§ 91.71 Complaint in Interpleader by Surety Against Claimants on Automobile Dealer's or Remanufacturer's Statutory Bond [Veh. Code § 11710]

[1] FORM Complaint in Interpleader by Surety Against Claimants on Automobile Dealer's or Remanufacturer's Statutory Bond [Veh. Code § 11710]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT IN INTERPLEADER
_____ [names],	)	[Amount demanded _____
[and DOES I through _____,]	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
Defendants.	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all times herein mentioned plaintiff _____ [name of surety] was, and now is, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____ [specify state], authorized to engage and engaged in the surety insurance business in the State of California, with its principal place of business at _____ [street address and, if any, city], _____ County, California.

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident of _____ County, California, residing at _____ [street address and if any, city]; defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident of _____ County, California, residing at _____ [street address and if any, city] [continue to allege any additional defendants claiming against the bond].

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by those fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacites when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is making or has a claim on the bond herein described which is conflicting with the claims of other defendants herein and which may subject plaintiff to vexatious litigation with respect to the bond.]

4. At all times herein mentioned, _____ [name of dealer or remanufacturer] was duly licensed as an automobile _____ [dealer or remanufacturer] under the laws of the State of California and[, doing business under the name _____ (specify fictitious name),] maintained and operated _____ [a place or places] of business in _____ County, California.

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff, as surety, and _____ [name of dealer or remanufacturer], as principal, made, executed, and delivered a certain automobile _____ [dealer's or remanufacturer's] bond in favor of the people of the State of California, in the sum of _____ [$50,000 or $10,000], that was conditioned as required by Vehicle Code Section 11710 of the State of California. The bond was in effect from _____ [date], until _____ [date], when it was canceled.

6. By the provisions of the bond, plaintiff's liability as surety shall not exceed the sum of _____ [$10,000 or $25,000].

7. Defendants, and each of them, assert claims against plaintiff on the bond for loss or damage claimed to have been suffered by them on account of acts of _____ [name of dealer or remanufacturer], during the period the bond was in effect; the claims so asserted aggregate to a sum in excess of _____ [$50,000 or $10,000].

8. Plaintiff cannot ascertain _____ [the validity of the defendants' claims or what part of the amount of plaintiff's obligation should be paid to each defendant or both if appropriate]. Because of these multiple and potentially conflicting claims, plaintiff is in doubt as to which of the defendants[, if any,] plaintiff may be required to satisfy and what proportion of the total amount of plaintiff's penalty on the bond should be equitably distributed between the defendants, if the total number of valid claims exceeds the total amount of plaintiff's obligation.

9. Because of defendants' claims, plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury, possibly will be subject to judgments in excess of the penalty of its bond, and will be subjected to a multiplicity of actions and extensive litigation unless the defendants are required to interplead in this action and are restrained from instituting any other proceedings against plaintiff.

[10. Plaintiff, at the time of filing this complaint, has deposited with the clerk of this Court the sum of _____ ($50,000 or $10,000), which is the total amount of the penalty of the bond.]

11. Plaintiff has incurred an obligation to pay reasonable attorney's fees and costs in this action.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That defendants, and each of them, be ordered to interplead and litigate their respective rights against _____ [name of dealer or remanufacturer] and their rights to the amounts of money that plaintiff may be obligated to pay the defendants, and each of them, under the bond;

2. That defendants, and each of them, be enjoined from taking any action against plaintiff by reason of its

_____ [dealer's or remanufacturer's] bond, except to come into this action, and set up their respective claims against the bond;

3. That [on delivering _____ ($50,000 or $10,000) to the clerk of this Court,] plaintiff be discharged from all liability to any of the defendants with respect to the bond;

4. For reasonable attorney's fees and costs, to be paid out of the fund represented by the penalty of the bond, as the Court may direct; and

5. For other and further relief the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, may be used by the surety on an automobile dealer's or remanufacturer's statutory bond [Veh. Code § 11710] to require all claimants on the bond to interplead in the action so that the liability of the surety on the bond can be adjudicated in one action [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b)]. A dealer's bond must be in the amount of $50,000, except that for a dealer who deals exclusively in motorcycles or all-terrain vehicles or a dealer who sells vehicles on a wholesale basis only and sells fewer than 25 vehicles per year, the bond must be in the amount of $10,000 [Veh. Code §§ 11710(b), 11710.1]. A remanufacturer's bond must be in the amount of $50,000 [Veh. Code § 11710(b)].

Attorney's fees and costs may be allowed to the plaintiff in interpleader out of the amount in dispute that is deposited with the court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above alleges the following:

- The capacity and place of business of plaintiff surety (Paragraph 1).
- The capacity and residence of each claimant against the bond (Paragraph 2, repeated as many times as there are claimants).
- Any fictitiously named defendants, and that each claims against the bond (Paragraph 3).
- The dealer or remanufacturer's name and place of business (Paragraph 4) [see Veh. Code § 11710(a) (bond)].
- The issuance of the bond, the parties to the bond, its amount, the date of issuance, and the time it remained in effect (Paragraph 5).
- The maximum amount for which plaintiff can be liable under the bond (assuming it was furnished in the statutory amount) (Paragraph 6) [see Veh. Code § 11710(b) (amounts of bond required)].

- That each defendant claims against the bond, and that their claims aggregate a sum in excess of the amount of the bond (Paragraph 7).

- That plaintiff cannot determine, on its own, to whom the bond amount should be paid, or in what amounts (Paragraph 8) [see Veh. Code § 11711(d), (e) (order in which claims under Veh. Code § 11711(a), (b) are to be satisfied)].

- Plaintiff's need to interplead the amount of the bond (Paragraph 9).

- If appropriate, that plaintiff will be depositing the amount of the bond with the clerk of the court at the time it files the complaint (Paragraph 10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 386(c)].

- That plaintiff has incurred attorney's fees (Paragraph 11) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 386.6].

[4] Verification of Complaint Seeking Temporary Restraining Order

A court may restrain all claimants named in an interpleader action from instituting or further prosecuting any other action on their claims during the pendency of the interpleader action [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(f)]. A complaint seeking a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunctive relief must be either verified or accompanied by affidavits (or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) in support of the allegations of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]. If relying on a verified complaint instead of affidavits (or declarations), counsel must plead evidentiary facts that would entitle plaintiff to the relief sought [see E.H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 ; San Juan G. Co. v. San Juan R. etc. Assn. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 159, 174, 93 P.2d 582] . For discussion, a procedural checklist, and additional forms necessary in order to obtain a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction, see Ch. 314, Interpleader , and Ch. 303, Injunctions .

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[6] Asserting Interpleader by Cross Complaint

If the surety has been made a defendant in an action brought on one or more of the claimants, the surety may file a cross complaint ininterpleader. If counsel modifies the form in [1], above, for use as a cross complaint, the cross complaint must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 386(b)].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned herein was, _____ [state capacity and residence of defendant or other basis of venue, e.g., a resident of or a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of _____ with its principal place of business at _____ (street address and town) in] _____ County, California, and _____ [authorized or licensed] to engage, and engaging in the business of servicing, repairing, and maintaining automobiles for the general public.

3. On or about _____ [date], defendants, and each of them, undertook to _____ [specify type of automotive service, e.g., replace the tires] of a certain _____ [year, make, model] automobile owned by plaintiff.

4. Defendants and their agents, servants, and employees, and each of them, negligently and carelessly _____ [e.g., replaced the tires of that automobile] so that, unknown to plaintiff, the automobile was in a dangerous and unsafe condition.

5. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff was driving and operating his/her/its automobile along and on _____, [street] near _____ [location] in _____ [city], California when as a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, _____ [specify failure of automotive service, e.g., the left front tire came off the automobile] causing the automobile to _____ [describe accident, e.g., run off the road and overturn] causing the injuries and damages alleged below.

6. As a proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her nervous system and person. All of these injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that these injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.] As a result of these injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages.

7. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff has incurred and will continue to incur medical and related expenses.

8. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff was prevented from performing his/her usual occupation as a _____ [specify occupation] _____ [for a period of _____ (specify period) or from the date of his/her injury to the date of the filing of this complaint] and has thereby lost earnings.

9. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], [and the collision resulting therefrom,] plaintiff's automobile was _____ [describe damage, e.g., destroyed beyond repair, to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $ _____ or damaged. Plaintiff _____ (has expended or will be required to expend) $ _____, for repair of the damaged automobile].

1. For general damages.

2. For medical and related expenses according to proof.

3. For lost earnings, past and future.

4. For repairs to plaintiff's property [in the sum of $_____].

5. For costs of suit herein incurred.

6. For other and further relief the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by an automobile owner to recover damages for both personal injury and property damage from a repair shop that negligently repaired or maintained plaintiff's automobile [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333; see also Veh. Code § 12002 (defective vehicle parts)]. The facts used as hypothetical illustration in the form involve negligent replacement of tires [see Spolter v. Four-Wheel Brake Serv. Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 690, 695, 222 P.2d 307 (jurors from their common experience could draw inference that new tire mounted on wheel from two to three weeks before accident would in meantime with reasonable probability not have to be replaced)]. For a form containing allegations relating to negligent over-inflation of tires, see § 91.81.

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above alleges the following:

- Defendant's capacity and licensure under the Automotive Repair Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 9880 et seq.], and that defendant was in the business of repairing or maintaining automobiles (Paragraph 1).

- Plaintiff's ownership of the vehicle (Paragraph 3) [see Veh.Code § 460 (defining owner)].

- That defendant undertook to repair the vehicle, and the date and type of repair (Paragraph 3).

- That defendant repaired the vehicle so negligently that it was dangerous to drive, and that plaintiff was unaware of the danger (Paragraph 4) [see Dunn v. Shamoon (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 486, 489-490, 99 P.2d 1113 (owner has duty to make reasonable inspection of repairs to his or her vehicle)].

- The date and description of the accident that happened and that it was proximately caused by the negligent repair (Paragraph 5) [see Civ. Code § 1714(a) (defining negligence); see also Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 682, 687-688, 268 P.2d 1041 (fact that accident occurs after defendant relinquishes control of instrumentality that causes accident does not bar application of res ipsa loquitur doctrine provided there is evidence that instrumentality was not improperly handled nor its condition otherwise changed after defendant relinquished control); Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 755, 762-763, 107 Cal. Rptr. 629 (although res ipsa loquitur does not apply unless balance of probabilities in favor of negligence can be found, doctrine applies when cause of injury is mystery, if there is reasonable and logical inference that defendant was negligent and that defendant's negligence caused injury)].

- Plaintiff's damages, and that each was proximately caused by defendant's negligence [see Civ.Code § 3333 (damages recoverable for negligence)]: general damages for physical injury; pain and suffering (Paragraph 6); medical expenses (Paragraph 7); loss of earnings (Paragraph 8); and property damage to the automobile (Paragraph 9).

[4] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Limitation Period

The three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c) governs actions for injury to personal property, but an action for personal injury caused by negligence is subject to a two-year limitation period [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1].

[6] Venue

Venue for an action arising out of defendant's negligence is proper in the county where the injury occurred or where the defendant, or one of them, resides at the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a), (c)]. For discussion of jurisdiction and limited civil cases, see § 91.63[6].

§ 91.81 Allegations--Negligent Over-Inflation of Tires

[1] FORM Allegations--Negligent Over-Inflation of Tires

1. Defendant was at all times herein mentioned engaged in the business of operating gasoline service stations, selling gasoline products, and providing related services, including tire repairs, air pressure, and other service, particularly at the service station located at _____ [street address], in _____ [city], California.

2. On _____ [date], at or about _____ [time], plaintiff purchased gasoline and air pressure service from the defendant's employee at defendant's gas station at the location set forth in Paragraph 1. and instructed defendant's employee to check the tire pressure on the _____ [make] automobile owned by plaintiff for _____ [e.g., "30 pounds pressure"]; defendant, acting through its employee, negligently and carelessly inflated the tires on plaintiff's automobile of plaintiff far in excess of _____ [e.g., 30 pounds pressure], without plaintiff's knowledge.

3. Thereafter, on _____ [date], at or about _____ [time], while plaintiff was driving, and operating his/her automobile, on _____ [street], near _____ [street], the automobile was caused to skid off the road, throw plaintiff out of the automobile, collide with another automobile and thereby severely injure plaintiff, and damage plaintiff's automobile, all by reason of the grossly over-inflated tires.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, are for use by an automobile owner to recover damages for both personal injury and property damage from a repair shop that negligently over-inflated a tire on plaintiff's automobile [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333; see also §§ 91.62[2] -[3], 91.80[2] -[7]]. In particular, those allegations may be used in place of Paragraphs 3., 4., and 5. of the complaint in § 91.80[1] and the portion of Paragraph 1 of that complaint that describes defendant's business.

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of corporate defendant. See § 91.80[1], Paragraph 1.]

3. At all times hereinafter mentioned, defendant _____ [name of individual defendant] was the owner of a certain _____ [year, make, model] automobile bearing the _____ [state, e.g., California] license plate _____ [specify].

4. For a period of time prior to _____ [date], defendant _____ [name], by and through its agents, servants, and employees, and particularly the employees of the _____ [garage or service station] operated by the defendant under the name and style of _____ [name], at _____ [address] undertook to repair and maintain in safe operating condition the vehicle owned by defendant _____ [name].

5. The agents, servants, and employees of defendant _____ [name] negligently and carelessly maintained and repaired the _____ [designate part repaired, e.g., brakes] on the _____ [make] automobile so that those brakes were in a dangerous, defective, and unsafe condition on the date hereinafter mentioned.

6. At all times herein mentioned, the intersection of _____ [street] and _____ [street], _____ [city], California was and is a public thoroughfare, and all acts and events hereinafter mentioned occurred at that location.

7. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was driving a _____ [make] automobile in a generally _____ [compass point] direction along and on _____ [street], and had reached a point at or near _____ [street]; at that time and place defendant _____ [name] was driving and operating his/her automobile in a generally _____ [compass point] direction along and on _____ [street].

8. At that time and place defendants _____ [names], and each of them, so carelessly, negligently, and unskillfully maintained, managed, controlled, and drove the _____ [make] automobile as to collide with the plaintiff's automobile with such great force and violence as to injure plaintiff and damage his/her automobile as hereinafter alleged.

9. As a proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her nervous system and person. All of these injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that these injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.] As a result of these injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages [in the amount of $_____].

10. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff has incurred [and will continue to incur] medical and related expenses. [The full amount of these expenses is not known to plaintiff at this time, and plaintiff will move to amend this complaint to state the amoun of these expenses when the amount becomes know to him/her, or on proof of the amount.]

11. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], plaintiff was prevented from performing his/her usual occupation as a _____ [specify occupation] _____ [for a period of _____ (specify period) or from the date of his/her injury to the date of the filing of this complaint] and has thereby lost earnings [_____ in the sum of or in an as yet ascertained amount].

12. As a further proximate result of the negligence of the defendant[s, and each of them], [and the collision resulting therefrom,] plaintiff's automobile was _____ [describe damage, e.g., destroyed beyond repair, to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____ or damaged. Plaintiff _____ (has expended or will be required to expend) $_____, for repair of the damaged automobile].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages [in the sum of $_____].

2. For medical and related expenses according to proof.

3. For lost earnings, past and future, according to proof.

4. For repairs to plaintiff's property [in the sum of $_____].

5. For costs of suit herein incurred.

6. For other and further relief the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is for use by an automobile driver in an action against a repair shop for damages caused by the negligent repair or maintenance of another's automobile, and against the driver of the negligently repaired automobile for negligence in its operation [see Civ. Code §§ 1714(a), 3333; see also §§ 91.62[2], [3], 91.80[2] -[7]].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above alleges the following:

- Defendant's ownership of the other vehicle involved in the accident (Paragraph 3).

- Defendant's maintenance and repair of the other defendant's vehicle and the dates of that maintenance and repair (Paragraph 4).

- That defendant repaired and maintained the other defendant's vehicle so negligently that it was dangerous to drive (Paragraph 5).

- A description of the intersection where the accident occurred (Paragraph 6).

- When, where, what, and in what direction plaintiff and defendant were driving at the time of the accident (Paragraph 7) [see Veh. Code § 305 (defining driver)].

- The date and description of the accident, and that it was caused by the negligent maintenance, driving, and control of defendants (Paragraph 8).

- Plaintiff's damages, and that each element of those damages was proximately caused by defendant's negligence [see Civ. Code § 3333 (damages recoverable for negligence)]: general damages for physical injury; pain and suffering (Paragraph 9); medical expenses (Paragraph 10); loss of earnings (Paragraph 11); and property damage to the automobile (Paragraph 12).

2. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], defendant negligently informed plaintiff that the automobile had been thoroughly inspected and checked and that _____ [no repairs, adjustments, or replacements were necessary or the _____ (specify repairs) had been made], when in fact the automobile had not been repaired or inspected and was in a dangerous and unsafe condition which was known or by the exercise of reasonable care could have been known by defendant.

3. Plaintiff relied on these representations and on the skill and judgment of defendant and on or about _____ [date], _____ [describe proximately caused accident and injuries].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, allege that an automobile repairer made negligent misrepresentations regarding automobile repairs, and are for use in conjunction with complaints alleging negligence or breach of warranty [for forms of complaints, see, e.g., §§ 91.60 (breach of warranty), 91.80 (negligence); see also § 91.13[6]; Reeder v. Hoag (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 41, 44, 321 P.2d 793] .

§ 92.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses post-licensing control of motor vehicle drivers by the California Department of Motor Vehicles.

Discussion in Part II includes the following:

- Subpart A [see § 92.10 et seq.], discussing basic definitions applicable to the administrative control of drivers as well as the State's general authority to regulate driving.

- Subpart B, discussing action by the Department of Motor Vehicles, including revocation, suspension, and cancellation of the driver's license generally [see § 92.20 et seq.], and, more particularly, suspension and revocation under the implied consent law [see § 92.40 et seq.], the administrative per se law [see § 92.60 et seq.], and the financial responsibility law [see § 92.90 et seq.].

- Subpart C [see § 92.100 et seq.], discussing general administrative review procedures applicable to actions by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

- Subpart D [see § 92.120 et seq.], discussing judicial review of actions by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

- Subpart E [see § 92.130 et seq.], discussing impoundment and forfeiture provisions for vehicles driven by unlicensed, suspended, or revoked drivers.

- A form for requesting an administrative hearing [see § 92.170].

- Forms for petitioning a court for writ of mandate to review action taken by the Department of Motor Vehicles [see §§ 92.180, 92.181].

- A form for filing a claim opposing a vehicle forfeiture [see § 92.190].

Part III provides a Research Guide [see § 92.150 et seq.].

§ 92.10 Governing Law

[1] Statutes and Regulations Governing Driver Licensing

Drivers' licenses are governed by Division 6 of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 12500 et seq.]. Financial responsibility laws containing provisions for suspension of a driver's license are set out in the first three chapters of Division 7 of the Vehicle Code [see Veh. Code § 16000 et seq.]. Provisions for cancellation of a minor's license because of failure of proof of financial responsibility generally are set out in Chapter 2 of Division 9 of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 17700 et seq.].

Regulations of the Department of Motor Vehicles generally are contained in Title 13 of the California Code of Regulations.

[2] DMV Hearings and Judicial Review

The Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11340 et seq.), insofar as it is applicable, governs all matters in a hearing that are not otherwise specifically addressed under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [Veh. Code § 14112]. For detailed discussion of the APA, see Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law , et seq. For detailed discussion of APA provisions governing agency adjudications, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudications , et seq.

Judicial review of administrative orders, such as for suspension or revocation of a driver's license, are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1084 et seq., covering mandate in general, and by Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, covering "administrative" mandate in particular, and by Code Civ. Proc. § 1107 et seq., covering extraordinary writs generally. Judicial review of an order of suspension or revocation of a person's driving privilege after a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 (implied consent and administrative per se laws) is governed by Veh. Code § 13559. For detailed discussion of judicial review of agency adjudications generally, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , et seq.

Award of attorney's fees in a civil action to review an administrative determination, when it is shown that the determination was the result of arbitrary or capricious action, is governed by Gov. Code § 800.

[3] Access to DMV Records

Inspection of DMV records is governed generally by the California Public Records Act [Gov. Code § 6250 et seq.; for detailed discussion of these provisions, see Ch. 470C, Public Records Act].

Volume 8: Automobiles-Chs. 80-92
Chapter 92 AUTOMOBILES: DRIVERS' LICENSES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. State's Authority to Control Drivers

§ 92.11 Definitions

[1] Driver's License

The term "driver's license" refers to a valid license to drive the type of motor vehicle or combination of vehicles for which a person is licensed under the Vehicle Code or by a foreign jurisdiction [Veh. Code § 310; see also Veh. Code §§ 325 (foreign jurisdiction defined), 415 (motor vehicle defined), 470 (person defined), 670 (vehicle defined)].

The usual meaning of "license" is permission or authority to do a particular thing or exercise a particular privilege [Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 851, 856, 76 Cal. Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930] . It may be said that the granting of a license to engage in an activity subject to regulation under the state's police power is merely the state's means to regulate and restrict the pursuit of the activity for the public good [Rosenblatt v. Cal. St. Bd. of Pharmacy (1945) 69 Cal. App. 2d 69, 74, 158 P.2d 199 (pharmacist's license)].

A provisional driver's license is one issued to drivers under the age of 18. These are more restrictive than those issued to older drivers. Some of the restrictions include the following [Veh. Code § 12814.6]:

- Six month instruction permit period before applying for a provisional driver's license.

- Fifty hours supervised driving practice, including 10 hours at night, before applying for a provisional driver's license.

- For the first 12 months after receiving the provisional driving license, unless accompanied and supervised by a licensed driver who is a parent or guardian, or who is a licensed driver 25 or older, or a licensed driving instructor, neither drive between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m. nor transport passengers under 20 years of age.

In the Vehicle Code, "license" is used to denote both the permission to drive and also the certificate, commonly called a driver's license, evidencing that permission has been duly given [compare Veh. Code § 12800 with Veh. Code §

[2] Drive

The meaning of "drive," which is used in the statutory definition of "driver's license" (see [1], above), is not given in the Vehicle Code, and apparently no court has construed it in the context of that definition. The ordinary meaning of "drive" with reference to a motor vehicle is "to operate the mechanism and controls and direct the course of" the vehicle or, intransitively, "to operate a vehicle" [Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary (1988); Estate of Richartz (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 292, 294, 288 P.2d 857 (statutory words should be given ordinary meanings unless Legislature otherwise clearly intended or indicated); see also Panopulos v. Maderis (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 337, 342, 303 P.2d 738 (equating "driving" with being "in actual physical control of a vehicle," the words of former Veh. Code § 69 which defined "driver")].

For discussion of whether a finding that a person was actually driving for purposes of determining whether an officer had reasonable cause to believe that the person was driving under the influence, see § 92.47[2][a].

[3] Department

In this chapter, "Department" refers to the Department of Motor Vehicles, a department in the Business, Transportation, and Housing Agency of the state government [see Veh. Code § 1500]. The word has this meaning generally in the Vehicle Code, but in some sections it means the California Highway Patrol [see Veh. Code § 290].

For a listing outlining state agencies generally and showing the Department in relation to other agencies, see Ch. 470, Overview of Public Administrative Law .

[4] Other Terms

The Vehicle Code contains definitions of many other terms [see Veh. Code § 105 et seq.]. Some of the more important or more frequently used terms include: drug [Veh. Code § 312], foreign jurisdiction [Veh. Code § 325], highway [Veh. Code § 360; see Veh. Code §§ 590-592], motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 415], nonresident [Veh. Code § 435], original driver's license [Veh. Code § 455], person [Veh. Code § 470], and vehicle [Veh. Code § 670].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. State's Authority to Control Drivers

§ 92.12 State's Authority to Regulate Driving

[1] Derives From Police Power

The state has authority to control, directly or through its agencies, the use of the public highways for all purposes [Santa Barbara v. More (1917) 175 Cal. 6, 11-12, 164 P. 895] . The operation of a motor vehicle in a public place is a privilege subject to reasonable regulation, under the state's police power, in the interest of the public safety and welfare [see Watson v. Division of Motor Vehicles (1931) 212 Cal. 279, 283, 298 P. 481] . The Supreme Court has stated that the area of driving is particularly appropriate for extensive legislative regulation, and the state's traditionally broad authority to enact any measure that reasonably relates to public health or safety under its police power operates with full force in this domain [Burg v. Municipal Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 257, 266, 198 Cal. Rptr. 145, 673 P.2d 732] .

[2] Authority of Department

The Director of Motor Vehicles of the State of California is the chief executive officer of the Department [see Veh. Code § 1504], and he or she is required to administer and enforce the provisions of the Vehicle Code relating to the Department [Veh. Code § 1650]. The Department is an administrative agency of legislative origin [see Veh. Code § 1500], and it derives all of its authority from the Legislature. That authority includes driver licensing, which is exclusive, and post-licensing regulation, which is shared with the courts.

The Department is authorized to control drivers by taking the following six kinds of action:

(1) Refusing to issue or renew a license [see Veh. Code § 12805 et seq.].

(2) Cancelling a license [see Veh. Code §§ 13100 (definition), 17704 (failure of financial responsibility by minor), 17711 (release from liability of signator of minor's application for license), 17712 (death of signator of minor's application for license)].

(3) Suspending a license [see Veh. Code §§ 13352(a)(1)-(3) (conviction for driving under influence or engaging in speed contest), 13353(a)(1) (refusal to submit to test), 13353.2 (administrative per se suspension for driving under influence), 13357 (theft of vehicle), 13359 (grounds authorizing refusal to issue license), 13360-13362 (violation of license restriction; failure to stop, reckless driving conviction, or manslaughter conviction; failure to surrender erroneously issued license, respectively), 13365 (failure to appear or pay fine), 13801 (refusal to submit to reexamination), 16070 (failure to prove financial responsibility), 16370 (failure to satisfy judgment for damages), 16374 (same), 16381 (default in payments on judgment), 16484 (inadequate proof of financial responsibility)].

(4) Revoking a license [see Veh. Code §§ 13202 (conviction of controlled substances offense), 13350 (conviction for hit and run, felony in commission of which motor vehicle was used, reckless driving causing bodily injury), 13352(d) (conviction in other state for driving under influence), 13353(a)(2), (3) (refusal to submit to test), 13357 (theft of vehicle), 13359 (grounds authorizing refusal to issue license), 13360 (violation of license restriction), 13365 (failure to appear or pay fine)].

(5) Placing restrictions on a license [see Veh. Code §§ 12812 (condition of probation for holder of class C or M license), 12813 (restrictions with respect to special mechanical devices or other restrictions to ensure safe operation)].

(6) Imposing probation in lieu of discretionary suspension or revocation [see Veh. Code § 14250].

The imposition of probation is always discretionary [see Veh. Code §§ 15 ("may" as permissive), 14250 (Department "may in lieu of suspension or revocation place the person on probation"); see also discussion in § 92.26[3]]. Regarding other actions, the Department in some cases has discretion whether to take action and in other cases is required to act, depending on the facts and the language of the applicable Vehicle Code section [see Veh. Code § 15 ("shall" as mandatory, "may" as permissive)].

The Department's authority to regulate driving includes the authority to suspend or revoke or impose probation on a nonresident's privilege to drive in California, in the same manner and to the same extent as respects a resident driver [see Veh. Code § 13552]. It also includes the authority to control the driving privileges of unlicensed persons [see Veh. Code § 13553]. As a practical matter, however, such persons are controlled by the courts through criminal prosecutions for driving without a license.

[3] Constitutional Limits on Authority

Once a driver's license is issued, its continued possession may become essential in the pursuit of a livelihood [Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , decision on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454]. Thus, suspension, revocation, cancellation, and the imposition of probation or restrictions as to existing licenses involve state action that adjudicates important interests of the licensees. Licenses may not, therefore, be taken away without procedural due process [see Bell v. Burson (1971) 402 U.S. 535, 539, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90 ; see also Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 795-799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , decision on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454 ; Mackey v. Montrym (1979) 443 U.S. 1, 10, 99 S. Ct. 2612, 61 L. Ed. 2d 321 ; Cinquegrani v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 741, 750, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 816 ; Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 368, 373 n.2, 224 Cal. Rptr. 543 (right to retain driver's license, once issued, is fundamental right for purposes of standard of judicial review of administrative decision to suspend or revoke)].

Although the privileges conferred by a driver's license are an important property right, they are not, however, so fundamental a right as to trigger strict scrutiny analysis [King v. Meese (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1228, 240 Cal. Rptr. 829, 743 P.2d 889 ; for detailed discussion of due process as it relates to administrative actions generally, see Ch. 470A, Due Process Restrictions on Public Agencies].

§ 92.20 Basic Licensing Law

The basic licensing law of California is that no person may drive a motor vehicle on a highway unless the person then holds a driver's license issued under the Vehicle Code, unless the person is expressly exempted under the code [Veh. Code § 12500(a)-(c); see Veh. Code §§ 12501-12505 (exempt persons); People v. Spence (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 710, 723-724, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92 (Section 12500 does not require knowledge that license is suspended)]. Further, no person may drive a motor vehicle or combination of vehicles that is not of a type for which the person is licensed [Veh. Code § 12500(d)].

In addition, no person may drive a motor vehicle on a highway when the person's driving privilege is suspended or revoked when the person has knowledge of such suspension or revocation. Knowledge of suspension or revocation is presumed if the Department has given notice to such person of the suspension or revocation. The presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof [see Veh. Code §§ 14601-14601.5].

When used in reference to a driver's license, "cancellation" means that a driver's license certificate is terminated without prejudice and must be surrendered. Cancellation may be made only when specifically authorized by the Vehicle Code [see, e.g., Veh. Code §§ 17704, 17711, 17712 (termination of adult's consent for minor's license)], when application is made for a license to operate vehicles of a higher class, or when a license has been issued through error or voluntarily surrendered to the Department. Any person whose license has been cancelled may immediately apply for a license [Veh. Code § 13100].

§ 92.22 Suspension and Revocation Distinguished

When used in reference to a driver's license, "suspension" means that a person's privilege to drive a motor vehicle is temporarily withdrawn [Veh. Code § 13102]. "Revocation" means that a person's privilege to drive a motor vehicle is terminated, and a new driver's license may be obtained after the period of revocation [Veh. Code § 13101]. As a practical matter, the distinction is that a license under suspension remains valid but not usable. If it is not expired when the suspension ends, the surrendered license certificate will be returned to the licensee. When a license is revoked, the effect is the same as expiration: the license ceases to exist. When the revocation is ended, the person may apply for a new license as in the case of the original application.

§ 92.23 Suspension or Revocation of License Issued to Person Under 21

Generally, for purposes of suspension or revocation of any driver's license issued to a minor, the Department has no authority to provide any lighter penalty than would be given to an adult under similar circumstances [Veh. Code § 13367].

Effective January 1, 1994, persons under 21 years of age and minors (persons under 18) are subject to special provisions of the implied consent and administrative per se laws, under which their driving privileges may be suspended or revoked for driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol [see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.2, 13382, 13388, 13390, 23136]. These provisions may apply in situations in which a driver under the age of 21 years has a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test [see Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(a)(2), 23136].

This standard is significantly more restrictive than that applicable to adult drivers 21 years of age of older (i.e., blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent or greater). The new provisions are intended to address the problem of drunk drivers under the legal age for purchasing or possessing alcoholic beverages [see Stats. 1993, ch 899, § 1]. For further discussion, see § 92.80 et seq.

§ 92.24 Mandatory and Discretionary Suspension or Revocation Distinguished

A chief distinguishing characteristic of mandatory suspension or revocation is that, generally, a person is not entitled to a hearing in any case in which action by the Department is made mandatory by the Vehicle Code [see Veh. Code § 14101(a)]. There are exceptions in which a right to hearing is specifically granted, however [see, e.g., Veh. Code §§ 13353.1(d) (driving under influence; persons under age 21), 13558(a) (implied consent and administrative per se laws), 13954 (accident caused by driver under influence with prior vehicular manslaughter conviction); see also § 92.25]. For discussion of the procedures for a hearing based on action by the Department generally, see § 92.100 et seq.

In addition, whenever the Department has discretionary authority to suspend or revoke a person's driving privilege, the Department may in lieu of suspension or revocation place the person on probation [see Veh. Code § 14250].

8-92 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 92.25

§ 92.25 Mandatory Suspension or Revocation of License

[1] Conviction for Specified Offenses

On receipt of a duly certified abstract of the record of any court showing that a person has been convicted of certain crimes or offenses, the Department is required to immediately revoke, or in certain cases suspend, the person's driving privilege [see Veh. Code §§ 13202.3, 13350, 13351, 13351.5, 13352, 13352.3, 13352.6, 13355, 13357].

Those crimes or offenses are:

- Failure to stop and render assistance after being involved in an accident resulting in injury or death [see Veh. Code § 13350(a)(1)].
- Use of a motor vehicle in commission of a felony [see Veh. Code § 13350(a)(2)].
- Reckless driving causing bodily injury [see Veh. Code § 13350(a)(3)].
- Manslaughter resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13351(a)(1)].
- Multiple convictions of failure to stop after an accident and reckless driving [see Veh. Code § 13351(a)(2)].
- Gross vehicular manslaughter while under the influence or flight from pursuing officer causing serious injury [see Veh. Code § 13351(a)(3)].
- Driving while under the influence [see Veh. Code § 13352(a)(1)-(7)].
- Engaging in speed contests or exhibition of speed [see Veh. Code § 13352(a)(8), (9)].

- Conviction of juvenile for driving while under the influence [see Veh. Code § 13352.3].

- Conviction of person who is 18 years or older of violation of Veh. Code § 23140 (operation of vehicle by person under 21 years, whose blood alcohol is 0.05 percent or more, by weight) [Veh. Code § 13352.6].

- Driving in excess of 100 miles per hour [see Veh. Code § 13355].

- Theft of motor vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13357].

- Assault with a deadly weapon in violation of Penal Code § 245, when the court finds that a vehicle constituted the deadly weapon or instrument used to commit the offense [see Veh Code § 13351.5(a)].

Veh. Code § 13352.3(a), above, relating to revocation of the license of a person under the age of 18 for driving under the influence, has been interpreted to mean that the violation, not the conviction, must have occurred while the person was under the age of 18 [Mayo v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 406, 410, 238 Cal. Rptr. 465] .

The statutes governing mandatory suspension or revocation also state, when applicable, a period of time after which the person may apply for reinstatement, and any conditions required for that reinstatement [see Veh. Code §§ 13202.3, 13350, 13351, 13351.5, 13352, 13352.3, 13355].

Generally, whenever the Vehicle Code requires the Department to suspend or revoke a person's driving privilege because of a conviction of a Vehicle Code violation, the suspension or revocation begins on a plea, finding, or verdict of guilty [Veh. Code § 13366].

Department action to revoke or suspend the driving privilege requires sufficient, admissible evidence of the conviction. The Department's action is triggered by its receipt of a duly certified abstract of the record of any court showing the appropriate conviction [see Veh. Code § 13352(a); Draeger v. Reed (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1511, 1522-1523, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (traffic citation is properly included in record of conviction as charging document, but standing alone is insufficient; police report may not be considered); see also Brierton v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 427, 435-436, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480 (DMV's mandatory suspension does not violate the separation of powers doctrine)].

[2] Commercial Driving Privileges

If the Vehicle Code requires the Department to suspend or revoke a person's driving privilege because of a conviction under Veh. Code §§ 23152 or 23153 (driving under the influence) or Veh. Code § 23109(a) (speed contests), and the violation occurred in a "commercial motor vehicle" (defined in Veh. Code § 15210), the revocation and suspension provisions of Veh. Code § 13352 apply to noncommercial driving privileges, while the commercial driving privileges are governed by Veh. Code § 15300 (requiring revocation of commercial driving privileges for specified offenses), and Veh. Code § 15302 (revocation for life on more than one conviction for specified offenses) [see Veh. Code § 13352(a)]. The holder of a commercial driver's license who was operating a commercial motor vehicle at the time of a violation that resulted in a suspension or revocation of the person's noncommercial driving privilege under Veh. C. § 13352 is not eligible for the restricted driver's license authorized under Veh. C. § 13352(a)(3) to (7) [Veh. C. § 13352(g)]. One court has held that the one-year commercial license disqualification imposed by Veh. Code § 15300(a)(1) requires a conviction of driving under the influence under Veh. Code § 23152(a) when the offense was committed while operating a commercial motor vehicle [Hamilton v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 351, 359, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652] . Thus, the court held that the Department lacked jurisdiction to impose the one-year suspension prescribed by Veh. Code §

15300(a)(1), based on a conviction under Veh. Code § 23152(b) (driving a vehicle with a.08 percent blood alcohol concentration), where that offense lacks the element that the driver be "under the influence" of alcohol at the time of the violation [Hamilton v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 351, 360-362, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652] .

[3] Violation of Implied Consent or Administrative Per Se Laws

[a] Failure to Complete Chemical Test Successfully

Under implied consent law, the Department is required to suspend or revoke a person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle if the person refuses an officer's request to submit to, or fails to complete, a chemical test as specified [see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 23612]. Under the administrative per se law, the Department must immediately suspend the privilege of any person to operate a motor vehicle if the person was driving with an unlawful blood alcohol level [see Veh. Code §§ 13353.2, 13382(a)].

Under both administrative acts, notice of the order of suspension or revocation is served on a person by the arresting officer, acting on behalf of the Department [see Veh. Code §§ 13382(a), 23612(e)]. The period of the suspension or revocation is generally determined by reference to any prior convictions that the person may have [see Veh. Code §§ 13353(a), (b), 13353.1, 13353.3(b), 13382(a), 23612(e)]. If certain conditions are satisfied the effective dates of action taken by the Department may run consecutively under an order by a sentencing court [see Veh. Code § 13354].

Although suspension or revocation is mandatory under these statutes, the Vehicle Code expressly provides for administrative review by hearing [see Veh. Code § 13558].

For further discussion of the implied consent and administrative per se laws, see § 92.40 et seq. and § 92.60 et seq., respectively.

[b] By Persons Under 21 and Minors

Special provisions of the implied consent law govern minors (persons under 18 years of age), and special provisions of the administrative per se law govern persons under the age of 21 years. Essentially, these provide different standards for determining unlawful alcohol intoxication as compared to drivers who are 21 years of age or older, e.g.:

- A driver under the age of 21 years who has 0.05 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood [see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 23140].

- A driver under the age of 21 years who has blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test [see Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(a)(2), 23136].

For further discussion, see § 92.80 et seq.

[4] Accident by Driver With Prior Manslaughter Conviction

Notwithstanding any other provision of the Vehicle Code, the Department immediately must suspend or revoke the driving privilege of any person who the Department has reasonable cause to believe was in some manner involved in an accident while operating a motor vehicle under the following circumstances at the time of the accident [Veh. Code § 13954(a)]:

- The person had an unlawful percentage, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood.

- He or she proximately caused the accident as a result of any act prohibited, or the neglect of any duty imposed, by law.

- The accident occurred within five years of the date of a violation of Penal Code § 192(c)(3) (vehicular manslaughter in violation of drunk driving statute while committing an unlawful act) which resulted in a conviction.

The period of suspension or revocation depends on which of the drunk driving statutes (Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153) the person is convicted under, and the existence of prior convictions [see Veh. Code § 13954(c), (d)].

The Department must immediately notify the person in writing of the action taken [Veh. Code § 13954(e)].

Although the administrative action under this section is mandatory, the section expressly provides for administrative review by hearing. On the person's written request and within 15 days from the date of receipt of that request, the Department must grant the person an opportunity for a hearing in the same manner and under the same conditions as provided under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [Veh. Code § 13954(e)].

The scope of the hearing covers whether the peace officer had reasonable cause to believe the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of drunk driving statutes Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153; whether the driver had been placed under lawful arrest; and whether a chemical test of the person's blood, breath, or urine indicated that the blood alcohol level wasan unlawful percentage, by weight, at the time of testing [Veh. Code § 13954(e)].

[5] Failure to Appear or Pay Fine

If the Department receives notification that a person has violated Veh. Code § 40508 (willful failure to appear as promised or to pay fine), the Department must suspend the person's driving privilege as specified [see Veh. Code § 13365(a)(1),(2)]. The suspension continues until the suspended person's driving record does not contain any notification of the violation [see Veh. Code § 13365(b)].

[6] Failure to Comply With Court Order

If the Department receives notice from a magistrate or a clerk of the court pursuant to Veh. Code § 40509, 40509.1, or 40509.5 that a person has willfully failed to comply with a court order issued for a Vehicle Code violation other than failure to appear or failure to pay a fine or, pursuant to Veh. Code § 40509.1, for a code violation other than failure to attend traffic violator school, the Department must suspend that person's driving privilege [Veh. Code §§ 13365.5, 40509.5(f)]. The requirement does not apply to specified code violations reported under Veh. Code § 1803(b) [Veh. Code §§ 13365.5(b), 40509.5(f)].

The magistrate or clerk of the court is not required to provide the Department with notice of compliance, except in cases when a person is charged with a violation of Veh. Code §§ 23152 or 23153 or Penal Code §§ 191.5 or 192(c)(3) relating to vehicular manslaughter or driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol. In those cases, notice to the Department is mandatory [Veh. Code §§ 40509(a), 40509.1, 40509.5(c), (f)]. However, if a notice is received under these provisions, the Department must suspend the driving privileges of the person involved [Veh. Code § 13365.5].

The suspension is effective 45 days after the Department notifies the person of the suspension action [Veh. Code §§ 13365.5(a), 40905.5(f)] or, if notice is provided under Veh. Code §§ 40905 or 40905.5, until the end of any stay of suspension [Veh. Code § 40905.5(f)]. The suspension continues until the person complies with the underlying order or, if the notice has been on file for five years or more (or in cases under Veh. Code §§ 23152 or 23153 or Penal Code §§ 191.5 or 192(c)(3) involving vehicular manslaughter or driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol, 10 years or more), until the Department, in its discretion, removes the notice from its records [Veh. Code §§ 12808(c), 13365.5(a)].

[7] Payment of Certain Fines, Fees, and Penalties With Dishonored Check

The Department must suspend a person's driving privilege on receipt of notice that a bank or financial institution has dishonored a check that the person presented to the Department in payment of either of the following [Veh. Code § 13364]:

- A fine that resulted from an outstanding violation pursuant to Veh. Code. § 40508 (wilful failure to appear as promised or to pay fine).

- A fine that resulted from a suspension for violation of Veh. Code § 40508 (wilful failure to appear as promised or to pay fine) or a court order issued under Veh. Code § 13365 (payment of fine in installments or in a specified time).

If any personal check is offered in payment of fines described in the instances described, above, and is returned for any reason, the related notice issued pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 40509 or 40509.5 must be restored to the person's record [Veh. Code § 13364(e)].

The suspension is effective 30 days after the Department mails written notice of the intent to suspend by certified mail and remains in effect until payment of the delinquent fines, fees, and penalties and until the person's driving record no longer includes a notice of a court order issued under Veh. Code § 42003(a) or a notice of a violation of Veh. Code § 40508(a) or (b) [Veh. Code § 13364(b), (c)]. However, a license suspended under these provisions must be reinstated immediately, and the fees and penalties waived, on submission of proof acceptable to the Department that the check in question was erroneously dishonored [Veh. Code § 13364(f)].

1. Cancellation, Revocation, and Suspension of License in General

8-92 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 92.26

§ 92.26 Discretionary Suspension or Revocation of License

[1] Applicable Circumstances

[a] Grounds Exist That Would Permit Refusal

The Department may suspend or revoke the privilege of any person to operate a motor vehicle on any of the grounds that authorize the refusal to issue a license [Veh. Code § 13359; see Veh. Code §§ 12805, 12807, 12809].

[b] Violation of License Restrictions

On receiving satisfactory evidence of any violation of the restrictions of a driver's license, the Department may suspend or revoke the license [Veh. Code § 13360].

[c] Conviction for Specified Offenses

The Department may suspend the privilege of any person to operate a motor vehicle on receipt of a duly certified abstract of the record of any court showing that the person has been convicted of any of the following crimes or offenses:

- Failure to comply with the requirements of Veh. Code § 20002 in the event of an accident resulting in damage to property only [Veh. Code § 13361(a)].

- A second or subsequent conviction of reckless driving [Veh. Code § 13361(b)].

- Manslaughter resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle as provided in Penal Code § 192(c)(2) [Veh. Code § 13361(c)].

In addition, the Department may, in its discretion, except as provided in Veh. Code § 15000 et seq. (Driver License Compact), suspend or revoke the privilege of any resident or nonresident to drive a motor vehicle in California on receiving notice of the conviction of the person in a state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the Dominion of Canada of an offense therein that, if committed in California, would be grounds for the suspension or revocation of the privilege to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 13363(a)].

[d] Failure to Surrender Erroneous License

The Department may require a licensee to surrender any driver's license that has been issued erroneously, contains any erroneous or false statement, or does not contain any notation required by law or by the Department. In the event a licensee does not surrender the license on proper demand, the Department may suspend the licensee's privilege to operate a motor vehicle. The suspension continues until the correction of the license by the Department or until issuance of another license or temporary license in lieu of thereof [Veh. Code § 13362].

[e] Failure to Submit to Reexamination

If a licensee refuses or fails to submit to reexamination, as required by the Department after notice, the Department may peremptorily suspend the driving privilege of the person until such time as the licensee shall have submitted to the reexamination. The suspension is effective on notice [Veh. Code § 13801]. For discussion relating to reexamination generally, see § 92.28[2].

[f] Determination That Safety Requires Action

In the event the Department determines on investigation or reexamination that the safety of the person subject to the investigation or reexamination or other person on the highways require such action, the Department is required to forthwith and without hearing suspend or revoke the privilege of the person to operate a motor vehicle or impose reasonable terms and conditions of probation that is to be relative to the safe operation of a motor vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13953]. For discussion relating to investigation and reexamination, see § 92.28.

[2] Duration of Suspension

[a] When Not Specifically Prescribed

Unless otherwise specifically provided for in Veh. Code § 13100 et seq., governing suspension or revocation of licenses, no suspension of a license by the Department may be for a longer period than six months. An exception applies, however, with regard to those cases in which a discretionary revocation would otherwise be authorized under Veh. Code § 13100 et seq.; in such cases the Department may suspend a license for a maximum period of 12 months [Veh. Code § 13556(a)].

[b] When Termination Is Dependent on Licensee

Any discretionary suspension, the ending of which depends on an action by the person suspended and which has been in effect for eight years, may be ended at the Department's election [Veh. Code § 13556(b)].

[c] When Suspension Is Based on Physical or Mental Condition

A suspension based on a physical or mental condition continues until evidence satisfactory to the Department establishes that the cause for which the action was taken has been removed or no longer renders the person incapable of operating a motor vehicle safely [Veh. Code § 13556(c)].

[3] Probation

Whenever the Department has discretionary authority by any Vehicle Code provision to suspend or revoke the privilege of a person to operate a motor vehicle, the Department may in lieu of suspension or revocation place the person on probation. The terms of the probation may include a suspension as a condition of probation, issuing a probationary license with such reasonable terms and conditions as deemed by the Department to be appropriate [Veh. Code § 14250]. The Department, as a condition of probation, may require the person to attend, for a period not to exceed 24 hours, an authorized driver education and training program [Veh. Code § 14250.5]. The Department may terminate or modify the terms or conditions of a probation order whenever good cause appears therefor [Veh. Code § 14251]. It may also, on receiving satisfactory evidence of a violation of any probation terms or conditions imposed under the Vehicle Code, withdraw the probationary license and order suspension or revocation of the privilege to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 14252].

§ 92.27 Suspension or Revocation of Certificate

The Vehicle Code provides various circumstances for the Department to revoke, suspend, or cancel certificates or endorsements relating to specified occupations [see Veh. Code § 13369 et seq.].

Those certificates or endorsements include: passenger transport vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13369]; hazardous materials [see Veh. Code § 13369]; school bus [see Veh. Code §§ 13369-13371]; school pupil activity bus [see Veh. Code §§ 13369-13371]; youth bus [see Veh. Code §§ 13369-13371]; general public paratransit vehicle [see Veh. Code §§ 13369-13371]; farm labor vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13369]; vehicle used for the transportation of developmentally disabled persons [see Veh. Code § 13369]; ambulance driver [see Veh. Code §§ 13372-13374]; and tow truck driver [see Veh. Code § 13377].

The right to an administrative hearing to review the Department's decision in a particular case would appear to be similar to that governing action on a driver's license. Thus, if the action is mandatory, the person would not be entitled to a hearing unless otherwise provided [see Veh. Code § 14101; see also Veh. Code §§ 13371 (hearing relating to school bus, school pupil activity bus, youth bus, certificate for vehicle used for transportation of developmentally disabled persons, and general public paratransit vehicle certificates), 13376 (same), 13374 (hearing relating to ambulance driver certificate), 13378 (hearing relating to tow truck certificate)]. On the other hand, if the Department's action is discretionary, it appears that review by hearing is available [see Veh. Code §§ 13950, 13951, 14100(a); see also Veh. Code § 310 (definition of "driver's license" is valid license to drive type of motor vehicle for which a person is licensed under Vehicle Code; hence definition appears to include certificates and endorsements thereto)].

[1] Bases for Investigation

[a] Broad Authority

The Department has broad authority to conduct an investigation to determine whether a driver's license should be or must be suspended or revoked (or whether probation should be imposed instead) [see Veh. Code § 13800]. An investigation may be commenced whenever the Department receives information or discovers from its records that a ground for action probably exists. Six kinds of information are listed in Veh. Code § 13800. It is not clear from the language of the statute whether the list is exclusive or whether other circumstances would permit the Department to conduct an investigation. The circumstances listed are as follows [Veh. Code § 13800]:

(1) A driver has been involved in any accident causing death or personal injury or serious damage to property. This information usually reaches the Department through official channels, such as police reports and driver accident reports [see Veh. Code § 16000 (discussed in Subdivision 5 (see § 92.90 et seq.) of this Subpart].

(2) The licensee has been involved in three or more accidents within a period of 12 consecutive months. This information is usually brought to the Department's attention by its computer.

(3) The person, within three consecutive years:

(a) Has committed three or more offenses that have resulted in convictions involving the consumption of an alcoholic beverage or drug, or both, while operating a motor vehicle [see Veh. Code § 13800(c) (setting forth partial list of offenses)].

(b) Has been involved in three or more accidents in which the accident reports show that the person was driving and had consumed alcoholic beverages or drugs, or both.

(c) Had any combination of three or more of those offenses and accidents. The Department might be informed of this information from abstracts of conviction records, in the case of the convictions, and through its own computer, in the case of the frequency of reported accidents.

(4) The licensee is a reckless, negligent, or incompetent driver of a motor vehicle. A source of this information may be the driver's family and friends, who may report the driver's consistent inability to drive safely. The cause may be, for example, advanced age or chronic illness. Another source of such information may be conservatorship proceedings. The superior court in some counties have routinely sent the Department copies of its orders in such cases.

(5) The licensee has permitted an unlawful or fraudulent use of his or her driver's license. The Department, apparently, investigates uses of a license certificate which are unlawful or fraudulent under the Penal Code, as well as uses which are unlawful under the Vehicle Code.

(6) Any ground exists for which a license might be refused [see Veh. Code § 12805 et seq.; see also Veh. Code § 13359 (Department may suspend or revoke on grounds that authorize refusal)]. This is the broadest category [see Veh. Code §§ 13359, 12805-12809]. The receipt by the Department of an abstract of the record of conviction of any offense involving the use or possession of narcotic controlled substances under Health & Safety Code § 11000 et seq. is a sufficient basis for an investigation by the Department to determine whether grounds exist for which a license might be refused [Veh. Code § 13800(f)].

[b] Determining Negligent Driver by Violation of Point Count

As discussed in [a], above, the Department may conduct an investigation to determine whether the privilege of any person to operate a motor vehicle should be suspended or revoked, or to impose probation, on receiving information that a licensee is a negligent driver [Veh. Code § 13800(d)]. A driver may be prima facie presumed to be a negligent operator of a motor vehicle under a schedule of "points" to be assigned to drivers for various traffic convictions [see Veh. Code § 12810.5(a)]. The Department has referred to this program as the "Negligent Operator Treatment System" or "NOTES."

Veh. Code § 12810.5 provides that, with an exception relating to certain classes of drivers discussed below, a person whose driving record shows a violation point count of four or more points in 12 months, six or more points in 24 months, or eight or more points in 36 months, shall be prima facie presumed to be a negligent operator of a motor vehicle. Application of the presumption in individual cases is qualified by the proviso that the Department is required to give due consideration to the amount of use or mileage traveled by the driver in question [Veh. Code § 12810.5(a)].

An exception under the schedule of points entitles certain classes of drivers to a higher point count. If a person is a class A, or class B licensed driver who is presumed to be a negligent operator under Veh. Code § 12810.5(a), discussed above, and who requests and appears at a hearing and is found to have a driving record violation point count of six or more points in 12 months, eight or more points in 24 months, or 10 or more points in 36 months, then he or she will be presumed to be a prima facie negligent operator [Veh. Code § 12810.5(b)(1); see Veh. Code § 12804.9 (establishing A, B, C, and M classes of licenses)].

The foregoing higher point count does not, however, apply to persons holding licenses in the above classes who are certified drivers or operators of a school bus or school pupil activity vehicle [Veh. Code § 12517], farm labor vehicle [Veh. Code § 12519], youth bus [Veh. Code § 12523], or general public paratransit vehicle [Veh. Code § 12523.5], or if the driver holds an endorsement to operate a 10-passenger transportation vehicle or certain hazardous waste vehicles [

Veh. Code § 15278(a)(2), (4); see Veh. Code § 12810.5(b)(1)].

In addition, the higher point count would not apply if the Department reasonably determines that four or more points in 12 months, six or more points in 24 months, or eight or more points in 36 months are attributable to the driver's operation of a vehicle requiring only a class C license, and not requiring a certificate or endorsement, or a class M license [Veh. Code § 12810.5(b)(1)].

For the purpose of Veh. Code § 12810.5(b)(1), each point assigned under Veh. Code § 12810 is valued at one and one-half times the value otherwise required by under that section for each violation reasonably determined by the Department to be attributable to the driver's operation of a vehicle requiring a class A or class B license, or requiring a certificate or endorsement described above [Veh. Code § 12810.5(b)(2)].

In addition, the Department may require a negligent operator whose driving privilege is suspended or revoked pursuant to Veh. Code § 12810.5 to submit proof of financial responsibility as defined in Veh. Code § 16430. The proof of financial responsibility must be filed on or before the date of reinstatement following the suspension or revocation and must be maintained with the department for three years following that date of reinstatement [Veh. Code § 12810.5(c); for discussion of proof of financial responsibility generally, see § 92.90 et seq.].

[c] Provisional License Program for Minors

Comparable to the Negligent Operator Treatment System, discussed in [b], above, the Department administers a provisional licensing program that applies to persons under 18 years of age. Under that program, the Department must take specified action when a driver's record shows a violation in excess of a designated point count [see Veh. Code § 12814.6(e); Essayli v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1251, 1255-1258, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 (minor driver properly assessed two points on driving record based on speeding violation and related automobile accident)].

[2] Reexamination

In addition to an investigation (see [1], above), the Department may require a reexamination of the licensee [Veh. Code § 13801]. The Department must give 10 days' written notice of the time and place of the reexamination. If the licensee refuses or fails to submit to the reexamination, the Department may peremptorily suspend the driving privilege of the person until such time as the licensee has submitted to reexamination. The suspension is effective on notice [Veh. Code § 13801].

[3] Notice of Proposed Action and Opportunity to Be Heard

Whenever the Department, after investigation or reexamination, proposes to revoke or suspend a person's driving privilege, or proposes to impose terms of probation on the privilege, the Department must give him or her notice and an opportunity to be heard before taking the action. The notice of proposed action and opportunity to be heard follows the Department's determination that any of the grounds for reexamination are true, or that the safety of the person investigated or reexamined, or other persons on the highways, requires that action [Veh. Code § 13950].

Whenever the Department proposes to refuse to issue or renew a driver's license, it must similarly notify the applicant of that fact and give him or her an opportunity to be heard [Veh. Code § 13951].

The notice must contain a statement setting forth the proposed action and the grounds therefor, and must notify the person of his or her right to a hearing as provided in Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [for discussion, see § 92.100 et seq.]. Otherwise, the Department, at the time it gives notice of its intention to act may set the date of hearing, giving 10 days' notice thereof [Veh. Code § 13952].

[4] Alternative Immediate Suspension

As an alternative to the procedure under Veh. Code §§ 13950-13952, in the event the Department determines on investigation or reexamination that the safety of the person subject to investigation or reexamination or other persons on the highways require such action, the Department must forthwith and without hearing suspend or revoke the privilege of the person to operate a motor vehicle or impose reasonable terms and conditions of probation that are to be relative to the safe operation of a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 13953].

Generally, no order of suspension or revocation or the imposition of terms or conditions of probation may become effective until 30 days after the Department gives written notice thereof to the person affected. An exception applies, however, when, in the Department's opinion, the mental or physical condition of the person requires immediate action for the safety of the driver or other persons on the highways. In such a case, the Department has the authority to make the order effective immediately on the giving of notice [Veh. Code § 13953].

Whenever a person is convicted of any offense for which the Vehicle Code makes suspension or revocation by the Department mandatory, the court in which the conviction is had must require the person convicted to surrender his or her license certificate to the court. The court thereafter sends the license certificate to the Department [see Veh. Code § 13550].

Whenever the Department suspends or revokes a driver's license, the action covers all licenses issued to the person, and all license certificates must be surrendered to the Department or, under Veh. Code §§ 13382, 13388, or 23612, to a peace officer on behalf of the Department, unless previously surrendered to a court [Veh. Code § 13551(a)]. A cancelled license certificate must also be surrendered [Veh. Code § 13551(a)].

2. Implied Consent Law

§ 92.40 Implied Consent Law in General

[1] Background and Purpose

In 1966, the Legislature enacted the implied consent statute [former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13558, 23612)] to fulfill the need for "a fair, efficient and accurate system of detection and prevention of drunken driving" [Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 77, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900] .

The law is intended to obtain the best evidence of blood alcohol content at the time of arrest by means of securing the civil cooperation of all persons privileged to drive [Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328 ; Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 368, 374, 224 Cal. Rptr. 543] . Its ultimate purpose is to inhibit intoxicated persons from driving on the highways [Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328 ; Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 993, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 (discussing admissibility of blood test results); People v. Ryan (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 168, 182, 171 Cal. Rptr. 854] . The implied consent statute does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to the arrest for driving under the influence [Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328] .

Before the enactment of the statute, courts held that when a person has been lawfully arrested for drunk driving, the police, utilizing appropriate medical procedures, may forcibly remove a blood sample from the driver without his or her consent [Hernandez v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 70, 77, 177 Cal. Rptr. 566, 634 P.2d 917 ; see also Mercer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 753, 758-759, 280 Cal. Rptr. 745, 809 P.2d 404 (noting that regardless whether terms of implied consent statute are met, forcible, warrantless chemical testing may occur)]. Despite the legality of such a coercive procedure, the Legislature recognized that such an episode "remains an unpleasant, undignified and undesirable one" [Hernandez v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 70, 77, 177 Cal. Rptr. 566, 634 P.2d 917] .

In enacting Veh. Code § 13353, the Legislature sought to obviate these consequences for the driver and avoid the possible violence that could erupt "if forcible tests were made on a recalcitrant and belligerent inebriate," while at the same time preserving the state's strong interest in obtaining the best evidence of the driver's blood alcohol content at the time of the arrest. Thus, the Legislature devised an additional or alternative method of compelling a person arrested for drunk driving to submit to a test for intoxication by providing that the person will lose his or her license for a specified period if the person refuses to submit an intoxication test [see Hernandez v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 70, 77, 177 Cal. Rptr. 566, 634 P.2d 917] . The effect of the legislation, according to the Supreme Court, is to equip peace officers with an instrument of enforcement not involving physical compulsion [see Hernandez v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 70, 77, 177 Cal. Rptr. 566, 634 P.2d 917 ; see also Mercer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 753, 760-761, 280 Cal. Rptr. 745, 809 P.2d 404 (citing R. Erwin, Defense Of Drunk Driving Cases, Ch. 33 (Matthew Bender), Court contrasted California implied consent law with similar but less restrictive laws in other states)].

Effective July 1, 1990, the Legislature enacted the administrative per se law to provide law enforcement with another powerful means to summarily and administratively remove suspected intoxicated drivers from the highways [see Veh. Code §§ 13353.2, 13382, 13558]. Similarly, effective January 1, 1994, the Legislature enacted provisions to both the implied consent law and the administrative per se law designed to remove from the highways suspected intoxicated drivers who are under the legal "drinking age" of 21 years or older [see Veh. Code §§ 13388, 13390, 23136]. For further discussion of the administrative per se law and the provisions governing drivers under 21 years of age, see § 92.60 et seq. and § 92.80 et seq., respectively.

A person who drives a motor vehicle in California is deemed to have given consent to chemical testing for the purpose of determining the alcoholic or drug content of his or her blood [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1); see Veh. Code § 13384 (Department may not issue or renew license unless person gives written consent to specified tests); see Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328 (statute does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to arrest for driving under the influence); Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 687, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1 (implied consent arises from act of driving rather than act of obtaining license)].

If a peace officer has reasonable cause to believe that a person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of the statutes that prohibit driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol, and has lawfully arrested the person, the officer may request that the person submit to a chemical test for the purpose of determining the alcohol content of the person's blood [see Veh. Code §§ 13353(a), 23612(a)(1)]. The officer's request is to be accompanied by certain warnings, including a warning of the consequences of refusing to submit to the test [see Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1); see also § 92.42]. If the person refuses to submit to the test, the officer, acting on behalf of the Department, serves the person with a notice of order of suspension or revocation, and seizes all the person's driver's licenses issued by the state of California [Veh. Code §§ 13353(a), 23612(f)]. The notice includes an endorsement that functions as a temporary license [Veh. Code §§ 13353(b), 23612(f); Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1562, 1573, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234] . For further discussion, see § 92.43.

The officer forwards the driver's license certificate with a sworn report to the Department and the Department is required to review the record to determine whether the suspension or revocation should be sustained [see Veh. Code § 13557; see also § 92.44]. In addition, the person may request review by an administrative hearing that is authorized to receive sworn testimony [see Veh. Code § 13558; see also § 92.45]. Unless the order of suspension or revocation is rescinded, it becomes effective 30 days from the date the person was served with the notice [see Veh. Code § 13353(a)(3)(C) (before July 1, 1993, order became effective 45 days from date of service); see also § 92.43[2]].

[3] Tests Permitted

[a] Testing for Alcoholic Content of Blood

A person who drives a motor vehicle is deemed to have given his or her consent to chemical testing of his or her blood or breath for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content of his or her blood [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)(A)].

If a blood or breath test is not available, the person must submit to the remaining test in order to determine the percent, by weight, of alcohol in the person's blood [Veh. Code § 23612(d)(2)].

If both the blood and breath tests are unavailable, the person is deemed to have given his or her consent to chemical testing of his or her urine and must submit to a urine test [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)(A), (d)(2)].

[b] Testing for Drug Content of Blood

A person who drives a motor vehicle is deemed to have given his or her consent to chemical testing of his or her blood or urine for the purpose of determining the drug content of his or her blood [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)(B)].

[4] Driver's Right to Request Testing

Although most of the provisions under the implied consent law relate to a person's refusal to submit to chemical testing, a person lawfully arrested for any offense allegedly committed while the person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code §§ 23140, 23152 or 23153 (driving while under influence of alcohol or drugs) may himself or herself request the arresting officer to have a chemical test made of the arrested person's blood or breath for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content of his or her blood [Veh. Code § 23612(d)(1)]. If so requested, the arresting officer is required to have the test performed [Veh. Code § 23612(d)(1)].

§ 92.41 Constitutional Questions

[1] Due Process and Equal Protection

As discussed in § 92.12[3], licenses may not be taken away without procedural due process [Bell v. Burson (1971) 402 U.S. 535, 539, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90] . The implied consent statute has withstood the challenge, however, that it violates federal and state due process by suspending licenses without a factual determination that the person was actually intoxicated [see Spurlock v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 821, 829-830, 82 Cal. Rptr. 42] .

In addition, the fact that Veh. Code § 13353 does not include an exception for cases in which a driver's license is essential to the maintenance of his or her employment and livelihood does not constitute a denial of equal protection [see Pepin v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 9, 11, 79 Cal. Rptr. 657] .

[2] No Right to Remain Silent

The Fifth Amendment right to remain silent does not protect a licensee in refusing to state whether he or she will submit to a test under Veh. Code § 23612. Further, there is no First Amendment right to remain silent in the face of a request that a licensee submit to a test [Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 382, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595] .

In addition, Veh. Code § 23577, which requires a period of confinement in the county jail if a person convicted of driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs is also found to have willfully refused to take a blood, breath, or urine test, does not violate a driver's privilege against self-incrimination [Quintana v. Municipal Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 361, 365-366, 237 Cal. Rptr. 397] .

[3] Not a Bill of Attainder

Veh. Code § 23612 does not constitute a bill of attainder since it does not apply to a certain individual or narrowly defined group but to all licensed drivers, the suspension of a license is civil in nature and does not constitute punishment for a crime, and the suspension proceedings are protected with administrative and judicial safeguards [Westmoreland v. Chapman (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5, 74 Cal. Rptr. 363 (decided under prior version of Veh. Code § 13353)].

§ 92.42 Warnings to Be Given Driver

[1] Warning of Consequences of Refusing to Test

The person arrested must be told that his or her failure to submit to the required chemical testing, or to complete the required chemical testing, will result in a fine and mandatory imprisonment if the person is convicted of a violation of Veh. Code §§ 23152 or 23153 (driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs), and will also result in one of the following [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)]:

(1) The suspension of the person's driving privilege for a period of one year.

(2) The revocation of his or her driving privilege for a period of two years if the refusal occurs within seven years of a separate violation of one of the following:

(a) Veh. Code § 23103 (reckless driving) as specified in Veh. Code § 23103.5 (regarding pleas).

(b) Veh. Code §§ 23152 or 23153 (driving under influence).

(c) Veh. Code § 23140 (person under age 21 driving under influence).

(d) Penal Code §§ 191.5 (gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated) or 192(c)(3) (vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated), which resulted in a conviction.

(e) If the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle has been suspended or revoked pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.1, or 13353.2 for an offense that occurred on a separate occasion.

(3) The revocation of the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle for a period of three years if the refusal occurs within seven years of two or more separate violations of:

(a) Veh. Code § 23103 as specified in Veh. Code § 23103.5.

(b) Veh. Code §§ 23140, 23152, or 23153.

(c) Penal Code § 191.5 or Penal Code § 192(c)(3), or any combination thereof, that resulted in convictions.

(d) If the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle has been suspended or revoked two or more times under Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.1, or 13353.2 for offenses that occurred on separate occasions.

(e) If there is any combination of those convictions or administrative suspensions or revocations.

The officer must also advise the arrested person that, in the event of refusal to submit to a test or tests, the refusal may be used against him or her in a court of law [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(4)].

For discussion of the effect of giving an inadequate warning of the consequences of refusing to test, see § 92.47[4][e].

The person arrested must be advised by the officer that he or she does not have the right to have an attorney present before stating whether he or she will submit to a test or tests, before deciding which test to take, or during administration of the test chosen [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(4)].

The right to counsel as an incident to the protection of the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent does not apply to the giving of a statement that one will or will not submit to a blood alcohol test, since the making of such a statement is not a testimonial communication and the refusal to take the test has not been declared a crime or punishable as such. Neither the denial of the opportunity for advice of counsel before stating whether one will submit to a test and before deciding which test to take, nor the denial of the opportunity to have counsel present while the test is administered, violates any constitutional right [Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 383-384, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595 ; Ent v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 936, 939, 71 Cal. Rptr. 726 (holding, on basis of foregoing statement in Fallis case, driver not entitled to advice of counsel in choosing which test to take); see also Rust v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 545, 547, 73 Cal. Rptr. 366 (officer who warns driver of Miranda right to counsel as required also to state right is not applicable to taking blood alcohol test under former Veh. Code § 13353)].

When it becomes apparent that the arrested person is confused, and the person's response to questions asked him or her concerning his or her willingness to take a chemical test clearly indicates that the person is asserting a right to counsel which he or she has been told only moments before that he or she is free to assert, then it is incumbent on the officer to make an explanation [West v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 908, 910, 80 Cal. Rptr. 385] . Fairness, as well as the provisions of Veh. Code § 23612, requires the officer to make it as clear as the arrested person's condition will permit that he or she is not entitled to have an attorney present [Plumb v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 256, 262, 81 Cal. Rptr. 639] .

[3] Warning of Choice of Tests

[a] Arrestee May Choose

If the person is lawfully arrested for driving under the influence of an alcoholic beverage, the person arrested has the choice of whether the test will be of his or her blood or breath, and he or she must be advised by the officer that he or she has that choice. If the person arrested either is incapable or states that he or she is incapable of completing the chosen test, then the person must submit to the remaining test [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(A)].

If both the blood and breath tests are unavailable, the person is deemed to have given his or her consent to chemical testing of his or her urine and must submit to a urine test [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(A), (d)(2)].

Although the arrestee is given the right to choose among the three tests, the person is not given the further right to specify when the test that he or she has chosen may be administered [Buchanan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 293, 298, 160 Cal. Rptr. 557] .

If the person is lawfully arrested for driving under the influence of a drug or the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug, that personalso has the choice of whether or not the test will be of his or her blood, breath, or urine, and the person must be advised by the officer that he or she has that choice [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(B)]. If he or she chooses to submit to a breath test, however, the person may also be requested to submit to a blood or urine test [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(C); see discussion in [d], below].

A person is neither expressly nor by necessary implication permitted to insist that all three tests provided for in Veh. Code § 23612 be administered to him or her at the state's expense [Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 77, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900] .

The person must also be advised that the blood or urine sample may be tested by either party in any criminal prosecution. The failure of either party to perform this test places no duty on the opposing party to perform the test, nor does it affect the admissibility of any other evidence of the alcoholic content of the blood of the person arrested [Veh. Code § 23614(c)].

[b] Warning of Limited Choice at Facility

If the person is lawfully arrested for an offense allegedly committed in violation of Veh. Code §§ 23140, 23152, or 23153 (driving while under influence of alcohol and/or drugs), and because of the need for medical treatment, the person is first transported to a medical facility where it is not feasible to administer a particular test of, or to obtain a particular sample of, the person's blood, breath, or urine, the person has the choice of those tests that are available at the facility to which that person has been transported. In this event, the officer must advise the person which tests are available at the medical facility and that the person's choice is limited to those tests that are available [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(3)].

Failure of the officer to advise a person that a particular test is not available at a medical facility, however, will not excuse a refusal to submit to any test unless the officer's misinformation is determined to have a causal effect on the refusal [Vann v. Meese (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 231 Cal. Rptr. 247] .

[c] Warning That Breath Sample Cannot Be Retained

In addition to the requirements of Veh. Code § 23612, a person who chooses to submit to a breath test must be advised before or after the test that the breath testing equipment does not retain any sample of the breath, and that no breath sample will be available after the test that could be analyzed later by the person or any other person [Veh. Code § 23614(a)]. These requirements have been held to be statutory only; there are no due process or fundamental fairness violations when the state fails to preserve a breath sample for independent testing, and there is no constitutional duty to advise a suspect that the breath test is not preservable [In re Cheryl S. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1240, 1242, 235 Cal. Rptr. 42] .

The person must also be advised that, because no breath sample is retained, he or she will be given an opportunity to provide a blood or urine sample that will be retained at no cost to the person, so that there will be something retained that may be subsequently analyzed for the alcoholic content of the person's blood. If the person completes a breath test, and wishes to provide a blood or urine sample to be retained, the sample is to be collected and retained in the same manner as if the person had chosen a blood or urine test initially [Veh. Code § 23614(b)].

[d] Warning That Driver Must Submit to Additional Testing

An officer may request a person who chooses to submit to a breath test to also submit to a blood or urine test if the officer has reasonable cause to believe that the person was driving under the influence of a drug or the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug and if the officer has a clear indication that a blood or urine test will reveal evidence of the person being under the influence. The officer must state in his or her report the facts on which that belief and that clear indication are based [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(C)].

The person has the choice of submitting to and completing a blood or urine test, and must be advised by the officer that he or she is required to submit to an additional test and that he or she may choose a test of either blood or urine. If the person arrested either is incapable or states that he or she is incapable of completing either chosen test, the person will then have the choice of submitting to and completing the other remaining test. The person must be advised by the officer that he or she has that choice [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(2)(C)].

§ 92.43 Suspension or Revocation for Refusal to Take Test

[1] Notice of Order

If the person who has been arrested for a violation of Veh. Code §§ 23140, 23152, or 23153 (driving under the influence of alcohol or drug) refuses or fails to complete a chemical test or tests, or requests that a blood or urine test be taken, the peace officer, acting on behalf of the Department, is required to serve the notice of the order of suspension of the person's privilege to operate motor vehicle personally on the arrested person. The notice must be on a form provided by the Department [Veh. Code § 23612(e)].

If the notice of the order of suspension has not been served by the peace officer under Veh. Code § 23612, the Department is required to immediately notify the person in writing of the action taken [Veh. Code § 13353(c)].

The peace officer who serves the notice, or the Department, if applicable, also must provide, if the officer or Department, as the case may be, determines that it is necessary to do so, the person with the appropriate non-English notice developed pursuant to Veh. Code § 14100(d) [Veh. Code § 13353(c)].

[2] Effective Date

The suspension or revocation does not become effective until 30 days after the giving of the written notice of suspension, or until the end of any stay of the suspension or revocation, as provided for in Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13353(a)(3)(C)]. For discussion relating to stay of suspension, see § 92.46[3]. For discussion relating to issuance of the notice of the order of suspension, see [1], above.

[3] Seizure of License and Issuance of Temporary License

If the peace officer serves the notice, he or she is required to take possession of any California driver's license and issue, on behalf of the Department, a temporary license, that is valid for 30 days from its date of issuance [Veh. Code § 23612(f)]. The temporary license is an endorsement on the notice of the order of suspension [Veh. Code § 23612(f)].

[4] Peace Officer's Sworn Report

The arresting officer must prepare a sworn statement under Veh. Code § 13380 on a form furnished or approved by the Department [Veh. Code § 13353(a)(3)(C)]. The report consists of a statement that the officer had reasonable cause to believe that the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code §§ 23136, 23140, 23152, or 23153, and that the person had refused to submit to, or did not complete, the test or tests after a request by the officer [Veh. Code § 13353(a); see Veh. Code § 13353.1].

The peace officer must immediately forward to the Department a sworn report of all information relevant to the enforcement action, including: information that adequately identifies the arrested person, a statement of the officer's grounds for belief that the person violated those sections, a report of the circumstances constituting a refusal to submit to or complete the chemical testing pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 13388 or 23612, a copy of any notice to appear under which the person was released from custody, and, if immediately available, a copy of the complaint filed with the court [Veh. Code § 13380(a)].

The sworn statement of the arresting officer must contain not just legal conclusions but the necessary facts that will constitute sufficient evidence to support those conclusions [Grundy v. Gourley (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 20, 24, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 104 (officer's sworn report contained sufficient facts to support probable cause); Solovij v. Gourley (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1229, 1233, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278] . There is a split of opinion over whether the arresting officer's unsworn report may be considered by a DMV hearing officer [see Dibble v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 496, 501, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709 (unsworn statements may not be used); Solovij v. Gourley (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1229, 1234, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278 (unsworn statements may not be used); MacDonald v. Gourley (2002) 102 Cal. App.4th 568, 572, 580-582, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607 , review granted (unsworn statements may be used)]. However, an unsworn report by the non arresting officer may properly be considered by the DMV hearing officer because: (i) the applicable statutes do not make certification of a nonarresting officer's report a condition of admissibility in the hearing; (ii) the report falls within the public employee records exception to the hearsay rule; and (iii) the admission recounted comes within the party admission exception to the rule [Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 448, 462, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860, 940 P.2d 311] . A driver facing license suspension following arrest for driving under the influence may not seek discovery of confidential peace officer personnel records pursuant to Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 531, 113 Cal. Rptr. 897, 522 P.2d 305 [Brown v. Valverde (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1531, 1547-1559, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 429] .

[5] Length of Suspension or Revocation

[a] Mandatory Periods Imposed

On receipt of the officer's sworn statement the Department must do one of the following [Veh. Code § 13353(a)]:

(1) Suspend the person's driving privilege to operate a motor vehicle for a period of one year.

(2) Revoke the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle for a period of two years if the refusal occurred within seven years of one of the following:

(a) A separate violation of Veh. Code § 23103 (reckless driving) as specified in Veh. Code §§ 23103.5 (regarding pleas), 23140 (person under age 21 driving while intoxicated), 23152 or 23153 (driving while intoxicated), or a separate violation of Penal Code §§ 191.5 (gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated) or 192(c)(3) (vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated), that resulted in a conviction.

(b) A suspension or revocation of the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353 (failure or refusal to submit to blood alcohol test) or 13353.2 (unlawful blood alcohol level during actual physical control of vehicle) for an offense that occurred on a separate occasion.

(3) Revoke the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle for a period of three years if the refusal occurred within seven years of one of the following:

(a) Two or more separate violations of Veh. Code § 23103 as specified in Veh. Code § 23103.5, or of Veh. Code § 23140, 23152, or 23153, or Penal Code § 191.5 or 192(c)(3), or any combination thereof, that resulted in convictions.

(b) Two or more suspensions or revocations of the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353 or 13353.2 for offenses that occurred on separate occasions.

(c) Any combination of two or more of those convictions or administrative suspensions or revocations.

[b] Compared With Administrative Per Se Suspension

Under some circumstances, the length of suspension or revocation for refusing to complete a chemical test is greater than had the person complied with the testing requirement and failed. For example, the minimum period of suspension under the implied consent law for refusing to take a chemical test is one year, while the minimum period of suspension under the administrative per se law when the person has taken the chemical test and the results of the test show that the person had an unlawful blood alcohol content is four months [compare Veh. Code § 13353(a) with Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(1) (discussed in § 92.62[4])]. Thus, it appears that the implied consent statute is designed to secure cooperation with chemical testing by providing an incentive for taking the chemical test [see Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 368, 374, 224 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; see also discussion under § 92.40[1]].

[6] Effect of Existing Suspension or Revocation

Generally, whenever the Vehicle Code requires the Department to suspend or revoke a person's driving privilege because of a conviction of a Vehicle Code violation, the suspension or revocation begins on a plea, finding, or verdict of guilty [Veh. Code § 13366]. If certain conditions are satisfied, however, the effective dates of action taken by the Department may run consecutively under an order by a sentencing court [see Veh. Code § 13354].

On receipt of the officer's sworn statement, the Department is required to review the record [Veh. Code §§ 13353(c), 13353.1(c), 13557(a); see also Veh. Code § 13380 (discussed under § 92.43[4], relating to contents of sworn arrest report)]. The Department is required to consider the sworn report and any other evidence accompanying the report [Veh. Code 13557(a)].

On review, the Department is required to sustain the order of suspension or revocation made under Veh. Code § 13553 or 13353.1 if the Department determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, all of the following facts [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1); see also Veh. Code §§ 13353(c), 13353.1]:

- The peace officer had reasonable cause to believe that the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136, 23140, 23152, or 23153.

- The person was placed under arrest (or was lawfully detained under Veh. Code § 23136).

- The person refused or failed to complete the chemical test or tests after being requested by a peace officer.

- Except for the persons described in Veh. Code § 23612 who are incapable of refusing, the person had been told that his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle would be suspended or revoked if he or she refused to submit to, and complete, the required testing.

If the Department determines, by a preponderance of the evidence, that any of the facts stated above were not proven, the Department is required to rescind the order of suspension or revocation and return or reissue the person's driver's license under Veh. Code § 13551 [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1)].

The Department is required to make the determination on administrative review before the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation [Veh. Code § 13557(c)]. A person may request and be granted a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, however, without first receiving the results of the administrative review under Veh. Code § 13557 [Veh. Code § 13557(e)]. After receiving a request for a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, the Department is not required to conduct an administrative review of the same matter under Veh. Code § 13357 [Veh. Code § 13357(e)].

The determination of the Department on administrative review is final unless a hearing is requested under Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1); see discussion under § 92.46[2]].

A request for an administrative review does not stay the suspension or revocation of a person's driving privilege. If the Department is unable to make a determination on administrative review within the time limit stated in Veh. Code § 13557(c), the Department is required to stay the effective date of the order of suspension pending the determination and, if the person's driver's license has been taken by the peace officer under Veh. Code § 13382, 13388, or 23612, the Department is required to notify the person before the expiration date of the temporary permit issued under those sections, or the expiration of any previous extension issued under Veh. Code § 13357(d), in a form that permits the person to establish to any peace officer that his or her driving privilege is not suspended or revoked [Veh. Code § 13357(d)].

A determination of facts by the Department under Veh. Code § 13357 has no collateral estoppel effect on a subsequent criminal prosecution and does not preclude litigation of those same facts in the criminal proceeding [Veh. Code § 13557(f)].

§ 92.45 Right to Administrative Hearing

Any person, who has received a notice of an order of suspension or revocation of his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle under Veh. Code § 13353, 13353.1, 13353.2, 13382, 13388, or 23612, or a notice pursuant to Veh. Code § 13557 may request a hearing on the matter [Veh. Code § 13558(a); see Dyer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 161, 167-168, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 138]. If a person fails to request a hearing, he or she fails to exhaust administrative remedies and is precluded from seeking judicial review [Marquez v. Gourley (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 710, 712, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784] .

§ 92.46 Administrative Hearing Procedure

[1] Applicable Law

The procedures relating to an administrative hearing to review an order of suspension or revocation by the Department under the implied consent law are governed under three statutory schemes [see Veh. Code §§ 13558(a), 14112].

Veh. Code § 13558 governs the request for a hearing, the location of the hearing, the issues to be determined at the hearing, the time within which the hearing must be held, a stay in the event the Department delays holding the hearing or rendering its decision, notice of determination and right of judicial review, and the effect of the determination on a subsequent criminal prosecution [see Veh. Code § 13558]. These aspects are discussed in [2]-[4], below, and §§ 92.47-92.53.

Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. provides the procedure relating to hearings to review actions affecting driver's licenses generally. These provisions govern a hearing for review of an order suspending or revoking a driver's license under the implied consent law, except as otherwise provided in Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13558(a)]. Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. governssuch aspects as: waiver of a hearing [Veh. Code § 14103], notice of hearing [Veh. Code § 14104], appointment of the hearing officer or board and recording of the hearing [Veh. Code § 14104.2], issuance of subpoenas [Veh. Code § 14104.5], certain evidentiary matters that may be considered [Veh. Code § 14104.7], request for administrative review of the hearing [Veh. Code § 14105.5], reopening the case, and application of the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.)]. For discussion of these aspects, see § 92.100 et seq.

All matters relating to administrative review of the suspension or revocation order that are not covered under Veh. Code §§ 13558, 14100 et seq., are governed by the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) [see Veh. Code § 14112]. For discussion of relevant aspects of the Act, see § 92.100 et seq.

The foregoing statutory scheme also applies to an administrative hearing for a suspension under Veh. Code § 13353.2, the administrative per se law, and Veh. Code § 13388, regarding administrative suspension for persons under 21 years of age. For further discussion of those provisions, see § 92.60 et seq. and § 92.80 et seq.

[2] Request for Hearing

A person may request and be granted a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 without first receiving the results of an administrative review under Veh. Code § 13557 [Veh. Code § 13557(e); see discussion under § 92.44].

Veh. Code § 13558(b) provides that if "the person wishes to have a hearing before the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation," the request for a hearing must be made within 10 days of the receipt of the notice of the order of suspension or revocation [Veh. Code § 13558(b); see also Veh. Code § 14100 (providing for demand of hearing)]. Although this provision seems to imply that a person might request a hearing after the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation, Veh. Code § 14103 provides that the failure to respond to a notice under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. within 10 days is a waiver of the right to a hearing, and the Department may take action without a hearing. Notice under Veh. Code § 13353 is a notice under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [see Veh. Code § 14100(a)]. Thus, it appears that notwithstanding the statement in Veh. Code § 13558(b) quoted above, the request should be made within 10 days of receiving notice of suspension or revocation. Otherwise, the failure to make the request within that time may be deemed a waiver of the right to a hearing. The Department has the authority, however, to reopen a matter when a person has failed to respond within the 10-day period [Veh. Code § 14103]. In any case, until clarification by statute, regulation, or court opinion, it is recommended that the request be made within the 10-day period. For a form of written request for a hearing or to reopen a question, see § 92.170.

[3] Stay of Suspension or Revocation

A request for an administrative hearing does not stay the suspension or revocation of a person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 13558(e)].

If the Department does not conduct an administrative hearing and make a determination after an administrative hearing within the time limit in Veh. Code § 13558(d), the Department is required to stay the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation pending the determination [Veh. Code § 13558(e)].

Under Veh. Code § 13558(d), the Department is required to hold the administrative hearing before the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation if the request for the hearing is postmarked or received by the Department on or before 10 days after the person's receipt of the service of the notice of the order of suspension or revocation pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.2, 13382, 13388, or 23612. Although these latter provisions refer only to administrative per se action, it appears that the stay under Veh. Code § 13558(e) would also apply to implied consent suspension or revocation since both laws are addressed in that subsection [cf. Veh. Code § 13557(d)].

If the person's driver's license has been taken by the peace officer pursuant to Veh. Code § 13382, 13388, or 23612, the Department must notify the person of the stay before the expiration date of the temporary permit issued pursuant to Veh. Code § 13382, 13388, or 23612, or the expiration date of any previous extension issued pursuant to Veh. Code § 13558(e). The notification must be in a form that permits him or her to establish to any peace officer that his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle is not suspended or revoked. The foregoing is conditioned, however, on the fact that the person is otherwise eligible [Veh. Code § 13558(e)].

[4] Location of Hearing

The hearing is to be held at a place designated by the Department as close as practicable to the place where the arrest occurred, unless the parties agree to a different location [Veh. Code § 13558(b); see Veh. Code § 14104].

§ 92.47 Issues Determined at Hearing

[1] Specifically Limited

For the purposes of a hearing on an order of suspension or revocation pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353, the only issues at the hearing are those facts listed in Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1) [Veh. Code § 13558(c)(1); see discussion under § 92.44]. Various issues relating to those facts are discussed in [2]-[5], below.

The delegation of authority to the Department to make findings of fact pertinent to the issues under former Veh. Code § 13353 [now see Veh. Code § 13558], and in particular to determine whether or not the arresting officer had reasonable cause to believe that the arrested person had been driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, does not constitute a denial of due process [see Finley v. Orr (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 656, 666, 69 Cal. Rptr. 137] .

[2] Reasonable Cause to Believe Person Violated DUI Statutes

[a] Reasonable Cause

An issue to be determined at a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 is whether the peace officer had reasonable cause to believe that the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136, 23140, 23152 or 23153 [Veh. Code §§ 13557(b)(1)(A), 13558(c)(1)].

"Reasonable cause" has been interpreted to be the substantial equivalent of the term "probable cause" [see People v. Pease (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 442, 445, 51 Cal. Rptr. 448 ; see also Veh. Code § 23612(h) (preliminary alcohol screening test that indicates presence or concentration of alcohol based on breath sample to establish reasonable cause to believe person was driving under influence of alcohol is field sobriety test and may be used by officer as further investigative tool); discussed under [b], below].

The implied consent statute applies broadly and generally to the motoring public (i.e., those who take advantage of the public streets, roads, and highways to operate a motor vehicle), and does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to the arrest for driving under the influence [Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133].

For further discussion of probable cause for arrest, and related constitutional restraints, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla, Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Chs. 11, 145 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Preliminary Alcohol Screening Test

A preliminary alcohol screening test (equipment used for such test commonly referred to as "PAS device") that indicates the presence or concentration of alcohol based on a breath sample in order to establish reasonable cause to believe the person was driving a vehicle in violation of Veh. Code §§ 23140, 23152, or 23153 is a field sobriety test that may be used by an officer as a further investigative tool [Veh. Code § 23612(h); see Roze v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1184-1190, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829 (PAS test results admissible in evidence but may not be given much weight)].

If the officer decides to use a preliminary alcohol screening test, the officer must advise the person that he or she is requesting that person to take a preliminary alcohol screening test to assist the officer in determiningif that person is under the influence of alcohol or drugs or a combination of alcohol and drugs. The person's obligation to submit to a blood, breath, or urine test, as required by Veh. Code § 23612, for the purpose of determining the alcohol or drug content of that person's blood, is not satisfied by the person submitting to a preliminary alcohol screen test. The officer is required to advise the person of that fact and of the person's right to refuse to take the preliminary alcohol screening test [Veh. Code § 23612(i); see Roze v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1187-1188, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829 (officer did not conduct PAS test in way to be used as proof of actual blood alcohol concentration; therefore not given substantial weight)].

However, the result of a preliminary alcohol screening test or chemical test (or the refusal to take or failure to complete one of these tests) is the statutory basis for a violation of Veh. Code §§ 13888 (driving while intoxicated; driver under 21 years of age), 23136 [see Veh. Code §§ 13388, 13390, 23136; for further discussion, see § 92.80 et seq.].

[3] Arrest

[a] Arrest Must Be Lawful

An issue to be determined at a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 is whether the person suspected of driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23140, 23152, or 23153 was placed under arrest [Veh. Code §§ 13557(b)(1)(B), 13558(c)(1)]. The testing must be incident to a lawful arrest under those provisions [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)]. If the arrest was not lawful, the person arrested is not subject to license suspension or revocation under Veh. Code §§ 13353 and 23612 [see Mercer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 753, 760, 280 Cal. Rptr. 745, 809 P.2d 404 ; Dyer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 161, 168, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 138 ; Music v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 841, 847, 270 Cal. Rptr. 692] .

For further discussion of what constitutes a lawful arrest generally, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla, Tarlow, California Criminal Defense Practice, Chs. 11 and 145 (Matthew Bender).

When the hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 involves a violation of Veh. Code § 23137, the preliminary alcohol screening test or chemical test or the request to take one of those tests must be incident to a lawful detention of a person under 21 years of age who is suspected of driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated [see Veh. Code §§ 13557(b)(1)(B), 23136(c)(2); for further discussion, see § 92.80 et seq.].

[b] Effect of Prior Unlawful Arrest Determination

When an arrest has been determined to be unlawful in a criminal proceeding, for example in a hearing under Penal Code § 1538.5 the Department is collaterally estopped from making a contrary finding on the issue of the unlawfulness of the arrest in a proceeding under Veh. Code § 13353 [see Zapata v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 108, 113, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855 ; Buttimer v. Alexis (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 754, 758 n.1, 194 Cal. Rptr. 603] .

In Buttimer v. Alexis (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759-762, 194 Cal. Rptr. 603 , the court held that as long as the issue necessarily decided in the previous proceeding is identical to the one that is sought to be relitigated, the previous proceeding resulted in a final judgment on the merits, and the party against whom collateral estoppel is asserted was a party or was in privity with the party at the previous proceeding, the elements for the application of the collateral estoppel doctrine are met [Buttimer v. Alexis (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 754, 758 n.1, 194 Cal. Rptr. 603 ; see Lucido v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 335, 341, 272 Cal. Rptr. 767, 795 P.2d 1223 ; People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 468, 484, 186 Cal. Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321 ; see also Ch. 491, Res Judicata].

There is a split of authority regarding whether privity exists between the Department and a district attorney's office [compare Zapata v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 108, 114-115, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855 (First Appellate District; holding that privity exists and criticizing Pawlowski, below, as incorrect); Buttimer v. Alexis (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 754, 760, 194 Cal. Rptr. 603 (Third Appellate District; same) ; Shackelton v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 327, 331, 119 Cal. Rptr. 921 (Second Appellate District, Division Four; same) with Pawlowski v. Pierce (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 692, 698, 249 Cal. Rptr. 49 (Second Appellate District, Division One; "no close association of entities representing state's interests"); Lofthouse v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 730, 738, 177 Cal. Rptr. 601 (Second Appellate District, Division Two; dicta, stating that Shackelton court erred)].

For discussion of collateral estoppel effect of hearing on subsequent criminal prosecution, see § 92.53[7].

[4] Refusal to Complete Tests

[a] Driver's Response Determinative

An issue to be determined at a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 is whether the person suspected of driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136, 23140, 23152 or 23153 refused or failed to complete the required test or tests after being requested by a peace officer [Veh. Code §§ 13557(b)(1)(C), 13558(c)(1)].

If the requirements of Veh. Code § 13353 are otherwise met, then regardless of the degree of a driver's voluntary intoxication or lack of understanding resulting from it, when he or she refuses or otherwise manifests an unwillingness to take the required test, he or she is subject to the license suspension or revocation provisions of that section [see Bush v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 788, 793, 71 Cal. Rptr. 123] .

In determining whether an arrested driver's conduct amounts to a refusal to submit to a test under Veh. Code § 13353, the court looks not to the state of mind of the arrested driver, but to the fair meaning to be given the driver's response to the demand that he or she submit to a chemical test [Payne v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1518, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

Even though no physical resistance is offered, the proclamation by a person that he or she is taking the test under protest has been held to be an unequivocal refusal to submit to a test [see Barrie v. Alexis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1157, 1161, 199 Cal. Rptr. 258 ; see also Payne v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1518, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] .

A person's inability to complete a test, such as a failure to produce urine for initial voiding of bladder during urine test, requires the person to select and complete one of the two remaining intoxication tests. The refusal to submit to such other tests constitutes a violation of the person's obligation under the implied consent law [Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1562, 1573-1574, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234 ; Kessler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1134, 1139, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46] .

[b] Exemption from Blood Testing

A person who is afflicted with hemophilia is exempt from the blood test required by Veh. Code § 23612 [Veh. Code § 23612(b)].

A person who is afflicted with a heart condition and is using an anticoagulant under the direction of a physician and surgeon is exempt from the blood test required by Veh. Code § 23612 [Veh. Code § 23612(c)].

In such cases, the person must elect to submit to one of the remaining tests, and failure to do so will be construed as a refusal to consent [see Carrey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1271, 228 Cal. Rptr. 705] .

[c] Incapacity Is Not Withdrawal of Consent

[i] Establishing Incapacity

The statutory scheme expressly permits a driver to prove incapacity to refuse, leaving his or her implied consent intact [Hughey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761-762, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 115] . A driver is excluded from the requirement of voluntary submission if he or she is incapable of understanding the requirements and consequences of the test. Implicit in this exclusion is a requirement that the driver's refusal is rational and disclosed under the circumstances of the facts presented. In all other situations, refusal to voluntarily submit to the test, and its completion, automatically results in the loss of the driver's license [Eilinger v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 748, 751, 192 Cal. Rptr. 187] .

As discussed in [a], above, the determining factor is not the state of the suspect driver's mind, but the fair meaning to be given to his or her response to the demand that the driver submit to the chemical test [Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 982, 986, 92 Cal. Rptr. 579] . For example, when a driver's express "refusal" to take a chemical test was accompanied by a comment that the arresting officer later testified had "made no sense," a finder of fact could well have found that it was not reasonable for the arresting officer to consider the driver's response to be a refusal [see Hughey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 115] .

A driver is not precluded from showing that he or she should be deemed not to have refused to submit due to a medical condition unrelated to alcohol use [compare Hughey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 752, 760, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 115 (driver with head injuries held not to have refused test) with Plunkett v. Alexis (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 370, 374, 186 Cal. Rptr. 261 (driver's pain from accident injuries did not preclude finding of refusal)]. The mere assertion by a licensee that he or she was suffering from some malady that prevented the licensee from submitting to a chemical test of his or blood, however, is no excuse for a refusal [Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 382-383, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595] .

A person who is unconscious or otherwise in a condition rendering him or her incapable of refusal is deemed not to have withdrawn his or her consent, and a test or tests may be administered whether or not the person is told that his or her failure to submit to, or the noncompletion of, the test will result in the suspension or revocation of his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(5)].

A person who is dead is deemed not to have withdrawn his or her consent, and a test or tests may be administered at the direction of a peace officer [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(5)].

[ii] Self-Induced Condition Does Not Excuse

A self-induced condition rendering the driver incapable of understanding and refusing to submit to a test, particularly if the condition results from alcohol, does not excuse failure to take a test [see Hughey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 752, 759-760, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 115 ; Bush v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 788, 792, 71 Cal. Rptr. 123 (contrary result would frustrate purpose of Legislature)].

There also is no impaired judgment defense in an implied consent case when the impairment is caused in part by the voluntary consumption of alcohol [McDonnell v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 653, 662-663, 119 Cal. Rptr. 804 (court rejected impaired judgment defense when driver suffered from reactive hypoglycemia due to unexpected synergistic effect of allergy medicine and alcohol)].

[d] Improper Testing

[i] Technical Deficiency

If one or two of the three tests provided for in Veh. Code § 23612 is objectionable to the driver because of a valid technical deficiency, then he or she must, if demand to take the test is properly made, point out the deficiency that has caused him or her to refuse the preferred test. The objection must be made with clearness sufficient to permit the officer or officers to decide on the validity of the protest and, if it is reasonable to do so, to take steps to meet the objection [Wegner v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 838, 841, 76 Cal. Rptr. 920 (decided under prior version of Veh. Code § 13353)].

[ii] Test Must Be Administered at Officer's Direction

The test must be administered at the direction of a peace officer having reasonable cause to believe that the person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23140, 23152 or 23153 [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)]. The arresting officer may, however, delegate administration of the test to another officer [Lee v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 275, 281, 283, 191 Cal. Rptr. 23] .

[iii] Person Administering Blood Test Must Be Qualified

Only a licensed physician and surgeon, registered nurse, licensed vocational nurse, duly licensed clinical laboratory technologist or clinical laboratory bioanalyst, unlicensed laboratory personnel regulated under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1242, 1242.5, and 1246, or certified paramedic acting at the request of a peace officer may withdraw blood for the purpose of determining the alcoholic content therein. A certified paramedic may not withdraw blood for this purpose unless authorized by his or her employer to do so [Veh. Code § 23158(a) (also providing that limitation as not applying to taking breath specimens)].

If an arrestee expresses hesitation about the technician's qualifications or identity, some form of assurance must be given to the arrestee. The simplest method is to produce some form of identification, although circumstances may warrant other methods of assurance. The mere presence of an officer with the technician acting at the officer's direction is not, however, sufficient comfort if there is no indication the officer had any peculiar knowledge of the technician's identity or qualifications [Ross v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 398, 402-403 n.2, 268 Cal. Rptr. 102] .

If the test given under Veh. Code § 23612 is a chemical test of urine, the person tested must be given such privacy in the taking of the urine specimen as will insure the accuracy of the specimen and, at the same time, maintain the dignity of the individual involved [Veh. Code § 23158(e); see Quesada v. Orr (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 866, 870, 92 Cal. Rptr. 640 (facts showed compliance with statute)].

[e] Inadequate Warning Causing Refusal

A function of a trial court when reviewing an order that suspends or revokes a license, is to determine whether the driver was in fact misled by inaccurate advice, and whether his or her refusal to submit to a test was a result of that inaccurate advice [Decker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 903, 907, 101 Cal. Rptr. 387, 495 P.2d 1307 (warning of consequences of refusal); see Vann v. Meese (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1070, 1073, 231 Cal. Rptr. 247 (dicta implying that misinformation regarding available tests may excuse refusal when it has causal effect on refusal); Plumb v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 256, 261-262, 81 Cal. Rptr. 639 (court reversed judgment denying driver's petition for writ of mandate to compel Department to set aside its decision suspending driver's license; Department required to determine whether driver was misled; implicit in warning requirement is further requirement that driver must be fairly warned)].

If the driver refuses to take a chemical test because he or she has not received the advice of an attorney, the driver must communicate this fact to the arresting officer at the time [see Thompson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 354, 362-363, 165 Cal. Rptr. 626 (construing Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 982, 986, 92 Cal. Rptr. 579 , and Lampman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927, 105 Cal. Rptr. 101)]. If the driver's refusal, however, was a result of an inadequate warning, that is, the driver was not aware that his or her refusal would result in an automatic suspension, then it is the officer's responsibility to take measures to ensure that the statutory warning is effectively communicated [Thompson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 354, 363, 165 Cal. Rptr. 626 (decided under prior law; now see Veh. Code § 23612)].

For further discussion of effect of an inadequate warning of the consequences of refusing to submit to chemical testing, see discussion in [5], below.

[f] Refusal to Choose Test Is Not Refusal to Submit

A person's willingness to take any test administered to him or her but refusal to select a particular test is not a refusal to submit to or complete a test within the meaning of Veh. Code § 23612 [James v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754, 73 Cal. Rptr. 452 ; see Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 78, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900 (dictum approving holding in James case)].

[g] Ambiguous Refusal Requires Clarification

An explanation by the arresting officer of a driver's rights and obligations under the implied consent law is necessary if something less than an outright refusal to submit to a test (e.g., a demand for counsel) is to be construed as a refusal. The determining factor is not the state of the suspect driver's mind; rather, it is the fair meaning of his or her response to the demand that he or she submit to a chemical test [see Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 982, 986-987, 92 Cal. Rptr. 579] .

[h] Qualified Consent Is Deemed Refusal

A conditional consent to a chemical test constitutes a refusal to submit within the meaning of Veh. Code § 13353 [Payne v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1518, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528] . Any equivocal refusal may be interpreted as a refusal [Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 382-383, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595 (dictum); see Carrey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1271, 228 Cal. Rptr. 705 (consent to submit to blood test, but refusal to sign hospital blood test consent form and refusal to submit to one of two remaining tests, construed as refusal to consent)].

A licensee may not qualify his or her consent to submit to a test by insisting that the test be administered by or in the presence of his or her own physician. Such a qualified consent is in fact a refusal to take the test. When the arresting officer does not cause, by a confusing warning as to the driver's rights, a misconception on the part of the driver that he or she is entitled to have his or her own physician administer a blood alcohol test, the officer is not required to correct that misconception; and a refusal to take a blood alcohol test arising from it may be treated as a refusal within the meaning of Veh. Code § 13353(a) [see Beales v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 594, 595-596, 76 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

A person's insistence on taking all three tests provided for in Veh. Code § 23612, rather than only one, constitutes nothing more than a conditional consent to a test, that must be deemed to be a refusal to submit to a test within the meaning of that section [Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 77, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900] .

[i] Delayed Consent Is Refusal

The provision in Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1) that the testing must be incidental to a lawful arrest and administered at the direction of, and when ordered by, a peace officer who has reasonable cause to believe that the person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23140, 23152 or 23153 (driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs), and the references in Veh. Code § 23612(d) to the arresting officer, imply that the decision of the arresting officer whether to request a test, and the suspect's response to the request, should not be delayed [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1); see Webb v. Miller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 619, 624, 627, 232 Cal. Rptr. 50 (constructive refusal followed 30 minutes later by unconditional consent and demand for test)].

[j] Refusal Is Not Overcome by Later Agreement

Once the person arrested has refused to take one of the tests required by Veh. Code § 23612, he or she may not avoid the license suspension mandated by the statute by later agreeing to take a specified test [Morgan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 165, 170, 195 Cal. Rptr. 707 (decided before legislation moving implied consent provision to Veh. Code § 23612(a)); see also Webb v. Miller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 619, 624, 627, 232 Cal. Rptr. 50 ; Zidell v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 867, 870, 71 Cal. Rptr. 111 (refusal followed 30 or 45 minutes later by consent and demand for test)]. The fact that a blood sample is ultimately obtained and the blood alcohol test is completed does not preclude a finding that the arrestee refused to submit to a chemical test [Morgan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 165, 171, 195 Cal. Rptr. 707 (decided before legislation moving implied consent provision to Veh. Code § 23612(a))].

[k] Refusal Is Not Overcome by Subsequent Guilty Plea

It is neither relevant nor material to the application of Veh. Code § 23612 whether the person arrested subsequently pleads guilty or not. At the time the person arrested refuses the chemical test, there is no assurance that on arraignment he or she will plead guilty. The arrestee has no power to avoid retroactively, by a guilty plea, the consequences of his or her earlier refusal to cooperate [see Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

An issue to be determined at a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 is whether the person suspected of driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136, 23140, 23152 or 23153 had been told that his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle would be suspended or revoked if he or she refused to submit to, and complete, the required testing [Veh. Code § 13558(c)(1); see Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1)(D)]. This requirement does not apply to cases relating to persons described in Veh. Code § 23612 who are incapable of refusing [Veh. Code §§ 13557(b)(1)(D), 13558(c)(1)].

Veh. Code § 23612(a)(1)(D) expressly requires that the driver who is arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs be warned of the consequences of his or her failure to submit to, or the failure to complete, the required testing. Under the Department's internal review of the record, if the Department determines, by a preponderance of the evidence that the person was not told of the consequence of suspension or revocation for refusal to submit to testing, the Department must rescind the order of suspension or revocation [see Veh. Code § 13557(b)(1)(D)]. Thus, it appears that if the omission was established at the hearing, the hearing officer or board should order rescission of the suspension or revocation order.

Further, the warning must be proper [see Giomi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 905, 906, 93 Cal. Rptr. 613] . As mentioned in [4][e], above, an inaccurate warning regarding the consequences of a refusal to submit to testing can taint the refusal if there is a causal relationship between the warning and the refusal [see Decker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 903, 907, 101 Cal. Rptr. 387, 495 P.2d 1307] .

A warning that a driver's license "could" be suspended if he failed to take one of the tests has been held to be insufficient and to amount to no warning at all because it reduces the admonition to one of bare possibility rather than strong likelihood that the adverse result would follow [see Decker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 903, 906-907, 101 Cal. Rptr. 387, 495 P.2d 1307 ; Giomi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 905, 906-907, 93 Cal. Rptr. 613 ; see also Thompson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 354, 358-361, 165 Cal. Rptr. 626] . The fact that a driver is warned that a six-month suspension could be imposed, but is not warned about the longer suspension imposed when prior convictions exist, precludes only the longer suspension and does not affect the six-month suspension [Daly v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 257, 262, 232 Cal. Rptr. 7] .

On the other hand, a warning that if a driver did not submit to one of the three tests required, then his driver's license "would probably be suspended" by the Department has been held to comply with that section's requirement of a warning regarding the consequences of refusal to take or complete a test [see Janusch v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 193, 196, 80 Cal. Rptr. 726 (petitioner also warned he "would lose" his license)].

Similarly, a warning that "if you don't submit to the test, chances are that you will lose your license" has been held to comply with the requirement that a person be warned regarding the consequences of refusal to take or complete a test [see Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 499, 503, 81 Cal. Rptr. 800 (petitioner also warned, "A refusal will result in the suspension of your driving privilege for a period of six months")].

Although the officer must also advise the arrested person that, in the event of refusal to submit to a test or tests, the refusal may be used against him or her in a court of law [Veh. Code § 23612(a)(4)], this advisement relates to a criminal proceeding, not an administrative proceeding. Thus, a failure to give the advisement does not preclude the administrative suspension of a driver's license [Sanchez v. Alexis (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 709, 716, 182 Cal. Rptr. 593 (decided before legislation moving implied consent provision to Veh. Code § 23612(a))].

[1] Broader Evidence Than Under Internal Review

Any evidence at the hearing is not limited to the evidence presented at the administrative review under Veh. Code § 13557 [Veh. Code § 13558(b); see also Veh. Code § 14104.7 (providing for sworn testimony and various reports at hearing)]. It appears that the internal administrative review is limited to review of the "record" consisting at least of the peace officer's report and accompanying documents [see Veh. Code §§ 13353(c), 13557(a)], and probably the Department's official records containing accident reports, license applications, abstracts of convictions, and similar materials. For discussion of the Department's review under Veh. Code § 13557, see § 92.44.

[2] Arresting Officer's Statement

[a] Admissibility

The arresting officer's sworn statement duly filed with the Department under Veh. Code § 13353(a) is an official record of the Department within the meaning of former Veh. Code § 14108 [now see Veh. Code § 14104.7]; and as such, it is entitled to consideration at a hearing before the Department, even though it is hearsay. The driver is entitled to produce evidence controverting the statement and can call the arresting officer as a witness at the hearing [Fankhauser v. Orr (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 418, 423, 74 Cal. Rptr. 61 ; see Veh. Code § 14104 (at hearing Department must consider its official records, among other records and reports)]. However, a driver facing license suspension following arrest for driving under the influence may not seek discovery of confidential peace officer personnel records pursuant to Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 531, 113 Cal. Rptr. 897, 522 P.2d 305 [Brown v. Valverde (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1531, 1547-1559, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 429] .

[b] Statement as Prima Facie Evidence

The sworn statement of the arresting officer provided for by Veh. Code § 13353, on which the summary suspension is based, is sufficient prima facie evidence at a hearing of any matter as to which there is no conflicting evidence. If the sworn statement is properly admitted into evidence under the public employee's records exception to the hearsay rule of Evid. Code § 1280, the statement can be sufficient even at a contested hearing [see Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1562, 1570-1572, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234 ; Snelgrove v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1364, 1374-1376, 240 Cal. Rptr. 281 ; but see Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 379, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595 (officer's conclusion in sworn statement that reasonable cause existed was not alone sufficient to overcome evidence to the contrary)].

The use of the sworn statement does not violate due process requirements, because the licensee may still confront and cross examine the officer if he or she obtains a subpoena at his or her own expense [Snelgrove v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1364, 1376-1377, 240 Cal. Rptr. 281 ; Burkhart v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 99, 113, 177 Cal. Rptr. 175] .

If the licensee desires to secure the testimony of the arresting officer, it is the licensee's burden to secure the officer's attendance. Even when the officer fails to appear after being served with a subpoena by the Department, or after the Department has given less formal assurances to the licensee that the officer will be present, the licensee must ask for a continuance to secure the officer's attendance, or any objection to the officer's nonappearance is waived [Scott v. Pierce (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 654, 657, 271 Cal. Rptr. 9] . There is no obligation on the part of the referee conducting the hearing to offer the licensee a continuance. Furthermore, when a continuance is sought, its grant or denial is within the referee's discretion, the exercise of which will likely depend on whether the licensee reasonably relied on the Department's subpoena or assurances [Scott v. Pierce (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 654, 657, 271 Cal. Rptr. 9 ; see Bussard v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 858, 864-865, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 414 (factors that influence granting or denying continuance are so varied that broad discretion allowed); Veh. Code § 14112; Gov. Code § 11524].

For further discussion of evidence that is admissible at a hearing on the Department's action affecting a driver's license generally, see § 92.100 et seq.

The Department is required to give written notice of its determination under Veh. Code § 14105. If the Department determines, on a hearing of the matter, to suspend or revoke the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle, notwithstanding the term of any temporary license issued under Veh. Code § 13382 or 23612, the temporary license must be revoked and the suspension or revocation of the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle becomes effective five days after notice is given. If the Department sustains the order of suspension or revocation, the Department must include notice that the person has a right to review by the court under Veh. Code § 13559 [Veh. Code § 13558(f)].

[1] Time to File

Notwithstanding Veh. Code § 14400 or 14401 (governing review of Department orders), within 30 days of the issuance of the notice of determination of the Department sustaining an order of suspension or revocation of the person's driving privilege after the hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, the person may file a petition for review of the order [Veh. Code § 13559(a)]. For a form of petition for judicial review, see § 92.181.

If a person has received a final, adverse decision by the Department without a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, it appears that judicial review would be governed by the administrative mandate provisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [see Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249 (discussed in [6], below)]. If a person fails to request a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, he or she fails to exhaust administrative remedies and is precluded from seeking judicial review [Marquez v. Gourley (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 710, 712, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784] . For further discussion of judicial review under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see § 92.120 et seq.).

[2] Proper Court

The petition for review must be filed in the court of competent jurisdiction in the person's county of residence [Veh. Code § 13559(a)]. This provision for filing a petition in the driver's county of residence is not a jurisdictional requirement. Therefore, although the DMV may, on timely motion, obtain a transfer of a petition that the driver filed in the wrong county (Code Civ. Proc. § 396b), it may not obtain a dismissal of the petition [Lipari v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 667, 671, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246] .

[3] Petition Will Not Stay Suspension or Revocation

The filing of a petition for judicial review will not stay the order of suspension or revocation [Veh. Code § 13559(a)].

[4] Review Limited to Hearing Record

The review will be on the record at the hearing and the court is not permitted to consider other evidence [Veh. Code § 13559(a)].

[5] Issues to Be Determined by Court

If the court finds that the Department exceeded its constitutional or statutory authority, made an erroneous interpretation of the law, acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner, or made a determination that is not supported by the evidence in the record, the court may order the Department to rescind the order of suspension or revocation and return the person's license or reissue a new license to the person [Veh. Code § 13559(a)].

[6] Standard of Review

Regardless of how it is labeled, either as a "petition for writ of mandate" or "petition for review," a petition challenging an administrative order based on the implied consent and administrative per se statutory scheme is heard by a court pursuant to the provisions of Veh. Code § 13559. If that section clashes with the more generalized provisions of the administrative mandate statute [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5], the specialized provisions of Veh. Code § 13559 control. If Veh. Code § 13559 is silent on some particular procedure, the general provisions for administrative mandate apply [Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249] .

For further discussion of judicial review under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see § 92.120 et seq.

[7] Effect of Judicial Review on Subsequent Criminal Prosecution

A finding by the court after a review under Veh. Code § 13559 has no collateral estoppel effect on a subsequent criminal prosecution and does not preclude litigation of those same facts in the criminal proceeding [Veh. Code § 13559(b)].

Generally, the driving privilege cannot be restored, and no restricted or hardship permit to operate a motor vehicle may be issued to a person during the suspension or revocation period specified in Veh. Code § 13353, 13353.1, or 13353.3 [Veh. Code § 13353.4(a)].

However, exceptions apply if the person has not previously been convicted of certain violations [see Veh. Code § 13353.4(a); see also Veh. Code § 13353.6(a) (allowing restricted commercial driver's license); Veh. Code § 13353.7 (allowing restricted driver's license if person enrolls in prescribed education and counseling or treatment programs); Veh. Code § 13353.8 (allowing restricted license for person under 21 years of age with critical need to drive when license is suspended under Veh. Code § 23136(a)].

Further, any fees due under Veh. Code § 14905 (costs of administration of suspension or revocation programs and California Highway Patrol overtime compensation for attendance at administrative hearings) must be paid before a driver's license may be issued, reissued, or returned to a person after suspension or revocation of the person's driving privilege [Veh. Code § 14905(a)]. This requirement does not apply, however, to a suspension or revocation that is set aside by the Department or a court [Veh. Code § 14905(b)].

§ 92.60 Administrative Per Se Law in General

[1] Background and Purpose

Before 1990, the actual act of suspending or revoking the license of a driver who was driving under the influence of a drug or alcohol was generally carried out by the Department when it received a duly certified abstract of judgment from a court [see Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 941, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319] . An exception was suspension under the implied consent statutes [see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 23612 (discussed in Subdivision 2 (see § 92.40 et seq.) of this Subpart)].

In 1990, another series of provisions was added to the drunk driving statutes, principal among which was Veh. Code § 13353.2. The purpose of the legislation was to provide safety for all persons using the highways of California by quickly suspending the driving privilege of those persons who have shown themselves to be safety hazards by driving with an excessive concentration of alcohol in their bodies [Stats. 1989, ch. 1460, § 1; Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 948, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319] .

Veh. Code § 13353.2 mandates that the Department "immediately" suspend the driving privilege of anyone who is found to have operated a vehicle while his or her blood alcohol level was at an unlawful percentage. Under this statutory scheme, once a driver is stopped by a police officer and arrested for drunk driving on the basis of blood alcohol findings, the Department is required to immediately serve notice on the driver that his or her driver's license is administratively suspended. Thus, no longer is license suspension dependent on the ultimate criminal conviction of the driver [Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 941, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319 (also holding no conflict between Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(2), governing p eriod of suspension under administrative per se law, and Veh. Code § 23542(b), providing for conditional probation with restricted license)].

Similar statutes, commonly known as "administrative per se" laws, have been enacted in several states [see Peretto v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 449, 452, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392] .

Effective January 1, 1994, the administrative per se laws were further amended to apply more restrictive provisions to drivers under 21 of age, i.e., under the legal "drinking age." For discussion of these provisions, see § 92.80 et seq.

[2] Summary of Departmental Action

If chemical tests show that a person arrested for a drunk driving offense has the prohibited blood alcohol level, the arresting officer or the Department must serve that person with a notice of order of suspension, effective 30 days from the date of service [Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(b), 13353.3(a), 13382(a)]. That notice must include the reason and statutory grounds for the suspension, the right to request an administrative hearing, and the date when a request must be made to receive a determination before the effective date of the suspension, among other information [Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(b), (c), 13353.3(a), 13382(a); Peretto v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 449, 452-453, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392] . The notice includes an endorsement that functions as a temporary license [Veh. Code § 13382(a)].

If no hearing is requested, the suspension becomes effective on the date specified in the notice, after the Department determines the facts on the basis of the officer's report [Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(a), (d), 13353.3(a), 13557(a); Peretto v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 449, 453, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392] .

For discussion of the administrative procedures for suspending or delaying the issuance of driver's licenses of persons under 21 years of age, based on lawful detention and the results of a blood alcohol screening test (or refusal to take or failure to take that test), see § 92.80 et seq.

In enacting the administrative per se laws, the Legislature contemplated two processes: one involving court proceedings and criminal in nature, the other involving administrative proceedings and civil in nature. The processes are, for the most part, intended to operate independently of each other and to provide for different dispositions [Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 947, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319] . Based on this distinction, the state does not violate due process or the proscription against double punishment by imposing both criminal and civil penalties for the same act or omission [Fearn v. Zolin (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1756, 1762, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314] .

The administrative per se law, providing for different periods of suspension for commercial and noncommercial drivers is rationally related to a legitimate legislative purpose and does not violate the equal protection clauses of the state or federal constitutions [Peretto v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 449, 459, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392 ; see Murphy v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 690, 696, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18] .

[1] Unlawful Blood Alcohol Content

It is unlawful for any person who has 0.08 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood to drive a vehicle [Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(a), 23152(b), 23153(b); see also Rehman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 581, 586, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 510 (0.04 percent for commercial vehicle)].

If a person was driving a motor vehicle when he or she had an unlawful blood alcohol content, the Department is required to immediately suspend his or her privilege to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 13353.2(a)].

A different standard for measuring unlawful intoxication applies with respect to drivers under the age of the 21. For further discussion, see § 92.80 et seq.

[2] Notice of Order of Suspension

[a] Service

The notice of the order of suspension under Veh. Code § 13353.2 must be served on the person by a peace officer pursuant to Veh. Code § 13382 or 13388 [Veh. Code § 13353.2(b)]. Under Veh. Code § 13382, the person is first arrested for a violation of the statutes that prohibit driving under the influence. After the arrest, a chemical test is conducted (assuming the person has not refused to submit to chemical testing under Veh. Code § 13353, as discussed in Subdivision 2 (see § 92.40 et seq.) of this Subpart). If the chemical test results show that the person has an unlawful blood alcohol content, the peace officer, acting on behalf of the Department, must personally serve the order on the arrested person [Veh. Code § 13382].

[b] Content

The notice must specify clearly the reason and statutory grounds for the suspension, the effective date of the suspension, the right of the person to request an administrative hearing, the procedure for requesting an administrative hearing, and the date by which a request for an administrative hearing must be made in order to receive a determination before the effective date of the suspension [Veh. Code § 13353.2(c)].

[c] Seizure of License and Issuance of Temporary License

If the peace officer serves the notice of order of suspension, the peace officer is required to take possession of any driver's license issued by California that is held by the person. When the officer takes possession of a valid driver's license, the officer must issue a temporary driver's license. The temporary driver's license is an endorsement on the notice of the order of suspension and is to be valid for 30 days from the date of arrest [Veh. Code § 13382(b)].

[3] Effective Date of Order of Suspension

An order of suspension of a person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.2 becomes effective 30 days after the person is served with the notice under Veh. Code § 13353.2, 13382(b), or 13388(b) [Veh. Code § 13353(a)].

[4] Length of Suspension

[a] Dependent on Previous Seven Years

The length of the suspension depends on whether there are certain prior convictions or administrative determinations within seven years of the occasion in question [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(b), (c); see also Veh. Code § 13353.6 (commercial license)]. For a general comparison with the length of suspension under the implied consent law, see § 92.43[5][b].

[b] Four-Month Suspension

Except as provided in Veh. Code § 13353.6 (relating to suspension of commercial license), if the person has not been convicted of a separate violation of any of the offenses specified below, or has not been administratively determined to have committed any of the following acts, within seven years of the occasion in question, the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle must be suspended for four months [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(1)].

The specified offenses or occurrences are the following [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(1)]:

- Conviction of reckless driving under Veh. Code § 23103 as specified in Veh. Code § 23103.5 (pleas of guilty or nolo contendere to reckless driving charge in satisfaction or as substitute for original charge of driving under influence).

- Conviction of driving under the influence of a drug or alcohol under Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153.

- Conviction of gross vehicular manslaughter while under the influence under Penal Code § 191.5.

- Conviction of committing an unlawful act while under the influence under Penal Code § 192(c)(3).

- Administrative determination that the person refused chemical testing pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353 (implied consent law, discussed in Subdivision 2 (see § 92.40 et seq.) of this Subpart).

- Administrative determination that the person was driving with an excessive concentration of alcohol pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.2 on a separate occasion.

- Conviction of driving while under the age of 21 years with 0.05 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood under Veh. Code § 23140.

- Administrative determination that the person was under 21 years of age and refused a preliminary alcohol screening test pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.1.

[c] One-Year Suspension

If the person has been convicted of a separate violation of any of the offenses, or has been administratively determined to have committed any of the acts, set forth in Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(1) (discussed in [b], above), within seven years of the occasion in question, the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle must be suspended for one year [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(2)].

[d] Concurrent Periods Based on Same Occurrence

If a person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle is suspended under the administrative per se statute, and he or she also is convicted of a violation of Veh. Code § 23140 (person under age 21 with prohibited blood-alcohol level) or Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153 (driving under the influence) arising out of the same occurrence, both the suspension under the administrative per se law, and the suspension or revocation ordered on the conviction must be imposed [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(c)]. The periods of suspension or revocation under these circumstances, however, are to run concurrently, and the total period of suspension or revocation may not exceed the longer of the two suspension or revocation periods [Veh. Code § 13353.3(c)]. This provision does not affect suspensions or revocations under the implied consent law pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353 or 13354 for refusal of chemical testing [Veh. Code § 13353.3(c)] (see discussion under § 92.43[5][b]).

For the purpose of the concurrent running of the suspension or revocation period, a conviction for violating the statutes that prohibit driving under the influence includes a violation described in Veh. Code § 23620, relating to vessels and vehicular manslaughter [see Veh. Code § 13353.3(c)].

§ 92.63 Collateral Testing

[1] Available at Driver's Own Expense

The person tested may, at his or her own expense, have a physician, registered nurse, licensed vocational nurse, duly licensed clinical laboratory technologist or clinical laboratory bioanalyst, unlicensed laboratory personnel regulated under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1242, 1242.5, and 1246, or any other person of his or her own choosing administer a test, in addition to any administered at the direction of a peace officer, for the purpose of determining the amount of alcohol in his blood at the time alleged as shown by chemical analysis of his or her blood, breath, or urine. The failure or inability to obtain an additional test by a person will not preclude the admissibility in evidence of the test taken at the direction of a peace officer [Veh. Code § 23158(b)].

[2] Advice of Availability Not Required

Veh. Code § 23612 does not purport to require the arresting officer to advise a driver that an additional test is available at his or her own expense. Principles of due process or equity also do not require it. All that due process requires is an opportunity for a person to obtain a timely sampling of his or her blood in the manner required by law [Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 78-79, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900] .

[3] Department's Consideration Not Required

The Department is not required to consider the results of a blood test made after arrest by a person's own physician. The test is not a substitute for the test required by Veh. Code § 23612 to be taken on arrest [see Funke v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 449, 453, 81 Cal. Rptr. 662] .

[4] No Due Process Right to Breath Sample

The requirements of Veh. Code § 23614 that a person electing a breath test must be told that the breath testing equipment does not retain a sample of the breath have been held to be statutory only. Hence, there are no due process or fundamental fairness violations when the state fails to preserve a breath sample for independent testing, and there is no constitutional duty to advise a suspect that the breath test is not preservable [In re Cheryl S. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1240, 1242, 235 Cal. Rptr. 42] .

§ 92.65 Internal Review of Record

The Department is required to make a determination of the facts in Veh. Code § 13353.2(a). The determination is made on the basis of the report of a peace officer submitted pursuant to Veh. Code § 13380, and any other evidence accompanying the report [Veh. Code §§ 13353.2(d), 13557(a)].

The Department is required to sustain the order of suspension or revocation in a review of a determination made under Veh. Code § 13353.2 if the Department determines by the preponderance of the evidence the facts under (1) and (2), and the facts under either (3), (4), or (5), below [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(2)]:

> (1) That the peace officer had reasonable cause to believe that the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code §§ 23136, 23140, 23152 or 23153.
> (2) That the person was placed under arrest (or, under Veh. Code § 23136, the person was lawfully detained).
> (3) That the person was driving a motor vehicle when the person had 0.08 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood.
> (4) That the person was driving a motor vehicle when the person was under 21 years of age and had 0.05 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his or her blood.
> (5) That the person was under 21 years of age and had a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or more, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test.

If the Department determines that any of those facts were not proven by the preponderance of the evidence, the Department must rescind the order of suspension or revocation and, provided that the person is otherwise eligible, return or reissue the person's driver's license pursuant to Veh. Code § 13551. For persons over 21 years of age, determination of the Department on administrative review is final unless a hearing is requested pursuant to Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(2)]. For persons under 21 years of age, the determination of the Department is final unless a hearing pursuant to Veh. Code § 13558 is requested within 10 days of the determination [Veh. Code § 13557(b)(2)].

For the purposes of the administrative per se law, an arrest, valid when made, remains a valid arrest for purposes of license suspension, even though the driver is subsequently released from custody without appearing before a magistrate for the issuance of a complaint (pursuant to Penal Code § 849(c)) [Armondo v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1179, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399] . This procedure results in a "disappearing lawful arrest," in that the arrest is retroactively deemed a detention only [see Penal Code § 849(b)]. The purpose of the reclassification of the driver's custody under the Penal Code (to prevent hiring discrimination against persons arrested but not charged with crimes) is different from that underlying the administrative-per-se scheme (to remove drunk drivers from the highway quickly, while providing drivers administrative review and hearing procedures) [Armondo v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1177-1179, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399] . The result of a contrary rule would be that no license suspension would be valid unless the driver were also brought before a magistrate and criminally charged [Armondo v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1179, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399] .

For further discussion of review under Veh. Code § 13557, including such matters as when the Department is required to make a determination, stay of suspension, and effect of the determination on a subsequent criminal trial, see § 92.44.

Except for the issues to be determined (see § 92.67), the hearing procedures are the same as those that govern an administrative hearing to review an order of suspension or revocation under the implied consent law [see Veh. Code § 13558]. Thus, Veh. Code § 13558 provides for request for a hearing, the location of the hearing, the time within which the hearing must be held, stay of the license suspension in the event the Department delays holding the hearing or rendering its decision, notice of determination and right of judicial review, and the effect of the determination on a subsequent criminal prosecution [see Veh. Code § 13558]. For further discussion of these procedures, see § 92.46[1].

In addition, as under the implied consent law, Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. (general procedure relating to hearings to review actions affecting driver's licenses generally), applies to hearings under the administrative per se law. For discussion of these aspects, see § 92.100 et seq. Finally, all matters relating to administrative review of the suspension or revocation order that are not covered under Veh. Code §§ 13558, 14100 et seq., are likewise governed by the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) [see Veh. Code § 14112]. For discussion of relevant aspects of the Act, see § 92.100 et seq.

For the purposes of a hearing on an order of suspension pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.2, the only issues at the hearing are those facts listed in Veh. Code § 13557(b)(2) [Veh. Code § 13558(c)(2); see discussion under § 92.65]. Various evidentiary matters relating to the issue of whether the person was driving with unlawful blood alcohol content are discussed under § 92.68[1].

For a discussion relating to the issues of whether the officer had reasonable cause to believe the person was driving in violation of Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153 and whether the person was placed under lawful arrest, see § 92.47[2] and [3], respectively.

[1] Dependent on Test Used

The Department has the evidentiary burden of justifying its order of suspension [Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 576 , citing Daniels v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 532, 536, 189 Cal. Rptr. 512, 658 P.2d 1313] .

The form of evidence that the Department will offer in support of its action will depend on the test used to determine that the person was driving with an unlawful blood alcohol content. If the person submitted to a breath test, the results of the test would be available immediately and stated in the officer's sworn statement or report [see, e.g., Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 140, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; see also Veh. Code § 13380; Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 548 n.7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 (report must contain results of breath test)]. The Department may also submit an intoxilyzer print out showing the results of the breath test [see, e.g., Bell v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 304, 308, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 ; Burge v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 384, 388, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 5] .

If the person submitted to a blood or urine test, the report would not contain the results of a blood or urine test because these tests are not performed by the officer at the time of the arrest [see Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 548 n.7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] . The results of the test would be contained in a report by the forensic laboratory that conducted the test [see, e.g., Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 542, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] .

For discussion of issues relating to admission of evidence in an administrative hearing generally, see § 92.100 et seq.

[2] Foundational Requirements

In general, the foundational requirements for establishing the reliability of test results consist of a showing of all of the following [Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 1001-1005, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792

; Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 140, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; People v. Adams (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 559, 561, 131 Cal. Rptr. 190] :

- The apparatus utilized was in proper working order.
- The test used was properly administered.
- The operator was competent and qualified.

Law enforcement agencies and their officers and employees have an official duty under Health & Safety Code § 100715, and related regulations, to perform blood alcohol analyses by methods devised to assure reliability [see Health & Safety Code § 100715; 17 Cal. Code Reg. § 1215 et seq.].

Compliance with the foregoing regulations establishes both a foundation for admission of test results into evidence in any proceeding and a basis for finding that such results are legally sufficient evidence to support the requisite findings in such proceeding [Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 142-143, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; see Shannon v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 60, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327 (test performed by trainee satisfied presumption requirements)].

The presumption contained in Evid. Code § 664, however, places the burden on the licensee to establish that the test did not comply with the foregoing requirements [Roze v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1183, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829 ; Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 140, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; see discussion in [4], below].

The presumption does not apply when the person who conducted the test was not among those authorized to perform forensic alcohol analyses. Thus, a test conducted by a "criminalist," rather than by a forensic alcohol supervisor, forensic alcohol analyst, or forensic alcohol analyst trainee working under the supervision of a forensic alcohol supervisor or forensic alcohol analyst, as required by 17 Cal. Code Reg. § 1216(a)(1) is not presumed valid [Furman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 416, 422-423, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 520] .

[3] Kelly-Frye Foundation Is Inapplicable

The traditional Kelly-Frye test, known also as the Kelly test [see People v. Kelly (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 24, 130 Cal. Rptr. 144, 549 P.2d 1240 ; see also People v. Leahy (1994) 8 Cal.4th 587, 599, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663, 882 P.2d 321 (reaffirming Kelly rule and declining to follow broader rule used in federal courts)], requiring foundational evidence regarding the general acceptance of a new scientific method of proof, is inapplicable to the well-accepted methods of testing blood alcohol [Burge v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 384, 389, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 5 ; but see People v. Leahy (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 587, 604, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663, 882 P.2d 321 (Kelly rule does apply to field sobriety test known as horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) test)].

[4] Presumption That Official Duty Was Regularly Performed

[a] Presumption Affects Burden of Proof

It is presumed that official duty has been regularly performed [Evid. Code § 664]. The presumption applies generally to police officers [Morgenstern v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 366, 374, 4 Cal.Rptr. 3d 46 (presumption applies even if officer failed to sign breath test operator's sworn certification); Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 141, 7 Cal. Rptr.2d 818 (noting that presumption does not apply to issue of lawfulness of warrantless arrest)]. This presumption supplies sufficient indicia of the trustworthiness of blood alcohol results to justify reliance on such results to support a license suspension, subject to a showing that the test was not performed in compliance with statutory requirements [Imachi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 809, 816-817, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478] . Thus, the foundational evidence described in [2], above, is not required in the absence of evidence that the test was not properly performed [see Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 547, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 ; see also Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 143, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] .

However, the presumption does not apply when the person who conducted the test was not among those authorized to perform forensic alcohol analyses. Thus, a test conducted by a "criminalist," rather than by a forensic alcohol supervisor, forensic alcohol analyst, or forensic alcohol analyst trainee working under the supervision of a forensic alcohol supervisor or forensic alcohol analyst, as required by 17 Cal Code Reg. § 1216(a)(1), was not presumed valid [Furman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 416, 422-423, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 520 ; see Shannon v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 60, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327 (test performed by trainee satisfied presumption requirements)].

If it is established that all matters in the report are the direct observations and within the personal knowledge of the reporting officer, the report, including the results of blood tests administered by the officer, constitutes sufficient evidence to support findings justifying suspension of the licensee's driving privilege [Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 143, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] .

Similarly, the actual written report of a blood test performed by a licensed forensic laboratory on behalf of a law enforcement agency would fall within the presumption of duty regularly performed [Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 547, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 ; see also Petricka v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1341, 1348, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909] .

The presumption affects the burden of proof. The presumption, therefore, effectively places on the licensee, against whom the sworn report is offered, the burden of proof as to the nonexistence of the foundational trustworthiness of the report as a whole, and in particular, the nonexistence of the foundational reliability of the tests on which the report is based [Roze v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1183, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829 ; Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 143, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818 ; see [2], above)].

Put another way, an officer's statement relating firsthand observations shifts the foundational method-of-preparation burden, requiring the licensee to show that the officer failed in his or her duty to observe and correctly report the events described in the statement [Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 547 ; see Manriquez v. Gourley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1227, 1233, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209 (officer not required to focus on driver for 15 minutes)]. Or, when the record of the test result is from a forensic laboratory, the presumption of duty regularly performed shifts the burden to the licensee to show that the report was not properly prepared [Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 547, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10] .

[b] Rebutting Presumption

As mentioned in [a], above, the licensee has the burden of rebutting the presumption favoring the reliability of blood alcohol tests [see Davenport v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 133, 140-143, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 818] .

The presumption has been rebutted by establishing that the testing apparatus or the forensic laboratory did not comply with licensing requirements. In such cases the Department is required to show that it complied with each of the traditional foundational requirements, discussed in [2], above, in order to sustain the suspension [see Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 1001-1005, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 (PAS test) ; Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 576, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249 (breath test); Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 549, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 (blood test)].

The operator of the test may be subpoenaed to testify regarding the manner in which the test was given [see McKinney Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 519, 525, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 (citing Veh. Code § 23158(c))]. The DMV's refusal to enforce a licensee's subpoena for the test operator's attendance at the hearing may deny the licensee his or her constitutional and statutory rights to confront and cross examine his or her accuser [Fitzpatrick v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1776-1778, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 110] . This may be so, for example, when the licensee's refusal to submit to a test is an issue at the hearing, and the opportunity to impeach an absent law enforcement officer's hearsay testimony regarding probable cause and the interaction between the officer and the licensee would be the licensee's only chance to defeat a license suspension [Fitzpatrick v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1771, 1777, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 110] .

[5] Official Records Exception to Hearsay Rule

Hearsay evidence is evidence of a statement that was made other than by a witness while testifying at the hearing that is offered to prove the truth of the matter stated [Evid. Code § 1200(a)]. Since evidence of the licensee's blood alcohol content is typically in the form of a peace officer's sworn report, in the case of a breath test, or a report by a forensic laboratory, in the case of a blood or urine test, such evidence is hearsay [see Santos v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 537, 546, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 ; Imachi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 809, 816-817, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478] .

Under the Administrative Procedures Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.), hearsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence but is not sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in civil cases [Gov. Code § 11513(d)]. The hearsay statement of a public employee such as the statement of a police officer or the tester's written report of the results of a blood alcohol test, is admissible at the hearing, and is sufficient in and of itself to support a finding, if it meets the criteria of a public employee business record [Evid. Code § 1280; Burge v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 384, 388, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 5 ; see Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1562, 1570-1572, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234 ; Wilson v. Zolin (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1108, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 (officer's sworn statement stating first-hand knowledge of breath test result qualifies under public record exception despite fact that report was not furnished by licensed forensic laboratory); but see Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 989-990, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 (blood test results not admissible when report not prepared at or near time of test)].

The criteria for admissibility under the public employee business record exception are the following [Evid. Code § 1280]:

- That the statement be made by and within the scope of duty of a public employee at or near the time of the act, condition, or event.

- That the sources of information and method and time of preparation are such as to indicate the statement's trustworthiness.

For example, in Lake v. Reed, the Supreme Court held that a police officer's unsworn report, containing both admission by defendant that he was driving car at time of arrest for driving while intoxicated, as well as witness statements that defendant was driving while intoxicated, was admissible under Gov. Code § 11513(c) in driver's license suspension hearing under "administrative per se" procedure for purposes of showing that defendant was driving at the time of arrest [Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 448, 460-461, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860, 940 P. 2d 311] . The police officer's report fit under public employee hearsay exception, and the driver's admission fit under party admission exception. The other witness statements were admissible to supplement the statements admitted under hearsay exceptions, and the evidence presented was sufficient to prove that defendant was driving at the time of the arrest [Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 448, 461-462, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860, 940 P.2d 311] . Further, an unsworn and uncertified blood or urine forensic laboratory report showing the blood alcohol level of a driver arrested for driving while intoxicated was held to be admissible under Gov. Code § 11513(c), as within the public employees exception to the hearsay rule [Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 448, 466-467, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860, 940 P.2d 311] .

Public employee business records are admissible in civil actions only to the extent that they report the employee's firsthand knowledge [Burge v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 384, 389, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 5] . For example, an officer's sworn statement that he or she saw the test results and was accurately reporting them cannot attest to the accuracy of the test results themselves or to the propriety of the procedures employed in obtaining them if the test was not performed by the officer and therefore was not within his or her personal knowledge [Imachi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 809, 815, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478] .

In addition, with respect to the requirement that a writing be made "at or near the time of the act, condition, or event," how soon a writing must be made after the act or event is a matter of degree and calls for the exercise of reasonable judgment. Whether an entry made subsequent to an event has been made within a sufficient time to render it within the hearsay exception depends upon whether the time span between the event and the entry was so great as to suggest a danger of inaccuracy by lapse of memory [Miyamoto v. DMV (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1210, 1219, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 459 ; see also Lee v. Valverde (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1076-1080, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867 (laboratory report admissible when blood work analyzed at or near time of being drawn, but computer printout dated later)].

[6] Presumption of Intoxication at Time of Driving

In any prosecution under Veh. Code § 23152, prohibiting a person from driving with an unlawful blood alcohol content, it is a rebuttable presumption that the person had an unlawful content at the time of driving the vehicle if he or she had an unlawful blood content at the time of the performance of a chemical test within three hours after driving [Veh. Code § 23152(b)]. Although this provision is expressly applicable to criminal proceedings and does not mention other forums, the presumption applies to Department hearings as well [see Komizu v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1008, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; Burge v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 384, 391, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 5 ; see also McKinney v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 519, 523-524, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18 (report stating that officer had reasonable cause to believe that driver was "arrested" for driving under influence at specified time, instead of stating that there was reasonable cause to believe person was "driving" under influence at the time, was not fatal when taken together with inferences and deductions from facts submitted)]. To trigger this presumption, it is incumbent on the DMV to establish that the test was taken within three hours of driving [Komizu v. Gourley (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1008-1010, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; Yordamlis v. Zolin (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 655, 660-662, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225] .

§ 92.69 Review of Determination

The methods of review following a hearing reviewing an order of suspension under the administrative per se suspension law are the same as those that apply after a hearing on an implied consent suspension or revocation. Thus, the person subject to the hearing may request a Departmental review of the decision [see Veh. Code § 14105.5(a)]. After notice of a decision following such a review, the person may request that the Department reopen the question [see Veh. Code § 14106]. He or she may also file a petition for judicial review after issuance of the notice of determination of the Department sustaining an order of suspension or revocation of the person's driving privilege after the hearing [Veh. Code § 13559(a)]. For further discussion of these methods of review, see § 92.40 et seq.

§ 92.70 Renewed Right to Request Administrative Review

If criminal charges under Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153 (driving under influence) are not filed for lack of evidence or dropped for insufficiency of evidence, a person whose license was suspended under the administrative per se law has a renewed right to request an administrative hearing before the Department. That request must be made within one year from the date of arrest under Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153 [Veh. Code § 13353.2(e)].

The Department must provide to the person seeking review, and the hearing officer must consider at the hearing, details regarding the defective or lacking evidence and the reason the evidence was found to be defective or lacking. If applicable, the hearing officer must also consider reasons stated on the record by the judge who dismissed the charges [Veh. Code § 13353.2(f)].

§ 92.71 Reinstatement of License Following Acquittal

If a person is acquitted of criminal charges related to a determination under Veh. Code § 13353.2(a) that the person was driving with an unlawful blood-alcohol content or concentration, the Department must immediately reinstate the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle if the Department has suspended it administratively under the administrative per se law [Veh. Code § 13353.2(e)]. An acquittal for these purposes means a ruling representing a judicial determination in the person's favor either that the person was not driving the motor vehicle or did not have the prohibited blood-alcohol level [Gikas v. Zolin (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 841, 855-857, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 500, 863 P.2d 745 (dismissal after successful suppression motion finding that arrest was illegal does not constitute "acquittal" for purposes of Veh. Code § 13353.2(e)); see also Agresti v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 599, 607, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 ("dismissal" does not constitute "acquittal" for purposes of Veh. Code § 13353.2(e)); Claxton v. Zolin (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 553, 562, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319 (not-guilty ruling, regardless of whether judge's ruling was based on adversarial litigation or factual stipulation of parties, constitutes "acquittal")].

The reinstatement requirement applies even though the licensee is convicted of alcohol-related reckless driving [Helmandollar v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 52, 56-57, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155 (stating that Veh. Code § 13353.2(a) does not mandate suspension of driving privileges for anyone convicted of "driving under the influence" but for driving with unlawful blood alcohol content)].

The DMV does not have a mandatory duty to reinstate a person's driver's license suspended pursuant to Vehicle Code § 13353 if that person is later found factually innocent of a criminal charge of willfully refusing to take a chemical test [Burnstine v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1431, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 89] .

The Department is required to immediately return or reissue for the remaining term any driver's license that has been taken from the person pursuant to Veh. Code § 13382 or otherwise. No fee may be imposed under Veh. Code § 14905 for the return or reissuing of a driver's license under these circumstances [Veh. Code § 13353.2(e), (f)].

[1] Background and Purpose

The Legislature enacted provisions effective January 1, 1994, that were specifically aimed at closing a "loophole" in the implied consent and administrative per se laws, with regard to penalties for those who drive under the influence of alcohol even though they are under 21 years of age, and hence, under the legal "drinking age" (i.e., under the legal age for purchasing or possessing alcoholic beverages) [see Veh. Code §§ 13352.3, 13353, 13353.2, 23136; see Stats. 1993, ch. 899, § 1]. It was the intent of the Legislature to prohibit a person under 21 years of age (including a minor under 18 years of age) from driving a motor vehicle for one year if that person drove with a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test [Stats. 1993, ch. 899, § 1(b), (d); see Bobus v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 680, 685, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168 (primary goal of Veh. Code § 23136 was to enhance public safety, and, indirectly, to discourage minors from consuming alcoholic beverages)].

For example, the administrative per se laws require the Department to suspend a driver's license when he or she is under 21 years of age and is found with a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test [see Veh Code § 13353.2(a)]. This is a more restrictive standard than the 0.08 blood-alcohol content standard that applies to adults 21 years of age or older [see Veh Code § 13353.2(a) and discussion under § 92.62]. These provisions are discussed under § 92.81.

[2] Implied Consent Laws Applicable to Persons Under 21

A person under the age of 21 years who drives a motor vehicle is deemed to have given his or her consent to a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test for the purpose of determining the presence of alcohol in the person, if lawfully detained for violating the prohibition against driving a vehicle with a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater [Veh. Code § 23136(a), (c)(1)].

For discussion of the implied consent law generally, see § 92.40 et seq.

§ 92.81 Administrative Per Se Laws Applicable to Drivers Under 21

[1] Automatic Suspension

It is unlawful for a person under the age of 21 years to drive a vehicle when he or she has a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test [Veh. Code § 23136(a)]. A violation of Veh. Code § 23136(a) is not, however, an infraction or a public offense, but subjects the driver to civil penalties under the Department's administrative procedures [see Veh. Code § 13390].

Thus, the administrative per se law now requires that the Department immediately suspend the driving privileges of any person under 21 who was lawfully detained under Veh. Code § 13388 and was found to have operated a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136(a), that is, who was driving with a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test [Veh. Code § 13353.2(a); cf. Veh. Code § 23612(h) (preliminary alcohol screening test is field sobriety test)].

Driving privileges must be suspended for one year at minimum when there is an administrative determination that the driver violated Veh. Code § 23136 or refused chemical testing pursuant to Veh. Code § 13353.1 [Veh. Code § 13353.3(b)(3)].

The Department must also suspend the driver's license if that person is lawfully detained and refuses to take or fails to complete the preliminary alcohol screening test when requested to do so [Veh. Code § 13388(b)].

For discussion of the administrative per se laws generally, see § 92.60 et seq.

[2] Preliminary Alcohol Screening Test Defined

For the purposes of Veh. Code § 23136 et seq., a preliminary alcohol screening test device is an instrument designed to measure the presence of alcohol in a person based on a breath sample [Veh. Code § 13388(c)].

[3] Lawful Detention and Request to Administer Preliminary Alcohol Screening Test

Any person under 21 who drives a motor vehicle in California is deemed to have given consent to a preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test for the purpose of determining the presence of alcohol if that person if lawfully detained for a violation of Veh. Code § 23136 [Veh. Code § 23136(c)(1); see also Veh. Code § 13384 (Department may not issue or renew driver's license unless person consents to preliminary alcohol screening test or other chemical test pursuant to Veh. Code § 23136)].

If a peace officer has reasonable cause to believe that a person under 21 years of age was driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136, and has lawfully detained the person, the officer is required to request that the person submit to a preliminary alcohol screening test for the purpose of determining that person's blood-alcohol concentration, if such a test is immediately available. If a preliminary alcohol screening test device is not immediately available, the officer may request the person to submit to chemical testing of his or her blood, breath, or urine, conducted pursuant to Veh. Code § 23612 [Veh. Code § 13388(a); see also Veh. Code § 23136(c)(2)]. This request must be accompanied by a warning that, if the person fails to submit to or fails to complete the alcohol screening test or other chemical test, his or her driving privileges will be suspended for one year to three years, as provided in Veh. Code § 13553.1 [Veh. Code § 23136(c)(3)].

[4] Notice of Order of Suspension

If the person refuses to take or fails to complete the preliminary alcohol screening test, or refuses to take or fails to complete a chemical test if the preliminary alcohol device is not available, or if either the preliminary alcohol screening test or chemical test reveals a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, the officer, acting on behalf of the Department, must do the following [Veh. Code § 13388(b)]:

- Serve the person with a notice of an order of suspension of his or her driving privileges.

- Take possession of the person's California driver's license, if any, and issue a temporary driver's license by endorsing the notice of order of suspension. A temporary driver's license issued in this manner is valid for 30 days from the date of issuance or until receipt of the order of suspension from the Department, whichever occurs first.

- Immediately forward a copy of the completed notice of order of suspension form, and the person's driver's license, if any, to the Department with the report required by Veh. Code § 13380. For the purpose of this section, "immediately" means on or before the end of the fifth ordinary business day after the notice of order of suspension was served.

The order of suspension issued under Veh. Code § 13388 is also governed by the applicable provisions of the general administrative per se law [see Veh. Code § 13353.2(b)]. For a full discussion of these provisions, see § 92.60 et seq.

[5] Peace Officer's Sworn Report

A peace officer who serves a notice of an order of suspension under Veh. Code § 13388 must immediately forward to the Department a sworn report of all information relevant to the enforcement action, including a statement of the officer's grounds for belief that the person violated Veh. Code § 23136 and a report of any results of tests conducted on the person or the circumstances constituting the person's refusal to submit to or complete the tests [see Veh. Code § 13380].

[6] Procedure on Driver's Refusal to Take or Failure to Complete Alcohol Screening Test

Veh. Code § 13353.1 sets forth steps that the peace officer and the Department must take when a person subject to Veh. Code § 13388 refuses to take or fails to complete the preliminary alcohol screening test. The peace officer must serve the notice of order of suspension personally pursuant to Veh. Code § 13388 [Veh. Code § 13353.1(b)]. Otherwise, the Department must immediately notify the person in writing of the action taken. In either case, if it is appropriate, the officer or the Department must provide a non-English notice developed under Veh. Code § 14100(d) [Veh. Code § 13353.1(b)].

On receipt of the peace officer's sworn statement submitted pursuant to Veh. Code § 13380, the Department must review the record and do one of the following [Veh. Code § 13553.1(a)]:

(1) Suspend the person's driving privilege for one year.

(2) Revoke the person's driving privilege for two years, if the refusal was within seven years of either of the following:

(a) Another violation of Veh. Code § 23136(a) that resulted in a finding or a conviction of specified sections.

(b) A suspension or revocation of the person's driving privilege pursuant to Veh. Code § 13355, 13353.2, or 23136(a) for an offense that occurred on a separate occasion.

(3) Revoke the person's driving privilege for three years, if the refusal was within seven years of any of the following:

(a) Two or more other violations of Veh. Code § 23136(a) that resulted in a finding or a conviction of specified sections.

(b) Two or more suspensions or revocations of the person's driving privilege pursuant to Veh. Code § 23136(a), 13353, or 13353.2 for offenses that occurred on separate occasions.

(c) Any combination of two or more of the foregoing convictions or administrative suspensions or revocations.

The Department's review of the record must consider all of the following issues [Veh. Code § 13353.1(c)]:

- Whether the peace officer had reasonable cause to believe the person had been driving a motor vehicle in violation of Veh. Code § 23136.

- Whether the person was lawfully detained.

- Whether the person refused to submit, or did not complete, the test after being requested to do so by the peace officer.

[7] Request for Administrative Hearing

A person whose driving privileges are suspended for refusal to take or failure to complete a preliminary alcohol screening test under Veh. Code § 13388 may request an administrative hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13353.1(d)]. However, this request does not stay the order of suspension except as provided in Veh. Code § 13558(e) [Veh. Code § 13353.1(d)]. These administrative hearing procedures are also available to review an order of suspension or revocation under the administrative per se law and implied consent law [see Veh. Code § 13558]. For further discussion see § 92.40 et seq. and § 92.60 et seq.

[8] Petition for Review Based on Critical Need to Drive

A person whose driving privileges have been suspended under Veh. Code § 23136(a) may petition the Department for review. On review, the Department may modify its original order of suspension and impose restrictions instead if the person has a "critical need to drive" as defined in Veh. Code § 12513 [Veh. Code § 13353.8].

[9] Notice to Driver's License Applicants

The Department must provide specified information regarding the provisions of Veh. Code § 23136 et seq. to any person under 21 years of age before issuing that person a driver's license or permit [Veh. Code § 12802.5]. In turn, applicants must consent to required chemical tests to determine alcohol or drug content of blood levels if lawfully arrested or detained under drunk driving laws [see Veh. Code § 13384].

[10] Procedures Applicable to Minors

With certain exceptions, the Department must immediately revoke the driving privilege of a person on receipt of an abstract of court record or juvenile court record or report showing that the person was convicted of violating Veh. Code § 23152 or 23153, relating to driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, while under 18 years of age [Veh. Code § 13352.3(a)]. This requirement also applies to out-of-state convictions [see Veh. Code §§ 13352(d), 13367].

§ 92.90 Financial Responsibility Laws in General

[1] Background and Purpose

Before 1975, the financial responsibility laws contained in former Veh. Code § 16000 et seq. presupposed the likelihood of negligent or willfully improper motor vehicle operation [see Stats. 1974, ch. 1409, § 1]. In the case of Rios, the Supreme Court held that since operation of the sanctions made that presupposition, the sanctions could not be constitutionally imposed without granting the right to notice and hearing on the issue of fault-related vehicle operation to the owner or operator [Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 797-799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454].

As a consequence of Rios, the Legislature suspended operation of some of the financial responsibility sanctions. Operative January 1, 1975, the Legislature enacted a new Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., together with amendments to certain provisions in the Insurance Code, that require those who own or operate motor vehicles on the streets and highways of California to show evidence that they are financially capable of providing monetary protection to those suffering injury to their person or property by reason of the ownership or use of such vehicles, without regard to negligence, liability, carelessness, or culpability. It deemed such capability a concurrent responsibility of ownership or operation [see Stats. 1974, ch. 1409, § 1].

Thus, the Legislature adopted provisions requiring those who own or operate motor vehicles to show evidence of such financial capability by certain prescribed methods, including the filing of proof of financial responsibility whenever a driver is involved in an accident involving bodily injury or property damage in excess of a specified amount, regardless of fault [see Stats. 1974, ch. 1409, § 1; Veh. Code § 16021].

The law was held to be constitutional in light of the Legislature's declaration that the purpose of the law was not so much to deter negligent drivers, but rather to ensure that everyone, negligent or not, was able to compensate for any harm they caused while driving [see Stats. 1974, ch. 1409, § 1; King v. Meese (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1220-1221, 240 Cal. Rptr. 829, 743 P.2d 889 (citing Anacker v. Sillas (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 416, 421-422, 135 Cal. Rptr. 537)].

The Department is required to suspend a person's driver's license when he or she has violated certain provisions in the financial responsibility laws.

In general, those laws may be classified as follows:

- Suspension because a driver has failed to make an accident report [see Veh. Code § 16004, discussed under § 92.91].

- Suspension because a driver has failed to prove that he or she was financially responsible at the time of an automobile accident [see Veh. Code § 16070, discussed under § 92.92].

- Suspension because a judgment debtor has failed to satisfy a judgment relating to an automobile accident within a specified time [see Veh. Code § 16370; discussed under § 92.93].

- General financial responsibility laws, applicable under various Vehicle Code provisions, that require a person to demonstrate evidence of financial responsibility before the Department may act; for example, as a condition to the reinstatement of a suspended or revoked license, or when requested by an examining officer prior to conducting a performance test [see Veh. Code § 16430 et seq. (discussed under § 92.94), see also Veh. Code § 16431(b)].

- Financial responsibility laws applicable to commercial vehicles [see Veh. Code § 16500 et seq.; discussed under § 92.95].

[3] Definitions

[a] Ability to Respond in Damages

"Ability to respond in damages" means financial responsibility [Veh. Code § 102]. Most provisions of the Vehicle Code have, however, now been revised to use the phrase "financial responsibility" instead.

[b] Driver, Owner, Registered Owner

The various financial responsibility laws use the terms "driver," "owner," and "registered owner" without defining them. Apparently, therefore, the definitions of those terms given in Veh. Code §§ 305, 460, and 505, respectively, govern the use of them in the financial responsibility laws [see Veh. Code § 100].

[c] Reportable Off-Highway Accident

For purposes of the financial responsibility laws, a "reportable off-highway accident" means an accident that includes all of the following [Veh. Code § 16000.1(a)]:

- Occurs off the street or highway.

- Involves a vehicle that is subject to registration under the Vehicle Code.

- Results in damages to the property of any one person in excess of $750 or in bodily injury or in the death of any person.

A "reportable off-highway accident" does not include any accident that occurs off-highway in which damage occurs only to the property of the driver or owner of the motor vehicle and no bodily injury or death of a person occurs [Veh. Code § 16000.1(b)].

[d] Uninsured Motor Vehicle

As used in the financial responsibility laws under Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., an "uninsured motor vehicle" is a motor vehicle for which financial responsibility as provided in Veh. Code § 16021 was not in effect at the time of the accident [Veh. Code § 16000.7].

[4] Reports Under Financial Responsibility Law

[a] Confidentiality

Except as provided for certain information mentioned in [b], below, all reports and supplemental reports required by the compulsory financial responsibility laws in Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., including insurance information forms, are for the confidential use of the Department and any other state department requiring the information. The reports also are without prejudice to the individual making the report [Veh. Code § 16005(a)].

[b] Disclosure of Information

On request, the Department is required to disclose the following information from reports made under the compulsory financial responsibility laws [Veh. Code § 16005(a)]:

- The names and addresses of persons involved in the accident.
- The registration numbers and descriptions of vehicles involved in the accident.
- The date, time, and location of the accident.
- Any suspension action taken by the Department.
- The names and addresses of insurers.

The information specified in Veh. Code § 16005(a), listed above, may be given to any person having a proper interest therein, including the following [Veh. Code § 16005(b)]:

- The driver or drivers involved, or the employer, parent, or legal guardian thereof.
- The authorized representative of any person involved in the accident.
- Any person injured in the accident.
- The owners of vehicles or property damaged in the accident.
- Any law enforcement agency.
- Any court of competent jurisdiction.

§ 92.91 Suspension for Failure to Make Accident Report

[1] Duty to Make Report

The driver of a motor vehicle that is involved in any manner in an accident originating from the operation of a motor vehicle on any street or highway is required to report the accident to the Department within 10 days after the accident, if the accident resulted in property damage to any person of more than $750, or bodily injury or death [Veh. Code § 16000(a)]. This requirement also applies to any reportable off-highway accident defined in Veh. Code § 16000.1 [Veh. Code § 16000(a); see definition under § 92.90[3][c]; Garcia v. Superior Court (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 342, 347, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902] . In a case of a driverless runaway vehicle, the registered owner of the vehicle must make a report [see Veh. Code § 16001].

The report must be made on a form approved by the Department, and submitted to the Department's Sacramento office [Veh. Code § 16000(a)].

If the driver is not the owner and is physically not capable of making the report, the owner is required to make the report as soon as he or she learns of the accident [Veh. Code § 16003]. The report must be in writing, but there is no express requirement that the owner's report be on an approved form [see Veh. Code § 16003].

If the driver was using an employer's vehicle at the time of the accident, the driver must report the accident to his or her employer within five days. The employer, unless self insured or covered by a liability insurance policy or surety bond establishing financial responsibility, must make the report, on a form approved by the Department, within 10 days [Veh. Code § 16002].

[2] Exception for Government-Owned Vehicle

A report is not required if the motor vehicle involved in the accident was owned or leased by or under the direction of the United States, the State of California, or another state, or a local agency [see Veh. Code § 16000(b)].

[3] Suspension Is Mandatory

The Department is required to suspend the driver's license of any person who fails, refuses, or neglects to make a report of an accident as requiredin Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., governing compulsory financial responsibility [Veh. Code § 16004(a)]. However, if none of the parties involved in an accident has reported the accident to the Department within one year following the date of the accident, the Department is not required to file a report on the accident and the driver's license suspension requirements of Veh. Code § 16004 and Veh. Code § 16070 do not apply [Veh. Code § 16000(c)].

[4] Duration of Suspension

The suspension will remain in effect until terminated by receipt of the report of the accident or evidence that financial responsibility is in effect [Veh. Code § 16004(b)]. The Department charges a fee for reinstatement of the license [see Veh. Code § 14904(a)].

[5] Effect of Suspension Under Other Provisions

A person's driving privilege may not be suspended under Veh. Code § 16004 and a suspension that has been imposed and is in effect under Veh. Code § 16004 must be terminated if the driving privilege is suspended under Veh. Code § 16370 (suspension for failure to satisfy judgment) or 16381 (suspension for judgment debtor's failure to pay required installment) as the result of a judgment arising out of the same accident for which the accident report is required [Veh. Code § 16004(c)].

The Department may suspend or reimpose the suspension of the driving privilege under Veh. Code § 16004 if the suspension under Veh. Code § 16370 or 16381 is later set aside for a reason other than that the person has satisfied the judgment in full or to the extent provided in Veh. Code § 16250 et seq. and has given proof of financial responsibility as provided in Veh. Code § 16430 et seq. [Veh. Code § 16004(c)].

[1] Duty to Maintain Financial Responsibility

Every driver and every owner of a motor vehicle is required at all times to be able to establish financial responsibility under Veh. Code § 16021, and must at all times carry in the vehicle evidence of the form of financial responsibility in effect for the vehicle [Veh. Code § 16020(a)].

Forms of financial responsibility under Veh. Code § 16021, and the evidence for those forms is discussed under [2], below.

[2] Forms and Evidence of Financial Responsibility

[a] Establishing

Under Veh. Code § 16021, financial responsibility of the driver or owner is established if the driver or owner of the vehicle involved in an accident in which a report is required under Veh. Code § 16000 is one of the following [Veh. Code § 16021]:

- A self-insurer under the financial responsibility statutes.

- An insured or obligee under a form of insurance or bond that complies with the requirements of the financial responsibility statutes and that covers the driver for the vehicle involved in the accident.

- The United States of America, the State of California, or any municipality, subdivision, or lawful agent of these entities.

- A depositor in compliance with Veh. Code § 16054.2(a).

- An obligee under a policy issued by a charitable risk pool that complies with Veh. Code § 16054.2(b).

- A person who has complied with the requirements authorized by the Department by any other manner that effectuates the purposes of the compulsory financial responsibility laws contained in Veh. Code § 16000 et seq.

In addition, in order to establish proof of financial responsibility every driver or employer involved in an accident that requires reporting under Veh. Code § 16000, must establish to the satisfaction of the Department that the provisions of Veh. Code §§ 16050-16057 are applicable to his or her responsibilities arising out of the accident [Veh. Code § 16050].

Veh. Code § 16021 provides an exclusive list of the authorized methods of establishing financial responsibility. Thus, the mere existence of personal assets does not satisfy any of the exclusive provisions of the statute. Furthermore, the Department does not authorize any procedure whereby retroactive proof of personal assets may be presented to satisfy the statute [Ruttenberg v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1284, 240 Cal. Rptr. 249] .

Pertinent aspects of the foregoing forms of financial responsibility, and required proof and evidence of those forms are discussed in [b]-[e], below.

[b] Liability Policy or Bond

[i] Requirements

Proof of financial responsibility of a driver or employer involved in an accident may be established by filing with the Department satisfactory evidence of one of the following [Veh. Code §§ 16050, 16054(a)]:

- That the owner had an automobile liability policy, a motor vehicle liability policy, or bond in effect at the time of the accident with respect to the driver or the motor vehicle involved in the accident, unless it is established that at the time of the accident the motor vehicle was being operated without the owner's permission, express or implied, or was parked by a driver who had been operating the vehicle without permission.

- That the driver of the motor vehicle involved in the accident, if he or she was not the owner of the motor vehicle, had in effect at the time of the accident an automobile liability policy or bond with respect to his or her operation of the motor vehicle not owned by him or her.

- That such liability as may arise from the driver's operation of the motor vehicle involved in the accident is, in the judgment of the department, covered by some form of liability insurance or bond.

- That the owner or driver, if he or she is involved in an accident while operating a vehicle of less than four wheels, had in effect at the time of the accident with respect to the driver or vehicle a liability policy or bond that meets the requirements of Veh. Code § 16056.

Any automobile liability policy or bond referred to above must comply with the requirements of Veh. Code § 16056, discussed below, and Ins. Code §§ 11580, 11580.011, 11580.1, 11580.2. The policy or bond need not contain provisions other than those required by those sections and is not governed by Veh. Code § 16430 et seq., discussed in § 92.94 [Veh. Code § 16054(b)].

No policy or bond is effective under Veh. Code § 16054, unless issued by an insurance company or surety company admitted to do business in this state by the Insurance Commissioner, except as provided in Veh. Code § 16056(b), relating to insurers of vehicles registered elsewhere [Veh. Code § 16056(a)].

A policy or bond is not effective under Veh. Code § 16054 unless the policy or bond is subject to certain limits relating to bodily injury or death and property damage [Veh. Code § 16056(a)].

If the accident has resulted in bodily injury or death, the policy or bond is not effective unless it is subject to a limit, exclusive of interest and costs, of not less than $15,000 because of bodily injury to or death of one person in any one accident. Further, subject to the $15,000 limit for one person, the policy or bond is not effective unless it is subject to a limit of not less than $30,000 because of bodily injury to or death of two or more persons in any one accident [Veh. Code § 16056(a)]. In addition, if the accident has resulted in injury to, or destruction of property, the policy or bond is not effective unless it is subject to a limit of not less than $5,000 because of injury to or destruction of property of others in any one accident [Veh. Code § 16056(a)].

The low cost automobile insurance policies described in Ins. Code § 11629.71, however, are effective under section 16054, even though the limits of those policies are less than the above limits [see Veh. Code § 16056.1(a) (bodily injury limits of $10,000 per person, $20,000 per accident, and property damage limit of $3,000)].

A nonresident driver whose driving privilege has been suspended or revoked based on an action that requires proof of financial responsibility may, in lieu of providing a certificate of insurance from a company admittedto do business in California, provide a written certificate of proof of financial responsibility that is satisfactory to the Department, covers the operation of a vehicle in California, meets the liability requirements of Veh. Code § 16056, and is from a company that is admitted to do business in that person's state of residence [Veh. Code § 16056(c)].

[ii] Consequence If Policy or Bond Is Not in Effect

On receipt of notice of an accident from the Department, the insurance company or surety company named in the notice is required to notify the Department within such time and in such manner as the Department may require whenever the policy or bond was not in effect at the time of the accident [Veh. Code § 16057]. In the event of notice to the Department by the company that coverage was not in effect, then the policy or bond does not operate to establish proof as provided for by Veh. Code § 16054 [Veh. Code § 16055].

[iii] Evidence of Liability Policy or Bond

For purposes of Veh. Code § 16020 (requiring that drivers and owners of motor vehicles carry evidence of approved form of financial responsibility in effect for vehicle; see discussion under § 92.92), the term "evidence of financial responsibility" means the following [Veh. Code § 16020(b)]:

- A form issued by an insurance company or charitable risk pool, as specified by the Department under Veh. Code § 4000.37.

- If the owner is self-insured, the certificate of self-insurance or the assignment of deposit letter issued by the Department [see [c][iii], below].

- An insurance covering note or binder, as specified in Ins. Code § 382 or 382.5.

- A showing that the vehicle is owned or leased by, or under the direction of, the United States or any public entity, as defined by Gov. Code § 811.2.

The evidence may be obtained by a law enforcement officer and court personnel from the electronic reporting system established by the Department [Veh. Code § 16020(c)].

The owner of a vehicle, who has a liability insurance policy with respect to the vehicle, must, on request, furnish insurance information to a person who, while operating the vehicle with the owner's permission, is involved in a reportable accident with the insured vehicle, or to the Department whenever the Department is required to establish whether the permitted driver meets the financial responsibility requirements of Veh. Code § 16020 [Veh. Code § 16050.5].

[c] Self Insurer

Proof of financial responsibility of a driver or employer involved in an accident may be established if the owner of the motor vehicle involved in the accident was a self-insurer. Any person in whose name more than 25 motor vehicles are registered may qualify as a self-insurer by obtaining a certificate of self-insurance issued by the Department as provided in Veh. Code §§ 16050-16057 [Veh. Code § 16052].

The Department may in its discretion, on application, issue a certificate of self-insurance when it is satisfied that the applicant in whose name more than 25 motor vehicles are registered is possessed and will continue to be possessed of ability to pay judgments obtained against him or her in amounts at least equal to the amounts provided in Veh. Code § 16056 [Veh. Code § 16053(a); see discussion in [b][i], above].

The certificate may be issued authorizing the applicant to act as a self-insurer for either property damage or bodily injury or both [Veh. Code § 16053(a)].

Any person duly qualified under the laws or ordinances of any city or county to act as self-insurer and then acting as such, may on filing with the Department satisfactory evidence thereof, along with the application as may be required by the Department, be entitled to receive a certificate of self-insurance [Veh. Code § 16053(a)].

[ii] Cancellation of Certificate

On not less than five days' notice and a hearing pursuant to the notice, the Department may on reasonable grounds cancel a certificate of self-insurance [Veh. Code § 16053(b)].

Failure to pay any judgment within 30 days after the judgment has become final and has not been stayed or satisfied constitutes a reasonable ground for the cancellation of a certificate of self-insurance [Veh. Code § 16053(b)].

[iii] Evidence of Self-Insurance

For purposes of Veh. Code § 16020 (see [1], above), the term "evidence of financial responsibility" means a certificate of self-insurance issued by the Department [Veh. Code § 16020(b)(2)].

[d] Depositor

[i] Requirement

For purposes of Veh. Code § 16020, discussed in [1], above, the term "evidence of financial responsibility" means the assignment of deposit letter issued by the Department [Veh. Code § 16020(b)(2)].

[Ii] Evidence of Deposit

For purposes of Veh. Code § 16020, discussed in [1], above, the term "evidence of financial responsibility" means the deposit number issued by the Department [Veh. Code § 16020(b)(2)].

[e] Obligee Under Policy Issued by Charitable Risk Pool

Proof of financial responsibility may also be established by providing evidence of a liability policy covering the operation of the vehicle that is issued by a charitable risk pool operating under Corp. Code § 5005.1. The registered owner of the vehicle must be a nonprofit, tax exempt organization, as specified, and the policy must be subject to the specified limits [see Veh. Code § 16054.2].

[f] Other Forms of Financial Responsibility

Proof of financial responsibility may also be established by any other manner authorized by the Department that effectuates the purpose of Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., governing compulsory financial responsibility [Veh. Code § 16054.2(b)].

[3] Exchange of Information After Accident

Every driver involved in the accident is required, unless rendered incapable, to exchange with any other driver or property owner involved in the accident and present at the scene, all of the following information [Veh. Code § 16025(a)]:

- Driver's name and current residence address, driver's license number, vehicle identification number, and current residence address of registered owner.

- Evidence of financial responsibility, as specified in Veh. Code § 16020 (see discussion in [1], above), including the name and address of the insurance company and the number of the insurance policy, if the financial responsibility is a form of insurance.

Any person failing to comply with all of the requirements of Veh. Code § 16025 is guilty of an infraction punishable by a fine not to exceed a specified amount [Veh. Code § 16025(b)].

[4] Mandatory Suspension for Failure to Maintain Financial Responsibility

[a] Applicable to Driver and Owner

Whenever a driver involved in an accident described in Veh. Code § 16000 [see § 92.91[1]] fails to provide evidence of financial responsibility as required by Veh. Code § 16020 at the time of the accident, the Department must suspend the privilege of the driver or owner to drive a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 16070(a)].

The Department's authority to suspend a license for failure to prove financial responsibility extends to the driving privilege of a nonresident [see Veh. Code § 16070(a)].

Veh. Code § 16070(a) uses the language "suspend the privilege of the driver or owner to drive a motor vehicle." This language suggests that either the driver's or the owner's license is to be suspended, but not both. However, it is apparent in the plan of Veh. Code §§ 16000-16075 that the Legislature intended to direct suspension of both the driver's and owner's licenses, when the driver is not the owner. When the driver is not the owner, it is also apparent that each must prove financial responsibility, and that proof by one would not inure to the benefit of the other so as to prevent suspension of both person's licenses. This is clear from the requirement in Veh. Code § 16020 that both the driver and the owner of a motor vehicle must maintain financial responsibility.

[b] Occupational Driving Excepted

The privilege of a person employed for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle for compensation, whose occupation requires the use of a motor vehicle in the course of his or her employment, to drive a motor vehicle not registered in his or her name and in the course of his or her employment is not subject to suspension under Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., even though his or her privilege to drive has been otherwise suspended under those sections [Veh. Code § 16073].

[c] Notice of Intent to Suspend

Whenever the Department receives an accident report pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 16070-16075 that alleges that one of the drivers involved in the accident was not in compliance with Veh. Code § 16020 at the time of the accident, the Department must immediately mail to that driver a notice of intent to suspend the license of that driver [Veh. Code § 16070(b)].

[d] Effective Date of Suspension

The Department must suspend the driver's license 30 days after mailing the notice unless the driver has, before then, established proof of financial responsibility at the time of the accident, as specified in V eh. Code § 16021, with the Department [Veh. Code § 16070(b)].

The suspension notice must notify the driver of the action taken and the right to a hearing under Veh. Code § 16075 [Veh. Code § 16070(b)].

[f] Period of Suspension

The suspension of the driving privilege of a person as provided in Veh. Code § 16070, discussed under [a], above, may not be terminated until one year has elapsed from the date of actual commencement of the suspension and until the person files proof of financial responsibility as provided in Veh. Code § 16430 et seq., discussed under § 92.94 [Veh. Code § 16072(a)].

[g] Effect of Suspension on Judgment Arising Out of Accident

If a suspension has been imposed under Veh. Code § 16070 and one year has elapsed from the date the suspension actually commenced, that suspension must be terminated if the driving privilege is suspended under Veh. Code § 16370 or 16381 as the result of a judgment arising out of the accident for which proof of financial responsibility was required to be established [Veh. Code § 16072(b)].

The Department may reimpose the suspension of the driving privilege of a person under Veh. Code § 16070 if the suspension under Veh. Code § 16370 or 16381 is later set aside for a reason other than that the person has satisfied the judgment in full or to the extent provided in Veh. Code § 16250 et seq. and has given proof of ability to respond in damages as provided Veh. Code § 16430 et seq., discussed under § 92.94 [Veh. Code § 16072(b)].

[5] Restricted License in Lieu of Suspension

[a] Department's Discretion to Grant Restriction

Although the Department has a mandatory duty to suspend a person's driving privilege whenever the driver fails to prove the existence of financial responsibility at the time of an accident [see Veh. Code § 16070], the Department has discretion to order that a restriction be placed on the person's license in lieu of suspending his or her driving privilege pursuant to Veh. Code § 16072. The Department may, on application, if the person files and thereafter maintains proof of financial responsibility as provided in Veh. Code § 16072 and pays a penalty fee to the Department of a specified amount, restrict the person's driving privilege to certain situations discussed in [b]-[d], below [Veh. Code § 16072(a)].

The restriction remains in effect for the period of suspension required by Veh. Code § 16072 [see discussion in [4][f], above], so long as proof of financial responsibility is maintained [Veh. Code § 16072(a)].

[b] Driving Relating to Employment

A person may be granted a restriction on his or her license that limits his or her driving privilege to necessary travel to and from the person's place of employment, in lieu of suspension for failing to prove financial responsibility after an accident [Veh. Code § 16072(a)(1)]. In addition, the person's driving privilege may be restricted to driving that is required in his or her course of employment, when driving a motor vehicle is necessary in order to perform the duties of the person's primary employment [Veh. Code § 16072(a)(2)]. For discussion of conditions for such restrictions, see discussion in [a], above.

[c] Driving Required to Transport Child to School

A person may be granted a restriction on his or her license that limits his or her driving privilege to necessary travel to transport a minor dependent in that person's immediate family to and from an institute of primary or secondary instruction, if the chief administrative officer or principal of the educational institution certifies in writing to the Department that the minor dependent is enrolled in the educational institution and no form of public transportation or school bus is available between the applicant's place of residence and the educational institution [Veh. Code § 16072(a)(3)]. For discussion of conditions for such restrictions, see [a], above.

[d] Prolonged and Repetitive Medical Treatment

On application and payment of specified fees, the Department may issue a restricted license to an applicant with serious health problems, or to an applicant with an immediate family member with serious health problems, when the applicant's privilege to drive is otherwise suspended under the financial responsibility provisions of Veh. Code § 16000 et seq. [Veh. Code § 16077(a)]. The restricted license may be issued to enable the applicant to drive a motor vehicle for the purpose of receiving medical or mental health treatments of a prolonged and repetitive nature for the applicant or the member of the applicant's immediate family with serious health problems [Veh. Code § 16077(a)].

To receive this restricted license, the applicant must file and maintain proof of financial responsibility on file with the Department pursuant to Veh. Code § 16021, and there must be no other suitable means of transportation available [Veh. Code § 16077(a)].

The application for a restricted license must set forth the nature of the health problem, the nature of the treatments, the duration and location of the treatments, and the schedule for visits. The applicant must submit documentation signed by the treating physician and surgeon or licensed psychotherapist, as defined in Evid. Code § 1010(a), (b), (c), and (e), as necessary to assist the Department in its decision to grant or deny the restricted license [Veh. Code § 16077(b)].

If the Department determines that an investigation regarding the applicant's fitness to operate a motor vehicle is warranted, it may conduct one in the manner provided in Veh. Code § 13801 et seq. [Veh. Code § 16077(b)].

In reviewing the application, the Department must give due consideration to the circumstances set forth in the application and must be guided by principles of fairness and humanity [Veh. Code § 16077(c)].

After a suspension of the driving privilege of a person as provided in Veh. Code § 16070, a suspension must be reinstated if the person fails to maintain proof of financial responsibility for three years [Veh. Code § 16072(a)].

[7] Correction of Errors by Department

Whenever the Department has taken any action or has failed to take any action under Veh. Code § 16000 et seq. as a result of having received erroneous information or having received no information, the Department is required to take appropriate action to carry out the purposes and effects of those statutes on receiving correct information [Veh. Code § 16074].

[8] Hearing

[a] Right to Hearing

The suspension provisions of Veh. Code §§ 16070-16078 do not apply to a driver or owner until 30 days after the Department sends to the driver or owner notice of its intent to suspend his or her driving privilege, pursuant to Veh. Code § 16070(b), and advises the driver or owner of his or her right to a hearing [Veh. Code § 16075(a)].

[b] Request for Hearing

[i] Time Limit

If the driver or owner receiving the notice of intent to suspend wishes to have a hearing, the request for a hearing must be made in writing to the Department within 10 days of the receipt of the notice. Failure to respond to a notice of intent within 10 days of receipt of the notice is a waiver of the person's right to a hearing [Veh. Code § 16075(b)].

[ii] Request Does Not Stay Suspension

A request for a hearing does not stay the suspension of a person's driving privilege. If the Department does not conduct a hearing and make a determination pursuant thereto within the time limit provided in Veh. Code § 16070(b), the Department must stay the effective date of the order of suspension pending a determination [Veh. Code § 16075(d)].

[c] Time Limit to Hold Hearing

If the driver or owner makes a timely request for a hearing, the Department must hold the hearing before the effective date of the suspension [Veh. Code § 16075(c)].

[d] Location

The hearing provided for by Veh. Code § 16075 must be held in the county of residence of the person requesting the hearing [Veh. Code § 16075(e)].

[e] Procedure

The hearing must be conducted pursuant to Veh. Code § 14100 et seq., governing administrative hearing procedures in review of action by the Department affecting driver's licenses [Veh. Code § 16075(e)]. For further discussion, see § 92.100 et seq.

[f] Issues to Be Determined

The purpose of the hearing is to determine the applicability of Veh. Code § 16000 et seq., governing compulsory financial responsibility, to the driver or owner, including a determination of the following issues [Veh. Code § 16075(c)]:

- Whether the accident has resulted in property damage in excess of $750, or bodily injury, or death.

- Whether the driver or owner has established financial responsibility, as provided in Veh. Code §§ 16050-16057 [see discussion in [2][a], above], was in effect at the time of the accident.

[g] Decision

The Department must render its decision within 15 days after conclusion of the hearing [Veh. Code § 16075(f)].

[9] Review of Decision

Since the hearing must be conducted pursuant to the general administrative hearing procedures contained in Veh. Code § 14100 et seq., it appears that a decision rendered after the hearing would also be subject to the methods of review stated under those provisions [see Veh. Code § 16075(e) (discussed in [8][e], above)]. Thus, it appears that the person subject to the hearing may request a Departmental review of the decision [see Veh. Code § 14105.5(a)]. After notice of a decision following such a review, the person may request that the Department reopen the question [see Veh. Code § 14106]. He or she may also file a petition for judicial review after issuance of the notice of determination of the Department sustaining an order of suspension or revocation of the person's driving privilege after the hearing [Veh. Code §§ 14400-14401]. For further discussion of these methods of review, see § 92.100 et seq. § 92.120 et seq.

§ 92.93 Suspension for Failure to Satisfy Judgment

[1] Definitions

Regarding the provisions of Veh. Code § 16370 et seq., governing enforcement of a driver's obligation as a judgment debtor to pay a judgment, two important terms are defined by statute:

- "Judgment" means a final judgment of any court of competent jurisdiction in California or any other state or of any court of the United States against a person as defendant on a "cause of action" [Veh. Code § 16250].

- "Cause of action" means any cause of action for damage to property in excess of $750 or for damages in any amount on account of bodily injury or death of any person resulting from the operation by the defendant or any other person of any motor vehicle on a highway in this state, except a cause of action based on statutory liability by reason of signing the application of a minor for a driver's license [Veh. Code § 16251; see Veh. Code §§ 17700-17714 (signing application of minor; civil liability)].

[2] Bases for Suspension

[a] Failure to Satisfy Judgment

The Department is required to suspend the license of a person on receiving a copy of a judgment (or a certified copy of the docket entries in an action resulting in a judgment for damages), and a certificate of facts relative to the judgment, on a form provided by the Department, indicating that the person has failed for a period of 30 days to satisfy a judgment, as defined, rendered against him or her [Veh. Code § 16370; see also Veh. Code §§ 16250, 16251 (defining "judgment"), discussed in [1], above]. The documents must be accompanied by a filing fee not to exceed $20 to pay for processing the documents and issuing the suspension order [Veh. Code § 16370.7].

The clerk of a court, or the judge of a court that has no clerk, must, subject to Veh. Code § 16373(b), issue on the request of a judgment creditor a certified copy of any judgment or a certified copy of the docket entries in an action resulting in a judgment for damages, and a certificate of facts relative to the judgment on a form provided by the Department [Veh. Code § 16373(a)].

The judgment creditor may pay the required fees and request the documents specified in Veh. Code § 16373(a), on the expiration of 30 days after the judgment has become final, if the judgment has not been stayed or satisfied within the amounts specified in Veh. Code § 16250-16381 as shown by the records of the court. The court must determine the required fees, which must be commensurate with the cost incurred by the court in carrying out Veh. Code § 16373 [Veh. Code § 16373(b)].

[b] Default in Installment Payment

There is provision in Veh. Code §§ 16379-16381 for the case of a judgment debtor whom the court has allowed to pay a judgment in installments. A default in installment payments will result in suspension of the driver's license until the judgment is satisfied to the extent provided in Veh. Code § 16377 [see Veh. Code § 16381].

[c] Small Claims Judgment

If a small claims court judgment in the amount of $750 or less against the driver of a motor vehicle arising from a motor vehicle accident occurring on a California highway remains unsatisfied for more than 90 days after the judgment becomes final, the judgment creditor may file with the Department of Motor Vehicles a notice stating that the judgment has not been satisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 116.880(a)]. The Department must suspend the privilege of any person to operate a motor vehicle for 90 days, as specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 116.880 [Veh. Code § 16370.5; see Code Civ. Proc. § 116.880(c)]. For further discussion of this procedure, see Ch. 526, Small Claims .

[d] Judgment Against Nonresident

If the person against whom judgment is rendered is a nonresident, and the person fails within the prescribed time to satisfy the judgment in full or to the extent specified in Veh. Code §§ 16250-16381, all privileges of operating a motor vehicle in California given to the person under the Vehicle Code must be suspended while the judgment remains in effect and unsatisfied and until the nonresident gives proof of his or her financial responsibility in the manner and to the extent provided in Veh. Code § 16430 et seq., discussed under § 92.92[2][a], for accidents occurring after the date of the giving of proof [Veh. Code § 16376].

The Department must forward a certified copy of the judgment of a court of record or a certified copy of the docket of a court not of record to the appropriate officer in charge of the licensing of drivers in the state of which the person is a resident [Veh. Code § 16376].

[e] Later Judgment on Prior Accident Without Proof

Whenever, after a judgment is satisfied and proof of financial responsibility is given, another judgment is rendered against the same person on account of any accident occurring before the proof was given, and the person fails to satisfy the latter judgment within the amounts specified in Veh. Code § 16377 within 15 days after the judgment becomes final, the Department is required again to suspend the driver's license of the judgment debtor until the latter judgment is satisfied to the extent provided in Veh. Code § 16377 [Veh. Code § 16374]. There will again be a fee for reinstatement of the license [see Veh. Code § 14904(a)].

[3] Duration of Suspension

The suspension remains in effect, and no license may be issued to the judgment debtor, until he or she gives proof of financial responsibility as provided in Veh. Code § 16430 et seq. [see discussion under § 92.94], and until the judgment is either satisfied in full or to the extent provided in Veh. Code §§ 16250-16381, subject to the exemption provided in Veh. Code § 16375 (when the person files an affidavit stating that he or she was insured) [Veh. Code § 16371]. The Department charges a fee for reinstatement of the license [see Veh. Code § 14904(a)].

[4] Relief From Suspension by Affidavit of Insurance

Any person whose driver's license has been suspended, or is about to be suspended or become subject to suspension under the statutes governing suspension because of an unsatisfied judgment, may relieve himself or herself from the effect of the judgment by filing with the Department an affidavit showing insurance coverage [see Veh. Code § 16375].

Specifically, the affidavit must state [Veh. Code § 16375]:

- That at the time of the accident on which the judgment has been rendered the person was insured.
- That the insurer is liable to pay such judgment.
- The reason, if known, why the insurance company has not paid the judgment.

The driver must also file the original policy of insurance or a certified copy thereof, if available, and such other documents as the Department may require to show that the loss, injury, or damage for which the judgment was rendered, was covered by the policy of insurance [Veh. Code § 16375].

If the Department is satisfied from such papers that the insurer was authorized to issue the policy of insurance in California at the time of issuing the policy and that such insurer is liable to pay such judgment, at least to the extent and for the amounts provided in Veh. Code § 16250 et seq., the Department may not suspend the license, or if already suspended, must reinstate it [Veh. Code § 16375].

§ 92.94 Proof of Financial Responsibility Required for Specified Acts

[1] Registration and Applications

In order for the Department to undertake certain activities, various provisions of the Vehicle Code require that the person requesting the action submit proof of financial responsibility. Except for the specific provisions governing proof of financial responsibility after a motor vehicle accident under Veh. Code § 16054 [see Veh. Code § 16054(b); see also discussion under § 92.92)], proof of financial responsibility, when required by the Vehicle Code, is governed by Veh. Code § 16430 [see Veh. Code § 16430].

The activities that require such proof include the following:

- Registration of certain vehicles [see Veh. Code § 6854 (registration of foreign commercial vehicle whose licensing jurisdiction does not grant reciprocal privileges to California owners)].

- Application for driver's license [see Veh. Code §§ 12504(b)(2) (nonresident minor), 12804.9 (examining officer may request to see proof)].

- Application for reinstatement of license or for restricted license:

  - Reinstatement of license of negligent operator whose privilege has been suspended or revoked [see Veh. Code § 12810.5].

  - Reinstatement of minor's license suspended or revoked under provisional licensing program) [see Veh. Code § 12814(d)].

  - Reinstatement of revoked license [see Veh. Code §§ 13350(c), 13351].

- Reinstatement of minor's license suspended for drunk driving conviction [see Veh. Code § 13352.3(b)].

- Reinstatement after suspension or revocation for implied consent or administrative per se violations [see Veh. Code § 13353.4(b)].

- Restricted license after administrative per se suspension for participation in program [see Veh. Code § 13353.7].

- Discretionary suspension based on specified circumstances [see Veh. Code § 13361].

- Reinstatement after suspension based on specified circumstances [see Veh. Code § 13954].

- Reinstatement after suspension for unsatisfied judgment [see Veh. Code § 16371].

[2] Proof Requirements

Proof of financial responsibility when required by the Vehicle Code means proof of financial responsibility resulting from the ownership or operation of a motor vehicle and arising by reason of personal injury to, or death of, any one person, of at least $15,000, and, subject to the limit of $15,000 for each person injured or killed, of at least $30,000 for the injury to, or the death of, two or more persons in any one accident, and for damages to property (in excess of $750), of at least $5,000 resulting from any one accident. Proof of financial responsibility may be given in any manner authorized in Veh. Code § 16430 et seq. [Veh. Code § 16430].

[3] Methods of Proof

[i] Issued by Authorized Carrier

Proof of financial responsibility may be given by a written certificate of any insurance carrier duly authorized to do business within the state, stating that it has issued to or for the benefit of the person named in the certificate a motor vehicle liability policy as defined in Veh. Code § 16450, an automobile liability policy as defined in Veh. Code § 16054, or any other liability policy issued for vehicles with less than four wheels that meets the requirements of Veh. Code § 16056 (minimum policy limits) [Veh. Code § 16431(a)].

A resident of another state may provide proof of financial responsibility when required to do so under the Vehicle Code from a company authorized to do business in that person's state of residence, if that proof is satisfactory to the Department, covers the operation of a vehicle in California, and meets the minimum coverage requirements of Veh. Code § 16056. If the person becomes a California resident during the period he or she is required to maintain proof of financial responsibility with the Department, the Department may not issue or return a driver's license to that person until he or she files a written certificate [see Veh. Code § 16431(a)] that meets the minimum coverage requirements specified in Veh. Code § 16056 and covers the period during which the person is required to maintain proof of financial responsibility [Veh. Code § 16431(d)].

Except for certain cases involving reinstatement of driving privileges (see discussion in [ii], below), certificates issued under any of these policies satisfy the proof of financial responsibility requirements under Veh. Code § 16430 et seq., and the Department is required to accept them [Veh. Code § 16431(a)]. An insurance carrier is not required to certify that there is coverage broader than that provided by the actual policy issued by the carrier [Veh. Code § 16431(a)].

[ii] Coverage of All Registered Vehicles Owned

The Department must require that a person whose driver's license has been revoked, suspended, or restricted under specified Vehicle Code sections provide, as proof of financial responsibility, a certificate (or certificates) that covers all motor vehicles registered to the person before reinstatement of his or her driver's license [Veh. Code § 16431(b)]. The requirement does not apply, however, to vehicles in storage if the current license plates and registration cards are surrendered to the Department in Sacramento [Veh. Code § 16431(c)].

Proof of coverage of all vehicles owned must be provided for reinstatement under the following sections [Veh. Code § 16431(b)]:

- Veh. Code § 13350 (conviction for failure to stop when involved in injury accident, use of motor vehicle in commission of felony, reckless driving causing injury).
- Veh. Code § 13351 (conviction for vehicular manslaughter, reckless driving, or hit-and-run causing injury or death).
- Veh. Code § 13352 (conviction for driving while intoxicated or under influence of drugs or for engaging in speed contest).
- Veh. Code § 13353 (failure or refusal to submit to intoxication tests).
- Veh. Code §§ 13353.2, 13353.3 (driving with unlawful blood alcohol level).
- Veh. Code § 13353.6 (commercial driver with unlawful blood alcohol level).
- Veh. Code § 13353.7 (restricted license).
- Veh. Code § 16370, 16370.5 (failure to satisfy judgment).

[b] Other Methods of Proof

Proof need not be made by a certificate of insurance. Alternative methods are by furnishing a bond [Veh. Code § 16434], a deposit of $35,000 in cash [Veh. Code § 16435], or a certificate of self-insurance [Veh. Code § 16436].

The Department cannot cancel the bond of individual sureties given pursuant to Veh. Code § 16434 or return a deposit of cash given pursuant to Veh. Code § 16435 if any action for damages arising out of a motor vehicle accident is pending against a driver, or if any judgment in such an action remains unsatisfied [Veh. Code § 16480(b)].

[4] Relief From Proof Requirement

The Department has authority to relieve a person of the requirements of filing proof of financial responsibility in certain cases, such as after the passage of three years from the date when such proof was required [Veh. Code § 16480(a)(2); see Veh. Code § 16482(b)].

The other cases in which the Department may relieve a driver of the burden of giving proof are the following [see Veh. Code § 16480(a)(1), (3), (4)]:

- When the law no longer requires it.

- When the driver has died.

- When the driver has become permanently incapacitated and surrendered his or her license certificate for cancellation.

[5] Mandatory Suspension When Evidence of Proof Becomes Unsatisfactory

Failure of proof of ability to respond in damages is a ground for mandatory suspension of the driver's license until adequate proof is filed [Veh. Code § 16484].

Every owner of a vehicle used in the transportation of passengers for hire, including taxicabs, when the operation of the vehicle is not subject to regulation by the Public Utilities Commission, is required to maintain, whenever he or she may be engaged in conducting those operations, proof of financial responsibility resulting from the ownership or operation of the vehicle and arising by reason of personal injury to, or death of any person, or for damages to property [Veh. Code § 16500]. The amounts of proof are governed by Veh. Code § 16500. The types of commercial vehicles for which proof is required, and the authorized methods of proof, are governed by Veh. Code § 16500.5.

[2] Mandatory Suspension of Registration

If an owner uses, or with his or her consent permits the use of, any vehicle used in the transportation of person or property in the conduct of a business, without maintaining proof of financial responsibility as required by Veh. Code § 16500 et seq., the Department is required to suspend the registration of all vehicles used for such transportation immediately on receipt of a duly certified abstract of the court in which the person was convicted [Veh. Code §§ 16502, 16503].

§ 92.100 Administrative Hearing Procedure in General

The statutes governing the right to a hearing and the procedures for conducting a hearing relating to Department action affecting a person's driving privilege are generally contained in Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. There are, in addition, statutes governing specific aspects of the administrative control of drivers that affect the right to a hearing [see, e.g., Veh. Code § 13558(c)(1) (limiting scope of hearing on order of suspension or revocation under implied consent and administrative per se law; for discussion, see § 92.20 et seq.)]. All matters in a hearing not covered by the Vehicle Code sections governing driver's licenses [see Veh. Code § 13800 et seq.] are governed, as far as applicable, by the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) [Veh. Code § 14112].

C. Administrative Review of Departmental Action

§ 92.101 Right to Hearing

[1] Action Subject to Judicial Review

The Vehicle Code provisions governing a person's right to a hearing should be interpreted in the light of case law establishing basic guidelines for administrative hearing procedures.

If an administrative agency is charged by law with the duty of issuing licenses on specified terms and conditions, the agency becomes a quasi-judicial body for determining the facts and exercising sound and reasonable discretion in the performance of its duty. Because the agency is only a quasi-judicial body in its investigation and determination of the merits of applications for licenses in conformity with the provisions of a statute, its hearings may be somewhat informal and need not conform in all respects to the solemnity of a court proceeding. Nevertheless, the law does contemplate a fair and impartial hearing of an application for a license with an opportunity for the applicant to present competent evidence for the consideration of the agency [see Fascination, Inc. v. Hoover (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 260, 269, 246 P.2d 656 (quoting court of appeal in case involving issuance of license by board of supervisors)], unless a statute expressly provides to the contrary [see Ratliff v. Lampton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 226, 230 (Department cannot revoke license for cause without hearing unless statute expressly provides otherwise); see also Fascination, Inc. v. Hoover (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 260, 269-271, 246 P.2d 656 (citing Ratliff and other cases; holding agency must normally give hearing to applicant for issuance of license)].

If an administrative agency has the authority to deprive a person of a license for cause and to make the quasi-judicial determination that cause exists, the person has the right to notice and a prior opportunity to be heard before the agency deprives him or her of the license, unless there is a clear showing of legislative intent to dispense with that right [see Ratliff v. Lampton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 226, 230, 195 P.2d 792 ; see also McCullough v. Terzian (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 647, 657, 87 Cal. Rptr. 195, 470 P.2d 4 (explaining rule of Ratliff case); Fascination, Inc. v. Hoover (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 260, 271, 246 P.2d 656 (citing Ratliff case and many others)].

In general, however, action without a prior hearing does not violate due process if it is subject to judicial review and is reasonably justified by a compelling public interest [see Escobedo v. California (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 870, 876, 222 P.2d

1 (overruled on different point in Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454]. Also, it appears that when the Department's action is based on a conviction or a record of convictions, mandatory suspension or revocation without a prior hearing does not violate due process because the facts have already been determined in a criminal proceeding [see Ratliff v. Lampton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 226, 227, 195 P.2d 792 (dictum); see also DiGenova v. State Board of Education (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 255, 260, 288 P.2d 862 (summary revocation of teacher's license based on conviction)].

For further discussion of agency authority regarding licensing generally, see Ch. 471B, Licensing by Public Agencies .

[2] Mandatory Action

The Vehicle Code provides that a person is not entitled to a hearing in any case in which action by the Department is made mandatory by the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 14101(a)]. This general exclusion is qualified by several sections that both make action by the Department mandatory, and also grant a right to hearing by the person affected [see, e.g., Veh. Code §§ 13353.1(d) (driving under influence--persons under 21), 13558(a) (implied consent and administrative per se laws), 13954 (accident caused by driver under influence with prior vehicular manslaughter conviction), 16070 (failure to prove existence of financial responsibility after accident); see also Civ. Code § 3534 (particular expressions qualify those that are general)].

[3] Discretionary Action

When the Department proposes to withhold, suspend, or revoke a driver's license on discretionary grounds, the Department is required to notify the applicant or licensee [see Veh. Code §§ 13950, 13951, 14100, 14101(a)]. The notice must contain a statement setting forth the proposed action and the grounds for the action and notify the person of his or her right to a hearing. In the alternative, the Department, at the time it gives notice of its intention to act, may set the date of hearing, giving the person 10 days notice thereof [Veh. Code § 13952; see Veh. Code § 14100(c)-(e)].

For a general form of request for hearing, see § 92.170.

A person is not entitled to a hearing if he or she has previously been given an opportunity with appropriate notice for a hearing and failed to request a hearing within the time specified by law [Veh. Code §§ 14100(a), 14101(b)].

A demand for a hearing does not stay the Department action for which the notice is given [Veh. Code § 14100(a); *but see Veh. In the event of a failure to respond, the Department may take action without a hearing or may, on request of the person whose privilege of driving is in question, or at its own option, reopen the question, take evidence, change or set aside any order previously made, or grant a hearing [*Veh. Before a hearing has commenced, the Department, or the hearing officer or hearing board, is required to issue subpoenas or subpoenas duces tecum, or both, at the request of any party, for attendance of witnesses or production of documents at the hearing. After the hearing has commenced, the Department, if it is hearing the case, or the hearing officer sitting alone, or the hearing board, may issue subpoenas or subpoenas duces tecum, or both [Veh. Code § 14104.5(a); *see Bussard v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 858, 865-866, 79 Cal. Subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum issued in conjunction with the hearings may be served by first-class mail [Veh. Code § 14104.5(b)].

The Vehicle Code does not provide for depositions of witnesses. Under the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.), depositions may be used in lieu of a witness's testifying at the hearing [see Gov. Code § 11511; see also discussion under § 92.107[2], for applicability of Administrative Procedure Act]. 8-92 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 92.107

[1] Prior Law Governing Informal and Formal Hearing

Under prior law, a person could demand an informal or formal hearing relating to the suspension or revocation of his or her driver's license by the Department [see former Veh. Code § 14102 et seq.]. Effective February 13, 1991, however, the Legislature repealed those provisions and provided for a hearing according to a prescribed procedure, as described in [2]-[6], below [see Veh. Code § 14104 et seq.].

[2] Matters Governed by Administrative Procedure Act

All matters in a hearing not covered by the Vehicle Code sections governing driver's licenses (see Veh. Code § 13800 et seq.) are governed, as far as applicable, by the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) [Veh. Code § 14112].

Apparently the operative word in Veh. Code § 14112 is "in," but it has been equated by at least one court with "relating to" a hearing [see Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 690, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1 (dictum)], which is broader than "in" a hearing.

The court in the Serenko case, above, remarked but did not hold that the Vehicle Code resolves all of the following questions, to which the Administrative Procedure Act is consequently said to be inapplicable: how hearings are initiated, where hearings are held, who shall conduct hearings, what evidence is admissible, how decisions are made, when decisions take effect, and to what extent the Department has continuing jurisdiction [see Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 689, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1] .

There are, however, a number of other matters that are not covered by the Vehicle Code but provided for in the Administrative Procedure Act. The discussion in [3]-[6], below, relating to the various aspects of a hearing, refers to relevant provisions under the Act when applicable. For further discussion of hearing procedure under the Administrative Procedure Act generally, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication , et seq.

[3] Hearing Officer

[a] Under Prior Law

The practice of the Department under the former law providing for formal hearings was that the hearing was usually conducted by a single senior Driver Improvement Analyst. The hearing officer could be challenged for bias at the time of the hearing, and the Department usually replaced a challenged officer with a different Driver Improvement Analyst. In addition, the practice of the Department under the former formal hearing proceedings was that decisions by a board regarding findings and procedures were resolved in favor of the person in question unless there was unanimity.

[b] Department Employee Appointed by Director

Any hearing is to be conducted by the director or by a hearing officer or hearing board appointed by the director from officers or employees of the Department [Veh. Code § 14104.2(a)].

The officers and employees of the Department who may be appointed by the director to conduct departmental hearings are not required to have any higher qualifications than the director, who is not required to be an attorney and as to whom no particular qualifications are delineated in the Vehicle Code, except for the requirement that the hearing be conducted by the director or by a hearing officer or hearing board appointed by him or her from officers or employees of the department [see Veh. Code § 14104.2(a); Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 690, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1 (decided under prior law providing for "formal hearings")].

The Vehicle Code does not provide for disqualification of hearing officers. The Administrative Procedure Act provides for grounds for disqualification that include bias, prejudice, interest, or receiving ex parte communications [see Gov. Code §§ 11425.40, 11430.60, 11512(c)]. For discussion of the grounds and procedure for disqualifying an administrative law judge under the Administrative Procedure Act, see Ch. 473E, Public Administrative Law Judges .

[4] Evidence

[a] Admissibility Based on Relevance

The scope of admissible evidence is set forth under Veh. Code § 14104.7, and discussed in [b]-[e], below. Under the Administrative Procedure Act, any relevant evidence is admissible if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule that might make improper the admission of such evidence over objection in civil actions [Gov. Code § 11513(c)]. Since Veh. Code § 14104.7 does not purport to govern exclusively questions of evidence at a hearing, it is arguable that Gov. Code § 11513(c) supplements the Vehicle Code provision.

For discussion of evidence issues applicable under the Administrative Procedure Act generally, see Ch. 473F, Agency Adjudication Hearings .

At the hearing the applicant or licensee should present as full a case as possible, because if the record of the hearing should disclose to a court (subsequently petitioned to review it) that the petitioner intentionally presented a "skeleton" case in the hearing for the obvious purpose of transferring the controversy to the court, that fact should weigh heavily against the endeavor to invoke the equity powers of the court on petitioner's behalf in the mandamus proceeding [see Dare v. Bd. of Medical Examiners (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 790, 799, 136 P.2d 304] .

Under the Administrative Procedure Act, hearsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence, but is not sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in civil actions [see Gov. Code § 11513(d); Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1562, 1569-1572, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 234] .

[c] Documentary Evidence

At any hearing, the Department is required to consider its official records and may receive sworn testimony. At the hearing, or subsequent to the hearing with the consent of the applicant or licensee, any or all of the following may be submitted as evidence concerning any fact relating to the ability of the applicant or licensee to safely operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 14104.7]:

- Reports of attending or examining physicians and surgeons.

- Reports of special investigators appointed by the Department to investigate and report on any facts relating to the ability of the person to operate a vehicle safely.

- Properly authenticated reports of hospital records, excerpts from expert testimony received by the Department or a hearing board on similar issues of scientific fact in other cases, and the prior decision of the director on those issues.

Under the Act, a person has the right "to introduce exhibits," a much broader right than to present documentary evidence [see Gov. Code § 11513(b)].

A delay by a laboratory, in not sending to DMV chemical tests results within 15 calendar days from arrest as required by Veh. Code § 23612(g), does not preclude the test results from being admitted into evidence at a DMV license suspension hearing [Spitze v. Zolin (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1920, 1924, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573] . While Veh. Code § 23612(g)(2) provides that the DMV may receive or retrieve evidence of a licensee's blood-alcohol test results directly from a government forensic lab database and that such evidence is the best available evidence of the test results, the statute does not preclude the opponent of the evidence from challenging the document or other record on other exclusionary grounds, including hearsay [Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 997, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792 (blood test results not admissible when report not prepared at or near time of test)].

A driver facing license suspension following arrest for driving under the influence may not seek discovery of confidential peace officer personnel records pursuant to Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 531, 113 Cal. Rptr. 897, 522 P.2d 305 [Brown v. Valverde (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 1531, 1547-1559, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 429] .

[d] Testimonial Evidence

At any hearing, the Department is required to receive sworn testimony [Veh. Code § 14104.7].

The Vehicle Code does not regulate the use of hearsay, which could, arguably, be admitted under Veh. Code § 14104.7 as "sworn testimony." The Administrative Procedure Act does allow for use of hearsay evidence for specified purposes [see Gov. Code § 11513(d); see also discussion in [b], above].

The Vehicle Code does not expressly provide for examination, cross examination, and impeachment of witnesses, or rebuttal of evidence. These matters are guaranteed, however, under the Administrative Procedure Act [see Gov. Code § 11513(b)].

In addition, the Vehicle Code does not provide that the person whose license is in question may be compelled to testify, but Gov. Code § 11513(b) under the Act provides that if a respondent does not testify on his or her own behalf he or she may be called and examined as if under cross examination. If this provision is applicable to hearings before the Department, then so is the provision that the rules of privilege shall be effective to the extent that they are otherwise required by statute to be recognized at the hearing [Gov. Code § 11513(e)]. The rules of privilege [Evid. Code § 900 et seq.] apply in all hearings in which, pursuant to law, testimony can be compelled to be given [see Evid. Code § 901], except as otherwise provided by statute [Evid. Code § 910].

Finally, under the Administrative Procedure Act, a party may be precluded from cross examining witnesses by following a procedure provided for in Gov. Code § 11514, but no such procedural device is provided for in the Vehicle Code.

[e] Official Notice

Under the Administrative Procedure Act, an agency may take official notice of technical or scientific matter within the agency's special field, and of any fact that may be judicially noticed by the courts of California [see Gov. Code § 11515], but the Vehicle Code does not similarly provide for official notice by the Department of such facts.

[5] Record of Proceedings

The entire proceedings at any hearing may be recorded by a phonographic recorder or by mechanical, electronic, or other means capable of reproduction or transcription [Veh. Code § 14104.2(b)].

[6] Decision

[a] Findings and Notice of Decision

At the conclusion of a hearing, the hearing officer or hearing board is required to make findings and render a decision on behalf of the Department and is to notify the person involved. Notice of the decision is to include a statement of the person's right to a review. The decision takes effect as stated in the notice, but not less than four nor more than 15 days after the notice is mailed [Veh. Code § 14105].

The basic purposes of findings are [see Swars v. Council of City of Vallejo (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 867, 871, 206 P.2d 355 (dictum)]:

- To aid the court in determining whether there is sufficient evidence to support them.

- To enable the court to examine the decision of the administrative agency in order to determine whether it is based on a proper principle.

- To inform the parties of the reasons for the administrative action, to aid them in deciding whether other proceedings should be begun and, if so, on what grounds.

Administrative findings must conform to the statutes governing the particular agency, but they need not be stated with the formality required in judicial proceedings [see Swars v. Council of City of Vallejo (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 867, 872-873, 206 P.2d 355 (dictum)].

The fact that certain action is taken by an administrative agency may raise a presumption that the necessary facts were found by the agency to exist. Administrative findings may be general as long as they satisfy the dual requirements of making intelligent review by the courts possible and informing the parties of the basis for the administrative action [see Swars v. Council of City of Vallejo (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 867, 872, 206 P.2d 355 (dictum)].

[b] Modification to Correct Mistakes or Clerical Errors

The decision under Veh. Code § 14105(a) may be modified at any time after issuance to correct mistakes or clerical errors [Veh. Code § 14105(b)].

The person subject to a hearing may request a review of the decision taken under Veh. Code § 14105, discussed under § 92.107[6], within 15 days of the effective date of the decision [Veh. Code § 14105.5(a)]. On receipt of a request for review, the Department is required to stay the action pending a decision on review, unless the hearing followed an action under Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.2 (implied consent or administrative per se laws), or 13953 (immediate action required for safety of driver or other persons on highways). The review must include an examination of the hearing report, documentary evidence, and findings. The hearing officer or hearing board conducting the original hearing may not participate in the review process [Veh. Code § 14105.5(b)].

Following the review, a written notice of the Department's decision must be mailed to the person involved. If the action has been stayed pending review, the Department's decision takes effect as stated in the notice, but not less than four nor more than 15 days after the notice is mailed [Veh. Code § 14105.5(c)].

The decision on review may be modified at any time after issuance to correct mistakes or clerical errors [Veh. Code § 14105.5(d)].

D. Judicial Review of Departmental Action

§ 92.120 Judicial Review in General

The Vehicle Code provides that nothing in the Code may be deemed to prev ent a review or other action as may be permitted by the Constitution and laws of the state by a court of competent jurisdiction of any order of the Department refusing, canceling, suspending, or revoking the privilege of a person to operate a motor vehicle [Veh. Code § 14400]. Thus, review under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, commonly known as "administrative mandate," would be available after a hearing under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); discussed under § 92.121]. For further discussion and forms relating to administrative mandate generally, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , et seq.

Review under a general writ of mandate may also be available in cases in which administrative mandate is not appropriate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1085, discussed under § 92.123].

There may, in addition, be opportunity for redress in an action in federal court based on a violation of the person's civil rights [see Hornsby v. Allen (5th Cir. 1964) 326 F.2d 605, 610-612 , discussed under § 92.124].

§ 92.121 Review by Administrative Mandate Proceeding

[1] Conditions for Review Generally

Review governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 is available when certain conditions specified in the statute are met [Keeler v. Superior Court (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 596, 599, 297 P.2d 967] . Those conditions are [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)]:

- A final decision has been made.
- The decision was made by an administrative agency having discretionary authority to make findings of fact in support of the decision.
- The agency was required by law to hold a hearing.
- Evidence was required by law to be compiled at the hearing in support of the agency's findings of fact.

The conditions appear to be satisfied in the case of a hearing under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. [see Cameron v. Cozens (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 887, 889, 106 Cal. Rptr. 537 (decided under former Veh. Code § 13353, which referred to hearing conducted under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq.; court stated that proper approach for judicial review is administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5)]. Further, as mentioned under § 92.120, the Vehicle Code may not be construed to limit otherwise applicable judicial review [see Veh. Code § 14400].

The question whether a hearing is required to be given may sometimes be hard to decide. In a case in which the law does not require a hearing [see, e.g., Veh. Code § 14101(a) (no hearing when action made mandatory by Vehicle Code)], it appears that the case may not be reviewed under administrative mandate, but may be reviewable under ordinary mandate [see Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1339, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379 ; see also discussion under § 92.123].

[2] Review in Implied Consent/Administrative Per Se Cases

After a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558, relating to an order of suspension or revocation based either on a refusal to complete a chemical test or a results from a test disclosing an unlawful blood alcohol concentration, a person may file a "petition for judicial review" [Veh. Code § 13559]. Although Veh. Code § 13559 does not expressly refer to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, the standard and scope of review in such cases are consistent with those governing proceedings for writ of administrative mandate [see Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 575-576, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249] . For further discussion of judicial review under Veh. Code § 13559, see § 92.40 et seq.

[3] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

The purpose of administrative mandate is to have the court inquire into the validity of a "final administrative order" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)]. The important word is "final." It signifies the emphasis which courts have traditionally and consistently placed on exhaustion of administrative remedies as a condition to maintaining a mandate proceeding.

The failure to exhaust administrative remedies is a jurisdictional defect [see Morton v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 977, 981, 88 Cal. Rptr. 533 (dictum reporting rule)]. The fact that the agency in question has consistently decided similar cases against persons in the petitioner's position does not excuse a failure to seek relief through administrative remedies before applying to the court [Gantner & Mattern Co. v. California E. Com. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 314, 317-318, 109 P.2d 932] .

For further discussion of the requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies as a condition to judicial relief generally, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , and Ch. 474A, Timing of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions .

[4] Notice of Right to Judicial Review

On final completion of all administrative appeals, the person whose driving privilege was refused, canceled, placed on probation, suspended, or revoked must be given written notice by the Department of his or her right to judicial review [Veh. Code § 14401(b)]. Thus, it appears that such notice must advise the person of his or her right to review through administrative mandate proceedings.

[5] Statute of Limitations

Any action brought in a court of competent jurisdiction to review any order of the Department refusing, canceling, placing on probation, suspending, or revoking the privilege of a person to operate a motor vehicle must be commenced within 90 days from the date the order is noticed [Veh. Code § 14401(a)].

[6] Record on Review

When a licensee files a petition for judicial review, the "review shall be on the record of the hearing" [Veh. Code § 13559]. The burden of supplying that record is on the licensee [Code Civ. Proc., § 1094.5(a); Elizabeth D. v. Zolin (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 347, 355, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 852] . However, the licensee can satisfy that burden through making a proper request on the DMV to prepare and certify the record [Hothem v. City and County of San Francisco (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 702, 705, 231 Cal. Rptr. 70] .

Since the DMV records and transcribes the hearing [Veh. Code § 14104.2] as well as maintains sole custody of the recordings and other evidence, it has a duty to maintain an adequate record [Hothem v. City and County of San Francisco (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 702, 705, 231 Cal. Rptr. 70] . If the DMV does not maintain an adequate record it may choose to set aside the order, reconstruct the record, prepare a summary of the facts, or hold a new hearing [Hothem v. City and County of San Francisco (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 702, 705, 231 Cal. Rptr. 70 ; Chavez v. Civil Service Com. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 324, 332, 150 Cal. Rptr. 197] . On the other hand, if it fails to maintain an adequate record and then refuses to assist the petitioner in compiling a new record, including financially, the "agency can be foreclosed from disputing petitioner's statement of fact" or the court may simply dismiss the order of suspension [Woodard v. Personnel Commission (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 552, 561, 152 Cal. Rptr. 658 ; Frase v. Gourley (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 762, 766, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Judicial Review of Departmental Action

8-92 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 92.122

§ 92.122 Scope of Review Under Administrative Mandate

[1] Scope of Inquiry

When reviewing an administrative order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, a court's inquiry is generally limited to the following three issues [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]:

- Whether or not the agency's proceeding was within its jurisdiction.
- Whether or not the petitioner received a fair hearing.
- Whether or not the agency abused its discretion to the petitioner's prejudice.

In addition to the discussion provided in [2]-[4] below, these issues are given further treatment in Ch. 474B, Standards in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

If a hearing should have been held but was not, in a case when the petitioner did all that he or she was required to do in order to obtain a hearing, the scope of the court's review will be limited to determining that a hearing should have been held; and the remedy in such a case is a writ setting aside the order and remanding the case to the Department for a hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(e); Fascination, Inc. v. Hoover (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 260, 265, 268, 246 P.2d 656] . If the petitioner failed to take all required steps in order to obtain a hearing, he or she has failed to exhaust his or her administrative remedies, and a writ will be denied [see, e.g., Veh. Code § 14103 (failure to respond to notice given under Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. within prescribed time is waiver of right to hearing); see also discussion under § 92.121[3]].

[2] Whether Department Had Jurisdiction

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, a court must determine whether or not the agency's proceeding was within its jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]. It appears that the nature of an agency's jurisdiction may be compared, by analogy, to jurisdiction of the courts. Thus, the Department, as an agency, must have jurisdiction in its fundamental sense. That is, the Department must have authority over the subject matter and over the person [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288-290, 109 P.2d 942 (relating to jurisdiction of courts)]. The Department has exclusive authority to issue or withhold a driver's license and comprehensive authority, which is shared with the courts and is, therefore, not exclusive, to take away a driver's license [see Veh. Code §§ 12500 et seq. (relating to issuance of licenses), 13200 et seq. (suspension or revocation by court), 13350 et seq. (suspension or revocation by Department)].

In addition, even when the Department has jurisdiction in the fundamental sense, it must not act in excess of its jurisdiction. In other words, the Department must not exceed its power to act in a particular manner, or to give other than certain kinds of relief, or to act at all without the occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288-290, 109 P.2d 942] . Speaking generally, any acts that exceed the defined power of the Department in any instance, whether that power be defined by constitutional provision, express statutory declaration, or rules developed and followed under the doctrine of stare decisis, are in excess of jurisdiction [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291, 109 P.2d 942] .

[3] Whether There Was Fair Hearing

Fairness, that is, procedural due process, requires that a person be informed of the evidence against him or her, that the person have an opportunity to test, refute, or explain it, and that the Department's decision be made in light of the evidence introduced at the hearing, not on the basis of "outside" information which, because it was not presented at the hearing, could not be controverted [see English v. City of Long Beach (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 155, 158-159, 217 P.2d 22] . It appears that a failure to hold a hearing, inadequate notice, and unreasonably restrictive or liberal application of rules of evidence would contribute to the denial of a fair hearing.

It should be noted that even though a hearing was not "fair," relief will be denied unless the unfairness was prejudicial [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 475, 1109].

Another aspect of a fair hearing includes the absence of prejudice or bias [see Thompson v. City of Long Beach (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 235, 243, 259 P.2d 649] . The test under procedural due process of the ability of an interested administrative body to act is whether, in light of particular facts, experience teaches that the probability of actual bias on the part of a decision maker is too high to be constitutionally tolerable [see Mennig v. City Council (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 341, 350, 150 Cal. Rptr. 207] .

[4] Whether There Was Prejudicial Abuse of Discretion

[a] Establishing Abuse of Discretion

Abuse of discretion is established if the Department had not proceeded in a manner required by law, the order or decision is not supported by the findings, or the findings are not supported by the evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]. Each of these issues is discussed in [b]-[d], below.

[b] Department Action Was Unlawful

The Department has abused its discretion if it is determined that the Department has not proceeded in a manner required by law [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]. It appears that a failure to proceed as required by law may appropriately be charged if the agency did not follow proper procedure, or took action that it was not authorized to take, or that its action was based on an improper ground. Examples of such action include: receipt of incompetent evidence [see Schoenen v. Board of Medical Exrs. (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 909, 914, 54 Cal. Rptr. 364] ; failure to consider a proper defense or make findings respecting it [see Boren v. State Personnel Board (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 634, 640, 234 P.2d 981] ; failure to follow spirit of law despite literal compliance [see Walsh v. Kirby (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 95, 103-106, 118 Cal. Rptr. 1, 529 P.2d 33] ; and failure to recognize and act on the implications of the law's explicit requirements [see No Oil, Inc.

v. City of Los Angeles (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 68, 79-86, 118 Cal. Rptr. 34, 529 P.2d 66] .

[c] Decision Was Not Supported by Findings

On the conclusion of a hearing, the hearing officer or hearing board is required to make findings and render a decision on behalf of the Department [Veh. Code § 14105]. Since the language of the statute clearly requires the Department to make findings, the findings must be made in a formal manner [see Webb v. State Personnel Board (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 542, 548, 94 Cal. Rptr. 115] .

Findings must be legally relevant to support agency action [see J. L. Thomas, Inc. v. County of Los Angeles (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 916, 927-929, 283 Cal. Rptr. 815] . Findings must also be set forth with sufficient clarity to be understandable [see In re Sturm (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 258, 272, 113 Cal. Rptr. 361, 521 P.2d 97] .

A failure to make proper findings in support of an administrative decision is an abuse of discretion of constitutional dimensions, because the failure is tantamount to a denial of due process [see In re Sturm (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 258, 267, 113 Cal. Rptr. 361, 521 P.2d 97 ; but see Webb v. State Personnel Board (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 542, 548, 94 Cal. Rptr. 115 (no reversible error in lack of findings when evidence clearly shows that findings must necessarily be against petitioner)].

[d] Findings Were Not Supported by Evidence

[i] Standard of Review

Two tests are prescribed for use when it is claimed that the evidence does not support the findings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c)]. The two tests are commonly called the "independent judgment" test and the "substantial evidence" test.

In cases in which the court is authorized by law to exercise its independent judgment on the evidence, the court determines whether the findings are supported by the weight of the evidence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c)]. This involves what is in effect a retrial, but there is no formal presentation of evidence as in a normal trial (with a possible exception under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(e), regarding evidence that was unavailable at the time of the initial administrative hearing). The "retrial" is conducted on the record of evidence that was presented to the agency [see Berlinghieri v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 392, 395, 398, 188 Cal. Rptr. 891, 657 P.2d 383 ; see Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130, 143, 93 Cal. Rptr. 234, 481 P.2d 242 ; Ocheltree v. Gourley (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1013, 1017, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 77 (trial court erred in ruling on petition without reviewing record)].

It is the petitioner's burden, not that of the agency, to provide a record of the administrative proceedings that will allow sufficient and effective review by the court, since it is the burden of the petitioner to demonstrate a prejudicial abuse of discretion. Such a record is sufficient if it provides the reviewing court with a basis for the affirmance or reversal of the order or decision, and establishes where in the proceedings the administrative agency abused its discretion. The record must accurately represent the administrative proceedings, provide the reviewing court with an understanding of what occurred below, and enable the court to undertake an independent judicial review of the administrative decision [Elizabeth D. v. Zolin (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 347, 355, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 852 (trial court erred in not reviewing sufficient portion of record before ruling on petition)].

Substantial evidence is evidence of ponderable legal significance, reasonable in nature, credible, and solid value [People v. Bassett (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 122, 138-139, 70 Cal. Rptr. 193, 443 P.2d 777 ; Pennel v. Pond Union School Dist. (1973) 29 Cal. App. 3d 832, 837 n.2, 105 Cal. Rptr. 817] . Under this test, the court may not reweigh the evidence and must resolve reasonable doubts in favor of the administrative decision [Security Environmental Systems, Inc. v. South Coast Air Quality Management Dist. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 110, 132, 280 Cal. Rptr. 108 ; see Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1340, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

[ii] Independent Judgment Standard

The cases in which the independent judgment test is used are those in which the agency action substantially affects a vested fundamental right, which is determined in each case according to the facts [see Strumsky v. San Diego County Employees Retirement Ass'n (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 28, 32, 112 Cal. Rptr. 805, 520 P.2d 29 ; Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130, 144, 93 Cal. Rptr. 234, 481 P.2d 242] .

In cases involving drivers' licenses, the test would be applied when the Department's action substantially affects an existing license [see Berlinghieri v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 392, 398, 188 Cal. Rptr. 891, 657 P.2d 383 (suspension or revocation of license under "implied consent" law of Veh. Code § 13353); Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 796 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454 (continued possession of existing driver's license as fundamental right); Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130, 139, 146, 93 Cal. Rptr. 234, 481 P.2d 242 (right held by virtue of existing license as vested); see also Thompson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 354, 357 n.1, 165 Cal. Rptr. 626 (independent judgment applies because Department is a state-level agency of legislative origin, and suspension proceedings affect vested right)]. Such action by the Department would be suspension, revocation, or imposition of probation. It appears that such action may also include restrictions if the restrictions are not imposed in connection with issuance of the license. It appears that it would also include cancellation.

[iii] Substantial Evidence Standard

In all cases not described in [ii], above, the court determines whether the findings are supported "by substantial evidence in the light of the whole record" [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c)]. With respect to a case involving a driver's license, this test would be applied when the Department has refused to issue a license [see Bixby v. Pierno (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 130, 137, 93 Cal. Rptr. 234, 481 P.2d 242 (attempt to obtain license as not involving vested fundamental right)].

§ 92.123 Review by Ordinary Mandate Proceeding

[1] Compel Performance of Legal Duty

As discussed under § 92.122, administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 cannot be granted unless certain statutorily required conditions are met. Although a writ of administrative mandate may not be available because a case does not satisfy those requirements, a writ of ordinary mandate may be available [see Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. SanDiego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1339, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

An ordinary mandate proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 is a method of compelling the performance of a legal, usually ministerial duty, whereas the purpose of an administrative mandate proceeding is to review the final adjudicative action of an administrative body [see Vernon Fire Fighters Assn. v. City of Vernon (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 802, 808, 810, 165 Cal. Rptr. 908] .

"Legislative" or "quasi-legislative" action, typically reviewable by traditional mandate, is action based on facts that help the tribunal determine the content of law and of policy and exercise its judgment or discretion in determining what course of action to take [Joint Council of Interns & Residents v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1202, 1209-1210, 258 Cal. Rptr. 762] .

To obtain a writ of mandate, the petitioner must generally show a duty on the part of the respondent, the petitioner's beneficial interest in compelling the performance of that duty, and the inadequacy of other legal remedies [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086].

In a mandate action arising under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085, judicial review is limited to an examination of the proceedings before the agency to determine whether the agency's actions have been arbitrary or capricious, entirely lacking in evidentiary support, or whether it failed to follow proper procedures or failed to give notice as required by law [Strumsky v. San Diego County Employees Retirement Ass'n (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 28, 34 n.2, 112 Cal. Rptr. 805, 520 P.2d 29 ; Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1340, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379] . In determining whether evidentiary support is present in a traditional mandate action, the applicable standard of review is the substantial evidence test [Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1340, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

For further discussion of ordinary mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

[2] Invalid Prior Conviction

In a mandate proceeding to review the Department's action taken on the basis of a driver's record of convictions, the court is bound by a prior determination that an earlier conviction was invalid. Since a prior conviction cannot be used for the purpose of suspending a driver's license if it is invalid, it is proper for the superior court to order reinstatement of a driver's license that was suspended by the Department on the basis of a record of convictions that included the invalid conviction [Hasson v. Cozens (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 576, 579-580, 83 Cal. Rptr. 161, 463 P.2d 385] .

The Department generally has a mandatory duty to suspend or revoke a person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle on receipt of an abstract of a court's record of conviction and the person usually is not granted a right to a hearing [see e.g., Veh. Code § 13350]. A writ of administrative mandate would therefore not be available [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Veh. Code § 14101(a)]. It appears, however, that a person may seek a writ of ordinary mandate for review of such cases [see Taylor Bus Service, Inc. v. San Diego Bd. of Education (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1331, 1339, 241 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

When the Department of Motor Vehicles suspends a license on conviction of driving under the influence, and the driver seeks to challenge the suspension on the ground that the conviction is unconstitutional, the driver may not initially seek a writ of mandate against the Department, but must first successfully challenge the conviction in the court in which it was rendered, or in a mandate proceeding directed at the rendering court, or in a criminal proceeding in which the conviction was alleged as a prior offense [Larsen v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 278, 284-288, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151, 906 P.2d 1306] .

D. Judicial Review of Departmental Action

§ 92.124 Redress by Federal Civil Rights Action

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that a complaint alleging facts that show denial, under color of state law, of an application for a license in a manner that does not meet constitutional standards of due process and equal protection states a cause of action under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3), in a case involving a retail liquor dealer. 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3) provides that the United States district courts have original jurisdiction of any civil action authorized by law to be commenced by any person to redress the deprivation, under color of state law, statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States or by any act of Congress providing for equal rights of citizens or of all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States [see Hornsby v. Allen (5th Cir. 1964) 326 F.2d 605, 610-612 ; see also Atlanta Bowling Center, Inc. v. Allen (5th Cir. 1968) 389 F.2d 713, 714-716 (explaining Hornsby case)].

The law authorizing such a civil action is 42 U.S.C. § 1983, which provides that every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any state or territory, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress [42 U.S.C. § 1983].

The proceeding selected by the plaintiff-appellant in the Hornsby case, discussed above, was a declaratory relief action under 28 U.S.C. § 2201. Under that section, in a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to federal taxes, any court of the United States, on the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought.

The complaint in the Hornsby case, above, alleged that although the plaintiff had met all of the requirements and qualifications prescribed for the holder of a retail liquor dealer's license, the application was denied without a reason therefor, and also that the application was denied pursuant to a practice, not authorized or sanctioned by law, of denying application where one or both of the city aldermen for the ward where the business was to be located had objection.

In light of the Hornsby case, above, it would appear that an unsuccessful applicant for a driver's license, or a licensee whose license is threatened or withdrawn, has a means of redress in the federal courts, at least for ascertaining whether the manner in which the determination of eligibility or fitness was or is made accords with constitutional standards of due process and equal protection [Hornsby v. Allen (5th Cir. 1964) 326 F.2d 605, 612] .

For discussion and a form of complaint for bringing an action in United States district court for damages and injunction for deprivation of civil rights under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1988, see Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities .

§ 92.131 Impoundment by Peace Officer

[1] Failure to Produce Valid License

If the driver of a motor vehicle is unable to produce a valid driver's license on the demand of a peace officer enforcing the provisions of the Vehicle Code, the vehicle must be impounded, regardless of ownership, unless the officer is reasonably able, by other means, to verify that the driver is properly licensed. If the driver claims to be properly licensed, the officer must attempt to verify the license status before impounding the vehicle [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(1)]. The officer may not impound the vehicle if the driver's license expired within the previous 30 days and the driver would otherwise have been properly licensed [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(2)]. As used in Veh. Code § 14607.6, "days" means workdays not including weekends and holidays [Veh. Code § 14607.6(o)]. If the driver has a valid license but the license is for a class of vehicle other than the vehicle operated by the driver, the vehicle may not be impounded [Veh. Code § 14607.6(s)].

A peace officer may not stop a vehicle for the sole reason of determining whether the driver is properly licensed [Veh. Code § 14607.6(b)]. The impoundment and forfeiture provisions do not apply to vehicles subject to Veh. Code §§ 14608 and 14609 if there has been compliance with the procedures in those sections [Veh. Code § 14607.6(t)].

[2] Vehicles Driven by Employees

The officer may exercise discretion regarding the impounding of a vehicle if the driver is an employee driving a vehicle registered to the employer in the course of employment. The officer also may exercise discretion if [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(3)]:

- The driver is an employee of, or otherwise controlled by, a bona fide business establishment.

- It reasonably appears that an owner, or agent of the owner, of the vehicle relinquished possession of the vehicle to the business establishment solely for servicing or parking of the vehicle or other reasonably similar situations.

- The vehicle was not to be driven except as directly necessary to accomplish that business purpose.

In this event, the officer may release and not impound the vehicle if the vehicle can be returned to or retrieved by the business establishment or a registered owner [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(3)].

[1] Actions of Driver

An impounded vehicle must be released if the vehicle is not subject to forfeiture because the driver is not the registered owner of the vehicle or does not have a specified prior conviction [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(5); for discussion, see § 92.140 et seq.].

An impounded vehicle must be released if the driver is a registered owner of the vehicle and the driver presents to the impounding agency, within three days of the impoundment, his or her valid California driver's license, including a valid temporary license or permit. A vehicle impounded pursuant to Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(3), relating to an officer's discretion in impounding a vehicle driven by an employee, must be released to a registered owner whether or not the driver presents a valid driver's license. The release of an impounded vehicle must be to a registered owner of record at the time of the impoundment, or an agent of that owner authorized in writing, on payment of towing and storage charges related to the impoundment and any administrative charges authorized by Veh. Code § 22850.5, providing that the person claiming the vehicle is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly registered [Veh. Code § 14607.6(d)(1)].

Towing and storage charges for vehicles impounded under these provisions may not exceed the normal rates for other vehicle towing and storage conducted by the impounding agency in the normal course of business [Veh. Code § 14607.6(p)].

[2] Community Property Interest in Vehicle

If at the time of impoundment there is a community property interest in the vehicle owned by a person other than the driver, and the vehicle is the only vehicle available to the driver's immediate family that may be operated with a class C driver's license, the vehicle may be released to a registered owner or the community property interest owner when [Veh. Code § 14607.6(d)(2)]:

- Release of the vehicle is requested by the registered owner or community property interest owner and the owner of the community property interest submits proof of that interest.

- The registered owner or community property interest owner submits proof that he or she is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly registered.

- All towing and storage charges and any administrative charges authorized by Veh. Code § 22850.5 are paid.

- If the driver requests release of the vehicle, the registered owner or community property interest owner signs a stipulated vehicle release agreement in consideration for the nonforfeiture of the vehicle. However, the vehicle may not be released if the driving record of a registered owner indicates that a prior stipulated vehicle release agreement was signed by that person [Veh. Code § 14607.6(d)(5)].

A stipulated vehicle release agreement must provide for the consent of the signator to the automatic future forfeiture and transfer of title to the state of any vehicle registered to the signator if the vehicle is driven by a driver whose license is suspended or revoked or who is unlicensed. The agreement is effective for only as long as it is noted on a driving record maintained by the Department under Vehicle Code § 1806.1 [Veh. Code § 14607.6(d)(3)]. The stipulated vehicle release agreement must be reported by the impounding agency to the Department within 10 days after the agreement is signed [Veh. Code § 14607.6(d)(4)].

The impounding agency must ascertain from the Department the names and addresses of all legal and registered owners of an impounded vehicle, if the vehicle has not been redeemed pursuant to Veh. Code § 14607.6(d) or has not otherwise been released. The impounding agency must, within two days of impoundment, send a notice by certified mail to all legal and registered owners of the vehicle to the addresses obtained from the Department, informing them that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and will be sold or otherwise disposed of pursuant to Veh. Code § 14607.6. The notice must include instructions for filing a claim with the district attorney, the time limits for filing a claim, and the legal owner's right to conduct the sale. Such a notice need not be sent to any registered owner who was personally served at the time of the impoundment with a notice containing all of the required information, but legal owners, if any, must be sent the notice [*Veh. Any owner of a vehicle who suffers any loss due to the impoundment or forfeiture of any vehicle under *Veh. A registered owner may recover damages for loss of use of a vehicle from a business establishment if possession of the vehicle was tendered to the business establishment in good faith and if the cause of the impoundment of the vehicle was an unlicensed driver employed or otherwise directed by the business establishment [Veh. Code § 14607.6(m)].

If notice was not sent to the legal owner in two working days, the impounding agency may not charge the legal owner for more than 15-days' impoundment when the legal owner redeems the impounded vehicle [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(2); for discussion, see § 92.133]. No processing charges may be imposed on a legal owner who redeems an impounded vehicle within 15 days of impoundment [*Veh. § 92.135 Contesting Validity of Impoundment at Poststorage Hearing

A legal or registered owner of an impounded vehicle is entitled, on request to the impounding agency, to a poststorage hearing to determine the validity of the storage. The owner's request for a poststorage hearing must be made within ten days after the impoundment, except that where personal service was provided under Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(2) and no mailed notice is required, the owner must make the request within three days after impoundment [Veh. Code § 14607.6(n)(1)].

The poststorage hearing must be conducted not later than two days after it was requested. The impounding agency may authorize its own officer or employee to conduct the hearing, except that the hearing officer may not be the same officer who directed storage of the vehicle. Failure of either the legal or registered owner to request a hearing as provided in Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(1), or failure of the owner to attend a scheduled hearing, satisfies the poststorage hearing requirement [Veh. Code § 14607.6(n)(2)].

If it is determined that the driver had a valid driver's license at the time of the impoundment, the agency employing the person who directed the storage is responsible for the costs incurred for towing and storage [Veh. Code § 14607.6(n)(3)].

§ 92.140 When Forfeiture Is Proper

A motor vehicle is subject to forfeiture as a nuisance when all of the following occur [Veh. Code § 14607.6(a)]:

- The driver is the registered owner of the vehicle.
- The driver is unlicensed or the driver's license is suspended or revoked.
- The driver has a previous misdemeanor conviction for a violation of Vehicle Code §§ 12500, 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5.

A trial court has discretion to deny a petition for forfeiture on a showing that the driver obtained valid license after impoundment of the vehicle [People v. One 1986 Cadillac DeVille (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 157, 162].

If the driver is not the registered owner of the vehicle or does not have a specified previous conviction, the vehicle is not subject to forfeiture and must be released [Veh. Code § 14607.6(c)(5)].

When the impounded vehicle has not been redeemed or released, the impounding agency must notify the legal and registered owners of the vehicle that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and must provide instructions for filing a claim [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(1), (2); see discussion in § 92.133].

For a form for filing a claim opposing the forfeiture, see § 92.190.

If no claims to the impounded vehicle are filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notices or within five days of personal service of notices, the district attorney must prepare a written declaration of forfeiture of the vehicle to the state, and the vehicle must be sold. Such a written declaration provides good and sufficient title to the forfeited vehicle. A copy of the written declaration must be provided, on request, to any owner who was given notice. A claim filed but later withdrawn is deemed not to have been filed [Veh. Code §§ 14607.6(e)(3), 14607.6(f)].

§ 92.142 Forfeiture Proceedings When Owner Files Claim

If a claim to the impounded vehicle is timely filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notices or within five days of personal service of notices, the district attorney must file a petition for forfeiture with the appropriate court within ten days of receipt of the claim [see § 92.191]. The district attorney must establish an expedited hearing date in accordance with instructions from the court, and the court must hear the matter without delay. The claimant must pay a court filing fee of $100, but a prevailing claimant must be reimbursed for the fee by the impounding agency. To the extent practicable, the civil and criminal cases must be heard at the same time in an expedited, consolidated proceeding [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(4)].

In the civil case, the burden of proof is on the prosecuting agency by a preponderance of the evidence. All questions that may arise shall be decided, and all other proceedings shall be conducted, as in an ordinary civil action. A judgment of forfeiture does not require, as a condition precedent, the conviction of a defendant of an offense that made the vehicle subject to forfeiture. The filing of a claim within the specified time limits is a jurisdictional prerequisite for the action [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(5)]. On the issuance of an order of forfeiture by the court, the vehicle must be sold [Veh. Code § 14607.6(f)].

On commission of the act that gave rise to the forfeiture, all right, tile, and interest in the vehicle vests in the state [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(6)].

§ 92.143 Stolen or Unidentifiable Vehicles

If the impounding agency determines that the vehicle had been stolen, it may not be sold. A stolen vehicle may be claimed by the registered owner at any time after impoundment, providing the vehicle registration is current and the registered owner has no outstanding traffic violations or parking penalties on his or her driving record or on the registration record of any vehicle registered to the owner. If the identity of the legal or registered owner of the impounded vehicle cannot be reasonably ascertained, the vehicle may be sold [Veh. Code § 14607.6(l)].

§ 92.144 Sale of Forfeited Vehicle

A specified legal owner, or its agent, may take possession and conduct the sale of the forfeited vehicle. The legal owner must be a motor vehicle dealer, bank, credit union, acceptance corporation, or other licensed financial institution legally operating in California [Veh. Code § 14607.6(g)]. The agent of the legal owner must either be licensed, or exempt from licensure, under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7500 et seq. [Veh. Code §§ 14607.6(v)].

The legal owner or agent must notify the impounding agency of its intent to conduct the sale within 15 days of the mailing of notice to it by the impounding agency. The notice may be presented in person, by certified mail, by facsimile transmission, or by electronic mail [Veh. Code § 14607.6(g)].

The sale may be conducted at the time, in the manner, and on the notice usually given for the sale of repossessed or surrendered vehicles [Veh. Code § 14607.6(g)].

If the legal owner or agent of the owner does not notify the agency impounding the vehicle of its intent to conduct the sale as provided in Veh. Code § 14607.6(g), the agency must offer the forfeited vehicle for sale at public auction within 60 days of receiving title to the vehicle. Low-value vehicles, or vehicles not of the type that can readily be sold to the public generally, must be conveyed to a licensed dismantler or donated to an eleemosynary institution [Veh. Code §§ 14607.6(g), 14607.6(k)].

The proceeds of a sale of a forfeited vehicle must be disposed of according to the priorities established in Veh. Code § 14607.6(i). The person conducting the sale must disburse the proceeds pursuant to those priorities and must provide a written accounting regarding the disposition to the impounding agency and, on request, to any person entitled to or claiming a share of the proceeds, within 15 days after the sale is conducted [Veh. Code § 14607.6(j)].

Once DMV establishes prima facie case, driver must produce affirmative evidence of the nonexistence of the presumed facts sufficient to shift the burden of proof back to the DMV. The licensee must show, through cross-examination of officer or by introducing affirmative evidence, that official standards were not observed. Once showing is made, the burden shifts to DMV to prove that test was reliable despite violation. Roze v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1183, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829

The rebuttable presumption under Evid. Code § 664 applies even if officer failed to sign breath test operator's sworn certification. Morgenstern v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 366, 374, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46

There is rebuttable presumption under Evid. Code § 664 that official duty has been regularly performed; once DMV presents competent evidence in form of documents contemplated in statutory scheme to establish its prima facie case, licensee must produce competent affirmative evidence of nonexistence of presumed facts sufficient to shift burden of proof back to the DMV. Baker v. Gourley (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1172 (licensee failed to meet burden of proving nonexistence of foundational trustworthiness of BA report, by offering expert testimony that integrity of blood sample was compromised when its seal had been cut some six days before it was tested)

Failure to object to admission of hearsay in hearing before Department is waiver of objection, whether person represented by counsel or not. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 64, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172 (dictum)

Hearing procedure specified in Veh. Code §§ 14100-14112 provides for initiation of hearing, time and place, who shall conduct hearing, admissible evidence, decision process, time decision shall take effect, and question of continuing jurisdiction. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 689, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1

Director of Department and officers or employees appointed to conduct hearings need not be lawyers or learned in law. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 690-691, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1

[b] Subpoenas

Person whose driver's license was suspended following formal administrative hearing was not deprived of fair hearing based on inability to pay witness fee to patrol officer served with subpoena who refused to appear. Nick v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1412-1417, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 305

[c] Under Administrative Per Se Law

Officer's report stating that witness watched driver try to drive her damaged car after she was involved in early morning accident and that driver had bloodshot and watery eyes and smelled of alcohol was sufficient to support probable cause to arrest driver. Grundy v. Gourley (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 20, 24, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 104

Deputy's statement to arresting officer that driver had been weaving, contained in arresting officer's report that was received in evidence, was competent evidence supporting finding that arresting officer had reasonable cause to believe that motorist was driving under influence; deputy's statement was not inadmissible hearsay, since it was not admitted to prove truth of matter. Cantrell v. Zolin (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 128, 132-134, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238

Motorist's admission of driving, contained in police officer's report, was admissible competent evidence under hearsay exception for public employee records; evidence that motorist had prohibited blood-alcohol level at time of driving was substantial, notwithstanding lack of direct evidence of driving, when chemical test was administered within two hours of time officer received radio call to respond to traffic accident, allowing inference that chemical test was administered within three hours of driving. Jackson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 730, 736-741, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712

Department has evidentiary burden of justifying order of suspension. Coombs v. Pierce (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 568, 576, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249

[d] Under Financial Responsibility Law

"SR-1" report required by Veh. Code § 16000 is hearsay evidence in suspension hearing, and is insufficient by itself to support suspension. Daniels v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 532, 541, 189 Cal. Rptr. 512, 658 P.2d 1313 ; Himelspach v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 542, 543, 189 Cal. Rptr. 518, 658 P.2d 1319

Use of licensee's own "SR-1" report during license suspension hearing is not violative of privilege against self-incrimination. Fahlgren v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 930, 937, 231 Cal. Rptr. 229

[e] Under Implied Consent Law

Implied consent statute applies broadly and generally to motoring public (i.e., those who take advantage of the public streets, roads, and highways to operate a motor vehicle), and does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to arrest for driving under influence. Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328

Person subject to hearing concerning suspension of license who wishes to contest matters contained in sobriety or arrest report is entitled to have arresting officer produce report or to have hearing continued so that report can be produced under subpoena duces tecum. Noll v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 281, 286, 79 Cal. Rptr. 236 (dictum)

Request for continuance of hearing under former Veh. Code § 13353 does not terminate stay of suspension when continuance is necessary because Department's witness failed to produce documents material to his testimony. Noll v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 281, 286, 79 Cal. Rptr. 236 (dictum)

Arresting officer's sworn statement filed with Department pursuant to former Veh. Code § 13353 is official record of Department within meaning of former Veh. Code § 14108 and is admissible at either informal or formal hearing. Fankhauser v. Orr (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 418, 422-423, 74 Cal. Rptr. 61

Arrest report and supplemental report are evidence of any fact required by Veh. Code § 13353 except when there is contrary evidence. Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 379-385, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595

Officer's sworn statement is prima facie evidence of matters therein stated but, insofar as it concludes that arresting officer had reasonable cause, statement is insufficient to overcome contrary evidence. Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 379, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595

Possible error in admitting hearsay evidence at hearing under Veh. Code § 13353 is cured by testimony of person who was subject of hearing, which provided sufficient evidence to support findings. Goss v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 268, 269-270, 70 Cal. Rptr. 447

Evidentiary rules in Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11513) provide procedural format for hearing on revocation or suspensions of license. Goss v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 268, 270, 70 Cal. Rptr. 447

Sworn statement of arresting officer is prima facie evidence in informal hearing when received without objection and without request to cross examine officer. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 62, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172

Testimony of person who is subject of license suspension or revocation hearing supplements evidence produced by Department. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 66, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172

Hearing procedures for license suspension or revocation hearing are specified in Veh. Code § 14100 et seq. rather than Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.), except regarding matters not covered by Vehicle Code provisions. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 689, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1

Administrative procedures that Legislature has provided with respect to proceeding to suspend or revoke license constitute fair trial before impartial tribunal. Finley v. Orr (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 656, 666, 69 Cal. Rptr. 137 (facts held to show petitioner had fair trial before impartial tribunal)

[2] Administrative Per Se Law

[a] Process

Although a notice of hearing must inform applicants of their right to an interpreter at hearing pursuant to Gov. Code § 11435.60, lack of notice was harmless error where applicant was informed of his right to an interpreter when he was arrested for driving under the influence and was issued a notice of suspension/revocation of his license by the arresting officer. Leal v. Gourley (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 963, 967-969, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220

State does not violate due process principles or proscription against double punishment by imposing both criminal and civil penalties for same act or omission under administrative per se laws. Fearn v. Zolin (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1756, 1762, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314

Two processes are contemplated in enacting administrative per se laws: one involving court proceedings is criminal in nature, other involving administrative proceedings is civil in nature; processes are intended to operate independently of each other and to provide for different dispositions. Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 947, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319

Administrative per se legislation is means to provide safety for all persons using California highways by quickly suspending driving privilege of those persons who have shown themselves to be safety hazards by driving with excessive concentration of alcohol in their bodies. Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 948, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319

License suspension is no longer dependent on ultimate conviction of driver. Robertson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 938, 941, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319

Provision in administrative per se law for different periods of suspension for commercial and noncommercial drivers is rationally related to legitimate legislative purpose and does not violate equal protection clauses of state or federal constitutions. Peretto v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 449, 459, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392

[b] Reinstatement of License Following Acquittal

"Acquittal" for purposes of Veh. Code § 13353.2(e) means ruling representing judicial determination in person's favor either that person was not driving or did not have prohibited blood-alcohol level; dismissal after successful suppression motion based on illegal arrest does not constitute "acquittal." Gikas v. Zolin (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 841, 855-857, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 500, 863 P.2d 745

Dismissal of charge of violating Veh. Code § 23152(b) (driving with prohibited blood-alcohol level) pursuant to plea bargain does not constitute acquittal of that charge requiring reinstatement of license; defendant's conviction of alcohol-related reckless driving, followed by dismissal of Veh. Code § 23152(b) charge, is not resolution of charge on its merits, as is case if not-guilty finding is made by trial court as part of plea bargain. Mosier v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 420, 425, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 249

Trial court properly denied plaintiff's petition for writ of mandamus to order DMV to delete its records regarding suspension of plaintiff's license under administrative per se law after related criminal charges were dismissed; mandamus action is proper for defendant who does not appeal administrative ruling but is acquitted at trial; Veh. Code § 13353.2(e) requires acquittal, which involves factual determination in favor of defendant. Snow v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 230, 232-233, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68

[3] Definitions

[a] Accident

"Accident" does not preclude deliberate act if act is unexpected from perspective of person acted upon, within meaning of Veh. Code § 40300.5, which allows peace officer to arrest, without warrant, person who is "involved in a traffic accident" and is believed to be under influence. McNabb v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 832, 838-839, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641

Jury verdict of guilt is equivalent of conviction. Cozens v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 441, 444, 107 Cal. Rptr. 408 (dictum)

Forfeiture of bail is a conviction under Veh. Code § 13103 (defining conviction) regardless of what happens after forfeiture. Powers v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 702, 705-706, 86 Cal. Rptr. 62 (dictum)

[c] Driver and Driving

Implied consent statute applies broadly and generally to motoring public (i.e., those who take advantage of the public streets, roads, and highways to operate a motor vehicle), and does not require evidence that actual driving occurred immediately prior to arrest for driving under influence. Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1125-1126, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328

"Driving" means being "in actual physical control of a vehicle." Panopulos v. Maderis (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 337, 342, 303 P.2d 738 (construing Veh. Code § 69 defining "driver")

Person who struck passing bicyclist by opening vehicle door is included within definition of "driver" for purposes of Veh. Code § 16070(a) financial responsibility requirement. Adler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 252, 258-259, 279 Cal. Rptr. 28

"License" is permission or authority to do particular thing or exercise particular privilege. Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 851, 856, 76 Cal. Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930

[4] Department's Authority

Police power of state includes regulation of driving in public places. Hendrick v. Maryland (1915) 235 U.S. 610, 622, 35 S. Ct. 140, 59 L. Ed. 385 ; Watson v. Division of Motor Vehicles (1931) 212 Cal. 279, 283, 298 P. 481 ; Santa Barbara v. More (1917) 175 Cal. 6, 11-12, 164 P. 895

Department's denial of request for reinstatement of driver's license, which had been revoked for four years because of multiple drunk driving convictions, is mandatory when driver had not completed approved one-year alcohol rehabilitation program, notwithstanding driver completed unapproved one-year program after sentencing court, in violation of Veh. Code § 13352(a)(7), failed to advise him of need to complete approved program for reinstatement. McDaniel v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 76, 79-81, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 149

Although trial court failed to advise defendant of 18-month suspension under Veh. Code § 13352, Department was without authority to perform, and writ of mandamus was not issuable to compel performance of, plea bargain providing for 90-day restriction on license, because of Department's mandatory duty under Veh. Code § 13352 to suspend or to revoke license. Corley v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 72, 78, 271 Cal. Rptr. 406

Veh. Code § 13352.5 does not deprive Department of power to suspend or revoke driving privilege of individual convicted of drunk driving while participating in court-ordered treatment program (Health & Safety Code §§ 11837-11838.2) for earlier offense. Kisielius v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 966, 970, 173 Cal. Rptr. 113

Propriety of suspension or revocation under Veh. Code § 13352 is not dependent on character of criminal penalty that might be imposed for conviction therein specified. Henry v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 649, 654, 102 Cal. Rptr. 36

Operation of Penal Code § 17(b) providing for misdemeanor status for certain felonies has no application to license suspension or revocation based on convictions. Henry v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 649, 652-655, 102 Cal. Rptr. 36

Reference in Veh. Code § 13352 to receipt of duly certified abstract of record of any court showing that person has been convicted does not contemplate different treatment when misdemeanor sentence imposed (pursuant to Penal Code § 17(b)(5)) than when felony sentence imposed. Henry v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 649, 653-654, 102 Cal. Rptr. 36

[b] Constitutionality

A driver's license cannot be suspended without due process of law. Once a license issues, an administrative decision to suspend or revoke it affects a fundamental right. Cinquegrani v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 741, 750, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 816

Exclusionary rule inapplicable to DMV administrative proceedings. Park v. Valverde (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 877, 881-887, 61 Cal. Rptr. 3d 895

DMV's mandatory suspension of license upon conviction for driving under the influence does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. Brierton v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 427, 435-436, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 480

Veh. Code § 1806, regarding DMV "in-house" printouts of accident reports, which department uses in negligent operator program and investigations, is constitutional, in that printouts are releasable only to DMV employees, law enforcement agencies, and some government entities; statute does notattach "badge of infamy" to driver subject to license suspension for failure to report accident. Kruger v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 541, 549, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584

DMV requirement of accident reports, and use of report form against licensee for purposes of license suspension, does not violate person's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Kruger v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 541, 548, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584

State power to terminate person's driving privilege is limited by constitutional requirement of due process. Bell v. Burson (1971) 402 U.S. 535, 539, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90 ; Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 795-799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454

Veh. Code §§ 13800-13802 do not delegate authority to Department to designate what are violations, to set penalties, and to impose penalties; those sections are not unconstitutional under separation-of-powers doctrine in California Constitution. Beamon v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 200, 206-209, 4 Cal. Rptr. 396 (construing former Veh. Code § 314 on which present Veh. Code §§ 13800-13802 are based)

[c] Immediate Action

Alternative notice and hearing procedure in Veh. Code § 13953 is equally applicable when safety calls for disciplinary measure and situation requires immediate action. Hough v. McCarthy (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 273, 285, 5 Cal. Rptr. 668, 353 P.2d 276

Alternative procedure of Veh. Code § 13953 makes prior hearing unnecessary when safety of persons on highways requires immediate suspension of drunk drivers' licenses. Hough v. McCarthy (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 273, 285, 5 Cal. Rptr. 668, 353 P.2d 276

Department's authority to suspend or revoke license is conferred by Veh. Code §§ 12809(e) and 13359, but not by Veh. Code § 12810, which merely sets forth statutory presumption that person is negligent driver. Kriesel v. McCarthy (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 69, 72-73, 29 Cal. Rptr. 256

Department's proceeding pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 12809(e), 12810, and 13359 (revocation of license of presumptively negligent driver) is in accord with due process since judicial review is specifically provided for in Veh. Code § 14400. Kriesel v. McCarthy (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 69, 72-73, 29 Cal. Rptr. 256 (driver in fact had review)

[e] Prior Convictions

DMV properly suspended license of recent California resident on discovery of two drunk-driving offenses in foreign state, pursuant to former Veh. Code § 13352(a)(3), which mandated license suspension for drivers convicted of two DUI's within seven years; foreign state provided forum to seek probationary conditions sufficient to entitle licensee to obtain restricted license, although licensee did not avail herself of it. Moomjian v. Zolin (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1606, 1613, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335

Amendments to Veh. Code §§ 13352 and 13352.5, requiring revocation of license even if offenders participated in alcohol rehabilitation program, which under pre-amendment version of statutes operated to prevent license revocation, do not apply retroactively to limited group of offenders whose third offense occurred before effective date of amendments, but whose convictions occurred thereafter. Fox v. Alexis (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 621, 627-630, 214 Cal. Rptr. 132, 699 P.2d 309

Veh. Code § 13352 mandates that license of driver convicted of second drunk driving offense within five years be suspended. Pollack v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 367, 377, 211 Cal. Rptr. 748, 696 P.2d 141

Veh. Code § 13352 does not require pleading and proof of prior conviction in second criminal proceeding as prerequisite to license suspension; rather, it provides that on second drunk driving offense in five years, license of offender may be suspended, whether or not prior offense was proven in second trial. Pollack v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 367, 372-377, 211 Cal. Rptr. 748, 696 P.2d 141

Prior invalid conviction as not applicable for purpose of suspending driver's license on basis of record of convictions. Hasson v. Cozens (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 576, 580, 83 Cal. Rptr. 161, 463 P.2d 385 (dictum); Mitchell v. Orr (1969) 268

Cal. App. 2d 813, 815, 74 Cal. Rptr. 407 (dictum)

Veh. Code § 13352(a)(5) imposes duty on Department of Motor Vehicles to suspend or revoke license of driver convicted of three drunk driving offenses within specified period (now seven years); fact that criminal court sentenced driver pursuant to former Veh. Code § 23165 (now see Veh. Code § 23540, relating to one prior conviction) rather than former Veh. Code § 23170 (now see Veh. Code § 23546, relating to two prior convictions) because two of the three convictions had occurred simultaneously was irrelevant to Department's legislatively mandated duty to revoke based on existence of three separate convictions. Vary v. Forrest (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1506, 1513, 247 Cal. Rptr. 873

Department is not bound to recognize court's merely striking prior conviction from record without having determined that it was invalid. Nicolino v. Cozens (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 1024, 1026, 109 Cal. Rptr. 498

Department is without authority to ignore court determination that prior conviction is invalid or to base action on invalidated conviction. Mitchell v. Orr (1969) 268 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816-818, 74 Cal. Rptr. 407

Department is not precluded from acting under Veh. Code § 13352 (suspension or revocation for conviction of drunk driving) because court rendering conviction did not also adjudicate how many prior convictions defendant had; Department's authority to make independent determination of driver's prior convictions is constitutional. Cook v. Bright (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 98, 101-102, 25 Cal. Rptr. 116

[f] Suspension Without Prior Hearing

Suspension of driver's license without prior hearing but subject to subsequent judicial review does not violate due process if reasonably justified bycompelling public interest. Orr v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 220, 224, 77 Cal. Rptr. 816, 454 P.2d 712 ; Escobedo v. California (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 870, 876, 222 P.2d 1 (both overruled on different points in Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454)

Mandatory suspension or revocation without prior hearing, based on conviction or record of conviction, does not violate due process because facts have already been determined in criminal proceeding. DiGenova v. State Board of Education (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 255, 260, 288 P.2d 862 (summary revocation of teacher's license based on conviction upheld); Ratliff v. Lampton (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 226, 227, 195 P.2d 792 (dictum)

Veh. Code § 13352(a)(5), which provides for suspension of driver's license for three years without hearing for person who suffers three drunk driving convictions within specified period (now seven years), does not violate due process when facts giving rise to application of Veh. Code § 13352(a)(5) have already been judicially established by proof beyond reasonable doubt. Paterson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 1126, 1129, 217 Cal. Rptr. 881

License revocation by Department under Veh. Code § 13365 because of violations of written promise to appear in court, without affording licensee opportunity for hearing beyond court appearances directed by summons on traffic citations, is not denial of due process of law. People v. Bailey (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 12, 16

[5] Financial Responsibility Law

Bond issued by "surety company authorized to do business in this state," under Veh. Code § 16056(a) means "admitted surety insurer," and includes corporate insurer to which Insurance Commissioner has issued certificate of authority to transact surety insurance in California. California Financial Responsibility Co. v. Pierce (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1663, 1668

Driver's operation of another's motor vehicle with knowledge that driver is unable to meet demands of financial responsibility law is at driver's own peril, notwithstanding "good faith" reliance on another to fulfill driver's own mandatory obligation. Dowell v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1567, 1570, 270 Cal. Rptr. 240

[a] As Written

Arresting officer may properly delegate administration of test to another officer. Webb v. Miller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 619, 628, 232 Cal. Rptr. 50 ; Lee v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 275, 281, 283, 191 Cal. Rptr. 23

Recommendation of judge receiving plea in criminal prosecution that license not be suspended does not prevent Department from suspending license under Veh. Code § 13353. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 67, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172

Suspension of driver's license under Veh. Code § 13353 is mandatory rather than discretionary when person refuses to take blood alcohol test. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1 (dictum)

Act of driving, not obtaining license, is act from which implied consent flows under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23157); that section covers all drivers, whether licensed in California, another state, or not at all. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 687, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1

[b] Constitutional Questions

[i] Answered in Favor of Validity

Highway sobriety checkpoint program does not violate Fourth Amendment prohibition against unlawful searches and seizures when degree of subjective intrusion to and potential for generating fear and surprise in law-abiding motorists is limited by fact that checkpoints are selected pursuant to guidelines, and uniformed officers stop every vehicle. Michigan State Police v. Sitz (1990) 496 U.S. 444, 453-455, 110 S. Ct. 2481, 110 L. Ed. 2d 412, 422-423

Analysis of effectiveness of proposed checkpoint program in advancing public interest is satisfied when checkpoint program involved neither random stops nor complete absence of empirical data indicating that stops would be effective means of promoting roadway safety. Michigan State Police v. Sitz (1990) 496 U.S. 444, 453-455, 110 S. Ct. 2481, 110 L. Ed. 2d 412, 422-423

Former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) bears reasonable relation to preservation of safety on California highways and does not violate "substantive due process." Hernandez v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 70, 74, 177 Cal. Rptr. 566, 634 P.2d 917

License suspension after imposition of 48-hour refusal enhancement under former Veh. Code § 23159(a)(2) (now see Veh. Code § 23577(a)(2)) does not violate Double Jeopardy Clause; suspension is not punishment. Ellis v. Pierce (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1557, 1559, 1562, 282 Cal. Rptr. 93

Summary suspension of license under Veh. Code § 13353 on sworn statement of arresting officer is not denial of due process because licensee entitled to hearing on request. Funke v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d

Failure of Veh. Code § 13353 to provide exception for "employment-livelihood" cases is not denial of equal protection. Pepin v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 9, 11, 79 Cal. Rptr. 657

Requirement that licensee state whether he or she will submit to test under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) does not violate privilege against self-incrimination. Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 380, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595

Denial of opportunity for advice of counsel before stating whether one will submit to test and before deciding which test to take, and denial of opportunity to have counsel present while test is administered, is not denial of any constitutional right. Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 383-384, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595 ; see Reirdon v. Director of Dep't of Motor Vehicles (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 808, 810, 72 Cal. Rptr. 614 ; Ent v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 936, 939, 71 Cal. Rptr. 726

Proper enforcement of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) does not entail any unconstitutional restriction on right of free speech. Fallis v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 373, 380-382, 70 Cal. Rptr. 595

Provision for subsequent hearing or review after summary suspension under Veh. Code § 13353 meets demands of due process, even though no such hearing or review is requested. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 62, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; but see Rios v. Cozens (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 792, 799 , cert. granted and remanded, 410 U.S. 425 , on remand, 9 Cal. 3d 454 (contrary holding with respect to suspension for failure to post security after accident as required by financial responsibility law (Veh. Code § 16000 et seq.))

Delegation to Department of authority to make findings of fact pertinent to issues arising under Veh. Code § 13353 is not denial of due process. Finley v. Orr (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 656, 666, 69 Cal. Rptr. 137

[ii] Choice of Tests

Arrestee's choice is limited to those tests that are both feasible and available when arrestee is incapable or states he or she is incapable of performing any chosen test, or if it is necessary to transport arrestee to medical facility for treatment, and it is not feasible to administer particular test. Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 368, 374, 224 Cal. Rptr. 543

Failure of arresting officer to advise arrested person that he or she has choice of tests does not violate any constitutionally protected interest and, in absence of express statutory provision to contrary, does not make breathalyzer test results obtained through such statutory violation inadmissible in prosecution for drunk driving. People v. Brannon (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 971, 975, 108 Cal. Rptr. 620

[iii] Refusal to Take Test

Suspension of license under Veh. Code § 13353 for refusal to take blood alcohol test is not denial of equal protection of law to persons who refuse. Walker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 793, 796, 79 Cal. Rptr. 433

Person requested to submit to test under former Veh. Code § 13353 has no constitutional right to refuse and, therefore, admission in evidence, at hearing pursuant to that section, of fact that person did not submit to test does not violate privilege against self-incrimination. Finley v. Orr (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 656, 663, 69 Cal. Rptr. 137 (suggesting but not holding result would be same whether refusal to submit was verbal or nonverbal)

[c] Discovery

Person faced with suspension of license for refusal to submit to test under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) is entitled todiscover contents of reports concerning his or her arrest. Noll v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 281, 286, 79 Cal. Rptr. 236 (dictum)

[d] Effect of Criminal Proceedings on Administrative Proceeding

Dismissal of criminal prosecution for lack of jurisdiction has no res judicata or collateral estoppel effect on subsequent administrative disciplinary proceeding by Department to suspend arrestee's license. Lofthouse v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 730, 736-737, 177 Cal. Rptr. 601

Conviction for misdemeanor drunk driving does not preclude imposition of sanctions under Veh. Code § 13353 (suspension of license for refusal to submit to chemical test for intoxication). Covington v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 54, 60, 162 Cal. Rptr. 150

Officer did not conduct PAS test in way to be used as proof of actual blood alcohol concentration; therefore not given substantial weight. Roze v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1187-1188, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 829

"Continuous observation" of driver for purposes of 17 Cal. Code Reg. § 1219.3 could be done by more than one person successively. Taxara v. Gutierrez (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 945, 950-951, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 172

"Continuous observation" of driver for 15 minutes under 17 Cal. Code Reg. § 1219.3 did not mean officer observing driver had to be a certified intoxilyzer operator. Hernandez v. Gutierrez (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 168, 173-176, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307

"Continuous observation" of driver for purposes of 17 Cal. Code Reg. § 1219.3 did not mean an officer had to keep his eyes focused on the driver for uninterrupted 15-minute period; court interpreted regulation with reference to its purpose, which was to determine whether the driver had smoked, ingested food or drink, or suffered physical symptoms that would adversely affect the test results. Manriquez v. Gourley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1227, 1235-1236, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209

Compliance with implied consent law (Veh. Code § 23612) consists of completing, not merely attempting, one of three blood alcohol tests; completion of urine test under 17 Cal. Code Reg § 1219.2 requires arrestee to urinate twice. Miles v. Alexis (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 555, 559-560, 173 Cal. Rptr. 473

Test is not complete until evidence of reliability of results is reasonably obtained; when driver refused to give third breath sample after first two samples produced results with greater than 0.02 difference, suspension of license is mandatory under Veh. Code § 13353(a). Hasiwar v. Sillas (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 295, 298-299, 173 Cal. Rptr. 358

After choosing blood test, driver's refusal to sign hospital consent form for blood test does not render him "incapable of completing" test within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612). Butler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 913, 916, 171 Cal. Rptr. 525

[f] Lawful Arrest

Driver was "lawfully arrested" under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) when arresting officer was called to scene of misdemeanor offense by another peace officer who witnessed offense. Freeman v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 235, 236-237, 74 Cal. Rptr. 259, 449 P.2d 195

Fact that the arresting officer was driving an unmarked vehicle did not render the subsequent arrest unlawful. Dyer v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 161, 169-170, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 138

Driver was "involved in a traffic accident" and lawfully arrested under Veh. Code § 40300.5, when driver intentionally made contact with and pushed other vehicles away from his driveway; "accident" does not preclude deliberate act if act is unexpected from perspective of person acted upon. McNabb v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 832, 837-839, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 641

Lawful arrest based on probable cause to believe that person arrested was driving motor vehicle under influence of alcohol is essential condition to application of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612); use of hearsay evidence of citizen informants that person arrested was driving car is sufficient to establish probable cause. Mueller v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 681, 684-686, 210 Cal. Rptr. 14

Former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) does not require officer to specifically inform arrestee that he or she is being "arrested." Ormonde v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 889, 893, 173 Cal. Rptr. 79

Suspension of driver's license under Veh. Code § 13353 for failure to submit to chemical test following lawful arrest is appropriate despite fact that driver subsequently obtained certificate under Penal Code § 849.5 describing "arrest" as "detention." Behan v. Alexis (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 403, 406-407, 172 Cal. Rptr. 132

[g] Legislative Purpose

Implied consent statute has dual legislative purpose: to obtain the best evidence of blood alcohol content while ensuring cooperation of the person arrested, and to inhibit driving under the influence. Troppman v. Valverde (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 1121, 1133, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 306, 156 P.3d 328

Legislative purpose underlying former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) is to provide method of compelling person arrested for drunk driving to submit to test for intoxication, additionally or alternatively to forcible removal of blood sample. People v. Superior Court (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 757, 764-765, 100 Cal. Rptr. 281, 493 P.2d 1145 (dictum; decided before 1985 legislation moving implied consent provision to Veh. Code § 23157(a))

Purposes of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) is to obtain best evidence of blood alcohol content at time of arrest of person reasonably believed to be driving while intoxicated and to inhibit intoxicated persons from driving. Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 77, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900

The immediate purposes of the implied consent law are to obtain the best evidence of blood alcohol content at the time of the arrest of a person who is reasonably believed to be driving while intoxicated before the evidence becomes unavailable due to the passage of time, and to provide incentive for voluntary submission to chemical tests thereby eliminating the potential for violence inherent in forcible testing. Molenda v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 974, 993, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792

Primary goal of Veh. Code § 23136 was to enhance public safety, and, indirectly, to discourage minors from consuming alcoholic beverages. Bobus v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 680, 685, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 168

[h] Refusal to Submit to Test

[i] Acts Equivalent to Refusal

Arrestee's insistence, while handcuffed at testing site, that he be allowed to look at card in his wallet before deciding which test to take is tantamount to refusal to take test; "reasonable condition" standard is unworkable and against public policy. Webb v. Miller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 619, 624, 627, 232 Cal. Rptr. 50

Refusal to sign hospital blood test consent form after agreeing to submit to blood test, and refusal thereafter to submit to one of two remaining chemical tests constitutes refusal to submit to test within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612). Carrey v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1265, 1271, 228 Cal. Rptr. 705

Refusal to take test without first consulting attorney and subsequent refusal to roll up sleeve for drawing of blood sample constitutes refusal within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612); driver's allegation that he changed his mind immediately before drawing of blood and fact that blood sample ultimately obtained and test completed is not relevant. Cole v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 870, 873-875, 189 Cal. Rptr. 249

Reply to arresting officer's request to take another test after failing to complete one, that "I'm not even going to give you an answer" is tantamount to refusal to submit to test within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612). Cahall v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 491, 496-498, 94 Cal. Rptr. 182

Refusal to choose and complete second test after failing to complete first chosen (urine) test through professed physical inability arising from excessive modesty constitutes refusal within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) and justifies suspension. Quesada v. Orr (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 866, 870-871, 92 Cal. Rptr. 640

Claim of failure of memory as to whether person refused to take test does not constitute evidence of refusal. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 66, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172

[ii] Advisement That Refusal Used in Court

Requirement that officer advise arrested person that refusal to submit to test may be used against him or her in court of law relates to criminal proceeding, not administrative proceeding, and thus, failure to give advisement does not preclude administrative suspension of driver's license. Sanchez v. Alexis (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 709, 716, 182 Cal. Rptr. 593

[iii] Application of Rule

Defendant's argument that admonitions required by former Veh. Code §§ 23157, 23157.5 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) were misleading and confusing was issue of law; therefore, conclusions of trial court were not binding on reviewing court. Blitzstein v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 138, 141-142, 244 Cal. Rptr. 624

Admonitions required by former Veh. Code §§ 23157, 23157.5 (now see Veh. Code §§ 23612, 23614), relating to penalties for refusal to submit to test, are not inherently misleading and confusing; suspension of license is proper when defendant made no claim that officer's conduct or additional statements confused him. Blitzstein v. Department of

Driver is subject to suspension of license when evidence established that he refused to take breath or blood tests after purposely dropping last available container for urine test into urinal, thereby contaminating container. Reyes v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 66, 67-69, 208 Cal. Rptr. 372

Once arrested driver refuses to submit to test, officer is not required to reoffer opportunity to take test; initial refusal is sufficient basis for license suspension. Dunlap v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 279, 283, 202 Cal. Rptr. 729

Refusal to agree to test required by former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) is sufficient in itself to support license suspension; fact that test was taken without resistance within 10 minutes is irrelevant. Barrie v. Alexis (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1157, 1161-1163, 199 Cal. Rptr. 258

Refusal to submit to test under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) is not ameliorated by eventual submission to and completion of test. Morgan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 165, 170, 195 Cal. Rptr. 707

Question whether driver "refused" test within meaning of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612) as issue of fact. Cahall v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 491, 497, 94 Cal. Rptr. 182 (dictum); Funke v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 449, 453, 81 Cal. Rptr. 662 (dictum); Walker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799, 79 Cal. Rptr. 433

Determining factor, when issue is whether person refused to submit to blood alcohol test, is not state of mind when he or she made or failed to make response to request but fair meaning of response to request. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 982, 986, 92 Cal. Rptr. 579

Withholding permission for arrested person to make telephone call within three-hour period prescribed by Penal Code § 851.5 has no bearing on refusal to submit to blood alcohol test under former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612), even though such withholding may have been unlawful. Lacy v. Orr (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 198, 205, 81 Cal. Rptr. 276

Person who refused to take blood alcohol test without first seeing attorney and whom officer had warned, before requesting test, of Miranda rights, is entitled, on seeking writ of mandate for review and vacation of Department's order of suspension, to hearing on question whether refusal arose from misunderstanding of Miranda warning. Kingston v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 549, 554, 76 Cal. Rptr. 614

Refusal or other manifestation of unwillingness to take test required by former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612), regardless of degree of voluntary intoxication or lack of understanding resulting therefrom, subjects person to license suspension under that section. Bush v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 788, 793, 71 Cal. Rptr. 123

Refusal to submit to test is not required to be "intelligent" in order to be basis for suspension of driver's license. Bush v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 788, 791, 71 Cal. Rptr. 123

Subsequent plea of guilty to drunk driving charge does not affect consequences of earlier refusal to take blood alcohol test. Serenko v. Bright (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 70 Cal. Rptr. 1

[iv] Effect of Later Consent

Refusal to submit to test is not vitiated by consent, 30 or 45 minutes later; officer is not required to administer test to person who changes mind after such interval. Webb v. Miller (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 619, 624, 232 Cal. Rptr. 50 ; Zidell v. Bright (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 867, 869-870, 71 Cal. Rptr. 111

Initial refusal to submit to test is not affected by fact that sample was eventually obtained. Morgan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 165, 170, 195 Cal. Rptr. 707

[v] Effect of Silence

Motorist's silence in face of police officer's repeated requests that he submit to chemical test and that he choose test to determine alcohol content of his blood constitutes refusal to submit to chemical test. Buchanan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1979) 100 Cal. App. 3d 293, 299, 160 Cal. Rptr. 557

Arresting officer is not required to try to administer one test in order to determine whether arrested person's silence in face of requests to submit to and to choose test amounts to refusal in fact. Lampman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927, 105 Cal. Rptr. 101

Silence of arrested person in face of repeated requests to submit to blood alcohol test and to choose test constitutes failure to submit to test. Lampman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 922, 926, 105 Cal. Rptr. 101

[vi] Excuse

Undisclosed, irrational fear of police, is self-induced condition, not excusing driver from refusal to take chemical test; only lack of understanding due to no fault of driver as excuses refusal. Eilinger v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 748, 751-752, 192 Cal. Rptr. 187

Person on whom demand is made to submit to blood alcohol test is required to point out deficiency, on which he or she refuses to take chosen test, with clearness sufficient to permit officer to decide on validity of protest and to take steps to meet objection if reasonable to do so. Wegner v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 838, 841, 76 Cal. Rptr. 920

General objection to taking of blood sample, that technician's hands and fingernails were dirty, is insufficient basis for refusal to submit to taking of blood sample, when person did not object that he or she feared needle was likely to be dirty. Wegner v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 838, 840-841, 76 Cal. Rptr. 920

[vii] Refusal to Choose Test

Indication of willingness to take blood alcohol test but refusal to choose which one does not constitute refusal to take test; arrested person is not required to select particular test. Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 78, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900 (approving result in James v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 750, 73 Cal. Rptr. 452)

[i] Stipulation That Test Was Taken

Collateral estoppel is inapplicable to estop Department from later revoking person's license, when factual stipulation in underlying criminal action that person took and completed chemical test was not necessary to judgment of conviction following negotiated plea of guilty to driving under influence of alcohol. Betyar v. Pierce (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1252, 1255, 252 Cal. Rptr. 907

[j] Warnings

[i] Generally

Proper focus for determining adequacy of warning is manner in which warning was given rather than on driver's receipt of warning. Plunkett v. Alexis (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 370, 373-374, 186 Cal. Rptr. 261

Arresting officer gave proper warning when injured driver indicated that he understood officer, officer read admonition twice and repeated it once informally, and driver refused to take test and indicated that he understood consequences of failure to take test. Plunkett v. Alexis (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 370, 373, 374, 186 Cal. Rptr. 261

Advisement that driver "could" lose license for refusal to submit to chemical test was defective, but of no consequence when specific and adequate warning also given. Ormonde v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 889, 893, 173 Cal. Rptr. 79

Question whether driver was given statutory warning is issue of fact. Walker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799, 79 Cal. Rptr. 433

Arresting officer is presumed to have performed duty to warn arrested person as required. August v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 52, 65, 70 Cal. Rptr. 172

[ii] Insufficient Warnings

Qualification of statutorily required warning, without explanation, defeats evident purpose of statute and misleads driver concerning legal realities of situation. Decker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 903, 907, 101 Cal. Rptr. 387, 495 P.2d 1307

Warning that if person refuses to take blood alcohol test his or her driver's license "could" be suspended for six months fails to correspond to statutory language and misrepresents legal significance of refusal to take test, and therefore, setting aside Department's order of suspension is justified. Decker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 903, 905-906, 101 Cal. Rptr. 387, 495 P.2d 1307 ; Giomi v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 905, 906-907, 93 Cal. Rptr. 613

Fact that driver was warned that refusal to submit to test could result in six-month suspension of license when he was actually subject to one-year suspension based on prior drunk driving conviction does not require vacation of six-month suspension imposed on him. Daly v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 257, 262, 232 Cal. Rptr. 7

Explanation that warning, given in terms of former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612), meant "if you don't submit to the test, chances are you will lose your license" does not vitiate compliance with that section. Smith v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 499, 502-503, 81 Cal. Rptr. 800

Warning that if person did not submit to blood alcohol test "his driver's license would probably be suspended" and, after one refusal and second request, "he would lose his license" is in compliance with requirements of statute. Janusch v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 193, 196-197, 80 Cal. Rptr. 726

[iii] Right to Counsel

Language in former Veh. Code § 13353 (now see Veh. Code § 23612), "such person shall be told" of effect of failure to comply with that section's demands, implicitly requires that possibly-about-to-be-accused driver be fairly warned and that it should be made as clear as accused's condition will permit that he or she is not entitled to have attorney present. Plumb v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 256, 261-262, 81 Cal. Rptr. 639 (decided before 1985 legislation moving implied consent provisions of Veh. Code § 13353 to Veh. Code § 23157(a))

Arresting officer is required to explain nonapplicability of Miranda rights to blood alcohol test when arrested person apparently is confused and person's responses to questions asked concerning willingness to take test clearly indicate that he or she is asserting right he or she has moments earlier been told he or she is free to assert. West v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 908, 910, 80 Cal. Rptr. 385

Arresting officer is required to qualify Miranda warning of right to counsel by stating it is inapplicable to blood alcohol test. Rust v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 545, 547, 73 Cal. Rptr. 366 (judgment granting peremptory writ of mandate vacating order of suspension affirmed); but see Walker v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 793, 799, 79 Cal. Rptr. 433 (such qualification merely advisable, not required)

[iv] Warnings Not Required

Arresting officer is not required to advise arrested person that additional tests may be taken at his or her own expense. Kesler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 74, 78-79, 81 Cal. Rptr. 348, 459 P.2d 900

Driver's license was properly suspended for failure to submit to chemical drunk-driving test even without admonishment when driver's uncooperative behavior prevented admonishment and led officer to conclude that driver refused test; to have required officer to wait until driver was ready to listen would be inconsistent with intent to have test conducted as quickly as possible. Morphew v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 738, 743-744, 188 Cal. Rptr. 126

Arresting officer is not required to warn that constitutional right to be silent for purposes of self-incrimination does not include right to be silent for purposes of driver licensing when blood alcohol test is sought. Lampman v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 922, 928, 105 Cal. Rptr. 101

Explicit warning that Miranda rights do not apply to taking blood alcohol test vitiates claim of confusion about rights that led to apparent refusal to take test. Cahall v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 491, 497, 94 Cal. Rptr. 182

Arresting officer is not required to clarify rights when there is no evidence of confusion, and apparent confusion is not demonstrated and is not apparent to officer. Cahall v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 491, 497, 94 Cal. Rptr. 182

Provision for supplemental test does not require that person be advised of right to have such supplemental test made. Lacy v. Orr (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 198, 203-204, 81 Cal. Rptr. 276

Arresting officer is not required to correct arrested person's misconception that he or she is not entitled to have his or her own physician make blood alcohol test, when officer did not create misconception by confusing warnings. Beales v. Dept. of Motor Vehicles (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 594, 596, 76 Cal. Rptr. 662

Arresting officer is not required to advise person whom he or she requests to take blood alcohol test that licensed technician is authorized to take blood specimen. Westmoreland v. Chapman (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5-6, 74 Cal. Rptr. 363

[7] Minors

Veh. Code § 13352.3 is constitutional because it bears rational relationship to legitimate goal of reducing fatal and injury traffic accidents involving youthful intoxicated drivers. In re Arthur W. (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 179, 191, 217 Cal. Rptr. 183

[8] Review

Evidence not presented at administrative hearing is not considered on judicial review unless it is newly discovered, i.e., could not have been produced at administrative hearing. Armondo v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1180, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

In mandate proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 regarding suspension of license under administrative per se order based on drunk driving, trial court uses independent judgment to determine whether weight of evidence supported administrative decision. Yordamlis v. Zolin (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 655, 659, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225

A. Request for Departmental Action

§ 92.170 Request for Hearing or Reopening of Question in Driver's License Proceeding Before Department of Motor Vehicles

[1] FORM Request for Hearing or Reopening of Question in Driver's License Proceeding Before Department of Motor Vehicles

To: Department of Motor Vehicles

_____[Set forth address of appropriate local driver safety office]

Re: _____ [complete name]

_____ [address]

[Driver's License No. _____]

[EITHER, if Department proposes action]

On _____[date], the above-named _____ [applicant or licensee] received a _____ [specify, e.g., Notice of Proposed Action, Grounds Therefor, and of Opportunity to be Heard] showing that the Department proposes to _____ [specify, e.g., suspend the above-named person's driving privilege] pursuant to Section _____ of the Vehicle Code.

[OR, if Department has given notice of action taken]

On _____[date], the above-named _____ [applicant or licensee] received a _____ [specify, e.g., notice of an order of suspension] showing that the Department has _____ [specify action taken, e.g., suspended his/her privilege to operate a motor vehicle,] pursuant to Section _____ of the Vehicle Code.

[CONTINUE]

On behalf of _____[name], I request that the Department _____ [schedule a hearing or reopen the question or take further evidence or change/set aside the order made on _____ (date)]. [The ground on which this request for reopening the case is based is _____ (state grounds for reopening case, e.g., that the licensee has discovered new evidence that establishes that at no time was he/she driving a motor vehicle with an unlawful percent by weight of alcohol in his/her blood).]

[I further request that the hearing be held at _____ (preferred place).]

Until further notice from me [or from _____ (name)] to the contrary, please send all further communications, except orders for suspension, revocation, or probation, to me.

The form of letter in [1], above, illustrates a request for a hearing or for reopening a case in a Department of Motor Vehicles proceeding involving a driver's license. The letter should clearly show the complete name (to avoid confusion arising from similar names) and address, and the driver's license number if there is one, of the person affected by the Department's action.

If the request is for reopening a case, the letter should state that fact and the grounds on which the request is based. The letter of request should state specifically the facts constituting the ground [see Veh. Code § 14106]. For further discussion, see §§ 92.52, 92.109.

[3] Submission to Local Driver Safety Office

Requests for hearing are processed by local driver safety offices, rather than the Department's state office in Sacramento. Thus, counsel should contact the Department, through any of its local field offices, to obtain the address of the appropriate driver safety office [see also http://www.dmv.ca.gov (Dept. of Motor Vehicles Internet site, including listing of field offices)].

[4] Telephonic Request and Hearing

As an alternative to this written request for hearing, the Department has adopted a procedure to request a hearing by telephone. In addition, a driver may request that the hearing be conducted by telephone. Since procedures among the various local driver safety offices may vary, counsel should contact the appropriate office for applicable procedures.

[5] Time Limit for Request

Generally, a request for a hearing must be made within 10 days after notice [see Veh. Code §§ 14100(a), 14103]. Failure to observe this time limit may be treated by the Department as a waiver, but the request should be made even if the 10-day period has passed because the Department has discretion in such cases [see Veh. Code § 14103].

In cases in which a person has received a notice of an order of suspension or revocation of his or her driving privilege under Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.1, 13353.2, 13382, 13388, 23612, or a notice under Veh. Code § 13557 (relating to unlawful blood alcohol level and refusal or failure to complete a blood alcohol test), the person may request a hearing on the matter pursuant to Veh. Code § 14100 et seq., except as otherwise provided in Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13558(a)]. If the person wishes to have a hearing before the effective date of the order of suspension or revocation, the request for a hearing must be made within 10 days of the receipt of the notice of the order of suspension [Veh. Code § 13558(b)].

[6] Request for Preferred Hearing Location

The form provides an optional request for a preferred site. In cases in which the application is made based on action under Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.2, 13382, 13388, 13557, or 23612, the hearing is required to be held at a place designated by the Department as close as practicable to the place where the arrest occurred, unless the parties agree to a different location [Veh. Code § 13558(b)].

§ 92.180 Petition for Writ of Mandate to Review Action by Department of Motor Vehicles in Driver's License Proceeding--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name], Petitioner,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
_____ [name], Department of Motor Vehicles, Respondent.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____

Petitioner alleges:

1. Respondent Director of Motor Vehicles is the chief Executive officer of the Department of Motor Vehicles ("the Department"), which is a department in the Business and Transportation Agency of the State of California.

2. Under Vehicle Code Section(s) _____[specify appropriate section(s)], the Department has discretion to determine _____ [state relevant facts, e.g., whether a person is qualified to receive a driver's license and whether a qualified person has met all requirements of the law for issuance of a driver's license].

3. Under Vehicle Code Section _____ [13950 or 13951], the Department is required to give notice and an opportunity to be heard whenever the Department proposes to _____ [suspend or revoke or refuse to issue] a driver's license. Under Vehicle Code Sections 14100 and 14101, the Department is required to grant a hearing on request when the Department has given notice pursuant to Vehicle Code Section _____[specify], except when the action in question is made mandatory by the Vehicle Code or the person receiving the notice has previously had an opportunity for a hearing.

4. Under Vehicle Code Section 14104.7, evidence is required to be taken at the hearing referred to in Paragraph 3.

5. On _____[date], petitioner received a notice from the Department stating that the Department proposed to _____[specify proposed action]. [On _____ (date), petitioner requested a hearing to contest the Department's proposed action.]

6. On _____[date], a hearing was held, which petitioner attended. [Petitioner was represented at the hearing by _____ (name), his/her counsel.]

7. On _____[date], after the hearing, petitioner received the Department's order of _____[date], _____ [state effect of order, e.g., suspending petitioner's driver's license] on the ground that _____ [specify ground set forth in Department's order)].

[8. On _____ (date), petitioner sent to the Department a written request to reopen the case. The basis for petitioner's request, which petitioner stated in the request, was _____ (specify). On _____ (date), the Department _____ (refused to reopen the case or reopened the case by giving petitioner an interview for the purpose of _____ (specify, e.g., presenting further evidence) but thereafter refused to reverse or modify the order of _____ (date)).]

9. The Department's order _____ [describe effect of order, e.g., suspending petitioner's driver's license] is invalid for the following reasons:

a. _____ [List separately each ground on which petitioner claims the order is invalid, e.g., The _____ (Director or hearing officer or hearing board) found that _____ (state all findings). Under the Vehicle Code, the Department does not have authority to _____ (identify action taken, e.g., suspend a license) on the basis of any of the facts set out in the findings.]

[Add additional grounds as warranted, e.g.]

[b. At the hearing petitioner tried to offer evidence to show that _____ (specify facts provable by evidence in question). This evidence was in the form of _____ (specify, e.g., a certified abstract of the record of the _____ Court of _____ [state jurisdiction]). The hearing _____ (officer or board) ruled that this evidence was not admissible, and it was not received.]

[c. The _____ (Director or hearing officer or board) found that _____ (state all findings). The evidence received at the hearing does not support these findings, as petitioner alleges more particularly hereinafter.]

[CONTINUE]

10. _____ [A verbatim transcript of the record of the hearing, containing the evidence received, is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof or The substance of the evidence received at the hearing is as follows: _____ (state substance of evidence).] [The evidence does not support the findings for the following reasons: _____ (specify).] [Petitioner objected at the hearing to the following evidence, on the grounds indicated, but in each instance petitioner's objection was not sustained, and the evidence was received: _____ (identify evidence, e.g., the testimony of _____ (name), which was offered to show _____ (specify), and that was objected to on the ground that _____ (specify)).]

[11. Petitioner has the following relevant evidence that was not presented at the hearing: _____ (describe completely). This evidence could not be produced at the hearing because _____ (specify why, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, petitioner could not produce evidence). Petitioner was not able to present this evidence to the Department after the order of _____ (date) was issued because _____ (specify why, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, petitioner could not produce evidence on the Department's reopening the case). This evidence tends to show that _____ (state what evidence will prove).]

12. Petitioner meets all of the qualifications for a driver's license of Class _____ [specify class applied for; see Veh. Code § 12804.9] specified in the Vehicle Code. Petitioner duly applied on _____[date], for a driver's license of that class, in compliance with the provisions of the Vehicle Code and the regulations of the Department governing such an application.

[13. As an incident of bringing and maintaining this proceeding, petitioner has become and is obligated personally to pay to his/her counsel, _____ (name), attorney's fees in the sum of $_____).]

14. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law in that _____ [specify, e.g., petitioner has no means other than this proceeding by which he/she can compel the Department to reverse its decision and reinstate petitioner's driving privilege].

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays judgment as follows:

1. For an alternative writ of mandate directing respondent to set aside the Department's order of _____[date], _____ [and to reconsider whether petitioner is entitled to receive a driver's license as applied for or and to reinstate petitioner's driver's license as it existed before the order was issued], or in the alternative to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect should not be issued;

2. For a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect as the alternative writ except for the order to show cause;

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to any other relief granted or other costs awarded;]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred[, including $_____ for preparation of the Departmental record]; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of petition for writ of mandate in [1], above, may be used to obtain review by the superior court of an order of the Department of Motor Vehicles refusing to issue a license or suspending or revoking a license, or otherwise controlling a person's privilege to drive, when the order was made as the result of a proceeding in which by law a hearing was required to be given, evidence was required to be taken, and discretion was vested in the Department to determine the relevant facts [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

A mandate proceeding involves other papers and pleadings, that may include an alternative writ of mandate, a demurrer to the petition, a return, a demurrer to the return, a replication by the petitioner, a judgment, and a peremptory writ of mandate. In addition, the petitioner may move the court for an order permitting filing of the petition before service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; discussed in [11], below].

For further discussion relating to administrative mandate proceedings to review the Department's order affecting a driver's license, see § 92.120 et seq. For further discussion relating to the procedure to be followed in a mandate proceeding for review of an administrative agency's order generally, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , et seq. For additional forms of petition for use in obtaining review of agency proceedings in general, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

The Supreme Court, the court of appeal, and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction to hear an original proceeding for a writ of mandate [see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10]. As a matter of policy, however, the higher courts normally refuse to exercise their original jurisdiction when the proceeding could be heard by a lower court [see Cohen v. Superior Court (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 268, 270-271, 72 Cal. Rptr. 814 (reporting and explaining policy)]. The petition should therefore be filed in the superior court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a) (petition filed in reviewing court but which may be filed in lower court as required to state circumstances making issuance of writ by reviewing court proper); Roma Macaroni Factory v. Giambastiani (1933) 219 Cal. 435, 436-437, 27 P.2d 371] .

[4] Venue

[a] Civil Action Rules Are Applicable

Neither the Vehicle Code nor the part of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to mandate proceedings [Code Civ. Proc.

§§ 1084-1097 (mandate particularly), 1107-1110b (extraordinary writs generally and mandate particularly)] expressly provides for venue in mandate proceedings; therefore, the venue rules applicable to civil actions generally would apply [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1109].

Subject to the power of the court to transfer actions and proceedings as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 392 et seq., the county in which the cause, or some part of it, arose is the proper county for the trial of an action against a public officer, or person especially appointed to execute duties of a public officer, for an act done by the officer or person in virtue of the office, or against a person who, by the officer's command or in the officer's aid, does anything touching the duties of the officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 393(1)(b)]. The Director of Motor Vehicles is a public officer and denial of a license, or revocation or suspension, or the imposition of probation, is an act done by the director in virtue of his or her office [see Veh. Code § 1650 (director as authorized to administer provisions of Vehicle Code relating to Department)].

[b] Liberal Construction Favors Petitioner

The application of Code Civ. Proc. § 393(1)(b) to a case involving a driver's license is problematical because it will not usually be clear what county is "the county in which the cause, or some part thereof, arose" [Code Civ. Proc. § 393(1)(b)]. The underlying purpose of statutory provisions as to venue for actions against state agencies is to afford to the citizen a forum that is not so distant and remote that access to it is difficult and expensive. It is the Legislature's policy to afford to a person adversely affected by the rulings of public agencies a forum for the resolution of disputes that is as convenient and inexpensive as possible. To that end, statutory provisions as to venue should be liberally construed in favor of the private litigant [Regents of University of California v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 529, 536, 541, 91 Cal. Rptr. 57, 476 P.2d 457] .

[5] Allegations

The allegations in the petition must state facts showing the following:

- Discretion to determine certain relevant facts is vested in the Department (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

- By law a hearing is required to be held for the purpose of determining those facts (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

- Evidence is required to be taken at the hearing (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

- A final administrative order was made as a result of the hearing and the determination of those facts (Paragraphs 5-8) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

- The order is invalid [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)] because of one of the following defects (Paragraph 9) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]:

  - The Department proceeded without or in excess of jurisdiction.

  - The petitioner was denied a fair trial.

  - The Department abused its discretion through one of the following:
    - The Department did not proceed in the manner required by law.

    - The Department's order was not supported by the findings resulting from the administrative hearing.

- The Department's findings were not supported by the evidence.

- The petitioner is beneficially interested in issuance of the writ of mandate (Paragraph 12) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

- The petitioner has exhausted administrative remedies (Paragraphs 5-8) [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291-296, 109 P.2d 942] .

- The petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law (Paragraph 14) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086].

If it is contended that the findings are not supported by the evidence, the petition must also allege the substance of the evidence or, alternatively and if there is a record of the evidence, that the record is attached as an exhibit and incorporated by reference (Paragraph 10).

If there is relevant evidence that, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, the petitioner could not have produced at the hearing, and that was not produced, the petition should allege the substance of the evidence together with facts showing that it could not have been produced at the hearing in the exercise of reasonable diligence (Paragraph 11) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(e)].

For further discussion of pleading requirements for a petition for writ of mandate to review an administrative decision, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[6] Alleging That Findings Not Supported by Evidence

The petition need not refer to the evidence unless the petitioner's complaint relates to an evidentiary matter. Failure of the evidence to supportthe Department's findings [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)] is a commonly alleged ground for attacking the administrative decision. In such a case, the petition must either have attached to it, as an exhibit, a complete transcript of all of the evidence on which the Department acted or, at the minimum, allege the substance of all of the evidence received at the hearing (Paragraph 10) [see Faulkner v. Cal. Toll Bridge Authority (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 317, 330-331, 253 P.2d 659] .

Because the limitation period for filing a petition is only 90 days [see Veh. Code § 14401(a)], a transcript might be unavailable. There is some difference of opinion whether a transcript should be attached, some practitioners preferring to allege the substance of the evidence instead. However, because all of the evidence, not just the evidence favorable to the petitioner, must be considered by the court, it is better practice to attach a transcript if available [see Bennett v. Brady (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 114, 116, 61 P.2d 530 (petition alleging only favorable evidence as demurrable); see also Thompson v. City of Long Beach (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 235, 241, 259 P.2d 649 ; Thayer v. Board of Osteopathic Examiners (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 4, 8, 320 P.2d 28 (both relating to case in which "substantial evidence" test applies)].

[7] Alleging Petitioner's Beneficial Interest

[a] Facts Must Appear in Petition

The requirement that the petitioner be "beneficially interested" in issuance of the writ [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086] reflects the general rule established by case law that a writ of mandate will not be issued if it would be of no benefit to the applicant, or if the right sought to be enforced is merely abstract and is not attended by any substantial benefit to the applicant [see Spotton v. Superior Court (1918) 177 Cal. 719, 720, 171 P. 801 ; Gay v. Torrance (1904) 145 Cal. 144, 147-148, 78 P. 540 ; Boyne v. Ryan (1893) 100 Cal. 265, 267, 34 P. 707] . It must appear from the petition that a right or interest of the petitioner will be protected or subserved by issuance of the writ (Paragraph 12) [see Ellis v. Workman (1904) 144 Cal. 113, 115, 77 P. 822] .

[b] Facts Specific to License

In a case in which an existing license has been taken away or the full enjoyment of it has been restricted, the beneficial interest of the licensee (petitioner) is clear. No additional facts need to be alleged to establish a beneficial interest. If the Department has refused to issue a license, however, it will be necessary to allege facts showing that the petitioner is actually qualified to receive a license as applied for and that all application requirements were complied with [see Hippen v. Ford (1900) 129 Cal. 315, 316, 61 P. 929 (petitioner seeking writ to compel issuance of liquor license as required to prove that all necessary steps to qualify were taken)].

An allegation that the petitioner is qualified to receive the license applied for and that he or she duly applied for it should be sufficient [see Babcock v. Goodrich (1874) 47 Cal. 488, 512 (allegation in petition for writ of mandate that certain orders "were duly given and made" by board of supervisors as sufficient allegation of board's jurisdiction to make them); Hippen v. Ford (1900) 129 Cal. 315, 316, 61 P. 929 (conceding sufficiency of allegation that petitioner duly complied with all laws, rules, ordinances, and regulations of municipality and performed all and every requirement necessary thereunder for issuance of liquor license)].

[8] Attorney's Fees

In a civil action to review an administrative determination of "any administrative proceeding," the court may award to a prevailing complainant reasonable attorney's fees computed at $100 per hour, not to exceed $7,500 if the administrative determination resulted from "arbitrary or capricious action or conduct by a public entity or an officer thereof in his or her official capacity" [Gov. Code § 800].

When a petitioner in a mandate proceeding for review of an administrative determination wishes to claim attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800, he or she must in some fashion present to the court an allegation either that the "arbitrary or capricious action" referred to in that statute has taken place on the part of some person or that the petitioner is in fact personally obligated to pay attorney's fees to his or her counsel in a specified sum [Rutherford v. Board of Trustees (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 775, 781-782, 112 Cal. Rptr. 560] . If agency action was sufficiently "arbitrary or capricious" to warrant an award of attorney's fees, this should be apparent in the specific allegations in the petition. To be sure that a claim for attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800 is properly presented to the court, the petitioner should include an allegation that he or she is personally obligated to pay attorney's fees (Paragraph 13).

One court of appeal has noted that Gov. Code § 800 applies to the review of a determination in any administrative "proceeding," as distinguished from the more limited "hearing" [Forrest v. Trustees of Cal. State University & Colleges (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 357, 368, 206 Cal. Rptr. 595] . Another court, however, has held that some sort of administrative hearing, although not necessarily a formal hearing, is required to trigger the fee-shifting provisions of this statute [see, e.g., Gustafson v. Zolin (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1367, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 ("everyday determinations" are not sufficient; declining to follow Forrest to the extent that case suggests that any administrative decision might qualify for attorney fees on appeal under section 800)].

ILLUSTRATION:

Exchange of Letters Between Attorney and Driver Safety Officer Not "Determination." The DMV suspended petitioner's driver's license after determining that he had been arrested for driving with a blood-alcohol level of 0.08 percent or more. After a criminal trial, the petitioner was found "not guilty" on the.08 percent charge. The petitioner's attorney sent a letter to the DMV requesting that the suspension be lifted and enclosed a copy of a municipal court minute order showing the not-guilty finding. A driver safety officer from the DMV responded, in a letter to the petitioner's attorney, that the suspension could not be lifted on submittal of the minute order and requested additional documentation. The attorney did not submit any additional documentation to the DMV, but filed a petition for writ of mandate instead. The trial court granted the writ and also awarded attorney fees of $1,185 to the petitioner under section 800. The court of appeal in Gustafson reversed this award, holding that the driver safety officer's letter to the petitioner did not constitute a "determination of [an] administrative proceeding" for which attorney fees could be awarded under Gov. Code § 800. The court stated that this "exchange of letters was a simple, routine communication between an attorney and an administrative official, not a process presenting an issue for hearing and disposition" [see Gustafson v. Zolin (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1367, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 645 (DMV acknowledged that petitioner could have requested DMV administrative hearing regarding acquittal claim)].

For further discussion concerning attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[9] Costs

[a] Request Must Be Explicit

The prayer should contain an explicit request for costs, which are recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1095 in an original proceeding for a writ of mandate [Gould v. Moss (1910) 158 Cal. 548, 549, 111 P. 925] . Costs are not recoverable unless specifically awarded in the judgment, costs being a matter of the court's discretion rather than a matter of right [see Gould v. Moss (1910) 158 Cal. 548, 549, 111 P. 925] . Respondent, if successful, may also recover his or her costs, if the court specifically awards costs, despite the reference in Code Civ. Proc. § 1095 to "the applicant" without a corresponding reference to the respondent [Union Trust Co. v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 541, 543-544, 90 P.2d 582] .

[b] Costs of Preparing Record

If the petitioner has incurred the expense of preparing all or any part of the record, the prayer should contain a request for costs "including (a specified amount) for preparation of the record." Such an expense is specifically recoverable as a cost by the prevailing party, if he or she bore the expense [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Moran v. Board of Medical Examiners (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 301, 315, 196 P.2d 20] .

The expense of preparing all or any part of the record is a taxable cost under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a) whether the record has been prepared for a mandate proceeding or for an administrative proceeding by which the petitioner seeks to exhaust his or her administrative remedies [Ralph's Chrysler-Plymouth v. New Car Dealers Policy & Appeals Bd. (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 792, 796, 106 Cal. Rptr. 169, 505 P.2d 1009] .

Except when otherwise prescribed by statute, the cost of preparing the record must be borne by the petitioner. When the petitioner has obtained a waiver of fees pursuant to Gov. Code §§ 68630-68641 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.50 et seq., and when the transcript is necessary to a proper review of the administrative proceedings, the cost of preparing the transcript must be borne by the respondent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)]. For discussion of waiving court fees because of a person's financial condition, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.110 et seq.

[10] Request for Stay of Departmental Order

The petitioner may also move for an order staying the operation of the Department's order [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(g)]. A request for a stay of a suspension of a driving license must be accompanied by a copy of the petitioner's driving record from the Department of Motor Vehicles [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1142]. For a form of petition including a request for an order staying operation of an administrative order, a related order to show cause, and a stay order, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions, §§ 474C.90, 474C.99, and 474C.100.

[11] Service of Petition

The petition must be served before it is filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107]. All civil process in actions against the director and the Department (and all subpoenas for the production of Departmental records) must be served on the director or the director's appointed representatives at the Department's headquarters [Veh. Code § 24.5].

[12] Other Pleadings and Papers

The procedure to be followed in a mandate proceeding for review of an administrative agency's order are set out in Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions . See that chapter for discussion and relating to alternative writ, peremptory writ, replication, statement of decision, judgment, and various associated orders.

[13] Verification

A petition for a writ of mandate must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086]. Proof of service on each respondent and real party in interest of a copy of a petition that seeks an alternative writ must accompany the petition when it is offered for filing except when, in its discretion and for good cause, the court has granted the application for the writ ex parte [Code Civ. Proc. § 1107; for a discussion of serving the petition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition]. Points and authorities also customarily accompany a petition filed in a superior court, although they do not appear to be expressly required by statute. When no alternative writ is sought, proof of service of a copy of the petition need not accompany the application, but proof of service of a copy of the filed petition must be lodged with the court prior to a hearing or any action by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1088.5].

§ 92.181 Petition for Writ of Mandate to Review Action by Department of Motor Vehicles in Driver's License Proceeding--Order of Suspension or Revocation Under Implied Consent or Administrative Per Se Law

Petitioner alleges:

1. [Identity of respondent Director of Motor Vehicles. See § 92.180[1], Paragraph 1.]

2. Under Vehicle Code Section _____ [13558(c)(1) or 13558(c)(2)], the Department has discretion to determine _____ [state relevant facts, e.g., whether petitioner was driving a motor vehicle when he/she had 0.08 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his/her blood].

3. Under Vehicle Code Section 13558(b), the Department is required to grant a hearing on request when the Department has given notice pursuant to Vehicle Code Section 13558(a).

4. [Requirement that Department take evidence. See § 92.180[1], Paragraph 4.]

5. On _____[date], petitioner was notified by _____ [the Department or (name of peace officer or other official), acting on behalf of the Department,] that petitioner's license was being _____ [suspended or revoked] under Vehicle Code Section _____[specify]. On _____[date], petitioner requested a hearing to contest the Department's action.

6. [Date and conduct of hearing. See § 92.180[1], Paragraph 6.]

7. On _____[date], after the hearing, petitioner received notice of the Department's determination sustaining its order of _____[date], _____ [suspending or revoking] petitioner's driver's license on the ground that _____ [specify ground, e.g., petitioner was driving a motor vehicle when he/she had 0.08 percent or more, by weight, of alcohol in his/her blood].

[8. Request to reopen hearing and Department response. See § 92.180[1], Paragraph 8.]

9. The Department's order _____ [suspending or revoking] petitioner's driver's license is invalid because _____ [list separately each ground under Veh. Code § 13559 on which petitioner claims the order is invalid, e.g., the _____ (Director or hearing officer or hearing board) made a determination that is not supported by the evidence in the record. The determination is erroneous for the reason that _____ (describe error, e.g., the Department determined that petitioner's blood alcohol content was 0.13 percent at the time of driving when the report of the _____(identify test, e.g., blood test) failed to indicate the time the sample was drawn].

15. [Lack of plain, speedy, or adequate remedy at law. See § 92.180[1], Paragraph 14.]

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays for judgment as follows:

[1. If alternative writ procedure is used: For an alternative writ of mandate directing respondent to rescind the Department's order of _____ (date), and _____ (return the license or issue a new license) to petitioner, or in the alternative to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect should not be issued;]

2. For a peremptory writ of mandate _____ [to the same effect as the alternative writ except for the order to show cause or set out terms at length as in Paragraph 1 of this prayer, omitting words relating to order to show cause];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred[, including $_____ for preparation of the Departmental record];

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of petition for writ of mandate in [1], above, is for use to obtain review by the superior court of an order by the Department suspending or revoking a license after a Veh. Code § 13558 hearing based on the implied consent or administrative per se law [see Veh. Code §§ 13353, 13353.2, 13382, or 23612].

The form may be adapted for review of an order of suspension when the Department suspends or delays issuance of a driver's license under Veh. Code § 23136 et seq. (administrative suspension for persons under 21 years of age) after a hearing authorized by Veh. Code §§ 13353.1(d), 13558. For instance, the relevant facts in paragraph 2 might address whether petitioner was under 21 years and was driving a vehicle when he or she had an blood-alcohol concentration of 0.01 percent or greater, as measured by a preliminary alcohol screening test [see Veh. Code § 13353.1(d)].

For further discussion of judicial review of an order of suspension or revocation under the implied consent or administrative per se law or under the administrative suspension law for persons under 21, see § 92.40 et seq., § 92.60 et seq., and § 92.80 et seq.

For additional discussion and cross references, see § 92.180[2] et seq.

[3] Allegations

[a] Set Forth in Form

This form of petition alleges:

- The Department's discretion to determine specified facts (Paragraph 2) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Veh. Code § 13558(c)].

- The requirement under Veh. Code § 13558(b) that the Department grant a hearing (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a)].

- The Department's notification of suspension or revocation of petitioner's driver's license under the implied consent or administrative per se laws and petitioner's request for a hearing on the Department's action (Paragraph 5) [see Veh. Code §§ 13382, 13553, 13553.2, 13558, or 14103].

- The petitioner's receipt of notice of the Department's determination sustaining the Department's order (Paragraph 7) [see Veh. Code § 13558(f)].

- The grounds of invalidity of the order (Paragraph 9) [see Veh. Code § 13559].

Additional facts of petitioner's beneficial interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 1086], and exhaustion of administrative remedies [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291-296, 109 P.2d 942] , appear from the allegations of the petition as a whole, and it is not necessary to set them out in separate allegations.

[b] Incorporated by Reference

The petition also incorporates by reference allegations from § 92.180 regarding:

- The identity of the Director of Motor Vehicles as respondent.
- The requirement that evidence be taken at the hearing.
- The date and conduct of the hearing.
- Any request to reopen the proceeding and the Department's response.
- Attachment of transcript of record of hearing (if appropriate) or an allegation regarding the substance of the evidence presented at the hearing.
- Relevant evidence not produced at hearing.
- The basis for an award of attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800, and lack of plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law.

[4] Time to File Petition

Notwithstanding Veh. Code § 14400 or 14401 (which generally govern petitions for writ of mandate to review orders by the Department), the foregoing petition must be filed within 30 days after the issuance of the notice of determination of the Department sustaining an order of suspension or revocation of the person's privilege to operate a motor vehicle following a hearing under Veh. Code § 13558 [Veh. Code § 13559(a)].

[5] Proper Court

The person may file a petition for judicial review of the order in the court of competent jurisdiction in the person's county of residence [Veh. Code § 13559(a)].

The form in [1], above, is an illustration of the Judicial Council form that may be used by a claimant to oppose forfeiture of a vehicle under Veh. Code § 14607.6 [Judicial Council Form MC-201]. Use of the form is optional.

Section 14607.6 provides for the forfeiture of a vehicle driven by its registered owner who is unlicensed or whose license has been suspended or revoked and who has a prior conviction for any one of several specified Vehicle Code violations [Veh. Code § 14607.6; for discussion, see § 92.140 et seq.].

This form is available in an interactive, electronic format in LexisNexis(R) Automated California Judicial Council Forms, which may be accessed at www.lexisone.com for an individual or monthly charge. A noninteractive version in PDF format also is available at www.lexisone.com at no charge.

[3] Contents of Form

The form has been filled in to illustrate how it might be used to oppose the forfeiture. The box for costs of suit in paragraph 6 has been checked, since the claimant will be entitled to reimbursement for the court filing fee (of $100) if he or she prevails [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(4)].

[4] Time Limits

To be timely, the claimant must file and serve the claim opposing forfeiture within 15 days after notice of impoundment was mailed to him or her, or within 5 days of being personally served with the notice [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(4)]. The district attorney will then have 10 days after receipt of the claim to file a petition for forfeiture with the appropriate court [Veh. Code § 14607.6(e)(4)]. For further discussion, see § 92.140 et seq.

Chapter 93 BAILMENTS
PART I. SCOPE

§ 93.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses, and contains forms for use in, actions involving deposits of personal property. It includes:

- Complaints by depositors to recover possession of property deposited [see §§ 93.210, 93.211].

- Complaints by depositors to recover damages for injury to the property during the deposit [see §§ 93.212 -93.218].

- Affirmative defenses to those actions [see §§ 93.219, 93.220].

- A complaint by a depositary against a depositor who reclaimed the property without paying agreed compensation [see § 93.221].

This chapter also discusses and contains forms for use in actions involving the loaning for use of personal property. It includes complaints:

- By a lender against a borrower for damages for injury to the thing lent [see § 93.240].

- By a borrower against a lender for damages caused by concealed defects in the thing lent [see § 93.241].

This chapter also discusses actions by third parties arising out of bailments. It includes forms of complaints for personal injuries by a third party against the parties to a hiring [see §§ 93.260, 93.261].

This chapter also discusses principally the provisions of Civ. Code § 1936, which establishes certain requirements and prohibitions regarding advertising, disclosures, and terms for the rental of passenger vehicles, including related collision damage waivers. This chapter also discusses the provisions of Civ. Code § 1936.05, creating an exception to the general requirements of Civ. Code § 1936 when a passenger car rental is covered by a commercial arrangement between the rental company and the renter's employer, and the provisions of Civ. Code § 1936.1, requiring a particular disclosure when a 15-passenger van is rented. This chapter includes a form for a complaint for declaratory relief for use by a vehicle renter to resolve differing contentions regarding his or her liability under Civ. Code § 1936 or the particular rental agreement of the parties [see § 93.280], as well as a complaint by a business renter based on a violation of Civ. Code § 1936.05 [see § 93.281].

The term of the hiring governed by Civ. Code § 1936 is any period less than 30 days [see Civ. Code § 1936(a)(2) (defining "renter")]. For discussion of vehicle leases for longer periods generally exceeding four months, and the California Vehicle Leasing Act [Civ. Code § 2985.7 et seq.], see Ch. 90, Automobiles: Vehicle Leasing Act .

A rental company's liability for negligent entrustment and imposition of vicarious liability on a rental company are discussed in Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action, §§ 82.11 and 82.16, respectively.

Although a rental agreement for a passenger vehicle is a lease as defined by Com. Code § 10103(a)(10), and is thus subject to Division 10 of the Commercial Code as well as Civ. Code § 1936, Division 10 provides that in cases of conflict between Division 10 and consumer protection laws, the consumer protection law governs [Com. Code §§ 10102, 10104(a)(3), (b)]. Division 10 provisions are not discussed in this chapter, because they are more general and less consumer-protective than Civ. Code § 1936. In the event that Civ. Code § 1936 does not address a particular issue, however, counsel should consult Ch. 413, Personal Property Leases, for discussion of Division 10 and related forms.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

§ 93.11 Definitions

A bailment is generally defined as the delivery of a thing to another for some special purpose or object, on contract, express or implied, to be held in conformity with the objects or purposes of delivery [Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 850, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 531, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 643, 307 P.2d 429] .

A "bailor" is a party who bails or delivers goods to another, in the contract of bailment. A "bailee" is one to whom goods are bailed, the party to whom personal property is delivered under a contract of bailment [Black's Law Dictionary (7th ed. 1999) at 136, 137].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

§ 93.12 Bailment as Contract

[1] In General

The general rule that the assent of both parties is necessary before a contract, either express or implied in fact, can come into existence is applicable to the ordinary case of a contract of bailment [H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 644, 307 P.2d 429] . No bailment can be implied if it appears it was the intention of the parties as derived from their relationship to each other and from the circumstances of the case that the property was to be held by the party in possession in some capacity other than as a bailee [H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 644, 307 P.2d 429] .

[2] Termination

Regardless of its expressed terms, any contract of bailment may be terminated at any time by the mutual consent of the parties [Rackliff v. Coronet Constr. Co. (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 419, 424, 321 P.2d 50] .

Chapter 93 BAILMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

§ 93.13 Acceptance of Duties by Bailee

The duties and responsibilities of a bailee cannot be thrust on a person without his or her knowledge or consent, or against his or her protest, and the bailee is required to have voluntarily assumed custody and possession of the property in question [Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 644, 307 P.2d 429 ; see, e.g., Sackett v. Public Storage Mgmt. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1089, 1092-1093, 272 Cal. Rptr. 284] . That the acceptance of the bailee be actual is not required; one that is constructive or implied is sufficient, as when a person comes into actual possession and control of a chattel fortuitously or by mistake, or takes possession of goods left rightfully in place by their owner, and removes them to another place. Knowingly taking property into possession or control is ordinarily sufficient to establish an implied bailment, but in order to have that result, delivery is required to be made for the purpose of creating a bailment. Acceptance is not inferred unless there is something to show notice or knowledge on the part of an alleged bailee that goods are in fact in his or her possession, and that they are the property of the bailor [Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703-704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679] .

Chapter 93 BAILMENTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. In General

9-93 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 93.14

§ 93.14 Bailee's Duties and Liabilities Regarding Third-Party Claims

When a professional bailee is presented with reasonably compelling evidence demonstrating a third party is entitled to possession of the property held by the bailee, the bailee must investigate the third-party claim. At a minimum, the bailee should ask the bailor whether the property may be released to the third party. If the bailor consents, the bailee should release the property to the third party. If the bailee is unable to obtain the bailor's consent, the bailee should file an interpleader action to adjudicate the third party's claim of possession. The bailee is ordinarily entitled to attorney's fees and costs in an interpleader action [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1327, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 ; see Ch. 314, Interpleader]. The bailee cannot disregard the third party's claim, and if he or she does, and redelivers to the bailor, the bailee is responsible to the adverse claimant in conversion if that claim proves to be a just one [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 ; see Ch. 150, Conversion].

If the bailee does not surrender possession to a third-party claimant who then brings a conversion action, the bailee must show that he or she had a right to possession of the property to successfully defeat that party's claim. Even when the bailee has a right to possession of the property due to a lien on it for storage or other charges, that lien will be sufficient to deny the owner's right to possession only until it is redeemed. When presented with an offer to pay outstanding charges made by a party claiming ownership, by which the lien would be redeemed, the bailee is entitled to retain the property for a reasonable time to allow investigation of that party's claim [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1330-1331, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548 ; see Civ. Code §§ 2903, 2905; see generally Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences]. Whether or not the bailee has a lien on the property, the bailee may require a third-party claimant to provide proof of his or her claim. For example, a third-party claimant provided reasonably compelling proof when he submitted to the bailee a registration certificate in his name, a statement executed under penalty of perjury asserting his right to immediate possession, and a copy of the security agreement on which that right was founded. However, if the bailee undertakes no investigation at all, but insists on a court order establishing the third-party claimant's right to possession, that will be seen as an unjustified refusal to deliver possession, and the bailee will be liable for conversion [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1332, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

If the bailee surrenders possession to a third-party claimant, the bailee is relieved from all liability to the bailor, if the bailee proves that, without collusion for the purpose of obtaining an advantage, the bailee delivered the goods to a third-party claimant, and that the third party is indeed the one rightfully entitled to them [Messerall v. Fulwider (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331, 245 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

A deposit may be for safekeeping or for exchange [Civ. Code § 1813]. The person giving is called the depositor, and the person receiving is called the depositary [Civ. Code § 1814]. However, courts applying Civ. Code § 1813 et seq. often use the common law terms--bailment, bailor, and bailee--instead of deposit, depositor, and depositary [Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 551, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585] . A deposit for safekeeping is one in which the depositary is bound to return the identical thing deposited [Civ. Code § 1817]. A deposit for exchange is one in which the depositary is only bound to return a thing corresponding in kind to that which is deposited [Civ. Code § 1818].

A deposit also may be voluntary or involuntary [Civ. Code § 1813]. A voluntary deposit is made by the depositor's giving to the depositary, with the latter's consent, the possession of personal property to keep for the benefit of the depositor or of a third person [Civ. Code § 1814]. An involuntary deposit is made either:

- By the accidental leaving or placing of personal property in the possession of any person, without negligence on the part of its owner [Civ. Code § 1815(a)];

- In cases of fire, shipwreck, inundation, insurrection, riot, or like extraordinary emergencies, by the owner of personal property committing it, out of necessity, to the care of any person [Civ. Code § 1815(b)];

- By the delivery to, or pick up by, and the holding of, a stray live animal by any person, or public or private entity [Civ. Code § 1815(c)]; or

- By the abandonment or leaving of a live animal, as proscribed by Penal Code § 597.1 (providing a penalty for keeping an animal without proper care), in or about any premises or real property that the tenant or owner vacated on, or immediately preceding, the termination of a lease or other rental agreement or foreclosure of the property [Civ. Code § 1815(d)].

The person or private entity with whom a thing is involuntarily deposited is bound to take charge of it, if able to do so [

Civ. Code § 1816(a)].

Any person or private entity with whom a live animal is deposited in the manner described in Civ. Code § 1815(d) must immediately notify animal control officials for the purpose of retrieving the animal pursuant to Penal Code § 597.1. No new or additional civil or criminal liability is imposed on a depositary who complies with that requirement. Animal control officers who respond are entitled to exercise the right afforded them pursuant to Penal Code § 597.1 to secure a lien for the purpose of recovering the costs of attempting to rescue the animal. A public agency or shelter where an abandoned animal is involuntarily deposited is bound to take charge of it, as provided in Penal Code § 597.1. The person in possession of the abandoned animal is subject to all local ordinances and state laws that govern the proper care and treatment of such an animal. The person or private entity that notifies animal control officials to retrieve the animal, or the successor property owner, will not be considered the keeper of the animal or the agent of the animal's owner as those terms are used in Penal Code § 597.1 [Civ. Code § 1816(b)-(e)].

Civ. Code §§ 1815 and 1816 presuppose the express or implicit acceptance of the personal property involved, in order to make the depositary liable for its care. The adjective "involuntary" qualifying the word "deposit" in Civ. Code §§ 1815 and 1816 indicates the assumption that the deposit is involuntarily made rather than involuntarily received [Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 702, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679] . For instance, the owner of a self-storage facility did not become an involuntary bailee of the property stored in a leased unit by placing a lock on the leased unit after it had been vandalized, then immediately notifying the occupant in writing to inspect the unit for stolen items and to replace the lock with one of the occupant's locks, as was required by the lease agreement. The owner's actions were not consistent with consent to the duties of an involuntary bailee but instead were consistent with the terms of the lease agreement. Thus, the owner had no liability for subsequent theft of items from the unit [Sackett v. Public Storage Mgmt. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1089, 1092-1093, 272 Cal. Rptr. 284] .

§ 93.32 Deposits for Keeping

[1] Duties of Depositor

A depositor must indemnify the depositary [Civ. Code § 1833]:

- For all damage caused to the depositary by the defects or vices of the thing deposited; and
- For all expenses necessarily incurred by the depositary about the thing, other than such expenses as are involved in the nature of the undertaking.

[2] Service Performed by Depositary

Insofar as any service is rendered by a depositary, or required from a depositary, the depositary's duties and liabilities are prescribed by Civ. Code § 2019 et seq. (services and employment) [Civ. Code § 1839].

[3] Duties of Depositary

[a] In General

A depositary may not use the thing deposited, or permit it to be used, for any purpose, without the consent of the depositor. The depositary may not, if it is purposely fastened by the depositor, open it without the consent of the latter, except in case of necessity [Civ. Code § 1835]. If a thing is lost or injured during its deposit, and the depositary refuses to inform the depositor of the circumstances under which the loss or injury occurred, as far as the depositary has information concerning them, or willfully misrepresents the circumstances to the depositor, the depositary is presumed to have willfully or by gross negligence permitted the loss or injury to occur [Civ. Code § 1838].

If a thing deposited is in actual danger of perishing before instructions can be obtained from the depositor, the depositary may sell it for the best price obtainable, and retain the proceeds as a deposit, giving immediate notice of the proceedings to the depositor [Civ. Code § 1837].

[i] One Owner

A depositary must deliver the thing to the person for whose benefit it was deposited, on demand, whether the deposit was made for a specified time or not, unless the depositary has a lien on the thing deposited, or has been forbidden or prevented from doing so by the real owner, or by the act of the law, and has given the notice required in Civ. Code § 1825 [Civ. Code § 1822; see § 93.32[3][c]]. A depositary is not bound to deliver a thing deposited without demand, even when the deposit is made for a specified time [Civ. Code § 1823]. A depositary must deliver the thing deposited at the depositary's residence or place of business, as may be most convenient for the depositary [Civ. Code § 1824].

[ii] Two or More Owners

If a thing deposited is owned jointly or in common by persons who cannot agree on the manner of its delivery, the depositary may deliver to each a proper share, if it can be done without injury to the thing [Civ. Code § 1827].

When a deposit is made in the name of two or more persons, deliverable or payable to either or to their survivor or survivors, the deposit or any part, or increase, may be delivered or paid to either of the persons, or to the survivor or survivors, in due course of business [Civ. Code § 1828].

[c] Notice of Adverse Interest

A depositary must give prompt notice, to the person for whose benefit the deposit was made, of any proceedings taken adversely to that person's interest in the thing deposited, which may tend to excuse the depositary from delivering the thing [Civ. Code § 1825].

A depositary who believes that the thing deposited is wrongfully detained from its true owner, may give that person notice of the deposit; and if within a reasonable time afterwards that person does not claim it, and sufficiently establish a right to it, and indemnify the depositary against the claim of the depositor, the depositary is exonerated from liability to the person to whom the notice was given, on returning the thing to the depositor, or assuming, in good faith, a new obligation and changing position in respect to the thing, to the depositary's prejudice [Civ. Code § 1826].

[4] Liability of Depositary

A depositary is liable for any damage happening to the thing deposited, during the depositary's wrongful use of it, unless the damage must inevitably have happened even though the property had not been thus used [Civ. Code § 1836]. The liability of a depositary for negligence cannot exceed the amount that the depositary is informed by the depositor, or has reason to suppose, the thing deposited to be worth [Civ. Code § 1840]. Civ. Code § 1840 has no application when the value of goods bailed is not disclosed by the owner or when the bailee has no reason to suppose that they have any special value. Under these circumstances, the measure of damages is the actual value of the goods [Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 855, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272, 281, 258 P. 155 ; but see Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 368, 291 P. 624] .

Although loss of profits is the proper element of damages in respect of the breach of certain contracts when there is a showing of reasonable probability of profits, there is no such assumption in respect to bailments. Civ. Code § 1840 provides the measure of damages [Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 533-534, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770] .

§ 93.33 Gratuitous Deposits

A gratuitous deposit is a deposit for which the depositary receives no consideration beyond the mere possession of the thing deposited [Civ. Code § 1844]. An involuntary deposit is gratuitous, the depositary being entitled to no reward. However, an involuntary depositary of any live animal may accept advertised rewards or rewards freely offered by the owner of the animal [Civ. Code § 1845].

A gratuitous depositary must use at least slight care for the preservation of the thing deposited [Civ. Code § 1846(a)]. A gratuitous depositary of a living animal must provide the animal with necessary and prompt veterinary care, adequate nutrition and water, and shelter, and must treat it humanely and, if the animal has any identification, make reasonable attempts to notify the owner of the animal's location. Any gratuitous depositary that does not have sufficient resources or desire to provide that care must promptly turn the animal over to an appropriate care facility [Civ. Code § 1846(b)]. If the gratuitous depositary of a living animal is a public pound, shelter operated by a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, or humane shelter, the depositary must comply with all other requirements of the Food and Agricultural Code regarding the impounding of live animals [Civ. Code § 1846(c)].

The duties of a gratuitous depositary cease when the depositary restores the thing deposited to its owner, or gives reasonable notice to the owner to remove it and the owner fails to do so within a reasonable time. An involuntary depositary on account of emergency [see Civ. Code § 1815(b)], however, may not give notice until the emergency that gave rise to the deposit is past. Moreover, the power to give notice so as to relieve the depositary of duties is not exercisable by a public pound, a shelter operated by a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, or a humane shelter, with respect to the involuntary deposit of a live animal. On the contrary, the duty to provide care, as required by Civ. Code § 1846, continues until the public pound or private shelter is lawfully relieved of responsibility for the animal [Civ. Code § 1847].

However, a deposit, otherwise gratuitous, which is a mere incident to the conduct of a business from which the depositary derives profits (such as where made to induce a purchase), is considered sufficient to give rise to the same duty of reasonable care on the part of the depositary as in the situation of the ordinary bailment for hire [Tierstein v. Licht (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 835, 842, 345 P.2d 341 ; see also Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966)

246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 532, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366, 291 P. 624 ; Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272, 283, 258 P. 155 (athletic club and member as guest in its clubhouse)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Deposits

§ 93.34 Storage (Deposits for Hire)

A deposit that is not gratuitous is called storage. The depositary in this case is called a depositary for hire [Civ. Code § 1851]. A depositary for hire must use at least ordinary care for the preservation of the thing deposited [Civ. Code § 1852].

In an action for breach of a contract of deposit for hire, the plaintiff must establish the existence of the deposit and the defendant's failure to redeliver the thing deposited. If the defendant is relying on the defense that the loss or damage to the thing deposited occurred despite his or her use of ordinary care, he or she has the burden of showing freedom from fault [Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 551-553, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585] . Thus, one court of appeal held that when the plaintiff had pleaded alternative causes of action for negligence and for breach of the deposit contract, it was not inconsistent for the jury to find for defendant on the negligence cause of action but against the defendant on the contract cause of action, because in the negligence cause of action the evidence supported the conclusion that the plaintiff had not established the defendant's negligence, whereas in the contract cause of action the same evidence supported the conclusion that the defendant had not established his freedom from fault [Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 554, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585] .

In the absence of an agreement as to the length of time during which a deposit is to continue, it may be terminated by the depositor at any time, and by the depositary on reasonable notice [Civ. Code § 1854]. Notwithstanding an agreement respecting the length of time during which a deposit is to continue, it may be terminated by the depositor on paying all that would become due to the depositary in case of the deposit so continuing [Civ. Code § 1855].

A depositary for hire has a lien for storage charges and for advances and insurance incurred at the request of the bailor, and for money necessarily expended in and about the care, preservation, and keeping of the property stored, and also has a lien for money advanced at the request of the bailor, to discharge a prior lien, and for the expenses of a sale when default has been made in satisfying a valid lien. The rights of the depositary for hire to this lien are regulated by Civ. Code §§ 2872 et seq. (liens) [Civ. Code § 1856].

If from any cause other than want of ordinary care and diligence, a depositary for hire is unable to deliver perishable property, baggage, or luggage received for storage, or to collect charges for storage the depositary may cause the property to be sold, in open market, to satisfy a lien for storage. However, no property except perishable property is to be sold on which storage charges are not due and unpaid for one year at the time of the sale [Civ. Code § 1857].

§ 93.35 Deposits of Animals

A depositary of living animals must provide the animals with necessary and prompt veterinary care, nutrition, and shelter, and treat them kindly. Any depositary that fails to perform these duties may be liable for civil damages as provided by law [Civ. Code § 1834]. It is the policy of the state that no adoptable animal should be euthanized if it can be adopted into a suitable home. An adoptable animal is only an animal eight weeks of age or older that, at or after the time the animal was impounded or otherwise taken into possession, manifested no sign of a behavioral or temperamental defect that could pose a health or safety risk or otherwise make the animal unsuitable for placement as a pet and manifested no sign of disease, injury, or congenital or hereditary condition that adversely affects the health of the animal or that is likely to adversely affect the animal's health in the future [Civ. Code § 1834.4(a)]. Further, it is the policy of the state that no treatable animal should be euthanized. However, this policy, by itself, may not be the basis of liability for damages regarding euthanasia. A treatable animal is any animal that is not adoptable but could become adoptable with reasonable efforts [Civ. Code § 1834.4(b)].

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, whenever any animal is delivered to any veterinarian, dog kennel, cat kennel, pet grooming parlor, animal hospital, or any other animal care facility pursuant to written or oral agreement, and the owner of the animal does not pick up the animal within 14 calendar days after the day the animal was due to be picked up, the animal may be deemed to be abandoned. The person into whose custody the animal was placed for care must first try for a period of not less than 10 days to find a new owner for the animal, and, if unable to place the animal with a new owner, must thereafter humanely destroy the animal so abandoned [Civ. Code § 1834.5].

If an animal so abandoned was left with a veterinarian or with a facility that has a veterinarian, and a new owner cannot be found, the veterinarian must humanely destroy the animal [Civ. Code § 1834.5].

There must be a notice posted in a conspicuous place, or in conspicuous type in a written receipt given, to warn each person depositing an animal at such animal care facilities of these statutory provisions [Civ. Code § 1834.5].

An abandoned animal, as described above, must not be used for scientific, or any other type of experimentation, nor may an abandoned animal be turned over to a pound or animal regulation department of a public agency [Civ. Code §

1834.6]. For further discussion of the injury to and conversion of animals, see Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability .

In the absence of a different agreement or usage, a depositary for hire is entitled to one week's hire for the sustenance and shelter of living animals during any fraction of a week, and to half a month's hire for the storage of any other property during any fraction of a half month [Civ. Code § 1853].

The duty of ordinary care and burden of proof imposed on depositories for hire was applied in the case of a bloodstock agent who received thoroughbred horses for the purpose of sale. The court rejected the argument that different rules should be adopted with respect to deposits of animals, reasoning that the legislature was the proper forum to effect such a change [Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 553, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585] .

[1] In General

A depositary entrusted with merchandise for the purpose of repair is deemed a depositary for hire and is not liable for loss or injury resulting without negligence on his part [Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905] .

Under the law regulating these deposits [Civ. Code § 1858]:

- "Customer" means a natural person who deals with a depositary;

- "Depositary" means a person who in the ordinary course of business regularly receives property from customers for the purpose of repair or alteration; and

- "Property" means personal property used for or intended for personal, family, or household purposes, but does not include any motor vehicle within the meaning of Veh. Code § 415 (motor vehicle defined).

Every depositary is required, on accepting property from a customer, to present the customer with a written receipt that includes a statement, if it is the case, that the deposited property is not insured or protected to the amount of the actual cash value by the depositary against loss occasioned by theft, fire, and vandalism while the property remains with the depositary [Civ. Code § 1858.1]. Every depositary who fails to furnish this receipt, or a statement as required under Civ. Code § 1858.1, or who makes any misrepresentation in the receipt, is strictly liable to the customer for any loss occasioned by theft, fire, or vandalism while the property remains with the depositary and must forfeit any lien or other right to hold the property arising from services rendered in holding, repairing, altering, or selling the property. When liability is imposed on a depositary under this rule it is to be deemed as having been imposed for the commission of a willful act for the purposes of Ins. Code § 533 (willful act of insured; negligence) [Civ. Code § 1858.2].

If the depositary by insurance or by self-insurance does protect property deposited by customers for loss or damage occasioned by theft, fire, or vandalism while the property remains with the depositary, the depositary need not make or deliver to the customer any notice of the fact [Civ. Code § 1858.3].

[2] Repairman's Lien

If the legal possessor of property brings it to a repairman who repairs it at the possessor's request, the repairman has a lien under Civ. Code § 3051 (artisan and service lien on personalty for labor, storage, repair, or protection) [Goodman v. Anglo-Cal. Trust Co. (1923) 62 Cal. App. 702, 704, 217 P. 1078 ; but see Hackett v. California Laundry (1935) 7 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 757, 45 P.2d 833 (launderer's lien requires ownership by bailor for enforcement)]. Unlike other depositaries, a depositary who has a lien on the thing deposited is not required to deliver it on demand [Civ. Code § 1822].

The lien is dependent on possession of the property by the lien claimant and terminates when possession is voluntarily relinquished. It is not revived on regaining possession except in those instances when property is released to its owner on agreement that the lien is to be revived when possession is returned to the lien claimant [Jess H. Young & Son, Inc. v. Victory Tool & Die Co. (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 824, 827-828, 11 Cal. Rptr. 516] .

The liability of an innkeeper, hotel keeper, operator of a licensed hospital, rest home, or sanitarium, furnished apartment house keeper, furnished bungalow court keeper, boarding house or lodging house keeper, for losses of or injuries to personal property, is that of a depositary for hire. There are dollar limits, specified in Civ. Code § 1859, for maximum liability in the aggregate, maximum liability for each trunk, valise, traveling bag, box, bundle, or package, and the contents, and on maximum liability for all other personal property of any kind, unless the depositary has consented in writing with the owner to assume a greater liability [Civ. Code § 1859].

If an innkeeper, hotel keeper, operator of a licensed hospital, rest home or sanitarium, boarding house or lodging house keeper, keeps a fireproof safe and gives notice to a guest, patient, boarder, or lodger, either personally or by putting up a printed notice in a prominent place in the office or the room occupied by the guest, patient, boarder, or lodger, that the keeper or operator keeps a safe and will not be liable for money, jewelry, documents, furs, fur coats, and fur garments, or other articles of unusual value and small compass, unless placed in the safe, then the keeper or operator is not liable for any loss of or injury to those articles not deposited to be placed in the safe, except insofar as the keeper's or operator's own acts contributed to the loss or injury, nor in any case for more than the sum specified in Civ. Code § 1860 for any or all of the property of any individual guest, patient, boarder, or lodger, unless the keeper or operator has given a receipt in writing to the guest, patient, boarder, or lodger [Civ. Code § 1860].

A receipt, as used in Civ. Code § 1860 is nothing more in its common use than the bare acknowledgement of having received something. A writing is a receipt as a matter of law if all parties considered it to be a receipt [see Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272, 275-276, 258 P. 155] . If the depositor has deposited goods of unusual value, however, the receipt must be a reflection on the part of the depositary of an awareness of the unusual value of the deposit in order for there to be liability greater than the specified sum under Civ. Code § 1860 [see Providence Wash. Ins. Co. v. Hotel Marysville (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 338, 346-348, 140 P.2d 698] . For a discussion of the liability of an innkeeper and innkeeper's liens, see Ch. 297, Hotels and Motels .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
B. Deposits

9-93 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 93.38

§ 93.38 Parking Lots

[1] Bailee's Standard of Care

If the parking lot operator charges a fee and the vehicle and keys are left with the attendant, a bailment for hire arises, and the parking lot operator must exercise reasonable care to preserve the vehicle against loss or damage [Beetson v. Hollywood Athletic Club (1930) 109 Cal. App. 715, 718, 293 P. 821 (citing Civ. Code §§ 1851, 1852)].

[2] Liability of Bailee

If, while in the possession of the bailee, the vehicle is injured or lost as a result of the bailee's failure to exercise reasonable care, the bailee for hire will be liable for negligence. In such a case, it is not enough for the bailee to show that the property was stolen, lost, or destroyed. Rather, to avoid liability, the bailee must show that the loss occurred without the bailee's negligence [Downey v. Martin Aircraft Serv. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 99-100, 214 P.2d 581] . If the bailee delivers possession of the automobile to one other than the owner, or person entitled to its possession, the bailee is liable for conversion, even though the bailee acted innocently and by mistake [see Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 297, 299, 65 P.2d 67 (involving bonds deposited with bank)].

[3] Gratuitous Bailment

A bailee who receives no consideration beyond the mere possession of the vehicle is a gratuitous bailee [see Civ. Code § 1844]. Such a bailee must use at least slight care for the preservation of the deposited vehicle [Civ. Code § 1846].

[4] License Distinguished

If the driver parks a vehicle in a lot, locks the doors, carries away the keys, is given no parking ticket, and may remove the vehicle at will, the driver has merely a license to park the vehicle in the lot, and the parking lot operator is a licensor. As such, the parking lot operator assumes no responsibility for the safekeeping of the vehicle and is generally not liable for its damage or theft [Porter v. Los Angeles Turf Club (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 840, 841-842 , 105 P.2d 956] .

[5] Return of Vehicle to Intoxicated Bailor

A bailee has no duty to withhold automobiles from intoxicated bailors [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] . There is no special relationship between the bailee and the potential victim that would give rise to that duty. Nor would it be appropriate to impose such a duty on bailees when police officers who temporarily detain drunk drivers are not liable for allowing them to continue driving [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 74, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] .

In returning a thing to the bailor, a bailee does not entrust it. Thus, a bailee is not liable for negligent entrustment based on the return of a vehicle to an obviously inebriated bailor [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] . This holding is not based on a bailee's obligation to return the vehicle to the customer, because under these circumstances, a bailee could lawfully refuse to return a vehicle to a bailor who was not fit to drive. Any citizen has the right to interfere with an attempt to commit a crime, which drunk driving obviously is [Veh. Code § 23152(a); Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75-76, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365 ; see Gov. Code § 13970 (immunity to persons whose direct action prevents commission of crime against person or property of another)]. The court was unwilling to impose a duty to withhold the vehicle based on a bailee's right to do so because the imposition of civil liability in these circumstances would lead to unforeseeable consequences and because it would be inconsistent with the public policy expressed in Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602(c) that the consumption of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of injuries inflicted by an intoxicated person [Knighten v. Sam's Parking Valet (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 69, 76, 253 Cal. Rptr. 365] .

[6] Contractual Limitation of Liability

While the operator of a parking lot may limit liability by a contract entered into at the time the vehicle is deposited with the operator, the contract, if printed, must conform to certain formal requisites prescribed by Civ. Code § 1630 in order to be binding. Thus, unless (1) the contract provisions are printed in type no smaller than prescribed, (2) the words "This contract limits our liability--read it" appear at the top of the contract in capital letters of at least a prescribed size, and (3) a copy of the contract printed in large type is conspicuously posted at each entrance to the parking lot, the attempt of the parking lot operator to limit liability will be ineffectual [California State Automobile Assn. Inter-Insurance Bureau v. Barrett Garages, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 71, 79-81, 64 Cal. Rptr. 699] .

Moreover, the mere delivery of the contract of bailment or claim check does not, as a matter of law, create a contract embodying the matter printed on it. It is a question of fact in each case as to whether there was the necessary consent by the bailor to be bound by these contractual provisions. In other words, to impose liability it must be determined that a prudent person, acting reasonably, would have read the exculpatory provisions in question [California State Automobile Assn. Inter-Insurance Bureau v. Barrett Garages, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 71, 79, 64 Cal. Rptr. 699] .

The provisions of any contract of bailment for parking or storage of an automobile may not exempt the bailee from liability for the theft of any automobile when it is parked or stored with the bailee and the keys are required to be left in the automobile [Civ. Code § 1630.5].

§ 93.39 Finder as Depositary for Owner

Any person who finds a thing lost is not bound to take charge of it unless the person is otherwise required to do so by contract or law; but on taking charge of it, that person becomes a depositary for the owner, with the rights and obligations of a depositary for hire. Any person or any public or private entity that finds and takes possession of any money, goods, things in action, or other personal property, or saves any domestic animal from harm, neglect, drowning, or starvation, must, within a reasonable time, inform the owner, if known, and make restitution without compensation, except a reasonable charge for saving and taking care of the property. Any person who takes possession of a live domestic animal must provide for humane treatment of the animal [Civ. Code § 2080].

§ 93.61 Definitions

A loan for use is a contract by which one gives to another the temporary possession and use of personal property, and the latter agrees to return the same thing to the former at a future time, without reward for its use [Civ. Code § 1884]. Thus, loans of $20 bills by the chief executive officer of a company for its use in automated teller machines (ATMs) it operated could not be a "loan for use" because the bills were clearly intended to become the property of the customers who used the ATMs [see Credit Managers' Assn. v. Brubaker (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1587, 1592-1593, 285 Cal. Rptr. 417 (also disqualified as loan for use because chief executive officer charged company interest)]. A loan for use does not transfer the title to the thing; and all its increase during the period of the loan belongs to the lender [Civ. Code § 1885].

§ 93.62 Duties of Borrower

[1] Care

A borrower for use must use great care for the preservation in safety and in good condition of the thing lent [Civ. Code § 1886]. A borrower for use is bound to have and to exercise such skill in the care of the thing lent as the borrower causes the lender to believe the borrower to possess [Civ. Code § 1888].

[2] Repair and Other Expenses

The borrower must repair all deteriorations or injuries to the thing lent, which are occasioned by the borrower's negligence, however slight [Civ. Code § 1889].

The borrower must also bear all other expenses during the loan, except those that are necessarily incurred by the borrower to preserve the thing lent from unexpected and unusual injury. For these latter expenses the borrower is entitled to compensation for the lender, who may, however, exonerate himself or herself by surrendering the thing to the borrower [Civ. Code § 1892].

[3] Permissible Uses; Third Parties

The borrower may use the thing only for such purposes as the lender might reasonably anticipate at the time of lending [Civ. Code § 1890]. The borrower must not part with it to a third person, without the consent of the lender [Civ. Code § 1891].

[1] Liability for Defects

The lender of a thing for use must indemnify the borrower for damages caused by defects or vices in it, which the lender knew at the time of lending, and concealed from the borrower [Civ. Code § 1893].

[2] Inspection and Repair

In the absence of a special agreement, the lender is under no duty or obligation to inspect or repair property while it is in the possession of the borrower, and if there is a contract to repair on notice that repairs are necessary, the duty to repair does not arise until notice is given [Dickson v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 85, 88, 288 P.2d 310] .

§ 93.64 Return

A thing lent for a specified time or purpose is to be returned to the lender without demand as soon as the time has expired or the purposes has been accomplished [Civ. Code § 1895]. If the lender demands return of the thing before the expiration of the agreed period, the borrower is required to return it. However, if on faith of the agreement the borrower has made such arrangements that a return of the thing before the period agreed on would cause the borrower loss, exceeding the benefit derived by the borrower from the loan, the lender must indemnify the borrower for the loss, if the lender compels the return, and the borrower has not in any manner violated his or her duty [Civ. Code § 1894].

When no time or purpose is specified, a thing borrowed is required to be returned on demand [Civ. Code § 1895].

The borrower of a thing must return it to the lender, at the place contemplated by the parties at the time of lending; or if no particular place was contemplated, then at the place where it was at that time [Civ. Code § 1896].

D. Actions by Third Parties

§ 93.80 Bailor's Liability

[1] In General

The bailor of a chattel alleged to have caused injury is liable when there has been a breach of the bailor's duty running in favor of the injured person. Privity of contract is not required. Thus, the bailor may be liable for injury to a third person caused by an article that, if negligently manufactured or entrusted to a third party, is reasonably certain to place life and limb in peril [Di Muro v. Masterson Trusafe Steel Scaffold Co. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 784, 790, 14 Cal. Rptr. 551 ; Zucker v. Passetti Trucking Co. (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 260, 265, 12 Cal. Rptr. 692 (negligently maintained vehicle)].

[2] Loan of Automobile

The common law rule that a bailor of an object is not responsible for negligence of the bailee has been changed by Veh. Code § 17150 et seq., which impose liability on the nonnegligent letter of an automobile for the negligence of an operator to whom he or she has entrusted possession and control of his or her vehicle [Baugh v. Rogers (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 200, 208-209, 148 P.2d 633] .

For a discussion of the liability of an automobile owner for the negligence of an operator under Veh. Code § 17150 et seq. and under the doctrine of negligent entrustment, see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action, §§ 82.11 and 82.16.

[3] Strict Liability

The doctrine of strict liability in tort is applicable to professional or commercial bailors of personal property in the same manner as it is applicable to the sellers of that property [Price v. Shell Oil Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 245, 250, 253-254, 85 Cal. Rptr. 178, 466 P.2d 722] . This doctrine has been extended to third party bystanders [Elmore v. American Motors Corp. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 578, 586, 75 Cal. Rptr. 652, 451 P.2d 84] .

E. Rental Of Passenger Vehicles

§ 93.100 Governing Statutes

The rental of passenger vehicles generally is governed by Civ. Code § 1936. The legislation that enacted Civ. Code § 1936 provides that if any provision of Civ. Code § 1936 or any application of Civ. Code § 1936 to any person or circumstance is held unconstitutional, the remainder of Civ. Code § 1936 and the application of its provisions to other persons and circumstances will not be affected thereby [Stats. 1988, ch. 1523, § 2].

In addition to the general statute:

- Civ. Code § 1936.05 creates an exception in order to facilitate commercial arrangements between rental companies and businesses (which are outside the purview of consumer protection) [see § 93.106[4]].

- Civ. Code § 1936.1 imposes a disclosure requirement for renting a 15-passenger van [see § 93.108].

Civ. Code §§ 1936.01 and 1936.015 concern the practice of passing through to customers, by separately stated charges, a car rental company's costs attributable to airport concession fees, tourism commission assessments, and a temporary increase in the vehicle license fee [see § 93.106[5]]. Each of those code sections is subject to becoming inoperative on the occurrence of a specified event [see § 93.106[5][a]].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Rental Of Passenger Vehicles

§ 93.101 Definitions

[1] Rental Company

The term "rental company" means any person or entity in the business of renting passenger vehicles to the public [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(1)]. A company that rents trucks that are not passenger vehicles as defined in Civ. Code § 1936 is not a "rental company" for purposes of that section [Aron v. U-Haul Co. of California (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 796, 804, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 555] .

[2] Renter

The term "renter" means any person in any manner obligated under a contract for the lease or hire of a passenger vehicle from a rental company for a period of less than 30 days [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(2)].

[3] Authorized Driver

The term "authorized driver" means [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(3)]:

- The renter;
- The renter's spouse if that person is a licensed driver and satisfies the rental company's minimum age requirement;
- The renter's employer or coworker if they are engaged in a business activity with the renter, are licensed drivers, and satisfy the rental company's minimum age requirement; and
- Any person expressly listed by the rental company on the renter's contract as an authorized driver.

[4] Customer Facility Charge

The term "customer facility charge" means a fee required by an airport to be collected by a rental company from a renter, when the fee is intended to finance, design, and construct consolidated airport car rental facilities or to finance, design, construct, and provide common use transportation systems that move passengers between airport terminals and those consolidated car rental facilities [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(4)(A)].

[5] Damage Waiver

The term "damage waiver" means a rental company's agreement not to hold a renter liable for all or any portion of any damage or loss related to the rented vehicle, any loss of use of the rented vehicle, or any storage, impound, towing, or administrative charges [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(5)].

[6] Electronic Surveillance Technology

The term "electronic surveillance technology" means a technological method or system used to observe, monitor, or collect information, including telematics, global positioning system (GPS), wireless technology, or location-based technologies. The term does not include event-data recorders (EDR), sensing and diagnostic modules (SDM), or other systems that are used either (1) for the purpose of identifying, diagnosing, or monitoring functions related to the potential need to repair, service, or perform maintenance on the rental vehicle, or (2) as part of the vehicle's airbag sensing and diagnostic system in order to capture safety systems-related data for retrieval after a crash has occurred or in the event that the collision sensors are activated to prepare the decision-making computer to make the determination to deploy or not to deploy the airbag [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(6)].

[7] Estimated Time for Replacement

The phrase "estimated time for replacement" means the number of hours of labor, or fraction thereof, needed to replace damaged vehicle parts as set forth in collision damage estimating guides generally used in the vehicle repair business and commonly known as "crash books" [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(7)].

[8] Estimated Time for Repair

The phrase "estimated time for repair" means a good faith estimate of the reasonable number of hours of labor, or fraction thereof, needed to repair damaged vehicle parts [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(8)].

[9] Passenger Vehicle

The term "passenger vehicle" means a passenger vehicle as defined in Veh. Code § 465 [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(10)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
E. Rental Of Passenger Vehicles

§ 93.102 Maximum Liability of Renter

[1] In General

Except as limited by Civ. Code § 1936(c) [see § 93.102[3]], a rental company and a renter may agree that the renter will be responsible for no more than all of the following [Civ. Code § 1936(b)]:

- Physical or mechanical damage to the rented vehicle up to its fair market value, as determined in the customary market for the sale of that vehicle, resulting from collision regardless of the cause of the damage;

- Loss due to theft of the rented vehicle up to its fair market value, as determined in the customary market for the sale of that vehicle, provided that the rental company establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the renter or the authorized driver failed to exercise ordinary care while in possession of the vehicle;

- Physical damage to the rented vehicle up to its fair market value, as determined in the customary market for the sale of that vehicle, resulting from vandalism occurring after, or in connection with, the theft of the rented vehicle; however, the renter has no liability for any damage due to vandalism if the renter would have no liability for theft, as described immediately above;

- Physical damage to the rented vehicle up to a total of $500 resulting from vandalism unrelated to the theft of the rented vehicle;

- Actual charges for towing, storage, and impound fees paid by the rental company if the renter is liable for damage or loss; and

- An administrative charge that includes the cost of appraisal and all other costs and expenses incident to the damage, loss, repair, or replacement of the rented vehicle, and that is limited as described in Civ.

Code § 1936(c)(6) [see § 93.102[3][e]].

[2] Liability for Theft

The renter is presumed to have no liability for any loss from theft if both of the following conditions are satisfied [Civ. Code § 1936(b)(2)]:

- An authorized driver has possession of the ignition key furnished by the rental company, or an authorized driver establishes that the ignition key furnished by the rental company was not in the vehicle at the time of the theft.

- An authorized driver files an official report of the theft with the police or other law enforcement agency within 24 hours of learning of the theft and reasonably cooperates with the rental company and the police or other law enforcement agency in providing information concerning the theft.

This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof, which the rental company may rebut by establishing that an authorized driver committed, or aided and abetted the commission of, the theft [Civ. Code § 1936(b)(2)].

When a vehicle rental company brings an action against a renter to recover for loss due to theft, it must do so in the county where the renter resides, or, if the renter does not reside in California, in the jurisdiction where the renter resides [Civ. Code § 1936(r)].

[3] Liability for Damages to Rented Vehicle

[a] Components

The total amount of the renter's liability to the rental company resulting from damage to the rented vehicle may not exceed the sum of the following [see Civ. Code § 1936(c)]:

- The estimated costs of replacement parts;

- The estimated costs of labor necessary to repair and replace damaged parts;

- Towing, storage, and impound fees actually paid by the rental company [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(5)]; and

- An administrative fee limited as described in Civ. Code § 1936(c)(6).

A claim against a renter resulting from damage or loss, excluding loss of use, to a rental vehicle must be reasonably and rationally related to the actual loss incurred. A rental company must mitigate damages when possible, and may not assert or collect any claim for physical damage that exceeds the actual costs of the repairs performed or the estimated cost of repairs, if the rental company chooses not to repair the vehicle, including all discounts and price reductions. If the vehicle is a total-loss vehicle, the claim must not exceed the total-loss vehicle value established in accordance with procedures that are customarily used by insurance companies when paying claims on total-loss vehicles, less the proceeds from salvaging the vehicle, if those proceeds are retained by the rental company [Civ. Code § 1936(d)(3)].

If insurance coverage exists under the renter's applicable personal or business insurance policy, and the coverage is confirmed during regular business hours, the renter may require that the rental company submit any claims to the renter's applicable personal or business insurance carrier. The rental company must not make any written or oral representations that it will not present claims or negotiate with the renter's insurance carrier. Confirmation of coverage includes telephone confirmation from insurance company representatives during regular business hours. On the renter's request and after confirmation of coverage, the amount of claim must be resolved between the insurance carrier and the rental company. The renter will remain responsible for payment to the rental company for any loss sustained that the renter's applicable personal or business insurance policy does not cover [Civ. Code § 1936(d)(4)].

[b] Calculating Cost of Replacement Parts

In calculating the estimated cost that the rental company would have to pay to replace damaged vehicle parts, all discounts and price reductions or adjustments that are, or will be, received by the rental company must be subtracted from the estimate to the extent not already incorporated in the estimate or otherwise promptly credited or refunded to the renter [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(1)].

[c] Calculating Cost of Labor to Replace Damaged Parts

The estimated cost of labor to replace damaged vehicle parts may not exceed the product of (1) the rate for labor usually paid by the rental company to replace vehicle parts of the type that were damaged, and (2) the estimated time for replacement [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(2)]. Again, all discounts and price reductions or adjustments that are, or will be, received by the rental company must be subtracted from the estimate to the extent not already incorporated in the estimate or otherwise promptly credited or refunded to the renter [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(2)].

[d] Calculating Cost of Labor to Repair Damaged Parts

The estimated cost of labor to repair damaged vehicle parts may not exceed the lesser of the following [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(3)(A)]:

- The product of the rate for labor usually paid by the rental company to repair vehicle parts of the type that were damaged and the estimated time for repair; or

- The sum of the estimated labor and parts costs determined under Civ. Code § 1936(c)(1) and (2) [see § 93.102[3][b], [c]] to replace the same vehicle parts.

In estimating the cost of labor to repair damaged vehicle parts, all discounts and price reductions or adjustments that are, or will be, received by the rental company must be subtracted from the estimate to the extent not already incorporated in the estimate or otherwise promptly credited or refunded to the renter [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(3)(B)].

For the purpose of converting the estimated time for repair into the same unit of time in which the rental rate is expressed, a day is deemed to consist of eight hours [Civ. Code § 1936(c)(4)].

[e] Maximum Administrative Charge

No administrative charge [see Civ. Code § 1936(b)(6)] may be imposed if the total estimated cost of parts and labor is $100 or less. Otherwise, the administrative charge described in Civ. Code § 1936(b)(6) may not exceed the amounts specified in Civ. Code § 1936(c)(6), depending on the total estimated cost for parts and labor.

§ 93.103 Maximum Liability of Authorized Driver

An authorized driver's liability to the rental company, if any, for damage occurring during the authorized driver's operation of the rented vehicle may not exceed the amount of the renter's liability under Civ. Code § 1936(c) (see § 93.102[3]) [Civ. Code § 1936(d)(1)]. Nor may a rental company recover from the renter and another authorized driver an amount exceeding the renter's liability under Civ. Code § 1936(c) [Civ. Code § 1936(d)(2)]. A rental company may not recover from the renter or other authorized driver for any item described in *Civ. Civ. Code § 1936(d)(5) applies only to the maximum liability of a renter or other authorized driver to the rental company resulting from damage to the rented vehicle. It does not apply to the liability of any other person [Civ. Code § 1936(d)(6)].

E. Rental Of Passenger Vehicles

§ 93.104 Damage Waivers

[1] Provisions Deemed Included

Except as provided in Civ. Code § 1936(f) [see § 93.104[2]], every damage waiver must provide or, if not expressly stated in writing, be deemed to provide that the renter has no liability for any damage, loss, loss of use, or any cost or expense incident thereto [Civ. Code § 1936(e)(1); see Civ. Code § 1936(a)(4) (defining damage waiver)]. Except as provided in Civ. Code § 1936(f), every limitation, exception, or exclusion to any damage waiver is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1936(e)(2)].

[2] Permitted Exclusions From Damage Waiver

A rental company may provide in the rental contract that a damage waiver does not apply to damage or loss that results from an authorized driver's: (1) intentional, willful, wanton, or reckless conduct; (2) operation of the vehicle under the influence of drugs or alcohol in violation of Veh. Code § 23152; (3) towing or pushing anything; or (4) operation of the vehicle on an unpaved road if the damage or loss is a direct result of the road or driving conditions [Civ. Code § 1936(f)(1)].

A rental company also may provide in the rental contract that a damage waiver does not apply to damage or loss that occurs while the vehicle is (1) used for commercial hire, (2) used in connection with conduct that could be properly charged as a felony, (3) involved in a speed test or contest or in driver training activity, (4) operated by a person other than an authorized driver, or (5) operated outside of the United States [Civ. Code § 1936(f)(2)].

Additionally, a rental company may provide in the rental contract that a damage waiver does not apply if any authorized driver (1) provided fraudulent information to the rental company, or (2) provided false information and the rental company would not have rented the vehicle if it had instead received true information [Civ. Code § 1936(f)(3)].

[3] Required Disclosures in Connection With Damage Waiver

A rental company that offers or provides a damage waiver for any consideration in addition to the rental rate must clearly and conspicuously disclose the following information in the rental contract or holder in which the contract is placed and also disclose this information in signs posted at the place, such as the counter, where the renter signs the rental contract. For renters who are enrolled in the rental company's membership program, the information must be disclosed in a sign posted in a location clearly visible to those renters as they enter the location where their reserved rental cars are parked or near the exit of the bus or other conveyance that transports the enrollee to a reserved car [Civ. Code § 1936(g)(1); see Civ. Code § 1936(g)(3) (example of notice satisfying requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(g)(1))]:

- The nature of the renter's liability; for example, liability for all collision damage regardless of cause [see Civ. Code § 1936(b)(1); see also § 93.102[1]].

- The extent of the renter's liability, for example, liability for damage or loss up to a specified amount [see Civ. Code § 1936(b); see also § 93.102[1]].

- That the renter's personal insurance policy or the credit card used to pay for the car rental transaction may provide coverage for all or a portion of the renter's potential liability.

- That the renter should consult with his or her insurer to determine the scope of insurance coverage, including the amount of the deductible, if any, for which the renter is obligated.

- That the renter may purchase an optional damage waiver to cover all liability, subject to whatever exceptions the rental company expressly lists that are permitted under Civ. Code § 1936(f) [see § 93.104[2]].

- The range of charges for the damage waiver.

In addition, a rental company that offers or provides a damage waiver must orally disclose to all renters, except those who are participants in the rental company's membership program, that the damage waiver may be duplicative of coverage that the customer maintains under his or her own policy of motor vehicle insurance. The renter's receipt of the oral disclosure must be demonstrated through the renter's acknowledging receipt of the oral disclosure near that part of the contract where the renter indicates, by the renter's own initials, his or her acceptance or declination of the damage waiver. Adjacent to that same part, the contract must also state that the damage waiver is optional. Further, the contract for these renters must include a clear and conspicuous written disclosure that the damage waiver may be duplicative of coverage that the customer maintains under his or her own policy of motor vehicle insurance [Civ. Code § 1936(g)(2)].

"Membership program" means a service offered by a rental company that permits customers to bypass the rental counter and go directly to the car previously reserved. A membership program must meet all of the following requirements [Civ. Code § 1936(a)(9)]:

- The renter must initiate enrollment by completing an application on which the renter can specify a preference for type of vehicle and acceptance or declination of optional services.

- The rental company must fully disclose, before the enrollee's first rental as a participant in the program, all terms and conditions of the rental agreement as well as all required disclosures.

- The renter may terminate enrollment at any time.

- The rental company must fully explain to the renter that designated preferences, as well as acceptance or declination of optional services, may be changed by the renter at any time for the next and future rentals.

- An employee designated to receive the form specified in Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1)(C) must be present at the lot where the renter takes possession of the car, to receive any change in the rental agreement from the renter.

If the designated employee is actually present at the required location, a rental company's disclosure requirements will be met for renters who are enrolled in the rental company's membership program if the three conditions listed below are satisfied [Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1), (2)]:

- Before the enrollee's first rental as a participant in the program, the renter must receive, in writing: (1) all the disclosures required by Civ. Code § 1936(g)(1), including the terms and conditions of the rental agreement then in effect; and (2) a web site address, as well as a contact number or address, where the enrollee can learn of any changes to the rental agreement or to the laws of California governing rental agreements since the effective date of the rental company's most recent restatement of the rental agreement and distribution of that restatement to its members [Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1)(A)].

- At the commencement of each rental period, the renter must be provided, on the rental record or the folder in which it is inserted, with a printed notice stating that he or she had either previously selected or declined an optional damage waiver and that the renter has the right to change preferences [Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1)(B)].

- At the commencement of each rental period, the rental company must provide, on the rearview mirror, a hanger on which a statement is printed, in a box, in at least 12-point boldface type, notifying the renter that the collision damage waiver offered by the rental company may be duplicative of coverage that the customer maintains under his or her own auto insurance policy. If it is not feasible to hang the statement from the rearview mirror, it must be hung from the steering wheel. The hanger must provide the renter a box to initial if he or she (not his or her employer) has previously accepted or declined the collision damage waiver and now wishes to change his or her decision to accept or decline the collision damage waiver. Specified language must be used. The hanger must also provide a box for the enrollee to indicate whether this change applies to this rental transaction only or to all future rental transactions. The hanger must also notify the renter that he or she may make such a change, before leaving the lot, by returning the form to an employee designated to receive the form who is present at the lot where the renter takes possession of the car, to receive any change in the rental agreement from the renter [Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1)(C)].

Satisfaction of the above conditions, however, does not relieve the rental company from the duty to make disclosures that are required to be made within the text of a contract or holder in which the contract is placed, or to be made in or on an advertisement containing a rental rate, or to be made in a telephonic, in-person, or computer-transmitted quotation or reservation. [Civ. Code § 1936(t)(1), (2)].

[4] Maximum Fee for Damage Waiver

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a rental company may sell damage waivers but may not charge more than the fee specified by statute per full or partial 24-hour rental day for damage waiver [Civ. Code § 1936(h), (i)].

[5] Required Damage Waiver References in Advertisements

A rental company that disseminates an advertisement in California containing a rental rate must include in that advertisement a clearly readable statement of the charge for the damage waiver and a statement that the damage waiver is optional [Civ. Code § 1936(j)].

[6] Purchase of Damage Waiver May Not Be Required or Coerced

A rental company may not require the purchase of a damage waiver, optional insurance, or any other optional good or service [Civ. Code § 1936(k)(1)].

A rental company must not engage in any unfair, deceptive, or coercive conduct to induce a renter to purchase damage waiver, optional insurance, or any other optional good or service, including conduct such as, but not limited to, refusing to honor the renter's reservation, limiting the availability of vehicles, requiring a deposit, or debiting or blocking the renter's credit card account for a sum equivalent to a deposit if the renter declines to purchase damage waiver, optional insurance, or any other optional good or service [Civ. Code § 1936(k)(2)].

In the absence of express permission granted by the renter subsequent to damage to, or loss of, the vehicle, a rental company may not seek to recover any portion of any claim arising out of damage to, or loss of, the rented vehicle by processing a credit card charge or causing any debit or block to be placed on the renter's credit card account [Civ. Code § 1936(l)(1)]. A rental company may not engage in any unfair, deceptive, or coercive tactics in attempting to recover or in recovering on any claim arising out of damage to, or loss of, the rented vehicle [*Civ. 9-93 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 93.106

§ 93.106 Fees and Charges

[1] Required Format and Permitted Charges

As long as Civ. Code § 1936.01 or Civ. Code § 1936.015 is operative [see § 93.106[5][a]], the requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(n) discussed below will be superseded to some extent by requirements discussed in § 93.106[5] [see Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b), 1936.015(b)].

A rental company may only advertise, quote, and charge a rental rate that includes the entire amount except taxes, a customer facility charge, if any, and a mileage charge, if any, that a renter must pay to hire or lease the vehicle for the period of time to which the rental rate applies [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(1)].

In addition to the rental rate, taxes, customer facility charges, if any, and mileage charge, if any, a rental company may charge for an item or service provided in connection with a particular rental transaction if the renter could have avoided incurring the charge by choosing not to obtain or use the optional item or service [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(2); see also Civ. Code § 1936(k)(1) (options may not be required; see § 93.104[6]]. A rental company also may impose an additional charge based on reasonable age criteria established by the rental company. Items and services for which the rental company may impose an additional charge, include, but are not limited to the following [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(2)]:

- Optional insurance and accessories requested by the renter;

- Service charges incidental to the renter's optional return of the vehicle to a location other than the location where the vehicle was hired or leased; and

- Charges for refueling the vehicle at the conclusion of the rental transaction in the event that the renter did not return the vehicle with as much fuel as was in the fuel tank at the beginning of the rental [see Schnall v. Hertz Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1144, 1162, 1170, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439 (Civ. Code § 1936(m)(2) provided rental car company with safe harbor against claim that amount of fuel service charge was unfair within meaning of Unfair Competition Law (UCL), but did not provide safe harbor against allegations that it confused and misled customers in violation of unfair and fraud prongs of UCL); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 13800 (rental vehicle's fuel gauge installed by manufacturer may be used in rental transaction by rental company to calculate optional charge for fueling)].

If a rental company states a rental rate in print advertisement or in a telephonic, in-person, or computer-transmitted quotation, the rental company must clearly disclose in that advertisement or quotation the terms of any mileage conditions relating to the advertised or quoted rental rate, including, but not limited to, to the extent applicable, the amount of mileage and gas charges, the number of miles for which no charges will be imposed, and a description of geographic driving limitations within the United States and Canada [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(4)].

[2] Customer Facility Charges

A customer facility charge may be collected by a rental company under the following circumstances [Civ. Code § 1936(m)(1)]:

- Collection of the fee by the rental company is required by an airport operated by a city, a county, a city and county, a joint powers authority, or a special district.

- The fee is calculated on a per-contract basis.

- The fee is a user fee, not a tax imposed on real property or an incidence of property ownership under Cal. Const. art. XIIID.

- Except in the case described below, the fee is $10 per contract.

- If the fee imposed by the airport is for both a consolidated rental car facility and a common use transportation system, the fee collected from customers of on-airport rental car companies is $10, but the fee imposed on customers of off-airport rental car companies who are transported on the common use transportation system is proportional to the costs of the common use transportation system only. The fee is uniformly applied to each class of on-airport or off-airport customers, provided the airport requires off-airport customers to use the common use transportation system.

- Revenues collected from the fee do not exceed the reasonable costs of financing, designing, constructing, or operating the facility or services and may not be used for any other purpose.

- The fee is separately identified on the rental agreement.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the fees collected, or any other law whereby a local agency operating an airport requires a rental car company to collect a facility financing fee from its customers, are not subject to sales, use, or transaction taxes [Civ. Code § 1936(m)(2)].

As long as Civ. Code § 1936.01 or Civ. Code § 1936.015 is operative [see § 93.106[5][a]], the requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(n) discussed below will be superseded to some extent by requirements discussed in § 93.106[5] [see Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b), 1936.015(b)].

When a rental rate is stated in an advertisement, quotation, or reservation in connection with a car rental at an airport where a customer facility charge is imposed, the rental company must clearly disclose the existence and amount of the customer facility charge. Advertisements include radio, television, other electronic media, and print advertisements. Quotations and reservations include those that are telephonic, in-person, and computer-transmitted. If the rate advertisement is intended to include transactions at more than one airport imposing a customer facility charge, a range of fees may be stated in the advertisement. However, all rate advertisements that include car rentals at airport destinations must clearly and conspicuously include a toll-free telephone number whereby a customer can be told the specific amount of the customer facility charge for which the customer will be obligated [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(5)(A)].

If any person or entity other than a rental car company, including a passenger carrier or a seller of travel services, advertises or quotes a rate for a car rental at an airport where a customer facility charge is imposed, that person or entity, provided they are provided with information about the existence and amount of the fee, to the extent not specifically prohibited by federal law, must clearly disclose the existence and amount of the fee in any telephonic, in-person, or computer-transmitted quotation at the time of making an initial quotation of a rental rate and at the time of making a reservation of a rental car. If a rental car company provides the person or entity with rate and customer facility charge information, the rental car company is not responsible for the failure of that person or entity to comply with this requirement when quoting or confirming a rate to a third person or entity [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(5)(B)].

[3] Prohibited Charges

As long as Civ. Code § 1936.01 or Civ. Code § 1936.015 is operative [see § 93.106[5][a]], the requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(n) discussed below will be superseded to some extent by requirements discussed in § 93.106[5] [see Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b), 1936.015(b)].

A rental company may not charge in addition to the rental rate, taxes, a customer facility charge, if any, and a mileage charge, if any, any fee that must be paid by the renter as a condition of hiring or leasing the vehicle, such as, but not limited to, required fuel or airport surcharges other than customer facility charges, nor any fee for transporting the renter to the location where the rented vehicle will be delivered to the renter [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(1)]. If a rental company delivers a vehicle to a renter at a location other than the location where the rental company normally carries on its business, the rental company may not charge the renter any amount for the rental for the period before the delivery of the vehicle. If a rental company picks up a rented vehicle from a renter at a location other than the location where the rental company normally carries on its business, the rental company may not charge the renter any amount for the rental for the period after the renter notifies the rental company to pick up the vehicle [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(6)].

A rental company also may not charge any fee for authorized drivers in addition to the rental charge for an individual renter [Civ. Code § 1936(n)(3)].

[4] Pass-Through Pursuant to Commercial Arrangement

When a car rental company and a corporation or some other business entity have made a contract that establishes a discounted rental rate for employees and certain others associated with the business, that rate, by the consent of both parties, usually is to be supplemented through additional charges (such as airport concession fees, vehicle license fees, rental car surcharges, and stadium construction fees) that are imposed on the rental company or its customers. Civ. Code § 1936.05 permits the financial arrangements mutually agreed to by the parties in these commercial contracts to be implemented in California, by permitting the pass-through of those kinds of charges to the business entity--something that Civ. Code § 1936 would not permit. This flexibility allows the rental company to grant certain benefits that the business desires, in exchange for other charges.

Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary contained in Civ. Code § 1936(n)(1), a car-rental company, in connection with the "qualified business rental" of a passenger vehicle to a "business renter" of a "business program sponsor" under the sponsor's "business program," may separately quote (by telephone, in person, or by computer transmission) additional charges (that is, charges other than a per-period base rental rate established by the business program) for the rental if, at the time the quote is provided, the person receiving the quote is also provided a good faith estimate of the total of all charges for the entire rental [see Civ. Code § 1936.05(a) (definitions); see also Comments to see § 93.281]. The estimate may exclude mileage charges and charges for optional items and services that cannot be determined before completing the reservation based on the information provided by the renter [Civ. Code § 1936.05(b)(1)]. The rental company also may separately impose additional charges for the rental if the rental contract, or another document provided to the business renter at the time and place the rental commences, clearly and conspicuously discloses the total of all charges for the entire rental, exclusive of charges that cannot be determined at the time the rental commences [Civ. Code § 1936.05(b)(2)].

A renter may bring an action against a rental company for the recovery of damages and appropriate equitable relief for a violation of Civ. Code § 1936.05. The prevailing party is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1936.05(c)]. For a form of complaint, see § 93.281.

Any waiver of any of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1936.05 is void and unenforceable as contrary to public policy [Civ. Code § 1936.05(d)].

Nothing in Civ. Code § 1936.05 is intended to mean that the rental company is not required to comply with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(n)(2)-(6) [Civ. Code § 1936.05(e)].

[5] Separately Stated Charges for Certain Rental Company Costs

[a] Superseded Statutory Provisions

As long as Civ. Code § 1936.01 or Civ. Code § 1936.015 is operative, the requirements discussed in § 93.106[5][b] -[h] will supersede to some extent the requirements of Civ. Code § 1936(n) discussed in § 93.106[1] -[3]. As between those two code sections, as long as both are operative, section 1936.015 supersedes section 1936.01 [see Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b), 1936.015(b)].

Civ. Code § 1936.01 concerns separately stated charges for recoupment of a rental company's payments to cover airport concession fees and tourism commission assessments established by the California Travel and Tourism Commission [see Civ. Code § 1936.01(a)(1), (3)]. The section became operative March 31, 2007 [see Civ. Code § 1936.01(e); see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 5350 et seq. (tourism commission assessments on passenger rental car industry)] and remains operative at least through a yet undetermined date in 2013 [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 5358.1].

Civ. Code § 1936.015 concerns a separately stated charge for recoupment of a rental company's payments to meet a temporary increase in the vehicle license fee [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 10751, 10752] as that fee existed on January 1, 2009 [Civ. Code §§ 1936.015(a)(1)]. References in § 93.106[5][b]-[h] to the "vehicle license fee increment" mean the amount by which the vehicle license fee exceeds 0.65 percent of the value of the vehicle, after being increased (to 1 percent), effective May 19, 2009 [see Civ. Code § 1936.015(a)(2), (e); Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 10752, 10752.1, 10752.2]. The section became operative February 20, 2009 (but had no practical effect until May 19, 2009), and remains operative as long as the vehicle license fee exceeds 0.65 percent of the value of the vehicle [Civ. Code § 1936.015(e)(1)].

[b] Amounts to Be Separately Stated

A rental company may advertise only a rental rate that includes the entire amount that a renter must pay to hire or lease the vehicle for the period to which the rental rate applies, excepting any taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charge, or mileage charge [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(1), 1936.015(b)(1)]. The vehicle license fee increment must be separately charged, clearly stated, and prorated at one three hundred sixty fifth of the increment in the annual vehicle license fee actually paid on the particular vehicle being rented for each full or partial 24 hour rental day the vehicle is rented. The total of all vehicle license fee increments charged to renters must not exceed the increment in the annual vehicle license fee actually paid for the particular vehicle rented [Civ. Code § 1936.015(a)(2)].

When providing a quote [see Civ. Code § 1936.01(a)(2) (definition)], or imposing charges for a rental, the rental company may separately state the rental rate, taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charge, airport concession fee, tourism commission assessment, and mileage charge that a renter must pay to hire or lease the vehicle for the period to which the rental rate applies. The rental company may not charge any fee in addition to the rental rate, taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charge, airport concession fee, tourism commission assessment, or mileage charge, that the renter must pay as a condition of hiring or leasing the vehicle, such as, but not limited to, required fuel or airport surcharges other than customer facility charges and airport concession fees [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(2), 1936.015(b)(2)].

[c] Disclosure of Certain Amounts

If customer facility charges [see Civ. Code § 1946(m); § 93.106[2] , airport concession fees, or tourism commission assessments are imposed, the rental company must do each of the following [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(3), 1936.015(b)(3)].

- At the time a quote is given [see Civ. Code § 1936.01(a)(2) (definition of quote)], the rental company must provide the person receiving the quote with a good faith estimate of the rental rate, taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charge, airport concession fee, and tourism commission assessment, as well as the total charges for the entire rental. The total charges, if provided on a website, must be displayed in a typeface at least as large as any rental rate disclosed on that page and must be provided on a page that the person receiving the quote may reach by following links through no more than two website pages, including the page on which the rental rate is first provided. The good faith estimate may exclude mileage charges and charges for optional items that cannot be determined prior to completing the reservation based on the information provided by the person [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(3)(A), 1936.015(b)(3)(A)].

- The rental company must provide, to each person (other than a person within the rental company) who offers quotes to actual or prospective customers, access to information about the vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charges, airport concession fees, and tourism commission assessments, as well as access to information about when those charges apply. Any person providing quotes to actual or prospective customers for the hire or lease of a vehicle from a rental company must provide the quotes in the manner described above [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(3)(c), 1936.015(b)(3)(C)].

- At the time and place the rental commences, the rental company must clearly and conspicuously disclose in the rental contract (or the portion of it) that is provided to the renter, the following: the total of the rental rate, taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charge, airport concession fee, and tourism commission assessment, for the entire rental, exclusive of charges that cannot be determined at the time the rental commences. Charges imposed must be no more than the amount of the quote provided in a confirmed reservation, unless the person changes the terms of the rental contract after making the reservation [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(3)(B), 1936.015(b)(3)(B)].

[d] Charges Added at Renter's or Company's Option

A rental company may charge for (in addition to the rental rate, taxes, vehicle license fee increment, customer facility charges, airport concession fees, tourism commission assessments, and mileage charges) an item or service provided in connection with a particular rental transaction, if the renter could have avoided incurring the charge by choosing not to obtain or use the optional item or service. Such items and services, for which the rental company may impose an additional charge, include, but are not limited to, optional insurance and accessories requested by the renter, service charges incidental to the renter's optional return of the vehicle to a location other than the location where the vehicle was hired or leased, and charges for refueling the vehicle at the conclusion of the rental transaction in the event that the renter did not return the vehicle with as much fuel as was in the fuel tank at the beginning of the rental. A rental company also may impose an additional charge based on reasonable age criteria established by the rental company [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(4), 1936.015(b)(4)].

[e] Prohibition of Charge for Additional Driver

A rental company may not charge any fee for authorized drivers in addition to the rental charge for an individual renter [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(5), 1936.015(b)(5)].

[f] Disclosure of Mileage Limitations

If a rental company states a rental rate in a print advertisement, a telephone quote, an in person quote, or a computer transmitted quote [see Civ. Code § 1936.01(a)(2) (definition of quote)], then the rental company must clearly disclose in that advertisement or quote the terms of any mileage conditions relating to the rental rate disclosed in the advertisement or quote, including, but not limited to (to the extent applicable), the amount of mileage charges and gas charges, the number of miles for which no charges will be imposed, and a description of geographic driving limitations within the United States and Canada [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(6), 1936.015(b)(6)].

[g] Rental Rates at Airports

When a rental rate is stated in an advertisement in connection with a car rental at an airport where a customer facility charge is imposed, the rental company must clearly disclose the existence and amount of the customer facility charge. (Advertisements include radio, television, other electronic media, and print advertisements.) If the rental rate advertisement is intended to include transactions at more than one airport imposing a customer facility charge, then a range of charges may be stated in the advertisement. However, all rental rate advertisements that include car rentals at airport destinations must clearly and conspicuously include a toll free telephone number that a customer can use to know the specific amount of the customer facility charge for which the customer will be obligated [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(7)(A), 1936.015(b)(7)(A)].

If any person or entity other than a rental company (including a passenger carrier or a seller of travel services) advertises a rental rate for a car rental at an airport where a customer facility charge is imposed, and that person or entity has information about the existence and amount of the charge not specifically prohibited by federal law, then that person or entity must clearly disclose the existence and amount of the charge. If a rental company provides the person or entity with rental rate information and customer facility charge information, then the rental company is not responsible for the failure of that person or entity to comply with that requirement [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(7)(B), 1936.015(b)(7)(B)].

[h] Off-Premises Delivery to Customer or Return of Rented Vehicle by Customer

If a rental company delivers a vehicle to a renter at a location other than the location where the rental company normally carries on its business, the rental company may not charge the renter any amount for the rental for the period before the delivery of the vehicle. If a rental company picks up a rented vehicle from a renter at a location other than the location where the rental company normally carries on its business, the rental company may not charge the renter any amount for the rental for the period after the renter notifies the rental company to pick up the vehicle [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(8), 1936.015(b)(8)].

Except as otherwise permitted pursuant to the customer facility charge, a rental company may not separately charge, in addition to the rental rate, a fee for transporting the renter to the location where the rented vehicle will be delivered to the renter [Civ. Code §§ 1936.01(b)(9), 1936.015(b)(9)].

[1] Restriction on Use

A rental company may not use, access, or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using electronic surveillance technology [see § 93.101[6] for definition], except in specified circumstances [Civ. Code § 1936(o); § 93.107[2]].

A rental company may not use electronic surveillance technology to track a renter in order to impose fines or surcharges relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle [Civ. Code § 1936(p)].

[2] Location of Missing Vehicle

A rental company may use, access, or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using electronic surveillance technology when the equipment is used by the rental company only for the purpose of locating a stolen, abandoned, or missing rental vehicle after one of the following [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(1)(A)]:

- The renter or law enforcement has informed the rental company that the vehicle has been stolen or abandoned or is missing.

- The rental vehicle has not been returned following one week after the contracted return date, or one week following the end of an extension of that return date.

- The rental company discovers the rental vehicle has been stolen or abandoned, and, if stolen, the company has reported the vehicle stolen to law enforcement by filing a stolen vehicle report unless law enforcement has already informed the rental company that the vehicle has been stolen or abandoned or is missing.

If electronic surveillance technology is activated for any such purpose, the rental company must maintain a record, in either electronic or written form, of information relevant to the activation of the technology. That information must include the rental agreement, including the return date, and the date and time the electronic surveillance technology was activated. The record also must include, if relevant, a record of any written or other communication with the renter, including communications regarding extensions of the rental, police reports, or other written communication with law enforcement officials. The record must be maintained for a period of at least 12 months from the time the record is created and must be made available on the renter's request. The rental company must maintain and furnish any explanatory codes necessary to read the record. The rental company is not required to maintain a record if electronic surveillance technology is activated to recover a rental vehicle that is stolen or missing at a time other than during a rental period [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(1)(B)].

[3] Request From Law Enforcement

A rental company may use, access, or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using electronic surveillance technology in response to a specific request from law enforcement pursuant to a subpoena or search warrant [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(2)].

[4] Navigation Assistance to Driver

A rental company may equip rental vehicles with GPS-based technology that provides navigation assistance to the occupants of the rental vehicle if the rental company does not use, access, or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using that technology, except for the purposes of discovering or repairing a defect in the technology, and the information may then be used only for that purpose [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(3)].

[5] Remote Locking and Unlocking

A rental company may equip rental vehicles with electronic surveillance technology that allows for the remote locking or unlocking of the vehicle at the request of the renter, if the rental company does not use, access, or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using that technology, except as necessary to lock or unlock the vehicle [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(4)].

[6] Roadside Assistance

A rental company may equip rental vehicles with electronic surveillance technology that allows the company to provide roadside assistance, such as towing, flat tire, or fuel services, at the request of the renter, if the rental company does not use, access or obtain any information relating to the renter's use of the rental vehicle that was obtained using that technology, except as necessary to provide the requested roadside assistance [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(5)].

[7] Vehicle-Return Information

A rental company may obtain, access, or use information from electronic surveillance technology for the sole purpose of determining the date and time the vehicle is returned to the rental company, the total mileage driven, and the vehicle fuel level of the returned vehicle. This rule applies only after the renter has returned the vehicle to the rental company, and the information may only be used for the specified purpose [Civ. Code § 1936(o)(6)].

§ 93.108 Warning to Renter of 15-Passenger Van

A rental company must provide a renter of a 15-passenger van with a copy of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's consumer advisory for 15-passenger vans titled "Reducing the Risk of Rollover Crashes" (as updated from time to time). The renter must acknowledge receipt of that copy by signing an acknowledgment of receipt on the rental agreement or on an attached form [Civ. Code § 1936.1(a)(1)]. If the van is being rented for a business purpose or use, the rental company must also state on the same document that only an employee with the proper licensing may drive the vehicle; the renter must acknowledge the receipt of that warning in the same manner [Civ. Code § 1936.1(a)(2)].

A "15-passenger van" is any van manufactured to accommodate 15 passengers including the driver (regardless of whether that van has been altered to accommodate fewer than 15 passengers), other than a 15-passenger van with dual rear wheels that has a gross weight rating of not less than 11,500 pounds [Civ. Code § 1936.1(b)].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Deposits

§ 93.131 Decisions

[1] Acceptance Under Contract of Deposit

[a] In General

Acceptance of duties and responsibilities of depositary is permitted to be constructive or implied. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703-704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679

Acceptance of duties and responsibilities of bailment by depositary is not inferred unless there is something to show notice or knowledge on part of alleged depositary that goods are in fact in his possession and that they are property of bailor. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703-704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679

Civ. Code §§ 1815 and 1816 (relating to involuntary deposit) presuppose express or implied acceptance of personal property involved in order to make depositary liable for its care; adjective "involuntary" qualifying word "deposit" in Civ. Code §§ 1815 and 1816 involves assumption that deposit is involuntarily made rather than involuntarily received. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 702, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679

Duties and responsibilities of depositary may not be thrust on person without person's knowledge or consent, or against person's protest, and depositary is required to have voluntarily assumed custody and possession of property in question. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 644, 307 P.2d 429

[b] Innkeeper's Receipt for Deposited Property

Receipt as used in Civ. Code § 1860 (money or valuables as deposited with innkeeper; receipts therefor) is nothing more in its common use than bare acknowledgment of having received something; writing is receipt as matter of law when all parties involved considered it to be receipt. Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272,

275-276, 258 P. 155 ; but see Providence Wash. Ins. Co. v. Hotel Marysville (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 338, 346-347, 140 P.2d 698 (brass checks did not constitute receipts in writing for articles of unusual value, within contemplation of Civ. Code § 1860)

[2] Conversion by Depositary

Misdelivery by one entrusted with property of another constitutes conversion of it even though he or she acted innocently and by mistake, even in the case of a gratuitous depositary. Byer v. Canadian Bank of Commerce (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 297, 299, 301, 65 P.2d 67

Conversion exists when depositary of personal property refuses to redeliver it to depositor in accordance with terms of contract. Grosso v. Monfalcone, Inc. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 405, 409-410, 56 P.2d 1266

Requirements for depositor bringing cause of action for conversion against depositary refusing to redeliver property to depositor. Grosso v. Monfalcone, Inc. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 405, 409-410, 56 P.2d 1266

[3] Depositary's Failure to Return Deposit

Proof of deposit and subsequent refusal of defendant depositary, on demand, to make delivery according to contract cast on defendant burden of explaining refusal and lack of negligence where property was lost or destroyed. U Drive, & Tour, Ltd. v. System Auto Parks, Ltd. (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782, 784-785 , 71 P.2d 354 , overruled on other grounds, Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713, 225 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; see Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 945, 185 P.2d 610 ; Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905 ; Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 532, 535, 294 P. 436

[4] Deposits for Hire

[a] In General

Plaintiff delivering rings to defendant for purpose of having them reset is bailor for mutual benefit creating deposit for hire [Civ. Code § 1851] since plaintiff was to receive new ring fabricated with stones from rings she delivered to defendant and defendant was to receive consideration for having work performed. Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 850, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39

Deposit which is mere incident to conduct of business from which depositary derives profits is deposit for mutual benefit, although depositary receives no compensation for deposit as such [see Civ. Code § 1851]. Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 532, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366, 291 P. 624 ; Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272, 283, 258 P. 155 (athletic club and member as guest in its clubhouse)

Bailee entrusted with merchandise for purpose of repair is deemed depositary for hire. Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905

[b] Duties and Responsibilities of Depositary

Depositary for hire is chargeable only with ordinary care and diligence in safeguarding depositor's property and is liable only when he or she has been guilty of some negligence. Southern Pac. Co. v. Schmidt Dredge Co. (1897) 118 Cal. 368, 378, 50 P. 650 ; Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 850-851, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ;

Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 533, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Awalt v. Mercer, Fraser Co. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 853, 859, 279 P.2d 1001 [see Civ. Code §§ 1928, 1929]; Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905

In bailment for hire contract, bailee is liable for loss or damage to goods left in his or her possession when loss or damage results from bailee's lack of ordinary care; bailee has burden of establishing his or her use of ordinary care once bailor has established fact of bailment. Gebert v. Yank (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 544, 551-555, 218 Cal. Rptr. 585

Depositary, if bailment is for mutual benefit of depositor and depositary, is not insurer of chattel entrusted to depositary and is not liable, in absence of negligence, for loss resulting from robbery, burglary, or theft. Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 533, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905 ; Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366, 291 P. 624

Deposit, otherwise gratuitous, if made to induce purchase, is considered sufficient to give rise to same duty of reasonable care on part of depositary as ordinary bailment for hire. Tierstein v. Licht (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 835, 842, 345 P.2d 341 ; see also Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610

Depositary for repairs does not wrongfully assume control in placing bailed article with another for repairs unless bailment agreement expressly or impliedly requires bailee to perform labor personally. Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905

Gratuitous depositary is liable only for gross negligence during his possession. Roselip v. Raisch (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 125, 133, 166 P.2d 340

Only duty that gratuitous bailor owes to either bailee or third persons is to warn them of actually known defects that render chattel dangerous for purpose for which it is ordinarily used. Tierstein v. Licht (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 835, 842, 345 P.2d 341

[6] Limit of Liability of Depositary

Civ. Code § 1840 (limit of liability of depositary) has no application when value of goods bailed is not disclosed by owner or when bailee has no reason to suppose that they have any special value; under these circumstances, measure of damages is actual value of goods. Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 855, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 ; Greer v. Los Angeles Athletic Club (1927) 84 Cal. App. 272, 281, 258 P. 155 ; but see Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 368, 291 P. 624

Civ. Code § 1840 (limit of liability of depositary) provides measure of damages in bailment contracts, and loss of profits is not recoverable. Greenberg Bros., Inc. v. Ernest W. Hahn, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 529, 533-534, 54 Cal. Rptr. 770

[7] Parking Lots

Owner of car who pays parking fee, locks car, leaves it on parking lot, retains keys, and reserves possession at all times, having right to remove car at will, is mere licensee and creates no contract of bailment. Porter v. Los Angeles Turf Club (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 840, 842 , 105 P.2d 956

Prima facie proof of bailment and failure to redeliver car in suit for conversion casts burden on bailee to explain refusal to redeliver car according to contract. U Drive & Tour, Ltd. v. System Auto Parks, Ltd. (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782, 71 P.2d 354 , overruled on other grounds, Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713, 225 Cal. Rptr. 757

In action in which bailor's car was stolen from bailee's parking lot, bailor was entitled to recover expenses for renting another car during period he or she was deprived of use but not entitled to recover cost of taxicab hire. Beetson v. Hollywood Athletic Club (1930) 109 Cal. App. 715, 723-724, 293 P. 821

Parking lot operator is not insurer of contents of vehicle and is liable only for negligent loss thereof. Homan v. Burkhart (1930) 108 Cal. App. 363, 366, 291 P. 624

[8] Repairman's Lien

One who holds possession of personal property while claiming lien on it is normally depositary. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679

Repairman has lien under Civ. Code § 3051 (artisan and service lien on personalty for labor, storage, repair, or protection) if party was legal possessor of property brought to repairman and repairs were there made by repairman at party's request. Goodman v. Anglo-Cal. Trust Co. (1923) 62 Cal. App. 702, 704, 217 P. 1078

Subcontractor is not permitted to assert lien; lien [Civ. Code § 3051] is required to be asserted by party with whom owner has contracted. Goodman v. Anglo-Cal. Trust Co. (1923) 62 Cal. App. 702, 705, 217 P. 1078

Lien created by Civ. Code § 3051 (repair and service lien) is dependent on possession of property by lien claimant and terminates when possession is voluntarily relinquished and not revived on regaining possession except in those instances when property is released to its owner on agreement that lien is to be revived when possession is returned to lien claimant [see Civ. Code § 2913]. Jess H. Young & Son, Inc. v. Victory Tool & Die Co. (1961) 189 Cal. App. 2d 824, 827-828, 11 Cal. Rptr. 516

Possessory lien of improver and repairer of chattel is superior to lien of preexisting chattel mortgage under Civ. Code §§ 3051 and 3052 (service lien on personalty; enforcement by sale). Mortgage Sec. Co. v. Pfaffmann (1917) 177 Cal. 109, 113, 169 P. 1033 ; see Civ. Code 3067 et seq. for liens on automobiles

Conduct excusing tender of payment by obligor to repairman also amounts to waiver of repairman's lien. Enfield v. Hoffman Motor Co. (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 800, 807, 257 P.2d 458

Lienholder who refuses on proper demand to deliver property waives the lien if refusal is based on ground inconsistent with that lien. Enfield v. Hoffman Motor Co. (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 800, 807, 257 P.2d 458

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a depositor against a depositary to obtain possession of personal property.

The complaint alleges plaintiff's right to immediate and exclusive possession of the property (Paragraph 4) [see Sperisen v. Heynemann (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 228, 230, 308 P.2d 436] , defendant's possession of the property (Paragraph 5) [see Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 776, 778-779, 323 P.2d 584] , and plaintiff's demand for return of the property and defendant's refusal (Paragraph 5) [see Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Downey v. Martin Aircraft Serv. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 100, 214 P.2d 581] .

To permit an alternative judgment for the value of the property in the event possession cannot be obtained, the complaint contains an allegation of such value (Paragraph 4) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 627, 667]. Any damages caused by the wrongful detention of the property (Paragraph 6) are also recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 667.

[3] Alternative Theory of Recovery

In an action by a depositor against a depositary for the depositary's failure to redeliver the bailed object on demand, a prima facie showing of a conversion is also made by proof of a bailment and a subsequent refusal by the depositary to make delivery according to contract. If the depositor's action is strictly one of conversion, or is a contract action for failure to redeliver property, the depositary is required to justify the depositary's failure to return the bailed property [U Drive & Tour, Ltd. v. System Auto Parks, Ltd. (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 782, 71 P.2d 354 , overruled on other grounds, Gardner v. Downtown Porsche Audi (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 713, 225 Cal. Rptr. 757 ; see also Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 945, 185 P.2d 610 ; Travelers Fire Ins. Co. v. Brock & Co. (1938) 30 Cal. App. 2d 112, 114, 85 P.2d 905 ; Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 532, 535, 294 P. 436] . For a complaint based on the theory of conversion, see § 93.212.

[4] Interest on Damages

A plaintiff may recover interest on damages certain or capable of being made certain when the right to recover those damages is vested in plaintiff on a particular day. Interest is computed from that day [see Civ. Code § 3287(a)]. The allegation of recovery of damages for wrongful detention would, however, preclude the recovery of interest. The depositor then may recover damages for the wrongful detention of the property when the amount of damages exceeds the interest on the value of the property, inasmuch as the latter measure then would not furnish adequate compensation for the wrongful detention [Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 776, 778-779, 323 P.2d 584] .

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

Venue of an action to obtain possession of personal property is not specifically provided for and would generally be governed by that part of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) which states that "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by law and subject to the power of the court to transfer actions or proceedings as provided in this title, the superior court in the county where the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action is the proper court for the trial of the action." If, in addition to seeking possession of property, an action seeks recovery for injury to the property, either the county where the injury occurs or the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper county for trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a); see Spangenberg v. Spangenberg (1932) 123 Cal. App. 387, 391, 11 P.2d 408 (phrase "injury to ... property" in Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a) is limited to physical injury)]. If the action arises from a bailment primarily for personal, family or household use, the superior court in the county where the plaintiff in fact signed the contract, or where the plaintiff resided at the time the contract was entered into, or where the plaintiff resides at the commencement of the action, is the proper court for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b); Fontaine v. Superior Court (CashCall, Inc.) (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-840, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 (statute applies to action by consumer plaintiff, as well as to action against consumer, and if any defendant in consumer's action is individual, that is irrelevant to application of statute)]. If defendant is a corporation or association it may be sued in the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises, or the breach occurs, or where the principal place of business of the corporation or association is situated [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395.2, 395.5].

[6] Order to Compel Delivery

If it is established at trial that defendant is not the owner of the property and that plaintiff is entitled to its immediate possession, the court may compel defendant specifically to deliver the property to plaintiff [Civ. Code § 3380].

[7] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[10] Decisions

[a] Burden of Proof

Sufficient prima facie showing of liability is made under pleadings in case by proof of bailment and subsequent failure of bailee to make delivery of property on demand; burden is on defendant to explain the failure by showing that property was stolen or otherwise disposed of by others without negligence on defendant's part. Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Downey v. Martin Aircraft Serv. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 98-100, 214 P.2d 581

[b] Damages

Owner of property is allowed to estimate its worth whether or not he or she has any special knowledge of values; credit and weight to be given that evidence and its effect, as well as resolution of conflicts between testimony of owner as to value and that of expert witness, are for trier of fact [see Evid. Code § 800]. Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 853, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39

Depositor in claim and delivery action is permitted to recover damages for wrongful detention of property when amount exceeds interest on value of property, inasmuch as latter measure does not furnish adequate compensation for wrongful detention; both are not recoverable. Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 776, 778-779, 323 P.2d 584

Measure of damages in action for wrongful detention of personal property is reasonable rental value during wrongful detention. Crampton v. Clark (1934) 137 Cal. App. 392, 395, 30 P.2d 584

Plaintiffs were entitled to compensation for salary paid to employees during week their business was closed due to loss of property. Ruzanoff v. Retailers Credit Ass'n (1929) 97 Cal. App. 682, 687, 276 P. 156

Plaintiffs were entitled to compensation for usable value of property of which plaintiffs were deprived, regardless of whether they hired other property to take its place or not. Ruzanoff v. Retailers Credit Ass'n (1929) 97 Cal. App. 682, 687, 276 P. 156

[c] Depositor's Possessory Interest Sufficient

Depositor is not required to be owner of deposited property, and is permitted to maintain action against third person based on possessory interest if that interest is good as against all but true owner. Sperisen v. Heynemann (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 228, 230, 308 P.2d 436

[d] Statute of Limitations

Statute of limitations does not begin to run against person coming into possession of chattels permissively as bailee until it appears to owner that the holding was adverse. Estate of Rathgeb (1899) 125 Cal. 302, 306-307, 57 P. 1010 ; Niiya v. Goto (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 5 Cal. Rptr. 642

Statute of limitations is tolled until owner demands personal property and is refused possession of it where the property is legally taken. Niiya v. Goto (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 5 Cal. Rptr. 642

Statute of limitations begins to run at time of refusal where illegal taking consists of refusal by party in possession to surrender property on demand. Niiya v. Goto (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 682, 688, 5 Cal. Rptr. 642

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in actions to obtain possession of personal property by a depositor against a depositary and a third party.

The complaint alleges plaintiff's right to immediate and exclusive possession of the property (Paragraph 4) [see Sperisen v. Heynemann (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 228, 230, 308 P.2d 436] , defendants' possession of the property (Paragraph 5) [see Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 776, 778-779, 323 P.2d 584] , and plaintiff's demand for return of the property and defendants' refusal (Paragraph 6) [see Gordon H. Ball, Inc. v. Parreira (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 697, 704, 29 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Downey v. Martin Aircraft Serv. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 100, 214 P.2d 581] .

To permit an alternative judgment for the value of the property in the event possession cannot be obtained, the complaint contains an allegation of such value (Paragraph 6) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 627, 667]. It also contains an allegation of damages caused by the loss of use of the property (Paragraph 8), recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 667.

This complaint is for the recovery of damages for conversion by a depositor against a depositary through the failure to redeliver personal property on demand where the property has been left to be repaired.

The complaint alleges plaintiff's right to possession of certain identified personal property, the value of the property (Paragraph 3) [see United States Rubber Co. v. Union Bank & Trust Co. (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709, 15 Cal. Rptr. 385] , and defendant's conversion (Paragraph 6) [see Grosso v. Monfalcone, Inc. (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 405, 409-410, 56 P.2d 1266] .

Exemplary damages may be recovered in a conversion action, given the required showing of malice, fraud, or oppression [Civ. Code § 3294]. If the facts justify such an award, counsel will insert appropriate allegations as Paragraph 9 in this form. For forms for those allegations, see Ch. 177, Damages .

Wrongful conversion of personalty. Civ. Code § 3336

[5] Decisions

[a] Damages

Evidence of cost of property through testimony of owner as to its cost and value is admissible to prove value at time and place of conversion. Shook v. Beals (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 963, 973-974, 217 P.2d 56 ; Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 948, 185 P.2d 610

Measure of damages, in suit for unlawful conversion of personal property, is value of property at time of conversion, with interest from that time, or amount sufficient to indemnify party injured for loss which is natural, reasonable, and proximate result of wrongful act complained of and which proper degree of prudence on injured party's part would not have averted, together with fair compensation for time and money expended in pursuit of property [Civ. Code § 3336]. Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 947, 185 P.2d 610

[b] Demand for Return of Property

Demand by plaintiff for return of property is unnecessary when by act of conversion defendant has put it out of defendant's power to redeliver property in controversy or has evinced defendant's determination to refuse redeliver. Downey v. Martin Aircraft Serv. (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 94, 100, 214 P.2d 581

Proof of demand for return of property is useless and not required where answer of defendant denies plaintiff's right to possession thereof. Ruzanoff v. Retailers Credit Ass'n (1929) 97 Cal. App. 682, 685, 276 P. 156

[c] Nature of Action

Gist of action for conversion is wrongful interference with owner's right of dominion and possession of owner's property. Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610

Mere good faith of bailee in refusing to deliver goods to owner, on demand, is no defense to action of trover. Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 943, 946, 185 P.2d 610

Period of time and circumstances which will constitute conversion of property wrongfully withheld from owner are largely questions of fact for determination of court or jury. Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 532, 536, 294 P. 436

[d] Statute of Limitations

Statute of limitations begins to run at time bailee is shown to have done some act implying exercise or assumption of title, or of dominion over property, or some act inconsistent with plaintiff's right of ownership, or in repudiation of that right. Niiya v. Goto (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 682, 690, 5 Cal. Rptr. 642

§ 93.213 Allegation--Damages for Loss of Use

[1] FORM Allegation--Damages for Loss of Use

During the wrongful detention of the aforementioned personal property, and as a result of that wrongful detention, plaintiff has suffered the loss of the use and enjoyment of that personal property, the reasonable value of which use is approximately $_____ per day, and thus has suffered damages to date in the amount of $_____.

This allegation of loss of use is to be used either in complaints for conversion or complaints for the recovery of the possession of personal property by a depositor against a depositary where there has been a failure to redeliver the property on demand. Recovery of damages for loss of use may be obtained where the amount thereof exceeds the amount recoverable as interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) [Guerin v. Kirst (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 402, 414, 202 P.2d 10 ; Helmick v. Ritchie (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 776, 778-779, 323 P.2d 584] .

Damages for loss of use are not warranted when there is no evidence that the plaintiff had been deprived of any use that he or she otherwise would have made of the property during the time of its wrongful detention [Metz v. Soares (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1258, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743] . For example, it was held in one case that the trial court correctly instructed the jury that to receive damages for loss of use, plaintiff would have to prove loss of use for a specified time due to the fault of the defendant. The plaintiff in that case failed to meet this burden because he did not prove use of the car in question at any ascertainable time for five years before he entrusted it to defendant, and did not prove that he had even wanted to use the car during the four years it sat in defendant's shop [Metz v. Soares (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1258, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743] .

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST COUNT

[1. Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 93.211, Paragraph 1.]

[3. At all times herein mentioned _____ (names of defendant depositary's employees) were the agents of defendant and in doing the things hereinafter alleged were acting in the scope of such agency and with the permission and consent of their employer.]

4. At all times herein mentioned plaintiff was the owner of a _____ [article of personal property lost, e.g., a diamond pin] of the reasonable value of $_____.

5. At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was in lawful possession of the _____ [e.g., diamond pin] and was entitled to possession thereof.

6. On or about _____ [date], at the premises of _____ [name of defendant depositary], in _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant depositary's employees wrongfully took, converted, removed, and misplaced the _____ [e.g., diamond pin] of plaintiff. The taking was without the consent or permission, express or implied, of plaintiff, and although plaintiff has made demand therefor of defendant, defendant has failed to return or deliver the _____ [e.g., diamond pin] as a proximate result of which _____ [allege injuries for the loss which are the natural, reasonable, and proximate result of the conversion and which a proper degree of prudence on plaintiff's part would not have averted], all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

7. Plaintiff has heretofore made demand for payment of damages from defendant, but no part thereof has been paid.

[8. Between the time of defendant's conversion of the above mentioned _____ (e.g., diamond pin) to its own use and the filing of this action, plaintiff _____ (describe time and money properly spent in pursuit of the converted property), all to plaintiff's further damage in the sum of $_____.]

SECOND COUNT

1. Plaintiff incorporates Paragraphs 1 through 5 of the First Count as though set forth fully herein.

2. On or about _____ [date], at the premises of defendant, in _____ [city], _____ County, California, defendant's employees carelessly and negligently took, removed, and misplaced the _____ [e.g., diamond pin] of plaintiff. Defendant's employees so carelessly and negligently conducted themselves with respect to the _____ [e.g., pin], and so negligently and carelessly took charge and custody of the _____ [e.g., pin], that as a proximate result of their negligence and the negligence and carelessness of defendant, it was lost [and stolen], all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

THIRD COUNT

1. Plaintiff incorporates Paragraphs 1 through 5 of the First Count as though set forth fully herein.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff, who was at the time and place herein mentioned a customer of defendant, delivered for a consideration the _____ [e.g., diamond pin] into the custody and possession of defendant. Defendant was to safely and securely keep the _____ [e.g., pin] and redeliver it to plaintiff when so requested, which defendant then and there promised and undertook to do.

3. Although plaintiff has made demand therefor, defendant has failed to deliver to plaintiff the _____ [ e.g., pin], all to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____.

4. Plaintiff has heretofore made demand to defendant for payment of these damages from defendant, but no part thereof has been paid.

[5. At the time plaintiff deposited the _____ (e.g., diamond pin) it was made known to defendant-depositary's employees that it was a _____ (specify how object deposited directly affected the self-esteem or tender feelings of plaintiff, e.g., cherished memento of plaintiff's dead husband).]

[6. As a proximate result of the loss of the _____ (e.g., diamond pin), plaintiff was injured in _____ (his or her) health, strength, and activity, sustaining bodily injuries and shock and injury to _____ (his or her) nervous system, which have caused and will cause great mental and physical pain and suffering, all to _____ (his or her) damage.]

7. [Allegation of damages for loss of use. See § 93.213.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant as follows:

On the First Count:

1. For the value of the property converted in the sum of $_____.

2. For interest at _____ percent on the foregoing sum, pursuant to Section 3336 of the Civil Code, from and after _____ [date].

[3. For damages for time and money expended in pursuit of the converted property in the sum of $_____.]

On the Second Count:

4. For general damages according to proof.

On the Third Count:

5. For compensatory damages in the sum of $_____.

[6. For damages for physical and mental pain and suffering according to proof.]

[7. For damages caused by the loss of use of the property in the sum of $_____.]

On all counts:

8. For costs of suit herein incurred.

9. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in the recovery of damages by a depositor against a depositary based on theories of conversion, negligence, and breach of the bailment contract where a department store and its employees have lost a depositor-shopper's personal property.

[3] Contract Damages

Whenever the terms of a contract relate to matters which directly concern the comfort, happiness, or personal welfare of one of the parties, or the subject matter of which directly affects or moves the affection, self-esteem, or tender feelings of that party, the party may recover damages for physical suffering or illness proximately caused by its breach. In its application, this rule permits recovery of damages for mental suffering [Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 851, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39] . Where the facts warrant such recovery, Paragraphs 5 and 6 should be included in the Third Count, along with the relevant prayers in the prayer for relief.

[4] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

[5] Decisions

Jury is entitled to include in damages recoverable for loss of rings by reason of defendant bailee's breach of bailment contract damages for physical suffering or illness proximately resulting from such loss, in addition to damages sustained because of actual loss. Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 852, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39

Burden is on plaintiff to prove making of valid contract of bailment between parties, delivery of property to bailee under contract, and acceptance by bailee when existence of contract of bailment is in issue. H.S. Crocker Co., Inc. v. McFaddin (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 639, 647, 307 P.2d 429

Retailer implicitly invites public to enter store and do business, and retailer must exercise reasonable care for protection of property that customer properly brings there and necessarily lays aside while doing business pursuant to invitation. Fuller v. I. Magnin & Co. (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 517, 522, 232 P.2d 36 (notice that articles of special value are present as essential for recovery of their full value)

Theft of goods after termination of bailment furnishes no excuse for unwarranted and wrongful delay in restoring property to owner after adequate demand. Wolfe v. Willard H. George, Inc. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 532, 536, 294 P. 436

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense--Property Withheld From Plaintiff Depositor to Enforce Repairman's Lien [Civ. Code § 3051]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES:

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff brought the _____ [name of object] to the repair shop operated by defendant and at that time and place plaintiff ordered certain work and labor to be performed and certain materials to be furnished in repairing the _____ [name of object]; the work, labor, and materials are set forth in the copy of the repair order attached as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference.

2. On or about _____ [date], defendant presented to plaintiff a demand for $_____ for the work, as set forth in Exhibit A herein, which is a reasonable sum for the work, labor, and materials, and plaintiff has failed and refused to pay that bill.

3. Defendant claims a lien on _____ [name of object] in the amount of $_____ for the repairs made at the request of plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint by a depositor based on the depositary's failure to redeliver the object deposited. A depositary is not required to deliver property deposited on demand when the depositary has a lien on the property [Civ. Code § 1822]. For a more complete discussion, see § 93.96.

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Capacity and residence of defendants. See § 93.211, Paragraphs 1 and 2.]

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 93.210, Paragraph 2.]

3. On _____ [date], plaintiff was a _____ [specify, e.g., painter] employed by _____ [name], and was directed and instructed by him/her to perform certain duties as a _____ [specify, e.g., painter] at the premises at _____ [street address],

4. On or within a few days prior to _____ [date], defendants, and each of them, carelessly and negligently constructed and erected an unsafe, defective, and dangerous scaffold or rolling stage. Plaintiff was ignorant of all those facts.

5. Among other things, defendants did not install, provide, or furnish any hand rails or guard rails with or on the open sides or ends of the scaffold or rolling stage to protect plaintiff or other employees working thereon from the danger of falling.

6. On or immediately prior to _____ [date], defendants, for valuable consideration, did lease, rent, hire, and deliver possession of the scaffold or rolling stage to plaintiff's employer. Defendants then knew of the dangerous and unsafe condition thereof, and likewise knew that plaintiff's employer leased, rented, hired, and took possession of the scaffold or rolling stage for the purpose of using and furnishing the same to plaintiff and other employees and instructing and directing the employees to perform certain painting duties while standing on the elevated platform of the scaffold or rolling stage. On _____ [date], plaintiff's employer directed and instructed him/her to go on the elevated platform of the scaffold or rolling stage and perform certain painting duties thereon. Plaintiff did go on the elevated platform of the scaffold or rolling stage and commenced and undertook to perform his/her duties as a painter thereon.

7. While plaintiff was so engaged and was necessarily giving close attention to his/her _____ [specify, e.g., painting] work and duties, and as a proximate result of the unsafe, defective, and dangerous condition of the scaffold or rolling stage, and of the complete lack of any hand rails or guard rails on the open sides or ends thereof, plaintiff fell from the elevated platform of the scaffold or rolling stage to the concrete floor below.

8. As a proximate result of this fall and of the acts and omissions of the defendants, and each of them, plaintiff sustained the following injuries: _____ [describe]. Plaintiff still continues to suffer the effects of the injuries and is informed and believes and on that ground alleges that he/she will have permanent disability as a result thereof and will continue for an indefinite period to suffer pain and discomfort as a result thereof.

9. As a proximate result of this fall, of the acts and omissions of defendants, and of the injuries suffered by plaintiff, plaintiff was compelled to and did hire physicians and surgeons to examine, treat, and care for him/her and incurred medical and incidental expenses.

10. As a proximate result of this fall and of the acts and omissions of defendants alleged above, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual occupation as a _____ [specify, e.g., painter], and plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that he/she will thereby be prevented from attending to his/her usual occupation for a period in the future.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For damages for past and future medical expenses according to proof;

3. For damages for past and future loss of earnings according to proof;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This general complaint is for use by a third party against bailors for damages for personal injuries caused by the negligence of the bailors in letting a defective scaffold.

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought, regardless of the nature of the case or whether it is a limited civil case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[3] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[Caption. See § 93.260.]

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Capacity and residence of defendants. See § 93.211, Paragraphs 1, 2.]

3. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of letter] was the owner of a certain horse trailer bearing California License No. _____.

4. Prior to that date defendant _____ [name of letter] loaned, bailed, and delivered the possession and control of the horse trailer to defendant _____ [name of hirer] for use as a vehicle on which to load and transport horses. The loan, bailment, and delivery was made by defendant _____ [name of letter], with the intent to sell the trailer to defendant _____ [name of hirer] and as an inducement to him/her to buy the same.

5. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of hirer] requested plaintiff's help in loading a horse into and on the trailer.

6. Then and there plaintiff and defendant _____ [name of hirer] proceeded to load the horse into and on the trailer.

7. The trailer and its chains, rings, and other attachments for holding and fastening horses were in a worn, weakened, dilapidated, and defective condition, and were then unsafe and dangerous for use in loading and transporting horses. Defendants and each of them knew, or would have known by making a reasonable inspection thereof, of the unsafe and dangerous condition of the trailer. Defendants failed and neglected to keep and maintain the trailer in a fit condition for use in loading and transporting horses thereon; failed and neglected to warn or advise plaintiff of the unsafe and dangerous condition of the trailer; and negligently and carelessly requested and invited plaintiff to use the trailer on the implied representations of each of the defendants that the trailer was in a safe and fit condition to load the horse thereon and was a safe place to work, which representations were false and untrue.

8. As a proximate result of the negligence and carelessness of defendants, and each of them, a metal tie ring failed and gave way, and a chain attached thereto and to the horse became detached, loose, and pulled away from the frame of the trailer. As a proximate result thereof, plaintiff was _____ [describe injuries] and suffered physical and mental shock and pain, bruises, and great mental suffering, all to plaintiff's damage.

9. By reason of the foregoing, plaintiff has been, and will permanently be, hampered, handicapped, and restricted in practicing his/her profession and has suffered a loss of earning capacity, all to plaintiff's further damage.

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business in _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence], and engaged in the business of renting passenger vehicles to the public.

[3. Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 93.210, Paragraph 3.]

4. On _____ [date], in _____ [specify locality], California, plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit "A" and incorporated by reference, for the rental of a _____ [specify type of car, e.g., 2005 Eagle station wagon, California vehicle registration number RENTCO 3].

[5. Under the terms of the agreement, _____ (specify any terms relevant to the conflict at issue, e.g., plaintiff is not liable for loss due to theft of the rented vehicle unless he/she failed to exercise ordinary care while he/she was in possession of the vehicle).]

6. At approximately _____ [time] on _____ [date], _____ [state facts of incident that gave rise to controversy, e.g., when the rented vehicle was parked in the parking lot of the Sleep Eze Motel on Route 1 in Santa Cruz, California, and while plaintiff had the ignition keys in plaintiff's possession in the motel room, person or persons unknown stole the rented vehicle. Plaintiff did not discover that the rented vehicle had been stolen until approximately 7:30 A.M. the next morning. Plaintiff immediately notified the local police and defendant of the theft and has cooperated with the local police and sheriff's department and with defendant in providing information concerning the theft].

7. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant concerning their respective rights and duties in that plaintiff contends that _____ [state plaintiff's contentions, e.g., he/she exercised ordinary care while in possession of the vehicle, and he/she is in no way liable to defendant for any loss or damage sustained by it on account of the theft of the rented vehicle], whereas defendant disputes plaintiff's contention and contends that _____ [state defendant's contentions, e. g., plaintiff aided and abetted the thief by leaving the right rear door of the rented vehicle unlocked and is therefore liable to defendant for the market value of the vehicle].

8. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her rights and duties, and a declaration that _____ [specify, e.g., he/she is not liable to defendant in any manner or for any amount on account of the theft].

9. A judicial determination is necessary and appropriate at this time under the circumstances in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her rights and duties [under the rental agreement]. [_____ (Specify additional financial or other burden being caused to plaintiff by the unsettled state of affairs, e.g., If plaintiff is liable, plaintiff must notify his/her own insurer as soon as possible and is in danger of having his/her insurer deny coverage because of the lapse of time occurring between the date of the theft and the time of a determination of whether plaintiff is liable).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For a declaration that _____ [state determination the court is requested to render, e.g., he/she is in no way liable to defendant for any loss or damage sustained by it on account of the theft of the rented vehicle];

2. For his/her reasonable attorney's fees;

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a renter of a passenger vehicle to obtain declaratory relief against the rental company [see Civ. Code § 1936(q) (cause of action for damages and appropriate equitable relief); Code Civ. Proc. § 1060 (declaratory relief)].

This complaint may be modified for use by any other authorized driver by inclusion of an appropriate allegation setting forth that plaintiff's status as an authorized driver [see Civ. Code § 1936(a)(3) (see § 93.101[3]); see also Civ. Code § 1936(d) (see § 93.103)].

[3] Allegations

This form alleges:

- Defendant's capacity, residence, and status as a passenger vehicle rental company (Paragraph 1) [see Civ. Code § 1936(a)(1)].
- The rental agreement between the parties and the vehicle to which it relates (Paragraph 4).
- The incident giving rise the controversy (Paragraph 6).
- The existence of the controversy and respective contentions of the parties (Paragraph 7).
- The declaration desired by plaintiff (Paragraph 8).
- An allegation that such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time (Paragraph 9).

Financial or other burdens indicative of the necessity for immediate determination should also be alleged (Paragraph 9) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief].

The example used in the form relates to a controversy regarding interpretation of statutory language. If the controversy involves interpretation or application of contract language, optional Paragraph 5 should be used to specify the contract provision that is the basis of the dispute.

[4] Venue

This form bases venue on defendant's residence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 392 et seq.], but venue may also be proper at other places--for instance, in the county in which the contract was signed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

An action by the rental company against the renter for loss due to theft of the vehicle must be filed in the county where the renter resides, or, if the renter does not reside in California, in the jurisdiction where the renter resides [Civ. Code § 1936(p)].

[5] Additional Relief

Additional allegations or causes of action may be added to seek recovery of damages [see Civ. Code § 1936(q); see also Ch. 177, Damages] or injunctive relief [see Ch. 303, Injunctions].

[3] Allegations

This form alleges:

- Defendant's capacity, residence, and status as a passenger vehicle rental company (Paragraph 1).
- The rental agreement between the parties and the vehicle to which it relates (Paragraph 4).
- Fact showing that the case is subject to Civ. Code § 1936.05 (Paragraph 5).
- The statutory violation giving rise to the controversy (Paragraph 6).
- The existence of the controversy and respective contentions of the parties (Paragraph 7).
- The declaration desired by plaintiff (Paragraph 8).
- An allegation that such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time (Paragraph 9).

[4] Unbundled Charges in Business Rental

A car-rental company may, in connection with the qualified business rental of a passenger vehicle to a business renter of a business program sponsor under the sponsor's business program, do both of the following:

- Separately quote additional charges for the rental if, at the time the quote is provided, the person receiving the quote is also provided a good faith estimate of the total of all charges for the entire rental [Civ. Code § 1936.05(b)(1)].
- Separately impose additional charges for the rental if the rental contract, or another document provided to the business renter at the time and place the rental commences, clearly and conspicuously discloses the total of all charges for the entire rental, exclusive of charges that cannot be determined at the time the rental commences [Civ. Code § 1936.05(b)(2)].

The estimate may exclude mileage charges and charges for optional items and services that cannot be determined before completing the reservation based on the information provided by the renter [Civ. Code § 1936.05(b)(1)].

A renter may bring an action against a rental company for the recovery of damages and appropriate equitable relief for a violation of Civ. Code § 1936.05. The prevailing party is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Civ. Code § 1936.05(c)].

For further discussion, see § 93.106[4].

[a] Qualified Business Rental

"Qualified business rental" under a business program established for a business program sponsor by a rental company means the rental of a passenger vehicle under the business program if either of the following conditions is satisfied [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(5)]:

- In the 12-month period ending on the date of the rental or in the calendar year immediately preceding the year in which the rental occurs, the rentals under all business programs established by the rental company for the business program sponsor and its affiliates produced gross rental revenues in excess of $25,000.

- The rental company in good faith estimates that rentals under all the business programs established by the rental company for the business program sponsor and its affiliates will produce gross rental revenues in excess of $25,000 in the 12-month period commencing with the date of the rental or in the calendar year in which the rental occurs.

The rental company has the burden of establishing by objectively verifiable evidence that the rental was a qualified business rental [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(5)].

[b] Business Program Sponsor

"Business program sponsor" means a legal entity, other than a natural person, that is a corporation, limited liability company, or partnership [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(3)].

[c] Business Program

"Business program" means either of the following [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(2)]:

- A contract between a rental company and a business program sponsor that has established the per-period base rental rate, and any other material terms relating to additional charges, on which the rental company will rent passenger vehicles to persons authorized by the sponsor.

- A plan, program, or other arrangement established by a rental company at the request of, or with the consent of, a business program sponsor under which the rental company offers to rent passenger vehicles to persons authorized by the sponsor at per-period base rental rates, and any other material terms relating to additional charges, that are not the same as those generally offered by the rental company to the public.

[d] Business Renter

"Business renter" means, for any business program sponsor, a person who is authorized by the sponsor, through the use of an identifying number or program name or code, to enter into a rental contract under the sponsor's business program [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(4)].

In no case does the term "business renter" include a person renting as any of the following [Civ. Code § 1936.05(a)(4)]:

- A nonemployee member of a not-for-profit organization.

- The purchaser of a voucher or other prepaid rental arrangement from a person, including a tour operator, engaged in the business of reselling those vouchers or prepaid rental arrangements to the general public.

- An individual whose car rental is eligible for reimbursement in whole or in part as a result of the individual's being insured or being provided coverage under a policy of insurance issued by an insurance company.

- An individual whose car rental is eligible for reimbursement in whole or in part as a result of the individual's purchasing passenger vehicle repair services from a person licensed to perform such services.

§ 94.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter provides an overview of federal bankruptcy law to an attorney dealing with a California state court matter who is confronted by a federal bankruptcy issue. Typical issues include determining the dischargeability of a debt, seeking an abstention, withdrawal, or removal action, or seeking relief from the Bankruptcy Code's stay of a pending state court action. This chapter is not intended as a guide for filing a petition in bankruptcy, or a guide for use in representing a creditor in a bankruptcy proceeding [see § 94.02].

The Legal Background provides an overview of federal bankruptcy law, focusing on the following:

- Actions related to the dischargeability of debts;
- Abstention, withdrawal, and removal actions; and
- The effect of the bankruptcy stay of creditor actions and the proceeding to obtain relief from the stay.

The Legal Background also provides significant definitions under the Bankruptcy Code, as well as a summary of the various types of bankruptcy proceedings.

The forms include state and federal forms relating to these types of actions, including forms related to lien avoidance on exempt property [§ 94.80 et seq.], forms pertaining to relief from the bankruptcy stay [§ 94.100 et seq.], forms relating to removal of an action from state court to federal bankruptcy court [§ 94.110 et seq.], a form for moving for abstention [§ 94.112], and forms for use in determining the dischargeability of a debt [§ 94.120 et seq.]

§ 94.10 Applicable Law in Bankruptcy Cases

[1] Bankruptcy Code and Related Federal Law

Bankruptcy cases are governed largely by the following:

- The Bankruptcy Code: Title 11 of the United States Code [see U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, Cl. 4 (authority to adopt uniform federal bankruptcy law)].

- Bankruptcy Rules and Forms: The Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Official Forms, promulgated by the Supreme Court, Judicial Conference of the United States, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2075.

- Local Bankruptcy Rules and Forms: Local rules must be consistent with the Bankruptcy Rules and Forms and may not prohibit or limit the use of the Official Forms [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9029]. Local bankruptcy rules may require the use of local forms.

NOTE:
This chapter incorporates changes made by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23], which made substantial changes to the Bankruptcy Code and other bankruptcy-related statutes, effective October 17, 2005 (or earlier, in a few cases) [Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(a), (b)(2), 119 Stat. 23]. Some of the significant changes in bankruptcy law affecting individuals are:

- Introduction of measures intended to prevent abusive filing by individuals.

- Suppression of selected abusive creditor practices.

- Enhancement of the survivability of debts for family support.

- Increased protection for retirement savings, education savings, and personal information.

- Regulation of businesses offering debt-relief services.

- Extension of nondischargeability for drunk-driving debts, to cover also debts for personal injury arising from piloting a boat or an airplane while intoxicated.

In general, these changes apply to bankruptcy cases filed after October 17, 2005, while cases filed before that date are governed by the former bankruptcy law [Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(b)(1), 119 Stat. 23]. Attorneys using this chapter with respect to a bankruptcy case filed before October 17, 2005, should verify that the relevant discussion in this chapter is applicable to these earlier cases. For example, § 94.30[3][a] contains discussion of the expanded exceptions and limitations to the general rule governing stay of other proceedings that were introduced by the 2005 legislation.

Bankruptcy cases are also governed by a significant body of case law. There are several levels of case precedent:

- United States Supreme Court precedent, which binds all courts located within the United States [see In re Rheuban (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991) 24 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 2077, 2082, 128 B.R. 551, 554, 21 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1357] .

- Federal circuit court of appeals precedent, which binds all bankruptcy courts and district courts within the specific federal circuit [see In re Rheuban (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991) 24 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 2077, 2082, 128 B.R. 551, 555, 21 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1357] .

- Bankruptcy appellate panel precedent, which does not bind federal district courts within the federal circuit within which the panel sits [Bank of Maui v. Estate Analysis (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 470, 472 ; In re S.F. Drake Hotel Assocs. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 147 B.R. 538, 539] . The binding effect of B.A.P. decisions on bankruptcy courts within the Ninth Circuit is somewhat unclear [see Coyne v. Westinghouse Credit Corp. (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1993) 149 B.R. 614, 619 (B.A.P. decisions binding on bankruptcy courts); but see In re Junes (Bankr. D. Or. 1987) 17 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1243, 1245, 76 B.R. 795, 797 , aff'd, 99 B.R. 978 (9th Cir. 1989) (B.A.P. decisions not binding)].

- Federal district court precedent, which generally is considered nonbinding on other federal district judges or bankruptcy judges in a multi-judge district [see In re Rheuban (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1991) 24 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 2077, 2082-2083, 128 B.R. 551, 555, 21 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1357 ; In re Windsor Communications Group (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) 15 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1180, 1188-1189, 67 B.R. 692, 698-700] . Note, however, that judges of the same district court customarily follow a previous decision of a fellow judge on the same question except in unusual or exceptional circumstances [Buna v. Pac. Far E. Line, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1977) 441 F. Supp. 1360, 1365] .

- Bankruptcy court precedent, which generally is considered nonbinding on other district judges or bankruptcy judges in a multi-judge district.

- State case law precedent, which may be persuasive when bankruptcy law refers to state law--for example, in the area of exemptions from the bankruptcy estate [see, e.g., Rousey v. Jacoway (2005) 544 U.S. 320, 325-326, 125 S. Ct. 1561, 161 L. Ed. 2d 563 (reaffirming dictum in 1992 opinion and holding that tax-qualified IRA can be exempted from bankruptcy estate pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(10)(E)); Farrar v. McKown (In re McKown) (9th Cir. 2000) 203 F.3d 1188, 1190 (tax-qualified IRA can be selected for exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 703.140(b)(10)(E) because that statute tracks 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(10)(E))].

In addition, jurisdictional doctrines in federal case law may be applicable. For instance, in the Ninth Circuit (as in at least five other circuits), a party must first obtain leave of the bankruptcy court before initiating an action in another forum against a bankruptcy trustee, or another officer appointed by the bankruptcy court, for acts done in that officer's official capacity [Beck v. Fort James Corp. (In re Crown Vantage, Inc.) (9th Cir. 2005) 421 F.3d 963, 970-971 ; but see 28 U.S.C. § 959(a) (limited exception to this rule, respecting trustee's day-to-day operation of debtor's business)]. This rule is an extension of the Barton doctrine--which holds that before suit can be brought against a receiver, "leave of the court by which he was appointed must be obtained," thus limiting the subject matter jurisdiction of any other court [see Barton v. Barbour (1881) 104 U.S. 126, 127, 26 L. Ed. 672] --to the bankruptcy context.

[2] Preemption of State Law

The Bankruptcy Code preempts all state laws that conflict with the Code [National Collection Agency, Inc. v. Trahan (9th Cir. 1980) 624 F.2d 906, 907] . States may not pass or enforce laws to interfere with or complement the Bankruptcy Code or to provide additional or auxiliary regulations [International Shoe Co. v. Pinkus (1929) 278 U.S. 261, 263-265, 49 S. Ct. 108, 73 L. Ed. 318] . Preemption even extends to a creditor's tort claims for malicious prosecution and abuse of process against a bankrupt debtor and the debtor's lawyer who started an adversary proceeding in bankruptcy court against the creditor [Saks v. Parilla, Hubbard & Militzok (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 565, 574, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 120 ; Pauletto v. Reliance Ins. Co. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 597, 605-606, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; accord Ross v. Universal Studios Credit Union (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 537, 539, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712 ; but see Satten v. Webb (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 365, 383-386, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 234, 249-250 (cases disallowing malicious prosecution state court actions have involved underlying proceedings that were authorized bankruptcy proceedings, that is, authorized by federal law in bankruptcy area; but if underlying proceeding is not of that type, as when it is common law fraud or tort action, preemption is not required)].

The test of a state law's invalidity includes consideration of its impact, if any, to frustrate the objectives of the Bankruptcy Code or to deny debtors the benefits of the Code [see In re Anchorage Int'l Inn, Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 718 F.2d 1446, 1449-1452 ; In re Leslie (9th Cir. 1975) 520 F.2d 761, 762 (trustee takes escrow proceeds free of creditors' liens under state law)].

One significant area in which state law is expressly permitted to apply is in the determination of exemptions, or property that may be exempted from the bankruptcy estate [11 U.S.C. § 522]. There are many other areas in which substantive state law applies in bankruptcy; for example, property rights are adjudicated under state law, since the Bankruptcy Code has no independent property rights provisions.

[3] Bankruptcy Reform Acts

The amendments made by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1994, effective October 22, 1994, generally do not apply to cases commenced under the Bankruptcy Code before that date [Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 702(b)(1); but see Pub. L. No. 103-394, § 702(b)(2) (exceptions)].

The amendments made by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, enacted April 20, 2005, generally take effect 180 days after the date of enactment and do not apply to cases commenced under the Bankruptcy Code before that effective date [Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(a), (b)(1)]. Certain amendments limiting the use of bankruptcy (for the purpose of preventing abuse) apply to cases commenced on or after the date of enactment [see Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1501(a), (b)(2)].

§ 94.11 Significant Bankruptcy Code Definitions

[1] "After Notice and Hearing"

"After notice and hearing" means notice and an opportunity for a hearing, not notice and an actual hearing. No hearing is required if no party in interest requests one after having received notice, or if the court authorizes action when there is not time for a hearing, as when sale or disposition of perishable collateral is involved [11 U.S.C. § 102(1)].

Notices given in bankruptcy cases must conform to the detailed requirements set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 342. Under 2005 amendments, a creditor may designate an address to be used by all bankruptcy courts. If notice is not given to that address, then notice is not effective until brought to the attention of the creditor [11 U.S.C. § 342(f), (g)].

[2] "Claim"

"Claim" means either of the following [11 U.S.C. § 101(5)]:

- A right to payment, whether or not that right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured, or unsecured.

- A right to an equitable remedy for breach of performance if that breach givers rise to a right to payment, whether or not that right to an equitable remedy is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, secured, or unsecured.

[3] "Community Claim"

A "community claim" is one that arose before the commencement of the case and for which community property of the debtor or the debtor's spouse is liable, even if no community property actually exists at the commencement of the case [

11 U.S.C. §§ 101(7), 541(a)(2)].

A "creditor" is an entity that has one of the following [11 U.S.C. § 101(10); see 11 U.S.C. §§ 301, 302(a)]:

- A claim against the debtor that arose at or before the time of the order for relief concerning the debtor (which is the same time as the filing of the petition in a voluntary case).
- A claim against the estate arising under any of the following code sections:
  - 11 U.S.C. § 348(d) (conversion of case).
  - 11 U.S.C. § 502(f) (involuntary case).
  - 11 U.S.C. § 502(g) (rejection of executory lease or contract).
  - 11 U.S.C. § 502(h) (recovery of property including avoidances of preferential transfers and setoffs).
  - 11 U.S.C. § 502(i) (post-petition tax claims).
- A community claim.

[5] "Debt" and "Consumer Debt"

"Debt" means liability on a claim [11 U.S.C. § 101(12)]. A "consumer debt" is a debt incurred by an individual primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose [11 U.S.C. § 101(8)].

A restitution obligation imposed as a condition of probation in a state criminal proceeding is a "debt" under 11 U.S.C. § 101(12) [Pennsylvania Dep't of Pub. Welfare v. Davenport (1990) 495 U.S. 552, 564, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588 ; but see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(4) (debt for restitution, or criminal fine, included in sentence for debtor's commission of crime is not dischargeable)]. The state, not the crime victim, is the holder of the claim represented by the restitution order [In re Heincy (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1986) 14 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 870, 874-875, 58 B.R. 930, 934-935 , rev'd on other grounds, 858 F.2d 548 (9th Cir. 1988)].

[6] "Debtor"

A "debtor" is a person (that is, an individual, partnership, or corporation) or a municipality concerning which a case has been commenced under the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 101(13); see 11 U.S.C. § 101(41) (defining "person")].

[7] "Debtor in Possession"

In a Chapter 11 case, "debtor in possession" means the debtor, except when a trustee has qualified under 11 U.S.C. § 322 [11 U.S.C. § 1101(1)]. Normally in a Chapter 11 case, no trustee will be appointed, and the debtor in possession will continue to operate the business as "debtor in possession" [see 11 U.S.C. § 1108]. A trustee may be appointed, however, in the event of fraud or mismanagement by the debtor in possession or when it is in the best interest of creditors, equity security holders, and other interests of the estate [11 U.S.C. § 1104(a); see 11 U.S.C. § 1104(e) (when United States trustee is required to move for appointment of trustee)].

A debtor in possession has substantially the same the rights, powers, and duties as a trustee [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 1107(a), 1203; see also 11 U.S.C. § 1116 (duties of trustee or debtor in possession in small business cases)].

[8] "Order for Relief"

In a bankruptcy case initiated voluntarily by a debtor, the order for relief is the filed bankruptcy petition [11 U.S.C. §§ 102(6), 301(b), 302(a)].

In an involuntary case commenced against a debtor by petitioning creditors, the order for relief is an order entered by the court, after the creditor's petition is filed [see 11 U.S.C. § 303(h)].

[9] "Proceeding" or "Case"

The term "bankruptcy case" is used to refer to the entire legal action in bankruptcy initiated by the filing of the bankruptcy petition. The term "proceeding," in contrast, is used to refer to any subaction within the case, including adversary proceedings that may raise a disputed or litigated matter (for example, a motion for relief from the bankruptcy stay or a complaint to determine nondischargeability).

9-94 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 94.20

§ 94.20 Overview of Debtor Remedies Under the Bankruptcy Code

[1] Summary of Available Remedies: Chapters 7, 11, 12, 13

The Bankruptcy Code provides the following specific remedies, which are commonly referred to by the code chapter numbers in which they are set out:

- Under Chapter 7 [11 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.]: liquidation and distribution of a debtor's current non-exempt assets [see [3], below].

- Under Chapter 11 [11 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.]: reorganization of a debtor [see [5], below].

- Under Chapter 12 [11 U.S.C. § 1201 et seq.]: debt adjustment for a family farmer with a regular annual income or a family fisherman with a regular annual income [see [6], below].

- Under Chapter 13 [11 U.S.C. § 1301 et seq.]: debt adjustment for individuals with a regular income [see [4], below].

Although each remedy has distinct features, they are all designed to provide an honest debtor with a new start, unhampered by preexisting debt [see Perez v. Campbell (1971) 402 U.S. 637, 648, 91 S. Ct. 1704, 29 L. Ed. 2d 233] , and to provide a ratable distribution among creditors of the debtor's assets, affording creditors an opportunity to realize on the debtor's indebtedness [see Reading Co. v. Brown (1968) 391 U.S. 471, 476-477, 88 S. Ct. 1759, 20 L. Ed. 2d 751] .

PRACTICE TIP:
Under the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code there are numerous time traps for the unwary, and several new hoops for the debtor to jump through. For example, if the debtor fails timely to provide a copy of the current tax return, the case is subject to automatic dismissal, unless the debtor demonstrates that the failure to do so was due to circumstances beyond the debtor's control [11 U.S.C. § 521(e)(2)]. Similarly, a debtor is not entitled to a discharge under Chapter 13 if he or she is delinquent in any post-petition domestic support obligation [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)]. Attorneys handling bankruptcy matters should be prepared to help the client make sure that every hoop is jumped through, so that the debtor obtains a discharge. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[2] General Provisions Restricting Availability of Bankruptcy Remedies

[a] Debtor's Residence, Domicile, or Place of Business

A debtor must be one of the following in order to file under any chapter of the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 109(a)]:

- A person who resides in the United States.
- A person who has a domicile in the United States.
- A person who has property in the United States.
- A person who has a place of business in the United States.
- A municipality.

For purposes of the foregoing, a "person" is an individual, partnership, or corporation, but not a governmental unit [11 U.S.C. § 101(41)].

[b] Recent Prior Filing by Debtor

No individual may be a debtor under any chapter of the Bankruptcy Code if he or she was a debtor in a bankruptcy case within the preceding 180 days and either of the following occurred [11 U.S.C. § 109(g)]:

- The court dismissed the prior case for the debtor's willful failure to abide by orders of the court, or to appear before the court in proper prosecution of the case.
- The debtor requested and obtained a voluntary dismissal of the prior case after a creditor requested relief from the bankruptcy stay of creditor action.

The restriction under 11 U.S.C. § 109(g) covers two or more individuals who act as one for a common illegal purpose, such as family members who file multiple successive actions to obtain the benefit of a stay, without any intent to make repayments or reorganize. In such cases, a prior dismissed case brought by one individual may be imputed to the individual making the new filing [see In re Kinney (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1985) 13 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 957, 51 B.R. 840, 846 (construing similar predecessor statute)].

[c] Prerequisite Credit Counseling

Generally, an individual may not be a debtor under the Bankruptcy Code unless the individual, during the 180-day period preceding the date the individual filed the petition, has received from an approved nonprofit budget and credit counseling agency [see 11 U.S.C. § 111(a)] an individual or group briefing (including a briefing conducted by telephone or on the internet) that outlined the opportunities for available credit counseling and assisted the individual in performing a related budget analysis [11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(1)]. There are exceptions for debtors without reasonable access to such services, debtors who are unable to obtain such services after reasonable effort, and debtors in exigent circumstances (incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a military combat zone) [see 11 U.S.C. § 109(h)(2)-(4)].

[3] Chapter 7: Liquidation

[a] Nature of Chapter 7 Remedy

Chapter 7 permits an individual debtor to obtain a discharge of debts. The bankruptcy trustee liquidates the debtor's nonexempt assets and distributes the proceeds to the creditors. If the debtor complies with the conditions for receiving a Chapter 7 discharge, the debtor thereafter obtains a discharge of his or her obligation to pay any remaining debt that was included in the petition and that is not otherwise nondischargeable [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 507, 704, 726, 727].

[b] Persons Who May Proceed Under Chapter 7

Chapter 7, the most widely used of the bankruptcy remedies, may be used by the following [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 101(41), 109(b)]:

- Any individual (including an individual filing jointly with his or her spouse [see 11 U.S.C. § 302]).

- Partnerships and corporations, except railroads, insurance companies, and most financial institutions.

The 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code add a "means test" to the eligibility criteria to file under Chapter 7. If the debtor has primarily consumer debts [see § 94.11[5]; see also 11 U.S.C. § 101(8)], then the debtor is subject to the means test. The means test, in simplified form, is as follows [see 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)]:

- Compute the debtor's total income during the six months ending on the last day of the month before the month of filing. The Bankruptcy Code does not define "income" in this context [see 11 U.S.C. § 101 (definitions)], but the applicable statute does state that it is income "from all sources" and "without regard to whether such income is taxable income" [11 U.S.C. § 101(10A)(A)], and the total is to be adjusted as follows [11 U.S.C. § 101(10A)(B)]:

  - Include any amount paid by any entity other than the debtor (or, in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse) on a regular basis for the household expenses of the debtor or the debtor's dependents (and, in a joint case, the debtor's spouse if not otherwise a dependent); and

  - Exclude benefits received under the Social Security Act, payments to victims of war crimes or crimes against humanity on account of their status as victims of such crimes, and payments to victims of international terrorism or domestic terrorism [see 18 U.S.C. § 2331 (definitions)] on account of their status as victims of such terrorism.

  The phrase "without regard to whether such income is taxable income" reflects the judgment of Congress that the Internal Revenue Code's method of determining taxable income does not apply to the Bankruptcy Code's method of computing income in this context [*Blausey v. U.S. Trustee (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1124, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 1299, at 20 (private disability insurance benefits are to be included in income for purpose of applying Bankruptcy Code's means test)].

- Divide by 6 to determine the applicable monthly income.

- If the result is less than the applicable median California income (based on Census Bureau figures), the debtor is eligible to file and to obtain a simple Chapter 7 discharge.

- If the result is more than the applicable median California income, then the "means test" must be performed as to the debtor's expenses: subtract standardized monthly expenses (based on IRS allowances), allowable actual monthly expenses (based on IRS allowances), hypothetical Chapter 13 costs (10 percent), secured debt, and priority debt according to a statutory calculation.

- Under the first prong of the means test, if the result is more than $166.66 per month ($10,000 statutory maximum divided by 60 months), abuse is presumed [see 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(i)(II)].

- Under the second prong of the means test, if the result is less than $166.66 per month but is more than $6,000 in the aggregate over 60 months and is enough to pay a dividend of at least 25 percent to an unsecured claim, then abuse is presumed [see 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(i)(I)].

- If the result does not exceed either of the above amounts, then the debtor is eligible to file and obtain a simple Chapter 7 discharge.

- However, if the result does exceed either of the above amounts, the only way to remain in Chapter 7 is to rebut the presumption of abuse by showing special circumstances. If the bankruptcy court agrees, the debtor is eligible to file and obtain a Chapter 7 discharge. If the court disagrees, it may then dismiss the case [see 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(1)].

PRACTICE TIP:

11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(4)(A) specifically permits the court to award sanctions under Fed. Rules Bank. Proc., Rule 9011 (dealing with frivolous claims), including attorney's fees and costs, against debtor's attorneys who violate Rule 9011 in filing bankruptcy claims. The definitions in the means test, and the application of the test, are uncharted territory. It will take several years for the courts to sort out the rules and establish precedents in this new area. For example, the courts will have to decide how to interpret the means-test rule that the debtor's "monthly expenses shall be the debtor's applicable monthly expense amounts specified under the National Standards and Local Standards, and the debtor's actual monthly expenses for the categories specified as Other Necessary Expenses issued by the IRS for the area in which the debtor resides" [11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(I); see, e.g., Ransom v. MBNA Am. Bank, N.A. (In re Ransom) (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1026, 1030 (National Standards and Local Standards referenced in § 707(b)(2)(A)(ii)(I) are in IRS's Financial Analysis Handbook, which is contained in IRS's Internal Revenue Manual; courts have disagreed on what expenses can be allowed under those standards; Ninth Circuit holds, contrary to other courts' conclusions, that debtor cannot claim expense for "ownership costs" of car that debtor owns free and clear); In re Egebjerg (9th Cir. 2009) 574 F.3d 1045, 1047 (in case of first impression, debtor's repayment of 401(k) loan did not constitute "monthly payment on account of secured debts" and was not in IRS-specified category of "Other Necessary Expenses" that can be deducted from debtor's monthly income for purposes of computing debtor's disposable monthly income under means test)]. In general, it is expected that debtors' attorneys who perform an accurate means test analysis prior to filing and present a good faith argument for allowable expenses or special circumstances without having to amend the schedules will avoid the risk of such sanctions. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[c] Discharge of Debts Under Chapter 7

[i] Who May Obtain Discharge

Although Chapter 7 cases are not limited to individuals, only individuals may obtain a Chapter 7 discharge [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(1)].

[ii] Scope of Discharge

After discharge, a Chapter 7 debtor is discharged from all of the following [11 U.S.C. § 727(b)]:

- All debts arising before the petition was filed, except nondischargeable debts under 11 U.S.C. § 523.

- Liability for claims determined to be pre-petition claims under 11 U.S.C. § 502.

Post-petition attorney's fee awards against the debtor are not discharged when the debtor, after filing the petition, voluntarily commences litigation or voluntarily continues to pursue litigation that had been commenced before the petition was filed. In such circumstances, the debtor may be held personally liable for attorney's fees and costs that result to the other party from that litigation [Boeing N. Am., Inc. v. Ybarra (In re Ybarra) (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1018, 1024] .

[iii] Restrictions When Debtor Has Received Prior Discharge

A debtor proceeding under Chapter 7 may not obtain a discharge if he or she has been granted a discharge in a prior Chapter 7, 11, 12, or 13 case that was commenced within eight years of the date the present petition was filed [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(8), (9)]. If, however, the prior case was for debt adjustment under Chapter 12 or 13, this restriction does not apply when payments under the debt adjustment plan totaled at least one of the following [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(9)]:

- 100 percent of allowed unsecured claims.

- 70 percent of allowed unsecured claims, when the plan was proposed by the debtor in good faith, and the plan was debtor's best effort.

[iv] Other Restrictions on Chapter 7 Discharge

A Chapter 7 discharge may be denied if:

- The debtor is not an individual [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(1)].

- The debtor has engaged in fraudulent conduct in connection with the bankruptcy case [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)-(4); see, e.g., In re Caneva (9th Cir. 2008) 547 F.3d 1082, 1088-1089 (when debtor owns and controls numerous business entities and engages in substantial financial transactions, complete absence of recorded information related to those entities and transactions establishes prima facie violation of 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(3); when debtor transfers substantial amount of money to third party, failure to keep any documentation evidencing terms of transfer or fact that payment actually took place also establishes prima facie violation of that statute); Bernard v. Sheaffer (In re Bernard) (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1279, 1283 (discharge denied based on debtors' withdrawals from money market and deposit accounts with admitted intent to hinder creditors' attempts to attach accounts)].

- The debtor has failed to explain asset losses or deficiencies [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(5)].

- The debtor has disobeyed orders of the court or failed to respond to questions approved by the court [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(6)].

- The debtor has waived discharge [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(10)].

- The debtor did any of the acts listed in 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(2)-(6) on or within one year before the date of the filing of the petition, or during the case, in connection with another case, under the Bankruptcy Code or under the former Bankruptcy Act, concerning an insider [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(7)].

- After filing the petition, the debtor failed to complete a prescribed instructional course concerning personal financial management [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(11); see 11 U.S.C. § 111 (course requirement)].

- The court, after notice and a hearing held not more than 10 days before the date of the entry of the order granting the discharge, finds that there is reasonable cause to believe that (1) the limitation on a homestead exemption in 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor and (2) there is pending any proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony of the kind described in 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1)(A) or liable for a debt of the kind described in 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1)(B) (resulting from various crimes and intentional or willful misconduct) [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(12)].

- The debtor fails to file a tax return that comes due during a case [see 11 U.S.C. § 521(e)(2)].

[d] Stay of Creditor Actions Against Debtor

An important element of relief under Chapter 7, and all other chapters of the Bankruptcy Code, is the stay of creditor actions against the debtor and most property of the debtor, this stay usually begins immediately when the petition is filed and continues until the case is closed, the time the case is dismissed, the time a discharge is granted or denied, or at such a time as the court, after notice and a hearing, may terminate, annul, modify, or condition it [see 11 U.S.C. § 362]. For discussion, see § 94.30.

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23], created numerous exceptions to the stay. For discussion of these exceptions, see § 94.30[3][a].

[4] Chapter 13: Debt Adjustment for Individuals

[a] Nature of Chapter 13 Remedy

Chapter 13 allows an individual with regular income to obtain a discharge of certain debts by completing an approved plan for adjustment of debts. Most Chapter 13 plans use future disposable income as a key funding source. Other possible funding sources may include contributions by third parties and liquidation of assets [see 11 U.S.C. § 1322]. A Chapter 13 debtor receives a discharge only after either he or she has completed the reorganization plan or has been excused from total completion [see 11 U.S.C. § 1328].

[b] Persons Who May Proceed Under Chapter 13

The eligibility requirement of Chapter 13 is more restrictive than Chapter 7 or Chapter 11 [see [3][b], above, [5][b], below]. To proceed under Chapter 13, a debtor must satisfy the following requirements [11 U.S.C. § 109(e)]:

- The debtor must be an individual with a regular income, that is, an income sufficiently stable and regular to enable an individual to make payments under a Chapter 13 plan [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(30)].

- The debtor must not be a commodity broker [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(6) (definition)] or a stockbroker [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(53A) (definition); In re Berry (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1982) 7 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 270, 22 B.R. 950, 951-953 (individual employed as account executive of stock brokerage firm is not "stockbroker" and is eligible for Chapter 13 relief)].

- The debtor must owe noncontingent, liquidated, unsecured debts of less than $307,675 on the date the petition is filed [see Scovis v. Henrichsen (In re Scovis) (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 975, 982 (debts exceeded the statutory ceiling fixed by 11 U.S.C. § 109(e); "eligibility ... should normally be determined by the debtor's originally filed schedules, checking only to see if the schedules were made in good faith")].

- The debtor owes noncontingent, liquidated, secured debts of less than $922,675 on the date the petition is filed. "Noncontingent" means that the duty to pay presently exists and does not come into existence only after a future event occurs [see In re Fostvedt (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 305, 307 ; In re Wilson (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981) 3 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 912, 9 B.R. 723, 724-725] .

Although the conventional interpretation of "secured" might cover any debt for which the creditor has a security interest in the debtor's property, the Bankruptcy Code makes clear that in a Chapter 13 case, the status of a conventional secured debt (or secured claim, from the creditor's point of view) depends on the valuation of the collateral: "An allowed claim of a creditor secured by a lien on property in which the estate has an interest ... is a secured claim to the extent of the value of such creditor's interest in the estate's interest in such property ... and is an unsecured claim to the extent that the value of such creditor's interest ... is less than the amount of such allowed claim" [11 U.S.C. § 506(a)(1)]. In other words, a debt secured by a mortgage, for instance, is not a "secured claim" (or secured debt) to the extent that it exceeds the value of the property that secures it. Under the Bankruptcy Code, "secured claim" is thus a term of art, and not every claim (debt) that is secured by a lien on property will be considered a "secured claim" (secured debt) [Zimmer v. PSB Lending Corp. (In re Zimmer) (9th Cir. 2002) 313 F.3d 1220, 1223 (creditor, whose claim was secured by second deed of trust on debtor's residence, was holder of unsecured claim for purposes of Chapter 13, because first-lien claim exceeded value of underlying property; therefore, in accord with 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(2), rights of second-lien creditor could be modified under Chapter 13 plan)].

[c] Debtor's Retention of Assets

Unless the confirmed plan or the order confirming the plan provides otherwise, a Chapter 13 debtor retains title to and possession of his or her property [11 U.S.C. §§ 1306(b), 1327(b), (c)]. Whereas a Chapter 7 debtor engaged in business must ordinarily turn the business over to the trustee for liquidation, a Chapter 13 debtor engaged in business may continue to operate it unless the court orders otherwise [11 U.S.C. §§ 721, 1304(b)].

[d] Curing Defaults Under Chapter 13 Plan

A debtor's Chapter 13 plan may provide for the cure of any default [11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(3)], including the cure, within a reasonable time, of a default on a claim on which the last payment is due after the final date for payment under the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5)]. However, a debtor may not use 11 U.S.C. § 506(a)(1) [see § 94.20[4][i]] in combination with 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) to reduce the secured claim and repay it over a period longer than the plan term [Enewally v. Washington Mut. Bank (In re Enewally) (9th Cir. 2004) 368 F.3d 1165, 1172].

If a default occurs before the petition was filed and results in acceleration of the entire outstanding debt, the cure of that default may provide for "de-acceleration" of the debt [In re Clark (7th Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 869, 874 ; In re Taddeo (2d Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 24, 28] . In this respect, 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) preempts Civ. Code § 2924c(a)(1) (setting out the requirements and time period for reinstating an accelerated debt secured by real property), and allows confirmation of a Chapter 13 plan that cures any pre-petition accelerated delinquencies [see In re Nelson (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1985) 14 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 700, 59 B.R. 417, 419].

[e] Classification of Creditors Under Chapter 13 Plan

As long as there is no unfair discrimination, a Chapter 13 debtor may create different classes of creditors and propose different levels of payment to each class [see In re Haag (Bankr. D. Or. 1980) 2 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 144, 145, 3 B.R. 649, 650-651, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 367 (full payment of spousal support obligation versus 25 percent payments to all other unsecured creditors is permissible difference in treatment)]. Consumer debts on which there is a co-debtor may be treated differently from other unsecured claims [11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(1)].

[f] Discharge of Debts Under Chapter 13

[i] Discharge on Completion of Plan

As soon as practicable after the debtor completes all payments under a Chapter 13 plan, the court generally is required to grant a discharge [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a); but see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)-(h) (possible exceptions)] of all debts provided for by that plan or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, except the following [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)]:

- Debts provided for under 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) (debts on which the last payment is due after the date the final payment under the plan is due);

- Debts of a kind specified in 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8)(C) (a tax required to be collected or withheld and for which the debtor is liable in whatever capacity);

- Debts specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(B), (C), (2)-(5), (8), and (9) [see § 94.53];

- Debts for restitution, or a criminal fine, included in a sentence on the debtor's conviction of a crime; and

- Debts for restitution, or damages, awarded in a civil action against the debtor as a result of willful or malicious injury by the debtor that caused personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual [see Waag v. Permann (In re Waag) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2009) 418 B.R. 373, 378, 381 (statute does not differentiate between judgment entered before petition is filed and one entered after petition is filed; therefore, prepetition judgment is not prerequisite to prevailing on nondischargeability claim under this provision)].

PRACTICE TIP:
Under Chapter 13, a debt for restitution or damages awarded in a civil action as a result of "willful or malicious injury" causing "personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual" is not dischargeable [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(4)]. Under Chapter 7, a debt for "willful and malicious injury ... to another entity or to the property of another entity" is not dischargeable [11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(6), 727(b)]. These are significant differences: whether the injury is "willful or malicious" or is "willful and malicious," whether the injury is to a person or is to property, and whether or not the debt arises from an award in a civil action [*Waag v. Permann (In re Waag) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2009) 418 B.R. 373, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3418, at 8]. Depending on the facts of the client's case, if a debt for personal injury is involved, it could be strategically more advantageous to file under Chapter 13 rather than Chapter 7. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[ii] Discharge When Plan Not Completed

In limited circumstances, a Chapter 13 debtor may obtain a "hardship" discharge; that is, a discharge notwithstanding the debtor's failure to the complete the plan [see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b)]. A hardship discharge is less broad than a discharge after completion of the plan: it discharges only unsecured debts that were provided for by the plan or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, and it excludes the following [11 U.S.C. § 1328(b), (c)]:

- Unsecured debts provided for under 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5); that is, debts on which the last payment is due after the date on which the final payment under the plan is due.

- All unsecured debts specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a).

[g] Stay of Creditor Actions Against Debtor and Co-Debtor

The filing of a bankruptcy case under Chapter 13 automatically stays creditor actions against the debtor and most property of the debtor, as it does under Chapter 7 and other chapters of the Bankruptcy Code [see 11 U.S.C. § 362; see also §§ 94.20[3][d], 94.30 et seq.]. In a Chapter 13 case, unlike Chapter 7 and Chapter 11 cases, the bankruptcy stay also applies to consumer debt actions by a creditor against an individual who is a co-debtor of the Chapter 13 debtor [see 11 U.S.C. § 1301]. Thus, a business partner is not protected from business claims arising out of the joint operation of a partnership while one of the partners is in Chapter 13.

Furthermore, unlike Chapter 7 cases, property acquired by a Chapter 13 debtor after filing the petition is property of the estate, thus enjoying protection of the bankruptcy stay [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(a), 1306(a)].

[5] Chapter 11: Reorganization

[a] Reorganization Under Chapter 11 as Alternative to Chapter 7 or 13

Chapter 11 provides a court supervised procedure whereby the debtor can achieve immediate relief from actions by unsecured creditors and limited immediate relief from secured creditors, and then can reorganize itself through the medium of a plan that may be approved by the court if consented to by the appropriate number of voting creditors or if qualifying for confirmation without such a vote [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 1121-1129].

Reorganization permits the debtor to satisfy creditor claims in a broad array of ways, including sale of estate property, merger or consolidation of the debtor with one or more persons, distribution of estate property to secured creditors, or transfer of estate property to a separate entity [see 11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)(5)].

A brief summary of Chapter 11 is given in § 94.20[5][b]-[h].

[b] Persons Who May Proceed Under Chapter 11

[i] Partnerships and Corporations

Chapter 11 is broadly available to business entities. It may be used by the following entities [11 U.S.C. § 109(d)]:

- Any that are entitled to use Chapter 7, except a stockbroker or commodity broker [see § 94.20[3][b]].

- A railroad (which may not use Chapter 7).

- An uninsured state member bank [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(54A) (definition)], or a corporation organized under Section 25A of the Federal Reserve Act, which operates, or operates as, a multilateral clearing organization pursuant to Section 409 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991.

Chapter 11 is used most often by business debtors, as opposed to individuals. It is used particularly by partnerships and corporations, for example, because these entities may not obtain a discharge of debts under Chapter 7 [see § 94.20[3][c][i]]. However, a partnership or corporation may not obtain a discharge under Chapter 11 if the plan provides for the liquidation of all or substantially all of the property of the estate, the debtor does not engage in business after consummation of the plan, and the debtor would be denied a discharge under Chapter 7 if the case were adjudicated under that chapter [11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(3); *see Torrington Livestock Cattle Co. v. Berg (In re Berg) (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2010) 423 B.R. 671, 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 524, at 14 (all three elements of section 1141(d)(3) must be established before Chapter 11 debtor's discharge may be denied; Chapter 11 discharge cannot be denied solely on ground that debtor would have been denied discharge under Chapter 7); see also § 94.20[5][g]].

[ii] Individuals

Although designed for business entities, Chapter 11 is not expressly so limited, and may be used by individuals whether or not engaged inbusiness [Toibb v. Radloff (1991) 501 U.S. 157, 161-165, 111 S. Ct. 2197, 115 L. Ed. 2d 145] . It may be used by any individual except a stockbroker or commodity broker [see 11 U.S.C. § 109(d)].

A Chapter 11 case may be commenced voluntarily by the debtor, or involuntarily by certain creditors [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 301(a), 303].

An individual debtor in Chapter 11, like all other individual debtors under the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, must complete a credit counseling session before filing and a financial management (budgeting) class after filing as a condition to obtaining a discharge [11 U.S.C. §§ 109(h)(1), 521(b); added by Pub. L. 109-8, § 109; see § 94.20[2][c]].

[c] Debtor's Retention of Assets

[i] Role of Debtor as Trustee

In most Chapter 11 cases the debtor retains possession of all of the assets of the estate, as a "debtor in possession" [11 U.S.C. § 1101(1); see also § 94.11[7]]. The debtor-in-possession has the rights, duties, and powers of a Chapter 11 trustee [11 U.S.C. § 1107(a)]. The duties of a trustee are set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 1106. The debtor-in-possession, and its managing personnel, if it is not an individual entity, are subject to the fiduciary requirements imposed on court appointed trustees by statute, local rule, or by the United States trustee.

Thus, subject to compliance with the terms of the statute, a debtor in possession may [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 704, 1106]:

- Manage the debtor's business.
- Employ professionals.
- Use, sell, or lease property of the estate.
- Obtain credit in compliance with 11 U.S.C. § 364.
- Assume or reject executory contracts in compliance with 11 U.S.C. § 365 [see Agarwal v. Pomona Valley Med. Group, Inc. (2007), 476 F.3d 665 . 669-670 (bankruptcy court should apply business judgment rule to evaluate debtor-in-possession's rejection decision, that is, court should presume that debtor-in-possession acted prudently, on informed basis, in good faith, and in honest belief that rejection was in best interests of bankruptcy estate)].
- Exercise the trustee's avoidance powers.

In addition, the debtor must attend and submit to an examination, file necessary lists and schedules, and file a reorganization plan under 11 U.S.C. § 1121 or, in the alternative, file a report with the court concerning why the debtor will not file a plan [see 11 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(5)]. Furthermore, if there is a claim against the debtor for domestic support

[see 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A) (definition)], the debtor must give the holder of the claim a prescribed notice and could be required to give an additional notice to the state child-support enforcement agency [see 11 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(8), (c)].

A debtor in possession has the exclusive right to file a plan within 120 days (or, in a small business case, 180 days) after the date of the order for relief, or within such other period of time as the court may fix [see 11 U.S.C. § 1121(b), (e)].

[ii] Appointment of Separate Trustee or Examiner

The court may order the appointment of a trustee to manage the debtor if there is cause, such as the debtor's fraud, dishonesty, incompetence, or gross mismanagement, or if appointment of a trustee is in the interests of creditors, equity security holders, and other interests of the estate [11 U.S.C. § 1104(a)]. The United States trustee must move for the appointment of a trustee if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that current members of the governing body of the debtor, the debtor's chief executive or chief financial officer, or members of the governing body who selected the debtor's chief executive or chief financial officer, participated in actual fraud, dishonesty, or criminal conduct in the management of the debtor or the debtor's public financial reporting [11 U.S.C. § 1104(e)].

On the request of a party made within 30 days after the court orders appointment of a trustee, the United States trustee must convene a meeting of creditors to elect one disinterested person to serve as trustee [11 U.S.C. § 1104(b)(1); see 11 U.S.C. § 702(a)-(c) (manner of election)].

Alternatively, if the court does not order the appointment of a trustee, it may order the appointment of an examiner to investigate the debtor when this appointment is in the interests of creditors, equity security holders, and other interests of the estate, or if the debtor's fixed, liquidated, unsecured debts exceed $5 million, excluding those debts for goods, services, or taxes, or owing to an insider [11 U.S.C. § 1104(c)].

[d] Creditors' Committee

As soon as is practicable after the order for relief, the United States trustee appoints a creditors' committee, representing unsecured creditors [11 U.S.C. § 1102]. Typically, the committee consists of persons willing to serve who hold the seven largest unsecured claims or, in the alternative, of members of a committee organized by creditors before the commencement of the Chapter 11 case [11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(1), (2)]. In the latter situation, the United States trustee has broad discretion to assure that the committee was fairly chosen and is representative of the claimants. Additional committees representing creditors or equity security holders may be appointed when separate representation is considered desirable.

On request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court may order the United States trustee to change the membership of the committee [11 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(4)].

On the request of a party in interest in a case in which the debtor is a small business debtor and for cause, the court may order that a committee of creditors not be appointed [11 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(3)].

[e] Reorganization Plan

A Chapter 11 reorganization plan must do all of the following [11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)]:

- Designate classes of claims and interests.
- Specify classes that are not impaired.
- Specify the treatment of impaired classes.

- Provide the same treatment for claims or interests in a particular class unless a holder agrees to a less favorable treatment for a particular claim.

- Provide adequate means for the plan's implementation.

- Provide for the inclusion in the debtor's charter of a provision prohibiting the issuance of nonvoting equity securities.

- Contain only provisions that are consistent with the interests of creditors and equity security holders and with public policy with respect to the manner of selection of any officer, director, or trustee under the plan.

- When the debtor is an individual, provide for the payment to creditors under the plan of all or such portion of earnings from personal services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case, or other future income of the debtor, as is necessary for the execution of the plan.

A Chapter 11 reorganization plan may make other specified provisions [see 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)].

[f] Approval and Confirmation of Plan

[i] Submission of Plan to Court and Creditors

Before soliciting acceptance or rejection of the plan, the debtor must obtain court approval of, and then transmit to holders of claims and interests, a disclosure statement containing sufficient information to enable the holders to "make an informed judgment about the plan" [11 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1)]. The holders of claims and interests then vote on the plan; however, no acceptances are necessary from the holders of claims or interests that are not impaired by the plan [11 U.S.C. §§ 1126(f), 1129(a)(8)].

The bankruptcy court, at any time during the pendency of the Chapter 11 case, may dismiss it or convert it to one under Chapter 7 [see 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b); *see also Shulkin Hutton, Inc. v. Treiger (In re Owens) (9th Cir. 2008) -- F.3d --, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 26947, at 4 (when deciding between dismissal and conversion under 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b), court must consider interests of all creditors, not just interest of person seeking dismissal or conversion)]. The debtor may obtain an order converting the case as a matter of right, unless the debtor is not the debtor in possession, the case was originally commenced as an involuntary case under Chapter 11, or the case was converted to a Chapter 11 other than by the debtor's request [see 11 U.S.C. § 1112(a)]. Other parties in interest, the United States trustee, or the bankruptcy administrator may obtain this relief for cause after a court hearing on notice [see 11 U.S.C. § 1112(b); see, e.g., Pioneer Liquidating Corp. v. United States Trustee (In re Consolidated Pioneer Mortg. Entities) (9th Cir. 2001) 264 F.3d 803, 807-809] .

[ii] Confirmation Requirements

The court may confirm a Chapter 11 plan only if the following conditions are satisfied:

- The plan and its proponent must comply with the applicable provisions of the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(1), (2)].

- The plan must be proposed in good faith and not by unlawful means [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(3)].

- Any payment made or promised for services rendered or for costs and expenses incurred in connection with the case or the plan must be approved by or must be subject to approval by the court [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(4)].

- The identity and affiliation of proposed directors, officers, or voting trustees, as well as the identity of an affiliate of the debtor participating in a joint plan or a successor to the debtor under the plan, must be disclosed. The proposed appointments of directors, officers, or voting trustees must be consistent with both the interest of creditors and equity security holders and with public policy. In addition, the proponent of the plan must disclose the identity of any "insider" of the debtor that will be employed or retained by the reorganize d debtor and the nature of compensation which will be paid to that person [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(5)].

- If the debtor is subject to governmental regulation and the plan proposes to alter rates over which a regulatory commission has jurisdiction, the commission must have approved those rates, or any proposed rate change must be conditioned on the approval [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(6)].

- With respect to each impaired class, the class must unanimously accept the plan or the class must receive under the plan at least what the class would receive in a liquidation under Chapter 7. If, however, the class exercises an election under 11 U.S.C. § 1111(b)(2), the class must receive property with a present value equal to the value of the secured claims of the class [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(7)].

- Each class that is not unimpaired must accept the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(8)].

- Unless the holder of a priority claim agrees to less favorable terms, administrative claims entitled to priority must be paid in cash on the effective date of the plan; employee claims, pension benefit claims, and consumer claims entitled to priority must be either paid in cash on the effective date of the plan or must be paid in full over time according to terms acceptable to the requisite majority of the particular class; tax and customs claims entitled to priority must be paid in full but payments in respect of such claims may be extended over a period not to exceed six years from the date of assessment of such claims, so long as the present value of the payments as of the effective dateof the plan equals or exceeds the amount of those claims [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(9)].

- If a class is impaired under the plan, at least one impaired class of claims must accept the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(10)].

- It must be unlikely that confirmation of the plan would be followed by the liquidation, or the need for further financial reorganization, of the debtor or any successor to the debtor under the plan, unless such a liquidation or reorganization is proposed in the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(11); see Sherman v. Harbin (In re Harbin) (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 510, 517-519 (bankruptcy court considering feasibility of plan of reorganization must evaluate possible effect of debtor's ongoing civil case with potential creditor, whether that litigation is pending at trial level or on appeal)].

- Either the quarterly fees based on disbursements for the quarter must have been paid or the plan must make satisfactory provision for the payment of such fees [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(12)].

- To the extent that the debtor is required to continue paying retiree benefits under its original agreement or as it may have been modified pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1114, the plan must carry forward the obligation for the balance of the time for which the debtor is so obligated [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(13)].

- If the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order, or by statute, to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor must have paid all amounts payable under the order or statute for that obligation that first become payable after the date of the filing of the petition [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(14)].

- In a case in which the debtor is an individual and in which the holder of an allowed unsecured claim objects to the confirmation of the plan, either [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(15)]:

  - The value, as of the effective date of the plan, of the property to be distributed under the plan on account of the claim must be not less than the amount of the claim; or

  - The value of the property to be distributed under the plan must be not less than the projected disposable income of the debtor [see 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(2) (definition)] to be received during the five-year period beginning on the date the first payment is due under the plan, or during the period for which the plan provides payments, whichever period is longer.

- All transfers of property of the plan must be made in accordance with any applicable provisions of nonbankruptcy law that govern the transfer of property by a corporation or trust that is not a moneyed, business, or commercial corporation or trust [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(16)].

[iii] Confirmation Without Required Acceptances

Notwithstanding the requirements in 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a) [see § 94.20[5][f][ii]] concerning votes of creditors, it is possible for the court to confirm a plan under the "cramdown" provisions contained in 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b).

At least one class of claims impaired under the plan must accept the plan by the requisite votes, and there must be excluded for this purpose any acceptances of the plan by any insiders [11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(10); but see Barakat v. Life Ins. Co. of Va. (In re Barakat) (9th Cir. 1996) 99 F.3d 1520, 1524-1526 (bankruptcy court did not err in denying plan confirmation for lack of assent of impaired noninsider class of creditors when sole purpose of debtor's separate classification of unsecured deficiency claim was to obtain acceptance of plan)]. But for this requirement, votes of creditors may be disregarded if the plan provides, with respect to each class, treatment of the type set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(A), (B), or (C) (respecting secured claims, unsecured claims, and claims of interest holders, that is, shareholders or other equity holders).

Secured creditors may be "crammed down" only if one of three specified conditions is met [see 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(A)].

[g] Discharge on Confirmation of Plan

Debts that are dischargeable under Chapter 11 become discharged on the confirmation of the plan [see 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1)]. The scope of dischargeable debts in a Chapter 11 case is similar to that under Chapter 7; that is, a discharge under Chapter 11 does not discharge a debtor who is an individual from any debt excepted from discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 523 [11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(2)]. However, while under Chapter 7 a discharge covers pre-petition debts [see 11 U.S.C. § 727(b)], under Chapter 11 the discharge covers debts that arose before the date of confirmation of the plan [see 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1); e.g., Zimmerman, Rosenfeld, Gersh & Leeds v. Larson (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1466, 1486-1487, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 111 (post-petition debt for attorney's fees was discharged in Chapter 11 case)] (subject to certain exceptions in either case).

Unlike a Chapter 13 discharge, which is effective only after substantial consummation of the plan [11 U.S.C. §§ 1325-1328], a Chapter 11 discharge is entered on confirmation of the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1141(a); but see 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(3)-(6) (possible exceptions)]. Even if the Chapter 11 plan is not ultimately consummated, the discharge remains effective.

An order confirming a Chapter 11 plan may be revoked on request of a party in interest at any time within 180 days after the date of entry of the confirmation order, after notice of a hearing, if it is determined that the confirmation was procured by fraud [11 U.S.C. § 1144].

[h] Stay of Creditor Actions Against Debtor

The filing of a petition under Chapter 11 automatically stays a creditor action against the debtor and most property of the debtor, as is the case under Chapter 7 [see 11 U.S.C. § 362; see also § 94.20[3][d]]. For further discussion, see § 94.30 et seq.

[6] Chapter 12: Debt Adjustment for Family Farmers and Family Fishermen

[a] Nature of Chapter 12 Remedy

Chapter 12, available to a family farmer with a regular annual income or a family fisherman with a regular annual income, is similar in many respects to Chapter 13. A Chapter 12 case envisions an extension or composition plan in which debts are paid primarily out of future income, under the protection of the court. The debtor is allowed to retain existing assets, as well as employment or going-concern value of the farm or fishing business, pending completion of a repayment plan.

[b] Who May Proceed Under Chapter 12

Chapter 12 is designed specifically for a family-farmer debtor with a regular annual income or a family-fisherman debtor with a regular annual income [see 11 U.S.C. § 109(f); see also 11 U.S.C. § 101(19), (19B) (defining "family farmer with regular annual income" and "family fisherman with regular annual income")].

For an individual to qualify as a family farmer, a specific test must be met [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(18)]. For an individual to qualify as a family fisherman, a similar test must be met [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(19A)].

For a corporation or partnership to qualify as a family farmer or family fisherman, a different test must be met [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(18)(B), (19A)(B)]. A corporation cannot be considered a family farmer or family fisherman if any of its stock is traded publicly [11 U.S.C. § 101(18)(B)(iii), (19A)(B)(ii)(III)].

[c] Commencement of Case

A Chapter 12 case is commenced in the same manner as a Chapter 7 liquidation, by the filing of a petition [see 11 U.S.C. § 301(a)]. A Chapter 12 case, however, may only be commenced voluntarily. There are no involuntary Chapter 12 cases [see 11 U.S.C. § 303].

[d] Plan

In a Chapter 12 case, the debtor files a plan no later than 90 days after the order for relief, or within such further time as the court may order [11 U.S.C. § 1221]. Typically, a Chapter 12 plan provides for the satisfaction of all or a portion of the debts, using the debtor's future income, and, in some cases, a portion of the debtor's assets.

The plan must provide for all of the following:

- The submission of all or a portion of future earnings to the supervision and control of the Chapter 12 trustee [11 U.S.C. § 1222(a)(1)].

- The full payment of 11 U.S.C. § 507 priority claims [11 U.S.C. § 1222(a)(2)], with some exceptions [11 U.S.C. § 1222(a)(2), (4)].

- The same treatment for each claim or interest within a particular class, unless a particular holder agrees to less favorable treatment [11 U.S.C. § 1222(a)(3)].

The plan may include additional specified provisions [see 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)].

[e] Confirmation

After a Chapter 12 plan is filed, the court must hold a hearing on confirmation. Any party in interest, the trustee, or the United States trustee may object to confirmation of the plan. Other than for cause, the hearing must be concluded within 45 days after the plan is filed [11 U.S.C. § 1224].

The plan must be confirmed if all of the following conditions are met:

- The plan complies with the provisions of Chapter 12 and all other applicable provisions in the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1)].

- All required fees and charges have been paid, and the plan has been proposed in good faith [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(2), (3)].

- The plan is in the best interest of creditors--that is, creditors will receive at least an amount equal to what they would have received if the debtor were liquidated under Chapter 7 [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(4)].

- Secured creditors either accept the plan, retain their liens and receive a distribution that, as of the effective date of the plan, is equal to the allowed amount of the secured claim, or receive from the debtor surrender of the property [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(5)].

- The debtor will be able to make all payments under the plan and to comply with the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(6)].

- The debtor has paid all amounts that are required to be paid under a domestic support obligation and that first become payable after the date of the filing of the petition, if the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order, or by statute, to pay the domestic support obligation [11 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(7)].

If a trustee or an unsecured creditor objects to the plan, the court may not approve the plan unless, as of the effective date of the plan, either [11 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)]:

- The objecting claimant is to be fully paid;

- In the three-year period (or any longer period the court approves under 11 U.S.C. § 1222(c)) beginning on the date the first payment is due under the plan, all of the debtor's projected disposable income will be devoted to the plan; or

- In the three-year period (or any longer period the court approves under 11 U.S.C. § 1222(c)) beginning on the date the first distribution is due under the plan, the value of the property to be distributed under the plan is not less than the debtor's projected disposable income for that period.

In a Chapter 12 case, the filing of the petition operates as an automatic stay on virtually all actions against the debtor or against estate property, and also operates as a stay on virtually all actions against individual co-debtors to collect a consumer debt owed by the debtor [11 U.S.C. §§ 362, 1201]. For further discussion, see § 94.30 et seq.

The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23] created numerous exceptions to the stay. For discussion of these exceptions, see § 94.30[3][a].

[g] Discharge

On completion of the plan, the debtor is entitled to receive a discharge [11 U.S.C. § 1228(a); but see 11 U.S.C. § 1228(f) (possible exception if debtor is subject to 11 U.S.C. § 522(q)(1)); see also 11 U.S.C. § 1228(d) (revocation of discharge)] of all debts provided for by the plan, except the following [11 U.S.C. § 1228(a)]:

- Long-term debts.
- Debts that the debtor has satisfied or will satisfy with estate property under 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)(9).
- Debts that are nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) [see § 94.53].

A Chapter 12 debtor unable to complete the plan may receive a hardship discharge if the debtor's failure is due to circumstances for which the debtor should not justly be held accountable, provided that creditors have received at least as much as they would have received in a Chapter 7 liquidation, and modification of the plan is not practicable [see 11 U.S.C. § 1228(b)].

§ 94.30 Stay of Proceedings Against Debtor on Filing of Bankruptcy Petition

[1] Imposition of Stay

[a] Automatic Application in Most Cases

The filing of a bankruptcy petition usually operates to stay automatically certain creditor actions and proceedings [11 U.S.C. § 362(a); see [2], below]. There is an exception, intended to suppress the bad faith use of bankruptcy by individuals [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4); [4][a], below].

The purpose of this stay is to protect the assets of the estate, so that they may eventually be distributed to creditors. For the debtor, the practical effect of the stay is that, generally, creditor harassment, collection efforts, and lawsuits on debts must cease--excepting acts and proceedings that specifically are allowed by the Bankruptcy Code. In fact, numerous acts and proceedings by creditors (and others) are not subject to the stay [11 U.S.C. § 362(b); see [3], below].

For discussion of moving for relief from the bankruptcy stay, see § 94.33.

[b] Unavailability to Certain Small-Business Debtors

The stay does not apply automatically in a case in which any of the following conditions exists [11 U.S.C. § 362(n)(1)]:

- The debtor is a debtor in a small business case pending at the time the petition is filed.

- The debtor was a debtor in a small business case that was dismissed for any reason by an order that became final in the two-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition.

- The debtor was a debtor in a small business case in which a plan was confirmed in the two-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition.

- The debtor acquired substantially all of the assets or business of a small-business debtor described in one of the foregoing items and does not establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the acquisition was made in good faith and not for the purpose of evading 11 U.S.C. § 362(n)(1).

This conditional withholding of the automatic protection of a stay is intended to target small business debtors that engage in an abusive practice called serial filing. Therefore, in an involuntary case in which one of the above conditions exists, the stay nevertheless will be imposed as usual if the case involves no collusion by the debtor with creditors [11 U.S.C. § 362(n)(2)(A)]. In a voluntary case in which one of the foregoing conditions exists, the stay will be imposed as usual if the debtor proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the filing of the petition resulted from circumstances beyond the control of the debtor not foreseeable at the time the case then pending was filed, and if it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a feasible plan, but not a liquidating plan, within a reasonable period of time [11 U.S.C. § 362(n)(2)(B)].

[2] Acts and Proceedings That Are Stayed

[a] Civil Proceedings on Pre-Petition Claims

Filing a bankruptcy petition operates against all creditors to stay the commencement or continuation of any civil action or proceeding against the debtor that either (1) could have been or was commenced before the commencement of the bankruptcy case or (2) is to recover a claim against the debtor that arose before the commencement of the bankruptcy case [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1); see Eskanos & Adler, P.C. v. Leetien (9th Cir. 2002)309 F.3d 1210, 1215 (creditor has "affirmative duty to discontinue post-petition collection actions")], including some proceedings before the U.S. Tax Court [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(8)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Dismissal of Creditor's Pending Action. The stay may work in a creditor's favor by preventing dismissal of the creditor's pending action against the debtor. A California appellate court has held that a trial court has no power to dismiss the creditor's case, and that any purported dismissal would be void, on the ground that 11 U.S.C. § 362(a) "creates an automatic stay of all judicial proceedings against the debtor" [Sindler v. Brennan (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1353, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888] . (The stay is not automatic in every case, however [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4); [4][a], below].)

[b] Enforcement of Pre-Petition Judgment or Lien Rights

Filing a bankruptcy petition operates against all creditors to stay the enforcement, against the debtor or against property of the estate, of a judgment obtained before the commencement of the bankruptcy case [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(2)].

Filing a bankruptcy petition operates against all creditors to stay any act to create, perfect, or enforce any lien against property of the debtor, to the extent that the lien secures a claim that arose before the commencement of the case [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(5); see, e.g., In re Marriage of Sprague & Spiegel-Sprague (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 215, 219-220, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 261 (stay is violated by state court's determination of nondischargeability of debt for attorney's fees in dissolution proceeding, even if it is done indirectly by characterizing that debt as liability in nature of alimony, maintenance, or support--which is nondischargeable--since state court does not have concurrent jurisdiction to determine scope and applicability of stay with respect to core bankruptcy proceeding)].

[c] Attempts at Collection on Pre-Petition Claims

Filing a bankruptcy petition operates against all creditors to stay attempts at collection on pre-petition claims [11 U.S.C.

§ 362(a)(3), (4), (6)]. This includes an attempt to set off a pre-petition debt owing to the debtor against a claim against the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(7)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Collecting Attorney's Fees. The stay would prevent an attorney's attempt to collect fees owed under a deferred payment arrangement in connection with pre-petition services in the bankruptcy proceedings [see, e.g., American Law Ctr., P.C. v. Stanley (In re Jastrem) (9th Cir. 2001) 253 F.3d 438, 441-442 ; see also Sanchez v. Gordon (In re Sanchez) (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1148, 1150-1151 (reasonable fee for post-petition services is nondischargeable debt and may be collected in course of bankruptcy proceedings without violating stay)].

[3] Acts and Proceedings Not Stayed

[a] Exceptions and Limitations to Stay--In General

Under specified circumstances, the Bankruptcy Code provides exceptions and limitations to the general rule imposing a stay, the most significant of which are noted in the subsections below. Under the 1995 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code [Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23], effective October 17, 2005, a number of new exceptions to the stay were created, including exceptions for the following:

- Specified family law proceedings, including proceedings for the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(A)-(D), (E), (G); see § 94.30[3][f], [g], below]:
  - Child custody or visitation.
  - Dissolution of marriage, except division of estate property.
  - Domestic violence.
  - Collection of support from either the debtor or the estate.
- Proceedings relating to license restriction [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(D); see § 94.30[3][s], below].
- Proceedings for interception of a tax refund [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(F); see § 94.30[3][e], below].
- Proceedings for repayment of loan made from a pension plan [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(19); see § 94.30[3][i], below].
- Proceedings for violation of an in rem order [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(4); see §§ 94.30[3][j], below, 94.33[2][d]].
- Proceedings to enforce a lien on real property if the debtor is not eligible due to the 180-day bar for voluntary dismissal with stay relief pending [see 11 U.S.C. § 109(g)] or the case was filed in violation of a bar issued in a previous case [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(20); see § 94.30[3][j], below].
- Eviction proceeding involving residential premises when there is a pre-petition judgment [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(22); see § 94.30[3][l], below].
- Eviction involving residential property if illegal use of a controlled substance is alleged [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(23); see § 94.30[3][m], below].

- Any transfer not avoidable under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544 and 549 (certain unsecured voidable claims; postpetition transfers) [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(24)].

- Setoff of income tax refund [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(26); see § 94.30[3][e], below].

Moreover, the 2005 amendments generally limit the automatic stay in several significant respects:

- There is no stay at all if two cases were filed within one year, except after notice and hearing if a party in interest moves to impose a stay [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4); see § 94.30[4][a]].

- The stay expires 30 days after filing if a prior case was pending within one year prior to the filing, unless the prior case was dismissed pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 707(b). However, the stay can be extended by a timely motion [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3); see § 94.30[4][b]].

- In a single asset real estate case, the court must grant relief from the stay unless a plan with reasonable chance for success is filed within 90 days after the date of the entry of the order granting relief [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(3); see § 94.33[2][c]].

- The stay is terminated with personal respect to property as to which the debtor is required to file a statement of intentions (as in the case of a car loan) [see 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)] if the debtor fails to file the statement of intentions, unless the trustee files an appropriate and timely motion [11 U.S.C. § 362(h)(1); see § 94.30[4][d]].

[b] Judicial Proceedings Unrelated to Money or Property

A bankruptcy proceeding does not terminate, merely by virtue of its maintenance, an action already pending in a nonbankruptcy court to which the bankrupt is a party [Connell v. Walker (1934) 291 U.S. 1, 5, 54 S. Ct. 257, 78 L. Ed. 613] .

[c] Bankruptcy Court Proceedings

Filing a nondischargeability action in the bankruptcy court when the bankruptcy case is pending [see §§ 94.54, 94.121] does not violate the stay [see, e.g., Rein v. Providian Fin. Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 895, 904-905] .

[d] Proceedings Under Police Powers

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following:

- The commencement or continuation of a criminal proceeding against the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(1)].

- In specified instances [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1)-(3), (6)], commencement or continuation of an action or proceeding by a governmental unit, or any organization exercising authority under the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction, to enforce the governmental unit's or organization's police and regulatory power, including the enforcement of a judgment other than a money judgment, obtained in an action or proceeding by the governmental unit to enforce the governmental unit's or organization's police or regulatory power [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(4)].

[e] Tax-Related Proceedings

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following tax-related proceedings:

- An audit by a governmental unit to determine tax liability [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(9)(A)].

- Issuance to the debtor of a notice of tax deficiency by a governmental unit [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(9)(B)].

- A demand for tax returns [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(9)(C)].

- An assessment for any tax, and issuance of a notice and demand for payment of such an assessment (but any tax lien that would otherwise attach to property of the estate by reason of such an assessment cannot take effect unless the tax is a debt of the debtor that will not be discharged in the case and the property or its proceeds are transferred out of the estate to, or otherwise revested in, the debtor) [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(9)(D)].

- Creation or perfection of a statutory lien for an ad valorem property tax, or a special tax or special assessment on real property whether or not ad valorem, imposed by a governmental unit, if the tax or assessment comes due after the date of the filing of the petition [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(18)].

- The interception of a tax refund, as specified in the Social Security Act [42 U.S.C. §§ 664, 666(a)(3)] or under an analogous state law [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(F)].

Filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of a setoff of an income tax refund, under applicable nonbankruptcy law, by a governmental unit with respect to a taxable period that ended before the date of the order for relief against an income tax liability for a taxable period that also ended before the date of the order for relief, except that in any case in which the setoff of an income tax refund is not permitted under applicable nonbankruptcy law because of a pending action to determine the amount or legality of a tax liability, the governmental unit may hold the refund pending the resolution of the action, unless the court, on the motion of the trustee and after notice and a hearing, grants the taxing authority adequate protection [see 11 U.S.C. § 361] for the secured claim of the taxing authority in the setoff [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(26); *Gould v. United States (In re Gould) (9th Cir. 2010) -- F.3d --, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 7977, at *1-2 (for cases filed after Oct. 17, 2005, this statute permits IRS to set off pre-petition income tax overpayment against pre-petition income tax liability without seeking relief from automatic stay); see 11 U.S.C. § 506(a) (method for determining extent to which claim is secured)].

[f] Family Law Proceedings

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the commencement or continuation of any of the following civil actions or proceedings [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(A)]:

- Actions for the establishment of paternity.

- Actions for the establishment or modification of an order for domestic support obligations.

- Actions concerning child custody or visitation.

- Actions for the dissolution of a marriage, except to the extent that such a proceeding seeks to determine the division of property that is property of the estate.

- Actions regarding domestic violence.

[g] Enforcement of Support Obligations

In connection with the enforcement of a family support obligation, filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of, or with respect to, the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(B)-(G)]:

- Collection of a domestic support obligation from property that is not property of the estate.

- Withholding of income that is property of the estate or property of the debtor, for payment of a domestic support obligation under a judicial or administrative order or a statute.

- Reporting of overdue support owed by a parent to any consumer reporting agency [see 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(7)].

- Interception of a tax refund [see 42 U.S.C. §§ 664, 666(a)(3)] or under an analogous state law.

- Enforcement of a medical obligation [see 42 U.S.C. § 601 et seq.].

[h] Exercise of Investment-Contract Rights

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following setoffs:

- Setoff by a commodity broker, forward contract merchant, stockbroker, financial institution, financial participant, or securities clearing agency in connection with specified types of contracts or margin accounts [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(6)].

- Setoff by a repurchase agreement participant based on a mutual claim for a margin payment or settlement payment [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(7)].

- Setoff pursuant to a swap agreement [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(17); see 11 U.S.C. § 101(53B) (definition)].

Moreover, the exercise of these setoff rights that are not subject to the stay cannot be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 362(o)].

Filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of the setoff by a master netting agreement participant of a mutual debt and claim under or in connection with one or more master netting agreements [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 101(38A), (38B), 561 (definitions; contractual right to terminate, liquidate, accelerate, or offset under a master netting agreement and across contracts)] or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements that constitutes the setoff of a claim against the debtor for any payment or other transfer of property due from the debtor under or in connection with such agreements, or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements against any payment due to the debtor from the master netting agreement participant under or in connection with such agreements, or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements, or against cash, securities, or other property held by, pledged to, under the control of, or due from the master netting agreement participant to margin, guarantee, secure, or settle such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements, to the extent that the participant is eligible to exercise setoff rights under 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(6), (7), or (17) for each individual contract covered by the master netting agreement in issue [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(27)]. Moreover, the exercise of these setoff rights not subject to the stay cannot be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 362(o)].

[i] Repayment of Loan From Qualified Retirement Plan

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the withholding of income from the debtor's wages and the collection of amounts withheld, under the debtor's agreement authorizing that withholding and collection for the benefit of a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other tax-qualified plan [see I.R.C. §§ 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, 501(c)], that is sponsored by the debtor's employer, or an affiliate, successor, or predecessor of the debtor's employer, to the extent that the amounts withheld and collected are used solely for payments relating to either of the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(19)]:

- A loan from a plan under Section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [see 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(1)] or is subject to I.R.C. § 72(p) (each of which permits a loan, on specified terms, from a retirement plan to a participant or beneficiary).

- A loan from a thrift savings plan that satisfies the requirements of 5 U.S.C. § 8433(g) (which relates to loans from a retirement plan for federal civil-service employees).

Nothing in 11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(19) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under I.R.C. § 414(d) or a contract or account under I.R.C. § 403(b) constitutes a claim or a debt under the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(19)].

[j] Enforcement of Real Property Lien or Security Interest

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property if either [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(21)]:

- The debtor is ineligible under 11 U.S.C. § 109(g) to be a debtor in a bankruptcy case [see § 94.20[2][b]].

- The bankruptcy petition was filed in violation of a bankruptcy court order in a prior bankruptcy case prohibiting the debtor from being a debtor in another bankruptcy case.

Filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property following entry of a relief order under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(4) [see § 94.33[2]] in favor of the creditor as to the real property in any prior bankruptcy case, for a period of two years after the date of entry of that order, except that the debtor, in a subsequent bankruptcy case, may move for relief from that order based on changed circumstances or for other good cause shown, after notice and a hearing [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(20)].

[k] Proceedings Related to Security Interests in Property

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following acts:

- Any act to perfect, or to maintain or continue the perfection of, an interest in property to the extent that the trustee's rights and powers are subject to perfection under 11 U.S.C. § 546(b) or to the extent that the act is accomplished within the period provided by 11 U.S.C. § 547(e)(2)(A) [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(3)].

- Foreclosure by HUD of an insured mortgage or deed of trust on property consisting of five or more living units [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(8)].

- Postponement of a foreclosure sale under a mortgage or deed of trust [see Knapp v. Doherty (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 76, 82 n.2, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 5 n.2].

[l] Enforcement of Pre-Petition Judgment Evicting Debtor From Residential Tenancy

The filing of a bankruptcy petition generally does not stay the continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against the debtor, involving residential property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a lease or rental agreement and with respect to which the lessor obtained a judgment for possession of the property against the debtor before the date on which the bankruptcy petition was filed [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(22)].

However, the debtor may obtain a grace period of 30 days after the bankruptcy petition is filed by filing, along with the petition, a certification under penalty of perjury stating both of the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(1)]:

- That under the applicable nonbankruptcy law, there are circumstances under which the debtor would be permitted to cure the entire monetary default that gave rise to the judgment for possession after judgment for possession was entered; and

- That the debtor or an adult dependent of the debtor has deposited with the clerk of the court any rent that would become due during the 30-day period after the filing of the bankruptcy petition.

Thereafter, if the debtor or an adult dependent of the debtor files with the court and serves on the lessor, within the 30-day period after the bankruptcy petition is filed, an additional certification under penalty of perjury that the debtor or adult dependent has cured the entire monetary default that gave rise to the judgment, the judgment will be stayed unless the lessor objects and the court upholds the objection [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(2), (3)].

The lessor may object to any certification filed by the debtor by filing the objection with the court and serving it on the debtor. The court then must hold a hearing within 10 days after the objection is filed and served [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(3)(A)]. If the court upholds the lessor's objection, no further stay is granted and the lessor may complete the process to recover full possession of the property [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(3)(B)(i)].

Note that if the debtor indicates on the bankruptcy petition that there was a judgment for possession of the residential rental property in which the debtor resides and does not file a certification as described above, there is no 30-day grace period and the lessor can immediately complete the process to recover full possession of the property [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(4)(A)].

In any case, when a lessor obtains a judgment for possession of residential property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a lease or rental agreement, the debtor must so indicate on the bankruptcy petition and must provide the name and address of the lessor that obtained that pre-petition judgment on the petition and on any certification subsequently filed [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(5)(A)].

The form of certification filed with the petition must provide for the debtor to certify, and the debtor must certify, both of the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(l)(5)(B)]:

- Whether a judgment for possession of residential rental housing in which the debtor resides has been obtained against the debtor before the date of the filing of the petition.

- Whether the debtor is claiming that under nonbankruptcy law applicable in the jurisdiction, there are circumstances under which the debtor would be permitted to cure the entire monetary default that gave rise to the judgment for possession, after that judgment of possession was entered, and has made the appropriate deposit with the court.

[m] Eviction of Debtor From Residential Tenancy for Cause

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of an eviction action that seeks possession of the residential property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a lease or rental agreement based on endangerment of the property or the illegal use of controlled substances on the property, but only if the lessor files with the court, and serves on the debtor, a certification under penalty of perjury that the eviction action has been filed, or that the debtor, during the 30-day period preceding the date of the filing of the certification, has endangered the property or illegally used a controlled substance, or allowed it to be used, on the property [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(23)]. If the lessor files such a certification, the debtor then has 15 days within which to file and serve an objection to the truth or legal sufficiency of the lessor's certification. If the debtor files an objection, the court must hold a hearing within 10 days after the objection is filed and served to determine if the situation giving rise to the lessor's certification existed or has been remedied [11 U.S.C. § 362(m)(2)]. If the debtor can demonstrate to the court's satisfaction that the situation did not exist or has been remedied, the lessor's action will be stayed [11 U.S.C. § 362(m)(2)(C)]. Conversely, if the debtor cannot demonstrate to the court's satisfaction that the situation did not exist or has been remedied, the lessor may proceed with the eviction [11 U.S.C. § 362(m)(2)(D)(i)].

[n] Eviction of Debtor From Nonresidential Tenancy

Filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of the acts of a lessor of nonresidential property to obtain possession if the lease has expired by its terms before the commencement of or during the case [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(10)].

[o] Banking Transactions

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following acts:

- Presenting a negotiable instrument for payment, giving notice of dishonor of a negotiable instrument, and protesting notice of dishonor of a negotiable instrument [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(11)].

- A financial institution's administrative freeze of the debtor's deposit account pending determination of the institution's right of setoff [11 U.S.C. §§ 542(b), 553; In re Edgins (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1984) 36 B.R. 480, 483].

[p] Stock Exchange or Association Proceedings

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of any of the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(25)]:

- The commencement or continuation of an investigation or action by a securities self-regulatory organization to enforce the organization's regulatory power.

- The enforcement of an order or decision, other than for monetary sanctions, obtained in an action by a securities self-regulatory organization to enforce the organization's regulatory power.

- Any act taken by a securities self-regulatory organization to delist, delete, or refuse to permit quotation of any stock that does not meet applicable regulatory requirements.

A securities self-regulatory organization is either of the following [11 U.S.C. § 101(48A)]:

- A securities association registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under Section 15A of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. § 78o-3], such as the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (formerly known as the National Association of Securities Dealers).

- A national securities exchange registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission under Section 6 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [see 15 U.S.C. § 78f], such as the New York Stock Exchange.

[q] Transfers That Are Not Avoidable

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of any transfer that is not avoidable by the trustee under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544 and 549 (relating to avoidance of both pre-petition transfers and post-petition transfers) [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(24)].

If a transfer is avoidable under 11 U.S.C. §§ 544 and 549, it is not necessarily therefore subject to the automatic stay. For instance, under 11 U.S.C. § 549, the trustee can avoid certain unauthorized transfers of property initiated by the debtor, yet the Ninth Circuit has concluded that the automatic stay does not apply to transfers initiated by the debtor [Schwartz v. United States (In re Schwartz) (9th Cir. 1992) 954 F.2d 569, 574 ; see Irwin Mortg. Co. v. Tippett (In re Tippett) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2006) 338 B.R. 82, 89 (that conclusion became law of circuit when Schwartz was decided)]. (It appears that the Ninth Circuit's rationale supporting that conclusion in Schwartz was not invalidated by amendments of 11 U.S.C. § 362 made by the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8].)

[r] Exclusion of Debtor From Federal Benefit Programs

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the following:

- Any action by a guaranty agency [see 20 U.S.C. § 1085(j) (definition)] or the Secretary of Education regarding the eligibility of the debtor to participate in programs authorized under the Higher Education Act of 1965 (federal educational and student assistance programs) [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(16); see 20 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.].

- The exclusion of the debtor by the Secretary of Health and Human Services from participation in the Medicare program or any other Federal health care program [see 42 U.S.C. § 1320a-7b(f)] under Title XI [see 42 U.S.C. § 1302 et seq.] or Title XVIII [see 42 U.S.C. § 1395 et seq.] of the Social Security Act [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(28)].

[s] Proceedings Related to License or Similar Status

Filing a bankruptcy petition does not operate as a stay of the withholding, suspension, or restriction of a driver's license, a professional or occupational license, or a recreational license, under state law [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(2)(D); see 42 U.S.C. § 666(a)(16)].

Filing a bankruptcy petition also does not operate as a stay of the following acts:

- Any action by an accrediting agency regarding the accreditation status of the debtor as an educational institution [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(14)].

- Any action by a state licensing body regarding the licensure of the debtor as an educational institution [11 U.S.C. § 362(b)(15)].

- Disciplinary proceedings against a member of the State Bar of California [Cooper v. State Bar (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1016, 1024-1026, 239 Cal. Rptr. 709, 741 P.2d 206] .

[4] Duration of Stay

[a] Beginning Date

Usually the stay automatically begins on the filing of the bankruptcy petition [11 U.S.C. § 362(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Chapter 7 Case. Typically, a stay in Chapter 7 remains in effect for six months or less from the date of commencement of the Chapter 7 case.

If a single or joint case is filed by or against a debtor who is an individual, and if two or more single or joint cases of the debtor were pending within the previous year but were dismissed, other than a case refiled under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b), then the stay will not go into effect automatically on the filing of the later case [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(A)(i)]. On request of a party in interest, the court must promptly enter an order confirming that no stay is in effect [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(A)(ii), (j)].

If, within 30 days after the filing of the later case, a party in interest requests, the court may order the stay to take effect in the case as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may impose), after notice and a hearing, only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(B)]. The stay is effective on the date of the entry of the order allowing the stay to go into effect [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(C)].

In ruling on a motion for the stay to take effect, the court must presume that the case was filed not in good faith (but the presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary) as to all creditors in any of the following circumstances [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(D)(i)]:

- Two or more previous bankruptcy cases in which the individual was a debtor were pending within the one-year period.

- A previous bankruptcy case in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within the one-year period after the debtor either:

  - Failed to file or amend the petition or other documents as required by the Bankruptcy Code or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence will not be substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney);

  - Failed to provide adequate protection as ordered by the court; or

  - Failed to perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court.

- There has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous bankruptcy case, or any other reason to conclude that the later case will not be concluded with a discharge (if it is a case under chapter 7) or with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed (if it is a case under chapter 11 or 13).

The court likewise must entertain that presumption as to any creditor that commenced an action under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d) after obtaining relief from the stay [see § 94.33] in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of that case, the creditor's action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to the creditor's action [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4)(D)(ii)].

For discussion of the rules governing termination of a stay when a single or joint case is filed by or against debtor who is an individual in a case under Chapter 7, 11, or 13, and a single or joint case of the debtor was pending within the preceding one-year period but was dismissed [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)], see § 94.30[4][b].

[b] Ending Date--Stay Against Property-Related Acts

Ordinarily, and unless a creditor seeks relief from the stay [see § 94.33], the stay of an act against estate property continues until the property is no longer property of the estate [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(1); see § 94.3[4][d] for discussion of how personal property may cease to be part of an individual debtor's estate].

If a single or joint case is filed by or against a debtor who is an individual in a case under Chapter 7, 11, or 13, and if a single or joint case of the debtor was pending within the preceding one-year period but was dismissed, other than a case refiled under a chapter other than Chapter 7 after dismissal under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b), then the stay with respect to any action taken with respect to a debt or property securing a debt or with respect to any lease will terminate with respect to the debtor on the 30th day after the filing of the later case [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(A)]. On request of a party in interest, the court must issue an order confirming that the stay has been terminated [11 U.S.C. § 362(j)].

PRACTICE TIP:

The stay expires 30 days after filing if a prior case was pending within one year prior to the filing, unless the prior was case dismissed under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b) [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(A); see above] or unless the stay is extended by timely motion [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(B); see below]. Thus, in the circumstance of an abusive or serial filer, it may be more expedient simply to wait the 30 days and then proceed against the asset (e.g., evict the tenant or repossess the collateral) than it would be to file a motion for relief from the stay and wait out the time for obtaining relief from the stay after notice and a hearing before the bankruptcy court. Commentary by John A. Vos.

On the motion of a party in interest for continuation of the stay and on notice and a hearing, the court may extend the stay in particular cases as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may then impose) after notice and a hearing completed before the expiration of the 30-day period only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(B)].

In ruling on a motion for the stay to take effect, the court generally must presume that the case was not filed in good faith (but the presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary) as to all creditors in any of the following circumstances [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(C)(i)]:

- More than one previous case under any of Chapters 7, 11, and 13 in which the individual was a debtor was pending within the preceding one-year period.

- A previous case under any of Chapters 7, 11, and 13 in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within that one-year period, after the debtor either:

  - Failed to file or amend the petition or other documents as required by the Bankruptcy Code or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence shall not be a substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney);

  - Failed to provide adequate protection as ordered by the court; or

  - Failed to perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court.

- There has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous case under Chapter 7, 11, or 13 or any other reason to conclude that the later case will be concluded with a discharge (if it is a case under Chapter 7) or with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed (if it is a case under Chapter 11 or 13).

The court generally must likewise entertain the same presumption as to any creditor that commenced an action under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d) after obtaining relief from the stay [see § 94.33] in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of that case, the creditor's action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to the creditor's action [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3)(C)(ii)].

However, if a case commenced under Chapter 7, Chapter 11, or Chapter 13 was dismissed because of the creation of a debt repayment plan, then for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(3), discussed above, any subsequent case commenced by the debtor under any one those chapters cannot be presumed to be filed not in good faith [11 U.S.C. § 362(i)].

[c] Ending Date--Stay Against Other Acts

Ordinarily, and unless a creditor seeks relief from the stay [see § 94.33], the stay of any act other than an act against estate property, including acts against the debtor, continues until the earliest of the following times [11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(2)]:

- The time the case is closed;
- The time the case is dismissed; or
- In an individual's case under Chapter 7, or in a case under Chapter 11, 12, or 13, the time a discharge is granted or denied.

[d] How Personal Property May Cease to Be Part of Individual Debtor's Estate

If the debtor is an individual, the stay is terminated with respect to personal property of the estate or of the debtor, which either secures in whole or in part a claim or is subject to an unexpired lease, and thereupon the personal property is no longer property of the estate, if the debtor, within a specified 30-day period [see 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)], fails to take two steps [11 U.S.C. § 362(h)(1)]:

- The debtor fails to file a timely statement of intention, required under 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2), with respect to that personal property, indicating in the statement that the debtor will either:
  - Surrender the personal property;
  - Redeem the personal property [see 11 U.S.C. § 722];
  - Enter into a reaffirmation agreement [see 11 U.S.C. § 524(c)] applicable to the debt secured by the personal property; or
  - Assume the unexpired lease [see 11 U.S.C. § 365(p)] if the trustee does not do so.
- The debtor fails to take the action specified in the statement, in a timely manner, as the statement may be amended before expiration of the period for taking action--except when the statement specifies the debtor's intention to reaffirm the debt on the original contract terms, and the creditor refuses to agree to the reaffirmation on those terms.

The above rule does not apply, however, if the court determines, on the motion of the trustee filed before the expiration of the specified 30-day period [see 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(2)], after notice and a hearing, that the personal property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, and the court orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee. If the court does not make such a determination, the stay will terminate on the conclusion of the hearing on the motion [11 U.S.C. § 362(h)(2)].

PRACTICE TIP:

"Ride-Through" for Individual Debtors With Car Loans. The purpose of the 2005 amendments that created 11 U.S.C. §§ 521(a)(2) and 362(h), referenced above, was to curtail individual debtors' access to a practice that became known as "ride-through" because it mainly enabled debtors to keep their debt-encumbered cars by simply continuing to make payments, subject only to the risk of repossession by the creditor in the event of default but not subject to liability for a deficiency [see generally Dumont v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Dumont) (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1104, 1107-1112 (description of ride-through, comparison of pre-2005 law affecting ride-through with pertinent Bankruptcy Code provisions as amended by Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, and conclusion as to Congressional intent)]. Ride-through can still be achieved, perhaps, if the debtor takes the necessary first step of attempting to make a reaffirmation agreement, and if the creditor (or the bankruptcy court) then rejects that option. It appears that in such a situation, the debtor could keep the car--it would no longer be part of the estate--provided the debtor continued to make payments pursuant to the loan agreement (since otherwise the creditor could repossess it), while the risk of deficiency liability in the event of a default would be covered by the stay order and eventually by the discharge injunction. The Ninth Circuit notes that bankruptcy courts in other circuits have occasionally allowed ride-through in this scenario, although the law on ride-through remains unclear in the Ninth Circuit [Dumont v. Ford Motor Credit Co. (In re Dumont) (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1104, 1112-1113].

[5] Effect of Stay on Limitation Periods

[a] Possible Extension Under Bankruptcy Code

With respect to limitation periods for actions against the debtor on nondischarged claims, a limitation period that has not already expired before the filing of the bankruptcy petition will expire on the later of the following times [11 U.S.C. § 108(c)]:

- The ordinary time for expiration, plus any suspensions found in nonbankruptcy law.
- 30 days after notice of termination or expiration of the stay.

[b] Application to California Law

Code Civ. Proc. § 356 extends an applicable statute of limitation during the pendency of the bankruptcy stay [Eistrat v. Cekada (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 289, 291-292, 324 P.2d 881 ; Schumacher v. Worcester (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 376, 380, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] . That statute does not apply to other kinds of statutory time limits, however. For instance, the automatic stay would not toll the statutory three-month period for reinstatement of a mortgage after a notice of default [see Civ. Code § 2924(a)(2)], although that period is subject to a limited extension pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 108(b) [Napue v. Gor-Mey West, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615-619, 220 Cal. Rptr. 799] .

A judgment creditor under California law ordinarily is entitled to renew the judgment every 10 years, and the judgment becomes unenforceable if it is not renewed [Code Civ. Proc. § 683.020]. When a 10-year expiration date would fall during a bankruptcy stay, the effect of 11 U.S.C. § 108(c) is to extend the life of the judgment (until 30 days after notice of the termination or expiration of the stay), for purposes of the presenting and allowing of a claim against the estate on the basis of the judgment [Spirtos v. Moreno (In re Spirtos) (9th Cir. 2000) 221 F.3d 1079, 1081-1082] . In other words, the creditor would not be required to renew the judgment in order to prove a claim, and nonrenewal of the judgment could not be a ground for disallowance of a claim based on it. Whether the bankruptcy stay would preclude renewal of the judgment is another issue.

An action on a judgment must be commenced within 10 years after the judgment becomes final [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.5, 683.050]. If the judgment debtor files a bankruptcy petition so that the bankruptcy stay period overlaps or falls within that 10-year limitation period, then the limitation period is extended for as long as the bankruptcy stay provision [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1)] precludes the commencement of judicial proceedings against the debtor within that 10-year period [Kertesz v. Ostrovsky (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 369, 378, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 907 (citing both 11 U.S.C. § 108(c) and Code Civ. Proc. § 356); see § 4.30[4]].

The bankruptcy stay does not toll any limitation period affecting an action by the debtor [Shorr v. Kind (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 249, 254-255, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 ; Danielson v. ITT Indus. Credit Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 652-653, 245 Cal. Rptr. 126] . However, in some cases the bankruptcy stay could extend the period in which the debtor must file a notice of appeal [see ECC Construction, Inc. v. Oak Park Calabasas Homeowners Assn. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1040, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 580 (11 U.S.C. § 108(c)(2) "applies to provide a 30-day extension of the time in which a trial court may rule on a motion for new trial, if the ... stay is in effect while the motion is pending"; therefore, period for debtor to file notice of appeal after denial of motion for new trial is extended)].

§ 94.31 Stay of Proceedings Against Certain Co-Debtors in Chapter 13 Case

After the filing of the petition under Chapter 13, or the issuance of an order converting a case to a Chapter 13, a creditor may not act, or commence or continue any civil action, to collect all or any part of a consumer debt of the debtor from any other individual who is liable on the debt together with the debtor or who secured the debt, unless one of the following conditions is satisfied:

- The other individual became liable on or secured the debt in the ordinary course of that individual's business [11 U.S.C. § 1301(a)(1)]. Thus, the stay against a co-debtor does not apply to a commercial debt, as opposed to one undertaken for personal, family, household, or other consumer purposes [see In re SFW, Inc. (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1988) 18 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 584, 83 B.R. 27, 31-32 (applying similar provision, 11 U.S.C. § 1201, in Chapter 12 case: collection from guarantors of commercial loan, to corporate family-farmer debtor of which they were shareholders, was not stayed)].

- The Chapter 13 case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under Chapter 7 or 11 [11 U.S.C. § 1301(a)(2)].

The creditor in a Chapter 13 case may present a negotiable instrument, however, and give notice of the dishonor of such an instrument [11 U.S.C. § 1301(b)].

For discussion of availability of relief from the stay when there is an actual co-debtor who received the consideration for the claim held by the creditor, see § 94.34.

§ 94.32 Violation of Stay by Creditor

[1] Liability for Damages for Willful Violation

[a] General Rule

A creditor that willfully violates a stay may be liable for any actual damages, including costs and attorney's fees, and, in appropriate circumstances, may also be liable for punitive damages [11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1); see In re Zartun (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1983) 8 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1103, 30 B.R. 543, 546 (decided under prior law; imposing contempt sanction sufficient to restore the status quo before the violation)]. The statute allows any "individual"--not only the debtor, but also another creditor (whose interest in the estate could be diminished or otherwise harmed by a violation of the bankruptcy stay)--to recover damages. By limiting the availability of damages to individuals, Congress signaled a special interest in redressing harms that are unique to human beings [Dawson v. Washington Mut. Bank (In re Dawson) (9th Cir. 2004) 390 F.3d 1139, 1146 (applying former 11 U.S.C. § 362(h))].

One such harm is emotional distress, which can afflict individuals but not organizations. The "actual damages" that may be recovered by an individual who is injured by a willful violation of the bankruptcy stay include damages for emotional distress. A claim for emotional distress damages is available if the individual provides clear evidence to establish that significant harm occurred as a result of the violation. To be entitled to damages for emotional distress under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1), an individual must (1) suffer significant harm, (2) clearly establish the significant harm, and (3) demonstrate a causal connection between that significant harm and the violation of the bankruptcy stay (as distinct, for instance, from the anxiety and pressures inherent in the bankruptcy process) [Dawson v. Washington Mut. Bank (In re Dawson) (9th Cir. 2004) 390 F.3d 1139, 1146, 1148-1149 (applying former 11 U.S.C. § 362(h))].

The statutory reference to "actual damages, including costs and attorneys' fees" [11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1)] means compensation for the debtor's injury resulting from the stay violation. The damages, costs, and fees that can be recovered are limited to amounts that are properly allocable to efforts to enforce the automatic stay and to prevent enforcement of court orders in violation of the stay. If the debtor sues to recover those amounts after making those efforts, the debtor is not entitled to an award of attorney's fees in connection with that later action [Sternberg v. Johnston (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 1114, 1122-1124].

Although a Chapter 7 trustee is not an "individual" entitled to recover attorney's fees as damages for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1), a trustee can recover damages in the form of costs and attorney's fees under 11 U.S.C. § 105(a) as a sanction for ordinary civil contempt [Havelock v. Taxel (In re Pace) (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 187, 192-194 (applying former 11 U.S.C. § 362(h))].

[b] What Constitutes "Willful" Violation

A "willful violation" does not require a specific intent to violate the bankruptcy stay. Damages can be awarded on findings that the creditor knew of the bankruptcy stay and that the creditor's actions that violated the stay were intentional. Whether the creditor believed in good faith that it had a right to the property is not relevant to whether the act was "willful" or whether compensation must be awarded [In re Bloom (9th Cir. 1989) 875 F.2d 224, 227 ; In re Abrams (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1991) 25 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 15, 127 B.R. 239, 243] . Moreover, ordinarily the creditor will be presumed to know about the automatic stay when the creditor knows facts that would enable a reasonable person in the creditor's position to obtain confirmation that the bankruptcy case has been commenced [see, e.g., Morris v. Peralta (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2004) 317 B.R. 381, 389 (creditor received case name and docket number in debtor's first response to creditor's request for case information, and creditor could have confirmed filing of case by making telephone call to court)]. (This presumption might not be appropriate in a case commenced in bad faith by an individual debtor [see 11 U.S.C. § 362(c)(4); § 94.30[4][a]].)

PRACTICE TIP:

Under the 2005 amendments, a creditor may designate an address to be used by all bankruptcy courts. If notice is not given to that address, then notice is not effective until brought to the attention of the creditor [11 U.S.C. § 342(f), (g); Pub. L. 109-8, § 315]. This provision serves to protect an innocent creditor who acts in good faith and without valid notice from liability for the damages that can flow from willful violation of a stay.

[c] Awarding Punitive Damages

The standard for imposition of punitive damages has not been specifically defined in the Ninth Circuit. Courts are traditionally reluctant, however, to grant punitive damages without some showing of reckless or callous disregard for the law or the rights of others, and 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1) limits an award of punitive damages to "appropriate circumstances" [In re Bloom (9th Cir. 1989) 875 F.2d 224, 228 (applying former 11 U.S.C. § 362(h))].

[d] Recovery Limited to Actual Damages

If a willful violation is based on an action taken in the good faith belief that 11 U.S.C. § 362(h) applies to the debtor--in other words, a good faith belief that in an individual case, the stay was terminated as to personal property securing a claim or subject to an unexpired lease, and the property therefore was no longer property of the estate [see § 94.30[4][d]]--then the recovery under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1) [see § 94.32[1][a] -[c]] against the person, estate, trust, governmental unit, or U.S. trustee that took the action will be limited to actual damages [11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(2)].

[2] Foreclosure in Violation of Stay May Be Avoided

The trustee or the debtor generally may avoid a post-petition foreclosure sale conducted in violation of the stay. A post-petition foreclosure sale conducted in violation of the stay will not be set aside, however, if it was to a good-faith purchaser for present fair value who had no notice of the bankruptcy case, unless the property was purchased after a copy or notice of the bankruptcy petition was recorded in the county in which the property is situated and was sold [11

U.S.C. § 549(a), (c)].

9-94 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 94.33

AUTHOR: Reviewed by John A. Vos Mr. Vos is a member of the State Bar of California and maintains a practice in San Rafael, California. Mr. Vos practices in the area of bankruptcy, representing creditors, debtors, and trustees.

§ 94.33 Obtaining Relief From Bankruptcy Stay

[1] Relief on Noticed Motion; Types of Relief

On the request of a party in interest, after notice and a hearing, the court may grant relief from the bankruptcy stay by any of the following actions [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)]:

- Termination.
- Annulment.
- Modification.
- Conditioning the stay on provision of adequate protection to the creditor.

For forms related to relief from the stay, see § 94.100 et seq.

[2] Grounds for Relief

[a] Cause; Lack of Adequate Protection

An order granting limited relief from an automatic stay to allow a creditor to proceed to judgment in a pending state-court action is effective only as to those claims actually pending in the state court at the time the order modifying the stay is issued, or that were expressly brought to the attention of the bankruptcy court during the relief-from-stay proceedings [In re Wardrobe (9th Cir. 2009) 559 F.3d 932, 937].

PRACTICE TIP:

Avoiding Stay Violation After Relief. In the event that a previously unforeseen cause of action becomes apparent during a trial proceeding pursuant to an order granting relief from the automatic stay, numerous avenues of relief are available to a creditor to ensure that any resulting judgment does not violate the scope of the order. A creditor could petition the bankruptcy court for relief that is broad enough to encompass the cause of action, or could seek an order from the bankruptcy court clarifying the relief-from-stay order. If a judgment has been entered on a cause of action that was not pending at the time the relief was granted, the creditor could seek retroactive relief from the stay that is broad enough to encompass the judgment [In re Wardrobe (9th Cir. 2009) 559 F.3d 932, 937].

The court may grant relief from the bankruptcy stay if the court finds cause, including the lack of adequate protection of the creditor's interest [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(1)]. The following are some statutory examples of "adequate protection" [11 U.S.C. § 361]:

- Periodic cash payments equal, at least, to the amount by which the value of the creditor's interest in the collateral is depreciating.

- Replacement liens in assets that are not encumbered or in which the existing liens are less than the value of the creditor's interest in the property's value.

- Any other method of providing the secured creditor with the indubitable equivalent of the creditor's interest in the estate's property.

In Chapter 12 cases, similar but specially modified definitions of adequate protection apply instead of the foregoing provisions [see 11 U.S.C. § 1205]. The following are examples of "inadequate protection" that may constitute cause for relief from the stay:

- Lack of insurance covering the property.

- Unpaid property taxes.

- Deterioration of the property or collateral.

[b] Debtor Lacks Equity

The court may grant relief from the bankruptcy stay under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) with respect to a stay of an act against property if the court finds that the debtor has no equity in the property and the property is not necessary to an effective reorganization of the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2); see United Sav. Ass'n v. Timbers of Inwood Forest Assocs., Ltd. (1988) 484 U.S. 365, 375-376, 108 S. Ct. 626, 98 L. Ed. 2d 740, 751] . The creditor must prove both of those facts [see In re Miller (Bankr. S.D. Ind. 1981) 13 B.R. 110, 118 ; In re McAloon (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1980) 1 B.R. 766, 767-768, 1 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 306, 309, 5 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1207].

Relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) is clearly is available in Chapter 11 cases when both requirements of 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) are met [see, e.g., Stewart v. Gurley (9th Cir. 1984) 745 F.2d 1194, 1195] . Courts are in conflict, however, as to whether relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) can be allowed in Chapter 7 and Chapter 13 cases.

Some courts have held or suggested that relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) is not available at all in a Chapter 13 or Chapter 7 case. The reasoning is that because 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) refers to "reorganization," this provision is intended to apply only in Chapter 11 cases, which are the only cases involving a "reorganization" [see In re Fischer (Bankr. D. Alaska 1992) 136 B.R. 819, 825 (noting that the Ninth Circuit has not faced issue of applicability in Chapter 13); Brown Transp. Truckload v. Humboldt Express (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1990) 23 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1221, 1227, 118 B.R.

889, 894, 20 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1599 (noting in dictum that 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) offers no relief to Chapter 7 debtor); In re Feimster (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1979) 1 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 956, 959-960, 3 B.R. 11, 14, 6 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 131 (11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) unavailable to Chapter 13 debtor)].

Other courts have construed "reorganization" to include a debt adjustment plan, and have thus concluded that relief may be granted under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) in a Chapter 13 case [see In re Scott (Bankr. E.D. Okla. 1990) 121 B.R. 605, 607, 21 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 82 ; In re Kehm (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1988) 19 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 815, 820, 90 B.R. 117, 122-123] . In a Chapter 13 case, however, some courts have noted that relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) rarely will be granted with respect to a debtor's principal residence, since saving the debtor's home is usually essential to an effective Chapter 13 "reorganization" [see In re Elmore (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1988) 94 B.R. 670, 677-678 ; In re Artishon (Bankr. D. Minn. 1984) 39 B.R. 890, 893] . Others are reluctant to grant relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) with respect to any property, because it would be at odds with the Chapter 13 plan providing for cure of default [In re Evans (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1983) 30 B.R. 530, 531-532] .

Still another view is that relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2) is available in Chapter 7 cases and may be granted simply on a showing of the debtor's lack of equity. Under this view, which was followed by a Bankruptcy Appellate Panel in the Ninth Circuit, it is only in a Chapter 11 case that a creditor seeking relief must also show that the property in question is not necessary for effective reorganization, because it is only in this situation that a reorganization is involved. A creditor seeking relief in a Chapter 7 case may disregard this requirement since it is satisfied as a matter of law [see In re Preuss (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1981) 15 B.R. 896, 897, 8 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 563] . This same reasoning has been applied in a Chapter 13 case [see In re Branch (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1981) 10 B.R. 227, 229, 7 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 540 (only lack of equity need be proved in Chapter 13 case to obtain relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2))].

[c] Single-Asset Real Estate Case

With respect to a stay of an act against property in a single-asset real estate case, the court may grant relief to a creditor whose claim is secured by an interest in the real estate, unless, not later than the date that is the later of either (1) 90 days after the entry of the order for relief, or (2) 30 days after the court determines that the debtor is subject to this statutory rule, either [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(3)]:

- The debtor has filed a plan of reorganization that has a reasonable possibility of being confirmed within a reasonable time.

- The debtor has commenced monthly payments, and:

  - The payments may, in the debtor's sole discretion, notwithstanding 11 U.S.C. § 363(c)(2), be made from rents or other income generated before, on, or after the date of the commencement of the case by or from the property to each creditor whose claim is secured by the real estate (other than a claim secured by a judgment lien or by an unmatured statutory lien); and

  - The payments are in an amount equal to interest at the then applicable nondefault contract rate of interest on the value of the creditor's interest in the real estate.

[d] Claim Secured by Real Estate in Ordinary Case

With respect to a stay of an act against real property in an ordinary case, the court may grant relief to a creditor whose claim is secured by an interest in the real property if the court finds that the filing of the petition was part of a scheme to delay, hinder, and defraud creditors that involved either of the following [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(4)]:

- Transfer of all or part ownership of, or other interest in, such real property without the consent of the secured creditor or court approval.

- Multiple bankruptcy filings affecting such real property.

If recorded in compliance with applicable state law governing notices of interests or liens in real property, the order for relief will be binding in any other bankruptcy case purporting to affect that real property and filed not later than two years after the date of the entry of the order by the court, except that a debtor in a subsequent bankruptcy case may move for relief from the order based on changed circumstances or for good cause shown, after notice and a hearing. Any federal, state, or local governmental unit that accepts notices of interests or liens in real property must accept any certified copy of the order for relief for indexing and recording [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)].

[3] Burden of Proof on Motion for Relief

Once the party seeking relief from the stay has made a prima facie showing of grounds for relief, the debtor or party opposing the relief generally has the burden of proof on all issues except the extent of the debtor's equity in the property [11 U.S.C. § 362(g)]. If, however, the debtor or trustee is relying on an equity cushion as adequate protection, the debtor or trustee also has the burden of proving that equity [In re Gauvin (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1982) 8 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 359, 361, 24 B.R. 578, 580, 10 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 219] .

[4] Preparing and Serving the Moving Papers

Local rules should be consulted to determine particular requirements concerning the preparation, filing, and service of moving papers [see § 94.100 (form for notice of motion)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Sending Notice of Motion. Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4001 requires service of the motion on all creditors in a Chapter 11 case. On request and for a nominal fee, the court clerk's office will provide a list of creditors in the form of preprinted, gummed mailing labels. Commentary by John A. Vos.

Most courts require the use of a pre-printed form known as the Relief From Stay Cover Sheet, which summarizes the facts for the court. Counsel should check with the clerk's office or web site where the hearing will be held to verify local practice and to obtain a copy of the form.

[5] Hearing Procedure

A motion for relief from the bankruptcy stay is essentially an expedited contested matter [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4001(a)(1)]. There must be a hearing within 30 days after the request for relief. If this initial hearing is a preliminary evidentiary hearing, the final hearing must be concluded within 30 days after the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, unless the 30-day period is extended with the consent of the parties in interest or for a specific time the court finds is required by compelling circumstances [11 U.S.C. § 362(e)(1); Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4001(a)(2)].

The court may order the stay continued until the conclusion of the final hearing, and must do so if there is a reasonable likelihood that the party opposing relief from stay will prevail at the conclusion of the final hearing [11 U.S.C. § 362(e)(1)].

If any of the hearing deadlines are missed, the stay automatically terminates with respect to the moving party, unless the court has ordered the stay continued until the conclusion of the final hearing or the moving party has waived the time limitations [11 U.S.C. § 362(e)(1); see, e.g., In re Herrera (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1982) 23 B.R. 796, 797, 10 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 79] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Combining Motions. The time for notice of the hearing on motion for relief from stay is shorter than for a regular motion in Bankruptcy Court, but only for this motion alone. Generally, the relief from stay calendar dates are separate from the court's regular law and motion hearing dates. However, if a motion for relief from stay is combined with a motion for any other relief (such as for abstention), an expedited hearing is not available. Commentary by John A. Vos.

Notwithstanding the above, in a case under Chapter 7, Chapter 11, or Chapter 13 in which the debtor is an individual, the stay will automatically terminate on the date that is 60 days after a request for relief is made by a party in interest, unless the court renders a final decision during the 60-day period beginning on the date of the request, or unless the 60-day period is extended either by agreement of all parties in interest or by the court for a specific period of time that the court finds is required for good cause, as described in findings made by the court [11 U.S.C. § 362(e)(2)].

[6] Ex Parte Relief or Relief by Stipulation

As an alternative to the hearing procedure outlined above, the court may grant relief without a hearing on request of a party in interest on a showing that the relief is necessary to prevent irreparable damage to an interest in property [11 U.S.C. § 362(f)].

In addition, the parties may seek court approval of an agreement for relief from the stay [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4001(d)]. Note, however, that a stipulation allowing relief from the stay must be noticed to creditors before approval. Therefore, it may take the creditor longer to obtain relief by stipulation than by noticed motion.

§ 94.34 Obtaining Relief From Automatic Stay Against Co-Debtor in Chapter 13 Case

On request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, the court may grant relief to the creditor from the stay of actions against the co-debtor of a Chapter 13 debtor [11 U.S.C. § 1301(c); see § 94.31]. The court may grant relief if any of the following circumstances exist:

- As between the debtor and the co-debtor, the co-debtor received the consideration for the claim held by the creditor [11 U.S.C. § 1301(c)(1)].

- The plan filed by the debtor proposes not to pay the claim [11 U.S.C. § 1301(c)(2)]. Thus, the court may grant relief from the stay to the extent that the plan does not provide for full payment of the debt [In re Bradley (5th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 1409, 1412-1413 ; In re Jacobsen (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1982) 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 970, 972, 20 B.R. 648, 650, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 162] .

- The creditor's interest would be irreparably harmed by the continuation of the stay [11 U.S.C. § 1301(c)(3)].

When a creditor requests relief from the co-debtor stay on the grounds that the plan does not propose to pay the debt, the stay automatically terminates 20 days after the filing of the creditor's request unless the debtor or the co-debtor files and serves written objections to the proposed action [11 U.S.C. § 1301(d)].

§ 94.40 Abstention or Withdrawal of Jurisdiction

[1] Grounds for Abstention

The district court may abstain from hearing a proceeding arising under the Bankruptcy Code or related to a bankruptcy case in the interests of justice or comity or respect for state courts or law [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1); see 11 U.S.C. § 305 (dismissal or suspension of bankruptcy case)].

Abstention is required in a related proceeding, on timely motion of a party, if all of the following apply [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(2)]:

- The related proceeding is based on a state law claim or state law cause of action.
- The only basis for federal court jurisdiction over the related proceeding is that it is related to the bankruptcy case.
- The related proceeding is commenced and can be timely adjudicated in the state court.

Mandatory abstention does not apply to noncore personal injury tort and wrongful death proceedings that are to be tried either in the district court in which the bankruptcy case is pending or in the district in which the claim arose, as decided by the district court in which the bankruptcy case is pending [28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(4), (5)].

PRACTICE TIP:
Generally, bankruptcy courts are unwilling to try a noncore proceeding in which a party is entitled by right to a jury trial. Therefore, whether one insists upon or waives a right to trial by jury may steer the case away from, or toward, resolution of the matter in a bankruptcy court as opposed to some other forum. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[2] Motion for Abstention

Unless a district judge orders otherwise, the bankruptcy judge hears the abstention motion and files a report and recommendation for disposition of the motion, a copy of which is served on the parties to the proceeding [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(b)].

Within 10 days of service, a party may serve and file written objections, and arrange for the transcription of the record [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 5011(b), 9033(b)]. The bankruptcy judge may extend the time for filing objections for cause for an additional 20 days [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9033(c)].

The district judge must make a de novo review on the record or, after additional evidence, of any portion of the bankruptcy judge's findings or conclusions to which objection is made. The district judge may accept, reject, or modify the proposed findings and conclusions, receive further evidence, or recommit the matter to the bankruptcy judge with instructions [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 5011(b), 9033(d)].

Neither the motion nor a decision on the motion for abstention gives relief from the bankruptcy stay of 11 U.S.C. § 362 [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(2)]. To proceed against property of the bankruptcy estate, a party or affected entity must additionally seek relief from the stay [see § 94.33].

A motion for abstention does not stay the administration of or any proceeding in the case. However, the bankruptcy judge may stay the proceedings pending disposition of the motion, on terms and conditions that are proper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(c)].

For a form for a motion for abstention, see § 94.112.

[3] Withdrawal of Reference

"Withdrawal" refers to a district court's power to withdraw from a bankruptcy court a bankruptcy case or related matter originally referred to the bankruptcy court.

A motion for withdrawal of a case or proceeding is heard by a district judge [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(a)]. A motion for withdrawal of reference generally is considered timely if it is made before the time for filing responsive pleadings on the matter or motion sought to be withdrawn [see, e.g, In re Baldwin-United Corp. (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1984) 47 B.R. 898, 900 , (seeking removal of debtor's motion to dispose of asset)].

If the resolution of whether the matter should be withdrawn from the bankruptcy court involves federal laws regulating organizations or activities affecting interstate commerce, withdrawal on timely motion is mandatory [28 U.S.C. § 157(d); see Tom Carter v. Lummis (C.D. Cal. 1984) 11 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1216, 1221, 44 B.R. 605, 609, 12 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 536] .

A motion for withdrawal does not stay the administration of or any proceeding in the case. However, the bankruptcy judge may stay the proceedings pending disposition of the motion, on terms and conditions that are proper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(c)].

§ 94.41 Removal of Related State Court Proceedings to Bankruptcy Court

A party may remove any claim or cause of action in a civil action to the bankruptcy court for the district in which the civil action is pending, if that district court has jurisdiction over the claim or cause of action under 28 U.S.C. § 1334 [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a)].

The following actions may not be removed [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a)]:

- Proceedings before the United States Tax Court.

- Civil actions commenced by a government unit to enforce the governmental unit's police or regulatory power.

Removal is accomplished by filing a notice of removal with the clerk of the district court and a copy of the notice with the clerk of the court from which the action is removed [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(a)(1), (c); see §§ 94.110, 94.111 (request for and notice of removal)]. The state court action being removed is likely to be stayed by 11 U.S.C. § 362 [see § 94.30]. A notice of removal generally must be filed within 30 days after entry of an order terminating the stay with respect to the claim or cause of action or 30 days after service of summons or filing of the initial pleading [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(a)(2), (3)].

The court to which the claim or cause of action is removed may remand the claim or cause of action on any equitable ground [28 U.S.C. § 1452(b)]. An order remanding a claim or cause of action, or a decision not to remand, is not reviewable by the Court of Appeals or Supreme Court [28 U.S.C. § 1452(b); but see In re Borelli (N.D. Cal. 1991) 132 B.R. 648, 651 (remand decision by bankruptcy court is reviewable by district court)].

Once a state court action has been removed to a bankruptcy court, the state court has no jurisdiction, even if removal was improper, until the bankruptcy court remands [see In re Princess Louise Corp. (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1987) 17 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 663, 669-670, 77 B.R. 766, 772, 16 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 416] .

Unless the district court orders otherwise, motions for remand are heard by the bankruptcy judge, who files a report and recommendations for review by the district court [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(e)].

§ 94.50 Governing Law

Discharges in Chapter 7, 11, 12, and 13 bankruptcies are governed by 11 U.S.C. §§ 727, 1141(d), 1228, and 1328, respectively. The effect of discharge is set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 524. Exceptions to discharge are enumerated in 11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a), (b), 1141(d)(2)-(6), 1228, and 1328. Jurisdiction to determine dischargeability is governed by 11 U.S.C. § 523(c), 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(a), (b)(2)(I), 1334, and 1452, and Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007.

§ 94.51 Effect of Discharge in Bankruptcy

[1] Debtor Is Released From Liability for Debts

A discharge under the Bankruptcy Code releases the debtor from personal liability for (1) all of the debtor's pre-petition debts that are properly listed in the appropriate bankruptcy schedules and (2) all allowed claims [11 U.S.C. § 727(b)].

[2] Judgments on Discharged Debts Are Voided

A discharge under the Bankruptcy Code voids any judgment obtained at any time, to the extent that the judgment is a determination of the personal liability of the debtor with respect to any discharged debt, whether or not discharge of the debt is waived [11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(1); see generally Lone Star Security & Video, Inc. v. Gurrola (In re Gurrola) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) 328 B.R. 158, 164 (effect of statute is to void judgments obtained before, during, and after bankruptcy and to nullify all putative waivers of specific debts, including both express waivers and waivers by conduct)].

[3] Attempts to Collect Discharged Debts Are Enjoined

A discharge under the Bankruptcy Code operates to permanently enjoin the commencement or continuation of an action, the employment of process, or an act to collect, recover, or offset any discharged debt as a personal liability of the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2)]. However, the discharge does not operate as an injunction against an act by a creditor that is the holder of a secured claim if the following conditions are satisfied [11 U.S.C. § 524(j)]:

- The creditor retains a security interest in real property that is the principal residence of the debtor.
- The creditor acts in the ordinary course of business between the creditor and the debtor.

- The creditor does nothing more than seek or obtain periodic payments associated with a valid security interest in lieu of pursuing in rem relief to enforce the lien.

The willful failure of a creditor to credit payments received under a confirmed plan--unless the order confirming the plan is revoked, the plan is in default, or the creditor has not received payments required to be made under the plan in the manner required by the plan (including crediting the amounts required under the plan)--is a violation of the injunction under 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2) if the act of the creditor to collect and failure to credit payments in the manner required by the plan caused material injury to the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 524(i)].

[4] Proceeding Against Post-Petition Community Property Is Enjoined

A discharge under the Bankruptcy Code operates to permanently enjoin the commencement or continuation of an action or attempts to collect allowable community claims in any way from community property acquired after the filing of the petition. However, those community claims excepted from discharge or that were or would have been excepted from discharge had the debtor's spouse filed bankruptcy with or after the debtor are not enjoined. This protection also is denied if the debtor's spouse has been denied a discharge in a case commenced within six years of the filing of debtor's petition [11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(3)]. This provision has the effect of allowing the "sins" of either spouse to be visited on the community property interests of both [11 U.S.C. §§ 524(b), 541(a)(2); see 3 Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed., § 524.01[2] (Matthew Bender)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Allowable Community Claims. Because discharge in bankruptcy can protect the interests of both spouses when only one spouse files, counsel should be careful to check whether grounds to contest discharge of the non-filing spouse exist. Failure to timely file a challenge to the discharge of the non-filing spouse in the filing spouse's proceeding usually prevents recovery at a later time from the non-filing spouse [11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(3)]. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[5] Co-Debtors and Guarantors Remain Liable

Except as it concerns the discharge of community claims, the discharge of the debtor does not affect co-debtors or guarantors on the same debt [11 U.S.C. § 524(e); see Underhill v. Royal (9th Cir. 1985) 769 F.2d 1426, 1432 (bankruptcy court lacks power, even with consent of debtor and other creditors, to release co-debtors)].

§ 94.52 Dischargeability

[1] In General

The types of debts that remain undischarged differ depending on the chapter, and in a Chapter 12 or 13 case, depending on whether the plan was completed or the debtor obtained a hardship discharge despite failure to complete payments under the plan. In addition, discharge operates only with respect to personal liability, so liens remain enforceable after discharge unless they are avoided by one of several provisions [11 U.S.C. §§ 101(12) ("debt" defined), 506(d)(2) (lien is not lost by secured creditor's failure to file proof of claim), 522(c) (specified debts are enforceable from exempt property after discharge), 524(a)(2) (effect of discharge), 727(b) (discharge of unsecured debts and allowed claims); see 11 U.S.C. § 522(f) (debtor's power to avoid certain liens impairing exemptions)].

Completion of a mandatory financial management class is required to obtain a discharge [11 U.S.C. §§ 727(a)(11), 1328(g)(1)]. No time limit for the debtor's completion of the financial management class is stated in the statute, however.

[2] Discharge in Chapter 7 Cases

A discharge under Chapter 7 discharges an individual debtor from all debts that arose before the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, except any debt of the type specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) [11 U.S.C. § 727(b); see § 94.20[3][c]].

Only an individual may be discharged from debt in a Chapter 7 case [11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(1); see NLRB v. Better Bldg. Supply Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 837 F.2d 377, 379 (corporate debt not dischargeable in Chapter 7 and survives against corporation or alter ego that resumes operations)].

[3] Discharge in Chapter 11 Cases

The provisions of a confirmed plan bind all creditors whether their claims are impaired by the plan or they accepted the plan [11 U.S.C. § 1141(a)].

Except as otherwise provided for in the plan, or the order confirming it, the confirmation of a plan in a Chapter 11 case generally discharges the debtor from all debts that arose before the date of the confirmation and debts of the types specified in the following code sections [11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1); see § 94.20[5][g]]:

- 11 U.S.C. § 502(g), relating to claims arising from rejection of executory contracts after a petition has been filed.

- 11 U.S.C. § 502(h), relating to claims arising from the recovery of property after a petition has been filed.

- 11 U.S.C. § 502(i), relating to claims for taxes arising after a petition has been filed.

However, for an individual debtor, a debt is not discharged in a Chapter 11 case if it is excepted from discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) [11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(2)]; and for a corporation, certain debts arising from fraud are not discharged [see 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(6)].

Confirmation of a Chapter 11 plan also does not discharge a debtor if (1) the plan provided for liquidation or all or substantially all of the property of the estate; (2) the debtor does not engage in business after consummation of the plan; and (3) the debtor would be denied a discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 727(a) if the case were brought under Chapter 7 [11 U.S.C. § 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(3); *see Torrington Livestock Cattle Co. v. Berg (In re Berg) (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2010) 423 B.R. 671, 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 524, at 14 (all three elements of section 1141(d)(3) must be established before Chapter 11 debtor's discharge may be denied; Chapter 11 discharge cannot be denied solely on ground that debtor would have been denied discharge under Chapter 7)].

The court may approve a written waiver of discharge executed by a debtor in a Chapter 11 case [11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(4)].

In a case in which the debtor is an individual, confirmation of the plan generally does not discharge any debt provided for in the plan until the court grants a discharge, after notice and a hearing [see 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(5)].

[4] Discharge in Chapter 12 Cases

A Chapter 12 discharge does not discharge debts specified in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) [11 U.S.C. § 1228(a), (c); see discussion in § 94.53]. If the debtor completed all payments under a Chapter 12 plan other than those provided for under 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)(5) (debts on which the last payment is due after the date on which the final payment under the plan is due) or 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)(9) (revesting), the order of discharge discharges the debtor from all debts provided for by the plan allowed under 11 U.S.C. § 503 or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, except any debt specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) and those provided for in 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)(5) and (9) [11 U.S.C. § 1228(a); see § 94.20[6][g]].

A hardship discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 1228(b) discharges the debtor from all unsecured debts provided for by the plan or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, except debts specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) [see § 94.53] and those provided for in 11 U.S.C. § 1222(b)(5) and (9) [11 U.S.C. § 1228(c)].

The court may approve a written waiver of discharge executed by a debtor in a Chapter 12 case [see 11 U.S.C. § 1228(a)].

[5] Discharge in Chapter 13 Cases

As soon as practicable after the debtor completes all payments under a Chapter 13 plan, the court generally is required to grant a discharge [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a); but see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)-(h) (possible exceptions)] of all debts provided for by that plan or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, except the following [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)]:

- Debts provided for under 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) (debts on which the last payment is due after the date the final payment under the plan is due).

- Debts of a kind specified in 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8)(C) (a tax required to be collected or withheld and for which the debtor is liable in whatever capacity).

- Debts specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(B), (C), (2)-(5), (8), and (9) [see § 94.53].

- Debts for restitution, or a criminal fine, included in a sentence on the debtor's conviction of a crime.

- Debts for restitution, or damages, awarded in a civil action against the debtor as a result of willful or malicious injury by the debtor that caused personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual [*see Waag v. Permann (In re Waag) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2009) 418 B.R. 373, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3418, at *9, 18 (statute does not differentiate between judgment entered before petition is filed and one entered after petition is filed; therefore, prepetition judgment is not prerequisite to prevailing on nondischargeability claim under this provision)].

The amendment making a restitution debt to a crime victim nondischargeable in a Chapter 13 case was intended to abrogate Pennsylvania Dep't of Pub. Welfare v. Davenport (1990) 495 U.S. 552, 564, 110 S. Ct. 2126, 109 L. Ed. 2d 588, 600 ; see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(3) (debt for restitution, or criminal time, included in a sentence on debtor's conviction of a crime is nondischargeable) [see H.R. Rep. No. 681(I), 101st Cong., 2d Sess. (1990)]; thus it implicitly abrogated People v. Goulart (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 71, 85, 273 Cal. Rptr. 477 .

A hardship discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b) discharges the debtor from all unsecured debts provided for by the plan or disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502, except any debt specified as nondischargeable by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) and debts provided for in 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) [11 U.S.C. § 1328(c)].

The court may approve a written waiver of discharge executed by a debtor in a Chapter 13 case [see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)].

No discharge is allowed under Chapter 13 if the debtor had received a discharge under Chapters 7, 11, or 12 within four years preceding the date of the order for relief under Chapter 13 [11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(1)], or a previous discharge under Ch 13 within two years from the date of the order [11 U.S.C. § 1328(f)(2)].

9-94 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 94.53

AUTHOR: Reviewed by John A. Vos Mr. Vos is a member of the State Bar of California and maintains a practice in San Rafael, California. Mr. Vos practices in the area of bankruptcy, representing creditors, debtors, and trustees.

§ 94.53 Nondischargeable Debts

[1] Special Debts

There are two distinct issues to consider in the dischargeability analysis: first, the existence of the debt, which is subject to the applicable state statute of limitations; and second, the nature of that debt, which controls whether it is nondischargeable [Banks v. Gill Distrib. Ctrs., Inc. (In re Banks) (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 862, 868] . The Bankruptcy Code enumerates the types of debts that are nondischargeable, listed below. Of these, the following types are special because Congress reserved exclusively to the Bankruptcy Court the power to determine their dischargeability, and they are subject to a shortened period of limitations of actions [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1)]:

- Debts arising from common law fraud [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)].
- Debts arising from fraud or defalcation in a fiduciary capacity [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4)].
- Debts arising from willful and malicious injuries [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6)].

Prior to the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8; see § 94.10[3]], the same was true also for debts, other than for domestic support, arising from a marital settlement agreement or judgment [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15) (such debts are nondischargeable)].

[2] Other Debts of Individual

[a] Uniform Rule on Nondischargeability

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding, whether under Chapter 7 [see 11 U.S.C. § 727], Chapter 11 [see 11 U.S.C. § 1141], Chapter 12 [see 11 U.S.C. § 1228(a), (b)], or Chapter 13 [see 11 U.S.C. § 1328], does not discharge an individual debtor from the types of debts discussed in [b]-[r], below.

[b] Unscheduled Debts

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts not listed on schedules filed in the bankruptcy proceeding [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3); see generally Staffer v. Predovich (In re Staffer) (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 967, 971-973 (creditor's action may be filed at any time, under Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(b), but is subject to defense of laches)]. However, the Ninth Circuit has held that when the underlying bankruptcy case was a no-asset case, the failure to schedule and notice a creditor may result in discharge of that debt. This is like a "no harm, no foul" rule: had the creditor been notified, it would have received nothing anyway [Beezley v. California Land Title Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 994 F.2d 1433] .

[c] Debts Not Discharged in Previous Bankruptcies

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts that were or could have been listed or scheduled by the debtor in a previous case under the Bankruptcy Code or the former Bankruptcy Act concerning the debtor, in which the debtor waived discharge or was denied a discharge other than on the basis of the six-year rule [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(10)].

[d] Delinquent Taxes and Related Liabilities

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for taxes or customs duties that are entitled to priority in payment in bankruptcy [see 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8)], or with respect to which a return, if required, was not filed or was filed after the date on which it was due (including any extensions) and after two years before the date of the filing of the petition, or that the debtor willfully attempted to evade or defeat or with respect to which the debtor made a fraudulent return [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1); see generally Savaria v. United States (In re Savaria) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004) 317 B.R. 395, 396 (discharge exception for tax debt based on late return applies to post-petition filing of late return for pre-petition taxes); United States v. Hatton (In re Hatton) (9th Cir. 2000) 220 F.3d 1057, 1060-1061 (substitute return prepared by IRS after debtor failed to file normal return did not constitute return filed by debtor; debtor's execution and partial performance of installment payment agreement for delinquent taxes could not transform substituted return into return filed by debtor)]. Also not dischargeable are liabilities incurred to pay taxes to the United States or any governmental unit other than the United States, which would be nondischargeable [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(14), (14A)].

The term "return" means a return that satisfies the requirements of applicable nonbankruptcy law (including applicable filing requirements). The term includes a return prepared pursuant to I.R.C. § 6020(a) (that is, one prepared by the IRS with the taxpayer's cooperation) or a similar state or local law as well as a written stipulation to a judgment or a final order entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal; but the term does not include a return made pursuant to I.R.C. § 6020(b) (that is, one prepared by the IRS without the taxpayer's cooperation) or a similar state or local law [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

State Tax Liability. A debtor's failure to notify the Franchise Tax Board that the IRS reassessed the debtor's federal income tax liability is not equivalent to a failure to file a tax return; thus it would not render nondischargeable any California tax liability arising from the reassessment [see California Franchise Tax Bd. v. Jackson (In re Jackson) (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1046, 1050-1052]. Commentary by Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[e] Fines and Penalties

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture payable to and for the benefit of a governmental unit that is not compensation for actual pecuniary loss. In the case of a tax penalty, the penalty is not dischargeable if the tax is not dischargeable or if the penalty was imposed on an event or transaction that occurred within the three years before the date of the filing of the petition [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7)].

Also not discharged is any debt incurred to pay fines or penalties imposed under Federal election law [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(14B)].

[f] Restitution to Crime Victims

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for any payment of an order of restitution issued under Title 18 of the United States Code (concerning crimes) [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(13)].

[g] Common Law Fraud

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for money, property, services or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit to the extent obtained by a written statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition that is materially false, on which the creditor to whom the debtor is liable reasonably relied and which the debtor caused to be made or published with intent to deceive [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B)]. Also not discharged are debts for money, property, services or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit obtained by false pretenses or representations, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or insider's financial condition [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A); but see § 94.53[4][a]]. This "fraud exception" encompasses any liability arising from money, property, and other sources, that is fraudulently obtained, including treble damages, attorney's fees, and costs [Cohen v. De La Cruz (1998) 523 U.S. 213, 223, 118 S. Ct. 1212, 140 L. Ed. 2d 341 .

PRACTICE TIP:

Presumption of Nondischargeability--Luxury Goods and Cash Advances. For purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A), there is a presumption of nondischargeability for (1) consumer debts owed to a single creditor and aggregating more than $500 for luxury goods or services incurred by an individual debtor on or within 90 days before the order for relief, and (2) cash advances aggregating more than $750 that are extensions of consumer credit under an open end credit plan obtained by an individual debtor on or within 70 days before the order for relief [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(C)(i)]. "Luxury goods and services" do not include those reasonably acquired for the support or maintenance of the debtor and his or her dependents [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(C)(ii)(II)]. Commentary by Publisher's Editorial Staff.

[h] Fiduciary Fraud; Embezzlement; Larceny

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts created by the debtor's fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, by embezzlement, or by larceny [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4); see 11 U.S.C. § 523(e) (any institution-affiliated party of depository institution or insured credit union is considered to be acting in fiduciary capacity); but see § 94.53[4][a]].

For purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) as it relates to a debt created by larceny, a bankruptcy court is not bound by the state law definition of larceny, but rather may follow federal common law, which defines larceny as a felonious taking of another's personal property with intent to convert it or deprive the owner of it [In re Ormsby (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1199, 1205 , citing Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th ed., § 523.10[2] (Matthew Bender)]. In finding that the debtor committed larceny, the bankruptcy court may look solely to the fact that a state court adjudged the debtor liable for damages (whence arose the debt that the debtor seeks to have discharged) based on conduct conforming to the federal common law definition of larceny [In re Ormsby (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1199, 1205-1206 (Nevada court adjudged debtor liable for misappropriation and conversion of trade secret property and found, in connection with awarding punitive damages, that debtor had acted maliciously because his conduct was willful, wanton, and reckless)], but only if the bankruptcy court's reliance on the state court judgment comports with the state's issue-preclusion rules [In re

Ormsby (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1199, 1205 (bankruptcy court was bound to apply issue-preclusion rules of Nevada law--which are identical to issue-preclusion rules of California law)].

[i] Fraud or Malfeasance by Officer of Depository Institution

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts provided in any final judgment, unreviewable order, or consent order or decree entered in any court of the United States or of any state, issued by a federal depository institution's regulatory agency, or contained in any settlement agreement entered into by the debtor, arising from any act of fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity committed with respect to any depository institution or insured credit union [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(11); see 11 U.S.C. § 523(e) (any institution-affiliated party of depository institution or insured credit union is considered to be acting in fiduciary capacity)]. Also nondischargeable are liabilities for malicious or reckless failure to fulfill any commitment by the debtor to a federal depository institution's regulatory agency to maintain the capital of an insured depository institution, except that this does not extend to any such commitment that otherwise would be terminated due to an act of that agency [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(12)].

[j] Securities Fraud

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for violating any of the federal securities laws (as that term is defined in 15 U.S.C. § 78C(a)(47)), any of the state securities laws, or any regulation or order issued under a federal or state securities law, or for common law fraud, deceit, or manipulation in connection with the purchase or sale of any security, provided, in either case, that the debt resulted (before, on, or after the date the petition was filed) from a judgment, order, consent order, or decree entered in a federal or state judicial or administrative proceeding, or from a settlement agreement entered into by the debtor, or from a court or administrative order for damages, fine, penalty, citation, restitutionary payment, disgorgement payment, attorney's fee, cost, or other payment owed by the debtor [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(19); see Pub. L. No. 109-8, § 1404(b) (amendment adding reference to "before, on, or after" date petition was filed is effective beginning July 30, 2002, which is effective date of Sarbanes-Oxley Act)].

[k] Domestic Support

Notwithstanding any other provision of the Bankruptcy Code, a discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for domestic support [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5)] that accrue before, on, or after the date of the order for relief in the bankruptcy case, including interest that accrues on any such debt as provided under applicable nonbankruptcy law, if the following four conditions are satisfied [11 U.S.C. § 101(14A)]:

- The debt is owed to or recoverable by either (1) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or such a child's parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative; or (2) a governmental unit [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Henderson (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 531, 533-534, 275 Cal. Rptr. 226 (decided under former 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(18): support obligation that debtor has been ordered to pay to county is nondischargeable)].

- The debt is in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit) of the debtor's spouse, former spouse, or child, or of the other parent of the debtor's child, without regard to whether the debt is expressly so designated.

- The debt is established or subject to establishment before, on, or after the date of the order for relief in the bankruptcy case by reason of applicable provisions of either:

    - A separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement;

- An order of a court of record; or

- A determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit.

- The debt is not assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless that obligation is assigned voluntarily by the debtor's spouse, former spouse, or child, or the other parent, legal guardian, or responsible relative of the debtor's child, for the purpose of collecting the debt.

A debt is not one for domestic support if, even though designated as alimony, maintenance, or support, it is not actually in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support [see Shaver v. Shaver (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 1314, 1316-1317 (federal law determines nature of obligation to former spouse; needs of former spouse will be significant factor)].

[l] Nonsupport Debts From Family Law Proceedings

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts to the debtor's spouse, former spouse, or child, other than debts for domestic support [see § 94.53[2][k]], that are incurred by the debtor in the course of a separation or divorce or in connection with a separation agreement, divorce decree, or other court order [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15)].

[m] Willful and Malicious Injuries

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for willful and malicious injuries by the debtor to another entity or to the property of another entity [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6); but see § 94.53[4][a]]. For additional discussion of what constitutes "willful and malicious" injury in this context, see § 94.55[8].

[n] Drunk Driving or Drunk Piloting Injuries

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for death or personal injury caused by the debtor's operation of a motor vehicle, vessel, or aircraft if that operation was unlawful because the debtor was intoxicated from using alcohol, a drug, or another substance [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(9)].

[o] Student Loans and Benefits

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from any of the following types of debts, unless excepting such a debt from discharge would impose an undue hardship on the debtor and the debtor's dependents [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8); see § 94.53[4][b]]:

- An educational benefit overpayment or loan made, insured, or guaranteed by a governmental unit, or made under any program funded in whole or in part by a governmental unit or nonprofit institution [see, e.g., McKay v. Ingleson (9th Cir. 2009) 558 F.3d 888, 889-890 (this category encompassed student's agreement with university, by which student was permitted to defer payment of charges for tuition, activity fees, housing, and food service, until end of semester for which charges were imposed)].

- An obligation to repay funds received as an educational benefit, scholarship, or stipend.

- Any other educational loan that is a qualified education loan [see I.R.C. § 221(d)(1) (definition)], incurred by a debtor who is an individual.

The former rule allowed discharge of student loans once a specified period of time had passed (at first five years, later extended to seven years in 1991) after the loan became due; a showing of undue hardship was required only for discharge within the specified period. This rule was eliminated by 1998 legislation [Pub. L. 105-244, § 971, 112 Stat. 1581]. Under current law, a student loan is never dischargeable unless the court determines otherwise [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8), discussed above; see also § 94.55[9] (hardship)].

[p] Condominium or Cooperative Housing Fees

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for fees and assessments that become due and payable after the order for relief to a membership association with respect to the debtor's interest in a unit that has condominium ownership, in a share of a cooperative corporation, or a lot in a homeowners association, for as long as the debtor or the trustee has a legal, equitable, or possessory ownership interest in the unit, the corporation, or the lot. Not excepted from discharge is any debt of a debtor for a membership association fee or assessment for a period arising before entry of the order for relief in a pending or subsequent bankruptcy case [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(16)].

[q] Court Fees and Costs Imposed on Prisoner

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for fees imposed on a prisoner by any court for the filing of a case, motion, complaint, or appeal, or for other costs and expenses assessed with respect to such a filing, regardless of an assertion of poverty by the debtor under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(b) or (f) (or a similar nonfederal law), or the debtor's status as a prisoner, as defined in 28 U.S.C. § 1915(h) (or a similar nonfederal law) [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(17)].

[r] Loans From Retirement Savings Plans

A discharge in any type of bankruptcy proceeding does not discharge an individual debtor from debts for owed to a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other plan established under I.R.C. §§ 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(c), under either [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(18)]:

- A loan from a plan under section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [see 29 U.S.C. § 1108(b)(1)] or is subject to I.R.C. § 72(p) (each of which permits a loan, on specified terms, from a retirement plan to a participant or beneficiary).

- A loan from a thrift savings plan that satisfies the requirements of 5 U.S.C. § 8433(g) (which relates to loans from a retirement plan for federal civil service employees).

Nothing in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(18) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under I.R.C. § 414(d) or a contract or account under I.R.C. § 403(b) constitutes a claim or a debt under the Bankruptcy Code [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(18)].

[3] Liens

Discharge operates only with respect to personal liability, so liens remain enforceable after discharge unless they are avoided by one of several provisions [11 U.S.C. §§ 101(12) ("debt" defined), 506(d)(2) (lien is not lost by secured creditor's failure to file proof of claim), 522(c) (specified debts are enforceable from exempt property after discharge), 524(a)(2) (effect of discharge), 727(b) (discharge of unsecured debts and allowed claims); see 11 U.S.C. § 522(f) (debtor's power to avoid certain liens impairing exemptions); Johnson v. Home State Bank (1991) 501 U.S. 78, 86-87, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66 (creditor's right to foreclose that remains after discharge of debtor's personal liability on debt in Chapter 7 case is includable in Chapter 13 plan)].

For forms related to avoidance of liens, and opposition to avoidance of liens, see § 94.80 et seq.

PRACTICE TIP:

Creditors and debtors both should be alert to the possibility that a purported lien is not valid because of the creditor's failure to adhere to procedural requirements. Moreover, because of the injunctive effect of the automatic stay [see § 94.30[1], [2]] and the discharge [see § 94.51[2], [3]], the creditor could be precluded from taking advantage of any statutory provision for nunc pro tunc (retroactive) amendment of a deficient instrument underlying the claimed lien. For instance, a recorded abstract of judgment is not sufficient to create a valid lien if the creditor omits the last four digits of the debtor's social security number and/or driver's license number (and does not state that a missing number is unknown) on the abstract [see Keele v. Reich (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1129, 1132, 215 Cal. Rptr. 756] , because the last four digits of each of those numbers (or a statement that the number is unknown) must appear on an abstract of judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 674(a)(6); see Civ. Code § 1798.89(a) (unless otherwise required to do so by state or federal law, no person, entity, or government agency may present for recording or filing with county recorder any document that is required by any provision of law to be open to public if that record was created on or after January 1, 2010, and displays more than last four digits of social security number)]. While the governing statute authorizes the creditor to record an amendment of the abstract so as to cure such a deficiency nunc pro tunc [Code Civ. Proc. § 674(b)], and the explicit legislative purpose of the statute is to enable the creditor to avoid having an inadvertently invalid lien [Stats. 1988, ch. 1411, § 2], the creditor nevertheless is precluded from recording such an amendment once the debtor has filed a bankruptcy petition and after the debt in question has been discharged [Alcove Inv., Inc. v. Conceicao (In re Conceicao) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) 331 B.R. 885] .

[4] Additional Action Required

[a] By Creditor

Even though the categories of debts listed under § 94.53[1] and [2] are termed nondischargeable, debts in those categories [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), (6)] will be discharged unless the creditor takes affirmative action and files an adversary complaint within the required time period to have the bankruptcy court determine the dischargeability of the debt [11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1); see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(c), (e)]. For discussion of the procedural and timing requirements for complaints to determine dischargeability of these types of debts, see § 94.52. For a form for a complaint to determine dischargeability, see § 94.121. For a form for an application to reopen a case to file a complaint to determine dischargeability, see § 94.120.

[b] By Debtor

The primary instances in which a debtor would be likely to bring a complaint to determine dischargeability would involve a debt for taxes [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1); § 94.53[2][d]] or educational loans [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8); § 94.53[2][o]].

The debtor may wish to have a determination made that certain types of taxes are discharged by the bankruptcy. These are taxes such as personal income taxes, but not sales taxes that (1) have been due for at least three years (measured from April 15, the tax year return due date); (2) were filed on time; (3) were accurate; (4) were honest, and for which 240 days has elapsed since the date of assessment.

With respect to educational loans, unless the debtor establishes entitlement to a hardship discharge, the loan will be nondischargeable [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8)]. For discussion of the criteria for hardship discharges of student loans, see § 94.55[9].

[c] Issue Preclusion

A general common law rule, as applied in the bankruptcy context, is that if a particular debt is determined to be nondischargeable in a valid and final judgment by a court with jurisdiction and from which there was an opportunity to appeal, then the debt is always nondischargeable on the basis determined in the judgment [Moncur v. Agricredit Acceptance Co. (In re Moncur) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) 328 B.R. 183, 186].

The Bankruptcy Code creates some exceptions to the applicability of this rule, however. Notwithstanding 11 U.S.C. § 523(a), a debt that was excepted from discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1), (3), or (8)--namely, a debt that was excepted as being for a tax or customs duty, or because it was not duly listed or scheduled so as to permit the timely filing of a proof of claim, or as being for an educational benefit [see § 94.53[2][b], [d], [o]]--in a prior bankruptcy case concerning the debtor, is dischargeable in a current bankruptcy case unless, by the terms of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a), that debt is not dischargeable in the current case [11 U.S.C. § 523(b)]. (The statute also applies this rule to debts of the same kinds that were excepted in cases under the former Bankruptcy Act and described in former provisions of that act and two other acts; however, application of the rule to those debts has become practically insignificant with the passage of time, since those acts and provisions all were repealed before 1982.)

Therefore, unless 11 U.S.C. § 523(b) requires a different result, once a debt has been duly adjudged to be nondischargeable, the creditor is not obliged to litigate the issue in any subsequent proceeding [Moncur v. Agricredit Acceptance Co. (In re Moncur) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) 328 B.R. 183, 187 (in Chapter 7 case that was commenced soon after conclusion of debtors' Chapter 12 case, creditors were not required "to refresh their nondischargeable status with a timely adversary proceeding in the second bankruptcy in order to preserve the claim- and issue-preclusive effects" of valid and final judgment entered in first bankruptcy case, "the precise question having been [previously] litigated and decided")].

In addition, if the debt is one described in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), or (6), the statutory mandate for the bankruptcy court to determine whether it is nondischargeable [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1); § 94.53[1]] neither requires nor permits the court in a subsequent bankruptcy proceeding to adjudicate the issue again after nondischargeability of the debt has once been duly adjudged in a prior bankruptcy proceeding [Moncur v. Agricredit Acceptance Co. (In re Moncur) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2005) 328 B.R. 183, 189-191].

See further discussion of the preclusive effects of prior judgments in § 94.55[3].

[5] Alternative Remedies if Significant Debts Nondischargeable

Because discharging past indebtedness and obtaining a new financial start in life are major goals for a debtor when filing bankruptcy, if one substantial obligation or a sizable portion of the debtor's total outstanding indebtedness is nondischargeable or secured by an unavoidable lien, counsel should consider a remedy other than Chapter 7, such as Chapter 13 [see, e.g., Johnson v. Home State Bank (1991) 501 U.S. 78, 86-87, 111 S. Ct. 2150, 115 L. Ed. 2d 66, 76-77 (creditor's right to foreclose that remains after discharge of debtor's personal liability on debt in Chapter 7 case is includable in Chapter 13 plan)]. Chapter 13 also is preferred because the types of debts discharged under Chapter 13 are broader. For example, fraud debts and willful and malicious claims are dischargeable under Chapter 13, but not under Chapter 7. This is usually more important to a debtor than whether a property lien will be affected, because most bankrupts do not own real property [see § 94.52[2], [5]].

§ 94.54 Action to Determine Dischargeability of Debt

[1] Debts Subject to Exclusive Bankruptcy Court Jurisdiction

[a] In General

The bankruptcy court has exclusive jurisdiction to determine the dischargeability of the following types of special liabilities [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1)]:

- Debts arising from common law fraud [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)].
- Debts arising from fraud or defalcation in a fiduciary capacity [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4)].
- Debts arising from willful and malicious injuries [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6)].

Unless the creditor seeks a determination of dischargeability in the bankruptcy court within a 60-day window [see § 94.54[1][b], below], those types of liabilities are discharged [11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1); 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(a), (b)(2)(I), 1334, 1452(a); see § 94.53; but see 11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(2) (exception for depository institution receiver not appointed in time)].

Prior to the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 [Pub. L. No. 109-8; see § 94.10[3]], the same was true also for debts, other than for domestic support, arising from a marital settlement agreement or judgment [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(15) (such debts are nondischargeable)].

[b] Time for Filing Complaint Subject to Exclusive Bankruptcy Court Jurisdiction

Except in the Chapter 13 situation described in the next paragraph, in any case under Chapter 7, 11, 12, or 13, the creditor must file a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt not later than 60 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors. The bankruptcy court, on motion of a party in interest, may extend the time if the motion for extension is made within the original time period. The bankruptcy court must give creditors at least 30 days' notice of the time for filing complaints to determine dischargeability [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(c); see In re Gordon (9th Cir. 1993) 988 F.2d 1000, 1001 (time begins to run from date first set for meeting of creditors even if meeting is continued, rescheduled, or otherwise delayed)]. Unless an application on the categories of debts set forth in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), and (6) is timely filed, they will be discharged [11 U.S.C. § 523(c)(1)]. State courts lack authority to adjudicate the adequacy of the notice received by a creditor; only a bankruptcy court can grant relief on the ground of inadequate notice [McGhan v. Rutz (In re McGhan) (9th Cir. 2002) 288 F.3d 1172, 1180] .

In a Chapter 13 case, when the debtor moves for a hardship discharge [see 11 U.S.C. § 1328(b); § 94.20[4][f][ii]], the court will enter an order fixing the time to file a complaint to determine the dischargeability of any debt arising from willful and malicious injury [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6)] and must give no less than 30 days' notice of the time fixed to all creditors. On motion of any party in interest, after hearing on notice, the court may for cause extend the time fixed for filing a complaint. The motion must be filed before the time has expired [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(d)].

If a creditor's nondischargeability complaint were dismissed in a Chapter 11 proceeding solely because of being filed too late, that dismissal would not create a res judicata bar to the filing of a new nondischargeability complaint following conversion of the case to a Chapter 7 proceeding [Classic Auto Refinishing, Inc. v. Marino (In re Marino) (9th Cir. 1999) 181 F.3d 1142, 1146] .

For a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt, see § 94.121. For an application to reopen a case to file a complaint to determine dischargeability, see § 94.120.

[c] Costs and Attorney's Fees

There is no general right to recover attorney's fees under the Bankruptcy Code [Renfrow v. Draper (In re Renfrow) (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 688, 693]. A claim for attorney's fees based on a contract allocating attorney's fees is allowable in bankruptcy to the extent that the contract is enforceable under substantive, nonbankruptcy law (that is, under state law generally), except insofar as the Bankruptcy Code provides otherwise [Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. of Am. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2007) 549 U.S. 443, 127 S. Ct. 1199, 1204, 167 L. Ed. 2d 178 ; SNTL Corp. v. Centre Ins. Co. (In re SNTL Corp.) (9th Cir. 2009) 571 F.3d 826, 845 (unsecured creditor's claim may include attorney's fees incurred post-petition but arising from preexisting contract); see 11 U.S.C. § 502(b) (bases on which claims must be disallowed)]. The Ninth Circuit's so-called Fobian rule, which dictates that attorney's fees are not recoverable in bankruptcy for litigating issues peculiar to bankruptcy law, has no support in the Bankruptcy Code. Therefore, after March 20, 2007, a court may not disallow a claim for attorney's fees on the ground that the claimed fees were incurred in litigating issues of bankruptcy law [Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. of Am. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2007) 549 U.S. 443, 127 S. Ct. 1199, 1205, 167 L. Ed. 2d 178 , overruling In re Fobian (9th Cir. 1991) 951 F.2d 1149, 1153] . On the other hand, the court must disallow a claim for attorney's fees insofar as the claim is unenforceable against the debtor and property of the debtor, under any agreement or applicable law, for a reason other than that the claim is contingent or unmatured [11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1)]. In other words, the claim would be subject to any defense that the debtor could have interposed if sued on the claim, in the absence of bankruptcy proceedings [Travelers Cas. & Sur. Co. of Am. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2007) 549 U.S. 443, 127 S. Ct. 1199, 1204, 167 L. Ed. 2d 178].

If a creditor requests a determination of dischargeability of a consumer debt under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2) (fraudulent debt), and the debt is discharged, the bankruptcy court will grant judgment in favor of the debtor for the costs of, and a reasonable attorney's fee for, the proceedings if the court finds that the position of the creditor was not substantially justified, except that the court may not award costs and fees if special circumstances would make the award unjust [11 U.S.C. § 523(d)]. An award of attorney's fees is reviewable for abuse of discretion [First Card v. Hunt (In re Hunt) (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1098, 1101] .

Attorney's fees also may be awarded in connection with sanctions. Under Fed. Rules Bank. Proc., Rule 9011, by presenting (whether by signing, filing, submitting, or later advocating) a petition, pleading, written motion, or other paper to the court, an attorney or unrepresented party is certifying that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief it is not being presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation. The attorney or unrepresented party further warrants that the claims, defenses, and other legal contentions therein are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law or the establishment of new law, and that any allegations and other factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically so identified, are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery; and that the denials of factual contentions are warranted on the evidence or, if specifically so identified, are reasonably based on a lack of information or belief [Fed. Rules Bank. Proc., Rule 9011(b)]. Sanctions may be imposed for violation of this requirement, either on motion by another party or on the court's own initiative. Sanctions may include, if warranted for effective deterrence, an order directing payment to the moving party of some or all of the reasonable attorney's fees and other expenses incurred as a direct result of the violation. If warranted, the court may award to the party prevailing on the motion the reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred in presenting or opposing the motion [Fed. Rules Bank. Proc., Rule 9011(c)]. 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(4)(A) specifically permits the court to award sanctions (including attorney's fees) under Fed. Rules Bank. Proc. Rule 9011 against debtor's attorneys who violate Rule 9011 in filing bankruptcy claims under Chapter 7, including attorneys who file Chapter 7 claims without regard to the "means test" imposed by the 2005 amendments to that chapter [see 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2) (means test), discussed in § 94.20[3][b]].

[2] Debts Subject to Concurrent Jurisdiction

[a] In General

Both the bankruptcy courts and the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction to determine dischargeability of debts made nondischargeable by the following code sections [28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(1), (2)(I), 1334(b); In re Aldrich (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1983) 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1073, 34 B.R. 776, 779-780 ; In re Marriage of Henderson (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 531, 534, 275 Cal. Rptr. 226 ; see 11 U.S.C. § 523(c) (debts for which bankruptcy court determination of dischargeability is required)]:

- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1), relating to debts for taxes.
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3), relating to unscheduled debts or debts not timely or properly scheduled).
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7), relating to debts for government fines and penalties).
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8), relating to debts for student loans or educational benefit overpayments.
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(9), relating to debts for death or injury caused by unlawfully operating a motor vehicle, vessel, or aircraft while intoxicated.
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(10), relating to debts that could have been or were listed in a prior bankruptcy in which discharge was either waived or denied.
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(11), relating to debts for fraud or defalcation when acting in fiduciary capacity with respect to a depository institution or an insured credit union.
- 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(12), relating to debts for reckless or malicious failure to fulfill a commitment to maintain the capital of an insured depository institution.

The characterization of payments under a judgment of dissolution of marriage as being for domestic support [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A) (definition)]--nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5)--is frequently contested in state court. Because California courts have not always acknowledged their jurisdiction to characterize or determine dischargeability of payments claimed as support, either spouse may wish to foreclose the issue by bringing an adversary proceeding in the bankruptcy court [see In re Marriage of Williams (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1215, 1221-1224, 203 Cal. Rptr. 909] .

Generally the only other time the debtor would wish to initiate a proceeding to determine dischargeability would be in the bankruptcy court to qualify a student loan for discharge. This is the only type of debt on which the debtor has the burden to prove dischargeability [In re Norman (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1982) 25 B.R. 545, 548, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1417, 1419-1420 ; see § 94.55[9]]. In addition, later complications may be avoided by having the order of discharge specifically refer to the student loan.

[b] Time for Filing Complaint or Reopening Case Subject to Concurrent Jurisdiction

Complaints to determine dischargeability over which both the bankruptcy courts and state courts have jurisdiction may be filed by the debtor or any creditor at any time [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(b)]. The issue may be raised by filing a complaint to determine dischargeability in the bankruptcy case, or the creditor may wait until the bankruptcy case is closed and proceed with a civil action in state court [In re Marriage of Henderson (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 531, 534, 275 Cal. Rptr. 226 ; see also § 94.56].

For a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt, see § 94.121. For an affirmative defense for use in an action based on a claim that was discharged in a bankruptcy case, see § 94.122. For an affirmative defense for use in an action based on a debt that was not scheduled, and therefore was not discharged, in a bankruptcy case, see § 94.123.

Alternatively, the bankruptcy case may be reopened without payment of a filing fee to obtain a determination of dischargeability [28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(1), (2)(I), 1334(b); Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(a), (b); In re Aldrich (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1983) 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1073, 34 B.R. 776, 779-780] . For an application to reopen a bankruptcy case in order to file a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt, see § 94.120.

[c] Costs and Attorney's Fees

Although generally there is no right to an award of attorney's fees in bankruptcy proceedings [see Heritage Ford v. Baroff (In re Baroff) (9th Cir. 1997) 105 F.3d 439, 441 ; § 94.54[1][c]], the bankruptcy court has power to award fees in some cases when state law issues are litigated. For instance, if a divorce decree provides for the payment of attorney's fees, and state law issues are litigated in the bankruptcy proceedings, then attorney's fees are available, but only to the extent that they were incurred litigating the state law issues [Renfrow v. Draper (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 688, 694] .

As discussed in § 94.54[1][c], attorney's fees also can be awarded in appropriate cases as sanctions for filing frivolous or meritless litigation [Fed. Rules Bank. Proc., Rule 9011(c)].

[3] No Right to Jury Trial

The parties have no Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial, because an action to determine the dischargeability of a debt is equitable in nature [American Express Travel Related Servs. Co. v. Hashemi (In re Hashemi) (9th Cir. 1996) 104 F.3d 1122, 1124 (noting without deciding, however, that creditor's claim to recover amount of debt, if presented in bankruptcy court, would be subject to Seventh Amendment jury trial guaranty)].

§ 94.55 Standards and Burdens of Proof

[1] Burden Generally on Creditor

In any determination of dischargeability, the debt or judgment is required to be viewed in the light most favorable to the debtor, and exceptions to discharge are narrowly construed [see, e.g., In re Riso (9th Cir. 1992)978 F.2d 1151, 1154 (exception for willful and malicious injury to property as not including nontortious breach of contract)]. The burden of proving facts essential to establish nondischargeability is on the creditor [Hill v. Smith (1923) 260 U.S. 592, 595, 43 S. Ct. 219, 67 L. Ed. 419 ; Gleason v. Thaw (1915) 236 U.S. 558, 560-561, 35 S. Ct. 287, 59 L. Ed. 717 ; In re Houtman (9th Cir. 1978) 568 F.2d 651, 656 ; see § 94.122[2] (shifting burdens regarding proper and timely scheduling of a claim)]. Characterization of an obligation to a former spouse is determined in accordance with federal law [Shaver v. Shaver (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 1314] .

[2] Distinction Between Proving Claim and Establishing Nondischargeability

There is a distinction between the standard of proof a creditor must satisfy in order to establish a claim and the standard to establish the nondischargeability of the claim. The validity of the creditor's claim is determined by rules of state law. However, the issue of nondischargeability is a matter of federal law. The distinction becomes important in cases in which state law requires a clear and convincing standard to establish a fraud claim, for instance. To establish the nondischargeability of a debt based on such a claim, or any type of debt enumerated in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a), the creditor is required to meet only with the preponderance of the evidence standard [Grogan v. Garner (1991) 498 U.S. 279, 286-287, 111 S. Ct. 654, 112 L. Ed. 2d 755] .

[3] Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel

In determining whether a judgment is nondischargeable, the bankruptcy court can give collateral estoppel effect to those elements of the claim that are identical to the elements required for nondischargeability and that were actually litigated and determined in the prior action [Grogan v. Garner (1991) 498 U.S. 279, 284-285, 111 S. Ct. 654, 112 L. Ed. 2d 755 (abrogating cases that barred application of collateral estoppel to debts for which bankruptcy court had exclusive jurisdiction to determine dischargeability, which includes fraud, fiduciary defalcation, embezzlement, larceny, and willful and malicious injury; thus abrogating In re Houtman (9th Cir. 1978) 568 F.2d 651, 654-656) ; Gayden v. Nourbakhsh (In re Nourbakhsh) (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 798, 801 (bankruptcy court must give collateral estoppel effect to prior state court judgment); but see In re Daley (9th Cir. 1985) 776 F.2d 834, 837-839 (doctrine not applied to state court judgment based on stipulation)].

In determining whether a party should be estopped from relitigating an issue decided in a prior state court action, the bankruptcy court must look to California's law of collateral estoppel [Diamond v. Kolcum (In re Diamond) (9th Cir. 2002) 285 F.3d 822, 828-829 (creditors were entitled to summary judgment of nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A) and (6) based on collateral estoppel effect of state-court judgment); Baldwin v. Kilpatrick (In re Baldwin) (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 912, 918-920 (issues implicated by 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) were actually litigated in California intentional-tort suit, therefore judgment had collateral estoppel effect under California law); Gayden v. Nourbakhsh (In re Nourbakhsh) (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 798, 800] .

Issues that were actually litigated and necessarily decided in the course of obtaining an arbitration award that was confirmed as a judgment by a California court are eligible for issue-preclusive effect under California law; therefore, issue preclusion may be applied in subsequent bankruptcy nondischargeability litigation [Khaligh v. Hadaegh (In re Khaligh) (Bankr. 9th Cir. 2006) 338 B.R. 817, 831-832] .

When the judgment against the debtor is based solely on the debtor's "deemed admissions" in a case that the debtor started but then made no further attempt to pursue, the issues embraced by the judgment cannot be treated as "actually litigated" [United States IRS v. Palmer (In re Palmer) (9th Cir. 2000) 207 F.3d 566, 568].

PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel for a debtor should be careful before assuming that filing for bankruptcy will "clean up" pending state court litigation, as a default judgment in the state court may be nondischargeable as to the debtor in the subsequent bankruptcy filing. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[4] Misrepresentation and Fraud

[a] General Rule of Nondischargeability

A discharge under any applicable chapter of the Bankruptcy Code does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent that it was obtained by false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud, other than a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A)]. In short, the statute prevents the discharge of "all liability arising from fraud" [Cohen v. De La Cruz (1998) 523 U.S. 213, 223, 118 S. Ct. 1212, 140 L. Ed. 2d 341 (phrase "to the extent obtained by" in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A) modifies "money, property, services, or ... credit"--not "any debt"--so that exception encompasses "any debt ... for money, property, [etc.], to the extent [that the money, property, etc., is] obtained by" fraud; phrase thereby makes clear that share of money, property, or whatever, so obtained gives rise to nondischargeable debt)].

[b] Elements of Actual Fraud

A creditor must establish the following elements of actual fraud under the standard referred to in § 94.55[4][a] [Apte v. Japra (In re Apte) (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1319, 1322] :

- The debtor made a representation.

- The debtor knew at the time the representation was false.

- The debtor made the representation with the intention and purpose of deceiving the creditor [see, e.g., Citibank (S.D.), N.A. v. Eashai (In re Eashai) (9th Cir. 1996) 87 F.3d 1082, 1087-1088 (12 factors to be considered in determining debtor's intent); see also Anastas v. American Sav. Bank (In re Anastas) (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 1280, 1286 (in case involving credit card debt, inquiry must focus solely on whether debtor maliciously and in bad faith incurred credit card debt with intention of petitioning for bankruptcy and avoiding debt)]. (Moral turpitude is not required [Cowen v. Kennedy (In re Kennedy) (9th Cir. 1997) 108 F.3d 1015, 1018] .)

- The creditor justifiably relied on the representation.

- The creditor sustained damage as the proximate result of the representation.

There is no requirement to show that the debtor received some benefit from the fraud [Muegler v. Bening (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 980, 984] .

The second requirement (knowledge) is met if the representation was recklessly made without knowing of its truth or falsity [In re Houtman (9th Cir. 1978) 568 F.2d 651, 656 ; In re Kurdoghlian (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1983) 8 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1175, 30 B.R. 500, 502, 11 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 125 (debt incurred through checks drawn on insufficient funds when debtor knew or should have known the balance was insufficient--$46,000 drawn on $5,000 balance--held nondischargeable)].

Although the statute does not state what degree of reliance is necessary (the fourth requirement), the United States Supreme Court has held that the creditor's reliance need only be justifiable, not reasonable [Field v. Mans (1995) 516 U.S. 59, 74-75, 116 S. Ct. 437, 133 L. Ed. 2d 351] . In determining whether a creditor's reliance is justifiable, a court must examine all of the circumstances surrounding the particular transaction, including the creditor's knowledge and experience, and consider the subjective effect of those circumstances on the creditor [In re Kirsh (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 1454, 1457-1461 (creditor's reliance was not justifiable)]. A creditor may be justified in relying on a representation of fact even though the creditor could have ascertained the falsity of the representation by making an investigation. While a creditor cannot blindly rely, a creditor's mere negligence in failing to discover an intentional misrepresentation is no defense to a claim of fraud [Apte v. Japra (In re Apte) (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1319, 1322-1324 (creditor's reliance was justifiable)].

With respect to the requirement of proximate cause (the fifth requirement), the bankruptcy court is not required to "divine what might have happened" if the fraud had not occurred; it is enough that the creditor had options available that the creditor did not exercise as a result of the fraud [Cossu v. Jefferson Pilot Sec. Corp. (In re Cossu) (9th Cir. 2005) 410 F.3d 591, 597 n.4].

[c] False Statements of Financial Condition

A discharge under any applicable chapter of the Bankruptcy Code also does not discharge an individual debtor from any debt for money, property, services, or an extension, renewal, or refinancing of credit, to the extent that it was obtained by use of a statement in writing [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B)]:

- That is materially false;

- Respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition;

- On which the creditor to whom the debtor is liable for the money, property, services, or credit reasonably relied; and

- That the debtor caused to be made or published with intent to deceive.

The Ninth Circuit adds a fifth element: that the creditor sustained damage as the proximate result of the representation [In re Siriani (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 302, 304-306 ; see In re Candland (9th Cir. 1997) 90 F.3d 1466, 1469] .

"Material" misrepresentations are substantial inaccuracies of the type that would generally affect a lender's or guarantor's decision. To except a debt from discharge, the creditor must show not only that the statements are inaccurate, but also that they contain important and substantial untruths [In re Candland (9th Cir. 1997) 90 F.3d 1466, 1470 ("Certainly, in this case, significant misrepresentations of financial condition--of the order of several hundred thousand dollars--are of the type which would generally affect a lender's or guarantor's decision. The misrepresentations are, therefore, material.")]. The requirement of a materially false disclosure may be satisfied by silence or nondisclosure in the face of a duty to disclose [In re Haddad (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1145, 21 B.R. 421, 423, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 371 , aff'd, 703 F.2d 575 (9th Cir. 1983)].

The third requirement, that "the creditor to whom the debtor is liable for the money, property, services, or credit" must have reasonably relied on the false representation, should not be construed as meaning that, in the case of a subsequent assignment of that creditor's claim, there must also be proof of reliance by the assignee holding the claim at the time of the bankruptcy. Reliance by the assignee is not required, if the original creditor reasonably relied on the false representation: the assignee can stand in the shoes of the original creditor and assert nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B) [Boyajian v. New Falls Corp. (In re Boyajian) (9th Cir. 2009) 564 F.3d 1088, 1091].

With respect to the element of the creditor's reliance, 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B) explicitly states that "reasonable reliance" is the appropriate standard--a standard that "courts can apply without additional help"--when misrepresentations are made in written statements of financial condition [In re Candland (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1466, 1471] . On the other hand, 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A) does not provide a reliance standard; therefore, the Ninth Circuit and the Supreme Court created a "justifiable reliance" test for cases involving misrepresentations other than those respecting the debtor's financial condition [see Field v. Mans (1995) 516 U.S. 59, 74-75, 116 S. Ct. 437, 133 L. Ed. 2d 351 ; In re Kirsh (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 1454, 1460] .

To prove proximate cause in the context of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(B), a creditor must show that it had valuable collection remedies at the time it made or agreed to renew its commitment to the debtor and that those remedies later became worthless [In re Siriani (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 302, 305-306] . However, the creditor need not show that it would have exercised those remedies in a sufficiently timely fashion to collect the debt [In re Siriani (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 302, 305-306 (diligence requirement would cause courts to indulge in too much speculation)].

[d] Dischargeability of Punitive Damages for Fraud Debts

As the fraud exception to dischargeability [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A)] encompasses any liability arising from money, property, and other sources, that was fraudulently obtained by the debtor, including treble damages, attorney's fees, "and other relief that may exceed the value obtained by the debtor" [Cohen v. De La Cruz (1998) 523 U.S. 213, 223, 118 S. Ct. 1212, 140 L. Ed. 2d 341], it follows that punitive damages based on fraud would also be nondischargeable.

[5] Debts Not Properly or Timely Scheduled

[a] In General

To be scheduled properly, a claim must include the name and address of the creditor, a description of the claim, and a statement of the amount owing [see 11 U.S.C. § 521(a)(1); Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 1007]. Whether a deficiency or mistake in any of these components is fatal to discharge is a question of fact in each case based on whether the listing was unambiguous enough to give the creditor notice and whether the mistake was made despite the best efforts of the debtor to discover the true name or address [see Kreitlein v. Ferger (1915) 238 U.S. 21, 29-34, 35 S. Ct. 685, 59 L. Ed. 1184 ; Van Denburgh v. Goodfellow (1941) 19 Cal. 2d 217, 222, 120 P.2d 20 ; see also Collier on Bankruptcy (15th ed.), § 523.13 (Matthew Bender)]. When an obligation has been transferred, scheduling it under the name of the original creditor is not sufficient if the debtor knew or should have known of the transfer and could have obtained the name of the present owner [Ismay v. Tyler (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 883, 886, 169 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 883, 337 P.2d 257].

To be timely scheduled, a claim of the type enumerated in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), or (6) must be scheduled soon enough to allow the creditor to timely file both a proof of claim and a complaint to determine dischargeability of the debt [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(B)]. Any other type of claim need only be properly scheduled early enough for the creditor to file a timely proof of claim [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(A)].

What is sufficient notice may vary with special facts, but generally the creditor must receive notice or actual knowledge of the case within a reasonable time to file complaints to determine dischargeability. In some cases this time may be as short as 30 days [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 851 ; see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(c)]. A creditor does not have sufficient notice if all it has time to do is file a request for an extension [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 850] . However, a creditor who learns of a bankruptcy filing has a duty to inquire about the deadlines [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 851 n.3 ; In re Price (9th Cir. 1989) 871 F.2d 97, 99 ; see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(B) (only requires unscheduled creditor to have actual knowledge of case)]. Dewalt held that seven days notice insufficient for an improperly scheduled creditor, but said in dicta that the reasonable notice period could never exceed 80 days because that is what a creditor would ordinarily receive (20 days notice of the creditors' meeting plus 60 days after that) [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 851] . Thirty days notice might be insufficient for a truly unsophisticated creditor, not represented by counsel, that receives only the sketchiest notice of the filing of the case [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 851] . Less than 30 days notice might be sufficient for a creditor that has enough advance knowledge of the bar date to file a complaint or request an extension and purposefully chooses to lie in wait rather than present its claim [In re Dewalt (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 848, 851] .

[b] Actual Notice and "No-Asset" Cases

A claim not properly or timely listed will nevertheless be discharged if the creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the bankruptcy in time to file a proof of claim and, if necessary, a request for determination of dischargeability [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)]. For example, if actual notice of a bankruptcy proceeding is provided to a creditor's attorney in time for the attorney to file an objection to discharge or a timely motion for an extension of time, the notice is adequate, even if the debtor failed to list the creditor on the petition for bankruptcy [In re Price (9th Cir. 1989) 871 F.2d 97, 99] . However, an argument can be made that failure to schedule or provide notice to a creditor operates to make that creditor's claim against the debtor never dischargeable if the claim is one of the special debts [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), (6)] for which a complaint to determine dischargeability of the debt must be filed exclusively in the bankruptcy court within 60 days from the first meeting of creditors [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(c); see §§ 94.53[1], 94.54[1][a]].

In a no-asset case, in which the creditors receive a "no dividend notice" telling them that there is no need to file claims because there are no assets for distribution, no time for filing claims is set. Thus, a creditor cannot be prejudiced by not being notified of the time to file claims and a debtor will be allowed to amend its schedules to include the previously omitted creditor, after reopening the case if necessary, as long as there is no showing that the omission was intentional or part of a fraudulent scheme. This has the effect of discharging the debt [see, e.g., In re Rosinski (6th Cir. 1985) 759 F.2d 539, 542 ; In re Stark (7th Cir. 1983) 717 F.2d 322, 324 ; In re Walendy (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1990) 23 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1228, 1231-1232, 118 B.R. 774, 776 ; In re Hendricks (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1988) 87 B.R. 114, 116 ; In re Rayson (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1984) 10 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1426, 1427-1428, 39 B.R. 597, 598] .

Some ambiguity may remain in the Ninth Circuit regarding such "no-asset" cases. Only the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel has addressed the issue, but the case involved the anomalous situation in which a time for filing claims had been set in a no-asset case. In In re Laczko, the B.A.P. affirmed a bankruptcy court judgment in favor of a creditor that held the debt nondischargeable for failure to have been timely scheduled [In re Laczko (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1984) 10 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 530, 37 B.R. 676, 679 , aff'd, 772 F.2d 912]. The B.A.P. adhered to rules of strict construction, saying the debtors had not brought themselves within any exception to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3), and distinguished In re Stark [In re Stark (7th Cir. 1983) 717 F.2d 322, 324] , cited above, because in that case the "no dividend" notice had been sent to creditors [In re Laczko (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1984) 10 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 530, 37 B.R. 676, 678-679 , aff'd, 772 F.2d 912]. In re Walendy, also cited above, characterized Laczko as implying that it would follow Stark when a "no dividend" notice has been given [In re Walendy (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1990) 23 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1228, 118 B.R. 774, 776] . For an analysis of some of these issues, see the concurring opinion in Beezley v. California Land Title Co. [Beezley v. California Land Title Co. (9th Cir. 1992) 994 F.2d 1433, 1434 et seq.], which is extremely critical of Stark.

[6] Embezzlement

Embezzlement in the context of nondischargeability is the fraudulent appropriation of property by a person to whom it has been entrusted or into whose hands it has lawfully come. It requires the following three elements [In re Littleton (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 551] :

- Property rightfully in the possession of a nonowner;
- The nonowner's appropriation of the property to a use other than that for which it was entrusted; and
- Circumstances indicating fraud, including intent to defraud.

[7] Fiduciary Defalcation

To be nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4), liability founded on fiduciary defalcation must arise from a fiduciary relationship that predated the act creating liability. A resulting or constructive trust, or one implied in law, generally will be insufficient to constitute a fiduciary relationship [Ragsdale v. Haller (9th Cir. 1986) 780 F.2d 794, 796-797 ; In re Pedrazzini (9th Cir. 1981) 644 F.2d 756, 758-759 ; see, e.g., In re Teichman (9th Cir. 1985) 774 F.2d 1395, 1398-1400 (husband's obligation to pay wife 43 percent of military pension payments was not express trust, only constructive trust, and thus pre-petition arrearages were dischargeable and not within fiduciary defalcation exception); In re Cooper (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 30 B.R. 484, 489 (state court judgment imposing resulting trust on surviving joint tenant who spent joint account funds was dischargeable); but see Banks v. Gill Distrib. Ctrs., Inc. (In re Banks) (9th Cir. 2001) 263 F.3d 862, 871 (when attorney "placed his client's funds into his trust account, he became his client's fiduciary" even though no express trust existed in traditional sense)].

Fiduciary relationships imposed by statute may cause the debtor to be considered a fiduciary under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4). In general, a statutory fiduciary is considered a fiduciary under that provision if the statute in question does all of the following [Blyler v. Hemmeter (In re Hemmeter) (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1186, 1190 (ERISA satisfies traditional requirements for statutory fiduciary to qualify as fiduciary under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4))]:

- Defines the trust res;
- Identifies the fiduciary's fund-management duties; and
- Imposes obligations on the fiduciary before the alleged wrongdoing.

Although the meaning of "fiduciary" is determined under federal law for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4), state law determines when a trust in the strict sense occurs [Ragsdale v. Haller (9th Cir. 1986) 780 F.2d 794, 796] . Because California case law makes all partners trustees over assets of partnership, California partners are fiduciaries within the meaning of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) [Ragsdale v. Haller (9th Cir. 1986) 780 F.2d 794, 796-797] .

The creditor has the burden initially to prove that the debtor was a fiduciary to whom funds were entrusted [see generally § 94.55[1]]. Once that is proved, the debtor has the burden to account fully for all funds received for the creditor's benefit, by persuading the trier of fact that he or she complied with his or her fiduciary duties with respect to all questioned transactions. In other words, the debtor then has the burden to disprove defalcation; the creditor is not required to prove it [Otto v. Niles (In re Niles) (9th Cir. 1997) 106 F.3d 1456, 1462] .

When the requisite fiduciary relationship exists, as through an express trust, the debtor's defalcation need not have been intentional to be nondischargeable; even an "innocent" defalcation will be nondischargeable [In re Gonzales (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 22 B.R. 58, 59, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 447 (construction disbursement agreement was express trust)].

[8] Willful and Malicious Injury

[a] Standard for Nondischargeability

A line of cases based on Tinker v. Colwell [Tinker v. Colwell (1904) 193 U.S. 473, 485-489, 24 S. Ct. 505, 48 L. Ed. 754] defined "willful and malicious" as used in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) to require nothing more than an intentional act done with reckless disregard of the consequences. Although the statutory language has not changed, the legislative history of the 1978 amendments specifically overruled the reckless disregard standard [In re Cecchini (9th Cir. 1986) 780 F.2d 1440, 1443] .

In Kawaauhau v. Geiger [Kawaauhau v. Geiger (1998) 523 U.S. 57, 62-63, 118 S. Ct. 974, 977, 140 L. Ed. 2d 90] , the United States Supreme Court clarified the Tinker opinion. Nondischargeability requires a deliberate or intentional injury, not merely a deliberate or intentional act that leads to injury. Tinker, which involved the tort of criminal conversation, was construed to place that tort solidly within the traditional intentional tort category, and its holding was so limited. The Court in Kawaauhau concluded that Tinker "provides no warrant for departure from the current statutory instruction that, to be nondischargeable, the judgment debt must be 'for willful and malicious injury.' " Debts arising from recklessly or negligently inflicted injuries do not fall within 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) [Kawaauhau v. Geiger (1998) 523 U.S. 57, 63, 118 S. Ct. 974 140 L. Ed. 2d 90] . Rather, the willful injury requirement is met when, and only when, it is shown either that the debtor had a subjective motive to inflict the injury or that the debtor believed that injury was substantially certain to occur as a result of his or her conduct [Petralia v. Jercich (In re Jercich) (9th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 1202, 1208 ; see Carrillo v. Su (In re Su) (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1140, 1145 n.3]. The debtor's state of mind (knowledge) can be proved by circumstantial evidence, however [Carrillo v. Su (In re Su) (9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1140, 1146 n.6].

Whether an injury was "willful" for purposes of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) cannot necessarily be determined by reference to a finding that the injury was willful in a different context. For instance, liability for willful infringement of copyright [see 17 U.S.C. § 504(c)(2)] can be based on merely reckless behavior, instead of intentional behavior. Injuries resulting from recklessness are not sufficient to be considered willful injuries under the Bankruptcy Code and are therefore insufficient to merit an exemption to dischargeability [Barboza v. New Form, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 702, 707-708 (granting of summary judgment motion in favor of nondischargeability was reversible error because it was based on prior judgment for willful copyright infringement, without regard to whether "willful" aspect of infringement might have been reckless instead of intentional)].

The statute refers to "willful and malicious" injury; thus, there are two requirements: the injury must be willful (see above) and it must also be malicious. A malicious injury involves (1) a wrongful act, (2) done intentionally, (3) which necessarily causes injury, and (4) without just cause or excuse. The malicious-injury requirement is separate from the willful-injury requirement [Barboza v. New Form, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 702, 706 (bankruptcy court's failure to make separate determination as to malicious-injury requirement was reversible error); see In re Ormsby (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1199, 1206-1207 (debtor's conduct was both willful and malicious, and debt was not dischargeable)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Under Chapter 13, a debt for restitution or damages awarded in a civil action as a result of "willful or malicious injury" causing "personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual" is not dischargeable [11 U.S.C. § 1328(a)(4)]. Under Chapter 7, a debt for "willful and malicious injury ... to another entity or to the property of another entity" is not dischargeable [11 U.S.C. §§ 523(a)(6), 727(b)]. These are significant differences: whether the injury is "willful or malicious" or is "willful and malicious," whether the injury is to a person or is to property, and whether or not the debt arises from an award in a civil action [*Waag v. Permann (In re Waag) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2009) 418 B.R. 373, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3418, at 8]. Depending on the facts of the client's case, if a debt for personal injury is involved, it could be strategically more advantageous to file under Chapter 13 rather than Chapter 7. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[b] Conversion

When a judgment establishing the debtor's liability for conversion is the basis for a claim of nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6), the judgment does not, without more, establish that the debt arising out of that judgment is nondischargeable [Peklar v. Ikerd (In re Peklar) (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1035, 1039] . The mere intentional nature of the conversion is insufficient to satisfy the requirement that the creditor must strictly prove subjective intent to injure [Thiara v. Spycher Bros. (In re Thiara) (9th Cir. BAP 2002) 285 B.R. 420, 432].

[c] Intentional Breach of Contract

A willful and malicious injury does not include a simple breach of contract, even if committed intentionally. Debts that are nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) are debts relating solely to tortious liabilities. An intentional breach of contract cannot give rise to nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) unless it is accompanied by conduct that constitutes a tort under state law [Lockerby v. Sierra (9th Cir. 2008) 535 F.3d 1038, 1040].

[9] Student Loans

Under current (post-1998) law [see below], student loans are nondischargeable unless nondischargeability would impose an "undue hardship" on the debtor and the debtor's dependents [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8)]. Neither the Bankruptcy Code nor the legislative history of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8) defines "undue hardship" for purposes of determining the debtor's entitlement to a hardship discharge. The Ninth Circuit has adopted a three-part test--known as the "Brunner test"--for undue hardship [see United Student Aid Funds v. Pena (In re Pena) (9th Cir. 1998) 155 F.3d 1108, 1111 ; Brunner v. New York State Higher Educ. Servs. Corp. (2d Cir. 1987) 831 F.2d 395, 396] :

- The debtor must establish an inability to maintain a "minimal" standard of living for self and dependents, based on current income and expenses, if forced to repay the loans.

- The debtor must show that additional circumstances exist indicating that this state of affairs is likely to persist for a significant portion of the repayment period of the student loans. This part of the Brunner test considers whether there is a likelihood that the debtor's financial situation will improve sufficiently to permit the debtor to repay the loans [see Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Nys (In re Nys) (9th Cir. 2006) 446 F.3d 938, 945-947 (meaning of "additional circumstances" in Brunner test)]. The focus is on currently existing circumstances and what those circumstances show with regard to the debtor's future financial situation. A relevant condition that existed when the debtor obtained the educational loan may be considered if it persists, and the debtor is not required to show a worsening or exacerbation [

Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Mason (In re Mason) (9th Cir. 2006) 464 F.3d 878, 883-884] .

- The debtor must have made good faith efforts to repay the loans. Good faith is measured by the debtor's efforts to obtain employment, maximize income, and minimize expenses, as well as the debtor's effort, or lack of effort, to negotiate a repayment plan [Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Mason (In re Mason) (9th Cir. 2006) 464 F.3d 878, 884 (debtor failed to demonstrate good faith)].

Because the hardship discharge is an exception to the normal rule of nondischargeability, the burden of proving entitlement to a hardship discharge is on the debtor [In re Norman (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1982) 25 B.R. 545, 548, 9 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 1417] . The debtor must satisfy all three parts of the Brunner test to have the student loans discharged [see Saxman v. Educ. Credit Mgmt. BJR Corp. (In re Saxman) (9th Cir. 2003) 325 F.3d 1168, 1173] . The court could conclude that although repayment of the full amount of the loans would impose an undue hardship on the debtor, repayment of some lesser amount would not; and the court may grant a partial discharge [see, e.g., Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Mason (In re Mason) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2004) 315 B.R. 554, 563-565 , rev'd on other grounds, 464 F.3d 878 (2006)] . See § 94.121 for a complaint to determine the dischargeability of a debt, which can be modified for use by a debtor.

PRACTICE TIP:

The debtor usually will want to have a hardship determination early in the bankruptcy process, particularly when (as in many cases) the burden of repaying a large student loan debt is what drives the debtor to bankruptcy. The creditor naturally will want to avoid a hardship determination. In a Chapter 13 case, this tension can produce a ripeness issue when the debtor applies for a hardship determination soon after the commencement of a confirmed repayment plan. The Ninth Circuit's opinion in Educational Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Coleman (In re Coleman) (9th Cir. 2009) 560 F.3d 1000 (bankruptcy court could properly consider debtor's application for hardship determination, which debtor filed less than one year after confirmation of five-year Chapter 13 plan) provides guidance to debtors needing a favorable resolution of such a ripeness issue. The court noted that although a speedy hardship determination would be obtainable in a Chapter 7 case, there are practical impediments that normally would make the Chapter 7 option untenable for a student loan debtor.

Counsel should note that the former statute required a showing of undue hardship only during a specified period of years (at first five years, later extended to seven years in 1991) after the loan became due. Upon the expiration of that period, the debt became dischargeable under the former rule, and no showing of undue hardship thereafter was necessary. This rule was eliminated by 1998 legislation [Pub. L. 105-244, § 971, 112 Stat. 1581], which replaced the former time period with the current rule that a student loan is never dischargeable unless the court determines otherwise [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(8); see also § 94.53[2][n]].

PRACTICE TIP:

A student loan debt cannot be discharged by way of a Chapter 13 plan without a determination on the undue-hardship issue, even if the creditor fails to object to the proposed plan after receiving notice of it. A plan that proposes to discharge a student loan debt without a determination of undue hardship violates 11 U.S.C. §§ 1328(a)(2) and 523(a)(8). The bankruptcy court has the authority and the obligation to direct the debtor to conform the plan to the requirements of those code sections. An adversary hearing need not be held; the debtor and creditor may stipulate to the underlying facts of undue hardship, and the creditor may waive service of summons and the complaint. But the bankruptcy court must make an independent determination of undue hardship before the plan is confirmed, even if the creditor fails to object to the plan or fails to appear in the adversary proceeding [United Student Aid Funds, Inc. v. Espinosa (2010) -- U.S. --, 130 S. Ct. 1367, 176 L. Ed. 2d 158, 173-174 , disapproving contrary holding in Espinosa v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 1113] .

§ 94.56 Injunction Against Enforcing Discharged Debt

[1] Effect of Discharge

11 U.S.C. § 524(a) voids all judgments on discharged debts, whether obtained before or after the order of discharge and whether or not discharge is waived. It also provides for a perpetual injunction prohibiting creditors from any act to collect discharged debts (except by enforcement of unavoided liens). This section was enacted to discourage creditors from harassing or threatening debtors until they reaffirmed, and from bringing post-discharge state court actions that the debtor often could not afford to defend or in which the debtor, not understanding that it was necessary to affirmatively plead a defense, would allow his or her default to be taken [H.R. Rep. No. 1502, 91st Cong., 2d Sess. (1970); see 11 U.S.C. § 524(c), (d) (only reaffirmation agreements entered into before discharge and approved by bank ruptcy court are valid); but see 11 U.S.C. § 524(f) (validating voluntary repayment by debtor)].

A creditor may have dischargeability determined in the bankruptcy court even after discharge, as long as the debt is not of the type described in 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4)-(6), and (c), or if it was not properly or timely scheduled. The stay of 11 U.S.C. § 524(a), however, unlike the stay of 11 U.S.C. § 362 [see § 94.30], cannot be lifted during the pendency of the bankruptcy case to allow the creditor to proceed with a state court action [In re Aldrich (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1983) 9 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1073, 1076-1078, 1080, 34 B.R. 776, 780]. Thus, a creditor who proceeds with a state court action does so at his or her peril, and should be quite sure that there is a bona fide dispute regarding the dischargeability of the debt sought to be collected in the state court action [see Hurley v. Bredehorn (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1700, 1705-1706, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 (creditors granted 60 days to secure modification of discharge order in bankruptcy court allowing state court action to proceed)].

[2] Civil Contempt and Sanctions for Violation of Injunction

11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2), which enjoins the commencement or continuation of enforcement or collection actions for a discharged debt, is a basis for civil contempt and the imposition of sanctions. The sanctions have been designed to compensate the debtor for costs and fees in defending the state court action and in applying to the bankruptcy court for injunctive relief and/or sanctions [Espinosa v. United Student Aid Funds, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 545 F.3d 1113, 1120 (discharge injunction precludes creditor, on pain of contempt, from taking any actions to enforce discharged debt); ZiLOG, Inc. v. Corning (In re ZiLOG, Inc.) (9th Cir. 2007) 450 F.3d 996, 1007 (person who knowingly violates discharge injunction can be held in contempt); Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 502, 507 (compensatory civil contempt allows aggrieved debtor to obtain compensatory damages, attorney's fees, and offending creditor's compliance with discharge injunction; contempt proceeding is debtor's only remedy); In re Wagner (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1988) 87 B.R. 612, 617 ("remedial damages are appropriate whenever" violation takes place)].

[3] Enforcement Against Co-Debtors Not Enjoined

Except for certain property acquired after commencement of a case on account of community claims, discharge of a debt does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, that debt [11 U.S.C. § 524(e)]. Thus, discharge does not affect co-debtors or guarantors, and a creditor is not prevented from enforcing the debt against co-debtors [In re American Hardwoods (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 621, 625-626 ; Underhill v. Royal (9th Cir. 1985) 769 F.2d 1426, 1432] . For example, once a debtor has been discharged from a debt after completion of his or her Chapter 13 plan, the creditor may pursue the co-debtor for the balance due, if any, on the original debt.

The injunction created by a married debtor's discharge does not protect pre-bankruptcy community property that was never made a part of the bankruptcy estate. While the married debtor is discharged from personal liability on a pre-bankruptcy community debt, the nondebtor spouse remains personally liable for that debt, and the pre-bankruptcy community property may be looked to for payment [Sanwa Bank Cal. v. Chang (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1314, 1319, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330] .

An action against a discharged debtor to fix the liability of the debtor's insurers is permitted under 11 U.S.C. § 524 [Forsyth v. Jones (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 776, 780, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 357 (also observing, but not deciding, that while debtor could not be liable for deductible under insurance policy, insurer would be liable up to coverage limit minus deductible, and declining to consider effect of policy provision asserted to make insurer's liability depend on insured's payment of deductible); see Ortiz v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 392, 398, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484 (dictum)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Note that 11 U.S.C. §§ 1201 and 1301 provide for a co-debtor stay. Thus, when faced with a situation in which one spouse has filed for protection under Chapter 12 or Chapter 13, the attorney should be careful not to proceed against the other spouse who likely is protected during the period of the bankruptcy case by those sections. Commentary by John A. Vos.

§ 94.57 Entry of Judgment on Nondischargeable Debt

The bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to enter a money judgment on a disputed state law claim in the course of making a determination that a debt is nondischargeable [Cowen v. Kennedy (In re Kennedy) (9th Cir. 1997) 108 F.3d 1015, 1016] .

The fact that a debt was already reduced to judgment when the bankruptcy court acquired in rem jurisdiction of the debtor's property and personal jurisdiction of the debtor does not deprive the bankruptcy court of its subject matter jurisdiction to enter its own judgment on the debt, or of any of the court's statutory power [see 11 U.S.C. § 105(a)] and equitable power to issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code [Sasson v. Sokoloff (In re Sasson) (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 864, 870, 874 ("Thus, as a matter of law, a prior judgment [on a debt] does not preclude a bankruptcy court from exercising its power to determine how best to enforce its own [non]dischargeability order. [P] The bankruptcy court here, therefore, had the authority to enter a money judgment in conjunction with its nondischargeability order.")].

However, because the entry of a money judgment on a nondischargeable debt would be an exercise of equitable jurisdiction, the court's choice of that method to enforce its nondischargeability order is subject to review for abuse of discretion [Sasson v. Sokoloff (In re Sasson) (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 864, 874-875 (no abuse of discretion because court acted to counter debtor's pre-bankruptcy maneuvers that caused original judgment debt to become practically uncollectible after entry of state-court judgment)].

§ 94.74 Decisions

[1] Burdens of Proof; Res Judicata

Certified copy of order of discharge is prima facie defense against collection of debt that existed on date bankruptcy petition was filed. Kreitlein v. Ferger (1915) 238 U.S. 21, 26, 35 S. Ct. 685, 59 L. Ed. 1184

Confirmed Chapter 13 plan providing for discharge of post-petition interest on student loan debt (even though post-petition interest actually was not dischargeable under Bankruptcy Code) was res judicata as to all issues that could have or should have been litigated at confirmation hearing, including discharge of post-petition interest; therefore, creditor could not raise its first objection after confirmation became final, and could not collect post-petition interest. Great Lakes Higher Educ. Corp. v. Pardee (In re Pardee) (9th Cir. 1999) 193 F.3d 1083, 1085-1086

Final bankruptcy court order is entitled to res judicata effect in California court until reversed on appeal or modified or set aside in court of rendition. Martin v. Martin (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 752, 758-764, 87 Cal. Rptr. 526, 470 P.2d 662

[2] Chapter 11: Effect of Confirmed Plan

Even if 11 U.S.C. § 1141(a) binds creditors with respect to claims that arose before confirmation, income tax returns must be filed (and related taxes paid) for periods after confirmation. Holywell Corp. v. Smith (1992) 503 U.S. 47, 58, 112 S. Ct. 1021, 117 L. Ed. 2d 196, 207

[3] Effect of Bankruptcy Proceeding

Bankruptcy proceeding does not, merely by virtue of its maintenance, terminate action already pending in nonbankruptcy court, to which the bankrupt is party. Connell v. Walker (1934) 291 U.S. 1, 5, 54 S. Ct. 257, 78 L. Ed. 613

Bankruptcy Code did not preempt California bona fide purchaser statute as it applied to transaction in which Chapter 7 debtor, acting without trustee's authorization, sold debtor's home to purchaser who had neither actual nor constructive knowledge of bankruptcy proceeding; also applicable was established proposition that automatic stay triggered by filing of bankruptcy petition does not void transfers of estate property initiated by debtor; therefore, trustee was not entitled to recover property into estate. Burkart v. Coleman (In re Tippett) (9th Cir. 2008) 542 F.3d 684, 686

Discharge injunction [11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2)] is validly applied to foreign creditor who submits to jurisdiction of bankruptcy court by filing proof of claim against Chapter 7 debtor. Hong Kong & Shanghai Banking Corp. v. Simon (In re Simon) (9th Cir. 1998) 153 F.3d 991, 997 .

Code Civ. Proc. § 356 extends applicable statute of limitation during pendency of bankruptcy stay. Eistrat v. Cekada (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 289, 291-292, 324 P.2d 881

State court may only stay action that is pending against defendant when defendant files bankruptcy petition; it has no power to dismiss action. Traweek v. Finley, Kumble, etc. Myerson & Casey (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1135, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 185

[4] Jurisdiction

11 U.S.C. § 505(a)(1) grants U.S. district courts subject matter jurisdiction to review tax treatment of debtor's partnership items, notwithstanding requirement of Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) that tax treatment of partnership items ordinarily must be determined at partnership level. Central Valley Ag Enters. v. United States (9th Cir. 2008) 531 F.3d 750, 753

11 U.S.C. § 505, permitting bankruptcy court to determine certain tax liabilities of debtors, does not grant jurisdiction in case of partnership debtors to determine tax liability of nondebtor partners for partnership's activities. American Principals Leasing Corp. v. United States (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 477, 480-481

Sixty-day time limit of Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(c) for filing complaints to determine dischargeability of debts is procedural, not substantive rule, and does not abridge substantive rights under 11 U.S.C. § 523; motion for extension of time under Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9006(b) must be made before 60-day period has expired, although some courts have allowed extension when late filing was result of plaintiff's good faith reliance on bankruptcy court's erroneous statement or action. In re Hill (9th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 484, 486-487

When state court judgment established amount of arrearages, bankruptcy court has jurisdiction only to determine nature and dischargeability of debt, not amount owing. In re Comer (9th Cir. 1984) 723 F.2d 737, 740

Election in prior state court action to proceed on contract grounds does not prohibit bankruptcy court determination of nondischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2). In re Gross (9th Cir. 1981) 654 F.2d 602, 604

[5] Nondischargeable Debts

[a] Alimony, Maintenance, or Support Claims

Absent parent who owes money to county for child support payments is not entitled to discharge any portion of that Title IV-D debt, including any portion that may have accumulated before entry of court order. County of Santa Cruz v.

Cervantes (In re Cervantes) (9th Cir. 2000) 219 F.3d 955, 958 ; Leibowitz v. County of Orange (In re Leibowitz) (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 799, 800

Debtor/mother's court-apportioned share of fees and expenses for professional services arising from child custody proceeding, which involved false allegation of father's sexual abuse, was debt falling within child support discharge exception, and father and guardian ad litem were entitled to priority in debtor's Chapter 13 plan. Beaupied v. Chang (In re Chang) (9th Cir. 1998) 163 F.3d 1138, 1141-1142

Couple's election to extend support payments beyond remarriage not in conflict with intent to provide spousal support under California law, and debtor's obligation was nondischargeable as spousal support. Friedkin v. Sternberg (In re Sternberg) (9th Cir. 1996) 85 F.3d 1400, 1406-1407

Allowing modification of alimony based on discharge of property settlement. Siragusa v. Siragusa (In re Siragusa) (9th Cir. 1994) 27 F.3d 406, 408

Obligation to pay spouse percentage of pension is not support or maintenance and dischargeable; however, payments accruing after filing of petition are nondischargeable post-petition debts. In re Teichman (9th Cir. 1985) 774 F.2d 1395, 1398-1400

In determining whether obligation is support, court is not bound by designation in marital settlement agreement although provisions of agreement, including other sections entitled "support," are entitled to great weight; significant factors include whether other provisions are designated as for support, and whether payment in question terminates on specific date or event. Stout v. Prussel (9th Cir. 1982) 691 F.2d 859, 861

Attorney's fees payable by debtor in dissolution to spouse's attorney are in nature of support and are not dischargeable. Jones v. Tyson (9th Cir. 1975) 518 F.2d 678, 680-681

"Palimony" judgment is dischargeable debt that is not included under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5) as nondischargeable domestic support debt. In re Doyle (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1986) 16 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 761, 70 B.R. 106, 107-109, 15 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 700

Attorney's and psychiatrist's fees incurred in custody dispute for benefit of nonbankrupt spouse and child of debtor, but payable only by bankrupt spouse, do not constitute support when nonbankrupt spouse had no liability for fees and therefore as dischargeable. In re Linn (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1984) 10 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1049, 38 B.R. 762, 763, 12 Bankr. Ct. Dec. 24

Attorney of one spouse has standing to file complaint to determine dischargeability of fees that court had ordered paid by other (bankrupt) spouse; order that fees be paid by nonincurring spouse is not assignment; fees not dischargeable if found to be support. In re Gwinn (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 6 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 1114, 20 B.R. 233, 235

Support obligation that debtor has been ordered to pay to county is nondischargeable. In re Marriage of Henderson (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 531, 533-534, 275 Cal. Rptr. 226

Fact that payments under settlement are nonmodifiable is not determinative of whether obligation is dischargeable. Myhers v. Myhers (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 855, 858, 86 Cal. Rptr. 356

Provision for periodic payments in settlement of property rights may provide that payments will cease on death or remarriage of spouse without transforming payments into nature of alimony, which is nondischargeable in bankruptcy. Yarus v. Yarus (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 190, 201, 3 Cal. Rptr. 50

[b] Debts Not Properly or Timely Scheduled

Debtor's failure to list creditor in no-assets, no-bar-date Chapter 7 bankruptcy (which prevents creditor's receiving notice of proceedings) does not justify revocation of discharge. White v. Nielsen (In re Nielsen) (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 922, 925

Giving notice of bankruptcy proceedings to creditor's attorney is insufficient in absence of showing that attorney was in fact agent of creditor; notice given to attorney who had represented creditor in suit against debtor is insufficient when notice was given after judgment in that suit had been entered. Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 677-678, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680

Claim of creditor listed under wrong name is not discharged. United States Credit Bureau v. Claus (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 85, 88-89, 179 P.2d 36

Designation of city of residence without street and number is sufficient for discharge when debtor diligently attempted to discover full address. Dill v. Hamilton (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 881, 884-886, 167 P.2d 497

Listing of creditor in schedule without address is insufficient for discharge. Marlenee v. Warkentin (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 177, 179-180, 162 P.2d 321

[c] Fiduciary Defalcation

Taking funds from joint tenancy bank account under good faith belief of entitlement creates resulting trust, but debt is neither fiduciary defalcation nor willful or malicious injury, so debt is dischargeable. In re Cooper (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 30 B.R. 484, 489

[d] Fines, Penalties, and Forfeitures

Attorney disciplinary costs imposed by California State Bar Court pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6086.10, as amended in 2003 by addition of subdivision (e) specifying that those costs are penalties, are excepted from discharge in bankruptcy pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7). State Bar v. Findley (In re Findley) (9th Cir. 2010) 593 F.3d 1048, 1053-1054 , distinguishing State Bar v. Taggert (In re Taggert) (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 987 (holding that disciplinary costs were dischargeable, based on legislative intent inferrable from Bus. & Prof. Code § 6086.10 as it existed before 2003 amendment)

Sanction for contempt of court imposed by bankruptcy court on nonparty (such as sole shareholder of bankrupt corporation) could be nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7), but court has no power to adjudicate and decree nondischargeability of debt for sanction at time of imposing it because contemnor is not then in court as bankruptcy petitioner. Hansbrough v. Birdsell (In re Hercules Enters.) (9th Cir. 2004) 387 F.3d 1024, 1029

State and federal restitution orders are nondischargeable fines, penalties, or forfeitures. In re Soderling (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 730, 732

Fine for failure to appear on traffic violation is dischargeable in Chapter 13, although not in Chapter 7. In re Young (Bankr. S.D. Cal. 1980) 3 Collier Bankr. Cas. 2d 145, 10 B.R. 17, 18-19

[e] Fraud

If claim arising under 11 U.S.C. § 550 (because of trustee's recovery of property after avoidance of transfer such as preferential payment by debtor to creditor) is determined to be nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 502(h) (claim arising from recovery of property under section 550 shall be determined as if such claim had arisen before date of filing of petition), and nondischargeability is based on 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) because of embezzlement or similar act, then 11 U.S.C. § 523 permits that reinstated claim to be pursued against debtor personally. Busseto Foods, Inc. v. Laizure (In re Laizure) (9th Cir. 2008) 548 F.3d 693, 697-698

Because debt of unlicensed contractor that is liable for disgorgement of compensation under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b) (unlicensed contractor is strictly liable for "all compensation paid to the unlicensed contractor for performance of any act or contract") did not arise or flow from contractor's fraudulent conduct, whether or not contractor falsely represented that contractor was licensed, that debt is not subject to 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A) and therefore is dischargeable. Ghomeshi v. Sabban (In re Sabban) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2008) 384 B.R. 1, 7 , aff'd, 600 F.3d 1219, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 7538 (2010)

Claim that debt is not dischargeable because of debtor's misrepresentation requires creditor's reliance on misrepresentation to be justifiable; relying on debtors' representations rather than obtaining a title report on property used as security for loan is not justifiable because the lender's administrator was both an experienced business attorney who knew obtaining a title report was standard practice and also a close personal friend of the debtors who knew that the debtors were in serious financial difficulties. In re Kirsh (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 1454, 1457-1461 (disapproving language in In re Siriani (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 302, 304 , suggesting that standard is "reasonable reliance")

Lender's fraud claim based on misrepresentations relating to validity of accounts receivable that secured loan is nondischargeable and not barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 580a after foreclosure of debtor's residence, mortgage on which was taken is additional security one year after initial advance. In re Franklin (9th Cir. 1991) 922 F.2d 536, 543

Debtor, who was accountant and who fraudulently induced creditors to make loans to third party, is closely enough related to third party to benefit from infusion of capital represented by loans to render debt nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2). In re Ashley (9th. Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 599, 604

[f] Restitution

Restitution imposed by state criminal court as part of criminal sentence is nondischargeable debt under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7) in Chapter 7 case. Kelly v. Robinson (1986) 479 U.S. 36, 50-53, 107 S. Ct. 353, 93 L. Ed. 2d 216

[g] Taxes

Chapter 13 debtor's California income tax liability was discharged after completion of plan because petition had scheduled Franchise Tax Board as creditor (with estimation of amount owed), and FTB duly received notice of creditors' meeting and of bar date for government claims, in compliance with applicable statutory requirements for notice, yet in spite of receiving constitutionally adequate notice of its right to obtain payment, FTB ignored notice and did not file proof of claim. Joye v. Franchise Tax Bd. (In re Joye) (9th Cir. 2009) 578 F.3d 1070, 1079-1081

Creditor's claim by governmental entity cannot have priority as "excise tax" [11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(8)(E)(ii)] unless claim is for involuntary pecuniary burden, regardless of name, laid on individuals or property, which was imposed by, or under authority of, legislature for public purposes, including purposes of defraying expenses of government or undertakings authorized by it, and which was imposed under police or taxing power of state; but even if that test is met, government's claim will not have priority if any creditor similarly situated to government can be hypothesized under relevant statute, or if pecuniary obligation was not universally applicable to similarly situated entities, or if private creditors with like claims would be disadvantaged by according priority treatment to government's claim. Cal. Self-Insurers Sec. Fund v. Lorber Indus. (In re Lorber Indus.) (9th Cir. 2009) 564 F.3d 1098, 1101 (claim for reimbursement of worker's compensation benefits that California Self-Insurers' Security Fund paid to bankrupt company's employees was not entitled to priority as excise tax because there could have been private creditors similarly situated to government)

For purposes of determining dischargeability of California income taxes [see 11 U.S.C. §§ 507(a)(8)(A)(ii), 523(a)(1)(A) (not dischargeable if assessed within 240 days before date petition was filed)], taxes are assessed on date notice of proposed additional tax becomes final, that is, 60 days after mailing, if no protest is filed [see former Rev. & Tax. Code § 18590 (now Rev. & Tax. Code § 19041)]. In re King (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 1423, 1427

To establish nondischargeability based on tax fraud [see 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(C)], IRS is required to prove statutory civil fraud under I.R.C. § 6653(b); criminal fraud conviction under I.R.C. § 7206 does not establish all elements of civil fraud, but debtor's unqualified concession at trial does. McKay v. United States (9th Cir. 1992) 957 F.2d 689, 691-692

Penalties imposed with respect to transaction or event that occurred before three years before filing of petition [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(7)(B)] are dischargeable, even if taxes were not dischargeable based on tax-fraud exception [11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(1)(C)]. McKay v. United States (9th Cir. 1992) 957 F.2d 689, 693-694

Claim of title insurer for taxes it paid is dischargeable; taxes not entitled to priority are dischargeable. In re Kisich (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1983) 28 B.R. 401, 403

[h] Willful and Malicious Injury

Claim for attorney's fees, wrongly withheld in breach of fee-splitting agreement, could not be treated as nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6) if attorney did not have lien under California law (in which case, claim was simply unsecured and dischargeable); attorney basing claim on contract to represent minor could not have lien unless contract was approved by court pursuant to Fam. Code § 6602. Del Bino v. Bailey (In re Bailey) (9th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 997, 1000-1002

Breach of contractual right of first refusal is not the type of willful and malicious property damage that is a nondischargeable debt under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6); exceptions to discharge are strictly construed so that statute applies to intentional breaches of contract only if accompanied by malicious and willful tortious conduct. In re Riso (9th Cir. 1992) 978 F.2d 1151, 1154

Damages for intentional cutting of neighbor's tree is nondischargeable, including proper exemplary damages. In re Glazer (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 1982) 25 B.R. 329, 330

[6] Nondischargeable Orders

State court order requiring debtor to convey property does not involve right to payment, and thus is neither "debt" nor "claim" and is enforceable in state court after debtor's general discharge in bankruptcy. Rayan v. Dykeman (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1629, 1635-1636, 274 Cal. Rptr. 672 ; cf. Ohio v. Kovacs (1985) 469 U.S. 274, 278-283, 105 S. Ct. 705, 83 L. Ed. 2d 649 (injunction to clean up hazardous waste site that had been reduced to monetary obligation is dischargeable debt)

[7] Preemption of State Law

Transfer of security interest is "perfected" under 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(3)(B) on date secured party has completed steps necessary to perfect its interest, so that creditor may invoke enabling-loan exception only by satisfying state law perfection requirements within period provided by that federal statute. Fidelity Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Fink (1998) 522 U.S. 211, 212, 118 S. Ct. 651, 652, 139 L. Ed. 2d 571

States may not pass or enforce laws to interfere with or complement Bankruptcy Code or to provide additional or auxiliary regulations. International Shoe Co. v. Pinkus (1929) 278 U.S. 261, 263-265, 49 S. Ct. 108, 73 L. Ed. 318

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10233.2, which, under limited circumstances, permits perfection of security interests without possession of notes and trust deeds that were assigned as security, can apply to protect security interests of investors in bankrupt company. Nielson v. Chang (In re First T.D. & Inv. Inc.) (9th Cir. 2001) 253 F.3d 520, 531

Decision of state administrative law judge regarding scope of bankruptcy stay does not preclude bankruptcy court's independent review. Contractors' License Bd. v. Dunbar (In re Dunbar) (9th Cir. 2001) 245 F.3d 1058, 1062-1063

Federal courts are not bound by state court modifications of bankruptcy stay, but bankruptcy stay does not enjoin state criminal prosecutions. Gruntz v. County of Los Angeles (In re Gruntz) (9th Cir. 2000) 202 F.3d 1074, 1087

Bankruptcy Code preempts all state laws that conflict with Code. National Collection Agency, Inc. v. Trahan (9th Cir. 1980) 624 F.2d 906, 907

[8] Timely Filing of Complaint to Determine Dischargeability

Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4004 (grant or denial of discharge), prescribing time for filing complaint objecting to discharge, is not jurisdictional; debtor forfeits right to rely on Rule 4004 if debtor does not raise rule's time limitation before bankruptcy court reaches merits of creditor's objection to discharge. Kontrick v. Ryan (2004) 540 U.S. 443, 447, 124 S. Ct. 906, 157 L. Ed. 2d 867

What is excusable neglect is equitable determination, taking account of all relevant circumstances surrounding party's omission. Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assocs. Ltd. P'ship (1993) 507 U.S. 380, 395, 113 S. Ct. 1489, 123 L. Ed. 2d 74

Holidays that are recognized by California courts as judicial holidays will not be counted in determining time for filing complaint under Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4004. Dwyer v. Duffy (In re Dwyer) (9th Cir. 2005) 426 F.3d 1041, 1044 (day after Thanksgiving is California judicial holiday)

Excusable neglect standard of Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9006(b), articulated by Supreme Court in Pioneer Investment case, above, applies to 120-day service period prescribed by Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 4(m). Oyama v. Sheehan (In re Sheehan) (9th Cir. 2001) 253 F.3d 507, 513-514

When creditor's nondischargeability complaint was dismissed in Chapter 11 proceeding solely because it was filed too late, that dismissal did not create res judicata bar to filing of new nondischargeability complaint following conversion of case to Chapter 7 proceeding. Classic Auto Refinishing, Inc. v. Marino (In re Marino) (9th Cir. 1999) 181 F.3d 1142, 1146

Motion for relief from stay is not complaint to determine dischargeability for purpose of limitation periods. In re Kennerley (9th Cir. 1993) 995 F.2d 145, 146

Order granting partial relief from stay does not extend time for filing nondischargeability complaint. In re Kennerley

(9th Cir. 1993) 995 F.2d 145, 147

Fed. R. Bankr. P.4004(a) and 4007(c), leave court no discretion in setting time for filing complaints to determine dischargeability or, absent motion, in extending time for filing; but court has equitable power to allow complaint filed before second bar date when creditor received notice setting forth second date from court to which case was transferred. In re Anwiler (9th Cir. 1992) 958 F.2d 925, 927-930

Liberal standard is used to determine "excusable neglect" to allow late filing of complaint to determine dischargeability of debt; factors considered include prejudice to debtor, delay in administration of case, creditor's good faith, whether delay was beyond creditor's control, and that creditor should not suffer for counsel's mistake. In re Magouirk (9th Cir. 1982) 693 F.2d 948, 950-951

§ 94.80 Application for Ex Parte Order Reopening Case to File Lien Avoidance Action

[1] FORM Application for Ex Parte Order Reopening Case to File Lien Avoidance Action

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
_____ DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

EX PARTE APPLICATION FOR ORDER TO REOPEN CASE

To: The Honorable _____, United States Bankruptcy Judge.

The application of _____ [names], by _____ [name], their attorney, respectfully represents:

1. An order for relief under Chapter 7 of the United States Code was entered pursuant to a voluntary petition filed by the Debtors on _____ [date], and a discharge was entered on _____ [date].

2. At the time of filing their schedules, Debtors listed _____ [name] as an unsecured creditor, unaware that any litigation had been commenced, which resulted in a pre-petition judgment lien against Debtors' real property.

3. Within the past week Debtors first became aware that the lien exists.

4. There is less than $50,000 equity in the property and has been since the petition date; the lien impairs Debtors' homestead and is avoidable.

[5. Because the reopening of the case will not affect property of the Chapter 7 estate, it is not necessary that a Chapter 7 Trustee be appointed.]

WHEREFORE, Debtors pray for an order directing that their base case be reopened so that a lien avoidance action may be filed to remove _____ [name]'s lien from their home.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Applicant
_____ [address]
_____ [telephone]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an ex parte application to reopen a case. It is for use by a debtor to reopen a closed bankruptcy case in order to file a lien avoidance action relating to the debtor's real property [see Culver, LLC v. Chiu (In re Chiu) (9th Cir. 2002) 304 F.3d 905, 908 (debtor could reopen to avoid lien that impaired debtor's homestead exemption); In re Dodge (E.D. Cal. 1992) 138 B.R. 602, 607] . This application is considered a motion and may be served on the debtor and, if known, the debtor's attorney [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 5010, 9013]. Because the reopening of a bankruptcy case is a simple mechanical device and the merits of the case are not considered at this point [see In re Daniels (9th Cir. 1983) 34 B.R. 782, 784] , the motion to reopen made be made ex parte, and in that case, need not be served on the other parties [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9013; see In re Schreiber (2d Cir. 1928) 23 F.2d 428, 430 , cert. denied, 277 U.S. 593, 48 S. Ct. 529, 72 L. Ed. 1005 (1928)] .

There is no time limit for reopening a case to determine the dischargeability of a debt of the types enumerated at 11 U.S.C. § 523(a), and no filing fee is required [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 4007(b), 5010; Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 5010]. However, an undue and inordinate delay may result in refusal to reopen a case [see Hull v. Powell (9th Cir. 1962) 309 F.2d 3, 4-5 (23-year delay excessive)].

Optional paragraph 5 is provided to direct the court not to reappoint a trustee.

For a form for an order reopening a case, see § 94.81.

PRACTICE TIP:

All bankruptcy courts are now paperless. Any practitioner who anticipates filing more than an occasional pleading in any bankruptcy court would be prudent to contact the clerk of the court for a login and password, and to take the brief training class. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[3] Caption

The caption must include the name of the court, the title of the case, the bankruptcy docket number, and a brief

designation of the character of the paper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9004(b)]. This form may use the short form caption, containing merely the name of the debtor or joint debtors [see Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 16B].

NOTICE OF MOTION TO AVOID LIEN, MOTION, AND NOTICE OF OPPORTUNITY TO BE HEARD

TO: _____ [name and address of creditor]

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that the Debtor _____ [name] will make application to the court without further notice to you for an order avoiding your purported nonpurchase money lien in real property of the Debtor.

Debtor is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the lien arises by virtue of an abstract of judgment recorded _____ [date] as _____ [name] County Recorder's Document _____ [number].

That property is exempt property and properly the subject of an avoidance motion in accordance with _____ [specify, e.g., Section 522(f)(2)] of Title 11 of the United States Code]. This property is commonly known as follows: _____ [specify, e.g., All the Debtor's right, title, and interest in 123 Pearl Street, Alameda, California or the homestead proceeds of sale of 123 Pearl Street, Alameda, California or exempt household furniture and furnishings of the Debtor]. The basis for the claim of exemption is that the Debtor scheduled, and the court allowed by operation of law [or will allow], that property to be exempt as the Debtor's homestead under California Code of Civil Procedure Section 704.710 et seq.

An application for a court order avoiding your lien shall be presented to the court not earlier than 35 days from the date hereof.

MOTION TO AVOID LIEN

1. Debtor filed this Chapter 7 case on _____ [date].

2. This motion is brought pursuant to Title 11, United States Code, Section 522(f)(1), and Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rule 4003(d), to avoid judicial lien(s) on Debtor's residence located at _____ [address], California.

3. On or about _____ [date], Judgment Creditor _____ [name], caused to be recorded an abstract of judgment with the _____ [name] County Recorder, as instrument number _____ [number].

4. Debtor is entitled to a $75,000 homestead exemption. He/She owes a total of approximately $_____, secured by two deeds of trust on the aforementioned property. These two liens are ahead of the abstract of _____ [name].

5. The value of the Debtor's residence is approximately $_____, and after deducting costs of sale of $_____ [at 10 percent], the loan secured by the deeds of trust, the Debtor has no net equity in the property above and beyond the homestead exemption.

6. The aforementioned abstract of judgment is a judicial lien impairing the Debtor's homestead exemption under California Code of Civil Procedure Section 704.730.

7. Pursuant to Title 11, United States Code, Section 522(f)(1), the Debtor may avoid the fixing of the lien to the extent that the lien impairs an exemption to which the Debtor is entitled.

8. Debtor so moves.

NOTICE OF OPPORTUNITY TO BE HEARD

No response is required of you under Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rule 9014. However, if you fail to file and serve responsive papers with the Clerk of the Court and with Debtor's counsel, the matter will proceed by default without a formal hearing and the application likely will be granted. If you request a hearing, then it will be heard at the hour of _____ [time] before the United States Bankruptcy Court located at _____ [address], California.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a notice of motion, motion, and notice of opportunity to be heard in a lien avoidance action [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4003(d)]. This form is prepared by the debtor, filed with the court, and sent to the creditors and other lienholders to afford them an opportunity to respond [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9014].

For an application for default on motion to avoid a lien, see § 94.84. For orders avoiding liens, see §§ 94.85, 94.86.

[3] Avoiding Liens

A debtor may avoid the fixing of a lien on an interest of the debtor in property to the extent that the lien impairs an exemption to which the debtor would have been entitled under 11 U.S.C. § 522, if the lien is a judicial lien (except one securing a nondischargeable debt for support) or a nonposessory, nonpurchase-money security interest in specified personal property [11 U.S.C. § 522(f)(1)]. A judicial lien to secure a bona fide debt for a domestic support obligation [see 11 U.S.C. § 101(14A) (definition)] cannot be avoided [see 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(7)].

[4] Caption

The caption must include the name of the court, the title of the case, the bankruptcy docket number, and a brief designation of the character of the paper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9004(b)]. This form may use the short form caption, containing merely the name of the debtor or joint debtors [see Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 16B].

OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO AVOID LIEN

CREDITOR comes now and opposes the motion to avoid lien on the grounds that:

_____ [Specify ground(s) for opposition, e.g.,

1. The motion is not supported by competent evidence.

2. There is insufficient evidence of the amount and nature of liens ahead of this Creditor.

3. The lien was a consensual lien.

4. The lien arises by virtue of a judgment issued by the Family Law Court in favor of claimant (attach copy).

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an opposition to a debtor's motion to avoid a lien on exempt property. It is used by a creditor in an effort to ensure that the creditor's lien will remain in effect [11 U.S.C. § 522(c)(2); see 11 U.S.C. § 522(f) (avoiding lien)].

In contested matters not otherwise governed, relief is requested by motion, and reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing must be afforded the party against whom relief is sought [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9014]. This opposition is filed in response to the debtor's motion to avoid a lien [see § 94.82]. A creditor may object to the debtor's motion by challenging the validity of the exemption asserted to be impaired by the lien [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4003(d)].

APPLICATION FOR DEFAULT ON MOTION TO AVOID LIEN

Debtor comes now and makes application for an order avoiding the purported nonpurchase money lien of _____ [name of creditor] in exempt _____ [real or personal] property of the Debtor.

The basis for this application is that the lien impairs an exemption of the Debtor allowed by Title 11, United States Code, Section 522(f). All of the Debtor's interest in the _____ [real or personal] property commonly known as _____ [specify, e.g., 123 Pearl Street, Alameda, California], was determined to be, and is, exempt.

_____ [Name of creditor] _____ [recorded on _____ (date) as _____ (name) County Recorder's Number _____ an abstract of judgment against the Debtor or holds a nonpurchase money lien in personal goods of the Debtor, generally described as follows: _____ (describe)].

Notice of opportunity for hearing was provided to the Creditor _____ [name] on _____ [date] [add if applicable:, a copy of which is attached]; no request for hearing has been made or received from that Creditor.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor prays that this court issue an order avoiding lien as to that nonpurchase money involuntary judicial lien affecting exempt real property of the Debtor.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an application for default on motion to avoid a lien on exempt property. It is used by a debtor to request an order avoiding a lien, when the debtor has moved for such an order an no opposition was filed by the creditor in question [11 U.S.C. § 522(f); see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9013 (request for order on motion)]. For a motion to avoid a lien, see § 94.82.

In contested matters not otherwise governed, relief is requested by motion, and reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing must be afforded the party against whom relief is sought [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9014]. This application is filed by the debtor in response to the creditor's failure to respond to the creditor's previously filed motion to avoid lien [see § 94.82].

For two forms for orders avoiding lien, see §§ 94.85, 94.86.

[3] Judgment on Default

Bankruptcy law provides that Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 55, concerning default, applies to adversary proceedings [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7055]. Rule 55 provides that when a party against whom judgment is sought fails to plead or otherwise defend, the clerk of the court may enter the party's default [Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 55(a); see Civic Ctr. Square v. Ford (In re Roxford Foods) (9th Cir. 1993) 12 F.3d 875, 879] .

This application requests an entry of default when a creditor has failed to respond to the debtor's motion to avoid lien [see § 94.82].

For a form for a judgment by default, see Procedural Form B 261.

[4] Caption

The caption must include the name of the court, the title of the case, the bankruptcy docket number, and a brief

designation of the character of the paper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9004(b)]. This form may use the short form caption, containing merely the name of the debtor or joint debtors [see Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 16B].

MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM BANKRUPTCY STAY,
SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF _____ [name], AND MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

TO _____ [name], THE DEBTOR, _____ [name], HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY OF RECORD, AND _____ [name], THE TRUSTEE:

_____ [Name], hereafter Creditor, requests an order for relief from the stay under Section 362(a) of Title 11 of the United States Code as to the debtor herein [and the trustee] to permit Creditor to _____ [describe proposed action, e.g., exercise its rights under its note and deed of trust], described below, by foreclosing on the real property described below and encumbered by the deed of trust].

This motion is made and based on this notice of motion, on the attached memorandum of points and authorities and declaration(s), and on the following facts and circumstances:

1. Creditor, is, and at all times herein mentioned, was _____ [specify, e.g., a federal savings and loan association, organized and existing under the laws of the United States, authorized to do and doing business in California, with an office in Los Angeles].

2. _____ [Name of debtor] is the Debtor in this case, which was commenced on _____ [date] under Chapter _____ of Title 11 of the United States Code.

3. _____ [Name] is the duly appointed and acting trustee of the above-entitled estate.

4. This Court has jurisdiction over this proceeding under Title 28 of the United States Code, Sections 157(a), (b)(2)(G) and 1334(a) and (e) and _____ [specify applicable general reference order, e.g., General Order No. 266 of the United States District Court for the Central District of California]. This is a "core proceeding" under Title 28 of the United States Code, Section 157(b)(2)(G). This is the proper Court for commencement and prosecution of this proceeding under Title 28 of the United States Code, Section 1409(a),

[STATE, in as many paragraphs as necessary, the grounds for relief under 11 U.S.C. § 362. For example, Paragraphs 5 through 14, below, illustrate a fact situation in which a secured creditor seeks relief from the stay to proceed with a foreclosure sale of real property in debtor's possession, on the ground that debtor has no equity in the property and the property is not necessary to an effective reorganization.]

5. Creditor is the holder of a secured claim against Debtor for the sum of $_____. The claim is evidenced by a promissory note, in the original principal amount of $_____, made, executed, and delivered by Debtor to Creditor on or about _____ [date] for valuable consideration in the form of a loan. A true and correct copy of that note is attached as Exhibit "1" to the declaration of Creditor's officer, _____ [name]. The note requires Debtor to make monthly payments of $_____, of interest and principal, on the first day of each month, commencing on _____ [date] and continuing until _____ [date]. The note also provides Creditor with the option to declare all sums due and payable immediately in the event that Debtor fails to make payments required by the note.

6. On or about _____ [date], to secure its obligations under the promissory note, Debtor made, executed, and delivered to _____ [creditor] a deed of trust and assignment of rents that granted Creditor a lien, to the extent of all sums due under the promissory note, on that certain real property, hereafter the subject property, commonly known as _____ [address] and legally described in the deed of trust, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "2" to the declaration of Creditor's officer, _____ [name]. That deed of trust was recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office. That deed of trust provides, among other things, that in the event that Debtor defaults in the payment of any installment due under the note, Creditor has the option to declare all sums due under the note immediately due and payable and to commence foreclosure proceedings to sell the subject property at public or private sale as provided by law.

7. Debtor has continued in possession of the subject property. The subject property _____ [is not being used in the operation of Debtor's business or is not necessary to the Debtor's reorganization].

8. Debtor has failed to make the payment due on _____ [date] or any payment due thereafter, and is therefore in default under the terms of the note.

9. Creditor has exercised its option to declare all sums due under the note and deed of trust immediately due and payable and has made demand on Debtor for repayment of all sums due. On _____ [date], Creditor recorded notice of default. Debtor, however, has refused and continues to refuse to pay any part of the amount owed.

There is now due and payable the principal sum of $_____ plus interest accrued to _____ [date] of $_____. Interest continues to accrue according to the terms of the note at the rate of _____ percent per annum, which amounts to $_____ per day.

10. The note and deed of trust also provide for payment by Debtor of reasonable attorney's fees, trustee's fees, and other costs incurred by Creditor in collecting the sums owing under the note and deed of trust. Creditor has been required by debtor's actions to retain legal counsel and incur other costs and expenses.

11. As of _____ [date], the estimated fair market value of the subject property was $_____. That value is based on an appraisal, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "10" to the declaration of the appraiser, _____ [name].

12. In addition to Creditor's lien, the subject property is subject to the following other encumbrances:

a. A deed of trust in favor of _____ [name], securing an original obligation of $_____, plus accrued interest and costs, recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office.

b. A lien in favor of the United States Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, for assessments for unpaid withholding and Social Security taxes, penalties, and interest, perfected, notice of which was recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office.

13. The total of all encumbrances of record against the subject property, including accrued interest, costs, and attorney's fees, and estimated costs of sale exceed the fair market value of the real property. After deducting the aforementioned liens and costs, there is no equity remaining in the property for the benefit of the Debtor or the estate.

14. _____ [No reorganization plan is involved in this case, and therefore the subject property is not necessary to an effective reorganization of Debtor or Debtor _____ (is not using the site in its current operations or has alternative arrangements available to it) and therefore the property is not necessary to the reorganization of Debtor].

[CONTINUE]

WHEREFORE, Creditor prays for an order providing for the following:

1. Termination of the stay under Section 362(a) of Title 11 of the United States Code with regard to Creditor, so that Creditor may take measures necessary _____ [specify, e.g., to protect its security interest in the subject property under the note and deed of trust, including the following:

a. Conducting a private sale of the subject property under the deed of trust as permitted by law.

b. Commencement and prosecution of an unlawful detainer proceeding against Debtor, in the event that Debtor refuses to surrender possession after the private sale].

2. That the order be binding on all parties and their heirs, successors, assigns, including the trustee in the above-entitled case and any subsequent assignee or transferee of the debtor.

3. That the order be effective with regard to any subsequent filings on the part of the Debtor under the Bankruptcy

Code.

[PURSUANT TO BANKRUPTCY RULE 112(2)(d) OF THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT FOR THE CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, ANY PARTY WISHING TO OPPOSE THIS MOTION MUST FILE AND SERVE A FORMAL RESPONSE WITH THE COURT AND MAIL A COPY TO THE ATTORNEYS FOR THE MOVING PARTY NOT LESS THAN FIVE (5) DAYS PRIOR TO THE HEARING ON THIS MOTION.]

Attorney for _____ [moving party]

[ADD supporting declaration(s) showing facts sufficient to establish grounds for relief from stay under 11 U.S.C. § 362, e.g., The following declarations by a bank officer and appraiser, respectively, show that certain real property is subject to a creditor's lien, that the debtor has no equity in the property, and the property is not needed for effective reorganization.]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF SAVINGS AND LOAN
OFFICER _____ [name]

1. I, _____ [name], am an operations officer of _____ Savings Association, hereafter Creditor, charged with supervision of the foreclosure department. In that capacity, I am custodian of the records and files of Creditor relating to the loan to _____ [name], hereafter Debtor, and am familiar with the facts and circumstances regarding it.

2. Creditor's loan to Debtor originated on _____ [date], in the original principal amount of $_____, and is evidenced by a promissory note made, executed, and delivered by Debtor to Creditor. A true and correct copy of that note is attached to this declaration as Exhibit "1." Under the note, Debtor promised to make monthly payments of $_____, which include principal and interest at the rate of _____ percent per year. Payments are due on the first of each month. The note also provided for a late charge of $75 on each payment that was not paid during the 15-day grace period following the due date. Debtor has made no payments since _____ [date], and thus is in default under the note.

3. Simultaneously with the execution of the note and the disbursement of the loan proceeds, and to secure its obligations under the promissory note, Debtor made, executed, and delivered to Creditor a deed of trust and assignment of rents that granted the Creditor a lien, to the extent of all sums due under the note, on that certain real property, hereafter the subject property, commonly known as _____ [address] and legally described in the deed of trust, a true and correct copy of which is attached to this declaration as Exhibit "2." The deed of trust was recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office.

4. The deed of trust provides, among other things, that in the event Debtor defaults in the payment of any installment due under the note, Creditor has the option to declare all sums due under the note immediately due and payable and to commence foreclosure proceedings to sell the subject property at public or private sale as provided by law.

5. Creditor exercised its option to declare all sums due under the note and deed of trust immediately due and payable and has made demand on debtor for repayment of all sums due. The notice of default was recorded on _____ [date]. A true and correct copy of that notice is attached as Exhibit "3" to this declaration. There is now due and payable the principal sum of $_____ plus interest accrued to _____ [date] of $_____. Interest continues to accrue according to the terms of the note at the rate of _____ percent per annum, which amounts to $_____ per day.

6. The note and deed of trust also provide for payment by Debtor of reasonable attorney's fees, trustee's fees, and other costs incurred by Creditor in collecting the sums owing under the note and deed of trust. Creditor has been required by Debtor's actions to retain legal counsel and incur other costs and expenses.

7. As part of my examination of whether the Debtor had any equity in the property, I asked the other lienholders to provide me with statements of the current amounts owing to them secured by their respective liens. Letters received from _____ [name] and _____ [name] are attached to this declaration as Exhibits "4" and "5," respectively. These letters indicate that the balances secured by their liens are as follows:

a. $_____, secured by a deed of trust in favor of _____ [name] securing an original obligation of $_____, recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office, a true and correct copy of which is attached to this declaration as Exhibit "4-A."

b. $_____, secured by a lien in favor of the United States Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, for assessments for unpaid withholding and Social Security taxes, penalties, and interest, perfected by notice recorded on _____ [date] as Instrument No. _____ in the Official Records, _____ County Recorder's Office, a true and correct copy of which is attached to this declaration as Exhibit "5-A."

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [title]

SUPPORTING DECLARATION OF APPRAISER
_____ [name]

1. I, _____ [name], am a State Certified Real Estate Appraiser.

2. On _____ [date], I was asked by _____ [name], Operations Officer of Savings Association, to make an appraisal of the real property commonly known as _____ [address of property]. That property consists of a single family residence, with attached garage, and a pool. It is located on a parcel of approximately.8 acres. A true and correct copy of that appraisal report is attached to this declaration as Exhibit "10." It reflects a value, as of _____ [date], of $_____.

3. The report indicates the comparable properties I used in establishing that value. The reason the value of the subject property is lower than most of the comparables is that there is serious water damage in most of the upstairs bedrooms that will deteriorate into dry rot if not corrected soon. Pictures of the interior damage have been included as an appendix to the appraisal report. Also, there is erosion on the left side of the driveway, which condition, if allowed to remain uncorrected, will most likely undermine the driveway.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM

[Add memorandum supporting grant of relief from stay under 11 U.S.C. § 362 based on the facts shown in the supporting declaration(s).]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a motion by a plaintiff requesting that the bankruptcy stay of a pending state civil action be removed so that the moving party may proceed with the state court proceeding regarding a deed of trust [11 U.S.C. § 362(d); see § 94.33]. Filing a petition in bankruptcy operates ordinarily as a stay of various creditor actions and proceedings [11 U.S.C. § 362(a); see § 94.30].

The types of relief available are discussed in § 94.33[1]. The grounds for relief are discussed in § 94.33[2].

PRACTICE TIP:
Most if not all courts now require, in addition to the pleadings, the use of a "Relief from Stay Cover Sheet," which summarizes for the court the basis of the motion. That form is available from the clerk's office of the district where the motion is to be filed. Clerk's offices make the form available for downloading from the clerk's web site. Commentary by John A. Vos.

Local rules should be consulted to determine particular requirements concerning the preparation, filing, and service of moving papers.

MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM BANKRUPTCY STAY (NUNC PRO TUNC)

TO _____ [name], THE DEBTOR, _____ [name], HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY OF RECORD, AND _____ [name], THE TRUSTEE:

COMES NOW the Moving Party _____ [name], and moves the court for nunc pro tunc relief from the stay under Section 362(a) of Title 11 of the United States Code to allow the Moving Party to continue prosecution of a state court cross-complaint against the Debtor _____ [name] ("Debtor") to recover any available insurance proceeds. Relief from the stay should be granted for cause. This motion is made and based on this notice of motion and on the attached supporting memorandum.

This motion is brought pursuant to Title 11, United States Code, Sections 361 and 362, and Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 4001 and 9014.

WHEREAS, the Moving Party respectfully requests that this Court make and enter an order that the stay of Title 11, United States Code, Section 362 is vacated nunc pro tunc to:

1. Permit Moving Party's commencement and prosecution of the cross-complaint to judgment against the Debtor, including, but not limited to, the prior filing and service of the cross-complaint, amending the cross-complaint, participating in discovery, participating in motions and trial, and participating in all appropriate appears; and

2. Permit the Moving Party to recover insurance proceeds under any insurance policy or policies applicable in any way to the issues and claims raised in the cross-complaint.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an order vacating the bankruptcy stay of a pending state action. This form is for use by the court to order that the bankruptcy stay of a pending state action be removed so that the moving party may proceed with the state court proceeding regarding insurance. This order provides for relief from stay nunc pro tunc to give validity to a prior filing and service of a state court complaint [see; 11 U.S.C. § 362(a); see also §§ 94.30, 94.33].

This form should be prepared by the plaintiff and submitted to the court with the motion for relief from the bankruptcy stay [see § 94.101].

For discussion of moving for relief from the bankruptcy stay, see § 94.100[2] -[8].

PRACTICE TIP:
Most if not all courts now require, in addition to the pleadings, the use of a "Relief from Stay Cover Sheet," which summarizes for the court the basis of the motion. That form is available from the clerk's office of the district where the motion is to be filed. Clerk's offices make the form available for downloading from the clerk's web site. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[3] Type of Relief and Grounds for Relief

On the request of a party in interest, after notice and a hearing, a court may grant relief from the bankruptcy stay by terminating, annulling, modifying, or conditioning the stay [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)]. This form provides that the stay is vacated.

To grant relief from the bankruptcy stay, the court must find that there is (1) cause, (2) lack of equity in property, or (3) a reorganization plan or payment being made with regard to single-asset real estate [11 U.S.C. § 362(d)].

For further discussion, see § 94.33.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL OF STATE COURT ACTION
(Removed from _____ County Superior Court, Action No. _____)

To: The Honorable _____, United States Bankruptcy Judge.

Pursuant to Title 28, United States Code, Section 1452(a), and Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rule 9027, Debtor makes application for removal of a civil action entitled _____ [name of action], Action No. _____ (the "Civil Action"), now pending in the Superior Court for the State of California in and for the County of _____. This removal is based on the following facts:

1. _____ [Name of movant] is a _____ [specify status in state action, e.g., plaintiff] in the Civil Action.

2. The United States Bankruptcy Court in this district has jurisdiction over the Civil Action under Title 28, United States Code, Sections 157(a), and 1334(b). Jurisdiction exists under Title 28, United States Code, Section 1334(b) because the Civil Action is related to a bankruptcy case pending in this district as _____ [name of case], Case No. _____.

3. The Civil Action is related to the bankruptcy case because _____ [specify, e.g., the Debtor is a party to all of the claims or causes of action that are removed pursuant to this notice].

4. On removal of the Civil Action, the proceeding will be a _____ [core proceeding with the meaning of Title 28, United States Code, Section 157(b)(1), (2) or non-core proceeding with the meaning of Title 28, United States Code, Section 157(b)(1)].

[5. Notwithstanding the fact that this proceeding will constitute a non-core proceeding on removal, _____ (removing party) consents to entry of all final orders or judgment by the Bankruptcy Court as permitted by Title 28, United States Code, Section 157(c)(2) or _____ (Removing party) does not consent to entry of any final orders or judgment by the Bankruptcy Court in this proceeding. Rather, _____ (removing party) requested that this proceeding be treated as a non-core proceeding pursuant to Title 28, United States Code, Section 157(c)(1).]

6. True and correct copies of all process and pleadings filed and served in the Civil Action are attached to this notice.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Applicant
_____ [address]
_____ [telephone]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a request for and notice of removal of a state court action to the Bankruptcy Court. It is used by a debtor to remove a state court action that involves a claim against the debtor into the federal Bankruptcy Court [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a); see [3], below (grounds for removal)].

Optional Paragraph 5 is for use if the proceeding is a non-core proceeding [see 28 U.S.C. § 157(c)].

For a notice of removal to file with the affected state court, see § 94.111.

PRACTICE TIP:

All bankruptcy courts are now paperless. Any practitioner who anticipates filing more than an occasional pleading in any bankruptcy court would be prudent to contact the clerk of the court for a login and password, and to take the brief training class. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[3] Grounds for Removal

A party may remove any claim or cause of action in a civil action to the bankruptcy court for the district in which the civil action is pending, if that district court has jurisdiction over the claim or cause of action under 28 U.S.C. § 1334 [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a)].

Proceedings before the United States Tax Court and civil actions commenced by a government unit to enforce its police or regulatory power may not be removed [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a)].

[4] Procedure for Removal

Removal is accomplished by filing a notice of removal (this form) with the clerk of the district court and a copy of the notice with the clerk of the court from which the action is removed [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(a)(1), (c)]. The state court action being removed is likely to be stayed by 11 U.S.C. § 362 [see § 94.30]. A notice of removal generally must be filed within 30 days after entry of an order terminating the stay with respect to the claim or cause of action or 30 days after service of summons or filing of the initial pleading [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(a)(2), (3)].

[5] Caption

The caption must include the name of the court, the title of the case, the bankruptcy docket number, and a brief designation of the character of the paper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9004(b)]. This form may use the short form caption, containing merely the name of the debtor or joint debtors [see Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 16B].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a notice of removal of a state court action to federal Bankruptcy Court. It is used by a debtor who is a defendant in a state court action to give notice to the state court that the action is being removed to federal Bankruptcy Court [see 28 U.S.C. § 1452(a)]. The request for removal filed with the Bankruptcy Court [see § 94.110] should be attached to this form when it is filed.

Promptly after filing the notice of removal with the Bankruptcy Court, the removing party must file a copy of the notice with the clerk of the court from which the case is removed [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9027(c)].

For a request for and notice of removal of state court action to file with the Bankruptcy Court, see § 94.110.

MOTION TO _____ [DISMISS or SUSPEND]

COMES NOW, _____ [name of creditor], a creditor in the above titled case, and moves the court for an order of _____ [dismissal or suspension] pursuant to Title 11, United States Code, Section 305. Creditor makes the following representations in support of the motion:

1. On or about _____ [date], an involuntary petition for relief under Chapter _____ was filed against the Debtor in this action. Creditor is an unsecured creditor of the Debtor.

2. This court should _____ [dismiss or suspend proceedings in] this case because _____ [specify, e.g., the issues can better be considered in a pending state court action addressing many of the same issues].

3. The interest of Creditors would be better served by _____ [dismissal or suspension of all proceedings in] this case.

WHEREFOR, Creditor respectfully requests that the court _____ [dismiss or suspend all proceedings in] the above referenced bankruptcy case and further requests that the court grant Creditor such other and further relief as the court deems just and proper.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Creditor
_____ [address]
_____ [telephone]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a motion to dismiss the case or suspend proceedings in the case (sometimes called a motion to abstain). It is prepared by a creditor and presented to the bankruptcy court to request that the court abstain from hearing a bankruptcy case or a particular proceeding in such a case [11 U.S.C. § 305; see [3], [4], below].

[3] Grounds for Abstention

After notice and hearing, a court may abstain from hearing a proceeding arising under the Bankruptcy Code or related to a bankruptcy case in the interests of justice or comity or respect for state courts or law [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1); see 11 U.S.C. § 305 (dismissal or suspension of bankruptcy case)].

Abstention is mandatory in a related proceeding, on timely motion of a party, if of the following exist [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(2)]:

- The related proceeding is based on a state law claim or state law cause of action;
- The only basis for federal court jurisdiction over the related proceeding is that it is related to the bankruptcy case; and
- The related proceeding is commenced and can be timely adjudicated in the state court.

Mandatory abstention is unavailable for certain noncore personal injury tort and wrongful death proceedings in the same district as the bankruptcy case [see 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(4), (5)].

[4] Moving for Abstention

On timely motion, and after notice and opportunity for hearing, a court may dismiss a bankruptcy case or suspend proceedings in a bankruptcy case [11 U.S.C. § 305(a); 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)]. Unless a district judge orders otherwise, the bankruptcy judge hears the motion and files a report and recommendation for disposition of the motion [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(b)]. Within 10 days of service (20 days in some cases), a party may serve and file written objections [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 5011(b), 9033(b), (c)].

Neither the motion nor a decision on the motion gives relief from the stay of 11 U.S.C. § 362 [28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(2)]. To proceed against property of the bankruptcy estate, a party or affected entity must additionally seek relief from the stay [see § 94.33].

A motion for abstention does not stay the administration of or any proceeding in the case. However, the bankruptcy judge may stay the proceedings pending disposition of the motion, on terms and conditions that are proper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 5011(c)].

[5] Caption

The caption must include the name of the court, the title of the case, the bankruptcy docket number, and a brief designation of the character of the paper [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9004(b)]. This form may use the short form caption, containing merely the name of the debtor or joint debtors [see Advisory Committee Note to Official Form 16B].

The application of _____ [name], by _____ [name], his/her/its attorney, respectfully represents:

That he/she/it is [a Creditor of] the Debtor herein. That this case has been closed pursuant to Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rule 5009, and the trustee has been discharged. Applicant desires to file a complaint to determine dischargeability of a debt pursuant to Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rule 4007(a).

WHEREFORE, applicant prays for an order directing that this case be reopened and the applicant have such order and further relief as is just.
Dated: _____.

_____ [signature]
Attorney for Applicant
_____ [address]
_____ [telephone]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an application to reopen a case. It is for use by a debtor or creditor to reopen a closed bankruptcy case in order to file a complaint to determine dischargeability of a specific debt. This application is considered a motion and must be served on the debtor and, if known, the debtor's attorney [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 5010, 9013].

There is no time limit for reopening a case to determine the dischargeability of a debt of the types enumerated at 11 U.S.C. § 523(a), and no filing fee is required [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 4007(b), 5010; Advisory Committee Notes to Rule 5010]. However, an undue and inordinate delay may result in refusal to reopen a case [see Hull v. Powell (9th Cir. 1962) 309 F.2d 3, 4-5 (23-year delay excessive)].

For a form for an order reopening a case, see § 94.81. For a form for an ex parte application to reopen a case to pursue a lien avoidance action, see § 94.80.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an adversary complaint for use by a creditor to initiate an adversary proceeding in the bankruptcy court to determine the dischargeability of a specific debt [see Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 4007, 7008(a); see also § 94.50 et seq.].

[3] Caption

A proceeding to determine dischargeability of a debt commenced by a complaint filed under Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007 is governed by the rules regarding adversary proceedings [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(e)]. All captions in adversary proceedings must conform substantially to Official Form 16C [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7010]. The caption in this form is patterned on Official Form 16C. Most district courts also have their own caption requirements for adversary proceedings. Counsel should check with the local bankruptcy clerk to determine what local requirements apply.

[4] Contents of Complaint

Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7008(a) requires that the allegation of jurisdiction contain a reference to the name, number, and chapter of the bankruptcy case to which the complaint relates, and to the district and division in which it is pending. In an adversary proceeding before a bankruptcy judge, the complaint is required to contain a statement that the proceeding is a core proceeding (Paragraph 2) [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7008(a); see 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(I)].

Although a complaint to determine dischargeability under 11 U.S.C. § 523(c) must be filed before it has been determined that the debtor will be discharged, the court need not determine the question of discharge of the specific debt until it has been determined that the debtor is entitled to discharge. Before that time, the question of dischargeability of the specific debt is not ripe (Paragraph 3). The complaint sets forth facts that bring the debt within the requirements for nondischargeability (Paragraph 4), and specifies the subsection of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) that applies (Paragraph 5) [see § 94.53].

If there has already been a state court judgment rendered on the debt, Paragraph 2 of the prayer should be omitted [In re Comer (9th Cir. 1984) 723 F.2d 737, 740] .

The complaint must be signed by the plaintiff's attorney [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 9011(a)].

[5] Format

Most district courts have their own forms for adversary proceedings, as well as requirements with respect to cover sheets, number of copies, and transmission of records from nonbankruptcy courts. Thus, counsel should check with the local bankruptcy clerk to determine what local requirements apply.

[6] Time for Filing and Fees

Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(b)-(d) governs the time for commencing actions under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a) and (c). For further discussion, see § 94.54[1][b], [2][b].

There is a $350 filing fee for an adversary complaint [28 U.S.C. § 1914(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

All bankruptcy courts are now paperless. Any practitioner who anticipates filing more than an occasional pleading in any bankruptcy court would be prudent to contact the clerk of the court for a login and password, and to take the brief training class. Commentary by John A. Vos.

[7] Procedure and Service

Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 7002-7071 adopt Fed. R. Civ. P., Rules 3-5, 7-10, 12-23, 25-42, 52, 54-56, 62-64, and 67-71, with some modifications, for use in adversary proceedings in bankruptcy courts. The adversary proceeding is commenced by the filing and service of a summons and complaint [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7003, adopting Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 3]. Service of summons may be made by any of the methods set forth in Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 4, or any other method set forth in Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7004 [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7004]. The clerk will set a trial date on issuance of the summons. Usually service is made on both the defendant and his or her attorney. Service by first-class mail, postage prepaid (an approved method), but service by that method, and some others, must be made (deposited in the mail) within 10 days of the issuance of the summons [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rules 7004(a), (e), 9006(e)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Service of Process by Mail. Service of process may be completed merely by mailing a copy of the summons, complaint, and other documents required by local rule, if any, to the debtor [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7004(b)]. Personal service is not required [Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7004(a)]. If the defendant is the debtor represented by an attorney in the underlying bankruptcy case, Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 7004(b)(9) requires that a copy also be mailed to the debtor's counsel. Commentary by John A. Vos.

§ 94.122 Affirmative Defense in Action by Creditor Against Debtor--Discharge in Bankruptcy

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense in Action by Creditor Against Debtor--Discharge in Bankruptcy

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], Defendant alleges:

1. On _____ [date], _____ [Defendant filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy or an order for relief was entered against Defendant in an involuntary bankruptcy case] under Chapter _____ of Title 11 of the United States Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the _____ District of _____ [, _____ Division]. That case was entitled "In re _____ [name of defendant], Debtor," and numbered _____(hereinafter "the bankruptcy case").

2. On _____ [date], an _____ [order of discharge or in a Chapter 11, order confirming plan], a certified copy of which is attached hereto, marked Exhibit "A," and incorporated herein by reference, was duly entered in the bankruptcy case. By the terms of the order and in accordance with Title 11 of the United States Code, Section 524(a), Defendant was released from all personal liability for his/her dischargeable debts; any judgment at any time obtained in any court other than the Bankruptcy Court was voided as a determination of the personal liability of the Defendant with respect to all dischargeable debts [in a Chapter 7, an individual's Chapter 11, a Chapter 12, or a hardship discharge in a Chapter 13 add:, unless determined to be nondischargeable under Title 11 of the United States Code, Section 523(c)]; and Plaintiff, among others, was enjoined from the commencement or continuation of any action, the employment of process, or any act to collect, recover, or offset any such debt as the personal liability of Defendant, whether or not discharge of the debt is waived.

[3. Plaintiff, who was a creditor at the time of the commencement of the bankruptcy case, had _____ (notice or actual knowledge) of the case in that _____ (state facts showing plaintiff's notice or knowledge of proceedings).]

[4. The Bankruptcy Court had exclusive jurisdiction under Title 11 of the United States Code, Section 523(c) to determine the dischargeability of the debt sued on herein. Plaintiff failed to seek a timely determination of dischargeability of the debt sued on herein in the Bankruptcy Court; thus the order of discharge discharged the debt sued on herein.]

[5. On _____ (date), _____ (Plaintiff or Defendant) filed in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the _____ District of _____(, _____ Division), a complaint for the determination of the dischargeability of the debt sued on herein by Plaintiff. On _____(date), after a hearing on the merits, the bankruptcy judge made and entered an order determining that this debt was dischargeable. (That order is now final, and no appeal therefrom has been taken.) A copy of the order is attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated herein by reference.]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an affirmative defense for use by a defendant who has been discharged in bankruptcy to defend against an action (state or federal) by a creditor to collect a debt. The grounds for the affirmatiave defense is that the claim in question was discharged in the bankruptcy case.

Before 1970, the affirmative defense had to be pleaded or it was waived [Davison v. Anderson (1954) 271 P.2d 233 ; but see Robinson v. Early (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 19, 24-25, 56 Cal. Rptr. 183 (discussing plaintiff's burden of proof after default in context of quashing writ of execution)]. Since the 1970 amendments to the Code, under 11 U.S.C. § 524(a), an order of discharge serves both to void any judgment on a dischargeable debt, whether obtained before or after the discharge, and to enjoin post-discharge acts by a creditor to collect or attempt to collect a dischargeable debt [but see 11 U.S.C. § 524(f) (voluntary repayment by debtor as not prohibited)]. Pleading the affirmative defense is still necessary, however, if dischargeability of the debt in question has yet to be determined [3 Collier on Bankruptcy, 15th Ed., § 523.13 (Matthew Bender)]. Thus, to the extent that it has not yet been resolved whether the debt is dischargeable--for instance, if there remains a question regarding whether the debt was properly scheduled or whether an obligation is in the nature of domestic support--the defendant should still plead affirmatively his or her discharge in bankruptcy and put in issue the determination of dischargeability.

Optional Paragraph 4 is for use if the bankruptcy was a Chapter 7, an individual's Chapter 11, a Chapter 12, or hardship discharge under Chapter 13, the obligation sued on is of the type enumerated at 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), or (6), and no complaint to determine discharge was brought in the bankruptcy case in a timely manner. Optional Paragraph 5 is for use if a complaint to determine dischargeability was resolved in defendant's favor in the bankruptcy court.

[3] Certified Copy of Discharge Order as Prima Facie Defense

A certified copy of an order of discharge is a prima facie defense to any action to collect a debt existing at the commencement of the bankruptcy case. A creditor relying on the debtor's failure to properly or timely schedule the claim has the burden of establishing that failure. Once that failure is established, the debtor has the burden to show that the creditor nevertheless had actual notice of the case [Hill v. Smith (1923) 260 U.S. 592, 595,43 S. Ct. 219, 67 L. Ed. 419 ; Kreitlein v. Ferger (1915) 238 U.S. 21, 26, 35 S. Ct. 685, 59 L. Ed. 1184 ; Mizrahi v. Miscione (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 673, 676, 60 Cal. Rptr. 680] . A defendant who knows the claim was not properly or timely scheduled may wish to include Optional Paragraph 3.

[4] Removal to Federal District Court

Either party may remove the action to the district court for the district in which the state action is pending, if that district has or had jurisdiction of the bankruptcy case [28 U.S.C. § 1452(a); see 28 U.S.C. § 1334 (bankruptcy jurisdiction)]. The court to which the action has been removed may remand on any equitable ground [28 U.S.C. § 1452(b)]. For further discussion of removal actions, see § 94.41. For forms related to removal, see § 94.110 et seq.

§ 94.123 Affirmative Defense in Action by Creditor Against Debtor--Laches as to Unscheduled Claim

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense in Action Brought by Creditor Against Debtor--Laches as to Unscheduled Claim

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], Defendant alleges:

1. Plaintiff has delayed an unreasonable period of time in bringing this action in that _____ [specify length of delay, state when plaintiff first became aware of bankruptcy and when plaintiff commenced this action, and describe plaintiff's behavior during interim].

2. Plaintiff's delay in bringing this action has prejudiced defendant in that _____ [describe how delay has prejudiced defendant].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is an affirmative defense for use by a defendant who has been discharged in bankruptcy to defend against an action based on a debt that was not scheduled, and therefore was not discharged, in that bankruptcy case. The defense is based on laches. (Laches may be considered as a ground for demurrer if the facts are apparent on the face of the complaint [Kleinclaus v. Dutard (1905) 147 Cal. 245, 250, 81 P. 516] . For further discussion and forms relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

The Ninth Circuit holds that the doctrine of laches applies to nondischargeability complaints brought under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(B) (a discharge under Chapter 7 does not cover unlisted, unscheduled debts) and Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 4007(b) [Beaty v. Selinger (In re Beaty) (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 914, 922-926] . In 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(B) the Bankruptcy Code creates a nondischargeability action for creditors that were neither listed nor scheduled and had no notice or actual knowledge of the case in time to permit the timely filing of a proof of claim or a timely request for a determination of dischargeability. Rule 4007(b), which governs the timing of the commencement of actions by unscheduled creditors, allows the complaint to be filed "at any time."

While laches is available as a defense, courts are required "to be especially solicitous to [creditors] when laches is invoked, and to refuse to bar an action without a particularized showing of demonstrable prejudicial delay. Just as there is a strong presumption that a delay is reasonable for purposes of laches when a specified statutory limitations period has not yet lapsed, there should be a similar presumption in [these] cases." The debtor must make a heightened showing of "extraordinary circumstances" and set forth a "compelling reason why the [creditor's] action should be barred" [Beaty v. Selinger (In re Beaty) (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 914, 926] .

As a general rule, the affirmative defense of laches requires proof of both of the following [Kansas v. Colorado (1995) 514 U.S. 673, 687, 115 S. Ct. 1733, 131 L. Ed. 2d 759 ; Costello v. United States (1961) 365 U.S. 265, 282, 81 S. Ct. 534, 5 L. Ed. 2d 551] :

- Lack of diligence by the plaintiff against whom the defense is asserted; and
- Prejudice resulting to the defendant.

The first element of laches requires an examination both of the length of the delay between the time when the creditor became aware of the bankruptcy discharge and the filing of the nondischargeability action, and also of the circumstances surrounding that delay, including the creditor's behavior during the interim period [Beaty v. Selinger (In re Beaty) (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 914, 927] . With respect to the second element, generic claims of prejudice will not suffice for a laches defense in any case and would be particularly insufficient in a case in which a heightened showing of extraordinary circumstances and demonstrable prejudice is required [Beaty v. Selinger (In re Beaty) (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 914, 928 (citing as examples of generic claims, asserted by debtor in this case: debtor would be deprived of finality of discharge, debtor faced attorney's fees that otherwise might not have arisen, and there might be some witnesses or documentary evidence that will be unavailable because of passage of time)].

Chapter 95 BANKS, DEPOSITS, AND CHECKS
PART I. SCOPE

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.01

§ 95.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the organization, regulatory environment, and some powers of state and federal banks and savings and loan associations; venue for actions against national banks; and service of process on banking institutions.

This chapter includes allegations of the capacity and principal place of business of a national bank [see § 95.410] and of the capacity and principal place of business of a state bank [see § 95.411]. It also includes allegations of the capacity and principal place of business of a state savings and law association [see § 95.412] and of the capacity and principal place of business of a federal savings bank [see § 95.413]. Finally, it includes a complaint for a stockholder's derivative action against a state-chartered savings and loan association [see § 95.414].

This chapter also discusses the relationships and obligations arising from the various types of deposits with financial institutions, focusing on the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.), the California Delayed Withdrawal Provisions (Fin. Code § 866 et seq.), and the California Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.). Check collection and handling are discussed in § 95.310 et seq.

This chapter also includes the following forms:

- A complaint against a financial institution to recover the amount of a deposit [see § 95.430].

- A complaint for damages for failing to make deposited funds available for withdrawal within the required time [see § 95.431].

- A declaration and notice of adverse claim to funds deposited in a bank or savings account [see § 95.432].

- A complaint in interpleader by a bank to determine rights of adverse claimants [see § 95.433].

- A complaint for fraud and deceit by a creditor against a bank and its employee to recover damages for misrepresentation and suppression of facts surrounding the solvency of a debtor [see § 95.434].

- A complaint and an allegation for recovery of funds improperly subjected to setoff [§§ 95.435, 95.436].

Within this chapter "bank" means a person engaged in the business of banking, including a savings bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or trust company [Com. Code § 4105(1)].

This chapter also discusses the rights and responsibilities of financial institutions to their customers as drawers and payees of checks with regard to the collection and payment of checks under Division 4 of the California Commercial Code (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.). This chapter also discusses the regulation of check-cashing businesses under Civ. Code § 1789.30 et seq.

Checks are negotiable instruments within the meaning of Com. Code § 3104, so checks are governed also by Division 3 (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.), which is discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments . In particular, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments , for discussion of Com. Code § 3110, which determines to whom a check is payable. Selected provisions of Division 3 that relate to one's rights against a financial institution on particular checks are addressed in this part rather than in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments.

Forms in this chapter relating to Division 3 include a complaint for use by a payee whose endorsement was forged against the collecting bank that paid the forger [see § 95.461; see Com. Code § 3420]; a complaint by a represented person against a bank that took a check from his or her representative in circumstances giving notice of breach of fiduciary duty [see § 95.463; see Com. Code § 3307]; a declaration of loss of teller's, cashier's, or certified check and notice of claim [see § 95.464; see Com. Code § 3312(b)]; and a notice of potential damages likely to be caused by a bank's wrongful refusal to pay a teller's, cashier's, or certified check [see § 95.465; see Com. Code § 3411].

Division 4 is the basis for complaints against a bank for improper payment of a check [see § 95.450], for wrongful dishonor of a check [see § 95.456], and for payment of a check contrary to a stop-payment order [see § 95.459], as well as for forms of allegations for use with those complaints [§§ 95.457, 95.458] and forms of affirmative defenses for use by a bank in those actions [see §§ 95.451 -95.455]. A complaint for declaratory relief is also included for use by a drawee bank to determine its claim of subrogation after payment of a check the drawer claims was not properly payable check [see § 95.460].

For forms for use in actions by and between the parties to checks other than banks, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

This chapter also discusses rights, duties, obligations, and liabilities arising in connection with funds transfers between banks and banking customers under Division 11 of the Commercial Code [see Com. Code § 11101 et seq.; § 95.340 et seq.].

1. Scope and Governing Law

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.10

§ 95.10 Governing Law

California Banking Law, which is Division 1 of the Financial Code (Fin. Code § 99 et seq.), and regulations (10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1.1 et seq.) govern operations of state-chartered banks. Federally chartered banks are governed by various federal laws and regulations that are beyond the scope of this chapter, including the National Banking Act (12 U.S.C. § 21 et seq.).

California Savings Association Law, which is Division 2 of the Financial Code (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.), and regulations (10 Cal. Code Reg. § 100.100 et seq.) govern operations of state-chartered savings associations.

Banks and savings associations are also both subject to all provisions of law applicable to corporations generally, including the General Corporation Law (Corp. Code § 100 et seq.), except that, if any provision of the general corporation law is inconsistent with any provision of the Banking Law or the Savings Association Law, or any regulation or order issued thereunder, the provisions of the Banking Law or Savings Association Law prevail [Fin. Code §§ 101(b) (banks), 6500(a) (savings and loan associations)].

Banks, savings associations, and credit unions and industrial loan companies that formerly were regulated by the Department of State Banking, Department of Savings and Loan, and Department of Corporations, respectively, are regulated by the Department of Financial Institutions, headed by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [see Stats. 1996, ch. 1064, § 1].

Various federal laws and regulations, most notably the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. § 1811 et seq.) and regulations promulgated thereunder, that are beyond the scope of this chapter also govern specified operations of state-chartered banks and savings associations; branches of foreign banks and savings associations operating in California; and branches, agencies, subsidiaries, and affiliates of federally chartered or insured banks or savings associations operating in California [see generally § 95.100 et seq.].

Release of demand deposit funds, including NOW accounts, is governed by Fin. Code §§ 40500, 40501 [see § 95.291].

The California Right to Financial Privacy Act (Gov. Code § 7460 et seq.) governs access to customers' financial records by California agencies.

The California Consumer Contract Awareness Act of 1990 (Civ. Code § 1799.200 et seq.) governs contracts and guaranties and imposes requirements for providing copies to the consumer or guarantor. Any waiver of the provisions of that law is contrary to public policy, and is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1799.207].

Possible preemption of state wrongful discharge claims by employees of national banks and insured savings and loan associations are governed by 12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5 and 12 C.F.R. § 563.39(b), respectively.

Multiparty accounts are governed by Prob. Code § 5100 et seq., which is discussed in § 95.270, and in Ch. 316, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common, and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

§ 95.30 Right to Financial Privacy Act

[1] Purposes

The California Right to Financial Privacy Act (Gov. Code § 7460 et seq.; hereinafter, "Privacy Act") was enacted to establish procedures and policies to govern the relationship between financial institutions and government agencies in a way that ensures citizens' constitutional rights, specifically to clarify and protect the confidential relationship between financial institutions and their customers and to balance a citizen's right of privacy with the governmental interest in obtaining information for specific purposes [Gov. Code § 7461].

[2] Applicability and Definitions

The Privacy Act applies to all financial institutions operating in California: state and national banks, state and federal savings and loan associations, trust companies, industrial loan companies, and state and federal credit unions [Gov. Code § 7465(a)]. It does not apply to a title insurer while the insurer is engaging in the conduct of the "business of title insurance" [see Ins. Code § 12340.3], an underwritten title company, or an escrow company [Gov. Code § 7465(a)]. The "financial records" protected by the Privacy Act are any original or any copy of any record or document held by a financial institution pertaining to a customer of the financial institution [Gov. Code § 7465(b)]. The customer can be an individual, partnership, corporation, limited liability company, association, trust, or any other legal entity who has transacted business with or has used the services of the financial institution or for whom a financial institution has acted as a fiduciary [Gov. Code § 7465(c), (d)].

The Privacy Act applies to "state agencies," which means state offices, officers, departments, divisions, bureaus, boards, commissions, and other state agencies, including the Legislature [Gov. Code § 7465(e)]. The Privacy Act also applies to "local agencies" such as counties; cities, whether general law or chartered; cities and counties; school districts; municipal corporations; districts; political subdivisions or boards, commissions, or agencies thereof; or other local public agencies [Gov. Code § 7465(f)]. All "supervisory agencies" must abide by the Privacy Act, including the following [Gov. Code § 7465(g)]:

- The Department of Financial Institutions;
- State Controller;
- Administrator of Local Agency Security;
- Department of Real Estate; and
- Department of Insurance.

The Privacy Act pertains to investigations by any of the agencies including, but not limited to, any inquiry by a peace officer, sheriff, or district attorney or any inquiry to determine whether there has been a violation of any law enforceable by imprisonment, fine, or monetary liability [Gov. Code § 7465(h)].

The term "subpoena" includes subpoena duces tecum [Gov. Code § 7465(i)].

§ 95.31 Conditions for Disclosure of Financial Records to State and Local Agencies

[1] In General

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 7480 (discussed in § 95.37[1]), no officer, employee, or agent of a state or local agency or department may request or receive copies of, or the information contained in, a customer's financial records from a financial institution unless the financial records are described with particularity and are consistent with the scope and requirements of the investigation giving rise to the request [Gov. Code § 7470(a)]. Further, the information can only be disclosed if one of the following additional requirements is met [Gov. Code § 7470(a)]:

- The customer authorized disclosure to the officer, employee, or agent of the state or local agency or department of the agency in accordance with Gov. Code § 7473;

- The disclosure is in response to an administrative subpoena or summons that meets the requirements of Gov. Code § 7474;

- The disclosure is in response to a search warrant that meets the requirements of Gov. Code § 7475; or

- The disclosure is in response to a judicial subpoena or subpoena duces tecum that meets the requirements of Gov. Code § 7476.

Nothing in Gov. Code §§ 7470 or 7473-7476 requires a financial institution to inquire or determine that the agency seeking disclosure has complied with the requirements set forth in those sections so long as the customer authorization, administrative subpoena or summons, search warrant, or judicial subpoena or order served on or delivered to a financial institution shows compliance on its face [Gov. Code § 7470(b)].

[2] Record of Disclosures and Access to Customers

The financial institution must maintain a record of all examinations or disclosures of financial records for a period of five years. That record must show the following [Gov. Code § 7470(c)]:

- The identity of the person examining the financial records;
- The state or local agency or department the examiner represents; and
- A copy of the customer authorization, subpoena, summons, or search warrant providing for the examination or disclosure, or a copy of the certification received pursuant to Gov. Code § 7480(b) (discussed in § 95.37[3]).

The financial records obtained by the state or local agency or office must be made available to the customer within five days of request, during normal business hours, for review by the customer at the office or branch at which the customer's account was located when examined or disclosed. The financial institution may charge the customer a reasonable fee for furnishing the records and may require payment at the time the customer requests to see the records [see Gov. Code § 7470(c)].

§ 95.32 Requests in Connection With Investigation of Customer

[1] Limitations on Disclosure

If the director, officer, employee, or agent of the financial institution knows or has reasonable cause to believe that financial records or information are being requested in connection with a civil or criminal investigation of the customer, whether or not an investigation is being conducted pursuant to formal judicial or administrative proceedings, the financial institution or its director, officer, employee, or agent cannot provide or authorize another to provide to an officer, employee, or agent of a state or local agency or department any financial records, copies of financial records, or information contained in financial records, except in accordance with the following [Gov. Code § 7471(a)]:

- Penal Code § 14160 et seq. (currency transactions of more than $10,000);
- Gov. Code § 7473 (customer authorization);
- Gov. Code § 7474 (administrative subpoena or summons);
- Gov. Code § 7475 (search warrant); or
- Gov. Code § 7476 (judicial subpoena or subpoena duces tecum).

Gov. Code § 7471 does not prohibit disclosure of the financial records of a customer or the information contained in a customer's financial records incidental to a transaction in the normal course of business of the financial institution if the director, officer, employee, or agent of the financial institution making or authorizing the disclosure has no reasonable cause to believe that the financial records or the information contained in the financial records being disclosed will be used by a state or local agency or department in connection with an investigation of the customer, whether or not an investigation is being conducted pursuant to formal judicial or administrative proceedings [Gov. Code § 7471(b)].

A financial institution that refuses to disclose a customer's financial records, copies of a customer's financial records, or the information contained in a customer's financial records in good faith reliance on the prohibitions of Gov. Code § 7471(a), or discloses the financial records of a customer, or copies of a customer's records or the information contained in a customer's records, in reliance in good faith on Gov. Code § 7470(c) or (d) [discussed in §§ 95.31[2], 95.37[1]], or Penal Code § 14164 (concerning records of customers' currency transactions exceeding $10,000), is not liable to its customer, a state or local agency, or any other person for any loss or damage caused in whole or in part by that refusal or disclosure [Gov. Code § 7471(d)].

[2] Suspected Violations of Law

Gov. Code § 7471 does not preclude a financial institution, in its discretion, from initiating contact with, and thereafter communicating with and disclosing customer financial records to, appropriate state or local agencies concerning suspected violation of any law [Gov. Code § 7471(c); see also § 95.37[3]]. This provision is referred to in some cases as the "bank-as-victim" exception. If the financial institution is not neutral by reason of the fact that it is, or suspects it might be, the victim of suspected wrongdoing, the depositor's right of privacy will not prevail [Burrows v. Superior Court (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 238, 245, 118 Cal. Rptr. 166, 529 P.2d 590 ; People v. Hole (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 431, 438, 188 Cal. Rptr. 693 ; see also Gov. Code § 7480(f) (see § 95.37)].

For example, if a bank notices that a depositor who is an employee of a corporate depositor has made unauthorized transfers of funds from the corporate account to the employee's personal account, the bank is entitled under Gov. Code § 7471(c) to notify the corporate depositor. After the corporate depositor contacts the police, no warrant or subpoena is necessary for the bank to provide police with the employee's account records [People v. Nece (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 285, 291-292, 206 Cal. Rptr. 552] .

§ 95.33 Customer Authorization of Disclosures

[1] Form of Authorization

A customer may authorize disclosure under Gov. Code § 7470(a)(1) if the agency seeking disclosure furnishes the financial institution with a statement signed and dated by the customer that does all the following [Gov. Code § 7473(a)]:

- Authorizes disclosure of information regarding a period set forth in the authorization statement;
- Specifies the name of the agency or department to which disclosure is authorized and, if applicable, the statutory purpose for which the information is to be obtained; and
- Identifies the financial records that are authorized to be disclosed.

A financial institution cannot require this authorization as a condition of the customer's doing business with it [Gov. Code § 7473(b)].

The authorization form provided to a customer by an officer, employee, or agent of a state or local agency seeking customer authorization for disclosure of the customer financial records must include written notification that the customer has the right at any time to revoke the authorization, except when the authorization is required by statute [Gov. Code § 7473(c)].

[2] Notification of Receipt or Examination of Records

An agency or department examining a customer's financial records of a customer pursuant to the customer's written authorization must notify the customer in writing within 30 days of the receipt of the records. The notification requirements may be extended for two additional 30-day periods, however, by application to a court in the county in which the records are located, on a showing of good cause to believe that a disclosure to the customer would impede the investigation. Thereafter, by application to a court on a showing of extreme necessity for nondisclosure, the notification requirements may be extended for three additional 30-day periods. At the end of that period or periods, the agency or department must inform the customer that he or she has the right to make a written request as to the reason for the examination. The notice must specify the financial records that were examined and, if the customer requests, the reason for the examination [Gov. Code § 7473(d)(1)].

§ 95.34 Administrative Subpoena or Summons

[1] Requirements

To obtain a customer's financial records by administrative subpoena or summons otherwise authorized by law, officers and employees of state and local agencies must comply with the following requirements [Gov. Code § 7474(a)]:

- The entity seeking disclosure must serve a copy of the subpoena or summons on the customer in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10 et seq.;

- The subpoena or summons must include the name of the agency or department in whose name the summons or subpoena is issued and the statutory purpose for which the information is being obtained; and

- The entity seeking disclosure cannot obtain the records until and unless 10 days have passed since service of the summons or subpoena and the customer has not moved to quash the subpoena or summons.

Unless a court orders otherwise, a financial institution may notify its customer of receipt of an administrative subpoena or summons [Gov. Code § 7474(c)].

[2] Petition to Modify Notice Period

The Attorney General, the Commissioner of Corporations, and any district attorney investigating a violation of antitrust law authorized by Bus. & Prof. Code § 16759 may petition a court in the county where the records are located to waive or shorten the service and 10-day notice requirements if he or she can show that a law subject to the jurisdiction of that agency has been or is about to be violated [Gov. Code § 7474(b)(1)]. If the petition is granted by the court, the petitioning agency must notify the customer in writing of the examination within a period determined by the court, but not to exceed 60 days after the agency's receipt of any of the customer's financial records, copies, or information. The notice must specify what records were examined [Gov. Code § 7474(b)(3)]. On renewed petition, the time for notification can be extended another 30 days on a showing of good cause to believe that notification would impede the investigation. Thereafter, by application to a court, on a showing of extreme necessity for continued nondisclosure, the notification requirements may be extended for three additional 30-day periods [Gov. Code § 7474(b)(3)].

[3] Motion to Quash

If a customer files a motion to quash an administrative subpoena or summons, the motion must receive priority on the court calendar and must be heard within 10 days from the date of filing [Gov. Code § 7474(d)]. For discussion of administrative subpoenas, see Ch. 471, Investigations by Public Agencies . For discussion and forms of motion to quash service of summons in judicial proceedings, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal . Officers of a state or local agency may obtain financial records under Gov. Code § 7470(a)(3) only if a search warrant is obtained in accordance with Penal Code § 1523 et seq. [Gov. Code § 7475].

The financial records may be examined as soon as the warrant is served on the financial institution. Unless a court orders otherwise based on a finding that notification would impede the investigation, a financial institution may notify its customer of receipt of a search warrant [Gov. Code § 7475].

The financial institution must make the customer's records available to the officer, employee, or agent of the state or local agency or department within 10 days after service of the warrant on it, unless the institution makes a written showing to the court within the 10-day period that it cannot reasonably make the records available within that period [*Gov. Officers and employees of state and local agencies may obtain financial records under a judicial subpoena or subpoena duces tecum issued and served on the customer and the financial institution in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1985 et seq. If the customer has not been served by the time the records are to be produced, the court must, on good cause shown, make a finding of due diligence on the part of the agency before turning any records over to it [Gov. Code § 7476(a)(1)].

The agency must wait 10 days after serving the subpoena before it receives the financial records or information to allow the customer to move to quash. However, the 10-day period can be shortened on a showing of good cause [Gov. Code § 7476(a)(2)]. If the customer moves to quash and is unsuccessful, the records may be provided to the agency [Gov. Code § 7476(a)(3)].

A deputy district attorney, deputy attorney general, or other person authorized to present evidence to a grand jury in a criminal investigation before a grand jury, or scheduled to be presented to a grand jury, may obtain financial records for return to the grand jury pursuant to a judicial subpoena duces tecum, on a written showing to a judge of the superior court that there exists a reasonable inference that a crime within the jurisdiction of the grand jury has been committed and that the financial records sought are reasonably necessary to the jury's investigation of that crime, provided the subpoena is personally signed and issued by a judge of the superior court [Gov. Code § 7476(b)(1)], and one of three conditions is satisfied for the customer's reasonable protection [see Gov. Code § 7476(b)(1)(A)-(C)].

§ 95.37 Authorized Exceptions

[1] Financial Institution as Victim

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 7480, Gov. Code § 7470 is not intended to preclude a state or local law enforcement agency from initiating contact with a financial institution if there is reason to believe that the financial institution is the victim of a crime. After contact by an enforcement agency, if the financial institution believes it is a victim of a crime, it may in its discretion disclose relevant financial records pursuant to Gov. Code § 7471(c) (discussed in § 95.32[2]) [Gov. Code § 7470(d)]. Gov. Code §§ 7470(d) and 7471(c) are often considered together, depending on whether the financial institution or the enforcement agency initiates the contact or investigation. When a person attempts to pass a check drawn on insufficient funds in violation of Penal Code § 476a, the drawee bank is a "victim of the crime" for purposes of these exceptions whether or not it suffers any financial loss [People v. Hole (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 431, 438, 188 Cal. Rptr. 693] .

[2] Information Not Identifiable With Customer

The financial institution can release any financial information that is not identifiable with a customer [Gov. Code § 7480(a)].

[3] Inquiry Regarding Check Fraud

When a police or sheriff's department or district attorney in California certifies to a bank, credit union, or savings association in writing that a crime report has been filed that involves the alleged fraudulent use of drafts, checks, access cards, or other orders drawn on a bank, credit union, or savings association in, or doing business in, California, the police or sheriff's department or district attorney or, when investigating the financial abuse of an elder or dependent adult, a county adult protective services office or long-term care ombudsman may request that the bank, credit union, or savings association furnish a statement setting forth the following information with respect to a customer account specified by the police or sheriff's department or district attorney, for a period 30 days preceding, and up to 30 days following, the date of occurrence of the alleged illegal act involving the account [Gov. Code § 7480(b), (c)]:

- The number of items dishonored.

- The number of items paid that created overdrafts.

- The dollar volume of the dishonored items and items paid that created overdrafts and a statement explaining any credit arrangement between the bank, credit union, or savings association and customer to pay overdrafts.

- The dates and amounts of deposits and debits and the account balances on those dates.

- A copy of the signature card, including the signatures and any addresses appearing on a customer's signature card.

- The date the account was opened and, if applicable, the date the account was closed.

- Surveillance photographs and video recordings of persons accessing the crime victim's financial account via an automated teller machine (ATM) or from within the financial institution, for dates on which illegal acts involving the account were alleged to have occurred, if the financial institution possesses such a photograph or video recording [but see Gov. Code § 7480(b)(7)(B), (c)(7)(B) (certain statutory civil immunities are not affected by this requirement)].

If the bank, credit union, or savings association furnishes to the requesting person copies of complete account statements prepared in the regular course of business, that will be deemed to be in compliance with the first four requirements above [Gov. Code § 7480(b)(8), (c)(8)].

The bank, credit union, or savings association must furnish the requested information, provided, if it is not a California financial institution, the consent of the account holder has been obtained [Gov. Code § 7480(b), (c)]. Consent of the account holder will be given if an account holder provides to the financial institution, and to the person or entity seeking disclosure, a signed and dated statement containing all of the following [Gov. Code § 7480(d)]:

- Authorization of the disclosure for the period specified above.

- The name of the agency or department to which disclosure is authorized and, if applicable, the statutory purpose for which the information is to be obtained.

- A description of the financial records that are authorized to be disclosed.

[4] Limited Reply to Inquiry by Specially Authorized Person

The financial institution may reveal (to certain specified law enforcement, supervisory, and taxing agencies) whether a customer has an account at that office and its number [Gov. Code § 7480(e)]. Financial institutions may also disclose to taxing authorities information required for auditing the financial institution and the amount of any security interest the financial institution has in any asset of the customer [Gov. Code § 7480(g)-(i)].

[5] Disclosure to Supervisory Agency

Disclosure may be made to certain supervisory agencies if related solely to the agency's supervisory functions [Gov. Code § 7480(f)].

[6] Limited Reply to Inquiry by EDD

Disclosure may be made to the Employment Development Department of the amount of any security interest a financial institution has in a specified asset of a customer if the department's inquiry is directed to the branch or office where the interest is held [Gov. Code § 7480(j)].

[7] Reply to Inquiry Regarding Construction Loan Disbursements

A financial institution that is a construction lender, as defined in Civ. Code § 3087, may disclose to the Registrar of Contractors information concerning the making of progress payments to a prime contractor requestedby the registrar in connection with an investigation under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 [Gov. Code § 7480(k)].

[8] Inquiries Regarding Person Owing Child Support Obligation

A request by the Franchise Tax Board for information from a financial institution will be treated in the same manner and to the same extent as a request for information from a local child support agency referring to a support order pursuant to Fam. Code § 17400, for purposes of Government Code provisions pertaining to government access to financial records [Rev. & Tax. Code § 19271(b)(3)(C)]. The financial institution must provide the following [Gov. Code § 7480(l)]:

- Names of each owner of any account identified by number in the request; and

- Each account maintained by the person named in the request at the branch to which the request is delivered and, if the institution's computer capabilities allow, at all its California branches.

For each account disclosed, the institution must disclose the account number, the current balance, the street address of the branch where the account is maintained, and the name and address of any other persons listed as an owner [Gov. Code § 7480(l)].

The request may prohibit the financial institution from disclosing the request or the response to the account holder or any other person, except employees involved in responding to the request and auditors, attorneys, and regulatory authorities who need to know in order to perform their duties. Disclosure may also be made when required by legal process [Gov. Code § 7480(l)].

A local child support agency may make this type of request only if it has received at least one of the following types of physical evidence [Gov. Code § 7480(l)]:

- Any of the following, dated within the last three years: Form 599; Form 1099; a bank statement; a check; a bank passbook; a deposit slip; a copy of a federal or state income tax return; a debit or credit advice; correspondence that identifies the child support obligor by name, the bank, and the account number; correspondence that identifies the child support obligor by name, the bank, and the banking services related to the obligor's account; or an asset identification report from a federal agency.

- A sworn declaration from the custodial parent during the 12 months immediately preceding the request stating that the person named in the request has had or may have had an account at an office or branch of the financial institution to which the request is made.

The local child support agency may use the information obtained in response to the request only for purposes that are directly connected within the administration of the duties of the local child support agency pursuant to Fam. Code § 17400 [Gov. Code § 7480(l)].

For further discussion of enforcement of child support orders, see Ch. 394, Parent and Child .

[9] Interstate Child Support Enforcement

On receipt of an administrative subpoena on the current federally approved interstate child support enforcement form, as approved by the federal Office of Management and Budget, a financial institution must provide the information or documents requested by the administrative subpoena [Gov. Code § 7480(m)(1)].

The administrative subpoena must refer to the current federal Office of Management and Budget control number and be signed by a person who states that he or she is an authorized agent of a state or county agency responsible for implementing the child support enforcement program set forth 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq. A financial institution may rely on the statements made in the subpoena and has no duty to inquire into the truth of any statement in the subpoena [Gov. Code § 7480(m)(2)].

If the person who signs the administrative subpoena directs a financial institution in writing not to disclose either the subpoena or its response to any owner of an account covered by the subpoena, the financial institution must not disclose the subpoena or its response to the owner [Gov. Code § 7480(m)(3)].

The financial institution and its officers, employees, and agents are not liable to any person for (1) duly disclosing information or providing documents in response to the subpoena, (2) failing to notify any owner of an account covered by the subpoena, (3) duly complying with a request not to disclose the subpoena or disclosure, or (4) failing to discover any account owned by the person named in the subpoena pursuant to a computerized search of the records of the financial institution [Gov. Code § 7480(m)(4)].

[10] Money Laundering Investigation

A financial institution may disseminate financial information and records pursuant to an order by a judge on a written ex parte application by a peace officer showing specific and articulatable facts that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the records and information sought are relevant and material to an ongoing investigation of a felony violation of Penal Code § 186.10 (a money laundering scheme) or of any felony subject to the enhancement set forth in Penal Code § 186.11 (enhanced penalty for two or more fraud- or embezzlement-related crimes) [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(3)].

The ex parte application must specify with particularity the records to be produced, which must be only those of individuals who are the subjects of the criminal investigation [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(3)(A)].

The ex parte application and any subsequent judicial order must be open to the public as a judicial record unless ordered sealed by the court, for a period of 60 days. The sealing of these records may be extended for 60-day periods on a showing to the court that it is necessary for the continuance of the investigation, and 60-day extensions may continue for up to one year or until termination of the investigation of the individual or individuals, whichever is sooner [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(3)(B)].

The records ordered to be produced must be returned to the peace officer applicant or a designee within a reasonable period after service of the order on the financial institution [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(3)(C)].

The financial institution may, but is not required to, notify a customer of the receipt of the order for production of records, unless a court orders the financial institution to withhold notification to the customer on a finding that the notice would impede the investigation. When a court has made an order to withhold notification to the customer, the peace officer or law enforcement agency that obtained the financial information must notify the customer by delivering a copy of the ex parte order to the customer within 10 days of the termination of the investigation [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(3)(D), (E)].

No financial institution, nor any officer, employee, or agent of a financial institution, is liable to any person for disclosing information in response to an order as described above or complying with an order not to disclose to the customer either the order for records or information or the dissemination of information pursuant to the order [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(4)(B), (C)].

[11] Guardianship or Conservatorship Account or Safe Deposit

A financial institution may disseminate financial information and records in compliance with the requirements of Prob. Code §§ 2892 and 2893 [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(1), (2)]. Those sections require a financial institution to send certain information to the supervising court after a guardian or conservator opens or changes the name to an account or safe deposit box in the financial institution. The financial institution and its officers, employees, and agents are not liable to any person for disclosing information to the supervising court in that case [Gov. Code § 7480(n)(4)(A)].

[12] Identity Theft Investigation

A financial institution that is a credit card issuer may disclose financial information and records to a peace officer [see Penal Code § 830.1 (definition)] pursuant to Civ. Code § 1748.95(a)(1), in the case of a credit card obtained in consequence of identity theft, provided the financial institution has first complied with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1748.95(a)(2), (b) (concerning notification to the victim of the identity theft) [Gov. Code § 7480(o)(1)].

A financial institution that is a state or federally regulated bank, savings association, savings bank, or credit union, or a subsidiary of any of those [see Fin. Code § 4000(a)(9) (definition)], may disclose financial information and records to a peace officer [see Penal Code § 830.1 (definition)] pursuant to Fin. Code § 4002(a)(1), in the case of any application submitted in consequence of identity theft, provided the financial institution has first complied with the requirements of Fin. Code § 4002(a)(2), (b) (concerning notification to the victim of the identity theft) [Gov. Code § 7480(o)(2)].

A financial institution that is a finance lender engaged in the business of making consumer loans may disclose financial information and records to a peace officer [see Penal Code § 830.1 (definition)] pursuant to Fin. Code § 22470(a)(1), in the case of any application submitted in consequence of identity theft, provided the financial institution has first complied with the requirements of Fin. Code § 22470(a)(2), (b) (concerning notification to the victim of the identity theft) [Gov. Code § 7480(o)(3)].

[13] Death of Beneficiary of Public Retirement System

When the Governing Board of the Public Employees' Retirement System or the State Teachers' Retirement System, or the retirement board of a retirement system established under the County Employees Retirement Law of 1937, certifies in writing to a financial institution that a benefit recipient has died and that transfers to the benefit recipient's account at the financial institution from the retirement system occurred after the benefit recipient's date of death, the financial institution must furnish to the retirement system the name and address of any co-owner, co-signer, or any other person who had access to the funds in the account following the date of the benefit recipient's death or, if the account has been closed, the name and address of the person who closed the account [Gov. Code § 7480(p), (q)]. (When applying this rule in the case of a county employee's retirement benefits, substitute the term "retired member or beneficiary of a retired member" for "benefit recipient.")

[14] State Tax Refund Directly Deposited in Error

When the Franchise Tax Board certifies in writing to a financial institution that (1) a taxpayer filed a tax return that authorized a direct-deposit refund with an incorrect financial institution account or routing number that resulted in all or a portion of the refund not being received, directly or indirectly, by the taxpayer, (2) the direct deposit refund was not returned to the Franchise Tax Board, and (3) the refund was deposited directly on a specified date into the account of an account holder of the financial institution who was not entitled to receive the refund, the financial institution must furnish to the Franchise Tax Board the name and address of any coowner, cosigner, or any other person who had access to the funds in the account following the date of direct-deposit refund or, if the account has been closed, must furnish the name and address of the person who closed the account [Gov. Code § 7480(r)].

3. California Consumer Contract Awareness Act

§ 95.60 General Requirement That Consumer Receive Copy of Contract

The California Consumer Contract Awareness Act of 1990 (Civ. Code § 1799.200 et seq.) requires that, whenever a natural person signs specified written consumer contracts prepared by the seller, the seller must deliver a copy of the contract to the consumer at the time the contract is signed, if it is signed at the seller's place of business [Civ. Code § 1799.202(a); see also Civ. Code § 1799.201(a), (b) (defining "consumer" and "consumer contract")]. If the contract is not signed by the consumer at the seller's place of business and the seller has not provided the consumer with a copy of the contract that the consumer is instructed to keep, the seller must mail or deliver a copy of the contact to the consumer within 10 calendar days after the seller receives the signed contract [Civ. Code § 1799.202(a)]. Any waiver of the provisions of the California Consumer Contract Awareness Act of 1990 is contrary to public policy, and is void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 1799.207].

The following consumer contracts are governed by the Consumer Contract Awareness Act of 1990 [Civ. Code § 1799.201(b); see also Civ. Code § 1799.203 (contracts not governed by or deemed in compliance with Act)]:

- Contracts for the sale or lease of goods or services that are purchased or leased primarily for personal, family, or household purposes; or

- Contracts for extension of credit, the proceeds of which are used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

The term "services" as used in the act means work, labor, and services, including depository services and other banking services [Civ. Code § 1799.201(i)].

For discussion of the act as applied to consumer contract guarantees, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds and Undertakings .

A bank or trust company engaged in renting safe deposit boxes or receiving personal property for safekeeping and storage on its banking premises must deliver a copy of any safe deposit rental agreement or personal property safekeeping and storage agreement prepared by it and signed by its customer to that customer [Fin. Code § 757(b)]. If the agreement is signed at a place of business of the bank or trust company, it must be delivered to the customer at the time he or she signs it. If the agreement is not signed at a place of business of the bank or trust company, the bank or trust company must mail or deliver a copy of the contact to the customer within 10 calendar days after the bank or trust company receives the contract. The contract must not contain any blank spaces to be filled in after the customer signs the contract [Fin. Code § 757(b)].

If more than one consumer or customer has signed a consumer contract, safe deposit rental agreement, or personal property safekeeping and storage agreement, the seller, bank, or trust company may comply by mailing or delivering the copy to any one of the consumers who reside at the same address. A copy must also be mailed or delivered to any other consumer who has signed the contract and who does not reside at the same address [Civ. Code § 1799.204; Fin. Code § 757(b); *but see Civ. § 95.64 Consumer Credit Applications

An application for credit is not considered a consumer contract for purposes of Civ. Code § 1799.201(b) even if it contains incidental provisions, such as the consumer's consent to a credit review, a certification of the accuracy of the information furnished, or the consumer's agreement to the terms that will be furnished to the consumer pursuant to Civ. Code § 1799.200 et seq. This exclusion from the definition of consumer contract does not affect the enforceability of any incidental provision contained in the credit application [Civ. Code § 1799.201(b)].

If the consumer makes a written request, a seller or financial institution, within a reasonable time after receipt of the request, must mail a copy of the consumer's completed consumer credit application to the consumer at the address indicated on the request. That copy may, but need not, contain any information completed or added by the seller or financial institution. The seller or financial institution may specify the address to which these requests may be sent, may charge the consumer a reasonable copying fee, and is not obligated to provide the copy until the fee is paid [Civ. Code § 1799.202(d)].

By making a written request for a copy of the completed credit application, the consumer is conclusively deemed to have waived any action against the seller or financial institution, as well as against its employees or agents, on any theory, at law or in equity, arising directly or indirectly out of the mailing or other delivery of the copy, including any information added to the application by the seller or financial institution and included in the copy [*Civ. A seller, bank, or trust company that fails to comply with Civ. Code § 1799.202 or Fin. Code § 757(b) is liable to the consumer for any actual damages suffered by the consumer as a result of that failure. This remedy is nonexclusive and is in addition to any other remedies or penalties available under other laws of California [Civ. Code § 1799.205(a); Fin. Code § 757(b)].

Failure to comply with Civ. Code § 1799.202 does not create an independent basis for rescission, but is admissible to establish a basis for the rescission of the contract otherwise authorized by law [Civ. Code § 1799.205(b)].

§ 95.80 Discharge of Bank Officers

[1] Dismissal at Pleasure of Directors

The directors of a national bank may dismiss officers at their pleasure [12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5]. The purpose of the "at-pleasure" provision is to ensure the fiscal integrity of national banks and to instill public confidence in those financial institutions. Thus, rights of officers of national banking associations that conflict with the right of the board of directors to dismiss them at their pleasure are preempted by 12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5 whether those rights arise by virtue of an agreement or are imposed by state law and whether framed as contractual or tortious causes of action [Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat. Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 692-695, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 (12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5 held to preempt California's age discrimination law); Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 596-597, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52] . "Other officers" within meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 24 includes vice presidents serving as branch managers in positions created by the bank's board who had authority to bind the bank in substantial transactions with third parties [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1091, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025] .

However, when an employee asserted that his or her position as "vice-president" was not vested with any of the duties or responsibilities normally associated with such a position, the bank was required to show that the employee was "an officer" of the bank pursuant to the criteria set forth in Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal.3d 1082, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025], in to obtain summary judgment on preemption grounds under 12 U.S.C. § 24 [Ramanathan v. Bank of Am. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1021, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471].

For a form for an affirmative defense for use by a national bank to assert this preemption, as well as general discussion and forms relating to wrongful termination, see Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline .

[2] Liability if Dismissal Not Made or Approved by Directors

12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5 does not preempt state law causes of action for wrongful termination unless the officer was dismissed by the bank's board of directors itself or the dismissal was approved or ratified by the board. Initial approval of a discharge may take place by action of a committee of board members who have been specifically authorized by the entire board to take that action, but the initial approval must nonetheless be ratified by prompt and proper action of the entire board. If full board action is not taken, the bank may not rely on the at-pleasure provisions of 12 U.S.C. § 24 as a defense to a wrongful discharge action [Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1103, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025] .

[3] Liability if Dismissal Not in Bank's Best Interests

12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 5 does not shield a director from liability for interference, or conspiracy to interfere, with economic relationships if his or her actions in initiating or causing the officer's employment to be terminated were not undertaken in the best interest of the bank [see Aalgaard v. Merchants Nat. Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 683-686, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 (summary judgment for defendants held proper)]. Thus, if a director acts wantonly, maliciously, without justification, and not for protection of his or her legitimate interests as director, he or she may be liable for wrongful termination or breach of employment contract [Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 600, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52] .

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.81

§ 95.81 Discharge of Savings and Loan Officers and Employees

Employment contracts entered into by insured savings and loan associations must allow the association's board of directors to terminate an officer's or employee's employment at any time. A termination other than for cause, however, does not prejudice the officer's or employee's right to compensation or other benefits. Termination for cause includes termination because of the officer's or employee's personal dishonesty, incompetence, willful misconduct, breach of fiduciary duty involving personal profit, intentional failure to perform stated duties, willful violation of any law, rule, or regulations (other than traffic violations or similar offenses) or of a final cease and desist order, or material breach of any provision of the contract [12 C.F.R. § 563.39(b)(1)]. 12 C.F.R. § 563.39 is enforced by the Office of Thrift Supervision and applicable to all insured savings and loans assocations.

California cases hold that state court claims of former savings and loan association employees are not preempted by 12 C.F.R. § 563.39 [Thomka v. Financial Corp. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 887, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 ; Honig v. Financial Corp. of America (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 964-965, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 ; Hall v. Great Western Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 713, 722, 282 Cal. Rptr. 640] . Although Hall relied on the fact that 12 C.F.R. § 563.39 does not contain the "at pleasure" language found in the banking law, Honig and Hall involved employees who were clearly pursuing legal activities, and the actions against them could not be considered to have been undertaken "for cause." Honig involved a suit filed as a preventative measure by an employee who feared termination. Honig alleged harassment in retaliation for plaintiff's refusal to use illegal means of marketing "jumbo" certificates. Hall was a wrongful termination action by an employee allegedly fired for pursuing a valid partial unemployment claim.

1. Scope and Governing Law

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.100

§ 95.100 Governing Law

[1] In General

Banks, savings associations, and credit unions and industrial loan companies, which before July 1, 1997, were regulated by the Department of State Banking, Department of Savings and Loan, and Department of Corporations, respectively, are now regulated by the Department of Financial Institutions, headed by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [see Stats. 1996, ch. 1064, § 1].

[2] Banks

California Banking Law (Fin. Code § 99 et seq.) and Regulations of California's Superintendent of Banks (10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1.1 et seq.) govern operations of state-chartered banks.

Acquisition of a California bank by a foreign-bank holding company, which is defined to include a foreign bank [see Fin. Code § 3753(a)], is governed by Fin. Code § 3750 et seq. Federally chartered banks are governed by various federal laws and regulations that are beyond the scope of this chapter, including the National Banking Act (12 U.S.C. § 21 et seq.).

Federal law provides that national banks "shall, for the purposes of all ... actions by or against them, be deemed citizens of the States in which they are respectively located" (apart from a few exceptional cases, such as a lawsuit against a bank by the United States, or an action to wind up the affairs of a bank) [28 U.S.C. § 1348]. This provision governs diversity jurisdiction and means that a national bank (1) is a citizen of the state in which its main office is located, as set forth in its articles of association, and (2) is not a citizen of any other state in which it has established a branch [Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Schmidt (2006) 546 U.S. 303, 318, 126 S. Ct. 941, 163 L. Ed. 2d 797] .

Venue for actions against national banks under Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation receivership is prescribed by 12 U.S.C. § 94, and changes of venue are regulated by Code Civ. Proc. § 397. Service of summons on banking corporations in California is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 416.10(c).

[3] Savings Associations

California Savings Association Law (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.) and regulations of the Savings and Loan Commissioner (10 Cal. Code Reg. § 100.100 et seq.) govern operations of state-chartered savings associations.

Federal savings associations and federal savings banks are chartered, regulated, and supervised by the Office of Thrift Supervision (hereinafter, sometimes, "OTS"), a bureau of the Department of the Treasury, in accordance with the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. § 1461 et seq.), although their activities as members of the regional Federal Home Loan Banks are still governed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. § 1421 et seq., as amended by Pub. L. No. 101-73) [see Pub. L. No. 101-73, §§ 401-512, 701-725].

Conduct of savings association business in California by a foreign savings association is governed by Fin. Code § 10000 et seq.

[4] Corporation Law Applicable to Both

Banks and savings associations, including foreign associations doing business in California with approval of the Savings and Loan Commissioner, have all the powers and privileges of, and are subject to all provisions of law applicable to, corporations generally, including the General Corporation Law (Corp. Code § 100 et seq.) [see, e.g., FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046 (application of business judgment rule codified in Corp. Code § 309 to directors of federally-insured national bank)]. If any provision of the general corporation law is inconsistent with any provision of the Banking Law or the Savings Association Law or with any regulation or order issued thereunder, the provisions of the Banking Law or Savings Association Law prevail [Fin. Code §§ 101(b) (banks), 6500(a) (savings and loan associations)].

[5] Insurance of Accounts

Insurance of bank and savings association accounts is governed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. § 1811 et seq.) and relatedregulations of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (12 C.F.R. § 303 et seq.; hereinafter, sometimes, "FDIC") and the Office of Thrift Supervision (12 C.F.R. § 500.1 et seq.). Prior to doing business in California, a state-chartered association must obtain and maintain, and a foreign savings association doing business in California as defined in Fin. Code § 10000(c) must maintain, insurance of its accounts by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation [Fin. Code § 5606(a)]. Thus, both state-chartered and federally chartered savings and loan associations operating in California are subject to all applicable regulations of the FDIC and the Office of Thrift Supervision. The California Savings and Loan Commissioner can enforce those regulations, and all other federal statutes and regulations, as they apply to associations [Fin. Code § 5606(c)].

§ 95.120 California Banks

[1] Banking Business

"Bank" as used in California Banking Law [Fin. Code § 99 et seq.] means any incorporated banking institution that has been incorporated to conduct the business of commercial or industrial banking or a trust business. The soliciting, receiving, or accepting of money or its equivalent for deposit as a regular business is considered doing a commercial banking business, whether deposits are subject to check or evidenced by a certificate of deposit, a passbook, a note, a receipt, or other writing. These provisions do not apply to or include money or its equivalent left in escrow or left with an agent pending investment in real estate or securities for or on account of the agent's principal. It is unlawful for any corporation, partnership, firm, or individual to engage in or transact a banking business in California except by means of a corporation duly organized for that purpose [Fin. Code § 102].

It is unlawful for any person, corporation, limited liability company, partnership, firm, or any other form of business entity allowed by law, to engage in or transact commercial banking business, industrial banking business, or trust business within California except by means of a corporation duly organized for that purpose [Fin. Code § 107.5].

[2] Formation

When authorized by the Commissioner of Financial Institutions as provided in Fin. Code § 350 et seq. (organization of banks), a corporation may be formed by one or more persons in accordance with the laws of California for the purpose of conducting a commercial banking business or a trust business, or both. The qualification requirements of the Corporate Securities Law of 1968 will not apply to the offer and sale of securities issued by and representing an interest in or a direct obligation of a bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of California if the securities are offered and sold pursuant to the commissioner's authorization [see Fin. Code § 691] or the securities are exempt from authorization pursuant to Fin. Code § 691.1 or by a regulation or order of the commissioner [Fin. Code § 350].

A bank may not be a close corporation as defined in Corp. Code § 158 [Fin. Code § 351].

[3] Service of Process

If a corporation is a bank, a summons may be served by delivering a copy of the summons and complaint to one of the following persons [Code Civ. Proc. § 416.10(a)-(c)]:

- The person designated as agent for service of process as specified by any provisions of Corp. Code § 202, 1502 (domestic corporations), 2105, or 2107 (foreign corporations);

- The president, chief executive officer, or other head of the corporation, a vice president, a secretary or assistant secretary, a treasurer or assistant treasurer, a controller or chief financial officer, a general manager, or a person authorized by the corporation to receive service of process; or

- A cashier or assistant cashier.

§ 95.121 Banks and Trust Companies

Banks are divided into three classes [Fin. Code § 103]:

- Commercial banks;
- Industrial banks; and
- Trust companies.

A commercial bank is a corporation organized for the purpose of engaging in the commercial banking business [Fin. Code § 105]. The commercial banking business includes, but is not limited to, the business of soliciting, receiving, or accepting of money or its equivalent on deposit as a regular business, whether the deposit is made subject to check or is evidenced by a certificate of deposit, a passbook, a note, a receipt, or other writing, except money or its equivalent left in escrow or left with an agent pending investment in real estate or securities for, or on account of, his or her principal. In addition, to be engaged in the commercial banking business means to lend money on the security of real or personal property or without security; to discount or deal in bills, notes, or other commercial paper; to buy and sell for the account of customers, and, if eligible for investment, for the bank's own account, securities, gold and silver bullion, foreign coins, and bills of exchange; and generally to transact a commercial banking business [Fin. Code § 105.2].

An industrial bank is a corporation organized for the purpose of engaging in the industrial banking business [Fin. Code § 105.5]. The industrial banking business includes the making of loans and acceptance of deposits, including deposits evidenced by investment or thrift certificates, but excluding demand deposits [Fin. Code § 105.7].

A trust company is a corporation or a commercial or industrial bank that is authorized to engage in the trust business [Fin. Code § 107; see Fin. Code § 1500 et seq. (regulation of trust companies)]. For discussion of a banks' responsibilities when acting as trustee of a private or charitable trust, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts . For discussion of banks' powers to operate trust departments and their responsibilities in offering trust department services, see Banking Law, Chs. 34, 96 and 97 (Matthew Bender).

§ 95.122 National Banking Associations

National banking associations may be formed under 12 U.S.C. §§ 21-35 of the National Banking Act (12 U.S.C. § 21 et seq.). Associations carrying on the business of banking under the National Banking Act may be formed by five or more natural persons. Articles of association are required and must specify in general terms the object for which the association is formed. The articles may contain any other provisions, not inconsistent with law, that the association may see fit to adopt for the regulation of its business and the conduct of its affairs. The articles are signed by the persons uniting to form the association, and a copy is forwarded to the Comptroller of the Currency to be filed and preserved in that office [12 U.S.C. § 21].

§ 95.123 Savings Association or Association

[1] Definitions

An "association" or "savings association" within the meaning of the California Savings Association Law (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.) is a mutual or stock savings association, savings and loan association, or savings bank subject to the Savings Association Law, but excludes a federal association [Fin. Code § 5102(a)].

[2] Mutual Association

A mutual association is one type of association that may be formed under the California Savings Association Law. A mutual association is one whose articles of incorporation do not authorize issuance of capital stock [Fin. Code § 5109]. Mutual associations do not have stockholders but have "members." A member is any person holding a savings account of a mutual association [Fin. Code § 5110].

Each member of a mutual association is entitled to cast one vote for each $100, or fraction thereof, of the withdrawal value of his or her savings account or accounts [Fin. Code § 6003]. Any number of members present at a regular or special meeting of the members constitutes a quorum. A majority of all votes cast at any meeting of members determines any question, unless otherwise specified in the Savings Association Law [Fin. Code § 6006].

Members of a mutual association are not responsible for any losses of the association. Savings accounts are not subject to assessment, and savings account holders are not liable to creditors of the association for any unpaid installment on the association's account [Fin. Code § 6603; see In re Pacific Coast Bldg. Loan Assn. (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 134, 142, 99 P.2d 251 (construing former §§ 5.01, 7.07 of the 1931 Building and Loan Association Act)].

A mutual association may issue mutual capital certificates in accordance with regulations of the commissioner [Fin. Code § 5623]. Mutual capital certificates are certificates evidencing an investment in a mutual association [Fin. Code § 5111].

A mutual association may amend its articles of incorporation to issue stock [Fin. Code § 5621]. A mutual association may also reorganize as a mutual holding company of a reorganized stock association [Fin. Code §§ 5860-5868].

[3] Stock Association

A stock association is one type of association that may be formed under the California Savings Association Law. A stock association's articles of incorporation authorize the issuance of capital stock [Fin. Code § 5121].

Stock associations may issue shares of common stock and preferred stock, with or without par value. The common and preferred stock may be divided into classes and the classes into series [Fin. Code § 5620(a)]. If a stock association had withdrawable shares outstanding on January 1, 1984, that association may continue to issue savings accounts in that form, and the holders of these accounts have the same rights as they had before the current version of Fin. Code § 5620 came into effect [Fin. Code § 5620(b)].

Anyone who holds one or more shares of any class of capital stock of a capital stock association is a "stockholder" [Fin. Code § 5122].

[4] Savings Bank

A savings bank is another style of association that may be formed pursuant to the California Savings Association Law [Fin. Code § 5117].

[5] Federal Association

A "federal association" within the meaning of the California Savings Association Law is a savings and loan association or federal savings bank that is chartered by the Office of Thrift Supervision under 12 U.S.C. § 1464 [Fin. Code § 5102(b); see Fin. Code § 5102(a) (federal association excluded from definition of "association" and "savings association")]. Prior to 1990, federal associations were charted by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board [see Pub. L. No. 101-73 (Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, or "FIRREA")].

A federal association and the holders of stock, shares, share accounts, savings accounts, and certificate accounts issued by any federal association have all the rights, powers, and privileges, and are entitled to the same exemptions and immunities, granted respectively to associations organized under the laws of California and to the holders of their stock, membership accounts, and savings accounts [Fin. Code § 8500(a); see also Corp. Code § 204; Fin. Code § 8501 (limitation on liability of directors); Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management].

§ 95.124 Foreign Association

[1] In General

For purposes of Fin. Code § 10000 et seq., a foreign savings association is an insured institution other than a California savings association and other than a federal association [Fin. Code § 10000(c); see Fin. Code § 10000(d) (defining "insured institution")]. For purposes of Fin. Code § 10000 et seq., a California savings association means either (1) an association [see Fin. Code § 5102(a), discussed in § 95.123[5]] or (2) a foreign association or its successor that was licensed to do the business of an association in California on September 15, 1935 [Fin. Code § 10000(a)]. Except as provided by regulation, the California Savings Association Law (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.) applies to a foreign savings association or its holding company as if business conducted in California were that of a California savings association [Fin. Code § 10006].

[2] Right to Operate in California

A foreign association may not conduct any business of an association within California, and no foreign savings association or foreign holding company may acquire control of a California savings association, without the written approval of the Commissioner [Fin. Code §§ 10001, 10003; but see Fin. Code § 10002 (applicable after January 1, 1991; discussed in § 95.124[3])]. A foreign association is not considered to be doing business in California by doing any of the activities specified in Corp. Code § 191(d), including the following [Corp. Code § 191(d); Fin. Code § 10005(a)]:

- Acquisition, ownership, and enforcement of loans if carried on from outside California;

- Physical inspection and appraisal of real or personal property securing loans if the officer or employee making inspection is not resident of and does not maintain a place of business in California;

- Engaging of a corporation, firm, or association qualified to do business in California to make collections, service loans, and physical inspections and appraisals;

- Acquisition and retention of title to real or personal property pending orderly sale or other disposition; and

- Advertising or soliciting of savings accounts in California by a federally insured foreign savings association through the mail, radio, television, magazines, newspapers, or any other media that are published or circulated within California, except through or as a result of telemarketing, provided that the advertising or solicitation as a whole is accurate and does not create a misleading impression even though statements considered separately are literally accurate. A federally insured foreign savings association may not sell, take or solicit savings accounts through telemarketing by use of the telephone or telephone transceiving equipment, or through the use of an automatic dial-announcing device as defined in Pub. Util. Code § 2871.

The offering by a registered broker-dealer of, or the placement by a registered broker-dealer of a customer's funds into, a savings account at a federally insured foreign savings association chartered under the laws of a state in which broker-dealers make available savings accounts of California associations is not considered doing business in California, provided that the following conditions are satisfied [Fin. Code § 10005(b)]:

- Any advertising, offering material, or solicitation as a whole is accurate and does not create a misleading impression even though statements considered separately are literally accurate; and

- The savings accounts of the federally insured foreign savings association are rated "investment grade" by either Standard & Poor's Corporation or Moody's Investors Service, Inc. based on the foreign savings association's ability to repay the savings accounts independent of federal deposit insurance benefits.

The commissioner may obtain an injunction or may take any other action necessary to prevent any person from unlawfully doing any business of an association in California [Fin. Code § 10001(d)].

[3] Acquisition of California Association

Notwithstanding Fin. Code § 10001, and subject to Fin. Code § 10003, since January 1, 1991, foreign savings associations may conduct the business of an association in California or may acquire control of a California savings association, and a foreign holding company may acquire control of a California savings association, after obtaining prior written approval of the commissioner pursuant to Fin. Code § 10003. Approval will only be given if the jurisdiction in which the foreign savings association is incorporated or the foreign holding company has its principal place of deposits grants reciprocal rights to California savings associations or their holding companies [Fin. Code § 10002]. Except as provided by regulation, Fin. Code § 5000 et seq. apply to a foreign savings association or its holding company as if business conducted in California were that of a California savings association [Fin. Code § 10002].

§ 95.125 Savings and Loan Holding Companies

[1] Definitions

A "savings and loan holding company" within the meaning of California Savings Association Law (Fin. Code § 5000 et seq.) is any person that, directly or indirectly or acting in concert with one or more other persons, does either of the following [Fin. Code § 5800(a)]:

- Owns, controls, or holds with power to vote, or holds proxies to vote one of the following:
  - 25 percent or more of the outstanding voting capital stock of any capital stock association or savings and loan holding company or 25 percent or more of the total number of votes or proxies of votes eligible to be cast by the members of any mutual association located in California, if the association or savings and loan holding company has fewer than 500 stockholders or members, or
  - 10 percent or more of the outstanding voting capital stock of any capital stock association or savings and loan holding company or 10 percent or more of the total number of votes or proxies of votes eligible to be cast by the members of any mutual association located in California, if the association or savings and loan holding company has at least 500 stockholders or members; or
- Controls in any manner, whether by holding proxies or otherwise, the election of a majority of the directors of any association or savings and loan holding company located in California.

Notwithstanding Fin. Code § 5800(a), an individual or group of individuals will not be deemed to be a "savings and loan holding company" solely because an individual or group of individuals solicits, holds, or votes proxies in an association if, at the time of receiving the proxies, the individual or group of individuals serve as directors of the association and solicited or received the proxies pursuant to authorization by the board of directors of the association [Fin. Code § 5800(b)].

[2] Approval Process

To become a savings and loan holding company, a completed application must be approved by the commissioner, unless the transaction is one exempted by the commissioner [Fin. Code § 5801]. After the commissioner has approved or denied the application, any person aggrieved by the decision may request a hearing by filing a written request with the commissioner within 30 days of the decision. The commissioner must hold a public hearing on the merits of the request and affirm, modify, or reverse the decision [Fin. Code § 5803(a); but see Fin. Code § 5866 (Fin. Code §§ 5801-5803 are inapplicable to reorganization of mutual association to mutual holding company of reorganized stock association pursuant to Fin. Code §§ 5860-5868)].

§ 95.140 Action Against National Bank

[1] Jurisdiction and Venue

Except for actions by banking regulators or against them, which must be brought in federal district court, national banking associations are deemed citizens of the states in which they are located [28 U.S.C. § 1348]. This means that a national bank (1) is a citizen of the state in which its main office is located, as set forth in its articles of association, and (2) is not a citizen of any other state in which it has established a branch [Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Schmidt (2006) 546 U.S. 303, 316-318, 126 S. Ct. 941]. 28 U.S.C. § 1348 confers general jurisdiction over an action by or against a national bank on state courts [First Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 109, 110, 49 Cal. Rptr. 358] . No jurisdiction is conferred on a federal district court merely because the action is by or against a corporation that was incorporated by or under an act of Congress, unless the United States owns more than half of its capital stock [28 U.S.C. § 1349; see also § 95.410[5][b] (cases regarding state court jurisdiction over national banks)].

An action or proceeding against a national banking association for which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has been apppointed receiver, or against the FDIC as receiver, must be brought in the district or territorial court of the United States in the district in which the association's principal place of business is located. In the event any state, county, or municipal court has jurisdiction over such an action or proceeding, venue is also in that court in the county or city in which the association's principal place of business is located [12 U.S.C. § 94].

Venue is also proper in the county in which a contract is made or is to be performed, in which the obligation or liability arises or the breach occurs, or in which the bank's principal place of business is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

For discussion and forms relating to changes of venue generally, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[2] Limitations on Provisional Remedies or Execution Before Final Judgment

No attachment, injunction, or execution may be issued against any national banking association or its property before final judgment in any suit, action, or proceeding in any state, county, or municipal court [12 U.S.C. § 91].

"Final judgment" as used in 12 U.S.C. § 91 means a judgment on the merits that is no longer subject to examination on appeal, either because of disposition on appeal and conclusion of the appellate process or because of the passage, without action, of the time for seeking appellate review [U.S. v. Lemaire (5th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 387, 390 , cert. denied, 485 U.S. 960 (1990)] .

There is a split of authority regarding whether 12 U.S.C. § 91 prohibits the recording of an abstract of judgment prior to completion of the appellate process [see U.S. v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. (5th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 207, 209-210 (recording prohibited); U.S. v. Theos (D. Colo. 1989) 709 F. Supp 1007, 1009-1010 (recording not prohibited)]. A California court of appeal has opined in dicta that the argument prohibiting recordation of an abstract is more persuasive [Jewell v. Bank of America (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 934, 938 n.6, 269 Cal. Rptr. 671] . Nevertheless, Jewel affirmed a decision requiring a national bank to post an appeal bond because it held that the law was unsettled at the time, bond was more expedient, and necessity does not require a party to pursue an alternative remedy.

Some California cases have held that 12 U.S.C. § 91prevents issuance of an injunction against a national bank [see, e.g., Crocker Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 863, 870-872, 136 Cal. Rptr. 481 ; Kemple v. Security First Nat. Bank (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 719, 721, 57 Cal. Rptr. 838] . These cases, however, have been partially abrogated by Third Nat'l Bank v. Impac, Ltd. (1977) 432 U.S. 312, 97 S. Ct. 2307, 53 L. Ed. 2d 368 , which held that 12 U.S.C. § 91 only applies to prejudgement seizure of bank property by creditors of the bank. The prohibition does not apply to an action by a debtor of national bank who seeks a preliminary injunction to protect his or her own property from foreclosure [Third Nat'l Bank v. Impac, Ltd. (1977) 432 U.S. 312, 324, 97 S. Ct. 2307, 53 L. Ed. 2d 368 ; Garfinkle v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 268, 274 n.5, 146 Cal. Rptr. 208, 578 P.2d 925] .

Crocker involved a dispute regarding a contract under which one party's obligations were guaranteed by a letter of credit issued by the bank. Unlike some letter of credit arrangements, the letter of credit in Crocker was not secured by a "special deposit." If Crocker was required to make payments pursuant to the letter of credit, it would be required to use its own funds. In addition, if the bank did not honor the letter of credit, funds of the bank on deposit in a Turkish bank would likely be seized to offset the obligation. Thus, the situation involved potential impairment of the bank's assets and efficiency, which brought the situation within the prohibition [Crocker Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 863, 870-872, 136 Cal. Rptr. 481] .

§ 95.160 Right of Members or Shareholders to Inspect Records

[1] General Scope and Purpose

A stockholder or member, or group of stockholders or members, who holds of record $100,000 in voting shares or 1 percent of outstanding voting shares, and has been a holder of record of those voting shares for at least six months before making the written demand, may inspect the following [Fin. Code § 6050(a)]:

- The register of stockholders or members;
- The books of account; and
- The minutes of an association.

The inspection may be made at any reasonable time during usual business hours after the stockholder or member has made written demand for for inspection. Inspection may be made only for a proper purpose reasonably related to the stockholder's or member's interest [Fin. Code § 6050(a)].

Notwithstanding this right of inspection, no stockholder or member, or group of stockholders or members, has the right to inspect or make extracts of any portion of any register, book, or minutes of an association from which any of the following information can be reasonably constructed [Fin. Code § 6050(b)]:

- A list of depositors in or borrowers from the association;
- The addresses of depositors or borrowers from the association; or
- Individual deposit or loan balances or records.

Savings account holders who are neither stockholders, members, nor directors of an association have no right of inspection under Fin. Code § 6050 [Fin. Code § 6050(d)].

For a general form of petition for writ of mandate to compel inspection of corporate records that may be adapted for use by stockholders or members of an association, see Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports

[2] Inspection of Subsidiary's Records

The right of inspection extends to the records of each subsidiary of an association and includes the right to make extracts [Fin. Code § 6050(a)]. However, this right of inspection does not extend to allow shareholders of a state savings and loan association's parent holding company to inspect the association's records. Further, they cannot inspect the records under the general corporate inspection rights of Corp. Code § 1600 et seq. because allowing them rights under that section would frustrate legislative intent [Feldman v. San Mateo Financial Corp. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 543, 547-549, 276 Cal. Rptr. 285] .

[3] Director's Right to Inspect

A director of an association has the right at any reasonable time to inspect all books, records, documents of every kind, and the physical properties of that association. The inspection may be made in person or by an agent or attorney, and the right of inspection includes the right to make extracts. In the case of foreign associations the right of inspection extends only to books, records, documents, and property located in California [Fin. Code § 6050(c); see Diller v. Flynn (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 449, 452, 38 Cal. Rptr. 229 (form of copying may be subject to discretion of court)].

For a general form of petition for writ of mandate to compel inspection of corporate records that may be adapted for use by directors of an association, see Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports .

§ 95.161 Derivative Actions

A stockholder or member of an association may institute or maintain an action in the right of the association if all the following conditions exist [Fin. Code § 6052(b)]:

- The plaintiff alleges in the complaint that the plaintiff was a registered stockholder or member at the time of the transaction or any part of it or that the stock or membership devolved on the plaintiff by operation of law from a holder who was a holder at the time of the transaction or any part of it;

- The plaintiff alleges in the complaint with particularity the efforts of the plaintiff to secure from the board of directors the desired action, and alleges further that the plaintiff has either informed the association or its board of directors in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action against each defendant director or delivered to the association or its board of directors a true copy of the complaint that plaintiff proposes to file and the reasons for the plaintiff's failure to obtain the desired action or the reasons for not making an effort to secure the desired action from the association; and

- The commissioner has determined, after a hearing on at least 20 days' written notice to the association and each of its directors, that the action is proposed in good faith and that there is a reasonable probability that the prosecution of the action will benefit the association and its stockholders or members.

No action may be instituted or maintained in the right of any association by any savings account holder who is not a stockholder or member of the association [Fin. Code § 6052(a)].

1. Scope and Governing Law

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.180

§ 95.180 Governing Law

Bank deposits are governed by Fin. Code §§ 850-874, 40500, 40501. The procedures for asserting adverse third-party claims are set forth in Fin. Code §§ 952 (bank deposits) and 6661 (savings account). Savings operations generally, such as provisions governing the opening of accounts, savings liability, and information that must be maintained by associations, are set forth in Fin. Code § 6600 et seq.

The length of time within which the proceeds of a deposited item, usually a check, must be allowed to be withdrawn are governed by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.) and regulations promulgated under it (12 C.F.R. Part 229, also known as "Regulation CC"), and by Fin. Code §§ 866, 867 and regulations promulgated thereunder (10 Cal. Code. Reg. § 10.190400 et seq.). The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act and related regulations supersede inconsistent state law and regulations, including the Commercial Code as in effect in any state [12 U.S.C. § 4007(b); 12 C.F.R. § 229.41], except any state law or regulation in effect on September 1, 1989, that establishes a shorter maximum hold period for a given category of deposit than the period allowed under federal law [12 U.S.C. § 4007(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.20; 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.20]. The preemptive scope of the Act and the relevant portions of Regulation CC, however, is quite narrow. Only state laws that establish different timing or disclosure requirements than the Act or otherwise directly conflict with it face preemption. Congress expressed no desire to preempt state laws or causes of action that supplement, rather than contradict, the Act. Therefore, in a case in which a bank deposited a wire transfer to the wrong account, neither the plaintiff's negligence nor intentional and negligent misrepresentation claims were preempted, as those claims involved elements beyond the scope of the Act [Mihai Beffa v. Bank of the West (1998) 152 F.3d 1174, 1177-1178] .

On and after July 1, 1990, multiparty accounts in existence on that date or established after that date are governed by Prob. Code § 5100 et seq. [Prob. Code § 5205].

On and after July 1, 1991, consumer contracts are governed by the Consumer Contract Awareness Act of 1990 (Civ. Code § 1799.200 et seq.) and Fin. Code § 757, which are discussed in § 95.60 et seq.

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.200

§ 95.200 Types of Deposits

[1] "General" and "Special"

Bank deposits are classified as "general" or "special." In the case of a general deposit, the funds become a part of the bank's assets and may be used in conducting its banking business [Bank of America Assn. v. California Bk. (1933) 218 Cal. 261, 273-274, 22 P.2d 704] . On the other hand, a special deposit is one that the bank has no right to use in its banking business. A special deposit is created when the financial institution acts as escrow or agent or trustee [Bank of America Assn. v. California Bk. (1933) 218 Cal. 261, 274, 22 P.2d 704 ; cf. Com. Code § 4201 (agency relationship created when check is deposited for collection; discussed in § 95.310 et seq.)].

A deposit is deemed general unless there is some agreement or understanding that it should be special, or there are circumstances that give the nature of a special deposit to the particular transaction [Bank of America v. Board of Supervisors (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 75, 79-80, 208 P.2d 772] .

Some affirmative act of acceptance on the bank's part is necessary for a "bank deposit" to be created [Vilner v. Crocker National Bank (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 732, 736-737, 152 Cal. Rptr. 850] . The most common act of acceptance is accepting of an item, usually a check, for deposit for collection [see Com. Code § 4201 et seq. (duties of collecting bank with regard to checks; discussed in § 95.310 et seq.)].

[2] "Demand" or "Time"

Deposits are also characterized as demand deposits [see 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(b)], savings deposits [see 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d)], and time deposits [see 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(c)] to distinguish their relative accessibility to the depositor and the reserve requirements to which they are subject [see 12 C.F.R. Part 204 ("Regulation D")].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Deposits
2. Bank-Depositor Relationship

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.201

§ 95.201 Bank-Depositor Relationship

[1] General Depositor as Creditor

The relationship of a bank with its depositor arising out of a general deposit is that of debtor and creditor, respectively. The deposit creates a debt payable by the bank on demand [Union Tool Co. v. Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. (1923) 192 Cal. 40, 53, 218 P. 424 ; Lee v. Bank of America (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 919-920, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387] . Title to deposited funds passes immediately to the bank, which may use them for its own purpose and does not become trustee [Lee v. Bank of America (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 919-920, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387] .

Although the bank-depositor relationship has been characterized as having some of the elements of public interest and quasi-fiduciary responsibility [see Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 516, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551] , the depositor-bank relationship is not a special relationship warranting tort liability for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing [Copesky v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 678, 694, 280 Cal. Rptr. 338 (same court reversing its holding in Commercial Cotton Co. in light of Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 682-700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373)]. For further discussion relating to breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

On the other hand, the bank owes various statutory duties of care to the depositor under Division 4 of the Commercial Code [see § 95.310 et seq.] as well as common law duties of care. Unless displaced by the particular provisions of the Commercial Code, the principles of law and equity, including the law merchant and the law relative to capacity to contract, principal and agent, estoppel, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, bankruptcy, and other validating or invalidating cause, supplement its provisions [Com. Code § 1103(b)]. Thus, in the absence of a particular contrary provision in the Commercial Code, nothing bars a depositor from bringing an action against a bank based on, for example, negligent misrepresentation or negligence [Holcomb v. Wells Fargo Bank (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 490, 497-499, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142 (complaint adequately pleaded negligent misrepresentation in alleging bank branch manager's assurance that deposited check had "cleared" and depositor could draw against those funds, even though manager had information that deposited check had in fact been returned by drawee bank because of insufficient funds:

"There is nothing in the [Commercial] [C]ode prohibiting a claim based on a depositor's detrimental reliance on a[n informed] bank employee's incorrect statements.")].

[2] Special Deposit Arising From Agency or Trust

Some special accounts involve a principal and agent relationship or a trust relationship, or both, between the bank and the depositor. For instance, a "custodial agency account," in which a customer deposits securities with the bank for purchase and sale under a letter of instructions, creates a special deposit with aspects of both trust and agency relationships [Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 819, 859-861, 251 Cal. Rptr. 530] . In Van de Kamp, however, the letter of instructions did not provide that the cash proceeds be held in trust or as a special deposit. Thus, once the securities were sold and the proceeds collected, the agency relationship ended and the cash proceeds remaining on deposit became general deposits that the bank could use and from which use it could profit. No duties of agent or trustee were violated by the use and profit because those relationships did not extend to the cash proceeds [Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 819, 860-862, 251 Cal. Rptr. 530] . Similarly, the bank had no duty to disclose its use of the custodianship cash [Van de Kamp v. Bank of America (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 819, 861, 251 Cal. Rptr. 530] .

On a special deposit, the bank assumes the functions of a custodian, though it need not keep the deposited funds separate or apart in specie from other funds, absent a clearly expressed intent that they be so kept [Bank of America v. California Bank (1933) 218 Cal. 261, 273, 22 P.2d 704] .

[3] Bank as Bailee of Items Deposited in Night Depository Service

Under a typical night depository service contract between a bank and a customer using that service, their relationship does not become one of depositary-holder of deposit, or debtor-creditor, until the bank has counted the money "logged it into the account" (or provisionally credited the item and coded it for collection and routing to the payor bank or any clearinghouse used by both of them). The placing of a bag of money (or checks and money) into the night depository makes the depositor a bailor and the bank a bailee [Vilner v. Crocker National Bank (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 732, 736-737, 152 Cal. Rptr. 850] . As bailee, the bank is required to use ordinary care to prevent loss to the customer. If a bag of money disappears after being placed in a night depository, it is presumed that the disappearance was the result of the bank's negligence. A prima facie case of negligence is made out by the bank/bailee's failure to return the items. The customer does not have to explain the loss. On failure to return the items bailed, which is part of a bailee's statutory duty under Civ. Code § 1822, the bank is liable unless and until it can show that it was not at fault [Vilner v. Crocker National Bank (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 732, 737-738, 152 Cal. Rptr. 850] . For discussion of and forms for use in actions by bailors against bailees who fail to preserve the bailed goods, see Ch. 93, Bailments .

A provision in a night depository service contract exculpating the bank from liability except for gross negligence or for willful misconduct is in most cases unenforceable insofar as the bank relies on it to avoid liability for a mysterious disappearance of money placed in a night depository [see, e.g., Vilner v. Crocker National Bank (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 732, 735-736, 152 Cal. Rptr. 850 ; see Civ. Code § 1668]. Under Division 4 of the Commercial Code, an exculpatory clause by which a bank attempts to disclaim responsibility for its lack of good faith or failure to exercise ordinary care in its collection of items deposited with it is void [see Com. Code § 4103(a) (discussed in § 95.310 et seq.)].

§ 95.220 Expedited Funds Availability Act Supersedes Conflicting State Law

The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.) governs hold periods on deposits made after August 31, 1988. It supersedes state law and regulations, including the Commercial Code as in effect in any state [12 U.S.C. § 4007(b)], except any state law or regulation in effect on September 1, 1989, that establishes a shorter maximum hold period for a given category of deposit than the period allowed under federal law [see, e.g., 10 Cal. Code Reg § 10.190402(a), (b), discussed under § 95.231[10][b]]. The preemptive scope of the Act and the relevant portions of Regulation CC, however, is quite narrow. Only state laws that establish different timing or disclosure requirements than the Act or otherwise directly conflict with it face preemption. Congress expressed no desire to preempt state laws or causes of action that supplement, rather than contradict, the Act. Therefore, in a case in which a bank deposited a wire transfer to the wrong account, neither the plaintiff's negligence nor intentional and negligent misrepresentation claims were preempted, as those claims involved elements that were beyond the scope of the Act [Mihai Beffa v. Bank of the West (1998) 152 F.3d 1174, 1177-1178] .

Any state law or regulation that provides a shorter maximum hold period than the federal law or regulations supersedes the federal law as applied to deposits in all federally insured depository institutions to which the superseding state law or regulation applies that are located in that state [12 U.S.C. § 4007(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.20; 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.20].

The disclosure requirements and hold periods established by Fin. Code § 866 et seq. and regulations issued in accordance with those sections are not entirely superseded by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.20(c); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations, California]. The California provisions remain in effect as to some savings accounts, some share accounts, and savings accounts subject to automatic transfers. The definition of "deposit account" in Fin. Code § 866(b) is broader than the definition of "account" under the federal Act and regulations [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a), discussed under § 95.222[1]]. Although neither the California nor federal law applies to time deposits, the federal law excludes from its purview savings deposits or accounts described in 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d)(2), namely savings accounts and "money market accounts" from which up to six automatic or preauthorized transfers and withdrawals may be made each month [ see 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d)(2)]. The California law and regulations are discussed under § 95.231[1].

There are also instances in which the regulations of the California Superintendent of Banks as applied to demand deposit and transaction accounts establish shorter maximum hold periods than the federal law and regulations, and therefore supersede federal law for insured banks in California. These instances usually involve items drawn on another California depository institution, but one that is in a different check processing region than the depositary bank [see, e.g., 10 Cal. Code Reg § 10.190402(a)]. Throughout the following discussion, whenever the California regulation provides a shorter hold period, the California citation will be given after the federal one, and will be followed by a parenthetical note regarding the California maximum period.

§ 95.221 Depository Institutions Required to Comply

[1] Banks

The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act applies to deposits made to almost every conceivable type of organization that accepts deposits [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(12) (defining "depository institution" to include all institutions listed in 12 U.S.C. § 461(b)(1)(A)(i)-(vi))]. It applies to deposits made to any bank, savings bank, mutual savings bank, trust company, industrial loan company, or any other institution in the business of receiving deposits, whether organized under federal law or state law. Also included within the definition of depository institution are an office, agency, or branch of a foreign bank located in the United States [12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 461(b)(1)(A)(i)-(iii), 1813, 1815].

As used in this discussion, the term "bank" refers to all types of depository institutions that are subject to the Act.

[2] Credit Unions

The term "depository institution" as defined by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act includes any national credit union; credit unions organized and operated according to the laws of any state, district, territory, or possession of the United States, the Panama Canal Zone, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico; and credit unions operating under the jurisdiction of the Department of Defense [12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 461(b)(1)(A)(iv), 1752, 1781].

[3] Savings and Loan Associations and Other Thrift Associations

The term "depository institution" as defined by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act includes any federal-chartered or state-chartered savings and loan association, building and loan association, homestead association, cooperative bank, insurance company, or savings bank, as well as any such institution organized under the laws of any territory or possession of the United States [12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 461(b)(1)(A)(v), (vi), 1422, 1813-1815].

3. Expedited Funds Availability And Delayed Withdrawals

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.222

§ 95.222 Definitions

[1] Account

The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act defines "account" as a demand deposit or other similar transaction account at a depository institution [12 U.S.C. § 4001(1)]. The related regulation specifies types of accounts that are considered transaction accounts, namely accounts from which the depositor is permitted to make transfers or withdrawals by negotiable or transferable instrument, payment order of withdrawal, telephone transfer, electronic payment, or other similar means for the purpose of making payments or transfers to third persons or others, or from which the account holder may make third-party payments at an automated teller machine (hereinafter "ATM"), remote service unit, or other electronic device, including by debit card [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a); see 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(a)(1)(i), (e) (defining deposit and transaction account)]. However, the term account does not include savings deposits or accounts described in 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d)(2) [see § 95.220], even though those accounts permit third-party transfers [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a)]. An account may be in the form of (1) a demand deposit account, (2) a negotiable order of withdrawal account, (3) a share draft account, (4) an automatic transfer account, or (5) any other transaction account described in 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(e) that is not a time or savings deposit under 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d)(2). Accounts held by other depository institutions are not accounts [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a)].

[2] Banking Day

The term "banking day" means that part of any business day on which an office of a depository institution is open to the public for carrying on substantially all of its banking functions [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(f)]. This definition provides for a branch-by-branch determination. The fact that one branch is open to the public on a given day does not mean that day is a banking day for other branches of the same institution [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(f)].

[3] Business Day

The term "business day" means a calendar day other than a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday [12 U.S.C. § 4001(3)]. The Federal Reserve holidays, and thus holidays for purposes of the Expedited Funds Availability Act, are January 1, the third Monday in January, the third Monday in February, the last Monday in May, July 4, the first Monday in September, the second Monday in October, November 11, the fourth Thursday in November, and December 25. If January 1, July 4, November 11, or December 25 fall on a Sunday, the next Monday is not a business day [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(g)].

[4] Cash

The term "cash" means United States coins and currency, including Federal Reserve notes [12 U.S.C. § 4001(4); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(h)].

[5] Check

A "check" is (1) a negotiable demand draft drawn on or payable through or at an office of a depository institution located in the United States; (2) a negotiable demand draft drawn on the United States Treasury, a Federal Reserve Bank, or a Federal Home Loan Bank; (3) a demand draft drawn on a state government or unit of general local government that is not payable through or at a bank; (4) a United States Postal Service money order; or (5) a traveler's check drawn on or payable through a bank. A draft may be a check even though it is described on its face by another term, such as money order. The term "check" is limited to drafts payable in United States money [12 U.S.C. § 4001(7); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(k)]. The definitions of the particular types of checks that are subject to next-day availability are set forth under § 95.224[3].

[6] Electronic Payment and Wire Transfer

The Expedited Funds Availability Act only refers to wire transfers [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(25)], but the regulations use the terms "electronic payment" and "wire transfer." An electronic payment is a wire transfer or a credit transfer from an automated clearinghouse (hereinafter "ACH") [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(p)].

A wire transfer is an unconditional order to a depository institution to pay a fixed or determinable amount of money to a beneficiary on the order's receipt or on a day stated in the order, which is transmitted by electronic or other means over the Federal Reserve Communications System or other similar networks, between banks, or on a bank's books. The term "wire transfer" does not include an electronic fund transfer as defined in the Electronic Fund Transfer Act [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(ll); see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(6)]. Credits for credit card and debit card transactions are not wire transfers [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(ll)].

Note that, although an ACH credit transfer is both an electronic payment under Expedited Funds Availability Act and an electronic fund transfer under the Electronic Fund Transfer Act, ACH debit transfers are not electronic payments under Expedited Funds Availability Act. Point-of-sale transactions are not considered electronic payments unless effected by means of an ACH credit transfer or wire transfer [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(p)].

[7] Automated Teller Machines

ATMs are classified as either "nonproprietary" or "proprietary." A "nonproprietary ATM" is an automated teller machine that is not a proprietary ATM [12 U.S.C. § 4001(18); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(x)]. A "proprietary ATM" is an automated teller machine that is (1) owned or operated by, or operated exclusively for, the depository institution; (2) located on the premises, including the outside wall, of the depository institution (regardless of whether the ATM is owned or operated by that depository institution); or (3) located within 50 feet of the depository institution's premises and not identified as being owned or operated by another entity. If more than one depository institution meets the owned or operated criteria, the ATM is considered proprietary to the depository institution that operates it [12 U.S.C. § 4001(16); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(aa); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(aa)]. For purposes of this definition, the depository institution that puts the checks deposited into the ATM into the forward collection stream is the depository institution that operates the ATM [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(aa)]. If a network ATM is operated by a franchisee depository institution, it is proprietary to that depository [see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(aa)].

Some ATMs may not be proprietary to any depository institution, or to more than one institution. An ATM that is jointly owned by depository institutions but is serviced by a nondepository contractor is proprietary to the owners [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(aa)].

If the depository institution uses a longer hold period for deposits to nonproprietary ATMs than it uses for deposits to proprietary ATMs, its disclosure statement must contain a description of how the customer can differentiate between a proprietary and a nonproprietary ATM [12 C.F.R. § 229.16(b)(5)].

§ 95.224 Next-Day Availability

[1] Cash Deposits

Under Com. Code § 4215(f), a deposit of money becomes available for withdrawal at the beginning of the bank's first business day after receipt of the deposit. This right to withdraw, however, is subject to applicable law stating a time for availability of funds and any right of a bank to apply a deposit to a depositor's obligation [Com. Code § 4213(f)]. Under Regulation CC, cash deposits qualify for next-day availability only if they are made in person to an employee of the depositary institution; otherwise they need not be made available for withdrawal until the second business day after the banking day of deposit [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(1)(A); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(a)]. Because the Commercial Code language is arguably broader than the language under Regulation CC, *Com. Code § 4215(f)*supersedes 12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(1)(A) and 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(a), and cash deposits, even if not made in person to an employee of the depositary institution, must be available for withdrawal on the opening of business on the next business day after deposit [see 12 U.S.C. § 4007; 12 C.F.R. 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations].

Com. Code § 4103(a) provides that Com. Code § 4215(f) (or any part of Division 4) may be varied by an agreement between the depositary bank and its customer. However, no such agreement may vary the Regulation CC funds availability requirements in 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(a) [12 C.F.R. 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations].

[2] Deposits Other Than Cash

Unless an exception applies [see § 95.226], funds deposited in the following noncash forms must be made available for withdrawal on the business day after the banking day of deposit or receipt [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10]:

- Funds received by an electronic payment for deposit to an account at the receiving institution. An electronic payment is received when the depositary institution receiving the payment has received (1) information on the account and amount to be credited, and (2) payment in actually and finally collected funds [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(1)(B); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(b)(1), (2)].

- The lesser of $100 or the aggregate deposited on any one banking day to all accounts of the customer by check or checks of a type not otherwise required to be available for withdrawal on the next business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(D); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vii)].

- A check drawn on the United States Treasury and deposited in an account held by a payee of the check [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(A); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(i); see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.10(c) (Treasury checks have routing number beginning with "0000")].

- A check drawn on a Federal Reserve Bank or Federal Home Loan Bank or a United States Postal Service money order when the check or money order was deposited, in person, to an employee of the depositary institution in an account held by a payee of the check or money order [12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(ii), (iii)]. If the check or money order was deposited to an account of the payee but the deposit was not made in person to an employee of the depositary institution, the funds must be made available for withdrawal no later than the second business day after the banking day of deposit [12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(2)].

- A check drawn by a state or by a unit of general local government, deposited (1) in an account held by a payee of the check; (2) in a receiving institution located in the state that issued the check, or in the same state as the unit of general local government that issued the check; (3) in person to an employee of the receiving depositary institution; and (4) with a special deposit slip or deposit envelope, if one is required by the receiving depositary institution, indicating that the check is one of this type [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(B), (C); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(iv), (3)]. If the check would qualify for next-day availability under this provision except for the fact that it was not deposited in person to an employee of the depositary institution, the funds must be available on the second business day after the banking day of deposit [12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(iv), (2)].

- A cashier's check, certified check, or teller's check that is deposited (a) in an account held by a payee of the check; (b) in person to an employee of the depositary institution; and (c) with a special deposit slip or envelope, if one is required by the receiving depositary institution, indicating that the check is one of these types [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(F); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(v), (3); see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(5), (6), (11), (22) (definitions)]. If the check would qualify for next-day availability under this provision except for the fact that it was not deposited in person to an employee of the depositary institution, the funds must be available on the second business day after the banking day of deposit [12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(v), (2)].

- A check drawn on another or the same branch of the institution to which it is deposited (hereinafter "on-us" items) if both branches are located in the same state or in the same check-processing region [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(E); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi); see § 95.225[2]].

If the depositary institution requires special deposit slips or envelopes in order to give next-day availability, the institution must provide them to its customers or inform the customers how the special deposit slips or envelopes can be obtained. The special deposit slips and envelopes must be reasonably available [12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(3)(ii)].

[3] Check Definitions Relating to Next-Day Availability

A "cashier's check" is any check that is (1) drawn on a depository institution, (2) signed by an officer or employee of that institution on behalf of that institution as drawer, (3) a direct obligation of that institution, and (4) provided to a customer of the depository institution or acquired from the institution for remittance purposes [12 U.S.C. § 4001(5); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(i)]. The fourth criteria of a cashier's check is intended to exclude checks that a bank draws on itself for other purposes, such as to pay its vendors or employees, and checks issued by the bank in connection with a payment service, such as a payroll or bill-paying service [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(i)].

A "certified check" is any check with respect to which the drawee bank certifies by signature, on the check, of an officer or other authorized employee either that (1) the signature of the drawer on the check is genuine and the depository institution has set aside funds that are equal to the amount of the check and will be used to pay that check, or (2) the drawee will pay the check on presentment [12 U.S.C. § 4001(6); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(j)].

A "teller's check" is any check provided to a customer of a bank, or acquired from a bank for remittance purposes, that is drawn by a bank and drawn on, or payable through or at, another bank [12 U.S.C. § 4001(22); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(gg)]. Although in most instances under Regulation CC, the term "bank" and "depository institution" are synonymous, in this case, the definition of "teller's check" excludes checks drawn by a nonbank on a nonbank even if they are payable at or through a bank [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(gg)]. As with cashier's checks, the definition of a teller's check explicitly excludes checks used by the bank to pay employees or vendors and checks issued by the bank in connection with a payment service, such as a payroll or bill-paying service [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(gg)].

§ 95.225 Maximum Hold Periods

[1] General Guidelines

Funds deposited at a branch or ATM on or after September 1, 1990, must be available for withdrawal by the depositor no later than the start of the business day [12 U.S.C. § 4006(b)] indicated in the following chart after the banking day of deposit [12 U.S.C. § 4002(b); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12; see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(g) (defining business day); see also 12 U.S.C. § 4006(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(5) (deposit made after cut-off hour or close of business as deemed made on next business day)]. Note that the Federal Reserve Board must reduce the maximum hold period whenever studies show that the actual clearing times for a majority of any category of check are shorter than the legal maximum [see 12 U.S.C. § 4002(d)(1)]. Reductions to the permanent schedule are published in Appendix B-2 to 12 C.F.R. § 229. Appendix B-2, as adopted in May 1988, does not require any reduction for checks processed through the San Francisco or Los Angeles regions.

Type of Check n1	Business Day After Business Day of Deposit on Which Funds Must Be Available for Withdrawal[1]
1. Local; checks drawn on U.S. Treasury and Postal Service money orders that do not meet criteria for next-day availability; checks drawn on U.S. Treasury and deposited to nonproprietary ATM	$100 on 1st business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(D); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vii)]; remainder for payment of ordinary checks on second business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(b)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12(b), (d)]; additional cash withdrawal: $400 by 5 P.M. on second business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(b)(3)(B); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12(b), (d)]; remainder for cash withdrawals[4] on third business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(b)(3)(A); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12(b), (d)]
2. Nonlocal n2	$100 n on first business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(D), (b)(3)(C); 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vii)];

Code Reg. § 10.190402(b), discussed under § 95.231[10][b] (fourth business day availability)]

[2] Identifying Local Checks and Clearinghouse Associations

A "local check" is one payable by or at a local paying bank, or a check payable by a nonbank payor and payable through a local paying bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(r)]. A local paying bank is one that is located in the same check processing region as the physical location of the branch or proprietary ATM of the depositary bank in which the check was deposited [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(s)(1)]. A paying bank is also considered local if it is physically located in the same check processing region as both the branch of the depositary bank at which the account is held and the nonproprietary ATM at which the check is deposited [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(s)(2); see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(13), (20)]. A check processing region is the geographic area served by a Federal Reserve Bank for purposes of its check clearing activities [12 U.S.C. § 4001(9); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(m)]. California is in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District and encompasses two check processing regions [see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix A].

The check processing center used by the institution on which a check is drawn or through which it is payable can be identified by the first four digits of its nine-digit routing number. The routing number takes two forms. It appears in a nine-digit form encoded along the bottom of the check, and is also generally printed as a fraction in the upper right-hand corner of the check. In the fractional form, the first four digits of the routing number comprise the denominator. The routing numbers used for California processing regions are 1210-1213 and 1220-1224, or if the originating institution is a credit union, a savings and loan association, or other thrift institution, 3210-3213 and 3220-3224. The first two digits show the Federal Reserve District and type of originating institution. The third digit shows the Federal Reserve Office within the district. The first three digits 121 and 321 indicate processing in the San Francisco region and the first three digits 122 and 322 indicate processing through the Los Angeles region. These three digits indicate whether or not the check is local. If the originating institution and the branch or ATM at which the check is deposited are in the territory served by the same Federal Reserve Office, the check is local [12 U.S.C. § 4001(13), (20); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix A]. The fourth digit shows the clearing arrangements used by the originating institution [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix A].

A "clearinghouse association" is an arrangement by which three or more participants exchange checks on a local basis, including an entire metropolitan area, without using the check processing facilities of the Federal Reserve System [12 U.S.C. § 4001(8); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(l)]. California is one of the few places where a single clearinghouse association operates in different metropolitan areas. Each of those exchanges is considered a separate clearinghouse [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(l)]. A clearinghouse association may include arrangements using the premises of a Federal Reserve Bank, but it does not include the handling of checks for forward collection or return by a Federal Reserve Bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(l)]. Several clearinghouses meet at Reserve Banks to exchange checks among their members [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(l)].

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Deposits made in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, or the United States Virgin Islands in a form that does not require next-day availability are subject to a one-day extension of the maximum hold periods if drawn on an institution in another state [12 C.F.R. § 229.12(e)].

(n2)Footnote 2. Except for checks drawn on the United States Treasury and Postal Service money orders, other items that did not qualify for next-day or second-day availability are characterized as local or nonlocal depending on the check clearing region in which they are payable [12 C.F.R. § 229.12(b)(2)-(4), (c)(1)(ii); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.12].

(n3)Footnote . [3] This $100 must be available for either cash withdrawal or check writing purposes at the start of the next business day [see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.10].

(n4)Footnote . [4] 12 C.F.R. § 229.12(d) refers to availability for withdrawal by cash or similar means, including electronic payments, issuance of certified, cashier's, or teller's checks, or other irrevocable commitments to pay, but does not include granting of credit to a bank that presents a check to the depositary institution for payment. The $400 is not increased if funds deposited by both local and nonlocal checks become available for withdrawal under this provision in a single business day [12 U.S.C. § 4002(b)(3)(B)].

Note that some "California non-local" items that would otherwise be subject to fifth-day availability must be available for withdrawal on the fourth business day after deposit in accordance with the regulations of the California Superintendent of Banks [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(b)]. The California regulations are set forth under § 95.231[10][b].

Note also that deposits at nonproprietary ATMs are not subject to a separate schedule, nor are local checks divided into separate categories depending on whether the depositary and paying institution are participants in the same clearinghouse association [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(17), (20); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(o), (z) (defining paying and depositary institutions), discussed under § 95.225[2]].

§ 95.226 Exceptions

[1] New Accounts

The regular maximum hold periods [see 12 U.S.C. § 4002(b), (c), (e)(1), (2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12, discussed under § 95.225[1]] do not apply for the first 30 calendar days after a new account is established [12 U.S.C. § 4003(a)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(1)(iii)]. Nor do the next-day availability provisions for the first $100 of checks or for "on-us" items apply for the first 30 days [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(1)(iii)]. An account is not considered a new account if each customer on the account has had another account at the depositary institution for at least 30 calendar days, within 30 calendar days before the account is established [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(2)].

Even if the account is a new account, next-business-day or second-business-day availability is required for deposits made or received in the form of cash or electronic payment and for the first $5,000 of funds deposited on any one banking day in the form of United States Postal Service money order, or of a check drawn on the United States Treasury or on a Federal Reserve or Federal Home Loan Bank; of a cashier's, certified, teller's or traveler's check; or of a government check that is described in 12 U.S.C. § 4002(a)(2)(A)-(C) or 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(i)-(v) (see items (3)-(6) under § 95.224[2]) [12 U.S.C. § 4003(a)(1), (3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(1) and 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.13(a) (for purposes of 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(1), 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(v) includes traveler's checks)]. Any remainder of funds deposited in those forms of check need not be made available until the ninth business day after the banking day of deposit [12 U.S.C. § 4003(a)(3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(a)(1)(ii)].

[2] Large Deposits

The regular maximum hold periods [see § 95.225] do not apply, and may be extended for a reasonable period, to the excess over $5,000 of the aggregate amount of deposits by one or more checks in any one banking day [12 U.S.C. § 4003(b)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(b), (h)(1)]. The $5,000 limitation applies to the aggregate deposits to all accounts of a customer with multiple accounts even if the customer is not the sole holder of the accounts and not all of the holders of the accounts are the same [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(b)].

If a depository bank invokes this exception to the maximum hold period, it must make the funds available for withdrawal not later than a reasonable period after the day the funds would have been required to be made available had the check been subject to 12 C.F.R. § 229.12 [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(2)].

Pursuant to 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(4), a reasonable extension of the hold period that would otherwise apply would be up to one business day for checks deposited in a branch of the depository bank and drawn on the same or another branch of the same bank if both branches are located in the same state or the same check-processing region [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi)], up to five business days for local and certain other checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(b), 229.13(h)(2)], and up to six business days for nonlocal checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(c), 229.13(h)(2)].

[3] Checks Returned Unpaid and Redeposited

The regular maximum hold periods [see discussion under § 95.225] do not apply, and may be extended for a reasonable period, to a check that has been returned unpaid and redeposited by the customer or the bank [12 U.S.C. § 4003(b)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(c)]. This exception does not apply if the indicated reason for the return was a missing endorsement that was supplied before redeposit, or the fact that the check was postdated, as long as it was not postdated at the time of the redeposit [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(c)].

If a depository bank invokes this exception to the maximum hold period, it must make the funds available for withdrawal not later than a reasonable period after the day the funds would have been required to be made available had the check been subject to 12 C.F.R. § 229.12 [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(1), (2)].

Pursuant to 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(4), a reasonable extension of the hold period that would otherwise apply would be up to one business day for checks deposited in a branch of the depository bank and drawn on the same or another branch of the same bank if both branches are located in the same state or the same check-processing region [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi)], up to five business days for local and certain other checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(b), 229.13(h)(2)], and up to six business days for nonlocal checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(c), 229.13(h)(2)].

[4] Repeated Overdrafts

If any account or combination of accounts of a customer has been repeatedly overdrawn, the regular maximum hold periods [see § 95.225] do not apply to any of the accounts for a period of six months after the last overdraft [12 U.S.C. § 4003(b)(3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(d)]. An account is repeatedly overdrawn if (1) on six or more banking days within the preceding six months, the account balance is negative, or would have become negative if checks or other charges to the account had been paid, or (2) on two or more banking days within the preceding six months, the account balance is negative, or would have become negative in the amount of $5,000 or more, if checks or other charges to the account had been paid [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(d)].

If a depository bank invokes this exception to the maximum hold period, it must make the funds available for withdrawal not later than a reasonable period after the day the funds would have been required to be made available had the check been subject to 12 C.F.R. § 229.12 [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(1), (2)].

Pursuant to 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(4), a reasonable extension of the hold period that would otherwise apply would be up to one business day for checks deposited in a branch of the depository bank and drawn on the same or another branch of the same bank if both branches are located in the same state or the same check-processing region [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi)], up to five business days for local and certain other checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(b), 229.13(h)(2)], and up to six business days for nonlocal checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(c), 229.13(h)(2)].

[5] Reasonable Cause to Doubt Collectibility

Neither the regular maximum hold periods [see 12 U.S.C. § 4002(b), (c), (e)(1)-(3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12, discussed under § 95.225[1]] nor the next-business-day or second-business-day availability requirements for cashier's, certified, and teller's checks, or checks drawn on a Federal Reserve Bank or a Federal Home Loan Bank, apply to any check that the receiving depositary institution has reasonable cause to believe is uncollectible from the paying institution [12 U.S.C. § 4003(c)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(e)(1)]. Reasonable cause requires the existence of facts that would cause a well-grounded belief in the mind of a reasonable person and cannot be based on the fact that the check is of a particular class or is deposited by a particular class of persons [12 U.S.C. § 4003(c)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(e)(1), (2)]. The reason for the believed uncollectibility must be stated in the notice required by 12 U.S.C. § 4003(f) and 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(g) [12 U.S.C. § 4003(c)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(e)(1); see § 95.226[7]].

If a depository bank invokes this exception to the maximum hold period, it must make the funds available for withdrawal not later than a reasonable period after the day the funds would have been required to be made available had the check been subject to 12 C.F.R. § 229.12 [12 C.F.R. §§ 229.13(h)(1), (2)].

Pursuant to 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(4), a reasonable extension of the hold period that would otherwise apply would be up to one business day for checks deposited in a branch of the depository bank and drawn on the same or another branch of the same bank if both branches are located in the same state or the same check-processing region [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi)], up to five business days for local and certain other checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(b), 229.13(h)(2)], and up to six business days for nonlocal checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(c), 229.13(h)(2)].

A receiving depositary institution that invokes this exception to extend the time funds become available for withdrawal and does not furnish the depositor with written notice at the time of deposit may not assess any fees for any subsequent overdrafts (including the use of a line of credit), return of checks, or other debits to the account if (1) the overdraft or return of the check would not have occurred except for the fact that the deposited funds were delayed under this exception, and (2) the check was finally paid by the paying institution [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(e)(2)]. However, the receiving depositary institution may assess an overdraft or returned check charge if it includes a notice concerning those fees in the notice required by 12 U.S.C. § 4003(f) and 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(g) and, when required, refunds the fee at the customer's request. The overdraft and returned check notice must state that the customer may be entitled to a refund of overdraft or returned-check fees that are assessed if the check subject to this exception is paid, and must explain how to obtain the refund [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(e)(2)].

[6] Emergency Conditions

The regular maximum hold periods [see 12 U.S.C. § 4002(b), (c), (e); 12 C.F.R. § 229.12, discussed under § 95.225[1]] do not apply to funds deposited by check in any depositary institution that is experiencing any interruption of communications, computer, or other equipment facilities; a suspension of payments from another depository institution; war; or any emergency beyond its control, if the receiving depositary institution exercises as much diligence as the circumstances require [12 U.S.C. § 4003(d); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(f)]. If a depository bank invokes this exception to the maximum hold period, it must make the funds available for withdrawal not later than a reasonable period after the day the funds would have been required to be made available had the check been subject to 12 C.F.R. § 229.12 [12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(1)].

Pursuant to 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(h)(4), a reasonable extension of the hold period that would otherwise apply would be up to one business day for checks deposited in a branch of the depository bank and drawn on the same or another branch of the same bank if both branches are located in the same state or the same check-processing region [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.10(c)(1)(vi)], up to five business days for local and certain other checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(b), 229.13(h)(2)], and up to six business days for nonlocal checks [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.12(c), 229.13(h)(2)].

[7] Notice of Extension of Hold Period

[a] Required Contents

If any exception other than the new account exception is invoked to extend the maximum hold period otherwise applicable, the depositary institution must notify the customer in writing. The notice must include the account number of the customer, the date of the deposit, the amount of the deposit that is being delayed, the reason the exception was invoked, and the period within which the funds will be available for withdrawal [12 U.S.C. § 4003(f)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(g)(1)(i)].

[b] Timing of Notice of Extension

If the deposit is made in person to an employee of the depositary institution, the notice must be given to the depositor, in writing, at the time of deposit [12 U.S.C. § 4003(f)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(g)(1)(ii)(A)]. In the case of other deposits, or if a deposit was made in person but the facts giving rise to the exception did not become known to the depositary institution until after the deposit was made, the notice must be mailed or delivered to the customer as soon as practicable, but not later than the first business day following the day on which the facts become known to the depositary institution or on which the deposit was made, whichever is later [12 U.S.C. § 4003(f)(2)(B), (C), (3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.13(g)(1)(ii)].

[1] Initial and General

A depository institution must provide written notice of its policy regarding availability of deposited funds for withdrawal before a person opens an account [12 U.S.C. § 4004(a); see 12 U.S.C. § 4004(f); 12 C.F.R. § 229.17(a); see also 12 C.F.R. § 229.16 (contents of disclosures)].

All preprinted deposit slips must contain a notice that deposited checks may not be available for immediate withdrawal [12 U.S.C. § 4004(b); 12 C.F.R. § 229.18(a)]. The notice must also be posted in a conspicuous place at any location at which deposits are accepted, including on automated teller machines, and must be made available to any person on request [12 U.S.C. § 4004(c)(3), (d); 12 C.F.R. § 229.18(b)-(d)].

[2] Off-Premises ATM

A depositary institution that operates an off-premises ATM from which deposits are removed not more than two times each week must disclose at or on the ATM the days on which deposits made at that ATM will be considered received [12 C.F.R. § 229.18(c)(2)].

[3] Changes in Hold Policy

Whenever an institution's hold policy changes, the institution must send its customers written notice at least 30 days before implementing any change that extends the length of time before which funds are made available for withdrawal. Any change that expedites the availability of funds must be disclosed not later than 30 days after implementation [12 U.S.C. § 4004(c)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.18(e)].

§ 95.229 Civil Liability

[1] Individual Action

Any depository institution that fails to comply with any requirement imposed by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.) and regulations promulgated under it (12 C.F.R. Parts 210 and 229), or with any provision of state law that supersedes any provision of 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.10-229.21, with respect to any person other than another depository institution is liable to that person in an amount equal to the actual damage sustained by that person as a result of the failure to comply, plus an additional amount between $100 and $1,000 as allowed by the court [12 U.S.C. § 4010(a)(1), (2)(A); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a)(1), (2)(i)]. *12 U.S.C. § 4010(a)*and 12 C.F.R. § 229.21 do not apply to actions that arise under 12 C.F.R. § 229.30 et seq. (interbank responsibilities regarding collection of checks).

The regulation, but not 12 U.S.C. § 4010(a), excludes liability for wrongful dishonor [12 C.F.R. § 229.21(f)]. For a form of complaint for damages under 12 U.S.C. § 4010(a) and 12 C.F.R. § 229.21, see § 95.431.

[2] Attorney's Fees

In the case of a successful action to enforce liability under 12 U.S.C. § 4010 and 12 C.F.R. § 229.21, the prevailing party is entitled to costs and reasonable attorney's fees as determined by the court [12 U.S.C. § 4010(a)(3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a)(3); see generally Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees].

[3] Class Action

In a class action under 12 U.S.C. § 4010(a), actual damages, costs, and attorney's fees are recoverable as they would be in an individual action [12 U.S.C. § 4010(a)(1), (3); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a)(1), (3)]. With regard to the additional amount allowed by the court, there is no minimum recovery on the amount awarded to each member of the class, but the total recovery in any class action or series of class actions arising out of the same failure to comply by the same institution shall not exceed the lesser of $500,000 or 1 percent of the net worth of the depository institution [12 U.S.C. §

4010(a)(2)(B); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a)(2)(ii)].

In determining the amount of any award in any class action, the court must consider, along with other relevant factors, the amount of any actual damages awarded, the frequency and persistence of failures of compliance, the resources of the depository institution, the number of persons adversely affected, and the extent to which the failure of compliance was intentional [12 U.S.C. § 4010(b); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(b)].

For discussion and forms relating to class actions generally in California courts, see Ch. 120, Class Actions .

[4] Defense of Bona Fide Error or Reliance on Board Ruling

A depository institution is not liable for failing to comply with any requirement imposed by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act or regulations promulgated thereunder if that institution demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error [12 U.S.C. § 4010(c)(1); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(c)(1)]. Examples of bona fide errors include clerical errors, calculation errors, computer malfunction and programming, and printing errors. However, an error of legal judgment with respect to a depository institution's obligation under 12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq. is not a bona fide error [12 U.S.C. § 4010(c)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(c)(2)].

No civil liability is imposed by 12 U.S.C. § 4010 or 12 C.F.R. § 229.21 for any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any rule, regulation, or interpretation of a rule of regulation by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. This immunity applies even if the rule, regulation, or interpretation was amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason after the act or omission occurred [12 U.S.C. § 4010(e); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(e)]. The Commentary in Appendix E to 12 C.F.R. Part 229 is an interpretation by the Board within the meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 4010(e) [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary, opening paragraphs].

[5] Jurisdiction and Statute of Limitations

Federal court subject-matter jurisdiction under 12 U.S.C. § 4010(a), (d), and (f) is not confined to suits initiated by bank customers against banks. The Act also provides for federal court jurisdiction in cases initiated by one bank against another bank [Bank One Chicago, N.A. v. Midwest B & T (1996) 516 U.S. 264, 116 S. Ct. 637, 133 L. Ed. 2d 635] .

An action under 12 U.S.C. § 4010 may be brought in United States district court or in any other court of competent jurisdiction within one year after the date of the occurrence of the violation involved [12 U.S.C. § 4010(d); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(d); see, e.g., Mihai Beffa v. Bank of the West (1998) 152 F.3d 1174, 1176-1177 (even if statute of limitations is tolled until plaintiff receives notice of violation, complaint was untimely because once plaintiff knew foreign wire transfer was not credited to his account, he chose to blame foreign bank rather than track it through his own bank)]. For discussion of jurisdiction in California courts, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter . For discussion of jurisdiction in federal courts, and procedures for removal and remand, see Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal .

[6] Records Retention

A depository institution must retain evidence of compliance with 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.10-229.21 for not less than two years [12 C.F.R. § 229.21(g)(1)]. If the institution has notice of an investigation or proceeding by the agency charged with monitoring its compliance or has been served notice of an action filed under 12 C.F.R. § 229.21, it must retain the records relating to the action or proceeding until final disposition of the matter, unless an earlier time is allowed by order of the agency or court [12 C.F.R. § 229.21(g)(2)].

§ 95.230 Miscellaneous Provision

[1] When Deposits Are Considered Made

Funds deposited at a staffed facility or an ATM are considered deposited when they are received at the staffed facility or ATM [12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(1)]. Funds mailed to a depositary institution are considered deposited on the day they are received by the depositary institution [12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(2)]. Funds deposited at a night depository, lock box, or similar facility are considered deposited on the day on which the deposit is removed from the facility and is available for processing by the depositary institution [12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(3)].

Funds deposited at an ATM that is not on or within 50 feet of the premises of the depositary institution are considered deposited on the day the funds are removed from the ATM, if funds are normally removed from the ATM not more than two times each week [12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(4); see 12 C.F.R. § 229.18(c)(2) (disclosure of removal times on ATM, discussed under § 95.227[2])].

Funds may be considered deposited on the next banking day if they are deposited on a day that is not a banking day for the depositary institution or if they are deposited after any cut-off hour established by the depositary institution. Cut-off hours after 2 p.m., or after noon (12 p.m.) in the case of deposits at ATMs or off-premises facilities, are permissible [12 U.S.C. § 4006(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.19(a)(5)].

[2] Interest

A depositary institution must begin to accrue interest on funds deposited to an interest-bearing account no later than the business day on which it receives credit for the funds [12 U.S.C. § 4005(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.14(a); see also 12 C.F.R. § 229.19(d) (use of calculated availability for interest accrual on nonconsumer accounts)]. No institution is required to pay interest or dividends on funds deposited by a check that is returned unpaid [12 U.S.C. § 4005(c); 12 C.F.R. § 229.14(c)].

A credit union does not have to begin to accrue interest or dividends on funds deposited by check when it receives credit if it begins to accrue interest on all deposited funds, including cash, at some later time and if its accrual policy is disclosed in the notices required by 12 U.S.C. § 4004(a) and (c) (discussed under § 95.227) [12 U.S.C. §§ 4004(e), 4005(b)(2); 12 C.F.R. § 229.14(b); see 12 C.F.R. § 229.16(d) (contents of notice)].

[3] Prohibition on Freezing Other Funds

The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act provides that when a check is deposited and the funds represented by that check are not yet available for withdrawal, a depository institution cannot freeze any other funds in an account that are otherwise available for withdrawal solely because those deposited funds are not yet available for withdrawal [12 U.S.C. § 4006(d)]. The relevant regulation, however, provides that, when a check, other than a check drawn on that institution and cashed over the counter, is accepted for deposit or cashed, a hold can be placed on any funds of the customer at that institution up to the amount of that check as long as the funds are made available for withdrawal within the times specified in the availability schedules [12 C.F.R. § 229.19(e); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.19(e)].

3. Expedited Funds Availability And Delayed Withdrawals

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.231

§ 95.231 California Delayed Withdrawal Provisions

[1] Mostly Superseded by Federal Expedited Funds Availability Act

The California law governing delayed availability of deposited funds [Fin. Code § 866 et seq.] applies to the same types of depository institutions as does the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.)--banks, savings banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions, to name the primary ones [12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); Fin. Code § 866(a); see discussion under § 95.221]. For deposits made after August 31, 1988, federal law and regulations supersede state law except any state law or regulation in effect on September 1, 1989, that establishes a shorter maximum hold period for a given category of check than the period allowed under federal law [12 U.S.C. § 4007; 12 C.F.R. § 229.20, discussed in § 95.220]. The regulations of the California Superintendent of Banks (10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10.190400-10.190402), effective October 7, 1988, adopt the federal hold periods of Regulation CC in all instances except the six (or, after September 1, 1990, two) categories of California non-local checks described under § 95.231[10][b] [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402]. Similarly, the regulations of the California Savings and Loan Commissioner, effective October 12, 1988, do not provide for any shorter hold periods, but adopt the hold periods established by Regulation CC for items deposited to transactions accounts [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 106.201; see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 6.200(b) (conforming definition of item to Regulation CC definition of check)].

Fin. Code § 866 et seq. and the California Banking Regulations contain a broader definition of the term "deposit account" than do the federal law and Regulation CC. The California law and regulations apply not only to transaction (that is, checking) accounts, but also to savings deposits subject to automatic transfers, share draft accounts (other than those on which checks or negotiable orders of withdrawal may be written), and savings deposits and share accounts that are not "transaction accounts" other than time deposits [Fin. Code § 866(b); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(c); see also 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.20 (federal preemption)]. Although the definition of account under Fin. Code § 867(c) (see § 95.231[11]), governing the availability of deposits in form of cashier's checks, teller's checks, certified checks, and their equivalents, is the same as that in 12 U.S.C. § 400(1) (see § 95.222[1]), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has taken the position that the two-day availability requirement of Fin. Code § 867 supersedes the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act and Regulation CC when applied to cashier's checks or teller's checks issued other than for remittance purposes [12 C.F.R. 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations, California].

Four different sets of California regulations establish the maximum availability periods for California depository institutions: 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10.190400-10.190402 (banks); 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 106.200-106.202 (savings and loan associations); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 901 (credit unions); and 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 1101 (industrial loan companies). Only the regulations of the Superintendent of Banks and the regulations of the Savings and Loan Commissioner are discussed in this chapter.

[2] Accounts Defined

For purposes of Fin. Code § 866 et seq. and related regulations, the term "deposit account" means an account in a depository institution on which the account holder is permitted to make withdrawals from time to time in person by negotiable or transferable instrument, payment orders of withdrawal, telephone transfers, or other similar items for the purpose of making payments or transfers to third persons or others. The term includes demand deposits, negotiable order of withdrawal draft accounts, savings deposits subject to automatic transfers, share draft accounts, and all savings deposits and share accounts other than time deposits [Fin. Code § 866(b)].

"Deposit account" is defined by the banking regulations to mean an "account" as defined in Regulation CC (12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a)) and any savings deposit account other than a time deposit account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(c)]. A "savings deposit" is defined by the banking regulations to have the same meaning as provided in 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(i)].

The Savings and Loan Commissioner's regulation defines "non-transaction account" as a savings deposit, including a regular savings account, an automatic transfer account, a money market deposit account, or any savings deposit described in 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(d) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 106.200(c)].

[3] Disclosure and Notice Requirements

California Fin. Code § 866.2 requires disclosures that are different from those required by Regulation CC, and, therefore, is preempted to the extent that it applies to "accounts" as defined in Regulation CC [see 12 U.S.C. § 4007 (preemption)]. However, Fin. Code § 866.2 continues to apply to savings accounts and other accounts not governed by Regulation CC disclosure requirements [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations, California].

Before opening a deposit account, a depository institution, as defined by Fin. Code § 866, must provide a written disclosure to the potential customer of its general policy with respect to when a customer may withdraw funds deposited by check or similar instrument into the customer's deposit account [Fin. Code § 866.2(a)]. The depository institution must also furnish its customers with individual notice, which may be on preprinted deposit slips or on envelopes for automatic teller machine deposits, bearing a conspicuous summary statement of its general policy with respect to when a customer may withdraw funds deposited by check or similar instrument into the customer's deposit account. In the case of a particular deposit by check or similar instrument into a deposit account for which funds may not be immediately available for withdrawal, the depository institution must provide specific notice of the time after which the customer may withdraw the funds [Fin. Code § 866.2(b)].

[4] Computing Interest

For the purposes of computing the amount of interest or dividends payable with respect to an interest-bearing account, a depository institution must not delay beginning to compute interest on funds deposited by check or similar instrument to the account beyond the date on which that depository institution receives provisional credit on the check or similar instrument. However, the payment of interest is not required if the check or similar instrument is returned unpaid [Fin.

Code § 866.3].

[5] Depository Institution's Liability for Failure to Comply

Except as otherwise provided in Fin. Code § 866.4, any depository institution that fails to comply with any requirement imposed under Fin. Code § 866 et seq. is liable to the aggrieved party in an amount equal to the sum of any actual damage sustained by the person as a result of the failure and, in the case of an individual action, an additional amount as the court may allow that is not less than $50 or greater than $500. In any successful individual or class action to enforce a depository institution's liability under Fin. Code § 866.4, the recovery includes costs of the action together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court [Fin. Code § 866.4].

[6] Amount of Class Action Recovery

In a class action, the recovery is the amount that the court may allow, except that as to each member of the class no minimum recovery is applicable and the total recovery in any class action or series of class actions arising out of the same failure to comply by the same depository institution may not be more than the lesser of $500,000 or 1 percent of the net worth of the depository institution [Fin. Code § 866.4]. In determining the amount of award in any class action, the court considers, among other relevant factors, the amount of any actual damages awarded, the frequency and persistence of failures of compliance, the resources of the depository institution, the number of persons adversely affected, and the extent to which the failure of compliance was intentional [Fin. Code § 866.4]. For discussion and forms relating to class actions generally, see Ch. 120, Class Actions .

[7] Time and Place for Bringing Action

An action under Fin. Code § 866.4 may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction within one year from the date of the occurrence of the violation [Fin. Code § 866.4]. For discussion of jurisdiction, see Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal , and Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter . For discussion of venue, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[8] Limitations on Liability

A depository institution may not be held liable in any action brought under Fin. Code § 866.4 for violating Fin. Code § 866 et seq. if the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error despite the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error. Examples of a bona fide error include, but are not limited to, clerical, calculation, computer malfunction and programming, and printing errors. However, an error of legal judgment with respect to a person's obligations under Fin. Code § 866 et seq. does not constitute a bona fide error [Fin. Code § 866.4].

No provision of Fin. Code § 866.4 imposing any liability applies to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any rule, regulation, or interpretation thereof by the Federal Reserve Board, or in conformity with any interpretation or approval by an official or employee of the Federal Reserve Board duly authorized by the board to issue interpretations or approvals under such procedures as the board may prescribe, notwithstanding that, after any act or omission has occurred, the rule, regulation, interpretation, or approval is amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason [Fin. Code § 866.4].

[9] Regulations Defining "Reasonable Time"

The Commissioner of Financial Institutions is required to issue administrative regulations pursuant to Com. Code § 4215 to define a reasonable time for permitting customers to draw on items received for deposit in the customers' accounts. Public policy in California provides retail banking customers with the right to withdraw against items deposited with any depository institution located in California within a reasonable period of time [Fin. Code § 866.5].

In accordance with Fin. Code § 866.5, the Commissioner of Financial Institutions promulgates regulations that must be reviewed annually to establish a reasonable period of time within which a depository institution must permit a customer to draw as a matter of right on an item that has been received for deposit in the customer's account [Fin. Code § 866.6]. In determining what constitutes a reasonable period of time, the Commissioner must consider the following factors: (a) the actual time for processing and transporting between the depository and payer institutions, (b) the fastest air transport time between depository and payer institutions to be used for purposes of setting the reasonable time for transport, and (c) the most expeditious route and means for processing of returned items [Fin. Code § 866.6].

The Commissioner is authorized to issue regulations that provide for a different period of time for withdrawal as a matter of right against deposited items if there has been a determination that the application of the regulations adopted under Fin. Code § 866 et seq. would result in unsafe or unsound practices by a depository institution subject to the regulatory jurisdiction of the respective state regulatory agency [Fin. Code § 866.9].

[10] Regulations of Superintendent of Banks

[a] Miscellaneous Definitions

For purposes of 10 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10.190400-10.190402, "depositary bank" means any California state commercial or national bank or any California branch office of a foreign (other nation) bank [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(d); see Fin. Code § 102 et seq. (defining types of banks)].

For purposes of 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190400-10.190402, the terms "banking day" and "business day" have the same meanings as provided in 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(f) and (g), respectively (discussed under § 95.222[3]) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(a), (b)]. "Item" is defined by the California regulation to mean "check" as defined in 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(k) (discussed under § 95.222[5]) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(e)].

The term "1210 bank" is defined by the California regulations as a bank with a federal reserve routing symbol of 1210 [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(f)]; and "1220 bank" is a bank with a federal reserve routing symbol of 1220 [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(g)]. A "thrift institution" under the California regulations means a savings and loan association, savings bank, or credit union [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190401(j)].

[b] Maximum Hold Periods Under California Banking Regulations

Except as otherwise provided in 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(a) and (b), a depositary bank must make funds deposited into a deposit account by an item available for withdrawal as provided in Regulation CC. The hold schedules provided in Regulation CC and in 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(a) and (b) must be the reasonable time for the collection and return of an item and the reasonable time by which a depositary bank must permit a depositor to draw on an item deposited into a deposit account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402].

On or after September 1, 1990, items drawn and deposited as described below into accounts governed by the regulations of the Superintendent of Banks must be available for withdrawal not later than the business day specified below after the banking day on which the deposit was made [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(b)]:

- Fourth business day in the case of an item drawn on a 1220 bank [see § 95.231[10][a]] or a paying bank located in the portion of California served by the Los Angeles Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, and deposited into an account at a 1210 bank [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(b)(1)].

- Fourth business day in the case of an item drawn on a 1210 bank [see § 95.231[10][a]], or on a paying bank located in the portion of California served by the Head Office of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, and deposited into an account at a 1220 bank [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(b)(2)].

September 1, 1990, is also the date the federal schedule went into effect [see § 95.225]. However, unless feasibility studies lead to shortening of the federal hold periods, the above categories of items are subject to a shorter hold period under the California regulation than under Regulation CC and thus supersede the federal hold periods [see 12 U.S.C. §§ 4002(d)(1), 4007; see also 12 C.F.R. § 229.20 (shorter state periods supersede federal)].

[c] Maximum Hold Periods Under California Savings and Loan Regulations

The California regulations adopt the hold periods established by Regulation CC for items deposited to nontransactions accounts [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 106.201; see also 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 106.200(b) (conforming definition of item to Regulation CC definition of check)]. Those regulations also provide that disclosures by a savings and loan association or savings bank concerning nontransaction accounts in accordance with those required by Regulation CC for transaction accounts are deemed to comply with Fin. Code § 866.2 [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 106.202].

[11] Depository Checks

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has taken the position that the two-day availability requirement of Fin. Code § 867 supersedes the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act and Regulation CC when applied to cashier's checks or teller's checks issued other than for remittance purposes [12 C.F.R. Part 229, Appendix F, Preemption Determinations, California]. Regulation CC limits its definition of cashier's checks and teller's checks to those that are provided to a customer of the issuing depository institution, or acquired from the depository institution, for remittance purposes, while the Fin. Code § 867(c)(3) and (7) definitions contain no such limitation. Conceivably a check issued by a bank to pay its employee or vendor would fall within the definition of cashier's check or teller's check found in Fin. Code § 867, but not within the Regulation CC definition [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(i) and (gg), respectively; 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.2(i) and (gg), discussed under § 95.224[3]].

Although its application is extremely limited, Fin. Code § 867(a) provides that the first $5,000 of funds representing proceeds of depository checks, as defined below, deposited in any given day into a demand deposit or other similar transaction account must be available to the depositor on the second business day after the business day of deposit [Fin. Code § 867(a); see Fin. Code § 867(c)(1); see also Stats. 1987 ch. 1150, § 2 (account as not including investment thrift certificate accounts of industrial loan companies)]. Depository checks are cashier's checks, certified checks, teller's checks, or any functional equivalent as determined by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System or the Commissioner of Financial Institutions with a face amount of $5,000 or less and drawn on a bank, savings bank, or insured credit union as defined in 12 U.S.C. §§ 461(b)(1)(A)(i)-(iv), 1752 (federal credit union), 1813 [Fin. Code § 867(a)(5), (c)(3)-(6)]. The check must be endorsed only by the person to whom it was issued, and must be deposited in a depository institution that is staffed by individuals employed by that institution [Fin. Code § 867(a)(1), (2)]. The check must be deposited with a special deposit slip that indicates that it is a cashier's check, certified check, teller's check, or other depository check [Fin. Code § 867(a)(3)]. The customer who deposits the depository check must have maintained an account with the receiving depository institution for 60 days or more [Fin. Code § 867(a)(4)].

The proceeds of a depository check do not have to be made available within two business days if the receiving depository institution reasonably believes the check is uncollectible from the originating institution. "Reasonable cause to believe" requires the existence of facts that would cause a well-grounded belief in the mind of a reasonable person. These reasons include, but are not limited to, a belief that (1) the drawer or drawee of the depository check has been or will imminently the subject of an order for relief in bankruptcy or placed in receivership, or (2) the depository check may be involved in a fraud or in a scheme commonly known as "kiting." If the receiving depository institution elects to invoke this exception, it must so notify the drawer and the drawee no later than the close of the next business day following deposit of the check [Fin. Code § 867(b)].

Except for the specific circumstances and checks described in Fin. Code § 867, Fin. Code § 867 is not intended to restrict or preempt the regulatory authority of the Commissioner of Financial Institutions [Fin. Code § 867(d)]. In the event of a suspension or modification of any similar provision in the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act, the effect of Fin. Code § 867 must be similarly suspended or modified [Fin. Code § 867(e)].

§ 95.250 Opening and Increasing Savings Accounts

Savings accounts may be opened for cash or, subject to any limitations or restrictions in regulations issued by the commissioner, for property in which the association is authorized to invest. In the absence of fraud in the transaction, the property's value taken in payment, as determined by the association's board of directors, is conclusive [Fin. Code § 6602; see Fin. Code § 6150(a) (association's business directed by board of directors elected by members or stockholders)].

Account holders may make additions to their savings accounts in amounts and at times they elect, except as limited by the association or by state or federal law or regulations [Fin. Code § 6601].

An association may not, directly or indirectly, for the opening or increasing of any savings account, give, sell, dispose of, or permit the giving, selling, or disposition of, anything having a cost or value in excess of the amount authorized by the Savings and Loan Commissioner by regulation [Fin. Code § 6653(a)]. Notwithstanding Fin. Code § 6653(a), the commissioner is authorized to impose, by regulation, restrictions on associations, relating to the distribution and advertising of giveaways, equivalent to those imposed on federal association doing business in California [Fin. Code § 6653(b)].

§ 95.251 Evidence of Savings Account

Except for savings accounts issued in marketable or bearer form, savings accounts must be represented only by the account of each savings account holder on the books of the association. These accounts or any interest in the accounts are transferable only on the books of the association on proper written application and acceptance by the association of the transferee as a holder. The terms of transfer must be approved by the association's board of directors [Fin. Code § 6651].

If evidence of an account is lost or destroyed, an association may issue new evidence of an account in the name of the holder of record. This will only be done if the savings account holder of record, as shown by the association's books, or the holder's legal representative, files an affidavit to the effect that the evidence of account has been lost or destroyed, and that the account has not been pledged or assigned in whole or in part [Fin. Code § 6652(a)]. The new evidence of account may state that it is issued in lieu of the one lost or destroyed. It may also state that the association is not liable for the loss or destruction of the account's original evidence [Fin. Code § 6652(b)]. In addition, the association may require an indemnification or a bond in an amount it deems sufficient to indemnify the association against any loss that might result from the issuance of a new evidence of account under Fin. Code § 6652 [Fin. Code § 6652(c)].

§ 95.252 Interest--Rates and Computation

An association may issue savings accounts earning interest at different rates of return. The annual rate of return paid on a savings account may either be fixed at the time the account is issued or may vary on any basis specified at the time the account is accepted [Fin. Code § 7050]. An association may classify its savings accounts on any basis including, but not limited to, character, amount, or duration of the account, regularity of additions, or location of origin of the account [Fin. Code § 7051]. Except for accounts that are classified according to a specified contractual time or notice period, interest is based on the withdrawal value of each savings account at the beginning of the accounting period, plus additions made during the period (less amounts previously withdrawn and noticed for withdrawal, which for interest purposes will be deducted from the latest previous additions) computed at the rate for the time the funds have been invested, determined as provided in Fin. Code § 7053 [Fin. Code § 7052]. The date of investment in a savings account will generally be the date the association actually receives the account or an addition to the account. However, the association may determine that accounts, in one or more classifications, or additions received by the association on or before a date not later than the 20th day of the month (unless the day determined is not a business day, in which case it may be the next succeeding business day) will receive interest as if invested on the first day of the month in which the payments were received [Fin. Code § 7053(a)]. If the association makes a determination under Fin. Code § 7053(a) it also must determine that payments received after the determination date will either receive interest as if invested on the first day the next succeeding month, or receive interest from the date of actual receipt by the association, except as provided by Fin. Code § 866.3 [Fin. Code § 7053(b); see Fin. Code § 866.3 (no interest required on provisional credit for deposited item later returned unpaid)].

The association's directors must determine the method of calculating the amount of any interest on any savings account classification as provided in Fin. Code § 7050 et seq. as well as the time or times when the interest is to be paid or credited [Fin. Code § 7055]. The board of directors, by resolution, may also determine any of the following [Fin. Code § 7054]:

- That interest will not be paid on designated types of savings accounts from which withdrawals may be made on demand or by negotiable and transferable order or authorization;

- That an association may establish minimum balance requirements for savings accounts to be eligible for distribution of interest; and

- That, subject to applicable maximum regulatory limitations, an association may pay interest on a savings account at a rate or anticipated rate of return determined at the time that the account is accepted.

§ 95.253 Withdrawals From Savings Accounts

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, but subject to Fin. Code § 7100(b), an association may permit the owner of a deposit or account to make withdrawals by negotiable or transferable instruments for the purpose of making transfers to third parties [Fin. Code § 7100(a)]. Fin. Code § 7100(b) provides that with regard to deposits or accounts on which interest or dividends are paid, Fin. Code § 7100(a) applies only to the deposits or accounts that consist solely of funds in which the entire beneficial interest is held by one or more individuals or by an organization that is operated primarily for religious, philanthropic, charitable, educational, or other similar purposes and that is not operated for profit [Fin. Code § 7100(b)]. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an association may provide for the automatic transfer of funds at the account holder's direction [Fin. Code § 7100(c)].

4. Specific Savings Account Provisions

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.254

§ 95.254 Married Persons and Minors

[1] In General

An association or federal association may issue savings accounts to any married person or minor as the sole and absolute owner of the account, receive payments by or for the owner, pay withdrawals, accept pledges to the association, and act in any other manner with regard to the accounts on the order of a married person or minor. A married person or minor may establish a trust under I.R.C. §§ 401 and 408, as amended, and an association or federal association may issue savings accounts to the trust [Fin. Code § 6750]. Any payment or delivery of rights to a married person, to any minor, or to a trust established by or for a married person, or a minor, or a receipt or acquittance signed by a married person or by a minor who holds a savings account, will be a sufficient release of the association or federal association for any payment made or delivery of rights to the married person or minor [Fin. Code § 6751; but see Prob. Code § 5401 et seq. (financial institutions' liability for payments made from multiple-party accounts, discussed in § 95.270[9])].

In the case of a minor, the receipt, acquittance, pledge, or other action required by the association to be taken by the minor will be binding on the minor with like effect as if the minor were of full age and legal capacity [Fin. Code § 6752(a)]. Except under Fin. Code § 6752(c) (death of minor), the minor's parent or guardian has no power to attach or transfer any savings account issued to or in the minor's name. However, a parent or guardian of a minor, 13 or less, may require, by written notice delivered to the office where the account is maintained, that the signatures of both the minor and the parent or guardian be required for withdrawals from the account [Fin. Code § 6752(b)]. In the event of a minor's death, the receipt or acquittance of either parent, guardian, or foster parent of the minor is a sufficient discharge of the association or federal association for any sums not exceeding in the aggregate $2,500 unless the minor has given written notice to the association to accept the signature of the parent, guardian, or foster parent to withdraw a greater amount [Fin. Code § 6752(c)].

[2] Accounts of Incompetents

If an association or federal association has not received written notice and is not on actual notice that the savings account holder has been adjudicated incompetent, it may pay or deliver funds to the account holder in accordance with the provisions of the savings account contract, and the receipt or acquittance of the holder is sufficient release of that association for the payment or delivery [Fin. Code § 6900].

[3] Accounts of Deceased Nonresidents

When a savings account is held in any association or federal association by a person who dies while domiciled in a sister state or foreign nation, the account, together with additions and interest, or any part of it, is exempt from taxation otherwise imposed by California [Fin. Code § 6950(a)]. The account, together with additions and interest, or any part of it, must be paid to the sister-state personal representative or other claimant under the Probate Code, provided that the personal representative or other claimant has furnished the association or federal association with all the documents required under applicable provisions of the Probate Code and evidence of ownership of the account, if any, issued under Fin. Code § 6652 [Fin. Code § 6950(b)]. On payment or delivery to the personal representative or other claimant after receiving the documents specified in Fin. Code § 6950(b), the association or federal association is released and discharged to the same extent as if the payment or delivery had been made to a legally qualified local personal representative, and is not required to account for the application or disposition of the property [Fin. Code § 6950(c)]. An action at law or in equity may not be maintained against an association for payment made in accordance with Fin. Code §§ 6950-6951 [Fin. Code § 6951].

[4] Redemption

Whenever funds are on hand for the purpose of redemption, an association has the right to redeem by lot or otherwise, as the board of directors may determine, all or any part of any of its savings accounts on an interest date. The accounts are redeemed by giving 30 days' written notice to each affected account holder. Notice is sent by registered mail addressed to the holder's last address as recorded on the books of the association [Fin. Code § 7150]. The redemption price of savings accounts redeemed is the full value of the account redeemed, as determined by the board of directors, but is not less than the withdrawal value [Fin. Code § 7152].

Except with the prior consent of the commissioner, an association may not redeem any of its savings accounts when the association is in an impaired condition and when it has any applications for withdrawal that have been on file more than 14 days and have not been reached for payment [Fin. Code § 7151].

If the notice of redemption under Fin. Code § 7150 has been given and if on or before the redemption date the funds necessary for the redemption have been set aside and continue to be available for the redemption, interest on the accounts to be redeemed will cease to accrue from the interest date specified as the redemption date. All rights with respect to such accounts will also terminate after the redemption date, except the right of the account holder of record to receive the redemption price without interest [Fin. Code § 7153]. All certificates of ownership evidencing former savings accounts that have been called for redemption must be tendered for payment within the time limit specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1513(a)(2) for escheat of unclaimed funds [Fin. Code § 7154(a)]. Savings accounts that are not tendered for payment escheat to the state as provided in the Unclaimed Property Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1500 et seq.) [Fin. Code § 7154(b)].

[5] Liability of Members

[a] General Limitation

Members of a mutual association are not responsible for any losses of the association. Savings accounts are not subject to assessment, and savings account holders are not liable to creditors of the association for any unpaid installment on the association's account [Fin. Code § 6603; see In re Pacific Coast Bldg. Loan Assn. (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 134, 141-142, 99 P.2d 251 (construing former sections of the 1931 Building and Loan Association Act)].

[b] Savings Liability

An association's liability for savings deposits consists only of the aggregate amount of its savings accounts, plus interest earned or credited to the accounts, less redemption and withdrawal payments [Fin. Code §§ 5118, 6600; for further general discussion, see Banking Law, Ch. 9, Bank Accounts, §§ 9.06, 9.11 (Matthew Bender)].

5. Multiple-Party And Fiduciary Accounts

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.270

§ 95.270 Multiple-Party Accounts Law

[1] Accounts to Which Law Applies

The most common types of multiple-party accounts in state and federal banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, and similar organizations and industrial loan companies are governed by the California Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.) [see Prob. Code § 5128 (defining "financial institution")]. "Account" within the meaning of the law means a contract of deposit of funds between a depositor and a financial institution, and includes a checking account, savings account, certificate of deposit, share account, and other like arrangement [Prob. Code § 5122(a)]. Joint accounts, P.O.D. accounts, and Totten trust accounts are "multiple-party accounts" within the meaning of the California Multiple-Party Accounts Law [Prob. Code § 5132; see § 95.270[5][a]].

[2] Accounts Governed by Other Law

The following types of accounts are excluded from the purview of the California Multiple-Party Accounts Law [Prob. Code § 5122(b)]:

- An account established for deposit of funds of a partnership, joint venture, or other association for business purposes;

- An account controlled by one or more persons as the duly authorized agent or trustee for a corporation, unincorporated association, or charitable or civic organization;

- A regular fiduciary or trust account maintained in connection with a relationship that is established other than by the deposit agreement; and

- An account established for the deposit of funds of the estate of a ward, conservatee, or decedent.

[3] Accounts in Savings Association

An account in an association or federal association that is a multiple-party account is governed by the Multiple-Party Accounts Law [Fin. Code § 6800]. However, the Financial Code includes certain provisions applicable only to these types of accounts.

Specifically, no association or federal association that pays any survivor in accordance with the Multiple-Party Accounts Law may, because of that payment, become liable for any estate, inheritance, or succession taxes due to the state [Fin. Code § 6804; see also Fin. Code § 6855 (discussed § 95.271[2])].

In addition, the pledge or hypothecation to any association or federal association of all or part of a multiple-party account as defined in Prob. Code § 5132, signed by one or more of the tenants, whether minor or adult, on whose signature or signatures withdrawals may be made from the account, is a valid pledge unless the terms of the particular account specifically provide otherwise [Fin. Code § 6805]. Transfer to the association or federal association of a pledged or hypothecated portion of a multiple-party account does not operate to sever or terminate all or any part of that account [Fin. Code § 6805].

[4] Testamentary Formalities Not Necessary

Any transfers resulting from the application of Prob. Code § 5302 are effective by reason of the account contracts involved and are not to be considered as testamentary. The right of a surviving party to a joint account [see Prob. Code § 5302(a)], of a beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 5302(c)], or of a P.O.D. payee [see Prob. Code § 5302(b)] to the sums on deposit on the death of a party to a multiple-party account may not be denied, abridged, or affected because that right has not been created by a writing executed in accordance with the laws of California prescribing the requirements to effect a valid testamentary disposition of property [Prob. Code § 5304; but see Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail)].

[5] Definitions

[a] Joint, Community Property, and Tenancy-in-Common Accounts

"Joint account" means an account payable on request to one or more of two or more parties whether or not mention is made of any right of survivorship [Prob. Code § 5130].

For purposes of resolving controversies between parties to an account and whether the signature card, passbook, contract, or other instrument evidencing the account was executed before, on, or after July 1, 1990, words in substantially the following form create a joint account [Prob. Code §§ 5201, 5203(a)(1)]: "This account or certificate is owned by the named parties. On the death of any of them, ownership passes to the survivor(s)."

For the purposes of Prob. Code § 5301 et seq., except to the extent the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide otherwise, if the parties to an account are married to each other and the account is expressly described in the account agreement as a "community property" account, the ownership of the account during lifetime and after the death of a spouse is governed by the law governing community property generally [Prob. Code § 5307].

Words in substantially the following form create a joint account of husband and wife with right of survivorship [Prob. Code § 5203(a)(4)]: "This account or certificate is owned by the named parties, who are husband and wife, and is presumed to be their community property. On the death of either of them, ownership passes to the survivor." A community property account of spouses would use words substantially similar to these [Prob. Code § 5203(a)(5)]: "This account or certificate is the community property of the named parties who are husband and wife. The ownership during lifetime and after the death of a spouse is determined by the law applicable to community property generally and may be affected by a will."

For purposes of resolving controversies between parties to the account, words in substantially the following form create a tenancy-in-common account [Prob. Code §§ 5201, 5203(a)(6)]: "This account or certificate is owned by the named parties as tenants in common. On the death of any party, the ownership interest of that party passes to the named pay-on-death payee(s) of that party or, if none, to the estate of that party."

[b] P.O.D., P.O.D. Account, and P.O.D. Payee

"P.O.D." means pay on death [Prob. Code § 5139]. A "P.O.D. account" is an account payable on request to one person during the person's lifetime and on the person's death to one or more P.O.D. payees [Prob. Code § 5140(a)]. A "P.O.D. account" may also be an account payable on request to one or more persons during their lifetimes and on the death of all of them to one or more P.O.D. payees [Prob. Code § 5140(b)].

A "P.O.D. payee" is a person designated on a P.O.D. account as one to whom the account is payable on request after the death of one or more persons [Prob. Code § 5142]. A P.O.D. payee is a party to an account, in the sense of having a present right to payment from the account by reason of being a P.O.D. payee, only after the account becomes payable to that payee by reason of surviving all persons named as original payees [Prob. Code § 5136(a), (b)].

For purposes of resolving controversies between parties to the account and P.O.D. payees, and whether the signature card, passbook, contract, or other instrument evidencing the account was executed before, on, or after July 1, 1990, words in substantially the following form create a P.O.D. account with a single party [Prob. Code §§ 5201, 5203(a)(2)]: "This account or certificate is owned by the named party. On the death of that party, ownership passes to the named pay-on-death payee(s)." Words in substantially the following form create a P.O.D. account with multiple parties [Prob.Code § 5203(a)(3)]: "This account or certificate is owned by the named parties. On the death of any of them, ownership passes to the survivor(s). On the death of all of them, ownership passes to the named pay-on-death payee(s)."

[c] Totten Trust Account and Beneficiary

A "Totten trust account" means an account in the name of one or more parties as trustee for one or more beneficiaries when the relationship is established by the form of the account and the deposit agreement with the financial institution, and there is no subject of the trust other than the sums on deposit in the account [Prob. Code § 80]. Totten trust accounts are discussed more fully in Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

A "beneficiary" means a person named in a Totten trust account as one for whom a party to the account is named as trustee [Prob. Code § 5126]. A beneficiary of a Totten trust account is not a party to the account and has no present right to payment from the account by reason of being a beneficiary, until he or she survives all persons named as trustees [Prob. Code § 5136(a), (c)].

[d] Agent

"Agent" means a person who has a present right, subject to request, to payment from an account as an attorney in fact under a power of attorney [Prob. Code § 5124].

[e] Net Contribution

"Net contribution" of a party to an account as of any given time is the sum of all of the following [Prob. Code § 5134(a)]:

- All deposits to the account made by or for the party, less all withdrawals made by or for the party that have not been paid to or applied to the use of any other party;

- A pro rata share of any interest or dividends earned, whether or not included in the current balance; and

- Any proceeds of deposit life insurance added to the account by reason of the death of the party whose net contribution is in question.

In the absence of proof otherwise, only parties who have a present right of withdrawal are considered as having a net contribution [Prob. Code § 5134(b)(1)], and the net contribution of each of the parties having a present right of withdrawal is deemed to be an equal amount [Prob. Code § 5134(b)(2)].

This definition is for use in determining ownership interests in an account as between the parties to an account, and not as between the parties and the financial institution [Prob. Code § 5134(c)].

[f] Party

"Party" means a person who, by the terms of the account, has a present right, subject to request, to payment from a multiple-party account other than as an agent [Prob. Code § 5136(a)]. For discussion of when a P.O.D. payee becomes a party, see § 95.270[5][b]. For discussion of when a Totten trust beneficiary becomes a party, see § 95.270[5][c].

[g] Payment of Sums on Deposit

"Payment" of sums on deposit includes all of the following [Prob. Code § 5138]:

- A withdrawal, including payment on check or other directive of a party.

- A pledge of sums on deposit.

- A set-off, reduction, or other disposition of all or part of an account pursuant to a pledge.

[h] Sums on Deposit

"Sums on deposit" means both (a) the balance payable on an account, including interest and dividends earned, whether or not included in the current balance, and (b) any life insurance proceeds added to the account by reason of the death of a party [Prob. Code § 5150].

[i] Withdrawal

"Withdrawal" includes payment to a third person pursuant to a check or other directive of a party or an agent [Prob. Code § 5152].

[6] Ownership While All Parties Are Living

[a] In General

During the lifetime of all parties, an account belongs to the parties in proportion to the net contributions by each to the sums on deposit, unless there is clear and convincing evidence of a different intent [Prob. Code § 5301(a); see Prob. Code §§ 5134 ("net contribution" defined), 5150 ("sums on deposit" defined); see also Lee v. Yang (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 481, 490-494, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 819 (boyfriend had no right to reimbursement of funds disproportionate to contributions which were withdrawn by girlfriend from account to which she was added as signatory; due to her unrestricted right to withdraw and apply funds, ownership of any withdrawn funds passed to her by way of gift)].

In the case of a P.O.D. account or a Totten trust account, the P.O.D. payee or beneficiary has no rights to the sums on deposit during the lifetime of any party, unless there is clear and convincing evidence of a different intent [Prob. Code §§ 5301(b) (P.O.D.), 5301(c) (Totten trust)]. If there is an irrevocable trust, the account belongs beneficially to the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 5301(c)].

[b] Ownership of Community Property Accounts

Unless the account or deposit agreement expressly provides otherwise, if the parties to an account are married to each other and the account is expressly described in the account agreement as a "community property" account, the ownership of the account during lifetime and after the death of a spouse is governed by the law governing community property generally [Prob. Code § 5307]. For a discussion of the laws of community property generally, see Ch. 122, Community Property .

Notwithstanding Prob. Code §§ 5301-5303, if parties to an account are married to each other, whether or not they are so described in the deposit agreement, their net contribution to the account is presumed to be and remain their community property [Prob. Code § 5305(a)]. Except as provided in Prob. Code § 5305(b) and (c), a multiple-party account created with community property funds does not in any way alter community property rights [Prob. Code § 5305(d)].

Notwithstanding Fam. Code §§ 2581 and 2640, the presumption established by Prob. Code § 5305 is a presumption affecting the burden of proof and may be rebutted by proof of either of the following [Prob. Code § 5305(b)]:

- The sums on deposit that are claimed to be separate property can be traced from separate property unless it is proved that the married persons made a written agreement that expressed their clear intent that those sums be their community property; or

- The married persons made a written agreement, separate from the deposit agreement, that expressly provided that the sums on deposit, claimed not to be community property, were not to be community property.

Except as provided in Prob. Code § 5307, a right of survivorship arising from the express terms of the account or under Prob. Code § 5302, a beneficiary designation in a Totten trust account, or a P.O.D. payee designation may not be changed by will [Prob. Code § 5305(c)].

[c] Changes in Account Terms

During the lifetime of a party, the terms of the account may be changed as provided in Prob. Code § 5303(b) to eliminate or to add rights of survivorship. Withdrawal of funds from the account by a party with a present right of withdrawal during the lifetime of a party also eliminates rights of survivorship on the death of that party with respect to the funds withdrawn [Prob. Code § 5303(c)].

Once established, the terms of a multiple-party account can be changed only by any of the following methods [Prob. Code § 5303(b)]:

- Closing the account and reopening it under different terms;

- Presenting to the financial institution a modification agreement that is signed by all parties with a present right of withdrawal (if the financial institution has a form for this purpose, it may require use of the form);

- If the provisions of the terms of the account or deposit agreement provide a method of modification of the terms of the account, complying with those provisions; or

- As provided in Prob. Code § 5405(c) (discussed under § 95.270[9][f]).

Thus, a party who has a unilateral right of withdrawal can eliminate survivorship rights by closing out the account having survivorship rights and opening a new account without survivorship rights [see 1990 Law Rev. Comm. Comment to Prob. Code § 5303]. Prob. Code § 5303 permits a decedent unilaterally to sever joint tenancy accounts if the decedent had the unilateral right of withdrawal from those accounts. Withdrawal of the funds from the accounts will not, however, change the other rights of the parties to the moneys withdrawn, for instance the rights accruing under Prob. Code §§ 5301 and 5305 [see 1990 Law Rev. Comm. Comment to Prob. Code § 5303].

[7] Ownership After Death of Party

[a] Determined by Terms of Account

The provisions of Prob. Code § 5302 regarding rights of survivorship are determined by the form of the account at the death of a party [Prob. Code § 5303(a); but see Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail)]. A right of survivorship arising from the express terms of the account or under Prob. Code § 5302, a beneficiary designation in a Totten trust account, or a P.O.D. payee designation cannot be changed by will [Prob. Code § 5302(e)].

[b] Death of Party to Joint Account

Sums remaining on deposit at the death of a party to a joint account belong to the surviving party or parties as against the estate of the decedent unless there is clear and convincing evidence of a different intent. If there are two or more surviving parties, their respective ownerships during lifetime are in proportion to their previous ownership interests under Prob. Code § 5301, augmented by an equal share for each survivor of any interest the decedent may have owned in the account immediately before the decedent's death. The right of survivorship continues between the surviving parties [Prob. Code § 5302(a); but see Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail)]. Joint accounts are discussed in more detail in Ch. 316, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common .

[c] Death of Party to P.O.D. Account

If the account is a P.O.D. account with two or more parties, on the death of one of them, the rights to any sums remaining on deposit are governed by Prob. Code § 5302(a) (discussed under § 95.270[7][b]) [Prob. Code § 5302(b)(1)], subject to Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail).

On death of the sole or surviving party to a P.O.D. account, any sums remaining on deposit belong to the P.O.D. payee or payees if surviving, or to the survivor of them if one or more die before the party [Prob. Code § 5302(b)(2)(A)]. If two or more P.O.D. payees survive, any sums remaining on deposit belong to them in equal and undivided shares unless the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide for different shares [Prob. Code § 5302(b)(2)(B)]. If two or more P.O.D. payees survive, there is no right of survivorship in the event of death of a P.O.D. payee thereafter unless the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide for survivorship between them [Prob. Code § 5302(b)(2)(C)].

[d] Death of Totten Trustee

On death of one of two or more trustees to a Totten trust account, the rights to any sums remaining on deposit are governed by Prob. Code § 5302(a) (discussed under § 95.270[7][b]) [Prob. Code § 5302(c)(1)], subject to Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail).

On death of the sole or surviving trustee of a Totten trust account, any sums remaining on deposit belong to the person or persons named as beneficiaries, if surviving, or to the survivor of them if one or more die before the trustee, unless there is clear and convincing evidence of a different intent [Prob. Code § 5302(c)(2)(A)]. If two or more beneficiaries survive, any sums remaining on deposit belong to them in equal and undivided shares unless the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide for different shares [Prob. Code § 5302(c)(2)(B)]. If two or more beneficiaries survive, there is no right of survivorship in event of death of any beneficiary thereafter unless the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide for survivorship between them [Prob. Code § 5302(c)(2)(C); see also Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts].

[e] Death of Party to Tenancy-in-Common Account

If an account is expressly described in the deposit agreement as a "tenancy in common" account, no right of survivorship arises from the terms of the account or under Prob. Code § 5302 unless the terms of the account or deposit agreement expressly provide for survivorship [Prob. Code § 5306]. The death of a party to a tenancy-in-common account has no effect on beneficial ownership of the account other than to transfer the rights of the decedent as part of the decedent's estate [Prob. Code § 5302(d); but see Prob. Code § 5600 et seq. (certain transfers to former spouse will fail)].

[8] Special Power of Attorney on Multiple-Party Accounts

[a] Creation

In addition to a power of attorney otherwise authorized by law, a special power of attorney is authorized under Prob. Code § 5204 to apply to one or more accounts at a financial institution or to one or more contracts with a financial institution concerning safe deposit services. For the purposes of Prob. Code § 5204, "account" includes checking accounts, savings accounts, certificates of deposit, savings certificates, and any other depository relationship with the financial institution [Prob. Code § 5204(a)]. Nothing in Prob. Code § 5204 limits the use or effect of any other form of power of attorney for transactions with a financial institution [Prob. Code § 5204(j)]. Powers of attorney generally are discussed in Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

The special power of attorney under Prob. Code § 5204 must (1) be in writing, (2) be signed by the person or persons giving the power of attorney, and (3) explicitly identify the attorney or attorneys in fact, the financial institution, and the accounts or contracts subject to the power [Prob. Code § 5204(b)].

The special power of attorney must contain language in substantially the following form [Prob. Code § 5104(c)]:

WARNING

TO PERSON EXECUTING THIS DOCUMENT: This is an important legal document. It creates a power of attorney that provides the person you designate as your attorney in fact with the broad powers it sets forth. You have the right to terminate this power of attorney. If there is anything about this form that you do not understand, you should ask a lawyer to explain it to you.

In addition to this language, special powers of attorney that are or may be durable must also contain substantially the following language [Prob. Code § 5104(d)]:

These powers of attorney shall continue even if you later become disabled or incapacitated.

The attorney in fact under a power of attorney pursuant to Prob. Code § 5204 may also be designated as a P.O.D. payee [Prob. Code § 5204(l)].

[b] Duration

A power of attorney granted under Prob. Code § 5204 endures as between the grantor and grantee of the power until the occurrence of the earliest of the following events [Prob. Code § 5204(e)]:

- Revocation by the grantor of the power;
- Termination of the account;
- Death of the grantor of the power; or
- In the case of a nondurable power of attorney, appointment of a guardian or conservator of the estate of the grantor of the power.

[c] Payments by Financial Institution Pursuant to Power

A financial institution may rely in good faith on the validity of a power of attorney granted under Prob. Code § 5204 and is not liable to the principal or any other person for doing so if (1) the power of attorney is on file with the financial institution and the transaction is made by the attorney in fact named in the power of attorney, (2) the power of attorney appears on its face to be valid, and (3) the financial institution has convincing evidence of the identity of the person signing the power of attorney as principal [Prob. Code § 5204(f)]. In this context, "convincing evidence" requires both of the following [Prob. Code § 5204(g)]:

- Reasonable reliance on a document that satisfies the requirements of Prob. Code § 4751 (convincing evidence for purposes of declarations of witnesses for durable powers of attorney for health care); and
- The absence of any information, evidence, or other circumstances that would lead a reasonable person to believe that the person signing the power of attorney as principal is not the individual he or she claims to be.

The protection provided by Prob. Code § 5204(f) does not extend to payments made after written notice is received by the financial institution of termination of the power under Prob. Code § 5204(e) if the financial institution has had a reasonable time to act on the notice [Prob. Code § 5204(h); see Prob. Code § 5146 (absent account terms to contrary, receipt of notice as receipt at branch or office where account is carried)]. No other notice or any other information shown to have been available to the financial institution affects its right to the protection provided by this subdivision [Prob. Code § 5204(h)].

Nothing in Prob. Code § 5204 creates any implication that a financial institution is liable for acting in reliance on a power of attorney under circumstances in which the requirements of Prob. Code § 5204(f) are not satisfied. Nothing in Prob. Code § 5204 affects any immunity that may otherwise exist apart from Prob. Code § 5204 [Prob. Code § 5204(k)].

[d] Duties and Liabilities of Attorney in Fact

The attorney in fact acting under the power of attorney granted under Prob. Code § 5204 must maintain any books or records that will permit an accounting of the acts of the attorney in fact if an accounting is requested by a legal representative of the grantor of the power [Prob. Code § 5204(i)].

The attorney in fact acting under a power of attorney granted in accordance with Prob. Code § 5204 is liable for any disbursement other than a disbursement to or for the benefit of the grantor of the power, unless the grantor has authorized the disbursement in writing [Prob. Code § 5204(j)].

[e] Applicability of Power of Attorney Law

With the exception of Prob. Code § 4130 (controlling authority if principal grants inconsistent authority) and Prob. Code § 4900 et seq. (judicial proceedings), the Power of Attorney Law [Prob. Code § 4000 et seq.] does not apply to special powers of attorney under Prob. Code § 5204 [Prob. Code § 5204(m)].

[9] Financial Institutions' Rights and Duties

[a] Payments From Account

Prob. Code § 5301 et seq. concerning beneficial ownership as between parties, or as between parties and P.O.D. payees or beneficiaries of multiple-party accounts, are relevant only to controversies between those persons and their creditors and other successors, and have no bearing on the power of withdrawal of those persons as determined by the terms of account contracts [Prob. Code § 5201(a); see, e.g., Lee v. Yang (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 481, 489-490, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 819 (girlfriend had right to withdraw funds from account opened by boyfriend who had added her as signer; boyfriend failed to establish oral agreement restricting that right)]. Prob. Code § 5201(a) simply shields the financial institution from any liability for paying a sum out of a multiple-party account to a person who is a party to the account, when the sum paid is more than the recipient's beneficial interest in the account funds. Whether such a person is a party to the account is governed by Prob. Code § 5303, except to the extent that the terms of the account contract override the provisions of Prob. Code § 5303. Prob. Code § 5201 does not deprive a legitimate account holder of recourse against the financial institution if it permits a person to withdraw funds from a multiple party account when the person is not a proper party to the account pursuant to Prob. Code § 5303 and the account contract [Stevens v. Tri Counties Bank (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 236, 239, 99 Cal. Rptr. 3d 188] .

Prob. Code § 5401 et seq. govern the liability of financial institutions who make payments pursuant to that chapter [Prob. Code § 5201(b)]. Financial institutions may make payments from any multiple-party account on request and according to its terms, to any one or more of the parties or agents [Prob. Code § 5401(a)]. Thus, if the terms of the account or deposit agreement require the signatures of more than one of the parties to a multiple-party account during their lifetimes or of more than one of the survivors after the death of any one of them on any check, check endorsement, receipt, notice of withdrawal, request for withdrawal, or withdrawal order, the financial institution must pay the sums on deposit only in accordance with those terms. However, those terms do not limit the right of the sole survivor or of all of the survivors to receive the sums on deposit [Prob. Code § 5401(b)].

Although decided before Prob. Code § 5401 applied to multiple-party accounts at savings and loan associations, one case has held that a statement on the passbook or certificate that its presentation will be required for withdrawal is for the protection of, and waivable by, the financial institution. The account agreement at issue allowed withdrawal on the signature of one joint tenant, so the nonwithdrawing joint tenants had no cause of action against the financial institution for allowing withdrawals by another joint tenant without requiring presentation of the passbook or certificate [Beizer v. Financial Savings & Loan Assn. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 133, 136-139, 218 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

The financial institution may have additional obligations imposed by Division 3 or 4 of the Commercial Code relating to checks, as discussed in § 95.310 et seq.

[b] Specific Manners of Payment

Unless the financial institution has received a court order restraining payment, payment made on request and according to the account terms pursuant to Prob. Code § 5401 or in one of the following manners discharges the financial institution from all claims for amounts so paid, whether or not the payment is consistent with the beneficial ownership of the account as between parties, P.O.D. payees, or beneficiaries, or their successors [Prob. Code § 5405(a), (b)]:

(1) In the case of a joint account, to any party without regard to whether any other party is incapacitated or deceased at the time the payment is demanded. Payment may not be made to the personal representative or heirs of a deceased party unless proof of death is presented to the financial institution showing that the decedent was the last surviving party or unless there is no right of survivorship under Prob. Code § 5302 [Prob. Code § 5402; see also Ch. 316, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common].

(2) In the case of a P.O.D. account, to any original party to the account, or to the P.O.D. payee or the personal representative or heirs of a deceased P.O.D. payee if he, she, or they present the financial institution with proof of death showing that the P.O.D. payee survived all persons named as original payees. Payment may be made to the personal representative or heirs of a deceased original payee if he, she, or they present the financial institution with proof of death showing that the deceased original payee was the survivor of all other persons named on the account either as an original payee or as P.O.D. payee [Prob. Code § 5403].

(3) In the case of a Totten trust account, to any trustee. Unless the financial institution has received written notice that the beneficiary has a vested interest not dependent on surviving the trustee, payment may be made to the personal representative or heirs of a deceased trustee if he, she, or they present the financial institution proof of death showing that the deceased trustee was the survivor of all other persons named on the account either as trustee or beneficiary. Payment may be made to a beneficiary or beneficiaries or the personal representative or heirs of a beneficiary or beneficiaries if proof of death is presented to the financial institution showing that the beneficiary or beneficiaries survived all persons named as trustees [Prob. Code § 5404; see also Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts].

[c] No Duty to Determine Source or Application of Funds or Parties' Net Contributions

A financial institution is not required to inquire regarding the source of funds received for deposit to a multiple-party account, or to inquire about the proposed application of any sum withdrawn from an account, for purposes of establishing net contributions [Prob. Code § 5401(c)(1)]. A financial institution is not required to determine any party's net contribution or to limit withdrawals or any other use of an account based on the net contribution of any party, whether or not the financial institution has actual knowledge of each party's contribution [Prob. Code § 5401(c)(2), (3)].

[d] Right to Levy and Setoff Against All Funds

All funds in an account, unless otherwise agreed in writing by the financial institution and the parties to the account, remain subject to liens, security interests, rights of setoff, and charges, notwithstanding the determination or allocation of net contributions with respect to the parties [Prob. Code § 5401(d)].

[e] Court Order Restraining Payment From Multiple-Party Account

The financial institution is not discharged from claims with regard to payments made in accordance with Prob. Code §§ 5401-5404 if those payments were made after the financial institution has been served with a court order restraining payment [Prob. Code § 5405(a), (b)]. No other notice or any other information shown to have been available to a financial institution affects its right to the protection provided by Prob. Code § 5405(a) [Prob. Code § 5405(b); see Prob. Code § 5146 (absent account terms to contrary, receipt of notice as receipt at branch or office where account is carried)].

[f] Notice From Party Restraining Payment From Account

Unless the notice is withdrawn by a subsequent writing, after receipt of a written notice from any party to a multiple-party account that withdrawals in accordance with the terms of the account (other than a checking account, share draft account, or other similar third-party payment instrument) should not be permitted, except with the signatures of more than one of the parties during their lifetimes or of more than one of the survivors after the death of any one of the parties, the financial institution may only pay the sums on deposit in accordance with the written instructions pending determination of the rights of the parties or their successors [Prob. Code § 5405(c); see Prob. Code § 5146 (absent account terms to contrary, receipt of notice as receipt at branch or office where account is carried)]. No liability attaches to the financial institution for complying with the terms of any written notice provided pursuant to Prob. Code § 5405(c) [Prob. Code § 5405(c)].

[g] Effect of Financial Institutions' Protections

The protection provided to the financial institution by Prob. Code § 5405 has no bearing on the rights of parties in disputes between themselves or their successors concerning the beneficial ownership of funds in, or withdrawn from, multiple-party accounts, and is in addition to, and not exclusive of, any protection provided the financial institution by any other provision of law [Prob. Code § 5405(d)].

[h] Payment to Minor

If a financial institution is required or permitted to make payment under Prob Code § 5401 et seq. to a person who is a minor and a party to a multiple-party account, payment may be made to the minor or to the minor's order. Payment made to the minor or to the minor's order is a valid release and discharge of the financial institution [Prob. Code § 5407(a)]. However, the foregoing does not apply if the account is to be paid to the minor because the minor was designated as a P.O.D. payee or as a beneficiary of a Totten trust account [Prob. Code § 5407(a)]. Then, and in other cases to which Prob. Code § 5407(a) does not apply, the financial institution must make payment to the minor in accordance with the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act (Prob. Code § 3900 et seq.) or with the Probate Code provisions governing money or property of a minor (Prob. Code § 3400 et seq.) [Prob. Code § 5407(b); see also Ch. 278, Gifts and Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors].

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.271

§ 95.271 Fiduciary Accounts

[1] In General

Regular fiduciary and trust accounts maintained in connection with relationships that are established other than by the deposit agreement and accounts established for the deposit of funds of the estate of a ward, conservatee, or decedent are not subject to the Multiple-Party Accounts Law [see § 95.270], but are subject to various statutes and case law relating to the fiduciary's standard of care [Prob. Code § 5122(b)(3), (4)]. The particular standards of care are discussed in various chapters, such as Ch. 103, Brokers ; Ch. 290D, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Actions Against Guardians, Conservators, and Sureties ; Ch. 401, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners and Partnership ; Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution ; Ch. 427, Principal and Agent ; Ch. 458B, Probate: Suspension, Removal, or Resignation ,; and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts . Division 3 of the Commercial Code sets forth the rules for determining when a person who has taken a negotiable instrument from a fiduciary has notice of a breach of fiduciary duty that occurs as result of the transaction with the fiduciary [see Com. Code § 3307; Official Comment 1 to U.C.C § 3-307 (1990); see also § 95.463[3]].

The Multiple-Party Accounts Law applies to a Totten trust account or an account in the name of one or more parties as trustee for one or more other persons if the financial institution has no other or further notice in writing that the account is not a Totten trust account as defined in Prob. Code § 80 [Prob. Code § 5406; see also Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts]. When an account is not opened in accordance with a Totten trust agreement but is opened in the name of a person described by some fiduciary title, such as trustee, the bank is charged with notice that the funds are received in a fiduciary capacity. However, the bank is not liable for misappropriation of trust funds by the trustee unless it has actual or constructive knowledge of any misappropriation [Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 556, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 ; see Dodd v. Citizens Bank of Costa Mesa (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1624, 1627-1628, 272 Cal. Rptr. 623 (no duty owing by bank to company for whom payroll-processing firm opened "payroll trust account"; payroll-processing firm, not other company, as bank's customer within meaning of former Com. Code § 4104(e); now see Com. Code § 4104(a)(5))]. An adverse claimant of deposited funds is required to undertake the procedures set forth in Fin. Code § 952 before the bank may be subject to liability based on the depositor's misappropriation [see § 95.292]. If an account is opened in the name of coexecutors, the standard of care required of the depository institution, in light of statutory requirements regarding the concurrence of corepresentatives, requires the institution to set up the account contract so that both signatures musppear on checks and withdrawals; the institution's failure to do so renders it liable for misappropriations by one representative [Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 809-813, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 (decided under former Prob. Code § 570; now see Prob. Code § 9630)].

Creation of a trust in personalty does not require a writing, but may be done orally [Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 510, 286 P.2d 399 (oral trust relating to insurance proceeds)].

For discussion and forms for use in actions involving trusts, see Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts .

[2] Fiduciary Accounts in Associations

Any association may accept fiduciary savings accounts in the name of any administrator, executor, custodian, conservator, guardian, trustee, or other fiduciary for a named beneficiary or beneficiaries [Fin. Code § 6850]. The withdrawal value of a fiduciary account, and interest on it, or other rights relating to it, may be paid or delivered, in whole or in part to the fiduciary without regard to any notice to the contrary as long as the fiduciary is living [Fin. Code § 6851(a); but see Fin. Code § 6661(a) (does not include any express exception for a Fin. Code § 6851(a) situation; discussed in § 95.292)]. The payment or delivery to the fiduciary or a receipt or acquittance signed by a fiduciary to whom payment or delivery of rights is made is a sufficient release of an association for the payment or delivery [Fin. Code § 6851(b)].

Whenever a person holding an account in a fiduciary capacity dies and written notice of the revocation or termination of the fiduciary relationship has not been given to an association and the association has no written notice of any other disposition of the beneficial estate, the withdrawal value of the account, and interest on it, or other rights relating to it, may, at the option of an association, be paid or delivered, in whole or in part, to the beneficiary or beneficiaries [Fin. Code § 6852(a)]. In the absence of written notice to the contrary an association may presume that each beneficiary of an account with two or more beneficiaries has an undivided equal beneficial interest in the account [Fin. Code § 6852(b)].

No association that pays any fiduciary, beneficiary, or designated person in accordance with Fin Code §§ 6850-6856 or the California Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.) may, because of that payment, become liable for any estate, inheritance, or succession taxes due to the state [Fin. Code § 6855].

§ 95.290 Charges for Checks Drawn on Insufficient Funds

The checking account signature card constitutes a contract, albeit a contract of adhesion, between the bank and its depositor. The signature card authorizes the bank to impose charges for checks drawn on insufficient funds (hereinafter NSF checks and NSF charges). The fact that it empowers the bank to unilaterally determine and vary the amount of the NSF charges does not make the contract illusory but imposes on the bank the obligation of good faith and fair dealing. The bank's conduct in setting and varying the NSF charges must be objectively reasonable [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 923-924, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] . A $6 NSF charge compared with a $0.30 or a $1 actual cost to process an NSF check is not automatically so unconscionable as to be unenforceable, but it does state a cause of action and requires factual evaluation. Factors generally considered in determining whether a charge is reasonable include the following [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 926-929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 ; see Civ. Code § 1670.5; Rebney v. Wells Fargo Bank (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 269 Cal. Rptr. 844 (upholding class settlements, albeit from attackers who lacked standing, that provided for fair procedures rather than refunds)]:

- The basis and justification for the charge;
- The price being paid by other similarly situated consumers in similar transactions;
- The inconvenience imposed on the bank;
- The true value of the service;
- Depositors' absence of meaningful choice; and
- Whether or not deceptive practices are involved.

Although it is unlikely that a court would find a price set by a freely competitive market unconscionable, the market price set by an oligopoly is not immune from scrutiny [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 927, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] . Although a remote possibility for conflict exists, federal banking laws and regulations have not preempted the area of NSF charges. Nor have they authorized unconscionable charges or foreclosed a state court's inquiry into whether the charge is unconscionable [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 932-944, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] .

If the signature card contract involved does not contain a promise by the depositor to refrain from writing NSF checks, writing an NSF check is not a breach of contract. The NFS charge is therefore not a penalty nor violative of Civ. Code §§ 1670-1671 [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 930-932, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 (disagreeing with interpretation of Hoffman v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 964, 968-969, 176 Cal. Rptr. 14 , Shapiro v. United California Bank (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 256, 262, 184 Cal. Rptr. 34 , and Com. Code § 4401 that writing of NSF check is always application for credit)].

If the signature card itself or the manner in which it is presented to the depositor is deceptive or misleading, the depositor has a cause of action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 for unfair competition. Injunctive relief can be awarded without a showing that the plaintiff was actually misled if the practice is such that members of the public are likely to be deceived [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] . No cause of action for unfair competition exists, however, on account of the bank's arbitrary waiver of NSF charges for some preferred customers even though the waiver results in shifting the processing costs to other depositors [Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 930, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503] .

In accordance with the implied contract existing between a financial institution and its depositor, no bank, savings association, credit union, or other financial institution operating in California that maintains and services demand deposit accounts and NOW (negotiable order of withdrawal) accounts may release any funds from those accounts to any person who is not the account holder, unless the funds are released pursuant to the depositor's authorization or in accordance with the law (for example, escheat of unclaimed deposits). This prohibition does not apply to any setoff for a debt claimed to be owed to a bank, savings association, credit union, or other financial institution by a customer [Fin. Code § 40501; see 12 U.S.C. § 1832(a) (defining "NOW accounts"); but cf. 12 C.F.R. § 204.2(b)(3)(ii)(A) (NOW accounts excluded from definition of demand deposits for calculation of reserve requirements)].

§ 95.292 Adverse Claims to Deposit or Savings Account

Notice of an adverse claim to a deposit (in the case of a bank) or a savings account (in the case of an association) must be disregarded by the bank or association without liability subject to the following rules:

(1) An adverse claimant may deliver to the bank or association at the office at which the deposit or account is carried, or at which the property is held, his or her affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) stating that of his or her own knowledge the person to whose credit the deposit stands is a fiduciary for the adverse claimant, and that the adverse claimant has reason to believe the fiduciary is about to misappropriate the deposit or account or the property, and stating the facts on which that claim of fiduciary relationship and that belief are founded. If such a notice of an adverse claim is made, the bank or association must refuse payment of the deposit in the case of a bank, or refuse to pay withdrawals or interest on the account in the case of an association, for a period of not more than three court days (including the date of delivery) from the date that the bank or association received the adverse claimant's affidavit. The bank or association may refuse such payments without liability on its part and without liability for the sufficiency or truth of the facts alleged in the affidavit [Fin. Code §§ 952(a) (banks), 6661(a) (associations)].

(2) If at any time, whether before or after or in the absence of the filing of an affidavit [see Fin. Code §§ 952(a), 6661(a), discussed in (1), above], the adverse claimant procures and serves on the bank or association, at the office at which the deposit or account is carried, a restraining order, injunction, or other appropriate order against the bank or association from a court of competent jurisdiction in an action in which the adverse claimant and all persons in whose names the deposit or account stands or for whose account the property is held are parties, the bank or association is required to comply with the order or injunction without liability on its part [Fin. Code §§ 952(b) (banks), 6661(b) (associations)].

The foregoing rules apply even though the name of the person appearing on the bank's or association's books to whose credit the deposit or account stands or for whose account the property is held is modified by a qualifying or descriptive term such as "agent," "trustee," or other word or phrase indicating that the person may, in the case of a bank, not be the owner in his or her own right of the deposit or property or, in the case of an association, hold the account or property in a fiduciary capacity [Fin. Code §§ 952(c) (banks), 6661(c) (associations)].

Nothing in the Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.) limits the applicability of Fin. Code §§ 952 or 6661 [Fin. Code §§ 952(d), 6661(d); see discussion of Multiple-Party Accounts Law in § 95.270].

With regard to adverse claims under Fin. Code § 952, a person who is authorized to make withdrawals from the account is not an adverse claimant [AARTS Productions, Inc. v. Crocker National Bank (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1068-1069, 225 Cal. Rptr. 203] . When several people are authorized by the signature card to make withdrawals, a notice from one of them revoking the authority of another to make withdrawals is governed by Fin. Code § 953. Thus, the formalities of Fin. Code § 952 are not required and the bank may refuse to honor checks drawn by the signatory described in the other signatory's notice without liability for wrongful dishonor [AARTS Productions, Inc. v. Crocker National Bank (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1067-1069, 225 Cal. Rptr. 203] . The account at issue in AARTS Productions, Inc. was one of an unincorporated association. If the account in question is governed by the Multiple-Party Accounts Law, Prob. Code § 5405(c) [see § 95.270[9][f]] rather than Fin. Code § 953 would govern the bank's response to notices from parties to the account [see Prob. Code § 5122(b) (accounts excluded from Multiple-Party Accounts Law)]. Still, if there is an adverse claimant within the meaning of Fin. Code § 952, that section would apply even if the account were also governed by the Multiple-Party Account Law [see Fin. Code § 952(d)].

§ 95.293 Action to Recover Deposit

[1] Accrual

An action to recover the amount of a bank deposit is in the nature of an action to recover on a debt. The action accrues when the bank has refused the depositor's demand for payment or has otherwise denied liability for the amount in question [Union Tool Co. v. Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. (1923) 192 Cal. 40, 53, 218 P. 424] .

[2] Statute of Limitations

There is no period of limitation that applies to actions brought to recover money or other property deposited with any bank except as to institutions that become insolvent and are in the process of liquidation, in which case the statute of limitations commences to run from the beginning of the liquidation process [Code Civ. Proc. § 348].

Nevertheless, when a statement of account has been rendered by a bank to a depositor accompanied by vouchers, if any, which are the basis for debit entries in the account, the account is deemed finally adjusted and settled and its correctness is conclusively presumed after the period of four years from the date of its rendition in the event no objection to the statement has been made by the depositor. The depositor thereafter is barred from questioning the account's correctness for any cause [Fin. Code § 861].

When the cause of action has arisen in another state, or in a foreign country, and by the laws of that state or country an action cannot be maintained there against the defendant by reason of the lapse of time, the action cannot be maintained against the defendant in California, except by a plaintiff who was a citizen of California at the time the cause of action accrued and who has held the cause of action from the time it accrued [Code Civ. Proc. § 361; Cossman v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 370, 378, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376] . Whether a plaintiff can invoke the exception depends on when, under California law, the cause of action accrued [Lien Huynh v. Chase Manhattan Bank (9th Cir. 2006) 465 F.3d 992, 998] . See § 95.293[1] regarding accrual of the cause of action.

§ 95.294 Lien and Setoff Rights

A bank or savings and loan association has a general lien, dependent on possession, on all property in its hands belonging to a customer for the balance due to it from the customer in the course of business [Civ. Code § 3054(a)]. By virtue of this lien, a bank has the right to apply the amount of a deposit as credit on a promissory note against the depositor, thereby discharging the lien and balancing the account [Arnold v. San Ramon Valley Bank (1921) 184 Cal. 632, 635, 194 P. 1012] . Funds that are exempt by statute [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 704.010 et seq. (exempt property article)], retain their exempt status when deposited in a bank account and therefore are not subject to the bank's setoff rights under Civ. Code § 3054 [Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 352, 357, 367, 113 Cal. Rptr. 449, 521 P.2d 441] .

The exercise of a lien on deposit accounts must comply with setoff requirements [Civ. Code § 3054(b); see Fin. Code §§ 864 (banks), 6660 (savings and loan associations)]. These requirements provide that a bank or association may not exercise any setoff for a debt claimed to be owed by a customer to the bank or association if it would result in an aggregate balance of less than $1,000 as shown on the records of the bank or association for all accounts maintained by the customer with the bank or association or any of its branches [Fin. Code §§ 864(b) (banks), 6660(b) (associations)]. These setoff provisions also address notice and response requirements [see Fin. Code §§ 864(c), (d) (banks), 6660(c), (d) (associations)] as well as limitations and exemptions applicable to rights of setoff [see Fin. Code §§ 864(e)-(h) (banks), 6660(e)-(h) (associations)].

Fin. Code § 864 defines a "debt" as an interest-bearing obligation or an obligation which by its terms is payable in installments, which has not been reduced to judgment, arising from an extension of credit to a natural person primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [see Fin. Code § 864(a)(2)]. With respect to a credit card, an "extension of credit" occurs when the bank issues the card and it is at that point that the determination is made whether the credit is primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. For example, in a case in which a bank exercised a right of setoff for amounts due on a business credit card which had been used for personal expenditures, the court of appeal held that since the primary purpose of a business card is commercial, a bank may set off the debts incurred in its use without compliance with Fin. Code § 864(b) [Martin v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 489, 499-500, 110 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 653 (stating that cardholder may not apply for and receive business credit card, but then use it for personal purposes and expect to receive consumer protection)].

Fin. Code § 864 expressly excludes overdrafts and bank charges from the statute's definition of debt [Fin. Code § 864(a)(2)]. Therefore, a bank's practice of recouping overdrafts and extracting insufficient-funds fees from the customer's overdrawn account is permissible. In light of the unequivocal statement in § 864 that overdrafts and bank charges are not debts, they are not subject to the statute's limitations on a bank's right of setoff [Miller v. Bank of America (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 630, 640-641, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31, 207 P.3d 531 (noting also that setoff for overdraft and related fee would not implicate independent debt that was at issue in Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank, discussed above; therefore, presence of exempt funds in customer's account would not preclude setoff for overdraft and related fee)].

For a sample notice of setoff and response form in accordance with Fin. Code §§ 864 (banks) and 6660 (associations), see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.345 (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the enforcement of liens generally, see Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences .

A financial institution's right of setoff is based on equitable principles and not on Civ. Code § 3054. That is, a setoff against a general deposit account is considered an exercise of the equitable right of setoff, rather than the statutory lien right [see Security Pacific National Bank v. Wozab (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 991, 996 n.3, 275 Cal. Rptr. 201, 800 P.2d 557 ; Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 352, 357-358, 113 Cal. Rptr. 449, 521 P.2d 441 ; Aplanalp v. Forte (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 609, 615, 275 Cal. Rptr. 144 (bank's application of funds from checking account to pay delinquencies on note secured by deed of trust is an exercise of its right of equitable setoff, not its statutory banker's lien)].

Beginning July 1, 2006, a supervised financial institution may not issue a consumer deposit account number to a customer, if that account number was previously held by another customer of the institution, until at least three years have passed since the account of the other customer was closed. "Consumer deposit account number" means an account number that the financial institution uses to identify a natural person's checking account or share draft account established primarily for personal, family, or household purposes and that includes the routing number of that institution that is used to identify the institution responsible for the payment of negotiable instruments [Fin. Code § 4100].

§ 95.310 Governing Law

Division 4 of the Commercial Code (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.) governs bank deposits and collections. Division 3 of the Commercial Code (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.), which is discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments , governs negotiable instruments, including checks and their endorsement, transfer, or negotiation, and parties' obligations with respect to negotiable instruments. In case of a conflict between Division 3 and Division 4, Division 4 governs [Com. Code §§ 3102(b), 4102(a)]. If there is no specific provision in Division 4 governing the situation, Division 3 governs [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-102 (1990)].

The relationship between a represented person and his or her fiduciary and entities dealing with the fiduciary with respect to negotiable instruments is governed by Com. Code § 3307 and Prob. Code § 18100.

Com. Code § 3312 governs claims relating to lost, stolen, or destroyed cashier's, teller's, and certified checks. Com. Code § 3411 governs damages recoverable against a bank for failure to pay a cashier's, teller's, or certified check.

Conversion of negotiable instruments is governed by Com. Code § 3420.

The federal Expedited Funds Availability Act (12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.) and regulations promulgated under it (Regulation CC of the Federal Reserve Board, 12 C.F.R. Part 229) establish rules for collection and return of checks between banks. The provisions of Division 4 may be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 4103(a)]. Federal Reserve regulations have the effect of agreements, whether or not specifically assented to by the parties interested in the items concerned [Com. Code § 4103(b)]. Thus, Regulation CC supersedes some provisions of Division 4 [see, e.g., Com. Code § 4214(b); Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-102 (1990); Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 4-214 (1990) (12 C.F.R. § 229.31 preempts subsection (b) with respect to checks)].

Electronic fund transfers by consumers [see § 95.311[3]], errors in their transmission and execution, and liability for unauthorized transfers are not governed by Division 4 but by the Electronic Fund Transfer Act (15 U.S.C. § 1693 et seq.), which is discussed in California Legal Forms, Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers (Matthew Bender). That chapter contains a form of notice of error from the consumer to the financial institution.

Division 11 of the California Commercial Code (Com. Code § 11101 et seq.), which is substantially similar to Division 4A of the Uniform Commercial Code, governs funds transfers pursuant to payment orders, as defined therein, transmitted on or after January 1, 1991. Division 11 is discussed in detail in 95.340 et seq.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Check Collections

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.311

§ 95.311 Definitions

[1] "Check" as "Item"

An "item" within the meaning of Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq) is an instrument or a promise or order to pay money handled by a bank for collection or payment, except a payment order governed by Division 11 (Com. Code § 11101 et seq.; see § 95.340) or a credit or debit card slip [Com. Code § 4104(a)(9); see Com. Code § 3104(a) (unconditional order or promise to pay sum certain as negotiable instrument); see also § 95.311[3]].

A "check" is (1) a draft, other than a documentary draft, payable on demand and drawn on a bank, (2) a cashier's or teller's check, or (3) a demand draft [Com. Code § 3104(f); see Com. Code § 3104(g), (h), (k) ("cashier's check," "teller's check," and "demand draft" defined)]. Thus, "item" is broader than "check." Division 4 refers mostly to "items." The distinction between "items" and "checks" is important when Regulation CC (12 C.F.R. Part 229) varies the provision of Division 4 with respect to checks [see, e.g., Com. Code § 4214(b); Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 4-214 (1990) (12 C.F.R. § 229.31 preempts subsection (b) with respect to checks)].

[2] "Customer"

A "customer" within the meaning of Division 4 is a person having an account with a bank or for whom a bank has agreed to collect items, including a bank that maintains an account at another bank [Com. Code § 4104(a)(5)].

[3] Electronic Orders to Debit or Credit Account

A "debit card slip," which is excluded from the definition of "item" in Division 4 [see Com. Code § 4104(a)(9) (discussed under § 95.311[1])], is the documentation required by the Electronic Fund Transfer Act (15 U.S.C. § 1693 et seq.) to be generated by an electronic terminal, such as an automated teller machine, point-of-sale terminal, or cash-dispensing machine, each time a consumer initiates an electronic fund transfer (EFT) from a terminal [15 U.S.C. § 1693d(a); see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(7) (defining "electronic terminal")].

An "electronic fund transfer" is an order, instruction, or authorization from a consumer to a financial institution to debit or credit an account that is initiated through an electronic terminal, telephonic instrument, computer, or magnetic tape. The term does not include a transaction originated by check, draft, or other paper instrument. An electronic fund transfer is made through the use of what is commonly known as a debit card, used with a Personal Identification Number, called a "PIN code," rather than through the use of commercial paper [15 U.S.C. § 1693a(6); see 15 U.S.C. § 1693a(1) (definition of "accepted card or other means of access")].

A consumer whose financial institution does not satisfactorily resolve an error or unauthorized transfer may prefer to complain to the appropriate regulatory agency before initiating litigation. The responsible agencies for enforcement of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act are the following [15 U.S.C. § 1693o(a)]:

- For national banks and federal branches and federal agencies of foreign banks, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency;

- For member banks of the Federal Reserve System (other than national banks) and branches and agencies of foreign banks (other than federal branches, federal agencies, and insured state branches of foreign banks), the Federal Reserve Board;

- For banks insured by Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (other than members of the Federal Reserve System) and insured state branches of foreign banks, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;

- For savings associations the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Office of Thrift Supervision; and

- For federal credit unions, the Administrator of the National Credit Union Administration.

[4] "Good Faith"

"Good faith" means honesty in fact and the observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing [Com. Code § 1201(b)(20)].

Fair dealing is a broad term that must be defined in context. It is concerned with the fairness of conduct rather than with the care with which an act is performed. Failure to exercise ordinary care in conducting a transaction is an entirely different concept than failure to deal fairly in conducting the transaction. Both fair dealing and ordinary care are to be judged in the light of reasonable commercial standards, but the standards in each case are directed at different aspects of commercial conduct [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 3-103 (1990)].

[5] "Ordinary Care"

Division 4 adopts the definition of ordinary care set forth in Division 3 [Com. Code § 4104(c)]. "Ordinary care" in the case of a person engaged in business means observance of reasonable commercial standards prevailing in the area in which the person is located with respect to the business in which the person is engaged. In the case of a bank that takes a check for processing for collection or payment by automated means, reasonable commercial standards do not require the bank to examine the check if the failure to examine does not violate the bank's prescribed procedures and the bank's procedures do not vary unreasonably fromgeneral banking usage not disapproved by Division 3 or Division 4 [Com. Code § 3103(a)(7)].

Commercially reasonable standards are also a component of "good faith" (discussed in § 95.311[4]) [see Com. Code § 1201(b)(20)].

The second sentence of Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) is intended to reflect changes in Com. Code § 4406, all occasioned by technological advances in the check collection process [see Official Comment 5 to UCC § 3-103 (1990); see also Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-406 (1990)]. The definition of "ordinary care" in Com. Code § 3103 is declaratory of the meaning of "ordinary care" in former Com. Code § 4406 [see Story Road Flea Market, Inc. v. Wells Fargo Bank (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1733, 1741-1742, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524] .

§ 95.312 Collection Process and Status of Banks Involved in Process

[1] Payor or Drawee Bank

The basic steps and procedures customarily undertaken in processing a check are as follows. First, the drawer [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(3)] issues and delivers a check to the payee. The bank on which the check is drawn and that is ordered to pay the check is known as the payor bank [Com. Code § 4105(3)], or the "drawee" [see Com. Code §§ 3103(a)(2), 4104(a)(8)]. Throughout this part, the terms "payor" and "drawee," or "payor bank" and "drawee bank," are used interchangeably when referring to situations not governed by the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act or Regulation CC.

[2] Paying Bank

Regulation CC uses the term "paying bank" to mean, among other things, the bank by which a check is payable, except in the case of a check that is payable at another bank and is sent to the other bank for payment or collection. In the latter case, the "paying bank" is also the bank at which the check is payable and to which it is sent for payment or collection [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(z)(1), (2)]. The term "paying bank" will only be used in this part when discussing rights and duties under the Expedited Funds Availability Act or Regulation CC.

When presented for payment, the paying bank reviews the checks and either honors the check by payment to the presenting bank [see 12 C.F.R. § 210.9 (payment through Federal Reserve Bank)] or dishonors the check if, for example, there are insufficient funds to cover it or there is a stop-payment order against it. If the check is dishonored, the paying bank can return the check and notice of nonpayment directly to the depositary bank or to any returning bank as long as they will arrive at the depositary bank within the times required by 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.30(a), (c) and 229.33(a) [12 C.F.R. §§ 229.30, 229.33].

[3] Depositary Bank

The payee may present the check directly to the payor bank for payment or may deposit the check to the bank with which he or she maintains an account. The bank at which the check is deposited is referred to as the "depositary bank," which means the first bank to take a check, other than one presented for immediate payment over the counter, even though it is also the payor bank [Com. Code § 4105(2)].

If the check is cashed over the counter at the drawee, the drawee charges the drawer's account [see Com. Code §§ 4214, 4215, 4401(a)]. If the check was deposited to an account at a depositary bank, the depositary bank takes the check for collection, gives a provisional credit to the payee's account [see Com. Code § 4201(a)], processes the check, and sends it directly or through an intermediary bank or clearinghouse for ultimate presentment to the payor bank.

[4] Collecting Bank; Intermediary Bank; Presenting Bank

Any bank handling the check for collection except the payor bank is a "collecting bank" [Com. Code § 4105(5)]. Any banks to which a check is transferred in the course of collection, except the depositary or payor bank, are "intermediary banks" [Com. Code § 4105(4)]. Every bank that presents a check, except the payor bank, can properly be referred to as a "presenting bank" [Com. Code § 4105(6)].

In the forward collection process, each depositary and collecting bank "settles" with the prior bank on receipt of the check. Under Regulation CC, settlements between banks for the forward collection of a check are final when made [12 C.F.R. § 229.36(d)]. Under the Commercial Code, settlements are only provisional until the payor bank has determined that the check is properly payable from the account on which it is drawn or until, by lapse of time, the payor bank fails to return the check or give notice of dishonor [Com. Code §§ 4214, 4215, 4301; Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 4-215 (1990)].

[5] Returning Bank

Under Regulation CC, a "returning bank" is a bank (other than the paying bank or depositary bank) handling a returned check or notice in lieu of return. A "returning bank" is also a collecting bank for purposes of Com. Code § 4202(b), governing the bank's duty of prompt return [12 C.F.R. § 229.2(cc)].

Each returning bank settles with the bank sending a returned check to it. That settlement is final when made under Regulation CC [12 C.F.R. § 229.31(c)]. Returning banks are also obligated to return dishonored items as within the times established by 12 C.F.R. § 229.31(a).

§ 95.313 Determining Applicable Law

[1] By Bank's Location

A bank's liability for action or nonaction with respect to an item handled by it for purposes of presentment, payment, or collection is governed by the law of the place where the bank is located [Com. Code § 4102(b)].

In the case of action or nonaction by or at a branch or separate office of a bank, its liability is governed by the law of the place where the branch or separate office is located [Com. Code § 4102(b)].

[2] Branch as Separate Bank

A branch or separate office of a bank is a separate bank for the purpose of computing the time within which and determining the place at or to which action may be taken or notice or orders must be given under Division 3 (Com. Code § 3101 et seq.) or Division 4 (Com. Code § 4101 et seq.) [Com. Code § 4107]. This provision, along with Com. Code §§ 4303(a) (bank's cutoff hours, discussed in § 95.322[1]) and 4108 (cutoff hour for determining balances, discussed in § 95.456[5]), determines whether a stop-payment notice (Com. Code § 4403) is received in time to require the drawee to dishonor a check, to revoke any provisional settlement made to a presenting bank, or to reverse any charge made to the drawer's account to pay a check [see, e.g., Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4-107 (1990)].

Amendments enacted in 1992 altered former Com. Code §§ 4105 and 4106 by (1) deleting the last clause of former Com. Code § 4106 (now see Com. Code § 4107), which specified that receipt of a notice or order by one branch did not prevent another branch or office from being a holder in due course of a item, and (2) deleting former Com. Code § 4105(g), which also specified that, for purposes of the definitions of the various statutes governing banks, each branch or office of a bank is a separate bank [see Stats. 1992, ch. 914]. Thus, the 1990 version of the Uniform Commercial Code does not contain an absolute rule regarding the status of a separate branch office in all situations. The drafters' intent was to require local courts to make case-by-case determinations that seem fair and appropriate given the variations in operating practices among banks [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-107 (1990)]. Judicial interpretation should avoid illogical or unreasonable results. For example, in the case of stop-payment orders, it would be unfair to require the drawee to reverse a charge to the drawer's account if it had become obligated to pay the check or settlement had become final under Com. Code § 4301 (discussed under § 95.331[1]) [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4-107 (1990)].

The current version of Com. Code § 4107 may alter the results expected from rulings in earlier California cases such as Lawrence v. Bank of America (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 431, 434-437, 209 Cal. Rptr. 541 (discussed under § 95.333[4]). Lawrence did not consider allegations that the branch that cashed the checks was able to, and did, communicate by computer with the branch on which the checks were drawn and had actually charged the drawer's account at the time it paid the checks over the counter.

Commentary to Com. Code § 4107 specifies that the determination of the branches' status must take into account whether receipt of a stop-payment notice at one branch should be notice to other branches of the same bank so as to impair the right of that branch to become a holder in due course. In some circumstances, ordinary care requires the branch at which the stop-payment order is received to communicate that notice or order to another branch of the bank. In those cases, the notice or order would be effective at the proper branch from the time it was received or should have been received [see Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-107 (1990)].

§ 95.314 Disclaimers and Agreements or Regulations Varying Division 4 Provisions

Although parties to an item presented for collection pursuant to Division 4 may agree as to the effect of those provisions, the parties to the agreement cannot disclaim a bank's responsibility for lack of good faith or failure to exercise due care, nor may a bank limit the amount of damages it must pay for such lack or failure. Nevertheless, the parties' agreement may establish the standards by which the bank's responsibility is to be measured, as long as those standards are not manifestly unreasonable [Com. Code § 4103(a)]. For discussion of the validity of exculpatory clauses in general, see Ch. 380, Negligence . For discussion and a form for an affirmative defense relating to the illegality of a contract for being contrary to public policy, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

Between customers and between banks, federal reserve regulations, operating circulars, and opinion ("no action") letters vary the rules established by Division 4. The customer's specific assent is not necessary, nor is that of any other party, to an item handled [Com. Code § 4103(b), (c); see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-103 (1990)].

The measure of damages for failure to exercise ordinary care in handling an item is the amount of the item reduced by an amount that could not have been realized by the exercise of ordinary care. If the bank acted in bad faith, the customer also may recover any other damages he, she, or it suffered as a proximate consequence [Com. Code § 4103(e)].

§ 95.316 Drawee's Authority Limited to Properly Payable Items

[1] Contractual Duty

When a bank receives deposits, it has an implied contract with the depositor to discharge the indebtedness thus created by honoring checks drawn on the bank. The terms of this contract are set forth in Com. Code § 4401, which provides that a bank may charge a customer's account for items that are properly payable from the account, even though the charge creates an overdraft [Com. Code §§ 4401(a), 4402; see also § 95.321]. An item is properly payable if it is authorized by the customer and is in accordance with any agreement between the customer and the bank [Com. Code § 4401(a); Campbell v. Bank of America (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 1427, 235 Cal. Rptr. 906 ; Joffe v. United California Bank (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 541, 554-555, 190 Cal. Rptr. 443] . An item containing a forged drawer's signature or a forged endorsement is not properly payable [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-401 (1990); see § 95.316[2]].

The original and fundamental idea and purpose of checks is that the drawer has funds or effects in the hands of the drawee bank and orders the drawee to pay all or part of this debt or deposit to the payee [Torrance N. Bk. v. Enesco F. Credit Union (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 316, 320, 285 P.2d 737] . Nevertheless, a check does not of itself operate as an assignment of any funds in the hands of the drawee available for its payment, and the drawee is not liable on the instrument until the drawee accepts it [Com. Code § 3408; Arnold v. San Ramon Valley Bank (1921) 184 Cal. 632, 635, 194 P. 1012 ; Hansen v. Bank of America (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303-304, 225 P.2d 665] .

[2] Payment on Forged Drawer's Signature or Endorsement

A drawee bank is liable for breach of this primary contractual duty if it pays a check on which the drawer's signature is unauthorized or forged. Absent negligence or misleading conduct on the part of the drawer, no degree of care on the part of the drawee bank will excuse it from liability for payment of a check without its depositor's proper signature as drawer. The drawee bank is charged with knowledge of its depositor's signature [Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 321, 139 P.2d 1 ; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804-805, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883 ; see § 95.450 for form of complaint for recovery by drawer of checks paid without proper drawer's signature].

Checks with a forged or missing endorsement also are not properly payable by the drawee bank; therefore, a drawee bank may not charge a customer's account for them [Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 376-377, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 ; Joffe v. United California Bank (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 541, 554, 190 Cal. Rptr. 443 ; see § 95.450 for form of complaint for recovery by drawer of checks paid without properendorsement; see also § 95.451[7] regarding allocation of loss for forged endorsement].

For further discussion regarding forged drawer's signature or forged endorsements, see § 95.327.

[3] Payment From Corporate Account

When a corporation maintains a deposit account, the bank's duties may also be owed to the individual principals of the corporation [see, e.g., American Nat. Bank v. Stanfill (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1098-1101, 252 Cal. Rptr. 861 (unauthorized withdrawals and forged endorsements); Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 956, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848 (wrongful dishonor)]. Generally, the "owners" of a corporate account, or its agents, are its officers [see Com. Code § 3110(c)(1), (2)(B), (C)]. If more than one signature is required on checks, a check with less than the required number of signatures as maker is not properly payable from the account [Com. Code § 3403(b); American Nat. Bank v. Stanfill (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1100-1101, 252 Cal. Rptr. 861 ; see also § 95.456[4] for discussion of Commercial Code commentary regarding causes of action by principals of business entity depositors].

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.317

§ 95.317 Drawee's Negligence

No amount of care on the part of the drawee excuses it from liability for paying a check without its depositor's authorized signature, under Com. Code § 4401(a) [Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 321, 139 P.2d 1 ; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804-805, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883] .

The preclusion of Com. Code § 4406(f) acts like a one-year statute of limitations for actions based on a forged drawer's signature and altered ("raised") checks that were returned to the drawer with the statement, payment of which the drawer failed to report within a reasonable time, if the drawer's failure to report the unauthorized signature or alteration was in fact the cause of the loss [see Com. Code § 4406; Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1119, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (reiterating that Com. Code § 4406 is not per se statute of limitation but rather issue-preclusion statute); see also § 95.455 (affirmative defense based on drawer's negligence in leaving incompleted, signed checks lying about)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c) also establishes a one-year limitation period for an action by a depositor against a bank that paid a forged or raised check or one that bears a forged or unauthorized endorsement [see also § 95.450[4]].

The drawee's negligence also comes into play if it seeks to defend on the ground of the drawer's negligence [see Com. Code §§ 3404-3406; see §§ 95.453 -95.455].

A drawee bank that in good faith pays a holder may charge the indicated account of the customer according to either (1) the original terms of the altered item or (2) the terms of the completed item, even though the bank knows the item has been completed, unless the bank has notice that the completion was improper [Com. Code § 4401(d)].

Com. Code § 4401(d) reflects Com. Code § 3407(c) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments), which allows a payor bank or drawee that pays a fraudulently altered instrument in good faith and without notice of the alteration to enforce the instrument according to its original terms or, in the case of an incomplete instrument altered by unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed. Com. Code § 4401(d) follows the rules stated in Com. Code § 3407(c) by allowing the bank to enforce rights with respect to an altered item by charging its customer's account [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 4-401 (1990)], again placing the loss on the person best able to have avoided it.

For a form for an affirmative defense based on the drawer's failure to exercise ordinary care that contributed to the alteration or unauthorized completion of a check, see § 95.455.

§ 95.319 Postdated Checks

A drawee bank may charge a customer's account to pay a check that is otherwise properly payable from the account, even though payment was made before the date of the check, unless the customer has given notice to the bank of the postdating that describes the check with reasonable certainty [Com. Code § 4401(c)]. The notice is effective for the period stated in Com. Code § 4403(b) (which is discussed under § 95.322[2]). That period is six months, but the notice lapses after 14 calendar days if the original notice was oral and was not confirmed in writing during the 14-day period [see also Official Comment 6 to U.C.C. § 4-403 (1990), discussed in § 95.322[2]]. The bank must receive the notice not to pay a postdated check in sufficient time and in such a manner as to afford the bank a reasonable opportunity to act on it before the bank takes any action with respect to the check described in Com. Code § 4303, which addresses the bank's "cutoff hour" for "unposting" items subject to orders, notices, levies, or setoff [Com. Code § 4401(c)]. Com. Code § 4303 is discussed in § 95.322[1].

If a bank charges a customer's account to pay a postdated check before the date stated in the notice of postdating, the bank is liable for damages for the loss resulting from its act. The loss may include damages for dishonor of subsequent items under Com. Code § 4402 [Com. Code § 4401(c)].

A business may not request or require a postdated check without first advising the consumer, in writing, that the check can be cashedimmediately unless the consumer files the order not to pay postdated check with his or her bank. The business does not have to give this notice to the consumer if the business does not present the check for collection until on or after its date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17538.6(a), (b)].

Com. Code § 4401(c) was added because the automated check collection system cannot accommodate postdated checks. Com. Code § 4401(c) does not purport to regulate fees that banks charge their customers for implementing a notice of postdating, but fees must be set in accordance with the general duty of good faith and fair dealing [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 4-401 (1990); see also Com. Code § 1304; Perdue v. Crocker National Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 923-929, 216 Cal. Rptr. 345, 702 P.2d 503 (unconscionability)].

A drawee bank is under no obligation to a customer having a checking account to pay a check, other than a certified check, that is presented more than six months after its date, but it may charge its customer's account for a payment made thereafter in good faith [Com. Code § 4404; see Com. Code § 1201(b)(20) (discussed in § 95.311[4])].

The exception for certified checks reflects the fact that, once certified, they are the primary obligation of the certifying bank [see Com. Code §§ 3409, 3413] and the presumption that the customer's account was charged when the check was certified [Official Comment to UCC § 4-404 (1990)].

§ 95.321 Overdrafts

Ordinarily, a drawee bank is not obligated or expected to honor a check for any amount greater than the deposit against which it is drawn [Torrance N. Bk. v. Enesco F. Credit Union (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 316, 320-321, 285 P.2d 737] . Unless there is an agreement between the bank and its customer by which the bank agrees to pay overdrafts, the bank may dishonor any item that creates an overdraft [Com. Code § 4402(a)]. On the other hand, the bank also has discretion to charge against the customer's account to pay a check that is otherwise properly payable from that account even though the charge creates an overdraft [Com. Code § 4401(a)].

The statutes governing obligations of banks and their depositors are usually incorporated into the signature card agreement and become part of the contract between the parties. Usually, the contract does not contain a promise by the depositor to refrain from writing checks drawn on insufficient funds, and an overdraft check is treated by the bank as an application for credit [Shapiro v. United California Bank (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 256, 262, 184 Cal. Rptr. 34 ; Hoffman v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 964, 968-969, 176 Cal. Rptr. 14] . An overdraft by a bank amounts to a loan to the depositor, and the bank is entitled to recover the amount of the overdraft from the customer [Bank of Santa Ana v. Molina (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 617, 81 Cal. Rptr. 885] . Nevertheless, if there is more than one customer who is authorized to draw on the account, a customer who did not sign the check that created the overdraft is not liable for it unless he or she benefited from the proceeds of the check [Com. Code § 4401(b)].

If an overdraft is made against an attorney trust account, the bank must report the overdraft to the State Bar [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6091.1, 6091.2; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 6211(a), (b) (attorney is required to maintain interest-bearing demand trust account)].

§ 95.322 Stop-Payment Orders

[1] Availability and Required Notice

A customer, or any person authorized to draw on the account if there is more than one person, may stop payment of any item drawn on the customer's account or may close the account by an order to the drawee bank that describes the item or account with reasonable certainty. The order must be received at a time and in a manner that affords the bank a reasonable opportunity to act on it before any action by the bank with respect to the item described in Com. Code § 4303 [Com. Code § 4403(a)].

A bank's obligation to abide by any knowledge, notice, stop-payment order, or legal process served on it, and its right to exercise setoff, expires after the earliest of the following periods [Com. Code § 4303(a); but see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 4-303 (1990) (effect of customer's bankruptcy is governed by 12 U.S.C. § 542(c); Marin v. England (1966) 385 U.S. 99, 101-103, 87 S. Ct. 274, 17 L. Ed. 2d 197)]:

- The bank accepts or certifies the check;

- The bank pays the check in cash;

- The bank settles for the item without having the right to revoke settlement under statute, clearing house rule, or agreement;

- The bank becomes accountable for the amount of the item under Com. Code § 4302, which deals with the bank's responsibility for return of items, sometimes referred to as its "midnight deadline"; or

- With respect to checks, a cutoff hour no earlier that one hour after the opening of the next banking day after the banking day on which the bank received the check and no later than the close of that next banking day or, if no cutoff hour is fixed, the close of the next banking day after the banking day on which the bank received the check.

Com. Code § 4303(a)(5) gives a bank the opportunity to extend, beyond the period previously allowed, the time within which it must revoke anyprovisional settlement made for the check that is subject to the stop-payment order. The Commentary to the Uniform Commercial Code gives no indication whether it is permissible for a bank to establish one cutoff hour for stop-payment notices and another for exercise of setoff or other types of notices and orders.

In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the stop-payment notice must provide sufficient information to allow the bank, under technology then existing, to identify the item with reasonable certainty [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4-403 (1990)].

If the signature of more than one person is required to draw on an account, any of these persons may stop payment or close the account [Com. Code § 4403(a)]. If the customer is a corporation that requires checks drawn on its account to be signed by more than one person, any of those persons may stop payment on a check [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4-403 (1990)]. In addition, since January 1, 1993, a stop-payment order may be issued by any person claiming an interest in an account of a deceased drawer [see Com. Code § 4405(b)].

There are some checks, such as certified checks and cashier's checks, on which the customer or purchaser is not entitled to stop payment [see Com. Code § 3411 (discussed in § 95.465)].

[2] Duration of Effectiveness

Until January 1, 1993, a stop-payment order was not effective unless it was in writing [see former Com. Code § 4403(1)]. Under current law, an oral stop-payment order is effective for 14 calendar days, and a written order is effective for six months. An oral stop-payment order must be confirmed in writing within the 14-day period to become effective for the six-month period. If an oral order is so confirmed, the six-month period dates from the giving of the oral order [Com. Code § 4403(b); Official Comment 6 to UCC § 4-403 (1990)].

A stop-payment order may be renewed for additional six-month periods by a writing given to the bank within a period during which the stop-payment order is effective [Com. Code § 4403(b)].

[3] Liability and Burden of Establishing Loss for Payment Over Order

A payment in violation of an effective stop-payment order is an improper payment, even though it is made by mistake [Official Comment 7 to UCC § 4-403 (1990); see also § 95.316]. Any agreement to the contrary is invalid under Com. Code § 4103(a) if, in paying the item over the stop-payment order, the bank failed to exercise ordinary care. Com. Code § 4103 prohibits a bank from entering an agreement that disclaims its responsibility for failure to exercise ordinary care or limits the measure of damages for that failure [Official Comment 7 to UCC § 4-403 (1990); see also § 95.314].

The burden of establishing the fact and amount of loss resulting from the payment of an item contrary to a stop-payment order or order to close an account is on the customer. The loss from payment of an item contrary to a stop-payment order may include damages for dishonor of subsequent items under Com. Code § 4402 (discussed under § 95.464[7][a]) [Com. Code § 4403(c)].

[4] Bank's Right of Subrogation After Payment Over Order

A payor bank obtains specified subrogation rights if it has paid a check over the order of the drawer or maker to stop payment, after an account has been closed, or otherwise under circumstances giving a basis for objection by the drawer or maker. The payor bank is subrogated to the rights of all of the following [Com. Code § 4407]:

- Any holder in due course of the item against the drawer or maker;

- The payee or any other holder of the item against the drawer or maker either on the item or under the transaction out of which the item arose; and

- The drawer or maker against the payee or any other holder of the item with respect to the transaction out of which the item arose.

This subrogation right is meant to prevent unjust enrichment, but it is available only to the extent necessary to prevent loss to the bank by reason of its payment of the item [Com. Code § 4407].

A defense frequently interposed by a bank in an action against it for wrongful payment over a stop-payment order is that the drawer or maker suffered no loss because it would have been liable to a holder in due course in any event. On this argument, some cases have held that payment cannot be stopped against a holder in due course. Payment can be stopped, but, if it is, the drawer or maker is liable to the holder, and the sound rule is that the bank is subrogated to the rights of the holder [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-407 (1990)].

Com. Code § 4407(b) also subrogates the drawee bank to the rights of the payee or other holder against the drawer or maker either on the item or under the transaction out of which it arose [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4-407 (1990)]. Com. Code § 4407(c) subrogates the drawee bank to the rights of the drawer or maker against the payee or other holder with respect to the transaction out of which the item arose. For example, if the payee fraudulently induces the drawer to issue a check for defective securities and the bank pays the check over a stop-payment order but reimburses the drawer for the payment, Com. Code § 4407(c) provides the bank a basis for recovering the money from the fraudulent payee [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4-407 (1990)].

For a form for a complaint for declaratory relief based on Com. Code § 4407, see § 95.460.

§ 95.323 Wrongful Dishonor

[1] In General

Except as otherwise provided in Division 4, a payor bank wrongfully dishonors an item if it dishonors an item that is properly payable, but a bank may dishonor an item that would create an overdraft unless it has agreed to pay the overdraft [Com. Code § 4402(a); but see Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 954-955, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848 (previous pattern of paying overdrafts or oral agreement may require bank to continue to honor items creating overdrafts)].

If several people are authorized by the signature card to make withdrawals and one of them has notified the bank pursuant to Fin. Code § 953 to revoke the authority of another to make withdrawals, the bank may refuse to honor checks drawn by the signatory described in the other signatory's notice without liability for wrongful dishonor [AARTS Productions, Inc. v. Crocker National Bank (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1067-1069, 225 Cal. Rptr. 203 ; see also Com. Code § 4403(a) (stop-payment order may be executed by one of two or more authorized to draw on account)].

Other aspects of wrongful dishonor, such as the time for determining the available balance in the account and whether or not an individual principal of a corporate depositor have standing to maintain an action to recover damages for wrongful dishonor, are discussed in § 95.456[5].

[2] Damages for Wrongful Dishonor

[a] Compensatory Damages

A payor bank is liable to its customer for damages proximately caused by the wrongful dishonor of an item. Liability is limited to actual damages proved and may include damages for an arrest or prosecution of the customer or other consequential damages [Com. Code § 4402(b); Weaver v. Bank of America (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 428, 431-435, 30 Cal. Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644 (damages for drawer's arrest); Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 957-958, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848 (damages for emotional distress)]. An action for damages for wrongful dishonor sounds both in tort and in contract [Weaver v. Bank of America (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 428, 431-432, 30 Cal. Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644 ; Abramowitz v. Bank of America (1955) 281 P.2d 380] .

The drawer can recover damages for emotional distress caused by the wrongful dishonor if his or her emotional distress goes beyond a subjective state of discomfort and verifiable events following the wrongful dishonor would induce mental suffering in a reasonable person [Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 957-958, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848] . Kendall involved the failure of a business to which the defendant allegedly agreed to loan money. Criminal and administrative charges were brought against the drawers for dishonored payroll checks, failure to maintain workers' compensation insurance, and drawing checks on insufficient funds. Plaintiffs were subjected to vandalism and harassment by employees and creditors and suffered marital problems as a result of the stress of the failure of the business [Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 952-954, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848] .

Whether any consequential damages are proximately caused by the wrongful dishonor is a question of fact to be determined in each case [Com. Code § 4402(b)].

Wrongful dishonor is different from failure to exercise ordinary care in handling an item. The measure of damages for wrongful dishonor is that stated in Com. Code § 4402(b), not that stated in Com. Code § 4103(e) (discussed under § 95.315) [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)].

There was confusion arising from the second sentence of former Com. Code § 4402, which implied that a bank was liable for some form of damages other than those proximately caused by the dishonor if the dishonor was other than by mistake [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-402 (1990); see, e.g., Lee v. Bank of America (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 920, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387 (drawer cannot recover punitive damages for wrongful dishonor occasioned by drawee's mistake)]. The reference to mistake has been deleted from the present version of Com. Code § 4402(b).

[b] Punitive Damages

Whether a bank is liable for noncompensatory damages, such as punitive damages, must be decided under Com. Code §§ 1103(b) and 1305 [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-402 (1990)]. Com. Code § 1103(b) provides that, unless displaced by the particular provisions of the Commercial Code, the principles of law and equity supplement the provisions of the Commercial Code. Com. Code § 1305(a) states that the remedies provided by the Commercial Code are to be administered liberally to put the aggrieved party in as good a position as if the other party has fully performed, but neither consequential or special nor penal damages may be had except as specifically provided in the Commercial Code or by other rule of law.

Some California cases that awarded punitive damages seem to have conformed to this approach by basing the punitive damage award on some other cause of action. For example, a bank relied on an affidavit of forgery by a drawer to withdraw the amount of checks on which the drawer's unauthorized signature was forged by its employee, who was also the payee, from the account of the payee, who was also a depositor, and to dishonor checks drawn against the "reversed" deposit. The bank was sued for wrongful dishonor, intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligence, and violations of Fin. Code §§ 857 and 952. The punitive damage award was apparently based on the negligence cause of action. The appellate court relied on evidence, although conflicting, that reversal and dishonor were not standard banking practices, or, in Commercial Code parlance, amounted to failure to conform to commercially reasonable standards as practiced in the region in which the bank was located [Teitel v. First Los Angeles Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1593, 1599-1600, 1604-1605, 1607, 282 Cal. Rptr. 916 (construing former Fin. Code § 857); see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (discussed in § 95.311[5])]. Nevertheless, damages for failure to exercise ordinary care should not exceed the amount of the item, unless there is a finding of bad faith on the part of the bank [Com. Code § 4103(e) (discussed in § 95.315)].

§ 95.324 Customer's Duty to Examine Statements and to Notify Bank of Irregularities

[1] Scope of Duty

If a bank sends or makes available to its customer a statement of account or items pursuant to Com. Code § 4406(a), the customer, with reasonable promptness, must examine the statement or the items to determine whether any payment was not authorized because (1) an alteration of an item or (2) a purported signature by or on behalf of the customer was not authorized. If, based on the statement or items provided, the customer should reasonably have discovered the unauthorized payment, the customer must promptly notify the bank of the relevant facts [Com. Code § 4406(c); see also Com. Code § 1205(a) (what is a reasonable time for taking any action depends on nature, purpose, and circumstances of the action)]. For further discussion of the bank's duty to provide the statement and the bank's defenses based on the customer's failure to examine the statement promptly and to report irregularities, see §§ 95.451 and 95.452.

[2] Absolute Preclusion for Failure to Notify Within One Year

Without regard to care or lack of care of either the customer or the bank, a customer who within one year after the statement or items are made available to the customer under Com. Code § 4406(a) does not discover and report the customer's unauthorized signature on or any alteration on the item is precluded from asserting against the bank the unauthorized signature or alteration [Com. Code § 4406(f); see Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1125, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 (payroll account owner was precluded from pursuing any recovery against bank after failing to discover and report unauthorized signatures within prescribed one-year period); see also Com. Code § 4406(c), (d) (customer is precluded from asserting unauthorized or altered signature against bank if customer had reasonable time, not exceeding 30 days, to examine items and notify bank of problems)].

If there is a preclusion under Com. Code § 4406(f), the payor bank may not recover for breach of warranty under Com. Code § 4208 with respect to the unauthorized signature or alteration to which the preclusion applies [Com. Code § 4406(f)].

For discussion of the availability of punitive damages for bad faith assertion of the one-year preclusion, see § 95.452[3].

§ 95.325 Paying or Collecting Checks After Notice of Death or Incompetence of Account Holder

A payor or collecting bank's authority to accept, pay, or collect an item or to account for proceeds of its collection, if otherwise effective, is not rendered ineffective by the drawer's or depositor's death or incompetence until the bank knows of the fact of death or of an adjudication of incompetence and has reasonable opportunity to act on it. The incompetence must exist at the time the item is issued or its collection is undertaken, and the bank must not know of an adjudication of incompetence [Com. Code § 4405(a)].

Even with this knowledge, a bank, for 10 days after the date of death, may pay or certify checks drawn on or before the date of death unless a person claiming an interest in the account orders payment stopped [Com. Code § 4405(b); see § 95.322].

Any surviving relative, creditor, or other person who claims an interest in the account may give a direction to the bank not to pay checks or not to pay a particular check. The bank is not responsible for determining the validity of the claim or even whether it is "colorable." Anyone who has an interest in the estate, including a person named as a personal representative, even in a will that has not yet been admitted to probate, is entitled to claim an interest in the account [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4-405 (1990)]. Persons described in Prob. Code §§ 5201-5203 and 5307 (discussed in § 95.270) obviously have "interests in the account." These include joint tenants and beneficiaries of Totten trusts (also known as "signature card trusts") [see Prob. Code § 5122(a) (types of accounts covered include checking, savings accounts); see also discussions in Ch. 316, Joint Tenancy and Tenancy in Common and Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts]. The Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.) does not apply to accounts held by the following [Prob. Code § 5122(b)]:

- Corporations, partnerships, joint ventures, or other associations for business purposes;

- Accounts controlled by one or more persons as the duly authorized agent or trustee for a corporation, unincorporated association, or charitable or civic organization; or

- Regular fiduciary or trust accounts maintained in connection with a relationship that is established other than by the deposit agreement, including accounts established for the deposit of funds of the estate of a ward, conservatee, or decedent.

§ 95.326 Warranties

[1] Terms Defined

The Division 4 warranties made on transfer and presentment [Com. Code §§ 4207 (transfer), 4208 (presentment)] are substantially similar to the Division 3 warranties made by the parties on transfer and presentment [Com. Code §§ 3416 (transfer), 3417 (presentment)]. The warranties differ to the extent necessary to reflect the fact that the Division 4 warranties apply to "items" [see Com. Code § 4104(a)(9)], whereas the Division 3 warranties apply to "instruments," which is to say, "negotiable instruments" [see Com. Code § 3104(b)-(f)]. A check is usually both a negotiable instrument within Division 3 and and an "item" within Division 4.

Similarly, the presentment warranties of both Division 3 and Division 4 apply to "unaccepted drafts." Checks are "unaccepted drafts" under both definitions [see Com. Code §§ 3104(b)-(f), 4104(a)(7), (9)]. "Draft" as used in Division 4 includes items that are orders to pay, which may include orders that are not instruments within Division 3 [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 4-208 (1990)].

[2] Sun'n Sand Drawer Warranty Rejected

Although warranties are usually litigated between banks because nonbank parties to checks usually have more direct and easily provable causes of action available to them, nonbank parties to checks may state causes of action for breach of warranties. Note, however, that the 1990 version of the Uniform Commercial Code rejects the holding in Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 , that there is a warranty made to the drawer when presentment is made to the drawee and that the drawer has a cause of action for beach of the presentment warranty. The Uniform Commercial Code contemplates drawer's actions for breach of presentment warranties only on presentment of a previously dishonored draft under Com. Code § 3417(d) [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-417 (1990)].

[3] Transfer Warranties

[a] Types

A person who transfers an instrument for consideration warrants all of the following to any transferee and, if the transfer is by endorsement, to any subsequent transferee [Com. Code § 3416(a)]. A customer or collecting bank that transfers an item and receives a settlement or other consideration also warrants to the transferee and to any subsequent collecting bank that all of the following are applicable [Com. Code § 4207(a); see Mills v. U.S. Bank (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 871, 882, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146 (drawer of check cannot have benefit of these warranties, since drawer cannot be "transferee" to whom these warranties are made)]:

- The warrantor is a person entitled to enforce the item [see Com. Code § 3301 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)].

- All signatures on the item are authentic and authorized.

- The item has not been altered.

- The item is not subject to a defense or claim in recoupment [see Com. Code § 3305(a) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)] of any party that can be asserted against the warrantor.

- The warrantor has no knowledge of any insolvency proceeding commenced with respect to the maker or acceptor or, in the case of an unaccepted draft, the drawer [see Com. Code § 3305(c) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)].

- If the instrument is a demand draft [see Com. Code § 3104(k) (definition)], creation of the instrument according to the terms on its face was authorized by the person identified as drawer. Note that if this particular warranty is not given by a transferor or collecting bank under applicable conflict of law rules, then it is not given to that transferor when that transferor is a transferee, nor to any prior collecting bank of that transferee [Com. Code §§ 3416(e), 4207(f)].

These transfer warranties cannot be disclaimed with respect to checks [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 4207(d)], not even by endorsement purporting to do so, such as one stating that the transfer is made "without recourse" [Com. Code § 4207(b)]. However, unless the tranferee or other potential plaintiff gives notice of a claim for breach of warranty to the warrantor within 30 days after he, she, or it has reason to know of the breach and the identity of the warrantor, the warrantor is discharged to the extent of any loss caused by the delay in giving notice of the claim [Com. Code §§ 3416(c), 4207(d)].

With respect to checks, additional warranties are made by "paying" and "returning" banks under 12 C.F.R. § 229.34 [Official Comment to U.C.C. § 4-207 (1990)].

[b] Actions and Damages for Breach of Transfer Warranties

If an item is dishonored, a customer or collecting bank transferring the item and receiving settlement or other consideration is obliged to pay the amount due on the item (1) according to the terms of the item at the time it was transferred, or (2) if the transfer was of an incomplete item, according to its terms when completed as stated in Com. Code §§ 3115 and 3407 (both discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments) [Com. Code § 4207(b)]. A cause of action for breach of transfer warranties can be maintained by a transferee, any subsequent tranferee to whom the warranties were made, or any subsequent collecting bank that took the item in good faith [Com. Code §§ 3416(b), 4207(b)].

A cause of action for breach of transfer warranties accrues when the claimant has reason to know of the breach [Com. Code §§ 3416(d), 4207(e)].

A person to whom the warranties are made that took the item in good faith may recover from the warrantor an amount equal to the loss suffered as a result of the breach, but not more than the amount of the item plus expenses and loss of interest incurred as a result of the breach [Com. Code §§ 3416(b), 4207(c)]. Com. Code § 3416(b), however, does not provide for an award of attorney's fees to prevailing plaintiffs [Grasso v. Crow (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 847, 849-850, 67 Cal. Rptr.2d 367 (court declined to expansively interpret section 3416(b) as authorizing award of attorney fees in absence of specific provision providing for such fees as item of expenses)].

[4] Presentment Warranties

[a] Types

If an unaccepted draft is presented to the drawee (payor bank) for payment or acceptance and the drawee pays or accepts the draft, then (1) the person obtaining payment or acceptance, at the time of presentment (payee, depositary bank, or collecting bank, usually) and (2) a previous transferor of the draft, at the time of transfer, warrant to the drawee that pays or accepts the draft in good faith that all of the following apply [Com. Code §§ 3417(a), 4208(a)]:

- The warrantor is, or was, at the time the warrantor transferred the draft, a person entitled to enforce the draft or authorized to obtain payment or acceptance of the draft on behalf of a person entitled to enforce the draft [see Com. Code § 3301 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)].

- The draft has not been altered [see Com. Code § 3407 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)].

- The warrantor has no knowledge that the signature of the purported drawer of the draft is unauthorized.

- If the draft is a demand draft [see Com. Code § 3104(k) (definition); see also Com. Code §§ 3417(g), 4208(g) ("demand draft" is a "check")], creation of the demand draft according to the terms on its face was authorized by the person identified as drawer.

If the warranty described in (4), above, is not given by a transferor under applicable conflict of law rules, then the warranty is not given to that transferor when that transferor is a transferee [Com. Code §§ 3417(h), 4208(h)].

[b] Damages for Breach of Presentment Warranties

A drawee making payment may recover from a warrantor damages for breach of warranty equal to the amount paid by the drawee less the amount the drawee received or is entitled to receive from the drawer because of the payment. In addition, the drawee is entitled to compensation for expenses and loss of interest resulting from the breach. The right of the drawee to recover these damages is not affected by any failure of the drawee to exercise ordinary care in making payment. If the drawee accepts the draft, breach of warranty is a defense to the obligation of the acceptor. If the acceptor makes payment with respect to the draft, the acceptor is entitled to recover from a warrantor for breach of warranty the amounts stated above [Com. Code §§ 3417(b), 4208(b)].

This alters the result in cases decided under the former Commercial Code when both the drawee and the drawer were negligent. The loss is placed on the drawer, except that when a drawee asserts a claim for breach of warranty based on an unauthorized endorsement of the draft or on an alteration of the draft, the warrantor may defend on the following grounds [Com. Code §§ 3417(c), 4208(c)]:

- The endorsement is effective under Com. Code § 3404 or 3405 (discussed under §§ 95.329, 95.330) [ see also §§ 95.453, 95.454]; or

- The drawer is precluded under Com. Code § 3406 or 4406 from asserting the unauthorized endorsement or alteration against the drawee [see §§ 95.451, 95.452, 49].

Com. Code §§ 3417(c) and 4208(c) augment changes in Com. Code § 4406(f), which now provides that if the drawer/customer is precluded from demanding recredit to the account for an item improperly paid and returned more than a year ago with the statement, the drawee cannot recover for breach of warranty of presentment with respect to the unauthorized signature or alteration to which the preclusion applies [Com. Code § 4406(f); see Com. Code § 4406(d)(2) (discussed in § 95.451)].

[5] Warranties on Second Presentment

The presentment warranties of Com. Code §§ 3417(d) and 4208(d) apply to presentment of notes and accepted drafts to any party obligated on the instrument or item, including an endorser, and to presentment of dishonored drafts if presentment is made to the drawer or endorser [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 3-417 (1990)].

If (1) a dishonored draft is presented for payment to the drawer or an endorser or (2) any other item or instrument is presented for payment to a party obliged to pay the item or instrument, and the item or instrument is paid, the person obtaining payment and a prior transferor of the item or instrument warrant to the person making payment in good faith that the warrantor is, or was, at the time the warrantor transferred the item or instrument, a person entitled to enforce the item or instrument or authorized to obtain payment on behalf of a person entitled to enforce the item or instrument [Com. Code §§ 3417(d), 4208(d) (to drawer or endorser); see Com. Code § 3301 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)]. A drawer or endorser who pays the check may recover from any warrantor for breach of warranty the amount paid, plus expenses and loss of interest resulting from the breach [Com. Code §§ 3417(d), 4208(d)]. These warranties cannot be disclaimed with respect to checks [Com. Code §§ 3417(e), 4208(e)].

[6] Encoders' Warranties

A person who encodes information on or with respect to an item after issue warrants to any subsequent collecting bank and to the payor bank or other payor that the information is correctly encoded. If the customer of a depositary bank encodes, that bank also makes the warranty [Com. Code § 4209(a)]. Normally, only the depositary bank encodes items deposited for collection. However, some customers who are payees of large volumes of checks may do the encoding and retain the actual checks. If the customer does the encoding and retention, the depositary bank is also liable for breach of this warranty [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-209 (1990)].

A depositary bank that does not present items, but undertakes to retain them pursuant to an agreement for electronic presentment, warrants to any subsequent collecting bank and to the payor bank or other payor that retention and presentment of the item comply with the agreement. If a customer of a depositary bank undertakes to retain an item, that bank also makes this warranty [Com. Code § 4209(b)]. A collecting bank or other person to whom encoders' warranties are made and who took the item in good faith may recover from the warrantor as damages for breach of warranty an amount equal to the loss suffered as a result of the breach, plus expenses and loss of interest incurred as a result of the breach [Com. Code § 4209(c)].

The misencoding of an amount on the MICR line is not an alteration within the meaning of Com. Code § 3407(a), which defines alteration as a change in the obligation of a party [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 4-209 (1990)]. If the drawer wrote a check for $2,500 and the depositary bank encoded it as $25,000, that would not change the obligation of any party: the payor bank cannot charge the drawer's account any more than $2,500. This warranty allows the payor bank to recover the amount paid over $2,500 from the depositary bank without having to pursue claims against the intervening collecting banks or a payee. Intervening collecting banks are not liable for the misencoding. If a $25,000 check was misencoded as $2,500, the payor bank is not likely to suffer a loss unless the drawer's account is less than the amount of the check. If the payor pays the item even though an overdraft is created, it need not pursue its remedy against the drawer beyond the amount in the drawer's account before bringing an action for breach of warranty against the depositary (encoding) bank [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 4-209 (1990)].

[7] Regulation CC (12 C.F.R. Part 229) Warranties by Paying or Returning Bank

Each paying bank or returning bank that transfers a returned check and receives a settlement or other consideration for it warrants the following to the transferee returning bank, any subsequent returning bank, the depositary bank, and the owner of the check [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(a)]:

- The paying bank, or in the case of a check payable by a bank and payable through another bank, the bank by which the check is payable, returned the check within its deadline under the Commercial Code [see Com. Code §§ 4301, 4302], Regulation J [12 C.F.R. Part 210], or 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(c) (relating to extension of deadlines in an effort to expedite delivery);

- It is authorized to return the check;

- The check has not been materially altered; and

- In the case of a notice in lieu of return, the original check has not and will not be returned.

The warranties of 12 C.F.R. § 229.34(a) are not made with respect to a check drawn on the United States Treasury, a U.S. Postal Service money order, or a check drawn on a state or unit of general local government that is not payable through or at a bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(a)].

Each paying bank that gives a notice of nonpayment warrants the following to the transferee bank, any subsequent transferee bank, the depositary bank, and the owner of the check [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(b)]:

- The paying bank, or in the case of a check payable by a bank and payable through another bank, the bank by which the check is payable, returned or will return the check within its deadline under the Commercial Code [see Com. Code §§ 4301, 4302], Regulation J [12 C.F.R. Part 210], or 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(c) (relating to extension of deadlines in an effort to expedite delivery);

- It is authorized to send the notice; and

- The check has not been materially altered.

The warranties of 12 C.F.R. § 229.34(b) are not made with respect to checks drawn on a state or a unit of general local government that are not payable through or at a bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(b)].

Each bank that presents one or more checks to a paying bank and in return receives a settlement or other consideration warrants to the paying bank that the total amount of the checks presented is equal to the total amount of the settlement demanded by the presenting bank from the paying bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(c)(1)]. Each bank that transfers one or more checks or returned checks to a collecting, returning, or depositary bank and in return receives a settlement or other consideration warrants to the transferee bank that the accompanying information, if any, accurately indicates the total amount of the checks or returned checks transferred [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(c)(2)]. Each bank that presents or transfers a check or returned check warrants to any bank that subsequently handles it that, at the time of presentment or transfer, the information encoded after issue in magnetic ink on the check or returned check is correct [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(c)(3)]. If a bank settles with another bank for checks presented, or for returned checks for which it is the depositary bank, in amount exceeding the total amount of the checks, the settling bank may set off the excess settlement amount against subsequent settlements for checks presented, or for returned checks for which it is the depositary bank, that it receives from the other bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(c)(4)].

A bank that transfers or presents a remotely created check [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(fff) (definition)] and receives a settlement or other consideration warrants to the transferee bank, any subsequent collecting bank, and the paying bank that the person on whose account the remotely created check is drawn authorized the issuance of the check in the amount stated on the check and to the payee stated on the check. In this context, "account" includes an account as defined in 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(a) [see § 95.222[1]] as well as a credit or other arrangement that allows a person to draw checks that are payable by, through, or at a bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(d)(1)]. If a paying bank asserts a claim for breach of the foregoing warranty, the warranting bank may defend by proving that the customer of the paying bank is precluded under U.C.C. § 4-406, as applicable [see § 95.451], from asserting against the paying bank the unauthorized issuance of the check [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(d)(2)].

The measure of damages for breach of these warranties is the same as the measure under the Commercial Code; they may not exceed the consideration received by the paying or returning bank, plus finance charges and expenses related to the returned check, if any [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(e)].

If a bank is sued for breach of a warranty prescribed in 12 C.F.R. § 229.34, it may give a prior bank in the collection or return chain written notice of the litigation, and the bank notified may then give similar notice to any other prior bank. If the notice states that the bank notified may come in and defend and that failure to do so will bind the bank notified in an action later brought by the bank giving the notice as to any determination of fact common to the two litigations, the bank notified is so bound unless after seasonable receipt of the notice the bank notified does come in and defend [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(f)]. Unless a claimant gives notice of a claim for breach of warranty to the bank that made the warranty within 30 days after the claimant has reason to know of the breach and the identity of the warranting bank, the warranting bank is discharged to the extent of any loss caused by the delay in giving notice of the claim [12 C.F.R. § 229.34(g)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Check Collections

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.327

§ 95.327 Forged and Altered Checks

[1] Two Types of Forgeries

There are two types of forged checks--those with forged (unauthorized) maker's signatures, and those with forged endorsements [see Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804, 821-822, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883] . A check with both a forged drawer's signature and a forged endorsement may be referred to as a double forgery. The Commercial Code provisions are designed to place the loss on the person who dealt with the wrongdoer, in the belief that that person (or bank) is in the best position to protect against the loss. Disregarding certain exceptions, ultimate liability for payment of a check bearing a forged drawer's signature usually rests with the drawee bank, while liability for payment of a check bearing a forged endorsement lies with the collecting bank. The rationale is that the drawee bank possesses the signature card and is in the best position to detect a forged drawer's signature, while the collecting bank is in the best position to detect a forged endorsement because it presumably confronts the endorser [Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804, 821-822, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883] .

[2] Drawee's Liability for Forged or Unauthorized Maker's Signature

Under Com. Code § 4401(a), a drawee is not entitled to charge the maker's account for a check with an unauthorized maker's signature, or without a sufficient maker's signatures [see §§ 95.316, 95.450]. The drawee may cut off its liability if the drawer does not report the forgery within 30 days after receipt of the statement of account on which the item was drawn [see Com. Code § 4406(c), (d)(2); see also § 95.324 and see §§ 95.451 -95.452]. Note that Com. Code § 4406(f) applies without regard to care or lack of care of either the customer or the bank and precludes a customer who does not within one year after the statement or items are made available to the customer discover and report the customer's unauthorized signature from asserting it against the bank [Com. Code § 4406(f); Espresso Roma Corp. v. Bank of Am. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 525, 528, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549] .

The drawee is likely to charge the account initially, unless the check is postdated or the subject of a stop-payment order or payment would create an overdraft. Commercial Cotton once upheld a cause of action for breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing for the drawee's failure to reverse a charge for a check with a forged maker's signature. The blank check was (orally) reported lost more than a year after the theft, but four years before the forged check was presented for payment. The court awarded the customer tort and punitive damages [Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 516, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551] . Although that cause of action has been displaced [see Copesky v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 678, 694, 280 Cal. Rptr. 338 (same court reversing its holding in Commercial Cotton in light of Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373)], tort damages are recoverable if the bank, in making or failing to reverse the charge, also failed to adhere to reasonable commercial standards prevailing in the geographic region in which it operates [see Com. Code § 4103(e) (discussed under § 95.315)].

[3] Loss for Forged Payee Endorsement Initially on Depositary Bank

Under Com. Code § 3420, the loss for paying a check on a forged endorsement falls on the one who gave value to the thief/forger. That is usually the depositary bank [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)]. The measure of liability is the amount payable on the instrument,and may not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's interest in the instrument [Com. Code § 3420(b); see Stenseth v. Wells Fargo (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 457, 465-466, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 (payee not entitled to recover damages under Civ. Code § 3336 for time and effort spent attempting to recover converted property)]. If the forger stole the check before it was delivered to the payee, the payee never became the owner or holder of the check, so the payee has no cause of action for conversion [Com. Code § 3420(a)(2)]. The payee may still enforce the underlying obligation [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)]. For a complaint for use by a payee whose endorsement has been forged to recover the amount of the check from the depositary bank that paid the forger, see § 95.461.

Once the payee has taken delivery of the check, however, the payee no longer can enforce the underlying obligation [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(4) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)], so the payee needs a cause of action for conversion. Thus, if the forger steals a check after it is delivered to the payee and forges the payee's endorsement, the payee has causes of action for conversion against all the banks in the collection chain, including the payor (drawee) bank [see Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 381, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 (payee has action against drawee)]. Although the payee may sue any bank in the collection chain, Com. Code § 3420(c) makes it far more efficacious for the payee to sue the depositary bank. Each of the other banks in the collection chain is apt to defend on the ground of having paid the proceeds in good faith to one not entitled to enforce the instrument. A payee who sues both depositary and payor banks is entitled to only one recovery [see Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990); see also Resh v. Connecticut National Bank (1996) 89 Fed. 3d 598, 601 (payee ratifies payment made by drawee to depositary when payee sues both depositary and drawee in single suit in state court)].

The drawer has no cause of action for conversion [Com. Code § 3420(a)(1)]. The drawer's remedy is under Com. Code § 4401(a), for recredit of any unauthorized charge to his or her account for payment of a check on a forged endorsement [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

As between the banks, each bank has a claim for breach of warranties against the bank from which it took the check [Com. Code §§ 3417(a)(1), 4208(a)(1); Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 381, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609] , until, once again, the loss falls on the depositary bank [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)].

Chapter 95 BANKS, DEPOSITS, AND CHECKS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Check Collections

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.328

§ 95.328 Missing Endorsement

A check is converted if a bank makes or obtains payment with respect to the check, for a person not entitled to enforce the check or receive payment [Com. Code § 3420(a)]. If a bank makes payment with respect to a check, to a person not entitled to receive payment, then the bank is liable for conversion under Com. Code § 3420(a), without regard to whether the check bore a forged or unauthorized endorsement or whether there was a missing endorsement [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] . It is the depositary bank--the bank to which the check is first presented for payment--that ultimately is liable. If the payor bank is not the depositary bank, or if the check passed through any collecting banks, the plaintiff need not sue any but the depositary bank [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1378, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] .

An action for conversion of the check on the ground of a missing endorsement may not be brought by the issuer or acceptor of the check or by a payee or endorsee who did not receive delivery of the check either directly or through delivery to an agent or a copayee [Com. Code § 3420(a)]. An action may be brought by a copayee who endorsed the check, on the ground that the endorsement of another copayee was missing [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310 (homeowner's action for conversion of check drawn by fire insurer to pay claim was based on absence of mortgage lender's endorsement)]. The measure of the bank's liability is presumed to be the amount payable on the check, but recovery may not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's interest in the check [Com. Code § 3420(b)]. Thus, when there are copayees, the plaintiff's recovery could be limited to an amount less than the amount payable on the check [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] .

The conversion action is the sole remedy for a payee who is injured by payment of the check without a necessary endorsement. Common law remedies such as an action for negligence are supplanted by Com. Code § 3420 [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1379, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] .

For a complaint for use by a payee whose endorsement was missing, to recover the amount of the check from the depositary bank that paid on the check, see § 95.461.

For an affirmative defense by a bank asserting that the person who made a deposit had the authority to do so, see §

95.462.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.329

§ 95.329 Checks Payable to "Fictitious Payees" or Impostors

Any endorsement is valid on behalf of a payee that is (1) a nonexistent person (a "fictitious payee") or (2) a person who the maker never intended to have any interest in the item, in favor of a bank or person who, in good faith, takes the item for payment or collection [see Com. Code § 3404(b) (set forth in § 95.453[3])].

An example of the latter involves an accounts payable clerk who is authorized to prepare and sign checks on behalf of her employer to pay suppliers. Checks over a certain amount must also be signed by the treasurer or another officer. ABC is a supplier of the employer, but the employer does not owe ABC anything this month. Nevertheless, the clerk makes a $50,000 check payable to ABC intending to pull it from the outgoing mail when no one is looking and deposit it to her account or cash it and leave for the Yucatan. The clerk's intent governs [Com. Code §§ 3110(a), (b), 3404(b)], so ABC never had an interest in the check, and the clerk's forged endorsement is valid [see Case 3 of Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-404 (1990)]. Com. Code § 3404(b)(2) prevents any action against the depositary bank. If the employer owed ABC money and the clerk made a check payable to ABC for the amount owing, alone or with the second signature of another authorized person, and then later decided to, and did, steal the check, the forged endorsement would be valid, but not because of Com. Code § 3404. Rather, Com. Code § 3405(b) would make the endorsement valid in favor of anyone who took the check, in good faith, for value or collection [see Case 6 of Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990) (discussed in § 95.454)].

If an impostor induces a person to issue an instrument to the impostor, or to a person acting in concert with the impostor, by impersonating the payee of the instrument or a person authorized to act for the payee, any endorsement in the name of the payee is effective in favor of a person who, in good faith, pays the instrument or takes it for value or for collection [Com. Code § 3404(a)]. Impostors dupe drawers, who then usually seek to require the payor bank to reverse the charge made to their account. As long as the drawee bank acted in good faith in paying the check, the drawer cannot require recredit of the account. Similarly, the depositary bank that cashed or collected the check payable to an impostor is entitled to retain the proceeds if it did not know about the forgery [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-404 (1990); see also § 95.453[3]].

§ 95.330 Forgery by "Responsible Employee"

[1] Loss Initially on Employer

Com. Code § 3405 addresses a group of scenarios, all based on the malfeasance of an employee, independent contractor, or other agent of the payee or maker. A person in that position, whether having responsibility to endorse and deposit checks or to issue and deliver them, is in a position to take advantage of the maker or payee. Again, as part of a design to place the loss on the person best able to prevent or detect it, the Code places the loss on the employer in most situations [Com. Code § 3405(b); see Com. Code § 3405(a)(3) (list of functions considered "responsibility" with respect to checks, discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments); see also § 95.454[3]].

[2] Forged Endorsement Valid as Against Holders in Due Course

When an employee forges the employer's endorsement, that endorsement is good as against any other person or bank who, in good faith, pays it, or takes it for value or collection [Com. Code § 3405(b); see Com. Code §§ 3402(a) (represented person bound by signature), 3403(a) (unauthorized signature effective in favor of person who in good faith pays instrument or takes for value)], except one that fails to exercise ordinary care [Com. Code § 3405(b); see Com. Code § 3404(d) (person taking for value or collection fails to exercise ordinary care)]. The loss is on the payee/employer unless and until there is some handling of the item by a bank that constitutes failure to exercise ordinary care, that is, handling of the item that is not in accordance with the commercial standards prevailing in the region in which it operates [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (defining ordinary care); Case 3 of Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990); Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under Com. Code § 3405(b)); see also § 95.454].

[3] Unauthorized Maker's Signature

When an employee forges the employer's signature as maker, or uses a check writing machine to draw an unauthorized check, that signature is valid in favor of any other person or bank who pays the check or takes it for value [see Com. Code § 3403(a); see also Com. Code § 3402(a) (represented person bound by signature)], except one that fails to exercise ordinary care [Com. Code § 3404(d) (person taking for value or collection fails to exercise ordinary care)]. The loss for an unauthorized signature of a "represented person" made by his or her "representative" is on the maker unless and until he/she/it notifies the drawee that unauthorized items have been charged against the account. If the employee who makes the unauthorized signature is authorized to issue checks, or cause them to be issued, the drawee can charge the employer's account [see Com. Code § 3402(a)].

The validity of the signature rests to some extent on the intent of the wrongdoer. For instance, if the signature of more than one person is required to constitute the authorized signature of an organization, the signature of the organization is unauthorized if one of the required signatures is lacking [Com. Code § 3403(b)].

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.331

§ 95.331 Drawee's Liability for Late Return

[1] Midnight Deadline

Actions for damages arising from late returns are most frequently brought against the drawee or paying bank by other banks in the collection chain [see, e.g., Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 280 Cal. Rptr. 831 (depositary bank against drawee)]. Nevertheless, they are mentioned here because if the loss was absorbed by the drawer or payee rather than by the depositary, collecting, or returning bank, the drawer or payee will be able to recover the amount of the check from the payor or returning bank that failed to act by its midnight deadline [see Com. Code §§ 4301, 4302; 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.30, 229.34, 229.38; see also Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. California Canadian Bank (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 798, 812-813, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 ; Bank of America v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 638, 642-643, 100 Cal. Rptr. 438] . Furthermore, the payor's settlement with the presenting bank, and thus with the other banks in the collection chain, becomes final if the bank fails to send written notice of dishonor (or nonpayment if the item is unavailable for return) or to return the check by its "midnight deadline" [Com. Code § 4301(a) (except documentary drafts and checks paid "over the counter," that is, cashed at branch)]. If the payor takes a demand item for credit on its books, it may return the item or send notice of dishonor and may revoke any credit given or recover the amount of any credit withdrawn by its customer if it acts before its midnight deadline [Com. Code § 4301(b)].

An item presented through a clearinghouse is returned when it is delivered to the presenting or last collecting bank or to the clearinghouse or is sent or delivered in accordance with clearinghouse rules [Com. Code § 4301(d)(1)]. In all other cases, such as presentation by another customer for payment over the counter or for deposit to an account, an item is returned (by the payor bank) when it is sent or delivered to the bank's customer (or other transferor) or in accordance with the customer's or transferor's instruction [Com. Code § 4301(d)(2)].

The "midnight deadline" is midnight of the next banking day following the banking day of receipt [Com. Code §§ 4301(a), 4302(a)(1); see Com. Code § 4104(a)(10) (defining "midnight deadline")]. The statutory midnight deadline begins to run when the Federal Reserve makes the checks available for pickup, rather than when the payor bank actually receives the checks from its courier [Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 726, 739-740, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389] . Because the purpose of the midnight deadline rule is to ensure prompt notification, if the deadline did not begin to run until the bank or its agent actually decided to pick up the checks from the Federal Reserve, the bank could defeat the protection sought to be afforded by imposing strict deadlines for final payment or dishonor [Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 726, 739-740, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 , quoting Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 1280, 280 Cal. Rptr. 831] . If the drawee has the Federal Reserve clearinghouse deliver the drawee's checks to a processor, the processor is the drawee's agent, and the drawee "receives" checks for purposes of its compliance with the midnight deadline when they are delivered to its processor [Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 1280, 280 Cal. Rptr. 831] .

If the check is "otherwise unavailable for return," the payor bank complies with the midnight deadline if it gives written notice of dishonor (or nonpayment) by then [Com. Code § 4301(a)(2); Lincoln Nat. Bank v. Dworsky (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 852, 855-857, 267 Cal. Rptr. 361 (bank sent photocopy of check and notice of dishonor)]. A check is "otherwise unavailable for return" if it is lost or destroyed. The check does not have to be permanently lost or stolen, only unavailable for return at the time the bank must act to meet its midnight deadline. It does not matter if the check subsequently becomes available [Lincoln Nat. Bank v. Dworsky (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 852, 857, 267 Cal. Rptr. 361 (some evidence that check was later returned to its maker in monthly statement)].

[2] Expeditious Return

12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a) imposes the additional requirement that a paying bank return a check in an expeditious manner. One test of expeditious return is the forward-collection test, which generally requires that the return by the paying bank to the depositary bank be made in the same manner that the paying bank (or a similarly situated bank) would use in presenting a check of a similar amount as the returned check to the depositary bank for forward collection [12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a)(2); see 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(ee) (defining "similarly situated bank")]. The return is also expeditious if it is made in such a manner that the returned check would normally arrive at the depositary bank no later than 4 P.M. (local time of the depositary bank) on (1) the second business day following the banking day on which the check was presented to the paying bank, if the paying bank is located in the same check processing region as the depositary bank, or (2) the fourth business day following the banking day on which the check was presented to the paying bank, if the paying bank is not located in the same check-processing region as the depositary bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a)(1); see 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(b), (c), (f) (exception for unidentifiable depositary bank, extension for expedited delivery, and notice when check is unavailable)].

If the paying bank determines not to pay a check in the amount of $2,500 or more, a notice to that effect must be provided to the depositary bank. That notice must be received by the depositary bank by 4 P.M. (local time) on the second business day following the banking day on which the check was presented to the paying bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.33(a)]. Unless the check is used to satisfy the notice requirement, the requirement for notice is independent of the requirement for expeditious return of the check under 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a). If a paying bank fails both to comply with the notice requirement and to comply with the requirements for timely and expeditious return under 12 C.F.R. § 229.30, the Commercial Code, and Regulation J (12 C.F.R. Part 210), the paying bank is liable either under 12 C.F.R. § 229.33 or under the other requirements, but not both [12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to 12 C.F.R. § 229.33(a)].

Neither the expeditious return requirement [12 C.F.R §§ 229.30(a), 229.31(a)] nor the notice of nonpayment requirement [12 C.F.R § 229.33] nor the same day settlement requirement [12 C.F.R § 229.36(f)] applied to a check drawn on the United States Treasury, a United States Postal Service money order, or a check drawn on a state or unit of general local government that is not payable through or at a bank [12 C.F.R. § 229.42].

[3] Damages for Late Return and Limitation Period

In the absence of bad faith on the part of the bank, damages for late return are limited to the amount of the check, except that the amount may be reduced by the amount of any loss the payee would have incurred even if the paying bank had exercised ordinary care [see Com. Code §§ 4103(e), 4302; 12 C.F.R. § 229.38(a); see also Bank of America v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 638, 643, 100 Cal. Rptr. 438] . A drawee may be held strictly liable under Com. Code § 4302(a) for its failure to return checks by the applicable deadline, regardless of whether any actual damages suffered by the other party were solely a result of the drawee's failure to comply with Com. Code § 4302. This strict liability rule of Com. Code § 4302 displaces the defense that a party's loss was caused by its own negligence [see Com. Code § 1103(b) (only applies if not displaced by other particular provision); Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. California Canadian Bank (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 798, 808-813, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 ; Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 1278, 280 Cal. Rptr. 831] . For example, a drawee bank was strictly liable for failure to make timely return of a check that was not properly payable even though a contributing factor in the loss was the fact that plaintiff/depositary bank's employee gave cash exceeding her authorized limit against uncollected deposited items [Los Angeles Nat. Bank v. Bank of Canton (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1267, 1278, 280 Cal. Rptr. 831] . This rule of strict liability is intended to displace defenses in favor of uniformity, certainty, and finality of commercial transactions [Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. California Canadian Bank (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 798, 808-813, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422] .

A bank that fails to act in good faith may be liable for other damages, if any, suffered by the party as a proximate consequence [12 C.F.R. § 229.38(a)]. If a paying bank fails both to comply with 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a) and with the deadline for return under Com. Code § 4301 or 4302, Regulation J (12 C.F.R. Part 210), or 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(c) in connection with one check, the bank is liable under either 12 C.F.R. § 229.30(a) or such other provision, but not both [12 C.F.R. § 229.38(b)]. A paying bank is not liable for the insolvency, neglect, misconduct, mistake, or default of another bank or person [12 C.F.R. § 229.38(a)].

An action under Com. Code § 4302 is subject to the three-year statute of limitations of Com. Code § 4111. An action under 12 C.F.R. § 229.38 must be brought within one year [12 C.F.R. § 229.38(g)].

§ 95.332 When Payment by Drawee Becomes Final

An item is finally paid by a payor bank when that bank has first done any of the following [Com. Code § 4215(a)]:

- Paid the item in cash [but see Com. Code § 4215(e) (if payor is also depositary bank)];

- Settled for the item without having a right to revoke the settlement under statute, clearing house rule, or agreement; or

- Made a provisional settlement for the item and failed to revoke the settlement in the time and manner permitted by statute, clearing house rule, or agreement.

If provisional settlement for an item does not become final, the item is not finally paid [Com. Code § 4215(b)].

When provisional settlements between the presenting and payor banks are made through a clearing house or by debits or credits in an account between them, then to the extent that provisional debits or credits for theitem are entered in accounts between the presenting and payor banks or between the presenting and successive prior collecting banks seriatim, they become final on final payment of the items by the payor bank [Com. Code § 4215(c)].

Once a collecting bank receives a settlement for an item that is or becomes final, the collecting bank is accountable to its customer for the amount of the item and any provisional credit given for the item in an account with its customer becomes final [Com. Code § 4215(d)].

Subject to (1) applicable law stating a time for availability of funds and (2) any right of the bank to apply the credit to an obligation of the customer, credit given by a bank for an item in a customer's account becomes available for withdrawal as of right [Com. Code § 4215(e)]:

- If the bank has received a provisional settlement for the item, when the settlement becomes final and the bank has had a reasonable time to receive return of the item and the item has not been received within that time; or

- If the bank is both the depositary bank and the payor bank, and the item is finally paid, the opening of the bank's second banking day following receipt of the item.

Subject to applicable law stating a time for availability of funds and any right of a bank to apply a deposit to an obligation of the depositor, a deposit of money becomes available for withdrawal as of right at the opening of the bank's next banking day after receipt of the deposit [Com. Code § 4215(f)].

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.333

§ 95.333 Collecting Bank's Duties With Respect to Deposited Items

[1] Agent and Holder

The bank in which checks are deposited to an account (as opposed to drawn on the account) is termed the depositary bank, which is also a collecting bank and in many cases is the only collecting bank [see Com. Code § 4105(2), (5); see also § 95.312]. A bank's duties as collecting bank under Division 4 of the Commercial Code are set forth in Com. Code § 4200 et seq., and include the duty to present all items promptly for collection and make the proceeds available within the times specified by law [see, e.g., 12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq. (Expedited Funds Availability Act); 12 C.F.R. Part 229 (Reg. CC)].

Unless a contrary intent clearly appears prior to the time that a settlement given by a collecting bank for a check is or becomes final [see Com. Code §§ 4213-4215], the bank is an agent or subagent of the owner of the check and any settlement, as between them, is provisional [Com. Code § 4201(a); Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1464-1468, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871] . This is so regardless of the form of endorsement or lack of endorsement and even though credit given forthe check is subject to immediate withdrawal as of right or is in fact withdrawn. But the continuance of ownership of an item by its owner and any rights of the owner to proceeds of the check are subject to rights of a collecting bank, such as those resulting from outstanding advances on the check and valid rights of recoupment or setoff [Com. Code § 4201(a)].

When a check is handled by banks for purposes of presentment, payment, collection, or return, the relevant provisions of Division 4 apply even though the action of parties clearly establishes that a particular bank has purchased the check and is the owner of it [Com. Code § 4201(a); see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.36(d)].

When a customer delivers an item to a depositary bank for collection, the depositary bank becomes a holder of the item at the time it receives the item for collection if the customer at the time of delivery was a holder of the item, whether or not the customer endorses the item, and, if the bank satisfies the other requirements of Com. Code § 3302 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments), it is a holder in due course [Com. Code § 4205(a)].

[2] Duties of Prompt Presentment and Return

A collecting bank must use ordinary care in all of the following [Com. Code § 4202(a)]:

- Presenting an item or sending it for presentment [Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1464, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871] ;

- Sending notice of dishonor or nonpayment or returning an item other than a documentary draft to the bank's transferor after learning that it has not been paid or accepted, as the case may be;

- Settling for an item when the bank receives final settlement; and

- Notifying its transferor of any loss or delay in transit within a reasonable time after discovery.

A collecting bank uses ordinary care under Com. Code § 4202(a) by taking proper action before its midnight deadline following receipt of an item, notice, or settlement. Taking proper action within a reasonably longer time may constitute the exercise of ordinary care, but the bank has the burden of establishing timeliness [Com. Code § 4202(b)].

If a collecting bank exercises ordinary care, it may not be held liable for the insolvency, negligence, mistake, misconduct, or default of another bank or person that results in the loss or destruction of an item in the possession of others or in transit [Com. Code § 4202(c); Symonds v, Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1464, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871] .

Absent extraordinary circumstances, a collecting bank does not owe a duty of care to a noncustomer, particularly when the bank has met itsstatutory duties as set forth in Com. Code § 4202(a) [Karen Kane Inc. v. Bank of America NT & SA (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1192, 1202-1203, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712] . In a case in which a clothing manufacturer wrote numerous checks over several years to fictitious vendors for merchandise it never received, based on an employee's submission of fraudulent invoices, the manufacturer brought a negligence action against the check cashing service that cashed those checks and the bank that deposited the checks into the service's account. The court of appeal found that because the checks were not forged or improperly endorsed, and did not indicate that maker was being defrauded, neither the check cashing service nor the bank had a duty to inquire of the maker if a valid transaction supported the checks before accepting them. The circumstances were not extraordinary enough to give rise to a duty of inquiry by a bank complying with its statutory duties, when in fact they were not even sufficient to constitute notice of fraud to the maker of the checks [Karen Kane Inc. v. Bank of America NT & SA (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1192, 1202-1203, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712] .

Although a collecting bank might still be entitled to revoke any provisional settlement it made to its depositor for a negligently processed check [see Com. Code § 4214(d)(2) (discussed under § 95.333[4])], it would be liable to its customer for negligence under Com. Code §§ 4103 and 4202 [Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1467, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871] . In that case, the collecting back failed for eight months to process a check that became uncollectible 44 days after the payee deposited it. The bank's conduct was so outrageous and such a departure from normal banking practice that the complaint was held to state causes of action for failure to exercise ordinary care, which in the case of bad faith on the part of the bank allows the depositor to recover any other damages suffered by the depositor as a proximate consequence, including for intentional infliction of emotional distress [Com. Code § 4103(e); Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1467, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871] .

A depositary bank that receives a returned check or notice of nonpayment must send notice of that fact to its customer by midnight of the banking day following the banking day on which it received the returned check or notice, or within a longer reasonable time [12 C.F.R. § 229.33(d)].

Provisions governing the length of time a bank may hold proceeds of a check before allowing a customer to draw on them are discussed in § 95.180 et seq.

[3] Regulation CC Duty of Expeditious Return

In the context of the requirements imposed by 12 C.F.R. § 229.30 et seq., a collecting bank is subject to the expeditious return responsibilities of 12 C.F.R. § 229.31 [see also 12 C.F.R. § 229.42 (items to which requirementsof 12 C.F.R. § 229.31(a) do not apply); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(cc) ("returning bank" defined, discussed in § 95.312[5])]. The expeditious return requirements of 12 C.F.R. § 229.31 are more stringent in many cases than the requirement under Com. Code § 4202(b) to act seasonably [see 12 C.F.R. § 229.31; 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.31(a)]. A collecting bank may be liable to the depositary bank, the depositary bank's customer, the true owner of the check, or another party to the check for failure to exercise ordinary care or to act in good faith to comply with the expeditious return requirements. Subject to a collecting bank's duty to exercise ordinary care or to act in good faith in choosing the means for return or notice of nonpayment, a bank is only responsible for its own actions, not those of any other bank or person [12 C.F.R. § 229.38(a)]. The measure of damages is the same as that imposed on a paying bank that does not make timely return, and is discussed under § 95.331[3].

[4] Provisional Payment and Right of Charge-Back

If a collecting bank makes provisional settlement with its customer for an item, and the item proves uncollectible or is dishonored, the collecting bank may revoke its provisional settlement with its customer and charge the item back to the customer's account or obtain a refund from its customer. This is true whether or not the collecting bank is able to return the item, if by its midnight deadline or within a longer reasonable time after it learns the facts it returns the item or sends notification of the facts [Com. Code § 4214(a); see Com. Code §§ 4213 (settlement by collecting bank), 4215 (discussed under § 95.332)].

If the return or notice is delayed beyond the bank's midnight deadline or a longer reasonable time after it learns the facts, the bank may revoke the settlement, charge back the credit, or obtain refund from its customer, but it is liable for any loss resulting from the delay. These rights to revoke, charge back, and obtain refund terminate if and when a settlement for the item received by the bank is or becomes final [Com. Code § 4214(a)]. Under Com. Code §§ 4201 and 4214(a), the branch that cashes a check for its customer who is the payee of that check is entitled to retroactively dishonor the check and charge the payee's account when, before the check is finally paid, the drawer files a stop-payment order [see Lawrence v. Bank of America (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 431, 434-437, 209 Cal. Rptr. 541 (result may no longer be reliable due to 1992 amendments to Com. Code § 4107, discussed under § 95.313[2])].

Although a collecting bank may be estopped from charging back its customer's account if it has represented to the customer that the check was final and the customer relied on the representations, a collecting bank's right of charge-back is not affected by its failure to exercise ordinary care with respect to the item, but any bank so failing remains liable [Com. Code § 4214(d)(2); see Symonds v. Mercury Savings & Loan Assn. (1990)225 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1467, 275 Cal. Rptr. 871 (discussed under § 95.333[2]].

Although the term provisional settlement as used in Com. Code § 4214 is still applicable between a depositary bank and its customer [see 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to 12 C.F.R. § 229.35(b)], since the adoption of expedited return procedures effective September 1, 1988, the terms "provisional settlement" and "charge-back" are no longer applicable in an interbank context [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.31(c), 229.32(b), 229.35(b), 229.36(d)].

[5] Collecting Bank's Security Interest

A collecting bank has a security interest in an item and any accompanying documents or the proceeds of either [Com. Code § 4210(a)]:

- In case of an item deposited in an account, to the extent to which credit given for the item has been withdrawn or applied;

- In case of an item for which it has given credit available for withdrawal as of right, to the extent of the credit given, whether or not the credit is drawn on or there is a right of charge-back; or

- If it makes an advance on or against the item.

If a collecting bank gives credit for several items received at one time or pursuant to a single agreement and that credit is withdrawn or applied in part, the security interest remains on all the items, any accompanying documents, or the proceeds of either. For the purpose of this section, credits first given are first withdrawn [Com. Code § 4210(b)].

The collecting bank's receipt of a final settlement for an item is a realization on its security interest in the item, accompanying documents, and proceeds. So long as the bank does not receive final settlement for the item or give up possession of the item or possession or control of the accompanying documents for purposes other than collection, the security interest continues to that extent and is subject to Division 9 of the Commercial Code, but all of the following are applicable [Com. Code § 4210(c)]:

- No security agreement is necessary to make the security interest enforceable.

- No filing is required to perfect the security interest.

- The security interest has priority over conflicting perfected security interests in the item, accompanying documents, or proceeds.

§ 95.335 Cashier's Checks and Money Orders

Cashier's checks and money orders are unique in that the drawee and the drawer are usually the same entity, namely the issuing bank. Even if the bank was not privy to any contract between the purchaser of the cashier's check or money order and any other party, the bank is liable to see that those checks are paid to the named payees. Thus, if a cashier's check is paid on a forged endorsement, the drawer/drawee bank is liable to the purchaser of the check directly or to the named payee [Jerman v. Bank of America (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 882, 887, 87 Cal. Rptr. 88] . A drawer bank cannot refuse to honor its cashier's check in favor of a payee who is a holder in due course merely because the drawer's customer forged endorsements on checks used to purchase the cashier's check [Tokai Bank of California v. First Pacific Bank (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1664, 1667-1669, 231 Cal. Rptr. 503] . Issuer's liability for failure to honor a cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check is governed by Com. Code § 3411, which is discussed in see § 95.465. For a declaration and claim of loss by the payee or drawer of a certified check, or by the payee or remitter of a teller's or cashier's check, see § 95.464.

Money orders may or may not be checks or negotiable instruments [see Com. Code § 3104(f) (instrument may be check even though noted on its face as "money order")]. For instance, because an instrument must be signed by the drawer or maker to be considered a check or a negotiable instrument [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(3), (5), (6)], the money order is not a check if a bank authorizes agents to issue money orders drawn on it and will pay those money orders whether or not the agent's signature or that of purchaser appears on it as drawer [Central Bank v. Kaiperm Santa Clara Fed. Credit Union (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 186, 202, 236 Cal. Rptr. 262] .

§ 95.336 Check Cashing Businesses

[1] Regulation and Definition

Check cashing businesses are governed by Civ. Code § 1789.30 et seq. Every owner of a check cashing business must obtain a permit from the Department of Justice to conduct the business [Civ. Code § 1789.37(a)].

For purposes of Civ. Code § 1789.30 et seq., a "check casher" is a person or entity that for compensation engages, in whole or in part, in the business of cashing checks, warrants, drafts, money orders, or other commercial paper serving the same purpose [Civ. Code § 1789.31(a)].

"Check casher" does not include the following [Civ. Code § 1789.31(a)]:

- A state or federally chartered bank, savings association, credit union, or industrial loan company; or

- A retail seller engaged primarily in the business of selling consumer goods, including consumables, to retail buyers that cashes checks or issues money orders for a minimum flat fee not exceeding $2 as a service to its customers that is incidental to its main purpose or business.

[2] Posting of Information

Every check casher must post a complete, detailed, and unambiguous schedule of all fees for the following, as applicable to the services provided [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1)]:

- Cashing checks, drafts, money orders, or other commercial paper serving the same purpose and making any deferred deposit (see the discussion § 95.336[6]);

- The sale or issuance of money orders; and

- The initial issuance of any identification card.

Each check casher must also post a list of valid identification that is acceptable in lieu of identification provided by the check casher [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1)].

The above information must be clear, legible, and in letters not less than one-half inch in height. The information must be posted in a conspicuous location in the unobstructed view of the public within the check casher's premises [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(1)].

Failure to post information as required, or the imposition of fees or identification requirements contrary to the information posted, constitutes an unfair business practice within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 [Civ. Code § 1789.32].

[3] Transaction Requirements

A check casher must not charge a fee for cashing a payroll check or government check in excess of the greatest of the following [Civ. Code § 1789.35(a)]:

- 3 percent of the face amount of the check, if identification is provided by the customer;
- 3.5 percent of the face amount of the check, without the provision of identification; or
- $3.

Identification is limited to a California driver's license, a California identification card, or a valid U.S. military identification card [Civ. Code § 1789.35(a)].

A check casher may charge a fee for cashing a personal check, as posted pursuant to Civ. Code § 1789.30 [see discussion under § 95.336[2]], for immediate deposit in an amount not to exceed 12 percent of the face value of the check [Civ. Code § 1789.35(d)].

A check casher may charge a fee of no more than $10 to set up an initial account and issue an optional identification card for providing check cashing services. A replacement optional identification card may be issued at a cost not to exceed $5 [Civ. Code § 1789.35(b)].

A check casher must provide a receipt to the customer for each transaction [Civ. Code § 1789.35(c)].

For checks cashed on or after January 1, 2006, and until 2008, a check casher who cashed a check, or a series of checks, exceeding $10,000 in the aggregate, for the same person in the same calendar year, whether in a single transaction or in multiple transactions, was required to file an information return with the Franchise Tax Board [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(2), (b)(2); see Rev. & Tax. Code § 18631.7].

Starting January 1, 2008, a check casher engaged in the trade or business of cashing checks who, in the course of that trade or business, cashes checks, other than one-party checks, payroll checks, or government checks, totaling more than $10,000 in one transaction, or two or more transactions for the same person within the calendar year, must file the informational return [Civ. Code § 1789.30(a)(2), (b)(2); Rev. & Tax. Code § 18631.7(a)]. Compliance information is provided on the FTB website at http://www.ftb.ca.gov/businesses/ck_cash.shtml.

[4] Penalties for Violation

Any person who violates any provision of Civ. Code § 1789.35 [see discussion under § 95.336[6][b]] is liable for a civil penalty not to exceed $2,000 for each violation, which may be assessed and recovered in a civil action brought in the name of the people of the State of California by the Attorney General in any court of competent jurisdiction. Any action for a civil penalty must be commenced within four years of the date on which the act or transaction upon which the action is based occurred [Civ. Code § 1789.35(e); see Stats. 2002, ch. 777, §§ 5, 6]. In addition, a willful violation of Civ. Code § 1789.35 is a misdemeanor [Civ. Code § 1789.35(f); see Stats. 2004, ch. 17; Stats. 2002, ch. 777, §§ 5, 6].

[5] Treble Damages and Injunction

Any person who is injured by any violation of Civ. Code § 1789.35 [see discussion under § 95.336[6][b]] may bring an action for the recovery of damages, an equity proceeding to restrain and enjoin those violations, or both. The amount awarded may be up to three times the damages actually incurred, but in no event less than the amount paid by the aggrieved consumer to a person subject to Civ. Code § 1789.35. If the plaintiff prevails, the plaintiff must be awarded reasonable attorney's fees and costs. If a court determines by clear and convincing evidence that a breach or violation was willful, the court, in its discretion, may award punitive damages in addition to the amounts set forth above [Civ. Code § 1789.35(g); see Stats. 2004, ch. 17; Stats. 2002, ch. 777, §§ 5, 6].

[6] Deferred Deposit Transactions (Payday Loans)

[a] Governing Law

Until December 31, 2004, deferred deposit transactions--commonly called payday loans--by check cashing businesses were governed by Civ. Code §§ 1789.31, 1789.33, and 1789.35. Thereafter, payday loans (whether made by check-cashing businesses or by others) are governed by the California Deferred Deposit Transaction Law, a specialized statute dealing with these types of transactions [Fin. Code § 23000 et seq.; see generally Stats. 2004, ch. 17; Stats. 2002, ch. 777]. The discussion in this section deals with the law applicable after December 31, 2004.

Payday lenders make small, short-term loans to individuals who receive regular paychecks. Instead of signing a promissory note, on receiving the loan amount, the borrower hands the lender a personal check covering the loan amount plus the lender's transaction fee--which together may not exceed $300, under California law--and the lender holds that check until an agreed due date, which may not be more than 31 days away, under California law [Fin. Code § 23035(a)]. The due date usually is the borrower's next payday, or the payday after next. On the due date, the lender may deposit the borrower's check, or present it to the borrower's bank for payment. When the lender operates a check cashing business (which often is the case), if the borrower brings a paycheck to be cashed on the due date, the lender could retain the loan amount (plus a check cashing fee) and hand over the remainder along with the borrower's personal check that covered the loan. (Pawnbrokers also provide a small loan service. For discussion, see Ch. 568, Usury .)

A deferred deposit transaction is technically defined as one in which the check casher refrains from depositing a personal check written by a customer until a specific date, pursuant to a written agreement, as provided in Civ. Code § 1789.33 [Fin. Code § 23035].

[b] Transaction Requirements

Under Fin. Code § 23035, a check casher may defer the deposit of a personal check written by a customer for up to 31 days, subject to the statutory requirements. The face amount of the check must not exceed $300. Each deferred deposit must be made pursuant to a written agreement that has been signed by the customer and by the check casher or an authorized representative of the check casher [Fin Code § 23035(a)]. The written agreement must contain, among other things, a statement of the total amount of any fees charged for the deferred deposit, expressed both in U.S. currency and as an annual percentage rate (APR). The written agreement must authorize the check casher to defer deposit of the personal check until a specific date not later than 30 days from the date the written agreement was signed and executed. The written agreement must not permit the check casher to accept collateral. The agreement must also comply with the applicable federal Truth in Lending Act requirements [Fin. Code § 23035(e)].

A check casher may charge a fee for cashing a personal check for deferred deposit in an amount not to exceed 15 percent of the face value of the check [Fin. Code § 23036(a)]. A fee not to exceed $15 may be charged for the return of a dishonored check by a depositary institution [Fin. Code § 23036(e)]. No amount in excess of these fees may be directly or indirectly charged by a check casher pursuant to a deferred deposit agreement [Fin. Code § 23036(f)].

A check casher must not enter into an agreement for a deferred deposit with a customer during the period of time that an earlier written agreement for a deferred deposit for the same customer is in effect [Fin. Code § 23035(b)].

[c] Customer's Immunities

A customer who enters into a deferred deposit agreement and offers a personal check to a check casher pursuant to that agreement is not subject to any criminal penalty for the failure to comply with the terms of that agreement [Civ. Code § 1789.33(b)].

A check casher who enters into a deferred deposit agreement and accepts a check passed on insufficient funds, or any assignee of that check casher, is not entitled to recover damages in any action brought pursuant to, or governed by, Civ. Code § 1719 (liability, including treble damages, for passing a check on insufficient funds) [Fin. Code § 23036(d); see Stats. 2002, ch. 777, § 5].

[d] Enforcement

The deferred deposit transaction law is enforced by the Commissioner of Corporations, who is empowered to undertake administrative action and related civil proceedings for license violations, and to impose administrative sanctions and penalties [see Fin. Code § 23045 et seq.].

Payday lenders who overcharge or impose fees not authorized by the governing statutes forfeit the right to collect any fees whatsoever on the transaction [see Fin. Code §§ 23060-23062]. Limited exceptions exist for unintentional violations that are corrected within 60 days after discovery of the error [see Fin. Code § 23061(b)] and acts taken in good faith in accordance with an administrative rule or regulation that is subsequently rescinded or judicially determined to be invalid [Fin. Code § 23063].

In addition, any injured person may sue for damages, injunctive relief, or both. Damages awarded may be up to three times the actual damages, and in no event less than the amount paid by the aggrieved consumer to the payday lender. Punitive damages also are available if the court determines by clear and convincing evidence that the violation was willful. The court may also grant any equitable relief that it deems proper, including but not limited to, a claim for restitution and disgorgement. A prevailing plaintiff is entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees and costs [Fin. Code § 23064]. Exhaustion of administrative remedies is not necessary in order to pursue these civil remedies [Fin. Code § 23064.5].

These rights, remedies, and penalties are cumulative to any rights, remedies, or penalties established under other laws [Fin. Code § 23064.5].

§ 95.340 Scope of Part

This part covers rights, duties, obligations, and liabilities arising in connection with funds transfers between banks and banking customers under Division 11 of the Commercial Code [see § 95.341[1][a]]. Division 11 governs a specialized method of payment commonly referred to in the banking community as a wholesale wire transfer [see § 95.342[3][a]]. Funds transfers are made by means of payment orders. The scope of Division 11, and therefore the scope of this part as well, is determined by the definitions of "payment order" and "funds transfer" found in Com. Code §§ 11103 and 11104 [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-102; see § 95.342[1][a]].

Division 11 does not apply to a funds transfer if any part of the transfer is governed by the Electronic Fund Transfer Act of 1978 (EFTA) [Com. Code § 11108; see 15 U.S.C. § 1693 et seq. (EFTA)] EFTA covers a wide variety of electronic funds transfers involving consumers. The types of transfers covered by EFTA are essentially different from the wholesale wire transfers that are the primary focus of Division 11. Therefore, a funds transfer is excluded from Division 11 if any part of the transfer is covered by EFTA. Existing procedures designed to comply with federal law are unaffected by Division 11. The effect of Com. Code § 11108 is to make Division 11 and EFTA mutually exclusive. For example, if a funds transfer is to a consumer's account in the beneficiary's bank and the funds transfer is made in part by use of Fedwire [see § 95.343[2][c]] and in part by means of an automated clearinghouse (ACH), then EFTA applies to the ACH part of the transfer but not to the Fedwire part; and Division 11 does not apply to any part of the transfer. However, in the absence of any law governing the part of the funds transfer that is not subject to EFTA, a court could apply appropriate principles from Division 11 by analogy [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-108]. For detailed discussion of EFTA, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 56, Letters of Credit and Electronic Fund Transfers, § 56.80 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.341

§ 95.341 Governing Law

[1] Commercial Code Division 11

Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 11108 [see § 95.340] Division 11 of the Commercial Code applies to funds transfers as defined in Com. Code § 11104 [Com. Code § 11102; see § 95.342[1][a]]. Division 11 may be cited as Uniform Commercial Code--Funds Transfers [Com. Code § 11101].

When it was enacted in 1990, Division 11 was identical to UCC article 4A. Because in adding Division 11 to the Commercial Code, the legislature adopted UCC article 4A "exactly as written," the NCCUSL comments to a given section in Division 11 are "persuasive in interpreting the statute" [Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 239, 243 n.1, 252, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240, 158 P.3d 800] . Such a comment is cited as an "Official Comment" in this part.

The kind of funds transfer governed by Division 11 is in large part a product of developing technological changes. Before Division 11 was drafted, there was no comprehensive body of law--statutory or judicial--that defined the juridical nature of funds transfers or the rights and obligations flowing from payment orders. Judicial authority with respect to funds transfers was sparse, undeveloped, and not uniform. Judges had to resolve disputes by referring to general principles of common law or equity, or they sought guidance in statutes (such as Division 4 of the Commercial Code) that are applicable to other payment methods [e.g., Bank of Am. v. Sanati (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 1083, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 ("At the time of the fund transfer in this case the law controlling the risks and liabilities of banks, beneficiaries and originators was general common law and equitable principles.")]. Attempts to define rights and obligations in funds transfers by general principles or by analogy to rights and obligations in negotiable instrument law or the law of check collection proved unsatisfactory [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-102].

In the drafting of Division 11, a deliberate decision was made to write on a clean slate and to treat a funds transfer as a unique method of payment to be governed by unique rules that address the particular issues raised by this method of payment. A deliberate decision was also made to use precise and detailed rules to assign responsibility, define behavioral norms, allocate risks, and establish limits on liability, rather than to rely on broadly stated, flexible principles. In the drafting of these rules, a critical consideration was that the various parties to funds transfers need to be able to predict risk with certainty, to insure against risk, to adjust operational and security procedures, and to price funds-transfer services appropriately. This consideration is particularly important given the very large amounts of money that typically are involved in funds transfers [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-102].

California courts should take a narrow view in construing and applying Division 11 [see Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 239, 257, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240, 158 P.3d 800 ("Given the care with which [Division 11 of] the Uniform Commercial Code was drafted, and the goal stated in the Code Comment to section 11102 to use throughout division 11 'precise and detailed rules,' we must interpret section 11505 to mean what it says.")]. California case law interpreting Division 11 is sparse. Thus, in most cases, the official UCC comments are the only pronouncements bearing directly on the interpretation of Division 11 in California.

[2] Common Law Rules; Other California Statutes

Division 1 of the Commercial Code contains general definitions and principles of construction and interpretation applicable throughout Division 11 [Com. Code § 11105(d)]. Included is Com. Code § 1103(b), which states that, unless displaced by the particular provisions of the Commercial Code, the principles of law and equity, including the law merchant and the law relative to capacity to contract, principal and agent, estoppel, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, bankruptcy, and other validating or invalidating cause, supplement the provisions of the Code [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-105].

Funds transfers involve competing interests--those of the banks that provide funds-transfer services and the commercial and financial organizations that use the services, as well as the public interest. These competing interests were represented in the drafting process, and they were thoroughly considered. The rules that emerged represent a careful and delicate balancing of those interests and are intended to be the exclusive means of determining the rights, duties, and liabilities of the affected parties in any situation covered by particular provisions of the Division. Consequently, resort to principles of law or equity outside Division 11 is not appropriate to create rights, duties, and liabilities inconsistent with those stated in Division 11 [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-102].

Therefore, Division 11 provides, in effect, that common law causes of action based on allegedly unauthorized funds transfers are displaced in two specific areas:

- When the common law claims would create rights, duties, or liabilities inconsistent with Division 11.

- When the circumstances giving rise to the common law claims are specifically covered by the provisions of Division 11.

This does not mean that Division 11 necessarily displaces all common law actions based on all activities surrounding funds transfers. The exclusivity of Division 11 is deliberately restricted to any situation covered by particular provisions of Division 11. Conversely, situations not covered are not the exclusive province of Division 11 [Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 239, 253, 254, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240, 158 P.3d 800 (Division 11 "squarely covers the question who should bear the loss when a bank executes an unauthorized payment order"); see Official Comment to UCC § 4A-102].

[3] Federal Regulations

Regulations of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and operating circulars of the Federal Reserve banks supersede any inconsistent provision of Division 11 to the extent of the inconsistency [Com. Code § 11107].

Although the terms of Division 11 apply to funds transfers involving Federal Reserve banks, federal preemption would make ineffective any Division 11 provision that conflicts with federal law. The payments activities of the Federal Reserve banks are governed by regulations of the Federal Reserve Board and by operating circulars issued by the banks themselves. In some instances, the operating circulars are issued pursuant to a Federal Reserve Board regulation. In other cases, the bank issues the operating circular under its own authority under the Federal Reserve Act, subject to review by the Federal Reserve Board. Federal Reserve Board regulations, being valid exercises of regulatory authority pursuant to a federal statute, take precedence over state law if there is an inconsistency. Com. Code § 11107 treats Federal Reserve bank operating circulars as having the same effect whether issued under the bank's own authority or under a Federal Reserve Board regulation [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-107].

[4] Funds-Transfer System Rules

Funds-transfer system rules govern rights and obligations between banks that use the system [see § 95.343[2][b] for discussion of what constitutes a funds transfer system]. They may cover a wide variety of matters such as form and content of payment orders, security procedures, cancellation rights and procedures, indemnity rights, compensation rules for delays in completion of a funds transfer, time and method of settlement, credit restrictions with respect to senders of payment orders, and risk allocation with respect to suspension of payments by a participating bank. Funds-transfer system rules can be very effective in supplementing Division 11 and in filling gaps that may be present in Division 11. To the extent that they do not conflict with Division 11, there is no problem with respect to their effectiveness; they merely supplement Division 11. In addition, unless the contrary is stated, funds-transfer system rules can override provisions of Division 11 [Com. Code § 11501(b); see § 95.343[1][e]]. Thus, rights and obligations of banks, with respect to each other in a funds transfer, can be different from what is stated in Division 11, to the extent that a funds-transfer system rule applies [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-501].

Since funds-transfer system rules are defined as those governing the relationship between participating banks [Com. Code § 11501(b); see §§ 95.343[1][e]], a rule can have a direct effect only on participating banks. However, a rule that affects the conduct of a participating bank may indirectly affect the rights of nonparticipants such as the originator or beneficiary of a funds transfer, and such a rule can be effective even though it may affect nonparticipants without their consent. For example, a rule might operate to prevent execution of a payment order, or might allow cancellation of a payment order, with the result that a funds transfer is not completed or is delayed. However, a rule purporting to define rights and obligations of nonparticipants in the system will not be effective to alter Division 11 rights, because the rule is not within the definition of a funds-transfer system rule. Rights and obligations arising under Division 11 may also be varied by agreement of the affected parties, except to the extent that Division 11 provides otherwise [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-501].

§ 95.342 Funds Transfers--Participants and Process

[1] Instruction to Bank for Payment of Money

[a] Originator, Payment Order, and Beneficiary

A funds transfer that is subject to Division 11 begins when a person called the "originator" transmits to a bank an instruction for payment of a fixed or determinable amount of money to a specified person, called the "beneficiary," and the three conditions stated below are satisfied [Com. Code §§ 11103(a)(1), (2), 11104(a), (c)] Such an instruction is a "payment order" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)].

- The instruction must be transmitted directly to the bank or transmitted directly to an agent, a funds-transfer system, or a communication system for transmission to the bank [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(iii); see § 95.342[3][b]].

- The instruction must not state a condition to payment other than the time of payment [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(i); see § 95.342[3][c]].

- The bank is to be reimbursed by debiting an account of, or otherwise receiving payment from, the person that transmitted the instruction [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(ii); see § 95.342[3][d]].

In some cases the originator and the beneficiary may be the same person. This will occur, for example, when a corporation instructs a bank to transfer funds from an account of the corporation in that bank to another account of the corporation in that bank or in some other bank [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-104].

If a payment order is an instruction to make more than one payment to the beneficiary, the instruction is a separate payment order with respect to each payment [Com. Code § 11103(b)].

[b] Originator's Bank and Beneficiary's Bank

The bank to which the originator's payment order is addressed is called the "originator's bank" [Com. Code § 11104(d)]. The bank that is to make payment to the beneficiary is called the "beneficiary's bank" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(3)]. The originator's bank and the beneficiary's bank could be one and the same (for instance, when the originator of a payment order is also the beneficiary).

In some funds transfers, the first bank to issue a payment order is executing a payment order of a customer, in which case the customer is the originator. In other cases, the first bank to issue a payment order is not acting for a customer but is making a payment for its own account. In that event, the first bank to issue a payment order is both the originator and the originator's bank [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-104].

[c] Senders; Issuance of Payment Orders; Receiving Banks

The person transmitting a payment order to a bank is a "sender" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(5)]. The bank to which a payment order is addressed is a "receiving bank" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(4)]. A payment order is "issued" when it is sent to the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11103(c)]. Thus, the originator of a payment order is also a sender, and the originator's bank is also a receiving bank. The beneficiary's bank is also a receiving bank (but, in the role of receiving bank, is never a sender).

[d] Intermediary Banks

In most cases, two or more banks are involved in a funds transfer. Since each bank must be a receiving bank, two or more payment orders have to be sent. When three or more banks are involved, each bank other than the originator's bank and the beneficiary's bank is an "intermediary bank" [Com. Code § 11104(b)]. If two or more banks are involved, then each bank, except the beneficiary's bank, deals with two payment orders. Respecting one payment order, the bank is a receiving bank; respecting the other payment order, the bank is a sender. Note that a payment order is never forwarded from one bank to another; rather, each communication transmitted in the chain starting from the originator (to the originator's bank, thence to an intermediary bank, eventually to the beneficiary's bank) is a separate payment order.

Thus, a funds transfer that is subject to Division 11 typically comprises a series of transactions, beginning with the originator's payment order, made for the purpose of making payment to the beneficiary of the order. Included is any payment order issued by the originator's bank or an intermediary bank intended to carry out the originator's payment order. A funds transfer is completed on acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary of the originator's payment order [Com. Code § 11104(a)].

[2] Illustrative Fact Situations

Division 11 governs a method of payment in which the person making payment (the originator) directly transmits an instruction to a bank, either to make payment to the person intended to receive the payment (the beneficiary) or to instruct some other bank to make payment to the beneficiary. The payment from the originator to the beneficiary occurs when the bank that is to pay the beneficiary (the beneficiary's bank) becomes obligated to pay the beneficiary. Consider the following cases [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-104].

Example 1--Single Payment Order (One Bank).

Payne, having an account in Orange Bank, instructs that bank to pay $1,000,000 to Reeve's account in Orange Bank. Orange Bank carries out Payne's instruction by making a credit of $1,000,000 to Reeve's account and notifying Reeve that the credit is available for immediate withdrawal.

- The instruction by Payne to Orange Bank is a payment order, which was issued when it was sent to Orange Bank [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1), (c)].

- Payne is the sender of the payment order, and Orange Bank is the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11103(a)(4), (5)] Payne, in addition to being the sender of the payment order to Orange Bank, is the originator of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11104(c)].

- Reeve is the beneficiary of the payment order, and Orange Bank is the beneficiary's bank [Com. Code § 11103(a)(2), (3)]. Orange Bank also is the originator's bank [Com. Code § 11104(d)].

- When Orange Bank notified Reeve of receipt of the payment order, Orange Bank accepted the payment order [Com. Code § 11209(b)(1)].

On accepting the payment order, Orange Bank incurred an obligation to Reeve to pay the amount of the order [Com. Code § 11404(a)] and at the same time, Payne incurred an obligation to pay Orange Bank the amount of the order [Com. Code § 11402(b)]. Payment from Payne to Orange Bank normally would be made by a debit to Payne's account in Orange Bank [Com. Code § 11403(a)(3)]. When Orange Bank incurred the obligation to pay Reeve, payment of $1,000,000 by Payne to Reeve was made at the same time [Com. Code § 11406(a)]. Orange Bank actually paid Reeve when it gave notice to Reeve of a withdrawable credit of $1,000,000 to Reeve's account [Com. Code § 11405(a)].

The overall transaction, which comprises the acts of Payne and Orange Bank, in which the payment by Payne to Reeve is accomplished, is referred to as the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11104(a)]. In this case only one payment order was involved in the funds transfer. A one-payment-order funds transfer is usually referred to as a "book transfer" because the payment is accomplished by the receiving bank's debiting the account of the sender and crediting the account of the beneficiary in the same bank.

Example 2--Two Payment Orders (Two Banks). Assume the same facts as in Example 1 except that Payne instructs Orange Bank to pay $1,000,000 to Reeve's account in Barstow Bank. With respect to this payment order, Payne is the sender, Reeve is the beneficiary, and Orange Bank is the receiving bank. Orange Bank carries out Payne's order by instructing Barstow Bank to pay $1,000,000 to Reeve's account. This instruction is another payment order, as to which Orange Bank is the sender, Barstow Bank is the receiving bank, and Reeve is the beneficiary. When Orange Bank issued its payment order to Barstow Bank, Orange Bank executed Payne's payment order [Com. Code § 11301(a)]. In the funds transfer, Payne is the originator, Orange Bank is the originator's bank, and Barstow Bank is the beneficiary's bank. When Orange Bank executed Payne's order, Payne incurred an obligation to pay Orange Bank the amount of the order that Payne issued to Orange Bank [Com. Code § 11402(c)]. When Barstow Bank accepted the payment order issued to it by Orange Bank, Barstow Bank incurred an obligation to Reeve to pay the amount of that payment order [Com. Code § 11404(a)], and Orange Bank incurred an obligation to pay Barstow Bank [Com. Code § 11402(b)]. Acceptance by Barstow Bank also resulted in payment of $1,000,000 by Payne to Reeve [Com. Code § 11406(a)]. In this case two payment orders were involved in the funds transfer.

Example 3--Three or More Payment Orders (Intermediary Banks). Assume the same facts as in Example 2 except that Orange Bank does not execute Payne's payment order by issuing a payment order to Barstow Bank. One bank normally will not act to carry out a funds transfer for another bank unless there is an existing arrangement between the banks for transmitting payment orders and settling accounts. For example, if Barstow Bank is a foreign bank with which Orange Bank has no relationship, then Orange Bank might use a bank that is a correspondent of both Orange Bank and Barstow Bank. Assume that Orange Bank issues a payment order to Irvine Bank to pay $1,000,000 to Reeve's account in Barstow Bank. With respect to this payment order, Orange Bank is the sender, Irvine Bank is the receiving bank, and Reeve is the beneficiary. Irvine Bank will execute the payment order of Orange Bank by issuing a payment order to Barstow Bank to pay $1,000,000 to Reeve's account in Barstow Bank. With respect to Irvine Bank's payment order, Irvine Bank is the sender, Barstow Bank is the receiving bank, and Reeve is the beneficiary. Payment of $1,000,000 by Payne to Reeve occurs when Barstow Bank accepts the payment order issued to it by Irvine Bank.

In this case, the funds transfer involves three payment orders. In the funds transfer, Payne is the originator, Orange Bank is the originator's bank, Barstow Bank is the beneficiary's bank, and Irvine Bank is an intermediary bank [Com. Code § 11104(b)]. In some cases there may be more than one intermediary bank, and in those cases each intermediary bank is treated like Irvine Bank in this example.

In each of the three cases, a payment under Division 11 involves an overall transaction, the funds transfer, in which the originator (Payne) is making payment to the beneficiary (Reeve). The funds transfer may encompass a series of payment orders that are issued so as to effect the payment initiated by the originator's payment order [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-104].

[3] Essential Characteristics of Payment Orders

[a] Payments Are Made Through "Banks" (Wire Transfers)

"Payment order" is defined in Division 11 as an instruction to a "receiving bank" to pay, or to cause another "bank" to pay, a fixed or determinable amount of money [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1), (4)].

Division 11 is limited to payments made through the banking system, which are known among bankers as wholesale wire transfers (or simply wire transfers). Transactions covered by Division 11 typically transfer very large amounts of money, and several discrete transactions involving several banks may be necessary to carry out the payment. Payments normally are made by debits and credits to bank accounts. Originators and beneficiaries normally are business organizations, and the transfers are usually made to pay business obligations. Moreover, these transactions are frequently done on the basis of very short-term credit granted by the receiving bank to the sender of the payment order. Wholesale wire transfers involve policy questions that are distinct from those involved in consumer-based transactions by nonbanks. Therefore, a transfer of funds made by an entity outside the banking system is excluded from the coverage of Division 11. A transfer of funds through an entity other than a bank is usually a consumer transaction involving a relatively small amount of money and a single contract carried out by a transfer of cash or a cash equivalent such as a check. Typically, the transferor delivers cash or a check to the company making the transfer, which agrees to pay a like amount to a person designated by the transferor. [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-104].

"Bank" in this context means a person engaged in the business of banking and includes a savings bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or trust company. A branch or separate office of a bank is a separate bank for purposes of Division 11 [Com. Code § 11105(a)(2)]. This definition includes some institutions that are not commercial banks, reflecting the fact that many financial institutions now perform functions previously restricted to commercial banks, including acting on behalf of customers in funds transfers. Since many funds transfers involve payment orders to or from other countries, the definition also covers foreign banks. The definition also includes Federal Reserve banks [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-105], but funds transfers carried out by Federal Reserve banks are subject to Com. Code § 11107 [see § 95.341[3]].

[b] Instruction Is Transmitted Directly to Bank

An instruction to pay is a "payment order" only if it is "transmitted directly to the bank or transmitted directly to an agent, a funds-transfer system, or a communication system for transmission to the bank" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(iii)]. The principal effect of this limitation is to exclude from Division 11 payments made by check or credit card. In the case of a check or credit card, the instruction of the debtor to the bank on which the check is drawn or to which the credit card slip is to be presented is contained in the check or credit card slip signed by the debtor. The instruction is not transmitted by the debtor directly to the debtor's bank; rather, the instruction is delivered or otherwise transmitted by the debtor to the creditor, who then presents it to the bank either directly or through bank collection channels. These payments are governed by Division 3 (negotiable instruments) and Division 4 (bank deposits and collections) of the Commercial Code and by federal law. There are limited instances, however, in which the paper on which a check is printed can be used as the means of transmitting a payment order that is covered by Division 11 [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-104].

[c] Payment Is Unconditional Except as to Time

An instruction to pay is a "payment order" only if it "does not state a condition to payment to the beneficiary other than time of payment" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(i)].

An instruction to pay a beneficiary sometimes is subject to a requirement that the beneficiary perform some act (such as delivery of documents). Such an instruction is not covered by Division 11 because payment to the beneficiary is conditional on something other than the time of payment (such as receipt of shipping documents) [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-104].

The function of banks in a funds transfer under Division 11 is comparable to the role of banks in the collection and payment of checks, in that it is essentially mechanical in nature. The low price and high speed that characterize funds transfers reflect this fact. Conditions to payment other than time of payment impose responsibilities on a bank that go beyond those in Division 11 funds transfers. Although a payment by a bank to the beneficiary of a letter of credit is not covered by Division 11, if the beneficiary were paid by another bank, then payment of the issuing bank's obligation to reimburse the paying bank could be made by a Division 11 funds transfer. In such a case, there is a distinction between the payment obligation of the issuing bank to the beneficiary and the payment obligation of the issuing bank to the paying bank [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-104].

[d] Bank Makes Credit Transfer

An instruction to pay is a "payment order" only if the "receiving bank is to be reimbursed by debiting an account of, or otherwise receiving payment from, the sender" [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(ii)].

Transfers of funds made through the banking system are commonly referred to as either credit transfers or debit transfers. In a credit transfer, the instruction to pay is given by the person making payment; in a debit transfer, the instruction to pay is given by the person receiving payment. The purpose of Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(ii) is to include credit transfers in Division 11 and to exclude debit transfers. All of the instructions to pay in the three cases described in § 95.342[2] are credit transfers. For instance, in Example 2, with respect to Payne's instruction given to Orange Bank, Orange Bank will be reimbursed by debiting Payne's account or otherwise receiving payment from Payne (the first sender). With respect to Orange Bank's instruction to Barstow Bank, Barstow Bank will be reimbursed by receiving payment from Orange Bank (the second sender) [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-104].

In a debit transfer, a creditor, pursuant to authority from the debtor, is enabled to draw on the debtor's bank account by issuing an instruction-to-pay to the debtor's bank. If the debtor's bank pays, it will be reimbursed by the debtor rather than by the person giving the instruction. For example, the holder of an insurance policy may pay premiums by authorizing the insurance company to order the policyholder's bank to pay the insurance company. The order to pay may be in the form of a draft covered by Division 3 of the Commercial Code, or it might be an instruction to pay that is not an instrument under that division. The bank receives reimbursement by debiting the policyholder's account. As another example, a subsidiary corporation may make payments to its parent by authorizing the parent to order the subsidiary's bank to pay the parent from the subsidiary's account. These transactions are not covered by Division 11 because Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)(ii) is not satisfied. Division 11 is limited to transactions in which the account to be debited by the receiving bank is that of the person in whose name the instruction is given [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-104].

When the beneficiary of a funds transfer is also the originator of the transfer, the transfer is governed by Division 11 if it is a credit transfer in form. If it is in the form of a debit transfer, it is not governed by Division 11. For example, assume that Corporation has accounts in Orange Bank and Barstow Bank. Corporation instructs Orange Bank to make a payment into Corporation's account in Barstow Bank. This would be a funds transfer governed by Division 11. Sometimes, Corporation will authorize Barstow Bank to draw on Corporation's account in Orange Bank for the purpose of transferring funds into Corporation's account in Barstow Bank. If Corporation also makes an agreement with Orange Bank under which Orange Bank is authorized to follow instructions of Barstow Bank, as agent of Corporation, to transfer funds from Corporation's account in Orange Bank, the instruction of Barstow Bank is a payment order of Corporation and is governed by Division 11. (This kind of transaction is known in the wire-transfer business as a "drawdown transfer.") However, if Corporation does not make such an agreement with Orange Bank, and Barstow Bank instructs Orange Bank to make the transfer, then the order is in form a debit transfer and is not governed by Division 11. Such debit transfers are normally automated clearinghouse (ACH) transactions in which Orange Bank relies on Barstow Bank's warranties pursuant to ACH rules, including the warranty that the transfer is authorized [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-104].

§ 95.343 Key Concepts

[1] Definitions

[a] Authorized Account

"Authorized account" means a deposit account of a customer in a bank designated by the customer as a source of payment of payment orders issued by the customer to the bank. If a customer does not so designate an account, any account of the customer is an authorized account if payment of a payment order from that account is not inconsistent with any restriction on the use of that account [Com. Code § 11105(a)(1)].

[b] Clearinghouse; Item

"Clearinghouse" means an association of banks or other payers regularly clearing items [Com. Code §§ 4104(a)(4), 11105(c)].

"Item" means an instrument or a promise or an order to pay money handled by a bank for collection or payment. The term does not include a payment order governed by Division 11 or a credit or debit card slip [Com. Code §§ 4104(a)(9), 11105(c)].

The Federal Reserve System provides the principal clearinghouse operation in the United States. A private clearinghouse operation is provided by an association called NACHA--The Electronic Payments Association (formerly the National Automated Clearing House Association). These two operators provide virtually all clearinghouse services in the United States.

[c] Customer

"Customer" means a person, including a bank, having an account with a bank or from whom a bank has agreed to receive payment orders [Com. Code § 11105(a)(3)].

[d] Funds-Transfer Business Day

Funds-transfer business is frequently transacted by banks outside general banking hours. Thus, the definition of banking day in Com. Code § 4104(1)(c) is not suitable to describe when a bank is open for funds-transfer business. Com. Code § 11105(a)(4) defines a new term, "funds-transfer business day," which is applicable to Division 11 [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-105]. "Funds-transfer business day" of a receiving bank means the part of a day during which the receiving bank is open for the receipt, processing, and transmission of payment orders and cancellations and amendments of payment orders [Com. Code § 11105(a)(4)].

In some cases it is possible to electronically transmit payment orders and other communications to a receiving bank at any time. If the receiving bank is not open for the processing of an order when it is received, the communication is stored in the receiving bank's computer for retrieval when the receiving bank is open for processing. The use of the conjunctive makes clear that the defined term is limited to the period during which all functions of the receiving bank can be performed, that is, receipt, processing, and transmission of payment orders, cancellations, and amendments [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-105].

[e] Funds-Transfer System Rules

"Funds-transfer system rule" means a rule of an association of banks either [Com. Code § 11501(b)].

- Governing transmission of payment orders by means of a funds-transfer system of the association or rights and obligations with respect to those orders; or

- To the extent the rule governs rights and obligations between banks that are parties to a funds transfer in which a Federal Reserve bank, acting as an intermediary bank, sends a payment order to the beneficiary's bank.

Except as otherwise provided in Division 11, a funds-transfer system rule governing rights and obligations between participating banks using the system may be effective even if the rule conflicts with Division 11 and indirectly affects another party to the funds transfer who does not consent to the rule. A funds-transfer system rule also may govern rights and obligations of parties other than participating banks using the system, to the extent stated in Com. Code §§ 11404(c), 11405(d), and 11507(c) [Com. Code § 11501(b)].

Whether a transfer is made through an automated clearinghouse of a Federal Reserve bank or through an automated clearinghouse of another association of banks, the rights and obligations of the originator's bank and the beneficiary's bank are governed by uniform rules adopted by various associations of banks in various parts of the United States. With respect to transfers in which a Federal Reserve bank acts as an intermediary bank, these rules may be incorporated, in whole or in part, in operating circulars of the Federal Reserve bank. Even if not so incorporated, these rules can still be binding on the associated banks. If a transfer is made through a Federal Reserve bank, the rules are effective under the second clause of Com. Code § 11501(b); if the transfer is not made through a Federal Reserve bank, the association rules are effective under the first clause of Com. Code § 11501(b) [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-501].

[f] Payment Date; Settlement Date; Effective Date

"Payment date" of a payment order means the day on which the amount of the order is payable to the beneficiary by the beneficiary's bank. The payment date may be determined by an instruction of the sender but cannot be earlier than the day the order is received by the beneficiary's bank and, unless otherwise determined, is the day the order is received by the beneficiary's bank [Com. Code § 11401].

"Payment date" refers to the day the beneficiary's bank is to pay the beneficiary. The payment date may be expressed in various ways as long as it indicates the day the beneficiary is to receive payment. For example, in transfers through an automated clearinghouse, the payment date is the equivalent of "settlement date" or "effective date." The payment-date rule applies to the payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank, but a payment order issued to a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank may also state a date for payment to the beneficiary. In the latter case, the statement of a payment date is an instruction to the receiving bank concerning the time for executing the sender's order [Com. Code § 11301(b); Official Comment to UCC § 4A-401].

[g] Prove

"Prove" with respect to a fact means to meet the burden of persuading the trier of fact that the existence of the fact is more probable than its nonexistence [Com. Code §§ 1201(b)(8), 11105(a)(7)].

[h] Security Procedure

"Security procedure" means a procedure established by agreement of a customer and a receiving bank for the purpose of either (1) verifying that a payment order or communication amending or canceling a payment order is that of the customer, or (2) detecting error in the transmission or the content of the payment order or communication. A security procedure may require the use of algorithms or other codes, identifying words or numbers, encryption, callback procedures, or similar security devices. Comparison of a signature on a payment order or communication with an authorized specimen signature of the customer is not by itself a security procedure [Com. Code § 11201].

A large percentage of payment orders and communications amending or canceling payment orders are transmitted electronically, and it is standard practice to use security procedures that are designed to ensure the authenticity of the message. Security procedures can also be used to detect errors in the content of messages or to detect payment orders that are transmitted by mistake (as in the case of multiple transmission of the same payment order). Security procedures also may apply to communications that are transmitted by telephone or in writing. The definition of security procedure limits the term to a procedure "established by agreement of a customer and a receiving bank." The term does not apply to procedures that the receiving bank may follow unilaterally in processing payment orders. The question of whether loss that may result from the transmission of a spurious or erroneous payment order will be borne by the receiving bank or by the sender or purported sender is affected by whether a security procedure was or was not in effect and whether there was or was not compliance with the procedure. Security procedures are referred to in Division 11 with respect to authorized and verified payment orders [see Com. Code §§ 11202, 11203; § 95.343[7] and erroneous payment orders [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-201; see Com. Code § 11205; § 95.345].

[i] Sender

"Sender" includes the customer in whose name a payment order is issued if the order is the authorized order of the customer under Com. Code § 11202(a), or it is effective as the order of the customer under Com. Code § 11202(b) [Com. Code § 11202(d)]. See § 95.343[7] regarding when a payment order is authorized; see § 95.344[1] regarding when an unauthorized payment order can be effective.

[2] Transmission of Payment Order

[a] Permissible Methods; Wire Transfers

A payment order may be transmitted orally, electronically, or in writing [Com. Code § 11103(a)(1)]. Most payments covered by Division 11 are commonly referred to as wire transfers and usually involve some kind of electronic transmission, but the applicability of Division 11 does not depend on the means used to transmit the instruction of the sender. Transmission may be by letter or other written communication, oral communication, or electronic communication. An oral communication is normally given by telephone. Frequently the message is recorded by the receiving bank to provide evidence of the transaction, but apart from problems of proof there is no need to record the oral instruction. Transmission of an instruction may be a direct communication between the sender and the receiving bank or through an intermediary such as an agent of the sender, a communication system such as international cable, or a funds-transfer system such as CHIPS, SWIFT, or an automated clearinghouse [Official Comment 6 to UCC § 4A-104].

[b] Funds-Transfer Systems; CHIPS; SWIFT

"Funds-transfer system" means a wire transfer network, automated clearinghouse, or other communication system of a clearinghouse or other association of banks through which a payment order by a bank may be transmitted to the bank to which the order is addressed [Com. Code § 11105(a)(5)].

The concept includes a system such as the Clearing House Interbank Payments System (CHIPS), which provides for transmission of a payment order as well as settlement of the obligation of the sender to pay the order. It also includes an automated clearinghouse, operated by a clearinghouse or some other association of banks, which processes and transmits payment orders of banks to other banks. In addition, the concept includes organizations such as the Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication (SWIFT), which provides only transmission services [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-105].

The concept also includes the wire transfer network and automated clearinghouses of Federal Reserve banks. However, systems of the Federal Reserve banks are treated differently from systems of other associations of banks. Funds-transfer systems other than systems of the Federal Reserve banks are treated in Division 11 as a means of communication of payment orders between participating banks [Com. Code § 11206]. See §§ 95.343[2][c] and 95.345[1] regarding how Federal Reserve banks function under Division 11.

Funds-transfer systems are able to promulgate rules binding on participating banks that may supplement or in some cases may even override provisions of Division 11 [see Com. Code § 11501; Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-105].

[c] Transfers by Fedwire

Funds transfers under Division 11 may be made, in whole or in part, by payment orders through a Federal Reserve bank in what is usually referred to as a transfer by Fedwire [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-107 (providing examples)]. A funds transfer also can be made through a Federal Reserve bank in an automated clearinghouse transaction [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-107 (providing example)].

[3] Time of Receipt of Payment Order or Communication to Cancel or Amend

The time of receipt of a payment order or communication canceling or amending a payment order is determined by the rules applicable to receipt of a notice stated in Com. Code § 1202. A receiving bank may fix a cutoff time or times on a funds-transfer business day for the receipt and processing of payment orders and communications canceling or amending payment orders. Different cutoff times may apply to payment orders, cancellations, or amendments, or to different categories of payment orders, cancellations, or amendments. A cutoff time may apply to senders generally or different cutoff times may apply to different senders or categories of payment orders. If a payment order or communication canceling or amending a payment order is received after the close of a funds-transfer business day or after the appropriate cutoff time on a funds-transfer business day, the receiving bank may treat the payment order or communication as received at the opening of the next funds-transfer business day [Com. Code § 11106(a)].

The time a payment order is received by a receiving bank usually defines the payment date or the execution date of a payment order [Com. Code §§ 11301, 11401]. The time of receipt of a payment order, or communication canceling or amending a payment order, is defined in Com. Code § 11106(a) by reference to the rules stated in Com. Code § 1202 on notice. Thus, time of receipt is determined by the same rules that determine when a notice is received. Time of receipt, however, may be altered by a cutoff time [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-106].

If Division 11 refers to an execution date or payment date or states a day on which a receiving bank is required to take action, and the date or day does not fall on a funds-transfer business day, the next day that is a funds-transfer business day is treated as the date or day stated, unless the contrary is stated in Division 11 [Com. Code § 11106(b)].

[4] Rejection of Payment Order

[a] Notice of Rejection Generally Is Not Required

A payment order is a request by the sender to the receiving bank, to execute or pay the order; and that request can be accepted [see § 95.343[5]] or rejected by the receiving bank [Com. Code §§ 11209, 11210; Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-209].

With respect to a payment order issued to a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank, notice of rejection is not necessary to prevent acceptance of the order. Acceptance can occur only if the receiving bank executes the order [Com. Code § 11209(a); see § 95.343[5]]. However, notice of rejection routinely will be given by such a bank in cases in which the bank cannot or is not willing to execute the order for some reason. There are many reasons why a bank would not execute an order. For example, the payment order might not clearly instruct the receiving bank because of some ambiguity in the order or an internal inconsistency. In some cases, the receiving bank will not be able to carry out the instruction because of equipment failure, credit limitations on the receiving bank, or some other fact that makes proper execution of the order unfeasible. In such cases, notice of rejection is a means of informing the sender of the facts so that a corrected payment order can be transmitted or the sender can pursue some other means of completing the funds transfer. The other major reason for not executing an order is that the sender's account is insufficient to cover the order, and the receiving bank is not willing to give credit to the sender. If the sender's account is sufficient to cover the order and the receiving bank chooses not to execute the order, notice of rejection is necessary to prevent liability to pay interest to the sender if the case falls within Com. Code § 11210(b) [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-210; see § 95.347].

[b] Rejection Notice by Beneficiary's Bank Can Be Necessary to Prevent Acceptance By Inaction

A payment order to the beneficiary's bank can be accepted by inaction of the bank [Com. Code § 11209(b)(2), (3)]. To prevent acceptance by inaction, it is necessary for the beneficiary's bank to send notice of rejection before acceptance occurs [Com. Code § 11210(a); see § 95.347]. Rejection is effective when notice is given if it is given by a means that is reasonable in the circumstances; otherwise, it is effective when the notice is received [see Com. Code § 1202]. The question of when rejection is effective is important only in the relatively few cases under Com. Code § 11210(b)(2) and (3) in which a notice of rejection is necessary to prevent acceptance [see § 95.347]. The question of whether a particular means is reasonable depends on the facts in a particular case. In a most cases, the sender and the receiving bank will be in direct electronic contact with each other, and a notice of rejection can be transmitted instantaneously. Since time is of the essence in most funds transfers, some quick means of transmission usually would be required, but this is not always the case. The parties may specify by agreement the means by which communication between the parties is to be made [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-210].

[5] Acceptance of Payment Order

A receiving bank has no duty to accept a payment order unless the bank makes an agreement, either before or after issuance of the payment order, to accept it, or acceptance is required by a funds-transfer system rule. If the bank makes such an agreement, the bank incurs a contractual obligation based on the agreement and may be held liable for breach of contract if a failure to execute violates the agreement. In many cases, a bank will enter into an agreement with its customer to govern the rights and obligations of the parties with respect to payment orders issued to the bank by the customer. In cases in which the sender is also a bank, there may be a funds-transfer system rule that governs the obligations of a receiving bank with respect to payment orders transmitted over the system. The agreement or rule can specify the circumstances under which a receiving bank is obliged to execute a payment order, and can define the extent of liability of the receiving bank for breach of the agreement or rule [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-209; see Com. Code § 11305(d) (liability for breach of agreement to execute payment order); § 95.352[1][d]].

If the receiving bank is not the beneficiary's bank, acceptance occurs when the bank executes the payment order [Com. Code § 11209(a)] which the bank does by issuing its own payment order [Com. Code § 11301(a); see § 95.348[3]]. If the receiving bank is the beneficiary's bank, acceptance occurs on one of three possible events, which are discussed in § 95.348[4]. [see Com. Code § 11209(b)].

Acceptance of the payment order imposes on the receiving bank an obligation to either the sender (if the receiving bank is not the beneficiary's bank) or the beneficiary (if the receiving bank is the beneficiary's bank) [Com. Code §§ 11302, 11404; Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-209].

[6] Execution of Payment Order

[a] Intermediary Banks "Execute" Payment Orders

A payment order is "executed" by the receiving bank when it issues a payment order intended to carry out the payment order received by the bank. A payment order received by the beneficiary's bank can be accepted but cannot be executed [Com. Code § 11301(a)].

The terms "executed," "execution," and "execution date" are used only with respect to a payment order to a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank. Execution refers to the act of the receiving bank in issuing a payment order "intended to carry out" the payment order that the bank received. A receiving bank has executed an order even if the order issued by the bank is not sufficient to carry out the order received by the bank. For example, the bank might erroneously issue an order to the wrong beneficiary, or in the wrong amount, or to the wrong beneficiary's bank. In each of these cases execution has occurred, but the execution is erroneous [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-301; see Com. Code § 11303; § 95.351].

[b] Execution Date

The "execution date" of a payment order is the day on which the receiving bank may properly issue its payment order in execution of the sender's order. The execution date may be determined by instruction of the sender but cannot be earlier than the day the order is received and, unless otherwise determined, is the day the order is received. If the sender's instruction states a payment date, then the execution date is the payment date or an earlier date on which execution is reasonably necessary to allow payment to the beneficiary on the payment date [Com. Code § 11301(b)].

The execution date refers to the time a payment order should be executed rather than the day it is actually executed. Normally the sender will not specify an execution date, and most payment orders are meant to be executed immediately; therefore, the execution date is normally the day the order is received by the receiving bank. It is common for the sender to specify a "payment date" which is defined as "the day on which the amount of the order is payable to the beneficiary by the beneficiary's bank" [Com. Code § 11401; see § 95.343[1][f]]. Except for automated clearinghouse (ACH) transfers, if a funds transfer is entirely within the United States and the payment is to be carried out electronically, the execution date is the payment date unless the order is received after the payment date. If the payment is to be carried out through an automated clearinghouse, execution may occur before the payment date. In an ACH transfer the beneficiary is usually paid one or two days after issue of the originator's payment order. The execution date is determined by the stated payment date and is a date before the payment date on which execution is reasonably necessary to allow payment on the payment date. A funds-transfer system rule also can determine the execution date of orders received by the receiving bank if both the sender and the receiving bank are participants in the funds-transfer system. The execution date can be determined by the payment order itself or by separate instructions of the sender or an agreement between the sender and the receiving bank [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-301].

If a payment order is received after a cutoff time of the receiving bank, it may be treated by the bank as received at the opening of the next funds transfer business day [Com. Code § 11106; Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-301].

Execution on the execution date is timely, but the order can be executed before or after the execution date. See §§ 95.348[2] and 95.352[2][b] for the consequences of early execution [see Com. Code §§ 11209(d), 11402(c)]. See § 95.352[1] for the consequences of late execution [see Com. Code § 11305(a)].

[7] Authorized Payment Order

A payment order received by the receiving bank is the "authorized" order of the person identified as the sender if that person authorized the order or is otherwise bound by it under the law of agency [Com. Code § 11202(a)].

Some person will always be identified as the sender of a payment order. Acceptance of the order by the receiving bank is based on a belief by the bank that the order was authorized by the person identified as the sender. If the receiving bank is the beneficiary's bank, acceptance means that the receiving bank is obligated to pay the beneficiary. If the receiving bank is not the beneficiary's bank, acceptance means that the receiving bank has executed the sender's order and is obligated to pay the bank that accepts the order issued in execution of the sender's order. In either case, if the person identified as the sender of the order refuses to pay on the ground that the order was not authorized by that person, the receiving bank would suffer a loss unless it was entitled to enforce payment of the payment order that it accepted. In the absence of a statute or agreement that specifically addresses the issue, the matter usually will be resolved by the law of agency. In some cases, the law of agency works well. For example, suppose the receiving bank executes a payment order given by means of a letter apparently written by a corporation that is a customer of the bank and apparently signed by an officer of the corporation. If the receiving bank acts solely on the basis of the letter, the corporation is not bound as the sender of the payment order unless the signature was that of the officer and the officer was authorized to act for the corporation in the issuance of payment orders, or some other agency doctrine such as apparent authority or estoppel causes the corporation to be bound. Other equitable principles such as subrogation or restitution also may allow a receiving bank to recover with respect to an unauthorized payment order that it accepted [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-203].

Given the large amount of the typical payment order, a prudent receiving bank will be unwilling to accept a payment order unless it has assurance that the order is what it purports to be. This assurance is normally provided by security procedures [see Com. Code § 11201; § 95.343[1][h]]. Normally in cases covered by Division 11, transmission of the payment order is made electronically, and the receiving bank is obliged to act on the basis of a message that appears on a computer screen. Common law concepts of authority of an agent to bind the principal are not helpful. There is no way of determining the identity or the authority of the person who caused the message to be sent. The receiving bank is not relying on the authority of any particular person to act for the purported sender. The case is not comparable to payment of a check by the drawee bank on the basis of a signature that is forged. Rather, the receiving bank relies on a security procedure pursuant to which the authenticity of the message can be "tested" by various devices which are designed to provide certainty that the message comes from the sender identified in the payment order. Thus, in the wire transfer business, the concept of "authorized" is different from that found in agency law, in that a payment order is treated as the order of the person in whose name it is issued if it is properly tested pursuant to a security procedure, and the order passes the test [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-203].

[8] Choice-of-Law Rules

[a] Default Rules

The following choice of law rules apply unless the affected parties otherwise agree [see § 95.343[8][b]] or a funds-transfer system rule supervenes [see § 95.343[8][c]]:

- The rights and obligations between the sender of a payment order and the receiving bank are governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the receiving bank is located [Com. Code § 11507(a)(1)].

- The rights and obligations between the beneficiary's bank and the beneficiary are governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the beneficiary's bank is located [Com. Code § 11507(a)(2)].

- The issue of when payment is made pursuant to a funds transfer by the originator to the beneficiary is governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the beneficiary's bank is located [Com. Code § 11507(a)(3)].

Funds transfers typically are interstate or international in character. If part of a funds transfer is governed by Division 11 and another part is governed by other law, the rights and obligations of parties to the funds transfer may be unclear because there is no clear consensus in various jurisdictions concerning the juridical nature of the transaction. Unless all of a funds transfer is governed by a single law, it may be very difficult to predict the result when something goes wrong in the transfer. Com. Code § 11507 deals with this problem [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-507].

Payment by the originator to the beneficiary of the funds transfer occurs when the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11406]. A jurisdiction in which UCC article 4A (Division 11) is not in effect may follow a different rule or it may not have a clear rule. Under Com. Code § 11507(a)(3) the issue is governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which the beneficiary's bank is located. Since the payment to the beneficiary is made through the beneficiary's bank, it is reasonable that the issue of when payment occurs will be governed by the law of the jurisdiction in which that bank is located. Since it can be difficult in many cases to determine where a beneficiary is located, the location of the beneficiary's bank provides a more certain rule [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-507].

[b] Effect of Parties' Agreement

If the parties described in each paragraph of Com. Code § 11507(a) [see § 95.343[8][a]] have made an agreement selecting the law of a particular jurisdiction to govern rights and obligations between themselves, the law of that jurisdiction governs those rights and obligations, whether or not the payment order or the funds transfer bears a reasonable relation to that jurisdiction [Com. Code § 11507(b)].

This rule gives parties the maximum freedom of choice. As long as the case law of funds transfers is not well developed, there may be a strong incentive to choose the law of a jurisdiction in which UCC Article 4A is in effect because it provides a greater degree of certainty with respect to the rights of the parties. With respect to commercial transactions, uniformity and predictability based on commercial convenience are prime considerations in making the choice of governing law [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-507]. Com. Code § 11507(b) is derived in part from Civ. Code § 1646.5.

[c] Effect of Funds-Transfer System Rule

Under Com. Code § 11507(c), a funds-transfer system rule may select the law of a particular jurisdiction to govern rights and obligations between participating banks with respect to payment orders transmitted or processed through the system. A choice of law made pursuant to this power is binding on participating banks [Com. Code § 11507(c)].

A funds-transfer system rule also may select the law of a particular jurisdiction to govern the rights and obligations of some or all parties to a funds transfer any part of which is carried out by means of the system. A choice of law made pursuant to this power is binding on the originator, other sender, or a receiving bank having notice that the funds-transfer system might be used in the funds transfer and of the choice of law by the system when the originator, other sender, or receiving bank issued or accepted a payment order [Com. Code § 11507(c)].

The beneficiary of a funds transfer is bound by the choice of law in a funds-transfer system rule if, when the funds transfer is initiated, the beneficiary has notice that the funds-transfer system might be used in the funds transfer and of the choice of law by the system [Com. Code § 11507(c)].

The law of a jurisdiction selected pursuant to Com. Code § 11507(c) may govern whether or not that law bears a reasonable relation to the matter in issue [Com. Code § 11507(c); but see § 95.343[8][d] (conflicting rules)].

Com. Code § 11507(c) may be the most important provision in regard to creating uniformity of law in funds transfers. Most rights stated in Division 11 regard parties who are in privity of contract such as originator and beneficiary, sender and receiving bank, and beneficiary's bank and beneficiary. Since they are in privity, they can make a choice of law by agreement. Not all parties are in privity, however. For example, an intermediary bank that improperly executes a payment order is not in privity either with the originator or the beneficiary. The ability of a funds-transfer system to make a choice of law by rule is a convenient way of dispensing with individual agreements and to cover cases in which agreements are not feasible. It is probable that funds-transfer systems will adopt a governing law to increase the certainty of commercial transactions that are effected over such systems. A system rule might adopt the law of a particular state where UCC Article 4A (Division 11) is in force, to govern transfers on the system in order to provide a consistent, unitary, law governing all transfers made on the system. To the extent that such system rules become applicable, individual choice-of-law agreements become unnecessary [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-507].

Com. Code § 11507(c) has broad application. A system-rule choice of law not only applies to rights and obligations between banks that use the system but also may apply to other parties to the funds transfer, as long as some part of the transfer is carried out over the system. The originator and any other sender or receiving bank in the funds transfer is bound if at the time of issuing or accepting a payment order, that party had notice that the funds transfer involved use of the system and that the system chose the law of a particular jurisdiction [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-507]. Under Com. Code § 11107, the Federal Reserve by regulation could make a similar choice of law to govern funds transfers carried out by use of Federal Reserve banks [see § 95.341[3]].

[d] Conflicting Rules

In the event of inconsistency between an agreement under Com. Code § 11507(b) and a choice-of-law rule under Com. Code § 11507(c), the agreement under Com. Code § 11507(b) prevails [Com. Code § 11507(d)].

If a funds transfer is made by use of more than one funds-transfer system, and there is inconsistency between choice-of-law rules of the systems, the matter in issue is governed by the law of the selected jurisdiction that has the most significant relationship to the matter in issue [Com. Code § 11507(e)].

§ 95.344 Security Procedure Agreements

[1] Effect of Agreement

[a] Unauthorized Payment Order Can Be Effective

Under Com. Code § 11202, if a bank and its customer have agreed that the authenticity of payment orders issued to the bank in the name of the customer as sender will be verified pursuant to a security procedure, a payment order received by the receiving bank is effective as the order of the customer, whether or not authorized, if the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 11202(b)].

- The security procedure is a commercially reasonable method of providing security against unauthorized payment orders.

- The bank proves that it accepted the payment order in good faith and in compliance with the security procedure and any written agreement or instruction of the customer restricting acceptance of payment orders issued in the name of the customer.

The bank is not required to follow an instruction (1) that violates a written agreement with the customer, or (2) notice of which is not received at a time and in a manner affording the bank a reasonable opportunity to act on it before the payment order is accepted [Com. Code § 11202(b)].

Com. Code § 11202 reflects the reality of the wire transfer business. A person in whose name a payment order is issued is considered to be the sender of the order if the order is "authorized" as stated in Com. Code § 11202(a) [see § 95.343[7] or if the order is "verified" pursuant to a security procedure in compliance with Com. Code § 11202(b). If Com. Code § 11202(b) does not apply, the question of whether the customer is responsible for the order is determined by the law of agency. The issue is one of actual or apparent authority of the person who caused the order to be issued in the name of the customer. In some cases the law of agency might allow the customer to be bound by an unauthorized order if conduct of the customer can be used to find an estoppel against the customer to deny that the order was unauthorized. If the customer is bound by the order under any of these agency doctrines, Com. Code § 11202(a) treats the order as authorized and thus the customer is deemed to be the sender of the order [see § 95.343[7]]. In most cases, however, Com. Code § 11202(b) will apply. In that event there is no need to make an agency-law analysis to determine authority; the issue of liability of the purported sender of the payment order will be determined by agency law only if the receiving bank did not comply with Com. Code § 11202(b) [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-203].

[b] What Bank Must Prove

Com. Code § 11202(b) is based on the assumption that losses due to fraudulent payment orders can best be avoided by the use of commercially reasonable security procedures, and that the use of such procedures should be encouraged. The subsection is designed to protect both the customer and the receiving bank. A receiving bank needs to be able to rely on objective criteria to determine whether it can safely act on a payment order. Employees of the bank can be trained to "test" a payment order according to the various steps specified in the security procedure. The bank is responsible for the acts of these employees. The bank is required to prove that it accepted the payment order in good faith and "in compliance with the security procedure." If the fraud was not detected because the bank's employee did not perform the acts required by the security procedure, the bank has not complied. The bank also is required to prove that it complied with any agreement or instruction that restricts acceptance of payment orders issued in the name of the customer. For example, the customer may prohibit the bank from accepting a payment order that is not payable from an authorized account, that exceeds the credit balance in specified accounts of the customer, or that exceeds some other amount [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-203].

A limitation may relate instead to the beneficiary. For example, the customer may provide the bank with a list of authorized beneficiaries and prohibit acceptance of any payment order to a beneficiary not appearing on the list [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-203].

Limitations may be incorporated into the security procedure itself, or may be covered by a separate agreement or instruction. In either case, the bank must comply with the limitations if the conditions stated in Com. Code § 11202(b) are met. Normally limitations on acceptance would be incorporated into an agreement between the customer and the receiving bank, but in some cases the instruction might be unilaterally given by the customer. If standing instructions or an agreement state limitations on the ability of the receiving bank to act, provision must be made for later modification of the limitations. Normally this would be done by an agreement that specifies particular procedures to be followed. Thus, Com. Code § 11202(b) states that the receiving bank is not required to follow an instruction that violates a written agreement [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-203].

The receiving bank is not bound by an instruction unless it has adequate notice of the instruction [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-203; see Com. Code § 1202 (notice)].

[2] Commercial Reasonableness

[a] Requirement for Reasonableness

Com. Code § 11202(b) assures that the interests of the customer will be protected by providing an incentive to a bank to make available to the customer a security procedure that is commercially reasonable [see § 95.344[1][a]]. If a commercially reasonable security procedure is not made available to the customer, Com. Code § 11202(b) does not apply. The result is that Com. Code § 11202(a) applies and the bank acts at its peril in accepting a payment order that may be unauthorized [see § 95.343[7]]. Prudent banking practice may require that security procedures be used in virtually all cases except for those in which personal contact between the customer and the bank eliminates the possibility of an unauthorized order. The burden of making available commercially reasonable security procedures is imposed on receiving banks because they generally determine what security procedures can be used and are in the best position to evaluate the efficacy of procedures offered to customers to combat fraud. The burden on the customer is to supervise its employees to assure compliance with the security procedure and to safeguard confidential security information and access to transmitting facilities so that the security procedure cannot be breached [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-203].

[b] How Reasonableness Is Determined

The principal issue that is likely to arise in litigation involving Com. Code § 11202(b) is whether the security procedure in effect when a fraudulent payment order was accepted was commercially reasonable [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203]. Commercial reasonableness of a security procedure is a question of law to be determined by considering the following factors [Com. Code § 11202(c)]:

- The wishes of the customer expressed to the bank.
- The circumstances of the customer known to the bank, including the size, type, and frequency of payment orders normally issued by the customer to the bank.
- Alternative security procedures offered to the customer.
- Security procedures in general use by customers and receiving banks similarly situated [Com. Code § 11202(c)].

It is appropriate to make the finding concerning commercial reasonableness a matter of law because security procedures are likely to be standardized in the banking industry and a question of law standard leads to more predictability concerning the level of security that a bank must offer to its customers [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203].

The purpose of Com. Code § 11202(b) is to encourage banks to institute reasonable safeguards against fraud, not to make them insurers against fraud. Thus, a security procedure is not commercially unreasonable simply because another procedure might have been better or because the judge deciding the question would have opted for a more stringent procedure. The standard is not whether the security procedure is the best available. Rather, it is whether the procedure is reasonable for the particular customer and the particular bank, which is a lower standard. On the other hand, a security procedure that fails to meet prevailing standards of good banking practice applicable to the particular bank should not be held to be commercially reasonable [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203].

The concept of what is commercially reasonable in a given case is flexible. Verification entails labor and equipment costs that can vary greatly depending on the degree of security that is sought. A customer that transmits very large numbers of payment orders in very large amounts may desire and may reasonably expect to be provided with state-of-the-art procedures that provide maximum security. However, the expense involved may make use of a state-of-the-art procedure infeasible for a customer that normally transmits payment orders infrequently or in relatively low amounts [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203].

Another variable is the type of receiving bank. It is reasonable to require large money center banks to make available state-of-the-art security procedures. On the other hand, the same requirement may not be reasonable for a small country bank. A receiving bank might have several security procedures that are designed to meet the varying needs of different customers. The type of payment order is another variable. For example, in a wholesale wire transfer, each payment order normally is transmitted electronically and individually. A testing procedure will be applied individually to each payment order. In funds transfers to be made by means of an automated clearinghouse many payment orders are incorporated into an electronic device that is physically delivered. Testing of the individual payment orders is not feasible. Thus, a different kind of security procedure must be adopted to take into account the different mode of transmission [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203].

[c] Security Procedure Chosen by Customer Is Deemed Reasonable

A security procedure is deemed to be commercially reasonable if the following conditions are satisfied [Com. Code § 11202(c)].

- The security procedure was chosen by the customer after the bank offered, and the customer refused, a security procedure that was commercially reasonable for that customer.

- The customer expressly agreed in writing to be bound by any payment order, whether or not authorized, issued in its name and accepted by the bank in compliance with the security procedure chosen by the customer.

Sometimes an informed customer refuses a security procedure that is commercially reasonable and suitable for that customer and insists on using a higher-risk procedure because it is more convenient or cheaper. In that case, the customer has voluntarily assumed the risk of failure of the procedure and cannot shift the loss to the bank. However, this result follows only if the customer expressly agrees in writing to assume that risk. It is implicit in the last sentence of Com. Code § 11202(c) that a bank that accedes to the wishes of its customer in this regard is not acting in bad faith by doing so, as long as the customer is made aware of the risk. In all cases, however, a receiving bank cannot get the benefit of Com. Code § 11202(b) unless it has made available to the customer a security procedure that is commercially reasonable and suitable for use by that customer. In most cases, the mutual interest of bank and customer to protect against fraud should lead to agreement to a security procedure which is commercially reasonable [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-203].

[3] Application to Amended or Canceled Payment Order

Com. Code § 11202 applies to amendments and cancellations of payment orders to the same extent as it applies to payment orders [Com. Code § 11202(e)].

[4] No Variation by Agreement

Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 11202 [see § 95.344[1] -[3]] and in Com. Code § 11203(a)(1) [see § 95.350[1][a]], rights and obligations arising under Com. Code § 11202 may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11202(f)].

In a large majority of cases, the sender of a payment order is a bank. In many cases in which there is a bank sender, both the sender and the receiving bank will be members of a funds-transfer system over which the payment order is transmitted. Com. Code § 11202(f) does not prohibit a funds-transfer system rule from varying rights and obligations under Com. Code § 11202. Therefore, a rule of the funds-transfer system can determine how loss arising on account of an unauthorized payment order from a participating bank to another participating bank is to be allocated [Official Comment 7 to UCC § 4A-203]. A funds-transfer system rule, however, cannot change the rights of a customer that is not a participating bank [Com. Code § 11501(b)].

§ 95.345 Error in Content or Transmission of Payment Order Pursuant to Security Procedure

[1] In General

[a] Transmission Pursuant to Security Procedure

If an accepted payment order was transmitted pursuant to a security procedure for the detection of error, and the payment order either (1) erroneously instructed payment to a beneficiary not intended by the sender, (2) erroneously instructed payment in an amount greater than the amount intended by the sender, or (3) was an erroneously transmitted duplicate of a payment order previously sent by the sender, the following rules apply [Com. Code § 11205(a)].

- If the sender proves that the sender or a person acting on behalf of the sender pursuant to Com. Code § 11206 complied with the security procedure and that the error would have been detected if the receiving bank had also complied, the sender is not obliged to pay the order to the extent stated in the following two rules [Com. Code § 11205(a)(1)].

- If the funds transfer is completed on the basis of a payment order that either erroneously instructed payment to a beneficiary not intended by the sender or erroneously instructed payment in an amount greater than the amount intended by the sender, the sender is not obliged to pay the order and the receiving bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary any amount paid to the beneficiary to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11205(a)(2)].

- If the funds transfer is completed on the basis of a payment order that was an erroneously transmitted duplicate of a payment order previously sent by the sender, the sender is not obliged to pay the order to the extent the amount received by the beneficiary is greater than the amount intended by the sender. In that case, the receiving bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary the excess amount received to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11205(a)(3)].

The three cases covered by Com. Code § 11205 [see above] are essentially similar. In each, if the error is not detected, a beneficiary will receive funds that the beneficiary was not intended to receive. If Com. Code § 11205 applies, the risk of loss with respect to the error of the sender is shifted to the bank which has the burden of recovering the funds from the beneficiary. The risk of loss is shifted to the bank only if the sender proves that the error would have been detected if there had been compliance with the procedure and that the sender (or an agent under Com. Code § 11206; see § 95.345[2]) complied. In the case of a duplicate order or a wrong beneficiary, the sender does not have to pay the order. In the case of an overpayment, the sender does not have to pay the order to the extent of the overpayment. If Com. Code § 11205(a)(1) applies, the position of the receiving bank is comparable to that of a receiving bank that erroneously executes a payment order as stated in Com. Code § 11303. However, failure of the sender to timely report the error is covered by Com. Code § 11205(b) rather than by Com. Code § 11304, which applies only to erroneous execution under Com. Code § 11303. A receiving bank to which the risk of loss is shifted by Com. Code § 11205(a)(1) or (2) is entitled to recover the amount erroneously paid to the beneficiary to the extent allowed by the law of mistake and restitution. Rights of the receiving bank against the beneficiary are similar to those of a receiving bank that erroneously executes a payment order as stated in Com. Code § 11303 [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-205; see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-303].

A security procedure may be designed to detect an account number that is not one to which the sender normally makes payment. In that case, the security procedure may require a special verification that payment to the stated account number was intended. In the case of dollar amounts, the security procedure may require different codes for different dollar amounts. If a $1,000,000 payment order contains a code that is inappropriate for that amount, the error in amount should be detected. In the case of duplicate orders, the security procedure may require that each payment order be identified by a number or code that applies to no other order. If the number or code of each payment order received is registered in a computer base, the receiving bank can quickly identify a duplicate order [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-205].

[b] Compliance With Security Procedure

A security procedure established for the purpose of detecting error is not effective unless both sender and receiving bank comply with the procedure. Thus, the bank undertakes a duty of complying with the procedure for the benefit of the sender. This duty is recognized in Com. Code § 11205(a)(1). The loss with respect to the sender's error is shifted to the bank if the bank fails to comply with the procedure and the sender (or an agent under Com. Code § 11206; see § 95.345[2] does comply. Although the customer may have been negligent in transmitting the erroneous payment order, the loss is put on the bank on a last-clear-chance theory [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-205].

[c] Variation by Agreement

Com. Code § 11205 is subject to variation by agreement under Com. Code § 11501. Thus, if a receiving bank and its customer have agreed to a security procedure for detection of error, the liability of the receiving bank for failing to detect an error of the customer as provided in Com. Code § 11205 may be varied as provided in an agreement of the bank and the customer [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-205].

[d] Sender's Duty to Discover Error

If the sender of an erroneous payment order described in Com. Code § 11205(a) is not obliged to pay all or part of the order, and the sender receives notification from the receiving bank that the order was accepted by the bank or that the sender's account was debited with respect to the order, then the sender has a duty to exercise ordinary care, on the basis of information available to the sender, to discover the error with respect to the order and to advise the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time, not exceeding 90 days, after the bank's notification was received by the sender. If the bank proves that the sender failed to perform that duty, the sender is liable to the bank for the loss the bank proves it incurred as a result of the failure, but the liability of the sender may not exceed the amount of the sender's order [Com. Code § 11205(b)].

Whether the bank is entitled to recover from the sender depends on whether the sender's failure to give timely notice would have made any difference. If the bank could not have recovered from the beneficiary that received payment under the erroneous payment order even if timely notice had been given, the sender's failure to notify did not cause any loss of the bank [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-205].

[e] Application to Amendment of Payment Order

Com. Code § 11205 applies to amendments to payment orders to the same extent it applies to payment orders [Com. Code § 11205(c)].

[f] Sender's Risk When Transmission Is Not Pursuant to Security Procedure

Com. Code § 11205 concerns error in the content or in the transmission of payment orders transmitted pursuant to a security procedure [see Com. Code § 11205(a)]. Com. Code § 11205 does not apply if the receiving bank and the customer did not agree to the establishment of a procedure for detecting error [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-205; see Com. Code § 11201 ("security procedure" defined as "a procedure established by agreement of a customer and a receiving bank for the purpose of ... detecting error ...")]. In each case, if Com. Code § 11205 does not apply and the funds transfer is completed, the sender is obliged to pay the order. Sender's remedy, based on payment by mistake, is to recover from the beneficiary that received payment [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-205].

[2] Transmission of Payment Order to Funds-Transfer System

If a payment order addressed to a receiving bank is transmitted to a funds-transfer system or other third-party communication system for transmission to the bank, the system is deemed to be an agent of the sender for the purpose of transmitting the payment order to the bank. If there is a discrepancy between the terms of the payment order transmitted to the system and the terms of the payment order transmitted by the system to the bank, the terms of the payment order of the sender are those transmitted by the system. However, this does not apply to a funds-transfer system of the Federal Reserve banks [Com. Code § 11206(a)]. Com. Code § 11206 applies to cancellations and amendments of payment orders to the same extent as it applies to payment orders [Com. Code § 11206(b)].

If an agent of the sender is employed to transmit orders on behalf of the sender, the sender is bound by the order transmitted by the agent on the basis of agency law. Com. Code § 11206 is an application of that principle to cases in which a funds-transfer or communication system acts as an intermediary in transmitting the sender's order to the receiving bank. The intermediary is deemed to be an agent of the sender for the purpose of transmitting payment orders and related messages for the sender [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-206; see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-206 (examples)].

[3] Misidentification of Beneficiary by Erroneous Reference to Name, Account Number, or Other Fact

Subject to Com. Code § 11207(b) [see § 95.345[4]], if, in a payment order received by the beneficiary's bank, the name, bank account number, or other identification of the beneficiary refers to a nonexistent or unidentifiable person or account, no person has rights as a beneficiary of the order and acceptance of the order cannot occur [Com. Code § 11207(a)].

When a payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank calls for payment to a nonexistent or unidentifiable person or account, it is not possible for the funds transfer to be completed, hence the order cannot be accepted. The sender of a payment order is not obliged to pay its order unless the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order instructing payment to the beneficiary of that sender's order [Com. Code § 11402(c); see § 95.352[2][b]]. Therefore, if the beneficiary of a funds transfer is nonexistent or unidentifiable, each sender in the funds transfer that has paid its payment order is entitled to get its money back [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-207].

[4] Misidentification of Beneficiary by Ambiguous Reference to Both Name and Number

[a] In General

If a payment order received by the beneficiary's bank identifies the beneficiary both by name and by an identifying or bank-account number, and the name and number identify different persons, the following rules apply [Com. Code § 11207(b)].

- Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 11207(c) [see § 95.345[4][b]], if the beneficiary's bank does not know that the name and number refer to different persons, it may rely on the number as the proper identification of the beneficiary of the order. The beneficiary's bank need not determine whether the name and number refer to the same person [Com. Code § 11207(b)(1)].

- If the beneficiary's bank pays the person identified by name or knows that the name and number identify different persons, no person has rights as beneficiary except the person paid by the beneficiary's bank if that person was entitled to receive payment from the originator of the funds transfer. If no person has rights as beneficiary, acceptance of the order cannot occur [Com. Code § 11207(b)(2)].

A very large percentage of payment orders issued to the beneficiary's bank by another bank are processed by automated means using machines capable of reading orders on standard formats that identify the beneficiary by an identifying number or the number of a bank account. The processing of the order by the beneficiary's bank and the crediting of the beneficiary's account are done by use of the identifying or bank account number without human reading of the payment order itself. The process is comparable to that used in automated payment of checks. The standard format, however, may also allow the inclusion of the name of the beneficiary and other information which can be useful to the beneficiary's bank and the beneficiary but which plays no part in the process of payment. If the beneficiary's bank has both the account number and name of the beneficiary supplied by the originator of the funds transfer, it is possible for the beneficiary's bank to determine whether the name and number refer to the same person, but if a duty to make that determination is imposed on the beneficiary's bank, the benefits of automated payment are lost. Manual handling of payment orders is both expensive and subject to human error. If payment orders can be handled on an automated basis, there are substantial economies of operation, and the possibility of clerical error is reduced. Com. Code § 11207(b) allows banks to use automated processing, by allowing banks to act on the basis of the number without regard to the name if the bank does not know that the name and number refer to different persons [see generally Com. Code § 1202(b), (f) (when bank would "know" that fact)]. The time of payment is the pertinent time at which knowledge or lack of knowledge must be determined [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-207].

Although the clear trend is for beneficiary's banks to process payment orders by automated means, Com. Code § 11207 is not limited to cases in which processing is done by automated means. A bank that processes by semi-automated means or even manually may rely on number as stated in Com. Code § 11207 [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-207].

In the typical case the error is made by the originator of the funds transfer. The originator should know the name of the person who is to receive payment and can further identify that person by an address that would normally be known to the originator. It is not unlikely, however, for the originator to be unsure whether an identifying or account number refers to the person the originator intends to pay. Com. Code § 11207(b)(1) deals with the typical case in which the beneficiary's bank pays on the basis of the account number and is not aware at the time of payment that the named beneficiary is not the holder of the account which was paid. In some cases the false number will be the result of error by the originator; in other cases, fraud is involved [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-207].

[b] Payment to Beneficiary According to Number

If a payment order described in Com. Code § 11207(b) [see § 95.345[4][a]] is accepted, and the originator's payment order describes the beneficiary inconsistently by name and number, and the beneficiary's bank pays the person identified by number as permitted by Com. Code § 11207(b)(1), the following rules apply [Com. Code § 11207(c)]:

- If the originator is a bank, the originator is obliged to pay its order [Com. Code § 11207(c)(1)].

- If the originator is not a bank and proves that the person identified by number was not entitled to receive payment from the originator, the originator is not obliged to pay its order unless the originator's bank proves that the originator, before acceptance of the originator's order, had notice that payment of a payment order issued by the originator might be made by the beneficiary's bank on the basis of an identifying or bank account number even if it identifies a person different from the named beneficiary. Proof of notice may be made by any admissible evidence. The originator's bank satisfies the burden of proof if it proves that the originator, before the payment order was accepted, signed a writing stating the information to which the notice relates [Com. Code § 11207(c)(2)].

The originator is responsible for an inconsistent description of the beneficiary if it had notice that the order might be paid by the beneficiary's bank on the basis of the number. If the originator is a bank, the originator always has that responsibility. The rationale is that any bank should know how payment orders are processed and paid. If the originator is not a bank, the originator's bank must prove that its customer, the originator, had notice. Notice can be proved by any admissible evidence, but the bank can always prove notice by providing the customer with a written statement of the required information and obtaining the customer's signature on the statement. That statement will then apply to any payment order accepted by the bank thereafter. The information need not be supplied more than once [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-207].

[c] Recovery of Amount Paid to Wrong Person

In a case governed by Com. Code § 11207(b)(1) [see [a] above], if the beneficiary's bank rightfully pays the person identified by number, but that person was not entitled to receive payment from the originator, the amount paid may be recovered from that person to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution, as follows [Com. Code § 11207(d)]:

- If the originator is obliged to pay its payment order as stated in Com. Code § 11207(c) [see § 95.345[4][b]], the originator has the right to recover [Com. Code § 11207(d)(1)].

- If the originator is not a bank and is not obliged to pay its payment order, the originator's bank has the right to recover [Com. Code § 11207(d)(2)].

[5] Misidentification of Bank by Ambiguous Reference to Both Name and Number

[a] When Sender Is a Bank

In the case of a payment order identifying the beneficiary's bank (or an intermediary bank) both by name and by an identifying number, but the name and number identify different persons, then if the sender is a bank, the receiving bank may rely on the number as the proper identification of the beneficiary's bank (or intermediary bank) if the receiving bank, when it executes the sender's order, does not know that the name and number identify different persons. The receiving bank need not determine whether the name and number refer to the same person or whether the number refers to a bank. The sender is obliged to compensate the receiving bank for any loss and expenses incurred by the receiving bank as a result of its reliance on the number in executing or attempting to execute the order [Com. Code § 11208(b)(1); see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-208 (example)].

[b] When Sender Is Not a Bank

In the case of a payment order identifying the beneficiary's bank (or an intermediary bank) both by name and by an identifying number, but the name and number identify different persons, if (1) the sender is not a bank and (2) the receiving bank proves that the sender, before the payment order was accepted, had notice that the receiving bank might rely on the number as the proper identification of the beneficiary's bank (or intermediary bank) even if it identifies a person different from the bank identified by name, then the rights and obligations of the sender and the receiving bank are governed by Com. Code § 11208(b)(1), as though the sender were a bank [see § 95.345[5][a]]. Proof of notice may be made by any admissible evidence. The receiving bank satisfies the burden of proof if it proves that the sender, before the payment order was accepted, signed a writing stating the information to which the notice relates [Com. Code § 11208(b)(2); see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-208 (example)].

[c] Reliance on Name Alone Can Be Sufficient

Regardless of whether or not the sender is a bank, the receiving bank may rely on the name as the proper identification of the intermediary bank or beneficiary's bank if the receiving bank, at the time it executes the sender's order, does not know that the name and number identify different persons. The receiving bank need not determine whether the name and number refer to the same person [Com. Code § 11208(b)(3)]. If the receiving bank knows that the name and number identify different persons, however, reliance on either the name or the number in executing the sender's payment order is a breach of the obligation stated in Com. Code § 11302(a)(1) [Com. Code § 11208(b)(4)].

[6] Misidentification of Bank by Number Alone

In the case of a payment order identifying an intermediary bank or the beneficiary's bank only by an identifying number, the receiving bank may rely on the number as the proper identification of the intermediary bank or beneficiary's bank, and need not determine whether the number identifies a bank [Com. Code § 11208(a)(1)]. The sender is obliged to compensate the receiving bank for any loss and expenses incurred by the receiving bank as a result of its reliance on the number in executing or attempting to execute the order [Com. Code § 11208(a)(2)]; see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-208 (example)].

[7] Method of Processing Orders Is Immaterial When Bank Is Misidentified

Although the principal purpose of Com. Code § 11208 is to accommodate automated processing of payment orders, that section applies regardless of whether processing is done by automation, or by semi-automated means, or manually [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-208].

§ 95.346 Cancellation or Amendment of Payment Order

[1] In General

Com. Code § 11211 states the conditions under which the cancellation or amendment of payment orders is both effective and rightful. There is no concept of wrongful cancellation or amendment of a payment order. If the conditions stated in Com. Code § 11211 are not satisfied, the attempted cancellation or amendment is not effective. If the stated conditions are satisfied, the cancellation or amendment is effective and rightful [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-211].

The sender of a payment order may want to withdraw or change the order because the sender has had a change of mind about the transaction or because the payment order was erroneously issued or for any other reason. One common situation is that of multiple transmissions of one order. The sender that mistakenly transmits an order twice wants to correct the mistake by canceling the duplicate order. Or, for example, the amount of the order may have been incorrectly stated; for example, a sender may have intended to order a payment of $1,000,000 but mistakenly issued an order to pay $10,000,000. In this case the sender might try to correct the mistake by canceling the order and issuing another order in the proper amount. Alternatively, the mistake could be corrected by amending the order to change it to the proper amount. Whether the error is corrected by amendment or by cancellation and reissue, the net result is the same [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-211].

A canceled payment order cannot be accepted. If an accepted payment order is canceled, the acceptance is nullified, and no person has any right or obligation based on the acceptance. Amendment of a payment order is deemed to be both cancellation of the original order at the time of amendment and also issuance of a new payment order in the amended form, at the same time [Com. Code § 11211(e)].

[2] Before Acceptance of Order

[a] By Timely Transmission of Instruction

A communication of the sender of a payment order, canceling or amending the order, may be transmitted to the receiving bank orally, electronically, or in writing. If a security procedure is in effect between the sender and the receiving bank, the communication is not effective to cancel or amend the order unless the communication is verified pursuant to the security procedure or the bank agrees to the cancellation or amendment [Com. Code § 11211(a)]. If such a communication is not transmitted and the order remains unaccepted for a five-day period, the order will be canceled by operation of law [see Com. Code § 11211(d); § 95.346[2][b]].

Cancellations and amendments normally are subject to verification pursuant to security procedures to the same extent as payment orders. This is necessary to protect the receiving bank because under Com. Code § 11211(b), a cancellation or amendment can be effective by unilateral action of the sender. Without verification, the bank cannot be sure whether the communication was or was not effective to cancel or amend a previously verified payment order [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-211].

Subject to Com. Code § 11211(a), a communication by the sender canceling or amending a payment order is effective to cancel or amend the order if notice of the communication is received at a time and in a manner affording the receiving bank a reasonable opportunity to act on the communication before the bank accepts the payment order [Com. Code § 11211(b)]. If the receiving bank has not yet accepted the order, there is no reason why the sender should not be able to cancel or amend the order unilaterally as long as the requirements of Com. Code § 11211(a) and (b) are met. If the receiving bank has accepted the order, it is still possible to cancel or amend, but only if the requirements of Com. Code § 11211(c) are met [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-211]. See § 95.346[3] for discussion of cancellation after acceptance.

[b] By Nonacceptance After Five Business Days (Stale Payment Order)

An unaccepted payment order is canceled by operation of law at the close of the fifth funds-transfer business day of the receiving bank after the execution date or payment date of the order [Com. Code § 11211(d)].

In practice, payment orders normally are executed on the execution date or the day after, and an order issued to the beneficiary's bank is normally accepted on the payment date or the day after. If a payment order is not accepted on its execution date or payment date or shortly thereafter, it is probable that there was some problem with the terms of the order or the sender did not have sufficient funds or credit to cover the amount of the order. Delayed acceptance of such an order normally is not contemplated, but the order may not have been canceled by the sender. Com. Code § 11211(d) provides for cancellation by operation of law so as to prevent an unexpected delayed acceptance [Official Comment 7 to UCC § 4A-211].

[3] After Acceptance of Order

[a] Agreement or Rule Must Allow Cancellation or Amendment

After a payment order has been accepted, cancellation or amendment of the order is not effective unless the receiving bank agrees or a funds-transfer system rule allows cancellation or amendment without agreement of the bank [Com. Code § 11211(c)]. A funds-transfer system rule is not effective to the extent that it conflicts with Com. Code § 11211(c)(2) [Com. Code § 11211(h)], which concerns cancellation or amendment of an order after acceptance by the beneficiary's bank [see § 95.346[3][c]].

The statute does not state how or when the agreement of the receiving bank must be obtained for cancellation after execution. The receiving bank's consent could be obtained at the time cancellation occurs or it could be based on a preexisting agreement. A funds-transfer system rule could provide that cancellation can be made unilaterally by the sender and, by virtue of that rule, any receiving bank covered by the rule would be bound [Com. Code § 11501]. If the receiving bank already has executed the sender's order, the bank would not consent to cancellation unless the bank to which the receiving bank has issued its payment order consents to cancellation of that order. It makes no sense to allow cancellation of a payment order unless all subsequent payment orders in the funds transfer that were issued because of the canceled payment order are also canceled. Under Com. Code § 11211(c)(1) [see § 95.346[3][b]], if a receiving bank consents to cancellation of the payment order after it is executed, the cancellation is not effective unless the receiving bank also cancels the payment order issued by the bank [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-211].

If a receiving bank agrees to cancellation or amendment, the bank is automatically entitled to indemnification from the sender [Com. Code § 11211(f)]. This indemnification requirement recognizes that a sender has no right to cancel a payment order after it is accepted by the receiving bank. If the receiving bank agrees to cancellation, it is doing so as an accommodation to the sender and should not incur a risk of loss in doing so [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-211].

A funds-transfer system rule can govern rights and obligations between banks that are parties to payment orders transmitted over the system even if the rule conflicts with Division 11. In some cases, however, a rule governing a transaction between two banks can affect a third party in an unacceptable way. Com. Code § 11211(h) deals with such a case. A funds-transfer system rule cannot allow cancellation of a payment order accepted by the beneficiary's bank if the rule conflicts with Com. Code § 11211(c)(2). Because rights of the beneficiary and the originator are directly affected by acceptance, Com. Code § 11211(c)(2) severely limits cancellation [see § 95.346[3][c]]. These limitations cannot be altered by funds-transfer system rule [Official Comment 8 to UCC § 4A-211].

[b] By Bank Other Than Beneficiary's Bank

With respect to a payment order that has been accepted by a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank, assuming that the agreement-or-rule condition is satisfied [see § 95.346[3][a]], cancellation or amendment of the order is not effective unless a conforming cancellation or amendment of the payment order issued by the receiving bank also is made [Com. Code § 11211(c)(1)].

If the bank has not yet accepted the order, the sender can unilaterally cancel or amend. The communication amending or canceling the payment order must be received in time to allow the bank to act on it before the bank issues its payment order in execution of the sender's order. The time when the sender's communication is received is governed by Com. Code § 11106 [see § 95.343[3]]. If a payment order does not specify a delayed payment date or execution date, the order will normally be executed shortly after receipt. As a practical matter, the sender usually will have very little time for cancellation or amendment before the order is accepted. In addition, a receiving bank will normally have cutoff times for receipt of such communications, and the receiving bank is not obliged to act on communications received after the cutoff hour [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-211].

Cancellation by the sender after execution of the order by the receiving bank requires the agreement of the bank unless a funds transfer rule otherwise provides [Com. Code § 11211(c)]. Although execution of the sender's order by the receiving bank does not itself impose liability on the receiving bank--under Com. Code § 11402, no liability is incurred by the receiving bank to pay its order until it is accepted [see § 95.352[2]]--acceptance commonly follows shortly after issuance. Therefore, a receiving bank that has executed a payment order usually will incur a liability to the next bank in the chain before it is able to act on the cancellation request of its customer. It is unreasonable to impose on the receiving bank a risk of loss with respect to a cancellation request without the consent of the receiving bank [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-211].

[c] By Beneficiary's Bank

With respect to a payment order that has been accepted by the beneficiary's bank, assuming that the agreement-or-rule condition is satisfied [see § 95.346[3][a]], cancellation or amendment is not effective unless the order was issued either [Com. Code § 11211(c)(2); see Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-211 (examples)]:

- In execution of an unauthorized payment order; or

- Because of a mistake by a sender in the funds transfer which resulted in the issuance of a payment order that either:

- Is a duplicate of a payment order previously issued by the sender;

- Orders payment to a beneficiary not entitled to receive payment from the originator; or

- Orders payment in an amount greater than the amount the beneficiary was entitled to receive from the originator.

If the payment order is canceled or amended, the beneficiary's bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary any amount paid to the beneficiary to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11211(c)(2)].

Unless constrained by a funds-transfer system rule, a receiving bank may agree to cancellation or amendment of the payment order under Com. Code § 11211(c) but is not required to do so regardless of the circumstances. If the receiving bank has incurred liability as a result of its acceptance of the sender's order, there are substantial risks in agreeing to cancellation or amendment. This is particularly true for a beneficiary's bank. Cancellation or amendment after acceptance by the beneficiary's bank can be made only in the four cases stated, and the beneficiary's bank may not have any way of knowing whether the requirements of Com. Code § 11211(c) have been met or whether it will be able to recover payment from the beneficiary that received payment. Even with indemnity, the beneficiary's bank may be reluctant to alienate its customer (the beneficiary) by denying the customer the funds. Com. Code § 11211(c) leaves the decision to the beneficiary's bank unless the consent of the beneficiary's bank is not required under a funds-transfer system rule or other interbank agreement [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-211].

With respect to a payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank, acceptance is particularly important because it creates liability to pay the beneficiary, defines when the originator pays its obligation to the beneficiary, and defines when any obligation for which the payment is made is discharged. Since acceptance affects the rights of the originator and the beneficiary, it is not appropriate to allow the beneficiary's bank to agree to cancellation or amendment except in unusual cases. Except as provided in Com. Code § 11211(c)(2), cancellation or amendment after acceptance by the beneficiary's bank is not possible unless all parties affected by the order agree. Under Com. Code § 11211(c)(2), cancellation or amendment is possible only in the four cases stated. [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-211 (examples)].

[d] Sender's Indemnification of Receiving Bank

Unless otherwise provided in an agreement of the parties or in a funds-transfer system rule, if the receiving bank, after accepting a payment order, agrees to cancellation or amendment of the order by the sender or is bound by a funds-transfer system rule allowing cancellation or amendment without the bank's agreement, the sender is liable to the bank for any loss and expenses, including reasonable attorney's fees, incurred by the bank as a result of the cancellation or amendment or attempted cancellation or amendment, whether or not cancellation or amendment is effective [Com. Code § 11211(f)].

[4] Effect of Sender's Death or Incapacity

A payment order is not revoked by the death or legal incapacity of the sender unless the receiving bank knows of the death or of an adjudication of incapacity by a court of competent jurisdiction and has a reasonable opportunity to act before acceptance of the order [Com. Code § 11211(g)].

§ 95.347 Rejection of Payment Order by Receiving Bank

[1] Manner of Rejection; When Effective

A payment order is rejected by the receiving bank by a notice of rejection transmitted to the sender orally, electronically, or in writing. A notice of rejection need not use any particular words and is sufficient if it indicates that the receiving bank is rejecting the order or will not execute or pay the order. Rejection is effective when the notice is given if transmission is by a means that is reasonable in the circumstances. If notice of rejection is given by a means that is not reasonable, rejection is effective when the notice is received. If an agreement of the sender and receiving bank establishes the means to be used to reject a payment order, then any means complying with the agreement is reasonable, and any means not complying is not reasonable unless no significant delay in receipt of the notice resulted from the use of the noncomplying means [Com. Code § 11210(a)].

[2] Interest

If a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank fails to execute a payment order despite the existence on the execution date of a withdrawable credit balance in an authorized account of the sender sufficient to cover the order, and the sender does not receive notice of rejection of the order on the execution date and the authorized account of the sender does not bear interest, the bank is obliged to pay interest to the sender on the amount of the order for the number of days elapsing after the execution date, to the earlier of the day the order is canceled pursuant to Com. Code § 11211(d) [see § 95.346[2][b]] or the day the sender receives notice or learns that the order was not executed, counting the final day of the period as an elapsed day. If the withdrawable credit balance during that period falls below the amount of the order, the amount of interest is reduced accordingly [Com. Code § 11210(b)].

[3] Sender's Failure to Learn of Rejection Until After Execution Date

Com. Code § 11210(b) deals with cases in which a sender does not learn until after the execution date that the sender's order has not been executed. It applies only to cases in which the receiving bank was assured of payment because the sender's account was sufficient to cover the order. Normally, the receiving bank will accept the sender's order if it is assured of payment, but there may be some cases in which the bank chooses to reject. Unless the receiving bank had obligated itself by agreement to accept, the failure to accept is not wrongful. There is no duty of the receiving bank to accept the payment order unless it is obliged to accept by express agreement [Com. Code § 11212].

Even if the bank has not acted wrongfully, however, the receiving bank had the use of the sender's money that the sender could reasonably assume was to be the source of payment of the funds transfer. Until the sender learns that the order was not accepted, the sender is denied the use of that money. Com. Code § 11210(b) obliges the receiving bank to pay interest to the sender as restitution unless the sender receives notice of rejection on the execution date. The time of receipt of notice is determined pursuant to Com. Code § 1202(e). The rate of interest is stated in Com. Code § 11506 [see § 95.353[6]. If the sender receives notice on the day after the execution date, the sender is entitled to one day's interest. If receipt of notice is delayed for more than one day, the sender is entitled to interest for each additional day of delay [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-210].

[4] Suspension of Payments by Receiving Bank

If a receiving bank suspends payments, all unaccepted payment orders issued to it are deemed rejected at the time the bank suspends payments [Com. Code § 11210(c)]. This prevents acceptance by the passage of time under Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-210]. In this context, a bank "suspends payment" if it has been closed by order of the supervisory authorities, or if a public officer has been appointed to take it over, or if it ceases or refuses to make payments in the ordinary course of business [Com. Code §§ 4104(1)(k), 11105(c)].

[5] Acceptance Precludes Later Rejection of Order

Acceptance of a payment order precludes a later rejection of the order. Rejection of a payment order precludes a later acceptance of the order [Com. Code § 11210(d)]. Acceptance and rejection are mutually exclusive. If a payment order has been accepted, then rejection of that order becomes impossible. If a payment order has been rejected, it cannot be accepted later by the receiving bank. Once notice of rejection has been given, the sender may have acted on the notice by making the payment through other channels. If the receiving bank wants to act on a payment order that it has rejected, it has to obtain the consent of the sender. In that case, the consent of the sender would amount to the giving of a second payment order that substitutes for the rejected first order [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-210].

§ 95.348 Acceptance of Payment Order

[1] Receipt of Order Is Condition Precedent to Acceptance

Acceptance of a payment order cannot occur before the receiving bank receives the order. Acceptance does not occur under Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) or (3) [see § 95.348[4][c], [d]] if the beneficiary of the payment order does not have an account with the receiving bank, or if the account has been closed, or the receiving bank is not permitted by law to receive credits for the beneficiary's account [Com. Code § 11209(c)].

[2] Earliest Date for Acceptance Is Payment Date or Execution Date

A payment order issued to the originator's bank cannot be accepted until the payment date if the bank is the beneficiary's bank, or until the execution date if the bank is not the beneficiary's bank. If the originator's bank executes the originator's payment order before the execution date or pays the beneficiary of the originator's payment order before the payment date and the payment order is subsequently canceled pursuant to Com. Code § 11211(b) [see § 95.346[2][a]], the bank may recover from the beneficiary any payment received, to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11209(d)]. Com. Code § 11209(d) applies only to a payment order by the originator of a funds transfer to the originator's bank, and it refers to the following situation [see Official Comment 9 to UCC § 4A-209 (example)].

[3] By Receiving Bank Other Than Beneficiary's Bank

Subject to Com. Code § 11209(d) [see § 95.348[2], a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order when it executes the order [Com. Code § 11209(a)]. This is the only way in which a bank other than the beneficiary's bank can accept a payment order. A payment order to a bank other than the beneficiary's bank is, in effect, a request for the receiving bank to execute the sender's order by issuing a payment order to the beneficiary's bank or to an intermediary bank. Normally, acceptance occurs at the time of execution, but there is an exception [see Com. Code § 11209(d); § 95.348[2]]. Execution occurs when the receiving bank "issues a payment order intended to carry out" the sender's order [Com. Code § 11301(a); see § 95.343[6][a]]. In some cases the payment order issued by the receiving bank may not conform to the sender's order. For example, the receiving bank might make a mistake in the amount of its order, or the order might be issued to the wrong beneficiary's bank or for the benefit of the wrong beneficiary. In all of these cases, there is acceptance of the sender's order by the bank when the receiving bank issues its order intended to carry out the sender's order, even though the bank's payment order does not in fact carry out the instruction of the sender [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-209]. Improper execution of the sender's order may lead to liability to the sender for damages, or may mean that the sender is not obliged to pay its payment order [see Com. Code §§ 11303, 11305, 11402].

[4] By Beneficiary's Bank

[a] Three Possible Dates for Acceptance to Occur

Subject to Com. Code § 11209(c) and (d) [see § 95.348[1], [2]], in the case of a payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank, the beneficiary's bank accepts the payment order at the earliest of the dates described in § 95.348[4][b]-[d] [Com. Code § 11209(b)].

The function of a beneficiary's bank that receives a payment order is different from that of a receiving bank that receives a payment order for execution. In the typical case, the beneficiary's bank simply receives payment from the sender of the order, credits the account of the beneficiary, and notifies the beneficiary of the credit. Acceptance by the beneficiary's bank does not create any obligation to the sender. Acceptance by the beneficiary's bank means that the bank is liable to the beneficiary for the amount of the order [Com. Code § 11404(a)]. There are three ways in which the beneficiary's bank can accept a payment order [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-209; see § 95.348[4][b] -[d]].

Com. Code § 11209 is based on a general principle that a receiving bank is not obliged to accept a payment order unless it has agreed to do so or is bound by a funds-transfer system rule to do so [see § 95.348[3]. Therefore, provision is made to allow the receiving bank to prevent acceptance of the order. This principle is consistently followed if the receiving bank is not the beneficiary's bank. If the receiving bank is not the beneficiary's bank, acceptance is in the control of the receiving bank because it occurs only if the order is executed [see § 95.348[3]]. In the case of the beneficiary's bank, however, acceptance can occur by passive receipt of payment [see Com. Code § 11209(b)(2), (3); § 95.348[4][c], [d]]. In the case of a payment made by Fedwire [see § 95.343[2][c]], acceptance cannot be prevented. In other cases, the beneficiary's bank can prevent acceptance by giving notice of rejection to the sender before payment occurs [see Com. Code § 11403(a)(1), (2); § 95.347]. A minor exception to the ability of the beneficiary's bank to reject is stated in Com. Code § 11502(c)(3) [Official Comment 8 to UCC § 4A-209; see § 95.353[2][c]].

[b] When Bank Pays or Notifies Beneficiary

Unless acceptance has occurred at an earlier date [see § 95.348[4][c], [d]], acceptance by the beneficiary's bank results on the occurrence of either of the following events [Com. Code § 11209(b)(1)]:

- The bank pays the beneficiary as stated in Com. Code § 11405(a) or (b) [see § 95.352[5][a]].

- The bank notifies the beneficiary of receipt of the order or that the account of the beneficiary has been credited with respect to the order, unless the notice indicates that the bank is rejecting the order or that funds with respect to the order may not be withdrawn or used until receipt of payment from the sender of the order.

While the beneficiary's bank can accept a payment order by actually paying the beneficiary, in the normal case the bank merely credits an account of the beneficiary, and payment occurs when the beneficiary is given notice of the right to withdraw the credit, or the credit is applied to a debt of the beneficiary, or "funds with respect to the order" are otherwise made available to the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11405(a)]. The quoted phrase covers cases in which funds are made available to the beneficiary as a result of receipt of a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary, but the release of funds is not expressed as payment of the order. For example, the beneficiary's bank might express a release of funds equal to the amount of the order as a "loan" that will be automatically repaid when the beneficiary's bank receives payment by the sender of the order. If the release of funds is designated as a loan pursuant to a routine practice of the bank, the release is conditional payment of the order rather than a loan, particularly if normal incidents of a loan (such as the signing of a loan agreement or note and the payment of interest) are not present. Such a release of funds is payment to the beneficiary under Com. Code § 11405(a). Under Com. Code § 11405(c), the bank cannot recover the money from the beneficiary if the bank does not receive payment from the sender of the payment order that it accepted. Exceptions to this rule are stated in Com. Code § 11405(d) and (e) [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-209; see § 95.352[5][c], [d]].

The beneficiary's bank may also accept by notifying the beneficiary that the order has been received. "Notifies" is defined in Com. Code § 1202(d). In some cases a beneficiary's bank will receive a payment order during the day, but settlement of the sender's obligation to pay the order will not occur until the end of the day. If the beneficiary's bank wants to defer incurring liability to the beneficiary until the beneficiary's bank receives payment, it can do so. The beneficiary's bank incurs no liability to the beneficiary with respect to a payment order that it receives until it accepts the order. If the bank does not accept pursuant to Com. Code § 11209(b)(1), then acceptance does not occur until the end of the day when the beneficiary's bank receives settlement. If the sender settles, the payment order will be accepted under Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) [see § 95.348[4][c]], and the funds will be released to the beneficiary the next morning. If the sender does not settle, no acceptance occurs. In either case the beneficiary's bank suffers no loss [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-209].

[c] When Bank Receives Payment

Unless acceptance has occurred at an earlier date [see § 95.348[4][b], [d]], acceptance by the beneficiary's bank occurs when the bank receives payment of the entire amount of the sender's order pursuant to Com. Code § 11403(a)(1) or (2) [Com. Code § 11209(b)(2)]. However, acceptance does not occur if the beneficiary of the payment order does not have an account with the receiving bank, or the account has been closed, or the receiving bank is not permitted by law to receive credits for the beneficiary's account [Com. Code § 11209(c)].

In most cases the beneficiary's bank will receive a payment order from another bank. If the sender is a bank and the beneficiary's bank receives payment from the sender by final settlement through the Federal Reserve System or a funds-transfer system [Com. Code § 11403(a)(1)] or, less commonly, through credit to an account of the beneficiary's bank with the sender or another bank [Com. Code § 11403(a)(2)], then acceptance by the beneficiary's bank occurs at the time payment is made [Com. Code § 11209(b)(2)], subject to a minor exception [see Com. Code § 11209(c)]. Thus, Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) results in automatic acceptance of payment orders issued to a beneficiary's bank by means of Fedwire [see § 95.343[2][c]], because the Federal Reserve account of the beneficiary's bank is credited and final payment is made to that bank when the payment order is received [Official Comment 6 to UCC § 4A-209].

Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) also applies to cases in which the beneficiary's bank mistakenly pays a person who is not the beneficiary of the payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank. For example, suppose the payment order provides for immediate payment to account 12345. The beneficiary's bank erroneously credits account 12346 and notifies the holder of that account of the credit. No acceptance occurs in this case under Com. Code § 11209(b)(1) because the beneficiary of the order has not been paid or notified. The holder of account 12345 is the beneficiary of the order issued to the beneficiary's bank. Acceptance normally will occur if the beneficiary's bank takes no other action, because the bank normally will receive settlement with respect to the payment order. At that time the bank has accepted because the sender paid its payment order. The bank is liable to pay the holder of account 12345; but the bank has paid the holder of account 12346 by mistake and has a right to recover the payment if the credit is withdrawn, to the extent provided in the law governing mistake and restitution [Official Comment 6 to UCC § 4A-209].

[d] Next Funds-Transfer Business Day After Payment Date

Unless acceptance has occurred at an earlier date [see § 95.348[4][b], [c]], acceptance by the beneficiary's bank occurs at the opening of the next funds-transfer business day of the bank following the payment date of the order if, at that time, the amount of the sender's order is fully covered by a withdrawable credit balance in an authorized account of the sender or the bank has otherwise received full payment from the sender, unless the order was rejected before that time or is rejected within either one hour after that time or one hour after the opening of the next business day of the sender following the payment date if that time is later. If notice of rejection is received by the sender after the payment date and the authorized account of the sender does not bear interest, the bank is obliged to pay interest to the sender on the amount of the order for the number of days elapsing after the payment date to the day the sender receives notice or learns that the order was not accepted, counting that day as an elapsed day. If the withdrawable credit balance during that period falls below the amount of the order, the amount of interest payable is reduced accordingly [Com. Code § 11209(b)(3)]. Acceptance does not occur, however, if the beneficiary of the payment order does not have an account with the receiving bank, or the account has been closed, or the receiving bank is not permitted by law to receive credits for the beneficiary's account [Com. Code § 11209(c)].

Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) covers cases involving inaction by the beneficiary's bank. It applies whether or not the sender is a bank and covers a case in which the sender and the beneficiary both have accounts with the receiving bank and payment will be made by debiting the account of the sender and crediting the account of the beneficiary. Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) is similar to Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) in that it bases acceptance by the beneficiary's bank on payment by the sender. Payment by the sender is effected by a debit to the sender's account if the account balance is sufficient to cover the amount of the order. On the payment date [see Com. Code § 11401] of the order, the beneficiary's bank will normally credit the beneficiary's account and notify the beneficiary of receipt of the order if it is satisfied that the sender's account balance covers the order or is willing to give credit to the sender. In some cases, however, the bank may not be willing to give credit to the sender, and it may not be possible for the bank to determine until the end of the day on the payment date whether there are sufficient good funds in the sender's account. There may be various transactions during the day involving funds going into and out of the account. Some of these transactions may occur late in the day or after the close of the banking day. To accommodate this situation, Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) provides that the status of the account is determined at the opening of the next funds-transfer business day of the beneficiary's bank after the payment date of the order. If the sender's account balance is sufficient to cover the order, the beneficiary's bank has a source of payment, and the result in almost all cases is that the bank accepts the order at that time if it did not previously accept under Com. Code § 11209(b)(1). In rare cases, a bank may want to avoid acceptance under Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) by rejecting the order [Official Comment 7 to UCC § 4A-209].

Under Com. Code § 11209(b)(3) acceptance occurs at the opening of the next funds-transfer business day of the beneficiary's bank following the payment date unless the bank rejected the order before that time or it rejects within one hour after that time. In some cases the sender and the beneficiary's bank may not be in the same time zone, or the beginning of the business day of the sender and the funds transfer business day of the beneficiary's bank may not coincide. For example, the sender may be located in California and the beneficiary's bank in New York. Since in most cases notice of rejection would be communicated electronically or by telephone, it might not be feasible for the bank to give notice before one hour after the opening of the funds-transfer business day in New York because at that hour, the sender's business day may not have started in California. For that reason, there are alternative deadlines stated in Com. Code § 11209(b)(3). In the case stated, the bank acts in time if it gives notice within one hour after the opening of the business day of the sender. However, if the notice of rejection is received by the sender after the payment date, the bank is obliged to pay interest to the sender if the sender's account does not bear interest. In that case, the bank had the use of funds of the sender that the sender could reasonably assume would be used to pay the beneficiary. The rate of interest is stated in Com. Code § 11506 [see § 95.353[6]]. If the sender receives notice on the day after the payment date, the sender is entitled to one day's interest. If receipt of notice is delayed for more than one day, the sender is entitled to interest for each additional day of delay [Official Comment 8 to UCC § 4A-209].

§ 95.349 Liability of Receiving Bank for Failure to Accept Payment Order

If a receiving bank fails to accept a payment order that it is obliged by express agreement to accept, the bank is liable for breach of the agreement to the extent provided in the agreement or in Division 11, but the bank does not otherwise have any duty to accept a payment order or, before acceptance, to take any action, or refrain from taking action, with respect to the order except as provided in Division 11 or by express agreement. Liability based on acceptance arises only when acceptance occurs as stated in Com. Code § 11209 [see § 95.348] and liability is limited to that provided in Division 11. A receiving bank is not the agent of the sender or beneficiary of the payment order it accepts, or of any other party to the funds transfer, and the bank owes no duty to any party to the funds transfer except as provided in Division 11 or by express agreement [Com. Code § 11212].

With limited exceptions stated in Division 11, the duties and obligations of receiving banks that carry out a funds transfer arise only as a result of acceptance of payment orders or of agreements made by receiving banks. Exceptions are stated in Com. Code §§ 11209(b)(3) and 11210(b) [see §§ 95.348[4][d], 95.347]. A receiving bank is not like a collecting bank under Division 4, that is, no receiving bank, whether it be an originator's bank, an intermediary bank or a beneficiary's bank, is an agent for any other party in the funds transfer [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-212].

§ 95.350 Acceptance of Unauthorized Payment Orders

[1] Enforcement of Unauthorized Payment Order May Be Limited

[a] Limiting Written Agreement Exists

If, under Com. Code § 11202(a), an accepted payment order is not an authorized order of a customer identified as sender [see § 95.343[7]], but is effective as an order of the customer pursuant to Com. Code § 11202(b) [see § 95.344[1][a]], then, by express written agreement, the receiving bank may limit the extent to which it is entitled to enforce or retain payment of the payment order [Com. Code § 11203(a)(1)]. This applies to amendments of payment orders to the same extent as it applies to payment orders [Com. Code § 11203(b)].

Thus, the effect of Com. Code § 11202(b) may be changed by an agreement meeting the requirements of Com. Code § 11203(a)(1). Some customers may be unwilling to take all or part of the risk of loss with respect to unauthorized payment orders even if all of the requirements of Com. Code § 11202(b) are met. By virtue of Com. Code § 11203(a)(1), a receiving bank may assume all of the risk of loss with respect to unauthorized payment orders or the customer and bank may agree that losses from unauthorized payment orders are to be divided as provided in the agreement [Official Comment 6 to UCC § 4A-203].

[b] Customer Is Not Culpable

If, under Com. Code § 11202(a), an accepted payment order is not an authorized order of a customer identified as sender [see § 95.343[7]], but is effective as an order of the customer pursuant to Com. Code § 11202(b) [see § 95.344[1][a]], then the receiving bank is not entitled to enforce or retain payment of the payment order if the customer proves that the order was not caused, directly or indirectly, by a person who either [Com. Code § 11203(a)(2)]:

- Was entrusted at any time with duties to act for the customer with respect to payment orders or the security procedure; or

- Obtained access to transmitting facilities of the customer or obtained, from a source controlled by the > customer and without authority of the receiving bank, information facilitating breach of the security procedure, regardless of how the information was obtained or whether the customer was at fault. Information includes any access device, computer software, or the like.

This applies to amendments of payment orders to the same extent as it applies to payment orders [Com. Code § 11203(b)].

The effect of Com. Code § 11202(b) is to place the risk of loss on the customer if an unauthorized payment order is accepted by the receiving bank after verification by the bank in compliance with a commercially reasonable security procedure [see § 95.344[1][a]]. An exception to this result is provided by Com. Code § 11203(a)(2). The customer may avoid the loss resulting from such a payment order if the customer can prove that the fraud was not committed by a person described in that provision. Breach of a commercially reasonable security procedure requires that the person committing the fraud must have knowledge of how the procedure works and knowledge of codes, identifying devices, and the like. That person may also need access to transmitting facilities through an access device or other software in order to breach the security procedure. This confidential information must be obtained either from a source controlled by the customer or from a source controlled by the receiving bank. If the customer can prove [see Com. Code § 11105(a)(7) (defining "prove"); see also § 95.343[1][g]] that the person committing the fraud did not obtain the confidential information from an agent or former agent of the customer or from a source controlled by the customer, the loss is shifted to the bank. Because of bank regulation requirements, in this kind of case there will always be a criminal investigation as well as an internal investigation of the bank to determine the probable explanation for the breach of security. Because a funds-transfer fraud usually will involve a very large amount of money, both the criminal investigation and the internal investigation are likely to be thorough. In some cases there may be an investigation by bank examiners as well. Frequently, these investigations will develop evidence of who is at fault and the cause of the loss. The customer will have access to evidence developed in these investigations, and that evidence can be used by the customer in meeting its burden of proof [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-203].

[2] Consequences for Receiving Bank

If a receiving bank accepts a payment order issued in the name of its customer as sender which is not authorized and not effective as the order of the customer under Com. Code § 11202 or which is not enforceable, in whole or in part, against the customer under Com. Code § 11203, then the bank must refund any payment of the payment order received from the customer to the extent that the bank is not entitled to enforce payment and must pay interest on the refundable amount, calculated from the date the bank received payment to the date of the refund. However, the customer is not entitled to interest from the bank on the amount to be refunded if the customer fails to exercise ordinary care to determine that the order was not authorized by the customer and to notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days after the date the customer received notification from the bank that the order was accepted or that the customer's account was debited with respect to the order. The bank is not entitled to any recovery from the customer on account of a failure by the customer to give notification as described [Com. Code § 11204(a)].

What is a reasonable time under Com. Code § 11204(a) may be fixed by agreement as stated in Com. Code § 1302(b), but the obligation of a receiving bank to refund payment as stated in Com. Code § 11204(a) may not otherwise be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11204(b)].

With respect to unauthorized payment orders, in a very large percentage of cases a commercially reasonable security procedure will be in effect. Com. Code § 11204 applies only to cases in which either no commercially reasonable security procedure is in effect, or the bank did not comply with a commercially reasonable security procedure that was in effect, or the sender can prove, pursuant to Com. Code § 11203(a)(2), that the culprit did not obtain confidential security information controlled by the customer, or the bank, pursuant to Com. Code § 11203(a)(1), agreed to take all or part of the loss resulting from an unauthorized payment order. In each of these cases the bank takes the risk of loss with respect to an unauthorized payment order because the bank is not entitled to payment from the customer with respect to the order. The bank normally debits the customer's account or otherwise receives payment from the customer shortly after acceptance of the payment order. Com. Code § 11204(a) states that the bank must recredit the account or refund payment to the extent that the bank is not entitled to enforce payment [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-204].

Com. Code § 11204 is designed to encourage a customer to promptly notify the receiving bank that it has accepted an unauthorized payment order. Since cases of unauthorized payment orders will almost always involve fraud, the bank's remedy is normally to recover from the beneficiary of the unauthorized order if the beneficiary was party to the fraud. This remedy may not be worth very much, and it may not make any difference whether the bank promptly learns about the fraud. In some cases, however, prompt notification may make it easier for the bank to recover some part of its loss from the culprit. The customer will routinely be notified of the debit to its account with respect to an unauthorized order or will otherwise be notified of acceptance of the order. The customer has a duty to exercise ordinary care to determine that the order was unauthorized after it has received notification from the bank, and to advise the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days after receipt of notification [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-204].

Reasonable time is not defined and may depend on the facts of the particular case. For example, if a payment order for $1,000,000 is wholly unauthorized, the customer should normally discover it well within 90 days. If a $1,000,000 payment order was authorized but the name of the beneficiary was fraudulently changed, a much longer period may be necessary to discover the fraud. In any event, if the customer delays more than 90 days, the customer's duty has not been met. The only consequence of a failure of the customer to perform this duty is a loss of interest on the refund payable by the bank. A customer that acts promptly is entitled to interest from the time the customer's account was debited or the customer otherwise made payment. The rate of interest is stated in Com. Code § 11506 [see § 95.353[6]. If the customer fails to perform the duty, no interest is recoverable for any part of the period before the bank learns that it accepted an unauthorized order. The bank is not entitled to any recovery from the customer based on negligence for failure to inform the bank. Loss of interest is in the nature of a penalty on the customer designed to provide an incentive for the customer to police its account. There is no intention to impose a duty on the customer that might result in shifting loss on the unauthorized order to the customer [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-204].

[3] No Variation by Agreement

Except as otherwise provided in Com. Code § 11202 [see § 95.344[1] -[3]] and in Com. Code § 11203(a)(1) [see § 95.350[1][a]], rights and obligations arising under Com. Code § 11203 may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11202(f)].

§ 95.351 Execution of Payment Order

[1] Obligations of Receiving Bank in Executing Payment Order

[a] In General

Except as provided in Com. Code § 11302(b)-(d) [see § 95.351[1][b], [c]], if the receiving bank accepts a payment order pursuant to Com. Code § 11209(a) [see § 95.348[3]], the receiving bank is obliged to issue, on the execution date, a payment order complying with the sender's order and to follow the sender's instructions concerning any intermediary bank or funds-transfer system to be used in carrying out the funds transfer or concerning the means by which payment orders are to be transmitted in the funds transfer. If the originator's bank issues a payment order to an intermediary bank, the originator's bank is obliged to instruct the intermediary bank according to the instruction of the originator. An intermediary bank in the funds transfer is similarly bound by an instruction given to it by the sender of the payment order that it accepts [Com. Code § 11302(a)(1)].

In the absence of agreement, the receiving bank is not obliged to execute an order of the sender [Com. Code § 11212]. Com. Code § 11302 states the manner in which the receiving bank may execute the sender's order if execution occurs. Com. Code § 11302(a)(1) states the residual rule. The payment order issued by the receiving bank must comply with the sender's order and, unless some other rule in the section applies, the receiving bank is obliged to follow any instruction of the sender concerning which funds-transfer system is to be used, which intermediary banks are to be used, and what means of transmission must be used. The instruction of the sender may be incorporated in the payment order itself or may be given separately. For example, there may be a master agreement between the sender and receiving bank containing instructions governing payment orders to be issued from time to time by the sender to the receiving bank. In most funds transfers, speed is a paramount consideration. A sender wanting assurance that the funds transfer will be expeditiously completed can specify the means to be used. The receiving bank can follow the instructions literally or it can use an equivalent means. For example, if the sender instructs the receiving bank to transmit by telex, the receiving bank could use the telephone instead [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-302; see Com. Code § 11302(c); § 95.351[1][c]].

If the sender's instruction states that the funds transfer is to be carried out by telephone or by wire transfer, or it otherwise indicates that the funds transfer is to be carried out by the most expeditious means, then the receiving bank is obliged to transmit its payment order by the most expeditious available means, and to instruct any intermediary bank accordingly. If a sender's instruction states a payment date, the receiving bank is obliged to transmit its payment order at a time and by means reasonably necessary to allow payment to the beneficiary on the payment date or as soon thereafter as is feasible [Com. Code § 11302(a)(2)].

In most cases the sender will not specify a particular means but will use a general term such as "by wire" or "wire transfer" or "as soon as possible." Such words signify that the sender wants a same-day transfer. In these cases, the receiving bank is required to use a telephone or an electronic communication to transmit its order and is also required to instruct any intermediary bank to which it issues its order to transmit by similar means [Com. Code § 11302(a)(2)]. In other cases, such as an automated clearinghouse (ACH) transfer, a same-day transfer is not contemplated. Normally the sender's instruction or the context in which the payment order is received makes clear what type of funds transfer is appropriate. If the sender states a payment date with respect to the payment order, the receiving bank is obliged to execute the order at a time and in a manner sufficient to meet the payment date if that is feasible [Com. Code § 11302(a)(2)]. This requirement would apply to many ACH transfers made to pay recurring debts of the sender. In other cases, involving relatively small amounts, time may not be an important factor, and cost may be a more important element. Fast means, such as the telephone or electronic transmission, are more expensive than slow means such as mailing. Com. Code § 11302(c) states that in the absence of instructions, the receiving bank is given discretion to decide. It may issue its payment order by first-class mail or by any means reasonable in the circumstances [see § 95.351[1][c]]. Com. Code § 11305 [see § 95.352[1]] governs the liability of a receiving bank for breach of the obligations stated in Com. Code § 11302 [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-302].

[b] Bank's Use of Funds-Transfer System or Intermediary Bank

Unless otherwise instructed, a receiving bank executing a payment order may use any funds-transfer system, if use of that system is reasonable in the circumstances, and may issue a payment order to the beneficiary's bank or to an intermediary bank through which a payment order conforming to the sender's order can expeditiously be issued to the beneficiary's bank if the receiving bank exercises ordinary care in the selection of the intermediary bank. A receiving bank is not required to follow an instruction of the sender designating a funds-transfer system to be used in carrying out the funds transfer if the receiving bank, in good faith, determines that it is not feasible to follow the instruction or that following the instruction would unduly delay completion of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11302(b)].

Com. Code § 11302(b) concerns the choice of intermediary banks to be used in completing the funds transfer, and the funds-transfer system to be used. If the receiving bank is not instructed about the matter, it can issue an order directly to the beneficiary's bank or can issue an order to an intermediary bank. The receiving bank also has discretion concerning use of a funds-transfer system. In some cases it may be reasonable to use either an automated clearinghouse system or a wire transfer system such as CHIPS or Fedwire [see § 95.343[2][b], [c]]. Normally, the receiving bank will follow the instruction of the sender in these matters, but in some cases it may be prudent for the bank not to follow instructions. The sender may have designated a funds-transfer system to be used in carrying out a funds transfer, but it may not be feasible to use the designated system because of some impediment such as a computer breakdown which prevents prompt execution of the order. The receiving bank is permitted to use an alternate means of transmission in a good faith effort to execute the order expeditiously [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-302].

The same leeway is not given to the receiving bank if the sender designates an intermediary bank through which the funds transfer is to be routed. The sender's designation of that intermediary bank may mean that the beneficiary's bank is expecting to obtain a credit from that intermediary bank and may have relied on that anticipated credit. If the receiving bank uses another intermediary bank, the expectations of the beneficiary's bank may not be realized. The receiving bank could choose to route the transfer to another intermediary bank and then to the designated intermediary bank if there were some reason such as a lack of a correspondent-bank relationship or a bilateral credit limitation, but the designated intermediary bank cannot be circumvented, since to do so would violate the sender's instructions [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-302].

[c] Bank's Election of Reasonable Transmission Means

Unless Com. Code § 11302(a)(2) applies [see § 95.351[1][a]] or the receiving bank is otherwise instructed, the bank may execute a payment order by transmitting its payment order by first-class mail or by any means reasonable in the circumstances. If the receiving bank is instructed to execute the sender's order by transmitting its payment order by a particular means, the receiving bank may issue its payment order by the means stated or by any means as expeditious as the means stated [Com. Code § 11302(c)].

Unless instructed by the sender, the receiving bank may not obtain payment of its charges for services and expenses in connection with the execution of the sender's order by issuing a payment order in an amount equal to the amount of the sender's order less the amount of the charges, nor may the bank instruct a subsequent receiving bank to obtain payment of its charges in that manner [Com. Code § 11302(d)].

The normal rule, under Com. Code § 11302(a)(1) [see § 95.351[1][a]], is that the receiving bank, in executing a payment order, is required to issue a payment order that complies as to amount with that of the sender's order. In most cases the receiving bank issues an order equal to the amount of the sender's order and makes a separate charge for services and expenses in executing the sender's order. In some cases, particularly if it is an intermediary bank that is executing an order, charges are collected by deducting them from the amount of the payment order issued by the executing bank. If that is done, the amount of the payment order accepted by the beneficiary's bank will be slightly less than the amount of the originator's payment order [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-302].

[2] Transferring Wrong Amount of Funds

[a] More Than Proper Amount; Duplicate Orders

A receiving bank that executes the payment order of the sender by issuing a payment order in an amount greater than the amount of the sender's order, or by issuing a correct payment order and then issuing a duplicate order, is entitled to payment of the amount of the sender's order under Com. Code § 11402(c) [see § 95.352[2][b]] if that subdivision is otherwise satisfied. The bank is entitled to recover from the beneficiary of the erroneous order the excess payment received, to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11303(a)].

Com. Code § 11303 states the effect of erroneous execution of a payment order by the receiving bank. Under Com. Code § 11402(c) [see § 95.352[2][b]] the sender of a payment order is obliged to pay the amount of the order to the receiving bank if the bank executes the order, but the obligation to pay is excused if the beneficiary's bank does not accept a payment order instructing payment to the beneficiary of the sender's order. If erroneous execution of the sender's order causes the wrong beneficiary to be paid, the sender is not required to pay. If erroneous execution causes the wrong amount to be paid, the sender is not obliged to pay the receiving bank an amount in excess of the amount of the sender's order. Com. Code § 11303 takes precedence over Com. Code § 11402(c) respecting the liability of the sender and the rights of the receiving bank in various cases of erroneous execution [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-303].

[b] Less Than Proper Amount

A receiving bank that executes the payment order of the sender by issuing a payment order in an amount less than the amount of the sender's order is entitled to payment of the amount of the sender's order under Com. Code § 11402(c) [see § 95.352[2][b]] if that subdivision is otherwise satisfied and if the bank corrects its mistake by issuing an additional payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary of the sender's order. If the error is not corrected, the issuer of the erroneous order is entitled to receive or retain payment from the sender of the order that it accepted, up to the amount of the erroneous order. These rules do not apply, however, if the receiving bank executes the sender's payment order by issuing a payment order in an amount less than the amount of the sender's order for the purpose of obtaining payment of its charges for services and expenses pursuant to instruction of the sender [Com. Code § 11303(b); see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-303 (example)].

[3] Transferring Funds to Wrong Beneficiary

If a receiving bank executes the payment order of the sender by issuing a payment order to a beneficiary different from the beneficiary of the sender's order, and the funds transfer is completed on the basis of that error, the sender of the payment order that was erroneously executed together with all previous senders in the funds transfer are not obliged to pay the payment orders they issued. The issuer of the erroneous order is entitled to recover from the beneficiary of the order the payment received, to the extent allowed by the law governing mistake and restitution [Com. Code § 11303(c); see Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-303 (example)].

[4] Sender's Duty to Discover Erroneous Execution of Payment Order

If the sender of a payment order that is erroneously executed as stated in Com. Code § 11303 receives notification from the receiving bank that the order was executed or that the sender's account was debited with respect to the order, the sender has a duty to exercise ordinary care to determine, on the basis of information available to the sender, that the order was erroneously executed and to notify the bank of the relevant facts within a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days after the notification from the bank was received by the sender. If the sender fails to perform that duty, the bank is not obliged to pay interest on any amount refundable to the sender under Com. Code § 11402(d) [see § 95.352[2][c]] for the period before the bank learns of the execution error. The bank is not entitled to any recovery from the sender on account of a failure by the sender to perform the duty stated in Com. Code § 11304 [Com. Code § 11304].

This section is identical in effect to Com. Code § 11204 [see § 95.350[2], which applies to unauthorized orders issued in the name of a customer of the receiving bank [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-304].

E. Funds Transfers

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.352

§ 95.352 Payment

[1] Obligation of Receiving Bank on Delay in Payment to Beneficiary

[a] Interest Must Be Paid

If a funds transfer is completed but execution of a payment order by the receiving bank in breach of Com. Code § 11302 [see § 95.351[1] results in delay in payment to the beneficiary, the bank must pay interest either to the originator or the beneficiary of the funds transfer for the period of delay caused by the improper execution. Except as provided in Com. Code § 11305(c) [see § 95.352[1][c]], additional damages are not recoverable [Com. Code § 11305(a)].

Com. Code § 11305(a) covers cases of delay in completion of a funds transfer resulting from an execution by a receiving bank in breach of Com. Code § 11302(a). The receiving bank is obliged to pay interest on the amount of the order for the period of the delay. The rate of interest is stated in Com. Code § 11506 [see § 95.353[6]. With respect to wire transfers (other than automated clearinghouse transactions) within the United States, the expectation is that the funds transfer will be completed the same day. In those cases, the originator can reasonably expect that the originator's account will be debited on the day the beneficiary's account is credited. If the funds transfer is delayed, compensation can be paid either to the originator or to the beneficiary. The normal practice is to compensate the beneficiary's bank, allowing that bank to compensate the beneficiary by back-valuing the payment by the number of days of delay. Thus, the beneficiary's position is the same as it would have been if the funds transfer had been completed on the same day [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-305].

Reasonable attorney's fees are recoverable only in cases in which damages are limited to statutory damages stated in Com. Code § 11305(a), (b) and (d) [see § 95.352[1][e]]. If additional damages are recoverable because provided for by an express written agreement, then attorney's fees are not recoverable. The rationale is that there is no need for statutory attorney's fees in the latter case, because the parties have agreed to a measure of damages which may or may not provide for attorney's fees [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-305].

[b] Expenses May Have to Be Reimbursed

If execution of a payment order by a receiving bank in breach of Com. Code § 11302 [see § 95.351[1] results in noncompletion of the funds transfer, or in failure to use an intermediary bank designated by the originator, or in issuance of a payment order that does not comply with the terms of the payment order of the originator, then the bank is liable to the originator for the originator's expenses in the funds transfer and for incidental expenses and interest losses, to the extent not covered by Com. Code § 11305(a), resulting from the improper execution. Except as provided in Com. Code § 11305(c) [see § 95.352[1][c]], additional damages are not recoverable [Com. Code § 11305(b)].

Com. Code § 11305(b) applies to cases of breach of Com. Code § 11302 involving more than mere delay. In those cases, the bank is liable for damages for improper execution, limited to compensation for interest losses and incidental expenses of the sender resulting from the breach, the expenses of the sender in the funds transfer, and attorney's fees. Com. Code § 11305(b) reflects the judgment that imposition of consequential damages on a bank for commission of an error is not justified [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-305].

[c] Damages Pursuant to Agreement

In addition to amounts payable under Com. Code § 11305(a) and (b), damages, including consequential damages, are recoverable to the extent provided in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11305(c)].

Com. Code § 11305(c) allows the measure of damages in Com. Code § 11305(b) to be increased by an express written agreement of the receiving bank. An originator's bank might be willing to assume additional responsibilities and incur additional liability in exchange for a higher fee [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-305].

[d] Damages for Breach of Express Agreement to Execute Payment Order

If a receiving bank fails to execute a payment order that it was obliged by express agreement to execute, the receiving bank is liable to the sender for its expenses in the transaction and for incidental expenses and interest losses resulting from the failure to execute. Additional damages, including consequential damages, are recoverable to the extent provided in an express written agreement of the receiving bank, but are not otherwise recoverable [Com. Code § 11305(d)].

Com. Code § 11305(d) governs cases in which a receiving bank has obligated itself by express agreement to accept payment orders of a sender. In the absence of such an agreement, there is no obligation by a receiving bank to accept a payment order [Com. Code § 11212]. The measure of damages for breach of an agreement to accept a payment order is the same as that stated in Com. Code § 11305(b), that is, additional damages, including consequential damages, may be recovered to the extent stated in an express written agreement of the receiving bank [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-305].

[e] Attorney's Fees

Reasonable attorney's fees are recoverable if demand for compensation under Com. Code § 11305(a) or (b) is made and refused before an action is brought on the claim. If a claim is made for breach of an agreement under Com. Code § 11305(d), and the agreement does not provide for damages, then reasonable attorney's fees are recoverable if demand for compensation under Com. Code § 11305(d) is made and refused before an action is brought on the claim [Com. Code § 11305(e)].

[f] No Variation by Agreement

Except as otherwise stated in Com. Code § 11305, the liability of a receiving bank under Com. Code § 11305(a) and*(b)* may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11305(f)]. The effect of Com. Code § 11305(f) is to prevent reduction of a receiving bank's liability under Com. Code § 11305 [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-305].

[2] Acceptance of Payment Order by Receiving Bank

[a] Sender Must Pay Amount to Beneficiary's Bank

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11205 and 11207, with respect to a payment order issued to the beneficiary's bank, acceptance of the order by the bank obliges the sender to pay the bank the amount of the order, but payment is not due until the payment date of the order [Com. Code § 11402(a), (b)].

Com. Code § 11402(b) states that the sender of a payment order to the beneficiary's bank must pay the order when the beneficiary's bank accepts the order. At that point the beneficiary's bank is obliged to pay the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11404(a)]. The last clause of Com. Code § 11402(b) covers a case of premature acceptance by the beneficiary's bank. In some funds transfers, notably automated clearinghouse transfers, a beneficiary's bank may receive a payment order with a payment date after the day the order is received. The beneficiary's bank might accept the order before the payment date by notifying the beneficiary of receipt of the order. Although the acceptance obliges the beneficiary's bank to pay the beneficiary, payment is not due until the payment date. Moreover, the beneficiary's bank is not entitled to payment from the sender until the payment date [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-402].

A payment order is not like a negotiable instrument on which the drawer or maker has liability. Acceptance of the order by the receiving bank creates an obligation of the sender to pay the receiving bank the amount of the order. That is the extent of the sender's liability to the receiving bank, and no other person has any rights against the sender with respect to the sender's order [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-402].

[b] Sender Must Pay Amount to Intermediary Bank

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11205, 11207, 11303 and 11402(e), with respect to a payment order issued to a receiving bank other than the beneficiary's bank, acceptance of the order by the receiving bank obliges the sender to pay the bank the amount of the sender's order. Payment by the sender is not due until the execution date of the sender's order. The obligation of the sender to pay its payment order is excused if the funds transfer is not completed by acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order instructing payment to the beneficiary of that sender's payment order [Com. Code § 11402(a), (c); see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-402 (example)].

[c] Receiving Bank Might Have to Make Refund Payment

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11205 and 11207, if the sender of a payment order pays the order but was not obliged to pay all or part of the amount paid, the bank receiving payment is obliged to refund payment to the extent that the sender was not obliged to pay. Except as provided in Com. Code §§ 11204 and 11304, interest is payable on the refundable amount from the date of payment [Com. Code § 11402(a), (d)].

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11205 and 11207, if a funds transfer is not completed as stated in Com. Code § 11402(c) and an intermediary bank is obliged to refund payment as stated in Com. Code § 11402(d) but is unable to do so because it is not permitted by applicable law or because the bank suspends payments [see § 95.347] a sender in the funds transfer that executed a payment order in compliance with an instruction to route the funds transfer through that intermediary bank [see Com. Code § 11302(a)(1)] is entitled to receive or retain payment from the sender of the payment order that it accepted. The first sender in the funds transfer that issued an instruction requiring routing through that intermediary bank is subrogated to the right of the bank that paid the intermediary bank to refund as stated in Com. Code § 11402(d) [Com. Code § 11402(a), (e); see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-402 (example)].

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11205 and 11207, the right of the sender of a payment order to be excused from the obligation to pay the order as stated in Com. Code § 11402(c) or to receive refund under Com. Code § 11402(d) may not be varied by agreement [Com. Code § 11402(a), (f)].

[3] Payment of Sender's Obligation to Receiving Bank

[a] In General

Payment of the sender's obligation to the receiving bank under Com. Code § 11402 [see § 95.352[2] occurs as follows [Com. Code § 11403(a)]:

- If the sender is a bank, payment occurs when the receiving bank receives final settlement of the obligation through a Federal Reserve bank or through a funds-transfer system [Com. Code § 11403(a)(1)].

- If the sender is a bank and the sender credited an account of the receiving bank with the sender or caused an account of the receiving bank in another bank to be credited, payment occurs when the credit is withdrawn or, if not withdrawn, at midnight of the day on which the credit is withdrawable and the receiving bank learns of that fact [Com. Code § 11403(a)(2)].

- If the receiving bank debits an account of the sender with the receiving bank, payment occurs when the debit is made, to the extent that the debit is covered by a withdrawable credit balance in the account [Com. Code § 11403(a)(3)].

Com. Code § 11403 defines when a sender pays the obligation stated in Com. Code § 11402. If a group of two or more banks engage in funds transfers with each other, the participating banks will sometimes be senders and sometimes be receiving banks. With respect to payment orders other than Fedwires, the amounts of the various payment orders may be credited and debited to accounts of one bank with another or to a clearinghouse account of each bank, and amounts owed and amounts due are netted. Settlement is made through a Federal Reserve bank by charges to the Federal Reserve accounts of the net debtor banks and credits to the Federal Reserve accounts of the net creditor banks. In the case of Fedwires, the sender's obligation is settled by a debit to the Federal Reserve account of the sender and a credit to the Federal Reserve account of the receiving bank at the time the receiving bank receives the payment order. Both of these cases are covered by Com. Code § 11403(a)(1). When the Federal Reserve settlement becomes final, the obligation of the sender under Com. Code § 11402 is paid [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-403].

In some cases a bank does not settle an obligation owed to another bank through a Federal Reserve bank. This is the case if one of the banks is a foreign bank without access to the Federal Reserve payment system. In this kind of case, payment is usually made by credits or debits to accounts of the two banks with each other or to accounts of the two banks in a third bank [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-403 (providing example)].

Com. Code § 11403(a)(3) applies to a case in which the sender (bank or nonbank) has a funded account in the receiving bank. If the sender issues a payment order to the bank, the bank can obtain payment from the sender by simply debiting the account of the sender, which pays its Com. Code § 11402 obligation to the bank when the debit is made [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-403].

[b] Use of Funds-Transfer System

If the sender and receiving bank are members of a funds-transfer system that nets obligations multilaterally among participants, the receiving bank receives final settlement when settlement is complete in accordance with the rules of the system. The obligation of the sender to pay the amount of a payment order transmitted through the funds-transfer system may be satisfied, to the extent permitted by the rules of the system, by setting off and applying against the sender's obligation the right of the sender to receive payment from the receiving bank of the amount of any other payment order transmitted to the sender by the receiving bank through the funds-transfer system. The aggregate balance of obligations owed by each sender to each receiving bank in the funds-transfer system may be satisfied, to the extent permitted by the rules of the system, by setting off and applying against that balance the aggregate balance of obligations owed to the sender by other members of the system. The aggregate balance is determined after the right of setoff stated in the second sentence has been exercised [Com. Code § 11403(b)].

Com. Code § 11403(b) deals with multilateral settlements made through a funds-transfer system and is based on the CHIPS settlement system [see § 95.343[2][b]]. In a funds-transfer system such as CHIPS, which allows the various banks that transmit payment orders over the system to settle obligations at the end of each day, settlement is not based on individual payment orders. Each bank using the system engages in funds transfers with many other banks using the system. Settlement for any participant is based on the net credit or debit position of that participant with all other banks using the system. Com. Code § 11403(b) is designed to make clear that the obligations of any sender are paid when the net position of that sender is settled in accordance with the rules of the funds-transfer system. This provision is intended to invalidate any argument, based on common-law principles, that multilateral netting is not valid because mutuality of obligation is not present. Com. Code § 11403(b) dispenses with any mutuality of obligation requirements [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-403].

[c] Setoff Between Two Banks

If two banks transmit payment orders to each other under an agreement that settlement of the obligations of each bank to the other under Com. Code § 11402 will be made at the end of the day or other period, the total amount owed with respect to all orders transmitted by one bank shall be set off against the total amount owed with respect to all orders transmitted by the other bank. To the extent of the setoff, each bank has made payment to the other [Com. Code § 11403(c)].

Com. Code § 11403(c) applies to cases in which two banks send payment orders to each other during the day and settle with each other at the end of the day or at the end of some other period. It is similar to Com. Code § 11403(b) in that it recognizes that a sender's obligation to pay a payment order is satisfied by a setoff. The obligations of each bank as sender to the other as receiving bank are obligations of the bank itself and not as representative of customers. These two sections are important in the case of insolvency of a bank. They make clear that liability under Com. Code § 11402 is based on the net position of the insolvent bank after setoff [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-403].

[d] Sender Without Account Relationship

In a case not covered by Com. Code § 11403(a) [see [a] above], the time when payment of the sender's obligation under Com. Code § 11402(b) or (c) occurs is governed by applicable principles of law that determine when an obligation is satisfied [Com. Code § 11403(d)].

Com. Code § 11403(d) relates to the uncommon case in which the sender does not have an account relationship with the receiving bank and does not settle through a Federal Reserve bank. An example would be a customer that pays over the counter for a payment order that the customer issues to the receiving bank. Payment would normally be by cash, check, or bank obligation. When payment occurs is determined by law outside Division 11 [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-403].

[4] Obligation of Beneficiary's Bank to Pay Beneficiary

[a] In General

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11211(e) and 11405(d) and (e) [see §§ 95.346[1], 95.352[5][c], [d]], if a beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order, the bank is obliged to pay the amount of the order to the beneficiary of the order. Payment is due on the payment date of the order, but if acceptance occurs on the payment date after the close of the funds-transfer business day of the bank, payment is due on the next funds-transfer business day. If the bank refuses to pay after demand by the beneficiary and receipt of notice of particular circumstances that will give rise to consequential damages as a result of nonpayment, then the beneficiary may recover damages resulting from the refusal to pay, to the extent that the bank had notice of the damages, unless the bank proves that it did not pay because of a reasonable doubt concerning the right of the beneficiary to payment [Com. Code § 11404(a)].

The first sentence of Com. Code § 11404(a) states the time when the obligation of the beneficiary's bank arises. The second and third sentences state when the beneficiary's bank must make funds available to the beneficiary. They also state the measure of damages for failure, after demand, to comply. Since the Expedited Funds Availability Act [12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.; see § 95.220] also governs funds availability in a funds transfer, the second and third sentences of Com. Code § 11404(a) may be subject to preemption by that act [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-404].

Com. Code § 11404(a) provides that the beneficiary of an accepted payment order may recover consequential damages if the beneficiary's bank refuses to pay the order after demand by the beneficiary, provided the bank at that time had notice of the particular circumstances giving rise to the damages. Such damages are recoverable only to the extent that the bank had "notice of the damages." The quoted phrase requires that the bank have notice of the general type or nature of the damages that will be suffered as a result of the refusal to pay and their general magnitude. There is no requirement that the bank have notice of the exact or even the approximate amount of the damages, but if the amount of damages is extraordinary, the bank is entitled to notice of that fact [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-404].

Under the last clause of Com. Code § 11404(a), the beneficiary's bank is not liable for damages if its refusal to pay was "because of a reasonable doubt concerning the right of the beneficiary to payment." Normally there will not be any question about the right of the beneficiary to receive payment. The bank should be able to determine whether it has accepted the payment order and, if it has been accepted, the first sentence of Com. Code § 11404(a) states that the bank is obliged to pay. There may be uncommon cases, however, in which there is doubt whether acceptance occurred. For example, if acceptance is based on receipt of payment by the beneficiary's bank under Com. Code § 11403(a)(1) or (2), there may be cases in which the bank is not certain that payment has been received. There may also be cases in which there is doubt about whether the person demanding payment is the person identified in the payment order as beneficiary of the order [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-404].

The last clause of Com. Code § 11404(a) does not apply to cases in which a funds transfer is being used to pay an obligation, and a dispute arises between the originator and the beneficiary concerning whether the obligation is in fact owed. For example, the originator may try to prevent payment to the beneficiary by the beneficiary's bank by alleging that the beneficiary is not entitled to payment because of fraud against the originator or a breach of contract relating to the obligation. The fraud or breach of contract claim of the originator may be grounds for recovery by the originator from the beneficiary after the beneficiary is paid, but it does not affect the obligation of the beneficiary's bank to pay the beneficiary. Unless the payment order has been canceled pursuant to Com. Code § 11211(c), there is no excuse for refusing to pay the beneficiary. In a proper case, the refusal may result in consequential damages. Except in the case of a book transfer, in which the beneficiary's bank is also the originator's bank, the originator of a funds transfer cannot cancel a payment order to the beneficiary's bank, with or without the consent of that bank, because the originator is not the sender of that order. Thus, the beneficiary's bank may safely ignore any instruction by the originator to withhold payment to the beneficiary [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-404].

[b] Duty to Notify Beneficiary

If a payment order accepted by the beneficiary's bank requires payment to an account of the beneficiary, the bank is obliged to notify the beneficiary of receipt of the order before midnight of the next funds-transfer business day following the payment date. If the payment order does not instruct payment to an account of the beneficiary, the bank is required to notify the beneficiary only if notice is required by the order. Notice may be given by first-class mail or any other means reasonable in the circumstances. If the bank fails to give the required notice, the bank is obliged to pay interest to the beneficiary on the amount of the payment order from the day notice should have been given until the day the beneficiary learned of receipt of the payment order by the bank. No other damages are recoverable. Reasonable attorney's fees also are recoverable if demand for interest is made and refused before an action is brought on the claim [Com. Code § 11404(b)].

If acceptance of the order occurs under Com. Code § 11209(b)(1), the beneficiary is normally notified; hence, Com. Code § 11404(b) applies primarily to cases in which acceptance occurs under Com. Code § 11209(b)(2) or (3). Notice under Com. Code § 11404(b) is not required if the person entitled to the notice agrees (or a funds-transfer system rule provides) that notice is not required (and the beneficiary is given notice of the rule). In automated clearinghouse transactions, the normal practice is not to give notice to the beneficiary unless notice is requested by the beneficiary. This practice can be continued by adoption of a funds-transfer system rule [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-404].

[c] No Variation by Agreement or Funds-System Rule

The right of a beneficiary to receive payment and damages as stated in Com. Code § 11404(a) may not be varied by agreement or a funds-transfer system rule. The right of a beneficiary to be notified as stated in Com. Code § 11404(b) may be varied by agreement of the beneficiary or by a funds-transfer system rule if the beneficiary is notified of the rule before initiation of the funds transfer [Com. Code § 11404(c)].

[5] Payment of Obligation of Beneficiary's Bank to Beneficiary

[a] In General

If the beneficiary's bank credits an account of the beneficiary of a payment order, payment of the bank's obligation under Com. Code § 11404(a) occurs when and to the extent that either the beneficiary is notified of the right to withdraw the credit, or the bank lawfully applies the credit to a debt of the beneficiary, or funds with respect to the order are otherwise made available to the beneficiary by the bank [Com. Code § 11405(a)].

Com. Code § 11405 defines when the beneficiary's bank pays the beneficiary and when the obligation of the beneficiary's bank under Com. Code § 11404 to pay the beneficiary is satisfied. In almost all cases, the bank will credit an account of the beneficiary when it receives a payment order. In the typical case, the beneficiary is paid when the beneficiary is given notice of the right to withdraw the credit. In some cases payment might be made to the beneficiary, not by releasing funds to the beneficiary, but by applying the credit to a debt of the beneficiary; in that case, the beneficiary gets the benefit of the payment order because a debt of the beneficiary has been satisfied. The two principal cases in which payment will occur in this manner are setoff by the beneficiary's bank and payment of the proceeds of the payment order to a garnishing creditor of the beneficiary [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-405; see Com. Code § 11502].

If the beneficiary's bank does not credit an account of the beneficiary of a payment order, the time when payment of the bank's obligation under Com. Code § 11404(a) occurs is governed by principles of law that determine when an obligation is satisfied [Com. Code § 11405(b)].

[b] Unenforceable Condition on Payment

Except as stated in Com. Code § 11405(d) and (e) [see § 95.352[5][c], [d]], if the beneficiary's bank pays the beneficiary of a payment order under a condition to payment or agreement of the beneficiary giving the bank the right to recover payment from the beneficiary if the bank does not receive payment of the order, the condition to payment or agreement is not enforceable [Com. Code § 11405(c)].

If a beneficiary's bank releases funds to the beneficiary before it receives payment from the sender of the payment order, it assumes the risk that the sender may not pay the sender's order because of suspension of payments or other reason. The beneficiary's bank can protect itself against this risk by delaying acceptance. If the bank accepts the order, however, it is obliged to pay the beneficiary. If the beneficiary's bank has given the beneficiary notice of the right to withdraw a credit made to the beneficiary's account, the beneficiary has received payment from the bank. Once payment has been made to the beneficiary with respect to an obligation incurred by the bank under Com. Code § 11404(a), the payment cannot be recovered by the beneficiary's bank unless Com. Code § 11405(d) or (e) applies. Thus, a right to withdraw a credit cannot be revoked if the right to withdraw constituted payment of the bank's obligation. This principle applies even if funds were released as a "loan" or were released subject to a condition that they would be repaid in the event the bank does not receive payment from the sender of the payment order, or if the beneficiary agreed to return the payment if the bank did not receive payment from the sender [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-405].

[c] Use of Funds-Transfer System

A funds-transfer system rule may provide that payments made to beneficiaries of funds transfers made through the system are provisional until receipt of payment by the beneficiary's bank of the payment order that it accepted. If the beneficiary's bank makes a payment that is provisional under such a rule, the bank is entitled to refund from the beneficiary if the following conditions are satisfied:

- The rule requires that both the beneficiary and the originator be given notice of the provisional nature of the payment before the funds transfer is initiated.
- The beneficiary, the beneficiary's bank, and the originator's bank agreed to be bound by the rule.
- The beneficiary's bank did not receive payment of the payment order that it accepted.

If the beneficiary is obliged to refund payment to the beneficiary's bank, then acceptance of the payment order by the beneficiary's bank is nullified, and no payment by the originator of the funds transfer to the beneficiary occurs under Com. Code § 11406 [Com. Code § 11405(d)].

Com. Code § 11405(c) [see § 95.352[5][b]] is subject to the exception stated in Com. Code § 11405(d), which is intended to apply to automated clearinghouse (ACH) transfers. ACH transfers are made in batches. A beneficiary's bank will normally accept, at the same time and as part of a single batch, payment orders with respect to many different originator's banks. The custom in ACH transactions is to release funds to the beneficiary early on the payment date even though settlement to the beneficiary's bank does not occur until later in the day. The understanding is that payments to beneficiaries are provisional until the beneficiary's bank receives settlement. This practice is similar to what happens when a depositary bank releases funds with respect to a check forwarded for collection. If the check is dishonored the bank is entitled to recover the funds from the customer. ACH transfers are widely perceived as check substitutes; therefore, Com. Code § 11405(d) allows the funds-transfer system to adopt a rule making payments to beneficiaries provisional. If such a rule is adopted, a beneficiary's bank that releases funds to the beneficiary will be able to recover the payment if it does not receive payment of the payment order that it accepted [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-405].

The beneficiary, the beneficiary's bank, and the originator's bank must all agree to be bound by the rule, and the rule must require that both the beneficiary and the originator be given notice of the provisional nature of the payment before the funds transfer is initiated. There is no requirement that the notice be given with respect to a particular funds transfer. Once notice of the provisional nature of the payment has been given, the notice is effective for all subsequent payments to or from the person to whom the notice was given. Com. Code § 11405(d) provides only that the funds-transfer system rule must require notice to the beneficiary and the originator. The beneficiary's bank will know what the rule requires, but it has no way of knowing whether the originator's bank complied with the rule. Com. Code § 11405(d) does not require proof that the originator received notice. If the originator's bank failed to give the required notice, and the originator suffered as a result, the appropriate remedy is an action by the originator against the originator's bank based on that failure. However, the beneficiary's bank will not be able to get the benefit of Com. Code § 11405(d) unless the beneficiary had notice of the provisional nature of the payment, because Com. Code § 11405(d) requires an agreement by the beneficiary to be bound by the rule. Implicit in an agreement to be bound by a rule that makes a payment provisional is a requirement that notice be given of what the rule provides. The notice can be part of the agreement or separately given; for example, notice can be given by providing a copy of the system's operating rules [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-405].

With respect to ACH transfers made through a Federal Reserve bank acting as an intermediary bank, the Federal Reserve bank is obliged to pay a beneficiary's bank that accepts the payment order [Com. Code § 11402(b)]. Unlike Fedwire transfers, under current ACH practice a Federal Reserve bank that processes a payment order does not obligate itself to pay if the originator's bank fails to pay the Federal Reserve bank. It is assumed that the Federal Reserve will use its right of preemption [see Com. Code § 11107] to disclaim the payment obligation in ACH transactions if it decides to retain the provisional payment rule [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-405].

[d] Effect of Loss-Sharing Agreement

A funds-transfer system that nets obligations multilaterally among participants could have in effect a loss-sharing agreement among participants for the purpose of providing funds necessary to complete settlement of the obligations of participants that do not meet their settlement obligations. With respect to a funds transfer that includes a payment order transmitted over such a funds-transfer system, if the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order, and the system fails to complete settlement pursuant to its rules with respect to any payment order in the funds transfer, the following consequences ensue [Com. Code § 11405(e)].

- The acceptance by the beneficiary's bank is nullified, and no person has any right or obligation based on the acceptance.

- The beneficiary's bank is entitled to recover payment from the beneficiary.

- No payment by the originator to the beneficiary occurs under Com. Code § 11406.

- Subject to Com. Code § 11402(e), each sender in the funds transfer is excused from its obligation to pay its payment order under Com. Code § 11402(c), because the funds transfer has not been completed.

Com. Code § 11405(e) is another exception to Com. Code § 11405(c) [see § 95.352[5][b]]. It refers to funds-transfer systems having loss-sharing rules described in the subsection. Com. Code § 11405(e) applies only if the system fails to settle despite the loss-sharing rule. Since funds under the loss-sharing rule will instantly be available to the system and will be in an amount sufficient to cover any failure that can be reasonably anticipated, it is extremely unlikely that the system would ever fail to settle. Thus, Com. Code § 11405(e) addresses an event that should never occur. If that event were to occur, all payment orders made over the system would be canceled under the system's loss-sharing rule, and no bank would receive settlement, whether or not a failed bank was involved in a particular funds transfer. Com. Code § 11405(e) provides that each funds transfer in which there is a payment order with respect to which there is a settlement failure will be unwound. Acceptance by the beneficiary's bank in each funds transfer is nullified. The consequences of nullification are that the beneficiary has no right to receive or retain payment by the beneficiary's bank, no payment is made by the originator to the beneficiary, and each sender in the funds transfer is not obligated (subject to Com. Code § 11402(e)), to pay its payment order and is entitled to refund under Com. Code § 11402(d) if it has already paid [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-405].

[6] Payment by Originator of Funds Transfer

[a] When Payment Occurs

Subject to Com. Code §§ 11211(e) and 11405(d) and (e) [see §§ 95.346[1], 95.352[5][c], [d]], the originator of a funds transfer pays the beneficiary of the originator's payment order at the time a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary is accepted by the beneficiary's bank in the funds transfer. The payment is in an amount equal to the amount of the order accepted by the beneficiary's bank, but not more than the amount of the originator's order [Com. Code § 11406(a)].

Com. Code § 11406(a) states the fundamental rule of Division 11 that payment by the originator to the beneficiary is accomplished by providing to the beneficiary the obligation of the beneficiary's bank to pay [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-406].

[b] Payment Discharges Originator's Obligation to Beneficiary

If payment under Com. Code § 11406(a) is made to satisfy an obligation, the obligation is discharged to the same extent that discharge would result from payment to the beneficiary of the same amount in money, unless all of the following conditions are satisfied:

- The payment under Com. Code § 11406(a) was made by a means prohibited by the contract of the beneficiary with respect to the obligation.

- The beneficiary, within a reasonable time after receiving notice of receipt of the order by the beneficiary's bank, notified the originator of the beneficiary's refusal of the payment.

- Funds with respect to the order were not withdrawn by the beneficiary or applied to a debt of the beneficiary.

- The beneficiary would suffer a loss that could reasonably have been avoided if payment had been made by a means complying with the contract.

If payment by the originator does not result in discharge under Com. Code § 11406, the originator is subrogated to the rights of the beneficiary to receive payment from the beneficiary's bank under Com. Code § 11404(a) [Com. Code § 11406(b)].

In a large percentage of funds transfers, the transfer is made to pay an obligation of the originator. Com. Code § 11406(a) states that the beneficiary is paid by the originator when the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary. When that happens, the effect under Com. Code § 11406(b) is to substitute the obligation of the beneficiary's bank for the obligation of the originator. The effect is similar to that under Division 3 when a cashier's check payable to the beneficiary has been taken by the beneficiary. Normally, payment by funds transfer is sought by the beneficiary because it puts money into the hands of the beneficiary more quickly. As a practical matter, the beneficiary and the originator will nearly always agree to the funds transfer in advance. Under Com. Code § 11406(b), acceptance by the beneficiary's bank will result in discharge of the obligation for which payment was made unless the beneficiary had made a contract with respect to the obligation which did not permit payment by the means used. Thus, if there is no contractual obstacle with respect to the means of payment of the obligation, acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order to the account of the beneficiary can result in discharge [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-406; see Official Comments 3, 4 to UCC § 4A-406 (examples)].

[c] Effect of Deducting Bank Charges From Original Amount

For the purpose of determining whether discharge of an obligation occurs under Com. Code § 11406(b), if the beneficiary's bank accepts a payment order in an amount equal to the amount of the originator's payment order less charges of receiving banks in the funds transfer, then payment to the beneficiary is deemed to be in the amount of the originator's order unless, on demand by the beneficiary, the originator does not pay the beneficiary the amount of the deducted charges [Com. Code § 11406(c)].

Charges of receiving banks in a funds transfer normally are minimal compared to the amount being paid by the originator to the beneficiary. Wire transfers are normally agreed-to in advance, and the parties may agree concerning how the charges are to be covered between the parties. Com. Code § 11406(c) states a rule that applies in the absence of such an agreement. In some funds transfers, charges of banks that execute payment orders are collected by deducting the charges from the amount of the payment order issued by the bank--the bank issues a payment order for an amount slightly less than the amount of the payment order that is being executed. The result in such a case is that the payment order accepted by the beneficiary's bank will be for an amount slightly less than the amount of the originator's order. Com. Code § 11406(c) recognizes the principle that a beneficiary is entitled to full payment of a debt paid by wire transfer as a condition to discharge, yet the section prevents a beneficiary from denying the originator the benefit of the payment by asserting that discharge did not occur because deduction of bank charges resulted in less-than-full payment. The typical case is one in which the payment is made to exercise a valuable right such as an option, when that would be unfavorable to the beneficiary. Com. Code § 11406(c) allows discharge notwithstanding the deduction, unless the originator fails to reimburse the beneficiary for the deducted charges after demand by the beneficiary [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-406].

[d] Variation by Agreement

Rights of the originator or of the beneficiary of a funds transfer under Com. Code § 11406 may be varied only by agreement of the originator and the beneficiary [Com. Code § 11406(d)].

Except as otherwise provided in Division 11, the rights and obligations of a party to a funds transfer may be varied by agreement of the affected party [Com. Code § 11501(a)].

[2] Creditor's Claim

[a] "Creditor Process"

As used in Com. Code § 11502, "creditor process" means levy, attachment, garnishment, notice of lien, sequestration, or similar process issued by or on behalf of a creditor or other claimant with respect to an account [Com. Code § 11502(a)]. This definition is intended to cover the various devices by which a creditor of the holder of a bank account or a claimant to a bank account can seize the account. Procedure and nomenclature vary widely from state to state; hence, the term used in Com. Code § 11502 is a generic term [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4A-502].

[b] Receiving Bank's Interest Is Protected

With respect to an authorized account of the sender of a payment order, if the creditor process is served on the receiving bank, then for the purpose of determining rights with respect to the creditor process, if the receiving bank accepts the payment order, the balance in the authorized account is deemed to be reduced by the amount of the payment order to the extent that the bank did not otherwise receive payment of the order, unless the creditor process is served at a time and in a manner affording the bank a reasonable opportunity to act on it before the bank accepts the payment order [Com. Code § 11502(b)].

When a receiving bank accepts a payment order, the bank normally receives payment from the sender by debiting an authorized account of the sender. In accepting the sender's order the bank may be relying on a credit balance in the account. If creditor process is served on the bank with respect to the account before the bank accepts the order, but the bank employee responsible for the acceptance is not aware of the creditor process at the time the acceptance occurs, then it would be unjust to the bank to allow the creditor process to take the credit balance on which the bank has relied. Com. Code § 11502(b) allows the bank to obtain payment from the sender's account in this case, by providing that the balance in the sender's account to which the creditor process applies is deemed to be reduced by the amount of the payment order unless there was sufficient time for notice of the service of creditor process to be received by personnel of the bank responsible for the acceptance [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-502].

[c] Effect on Beneficiary's Bank

If a beneficiary's bank has received a payment order for payment to the beneficiary's account in the bank, the following rules apply [Com. Code § 11502(c)]:

- The bank may credit the beneficiary's account. The amount credited may be set off against an obligation owed by the beneficiary to the bank or may be applied to satisfy creditor process served on the bank with respect to the account [Com. Code § 11502(c)(1)].

- The bank may credit the beneficiary's account and allow withdrawal of the amount credited unless creditor process with respect to the account is served at a time and in a manner affording the bank a reasonable opportunity to act to prevent withdrawal [Com. Code § 11502(c)(2)].

- If creditor process with respect to the beneficiary's account has been served, and the bank has had a reasonable opportunity to act on it, the bank may not reject the payment order except for a reason unrelated to the service of process [Com. Code § 11502(c)(3)].

The bank may credit the beneficiary's account when the order is received, but under Com. Code § 11404(a) the bank incurs no obligation to pay the beneficiary until the order is accepted pursuant to Com. Code § 11209(b). Thus, before acceptance, the credit to the beneficiary's account is provisional. Under Com. Code § 11209(b), however, acceptance occurs if the beneficiary's bank pays the beneficiary pursuant to Com. Code § 11405(a), under which payment occurs if the credit to the beneficiary's account is applied to a debt of the beneficiary. Com. Code § 11502(c)(1) allows the bank to credit the beneficiary's account with respect to a payment order and to accept the order by setting off the credit against an obligation owed to the bank or applying the credit to creditor process with respect to the account [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-502; see Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-502 (example)].

Com. Code § 11502(c)(2) is similar to Com. Code § 11502(b). Normally the beneficiary's bank will release funds to the beneficiary shortly after acceptance or it will accept by releasing funds. Since the bank is bound by a garnishment order served before funds are released to the beneficiary, the bank might suffer a loss if funds were released without knowledge that a garnishment order had been served. Com. Code § 11502(c)(2) protects the bank if it did not have adequate notice of the garnishment when the funds were released [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 4A-502].

[d] Process Must Be Served on Beneficiary's Bank

Creditor process with respect to a payment by the originator to the beneficiary pursuant to a funds transfer may be served only on the beneficiary's bank with respect to the debt owed by that bank to the beneficiary. Any other bank served with the creditor process is not obliged to act with respect to the process [Com. Code § 11502(d)].

A creditor may want to reach funds involved in a funds transfer. The creditor may try to do so by serving process on the originator's bank, an intermediary bank or the beneficiary's bank. The purpose of Com. Code § 11502(d) is to guide the creditor and the court as to the proper method of reaching the funds involved in a funds transfer. A creditor of the originator can levy on the account of the originator in the originator's bank before the funds transfer is initiated, but that levy is subject to the limitations stated in Com. Code § 11502(b). The creditor of the originator cannot reach any other funds because no property of the originator is being transferred. A creditor of the beneficiary cannot levy on property of the originator, and until the funds transfer is completed by acceptance by the beneficiary's bank of a payment order for the benefit of the beneficiary, the beneficiary has no property interest in the funds transfer which the beneficiary's creditor can reach. A creditor of the beneficiary that wants to reach the funds to be received by the beneficiary must serve creditor process on the beneficiary's bank, so as to reach the obligation of the beneficiary's bank to pay the beneficiary, which arises on acceptance by the beneficiary's bank under Com. Code § 11404(a) [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4A-502].

[3] Restraining Orders

Under Com. Code § 11503, for proper cause and in compliance with applicable law, a court may restrain:

- A person from issuing a payment order to initiate a funds transfer;
- An originator's bank from executing the payment order of the originator; or
- The beneficiary's bank from releasing funds to the beneficiary or the beneficiary from withdrawing the funds.

A court may not otherwise restrain a person from issuing a payment order, making or receiving payment of a payment order, or otherwise acting with respect to a funds transfer [Com. Code § 11503].

Com. Code § 11503 is intended to prevent interruption of a funds transfer after it has been set in motion. The initiation of a funds transfer can be prevented by enjoining the originator or the originator's bank from issuing a payment order. After the funds transfer is completed by acceptance of a payment order by the beneficiary's bank, that bank can be enjoined from releasing funds to the beneficiary, or the beneficiary can be enjoined from withdrawing the funds. No other injunction is permitted. In particular, intermediary banks are protected, and injunctions against the originator and the originator's bank are limited to preventing issuance of a payment order. Except for the beneficiary's bank, nobody can be enjoined from paying a payment order, and no receiving bank can be enjoined from receiving payment from the sender of the order that it accepted [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-503].

[4] Charging Sender's Account

If a receiving bank has received more than one payment order of the sender, or received any payment orders and other items [see § 95.343[1][b] (what are "items")] that are payable from the sender's account, then the bank may charge the sender's account with respect to the various orders and items in any sequence [Com. Code § 11504(a)].

Com. Code § 11504(a) concerns priority among various obligations that are to be paid from the same account. A customer may have written checks on its account with the receiving bank and may have issued payment orders payable from the same account. If the account balance is not sufficient to cover all of the checks and payment orders, some checks may be dishonored and some payment orders may not be accepted. Although there is no concept of wrongful dishonor of a payment order in Division 11 (in the absence of an agreement to honor by the receiving bank), some rights and obligations may depend on the amount in the customer's account [see Com. Code §§ 11209(b)(3), 11210(b)]. Whether dishonor of a check is wrongful also may depend on the balance in the customer's account. Under Com. Code § 11504(a), the bank is not required to consider the competing items and payment orders in any particular sequence. Rather, it may charge the customer's account for the various items and orders in any sequence [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-504 (includes example)].

In determining whether a credit to an account has been withdrawn by the holder of the account or applied to a debt of the holder of the account, credits first made to the account are first withdrawn or applied [Com. Code § 11504(b)]. In other words, a "first in, first out" rule applies.

[5] Notice to Bank That Customer Objects to Payment

If a receiving bank has received payment from its customer with respect to a payment order issued in the name of the customer as sender and accepted by the bank, and the customer received notification reasonably identifying the order, the customer is precluded from asserting that the bank is not entitled to retain the payment, unless the customer notifies the bank of the customer's objection to the payment within one year after the notification was received by the customer [Com. Code § 11505].

Com. Code § 11505 is in the nature of a statute of repose for objecting to debits made to the customer's account. A receiving bank that executes payment orders of a customer may have received payment from the customer by debiting the customer's account with respect to a payment order that the customer was not required to pay. For example, the payment order may not have been authorized or verified pursuant to Com. Code § 11202, or the funds transfer may not have been completed. In either case the receiving bank is obliged to refund the payment to the customer, and this obligation to refund payment cannot be varied by agreement [Com. Code §§ 11204, 11402].

Refund also may be required if the receiving bank is not entitled to payment from the customer because the bank erroneously executed a payment order [Com. Code § 11303]. A similar analysis applies to that situation: Com. Code § 11402(d) and (f) require refund, and the obligation to refund may not be varied by agreement. Under Com. Code § 11505, however, the obligation to refund may not be asserted by the customer if the customer has not objected to the debiting of the account within one year after the customer received notification of the debit [Official Comment to UCC § 4A-505].

The statutory requirement is to notify the bank "of the customer's objection to the payment" [Com. Code § 11505]. The customer need not precisely state in so many words that the customer objects to the debiting of its account, but the customer must inform the bank in some fashion that it believes the bank should not have accepted the payment order or otherwise is liable for the loss. Under Division 11, a bank is not necessarily liable for accepting an unauthorized, or even fraudulent, payment order. Accordingly, merely informing the bank that a payment order was fraudulent does not inform it that the customer considers the bank liable for the loss [Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 239, 256, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240, 158 P.3d 800 (customer "must object to what the bank did, not merely inform the bank [that] the payment order was unauthorized"; emphasis in original)].

The notice requirement is not technical. The purpose of the notification requirement is to inform the bank reasonably promptly that the customer believes it is liable for the loss. That way, the bank knows that it should take appropriate steps to protect itself. The customer's notice need only be sufficient to satisfy this purpose. The customer does not have to state specifically that it objects to the debiting or otherwise use any particular words. While it would certainly be preferable and clearer, and might avoid unnecessary litigation, for the customer to tell the bank expressly that the bank erred in processing the payment orders, or that it is liable for the loss, or to use some other clear language, such specific words are not always necessary. What is necessary is that the customer convey to the bank in some way that the customer objects to what the bank did or, stated slightly differently, the customer must in some way assert a claim against the bank. Whether the notification is sufficient in a given case depends on the overall circumstances. The test is whether, in view all of the relevant circumstances, a reasonable bank would understand from the customer's communication that the customer was objecting to what the bank had done in accepting the payment orders, or the customer otherwise considered the bank liable for the loss. If a reasonable bank would so understand the communication, it would know that it should take appropriate steps to protect itself, thus satisfying the purpose behind Com. Code § 11505 [Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank (2007) 41 Cal. 4th 239, 259, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240, 158 P.3d 800] .

[6] Calculation of Interest

If, under Division 11, a receiving bank is obliged to pay interest with respect to a payment order issued to the bank, the amount payable may be determined either by agreement of the sender and receiving bank or by a funds-transfer system rule if the payment order is transmitted through a funds-transfer system [Com. Code § 11506(a)].

If the amount of interest is not determined by an agreement or rule as stated in Com. Code § 11506(a), the amount is calculated by multiplying the applicable federal funds rate by the amount on which interest is payable, and then multiplying the product by the number of days for which interest is payable. The applicable federal funds rate is the average of the federal funds rates published by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for each of the days for which interest is payable, divided by 360. The federal funds rate for any day on which a published rate is not available is the same as the published rate for the next preceding day for which there is a published rate. If a receiving bank that accepted a payment order is required to refund payment to the sender of the order because the funds transfer was not completed, but the failure to complete was not due to any fault by the bank, the interest payable is reduced by a percentage equal to the reserve requirement on deposits of the receiving bank [Com. Code § 11506(b)].

A receiving bank is required to pay interest on the amount of a payment order received by the bank in a number of situations. Sometimes the interest is payable to the sender; in other cases it is payable to either the originator or the beneficiary of the funds transfer [see Com. Code §§ 11204(a), 11209(b)(3), 11210(b), 11305(a), 11402(d), 11404(b)]. The rate of interest may be governed by a funds-transfer system rule or by agreement as stated in Com. Code § 11506(a); otherwise, the rate is determined under Com. Code § 11506(b) [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4A-506].

Example.

> A bank is obliged to pay interest on $1,000,000 for three days, July 3, July 4, and July 5. The published Fed Funds rate is 0.082 for July 3 and 0.081 for July 5. There is no published rate for July 4 because that day is not a banking day. The rate for July 3 applies to July 4. The applicable Fed Funds rate is 0.08167 (the average of 0.082, 0.082, and 0.081) divided by 360, which equals 0.0002268. The amount of interest payable is $1,000,000 times 0.0002268 times 3, which is $680.40.

In some cases, interest is payable even though there is no fault by the receiving bank. The last sentence of Com. Code § 11506(b) applies to those cases. For example, a funds transfer might not be completed because the beneficiary's bank rejected the payment order issued to it by the originator's bank or an intermediary bank. Com. Code § 11402(c) provides that the originator is not obliged to pay its payment order, and Com. Code § 11402(d) provides that the originator's bank must refund any payment received, plus interest. The requirement to pay interest in this case is not based on fault by the originator's bank. Rather, it is based on restitution. Since the originator's bank had the use of the originator's money, it is required to pay the originator for the value of that use. The value of that use is not determined by multiplying the interest rate by the refundable amount because the originator's bank is required to deposit with the Federal Reserve a percentage of the bank's deposits as a reserve requirement. Since that deposit does not bear interest, the bank had use of the refundable amount reduced by a percentage equal to the reserve requirement. If the reserve requirement is 12 percent, the amount of interest payable by the bank under the formula stated in Com. Code § 11506(b) is reduced by 12 percent [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 4A-506].

[1] Appraisals

Financial institution, in performing appraisal of property that would secure loan to be made by it, was acting in its own interest and did not owe any duty of care to buyer/borrower. Nymark v. Heart Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1100, 283 Cal. Rptr. 53

[2] Automated Teller Machines (ATMs)

Nevada statute allowing Nevada banks to charge transaction fee for ATM transaction initiated at bank-owned ATMs and accomplished through shared ATM network overrode network member agreement's prohibition on such fees and did not violate commerce clause [U.S. Const., art. I, § 8, cl. 3]; statute did not discriminate in favor of Nevada banks. Valley Bank of Nevada v. Plus System, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 914 F.2d 1186, 1197

ATM is public accommodation within meaning of Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 54.1) and other laws, thus requiring that they be accessible to handicapped persons, specifically that ramp-type access, rather than stairway, be used. Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1183, 1190-1196, 260 Cal. Rptr. 49

[3] "Bank" Defined

Federal reserve regulation 12 C.F.R. § 225.2(b)(1) (also known as Reg Y) is impermissibly broad definition of bank; 12 U.S.C. § 1841(c) (Bank Holding Company Act) definition of bank is controlling; bank is required to offer deposits that customer can legally withdraw on demand and to make commercial loans, which may not be defined to include money market transactions. Fed. Reserve Bd. v. Dimension Financial (1986) 474 U.S. 361, 364-375, 106 S. Ct. 681, 88 L. Ed. 2d 691

Deposits held by lender were "demand deposits" within meaning of Bank Holding Company Act when lender's oral policy allowed depositors to withdraw funds as needed and funds to be transferred to third parties; thus, lender was "bank" within meaning of Act. S&N Equipment Co. v. Casa Grande Cotton Fin. Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 97 F.3d 337, 345

[4] Director's Liability

[a] Federally Insured Banks

Business judgment rule immunizes directors of federally insured national bank from liability for purely negligent acts; nonofficer directors entitled to rely on company employees and advisors without duty of further inquiry, absent special circumstances. FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046

[b] Savings and Loan Associations

[i] In General

Director and sole shareholder who arranged for loan to third party, proceeds of which were used to purchase director's interest in association, breached fiduciary duty to association; however, recovery did not extend to amount of entire loan proceeds, but was limited to amount of profit director realized on transaction. Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp. v. Molinaro (9th Cir. 1989) 889 F.2d 899, 904-905 (applying California law; relying on F. & M. Bank v. Downey (1879) 53 Cal. 466, 468 ; Bank of America v. Ryan (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 698, 706, 24 Cal. Rptr. 739 ; and Broadway Fed. etc. Loan Assoc. v. Howard (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 382, 393, 285 P.2d 61)

[ii] Officers' and Directors' Standard of Conduct

State law sets standard of conduct for officers and directors of federally insured savings institutions as long as state standard (such as simple negligence) is stricter than that of 12 U.S.C. § 1821(k), which sets "gross negligence" floor and applies as substitute for state standards that are more relaxed. Atherton v. F.D.I.C. (1997) 519 U.S. 213, 117 S. Ct. 666, 669-676, 136 L. Ed. 2d 656

[5] Electronic Funds Transfer Act

As matter of law, cardholder was liable for unauthorized electronic fund transfers occurring in July and August of 1987 that could have been prevented had cardholder reported unauthorized transaction that was shown on December 1986 statement. Kruser v. Bank of America (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 741, 750, 281 Cal. Rptr. 463

[6] Escrow Services

Bank that performed "in-house" escrow services in connection with construction loan did not undertake, and therefore did not owe, any fiduciary duty to borrower, even though third-party escrow would be fiduciary. Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 103, 119-120, 284 Cal. Rptr. 367

[7] Federal Preemption

Comptroller regulation limiting exercise of visitorial powers by state officials [see 12 C.F.R. § 7.4000(a)] was overbroad in precluding state officials from "prosecuting enforcement actions" in courts, under applicable state laws; however, that regulation could be applied to prevent state official from issuing executive subpoena (as distinct from judicial subpoena) requiring national bank to disclose information about lending practices. Cuomo v. Clearing House Ass'n, L.L.C. (2009) -- U.S. -- 129 S. Ct. 2710, 2721-2722, 174 L. Ed. 2d 464

National Bank Act and implementing regulations preempted state law claims that, in connection with real estate lending to consumers, national bank (1) committed "unfair" competition by overcharging for underwriting fees and by marking up tax-service fees and (2) engaged in "fraudulent" practices by failing to disclose actual costs of its underwriting and tax services. *Martinez v. Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, Inc. (9th Cir. 2010) 598 F.3d 549, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 4899, at *13-16

Civ. Code §§ 9 and 11 (stating that whenever legal or contractual act is required to be performed on holiday, it may be performed on next business day without any adverse consequence) do not apply to national bank's credit card payment due dates because those state laws are preempted by federal law stating that national bank may make non real estate loans without regard to state law limitations concerning terms of credit, including schedule for repayment of principal and interest and payments due [12 C.F.R. § 7.4008(d)(2)(iv)]. Miller v. Bank of Am. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 980, 982, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 723

National banking regulations describing preemption of state laws on visitorial powers of state officials [12 C.F.R. § 7.4000(a)], taking of deposits [12 C.F.R. § 7.4007(b)], and making of non-real-estate loans [12 C.F.R. § 7.4008(d)], did not bar consumer class action under unfair competition law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.] and Consumers Legal Remedies Act [Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.] against group of national banks arising from alleged violations of those laws and Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act [Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.] in connection with making income tax refund loans. Hood v. Santa Barbara Bank & Trust (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 526, 541-548, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 369

Neither Home Owners Loan Act (12 U.S.C. § 1461 et seq.) nor related regulations [see 12 C.F.R. §§ 545.1, 545.2] preempted cause of action against savings association and its officers for unfair competition (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.) based on making loans to unqualified strawmen to maximize income and perpetuate slum conditions; however, allegation with regard to "points" charged was in conflict with 12 U.S.C. § 1463(g) and portion of prayer seeking foreclosure was in conflict with 12 C.F.R. § 545.34, requiring that both be stricken. People v. Highland Fed. Savings & Loan (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1692, 1708-1713, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555

Borrowers' state claims challenging lender's collection of reconveyance fee when deed of trust was recorded was not preempted, expressly or impliedly, by former 12 U.S.C. § 1464 or by related regulations, which created no direct right of action. Siegel v. American Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 953, 960-961, 965-966, 258 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; but see Lopez v. World Savings & Loan Assn. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 729, 740, 130 Cal. Rptr. 42 (agreeing with Siegel court's construction of former 12 C.F.R. Part 545.2, but noting that Siegel's continuing validity was in "serious doubt" in light of successor regulation, 12 C.F.R. Part 560.2, which contained clear statement of OTS to occupy entire field of leading regulation for federal savings associations)

[8] Insolvent Institutions

[a] Bankrupt Holding Company

When bank holding company files petition in bankruptcy, ongoing, nonfinal administrative proceeding by Federal Reserve Board is not within stay of 11 U.S.C. § 362, but, if action results in judgment enforcement of which would effect bankruptcy estate, Bankruptcy Court is permitted to exercise its concurrent jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b). Federal Reserve Board v. MCorp Fin., Inc. (1991) 502 U.S. 32, 112 S. Ct. 459, 116 L. Ed. 2d 358, 368, 370

[b] Claims Against Insolvent Institutions

Stockholder who sued Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) in capacity as stockholder, officer, or director of savings bank that was under conservatorship of FDIC, had standing under conflict of interest exception to FIRREA requirement that FDIC receivers succeed to all rights of institution, including right to sue on behalf of institution; because FDIC and OTC are closely related agencies with overlapping structures, FDIC faces conflict of interest when it contemplates suing OTC. Delta Savings Bank v. United States (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 1017, 1022-1024

When FDIC as receiver of insolvent bank pursuant to FIRREA repudiated contracts with service provider, 12 U.S.C. § 1821(e) exclusion of lost profits precluded provider from recovering damages based on its expectation interest in agreements. Alltel Information Services, Inc. v. FDIC (9th Cir. 1999) 194 F.3d 1036, 1042

Aggrieved parties to whom bank tendered cashier's checks in lieu of wire fund transfer required by state court-approved settlement agreement were neither "depositors" of bank under California law nor "creditors" of bank subject to FIRREA claims process. Sharpe v. F.D.I.C. (9th Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 1147, 1156-1157

FDIC could invoke preliminary injunction asset freeze in action against bank's officers and directors under Taxpayer Recovery Act absent allegations of fraudulent conduct pursuant to 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(18), (19). F.D.I.C. v. Garner (9th Cir. 1997) 125 F.3d 1272, 1277-1278

Fin. Code § 3110.1 is not authority for receiver of insolvent bank to omit creditor's claim against insolvent bank from purchase and assumption agreement by which solvent bank assumed all other liabilities of insolvent bank; Fin. Code §§ 857, 3119 requires all creditors of insolvent bank to be treated equally; receiver is liable to creditor in its capacity as insurer, rather than as receiver. Woodbridge Plaza v. Bank of Irvine (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 538, 540-542, 544 (construing former Fin. Code § 857)

Fact that creditor's claim against insolvent bank was not reduced to judgment did not affect its ripeness for purposes of requiring its inclusion in purchase and assumption agreement. Woodbridge Plaza v. Bank of Irvine (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 538, 542

Claim against receiver for excluding creditor's claim from purchase and assumption agreement by which solvent bank assumed all other liabilities of insolvent bank was not tort and was not barred by Federal Tort Claims Act; 12 U.S.C. § 1819 is general waiver of sovereign immunity from claims brought against Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Woodbridge Plaza v. Bank of Irvine (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 538, 542-543

When FDIC became receiver for failed bank while action on claim against bank was pending, FDIC was entitled to have action stayed during 180-day period specified in 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(5)(A)(i), in order to permit exhaustion of administrative review process as it pertained to underlying claim. Neman v. Commercial Capital Bank (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 645, 652-653, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 800

Once determination becomes final without any challenge under Administrative Procedures Act (see 5 U.S.C. § 702 et seq.), unsecured creditor and California court was bound by Federal Home Loan Bank Board's decision that claims of general creditors of insolvent institution are worthless and entry of summary judgment against unsecured creditor was proper. Tri-Continent Internat. Corp. v. Paris Savings & Loan Assn. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1354, 1359-1360, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508

Maximum liability of FDIC is amount claimant would have received if FDIC liquidated assets and liabilities of failed institution. Tri-Continent Internat. Corp. v. Paris Savings & Loan Assn. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1354, 1359, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508

Entity that assumed deposits and secured liabilities of failed institution and acquired its assets from FSLIC as receiver is not successor in sense that it is not party to contract of failed institution and cannot be sued on it. Tri-Continent

Internat. Corp. v. Paris Savings & Loan Assn. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1354, 1359, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508

If FDIC as receiver of insolvent bank intends to retain possession of branch under lease and/or sells or assigns lessee's interest to third party, FDIC or third party is required to cure defaults accrued prior to insolvency; lessor cannot be required to accept receivership certificate pending liquidation of insolvent's assets. In re Valley State Bank (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 221, 223-225, 272 Cal. Rptr. 707 ; see Fin. Code §§ 3110.1(d)(1), 3111

Fin. Code § 3118 does not require claim to be filed by plaintiff whose action against bank was already pending at time bank became insolvent. Nulph v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1116, 1119-1122, 235 Cal. Rptr. 831

[c] Claims by Receiver or Its Assignee

FSLIC, in its corporate capacity and as assignee of FSLIC acting as receiver of insolvent state-chartered association, was entitled to collect dividends paid to sole shareholder who was also director out of paid-in surplus in violation of Fin. Code § 6522 [see also Corp. Code § 316(a)(1) (liability of director for illegal dividends)]. Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp. v. Molinaro (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 1490, 1492-1493

Assignment by FDIC, as receiver, of cause of action held by insolvent savings and loan association to FDIC in corporate capacity [see 12 U.S.C. § 1823(d), (e)] after state action was dismissed for failure to be tried within five years and filing of second action in federal court was forum shopping, but was not ground for federal court to abstain from trying, or to dismiss, federal action. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Nichols (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 633, 637

Actions by FDIC as receiver of failed bank governed by six-year limitation of 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(14)(A) or by any longer period applicable under state law; six-year period commences when FDIC receivership commences, but does not revive any claim (or, on installment note, any portions of claim) barred under state law before FDIC's appointment as receiver. White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1297-1299, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200 (California statute compared was Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1); see now Com. Code § 3118(a), which provides for six-year limitation period)

Six-year limitation of 12 U.S.C. § 1821(d)(14)(A) passes to assignee with assignment by FDIC of claim it acquired as receiver of failed bank. White v. Moriarty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1290, 1297-1298, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200

[d] Oral Agreements (D'Oench, Duhme Doctrine)

Alleged misrepresentation by bank to borrowers regarding amount of land and extent of mineral interests in it was express warranty within purview of 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e), which required it to be in writing to establish defense against FDIC in its action as receiver to collect note. Langley v. FDIC (1987) 484 U.S. 86, 90-96, 108 S. Ct. 396, 98 L. Ed. 2d 340

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine did not preclude debtors' reliance on unwritten agreement that their obligations under promissory notes were conditioned on bank's fulfillment of obligations under loan commitment letter; D'Oench, Duhme doctrine does not apply when FDIC acts as receiver in foreclosure action in which agreement is asserted as defense. F.D.I.C. v. Craft (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 697, 705

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine did not bar fraud claim when no unique federal interest existed to justify application of federal common law; 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) was inapplicable because oral agreement in case pertained to liabilities of bank rather than assets. Ledo Financial Corporation v. Summers (9th Cir. 1997) 122 F.3d 825, 828-830

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine and 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) bar affirmative defenses and counterclaims without regard to negotiability of underlying obligation or federal regulatory agency's status as holder in due course. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Kennelly (9th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 818, 822

Common law D'Oench, Duhme doctrine of equitable estoppel applies to protect banking authorities and bar suit even when financial institution does not acquire specific asset whose value is affected by alleged secret agreement; fact that acquisition of asset is required in order to invoke statutory bar to suit [see 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e)] does not affect application of common law doctrine. Brookside Associates v. Rifkin (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 490, 495-496

FDIC, being receiver for bank, was entitled to rely on 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) and refuse to honor letter of credit issued to investor by failed bank when letters were not reflected on bank's books, lacked collateral required under federal banking statutes, and had adverse impact on bank's assets. Murphy v. FDIC (9th Cir. 1993) 12 F.3d 1485, 1491-1492

Neither common-law D'Oench, Duhme doctrine nor its statutory counterpart [12 U.S.C. § 1823(e)] prohibited reformation of loan documents to include nonrecourse provision, when "side agreement" to include this provision in loan was evidenced by loan commitment letter, minutes of bank board meeting approving loan, and board submission describing loan to board members before approval. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Midwest Fed. Sav. Bank (9th Cir. 1993) 4 F.3d 1490, 1497-1502

Doctrine enunciated in D'Oench, Duhme & Co. v. FDIC (1942) 315 U.S. 447, 460-461, 62 S. Ct. 676, 86 L. Ed. 956 , applied to bar affirmative defense in action by FSLIC to enforce promissory note when unsigned prior loan commitment letter constituted "secret agreement." Federal Sav. & Loan Ins. v. Gemini Management (9th Cir. 1990) 921 F.2d 241, 245-246

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine applied to bar borrower's purported state law defenses that were based on exculpatory agreement signed only by borrower and witness. RTC Mortgage Trust v. Shlens (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 304, 318-319, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581

D'Oench, Duhme cases and statutes do not provide that "records speak for themselves as to enforceability of the debt"; rule allowing or requiring admissibility of any document found in bank's records without evidence of reliability would be break with past practice, could raise grave implications for continued maintenance of reliable bank records over long term, and is far beyond the scope of D'Oench, Duhme doctrine. Remington Investments, Inc. v. Hamedani (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1033, 1039, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine barred both defenses and affirmative claims for relief that would either diminish value of insolvent institution's assets or increase its liabilities, but did not bar claim for breach of implied in fact employment agreement that rested in part on oral evidence. Thomka v. Financial Corp. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 887, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382

Association created by FSLIC to take over pooled assets and liabilities of several failed associations in receivership was entitled to raise D'Oench, Duhme doctrine to bar cause of action based on breach of alleged agreement (commitment letter) not properly documented in records of failed predecessor association. Weber v. New West Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 97, 107-108, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468

Receiver for savings and loan association was entitled to raise D'Oench, Duhme doctrine [see 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e)] in state court to bar cause of action against association based on breach of agreement not properly documented in association's records; defense may be raised initially on appeal when supporting facts are not disputed. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Winslow (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1799, 1807-1811, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510

D'Oench, Duhme doctrine bars any claim against insolvent institution that would either diminish value of assets held by FSLIC or increase liabilities of insolvent institution, whether asserted affirmatively or as defense, as general creditor, or to recover specific asset. Bartram v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1749, 1752-1753, 1757-1758, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614 (seeking damages for misrepresentations related to exchange of real property)

Although express language of 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) applies only to FDIC, statute is based on equitable doctrine enunciated in D'Oench, Duhme & Co. v. FDIC (1942) 315 U.S. 447, 62 S. Ct. 676, 86 L. Ed. 956 , and extends to FSLIC and savings and loan industry; statute thus bars setoff against successor to FSLIC as receiver of insolvent association when claim against insolvent and successor is based on oral agreement. Walsh v. New West Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1539, 1543-1544 n.6, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35 ; Webb v. Superior Court (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 990, 1002-1003, 275 Cal. Rptr. 581

Defense of 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) (D'Oench, Duhme doctrine) was applicable to claims of fraud and to enforce oral agreement for exchange of property against successor of insolvent savings and loan association alleged to be principal and coconspirator; direct relationship was not essential to application of doctrine. Walsh v. New West Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1539, 1545-1546, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35

Despite application of 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e) (D'Oench, Duhme doctrine) to bar action against successor of insolvent savings and loan association, successor was entitled to attorney's fees [see Civ. Code § 1717] under provision in notes between plaintiffs and codefendant. Walsh v. New West Federal Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1539, 1546-1548, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 35

Failure of insolvent association to raise D'Oench, Duhme doctrine as affirmative defense to plaintiff's claim based on oral agreement did not constitute waiver of defense on behalf of successor that raised it on becoming defendant in intervention. Webb v. Superior Court (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 990, 1002-1003, 275 Cal. Rptr. 581

Federal association that voluntarily answered complaint against insolvent state association, describing itself in answer as successor in interest, and participated in action for two years waived any defense that might have been available to it under former 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e). California Concrete Co. v. Beverly Hills Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 260, 270-273, 261 Cal. Rptr. 484

As matter of public policy to ensure maximum return to insured depositors, FDIC, acting as receiver for insolvent bank, was not bound by secret or oral agreement between bank and its debtors (borrower's guarantors), whether fraudulent or not; when FDIC takes possession as receiver, borrower is estopped to rely on defenses of fraud and mistake to conform written loan documents to oral understanding. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dureau (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 956, 960-961, 963-965, 261 Cal. Rptr. 19 (distinguishing defense of failure of consideration)

[9] Insurance Business

12 U.S.C. § 92 (authorizing national bank, with approval of Controller of Currency, to sell insurance in any of its branches in community with population of 5,000 or less) was not repealed; attempted repeal in 1916 was mere scrivener's error. U.S. Nat. Bank of Ore. v. Ins. Agents (1993) 508 U.S. 439, 113 S. Ct. 2173, 124 L. Ed. 2d 402, 422

Proposition 103 (1988) intended to allow banks to enter into insurance business, and express repeal of (former) Ins. Code § 1643 was essential step in implementing that intent; Proposition 103 did not repeal former Fin. Code § 772(b) (prohibiting bank's investment in company that acts as insurance agent) or Fin. Code § 1208 (grant of authority to limited types of banks to act as insurance agent) by implication; bank subsidiaries still prevented from selling insurance. Sanford v. Garamendi (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1109, 1119, 1121, 1123-1125, 284 Cal. Rptr. 897

[10] Interstate Operations

Bank Holding Company Act [12 U.S.C. § 1842(d)] allows states to prohibit establishment or acquisition of bank, as defined in 12 U.S.C. § 1841(c), within its borders by bank holding company with its principal banking operations in another state. Lewis v. Continental Bank Corp. (1990) 494 U.S. 472, 474, 110 S. Ct. 1249, 108 L. Ed. 2d 400

12 U.S.C. § 1842(d) (Bank Holding Company Act) and state laws that allow bank holding company located in one state to acquire bank in another state if other state is in same region and has reciprocal statute does not violate commerce clause or compact clause or equal protection; out-of-state corporations from outside region not discriminated against. Northeast Bancorp v. Board of Governors (1985) 472 U.S. 159, 174-178, 105 S. Ct. 2545, 86 L. Ed. 2d 112

[11] Jurisdiction

Federal courts do not have exclusive jurisdiction over actions against financial institution filed before appointment of FDIC under FIRREA as receiver following failure of institution. Robbins v. Foothill Nissan (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1769, 1783-1784, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 190

[12] Loans and Loan Relationship

Federal law precludes any requirement that "Rule of 78's" be further defined or effect be further disclosed in lending agreement. Drennan v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 764, 767-780, 170 Cal. Rptr. 904, 621 P.2d 1318

Letter of commitment for which fee is paid was option to addressee to obtain loan at specific term. Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 103, 115, 284 Cal. Rptr. 367

Commitment letter for permanent ("takeout") financing, even when construed with construction loan agreement that named nonsignatory affiliate as permanent lender and required permanent loan commitment as condition of construction financing, lacked definite terms and, thus, was not contract but only agreement to agree. Peterson Development Co. v. Torrey Pines Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 103, 115, 284 Cal. Rptr. 367

Ordinary arm's-length commercial lender/borrower relationship between bank and commercial borrower of equal bargaining strengths does not support cause of action for tortious breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Careau & Co. v. Security Pacific Business Credit, Inc. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1400-1401, 272 Cal. Rptr. 387 ; Mitsui Manufacturers Bank v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 726, 729, 731-733, 260 Cal. Rptr. 793

Evidence of parallel pricing, meetings, discussions, and sharing of information on subject insufficient to establish triable issue of fact regarding existence of conspiracy among banks and bankers' associations to set and manipulate variable interest rates on loans to "middle-market" commercial borrowers. BILJAC Assocs. v. First Interstate Bank (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1410, 1429-1433, 267 Cal. Rptr. 819 , superseded by statute as stated in 78 Cal. App. 4th 79 (2009)

Bank/depositor relationship and bank/borrower relationship is that of debtor and creditor, not as quasi-fiduciary or special, and thus does not support recovery of tort damages for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Price v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 465, 476-479, 261 Cal. Rptr. 735

Application of rule that trust deed beneficiary cannot recover damages after acquiring property that is security for loan on full credit bid at foreclosure sale to bar bank's claims for waste, fraud, and breach of contract based on construction defects were not inconsistent with Fin. Code § 779. Sumitomo Bank v. Taurus Developers, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220 n.4, 229 Cal. Rptr. 719

[13] National Banking Act

National bank's agreement with bank president to pay six months' salary as severance pay upon discharge without cause did not violate 12 U.S.C.A. § 24, which provides that all officers of national bank serve at pleasure of board of directors. Mardula v. Rancho Dominguez Bank (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 790, 792, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 63 .

[14] Related Operations

National bank is permitted to have operating subsidiary engaged in retail securities brokerage business, since brokerage is not core banking function [see 12 U.S.C. § 36(j)]. Clarke v. Securities Indus. Ass'n (1987) 479 U.S. 388, 390-391, 409, 107 S. Ct. 750, 93 L. Ed. 2d 757

Bank holding company was permitted, under Bank Holding Company Act [see 12 U.S.C. § 1843(c)(8)], to acquire subsidiary engaged in retail securities brokerage business; retail securities brokerage business was not barred by § 20 of Glass-Steagall Act (former 12 U.S.C. § 377, repealed 1999), which prohibited issue, flotation, underwriting, public sale, or distribution of securities by bank or bank affiliate when no investment advice was provided and purchases and sales were for account of customer. Securities Ind. Assn. v. Fed. Reserve Bd. (1984) 468 U.S. 207, 214-221, 104 S. Ct. 3003, 82 L. Ed. 2d 158

Commercial paper is security; trial court had to determine whether bank's selling of commercial paper of its corporate customers was "underwriting" within prohibition of 12 U.S.C. § 24 para. 7 and § 378(a)(1). Securities Ind. Assn. v. Fed. Reserve Bd. (1984) 468 U.S. 137, 139-140, 148-160, 104 S. Ct. 2979, 82 L. Ed. 2d 107

[15] Racketeer-Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO; 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq.)

RICO cause of action for mail fraud, based on use of mails to make loans to unqualified straw men to maximize income and perpetuate slum conditions, was adequately pleaded; claim based on wire fraud (telephone) was insufficient, but leave to amend should have been granted. People v. Highland Fed. Savings & Loan (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1692, 1713-1717, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 555

[16] Taxation

City is not empowered to impose license tax (calculated on annual business activity) on federal savings bank; nondiscriminatory treatment of state and federally chartered financial institutions is matter of statewide concern that requires prohibition on local taxation of financial institutions [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23182 (uniform "in lieu" tax on financial corporations)]. California Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 1, 19-25, 283 Cal. Rptr. 569, 812 P.2d 916

[17] Unsafe or Unsound Practice

Federal regulation prohibiting insured financial institutions from entering contracts constituting "unsafe or unsound practice" did not invalidate alleged contract between state-chartered savings institution in federal receivership and employee that provided for dismissal only for good cause; special representative of FSLIC serving as receiver is entitled to qualified immunity in action by terminated employee. Meyer v. Fidelity Sav. (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 562, 572-577

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.372

§ 95.372 Decisions

[1] Assignment of Account

Savings account, being chose in action, permissibly assigned with or without delivery of passbook. Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 393, 405, 93 P.2d 855

Assignment of savings account best evidenced by delivery of passbook together with formal written assignment of account. Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 393, 405, 93 P.2d 855

Assignment of savings account carries with it and confers on assignee all remedies that assignor possessed, including right to sue bank for misappropriation of funds. Watson v. Stockton Morris Plan Co. (1939) 34 Cal. App. 2d 393, 405, 93 P.2d 855

[2] Banker's Lien and Setoff Rights

Bank's practice of using directly deposited Social Security and SSI benefits to cover overdrafts and overdraft fees was prohibited by 42 U.S.C. §§ 407(a) and 1383(d)(1), which provide that such benefits are not subject to execution, levy, or "other legal process." Lopez v. Washington Mutual Bank, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 284 F.3d 990, 993-995

Code Civ. Proc. § 701.030(b)(1) and (6) require bank to give creditor true reason for not honoring attachment and to notify creditor of other claims to deposit, including bank's own right of setoff. Da-Green Electronics, Ltd. v. Bank of Yorba Linda (9th Cir. 1989) 891 F.2d 1396, 1399

Bank's exercise of setoff rights under banker's lien law [Civ. Code § 3054] does not constitute state action and does not violate due process clauses of federal or state constitutions even though exercised without notice or hearing afforded to depositor. Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 352, 357, 113 Cal. Rptr. 449, 521 P.2d 441

Bank cannot exercise its right of setoff against deposits derived from unemployment and disability benefits. Kruger v. Wells Fargo Bank (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 352, 357, 368-372, 113 Cal. Rptr. 449, 521 P.2d 441

Bank, not having notice of trust status of deposited funds, was entitled to apply funds against depositor's debt without liability to trust beneficiary. Arnold v. San Ramon Valley Bank (1921) 184 Cal. 632, 636, 194 P. 1012

Bank, collecting on note executed by individual shareholder, unable to exercise banker's lien setoff rights against funds deposited by corporation, when shareholder did not act as agent for corporation in executing note and corporation was not liable on note. Potts v. First City Bank (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 341, 345-346, 86 Cal. Rptr. 552

Deceased depositor's insolvency at time of death was cause for exercise of bank's right of setoff under banker's lien law [Civ. Code § 3054] for collection of note owed to bank, notwithstanding that note was not due at time of death. Pendleton v. Hellman Com. etc. Bk. (1922) 58 Cal. App. 448, 450, 208 P. 702

[3] Certificates of Deposit

Certificate of deposit issued by domestic bank were not "security" within meaning of federal securities acts. Marine Bank v. Weaver (1982) 455 U.S. 551, 558-559, 102 S. Ct. 1220, 71 L. Ed. 2d 409

Certificate of deposit issued by foreign bank were not "security" within meaning of federal securities acts. Wolf v. Banco Nacional de Mexico, S. A. (9th Cir. 1984) 739 F.2d 1458, 1463-1464 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108

[4] Check Processing Fees

Provision in bank's depositor signature card contract imposing $3 deposit item returned fee was not unconscionable, based on industry-wide comparison of fees. California Grocers Ass'n v. Bank of America (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 205, 215-216, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 396

[5] Foreign (Eurodollar) Deposits

Eurodollar deposit is deposit of U.S. dollars in foreign bank or foreign branch of U.S. bank with commitment that it will be repaid in U.S. dollars; distinction between repayment and collection is that repayment refers to place of payment and collection designates assets to which depositor may look for payment. Citibank v. Wells Fargo Asia (1990) 495 U.S. 660, 668-671, 110 S. Ct. 2034, 109 L. Ed. 2d 677

When foreign government prohibits assets of foreign branch of U.S. bank to be used to repay deposits outside country, whether depositor can look to general assets of bank in U.S. may be determined by agreement of parties. Citibank v. Wells Fargo Asia (1990) 495 U.S. 660, 672, 110 S. Ct. 2034, 109 L. Ed. 2d 677 (no agreement found, remanded for determination of which law controls)

[6] Insurance of Accounts

Standby letter of credit backed by depositor's contingent promissory note does not create insured deposit within meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 1813(l)(1), and thus beneficiary is unable to recover FDIC insurance on insolvency of issuing bank. FDIC v. Philadelphia Gear Corp. (1986) 476 U.S. 426, 439-440, 106 S. Ct. 1931, 90 L. Ed. 2d 428

Fee accounts of former directors of failed bank were not insured deposits within meaning of 12 U.S.C. § 1813(1) and thus were properly excluded from transfer of "deposits" to new savings institution; directors were limited to recovery as unsecured creditors of bank. Betz v. F.D.I.C. (9th Cir. 1996) 99 F.3d 904, 906

When community property funds of family trust were deposited in three accounts, totaling more than $300,000, in names of spouses as trustees and, under terms of trust, interests of beneficiaries other than surviving spouse were contingent, insurance coverage under 12 C.F.R. § 330.3 was $200,000/$100,000 for interest of each spouse. Lambert v. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 847 F.2d 604, 608-609

[7] Interest

Award of prejudgment interest from date of unauthorized withdrawal of funds from bank by coexecutor of estate proper in action against bank to recover funds misappropriated from account by coexecutor. Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814-815, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109

[8] Multiple-Party/Joint Accounts

If, under state law and deposit contract, delinquent taxpayer can withdraw all funds in account, IRS levy pursuant to I.R.C. § 6331(d) reaches all funds and bank is required to pay over all sums owed even if only one account holder is delinquent taxpayer; third party's rights determinable in postseizure hearings. United States v. National Bank of Commerce (1985) 472 U.S. 713, 720-727, 731, 105 S. Ct. 2919, 86 L. Ed. 2d 565

Generally, when multiple-party account is used to make gift, delivery of passbook to donee is not required. Kennedy v. McMurray (1915) 169 Cal. 287, 295, 146 P. 647 ; but see Berl v. Rosenberg (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 125, 130-134, 336 P.2d 975 (gift of securities in possession of broker requires delivery, but letter of instructions to broker constituted sufficient delivery)

One who holds title to account as surviving joint tenant may be held to be trustee for others. Estate of Fisher (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 418, 428, 244 Cal. Rptr. 5 ; Jarkieh v. Badagliacco (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 505, 507-510, 170 P.2d 994 (overruled on other grounds in Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 30, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212)

Use of word "or" between names of account holders not sufficient to create joint tenancy; evidence establishing that depositor intended to create joint tenancy required. Estate of Fisher (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 418, 427, 244 Cal. Rptr. 5 ; Manti v. Gunari (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 442, 447, 85 Cal. Rptr. 366

When account title was A or B as trustees for C and D, no box indicating type of account chosen by depositor was checked, and only A signed signature card, signature card did not establish B's entitlement to account as surviving joint tenant, as surviving joint trustee of Totten trust, or as beneficiary of third-party beneficiary contract; parole evidence admissible to determine A's intent. Estate of Fisher (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 418, 423-430, 244 Cal. Rptr. 5

When contributing joint tenant's intention was that noncontributing tenant could only withdraw funds while both were living to use them for contributing tenant's benefit, arrangement was legal equivalent of revocable living trust; noncontributing tenant had no right to property purchased by contributing tenant with funds withdrawn from account and standing in name of contributing tenant alone. Estate of Drucker (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 509, 514-515, 199 Cal. Rptr. 345 (overruled on other grounds in Estate of Propst (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 448, 462, 268 Cal. Rptr. 114, 788 P.2d 628)

Bank entitled to restitution against administrator to whom account balance had been inappropriately transferred. Willis v. Bank of America (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 745, 752-753, 109 Cal. Rptr. 359 (joint tenancy account)

[9] Pay-on-Death Accounts; Totten Trusts

Person who claims to be cotrustee, but who did not sign signature card, cannot rely on account title on signature card as evidence of his or her intent to create trust. Estate of Fisher (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 418, 425, 244 Cal. Rptr. 5 (no box indicating type of account chosen by depositor was checked)

Totten trust, like any other trust, requires trustor, trustee (usually same person), trust res, trust beneficiary, and trust intent. Estate of Fisher (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 418, 424-425, 244 Cal. Rptr. 5

[10] Savings Accounts

Complaint for recovery of money on deposit did not state cause of action when deposit was made by third parties into their own account and subsequently was withdrawn by them in manner appropriate to that account, even though money deposited and withdrawn was plaintiff's. La Vista Cemetery Assn. v. American Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 365, 368, 90 Cal. Rptr. 722

[11] Standard of Care Owed to Depositor

When embezzler's victim sued to recover stolen money from bank at which embezzler had opened phony account in victim's name, court held that victim did not acquire standing to sue as depositor from mere fact that account was fraudulently opened in his name. Rodriguez v. Bank of the West (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 454, 460-462, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543

When plaintiff failed to comply with requirements of Enforcement of Judgments Law [Code Civ. Proc. § 680.010 et seq.] for levy on deposit account of debtor's spouse, bank had no right or duty to freeze or prevent withdrawals on the account (citing Chazen, below, for summary of bank's basic duties with respect to depositors and nondepositors). Grover v. Bay View Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 452, 456-458, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677

Fin. Code §§ 952, 953 codify well-established principle that bank has no duty to monitor trust accounts for breaches of fiduciary duty; specifically, bank has no duty to prevent commingling of assets in fiduciary accounts, monitor fiduciary accounts for irregular transactions, prevent improper disbursements from accounts, or conduct investigation of possible misappropriation of funds. Chazen v. Centennial Bank (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 532, 541, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462

Immunity provided to bank by former Prob. Code § 631 (now see Prob. Code § 13106) is not absolute; bank that has actual notice of superior claim to account of decedent cannot rely on affidavit of person claiming entitlement to account. Mautner v. Peralta (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 796, 799, 805-807, 263 Cal. Rptr. 535

§ 95.393 Decisions

[1] Collecting Bank's Liability to Drawer or Payee

Collecting bank's duty to notify customer that drawee bank dishonored check deposited by customer in order for collecting bank to charge back amount of check against customer's account arises only after bank has learned facts sufficient to enable it to do so. Lufthansa German Airlines v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 1981) 652 F.2d 835, 836

Under common law negligence theory, drawer of check is owed duty of care by collecting bank when risk of harm is foreseeable. Mills v. U.S. Bank (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 871, 888 n.22, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146 (dictum)

Com. Code § 4103(a) and (e) [see §§ 95.314, 95.315] neither create duty on part of depositary banks to drawers nor authorize action for negligence in any specific situation. Mills v. U.S. Bank (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 871, 889, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146

Com. Code §§ 3404-3406 [see §§ 95.329, 95.330, 95.455[2]] and Com. Code § 4202(a)(1) [see § 95.333[2]] do not establish that drawer has statutory cause of action for negligence against depositary bank which deposits checks with missing endorsements. Mills v. U.S. Bank (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 871, 889, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 146

When bank's depositor and second party were involved in scheme in which depositor presented NSF checks to noncustomer/payee, causing noncustomer/payee, on close of sham escrows, to issue its good checks to second party (who would endorse checks over to depositor for deposit to cover NSF checks), bank had no duty to disclose its suspicions or fact of suspicious account activity to payee. Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1145-1147, 1155-1160, 220 Cal. Rptr. 507

After delivery of check has been made with intent and purpose of giving effect thereto and it falls into hands of unauthorized person, rightful payee may charge collecting bank with having received it as agent for use and benefit of payee. Indiana Plumbing Supply Co. v. Bank of America (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 910, 913-917, 63 Cal. Rptr. 658

Fact that provisional credit is given does not convert creditor-debtor relationship between bank and depositor into one of principal and agent; thus, bank is entitled to reverse provisional credit when one joint payee died before final settlement. Camperi v. Chiechi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 485, 510, 286 P.2d 399

[2] Collection of Dishonored Checks

Third-party debt collector's efforts to collect dishonored check are governed by Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq.); addressing issue of first impression in Ninth Circuit, court held that dishonored check is "debt" within meaning of FDCPA. Charles v. Lungdren & Associates (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 739, 742

[3] Drawee Bank's Liability to Payee

Payee of dishonored check states cause of action against drawee bank pursuant to former Com. Code § 4302(a) (now see Com. Code § 4302(a)(1)) for failure to give notice of dishonor on second presentment of check previously dishonored for lack of sufficient funds. Huntmix, Inc. v. Bank of America (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 347, 361, 184 Cal. Rptr. 551

Drawee was not liable to payee when check was not paid because drawer stole it from payee, forged payee's endorsement, and deposited it in account on which it was drawn. Pupko v. Bank of America (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 495, 498-502, 170 Cal. Rptr. 615

[4] Guaranty

Language of continuing guaranty covered overdraft incurred as customary banking practice when overdraft was result of credit arrangement with bank; overdraft was deemed to amount to loan to depositor. Bank of Santa Ana v. Molina (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 607, 617-618, 81 Cal. Rptr. 885

[5] Liability of Endorser

Summary judgment in favor of collecting bank in action to enforce liability of endorser for dishonored checks proper when defendant admitted endorsing checks and bank gave timely notice of dishonor to defendant endorser. Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. Associated Motor Sales (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 171, 175-176, 165 Cal. Rptr. 38

[6] Money Orders

Bank's issuance of money order for fee is sale of product under Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17043, 17044) and subject to "sales below cost" and "loss leader" prohibitions. Los Angeles Check Sellers Asso. v. United States Nat'l Bank (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 570, 573, 80 Cal. Rptr. 321

[7] Overdrafts

Drawee's paying of checks drawn by its depositor on insufficient funds does not constitute misrepresentation to payee. Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1155-1156, 220 Cal. Rptr. 507

Right of bank to general lien authorized by statute (Civ. Code § 3054) is not to be tested by character of indebtedness, but solely by fact that bank customer is indebted to it in balance due to it and accruing in course of business; indebtedness due bank within meaning of Civ. Code § 3054 permissibly consists of overdrafts of depositor. Bromberg v. Bank of America (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 135 P.2d 689

[8] Restitution for Mistake

Despite its negligence, bank that mistakenly transferred principal of account on depositor's instructions to transfer interest periodically entitled to recover amount from transferee, when transferee neither relied on payment nor believed that larger sum was paid to discharge preexisting debt. Bank of America v. Sanati (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1079, 1085, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 (same result required by Com. Code § 11303 had payment order originated after January 1, 1991)

[9] Statute of Limitations

Limitation period on action for payment of forged check is one year [Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c)], which begins to run on receipt of statement showing improper payment of that check. Chatsky & Assocs. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 873, 875, 880, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 ; see Com. Code § 4406(f) (issue preclusion if bank not notified of forgery within one year).

Com. Code § 4406(f) applies regardless of lack of care of customer or bank, precluding customer who does not within one year after statement or items are made available discover and report unauthorized signature from asserting it against bank. Com. Code § 4406(c) requires customer promptly to review monthly statements or checks made available by bank, to exercise reasonable care in discovering unauthorized signature or alteration, and promptly to notify bank of such items. Pursuant to Com. Code § 4406(d), if customer fails to comply when that person has forged checks on account, customer is precluded from making claim against bank for unauthorized payment unless customer notified bank no more than 30 days after first forged item was included in monthly statement or canceled checks, and should have been discovered. Preclusion is conditional because customer may avoid its application by establishing that bank failed to exercise ordinary care in paying item and failure contributed to loss. Espresso Roma Corp. v. Bank of Am. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 525, 528, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549

When bank honors depositor's check, fails to debit account, and subsequently seeks repayment, applicable statute of limitations is three-year period, beginning on discovery of mistake, provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d). Creditors Collection Service v. Castaldi (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1043-1044, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 511

[10] Stop Payments

False statement made to influence bank to stop payment of bank check relates to "application" or "commitment" for purposes of 18 U.S.C. § 1014, which prohibits knowingly making false statement for purpose of influencing action of FDIC-insured institution upon various enumerated types of transactions; district court's dismissal of two counts of indictment reversed. United States v. Boren (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 911, 916-917

9-95 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 95.410

§ 95.410 Allegation of Capacity and Location of Bank--National Banking Association [12 U.S.C. § 21]

[1] FORM Allegation of Capacity and Location of Bank--National Banking Association [12 U.S.C. § 21]

Defendant _____ [name of bank] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a national banking association organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the United States of America, with its principal place of business [in California] in _____ County, California, [if a county other than the county of the principal office branch determines venue, add: and the branch office at which the _____ (transaction that is the subject of this action arose or account that is the subject of this action is maintained) at _____ (street address), _____ (city), _____ County, California].

[2] Use of Form

This form is an allegation for use in an action against a national banking association.

[3] Venue

Venue is proper in the county in which a contract is made or is to be performed, in which the obligation or liability arises or the breach occurs, or in which the financial institution maintains its principal place of business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[4] Federal Statutes

Formation of national banking associations. 12 U.S.C. § 21

[5] Decisions

[a] In General

Term "national" is permitted as part of bank's name only if banking association is chartered under federal law [12 U.S.C. § 22 (organization certificate)]. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 596, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52

[b] Jurisdiction

Federal district court's personal jurisdiction over foreign corporation in diversity action is tested under forum state's jurisdictional standard; three-part test requires consideration of seven relevant factors; one party's execution of contract in California and delivery of payment in California as insufficient contact when subject matter and performance were in Fiji. FDIC v. British-American Ins. Co., Ltd (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 1439, 1441-1445

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity of defendant association. Choose appropriate allegation from § 95.412[1] or 95.411[1].]

2. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of other defendants, e.g., Defendant _____ (name of director of association) is a resident of _____ County, California.

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff believes these defendants are responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged herein and will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained.]

[EITHER]

4. At all times mentioned herein and at the time of [that part of] the transaction complained of, plaintiff was, and presently remains, a _____ [registered stockholder in or member of] defendant association, holding _____ [_____ (number) shares of _____ (describe type, e.g., Class A, Series 1, stock) or Account No. _____] therein.

[OR]

4. Plaintiff is a _____ [registered stockholder in or member of] defendant association, holding _____ [_____ (number) shares of _____ (describe type, e.g., Class A, Series 1, stock) or Account No. _____] therein.
