or cases that have been overruled. Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-200.

When cases from jurisdictions outside California or federal cases are cited, a copy must be attached to the papers and tabbed as an exhibit. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(i). See §12.56. If a California case is cited before it is published in the advance sheets, a copy also must be attached and tabbed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(i).

PRACTICE TIP: Short quotations from governing authorities are often useful.

§12.41 10. Conclusion

A concluding section that summarizes the major points and arguments made and states the nature of the order or relief sought in the motion is customarily included. This type of section should be brief, and not a verbatim repetition of the points already made.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.42 11. Subscription

There is no general requirement that a supporting memorandum be dated or signed. Most attorneys do date and sign them, and a common subscription form is shown in §12.141.

B. Declarations

§12.43 1. Declaration Compared With Affidavit

Declarations and affidavits are written statements used to present facts to the judge who will rule on the motion. Declarations are made and signed under penalty of perjury (CCP §2015.5; see also §12.52), and affidavits are made under oath and attested to, ordinarily by a notary public (CCP §2003). "Declaration" is used generally in this book to cover both a declaration under penalty of perjury and an affidavit. CCP §2015.5. In California, the declaration form, which need not be notarized, is more widely used than the affidavit form. A declaration in the form prescribed by CCP §2015.5 is as valid and effective in support of a motion as an affidavit. See §12.44 and form in §12.142.

Whichever form is used, it is important that it conform strictly to content and execution requirements. A judge may disregard an improperly phrased or executed statement. See, e.g., Palm Springs Alpine Estates, Inc. v Superior Court (1967) 255 CA2d 883, 888, 63 CR 618.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.44 2. Declaration as Substitute for Oral Testimony

Written declarations are used in motion proceedings as a substitute for sworn oral testimony. See, e.g., Evid C §§135, 225; Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(a). Code of Civil Procedure §1005 requires that a written notice of motion be accompanied by supporting declarations.

Motions are usually made and determined on declarations alone. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(a); Beckett v Kaynar Mfg. Co. (1958) 49 C2d 695, 698 n3, 321 P2d 749. Declarations are used both to provide factual matters for the decision on the motion and as a means for stating facts in a direct and logical order, sparing the judge the need to ferret them out of the case record. Some motions can be granted, of course, even though not supported by a declaration. See, e.g., Black Bros. Co. v Superior Court (1968) 265 CA2d 501, 507, 71 CR 344, disapproved on other grounds in Denham v Superior Court (1970) 2 C3d 557, 86 CR 65. Other motions require that a declaration be submitted. See, e.g., CCP §§2023.010(i), 2023.020 (discovery motions); CCP §1008(b) (when prior similar motions have been made); Cal Rules of Ct 3.770 (request for dismissal of class action); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1342(a) (dismissal for failure to prosecute); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1360 (motion for lien on a cause of action or judgment).

In exercising its power to exclude or permit oral testimony, the trial follows the principal that constitutional due process entitles the parties to notice and hearing appropriate to the case. See Marriage of Nadkarni (2009) 173 CA4th 1483, 1499, 93 CR3d 723 (because application for restraining order under Domestic Violence Prevention Act was facially sufficient, dismissal reversed and case remanded for hearing on merits).

© The Regents of the University of California

3. Selecting Declarant

§12.45 a. Tactical Considerations

The attorney must make tactical decisions in determining who should submit a declaration in support of a motion or how many declarations to submit. If a factual point needs to be established, it must, of course, be established by someone with sufficient personal knowledge that the declaration statements are competent evidence. See §12.49. The declarant who is in a position to verify or present the fact will probably be the most persuasive, and if several facts are to be presented, it is usually advantageous and more efficient to have those facts addressed by as few witnesses as possible.

There are, however, significant differences between trial testimony and fact-finding through declarations. Declarations may be carefully drafted by counsel, whereas trial testimony tends to be spontaneous in its wording and depends on the witness's particular personality, linguistic skills, and state of mind. Furthermore, a declarant in a written declaration will not ordinarily be able to be cross-examined on what is included in the declaration prior to the hearing on the motion.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.46 b. Attorney as Declarant

§12.46 b. Attorney as Declarant

Whether counsel should act as a declarant depends on the nature of the facts to be presented and the necessity of using the lawyer for that purpose. The most common situations in which counsel presents his or her own declaration are:

- When the declaration addresses communication between counsel;
- If the declaration presents copies of pleadings or discovery material (e.g., copies of documents produced, interrogatory answers, deposition transcripts);
- If a particular statute calls for a certificate that could be appropriately provided only by counsel (see, e.g., CCP §1008(b)); or
- If the facts presented involve the activities of counsel in the litigation (e.g., time spent and the cost of preparing or defending a motion when sanctions are sought).

When it is contemplated that counsel would go beyond these areas of testimony and present factual matter directly supporting or contradicting pleading allegations, counsel should determine whether providing such a declaration will risk waiving any applicable attorney-client or work-product privileges. Further, the California Rules of Professional Conduct preclude counsel from acting as an advocate for a party before a jury when counsel will also testify on substantive matters, at least without the client's informed, written consent (Cal Rules of Prof Cond 5-210). Even without jury involvement, when counsel is expected to be a witness at trial (a conclusion of concern if counsel is the best person to submit a substantive declaration as to facts), consideration should be given as to whether it is in the client's best interests to have counsel act in both capacities. On limitations of counsel acting as a witness, see §4.34.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.47 4. Caption: Introduction

A declaration is usually drafted as a separate paper, with the caption prescribed for court papers by Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119, even though it is attached to a notice of motion. A defect in the title of the action does not render the paper invalid or ineffectual if it intelligibly refers to the action. CCP §1046. The caption of a declaration must identify the name of the declarant (or affiant) and identify the motion or proceeding that it supports (or opposes). Cal Rules of Ct 3.1115(a). For example, a caption could read: "Declaration of John Jones in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment."

NOTE: The requirement in Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b) that the date and time of hearing, the number or designation of the department or division to which it is assigned, the name of the hearing judge (if ascertainable), the date of filing of the action, and the trial date be stated (see §12.18) may apply to declarations as well as to the notices of motion to which they are attached. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.3(2).

In an affidavit, it is customary to follow the caption with a line stating the "venue," the state and county (or other subdivision) where the affidavit was executed and notarized. However, failure of the affidavit to show where the oath or affirmation of the affiant was administered does not by itself invalidate the affidavit. See County Bank v Jack (1906) 148 C 437, 440, 83 P 705 (venue line omitted). The venue line or lines may, with equal effect, be placed at the beginning of the jurat or notary's certification.

For the footer requirements, see Cal Rules of Ct 2.110 and §12.12.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.48 5. Identity of Declarant

The first paragraph of the body of a declaration usually identifies the declarant by stating his or her title or relationship to the lawsuit. For example:

1. I am the plaintiff, _ _[name]_ _, in this action.

1. I am an attorney of record for defendant, _ _[name]_ _.

1. I am, and have been since _ _[date]_ _, the Vice-President in charge of marketing for defendant, _ _[name of, e.g., corporation]_ _.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.49 6. Competence of Declarant

Generally, anyone who would be competent to testify as a witness about a matter is competent to make a declaration. See McLellan v McLellan (1972) 23 CA3d 343, 359, 100 CR 258. In this context, "competent" usually means that the declarant has personal knowledge of the subject matter of the declaration (see Evid C §702) or that the declarant qualifies as an expert on the subject matter of the declaration (see Evid C §§720, 801). On admissibility of matter stated, see §12.50.

A declarant, like a witness (see Evid C §702), should normally state only facts personally known to him or her. The statute authorizing the order sought may also specify that matter in declarations must be based on personal knowledge. See, e.g., CCP §437c (declarations on motion for summary judgment). Thus, a statement made "on information and belief" may be disregarded (Franklin v Nat C. Goldstone Agency (1949) 33 C2d 628, 631, 204 P2d 37; Judd v Superior Court (1976) 60 CA3d 38, 43, 131 CR 246) unless the fact stated is one that by its nature could not be known directly and positively (e.g., another's intent). See Brown v Happy Valley Fruit Growers, Inc. (1929) 206 C 515, 520, 274 P 977; Fielder v Superior Court (1963) 213 CA2d 60, 28 CR 597. Statements made in declarations are presumed to be made on personal knowledge unless it is stated that they are made on information and belief. Weathers v Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1971) 5 C3d 98, 106, 95 CR 516.

Many attorneys drafting declarations routinely include a statement attesting to the declarant's personal knowledge, such as:

2. I have personal knowledge of all facts stated in this declaration, and if called as a witness I could and would testify competently to them under oath.

Such a statement is a conclusion that may be disregarded by a judge who feels that personal knowledge must be shown by factual statements. See Fisher v Cheeseman (1968) 260 CA2d 503, 506, 67 CR 258 ("[t]hat which is required is not a sworn statement that the affiant would so testify but a showing that he can competently do so"). Thus, the above statement is not a substitute for the inclusion of facts showing that the declarant has personal knowledge of the facts being sworn to. For example:

3. I was at the corner of Fourth and Main Streets on _ _[date]_ _, and saw _ _[specify]_ _.

3. On _ _[date]_ _, I received a letter by _ _[name]_ _, a true and complete copy of which is attached as Exhibit A.

3. I am the custodian of records for Mercy Hospital.

A declaration based on expert opinion should include information about the expert's qualifications to make a showing that the declarant is competent to express an opinion about the subject matter of the declaration.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.50 7. Admissibility of Matters Stated

The body of a declaration is a series of statements, usually set out in separately numbered paragraphs. The judge hearing the motion may decline to consider statements in a declaration on the same grounds that a trial judge would sustain an objection to proffered testimony. See McLellan v McLellan (1972) 23 CA3d 343, 359, 100 CR 258; Mayo v Beber (1960) 177 CA2d 544, 551, 2 CR 405. Filing a declaration in support of a motion is normally the equivalent of offering it in evidence; it need not be offered formally in evidence at the hearing. See Waller v Waller (1970) 3 CA3d 456, 465, 83 CR 533.

Declarations should state evidentiary facts rather than ultimate facts or legal conclusions. Ware v Stafford (1962) 206 CA2d 232, 237, 24 CR 153. The facts should be set forth positively; a declaration that states only the conclusions or opinions of the declarant is insufficient. See Tri-State Mfg. Co. v Superior Court (1964) 224 CA2d 442, 445, 36 CR 750. One test for whether a statement in a declaration should be considered is whether a perjury prosecution could be based on the statement if it were false. See Mack v Superior Court (1968) 259 CA2d 7, 10, 66 CR 280.

Opinions stated in a declaration are sometimes considered when the declaration shows that

- The opinion is rationally based on the declarant's perception and is helpful to a clear understanding of his or her testimony (Evid C §800); or
- The declarant is qualified to testify as an expert on the subject (Evid C §801).

Hearsay statements may be disregarded unless admissible under an exception to the hearsay rule. See Pacific Air Lines, Inc. v Superior Court (1965) 231 CA2d 587, 42 CR 68. See also Weathers v Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1971) 5 C3d 98, 106, 95 CR 516 (although declarant's statement might have been based on hearsay, it might also have been based on observation and could thus be considered under the presumption that it was made on personal knowledge).

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney drafting a declaration should consider not only the admissibility and persuasiveness of what is said, but also that the declaration may be used to cross-examine the declarant at a later deposition or at trial. The declaration must state enough factual matter to be persuasive in support of the motion, but it should not be repetitive or contain unnecessary detail.

§12.51 8. Subscription

The proper subscription for a declaration or affidavit is important because an incorrectly executed declaration or affidavit will not be considered.

§12.52 a. Declaration

A declaration under penalty of perjury must be signed by the declarant and certified or declared to be true "under penalty of perjury." CCP §2015.5. It is improper for an attorney to sign declarations under penalty of perjury on behalf of his or her clients or witnesses, even in family law court. Marriage of Reese & Guy (1999) 73 CA4th 1214, 1222, 87 CR2d 339. The certification or declaration may be in substantially the following form (CCP §2015.5):

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

PRACTICE TIP: Either "certify" or "declare" can be used, but not both. See CCP §2015.5. Most lawyers use "declare" unless a particular statute calls for a certification or the paper is called a certificate. Other lawyers use "certify" when the declaration is signed by an attorney or court official. The phrase "under the laws of the State of California" can be omitted if the declaration is executed within California and the place of execution is stated.

This statement is normally placed at the end of the declaration. See People v Pierce (1967) 66 C2d 53, 59, 56 CR 817 (end is preferred, not required). A statement declared to be made "under penalty of perjury" is acceptable even though "true and correct" have been omitted. See Pacific Air Lines, Inc. v Superior Court (1965) 231 CA2d 587, 42 CR 68. See also People v Pacific Land Research Co. (1977) 20 C3d 10, 21 n11, 141 CR 20 (declaration did not state place of execution or that it was made under penalty of perjury; address and signature sufficient to constitute compliance); People v Resolute Ins. Co. (1975) 46 CA3d 249, 256, 120 CR 17 (declaration missing date and place of execution sufficient when attached document contained date and place of execution).

Additionally, the statement must be in writing, because "subscribe" as used in CCP §2015.5 means to sign with one's own hand. Thus, when a transcript of a telephone conversation with various witnesses was submitted, even though the witnesses said that their statements were true and correct under penalty of perjury, there was no compliance with §2015.5, and the transcripts were inadmissible as evidence. Stockinger v Feather River Community College (2003) 111 CA4th 1014, 1026, 4 CR3d 385.

The date of execution must be stated. CCP §2015.5; People v United Bonding Ins. Co. (1969) 272 CA2d 441, 444, 77 CR 310. The court must disregard a declaration that lacks the required formalities (Baron v Mare (1975) 47 CA3d 304, 308, 120 CR 675), or when it is patently untrue (Krueger v Superior Court (1979) 89 CA3d 934, 939, 152 CR 870 (declaration predated matter verified)).

§12.53 b. Affidavit

An affidavit is a written declaration under oath, made without notice to the adverse party. CCP §2003. It is customary for the affiant to sign an affidavit, but an affidavit with a proper jurat is sufficient without the affiant's signature unless a particular statute or rule requires a signed affidavit. City of Petaluma v White (1907) 152 C 190, 195, 92 P 177; Dodge v Free (1973) 32 CA3d 436, 443, 108 CR 311.

The jurat of an affidavit is a certificate stating when, where, and before whom the affidavit was sworn or affirmed. See CCP §§2093-2094. A statement without a jurat is not sufficient to serve as an affidavit. People v United Bonding Ins. Co. (1969) 272 CA2d 441, 443, 77 CR 310. The jurat may take different forms in other states or if made by an officer other than a notary public. Code of Civil Procedure §§2012-2015 specify the persons and officers in California ("any officer authorized to administer oaths") and elsewhere who may certify affidavits.

A notary's seal stamped near his or her signature should indicate the county in which the notary's oath of office is filed, the county in which the notary's bond is filed, and the date on which the notary's commission expires. See Govt C §8207. However, an otherwise sufficient affidavit is valid without the seal. See Reclamation Dist. v Snowball (1911) 160 C 695, 117 P 905.

§12.54 C. Pleadings and Papers on File

Pleadings and papers on file in the action are before the judge (at least if referred to in the notice of motion) and may be referred to in the memorandum and declarations. Even though the clerk's file of the case will be given to the judge hearing the motion, a copy of the pertinent papers can be attached to the motion papers for the convenience of the judge. Any paper previously filed must be referred to by title and date of execution. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(d).

That a matter is stated in a pleading or paper in this court file does not, by itself, necessarily satisfy applicable evidentiary requirements. For instance, if the intent is to prove the truth of a fact included in the allegations of a pleading, the pleading must have been verified and the allegations must be in the form of evidentiary facts rather than ultimate facts or conclusions. See Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 532, 67 CR 761.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.55 D. Contracts, Letters, Business Records

Contracts, letters, business records, and other documents can be used to support a motion. Counsel should either

- Obtain the agreement of adverse counsel that the document (or a copy) may be used; or
- Include in supporting declarations authenticating statements that permit the document's admission in evidence over objections to authentication (Evid C §1400), secondary evidence (Evid C §1521), and hearsay (Evid C §1200).

See Dugar v Happy Tiger Records, Inc. (1974) 41 CA3d 811, 815, 116 CR 412. The declaration that authenticates a document may also incorporate it by reference. For example:

On _ _[date]_ _, I entered into a written agreement with _ _[name]_ _. A true and correct copy of that agreement, marked Exhibit A, is attached to this declaration and incorporated by reference.

If a document is offered to prove the truth of matters stated in it, the document is hearsay evidence (see Evid C §1200) and the declaration that accompanies it should contain statements that establish its admissibility under one of the exceptions to the hearsay rule (see Evid C §§1220-1350). A document offered only to show its existence and terms is not subject to a hearsay objection.

Some motions must be accompanied by particular filings, as specified by statute or the Rules of Court. For example, certain discovery motions must be accompanied by a separate paper listing the discovery requests, responses, and reasons for compelling further response. Other documents relied on must be summarized. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1020.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.56 E. Exhibits

Exhibits must be separated by a hard 8½ by 11 inch sheet with tabs bearing the exhibit designation that extend below the bottom of the page. Pages from a single deposition and any associated exhibits must be designated as a single exhibit. An index to the exhibits must be included. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(f).

Exhibits may be fastened to pages of the specified size and, when prepared by a machine copying process, must be equal to typewritten material in legibility and permanency of image. Cal Rules of Ct 2.114.

All references to exhibits or declarations in supporting or opposing papers must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, and, if appropriate, the paragraph or line number. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(k).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.57 F. Materials Lodged With Clerk

Materials lodged with the clerk should be accompanied by a return envelope (addressed and stamped) so that the material can be mailed back after the motion is decided. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1302(b). Some local rules provide for the use of attorney pick up services for lodged materials, instead of providing a return envelope. See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 9.0(b).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.58 G. Use of Copies

§12.58 G. Use of Copies

The "secondary evidence rule" provides that the content of a writing may be proved by otherwise admissible secondary evidence unless:

- A genuine dispute exists regarding material terms of the writing and justice requires exclusion; or
- Admission would be unfair.

Evid C §1521. See also Evid C §§1270-1272. The secondary evidence rule applies to evidence offered in motion proceedings.

Counsel should also remember that if the existence of the document, rather than the truth of its contents, is what is being proven, there is not a hearsay problem as to the contents. See, e.g., Evid C §1200.

PRACTICE TIP: If an original document is required, copies of the documents may be used and identified in declarations, and the originals brought to court at the time of the hearing.

If the original is needed and if the document is in the hands of an adverse party, a notice or subpoena directing its production at the hearing can be served with the motion papers. CCP §1987(b)-(c).

§12.59 H. Requests for Judicial Notice

A moving party may ask that judicial notice be taken of facts that support a motion. See Parker v Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 C3d 176, 181, 89 CR 737 (motion for summary judgment). Judicial notice of the matters specified in Evid C §451 is mandatory; although judicial notice of the matters listed in Evid C §452 is designated "permissive," Evid C §453 states that the court "shall take judicial notice" of matters listed in §452 if a party requests it. A request for judicial notice must be made in a separate document listing the specific items for which notice is requested and must comply with Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(c) and Evid C §453. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(l). Local court rules may also prescribe procedures for requesting judicial notice. See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 9.2. On judicial notice generally, see California Trial Practice: Civil Procedure During Trial, chap 14 (3d ed Cal CEB 1995).

PRACTICE TIP: It is good practice to submit a request for judicial notice under Evid C §453 as to both the "mandatory" matters listed in Evid C §451 and the "permissive" matters listed in Evid C §452.

Copies of the records or documents to be noticed must be provided to the court and to each party and should be attached to the request. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(c). If the material is part of the court file, the moving party must specify in writing the part of the court file of which notice is requested and arrange to have the file in the courtroom at the time of the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(c).

NOTE: For some motions, e.g., a motion to strike, the request for judicial notice must be raised in the notice of motion or in the supporting memorandum. See CCP §437(b).

IV. TIME FOR MAKING MOTION; SHORTENING AND EXTENDING TIME

§12.60 A. Timing Considerations

There are two timing factors that must be considered before making any motion: (1) as a procedural matter, when the motion can be made (including when papers can be served and when the hearing can take place) and (2) as a tactical matter, when the motion should be made. The first factor is discussed in §§12.61-12.62. The second factor must be evaluated in the context of the tactical objectives of the entire lawsuit. See §12.5.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.61 B. Restrictions on Time for Motion or Hearing

Several restrictions affect the choice of the date to serve and to file motion papers and the date to notice for the motion hearing. The statute or rule that provides for a particular order may set a deadline. For example, a demurrer must be served and filed within 30 days after service of the summons and complaint. CCP §430.40(a). A notice of motion to compel further answers to interrogatories must be served within 45 days after service of the response to the interrogatories (unless extended by the parties by written agreement). CCP §2030.300(c). Motions for reconsideration or to amend an order based on new facts must be made within 10 days after service of written notice of entry of the order. CCP §1008(a). Under CCP §2024.020(a), discovery motions must be heard at least 15 days before the date initially set for trial. A motion can be made to the court to allow a discovery motion to be heard after that date (see CCP §2024.050) or the parties can agree to extend the date (see CCP §2024.060). See Pelton-Shepherd Indus. v Delta Packaging Prods., Inc. (2008) 165 CA4th 1568, 1589, 82 CR3d 64 (error to award terminating sanctions based on late motion to compel without reopening discovery).

For discussion of discovery motions, see California Civil Discovery Practice (4th ed Cal CEB 2006); Handling Motions To Compel and Other Discovery Motions (Cal CEB Action Guide October 2004). If the notice of motion is served or filed after the deadline, the court can deny the motion as untimely and an appellate court can overturn an order granting the motion.

Conversely, some motions are untimely if made too early. For example, a notice of motion for summary judgment can be made no sooner than 60 days after the adverse party's appearance in the action (see CCP §437c(a); see chap 36), and a motion to dismiss can be made no earlier than 2 years after the complaint was filed (see, e.g., CCP §§483.410(b), 583.420(a)(2)(B); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1340; see chap 39).

Motions to strike and demurrers directed to the same pleading should be noticed for hearing simultaneously. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1322. Regarding demurrers, see chap 23; regarding motions to strike, see chap 24.

Counsel must also determine how long before the hearing on a motion the notice of motion must be served and filed. Written notice of hearing must be given (i.e., served) at least 16 court days before the appointed time for the hearing, unless a judge has granted an order shortening time. CCP §1005(b); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300(a). For some motions, a different period may be required. See, e.g., chap 36 on summary judgment motions.

WARNING: Setting a hearing too many days in the future could constitute improper delay. See CCP §128.7(b)(1). See §12.5.

PRACTICE TIP: Although the adoption of Cal Rules of Ct 3.20 limits the local courts' authority to make rules concerning motions, local rules that are within the rule-making authority of the trial courts may still affect motion practice. Thus, counsel should consult local rules or the court clerk about the appropriate department for a motion hearing, as well as times and dates on which the court hears motions. See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 9.0 (time of hearing and filing of papers). Note also that local court rules may limit the ability of the parties to stipulate to extensions of time.

§12.62 C. Effect of Service by Mail

A written notice of motion must be given at least 16 court days before the hearing. CCP §1005. When this notice is served by mail, the notice period is increased by 5 calendar days if the place of mailing and the address of the person served are within California, by 10 calendar days if either place of mailing or the address is outside California but within the United States, and by 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the address is outside the United States. CCP §1005(b). Service by express mail, fax, or some other method of overnight delivery increases the notice period by 2 calendar days. The provisions of CCP §1013, extending the time within which a right may be exercised or an act may be done, do not apply to a notice of motion, opposition papers, or reply papers. CCP §1005(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.63 D. Shortening Time

To obtain a hearing date on a motion that is sooner than would otherwise be possible under normal procedures (see §§12.60-12.62), a stipulation must be obtained from the opposing party or an order shortening time must be obtained from the court.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.64 1. By Stipulation

The parties may agree to shorten the time necessary for a notice for the hearing of a motion. Such a stipulation should be in writing.

Before seeking or obtaining such a stipulation, however, contact should be made with the court clerk in the courtroom where the hearing will be held to learn any local requirements or practices with regard to such stipulations and the early setting of a hearing. Because it is best to have a stipulation specify the date, time, and place of the hearing, contact will have to be made in advance to be sure that the court can accommodate the date, time, and place agreed on.

If such an agreement can be reached between the parties, a stipulation should be prepared, signed, and submitted to the court as promptly as possible. Local court rules or policies should also be consulted in connection with such stipulations.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.65 2. By Application for Order Shortening Time

If a stipulation for shortening time is not possible or practicable to obtain, an order shortening time must be sought as part of a formal application to the court. An application for an order shortening time must be supported by an affidavit or declaration showing good cause. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300. In other words, it must be demonstrated that shortened time is appropriate and necessary because of some substantial prejudice or harm that would be suffered without the shortening of time. On ex parte applications, see chap 13. Although applications to shorten time are usually made by moving parties, they can also be made by a responding party that desires an earlier hearing date than that specified in the moving party's notice of motion.

PRACTICE TIP: The order shortening time should be drafted to address the following: (1) when motion papers are to be served, (2) when opposition papers are due, (3) when reply papers are due, (4) how papers are to be served (e.g., by hand delivery), and (5) the date of the hearing.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.66 E. Extending Time

Where it is desired to file a notice of motion, or seek a hearing on a motion on a date that is after the last date prescribed by statute or rule, it is necessary to obtain an extension either from opposing counsel or from the court.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.67 1. By Stipulation

The parties may agree, by stipulation, to extend the time to serve and file motions, or the time for hearing on a motion. It is safest to prepare a formal stipulation, signed by both parties, for this purpose. Local court rules or policies should also be consulted in connection with these stipulations, and they may not be favored under current delay reduction rules.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.68 2. By Motion

If an extension is needed (either by the moving or opposing party on a motion) and opposing counsel will not agree to it, an application seeking the extension can be made. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.20. Counsel must present the application for an order extending time to the judge before whom the action, motion, or other proceeding is pending, or, if that judge is absent or not able to hear it, to another judge of the same court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.20(a). The application must disclose the nature of the case and any prior extension granted by stipulation or court order. Cal Rules of Ct 2.20(b). After the order has been signed, it must be filed immediately and copies served within 24 hours unless the judge has set a different time. Cal Rules of Ct 2.20(c).

Be sure to consult local rules regarding extensions. On ex parte applications, see chap 13.

V. SERVICE AND FILING

§12.69 A. Proof of Service

The last paper in the group of papers served and filed to initiate a motion is normally a proof of service form. Motion papers are often served by mail (CCP §§1012, 1013(a); see §12.71), and a proof of service by mail form can be completed (but not signed) before the papers are mailed and filed (CCP §1013a; see §§18.19 (discussion), 18.21-18.24. (forms)). A conformed copy of the proof of service form is attached to each set of copies of the motion papers served.

On service and filing of the papers generally, see chap 18.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.70 1. Whom to Serve

All parties to the action should be served with the motion papers. See CCP §§1010-1020. The attorney for the plaintiff named first in the complaint must maintain and make available a list of all parties and the addresses at which they may be served. Cal Rules of Ct 3.254.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.71 2. Service by Mail

Service of papers by mail may be made where there is regular mail service available. CCP §1012. Service by mail can be made by a person who is

- A resident of, or employed in, the county where the mailing occurs;
- Over the age of 18 and not a party to the lawsuit; and
- Readily familiar with the collection and processing of correspondence for mailing.

CCP §1013a(3). Papers are served by that person placing them in a sealed, addressed, and stamped envelope, and depositing it with the United States Postal Service or by placing that sealed envelope for collection and mailing in accordance with ordinary business practices. CCP §1013a(3). On service by mail and express mail, see §§18.18, 18.19.

As a matter of courtesy, mailing should be made in a timely fashion and delivered without undue delay. Moreover, service is presumed invalid if the postal cancellation date or postage meter date is more than one day after the date of the deposit for mailing stated on the proof of service. CCP §1013a(3).

Service is completed at the time of the deposit of the papers, but any prescribed time that depends upon the date of such service (e.g., a notice period) is extended 5 calendar days for service by mail if the place of address and place of mailing is in California, 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or place of address is outside California but within the United States, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States. CCP §§1005(b), 1013(a).

The declarant may sign the proof of service by mail only after the envelopes have been sealed and are on their way. See CCP §1013a(3). Thus, a copy of the proof of service actually served on other parties should not include the signature of the declarant. See forms in §§18.21-18.24.

NOTE: Some attorneys add a statement that the declarant is aware that, on motion of the party served, service by mail under CCP §1013a(3) is presumed invalid if the cancellation date or postage meter date on the envelope is more than 1 day later than the deposit date stated in the declaration.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.72 3. Service by Personal Delivery

§12.72 3. Service by Personal Delivery

Service can be made by personal delivery of the papers. Personal delivery does not necessarily require that the recipient actually be present when the papers are delivered. If service is to be made on an attorney, the papers may be left at the attorney's office as specified in CCP §1011(a). When it is appropriate and service is to be made on a party rather than counsel, the papers may be delivered to the party's residence, as specified in CCP §1011(b).

PRACTICE TIP: If there is sufficient time to do so, the simplest method for handling a proof of service by personal delivery is to have the person making the delivery (the "messenger"), fill in how service was made, the date of execution, and sign the declaration of service. Signing of the declaration of service must take place after service has occurred and thus a copy of the proof of service served on the opposing party would not include the messenger's signature. The original of the proof of service, which the messenger signs, is what must then be submitted to the court with the original of the papers that were served.

If a filing with the court must be made before the time the messenger finishes the service and signs the proof of service, a two-step process can be undertaken. This method consists of having a declaration of service in a form similar to that discussed above, but stating that the "envelopes were given to a messenger for personal delivery." That declaration of service should be signed only after the envelopes have been sealed and delivered to the messenger. The copy served on the other parties is thus an unsigned form of the proof of service. The messenger actually making the personal delivery could then sign a proof of service, similar to that described above, but indicating that the messenger received the envelopes from counsel. That proof of service would then be filed separately with the court and would need a case caption.

See discussion and forms in chap 18.

§12.73 4. Service by Fax or Electronically

Papers may be served by fax if the parties agree and the agreement in confirmed in writing. CCP §1013(e); Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(a)(1). Additionally, the court may serve notices by fax if the parties agree. Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(c). An attorney or a party who wishes to receive service by fax must have a fax machine available to receive documents between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on weekdays, except for court holidays. Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(f). On service by fax, see Cal Rules of Ct 2.300-2.306 and §§18.12-18.15.

A trial court may also adopt local rules permitting electronic filing and service of documents. See CCP §1010.6. If notice may be served by mail, CCP §1010.6(a)(6) permits it to be served electronically, even if it is one of the documents (e.g., a file-stamped copy of the judgment) that triggers the time to file a notice of appeal. InSyst, Ltd. v Applied Materials, Inc. (2009) 170 CA4th 1129, 1138, 88 CR3d 808. Electronic service is complete at the time of transmission. CCP §1010.6(a)(6). However, according to the court in InSyst, Ltd. v Applied Materials, Inc., sending the parties an e-mail notifying them that the judgment had been filed, giving them instructions for accessing it on the World Wide Web, and supplying hyperlinks to the document did not transmit the document but merely gave the parties notice of where they could find it, which is not authorized by statute or rule. 170 CA4th at 1139.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.74 B. Filing Papers With Court

The original of the motion papers, with the appropriate proofs of service, is filed in the court clerk's office (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1302(a)) or where local rules specify, directly in the law and motion department in which the hearing is noticed.

The filing should comply with CCP §1005(b); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300(a) (at least 16 court days before the hearing).

When the original papers are filed with the court, a copy should also be available so that the court clerk accepting the originals can affix a court stamp on a set of copies, showing that the originals have been filed. Counsel can then retain these stamped copies if any question arises as to the date of filing or if the originals are misplaced.

C. Service on Public Officer or Agency

§12.75 1. Service on Attorney General

In addition to any statutory requirements for service of briefs on public officers or agencies, a party must serve its brief or petition on the Attorney General if the brief or petition (Cal Rules of Ct 8.29(c)):

- Questions the constitutionality of a state statute; or
- Is filed on behalf of the State of California, a county, or an officer whom the Attorney General may lawfully represent in:
- A criminal case;
- A case in which the state or a state officer in his or her official capacity is a party; or
- A case in which a county is a party, unless the county's interest conflicts with that of the state or a state officer in his or her official capacity.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.76 2. Proof of Service

When a statute or this rule of service on the Attorney General requires a party to serve any document on a nonparty public officer or agency, the party must file proof of such service with the document unless a statute permits service after the document is filed, in which event the proof of service must be filed immediately after the document is served on the public officer or agency. Cal Rules of Ct 8.29(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.77 3. Identification on Cover

When a statute or this rule of service on the Attorney General requires a party to serve any document on a nonparty public officer or agency, the cover of the document must contain a statement that identifies the statute or rule requiring service of the document on the public officer or agency in substantially the following form: "Service on [insert name of officer or agency] required by [insert citation to statute or rule]." Cal Rules of Ct 8.29(b).

VI. OPPOSING MOTION

A. Tactical Considerations

§12.78 1. Initial Evaluating; Options

An attorney served with a notice of motion should read the motion papers immediately and decide what response, if any, should be made. As a part of that evaluation, thought should be given to:

- The merits of the motion itself, i.e., whether the moving party is entitled to the order sought;
- Whether the moving party met all time and technical requirements for the particular motion; and
- How the motion is likely to affect the parties' overall tactical positions.

The party served with motion papers has three basic options:

- Do nothing, effectively acquiescing in issuance of the order sought.
- Attempt to negotiate with opposing counsel some compromise order or result.
- Oppose the motion (normally by filing and serving opposition papers).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.79 a. Cost-Benefit Analysis

Counsel must decide whether opposing a motion is advisable in the context of the party's overall litigation plan. Opposing a motion entails time, effort, and expense, and counsel may find it useful to undertake a cost-benefit analysis.

Counsel should consider such questions as: Does the anticipated benefit (after discounting the possibility of losing the motion and any disadvantage of educating the adversary) outweigh the expense of opposing the motion? How does the balance thus determined compare with the balance reached by weighing the advantages and costs of other approaches, such as trying to negotiate a resolution with opposing counsel?

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.80 b. Factors to Be Evaluated

§12.80 b. Factors to Be Evaluated

Among the factors determining the attorney's response to an opposing motion are:

- The significance of success or failure of the motion to the ultimate outcome of the case. For example, correcting an easily correctable error in a pleading may make greater sense than spending the time and money opposing a special demurrer. Similarly, providing more detail or some extra information in a discovery response may have no effect on the outcome of the case and may be faster and cheaper than opposing a discovery motion even if the relevance of the information is questionable.
- The likelihood that vigorous opposition can defeat the motion.
- The danger of alerting the adversary to matters that are best left unfocused. For example, the best opposition to a particular motion might be to focus on a particular defect or potential defect in the opponent's case with the result that the opponent will pursue a different theory or develop additional evidence on the original theory.
- The advantage, if any, of early determination of the issue raised by the motion. In some situations, even though the particular issue is not crucial to the outcome of the case, the principle that would be decided on resolution of the motion would have broader significance in the continuing conduct of the case. For example, it may be useful to have the court rule on attorney-client privilege questions early if issues arising from that privilege might recur later. Further, favorable resolution of the motion, given the facts on which it will be decided, may set a pattern for resolution of later disputes or questions.
- Whether opposition to the motion will help or interfere with any settlement possibilities.
- The cost of opposing the motion, in both direct monetary cost to the party and in the general conduct of the litigation and the relationship between counsel.
- Whether an acceptable result can be achieved by less costly measures.

PRACTICE TIP: Unless there is a legitimate objective to be achieved by opposing the motion, a motion should not be opposed. Frivolous or unnecessary opposition results in increased costs for the parties involved and unnecessary time by the court, and may subject an attorney, firm, or party to sanctions under CCP §128.7.

Section 128.7 does not apply to discovery requests, responses, objections, or motions. CCP §128.7(g). Sanctions under the California Civil Discovery Act (CCP §§2016.010-2036.050) apply to discovery matters. See, e.g., CCP §2023.030. See §1.6.

§12.81 2. Consulting With Client

It is usually good practice, and often good protection for counsel, to discuss the nature of the motion and whether it should be opposed with the client. Some factors to be evaluated in deciding whether to oppose a motion are matters as to which the client may have significant information or constraints, including those involving the costs of opposing the motion.

NOTE: As a rule, the client who is involved in the tactical decisions made in the litigation is more likely to feel well represented than one who is not.

§12.82 3. Leaving Motion Unopposed

Out of courtesy to other counsel and to the court, an attorney who decides not to oppose a motion should:

- Telephone counsel for the moving party to say that there is no opposition, or to offer to do (or not do) whatever was moved for, if what is sought by the motion can be achieved without a formal court order.

  NOTE: The moving party should immediately inform the court that the parties have resolved the issues raised by the motion, so that the court can take the motion off the calendar, and the judge and law clerks can avoid having to consider the motion papers. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1304(b).

- Advise the court, when a court order is needed or desirable, that there is no opposition to the motion so that the court may sign the order without having to spend time reading the motion papers or to set aside time for a hearing.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.83 4. Resolving Motions by Stipulation or Compromise

Before spending the time and effort in preparing opposition papers to a motion, the attorney should consider whether a negotiated compromise or stipulation might be possible to resolve the issues raised by the motion. If a resolution is possible, opposing counsel should contact counsel for the moving party to try to negotiate that resolution. If a resolution is possible but more time is needed for discussion or analysis before opposition papers are due, the parties may agree on a later date for the hearing on the motion and for service and filing of opposition papers in order to allow time for negotiation. See §12.92.

B. Grounds for Opposing Motion

§12.84 1. Noncompliance With Procedural Requirements

Opposing counsel must determine whether the moving party has met the applicable procedural requirements. Thus, the following questions should be considered:

- Was the motion served and filed at the appropriate time? Did the moving party meet the specific requirements in the Code of Civil Procedure or in the Rules of Court that limit the time within which the particular motion must be brought? See, e.g., §§12.60-12.62. The terms of any case management order should be checked to see if there are limitations expressed there. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.728.
- Has service been made in a timely and proper fashion? If there is an applicable minimum or maximum time for notice, have those requirements been met? See, e.g., §§12.60-12.62. On requirements for proof of service, see §§12.69-12.73.
- Is there a memorandum in support of the motion as required by Cal Rules of Ct 3.1112(a) and 3.1113? See generally §12.30.
- If required, has evidentiary support for the motion been provided? See generally §§12.43-12.53.
- Are there any other special requirements in the Code of Civil Procedure or in any other applicable statute or rule that must be met? See, e.g., the affidavit requirement in CCP §1008(b) for a motion seeking the same order that was sought on a prior motion.

PRACTICE TIP: When it appears that there is a procedural defect in the motion papers, opposing counsel, before spending the time and effort for further research or to prepare opposition papers on that basis, should consult with the court clerk to learn whether the motion papers have been accepted for filing and whether the hearing has actually been scheduled. Depending on the type of defect, defective motion papers may be refused for filing altogether or the hearing may simply not be scheduled. If that occurs, there may be no danger of the motion being granted and ordinarily nothing further need be done. But see, e.g., Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300(d) (no paper shall be rejected for filing on ground that it was untimely). If there is potential that the motion would be heard and ruled on by a judge, however, then opposition papers must be filed. Any procedural defects in the motions can be addressed in the opposition papers.

§12.85 2. Evidentiary Matters Inadmissible or Declarant Incompetent

If evidentiary material is offered to support the motion, opposing counsel should determine whether evidentiary objections should be made. Declarations or affidavits, for instance, can be objected to if the formal requirements for these papers were not met. See, e.g., CCP §2015.5; see §§12.43-12.53. The declarant must be competent to testify to the statements made in a declaration. The same objections can be made to declaration statements as would be made at trial if those statements were offered as testimony. See §§12.49-12.50. Finally, the subscription on a declaration must be proper. See CCP §2015.5; see §12.52.

Regarding other proposed evidence (e.g., documents, requests for admissions, or deposition transcripts), the standards for admissibility of evidence in connection with a motion are the same as for admissibility at trial and the same objections can be made. Evidentiary objections can be made either in a separate paper served and filed, and identified as such, or in a separate section in the opposition's memorandum. The evidentiary objections should clearly identify the matter to which objection is made, the precise objection or objections made, and any necessary argument or supporting authority for such objections.

For summary judgment motions, evidentiary objections must be made in writing or arrangements must be made for a court reporter to be present at the hearing (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1352); written objections must be "served and filed at the same time as the objecting party's opposition or reply papers are served and filed." (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1354(a)). On summary judgment, see chap 36.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.86 3. Facts or Law Insufficient to Support Motion

§12.86 3. Facts or Law Insufficient to Support Motion

The most common way to oppose a motion is to argue that the facts, the law, or both do not justify granting the motion. Thus, if opposition to a motion is to be made, counsel should perform sufficient research and analysis to be able to present a well-reasoned argument.

C. Preparing Opposition Papers

§12.87 1. Memorandum in Opposition to Motion

The general principles for researching, preparing, and organizing a memorandum in support of a motion, discussed in §§12.30-12.42, apply equally to a memorandum in opposition to a motion. The opposition memorandum may be in a form like that shown in §12.147. The caption should identify the moving party and the nature of the motion being opposed. See Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(6).

The organization of the opposition memorandum should be appropriate to respond to the moving party's memorandum and argument. The discussion should be divided, or subdivided, into specific subjects so that the judge hearing the motion can easily locate the response to a particular point made in the moving papers. Thus, the response is often organized in the same way, and in the same order, as the motion papers.

In preparing the opposition memorandum, opposing counsel may consider the following:

- Provide a case summary, particularly if the moving party did not summarize the case in its moving papers. A summary of the posture of the case and the setting for the particular motion may be persuasive to suggest that a motion should not be granted. For example, if nearly identical issues were previously raised in a motion and repeatedly denied by the court, opposing counsel might benefit from presenting these facts in a summary at the beginning of an opposition memorandum.
- Identify and correct any material inaccuracies in the moving party's statement of issues or facts.
- State if particular points argued in the moving party's papers are not disputed in an introductory section or summary.
- State when one of the moving party's points is opposed and briefly summarize the moving party's point and then respond to that point. It is unnecessary and counterproductive to repeat or detail the arguments made in the moving party's papers, and opposing counsel's summary should serve only to orient the reader to the subject being discussed.
- Object to inadmissible evidence in any portion of the moving party's papers. These objections may be stated separately or as a part of the opposition memorandum. See §12.85.

The opposition memorandum may not exceed 15 pages except in a summary judgment or summary adjudication motion, in which the memorandum is limited to 20 pages. The page limit does not apply to exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, or the proof of service. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(d).

If the opposition memorandum exceeds 10 pages, it must include a table of contents and table of authorities; if it exceeds 15 pages, it must contain an "opening summary of argument." Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(f). Generally, the summary should precede the argument itself; it should be relatively short and it should have a separate heading identifying it as a summary.

§12.88 2. Declarations Opposing Motion

The attorney must assess whether any opposition declarations or affidavits are needed. As with motion papers (see §§12.43-12.53), if a point to be made requires presentation of a fact to the court, then the attorney must present that fact to the court in a proper manner. That manner is often by declaration or affidavit. Declarations may present facts not addressed in the moving party's papers at all, or they may contain denials or responses to facts presented by the moving party. Not every motion opposition will need a declaration, of course. See CCP §2015.5.

A declarant's responses or denials of facts presented in a moving party's declarations or evidence should not be simply the formal denials used in pleadings. The declarant's positive statement of the facts should be presented, which can include identification of errors or inexactitudes in the moving party's declaration. The opposition declaration may also, when appropriate, call the court's attention to conflicts between the opposing declarant's statements and those in the moving party's declarations, and state facts showing why the opposing declarant should be believed and the moving party's declaration considered unpersuasive or not pertinent.

The general principles for preparing a declaration or affidavit, discussed in §§12.43-12.53, apply as well in preparing declarations and affidavits in opposition to a motion. The caption of a declaration or affidavit must state both the name of the declarant or affiant and specifically identify the motion that it opposes. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1115. A sub caption should specify the trial date, if set, the hearing date, location, and hearing judge, if ascertainable, as well as the date the action was filed. In addition, the caption must specify the nature or title of any attached document other than an exhibit. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.89 3. Other Evidentiary Material

As with support for a motion, other evidentiary material may be presented as part of the opposition (see §§12.54-12.58), and the court may be asked to take judicial notice of facts (see Evid C §§452-453 on mandatory or permissive judicial notice, discussed in §12.59).

D. Opposition Procedure

§12.90 1. Check for Additional Filing Requirements

Care should be taken to ensure that any additional filing requirements in the applicable statutes, court rules, or local rules that have not been preempted by Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, 2.100(a) are met. On preemption of local rules, see §11.2. For example, a party opposing a summary judgment motion must file a separate statement that responds to each of the material facts the moving party contends are undisputed, indicating whether the opposing party agrees or disagrees. The statement must also set forth any other material facts the opposing party contends are disputed and include references to the supporting evidence. Failure to file such a statement would allow the court, in the exercise of its sound discretion, to deny the motion. CCP §437c(b)(3).

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.91 2. Time for Filing Opposition Papers

§12.91 2. Time for Filing Opposition Papers

All papers opposing a motion must be filed with the court and a copy served on each party at least 9 court days before the hearing. CCP §1005(b).

NOTE: Other times may be specified for particular motions; for example, papers in opposition to motions to dismiss for failure to prosecute are due 15 days after service of the motion papers. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1342(b).

Although CCP §1005 is explicit in requiring that papers opposing a motion be filed at least 9 court days before the hearing, courts have some discretion to accept and consider papers filed after that time. Clearly, it is not good practice to depend on a judge's willingness to exercise that discretion, because failure to file timely opposition papers can be considered a waiver of opposition and consent to entry of the order requested by the motion.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.92 3. Serving and Filing Opposition Papers

The methods for serving opposition papers are the same as for initial motion papers, as are proof of service requirements (see §§12.69-12.74). The opposition papers must be served by personal delivery, fax, express mail, or other method consistent with CCP §§1010-1013 and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery by the close of the next business day after the papers are filed. CCP §1005(c). Section 1005(c) applies to the service of opposition and reply papers on motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, in addition to the motions listed in CCP §1005(a).

NOTE: Consult local rules to learn where the opposition papers should be filed. In some counties, they must be filed directly in the department where the hearing takes place, rather than at the court's central filing window. Some local rules may be preempted. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.20, 2.100(a). See §12.4, chap 11.

On service, see chap 18.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.93 4. Moving for Continuance

If more time is needed to prepare opposition papers, counsel may seek a continuance of the date of hearing and the date for service and filing of opposition papers. It is usually best to first seek agreement from the moving party. If that agreement is given, local practice should be consulted on how to accomplish the change on the court's calendar. See, e.g., San Francisco Ct R 8.2(B). If agreement cannot be reached, an ex parte motion may be made to continue and reschedule the hearing date and date for filing opposition papers. On ex parte motions, see generally chap 13. On summary judgment, see chap 36.

VII. THE REPLY

§12.95 A. Replying to Opposition Papers

Opposition papers are often filed and served only 9 court days before the hearing. CCP §1005(b). see §12.91. Because reply papers must be served and filed at least 5 court days before the hearing, they must be prepared and submitted quickly. CCP §1005(b); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300(a). Note that summary judgment reply papers must be served 5 days before the hearing. CCP §437c(b)(4). Service of reply papers must be made personally or by fax, express mail, or some other method that is reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to other parties by the close of the next business day after the reply is filed. CCP §1005(c).

PRACTICE TIP: Counsel for the moving party in a motion who has been served with opposition papers should immediately consider whether it is worthwhile to submit a written reply. If a point or argument made in the written opposition papers has not been adequately addressed in the initial motion papers, counsel should submit a written reply if there is sufficient time to do so. If there is time, it is usually better to reply in writing than to depend on the opportunity for an oral reply at the hearing. If authority is cited in a reply that was not cited in earlier papers, the written reply will give the opposition party an opportunity to address that authority orally at the hearing, which will usually avoid the danger of the judge delaying a ruling on the motion by allowing the opposing party an opportunity to review the new authority and further respond. Furthermore, having the reply argument before the judge when the papers are read and when tentative rulings are made will allow the reply arguments to be more persuasive. Reply papers should respond to the opposition's papers and not raise new points.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.96 B. Responding to Reply Papers

§12.96 B. Responding to Reply Papers

Any reply papers from the moving party must be served and filed at least 5 court days before the hearing. CCP §1005(b); Cal Rules of Ct 3.1300(a). Even though the reply must be served by personal delivery, fax, express mail, or other method consistent with CCP §§1010-1013 and reasonably calculated to ensure delivery by the close of the next business day after the papers are filed (CCP §1005(b)), there is usually little time for any detailed response to new materials presented in the moving party's reply papers. Nonetheless, if some new point or new evidence necessitates a response, at least two possible options are available:

- Present the response as part of the oral argument at the hearing on the motion. The judge hearing the motion would not, of course, have the benefit of the response when reading the motion papers before the hearing. Further, it may be impossible to present evidence orally at the hearing. Perhaps the attorney could make an offer of proof, agreeing to provide supplemental declarations or evidence after the hearing.
- Prepare, serve, and file responsive papers quickly. If there is time to do so before a judge reads the motion papers, submitting a written response may be more effective than waiting for oral argument. Any such written papers should be as brief and to the point as possible, avoiding repetition of points or arguments already made and focusing only on the new argument or piece of evidence raised in the reply papers. Counsel should be ready to make the same points orally at the hearing if the papers are refused for filing or if they do not reach the judge in time to be read and considered. Filing of any such papers should be directly with the court in which the hearing is to take place if possible, and service on the opposing party should be made by hand delivery.

NOTE: For motions seeking dismissal for failure to prosecute, different time periods are prescribed. The opportunity to respond to the moving party's reply papers is established by the California Rules of Court, and those responsive papers are due 5 days after the moving party's reply papers were filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1342(d). For discussion of motions to dismiss, see chap 39.

VIII. HEARING

§12.97 A. Attendance

Parties have the right, on giving notice of nonappearance, to submit a matter without appearing at the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1304(c). If no party appears (and no notice of nonappearance was given), the court may take the matter off calendar to be reset only on motion, or may rule on the matter. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1304(d). See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1320(f) on demurrers.

NOTE: Even before Cal Rules of Ct 3.1304(c), no statute required the attorney for the moving party, or for an adverse party, to attend the hearing on a motion. See Ensher, Alexander & Barsoom, Inc. v Ensher (1964) 225 CA2d 318, 325, 37 CR 327. The motion is deemed to have been made when the notice of motion was served and filed. CCP §1005.5. The parties are not normally required to be present at motion hearings, and their presence may even be a distraction.

If a matter will not be heard on a scheduled date, the moving party must promptly notify the court. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1304(b).

PRACTICE TIP: An attorney who does not wish to attend a hearing should contact adverse counsel to see whether all will agree to submission of the motion on the papers filed. The attorney should also notify the clerk that the motion is submitted for decision without attendance of counsel. This method permits the court to move more quickly through the calendar and ensures that the judge will not put the matter off-calendar or interpret nonattendance as lack of interest in a ruling.

There are several positive reasons for attorneys to attend a hearing. The judge may ask for clarification of some point raised in the motion or opposition papers. If the attorneys could not informally solve the dispute about which the motion was made, and it was worth counsel's time and effort to prepare the motion or opposition papers, it should also be worth the time to attend the hearing. See §12.102.

NOTE: A court's law and motion calendar for a given day normally lists several cases that will be called in the listed order beginning at a specified hour. The attorneys on the first case should be ready to present argument at that time. Attorneys on subsequent cases should also be present and ready because early cases may be taken off the calendar or submitted without argument.

B. Telephone Appearances

§12.98 1. When Appropriate

A party generally has the option of appearing by telephone in any hearing or conference at which witnesses are not expected to be called to testify. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(b). Local rules may also provide procedures for an appearance by telephone. See Cal Rules of Ct, Standards of J Admin 3.1(d). The option to appear by telephone applies to civil actions as defined in Cal Rules of Ct 1.6(4) and to unlawful detainer and probate proceedings. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(b).

Each court must ensure that the participants' statements are audible to all other participants and that the statement made by a participant is identified as being made by that participant. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(j).

Each court must publish information for parties and attorneys on how to appear by telephone. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(m). A court may require that a particular conference call provider must be used for telephone appearances. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(l). Proceedings involving telephone appearances are recorded just as if the parties appeared in person. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(k).

No telephone appearances are permitted, however, and personal appearances are required, for (Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(b), (d)(1)-(6)):

- Trials and hearings at which witnesses are expected to testify;
- Hearings on restraining orders;
- Settlement conferences;
- Trial management conferences;
- Hearings on motions in limine; and
- Hearings on petitions to confirm the sale of property under the Probate Code.

In addition, personal appearance is required for (Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(b), (d)(7)):

- Applicants seeking an ex parte order, except when the applicant is seeking an order to for permission to file a memorandum in excess of the applicable page limits, for an extension of time to serve pleadings, to set hearing dates on alternative writs and orders to show cause, or by stipulation of the parties;
- Persons ordered to appear to show cause why sanctions should not be imposed for violation of a court order or rule; and
- Persons ordered to appear in an order or citation issued under the Probate Code.

§12.99 2. Notice of Intent to Appear by Telephone

A party who wishes to appear by telephone should include the words "telephone appearance" in the caption of the moving or opposing papers. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(g)(1)(A). See §12.15. If a party is not filing papers, the party must notify the court and all other parties of the party's intent to appear by telephone at least 3 days before the appearance. If the notice is oral, it must be given either in person or by telephone. If the notice is in writing, it must be given by filing a "Notice of Intent to Appear by Telephone" with the court at least 3 court days before the hearing and by serving the notice at the same time on all other parties by personal delivery, facsimile transmission, express mail, or other means reasonably calculated to ensure delivery to the parties no later than the close of the next business day. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(g)(1)(B).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.100 3. Personal Appearance After Notice to Appear by Telephone

A party who has given notice that it intends to appear by telephone and subsequently chooses to appear in person must notify the court and all other parties that have appeared in the action by telephone at least 2 court days before the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(e)(3). If, after a party has requested a telephone appearance, the court decides that a personal appearance by that party is necessary, the court must give reasonable notice to all parties before the hearing and may continue the hearing if necessary to accommodate the personal appearance. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(h). Courts using a telephonic tentative ruling system for law and motion matters may use the tentative ruling to require the parties' personal appearances if the notice is given 1 court day before the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(h).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.101 4. Teleconferencing

A court may provide teleconferencing for court appearances by entering into a contract with a private vendor. The contract may provide that the vendor may charge the party appearing by telephone a reasonable fee, specified in the contract, for its services. Cal Rules of Ct 3.670(i).

§12.102 C. Oral Argument; Answering Judge's Questions

The hearing gives counsel an opportunity to persuade the judge to decide the motion in the client's favor. It also permits counsel to see how the judge and adverse counsel perceive particular aspects of the case and allows counsel to clear up any confusion or misconception. The argument should be planned and not be merely a rehash of points made in the filed memorandum and declarations. Oral argument at a hearing is a privilege, not a right, and the court has discretion to limit argument or deny it. See Gillette v Gillette (1960) 180 CA2d 777, 781, 4 CR 700.

At the hearing, an attorney can begin the argument by stating points that support his or her position, but should be flexible, prepared to answer questions when they are asked, and ready to shift to issues that the judge wants discussed. Mention of a statute or case should include the page where the judge can find the citation in the motion or opposition papers. It can be helpful to tab portions of declarations or documents to which reference may be necessary.

Ordinarily, no transcript will be made of oral argument on a motion unless one of the attorneys arranges before the hearing for a court reporter to be present.

If possible, the attorney who prepared the motion or opposition papers should attend the hearing and should be familiar with the facts of the case and all papers in the file. The judge may ask counsel such procedural questions as:

- Who are the parties and their attorneys?
- Have all parties been served?
- Is there a case management statement on file? See Cal Rules of Ct 3.734(g). Has a case management conference been conducted or set? See Cal Rules of Ct 3.734(e). Is the case set for trial? On case management conferences, see chap 40.
- Does the order sought affect the procedural status of the case?
- Have local rules applicable to the motion been complied with?
- Have all proofs of service and declarations or affidavits been properly executed?
- Has discovery been completed or is the case within 30 days of trial?
- Is there any reason (e.g., other motions, trial-setting, or settlement conference) why the file or any part of it may be unavailable to the court? On settlement conferences, see chap 40.

In preparing for oral argument at the hearing, the attorney should also consider such questions as:

- Were any arguments in favor (or against) the motion omitted from the memorandums?
- Is new evidence available or needed?
- What points in counsel's own memorandum or documents need to be highlighted?
- What points in the opponent's documents are easily or surely refutable?
- What reasons, if any, might give the judge difficulty in reaching a favorable conclusion?
- Are there points of compromise that might be suggested if the judge seems to be leaning the other way?

§12.103 D. Presenting Evidence

All testimony offered at a hearing must be written except as allowed "in the court's discretion for good cause shown." Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(a). A party desiring to introduce oral testimony must file, no later than 3 court days before the hearing, a written statement describing the nature and extent of the testimony and a reasonable time estimate for the hearing. When the statement is filed less than 5 court days before the hearing, it must be served on the other parties in a manner that ensures delivery no later than 2 court days before the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306(b).

WARNING: Judges rarely welcome testimony at the hearing or exhibits that could have been, but were not, served and filed with the motion papers. See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 9.1 (statement required by Cal Rules of Ct 3.1306 must explain why evidence cannot be presented by declaration or affidavit).

A judge has the power to rule on a motion on declarations alone and has discretion to refuse to hear oral testimony at the hearing on a motion. See Beckett v Kaynar Mfg. Co. (1958) 49 C2d 695, 698 n3, 321 P2d 749; Crocker Citizens Nat'l Bank v Knapp (1967) 251 CA2d 875, 880, 60 CR 66. The judge also has discretion to receive testimony and exhibits at the hearing. See Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 524 n7, 67 CR 761; Reifler v Superior Court (1974) 39 CA3d 479, 485, 114 CR 356. See generally 6 Witkin, California Procedure, Proceedings Without Trial §§40, 42 (5th ed 2008).

If a party requests permission to present testimony at the hearing, or to introduce an exhibit not previously mentioned, the judge must exercise the discretion to receive or to exclude it; the judge cannot exclude the testimony or exhibit solely because there is a local policy to consider declarations only. Reifler v Superior Court, supra. The judge should base the decision on the circumstances of the request and the reasons for it.

PRACTICE TIP: A party who wants a judge to consider oral testimony or a new exhibit, or to permit cross-examination of a declarant or other person, should make that request as soon as possible so that calendar time can be scheduled. The reasons for the request should be stated, because the judge must be persuaded to exercise the discretion to permit more than legal argument.

IX. RULINGS AND ORDERS

§12.104 A. Rulings and Orders Defined

An order is a "direction of a court or judge, made or entered in writing, and not included in a judgment." CCP §1003. A judgment is a final determination of the parties' rights in an action or proceeding. CCP §577.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.105 B. Court's Ruling on Noticed Motion

A judge ruling on a noticed motion may:

- Make a tentative ruling which, unless modified at the hearing, becomes the order;
- Render an oral ruling at the hearing, which the clerk will enter as a minute order; or
- Take the motion under submission at the hearing and later issue a written order or ask one of the attorneys to prepare an order to be signed.

See chap 13 on ex parte orders. An oral ruling becomes effective when the clerk enters it in the minutes (Adam v Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 CA2d 535, 541, 317 P2d 642); a written order, after it has been signed, becomes effective when it is filed (Maxwell v Perkins (1953) 116 CA2d 752, 756, 255 P2d 10). See Hollister Convalescent Hosp. v Rico (1975) 15 C3d 660, 664, 125 CR 757. See generally 6 Witkin, California Procedure, Proceedings Without Trial §44 (5th ed 2008).

If the ruling on a motion is complicated, an attorney may be asked to prepare a written order for the judge's signature and for filing. Conformed copies of the order can then be served on all parties. See §12.153.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.106 C. Reason to Submit

A proposed order may be submitted along with the moving papers. If a proposed order is submitted, it must be lodged and served with the moving papers, but it must not be attached to them. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(m).

PRACTICE TIP: The proposed order may aid the judge by showing exactly what the court is being asked to order and by requiring only a signature, without the need for further drafting time or delay. The judge can also sign the order with confidence that adversaries served with the order form in advance had the chance to argue against its form and content. Preparing a form of order at the outset is also useful for counsel as a means to better focus the motion papers on precisely what is being requested.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.107 D. Contents of Proposed Order

The proposed form of order should be a separately captioned document, which will ordinarily have a title such as:

ORDER FOR _ _[specify nature of order]_ _

The order should then begin by identifying the motion made and the fact that it was heard by the court on the date and time it was heard. If known, the introduction can also identify the attorneys and parties represented at the hearing. These introductory recitals of when and how the motion came on for hearing and who appeared, although customarily included, are not required. See, e.g., Doran v Burke (1953) 118 CA2d 806, 258 P2d 1078.

Following that introduction, the ordering language itself should be preceded by language such as:

The Court having heard and considered the arguments made by counsel for the parties, and good cause appearing,

IT IS ORDERED that:

PRACTICE TIP: The specific ordering paragraphs should be clear, concise, and unambiguous. If the order is to grant a motion, the language should specifically state that the motion of that particular party is granted, in addition to language specifically stating what it is the court is ordering by granting that motion.

The order should end with a place for the date and the judge's signature.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.108 E. Attorney Preparation of Order

An attorney may prepare in advance a form of the order sought and submit it along with the moving (or opposition) papers that are served and filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1113(m) (proposed order must be lodged and served with moving papers, but shall not be attached to them). See §12.106. Alternatively, the attorney may

- Bring a form of the order to the hearing and present it for signature if the judge rules in the party's favor; or
- Prepare the form after the judge has ruled on the motion or indicated what the ruling will be.

The date and signature line in the original typed order, and sometimes also date and number spaces in the body of the order, are left blank for the judge to fill in. After the judge has signed the order, it is normally returned to counsel for the prevailing party to serve and file. See §§12.69-12.74.

In some counties, the judge or clerk prepares the original order and mails copies to the parties. The judge may request that an order prepared by counsel be approved as to form by adverse counsel before it is presented to the judge for signature. This may be done by asking adverse counsel to sign and date a line at the end of the order:

Approved as to form:

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ __[Signature]__
John Smith
Attorney for Defendant Johnson

An order is valid even if it does not contain recitals of when and how the motion came on for hearing, who appeared, and that proof was made and good cause appeared. However, it is customary to include these recitals, and at a later proceeding they will be regarded as true unless contradicted by other parts of the record. See, e.g., E. M. Derby & Co. v Jackman (1891) 89 C 1, 26 P 610; Doran v Burke (1953) 118 CA2d 806, 258 P2d 1078. The recitals also add clarity when several motions have been made in an action or there are multiple parties.

PRACTICE TIP: Some court clerks and judges refuse to sign or file orders that are not specified in the caption. Merely "ORDER" or "ORDER OF COURT" is insufficient. Examples of proper descriptions are "ORDER CONTINUING TRIAL DATE," "ORDER SUSTAINING DEMURRER," and "ORDER GRANTING MOTION TO STRIKE."

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.109 F. Findings

Findings of fact need not be made in connection with the granting or denial of a pretrial motion (Beckett v Kaynar Mfg. Co. (1958) 49 C2d 695, 699, 321 P2d 749) unless the order is the basis of a final judgment or a contempt judgment. See generally 7 Witkin, California Procedure, Trial §§389-392 (5th ed 2008). Detailed findings may also be required when sanctions are ordered. See, e.g., CCP §128.7(e) (order imposing sanctions for violation of specified conditions regarding filed pleadings and similar filed documents); see discussion in §3.4. Some recitation of facts may be put in an order if it is necessary to provide guidelines to the persons who must obey it.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.110 G. Notice of Ruling

The time within which a party must act after an order takes effect normally begins to run against the party when he or she is served with a notice of the ruling (see form in §12.149) or a conformed copy of the order (see form in §12.153). If the ruling is made orally at the hearing, in the presence of all counsel, and entered by the clerk in the minutes, counsel may be asked to waive notice. If counsel agree, no written notice of the order need be given. The attorney for a prevailing party can notify any party who is not present at the hearing by serving a notice of the oral ruling. See CCP §1019.5.

If the judge took the motion under submission and later ruled on it, the court clerk must send notice of ruling to the parties. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1109(a). Under Rule 3.1109(a), however, notification by the clerk constitutes service of notice of ruling or order only if the clerk must give notice under CCP §664.5, which relates to judgments and orders that conclude the case. The prevailing party usually prepares and serves on the parties an order form signed by the judge (see §12.153) or a notice of ruling (see §12.149). A notice of ruling is not an order but is only notification that a minute order has been entered.

H. Procedures After Motion Granted

§12.111 1. Moving Party

If the judge makes an oral ruling granting the motion at the hearing, counsel for the moving party may ask all attorneys or parties present to waive notice of the ruling. See CCP §1019.5. If any party does not agree, or if an attorney or unrepresented party is not present, the moving party's attorney can prepare a notice of ruling (see §§12.108, 12.149), serve copies, and file the notice with proof of service.

PRACTICE TIP: It is important to serve a notice of an oral ruling on adverse parties who must perform some act within a specified time.

The trial judge granting a motion may fill in and sign a written order form prepared by the moving party's attorney in advance or may ask the attorney to prepare a written order form embodying specified terms. After a written order has been signed, the attorney should prepare conformed copies for service. These may be

- Photocopies of the filled-in and signed original order; or
- Copies of the original made before it was signed that have been conformed by writing or typing in dates and numbers that the judge put in the original, and by writing or typing the judge's name on the signature line after the symbol "s/." For example:

Judge

PRACTICE TIP: Sometimes, the court clerk will conform copies by rubber stamping the judge's name on the signature line. The conformed copies are then served on each other party, and a proof of service form is filed along with the original signed order if the latter was not previously filed.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.112 2. Opposing Party

After a motion has been granted, an opposing party may pursue several possible courses of action. For example:

- Review of a particular order (see, e.g., CCP §400 authorizing writ of mandate to review order granting or denying a change of venue).
- Appeal from certain orders. CCP §§904.1-904.2.
- Relief from an order on the ground that it was taken against the party through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. CCP §473(b); see Los Angeles v Gleneagle Dev. Co. (1976) 62 CA3d 543, 553, 133 CR 212 (failure to oppose motion properly).
- Motion for reconsideration. CCP §1008(a). See §§12.113-12.118.

Further, the nature of the order, or the circumstances of its issuance (e.g., a deficiency in the notice of motion), may suggest forms of collateral attack on the order. The adverse party can even risk declining to obey the order, stating objections to it or the way in which it was obtained when enforcement of the order is sought.

Until an order given orally is entered in the court minutes, or until a written order is signed and filed, the judge has authority to change his or her mind and to reverse or modify a ruling granting a motion. See Adam v Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 CA2d 535, 541, 317 P2d 642; Miller v Stein (1956) 145 CA2d 381, 385, 302 P2d 403. After the order has been entered or filed, however, there is no general statutory basis for a motion to reconsider or to vacate the order unless the reconsideration is sought under CCP §473 or some other specific statute. Dunas v Superior Court (1970) 9 CA3d 236, 239, 87 CR 719. See also Farrar v McCormick (1972) 25 CA3d 701, 705, 102 CR 190 (e.g., declarations supporting motion to vacate did not show mistake). But see §§23.58, 23.62 (motions to reconsider after demurrer has been overruled or sustained).

I. Procedures After Motion Denied

§12.113 1. Motion for Reconsideration

A party whose application for an order, including any interim order, has been denied (or granted only in part, conditionally, or on terms) may move for reconsideration based on "new or different facts, circumstances, or law" under CCP §1008(a), (g). See Le Francois v Goel (2005) 35 C4th 1094, 1098, 29 CR3d 249. This motion must be made within 10 days after service of written notice of entry of the order to which it is directed. CCP §1008(a).

A motion for reconsideration may also be made by "any party affected by the order," including a responding party, after a motion has been granted wholly, partially, or conditionally. CCP §1008(a).

Under Cal Rules of Ct 8.108(e), filing a valid motion to reconsider an appealable order under CCP §1008 extends the time to appeal from the order for all parties until the earliest of:

- 30 days after the clerk mails or a party serves the order denying a motion or a notice of entry of that order;
- 90 days after the first motion to reconsider is filed; or
- 180 days after entry of the appealable order.

NOTE: Subsection (e) was added to Cal Rules of Ct 8.108 in 2002 specifically to address a split in case authority regarding whether filing a motion for reconsideration extended a party's time to appeal. Cal Rules of Ct 8.103, Advisory Committee Comment (2002). Older cases discussing this issue should be read in light of this change in the law. See, e.g., Conservatorship of Coombs (1998) 67 CA4th 1395, 79 CR2d 799 (holding former Cal Rules of Ct 3, see now revised Cal Rules of Ct 8.108, did not apply to motions for reconsideration).

To extend the time to appeal, a motion for reconsideration must be valid. Branner v Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 175 CA4th 1043, 1048, 96 CR3d 690. A motion that is filed without the supporting affidavit required by CCP §1008(a) is invalid and remains so, even if the court later allows the party to file the affidavit. 175 CA4th at 1049.

Once judgment has been entered, the court has no power to reconsider its order without a postjudgment request for relief from the judgment. Nave v Taggart (1995) 34 CA4th 1173, 40 CR2d 714 (prejudgment motion does not survive subsequently entered judgment; entry of judgment implied denial of pending motion).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.114 a. Subsequent Motion for Same Order

Alternatively, a party whose motion was not granted fully and unconditionally may make a later application (motion) for the same order. CCP §1008(b). The motion must be supported by an affidavit or declaration that states what the original motion was, when and by what judge it was ruled on, what order or decisions were made, and what new or different facts, circumstances, or law are claimed to be shown by the later motion. CCP §1008(b). "New or different law" does not include a later-enacted statute that may not be applied retroactively. CCP §1008(f).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.115 b. Jurisdiction to Hear Motion

No judge or court has jurisdiction to hear a motion to reconsider, or the renewal of a motion previously ruled on, that does not comply with CCP §1008, although a court may reconsider a prior order on its own motion if it finds that a change of law warrants doing so. CCP §1008(c), (e). The court exceeds its jurisdiction if it grants reconsideration of a motion that is not based on "new or different facts, circumstances, or law." CCP §1008(e); Gilberd v AC Transit (1995) 32 CA4th 1494, 38 CR2d 626; Morite of Cal. v Superior Court (1993) 19 CA4th 485, 23 CR2d 666. This jurisdictional prerequisite is not satisfied by arguing that the court "misinterpreted" the law in its initial decision and would, therefore, be relying on "different" law on reconsideration. Gilberd v AC Transit (1995) 32 CA4th 1494, 1500, 38 CR2d 626. See §12.119 regarding the court's inherent power to reconsider interim decisions.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.116 c. Denial of Motion

When a motion has been denied, the attorney for a party who opposed the motion may prepare a form of order denying the motion (see §12.153) or a notice of ruling (see §12.149) to inform other parties of the denial. This step ensures the commencement of any time period that begins to run against the moving party on denial of the motion.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.117 d. Sanctions

Various sanctions may be imposed on a party or an attorney who does not comply with CCP §1008 when making a motion to reconsider or a renewed motion, including punishment for contempt, sanctions under CCP §128.7, or revocation of any order made under the section. However, penalties for failure to comply with §1008 have been held not to be mandatory. Moore v Moore (1955) 133 CA2d 56, 60, 283 P2d 338.

NOTE: Section 1008 was substantially amended in 1992. Judicial decisions based on former versions of §1008 must be read in the light of the new wording.

A judge presented with a subsequent motion based on substantially the same grounds and seeking substantially the same relief as a denied motion may:

- Deny it summarily without further reconsideration (City & County of San Francisco v Muller (1960) 177 CA2d 600, 603, 2 CR 383); or
- Consider it and deny it (Josephson v Superior Court (1963) 219 CA2d 354, 358, 33 CR 196).

The court may not ignore the subsequent motion. Muller v Tanner (1969) 2 CA3d 445, 460, 82 CR 738.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.118 e. Appeal

There is a split in authority about whether a denial of a motion for reconsideration is appealable. In Marriage of Burgard (1999) 72 CA4th 74, 81, 84 CR2d 739, the Sixth District Court of Appeal noted a trend to treat motions for reconsideration as not appealable, but held that the instant case did not provide an opportunity to review its position in Santee v Santa Clara County Office of Educ. (1990) 220 CA3d 702, 710, 269 CR 605 (motion for reconsideration that raises new facts is appealable). See also City of Los Angeles v Glair (2007) 153 CA4th 813, 823 n8, 63 CR3d 280. But see Branner v Regents of Univ. of Cal. (2009) 175 CA4th 1043, 1050, 96 CR3d 690 (denial of motion for reconsideration is not appealable under any circumstances).

WARNING: In Blue Mountain Dev. Co. v Carville (1982) 132 CA3d 1005, 1010, 183 CR 594, the court noted that an order on a motion for reconsideration is appealable only if the original ruling as to which reconsideration was sought was a judgment under CCP §904.1.

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.119 2. Court's Inherent Power to Reconsider

Trial courts have the inherent power to reconsider and correct their own interim decisions in order to achieve substantial justice. Phillips v Phillips (1953) 41 C2d 869, 874, 264 P2d 926 (trial court may change its decision on law or facts at any time before judgment is entered); Kerns v CSE Ins. Group (2003) 106 CA4th 368, 388, 130 CR2d 754. This power is derived from the California Constitution. Cal Const art III, §3; art IV, §1; art V, §1; art VI, §1 (providing for legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government); Manduley v Superior Court (2002) 27 C4th 537, 557, 117 CR2d 168; Kerns v CSE Ins. Group, supra. The only requirement of the court is that it exercise "due consideration" before modifying, amending, or revoking its prior orders. Darling, Hall & Rae v Kritt (1999) 75 CA4th 1148, 1156, 89 CR2d 676.

Code of Civil Procedure §1008 limits the ability of parties to file repetitive motions, but it does not limit a court's ability, on its own motion, to reconsider a prior interim order to correct an error. Le Francois v Goel (2005) 35 C4th 1094, 1107, 29 CR3d 249. A trial court may sua sponte reconsider its own interim orders irrespective of CCP §1008, because to eliminate a trial court's jurisdiction in this regard would materially impair and defeat a core function of the judiciary and violate the separation of powers doctrine. Case v Lazben Fin. Co. (2002) 99 CA4th 172, 175, 121 CR2d 405. See also Abassi v Welke (2004) 118 CA4th 1353, 1359, 14 CR3d 336 (court had power to reconsider ruling on motion for summary judgment sua sponte and request that parties resubmit motion court had previously denied). But see Schachter v Citigroup, Inc. (2005) 126 CA4th 726, 23 CR3d 920 (court's inherent power to correct its own rulings does not excuse party from complying with requirements of CCP §437c(f)(2) when seeking reconsideration of summary judgment ruling).

A trial court that grants reconsideration on its own motion does so because, based on the evidence originally submitted, its earlier decision was wrong; the court does not have inherent power to grant a new trial, i.e., to take new evidence and hold a new hearing. Marriage of Herr (2009) 174 CA4th 1463, 95 CR3d 464 (when trial court expressly rejected parties' trial evidence as inaccurate or unreliable, its sua sponte grant of reconsideration ordering them to produce new, competent evidence at new hearing was a grant of new trial and beyond its power under CCP §659; party's own motion for new trial was untimely under CCP §659).

A change in the law is always an appropriate basis, until a final judgment is entered, for changing an interim order; courts retain the inherent power, regardless of CCP §1008, to change their orders at any time before entry of judgment. Darling, Hall & Rae v Kritt (1999) 75 CA4th 1148, 1155, 89 CR2d 676.

A party may not file a written motion to reconsider that has procedural significance if it does not satisfy CCP §1008. Le Francois v Goel (2005) 35 C4th 1094, 1108, 29 CR3d 249. Although a party may not be prevented from communicating to the court that it should reconsider a prior ruling, this communication may not be made ex parte. 35 C4th at 1108. If the requirements of CCP §1008 are not satisfied, an action to reconsider a prior interim order must formally begin with the court on its own motion. 35 C4th at 1108. See Barthold v Barthold (2008) 158 CA4th 1301, 70 CR3d 691 (motion for reconsideration granted on court's own motion after party filed motion that failed to meet requirements of CCP §1008).

§12.120 J. Motion for Relief Under CCP §473 (Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, Neglect)

Depending on the circumstances, the court may, in effect, reconsider a prior order under CCP §473 if the moving party can show that the prior order was a result of "mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect." See Juarez v Superior Court (1982) 31 C3d 759, 765, 183 CR 852; Garber & Assocs. v Eskandarian (2007) 150 CA4th 813, 822, 59 CR3d 1. However, a motion for relief under §473 cannot be used merely to evade the jurisdictional requirements of CCP §1008. Gilberd v AC Transit (1995) 32 CA4th 1494, 38 CR2d 626 (mistake on issue collateral to merits of initial motion). See also Standard Microsystems Corp. v Winbond Elec. Corp. (2009) 179 CA4th 868, 890, 102 CR3d 140 (motion for mandatory relief from default based on attorney error under CCP §473 was not motion for reconsideration under CCP §1008, because first, unsuccessful motion for reconsideration had been based on mistake of law). On motions for relief from default under §473, see chap 38.

§12.121 X. SANCTIONS

The court has the power to order payment of attorney fees and expenses incurred in responding to pleadings or other papers that are "presented primarily for an improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation" or for legal contentions that are unwarranted "by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law." CCP §128.7(b)-(d). Under CCP §128.7, attorneys who represent themselves cannot recover their attorney fees as sanctions for filing abuses. Musaelian v Adams (2009) 45 C4th 512, 87 CR3d 475.

Section 128.7 does not apply to discovery motions. CCP §128.7(g). Sanctions under the California Civil Discovery Act (CCP §§2016.010-2036.050) apply to discovery matters. See, e.g., CCP §2023.030. For further discussion of sanctions under CCP §128.7 (applying only to complaints filed, or proceedings initiated, after December 31, 2004), see §1.6.

In addition, the court may order a party, the party's attorney, or both to pay any reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, incurred by another party as a result of bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay. CCP §§128.5, 128.7; Wallis v PHL Assoc., Inc. (2008) 168 CA4th 882, 86 CR3d 297. A determination of frivolousness requires a finding that a motion is totally and completely without merit, i.e., any reasonable attorney would agree that such a motion is totally devoid of merit. Decker v U. D. Registry, Inc. (2003) 105 CA4th 1382, 1392, 129 CR2d 892.

The court may also order sanctions under Cal Rules of Ct 2.30(b) for failure to comply with the trial and pretrial rules of the Rules of Court (Cal Rules of Ct 2.2-2.958). Cal Rules of Ct 2.30(b).

XI. SEALING OF COURT RECORDS

§12.122 A. Standards and Procedures Generally

California Rules of Court 2.550 and 2.551 provide a standard and procedures for courts to use when a request is made to seal a record. The standard is based on NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-TV), Inc. v Superior Court (1999) 20 C4th 1178, 86 CR2d 778. These rules apply to civil and criminal cases. They recognize the First Amendment right of access to documents used at trial or as a basis of adjudication. The rules do not apply to records that courts must keep confidential by law. Examples of confidential records to which public access is restricted by law are records of the family conciliation court (Fam C §1818(b)), fee waiver applications (Cal Rules of Ct 3.54), and search warrant affidavits sealed under People v Hobbs (1994) 7 C4th 948, 30 CR2d 651. The sealed records rules do not apply to discovery proceedings, motions, and materials that are not used at trial or submitted to the court as a basis for adjudication. See NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-TV), Inc. v Superior Court (1999) 20 C4th 1178, 1208 n25, 86 CR2d 778; Advisory Committee Comment to Cal Rules of Ct 2.550 (2004).

A record filed publicly in the court must not disclose material from a record that is sealed, conditionally under seal, or subject to a pending motion or an application to seal. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(c).

§12.123 1. Applicability

California Rules of Court 2.550-2.585 apply to records sealed or proposed to be sealed by court order. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(a)(1).

California Rules of Court 2.550-2.585 does not apply to records that are required to be kept confidential by law. These rules also do not apply to discovery motions and records filed or lodged in connection with discovery motions or proceedings. The rules do apply to discovery materials that are used at trial or submitted as a basis for adjudication of matters other than discovery motions or proceedings. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(a)(2).

California Rules of Court 8.46 applies to sealed records and records proposed to be sealed on appeal and in original proceedings under Cal Rules of Ct 8.490, but it does not apply to records required to be kept confidential by law. See Universal City Studios, Inc. v Superior Court (2003) 110 CA4th 1273, 2 CR3d 484.

§12.124 2. Definitions

A "sealed" record is a record that by court order is not open to inspection by the public. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(b)(2).

A "lodged" record is a record that is temporarily placed or deposited with the court but not filed. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(b)(3).

B. Procedures for Filing Records Under Seal

§12.126 1. Court Approval Required

A record must not be filed under seal without a court order. The court must not permit a record to be filed under seal based solely on the agreement or stipulation of the parties. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(a).

2. Motion or Application to Seal a Record

§12.127 a. Motion or Application

A party requesting that a record be filed under seal must file a motion or an application for an order sealing the record. The motion or application must be accompanied by a memorandum and a declaration containing facts sufficient to justify the sealing. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(1).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.128 b. Express Factual Findings Required to Seal Records

The court may order that a record be filed under seal only if it expressly finds facts that establish (Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(d)(1)-(5)):

- There is an overriding interest that overcomes the right of public access to the record;
- The overriding interest supports sealing the record;
- A substantial probability exists that the overriding interest will be prejudiced if the record is not sealed;
- The proposed sealing is narrowly tailored; and
- No less restrictive means exist to achieve the overriding interest.

California Rules of Court 2.550(d)-(e) is derived from NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-TV), Inc. v Superior Court (1999) 20 C4th 1178, 86 CR2d 778. That decision contains the requirements that the court, before closing a hearing or sealing a transcript, must find an "overriding interest" that supports the closure or sealing and must make certain express findings. 20 C4th at 1217. The decision notes that the First Amendment right of access applies to records filed in both civil and criminal cases as a basis for adjudication. 20 C4th at 1208 n25. Thus, the NBC Subsidiary test applies to the sealing of records. Advisory Committee Comment to Cal Rules of Ct 2.550 (2004).

NBC Subsidiary (KNBC-TV), Inc. v Superior Court, supra, provides examples of various interests that courts have acknowledged may constitute "overriding interests." 20 C4th at 1222 n 46. Courts have found that, in appropriate circumstances, various statutory privileges, trade secrets, and privacy interests, when properly asserted and not waived, may constitute "overriding interests." The rules do not attempt to define what may constitute an "overriding interest," but leave this to case law. Advisory Committee Comment to Cal Rules of Ct 2.550 (2004).

In an insurance coverage dispute, the defendant failed to show an "overriding interest" supporting the sealing of various documents. Thus, none of the following documents could remain sealed: the settlement agreement with a confidentiality clause containing an exception for court-ordered disclosure; papers that revealed sources of payments to settle claims; documents that contained admissions that the defendant may have violated pollution laws; papers revealing the identity of witnesses to possible violations of laws; and documents that disclosed the identity of other entities that may have violated laws. Huffy v Superior Court (2003) 112 CA4th 97, 4 CR3d 823; see Universal City Studios, Inc. v Superior Court (2003) 110 CA4th 1273, 1279, 2 CR3d 484 (defendant failed to make any showing of prejudice to any of its legitimate commercial interests if heavily redacted settlement agreement was unsealed); In re Providian Credit Card Cases (2002) 96 CA4th 292, 298 n3, 116 CR2d 833 (defendant claimed that materials contained trade secrets, but court noted that they were telemarketing scripts that had already been disclosed to defendant's customers).

§12.129 c. Service

A copy of the motion or application must be served on all parties who have appeared in the case. Unless the court orders otherwise, any party that already possess copies of the records to be placed under seal must be served with a complete, unredacted version of all papers as well as a redacted version. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(2).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.130 3. Lodging of Records

The party requesting that a record be filed under seal must lodge it with the court under Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d) when the motion or application is made, unless good cause exists for not lodging it or the record was previously lodged under Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(i). Pending the determination of the motion, the lodged record will be conditionally under seal. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(4).

If necessary to prevent disclosure, any motion or application, any opposition, and any supporting documents must be filed in a public redacted version and lodged in a complete version conditionally under seal. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(5).

A record that may be filed under seal must be put in an envelope or other appropriate container, sealed in the envelope or container, and lodged with the court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d)(1).

The envelope or container lodged with the court must be labeled "CONDITIONALLY UNDER SEAL." Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d)(2).

The party submitting the lodged record must affix to the envelope or container a cover sheet that (Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d)(3)(A)-(B)):

- Contains all the information required on a caption page under Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119; and
- States that the enclosed record is subject to a motion or an application to file the record under seal.

On receipt of a record lodged under this rule, the clerk must endorse the affixed cover sheet with the date of its receipt and must retain but not file the record unless the court orders it filed. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d)(4).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.131 4. Trial Records Subject to Confidentiality Agreement or Protective Order

§12.131 4. Trial Records Subject to Confidentiality Agreement or Protective Order

A party who files or intends to file with the court for the purposes of adjudication or to use at trial records produced in discovery that are subject to a confidentiality agreement or protective order, and does not intend to request to have the records sealed, must (Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)):

- Lodge the unredacted records subject to the confidentiality agreement or protective order and any pleadings, memorandums, declarations, and other documents that disclose the contents of the records, in the manner stated in Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d) (Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(i));
- File copies of the documents named in Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(i) that are redacted so that they do not disclose the contents of the records that are subject to the confidentiality agreement or protective order (Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(ii)); and
- Give written notice to the party who produced the records that the records and the other documents lodged under Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(i) will be placed in the public court file unless that party files a timely motion or application to seal the records under this rule (Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(A)(iii)).

If the party who produced the documents and who was served with the notice under Rule 2.551(b)(3)(A)(iii) fails to file a motion or application to seal the records within 10 days or to obtain a court order extending the time to file such a motion or an application, the clerk must promptly remove all documents named in Rule 2.551(b)(3)(A)(i) from the envelope or container where they are located and place them in the public file. If the party files a motion or an application to seal within 10 days or such later time as the court has ordered, these documents are to remain conditionally under seal until the court rules on the motion or application and thereafter are to be filed as ordered by the court. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(3)(B).

5. Order

§12.132 a. Content and Scope of Order

An order sealing the record must:

- Specifically set forth the factual findings that support the order; and
- Direct the sealing of only those documents and pages, or, if reasonably practicable, portions of those documents and pages that contain the material that needs to be placed under seal.

All other portions of each document or page must be included in the public file. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(e)(1).

Consistent with CCP §§639 and 645.1, if the records that a party is requesting to be placed under seal are voluminous, the court may appoint a referee and fix and allocate the referee's fees among the parties. Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(e)(2).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.133 b. Procedure on Grant or Denial of Order

If the court grants an order sealing a record, the clerk must substitute on the envelope or container for the label required by Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(d)(2) a label prominently stating, "SEALED BY ORDER OF THE COURT ON [DATE]," and must replace the cover sheet required by Rule 2.551(d)(3) with a filed-endorsed copy of the court's order. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(e)(1).

The order must state whether—in addition to records in the envelope or container—the order itself, the register of actions, any other court records, or any other records relating to the case are to be sealed. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(e)(2).

The order must state whether anyone other than the court is authorized to inspect the sealed record. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(e)(3).

Unless the sealing order provides otherwise, it prohibits the parties from disclosing the contents of any materials that have been sealed in any subsequently filed records or papers. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(e)(4).

If the court denies the motion or application to seal, the clerk must return the lodged record to the submitting party and must not place it in the case file unless that party notifies the clerk in writing within 10 days after the order denying the motion or application that the record is to be filed. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(b)(6).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/12 Noticed Motions/§12.134 C. Custody of Sealed Records

§12.134 C. Custody of Sealed Records

Sealed records must be securely filed and kept separate from the public file in the case. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(f).

NOTE: If the court mistakenly files in a public file documents subject to a protective order, an action by an attorney or party to take advantage of this mistake may be viewed as made in bad faith and subject to sanctions under CCP §128.5. See Wallis v PHL Assoc., Inc. (2008) 168 CA4th 882, 86 CR3d 297. See §12.121.

§12.135 D. Custody of Voluminous Records

If the records to be placed under seal are voluminous and are in the possession of a public agency, the court may by written order direct the agency instead of the clerk to maintain custody of the original records in a secure fashion. If the records are requested by a reviewing court, the trial court must order the public agency to deliver the records to the clerk for transmission to the reviewing court under these rules. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(g).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.136 E. Motion, Application, or Petition to Unseal Records

A sealed record must not be unsealed except by court order. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(h)(1). See H.B. Fuller Co. v Doe (2007) 151 CA4th 879, 889, 60 CR3d 501 (no clear enunciation of specific facts to support maintaining documents sealed under stipulated order).

A party or member of the public may move, apply, or petition, or the court on its own motion may move, to unseal a record. Notice of any motion, application, or petition to unseal must be filed and served on all parties in the case. The motion, application, or petition and any opposition, reply, and supporting documents must be filed in a public redacted version and a sealed complete version if necessary to comply with Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(c). Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(h)(2).

If the court proposes to order a record unsealed on its motion, the court must mail notice to the parties stating the reason therefor. Any party may serve and file an opposition within 10 days after the notice is mailed or within such time as the court specifies. Any other party may file a response within 5 days after the filing of an opposition. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(h)(3).

In determining whether to unseal a record, the court must consider the matters addressed in Cal Rules of Ct 2.550(c)-(e) (court records presumed to be open, express factual findings required to seal records, content and scope of order). Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(h)(4).

The order unsealing a record must state whether the record is unsealed entirely or in part. If the court's order unseals only part of the record or unseals the record only as to certain persons, the order must specify the particular records that are unsealed, the particular persons who may have access to the record, or both. If, in addition to the records in the envelope or container, the court has previously ordered the sealing order, the register of actions, or any other court records relating to the case to be sealed, the unsealing order must state whether the additional records are unsealed. Cal Rules of Ct 2.551(h)(5).

§12.137 F. Request for Delayed Public Disclosure

In an action in which the prejudgment attachment remedy under CCP §§483.010-483.020 is sought, if the plaintiff requests at the time a complaint is filed that the records in the action or the fact of the filing of the action be made temporarily unavailable to the public under CCP §482.050, the plaintiff must file a declaration stating one of the following (Cal Rules of Ct 2.580(a)(1)-(2)):

- "This action is on a claim for money based on contract against a defendant who is not a natural person. The claim is not secured within the meaning of CCP §483.010(b)."
- "This action is on a claim for money based on contract against a defendant who is a natural person. The claim arises out of the defendant's conduct of a trade, business, or profession, and the money, property, or services were not used by the defendant primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. The claim is not secured within the meaning of CCP §483.010(b)."

G. In Camera Confidential Proceedings

§12.138 1. Minutes of Proceedings

If a confidential in camera proceeding is held in which a party is excluded from being represented, the clerk must include in the minutes the nature of the hearing and only such references to writings or witnesses that will not disclose privileged information. Cal Rules of Ct 2.585(a).

© The Regents of the University of California

§12.139 2. Disposition of Examined Records

Records or copies of records examined by the court in confidence under Cal Rules of Ct 2.585(a) must be filed with the clerk under seal and must not be disclosed without court order. Cal Rules of Ct 2.585(b).

I. INTRODUCTION

§13.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the procedures and forms for obtaining a court order without serving a notice of motion on adverse parties, called an "ex parte" order. It discusses applications (see §§13.3-13.14) and contains forms (see §§13.18-13.19). This chapter also highlights the procedures for obtaining an order to show cause, which requires another party to attend a hearing and show cause why a specified order should not issue. See §§13.15-13.17, 13.20. The OSC procedure is typically used for contempt proceedings, family law disputes, preliminary injunctions, and other provisional remedies.

Particular ex parte applications and orders are discussed in the other chapters of this book that cover the procedures in which they are used. For example, an ex parte application for an order shortening the time within which a hearing may be held on a noticed motion is covered in §§12.63-12.64.

§13.2 B. Governing Law

Procedures for applying for an ex parte order are set forth in Cal Rules of Ct 3.1200-3.1207. The Judicial Council has preempted local rules relating to ex parte applications in civil cases under the courts' general jurisdiction, unless such rules "are otherwise permitted or required by a statute or a rule in the California Rules of Court." Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(a). Nevertheless, some local courts still have rules regarding ex parte motions, and it is suggested that these rules be followed, even though they are arguably preempted. See, e.g., Contra Costa Ct R 7(G); Los Angeles Ct R 7.12(j)(2)-(3).

NOTE: Local rules continue to apply to ex parte applications in, e.g., family court and probate court, because Cal Rules of Ct 3.20 does not preempt local rules in these areas (Cal Rules of Ct 3.20(b)). See, e.g., Los Angeles Ct R 10.37-10.38 (probate); Los Angeles Ct R 14.3 (family).

II. APPLICATION FOR EX PARTE ORDER

§13.3 A. Nature

The ex parte procedure is used in situations in which a judge may issue an order on the request of one party without the need to give other parties time to prepare and present either papers in opposition or oral argument against the order. A judge asked to sign an ex parte order often wants to be assured that opposing parties have been notified that the moving party is requesting the particular order and has been given an opportunity to informally voice any objections they have to its issuance. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1200-3.1207.

NOTE: Attorneys use "ex parte" as an adjective to denote the request (e.g., "an ex parte application") or the result (e.g., "an ex parte order") when the noticed motion procedure specified in chap 12 is not used.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/13 Ex Parte Motions and Orders to Show Cause/§13.4 B. When Available

§13.4 B. When Available

A motion may be made and granted ex parte when the order issued would affect only the moving party or would not affect a substantial right of any adverse party. McDonald v Severy (1936) 6 C2d 629, 631, 59 P2d 98. Although certain orders may be obtained through ex parte application, a statute silent on the question should not be interpreted as authorizing an ex parte application for an order. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Superior Court (1984) 156 CA3d 82, 85, 202 CR 571. Some statutes expressly provide that a party may apply ex parte for a particular order. When a statute provides that an order may be obtained "on notice," however, the notice of motion procedure in chap 12 must be followed. See McDonald v Severy, supra. Additionally, the use of the term "motion" rather than "ex parte application" in a statute imposes the notice and hearing requirements generally applicable to motions. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Superior Court, supra.

NOTE: Some attorneys and judges believe that an order may be issued ex parte, unless a statute or rule specifically requires a noticed motion and hearing. Other judges believe that orders should be granted ex parte only when it is clear that requiring notice or a hearing would be impracticable, or detrimental to the moving party's rights or to the purpose of order. See generally 6 Witkin, California Procedure, Proceedings Without Trial §§58-61 (5th ed 2008).

§13.5 C. Required Documents

An ex parte application must be in writing and include all of the following (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1201):

- An application containing the case caption and stating the relief requested (see §§13.6, 13.18);
- A declaration in support of the application making the factual showing required under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1202(c) (see §§13.7, 13.18);
- A competent declaration based on personal knowledge of the notice given under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1204(b) (see §§13.8-13.9, 13.18);
- A supporting memorandum (see §13.18); and PRACTICE TIP: An extensive memorandum is seldom needed to support the routine orders usually applied for ex parte. The authorizing statute can be cited, and any comment needed made under an "Argument" heading following the declarant's signature. The statute may also be cited in the caption and the opening paragraph.

- A proposed order (see §13.19).

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.6 1. Contents of Application

Like other court papers, the application for an ex parte order should comply with form and format requirements prescribed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119. See chap 12 for discussion. The nature of the paper may be, e.g., "Ex Parte Application for Order _ _ _ _ _ _," or "Declaration for Ex Parte Order for _ _ _ _ _ _."

An ex parte application for an order must state the name, address, and telephone number of any attorney known to the applicant to be an attorney for any party or, if no such attorney is known, the name, address, and telephone number of such party if known to the applicant. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1202(a).

If an ex parte application for an order has been made to the court and has been refused in whole or in part, any subsequent application of the same character or for the same relief, although made on an allegedly different state of facts, must include a full disclosure of any previous applications and the court's actions. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1202(b).

For form of application, see §13.18.

§13.7 2. Declaration Stating Basis for Relief

An applicant must make an affirmative factual showing in a declaration containing competent testimony based on personal knowledge of irreparable harm, immediate danger, or any other statutory basis for granting relief ex parte. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1202(c). For form of declaration, see §13.18.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.8 3. Declaration Regarding Notice

An ex parte application for an order must be accompanied by an affidavit or a declaration showing one of the following (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1204(b)):

- That, within the applicable time period under Cal Rules of Ct 3.1203(a) (see §13.10), the applicant informed the opposing party when and where the application would be made;
- That the applicant in good faith attempted to inform the opposing party but was unable to do so, specifying the efforts made to inform the opposing party; or
- That, for reasons specified, the applicant should not be required to inform the opposing party.

For form, see §13.18.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/13 Ex Parte Motions and Orders to Show Cause/§13.9 4. Contents of Notice and Declaration Regarding Notice

§13.9 4. Contents of Notice and Declaration Regarding Notice

When notice of an ex parte application is given, the person giving notice must state with specificity the nature of the relief to be requested and the date, time, and place for the presentation of the application, and must attempt to determine whether the opposing party will appear to oppose the application. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1204(a).

Every ex parte application must be accompanied by a declaration regarding notice that states (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1204(b)):

- The notice given, including the date, time, manner, and name of the party informed, the relief sought, any response, and whether opposition is expected; or
- Why notice should not be required.

If notice was provided later than 10 a.m. the court day before the ex parte appearance, the declaration regarding notice must explain (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1204(c)):

- The exceptional circumstances that justify the shorter notice, or
- In unlawful detainer proceedings, why the notice given is reasonable.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.10 D. Time of Notice

A party seeking an ex parte order must notify all parties no later than 10 a.m. the court day before the ex parte appearance, absent a showing of exceptional circumstances that justify a shorter time for notice. A party seeking an ex parte order in an unlawful detainer proceeding may provide shorter notice as long as the notice given is reasonable. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1203(b).

PRACTICE TIP: Notification may be given by telephoning the attorneys for other parties or by delivering or mailing a copy of the application with an indication of the department or judge and of the date and time of submission for issuance of the order. If notice is given by telephone message, include details regarding the time and contents of the message in counsel's declaration supporting the ex parte application. See Datig v Dove Books, Inc. (1999) 73 CA4th 964, 87 CR2d 719 (decided under former Cal Rules of Ct 379(b); see now Cal Rules of Ct 3.1203; defense attorney failed to give plaintiff appropriate notice of ex parte application to dismiss and attorney's declaration stated that he had telephoned plaintiff's counsel, but did not state contents of messages or time he left messages).

§13.12 F. Service of Papers

Parties appearing at the ex parte hearing must serve the ex parte application or any written opposition on all other appearing parties at the first reasonable opportunity. Absent exceptional circumstances, no hearing may be conducted unless such service has been made. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1206.

PRACTICE TIP: Usually, service at the hearing is sufficient. However, courts will deny a motion if the moving party prepared the application a significant time before the hearing, but failed to serve the papers until the hearing.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/13 Ex Parte Motions and Orders to Show Cause/§13.13 G. Personal Appearance Requirements

§13.13 G. Personal Appearance Requirements

A personal appearance is not required on an ex parte application to (1) file a memorandum that exceeds the page limit or (2) set hearing dates on alternative writs and orders to show cause. An appearance is also not required on stipulations by the parties or other orders of the court. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1207.

NOTE: Although Rule 3.1207 does not require an appearance on an ex parte application to file an oversize brief or to set hearing dates on alternative writs and orders to show cause, as a practical matter, courts are often less inclined to grant relief if the attorney does not appear to argue.

III. APPLICATION FOR ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

§13.15 A. Nature; When to Use

The order to show cause procedure is an alternative to proceeding by noticed motion. Basically, the moving party makes an ex parte application for an order that requires another party to attend a hearing and show cause why a specified order should not issue. Service of the order to show cause on the other party acts as the service of a notice of motion. The judge may order that the show-cause hearing take place sooner than the 16 court days normally required for a notice of motion (CCP §1005(b)), thus eliminating the need for a separate application for an order shortening time.

Applying for an order to show cause is the customary method of obtaining an order in cases involving, e.g., requests for a preliminary injunction (see chap 32), family law disputes (see Cal Rules of Ct 5.118), contempt proceedings, provisional remedies, and extraordinary writs. See generally 6 Witkin, California Procedure, Proceedings Without Trial §§60-62 (5th ed 2008). The procedure may be used in other types of cases, the order to show cause being treated as if it were a notice of motion accompanied by a citation to a party to appear at a stated place and time. See Green v Gordon (1952) 39 C2d 230, 232, 246 P2d 38; Difani v Riverside County Oil Co. (1927) 201 C 210, 213, 256 P 210; Marriage of Nadkarni (2009) 173 CA4th 1483, 1499, 93 CR3d 723.

© The Regents of the University of California

§13.16 B. Notice of Application

An order to show cause is obtained on ex parte application. However, it is rarely necessary to give advance notice of the application to adverse parties. The order to show cause gives notice of a hearing, and the procedure is often used when it would be futile to try to give notice, a quick hearing is necessary, or giving notice would frustrate the purpose of the relief sought. See, e.g., Cal Rules of Ct 5.118 (governing orders to show cause in family law proceedings).

The order to show cause, when signed by the judge, should be personally served on the adverse party if the order is to serve as a citation or summons that gives jurisdiction over that party, or as a basis for holding the party in contempt. Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v Superior Court (2000) 83 CA4th 1281, 1286, 100 CR2d 320. The order may be served on the party's attorney, however, if the party has appeared in the action and the order serves merely as a form of notice of motion. In re Morelli (1970) 11 CA3d 819, 838, 91 CR 72, disapproved on other grounds in Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v Superior Court (2000) 83 CA4th 1281, 1287 n6, 100 CR2d 320.

I. INTRODUCTION

§14.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers questions that a plaintiff's attorney considers when determining whom to name as plaintiff and defendants in the complaint:

- Is the person a "real party in interest"? See §§14.2-14.3.
- Does the person have the legal capacity to sue or be sued? See §§14.5-14.7.
- Is it compulsory (see §§14.8-14.10), or merely permissive that the person be named (see §14.11-14.12)?

Also covered are the rules for, and the choice of words used, to name corporations, associations and other entities, and persons and entities whose true names are not known when the complaint is being drafted and filed. See §§14.13-14.20.

§14.2 B. Governing Law

The definition of the real party in interest is set forth in CCP §367. Compulsory joinder is governed by CCP §389, and permissive joinder is governed by CCP §378. Defendants sued by fictitious names are generally governed by CCP §474.

II. REAL PARTY IN INTEREST

§14.3 A. Requirement; Definition

Every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, with exceptions specified in CCP §369 and CC §1368.3. CCP §367.

A real party in interest is generally defined as the person possessing the right sued on by reason of the substantive law. See Estate of Bowles (2008) 169 CA4th 684, 690, 87 CR3d 122. The real party in interest is the party who has title to the cause of action, i.e., the one who has the right to maintain the cause of action. A real party in interest is the owner of the cause of action. For example, someone who is not a party to a contract has no standing to enforce the contract or to recover extra-contract damages for wrongful withholding of benefits to the contracting party. Windham at Carmel Mountain Ranch Ass'n v Superior Court (2003) 109 CA4th 1162, 1172, 135 CR2d 834.

§14.4 B. Exceptions

Certain persons with what appear to be "indirect" or "secondary" interests in a dispute may, nonetheless, sue without joining the "beneficiaries" of that action; such persons include:

- A personal representative as defined in Prob C §58(a) (CCP §369);
- A trustee suing on a claim by an express trust (CCP §369; Giselman v Starr (1895) 106 C 651, 657, 40 P 8), unless the controversy is between beneficiaries and a trustee (De Olazabal v Mix (1937) 24 CA2d 258, 261, 74 P2d 787);
- A lessor who, although no longer the owner, sues on a claim of unlawful detainer (Commonwealth Mem., Inc. v Telophase Soc'y (1976) 63 CA3d 867, 871, 134 CR 58);
- An assignee of an assignable chose in action (see generally 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§127-131 (5th ed 2008)), but not the assignor, or an executor or administrator (CCP §§369, 377.22; Prob C §§573(e), 9820, 9823), unless the personal representative is guilty of fraud or collusion with those against whom the right of action exists (Landis v First Nat'l Bank (1937) 20 CA2d 198, 207, 66 P2d 730 (action pleading special circumstances by heirs or distributees allowed));
- A principal to a contract, not his or her agent, unless the agent has a beneficial interest in the subject matter, or certain other exceptions apply (see 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§140-141);
- A "common interest development" owners' association suing for damages to commonly owned lots, parcels, or areas (CC §1368.3);
- A person with whom or in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another, except someone who has a power of sale through a mortgage or a deed of trust (CCP §369); and
- Anyone else expressly authorized by statute (CCP §369).

§14.5 III. CAPACITY TO SUE OR BE SUED

After the identities of the real parties in interest have been determined, counsel must be satisfied that those persons have the capacity to sue or be sued. There must be "some existing entity aimed at by the processes of the law, and against whom the court's judgment will operate." Tanner v Estate of Best (1940) 40 CA2d 442, 445, 104 P2d 1084.

Only an existing natural, artificial, or quasi-artificial person has the capacity to be a party to a civil action; a nonentity can neither sue nor be sued. Oliver v Swiss Club Tell (1963) 222 CA2d 528, 537, 35 CR 324 (unincorporated association that has ceased to exist cannot be defendant). Human beings, corporations, governmental entities, public agencies, partnerships, and unincorporated associations are all "persons" with the capacity to be party plaintiffs or defendants. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §69 (5th ed 2008).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/14 Ascertaining, Joining, and Naming Parties/§14.6 A. Individuals Without Capacity

§14.6 A. Individuals Without Capacity

Persons who may not, at least individually, prosecute civil actions include:

- Nonemancipated minors;
- Incompetent persons; and
- Persons for whom a conservator has been appointed (CCP §372(a); 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§70-72 (5th ed 2008)).

Under such circumstances, the minor or incompetent is designated in the complaint along with his guardian, who appears for him as follows: "A, a minor (or insane person), by G, his guardian ad litem (or guardian)."

The same rule applies when the action is against the minor or incompetent—i.e., "D, a minor (or insane person)." Justice v Ott (1891) 87 C 530, 25 P 691. See chap 9 on appointment of guardians ad litem.

§14.7 B. Entities Without Capacity

Entities that may not prosecute actions include:

- Estates, which are merely collections of assets and liabilities (see Estate of Bright v Western Air Lines, Inc. (1951) 104 CA2d 827, 828, 232 P2d 523), although an executor or administrator can be a party, and under certain circumstances the estate may be named as a defendant (see Prob C §§550, 555, 9390);
- Entities that have ceased to exist, e.g., one corporation merged into another (J.C. Peacock, Inc. v Hasko (1960) 184 CA2d 142, 150, 7 CR 490);
- Foreign corporations that have failed to comply with the statutory conditions for conducting interstate commerce (Corp C §2203(c)); and
- Domestic or foreign corporations that have been suspended or forfeited for failure to pay the corporate franchise tax (Rev & T C §23301).

On the effect on litigation of the revival of corporate powers, e.g., after a suspended corporation has filed all tax returns and paid all taxes due, see Center for Self-Improvement & Community Dev. v Lennar Corp. (2009) 173 CA4th 1543, 94 CR3d 74.

NOTE: See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§70-119 (5th ed 2008) for a listing of various other persons and entities and their capacity under California law.

IV. JOINDER

A. Compulsory Joinder

§14.8 1. Requirements

Once the potential parties' capacity and beneficial interest in the action are ascertained, the attorney must then determine which (potential) parties must, or should be, joined in the action as plaintiffs or defendants.

The purpose of joinder is to avoid injury to absent persons, and to obtain a complete and final resolution of the controversy in one proceeding. 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §173 (5th ed 2008).

Generally, all persons materially interested in the subject matter of an action must be joined as either plaintiffs or defendants whenever feasible. See Comment to CCP §389. Specifically, CCP §389(a) provides that a person subject to service of process whose joinder would not deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction must be joined as a necessary party if (Tracy Press Inc. v Superior Court (2008) 164 CA4th 1290, 1297, 80 CR3d 464; Kaczorowski v Mendocino County Bd. of Supervisors (2001) 88 CA4th 564, 568, 106 CR2d 14):

- In the person's absence, complete relief cannot be accorded among those already joined as parties; or
- The person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action, and not joining this person would, as a practical matter, impair or impede his or her ability to protect that interest or create a substantial risk of subjecting a party to multiple or inconsistent obligations.

If a party is "necessary" under CCP §389(a) but cannot be joined (e.g., is not amenable to service of process), then under CCP §389(b), the court decides whether as a matter of equity and convenience the party is indispensable to the litigation and the litigation should not proceed without that party. See Salsedo v Dep't of Parks & Recreation (2009) 175 CA4th 1510, 1522, 97 CR3d 493 (as matter of law, cooperating federal agency neither necessary nor indispensable party in action regarding governmental permits for vehicle access to state beach).

For example, in a challenge by environmental groups to an environmental impact report prepared in connection with a water transfer agreement, purchasers of water were not indispensable parties when named parties (sellers and one purchaser) had an interest in litigation sufficient to protect the interests of those not joined, and nonjoined parties conceded that the named parties could fully represent their interests. Deltakeeper v Oakdale Irrig. Dist. (2001) 94 CA4th 1092, 1101, 115 CR2d 244. See also RiverWatch v Olivenhain Mun. Water Dist. (2009) 170 CA4th 1186, 1216, 88 CR3d 625 (county environmental agency was not indispensable party because its actions were not challenged). But see County of Imperial v Superior Court (2007) 152 CA4th 13, 38, 61 CR3d 145 (disparate interests of water districts and lack of joint litigation agreement supported finding that unnamed water districts were indispensable parties).

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/14 Ascertaining, Joining, and Naming Parties/§14.9 2. Effect of Failure to Join

§14.9 2. Effect of Failure to Join

Failure to name as a party a person who fits one of the categories specified in CCP §389 may be met by a:

- Motion to make the person a party;
- Demurrer for defect or misjoinder of parties (see chap 23); or
- Motion to dismiss for absence of an indispensable party.

The court should not dismiss the action unless a person described in one of the categories specified in CCP §389 cannot be made a party and the court determines in equity and good conscience that the action should be dismissed without prejudice (the absent person being regarded as indispensable) on consideration of the following factors:

- The extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence would be prejudicial to that person or to those who are already parties;
- The extent to which the prejudice can be lessened or avoided by protective provisions in the judgment, the shaping of relief, or other measures;
- Whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence will be adequate; and
- Whether the plaintiff (or cross-complainant) will have an adequate remedy if the action is dismissed for nonjoinder (i.e., whether there is another forum where all parties can be joined). CCP §389(b).

The plaintiff's failure to join an indispensable party, which could not be joined because the status of limitations had expired, was dispositive of its petition for a writ of mandamus. Kaczorowski v Mendocino County Bd. of Supervisors (2001) 88 CA4th 564, 568, 106 CR2d 14.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/14 Ascertaining, Joining, and Naming Parties/§14.10 3. Procedure

§14.10 3. Procedure

A plaintiff's attorney who knows of the existence of a person who must be joined as a plaintiff in the action (see §14.8) may, under CCP §382:

- Seek the person's consent to be joined as a plaintiff;
- If that consent cannot be obtained, name and serve the person as a defendant in the action, stating in the complaint the reason why the person is not joined as a plaintiff; or
- If the person is not subject to service of process or if joinder of this person would deprive the court of jurisdiction over the subject matter, state the person's name in a paragraph of the complaint and the reasons why that person is not joined (CCP §389(c)).

PRACTICE TIP: In some cases, the plaintiff's attorney may prefer not to name the absent party. If the defendant then demurs or moves to dismiss (see §14.9), the plaintiff can amend or state in opposition to the demurrer or motion the reasons why the person was not joined.

If the absent person cannot be made a party, and there is a motion to dismiss or abate the action, the plaintiff can argue that in equity and good conscience the action should not be dismissed but should proceed, with the judgment to contain any necessary protective provisions. CCP §389(b).

A plaintiff's attorney who knows of the existence of a person who must be joined as a defendant should:

- Name that person in the complaint and serve him or her with process as a defendant; or
- If that person cannot be made a party, decide whether to name him or her and state the reasons why that person is not joined (CCP §389(c)) or leave him or her unnamed and oppose any demurrer or motion filed by the defendant as above.

B. Permissive Joinder

§14.11 1. Plaintiffs

An attorney who has determined which parties must be joined (see §14.8) should also consider whether additional parties may be joined as plaintiffs and whether it is tactically useful to do so. Generally, CCP §378 permits the broadest sort of permissive joinder of plaintiffs. Comment to CCP §378. See also Fed R Civ P 20(a).

Specifically, CCP §378(a) provides that all persons may join in one action as plaintiffs who:

- Assert any right to relief, jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, if any question of law of fact common to all these persons will arise in the action; or
- Have a claim, right, or interest adverse to the defendant in the property or controversy that is the subject of the action.

It is not necessary that each plaintiff have an interest in every cause of action or in all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given for one or more plaintiffs according to their respective rights to relief. CCP §378(b).

PRACTICE TIP: Joining several plaintiffs in one action helps avoid duplicated effort, encourages cooperation and pooling of resources, may change the jurisdictional classification of a case (see chap 6), or establish venue in a more favorable county (see chap 8). On the other hand, with several plaintiffs in one action, the impact of the case for each may be diluted, differences between their cases may confuse the trier of fact, and defenses good against one may muddy the case of another.

If joinder of several plaintiffs might cause undue hardship to a party or create unnecessary confusion or complexity at trial, the court may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent embarrassment, delay, or undue expense to any party. CCP §379.5.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/14 Ascertaining, Joining, and Naming Parties/§14.12 2. Defendants

§14.12 2. Defendants

A plaintiff's attorney who has determined which parties must be joined in the action as plaintiffs and defendants (see §14.8), and which additional plaintiffs may, and tactically should, be joined (see §14.11), should also consider whether defendants he or she wishes to sue are permitted to be joined and whether there are additional permitted defendants who should be joined for tactical reasons.

Generally, CCP §379 provides standards for permissive joinder of defendants comparable to those for permissive joinder of plaintiffs. Comment to CCP §379. See also Fed R Civ P 20(a). Specifically, CCP §379(a) provides that all persons may be joined in one action as defendants if there is asserted against them:

- Any right to relief, jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of or arising out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, and if any question of law or fact common to all these persons will arise in the action; or
- A claim, right, or interest adverse to them in the property or controversy that is the subject of the action.

It is not necessary that each defendant have an interest in every cause of action or in all relief prayed for. Judgment may be given against one or more of the defendants according to their respective liabilities. CCP §379(b).

A plaintiff who does not know which of two or more defendants is liable, or to what extent, may sue them in the alternative. CCP §379(c); Kraft v Smith (1944) 24 C2d 124, 148 P2d 23 (joinder of two doctors who operated on plaintiff's leg at different times); Landau v Salam (1971) 4 C3d 901, 95 CR 46 (joinder of two defendants who allegedly injured plaintiff in accidents on separate days). See also 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§204-208 (5th ed 2008).

PRACTICE TIP: Joining several defendants in one action saves the expense of separate suits, increases the chances that one will be found liable, may induce the defendants to blame each other for detriment suffered by the plaintiff, and may affect jurisdiction and venue. On the other hand, multiple defendants can combine resources and, by asserting different defenses, confuse the issues.

If joinder of several defendants might cause undue hardship to a party or create unnecessary confusion or complexity at trial, the court may order separate trials or make other orders to prevent embarrassment, delay, or undue expense to any party. CCP §379.5.

V. NAMING PARTICULAR PARTIES

A. Defendants Sued by Fictitious Names

§14.13 1. Situations

If the complaint states that the plaintiff does not know the name of a defendant, it may designate that defendant by any name and be amended to substitute the true name when it is discovered. CCP §474. Plaintiffs who designate defendants by fictitious names must be sure the summons to those defendants includes notice that they have been sued under a fictitious name. CCP §474; Carol Gilbert, Inc. v Haller (2009) 179 CA4th 852, 866, 101 CR3d 843 (default judgment against defendant vacated because summons did not notify him that he was sued under fictitious name).

Pleaders designate defendants by fictitious names in several basic situations, for example, when the pleader:

- Believes that certain persons are liable to the plaintiff, but does not know and cannot readily learn their names. Code of Civil Procedure §474 enables the plaintiff to sue these defendants under fictitious names before the suit is barred by the statute of limitations. Austin v Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1961) 56 C2d 596, 15 CR 817.
- Believes that there might be other persons involved in the events, or related to known defendants in a way that would make them liable. The plaintiff may state causes of action against fictitiously named defendants so that true names can be substituted if such persons are later discovered to exist. This speculative use of fictitiously named defendants has been recognized in appellate opinions. See, e.g., Garrett v Crown Coach Corp. (1968) 259 CA2d 647, 66 CR 590 (manufacturer of vehicle); Larson v Barnett (1950) 101 CA2d 282, 289, 225 P2d 297 (owner of vehicle); Day v Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1940) 42 CA2d 226, 108 P2d 702 (employer of tortfeasor). See also 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §483 (5th ed 2008).
- Adds one or more fictitious names after each known defendant's name so that additional parties can be brought in if the known defendant was not acting alone or if the pleader used an incorrect name.
- Wants to preserve causes of action against potential defendants whose names are known, in case the main defendants are judgment-proof, but for tactical reasons prefers not to name them in the action. The pleader may hope, e.g., to retain their goodwill or to avoid unleashing their lawyers.

WARNING: There is some risk in suing known persons by fictitious names. Many opinions state that ignorance of the true name must be real, not feigned. See Maier Brewing Co. v Flora Crane Serv. (1969) 270 CA2d 873, 76 CR 219; Lipman v Rice (1963) 213 CA2d 474, 28 CR 800. However, other cases state that even though a plaintiff knows of the actual name and existence of a defendant sued by a fictitious name, it is "well established" that substitution of a true name is permitted when the plaintiff is ignorant within the meaning of CCP §474, because he or she lacks knowledge of the facts that make the person liable. General Motors Corp. v Superior Court (1996) 48 CA4th 580, 593, 55 CR2d 871; Parker v Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 CA4th 512, 4 CR2d 347. See Mishalow v Horwald (1964) 231 CA2d 517, 41 CR 895; Johnson v Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (1963) 216 CA2d 133, 30 CR 650; Larson v Barnett (1950) 101 CA2d 282, 225 P2d 297. "Section 474 allows a plaintiff in good faith to delay suing particular persons as named defendants until he has knowledge of sufficient facts to cause a reasonable person to believe liability is probable." General Motors Corp. v Superior Court (1996) 48 CA4th 580, 595, 55 CR2d 871; Dieckmann v Superior Court (1985) 175 CA3d 345, 363, 220 CR 602.

Although the requirement is not explicit, it has been held that CCP §474 implicitly requires the plaintiff to amend the complaint to add the true names of the Doe defendants within a reasonable period of time after learning of their identity. A.N. v County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 CA4th 1058, 1066, 90 CR3d 293, citing Barrows v American Motors Corp. (1983) 144 CA3d 1, 192 CR 380. A defendant may challenge the CCP §474 amendment of the complaint by an evidence-based motion that argues unreasonable delay and shows that filing the Doe amendment would cause defendant to suffer undue prejudice. A.N. v County of Los Angeles, supra. On amending complaint, see §16.14.

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/14 Ascertaining, Joining, and Naming Parties/§14.14 2. Fictitious Name Allegation

§14.14 2. Fictitious Name Allegation

Fictitiously named defendants are usually named in the caption of the complaint as a group, for example, as "Doe 1 through Doe 100" or "Does I through XX." See form in chap 15.

The fictitious name allegation is directly and simply made, e.g.:

1. Plaintiff does not know the true names of defendants sued herein as Doe 1 through Doe _ _[number of fictitiously named defendants]_ _.

The plaintiff must directly allege ignorance of the true names of defendants sued by fictitious names. Without such an allegation, a new party cannot be brought in by amendment after the statute of limitations has run. Kline v Beauchamp (1938) 29 CA2d 340, 84 P2d 194.

WARNING: Indirect allegations are not sufficient. See, e.g., Stephens v Berry (1967) 249 CA2d 474, 57 CR 505 (First Doe through Fourth Doe are fictitious names sued under CCP §474); Lipman v Rice (1963) 213 CA2d 474, 28 CR 800 (John Doe One to John Doe Twenty are fictitiously designated individuals). See also Armstrong v Superior Court (1956) 144 CA2d 420, 423 n1, 301 P2d 51 (allegation that "Does One and Two are fictitious" means that they are imaginary). But see Motor City Sales v Superior Court (1973) 31 CA3d 342, 346, 107 CR 280 (sufficient to say defendants, Does I through XXV, inclusive, are sued under provisions of CCP §474).

It is not necessary to allege that the plaintiff does not know the capacities of the fictitiously named parties. A capacity can be stated when the complaint is amended to show the true name. Nor is it necessary to indicate that a fictitiously named defendant is a corporation or other business entity. "Doe 1" can stand for a corporation or other entity as well as for a person. See Irving v Carpentier (1886) 70 C 23, 11 P 391 ("Pacific Improvement Co." substituted for fictitious name "Tom Jones").

It is not necessary to state that the plaintiff will (or prays leave to) amend to show the true names when they have been ascertained. Code of Civil Procedure §474 gives the plaintiff the right to amend the complaint and does not require such a recital or the statement that the plaintiff give notice that he or she will amend.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.15 3. Need to State Cause of Action

The complaint must state a cause of action against each fictitiously named defendant. This is often done by adding one or more fictitious names to the known names in the allegations that show the known persons' involvement in the events sued on.

The plaintiff can amend to insert true names and factual allegations that repair an imperfect statement of original causes of action or that charge a defendant under a new theory arising out of the same cause of action. Austin v Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1961) 56 C2d 596, 15 CR 817. However, if the statute of limitations has run, it is too late to insert new charging allegations against a fictitiously named defendant. See Milam v Dickman Constr. Co. (1964) 229 CA2d 208, 213, 40 CR 130 (charging allegations referred only to named defendants); Williams v Goodman (1963) 214 CA2d 856, 861, 29 CR 877.

WARNING: Statements such as "each Doe is in some manner negligently responsible for plaintiff's injury and damages" are usually not considered sufficient charging allegations and have been stricken from complaints by law and motion judges as stating a legal conclusion. But see Breceda v Gamsby (1968) 267 CA2d 167, 72 CR 832.

B. Individual Doing Business Under Fictitious Name

§14.16 1. As Plaintiff

A person doing business under a fictitious name (i.e., a business name that does not include the person's surname) should not bring a civil action on a contract made or transaction performed under the fictitious business name until the required fictitious business name statement has been executed, filed, and published. Bus & P C §17918.

When suit is brought, the caption of the complaint usually shows both the individual and business names, e.g.:

John Henry Smith, doing) business as Henry's,) Plaintiff)
_____)

A paragraph of the complaint should allege compliance with Bus & P C §17918, e.g.:

Plaintiff John Henry Smith is now, and at all times mentioned in this complaint has been, an individual doing business under the fictitious name Henry's. Plaintiff has filed the statement and published the notice required by California Business and Professions Code §17918.

A plaintiff's failure to comply with Bus & P C §17918 is a ground for abatement of the action until there is compliance. See Comment to Bus & P C §17918; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§94-96 (5th ed 2008). On fictitious name declarations in small claims actions, see CCP §116.430 and Cal Rules of Ct 3.2100.

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.17 2. As Defendant

Plaintiffs may not know the organizational form of the business entity being sued. If they sue "John H. Smith, doing business as Henry's," they may be limited to judgment against Smith the individual even though there may be a separate business entity that would also have been liable. See §14.19 for discussion and form.

C. Partnerships; Unincorporated Associations

§14.18 1. As Plaintiffs

Any partnership or unincorporated association, whether organized for profit or not, may sue and be sued by the name it has assumed or by which it is known. CCP §369.5(a). If the name is fictitious (i.e., does not include the surname of each general partner), compliance with Bus & P C §17918 should be alleged.

The caption should indicate that the plaintiff is a partnership, e.g.:

The Partners, a partnership,) Plaintiff)
_____)

An allegation paragraph can state:

Plaintiff is now, and at all times mentioned in this complaint has been, a partnership doing business under the fictitious name "The Partners." The members of this partnership are John H. Smith and William H. Jones, and they have filed the statement and published the notice required by California Business and Professions Code §17918.

Because former CCP §388, the predecessor of §369.5, was amended in 1967 to permit partnerships to sue by the name of the entity, it does not appear necessary to name each partner. A plaintiff's failure to comply with Bus & P C §17918 is a ground for abatement of the action until there is compliance. See Comment to Bus & P C §17918; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§94-96 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§14.19 2. As Defendants

Plaintiffs may be uncertain whether the business they want to sue is a partnership or some other form of business entity. Naming the entity incorrectly can produce later inconvenience and even loss of causes of action against certain defendants. See Mayberry v Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1966) 244 CA2d 350, 352, 53 CR 317. See chap 16 on amending to correct a name.

The complaint should be drawn to state a cause of action against the business, whatever its form, and against the individuals who operate it in case they prove to be personally liable.

WARNING: A suit against "John Jones and Henry Smith, individually and as partners doing business as The Partners Company" is a suit against Jones and Smith as individuals, not against the partnership as an entity. See Hildebrand v Stonecrest Corp. (1959) 174 CA2d 158, 169, 344 P2d 378; Macclay Co. v Meads (1910) 14 CA 363, 370, 112 P 195; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§99, 473-474 (5th ed 2008). Similarly, a suit against "The Partners Company, a partnership comprised of John Jones and Henry Smith," is a suit against the entity, not the individuals.

A safe course is to set forth in the caption and in an allegation the business name as the pleader knows it, the names of known partners or proprietors, and several fictitious names, e.g.:

vs.)

§14.20 D. Corporations

Existing corporations can sue and be sued. For exceptions, see 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§87-92 (5th ed 2008).

Corporations can be identified in complaints by name alone. It is not necessary to add "a corporation" after the name in the caption or allegations, or to allege that the corporation is "duly organized and existing." See Los Angeles Ry. v Davis (1905) 146 C 179, 79 P 865; Craig v San Fernando Furniture Co. (1928) 89 CA 167, 171, 264 P 784.

However, if a cause of action is one that can be brought only by or against a corporation, or if plaintiff wants to inform the court and other parties that a party is a corporation, the following language may be used:

_ _[Plaintiff/Defendant]_ _, _ _[name]_ _, is now, and at all times mentioned in this complaint has been, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of _ _[state]_ _ _ _[and authorized to do business in California]_ _.

NOTE: A corporation that is under suspension for failure to comply with Rev & T C §23305 suffers a legal disability, but when the corporation comes back into compliance and its corporate powers are revived, the procedural litigation steps it took during the suspension period are validated retroactively. Center for Self-Improvement & Community Dev. v Lennar Corp (2009) 173 CA4th 1543, 1554, 94 CR3d 74.

I. INTRODUCTION

§15.1 A. Scope of Chapter

The complaint is a pleading that commences a lawsuit. It is the first pleading filed by the plaintiff. CCP §§350, 410.10, 411.10, 425.10. This chapter covers the drafting of the formal parts of complaints. See §§15.3-15.13. It also discusses verification (see §§15.14-15.21), pleading causes of action (see §§15.22-15.27), choice and election of remedies (see §§15.28-15.30), filing the complaint (see §§15.31-15.33), and using official forms (see §15.34). Sample forms are set forth in §§15.35-15.48.

§15.2 B. Governing Law

Complaint captions are governed by CCP §422.30, pleadings demanding relief by CCP §§425.10-425.17, compulsory cross-complaints by CCP §§426.10-426.70, cross-complaints by CCP §§428.10-428.80, and contents of documents in particular actions or proceedings by CCP §429.30. The format of complaints is governed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119.

II. COMPONENTS OF COMPLAINTS

§15.3 A. First-Page Format; Caption

The first page of a complaint filed in a California superior court must set forth (CCP §422.30; Cal Rules of Ct 2.111):

- Name, State Bar membership number, address, telephone number, fax number (optional), and e-mail address (optional) of the attorney filing the complaint.
- Name of the court and county in which the action is brought, and a space for the number of the case, stamped by the clerk on filing. Misnaming the court in the caption is an irregularity that does not affect the jurisdiction of a court in which the complaint was properly filed. Ex parte Fil Ki (1889) 79 C 584, 21 P 974; CCP §475.
- Title of the action, which should include the names of all the parties. CCP §422.40. Misstating a name in the caption does not affect the sufficiency of the pleading; the caption is not a part of the cause of action. See McDonough v Waxman (1930) 103 CA 169, 173, 284 P 482. Occasionally, a correct identification of the party's identity in the caption may clarify an ambiguous or omitted allegation. See Morton v Shannon (1915) 26 CA 689, 691, 147 P 1179. See discussion of the naming of particular parties in the caption and body of the complaint in chap 14.
- Case number and the nature of the paper and the character of the action (e.g., "COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES —PERSONAL INJURY" or "COMPLAINT TO QUIET TITLE"). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(5)-(6). A statement of the character of the action aids the clerk in compiling statistics and indexes, and gives the court and other parties an idea of what the case is about. However, it does not determine the nature of the action and does not limit the relief that can be granted; the allegations in the complaint control. See Jaffe v Carroll (1973) 35 CA3d 53, 57, 110 CR 435; Coffelt v Coffelt (1964) 229 CA2d 659, 665, 40 CR 513.
- In a limited civil case, immediately below the character of the action, either "Amount demanded exceeds $10,000" or "Amount demanded does not exceed $10,000." Govt C §70613; Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9).
- In a limited civil case, the phrase, "Limited Civil Case" in the caption of the case. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(10); see CCP §422.30(b); example in §11.26 ("LIMITED CIVIL CASE" centered immediately below name of court).

§15.4 B. Introductory Clause

It is customary to introduce the body of the complaint with a line such as "Plaintiff alleges:" placed below the caption (see form in §15.35).

NOTE: Some lawyers continue to use such stately but archaic clauses as: "Comes now the plaintiff and complains against the above-named defendants, and for a cause of action alleges."

When different plaintiffs assert different causes of action against different defendants, it is helpful to use a separate introduction under each cause of action heading, e.g.:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD

Plaintiffs John Jones and Henry Smith, for a cause of action against defendant William Johnson, allege:

C. Allegation Paragraphs

§15.5 1. Paragraphing and Numbering; Headings for Causes of Action and Counts

The body of a complaint consists of allegations or statements of fact "in ordinary and concise language" that constitute each cause of action. CCP §425.10(a)(1). Each ultimate fact (see §15.26) may be stated in a separate paragraph, although this is not required. Several closely related facts may be stated in a single paragraph for convenience, and a paragraph may contain more than one sentence.

Each cause of action or count must be separately numbered (e.g., "FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION" or "FIRST COUNT") (Cal Rules of Ct 2.112) and specify its nature (e.g., "SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION—FRAUD") (Cal Rules of Ct 2.112). However, the nature of the case made by the allegations, not the heading or label, determines whether the group of paragraphs constitutes a cause of action or a count, and the character of the remedy sought. Jaffe v Carroll (1973) 35 CA3d 53, 57, 110 CR 435.

Traditionally, attorneys have numbered paragraphs with roman numerals and have started a new series of paragraph numbers under each new cause of action or count heading. Modern practice is to begin each paragraph with an Arabic numeral and to number paragraphs consecutively throughout the complaint. See form in §15.35.

§15.6 2. Incorporating Allegations by Reference

It is a common and accepted practice to incorporate the allegations of one cause of action or count into a subsequent cause of action or count. Treweek v Howard (1895) 105 C 434, 441, 39 P 20; Casaretto v DeLucchi (1946) 76 CA2d 800, 806, 174 P2d 328, disapproved on other grounds in Sinz v Owens (1949) 33 C2d 749, 205 P2d 3. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §435 (5th ed 2008). Even incorporation from a superseded pleading in the action has been allowed. See Turney v Collins (1941) 48 CA2d 381, 388, 119 P2d 954.

The incorporation should be clear and direct, but no particular words are required, e.g.:

Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action the allegations of paragraphs __ through __ of the _ _[e.g., first]_ _ cause of action.

WARNING: Indirect statements, e.g., "the allegations of the first cause of action are true," should not be used. See Pennie v Hildreth (1889) 81 C 127, 131, 22 P 398. The pleader should also carefully analyze each allegation to avoid incorporating unnecessary or conflicting facts that render the subsequent cause of action ambiguous, meaningless, or more difficult to prove.

D. Demand for Judgment (Prayer)

§15.7 1. Requirement

Code of Civil Procedure §425.10(a)(2) requires that each complaint and cross-complaint contain a demand for judgment for the relief to which the pleader claims he or she is entitled. This demand, called the prayer, is usually a separate paragraph placed at the end of the complaint. See form in §15.35. If money or damages are demanded, the amount must be stated. CCP §425.10(a)(2). When an action is brought to recover actual or punitive damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the amount demanded shall not be stated, but the complaint shall comply with CCP §422.30 (caption requirements) and, in a limited civil case, with Govt C §70613 (requirements for first paper in limited civil case). CCP §425.10(b). For further discussion of limited civil cases, see chap 6.

A well-drafted prayer serves the pleader in several ways:

- It shows each defendant the nature and extent of the relief demanded from that defendant, perhaps inducing settlement, default, or a confessed judgment.
- It shows whether the amount in controversy or the nature of the relief sought places jurisdiction in the court in which the complaint has been filed. See Silverman v Greenberg (1938) 12 C2d 252, 254, 83 P2d 293; 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Jurisdiction §§23, 50 (5th ed 2008). Jurisdiction, however, can be found from the allegations of the complaint, regardless of the prayer. Hoffman v Pacific Coast Constr. Co. (1918) 37 CA 125, 131, 173 P 776.
- If the complaint's allegations are not clear, the court may look to the prayer to ascertain the plaintiff's theory of action and whether the allegations sufficiently inform the defendant of the cause of action asserted. See Hails v Martz (1946) 28 C2d 775, 777, 172 P2d 52; Central Sur. & Ins. Corp. v Foley (1962) 204 CA2d 738, 742, 22 CR 504. See also Hiroshima v Bank of Italy (1926) 78 CA 362, 368, 248 P 947 (statement of specific sum in prayer cured failure to allege damages in stated amount). However, the prayer is not a part of the statement of the cause of action and will not cure a basic deficiency in the facts pleaded. See Berg v Investors Real Estate Loan Co. (1962) 207 CA2d 808, 815, 24 CR 701.
- If there is no answer to the complaint, the prayer limits the extent of damages or other relief that may be granted by default judgment. See §15.11. Even if the case is contested, a demand for a specific amount of money or damages may limit the amount of the judgment. See §15.12.

Despite the requirement of CCP §425.10(b) that the complaint state a demand for the relief sought, cases have stated that:

- Failure to include a prayer in a complaint does not deprive a court of jurisdiction.
- The prayer cannot be the subject of a demurrer.
- An omitted, incomplete, or defective prayer may be supplied or corrected by amendment.

See, e.g., Miller v Superior Court (1922) 59 CA 334, 338, 210 P 832; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §495 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.8 2. Placement; Wording

The demand, or prayer, is usually placed at the end of the complaint, below the last allegation paragraph and above the subscription, e.g.:

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgment from defendants for: _ _[Specify in numbered paragraphs]_ _.

See also sample form in §15.35.

The format of the prayer can become complicated when different plaintiffs seek different relief from different defendants on different causes of action, e.g.:

WHEREFORE:

1. Plaintiff John Jones demands judgment as follows:

a. From defendant Walter Johnson:

(1) _____ .

(2) _____ .

b. From defendant Guy F. Wilson:

(1) _____ .

(2) _____ .

2. Plaintiff William Smith demands judgment as follows:

a. On his first cause of action:

(1) _____ .

(2) _____ .

b. On his second cause of action:

(1) _____ .

(2) _____ .

NOTE: Most pleaders conclude with a general prayer, e.g., "for such other and further relief as this Court may deem proper." Some opinions have mentioned these clauses when upholding or ordering, in contested cases, relief beyond that specifically prayed for. In contrast, the 1872 Code Commissioner's Note for a predecessor of CCP §425.10 calls such a demand "unauthorized" and "useless." See §§15.11-15.12.

Interest may be awarded in a contested action even though there is no specific prayer for it. Sanders v City of Los Angeles (1970) 3 C3d 252, 263, 90 CR 169.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.9 3. Personal Injury and Wrongful Death Actions: Statement of Damages

The demand for judgment in a superior court complaint to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death must not state the amount of damages sought, but the complaint shall comply with CCP §422.30 (caption requirements) and, in a limited civil case, with Govt C §70613(b) (requirements for first paper in limited civil case). CCP §425.10(b). See form in §15.35. The purpose of this prohibition is to protect defendants, particularly in medical malpractice cases, from adverse publicity resulting from inflated demands. Schwab v Rondel Homes, Inc. (1991) 53 C3d 428, 431, 280 CR 83. For further discussion of limited civil cases, see chap 6.

A defendant (or cross-defendant) who wants to know the amount of damages being sought may simply ask the plaintiff's attorney, or may serve a request for that information on the plaintiff (or cross-complainant) at any time. CCP §425.11(b). The request may be in the form of a court paper, captioned as are other papers in the action, signed by the attorney, and stating, e.g.:

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT OF DAMAGES

Under Code of Civil Procedure §425.11, please serve on defendant, _ _[name]_ _, by _ _[date]_ _, a statement of the nature and amount of damages claimed by plaintiff(s) in this action.

If the plaintiff does not respond to this request within 15 days, the defendant may petition the court, on notice to the plaintiff, for an order requiring the plaintiff to respond. CCP §425.11(b). A default judgment for the plaintiff is limited to the amount of general and special damages stated (see chap 38), but it is unclear whether the plaintiff's statement of damages will act as a limit on the judgment awarded in a contested case (see §15.12). However, the plaintiff is not limited to the amount specified in the statement of punitive damages when the defendant appears in the action. CCP §425.115(c).

Code of Civil Procedure §425.11 does not indicate how much information the plaintiff must give in response to a request for a statement of the nature and amount of damages. The response might say no more than what the prayer in a personal injury complaint was required to say before the 1974 amendment of CCP §425.10. For example, a statement such as the following might be deemed sufficient:

Plaintiff's damages are as follows:

1. General damages for John Smith: $100,000.

2. General damages for Helen Smith: $25,000.

3. Medical and related expenses for each plaintiff according to proof.

See Thorson v Western Dev. Corp. (1967) 251 CA2d 206, 213, 59 CR 299 (prayer for "damages according to proof" supported default judgment when allegations of complaint stated specific sum); Wilcox v Sway (1945) 69 CA2d 560, 573, 160 P2d 154. To elicit more detailed information about the nature and amounts of the damages sought, the defendant can use discovery procedures, e.g., depositions and interrogatories.

If the defendant does not request a statement of damages, the plaintiff must give notice to the defendant of the amount of special, general, and punitive damages before a default may be taken. CCP §§425.11(b)-(c), 425.115(f). See §15.10 for discussion of statement of punitive damages.

If the party has appeared in the action, the statement of damages must be served on his or her attorney, or on the party if he or she has appeared without an attorney. CCP §§425.11(d)(2), 425.115(g)(2). If the party has not appeared, the statement must be served in the same manner as a summons. CCP §§425.11(d)(1), 425.115(g)(1). See Anastos v Lee (2004) 118 CA4th 1314, 13 CR3d 716 (plaintiff who obtains court order allowing service of summons and complaint by publication need not obtain separate order to simultaneously serve statement of damages by publication).

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.10 4. Statement Reserving Right to Punitive Damages

A plaintiff must serve a statement preserving the right to seek punitive damages before taking a default, when the request for default judgment includes punitive damages under CC §3294. CCP §425.115. The statement may be served as part of the statement of damages required by CCP §425.11. See §38.19 for form of statement of punitive damages.

© The Regents of the University of California

5. Effect of Prayer on Judgment

§15.11 a. Default Cases

If there is no answer to the complaint, the relief granted to the plaintiff cannot exceed the relief demanded in the complaint, the statement of damages (CCP §425.11), or a statement reserving the right to seek punitive damages (CCP §425.115). CCP §580. See §15.9 on use of a statement of damages if the complaint is one for damages for personal injury or wrongful death filed in a superior court in other than a limited civil case (see chap 6). See generally chap 38.

A default judgment that exceeds the demand or gives relief not demanded is in excess of the court's jurisdiction and is void. Marriage of Lippel (1990) 51 C3d 1160, 1166, 276 CR 290; Burtnett v King (1949) 33 C2d 805, 808, 205 P2d 657. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §498 (5th ed 2008).

The court can refuse to look beyond the prayer in resolving what relief to grant in a default judgment. Gudarov v Hadjieff (1952) 38 C2d 412, 416, 240 P2d 621; Brooks v Forington (1897) 117 C 219, 48 P 1073 ("demanded in the complaint" means asked for in prayer). Relief that was not specifically demanded cannot be granted under a general prayer such as "other relief that the court considers proper." Gudarov v Hadjieff, supra; Lee v Ski Run Apartments Assocs. (1967) 249 CA2d 293, 299, 57 CR 496. However, allegations of the complaint may sometimes clarify a prayer, justifying relief not specifically detailed. See Thorson v Western Dev. Corp. (1967) 251 CA2d 206, 213, 59 CR 299; Padgett v Padgett (1962) 199 CA2d 652, 658, 18 CR 789.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.12 b. Contested Cases

If the complaint has been answered, the court may grant the plaintiff any relief consistent with its jurisdiction and the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue. CCP §580. That is, in a contested case, the plaintiff may secure relief greater than or different from that demanded in the prayer or statement of punitive damages. CCP §425.115(c); Singleton v Perry (1955) 45 C2d 489, 498, 289 P2d 794; Damele v Mack Trucks, Inc. (1990) 219 CA3d 29, 38, 267 CR 197 ($568,000 verdict upheld although CCP §425.11 statement of damages specified $400,000); Lawrence v Shutt (1969) 269 CA2d 749, 767, 75 CR 533; Wright v Rogers (1959) 172 CA2d 349, 367, 342 P2d 447. Full relief should be granted even if there is no prayer at all. Petersen v Ridenour (1955) 135 CA2d 720, 727, 287 P2d 848.

Even in contested cases, however, courts have limited judgments for damages to the amount alleged or prayed for in the complaint. See Meisner v McIntosh (1928) 205 C 11, 269 P 612; Brown v North Ventura Rd. Dev. Co. (1963) 216 CA2d 227, 234, 30 CR 568; Frost v Mighetto (1937) 22 CA2d 612, 616, 71 P2d 932. See also Crofoot v Blair Holdings Corp. (1953) 119 CA2d 156, 195, 260 P2d 156; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §497 (5th ed 2008).

PRACTICE TIP: If, in a personal injury or wrongful death case (see §15.9), it appears that the proof will justify a greater money award than that alleged and prayed for (or specified in a statement under CCP §425.11), or if the verdict actually exceeds the demand, the plaintiff may ask leave to amend the allegations, prayer, or statement, or argue that CCP §580 permits the judgment to exceed the amount of the demand.

In a limited civil case, however, the court may not allow relief that exceeds the amount-in-controversy limitation (i.e., $25,000) for a limited civil case. CCP §§85(a), 580(b)(1). For further discussion of limited civil cases, jurisdictional classification, and reclassification, see chap 6.

A plaintiff who is seeking punitive damages under CC §3294 is not limited to the amount set forth in the statement re punitive damages (CCP §425.115) if the defendant appears in the action. CCP §425.115(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.13 E. Subscription

Every complaint must be signed by at least one attorney of record in the attorney's individual name or by the party, if the party is unrepresented. CCP §128.7(a). By presenting the complaint to the court, the attorney is certifying to the best of his or her knowledge, after reasonable inquiry, that the factual allegations have evidentiary support. CCP §128.7(b). See §1.6 for discussion of sanctions.

The usual practice is for the attorney to sign on a line under which his or her name is typed. See, e.g., form in §15.35. A failure to sign is an irregularity that can be corrected by amendment. Board of Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ. v Superior Court (2007) 149 CA4th 1154, 1158, 57 CR3d 755 (plaintiff exercised control over content of complaint signed by plaintiff's father); Canadian Bank of Commerce v Leale (1910) 14 CA 307, 309, 111 P 759 (filing tolled statute of limitations even though complaint was not signed).

An unsigned complaint will be stricken, however, unless the problem is corrected promptly after it is called to the attention of the attorney or the party. CCP §128.7(a).

NOTE: Code of Civil Procedure §128.7 is based on Fed R Civ P 11 and replaces the part of CCP §446 that required each pleading to be subscribed by the party or the party's attorney. Section 128.7 applies to complaints filed after December 31, 2004. See CCP §128.7(i).

Typing a date at the bottom of the complaint is not required and serves no purpose. The clerk's filing stamp on the first page controls.

§15.14 III. VERIFICATION

A verification is a statement in the form of a declaration under penalty of perjury or affidavit that the complaint is true. CCP §446. Verifications in the exact words of §446 have been approved. See Patterson v Ely (1861) 19 C 28, 39; Ware v Stafford (1962) 206 CA2d 232, 236, 24 CR 153.

However, any wording that substantially asserts the truth of the matters stated is sufficient. See City of Los Angeles v Superior Court (1925) 196 C 445, 449, 238 P 670; Seattle Coal & Transp. Co. v Thomas (1881) 57 C 197; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §463 (5th ed 2008). See forms in §§15.18-15.21. The test of sufficiency is whether the verification is clear and certain enough to sustain a perjury indictment on it if false. Sheeley v City of Santa Clara (1963) 215 CA2d 83, 85, 30 CR 121.

§15.15 A. Deciding Whether to Verify

A complaint needs to be verified only when a particular statute requires verification. See Parke & Lacy Co. v Inter Nos Oil & Dev. Co. (1905) 147 C 490, 493, 82 P 51; Quick v Corsaro (1960) 180 CA2d 831, 836, 4 CR 674. See, e.g., CCP §§527 (action seeking preliminary injunction), 761.020 (action by adverse possessor), 1166 (action for unlawful detainer or forcible entry), 396a (actions involving installment or automotive sales, consumer obligations, or unlawful detainer). See also 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §466 (5th ed 2008).

If a complaint required by statute to be verified is not verified, or the attempted verification does not comply with CCP §446, the complaint may, on motion, be stricken. See Ware v Stafford (1962) 206 CA2d 232, 237, 24 CR 153. However, lack of or defective verification is waived if not raised before the case proceeds to trial, and a proper verification may be supplied by amendment, even after the statute of limitations on filing the action has run. Ware v Stafford, supra; Board of Educ. v Mulcahy (1942) 50 CA2d 418, 423, 123 P2d 114. See 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §468.

§15.16 1. Reasons to Verify

There are reasons to verify complaints even when verification is not required by statute:

- If the complaint is verified, the answer must be verified, unless the defendant is a public entity or officer. CCP §446. The defendant's denials and allegations must be made under oath or penalty of perjury. If the answer is not verified, the allegations of the complaint are deemed admitted and the plaintiff can move for judgment on the pleadings or move to strike the answer and take judgment by default. See H. G. Bittleston Law & Collection Agency v Howard (1916) 172 C 357, 156 P 515; Huston v Huston (1948) 87 CA2d 8, 10, 195 P2d 551; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §468 (5th ed 2008).
- If the complaint is verified, denials in the answer must be specific (directed at least to individual paragraphs of the complaint). CCP §431.30(d). On answers, see chap 25. A general denial of the entire verified complaint puts nothing in issue. Hensley v Tartar (1860) 14 C 508; Kinard v Kaelin (1913) 22 CA 383, 390, 134 P 370.
- A complaint verified by a plaintiff, or other person who states that he or she knows the facts, can be used as an affidavit to support applications for certain forms of preliminary relief. Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 532, 67 CR 761 (preliminary injunction). See also 5 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §824.

§15.17 2. Reasons Not to Verify

There are reasons to file unverified complaints when verification is not required by a particular statute:

- A false allegation, perhaps overlooked by the verifier, creates the possibility of a perjury charge. See Pen C §§118, 125, 259; People v Agnew (1947) 77 CA2d 748, 176 P2d 724.
- Verification of allegations not known to be true may show bad faith on the part of a verifier later sued for malicious prosecution. See Albertson v Raboff (1960) 185 CA2d 372, 387, 8 CR 398.
- Contradictory or antagonistic facts in separate causes of action or counts are less permissible in verified than in unverified complaints. See Faulkner v California Toll Bridge Auth. (1953) 40 C2d 317, 328, 253 P2d 659.
- Facts stated in a verified complaint are sometimes treated as admissions that cannot be contradicted by or omitted from an amended complaint except on an adequate showing of mistake or excuse. Wennerholm v Stanford Univ. Sch. of Medicine (1942) 20 C2d 713, 716, 128 P2d 522; Lee v Hensley (1951) 103 CA2d 697, 709, 230 P2d 159; Jackson v PG&E (1949) 95 CA2d 204, 211, 212 P2d 591.
- If the verifier testifies to facts different from those alleged in a verified complaint, defense counsel can capitalize on the contradictory sworn statements.
- The defense is more apt to demur or to delay answering a verified complaint, and such tactics can result in a delay in proceedings and the plaintiff's having to file amendments to the complaint.
- Theories of recovery may be rethought between filing the complaint and trial; a verified pleading could be used at trial against the plaintiff if a theory alleged in the initial complaint were no longer viable.

PRACTICE TIP: Impressed by the foregoing reasons, many practitioners verify a complaint only when verification is required or there is a significant positive tactical reason for verification.

B. Persons Who May Verify; Verification Forms

§15.18 1. Plaintiff

A plaintiff may verify a complaint, although it has been drafted and signed by an attorney; in this instance, the plaintiff becomes responsible for the truth of the matters stated in it. See Albertson v Raboff (1960) 185 CA2d 372, 387, 8 CR 398; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §461 (5th ed 2008). If there is more than one plaintiff, verification by one of them is sufficient. Clairborne v Castle (1893) 98 C 30, 32 P 807. A verification must be by a plaintiff except in those instances noted in §§15.19-15.20.

The following declaration form uses the language of CCP §446:

VERIFICATION

I am _ _[a/the]_ _ plaintiff in this action; the foregoing complaint is true of my knowledge, except as to the matters stated in it on my information or belief, and as to those matters I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ __[Signature of plaintiff]__
_ _[Typed name]_ _

§15.19 2. Attorney

An attorney is authorized by CCP §446 to verify a complaint if:

- Plaintiffs are absent from the county in which the attorney has his or her office;
- Plaintiffs are unable to verify for some other reason; or
- The facts are within the attorney's knowledge.

The following is an example of an attorney's verification in the first two of these instances:

VERIFICATION

I am _ _[an/the]_ _ attorney for plaintiff, _ _[name]_ _, in this action. Plaintiff is _ _[state reason that plaintiff is unable to verify, e.g., absent from the County in which I have my office]_ _. I have read the foregoing complaint. I am informed and believe that the matters in it are true and on that ground allege that the matters stated in the complaint are true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ __[Signature]__
_ _[Typed name]_ _
Attorney for _ _[name]_ _

A complaint verified in this form may not be used as an affidavit or declaration establishing facts alleged in the complaint. CCP §446. However, an attorney may verify a complaint on the basis of his or her own knowledge of the facts, and that form of verified complaint may be used as an affidavit. Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 532, 67 CR 761.

WARNING: Verification by the attorney may give the impression that the attorney is a participant in the controversy and subject the attorney to deposition or subpoena as a source of facts.

§15.20 3. Other Person

To download Word version, right click and choose Save Target As

To download WordPerfect version, right click and choose Save Target As

A person other than the plaintiff is authorized by CCP §446 to verify the complaint if:

- Plaintiffs are absent from the county in which the attorney who files the complaint has his or her office;
- Plaintiffs are unable to verify for some other reason; or
- The facts are within the verifier's knowledge.

In the first two instances (see Ware v Stafford (1962) 206 CA2d 232, 236, 24 CR 153), the verifier should state:

- The verifier's relationship, if any, to the plaintiff;
- The reason the verifier, instead of the plaintiff, is making the verification; and
- That the complaint is true of the verifier's own knowledge except for matters stated on information or belief, which the plaintiff is informed are, and believes to be, true.

The following form can be used by a person, including an attorney, who verifies because the facts are within his or her knowledge:

VERIFICATION

I am _ _[e.g., the assignor of the claim sued on]_ _ in this action. I am more familiar with the facts alleged in the complaint than the plaintiff is. The foregoing complaint is true of my own knowledge.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

Date: _ _ _ _ _ _ __[Signature]__
_ _[Typed name]_ _

When an attorney uses this form of verification, the words "attorney for plaintiff" should be inserted in the first clause. It is common for the verifier to declare that he or she has better knowledge of the facts than does the plaintiff. See H. G. Bittleston Law & Collection Agency v Howard (1916) 172 C 357, 156 P 515. However, a simple statement that the complaint is true of the verifier's own knowledge should be enough without further explanation. See Milstein v Sartain (1943) 56 CA2d 924, 927, 133 P2d 836.

NOTE: In a verification made on the ground that the facts are within the verifier's knowledge, it is inappropriate to state the verifier's belief in the truth of matters stated in the complaint on information or belief. See Brown v Sandell (1926) 79 CA 313, 315, 249 P 209.

§15.21 4. Officer of Corporation or Public Entity

When a corporation is a party, verification may be made by any officer of the corporation. CCP §446; Stockton Lumber Co. v Blodgett (1906) 3 CA 94, 84 P 441 (manager). Complaints filed for corporations may also be verified by an attorney or other person with knowledge of the facts (see forms in §§15.19-15.20). Continental Baking Co. v Katz (1968) 68 C2d 512, 532, 67 CR 761; H. G. Bittleston Law & Collection Agency v Howard (1916) 172 C 357, 156 P 515.

Code of Civil Procedure §446 provides that an officer of a public agency may make essentially the same form of verification on its behalf that the officer of a corporation may make. Section 446 also exempts the state and any California county, city, school district, district, public agency, and public corporation from the need to verify a complaint or an answer. (Note, however, that answers to complaints filed by public entities must, with exceptions, be verified.) For example:

VERIFICATION

I am the _ _[title of officer]_ _ of _ _[name of corporation or public agency]_ _, a plaintiff in this action. I have read the foregoing complaint. I am informed and believe that the matters in it are true and on that ground allege that the matters stated in the complaint are true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

IV. PLEADING CAUSES OF ACTION

§15.22 A. Distinctions: Cause of Action; Count; Remedy; Relief

The complaint must contain a statement of facts constituting the cause of action. CCP §§425.10(a)(1), 430.10(e). A cause of action is the legal obligation the plaintiff seeks to enforce. Busick v WCAB (1972) 7 C3d 967, 975, 104 CR 42. It arises from the breach of, impingement on, or interference with, a primary right of the plaintiff, by the defendant, contrary to a primary duty. See Hurt v Haering (1922) 190 C 198, 200, 211 P 228; Frost v Witter (1901) 132 C 421, 426, 64 P 705; Lippert v Bailey (1966) 241 CA2d 376, 381, 50 CR 478; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§34-35 (5th ed 2008). A cause of action is pleaded by stating (1) the facts from which the plaintiff's primary right and the defendant's corresponding duty arise, and (2) the facts constituting the defendant's delict, or wrong. Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v City & Suburban Mortgage Co. (1970) 10 CA3d 206, 215, 88 CR 858.

The term "count" is sometimes used as a synonym for "cause of action." At other times, "count" is used to designate different statements of the same cause of action or statements of different theories that may be pursued for an invasion of a single primary right. See Eichler Homes, Inc. v Superior Court (1961) 55 C2d 845, 847, 13 CR 194.

A remedy is the means authorized by law for enforcing or preserving a right, preventing a threatened injury, or securing redress for damage. Jewett v City Transfer & Storage Co. (1933) 128 CA 556, 558, 18 P2d 351. Remedies may be administrative or judicial, civil or criminal, in personam or in rem, legal or equitable, and ex contractu (contract) or ex delicto (tort).

"Cause of action" is distinct from "remedy" and from "relief" or "redress." "Cause of action" means the basis or ground on which a person wronged seeks redress, i.e., everything that is requisite to show that an action is maintainable. "Remedy," a more extensive term, refers to the means by which a wrong is redressed and relief obtained. "Relief" in civil actions for violation of private rights may be compensatory (damages), specific, or preventive. CC §§3274-3426.10. See Frost v Witter, supra; DeMonbrun v Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n (1956) 140 CA2d 546, 553, 295 P2d 881; Painter v Berglund (1939) 31 CA2d 63, 70, 87 P2d 360; 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §30. Violation of one primary right creates only one cause of action regardless of how many legal theories are pursued or how many different forms of relief are sought. Slater v Blackwood (1975) 15 C3d 791, 795, 126 CR 225; Wulfjen v Dolton (1944) 24 C2d 891, 895, 151 P2d 846; Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v City & Suburban Mortgage Co., supra.

NOTE: Disregarding technical distinctions, many attorneys place a separate "CAUSE OF ACTION" heading over each group of allegations that states a reason the plaintiff has for suing a defendant or for seeking a particular form of relief. See discussion in Barrett v Superior Court (1990) 222 CA3d 1176, 1181, 272 CR 304.

§15.23 B. Stating Causes of Action Separately

The Code of Civil Procedure no longer requires that causes of action be separately stated, and failure to state separately has not, since 1973, been a ground for demurrer. Nevertheless, Cal Rules of Ct 2.112 and 2.112 require each cause of action to identify its number, its nature, the party asserting it (if there is more than one party represented in the pleading), and the party to whom it is directed. Thus, the facts constituting each cause of action and each count or theory for recovery should be set forth under a separate heading, e.g., "FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD," "SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION FOR CONVERSION." See Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v City & Suburban Mortgage Co. (1970) 10 CA3d 206, 88 CR 858. See also 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§36-39 (5th ed 2008). It is common to label a group of allegations a "cause of action" even though it is only a count or request for different relief.

Intermingling allegations may lead to a demurrer for uncertainty. When causes and counts are separately stated, a judge ruling on a demurrer or motion to strike can more easily recognize good causes and theories. There are situations in which different theories should be stated as separate counts to clarify the issues and to permit defendants to assert appropriate objections and defenses to each of the plaintiff's causes of action and theories. See City of Burbank v Superior Court (1965) 231 CA2d 675, 684, 42 CR 23.

§15.24 1. Joinder of Causes of Action

A plaintiff who has stated a cause of action against one or more defendants may assert in the same complaint any additional causes of action the plaintiff has, alone or with coplaintiffs, against any of those defendants. CCP §427.10(a). This broad principle of permissive joinder of causes of action, based on Fed R Civ P 18(a), supersedes former CCP §427 and eliminates the arbitrary categories of that section. Comment to CCP §427.10 (no longer ground for demurrer that several causes of action improperly united in complaint).

NOTE: Although unlimited permissive joinder of causes of action produces no undesirable effects at the pleading stage, joint trial of several causes may introduce undue complexity or prejudice. These problems can be avoided by severance of causes or issues for trial under CCP §1048(b). See chap 43.

California law does not require a plaintiff to join certain causes of action in a complaint. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §340 (5th ed 2008). A defendant can sometimes force a plaintiff to join additional causes of action by cross-complaining. The plaintiff must then state related causes of action in his or her own cross-complaint. On cross-complaints, see chap 26.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.25 2. Rule Against Splitting Causes of Action

There are good reasons for joining all related causes of action in the same complaint. For example, an apparently separate cause of action may be no more than a request for different relief or a different way of stating the same cause of action. See §15.22. Under the rule against splitting causes of action, a first lawsuit may be pleaded in abatement of a second that states the same cause of action, albeit invoking a different theory or seeking different relief. Wulfjen v Dolton (1944) 24 C2d 891, 151 P2d 846. See Purcell v Colonial Ins. Co. (1971) 20 CA3d 807, 813, 97 CR 874; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§45-47, 340 (5th ed 2008). Even if the second complaint states a different cause of action, the unfavorable determination of an issue in the first action, when it may not have been fully presented, is conclusive in any subsequent suit between the same parties. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. v McConnell (1955) 44 C2d 715, 724, 285 P2d 636.

Invasion of a single primary right may give rise to a cause of action under both federal and state statutes. Filing suit in a federal court under the federal statute may bar a later suit in the state court under the state statute because the plaintiff may not split a single cause of action and try it piecemeal. Ford Motor Co. v Superior Court (1973) 35 CA3d 676, 679, 110 CR 59. But see City of Los Angeles v Superior Court (1978) 85 CA3d 143, 149 CR 320; Merry v Coast Community College Dist. (1979) 97 CA3d 214, 158 CR 603; Mattson v City of Costa Mesa (1980) 106 CA3d 441, 164 CR 913.

C. Allegations

§15.26 1. Ultimate Facts

Complaints must contain statements of fact in ordinary and concise language. CCP §425.10(a)(1). The facts stated should be only the ultimate facts essential to the plaintiff's claims. Green v Palmer (1860) 15 C 411, 415. See Birke v Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 CA4th 1540, 1548, 87 CR3d 602 (plaintiff need not plead evidentiary facts supporting allegation of ultimate fact so long as pleading informs defendant of claim's factual basis; here, allegations that tobacco smoke in apartment complex common areas "affects a substantial number of people at the same time" adequate to state claim of public nuisance).

Ultimate facts are logical conclusions deduced from primary evidentiary facts (Rhode v Bartholomew (1949) 94 CA2d 272, 279, 210 P2d 768), as opposed to conclusions of law on the one hand and evidence of the facts on the other (Krug v Meeham (1952) 109 CA2d 274, 277, 240 P2d 732). The distinctions between ultimate facts, conclusions, and evidentiary facts, however, are not always easy to draw and often are a matter of degree. Burks v Poppy Constr. Co. (1962) 57 C2d 463, 473, 20 CR 609; 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§378-396 (5th ed 2008).

PRACTICE TIP: The foregoing technical distinctions are little help when drafting allegations. A more practical approach is to:

- Outline the facts (i.e., events, acts, omissions, relationships, and consequences) that show the plaintiff's primary rights, the defendant's duties, and the defendant's impingements on plaintiff's rights.
- Compare this outline with text discussions of the traditional causes of action and theories to ensure that each essential element is shown by a factual allegation and that nonessential facts are eliminated. See, e.g., 4-5 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§515-898.
- Formulate direct, positive, and concise statements of the essential facts in a general form. Too much specificity or detail may limit evidence that can be introduced at trial or reveal potential defenses. Formbooks and treatises can show acceptable ways of stating common facts, even in conclusory form, as well as allegations that have been held to be deficient. See, e.g., 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§384-392. However, California has not adopted "notice pleading," as have the federal courts and many states, and formbook forms adequate for those jurisdictions may be inadequate in California.

There is no need to plead facts that anticipate defenses. Allegations in the defendant's answer are considered controverted. CCP §431.20(b). However, if the allegations of the complaint reveal a defense, e.g., that the statute of limitations has run, the complaint should also contain allegations that negate the defense. Tarkington v California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 172 CA4th 1494, 1502, 92 CR3d 131. In Tarkington, for example, because the plaintiffs' writ petition showed that the statute of limitations had run, plaintiffs pleaded facts sufficient to invoke the judge-made equitable tolling doctrine, which extends statutes of limitations when necessary to ensure fundamental practicality and fairness. In another example, in one series of cases the plaintiffs, anticipating a statute of limitations defense, alleged that their discovery of the defendants' wrongdoing was delayed. The complaints were insufficient to invoke the delayed discovery rule, however, because there were no allegations concerning the time or manner of discovery of the wrongdoing by any plaintiff. McKelvey v Boeing N. Am., Inc. (1999) 74 CA4th 151, 86 CR2d 645, superseded by statute as stated in Grisham v Philip Morris, Inc. (2007) 40 C4th 623, 637 n8, 54 CR3d 735. See also Nelson v Indevus Pharms., Inc. (2006) 142 CA4th 1202, 48 CR3d 668 (statute of limitations under CCP §340.8 begins to run from date when plaintiff has reason to suspect harm, not when effects of prescription drug are publicized).

An exhibit attached to the complaint and incorporated by reference (see §15.6) can sometimes serve as a substitute for allegations. See 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§427-437.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.27 2. Direct Allegations; Information and Belief

Allegations of fact in a complaint should be direct and positive. Although allegations are to be liberally construed (CCP §452), and perfection in pleading is not required (Lloyd v California Pictures Corp. (1955) 136 CA2d 638, 643, 289 P2d 295), courts have imposed various sanctions on pleadings characterized as "argumentative," "inferential," or "by recital." See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§393-395 (5th ed 2008).

NOTE: The pleader should check the complaint for facts stated parenthetically that could be stated directly. For example, "X, the agent of Y," could be converted to "X was the agent of Y and was acting as Y's agent in doing the following." See Vilardo v County of Sacramento (1942) 54 CA2d 413, 418, 129 P2d 165.

The pleader should not make allegations known to be false or misleading unless they are accepted legal fictions such as those embodied in common counts. See 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §397. Making unfounded allegations can sometimes amount to malicious prosecution. See Albertson v Raboff (1960) 185 CA2d 372, 387, 8 CR 398. On the other hand, doubtful facts are often alleged, particularly against fictitiously named defendants, in order to preserve causes of action against the running of statutes of limitation. On joinder, see chap 14.

A pleader who has no direct personal knowledge of a fact can allege it "on information and belief." The allegation should be positive, e.g., "Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges …." The phrase "Plaintiff is informed and believes that" is merely a recital of the plaintiff's belief, not a direct allegation of the fact. See 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§398-399.

Pleaders use allegations on information and belief to help preserve a measure of credibility when stating facts within the defendant's knowledge or about which the plaintiff knows only by hearsay or guess.

WARNING: Alleging a fact on information and belief does not immunize the pleader from a perjury charge if he or she willfully verifies an allegation knowing it to be false. See People v Agnew (1947) 77 CA2d 748, 755, 176 P2d 724.

V. CHOICE AND ELECTION OF REMEDIES

§15.28 A. General Considerations

California has only one form of civil action for enforcement or protection of private rights or prevention of private wrongs. CCP §307. Thus, a complaint may pursue both legal and equitable remedies and state causes of action based on contract and on tort. The plaintiff need only allege facts that entitle the plaintiff to some relief, and need not designate causes of action as legal or equitable, nor plead them with technical common law precision. See 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§31-32 (5th ed 2008).

One cause of action, i.e., one invasion of a primary right, may give rise to more than one remedy and entitle the plaintiff to alternative forms of relief. See 4 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§40-41.

EXAMPLE: The plaintiff may sometimes choose to state a cause of action that (1) is based on contract rather than tort; (2) traditionally was cognizable in courts of equity rather than courts of law; or (3) demands relief characterized as equitable (e.g., specific performance) rather than legal (e.g., damages).

The choice of causes of action alleged may affect such matters as:

- The jurisdictional classification of the case (for discussion of limited and unlimited civil actions, see chap 6);
- The county in which the case may be filed (venue);
- Whether factual issues will be tried to a jury;
- The applicable statute of limitations;
- The nature of available defenses; and
- The form of relief available.

See 3 Witkin, Procedure, Actions §§118-119.

EXAMPLE: The plaintiff may be able to avoid the procedural limitations placed on limited civil actions (see chap 6) by pursuing an equitable remedy, even though the amount in controversy is below $25,000. See Silverman v Greenberg (1938) 12 C2d 252, 254, 83 P2d 293. For discussion of classification of cases, see generally chap 6. A cause of action that can be pleaded as a breach of contract may sometimes be filed in a different county from the one where it would be filed if pleaded as a tort, and vice versa. On venue, see chap 8. Pleading in the form of a traditionally legal cause of action may preclude the defendant from raising such equitable defenses as laches or mutuality of remedy.

§15.29 B. Tax Considerations

The nature of the causes of action pleaded and relief sought in a complaint can affect the form of the judgment obtained and the parties' tax liabilities. The plaintiff's choice of remedies and willingness to settle can be affected by whether the proceeds of a settlement or judgment are taxable income, and whether taxable as ordinary income or as a recovery of capital. A defendant, whether cross-complaining, asserting particular defenses, or settling on particular terms, may change nondeductible capital or personal expenditures into an item deductible as a business expense or otherwise.

EXAMPLE: A person from whom specific property was taken might sue the taker either for return of the property or for damages for its taking. Return of the specific property to the plaintiff might be viewed as a recovery of capital that is not income unless the plaintiff had previously taken a deduction for loss of the property. Recovery of money damages on the other hand might be viewed as a sale that constituted a taxable gain or loss. (This example does not purport to state the rules of tax law that govern a particular situation. The tax consequences of any prospective settlement or judgment must be determined by the pleader or consultants in light of the particular facts of the case and current tax law.)

§15.30 C. Election of Remedies

A plaintiff's attorney must consider two aspects of election:

- Whether there is an administrative or other remedy that may be pursued as an alternative to the judicial remedy by civil action; and
- Whether in a lawsuit a choice must be made between two causes of action or theories that amount to inconsistent remedies.

If there are two coexisting but inconsistent remedies for one invasion of a primary right, the plaintiff must elect between them; an election to pursue one precludes pursuit of the other. Mansfield v Pickwick Stages, Inc. (1923) 191 C 129, 215 P 389; Roam v Koop (1974) 41 CA3d 1035, 1039, 116 CR 539. See generally 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§179-202 (5th ed 2008).

An injured worker may have to choose whether to pursue a defendant as an employer against whom the worker's exclusive remedy is a Workers' Compensation Appeals Board proceeding for benefits (see Lab C §3601) or as a nonemployer against whom a civil action for damages may be filed. See generally California Workers' Damages Practice §§4.38, 5.2, 5.7, 5.11 (2d ed Cal CEB 2001). In some instances, the plaintiff can file and pursue both an application for compensation and a civil action until obtaining sufficient information to know which of the remedies is more likely to be fruitful or until pursuit of one amounts to an estoppel to pursue the other. Felix v WCAB (1974) 41 CA3d 759, 765, 116 CR 345.

Although a plaintiff can allege different versions of the facts in separate counts of a complaint (see 4 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§402-411 (5th ed 2008)), if the alternatives seek inconsistent remedies, the plaintiff is normally required to elect between them.

A person injured by a breach of contract may elect to affirm the contract and seek specific performance or to rescind and sue for restitution and damages, but an election to pursue one of those remedies bars invocation of the other. But see Acadia, Cal., Ltd. v Herbert (1960) 54 C2d 328, 336, 5 CR 686, in which the plaintiff was permitted to submit both tort and contract theories to the jury although different measures of damages flowed from each. See generally 3 Witkin, Procedure, Actions §§179-182.

Because election of remedies is a "harsh and disfavored" doctrine and as such is continually being narrowed and restricted, it is doubtful whether it survives at all in the context of attachment. Waffner Int'l Corp. v Khorsandi (1999) 69 CA4th 1261, 82 CR2d 241. Thus, election of remedies does not apply in an attachment context when different operative facts are involved in contract and tort claims. Thus, for example, a plaintiff who obtained a writ of attachment in a contract action against a corporation was not barred by the doctrine of election of remedies from pursuing tort claims against two officers of the corporation in a related but different action. 69 CA4th at 1280. The remedy of attachment is discussed in chap 32.

VI. FILING COMPLAINT

§15.31 A. Filing and Serving Complaint and Summons; Fees

A printed Judicial Council form of summons should be prepared with the complaint. For the various prescribed forms of summons, see the forms in chap 17. The complaint and the summons are then given to the clerk of the court for filing, along with the filing fee.

The complaint must be served on all named defendants and proofs of service on those defendants must be filed with the court within 60 days after the complaint is filed. When the complaint is amended to add a defendant, that defendant must be served and proof of service must be filed within 30 days after the amended complaint is filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(a)-(b) (not applicable to unlawful detainer, family law proceedings, or proceedings with different service requirements prescribed by law). The court, on its own motion or on the application of a party, may extend or otherwise modify the time provided in Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(b). An application for a court order extending the time to serve a pleading must be filed before the time for service has elapsed. The application must be accompanied by a declaration showing why service has not been effected, documenting the efforts that were made to effect service, and specifying the date by which service is proposed to be effected. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(e). Unless the court has granted an order extending the time to serve a complaint or cross-complaint, the failure to serve and file pleadings as required under this rule may result in an Order to Show Cause (OSC) being issued as to why sanctions shall not be imposed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(f). When the court issues an OSC under this rule, responsive papers to the OSC must be filed and served no less than 5 calendar days before the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(i).

The filing fee generally is fixed by statute. The fee for filing the first paper in a civil action or proceeding in superior court, other than a limited civil case or an adoption proceeding, is $355. Govt C §70611. The fee for filing the first paper in a limited civil case is $330. Govt C §70613(a). If the amount demanded, excluding attorney fees and costs, is $10,000 or less, the filing fee is $205. See Govt C §70613(b). On receipt of the complaint and the filing fee, the clerk files the complaint (see CCP §411.10) and issues a summons (see CCP §412.10). In the case of a pro se prisoner litigant, the complaint is deemed filed on the date it is delivered to prison authorities for forwarding to the superior court. Moore v Twomey (2004) 120 CA4th 910, 918, 16 CR3d 163. The plaintiff must then serve a copy of the complaint and the summons on the defendant (CCP §§413.10-416.90) and prepare a proof of service. On service of process and forms of proof of service, see chap 17.

On filing and serving the complaint by facsimile transmission, see §§18.11-18.16.

© The Regents of the University of California

§15.32 B. Case Cover Sheet

The first paper filed in an action or proceeding must be accompanied by a case cover sheet. Cal Rules of Ct 3.220(a). See form reproduced in §15.48. The case cover sheet consists of a Judicial Council form that is required in every civil action or proceeding, except those filed in small claims court or under the Probate Code, Family Law Code, or Welfare and Institutions Code. Cal Rules of Ct 3.220(b)(1). It is used for statistical purposes only and need not be served on the defendant with the complaint and summons. It does not affect the assignment of the case. Cal Rules of Ct 3.220(a).

If a party that is required to provide a cover sheet under this rule or a similar local rule fails to do so or provides a defective or incomplete cover sheet at the time the party's first paper is submitted for filing, the court clerk must file the paper. Failure of a party or a party's counsel to file a cover sheet as required by this rule may subject that party, its counsel, or both, to sanctions under Cal Rules of Ct 2.30. Cal Rules of Ct 3.220(c).

§15.33 C. If Filing Fee Check Is Returned by Bank

If the clerk receives a complaint for filing, and the filing fees are paid by a check that is later returned by the bank without payment, the clerk must notify the party tendering the check that it has 20 days from the date of mailing of the notice within which to pay the fee and an administrative charge ($25 or no more than the actual cost incurred by the court) to reimburse the court for the costs of processing the returned check. CCP §411.20(a), (g). The fee and administrative charge must be paid by cash or certified check or by other means specified by the court, but not by traveler's check or personal check. CCP §411.20(a).

If the person who tendered the returned check is not a party but only acting on behalf of a party, the clerk shall notify not only the person who tendered the check, but also the party or that party's attorney, if any. CCP §411.20(a). The clerk's certificate of the mailing of the notice establishes a rebuttable presumption that the fee and administrative charge were not paid. CCP §411.20(a).

If, after the 20-day period following the mailing of notice, the fee and administrative charge remain unpaid, the clerk must void the filing. CCP §411.20(b), (g). See Hu v Silgan Containers Corp. (1999) 70 CA4th 1261, 83 CR2d 333 (once plaintiff failed to pay fees within 20 days after notice from clerk, trial court lost all jurisdiction over suit and lacked power to do anything but void complaint, even though plaintiff paid fees some months later). If an adverse party has filed a responsive pleading to the complaint, and the original filing is voided, the adverse party's filing is not required, and his or her filing fee must be refunded on request. CCP §411.20(c). If the adverse party's filing fee check is returned by the bank, the same notice procedures apply. CCP §411.20(d).

If any trial or other hearing is scheduled before the 20-day period has elapsed, the filing fee and the administrative charge must be paid before the trial or hearing; otherwise, the court will void the filing and proceed as though the paper had not been filed. CCP §411.20(e), (g).

If the clerk issues any documents in the proceeding, or performs a service for which a fee is required, and a check for the fee is returned unpaid, the court may order further proceedings suspended for the party tendering the check. The clerk must notify the party by mail that proceedings have been suspended until the fee and administrative charge have been paid by cash or certified check. The clerk's certificate of the mailing of the notice establishes a rebuttable presumption that the fees were not paid. CCP §411.20(f)-(g).

§15.34 VII. USING OFFICIAL FORMS

Code of Civil Procedure §425.12 directs the Judicial Council to develop and approve official forms for use in California courts for complaints and answers based on personal injury, wrongful death, unlawful detainer, breach of contract, fraud, or property damage and statement of damages under CCP §§425.11 and 425.115. Use of the forms is optional. CCP §425.12; Cal Rules of Ct 1.30-1.45, 2.131-2.134.

The basic complaint form (Complaint—Personal Injury, Property Damage, Wrongful Death (Judicial Council Form PLD-PI-001) set forth in §15.36 must be accompanied by an attachment stating a cause of action. If one of the Judicial Council cause of action forms is not appropriate for use as an attachment, the complaint may be accompanied by traditional typed pleadings. The Judicial Council cause of action forms are subtitled Motor Vehicle, General Negligence, Intentional Tort, Premises Liability, and Products Liability. See §§15.37-15.41.

The mere fact that a plaintiff uses a Judicial Council form complaint does not make the complaint invulnerable to demurrer. People ex rel Dep't of Transp. v Superior Court (1992) 5 CA4th 1480, 7 CR2d 498 (plaintiff did not set out enough detail of "description of premises and circumstances of injury" under paragraph "Prem.L-1" in premises liability cause of action sheet (shown below in §15.40)).

If punitive damages are sought, the printed exemplary damages attachment should be used. Note that the amount of punitive damages may not be specified in the complaint. CC §3295(e).

The Judicial Council forms, supplemented with appropriate fact pleadings specifying the circumstances under which the plaintiff seeks recovery and indicating facts entitling the plaintiff to recover, are frequently used in both limited and unlimited civil cases.

NOTE: Under Govt C §§68600-68620, the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, some superior courts have altered the pleading rules applicable to both form and nonform complaints. Practitioners should consult the local rules applicable in the court in which they will be filing the complaint. On the delay reduction rules generally, see chap 40.

Comment: A well-pleaded complaint is fundamental to a successful civil action. For discussion of rules of pleading and guidance in shaping allegations to state a cause of action, see §§15.22-15.27.

The attorney may provide his or her fax number and e-mail address. Inclusion of a fax number or e-mail address does not constitute consent to service by fax or e-mail unless otherwise provided by law. Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(1). The caption of every pleading filed in a limited civil case must include the words "Limited Civil Case," as required by CCP §422.030(b). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(10). A complaint filed in a limited civil case must state, immediately below the character of the action or proceeding, the amount demanded in the complaint, stated as follows: "Amount demanded exceeds $10,000" or "Amount demanded does not exceed $10,000," as required by Govt C §70613 (fee for filing first paper in limited civil case). Cal Rules of Ct 2.111(9). This amount must be specified because it affects the amount of the filing fee. See Govt C §70613. Additional format requirements are set forth in Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119. For special format requirements for limited civil cases, see §11.26.

Note: The format of attorney-drafted court papers is governed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119. For example, pleading paper (with consecutive line numbers at the left margin of each page) must be used. On the many specific details required, see chap 11 and the sample form in §11.35. On when preprinted Judicial Council forms must or may be filed with the court, see Cal Rules of Ct 1.30-1.44, 2.131-2.134 and the discussion in §11.27.

INSTRUCTIONS ON HOW TO COMPLETE THE COVER SHEET

To Plaintiffs and Others Filing First Papers. If you are filing a first paper (for example, a complaint) in a civil case, you must complete and file, along with your first paper, the Civil Case Cover Sheet contained on page 1. This information will be used to compile statistics about the types and numbers of cases filed. You must complete items 1 through 6 on the sheet. In item 1, you must check one box for the case type that best describes the case. If the case fits both a general and a more specific type of case listed in item 1, check the more specific one. If the case has multiple causes of action, check the box that best indicates the primary cause of action. To assist you in completing the sheet, examples of the cases that belong under each case type in item 1 are provided below. A cover sheet must be filed only with your initial paper. Failure to file a cover sheet with the first paper filed in a civil case may subject a party, its counsel, or both to sanctions under rules 2.30 and 3.220 of the California Rules of Court.

To Parties in Rule 3.740 Collections Cases. A "collections case" under rule 3.740 is defined as an action for recovery of money owed in a sum stated to be certain that is not more than $25,000, exclusive of interest and attorney's fees, arising from a transaction in which property, services, or money was acquired on credit. A collections case does not include an action seeking the following: (1) tort damages, (2) punitive damages, (3) recovery of real property, (4) recovery of personal property, or (5) a prejudgment writ of attachment. The identification of a case as a rule 3.740 collections case on this form means that it will be exempt from the general time-for-service requirements and case management rules, unless a defendant files a responsive pleading. A rule 3.740 collections case will be subject to the requirements for service and obtaining a judgment in rule 3.740.

To Parties in Complex Cases. In complex cases only, parties must also use the Civil Case Cover Sheet to designate whether the case is complex. If a plaintiff believes the case is complex under rule 3.400 of the California Rules of Court, this must be indicated by completing the appropriate boxes in items 1 and 2. If a plaintiff designates a case as complex, the cover sheet must be served with the complaint on all parties to the action. A defendant may file and serve no later than the time of its first appearance a joinder in the plaintiff's designation, a counter-designation that the case is not complex, or, if the plaintiff has made no designation, a designation that the case is complex.

I. INTRODUCTION

§16.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the methods by which a plaintiff's attorney can alter or augment a complaint already filed. For an overview of the procedure, see §§16.3-16.6. It also discusses forms of written amendments (see §§16.7-16.10), procedures to amend (see §§16.11-16.17), and supplemental complaints (a supplemental complaint is an additional complaint that alleges facts that occurred after the original complaint was filed; see §16.18). Forms are set forth in §§16.19-16.25.

§16.2 B. Governing Law

Amendments to complaints are governed by CCP §§469-475, and by Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324. Supplemental complaints are governed by CCP §464.

II. OVERVIEW

§16.3 A. Reasons to Amend

Amendment is used to correct an erroneous name or allegation, to change a demand for relief (prayer), to add or correct a verification or a signature, and in some instances to add new parties and new or different allegations. See 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §1186 (5th ed 2008). However, amendment cannot be used to substitute an entirely different party for one described in the complaint. See Diliberti v Stage Call Corp. (1992) 4 CA4th 1468, 6 CR2d 563, in which an attorney who was retained by a car passenger injured in a collision mistakenly filed a complaint naming the driver, who was not injured, as the plaintiff and not mentioning a passenger.

Statutes may require that some claims be asserted by amended pleading. See, e.g., CCP §425.13, requiring an amended pleading accompanied by a showing of the substantial probability of prevailing when punitive damages are claimed from a health care provider. The California Supreme Court has ruled that §425.13 does not require the court to weigh the merits of a punitive damage claim or deny a motion to amend if the claim does not appear likely to succeed at trial. College Hosp. v Superior Court (1994) 8 C4th 704, 34 CR2d 898. The court likened a motion to amend under §425.13 to a demurrer or a summary judgment motion in reverse. Such a motion may be granted only if the plaintiff "both states and substantiates a legally sufficient claim." 8 C4th at 719. The motion must be denied when the allegations of the proposed amended complaint are legally insufficient to support a punitive damages claim or when the evidence in the supporting and opposing affidavits negate or fail to show the actual existence of a triable claim.

§16.4 B. Need for Leave of Court; Notice

In specific situations, a complaint may be amended or replaced without leave of court, or with leave but without notice to other parties. CCP §§472-474, 576; see §§16.11-16.17. Otherwise, amending a complaint is accomplished by filing and serving a notice of motion with accompanying papers, which must include the proposed amended complaint or amendment to the complaint. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(a); §§16.16, 16.24. For further requirements for the notice of motion, see §16.17.

© The Regents of the University of California

§16.4A C. Limits on Amendments

The liberal policy in favor of amendments is subject to limitations. See CCP §473(a)(1); Fed R Civ P 15(a). Leave to amend is not appropriate if the "amendment would cause prejudice to the opposing party, is sought in bad faith, is futile, or creates undue delay." Madeja v Olympic Packers (9th Cir 2002) 310 F3d 628, 636 (applying Fed R Civ P 15(a)). For example, plaintiff medical provider was not permitted to amend its complaint to add 23 new defendants when it would cause prejudice to defendants. See Spindex Physical Therapy USA, Inc. v State of Ariz. Dep't of Ins. (D Ariz, Nov. 9, 2005, No. 04-1576) 2005 US Dist Lexis 27841.

D. Effect on Limitation Periods

§16.5 1. Statute of Limitations and Failure to Prosecute

Except for an amendment that states a wholly different cause of action or that names an entirely new defendant, the time that the original complaint was filed is deemed the time when the action was commenced for purposes of tolling the statute of limitations. Grudt v City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 C3d 575, 583, 86 CR 465. See also Hightower v Roman Catholic Bishop of Sacramento (2006) 142 CA4th 759, 48 CR3d 420 (giving notice of intent to sue by motion does not qualify as complaint for statute of limitations purposes); the original filing time also determines when the action may be dismissed for failure to prosecute under CCP §§581-583. See Rosefield Packing Co. v Superior Court (1935) 4 C2d 120, 124, 47 P2d 716. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §1188 (5th ed 2008).

If the amendment or amended complaint names new parties, or states causes of action that are fundamentally different in nature from those in the original complaint, the action against those defendants or on those causes commences, for statute of limitations purposes, at the time of the filing of the amendment or of the notice of motion to amend to which the amendment is attached. Wiener v Superior Court (1976) 58 CA3d 525, 130 CR 61.

For an amended complaint naming a new party to relate back to the date of filing of the original complaint, the amending party must demonstrate that it was genuinely ignorant of the new party's identity at the time of filing the complaint. See Woo v Superior Court (1999) 75 CA4th 169, 89 CR2d 20 (plaintiff's amended complaint naming new doctor as defendant did not relate back when her deposition testimony indicated she knew of defendant's identity and his possible participation in her injuries before she filed original complaint). But see McOwen v Grossman (2007) 153 CA4th 937, 945, 63 CR3d 615 (plaintiff knew doctor when complaint was filed but only learned of doctor's role in injury after deposition). On dismissal for want of prosecution, see chap 39.

A motion to amend may be denied, or an amendment filed without leave can be stricken, if the statute of limitations has run for a newly named party or a newly stated cause of action. For a discussion of situations in which new parties can be brought in and new allegations made against new or existing defendants, see 5 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§1217-1237.

WARNING: Filing an amended complaint that embodies substantial changes from the original may require defendant to file a new answer or demurrer to avoid a default. See Darsie v Darsie (1942) 49 CA2d 491, 122 P2d 64. On the other hand, a defendant in default on the original complaint must be served with, and has a right to answer, an amended complaint and be relieved from the default. Ford v Superior Court (1973) 34 CA3d 338, 342, 109 CR 844.

A defendant omitted from an amended complaint is no longer a party in the action and has no right to answer the superseded complaint. See generally 5 Witkin, Procedure, Pleading §§1187-1189.

© The Regents of the University of California

§16.5A 2. Relation-Back Doctrine

Under the relation-back doctrine, the amended complaint may relate back to the original complaint for statute of limitations purposes if it

- Rests on the same general facts as the original;
- Involves the same injury; and
- Refers to the same instrumentality.

Norgart v Upjohn Co. (1999) 21 C4th 383, 408, 87 CR2d 453. For example, the amendment in Quiroz v Seventh Ave. Ctr. (2006) 140 CA4th 1256, 45 CR3d 222, did not relate back because two different injuries were involved; the original survivor claim pled injury to plaintiff, while the amendment pled elder abuse as injury to the decedent. In San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v Superior Court (2007) 146 CA4th 1545, 1552, 53 CR3d 722, the court held that in a wrongful death action, the relation-back doctrine does not allow the addition of a party barred by the statute of limitations.

The relation-back doctrine was successfully applied in Lamont v Wolfe (1983) 142 CA3d 375, 190 CR 874 (amendment to loss-of-consortium lawsuit, alleging action for wrongful death, was not time barred), and recognized as available under appropriate circumstances in Branick v Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n (2006) 39 C4th 235, 46 CR3d 66 (plaintiffs could seek to amend unfair competition suit to satisfy Proposition 64 standing requirements under ordinary relation-back rules). See Cryoport Sys. v CNA Ins. Cos. (2007) 149 CA4th 627, 633, 57 CR3d 358 (trial court allowed plaintiff to amend complaint filed 1 day before passage of Proposition 64 to allege standing).

§16.6 E. Prompt Service

Service of an amended pleading should be made as promptly as possible—especially in those lawsuits subject to trial delay reduction requirements. On delay reduction rules, see chap 40. An amendment that is substantive in nature must be served on other parties in the action, including defendants who have defaulted on a preceding complaint. Ford v Superior Court (1973) 34 CA3d 338, 342, 109 CR 844; see CCP §1010. When the complaint is amended to add a defendant, that defendant must be served and proof of service must be filed within 30 days after the amended complaint is filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(a)-(b) (not applicable to unlawful detainer, family law proceedings, or proceedings with different service requirements prescribed by law).

NOTE: An amendment that changes the complaint in form only (i.e., that would not affect the contents or form of an answer) need not be served. However, it is good practice to serve all amendments. A substantive amendment must be personally served before a default can be entered. See Engebretson & Co. v Harrison (1981) 125 CA3d 436, 441, 178 CR 77. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1187, 1242-1245, (5th ed 2008).

Service may be on the adverse party or his attorney, as a pleading subsequent to the complaint. CCP §465; see chap 18. Newly named defendants must be served with a summons as well as the amended complaint or complaint as amended.

When service of an amended complaint precedes its filing, the time within which to plead to the amended complaint runs from the date of filing. Baker v Anderson (1981) 119 CA3d 1000, 174 CR 307. See chap 17. Service on defendants whose true name has been substituted for a fictitious name is discussed in §16.14.

III. FORMS OF WRITTEN AMENDMENTS

A. Amended Complaint

§16.7 1. Defined; Uses

An amended complaint is a pleading complete in itself; when served and filed, it supersedes the original complaint and any preceding amended complaint. See Cohen v Superior Court (1966) 244 CA2d 650, 657, 53 CR 378. An amended complaint differs from a supplemental complaint (see §16.18) in that it alleges facts that existed when the original complaint in the action was filed.

The amended complaint format is usually preferred to an amendment to the complaint (see §16.9) if a cause of action or count is to be substantially restated.

PRACTICE TIP: Filing an amended complaint permits plaintiff to state all allegations in logical order in a single document, without highlighting the matter that has been added, deleted, or altered.

An amended complaint can specifically incorporate by reference allegations from a prior complaint (see Ogier v Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Co. (1955) 132 CA2d 496, 499, 282 P2d 574), although it is usually better to replead all good allegations in the amended complaint. Unless specifically incorporated by reference, allegations of prior complaints are not considered in determining the sufficiency of an amended complaint. See Karp v Dunn (1964) 229 CA2d 186, 190, 40 CR 93.

WARNING: A judge may strike an amended complaint as sham on the basis of allegations from a prior complaint that have been changed or omitted without a satisfactory explanation. On motions to strike, see chap 24. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1187, 1190-1191 (5th ed 2008).

© The Regents of the University of California

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/16 Amending Complaints/§16.8 2. Format

§16.8 2. Format

The caption of an amended complaint is the same as the caption of an original complaint, except:

- If the amended complaint brings in new parties, they are named in the title of the case.
- The case number assigned when the original complaint was filed is typed on the amended complaint.
- The nature of the paper for a first amended complaint is given as AMENDED COMPLAINT (or FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT), and for subsequent amended complaints as, e.g., SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT.

The introductory line "Plaintiff alleges:" is usually sufficient for an amended complaint, but it is helpful to state the occasion for filing the pleading, e.g.:

Pursuant to leave of court, following an order sustaining a demurrer to _ _[his/her/their/its]_ _ _ _[e.g., original/first amended]_ _ complaint in this action, plaintiff files this _ _[e.g., amended/second-amended]_ _ complaint, and alleges:

The body of the amended complaint should contain allegations sufficient to state plaintiff's causes of action and theories, and there should be a demand for relief and signature as on an original complaint. CCP §425.10. The same considerations on deciding whether to verify a complaint apply in deciding whether to verify an amended complaint. On complaints and verification of complaints, see chap 15.

B. Amendment to Complaint

§16.9 1. Defined; Uses

An amendment to a complaint is an addition to or change in part of the complaint currently pending in the action. See Cohen v Superior Court (1966) 244 CA2d 650, 657, 53 CR 378. Because it is based on facts as they existed when the original complaint was filed, it differs from a supplemental complaint (see §16.18).

Amendments are not normally made by altering the face of a com plaint that is on file, but by filing a separate paper that lists the additions, deletions, and changes to be made. Thus, an amendment to a complaint is not a pleading in itself, but must be read in conjunction with the complaint it amends. See form in §16.19.

NOTE: A court can permit amendment by alteration on the face of the complaint that has already been filed, but the alterations must be initialed by the court or clerk. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(d).

A court can require a party to file an amended complaint rather than an amendment to the complaint. CCP §471.5. It is probably the better practice to file an amended complaint, rather than an amendment, unless the amendments are few in number or scope.

© The Regents of the University of California

§16.10 2. Format

An amendment to a complaint is usually in the form of a court paper. See chap 11 for general form and format requirements. The format shown in §16.19 incorporates the following features:

- The title of the action shows only the first party on each side, although the names of any new parties added by the amendment should also be shown. The character of the action need be stated only if the amendment changes the character shown on the complaint.
- The amendment must designate the amended page and lines of the prior pleading; a motion to amend must include a copy of the proposed amendment or amended pleading. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(a)-(b). For further discussion of the contents of the motion to amend, see §16.17.
- The signature should be the same as the signature on the original complaint.

If the original was verified, the amendment should be verified. For forms, see chap 15. A form of order permitting the amendment to be filed, if required, can be typed below the signature on the amendment or on the request for the order; however, many courts require a separate order (see §§16.21, 16.25).

IV. PROCEDURES TO AMEND

§16.11 A. Amendment of Course: Before Answer Filed or Demurrer Heard

A complaint may be amended once "of course," i.e., without permission of court or other parties and without costs, at any time before an answer or demurrer has been filed, or before the hearing on the demurrer if a demurrer but no answer has been filed. CCP §472. Plaintiff has the right to amend a complaint before a responsive pleading is filed, and after a responsive pleading is filed, before a hearing on the demurrer. Barton v Khan (2007) 157 CA4th 1216, 1220, 69 CR3d 238 (trial court erred in refusing to accept amended complaint before hearing on demurrer). An amendment may include new parties without having to seek leave of court, notwithstanding the provisions of CCP §473. Gross v Department of Transp. (1986) 180 CA3d 1102, 226 CR 49. Amendment-of-course is accomplished by filing an amended complaint or an amendment to the complaint, and serving a copy on the defendants affected by it. CCP §§471.5, 472.

The defendant has 30 days, or such other time as a court may direct, after service of the amendments or amended complaint to file an answer (CCP §471.5) and may also demur or use other responsive motions to prevent the plaintiff's taking a default (see CCP §586).

© The Regents of the University of California

§16.12 B. Amendment by Stipulation

An amendment may be filed by stipulation of all parties affected by the amendment. See generally §16.20. If the other parties will stipulate to filing the amendment, the plaintiff's attorney is spared the need to prepare motion papers and attend a hearing on the motion to amend even though the time to amend-of-course (see §16.11) has expired.

Code of Civil Procedure §473(a)(1) states that the court in its discretion may allow an amendment to a pleading. It is not clear whether a court could deny permission to file an amendment to which all parties agree, or could later ignore the amendment, but it is good practice to ask a judge to sign a written order or enter a minute order permitting the amendment.

Opposing counsel should be given a copy of the proposed amendment to the complaint or amended complaint along with the stipulation form to be signed. The stipulation can specify that allegations in the amendment are deemed denied, or can provide for the time within which an answer or other responsive papers may be filed. (Note: In light of the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act, the practitioner should consult the rules applicable to that court which may modify the parties' stipulation. On delay reduction rules, see chap 40.)

The written stipulation may be a separate paper attached to and filed with the amendment, or it may be typed at the end of the amended complaint or amendment to the complaint.

§16.13 C. Amendment to Correct Mistake or Add or Delete Name of Party

Code of Civil Procedure §473(a)(1) provides that a court may, in furtherance of justice and on such terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend a pleading by adding or striking out the name of any party, or by correcting a mistake in the name of a party, or a mistake in any other respect. See also CCP §576. See Hawkins v Pacific Coast Bldg. Prod., Inc. (2004) 124 CA4th 1497, 22 CR3d 453 (amendment of complaint to correct name of corporate defendant in wrongful termination action relates back to filing of original complaint for statute of limitations purposes); Cuadros v Superior Court (1992) 6 CA4th 671, 8 CR2d 18 (trial court should have permitted amendment to add correct name of business entity that owned leased car).

When an amendment does not add a new defendant but merely corrects a misnomer, such as to correct a name, the amendment may relate back to the date of the original complaint under the "misnomer exception" to the "no relation back" rule in California. Hawkins v Pacific Coast Bldg. Prod., Inc., supra.

The judge may sign an order permitting the filing of this kind of amendment without a noticed hearing. However, whenever practical, plaintiff should serve a copy of the proposed amendment on all defendants affected by it before asking the judge to sign the order. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1242-1245 (5th ed 2008).

The original of the proposed amendment can be presented to a judge with an oral request that he or she sign an attached order permitting the amendment to be filed.

NOTE: Also presenting a written request for order allowing amendment (see §16.21) is useful to signal the judge that it is the kind of amendment that can be allowed without a noticed hearing.

To obtain permission to file an amendment without notice, the plaintiff should:

- Prepare a written amendment to the complaint (see §16.19), a request for order allowing amendment (see §16.21), and an order permitting the amendment (see §16.25);
- Serve a copy of the amendment, request, and order on each affected party;
- Present the amendment, request, order, and attached proof of service, to the judge for signature of the order; and
- Serve the amendment and signed order on each party and file with proof of service.

§16.14 D. Substituting True Name for Fictitious Name

Code of Civil Procedure §474 provides that a plaintiff who is ignorant of the defendant's true name can designate that defendant by any name, and then when the true name is discovered amend the complaint accordingly. The action against the defendant is deemed to have been commenced when the complaint was filed, not when the substitution was made. Hoffman v Keeton (1901) 132 C 195, 64 P 264. See Guenter v Lomes & Nettleton Co. (1983) 140 CA3d 460, 189 CR 470 (amendment adding additional plaintiffs should be permitted and would relate back to filing of complaint, as new plaintiffs were members of a class that the named plaintiff sought to represent in original pleading). See chap 14 for reasons to use fictitious names and the form of a fictitious name allegation. A person may object to being joined as a defendant under CCP §474 by demurrer (see chap 23) or motion to quash service (see chap 19).

Courts differ on whether leave of court, i.e., an order signed by a judge or commissioner, must be obtained before an amendment substituting a true name will be accepted for filing by the clerk. When a signature is required, it is normally given pro forma and ex parte. See Brock v Martinovitch (1880) 55 C 516.

NOTE: Counsel preparing an amendment to substitute a true name should check with the clerk of the court in which the complaint was filed to determine whether an order form should be appended to the amendment. The clerk can also say whether the court has a printed form for the amendment and what must be included in a typed form.

An amendment that not only substitutes a name, but also contains new allegations against the now truly named defendant should normally be made with leave of court after notice. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1219, 1228 (5th ed 2008).

Code of Civil Procedure §474 states that the complaint must be amended to show the true name, but does not say when the amendment must be made or what harm to plaintiff might ensue if the amendment is not filed. See Fuller v Tucker (2000) 84 CA4th 1163, 101 CR2d 776 (court used incorrect standard in determining whether plaintiff's amendment of complaint to identify Doe defendant was timely). It has been held, however, that CCP §474 implicitly requires the plaintiff to amend the complaint to add the true names of the Doe defendants within a reasonable period of time after learning of their identity. A.N. v County of Los Angeles (2009) 171 CA4th 1058, 1066, 90 CR3d 293 (2-year delay in filing and serving Doe amendments caused undue prejudice to defendants brought into litigation less than 1 month before trial).

Service of a copy of the original summons and complaint can be made on defendant if the summons bears on its face a notice stating in substance:

You are hereby served in this action as the person sued under the fictitious name _ _ _ _ _ _.

On service, see chap 17. Default judgment can be taken if a defendant so served does not answer. CCP §474. Filing the amendment and serving it on all parties gives them notice of the true identity of the defendant. However, service of the amendment appears not to be required. See Drotleff v Renshaw (1949) 34 C2d 176, 181, 208 P2d 969.

§16.15 E. Amendment After Demurrer Sustained

After a demurrer to a complaint has been sustained with leave to amend, plaintiff may file an amended complaint or amendment to the complaint without further motion. See chap 23. The time within which the amendment must be filed may be specified in the order sustaining the demurrer. See CCP §472a. If there is no specification of time in the order, plaintiff is considered to have been granted ten days within which to answer or amend (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1320(g)), beginning on the day notice of the ruling was served or waived (CCP §472b), unless the action is for forcible entry or detainer or unlawful detainer.

An order granting leave to amend after a demurrer is sustained is not a sanction of the amendment filed, which may be challenged by a further demurrer or motion. See People ex rel Dep't of Pub. Works v Clausen (1967) 248 CA2d 770, 785, 57 CR 227.

© The Regents of the University of California

§16.16 F. Oral Motion to Amend; Motions at Trial

When all parties are before the court, even at trial, the court can order a complaint amended at the oral request of the plaintiff. See McKee v Mires (1952) 110 CA2d 517, 522, 242 P2d 954 (amendment at trial to conform to proof).

NOTE: The court probably has power to effect amendment by minute order, although it is usual for a plaintiff to file and serve a written amendment or amended complaint. See Conroy v Perez (1944) 64 CA2d 217, 148 P2d 680 (order permitting amendment not itself an amendment).

If a motion granted during trial affects the manner in which the case is tried, or the theories on which it rests, the opposing party may be estopped from complaining of plaintiff's failure to file the amendment. Campagna v Market St. Ry. (1944) 24 C2d 304, 149 P2d 281. See also Steele v Conway (1955) 135 CA2d 363, 287 P2d 189.

For a discussion of motions to amend at trial to conform the allegations to the complaint to the proof made, see 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1209-1216 (5th ed 2008).

§16.17 G. Noticed Motion for Leave to Amend

Code of Civil Procedure §473(a)(1) provides that an amendment may be permitted by a court on such terms as may be just after notice to adverse parties. But see CCP §576, which does not mention notice in stating that a court may allow a pleading or pretrial order to be amended at any time in furtherance of justice. See also §16.13 on amendment without notice to correct formal mistakes.

Leave of court to file an amended complaint or amendment to a complaint is obtained by filing and serving a notice of motion for leave to amend accompanied by the proposed amendment; a supporting memorandum facts that justify the motion and the time it is made; and a form of the order sought. On noticed motion procedures, see chap 12.

If the purpose or grounds for the amendment are not evident from the nature or content of the amendment, a declaration containing the necessary information may be attached to show the facts that would support filing the amendment, although CCP §473 does not require a declaration or affidavit of merits. See Plummer v Superior Court (1963) 212 CA2d 841, 28 CR 294. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §1240 (5th ed 2008).

A motion to amend must (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(a)):

- Include a copy of the proposed amendment or amended pleading, which must be serially numbered to differentiate it from previous pleadings or amendments;
- State what allegations in the previous pleading are proposed to be deleted, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the deleted allegations are located; and
- State what allegations are proposed to be added to the previous pleading, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the additional allegations are located.

A separate declaration must accompany the motion and must specify (Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(b)):

- The effect of the amendment;
- Why the amendment is necessary and proper;
- When the facts giving rise to the amended allegations were discovered; and
- The reasons the request for amendment was not made earlier.

The court may deem a motion to file an amendment to a pleading to be a motion to file an amended pleading and require the filing of the entire previous pleading with the approved amendments incorporated into it. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(c).

An amendment to a pleading must not be made by alterations on the face of a pleading except by permission of the court. All alterations must be initialed by the court or the clerk. Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(d).

Motions to amend should be made promptly on discovery of the need to amend the complaint; the nearer to the trial the notice of motion is filed, the more reluctant the court may be to allow the amendment. Failure to ask for and to obtain leave to amend when leave is required is a ground for striking an amendment or an amended pleading. Stafford v Ballinger (1962) 199 CA2d 289, 297, 18 CR 568. See chap 24.

The court may not condition a leave to amend on the requirement that the moving party present evidence sufficient to withstand summary judgment in support of the amendment. Sanai v Saltz (2009) 170 CA4th 746, 769, 88 CR3d 673.

NOTE: Under CCP §425.13(a) (punitive damages in medical malpractice actions), motions to amend must be brought within 2 years after the filing of the complaint or less than 9 months before trial. See Freedman v Superior Court (2008) 166 CA4th 198, 82 CR3d 563.

§16.18 V. SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

A supplemental complaint brings to the notice of the court and other parties things that occurred after commencement of the action and that affect the rights asserted and relief asked in the action. CCP §464; California Farm & Fruit Co. v Schiappa-Pietra (1907) 151 C 732, 742, 91 P 593. See Earp v Nobmann (1981) 122 CA3d 270, 175 CR 767 (amendment to original complaint not proper; supplemental complaint necessary to set forth matters occurring after complaint filed), disapproved on other grounds in Silberg v Anderson (1990) 50 C3d 205, 219, 266 CR 638.

Unlike an amended complaint, a supplemental complaint does not supersede the original complaint; it adds new allegations that are to be considered in conjunction with the allegations of the previous complaint. See generally 5 Witkin, California Procedure, Pleading §§1246-1253 (5th ed 2008).

While CCP §464 requires leave of court for filing a supplemental complaint, the section does not specify that notice of motion must be given. Nonetheless, a plaintiff should, in all but exceptional cases, proceed by noticed motion. If the supplemental complaint alleges when the facts it avers occurred, there is no need to attach to the motion papers a declaration stating that the facts occurred after the original complaint was filed or that they are true.

A supplemental complaint should be captioned as was the original complaint (see chap 15), but an abbreviated title of the action can be used (see chap 11). The nature of the paper is given as SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT. If the new facts alleged entitle plaintiff to different or greater relief, a demand for relief (prayer) can be included. A possible source of resistance to the filing of the supplemental complaint can be avoided if the signature is the same as on the original complaint and the complaint is verified or not as was the original complaint. On complaints and the verification of complaints, see chap 15.

When a supplemental complaint is filed, the court clerk issues an amended or supplemental summons. The supplemental summons and complaint must be served in the same manner as required for initial service of a summons. CCP §464(c).

- Include a copy of the proposed amendment or amended pleading, which must be serially numbered to differentiate it from previous pleadings or amendments;
- State what allegations in the previous pleading are proposed to be deleted, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the deleted allegations are located; and
- State what allegations are proposed to be added to the previous pleading, if any, and where, by page, paragraph, and line number, the additional allegations are to be inserted.

A separate declaration must accompany the motion. For content requirements, see Cal Rules of Ct 3.1324(b); discussion in §16.17. A minimum of 15 days' notice is required, absent an order shortening the time within which to file a motion to amend. Proof of service must be filed with the court. CCP §465. A supporting memorandum must be served and filed with this notice of motion. See Cal Rules of Ct 3.1110-3.1113.

Note: The format of attorney-drafted court papers is governed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.100-2.119. For example, pleading paper (with consecutive line numbers at the left margin of each page) must be used. On the many specific details required, see chap 11 and the sample form in §11.35. On when preprinted Judicial Council forms must or may be filed with the court, see Cal Rules of Ct 1.30-1.44, 2.131-2.134 and the discussion in §11.27.

I. INTRODUCTION

§17.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the initial service of process in a civil action. The primary focus is the proper preparation and service of a summons. An overview is presented in §§17.3-17.5. Preparing summons is discussed in §§17.6-17.10, issuance of summons in §§17.11-17.13, serving summons in §§17.14-17.46, and return of service in §§17.47-17.61. A comprehensive procedural checklist is presented in §17.62, and forms in §§17.63-17.71.

NOTE: Technically, the word "process" signifies "a writ or summons issued in the course of judicial proceedings." CCP §17(b)(6). The word "writ" signifies "an order or precept in writing, issued in the name of the people, or of a court or judicial officer." CCP §17(b)(6). Thus, the word "process" includes such writs as subpoenas, temporary restraining orders, preliminary and permanent injunctions, and extraordinary writs and does not include complaints. Nevertheless, this chapter refers interchangeably to service of "process," service of a "summons," and service of a "summons and complaint." The chapter does not refer to writs, because a summons and complaint are generally the initial documents served in a civil action.

Related topics covered elsewhere in this book are serving papers after a party has been properly served with a summons or has appeared in an action (see chap 18) and challenging jurisdiction over the person (see chap 19).

§17.2 B. Governing Law

California's statutory requirements are usually found in the Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act (CCP §§410.10-418.11), but provisions regarding service may be found in other statutes addressing specific situations (see, e.g., Govt C §955.4 on service of process in actions against the state).

California's statutory requirements are generally more stringent than constitutional due process requirements. Consequently, constitutional issues regarding the sufficiency of the method of service seldom arise in California. See, e.g., Milliken v Meyer (1940) 311 US 457, 463, 85 L Ed 278, 61 S Ct 339.

II. OVERVIEW

§17.3 A. Relationship Between Service of Process and Jurisdiction

The service of process requirements constitute only one of the three basic jurisdictional prerequisites for a judgment entitled to full faith and credit under US Const art IV, §1:

- The court rendering the judgment must have jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action, i.e., the power or competence by statute or constitutional provision to hear and determine the particular case. On jurisdiction, see chap 6.
- The court must have personal jurisdiction over the defendant, i.e., the defendant either has made a general appearance or has had "certain minimum contacts with [the forum state] such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice'" (International Shoe Co. v Washington (1945) 326 US 310, 316, 90 L Ed 95, 66 S Ct 154). See chap 6 on bases for asserting personal jurisdiction and for discussion of general appearances.
- Service of process must have been accomplished in a manner reasonably calculated to give the defendant actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard. Milliken v Meyer (1940) 311 US 457, 463, 85 L Ed 278, 61 S Ct 339.

This chapter covers the third requirement, i.e., service of process that meets constitutional standards for fair notice and opportunity to respond.

§17.4 B. Requirements for Valid Service

In California, valid service of process requires satisfying both

- The minimum requirements under the United States Constitution; and
- California's statutory requirements.

The constitutional requirements for service of process derive from the Fourteenth Amendment's due process clause, which provides that a state may not deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. This general requirement has spawned the specific rule that the means of service used must be reasonably calculated to give a defendant actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard. Milliken v Meyer (1940) 311 US 457, 463, 85 L Ed 278, 61 S Ct 339.

§17.5 C. Effect of Failure to Make Proper Service

Failure to properly effect service is a jurisdictional defect. A defendant may raise this defect by:

- Moving to quash service of summons under CCP §418.10 (on motions to quash, see chap 19);
- Moving to vacate any resulting default or default judgment on lack of jurisdiction grounds;
- Moving for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve or to return summons (on dismissal, see chap 39); or
- Collaterally attacking the judgment.

When a defendant properly challenges service of process, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove the facts that give the court jurisdiction. Until the plaintiff makes at least a prima facie showing, the defendant need not offer any evidence whatever. Floveyor Int'l, Ltd. v Superior Court (1997) 59 CA4th 789, 69 CR2d 457.

When actual notice of the litigation has been received, however, courts have upheld jurisdiction notwithstanding a technically deficient manner of service at least when defendant had notice of the lawsuit and the time limitation for service had not passed. The provisions of CCP §§413.10-417.40 were intended by the legislature to be "liberally construed to effectuate service and uphold the jurisdiction of the court if actual notice has been received by the defendant, and in the last analysis the question of service should be resolved by considering each situation from a practical standpoint." Report of the Judicial Council's Special Committee on Jurisdiction 14-15 (1968), quoted with approval in Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. v Superior Court (1973) 9 C3d 773, 778, 108 CR 828; Hammer Collections Co. v Ironsides Computer Corp. (1985) 172 CA3d 899, 218 CR 627. When notice was not the relevant deficiency, however, courts have reached a contrary conclusion. See e.g., Renoir v Redstar Corp. (2004) 123 CA4th 1145, 1154, 20 CR3d 603 ("[b]ecause no summons was served on any of the defendants and the defendants did not generally appear in the proceeding, the trial court had no jurisdiction over them"); Schering Corp. v Superior Court (1975) 52 CA3d 737, 125 CR 337 (service defective when summons failed to indicate that defendant was being served on behalf of corporation and indicated instead that he was being served as Doe 1, who complaint alleged was physician).

NOTE: In Bishop v Silva (1991) 234 CA3d 1317, 285 CR 910, the court questioned whether service statutes were subject to a liberal construction, as stated in Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. v Superior Court, supra, after the amendment of CCP §583.240 in 1982. The Bishop court, however, was faced with technical service deficiencies and the passage of time for accomplishing service of process. Bishop ultimately decided that it lacked jurisdiction because the time limits of CCP §583.240 (not CCP §§413.10-417.40) must be strictly construed. Regardless, the lesson of Bishop and Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. is that attorneys should make strict compliance with both service requirements and service time limitations a top priority.

III. PREPARING SUMMONS

§17.6 A. Use of Judicial Council Forms

The content of a summons in a civil action is ordinarily governed by CCP §412.20. In practice, Judicial Council forms are generally used and are considered to comply with CCP §412.20 (CCP §412.20(c)).

The Judicial Council has adopted five summons forms for mandatory use by all courts whenever applicable (see Cal Rules of Ct 1.31(a); Cal Rules of Ct Appendix A):

- A summons for general use in most actions (see form in §17.63);
- A summons for use in joint debtor proceedings (see form in §17.66);
- A summons for use in unlawful detainer actions (see form in §17.67);
- A summons for use in marital proceedings under the Family Code (see form in §17.68); and
- A summons for joinder in marital proceedings under the Family Law Act (see form in §17.70).

These forms are generally available from court clerks, in the California Judicial Council Forms Manual (Cal CEB 1981), and in forms drafting software, such as CEB's SmartLaserä CD-ROM, which allows the user to view, print, and save the forms electronically.

For Judicial Council summons forms and comments on their preparation, see §§17.63, 17.66-17.70.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.7 B. Use of Attorney-Drafted Forms

Although the mandatory Judicial Council summons forms must be used "wherever applicable" (Cal Rules of Ct 1.31(a)), they are not designed for certain circumstances, e.g., eminent domain proceedings. The forms may not provide sufficient space when there are numerous plaintiffs or defendants, in which case an addendum to the printed form or a completely new form may be prepared. Practice in this regard, however, varies from court to court.

When preparing an original form, the drafter should ensure compliance with CCP §412.20 and conformity, to the extent possible, with the Judicial Council's printed summons form for general use (see §17.63). The original form should include the Judicial Council form's Spanish instruction, capitalization, and boldface type (or underlining). Although minor deviations from the requirements of CCP §412.20 or the Judicial Council form may not render service invalid (see Comment to CCP §412.20; Clark v Palmer (1891) 90 C 504, 27 P 375), every effort should be made to achieve strict compliance to avoid a potentially costly challenge by a served defendant.

The same number of copies should be prepared for an attorney-drafted form as for a Judicial Council form (see §17.63).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.8 C. Requirements in Particular Actions

The content of a summons in a civil action is governed by CCP §412.20 "[e]xcept as otherwise required by statute." The list below, which is not exhaustive, identifies some common statutes that vary from the usual form by requiring inclusion of different or additional matter in particular actions. A practitioner preparing a complaint based on a cause of action created by statute should consult the applicable code for any special requirements governing the form of summons.

- Fam C §§200, 2330(a), 2331, 2250 (marital dissolution, legal separation, or nullity proceedings; for mandatory Judicial Council form, see §17.68).
- CCP §751.05 (action to reestablish destroyed land records).
- CCP §801.6 (action to determine interest in, or liens or clouds on title to, real property affected by public improvement assessment).
- CCP §861.1 (action by public agency for validation of matters within its jurisdiction).
- CCP §§872.310-872.330 (action for partition of real or personal property).
- CCP §§990-991 (proceedings against joint debtors; for prescribed Judicial Council form, see §17.66).
- CCP §1167 (unlawful detainer proceedings; for prescribed Judicial Council form, see §17.67).
- CCP §§1250.120-1250.125 (eminent domain proceedings).
- Health & S C §17990 (10-day period for filing responsive pleadings in actions brought under State Housing Law (Health & S C §§17910-17995.5)).
- Rev & T C §3957 (action by purchaser of tax-deeded property to determine claims on property).
- Veh C §17462 (60-day time limit for defendant to appear in action for negligence against nonresident motorist served outside California; best practice in such an action appears to be for plaintiff's attorney to change summons to indicate that the defendant has 60 days in which to appear, instead of usual 30 days).
- Wat C §7008 (action for declaration of rights in jointly used wells, pumping plants, or conduits).

D. Additional Requirements for Particular Parties

§17.9 1. Action Against Corporation or Unincorporated Association

When a copy of a summons and complaint is served on a corporation or an unincorporated association (including a partnership), the summons must contain a notice informing the person served that he or she is being served on behalf of the business or other entity and, if the person is also being served individually, a notice that he or she is being served in both capacities. CCP §412.30.

The provisions of this statute are mandatory; service of a summons that does not comply is ineffective (Tresway Aero, Inc. v Superior Court (1971) 5 C3d 431, 96 CR 571 (decided under former CCP §410)), and no default may be entered against either the entity or the individual (CCP §412.30). A technically deficient service will be valid, however, when there is substantial compliance. For a case in which the court found substantial compliance, see Cory v Crocker Nat'l Bank (1981) 123 CA3d 665, 177 CR 150. For cases in which the courts acknowledged that substantial compliance is sufficient but found that the standard was not met on the facts presented, see MJS Enters. v Superior Court (1984) 153 CA3d 555, 200 CR 286; Schering Corp. v Superior Court (1975) 52 CA3d 737, 125 CR 337.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.10 2. Action Against Fictitiously Named Defendants

A copy of a summons served on a fictitiously named defendant under CCP §474 must contain a notice informing the person served that he or she is being served as, or on behalf of, the fictitiously named defendant, e.g., Doe 1. See Pelayo v J.J. Lee Mgmt. Co., Inc. (2009) 174 CA4th 484, 495, 94 CR3d 784. A default judgment may not be entered against the defendant unless such notice has been given. CCP §474. On requirements for proof of service on fictitiously named defendants, see §17.61.

© The Regents of the University of California

IV. ISSUANCE OF SUMMONS

§17.11 A. On Original Complaint

At any time after the complaint has been filed and any required filing fee has been paid, the court clerk will issue the original summons on the plaintiff's request. CCP §412.10.

The summons is prepared by counsel and submitted for issuance to the clerk, who inserts the issuance date and affixes his or her signature or stamp. The court seal may also be affixed at the time of issuance. Many courts supply blank Judicial Council forms, however, with the court seal already imprinted. The clerk conforms copies of the summons, generally by stamping his or her signature and the date of issuance on each. The plaintiff may also have an additional summons issued at any time during the action.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.12 B. On Amended or Supplemental Complaint

Because the jurisdiction of the court in which the action is pending over a defendant who has been properly served with summons continues throughout subsequent proceedings in the action (CCP §410.50), the plaintiff need not obtain an additional summons to serve on the defendant when the complaint is amended. In such cases, service is made without summons, usually by mailing a copy of the amended complaint to the defendant or the defendant's attorney. See CCP §§465, 1010-1020. When the complaint is amended to add a new defendant (not substituting the defendant's true name for a "Doe"), however, the plaintiff must obtain a summons on amended complaint for service on the new defendant because the original summons does not name the defendant. W.H. Marston Co. v Kochritz (1926) 80 CA 352, 251 P 959. See Gillette v Burbank Community Hosp. (1976) 56 CA3d 430, 128 CR 636 (summons on amended complaint unnecessary when amended complaint was identical to original and added no new parties). In addition, if the defendant's name is changed in any manner in the amended complaint (e.g., by omitting a middle initial), some courts require the plaintiff to obtain a new summons in which the defendant's name matches that stated in the amended complaint.

It is uncertain whether a summons on an amended complaint is required for a previously named defendant when a complaint is amended before any service. See Dowling v Comerford (1893) 99 C 204, 33 P 853. Hence, the safer practice is for the plaintiff to have such a summons issued for service with the amended pleading. See Comment to CCP §412.10. See also Gillette v Burbank Community Hosp., supra.

When a supplemental complaint is filed, CCP §465 does not apply, because the court clerk is required to issue an amended or supplemental summons. CCP §464(c). The supplemental summons and complaint must be served in the same manner as required for initial service of a summons. CCP §464(c).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.13 C. Lost Summons

The clerk is instructed to keep the original summons in the court records, and provide a copy of each summons issued to the plaintiff who made the issuance request. CCP §412.10. Thus, when a summons is lost before service, the plaintiff should have retained a copy of the original summons under CCP §412.10. The former distinction between an original summons and a substitute or "alias" summons has been eliminated. See Comment to CCP §412.10.

On loss of summons after service, see §17.49.

V. SERVING SUMMONS

§17.14 A. Persons Who May Serve Summons

A summons may be served by any person who is at least age 18 and is not a party to the action. CCP §414.10. Thus, service may be made by any duly qualified and acting sheriff or marshal of any county in the state (Govt C §26665); a professional process server; or even the plaintiff's attorney or other agent (Shee-han v All Persons (1926) 80 CA 393, 252 P 337). The practice of using the plaintiff's attorney, employee, or other agent, however, is not recommended.

Service by a registered process server has one advantage over other methods. Evidence Code §647 provides that a registered process server's return establishes a presumption of the facts stated in the return.

A professional process server is governed by certain statutes concerning registration and business conduct. See Bus & P C §§22350-22360. Failure to comply with any of these requirements, however, will not invalidate an otherwise proper service. CCP §413.40.

§17.15 B. Fees

A sheriff or marshal may charge $35 for service of process. Govt C §§26720.9, 26721, 26721.1. Other process servers' fees are not limited and are often higher. Fees for service are recoverable as costs. CCP §1033.5(a)(4)(A)-(B), (D).

§17.16 C. Time for Service

Before the introduction of delay reduction rules under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620), timing of service was limited only by mandatory dismissal under CCP §583.210 (service not made within 3 years after commencement of action against defendant) and discretionary dismissal under CCP §583.420(a)(1) (2 years). It has not yet been decided whether these time periods on an amended complaint run from the date on which the amended complaint is filed. See Washington v Nelson (1979) 100 CA3d 47, 160 CR 644 (under former CCP §581a, 3-year period for service of amended complaint ran from date amended complaint filed).

Time during which the defendant was not amenable to service of process is not included in the 3-year period. CCP §583.240(a). Time during which the action is stayed is not included if the stay affects service. CCP §583.240(b). Likewise, time during which the validity of the service is being litigated (CCP §583.240(c)) and time during which service was impossible, impracticable, or futile for reasons beyond the plaintiff's control (CCP §583.240(d)) are not included.

Under authority of Govt C §§68608 and 68612, courts have published local rules on the timing of service of process. Local rules cannot reduce the time for service of the complaint to fewer than 60 days after the complaint is filed. Govt C §68616(a). Exceptions for longer periods must be granted when the plaintiff shows that service could not reasonably be accomplished within the delay reduction deadlines, despite diligent efforts consistent with the amount in controversy. Govt C §68616(a).

Before filing a complaint, counsel should consult the local rules on the timing of service of process. Juvenile, probate, and family law cases are generally exempt, but the specific exemptions vary from county to county. If local delay reduction rules will apply, counsel must become familiar with them or engage local counsel for this purpose. The general thrust of these rules is to speed up litigation, including the time for service. Thus, counsel filing a complaint subject to delay reduction rules should anticipate any potential difficulties with service of process and attempt to minimize them before filing the complaint (e.g., ascertain any unknown names, addresses, capacities, or business statuses of defendants and confirm any uncertain ones). Counsel should ensure that the process server is diligent in attempting service and maintains records sufficient to demonstrate diligence, if necessary. On delay reduction generally, see chap 40.

The complaint must be served on all named defendants and proofs of service on those defendants must be filed with the court within 60 days after the complaint is filed. When the complaint is amended to add a defendant, that defendant must be served and proof of service must be filed within 30 days after the amended complaint is filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(a)-(b) (not applicable to unlawful detainer, family law proceedings, or proceedings with different service requirements prescribed by law). The court, on its own motion or on the application of a party, may extend or otherwise modify the time provided in Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(b).

A cross-complaint against a party who has appeared in the action must be accompanied by proof of service of the cross-complaint at the time it is filed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(c). An application for a court order extending the time to serve a pleading must be filed before the time for service has elapsed. The application must be accompanied by a declaration showing why service has not been effected, documenting the efforts that have been made to effect service, and specifying the date by which service is proposed to be effected. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(e). Unless the court has granted an order extending the time to serve a complaint or cross-complaint, the failure to serve and file pleadings as required under this rule may result in an Order to Show Cause (OSC) being issued as to why sanctions shall not be imposed. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(f). When the court issues an OSC under this rule, responsive papers to the OSC must be filed and served no less than 5 calendar days before the hearing. Cal Rules of Ct 3.110(i).

D. Persons and Entities on Whom Summons May Be Served

1. Individuals

§17.17 a. Basic Rule

A summons may be served on an individual by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the individual or to someone else authorized by the individual to receive service of process. CCP §416.90. On service on minors and conservatees, see §17.24.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.18 b. Determination of Agency for Purposes of Service

Whether a person has been authorized by a defendant to receive service of summons under CCP §416.90 is determined by common law agency principles of actual and ostensible authority and of ratification (see generally 3 Witkin, Summary of California Law, Agency and Employment §§130-149 (10th ed 2005)) and is unrelated to statutory agents for service of process under Corp C §2105.

An attorney is not necessarily considered an agent for service of process on behalf of a client simply because of present or prior representation of the client related to the subject matter of the litigation. See Wilson v Eddy (1969) 2 CA3d 613, 82 CR 826. Service by delivery to an attorney is valid, however, when the facts establish the necessary authority or ratification. See Warner Bros. Records v Golden W. Music Sales (1974) 36 CA3d 1012, 1017, 112 CR 71 (specific appointment not required when nature of relationship makes it highly probable defendant will receive actual notice).

Service of documents on an agent unauthorized to receive service however, does not constitute effective service, even though the documents eventually "make their way to counsel." Summers v McClanahan (2006) 140 CA4th 403, 44 CR3d 338. In Summers, the summons and complaint were left with defendant's personal manager who, although not authorized to receive service, forwarded the documents to counsel. The court, reversing the trial court's decision that notice was given because the documents made it to the defendant, held that even though the service provisions of CCP §416.90 should be liberally construed (Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. v Superior Court (1973) 9 C3d 773, 108 CR 828), service on a person unauthorized to receive service did not substantially comply with the statute. The court rejected plaintiff's reliance on Warner Bros. Records v Golden W. Music Sales, supra; the two cases were similar only because service ultimately resulted in notice of the action in both cases. The court was not aware of any California case that upheld service of process "solely on the ground that defendant received actual notice when there was a complete failure to comply with the statutory requirements." Summers, 140 CA4th at 414.

§17.19 2. Corporations

A domestic or foreign corporation may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint:

- To the president or other head of the corporation, a vice president, a secretary or assistant secretary, a treasurer or assistant treasurer, a general manager, chief executive officer, controller, chief financial officer, or a person authorized by the corporation to receive service of process (CCP §416.10(b));
- To the person designated as agent for service of process as provided in Corp C §§1502(b), 2105(a)(4)-(5), 2105(c), and 2107(d) (or in former Corp C §§3301-3303 and 6500-6504 as in effect on December 31, 1976, with respect to corporations to which they remain applicable) (CCP §416.10(a));
- To a cashier or assistant cashier if the corporation is a bank (CCP §416.10(c)); or
- As authorized and provided by Corp C §§1701-1702 and 2110-2111 (or by former Corp C §§3301-3303 and 6500-6504 as in effect on December 31, 1976, with respect to corporations to which they remain applicable) (CCP §416.10(d)).

Service of summons on a corporation by delivery to one of the individuals specified in CCP §416.10(b) or Corp C §2110(a) may be made even when the individual is not actually the holder of the title as long as he or she is the ostensible holder. See Pasadena Medi-Center Assocs. v Superior Court (1973) 9 C3d 773, 108 CR 828 (service held valid on corporate employee who, although not secretary-treasurer, was held out as such to public by corporation).

Corporations Code §1502(a) requires each domestic corporation to file and update the names and addresses of its principal officers as well as the address of the corporation's principal office. This information is available from the Secretary of State's office. Although foreign corporations are not required to file such a list, those that transact intrastate business must designate a local agent to receive service of process. Corp C §2105(a)(4).

Although the cases defining "general manager" are not entirely consistent, the courts probably will view the term somewhat broadly, especially when the particular person is the only corporate representative available to accept service within California. Compare Cosper v Smith & Wesson Arms Co. (1959) 53 C2d 77, 346 P2d 409 (manufacturer's representative was general manager), with General Motors Corp. v Superior Court (1971) 15 CA3d 81, 93 CR 148 (customer relations manager was not general manager). Thus, for example, a corporation that was suspended by the Secretary of State, and had no designated agent for service of process, but operated as an ongoing business was validly served by service on the general manager of its regional office. Gibble v Car-Lene Research, Inc. (1998) 67 CA4th 295, 78 CR2d 892. Similarly, service on the agent for service of process for a foreign corporation's wholly-owned subsidiary and exclusive importer and distributor in California was proper service on parent's "general manager in the state" under Corp C §2110(a). Yamaha Motor Co., LTD v Superior Court (2009) 174 CA4th 264, 94 CR3d 494.

Because of the variety of means by which service of process may be made on a corporation under CCP §416.10, it should rarely be necessary to serve the corporation by serving the Secretary of State. See 3 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions §§1048, 1050 (5th ed 2008), for discussion of procedures for such service.

§17.20 3. Defunct Corporations

A corporation that has forfeited its charter or right to do business or that has dissolved may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint:

- To a person who is a trustee of the corporation and of its stockholders or members (CCP §416.20(a); North Am. Asbestos Corp. v Superior Court (1982) 128 CA3d 138, 142, 179 CR 889, 890); or
- As authorized and provided by Corp C §§2011 and 2114 (or by former Corp C §§3301-3303 and 6500-6504 as in effect on December 31, 1976, with respect to corporations to which they remain applicable) (CCP §416.20(b)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.21 4. Joint Stock Companies

A joint stock company or association may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint as provided by CCP §416.10 (governing service on corporations; see §17.19) or by CCP §416.20 (governing service on defunct corporations; see §17.20). CCP §416.30.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.22 5. Partnerships and Other Unincorporated Associations

The rules governing service of summons on an unincorporated association, including a partnership, closely parallel those governing service of summons on a corporation (see §17.19). On the definition of "unincorporated association," see Corp C §18035(a). See also White v Cox (1971) 17 CA3d 824, 95 CR 259 (condominium is unincorporated association).

A general or limited partnership may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the person designated as agent for service of process under Corp C §15800 or to a general partner or the general manager of the partnership. CCP §416.40(a). See §17.19 for discussion of who is a general manager.

If it is shown satisfactorily by affidavit that process cannot be served with reasonable diligence on the designated agent for a partnership by hand, the court may order that service be made on a partnership by delivering the summons and complaint, accompanied by the order authorizing service, to the Secretary of State or any deputy or assistant in the Secretary of State's office. Corp C §16310(d). Service must be complete on the 10th day after delivery to the Secretary of State. Corp C §16310(d).

An association that is not a partnership may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to its designated agent for service of process under Corp C §18200, the president or other head of the association, a vice president, a secretary or assistant secretary, a treasurer or assistant treasurer, a general manager, or a person authorized by the association to receive service of process. CCP §416.40(b).

When an agent has not been designated, or when the agent cannot with reasonable diligence be found at the address provided by the association to the Secretary of State, and it is satisfactorily shown by affidavit that process cannot be served with reasonable diligence on either the agent by hand or the association under CCP §§415.10, 415.20(a), or 415.30, service may be made under court order by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to any one or more of the association's members designated in the order and by mailing copies to the association at its last known address. CCP §416.40(c); Corp C §18220.

§17.23 6. Public Entities

A public entity may be served with a summons by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to the clerk, secretary, president, presiding officer, or other head of its governing body. CCP §416.50(a). The term "public entity" includes the state and any office, department, division, bureau, board, commission, or agency of the state, the Regents of the University of California, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision or public corporation in California. CCP §416.50(b).

Names, titles, and addresses of the officials to whom delivery may be made for all public entities except the state, cities, and counties are required to be submitted to the Secretary of State and county clerks and are available from them in a Roster of Public Agencies. Govt C §§53050-53051. If an entity fails to furnish this information in proper form, or if the persons to be served cannot be personally served with due diligence, the court may permit service to be made on the Secretary of State. Govt C §§960.2-960.3. On manner of service, see Govt C §960.3.

Certain statutes provide for service of summons in specific actions to be made on a public entity in a manner other than as prescribed by CCP §416.50, e.g., by delivery to the Attorney General (see Govt C §955.4) or to the State Controller (see Rev & T C §16252). See §17.45 for a list of these statutes. For a holding that Govt C §955.4, as a specific statute, controls over the more general provisions of CCP §416.50, see House v State (1981) 119 CA3d 861, 873 n9, 174 CR 279. For discussion of the relationship between such statutes and provisions of Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act (CCP §§410.10-418.11) generally, see §17.44.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.24 7. Minors and Conservatees

A summons may be served on a minor by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to:

- His or her parent or to his or her guardian or similar fiduciary; or
- If no such person can be found with reasonable diligence, any person having the care or control of the minor or with whom the minor resides or by whom the minor is employed.

CCP §416.60. A minor is any person under age 18. Fam C §6500. If the minor is at least age 12, a copy of the summons and complaint must also be delivered to him or her. CCP §416.60.

A summons may be served on an adult for whom a conservator or similar fiduciary has been appointed by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to both the conservator or similar fiduciary and the individual. CCP §416.70. When good cause is shown (e.g., when the individual is unable to comprehend the nature of the documents being served or would suffer severe mental harm from the service), the court may dispense with the requirement that delivery be made to him or her. CCP §416.70. Compare CCP §416.70 with Prob C §1210, which permits service on the conservator of the estate alone of any process, notice, or court order concerning a decedent's estate in which a conservatee has an interest.

The attorney should keep in mind that whenever delivery of a copy of a summons and complaint to two or more persons is required for valid service, as it may be under CCP §§416.60-416.70, different methods of service may be used. For example, under CCP §416.60, a parent may be served personally (see §§17.27-17.29) and a minor by substituted service (see §17.31) without affecting the validity of service. See Comment to CCP §415.20.

§17.25 8. Political Candidates

When the action is unrelated to running for office, a candidate for public office may be served in the same manner as any other individual. When the action relates to election laws or the candidate's campaign, however, Elec C §12 (former Elec C §49; CCP §416.80, which incorporated by reference former §49, was amended incorrectly to refer to Elec C §11 instead of §12) permits service under court order on a candidate in a California election who cannot be personally served with process after reasonable diligence by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint to the Secretary of State or a county clerk.

§17.25A 9. Prisoners

A prisoner may be served with summons by serving the sheriff or jailer who has custody of the prisoner. Sakaguchi v Sakaguchi (2009) 173 CA4th 852, 858, 92 CR3d 717. See CCP §416.90 (service on person's agent effectuates service on person if agent authorized to receive service of process); Pen C §4013 (sheriff or jailer authorized to receive service of process on behalf of person in his or her custody). Service on the sheriff or jailer may be made by mail under §CCP 415.30. 173 CA4th at 859. See §17.35.

E. Manner of Service

1. Within California

§17.26 a. Available Methods

Ordinarily, service of summons is made within California by personal service (CCP §415.10; see §§17.27-17.29), substituted service (CCP §415.20; see §§17.30-17.31), service by mail and acknowledgment of receipt (CCP §415.30; see §§17.32-17.35), or service by publication when the plaintiff cannot with reasonable diligence serve the defendant by any of the other methods listed here (CCP §415.50; see §17.36). Other provisions, however, apply in particular circumstances. See §§17.41-17.42 (unlawful detainer actions), 17.43 (no procedure provided), 17.44-17.46 (statutory provisions outside Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.27 b. Personal Service

A summons may be served by personal delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint to the person to be served. CCP §415.10. Personal service is considered to be complete at the time of delivery, so that the 30-day period for filing a responsive pleading (see CCP §412.20(a)(3)) begins to run from that date. The date on which service is made is required to be entered on or attached to the face of the copy of the summons at the time of service, but a summons served without the date is nevertheless valid and effective. CCP §415.10.

There is no requirement that the process server identify himself or herself to the person being served or disclose the nature of the documents being delivered (Sorrell v Superior Court (1946) 73 CA2d 194, 201, 166 P2d 80), but the better practice is to do so, particularly when serving an agent on behalf of his or her principal (see §17.18). A representative of the county sheriff or marshal or a registered process server must now be permitted to enter a gated community for a reasonable period to serve process or a subpoena. CCP §415.21. See §17.28 on disclosure when actual physical delivery is prevented by person being served.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.28 (1) Sufficiency of Attempted Delivery

"Personal delivery" as used in CCP §415.10 usually requires actual physical delivery of the summons and complaint by the process server to the person served while in each other's presence. Sternbeck v Buck (1957) 148 CA2d 829, 832, 307 P2d 970. Actual delivery is not necessary, however, when the person to be served is in physical proximity to the process server but refuses to accept delivery. In such cases, CCP §415.10 is sufficiently complied with if the process server reasonably attempts to make actual delivery but is prevented from doing so. The summons and complaint should be left in as close proximity to the person as is feasible under the circumstances and he or she should be made aware of their location. The process server should also attempt to inform the person served of the nature of the documents. See, e.g., Trujillo v Trujillo (1945) 71 CA2d 257, 162 P2d 640 (process server attempted to inform defendant of nature of documents through window of defendant's car and placed papers under windshield wiper); In re Ball (1934) 2 CA2d 578, 38 P2d 411 (process server, who had previously served defendant at same location, approached within 12 feet of defendant and stated "I have here another one of those things for you," then tossed papers toward defendant as defendant walked away).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.29 (2) Effect of Concealment

Sometimes a defendant conceals himself or herself from the person attempting personal service (e.g., separated by a door that the defendant refuses to open), perhaps making it difficult to prove his or her identity if the papers are left nearby.

PRACTICE TIP: When a defendant is concealed from the process server, substituted service (CCP §415.20; see §§17.30-17.31) may be used (i.e., leaving the papers at the residence or business of the person to be served).

c. Substituted Service

§17.30 (1) On Business and Other Entities

Code of Civil Procedure §415.20(a) sets forth a method for effecting "substituted service" of a summons and complaint (i.e., a substitute for personal delivery under CCP §415.10; see §§17.27-17.29) on business and other entities, including corporations (see CCP §416.10), defunct corporations (see CCP §416.20), joint stock companies (see CCP §416.30), partnerships and unincorporated associations (see CCP §416.40), and public entities (see CCP §416.50).

Substituted service under CCP §415.20(a) is effected by:

- Leaving a copy of the summons and complaint during usual office hours in the office of the person to be served or, if no physical address is known, at his or her usual mailing address, other than a United States Postal Service post office box, with the person apparently in charge of the office; and
- Mailing a copy of the summons and complaint (by first-class mail, postage prepaid), addressed to the person to be served at the place where a copy of the summons and complaint was left.

When service is effected by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at a mailing address, it must be left with a person at least 18 years of age, who must be informed of its contents. CCP §415.20(a).

Properly effected substituted service is considered to be complete on the tenth day after the date of mailing (CCP §415.20(a)), and therefore a responsive pleading must be filed by the defendant within 40 days (10 plus 30) after the date of mailing (see CCP §412.20(a)(3)). The provisions of CCP §1013 extending the time for filing a responsive pleading when service of papers is made by mail do not apply to computation of this time period. CCP §413.20.

The office of the person to be served, referred to in CCP §415.20(a), is not necessarily the office of the entity. The term "usual office hours" means that delivery must be made during the hours that the person to be served is normally at his or her office or during the normally functioning hours of the office. The "person who is apparently in charge" (CCP §415.20(a)) of the office need not be the person actually in charge as long as he or she reasonably appears to the process server to be in charge. The person may under certain circumstances be the personal secretary of the person to be served (see Comment to CCP §415.20) or may even be a receptionist or similar employee in situations in which access to the personal secretary is denied. See Ludka v Memory Magnetics Int'l (1972) 25 CA3d 316, 101 CR 615 (service proper under CCP §415.20 when process server left papers on table in common reception area of corporate defendant and mailed copy to same place).

A summons may be served on a business organization, form unknown, by leaving a copy of the summons and complaint during usual office hours with the person who is apparently in charge of the office of that business organization, and by thereafter mailing a copy of the summons and complaint by first-class mail, postage prepaid, to the person to be served at the place where a copy of the summons and complaint was left. Service of a summons in this manner is considered complete on the 10th day after mailing. CCP §415.95(a).

Service of a summons under CCP §415.95 is not valid for a corporation with a registered agent for service of process listed with the Secretary of State. CCP §415.95(b).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.31 (2) On Natural Persons

The method for effecting substituted service on natural persons (i.e., those persons specified in CCP §§416.60-416.90) is set forth in CCP §415.20(b) and, with one major exception, is similar to that for effecting substituted service on business and other entities (see §17.30). The major exception is that natural persons may not be served in this manner unless the plaintiff has, "with reasonable diligence," first attempted to effect personal service (see §§17.27-17.29).

If a defendant challenges substituted service, the burden is on the plaintiff to show that reasonable attempts to effect personal service were made; each case must be judged on its own facts. Evartt v Superior Court (1979) 89 CA3d 795, 801, 152 CR 836. Compare Espindola v Nunez (1988) 199 CA3d 1389, 245 CR 596 (substituted service permitted when, after three unsuccessful attempts to serve defendant at his residence shortly after plaintiff learned where defendant lived, process server left papers at residence with defendant's wife), with Evartt v Superior Court, supra (substituted service rejected when plaintiff waited until three days before expiration of three-year period under former CCP §581a (substance continued in CCP §583.210(a)) to attempt service and, finding defendant away on vacation, left papers with defendant's house sitter). Ordinarily, three attempts at personal service at a proper place should fully satisfy the requirement of reasonable diligence and allow substituted service to be made. However, if a process server attempts to serve defendants at an address and notices that the mail is addressed to a different party and the guard tells him that the defendants have moved, it would be futile for the process server to return to that address two more times to attempt service. Ellard v Conway (2001) 94 CA4th 540, 545, 114 CR2d 399.

Substituted service under CCP §415.20(b) is effected by:

- Leaving a copy of the summons and complaint at the dwelling house, usual place of abode, usual place of business, or usual mailing address (other than a United States Postal Service post office box) of the person to be served, in the presence of a person at least age 18 who is either a competent member of the household or a person apparently in charge of the office, place of business, or mailing address, and informing the person of the contents; and
- Mailing a copy of the summons and complaint (by first-class mail, postage prepaid), addressed to the person to be served at the place where a copy of the summons and complaint was left.

Substituted service is authorized at a private/commercial post office box rental store. Hearn v Howard (2009) 177 CA4th 1193, 1203, 99 CR3d 642, citing Ellard v Conway (2001) 94 CA4th 540, 546, 114 CR2d 399.

Properly effected substituted service is considered to be complete on the tenth day after the date of mailing (CCP §415.20(b)), and the time for filing a responsive pleading is the same as for substituted service on business and other entities (see §17.30).

On the meaning of terms used in CCP §415.20(b), see Note, Substituted Service of Process on Individuals: Code of Civil Procedure Section 415.20(b), 21 Hastings LJ 1257, 1261 (1970).

d. Service by Mail and Acknowledgment of Receipt

§17.32 (1) Procedure

Code of Civil Procedure §415.30 sets forth how a plaintiff may effect service by mailing a copy of the summons and complaint to the person to be served. This method should not be confused with service by mail and return receipt under CCP §415.40 (see §17.38), which is available only when the person to be served is outside California. Service under CCP §415.30 is effected by:

- Mailing (by first-class mail, postage prepaid) a copy of the summons and complaint, two copies of a notice and acknowledgment of receipt (see form in §17.65), and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the person to be served; and
- Having the person to be served complete and sign one copy of the acknowledgment of receipt and return it to the sender.

If the person to be served completes and signs the acknowledgment of receipt and returns it to the sender, service is considered to be complete on the date of signing. CCP §415.30(c). Thus, a defendant who is served in this manner must file a responsive pleading within 30 days after the date of execution of the form. See CCP §412.20(a)(3). The provisions of CCP §1013, which would otherwise extend the time for filing a responsive pleading, do not apply to the computation of this time period. CCP §413.20.

PRACTICE TIP: In most instances, it is sound to attempt service initially by mail and acknowledgment of receipt because the approach saves costs if the defendant cooperates and may facilitate recovery of expenses of service if the defendant does not cooperate. The approach should not be used, however, (a) when prompt service is essential or (b) when the person to be served is unaware of the filing of the action and likely to make service difficult after being informed of the action by receipt of the notice form.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.33 (2) Form of Notice and Acknowledgment of Receipt

The form and content of the notice required when summons is served by mail under CCP §415.30 (see §17.32) are governed by CCP §415.30(b). Counsel should routinely use the form of Notice and Acknowledgement of Receipt (Judicial Council Form POS-015) (see §17.65) because it must be used whenever applicable (Cal Rules of Ct 1.31) and is considered to be in compliance with the requirements of CCP §415.30(b) (CCP §415.30(e)).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.34 (3) Effect of Execution and Return

The execution and return of an acknowledgment of receipt simply acknowledges receipt of the documents. It should not be viewed as an acknowledgment that service has been properly made or as constituting a general appearance (see CCP §1014). By executing and returning the acknowledgment of receipt, a party does not consent to the court's personal jurisdiction over him or her. Marriage of Merideth (1982) 129 CA3d 356, 180 CR 909.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.35 (4) Effect of Failure to Respond

When the person to be served does not execute and return the acknowledgment of receipt, the plaintiff must resort to another means of service. When a defendant does not complete, sign, and return the acknowledgment to the plaintiff within 20 days after mailing, however, the defendant is liable to the plaintiff for the reasonable expenses incurred in serving or attempting to serve the summons in any other permissible manner. Except for good cause shown, such expenses are recoverable on a motion, with or without notice and whether or not the moving party is otherwise entitled to recover costs in the action. CCP §415.30(d).

NOTE: In Sakaguchi v Sakaguchi (2009) 173 CA4th 852, 859, 92 CR3d 717, the court found that a prisoner's failure to return the acknowledgment of receipt did not affect the validity of the service in view of Pen C §4013, which expressly authorizes service by mail on the sheriff or jailer having custody of the prisoner.

§17.36 e. Service by Publication

A plaintiff may effect service by publication when it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the party to be served cannot with reasonable diligence be served by another method specified in CCP §§415.10-415.50. CCP §415.50. Reasonable diligence requires an effort such as a reasonable person who truly desired to give notice would have made under the circumstances. Donel, Inc. v Badalian (1978) 87 CA3d 327, 333, 150 CR 855. As a condition of establishing that the party to be served cannot with reasonable diligence be served in another manner specified in this article (CCP §§415.10-415.50, providing for manner of service of summons), the court may not require that a search be conducted of public databases where access by a registered process server to residential addresses is prohibited by law or by published policy of the agency providing the database, including, but not limited to, voter registration rolls and records of the department of motor vehicles. CCP §415.50(e).

WARNING: Failure to conduct a reasonably diligent search to ascertain the defendant's address, e.g., by investigating city and county directories, utility companies, employers, friends, acquaintances, and relatives is grounds for setting aside the default and default judgment. Slusher v Durrer (1977) 69 CA3d 747, 138 CR 265. A party who has not received actual notice may move to set aside a default or default judgment up to 2 years after entry of the default judgment under CCP §473.5. If the defendant simultaneously moves to quash service because the publication order was not based on sufficient evidence of "reasonable diligence," and the motion is granted more than 3 years after the filing of the complaint, the complaint will be subject to mandatory dismissal under CCP §583.210. However, courts are reluctant to grant such motions since the court already has made a finding of reasonable diligence when it granted the publication order.

In addition to the reasonable diligence requirement, the court must find that:

- A cause of action exists against the party to be served or the party is a necessary or proper party to the action (CCP §415.50(a)(1)); or
- The party has or claims an interest in real or personal property in California that is subject to the court's jurisdiction or the relief demanded would exclude the party from any interest in such property (CCP §415.50(a)(2)).

A plaintiff seeking an order permitting service by publication should prepare an ex parte application for an order for publication of summons, a declaration in support of the application, a brief memorandum, and an order for publication of summons. The declaration must set forth facts establishing both the requisite reasonable diligence and that the requirement of CCP §415.50(a) noted above is met. Harris v Cavasso (1977) 68 CA3d 723, 137 CR 410 (affidavit for order for publication of summons insufficient for failure to show that cause of action exists).

WARNING: The order permitting service by publication should be obtained early enough so that service can be completed before the three-year period for service of process expires. The finding required for service by publication, that a party cannot with reasonable diligence be served by another method, is not the same as a finding that the "defendant was not amenable to the process of the court" for purposes of computing the time within which service must be made under CCP §583.240(a), and does not toll the time to bring the case to trial under CCP §583.340. Watts v Crawford (1995) 10 C4th 743, 42 CR2d 81 (case dismissed for failure to serve within 3 years when order for publication issued one day before expiration of 3-year period).

The order allowing service by publication must (1) order the summons published in a named California newspaper that is most likely to give notice to the party to be served and (2) direct that a copy of the summons, the complaint, and the publication order be mailed "forthwith" to the party if his or her address is determined before the end of the publication period. If the party to be served resides or is located out of state, the court may also order the summons to be published in a named newspaper outside this state that is most likely to give actual notice to that party. CCP §415.50(b). As a practical matter, most attorneys choose to have the notice published in a legal newspaper. On the meaning of "forthwith," see Anderson v Goff (1887) 72 C 65, 73, 13 P 73.

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the summons must be published once a week for four successive weeks unless the court orders a longer period. CCP §415.50(b); Govt C §6064. The publication notice period starts with the first day of publication and consists of 28 consecutive days, including the first day of publication. Govt C §6064. Service is considered to be complete on the 28th day. CCP §415.50(c); Govt C §6064. A responsive pleading must be filed within 30 days after that date. See CCP §412.20(a)(3).

If it becomes possible to serve the defendant by another method specified in CCP §§415.10-415.50, the plaintiff may do so and the service will supersede any published summons. CCP §415.50(d).

2. Outside California

a. Within United States

§17.37 (1) Basic Rule

Service of a summons and complaint in connection with a California action may be made outside California but within the United States (CCP §413.10(b)):

- In any manner provided by CCP §§415.10-415.50, including personal service (see §§17.27-17.29), substituted service (see §§17.30-17.31), service by mail and acknowledgment of receipt (see §§17.32-17.35), service by mail and return receipt (see §17.38), and service by publication (see §17.36); or
- As prescribed by the law of the place where the person is served (see §17.39).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.38 (2) Service by Mail and Return Receipt

Service by mail and return receipt under CCP §415.40 is probably the most widely used method for service outside California. This method should not be confused with service by mail and acknowledgment of receipt under CCP §415.30 (see §§17.32-17.35), available whether the person to be served is within or outside California. Service under CCP §415.40 is attempted by sending a copy of the summons and complaint to the person to be served by first-class mail requiring a return receipt.

If the return receipt is returned without signature because the mail was not accepted, service under CCP §415.40 will not have been made. Stamps v Superior Court (1971) 14 CA3d 108, 92 CR 151.

If the return receipt is signed, the signer need not necessarily be the person to be served. See Cruz v Fagor Am., Inc. (2007) 146 CA4th 488, 496, 52 CR3d 862 (return receipt signed by employee authorized to receive corporate mail addressed to chairman); Marriage of Tusinger (1985) 170 CA3d 80, 215 CR 838 (mother of party to be served signed return receipt and party's attorney indicated in letter to opposing counsel that party had received papers); Neadeau v Foster (1982) 129 CA3d 234, 180 CR 806 (return receipt was signed by office manager of party to be served who was authorized to sign for and accept mail addressed to party).

Service is considered to be complete on the tenth day after the date of mailing (CCP §415.40), and the defendant must file a responsive pleading within 40 days (10 plus 30) after the date of mailing (see CCP §412.20(a)(3)). The provisions of CCP §1013 do not apply to further extend the time. CCP §413.20.

Source: Civil Litigation/California Civil Procedure Before Trial/17 Service of Summons/§17.39 (3) Service as Prescribed by Local Law

§17.39 (3) Service as Prescribed by Local Law

Code of Civil Procedure §413.10(b) permits service to be made outside California but within the United States in accordance with the law of the place where service is made.

PRACTICE TIP: In some instances, service in another state may be easier to effect in accordance with the law of that state than under California law. Consequently, when service is to be made in another state, counsel should check, and consider using, the law of that state.

Four points should be made in connection with CCP §413.10(b):

- If local law provides less stringent service requirements, California counsel may wish to take advantage of them. For example, in some states a plaintiff may effect substituted service on an individual without first attempting personal service with reasonable diligence. Compare CCP §415.20(b), discussed in §17.31.
- The person to be served in other jurisdictions may differ from California requirements. For example, California counsel can take advantage of local law that permits service to be made on a limited partnership by serving a limited partner even though such service would not be valid under California law (see §17.22).
- The location of the person to whom delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint is made determines which local law may be invoked, not the location of the defendant or even of the person to be served. If, for example, the defendant is a California corporation and the person to be served is a corporate employee who resides in California but maintains an office outside the state, service on someone at that office in accordance with the law of the place where the office is located would be valid if permissible under local law, even if the particular service would not be valid under California law.
- It is unclear whether the language in CCP §413.10(b) permitting service on a person "as prescribed by the law of the place where the person is served" extends to determining persons who are permitted to serve summons as well as persons on whom summons may be served and the manner of service. Until California courts resolve this problem, the plaintiff should consult local law governing persons who are permitted to serve process because, unlike CCP §414.10, some state statutes permit private persons to act as process servers only when a court has expressly authorized them to do so. In such situations, the plaintiff may be able to move for such an order in the California court in which the action is pending if a professional process server will not be used.

§17.40 b. Outside United States

When effecting service of process outside the United States in a California action, CCP §§413.10(c) permits a plaintiff to proceed:

- In any manner provided by CCP §§415.10-415.50, including personal service (see §§17.27-17.29), substituted service (see §§17.30-17.31), service by mail and acknowledgment of receipt (see §§17.32-17.35), service by mail and return receipt (see §17.38), and service by publication (see §17.36);
- As directed by the court in which the action is pending; or
- If the court before or after service finds that the service is reasonably calculated to give actual notice, as prescribed by the law of the place where the person is served or as directed by the foreign authority in response to a letter rogatory.

The flexibility of these procedures is important when service is made outside the United States because a number of foreign jurisdictions refuse to recognize a foreign judgment unless service has been made in accordance with their own laws. See Comment to CCP §413.10.

The provisions of CCP §413.10(c) are expressly made subject to the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters (20 UST 361, TIAS 6638). The convention governs service of process abroad for the signatory nations (the United States, Japan, and most Western European countries are signatories). See, e.g., Dr. Ing H.C. F. Porsche A.G. v Superior Court (1981) 123 CA3d 755, 177 CR 155 (California court had no jurisdiction over German automobile manufacturer when Hague Convention service requirements not observed). Article 10(a) of the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters allows service of process by registered mail on plaintiffs who reside and work in Hong Kong. Denlinger v Chinadotcom Corp. (2003) 110 CA4th 1396, 1398, 2 CR3d 530. Failure to properly serve a party who resides outside the country under the Hague Service Convention renders all subsequent proceedings void for that person. This is true even when the party indisputably had notice of the action. In re Alyssa F. (2003) 112 CA4th 846, 852, 6 CR3d 1.

A copy of the convention may be found following Fed R Civ P 4 in Title 28 of United States Code Annotated.

3. Unlawful Detainer Actions

§17.41 a. Service by Posting

Service by posting ("nail and mail") may be used in an unlawful detainer action when the court is shown that the party to be served cannot with reasonable diligence be served in any manner specified in CCP §§415.10-415.50 except publication. CCP §415.45(a). The court must also find that:

- A cause of action exists against the party to be served or that the party is a necessary or proper party to the action (CCP §415.45(a)(1)); or
- The party has or claims an interest in real property in California that is subject to the court's jurisdiction or that the relief demanded would exclude the party from any interest in such property (CCP §415.45(a)(2)).

PRACTICE TIP: Sometimes in unlawful detainer actions a landlord is faced with a tenant who has left the rented premises and cannot be located, making it difficult to serve him or her by the usual methods. Before the enactment of CCP §415.45, the landlord's only alternative in this situation was service by publication. Now, the posting procedure, which is less expensive and time consuming than publication, is clearly preferable.

The order allowing service by posting must:

- Order the summons posted on the premises in a manner most likely to give actual notice to the party to be served; and
- Direct that a copy of the summons and complaint be mailed "forthwith" by certified mail to the party at his or her last-known address.

CCP §415.45(b). On the meaning of "forthwith," see Anderson v Goff (1887) 72 C 65, 73, 13 P 73.

Service is considered to be complete on the tenth day after posting and mailing. CCP §415.45(c). A responsive pleading must be filed within 15 days (10 plus 5) after the date of posting and mailing. See CCP §1167.3. The provisions of CCP §1013 extending the time for filing a responsive pleading when service of papers is effected by mail do not apply. CCP §413.20.

If the party is served by another method specified in CCP §§415.10-415.50, except publication, that service supersedes any posted summons. CCP §415.45(d).

For Judicial Council summons form for unlawful detainer actions, see §17.67.

§17.42 b. Abandonment

Under CC §1951.3, leased real property is considered to be abandoned by the lessee and the lease terminated when:

- The lessor gives the lessee the required notice in writing of the lessor's belief of abandonment; and
- The lessee fails to give the lessor written notice, before the date of termination specified in the lessor's notice, of the lessee's intent not to abandon the premises.

The lessee's notice must also state an address at which the lessee may be served by certified mail in any unlawful detainer action.

When the lessee has given the lessor notice of the lessee's intent not to abandon the premises, the lessor may serve the summons and complaint on the lessee in any manner authorized by CCP §§415.10-415.50 (CCP §415.47(c)) or by certified mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the lessee at the address given in the notice of intent not to abandon if the summons is mailed within 60 days after the notice is received by the lessor (CCP §415.47(a)).

When the lessee's notice fails to include an address at which the lessee may be served, the summons and complaint may be served on the lessee by certified mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the lessee at either:

- The address or addresses to which the lessor's notice of belief of abandonment was addressed if given by mail; or
- The address of the leased premises if the notice of belief of abandonment was personally served on the lessee.

CCP §415.47(b). As with CCP §415.47(a), service of process may not be made under CCP §415.47(b) unless the summons is mailed to the lessee within 60 days after the lessor's receipt of the lessee's notice of intent not to abandon.

Service of process under either CCP §415.47(a) or CCP §415.47(b) is considered to be complete on the 10th day after the summons is mailed. A responsive pleading must be filed within 15 days (10 plus 5) after mailing. See CCP §1167.3. The provisions of CCP §1013 extending the time for filing a responsive pleading when service of papers is effected by mail do not apply. CCP §413.20.

§17.43 4. Manner of Service When No Procedure Provided

When no provision for service of summons has been made in CCP §§413.10-417.40 or under any other law, the court in which the action is pending may direct that service be made in a manner reasonably calculated to give actual notice to the party to be served and may prescribe the manner in which proof of service is to be made. CCP §413.30.

Situations for which no statutory procedure for service of summons is provided may appear to be rare, but CCP §413.30 may have broader use than its literal language suggests. In Cohen v Board of Supervisors (1971) 20 CA3d 236, 97 CR 550, indigent petitioners in marital actions sought to have their county board of supervisors and the State Controller ordered to pay costs of publication to serve respondents who could not be found for other means of service specified in CCP §§415.10-415.50. The court of appeal held that an indigent petitioner could be permitted under CCP §413.30 to serve the summons at the respondent's last known address by mail and posting because, although publication was theoretically possible, it was not a practical method under the circumstances.

PRACTICE TIP: The analysis used in Cohen may serve plaintiffs in other situations. A plaintiff might argue, for example, that Cohen provides authority under which a court may fashion an appropriate manner of service when the defendant is avoiding service by other statutorily provided means and the circumstances do not allow sufficient time for service by publication. The plaintiff should propose a specific procedure to be ordered for service of summons and argue that the suggested procedure is in fact more likely than publication to provide the defendant with actual notice.

§17.44 F. Statutory Provisions Outside Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act

Code of Civil Procedure §413.10 expressly recognizes the validity of specific statutory provisions outside the Jurisdiction and Service of Process Act (CCP §§410.10-418.11) that apply to service of process in particular actions (see §§17.45-17.46).

The Judicial Council Comments to CCP §§413.10, 415.10, and 416.50 seem to view such specific provisions as supplementary rather than exclusive, which suggests that the general rules regarding service prescribed in the Act may be used in all civil actions, including those for which a statute provides a different approach for service. See Anderson v Sherman (1981) 125 CA3d 228, 237, 178 CR 38 (Judicial Council comments underscore plain meaning of statutory language, i.e., that Code of Civil Procedure service provisions have universal application). But see House v State (1981) 119 CA3d 861, 873 n9, 174 CR 279 (more specific statute prevails over more general provisions of CCP §416.50). Although service in accordance with the Act may withstand challenge when another statute provides a different approach for service in a particular instance, the safer course is to use the specifically provided approach.

§17.45 1. Statutes Governing Service on State and Certain State Agencies

The following statutes contain provisions governing service of process on the state and certain state agencies in particular situations. The list, which is not exhaustive, contains some commonly used statutes. An attorney preparing to serve a complaint based on a cause of action created by statute should determine whether the applicable code contains any special service provisions.

- CC §2931a (action involving real property on which state agency claims lien).
- CCP §1250.140 (eminent domain proceeding in which state is defendant).
- Govt C §955.4(a) (all actions on claims against state).
- Govt C §955.6(a) (inverse condemnation action arising out of work by Department of Transportation).
- Govt C §955.8(a) (inverse condemnation action arising out of work by Department of Water Resources).
- Govt C §956 (certain actions involving real property in which state has interest).
- Pub Res C §6462 (action against state to quiet title to real property situated in former bed of navigable river or stream).
- Pub Res C §7555 (action against state to establish boundaries of and quiet title to swamp and overflowed land sold by state).
- Rev & T C §160 (action against county to quiet title arising from property tax dispute).
- Rev & T C §14573 (inheritance tax quiet title action against state).
- Rev & T C §16252 (action against state for refund of gift taxes).
- Rev & T C §26104 (action against Franchise Tax Board for refund of tax imposed under Bank and Corporation Tax Law).
- Veh C §24.5 (all actions against Department of Motor Vehicles and its director).

§17.46 2. Statutes Governing Service in Particular Actions

The following statutes contain provisions governing service of process in particular actions. The list, which is not exhaustive, contains some commonly used statutes. An attorney preparing to serve a complaint based on a cause of action created by statute should determine whether the applicable code contains any special service provisions.

- CCP §116.340 (small claims actions).
- CCP §§751.06, 751.08, 751.10 (in rem action by persons claiming interest in real property to establish title in case of destroyed property records).
- Ins C §1620.5 (action against foreign insurer under Unfair Trade Practices Act (Ins C §§790-790.15)).
- Veh C §§17454-17455 (action against nonresident motorist arising out of automobile accident that occurred in state).

VI. FILING PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS

§17.47 A. Requirement of Filing Proof of Service of Summons

The amendment of CCP §417.30 in 2005 dispensed with language that the summons must be "returned." After service of process is made, proof of service of the summons must be "filed" with the court as provided in CCP §417.10 (service in California) or CCP §417.20 (service outside California), unless the defendant has made a general appearance. CCP §417.30. Proof of service should be made on a Judicial Council form whenever possible. See CCP §417.10(f). See also forms in §§17.63-17.64, 17.66-17.70.

Because "returned" meant filing with the court clerk (Drinnon v Oliver (1972) 24 CA3d 571, 584, 101 CR 120), previous cases interpreting "return of service" may still have validity under the present "filing" requirement of CCP §417.30. See, e.g., City of Los Angeles v Morgan (1951) 105 CA2d 726, 731, 234 P2d 319 (return of service in proper form is prima facie evidence that service of process has been made, but the presumption may be overcome by other evidence).

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.48 B. Time for Filing Proof of Service

Under CCP §583.210(b), proof of service must be filed within 60 days after the 3-year period of CCP §583.210(a) during which the summons and complaint must be served. This time limit is mandatory unless an exception is provided by statute. CCP §583.250(b). See §17.16 on time for service of process.

It is not clear whether dismissal would be required for failure to file proof of service of summons under CCP §583.210(b) when the service itself was timely under CCP §583.210(a). The provisions requiring dismissal are currently in CCP §583.250(a), which requires that the complaint be dismissed only if service is not made in a timely fashion; a timely filed proof of service of summons to avoid dismissal is not an express part of §583.250(a). Nevertheless, counsel is advised to avoid litigating the matter by filing the proof of service in every instance within the 3 years and 60 days from the time the complaint is filed.

Time requirements for filing a proof of service may differ radically from the requirements outlined above under the Trial Court Delay Reduction Act (Govt C §§68600-68620). These delay reduction rules typically require that the proof of service be filed within the time for service or within five days afterwards. See §17.16 on the time for service of process, which is typically between 30 and 60 days under local rules. On delay reduction programs generally, see chap 40.

§17.49 C. Procedure When Original Summons Lost

By amendment in 2005, CCP §417.30 omitted procedures to follow if the original summons was lost after service of a copy had been made but before the summons has been "returned." This procedure no longer appears necessary because the original summons is now to be retained by the court clerk in the court records and only copies of summons are to be issued to the plaintiff who requests issuance of the summons. See CCP §412.10. See §17.47.

On loss of summons before service, see §17.13.

© The Regents of the University of California

§17.50 D. Content of Proof of Service

Proof of service should be made on a Judicial Council form whenever possible. See CCP §417.10(f). See also forms in §§17.63-17.64, 17.66-17.70. When a professional process server is used, the proof of service must indicate the county of registration and registration number of the server. CCP §417.40.

Regardless of the method of service used, a written admission of service by the party to be served may be used as proof of service. CCP §§417.10(d), 417.20(d).

A problem may arise if the person to whom a copy of the summons and complaint is delivered refuses to divulge his or her name. Code of Civil Procedure §417.10(a) requires that the person's name be shown. It is possible that a proof of service without the name may be found valid if it includes an affidavit or declaration setting forth the refusal with additional facts from which it appears likely that service was properly made (e.g., for substituted service, that a copy of the summons and complaint was left during usual office hours at a corporate headquarters with a person who appeared to be in charge of the office). It often happens, however, that when a person served refuses to identify himself or herself, the defendant has actually moved and the person served is unconnected with the defendant.

In this situation, it is safer to get a court order authorizing service under CCP §413.30, which permits the court to direct the manner of service in certain circumstances. The court could provide for service on an individual identified by physical description or other appropriate means.

However, the easiest solution is to have service carried out by a peace officer in counties where it is still available. Under Govt C §26662, service by a peace officer is presumed to be valid and in fact is less likely to be defective. A peace officer is more likely to get identification from the person served and less likely to serve a person who has nothing to do with the defendant.

On specific requirements for proofs of service according to place and manner of service, see §§17.51-17.61.

§17.51 1. Service Within California

Code of Civil Procedure §417.10 provides that, when service of process is made on a person within California, the content of the proof of service depends on the manner of service.

§17.52 a. Personal or Substituted Service; Service by Mail

The declaration of the person making service must show (CCP §417.10(a)):

- The time, place, and manner of service;
- Facts showing that the service was made in accordance with CCP §§413.10-417.40 (including a statement that the server was at least age 18 and was not a party to the action (see CCP §414.10) and, for substituted service on a natural person, facts establishing reasonable diligence in attempting personal service (see CCP §415.20(b)));
- The name of the person to whom a copy of the summons and complaint was delivered (this may not be required when the person refuses to divulge his or her name; see §17.50) and, if appropriate, the person's title or the capacity in which he or she was served; and
- For an action against a corporation or unincorporated association, that the notice required by CCP §412.30 appeared on the copy of the summons served, if in fact it did.

For service by mail and acknowledgment of receipt, the proof of service must be accompanied by the written acknowledgment. CCP §417.10(a).

§17.55 d. Service by Other Methods

The proof of service must comply with the requirements of the particular statute or, if no manner of proof is prescribed, the requirements of CCP §417.10 for proof of a similar manner of service. CCP §417.10(c).

§17.56 2. Service Outside California

Code of Civil Procedure §417.20 provides that, when service of process is made on a person outside California, the content of the proof of service depends on the manner of service.

§17.57 a. Personal or Substituted Service, or Other Methods

If served under CCP §415.10, §415.20, or §415.30, proof of service must be as prescribed by CCP §417.10 for service within California (see §17.51). CCP §417.20(a).

§17.58 b. Service by Mail and Return Receipt

The proof of service must include satisfactory evidence, by a signed receipt or other evidence, establishing actual delivery to the person served. CCP §417.20(a). See Bolkiah v Superior Court (1999) 74 CA4th 984, 1000, 88 CR2d 540. The return receipt need not necessarily be signed, however, by the person to be served. See §17.38.

§17.61 3. Service on Fictitiously Named Defendants

When a fictitiously named defendant is served with process under CCP §474, the proof of service must state the fictitious name under which the defendant was served and the fact that the summons gave notice to the person served that he or she was served as (or on behalf of) the person sued under the specified fictitious name. See §17.10 on content of summons for fictitiously named defendant. A default judgment may not be entered unless these requirements are met. CCP §474; Pelayo v J.J. Lee Mgmt. Co., Inc. (2009) 174 CA4th 484, 496, 94 CR3d 784 (plaintiff must comply with requirements both for endorsement of summons and recitals in proof of service on fictitiously named defendant; entry of default set aside when proof of service lacked proper recitals). See also Armstrong v Superior Court (1956) 144 CA2d 420, 301 P2d 51 (court has no jurisdiction over defendant sued under fictitious name unless summons contains notice required by CCP §474).

The Judicial Council forms for summons and proof of service should be used for service on fictitiously named defendants. The entry for the defendant's name should include both the defendant's true name and fictitious name, e.g., Richard Smith sued as Doe 1.

NOTE: In Pelayo v J.J. Lee Mgmt. Co., Inc., supra, no actual amended proof of service was offered; the court did not decide whether such a procedure would have been proper. 174 CA4th at 498 n 10.

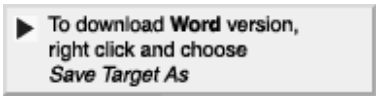
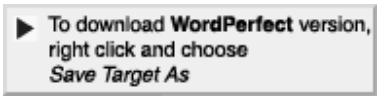
§17.62 VII. CHECKLIST: PROCEDURE FOR SERVING SUMMONS ON PARTIES





Determine party on whom summons is to be served

If party is individual, ascertain

- Full name and any aliases
- Residence address
- Employment address
- Age (service must be made on minors at least age 12), and name and address(es) of parent or other adult to whom summons will be delivered, if individual is minor (see §17.24)
- If individual is conservatee, name and address(es) of conservator and whether to seek order dispensing with requirement of delivery to conservatee (see §17.24)

If party is entity, ascertain

- Whether it is corporation, defunct corporation, joint stock company, partnership or other unincorporated association, or public entity
- To what individuals delivery may be made on entity's behalf (see §§17.19-17.23), their names and addresses, and which would be easiest to serve

Whether party is individual or entity

- Determine which Judicial Council summons form to use (see §17.6), or whether an attorney-drafted form will be required (see §17.7), and whether any special requirements apply to preparation of summons (see §§17.8-17.10)
- Determine whether service by Notice and Acknowledgment of Receipt may be appropriate (see §§17.32-17.35)
- Prepare summons (see §§17.6-17.10, 17.63, 17.66-17.70)
- Have summons issued (see §17.11)
- Determine time requirements for service of summons (see §17.16)
- Determine who will serve summons and manner of service (see §§17.14, 17.26-17.46)
- Have summons served

- Prepare proof of service (see §§17.50-17.61, 17.63-17.70)
- File return of service (see §17.47)

If serving individual directly may be difficult, determine name and address(es) of agent, if any, authorized by individual to receive service of process (see §17.18).

WARNING—IMPORTANT INFORMATION

WARNING: California law provides that, for purposes of division of property upon dissolution of a marriage or domestic partnership or upon legal separation, property acquired by the parties during marriage or domestic partnership in joint form is presumed to be community property. If either party to this action should die before the jointly held community property is divided, the language in the deed that characterizes how title is held (i.e., joint tenancy, tenants in common, or community property) will be controlling, and not the community property presumption. You should consult your attorney if you want the community property presumption to be written into the recorded title to the property.

STANDARD FAMILY LAW RESTRAINING ORDERS

Starting immediately, you and your spouse or domestic partner are restrained from

1. Removing the minor child or children of the parties, if any, from the state without the prior written consent of the other party or an order of the court;
2. Cashing, borrowing against, canceling, transferring, disposing of, or changing the beneficiaries of any insurance or other coverage, including life, health, automobile, and disability, held for the benefit of the parties and their minor child or children;
3. Transferring, encumbering, hypothecating, concealing, or in any way disposing of any property, real or personal, whether community, quasi-community, or separate, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court, except in the usual course of business or for the necessities of life; and
4. Creating a nonprobate transfer or modifying a nonprobate transfer in a manner that affects the disposition of property subject to the transfer, without the written consent of the other party or an order of the court. Before revocation of a nonprobate transfer can take effect or a right of survivorship to property can be eliminated, notice of the change must be filed and served on the other party.

You must notify each other of any proposed extraordinary expenditures at least five business days prior to incurring these extraordinary expenditures and account to the court for all extraordinary expenditures made after these restraining orders are effective. However, you may use community property, quasi-community property, or your own separate property to pay an attorney to help you or to pay court costs.

ADVERTENCIA – INFORMACIÓN IMPORTANTE

ADVERTENCIA: De acuerdo a la ley de California, las propiedades adquiridas por las partes durante su matrimonio o pareja de hecho en forma conjunta se consideran propiedad comunitaria para los fines de la división de bienes que ocurre cuando se produce una disolución o separación legal del matrimonio o pareja de hecho. Si cualquiera de las partes de este caso llega a fallecer antes de que se divida la propiedad comunitaria de tenencia conjunta, el destino de la misma quedará determinado por las cláusulas de la escritura correspondiente que describen su tenencia (por ej., tenencia conjunta, tenencia en común o propiedad comunitaria) y no por la presunción de propiedad comunitaria. Si quiere que la presunción comunitaria quede registrada en la escritura de la propiedad, debería consultar con un abogado.

ÓRDENES DE RESTRICCIÓN NORMALES DE DERECHO FAMILIAR

En forma inmediata, usted y su cónyuge o pareja de hecho tienen prohibido:

1. Llevarse del estado de California a los hijos menores de las partes, si los hubiera, sin el consentimiento previo por escrito de la otra parte o una orden de la corte;
2. Cobrar, pedir prestado, cancelar, transferir, deshacerse o cambiar el nombre de los beneficiarios de cualquier seguro u otro tipo de cobertura, tal como de vida, salud, vehículo y discapacidad, que tenga como beneficiario(s) a las partes y su(s) hijo(s) menor(es);
3. Transferir, gravar, hipotecar, ocultar o deshacerse de cualquier manera de cualquier propiedad, inmueble o personal, ya sea comunitaria, cuasicomunitaria o separada, sin el consentimiento escrito de la otra parte o una orden de la corte, con excepción las operaciones realizadas en el curso normal de actividades o para satisfacer las necesidades de la vida; y
4. Crear o modificar una transferencia no testamentaria de manera que afecte el destino de una propiedad sujeta a transferencia, sin el consentimiento por escrito de la otra parte o una orden de la corte. Antes de que se pueda eliminar la revocación de una transferencia no testamentaria, se debe presentar ante la corte un aviso del cambio y hacer una entrega legal de dicho aviso a la otra parte.

Cada parte tiene que notificar a la otra sobre cualquier gasto extraordinario propuesto, por lo menos cinco días laborales antes de realizarlo, y rendir cuenta a la corte de todos los gastos extraordinarios realizados después de que estas órdenes de restricción hayan entrado en vigencia. No obstante, puede usar propiedad comunitaria, cuasicomunitaria o suya separada para pagar a un abogado o para ayudarle a pagar los costos de la corte.

I. INTRODUCTION

§18.1 A. Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the methods for service of notices and other papers on a party after the party has been properly served with a summons or has made a general appearance. It gives an overview of procedure (see §18.3), discusses time for service (see §18.4), manner of service (see §§18.5-18.17), proof of service (see §§18.18-18.20), and forms for use (see §§18.21-18.24).

§18.2 B. Governing Law

Unless otherwise prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, the notices and other papers may be served in the manner prescribed by CCP §§1010-1020. CCP §1010.

§18.3 II. OVERVIEW

As a rule, service of notices and other papers is accomplished by mail sent to the party or the party's attorney under CCP §1012. See §§18.5-18.6. Under CCP §1011, however, the party may also be served personally or by substituted service (see §§18.8-18.10), and under CCP §1013, the party also may be served by facsimile transmission (see §§18.11-18.16).

Code of Civil Procedure §§1010-1020 cover "notices and other papers." CCP §1010. The term "other papers" includes, e.g., a cross-complaint against a party who has already appeared (see Lyydikainen v Industrial Acc. Comm'n (1939) 36 CA2d 298, 303, 97 P2d 993), an order to show cause after personal jurisdiction has been obtained (In re Morelli (1970) 11 CA3d 819, 838, 91 CR 72, disapproved on other grounds in Cedars-Sinai Imaging Med. Group v Superior Court (2000) 83 CA4th 1281, 1287 n6, 100 CR2d 320), and a variety of types of discovery requests (e.g., interrogatories (Frates v Treder (1967) 249 CA2d 199, 201, 57 CR 383)).

Note that when an unserved defendant appears by way of an answer to a cross-complaint, it does not constitute a general appearance that will permit the plaintiff to serve the original complaint under §§1010-1020. Glenwood Homeowners Ass'n v Prosher Dev. Ltd. (1980) 111 CA3d 1002, 169 CR 48.

Sections 1010-1020 do not apply to service of a summons or other process, or to service of any paper necessary to bring a party into contempt, e.g., a subpoena. CCP §1015-1016. These papers must ordinarily be served on the party personally. See In re Morelli (1970) 11 CA3d 819, 835, 91 CR 72.

§18.4 III. TIME FOR SERVICE

The date by which a paper must be served may depend on either of two types of requirements. First, a statute or rule may specify the time period after an event within which the paper must be served. For example, responses to interrogatories must normally be served within 30 days after service of the interrogatories. CCP §2030.260. Second, a statute or rule may specify the number of days before an event that a paper must be served. A written notice of motion, for example, along with all supporting papers, must normally be served at least 16 court days before the date set for hearing. CCP §1005(b).

The time period for service of some papers may be extended if service is by mail. Under CCP §1013(a), if service is by mail, any period of notice and any right or duty to perform an act or make a response, within a period or on a certain date prescribed by statute or court rule, is extended by 5 calendar days if the recipient's mailing address and place of mailing is in California; 10 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside California but within the United States; and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or place of address is outside the United States. The CCP §1013 extension applies in the absence of a specific exception provided for by statute or rule of court. Department of Indus. Relations v Atlantic Baking Co. (2001) 89 CA4th 891, 894, 108 CR2d 44 (when time period is extended by act other than service, such as "mailing" of findings issued by Labor Commissioner, §1013 does not extend filing deadline). Nor does §1013 apply to notices of motion, opposition papers, or reply papers governed by CCP §1005. CCP §1005(b). Section 1005(b) contains similar provisions for service of notices of motion. On noticed motions, see chap 12.

See §§18.5-18.6 on service by mail generally. In Injectronics, Inc. v Commodore Bus. Machs. (1979) 100 CA3d 185, 160 CR 667, the court held that when a memorandum of decision is served by mail, CCP §1013(a) adds 5 days to the 10-day period specified by Cal Rules of Ct 3.1590(e) within which to request findings of fact and conclusions of law (now called a "statement of decision"). In Baker v Anderson (1981) 119 CA3d 1000, 174 CR 307, the court held that CCP §1013 extends for 5 days the 30-day period provided by CCP §471.5(a) within which to plead to an amended complaint served by mail.

If the last day for performance of an act in a lawsuit, after service of the paper that requires it, is a Saturday, Sunday, or judicial holiday, the time to do the act is normally extended by law to the close of the next day that is not a holiday. CCP §§10, 12a-12b, 135. Note, however, that CCP §12a (extending time if the last day to perform is a holiday) does not apply to acts governed solely by contractual provisions. Gans v Smull (2003) 111 CA4th 985, 988, 4 CR3d 353 (option to extend lease).

NOTE: Under Govt C §68106 (b)(1), effective July 28, 2009, and operative through June 30, 2010, if a court is closed as the result of a budget reduction measure in response to the state fiscal crisis, the day is considered a holiday.

IV. MANNER OF SERVICE

A. Service by Mail

§18.5 1. When Permitted

Service of notices and other papers may be made by mail when (a) the person on whom service is to be made resides or has his or her office at a place where there is a delivery service by mail, or (b) the person making service and the person on whom it is to be made reside or have their offices in different places between which there is a regular communication by mail. CCP §1012. Thus, service by mail on a party or on his or her attorney is permissible even when the person making service and the person being served reside or have their offices in the same city, as long as mail delivery is available. See Marsden v Collins (1937) 23 CA2d 148, 72 P2d 247.

Because service may almost always be made by mail under CCP §1012, notices and other papers (see §18.3) are usually served in this manner. Currently, electronic service, i.e., serving papers by e-mail, is available only in federal court. See, e.g., Calderon v IBEW Local 47 (9th Cir 2007) 508 F3d 883. In fact, some district courts require parties to file all documents electronically (see, e.g., ED Cal Local R 5-134). On service by fax, see §§18.11-18.16.

§18.6 2. Procedures

Under CCP §1013(a), a notice or other paper is served by mail by depositing a copy in a regularly maintained post office, mailbox, or mail chute in a sealed envelope with postage prepaid. The envelope must be addressed to the person on whom the papers are to be served, at:

- The office address given on the last document filed by him or her in the case and served on the party making service; or
- His or her residence.

CCP §1013(a).

The papers must state the date and place of mailing or be accompanied by an affidavit or certificate of mailing (see forms in §§18.21-18.24), which need not be signed. CCP §1013(b). However, because CCP §1013(g) states that §1013(b) is directory only, noncompliance does not invalidate service. On proof of service by mail, see §§18.18-18.19.

Service by mail is complete at the time of deposit, but in some situations, the deposit must be made a given number of days earlier than would be required if service were personal: 5 calendar days if the papers are mailed from within California to an address within California, 10 calendar days if either the place of address or place of mailing is outside California, and 20 calendar days if either the place of mailing or the place of address is outside the United States. CCP §1013(a).

Mail sent to a former address is considered properly served for up to 1 year after the change of address. Whitehead v Habig (2008) 163 CA4th 896, 903, 77 CR3d 679.

When the time period is commenced by an act other than service, CCP §1013 does not operate to extend the filing deadline. Department of Indus. Relations v Atlantic Baking Co. (2001) 89 CA4th 891, 894, 108 CR2d 44 (no §1013 extension for filing when 45-day period of Lab C §3725 runs from "mailing" of findings issued by Labor Commissioner).

§18.7 B. Service by Express Mail or Overnight Delivery

Under CCP §1013(c), a notice or other paper may be served by depositing a copy, in a sealed envelope with Express Mail postage paid, in a mailbox or other United States Postal Service facility for receipt of Express Mail. A notice or other paper may be served by "another method of delivery providing for overnight delivery" by depositing the envelope in a box or other facility regularly maintained by the express service carrier or delivering it to the carrier's authorized courier with delivery fees paid or provided for. Rules applicable to service by mail, e.g., for addressing the envelope and for the certificate of mailing (see §§18.5-18.6), also apply to Express Mail or overnight delivery. CCP §1013(c)-(d). Section 1013(d) is directory only. CCP §1013(g). See §18.6.

Like service by mail, service by Express Mail and by overnight delivery is complete at the time of deposit, but any right or duty to do an act or make a response is extended by only 2 court days. This extension does not apply to a notice of intention to move for a new trial or to vacate judgment or a notice of appeal. CCP §1013(e).

§18.8 C. Personal and Substituted Service

Code of Civil Procedure §1011 provides a procedure for personal or substituted service of notices and other papers on an adverse attorney (see §18.9) or party (see §18.10), although service by mail (see §§18.5-18.6) is usually more convenient and less expensive. If the party has appeared and has an attorney, all papers other than a summons or other process or any paper necessary to bring a party into contempt should be served on the attorney, rather than on the party. See §18.9.

§18.9 1. On Attorney; Exceptions

Service of a notice or other paper on a party who has been served with a summons or has appeared in the action (see CCP §1014), and who is represented by an attorney, may be made under CCP §1011 by personally serving the attorney or, if the attorney is absent from his or her office, by leaving the papers (CCP §1011(a)):

- At the attorney's office, in an envelope or package clearly labeled to identify the attorney being served, with a receptionist or person having charge of the office. See King v Wilson (1950) 101 CA2d 242, 225 P2d 270 (switchboard operator in reception room, even though not attorney's secretary and not authorized by him to accept service, is person in charge under CCP §1011).
- When neither a receptionist nor a person having charge is present, in a conspicuous place in the office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.
- If the office is not open, at the attorney's residence with some person of not less than 18 years of age, as long as the attorney's residence and office are located in the same county. If there is no one at the residence who is 18 years of age or older, the attorney's residence is not known, or the residence and office are not in the same county, the papers may be mailed to the attorney's office address, if known, and otherwise to the residence address, if known.
- If neither the attorney's office address nor residence address is known, at the address of the attorney or the party of record as designated on the court papers, or with the court clerk (or the judge, if there is no clerk).

In a few situations, e.g., when the party is a nonresident and his or her attorney has no known office in the state (see CCP §1015), service is not made on the attorney. For discussion, see 6 Witkin, California Procedure, Proceedings Without Trial §14 (5th ed 2008).

§18.10 2. On Party

Service of a notice or other paper on a party who has been served with a summons or has appeared in the action (see CCP §1014) may be made under CCP §1011 by personally serving the party or serving "in the manner specifically provided in particular cases" (CCP §1011(b)). If no specific provision is made, the papers may be left at the party's residence between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. with a person of not less than 18 years of age. If no such person can be found, the papers may be served by mail. If the party's residence is unknown, they may be delivered to the court clerk (or the judge if there is no clerk). CCP §1011(b). Papers delivered to the clerk or the judge must be placed in an envelope addressed to the party in care of the clerk or judge. Cal Rules of Ct 3.252. The following information must be included on the back of the envelope:

> Service is being made under Code of Civil Procedure section 1011(b) on a party whose residence address is unknown.
> [Name of party whose residence address is unknown]
> [Case name and number]

D. Service and Filing by Facsimile Transmission (Fax)

§18.11 1. Service by Fax

Papers may be served by fax if the parties agree and the agreement is confirmed in writing. CCP §1013(e); Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(a). In addition, the court may serve notices by fax if the parties agree. Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(c). An attorney or party who agrees to receive service by fax must have a fax machine available to receive documents between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on weekdays, except for court holidays (see CCP §136). Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(f).

Specific provisions applicable to fax service, many of them paralleling provisions for service by mail, express mail, and overnight delivery (see §§18.5-18.7) are in CCP §1013(e)-(g) and Cal Rules of Ct 2.306, 2.304(b). The Judicial Council has adopted a printed form, the Facsimile Transmission Cover Sheet, that parties must use when serving documents by fax. Cal Rules of Ct 2.304(b). A copy of the form is reproduced in §18.24. See also California Judicial Council Forms Manual (Cal CEB 1981). Contact the local clerk's office to learn its particular procedures.

Service by fax is complete when the entire document has been received by the receiving party's fax machine. Service after 5 p.m. is considered to have occurred on the next court day. Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(g).

The time for exercising any right or performing any duty to do an act or make a response is extended by only 2 court days. The time for filing a notice of intention to move for a new trial or to vacate judgment or a notice of appeal is not extended. CCP §1013(e).

Proof of service by fax may be made by any method specified in CCP §1013(a). Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(h). See also §18.19. The time, date, and sending machine's telephone number must be used instead of the date and place of deposit in the mail (Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(h)(1)), and a copy of the transmission report generated by the sender's fax machine must be attached (Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(h)(4)). For other required alterations in the proof of service, see Cal Rules of Ct 2.306(h)(2)-(5).

§18.12 2. Filing by Fax

Fax filing of court papers is authorized by CCP §1010.5 and governed by Cal Rules of Ct 2.300-2.306, 2.304(b). The rules of court permit two kinds of fax filing: filing through a "fax-filing" agency, and "direct filing."
