8. Thereafter, and on or about _____ [date], plaintiff filed a formal request with the Savings and Loan Commissioner to bring this action. The commissioner gave at least 20 days' written notice to the association and each of its directors of a hearing on this request. On or about _____ [date], the commissioner held the hearing and determined that the action proposed by plaintiff was proposed in good faith and that there is a reasonable probability that the prosecution of the action will benefit the association and its _____ [stockholders or members]. A copy of that determination is attached hereto as Exhibit "A" and made a part hereof.

[9. If plaintiff is successful in this action, plaintiff will have _____ (_____ (recovered or protected) a common fund for or brought about a substantial benefit to) defendant association on whose behalf this action is prosecuted, and plaintiff is entitled to attorney's fees incurred herein (in the sum of $_____) against the defendant association.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants _____ [names of defendant directors], and each of them, as follows:

1. For _____ [specify relief sought, e.g., damages in the sum of $_____];

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Plaintiff also prays judgment against defendant association as follows:

4. For attorney's fees in the amount of $_____; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in a derivative action by a stockholder or member against a savings association after the commissioner has determined that the action was proposed in good faith and that there was a reasonable probability that its prosecution would benefit the association and its stockholders or members [Fin. Code § 6052; see § 95.161].

By way of contrast, an injury done to a particular group of stockholders or members is not the ground for a derivative action. A plaintiff from within the group may bring an action on the group's behalf against the association without having to obtain permission of the Commissioner, so long as the injury is not alleged to have been done to the association itself [see Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 105-107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] .

[3] Corporation Code Provisions Applicable

In addition to the requirements discussed in § 95.161, the provisions of Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f) apply to derivative actions by stockholders or members of a savings association [Fin. Code § 6052(c)]. Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f) governs a defendant's motion, in a regular derivative suit against a corporation, to require plaintiff to furnish security.

[4] Allegations

This complaint alleges in pertinent part

- The plaintiff's status as a registered stockholder or member at the time of the transaction or by legal devolution (alternative Paragraphs 4) [Fin. Code § 6052(b)(1)]

- The defendant association's cause of action against the defendant directors (Pargraph 5)

- The plaintiff's attempt to have the association act against its culpable directors, along with a required form of notice (first alternative Paragraph 6), and the association's refusal to so respond (Paragraph 7), or the plaintiff's excusable failure to seek action from the association and notification as to the claim (second alternative Paragraph 6) [Fin. Code § 6052(b)(2)]

- The plaintiff's submission of a request to bring the action to the Savings and Loan Commissioner and the Commissioner's determination, on noticed hearing, that the action is proposed in good faith and is of probable benefit to the association (Paragraph 8) [Fin. Code § 6052(b)(3)]

- A request for attorney's fees from the association if the suit on its behalf is successful (Paragraph 9) [Fletcher v. A.J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 322-325, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[5] Commissioner's Function in Screening Derivative Actions

The commissioner's function is to screen proposed actions and to separate those that are frivolous from those that are not. The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to establish the two conditions that the commissioner must find to allow the action to go forward as nonfrivolous [see Fin. Code § 6052(b)(3)]. The burden is not heavy, but the plaintiff must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the proposed action is "built on facts rather than frivolity," and that it has some possibility of success. As to the first or "good faith" requirement, the commissioner only need find that the plaintiff believes in the validity of the suit, and need not determine whether or not that party entertains an improper or ulterior motive. In determining whether or not the plaintiff meets the requirement that there be a reasonable possibility that the action will benefit the association and its stockholders or members, the commissioner is obliged to look at the proposed action in the light of the applicable legal principles [see Mueller v. MacBan (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 258, 271, 273-274, 282, 132 Cal. Rptr. 222] .

[6] Attorney's Fees

An award of attorney's fees to a successful plaintiff may be available in a derivative action [see Fletcher v. A.J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 320, 322-323, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146 ; for further discussion, see Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions].

[7] State Statutes

Members or stockholders as permitted to institute action against association. Fin. Code § 6052(a)

Savings account holder who is not stockholder or member of association as not permitted to institute action. Fin. Code § 6052(a)

Prerequisites to action. Fin. Code § 6052(b)

Applicability of Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f). Fin. Code § 6052(c)

[8] Decisions

Allegations that actions of defendant majority stockholders diminished value of minority stockholders' stock, absent allegation that diminished value reflects injury to corporation and resultant depreciation in value of its stock, constitute cause of action on behalf of plaintiff and other minority stockholders and not on behalf of corporation, so derivative action requirements not applicable. Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464

Former Fin. Code § 7616 (now see Fin. Code § 6052), authorizing derivative actions on behalf of associations, as not applicable to suit by stockholder of savings and loan holding company. Mueller v. MacBan (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 258, 267-269, 132 Cal. Rptr. 222

When parties do not complain of plaintiff stockholder's standing until appeal, parties treat plaintiff as alter ego of savings and loan holding company, and holding company, controlling stockholder of association, declines to institute or maintain action, plaintiff is entitled to maintain derivative action on behalf of association under former Fin. Code § 7616 (now see Fin. Code § 6052) Mueller v. MacBan (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 258, 269-270, 132 Cal. Rptr. 222

Attorney's fees awardable to successful plaintiff, measured by and paid from common fund when derivative action on behalf of corporation recovered or protected fund, but fund is not a prerequisite of award. Fletcher v. A.J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 322-325, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Name and capacity of defendant financial institution. Choose appropriate allegation from §§ 95.410-95.411].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of such fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by such defendants.)]

[3. At all times herein mentioned defendants DOES I through _____ were the agents, servants, and employees of their codefendants, and in doing the things hereinafter alleged were acting in the scope of their authority as agents, servants, and employees of the codefendants, and with the permission and consent of their codefendants.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff opened a _____ [specify type of account, e.g., savings account], designated No. _____, with defendant at its branch located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California. The deposit stood on defendant's books to the credit of _____ [title as it appears on signature card agreement or on statements furnished by defendant] and for his/her use and benefit, and was governed by _____ [continue with as much description as is necessary to incorporate any relevant terms and conditions of the account, e.g., the terms and conditions set forth in the passbook and a signature card contract dated _____ (, true and correct copies of which are attached as Exhibit "A" and incorporated by reference)].

5. The account was credited with amounts deposited from time to time by plaintiff [if necessary to dispel any issue regarding escheat (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1513(a)(2), (6)), add:, the last such deposit having been made by plaintiff on or about _____ (date) or quarterly statements having been sent by defendant to plaintiff at _____ (address), showing interest credited during the quarter] [, and with interest accrued on those balances].

6. On or about _____ [date], [when plaintiff closed the account,] plaintiff had a balance of $_____ in that account, representing accumulated deposits and interest thereon to _____ [specify last date on which interest was credited]. [In accordance with _____ (specify contract or regulation that governs, e.g., defendant's regulations), that account continues to earn interest at _____ percent per annum.]

7. On or about that date plaintiff attempted to withdraw $_____ from the account [specify mode of attempted withdrawal if relevant, e.g., by presenting an executed withdrawal slip at the branch], but defendant then refused, and to the present refuses, to pay, and despite plaintiff's protest and demand on that date [and on subsequent occasions] has not paid plaintiff the $_____ [or any part thereof], and there is now due, owing, and unpaid the sum of $_____, with interest as described above running from _____ [date].

1. For the sum of $_____;

2. For interest at the rate of _____ percent per annum from _____ [date];

[3. For additional damages according to proof;]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use to recover sums on deposit with a financial institution that refuses to honor plaintiff's withdrawal requests.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- That plaintiff has a sum of money on deposit with defendant bank (Paragraphs 4-6).
- That plaintiff has demanded the return of that money (Paragraph 7).
- That despite plaintiff's demand defendant refuses to return the deposited money (Paragraph 7) [Civ. Code § 1822; Bank of America Assn. v. California Bk. (1933) 218 Cal. 261, 273-274, 22 P.2d 704 ; Union Tool Co. v. Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. (1923) 192 Cal. 40, 53, 218 P. 424] .

The complaint also contains an optional fictitious name allegation (Paragraph 2) for use, if appropriate, when there are multiple defendants whose names and capacities are unknown to plaintiff at the time the complaint is filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474; see also Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used]. An agency allegation (Paragraph 3) is also included for optional use when any of multiple defendants are sued as agents [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Attorney's Fees

Attorney's fees recovered under a contract provision in a signature card or other agreement or under a statute that authorizes their recovery are an element of costs [see Civ. Code § 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5) (methods of fixing attorney's fees that are item of costs)]. It is not necessary to plead or to prove a contract provision for attorney's fees or the amount of attorney's fees incurred. It is sufficient if the contract, including the attorney's fees provision, is attached to and incorporated by reference in the complaint [Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 911-912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787] . Nor is it necessary to plead the right to recover attorney's fees that are authorized by statute [see Beneficial Standard Properties, Inc. v. Scharps (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 227, 232, 136 Cal. Rptr. 549 ; T.E.D. Bearing Co. v. Walter E. Heller & Co (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 59, 62, 112 Cal. Rptr. 910] . However, no election or waiver results from pleading an entitlement to attorney's fees [see Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 188, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32] . Discussion and forms addressing the various methods for recovering attorney's fees provided by statutes are located in Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees.

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(1)].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

A national banking association is considered a citizen of the state in which it is located [28 U.S.C. § 1348]. This means that a national bank (1) is a citizen of the state in which its main office is located, as set forth in its articles of association, and (2) is not a citizen of any other state in which it has established a branch [Wachovia Bank, N.A. v. Schmidt (2006) 546 U.S. 303, 318, 126 S. Ct. 941, 163 L. Ed. 2d 797] . Although limited areas of jurisdiction over national banking associations are reserved to federal courts [see, e.g., 12 U.S.C. § 91 (injunction)], 28 U.S.C. § 1348 confers general jurisdiction over an action by or against a national bank on state courts [First Nat. Bank v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 109, 110-111, 49 Cal. Rptr. 358] . No jurisdiction is conferred on a federal district court merely because the action is by or against a corporation that was incorporated by or under an act of Congress, unless the United States owns more than half of its capital stock [28 U.S.C. § 1349].

A corporation or association may be sued in the county in which the contract is made or is to be performed, or in which the obligation or liability arises or the breach occurs, or in the county in which its principal place of business is situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; see generally Ch. 571, Venue].

[6] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case in the superior court [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned toa third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[7] Statute of Limitations

There is no statute of limitations on an action to recover a deposit unless the financial institution has become insolvent and is in the process of liquidation [Code Civ. Proc. § 348; see discussion in § 95.293[2]]. However, there are other theories, such as negligence or a depositor's action on an implied contract established by Com. Code § 4401(a), that would be subject to a one-year or three-year period of limitation [see Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 698-700, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 ; Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 515, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551 (applying three-year limitation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(c)) to action based on drawee's and collecting bank's negligence); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c) (one year, forgeries); Com. Code §§ 4111 (three-year, right created in Division 4), 4406(f) (one year, unauthorized drawer's signature)]. These other theories are discussed in § 95.180 et seq., and in §§ 95.450-95.452.

[8] Federal Statutes

National banking association as party to suit. 28 U.S.C. § 1348

[9] State Statutes

Right to interest in action for money. Civ. Code § 3302

Money due with interest. Civ. Code § 3302

Time for initiating action to recover money deposited with any financial institution is unlimited except when financial institution is in process of liquidation. Code Civ. Proc. § 348

Service of summons on banking corporation. Code Civ. Proc. § 416.10(c)

[10] Decisions

Code Civ. Proc. § 348, providing that there is no limitation on time for initiating action "brought to recover money ... deposited with any bank" on its face permits person to file suit at any time to recover money deposited in bank whether action is ex delicto or ex contractu. Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 813, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109

Cause of action accrues and statute of limitations is set in motion when bank denies liability to depositor for amount in question; such denial dispenses with need for demand by depositor. Union Tool Co. v. Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. (1923) 192 Cal. 40, 53, 218 P. 424

Creation of express trust, with bank as trustee, does not establish debtor-creditor relationship between beneficiary and bank because express trust does not constitute deposit of money; thus action by beneficiary against bank for rescission of trust does not fall within open limitation provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 348. Morse v. Crocker National Bank (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 228, 233-234, 190 Cal. Rptr. 839

Action against bank to recover bank deposit and damages is not subject to demurrer on ground that plaintiff held time certificate of deposit subject to restricted right of redemption when terms on certificate's face suggest that it is demand obligation payable on presentation and surrender. Jennings v. Imperial Bank (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 896, 899, 152 Cal. Rptr. 15

9. Defendant refused to make [_____ ($100 or $400 or $5,000) of] the funds represented by plaintiff's deposit(s) of _____ [date(s)] available for use or withdrawal on _____ [date], in that _____ [specify how withdrawal or use of funds was refused, e.g., _____ (name), an employee at defendant's _____ (address) branch, refused to certify plaintiff's check number _____ and said the refusal was based on the fact that a 12-day hold had been placed on the check deposited by plaintiff on _____ (date), although no notice of dishonor or return had been received from the bank _____ (on which that check was drawn or _____ at/through which the check was payable), and without the funds represented by that check there were not sufficient funds available in plaintiff's account to pay plaintiff's check number _____].

10. As a proximate result of defendant's wrongful failure to make [_____ ($100 or $400 or $5,000) of] the funds represented by plaintiff's deposit(s) of _____ [date(s)] available for withdrawal _____ [after 5 P.M. on or on] _____ [date], plaintiff has suffered damages of $_____, in addition to the amount of the check, in that _____ [describe consequential damages].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For actual damages _____ [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];

2. For $1,000, or any lesser sum allowed by the court under Title 12 of the United States Code, Section 4010(a)(2)(A);

3. For reasonable attorney's fees;

4. For costs of suit incurred herein; and

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a depositor to recover damages from a depositary institution arising from the institution's refusal to allow withdrawal of deposited funds after the time specified in the federal Expedited Funds Availability Act [12 U.S.C. § 4001 et seq.; 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.10-229.12] or any shorter time period provided by a state law or regulation that supersedes the Expedited Funds Availability Act [12 U.S.C. § 4010(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a); see § 95.229[1]; see, e.g., 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 10.190402(a), (b) (possibly shorter maximum hold period)]. Banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, industrial loan companies, and almost every type of institution that accepts funds for deposit, other than trust funds, are subject to the Act [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(e) (defining depository institution to include all institutions listed in 12 U.S.C. §§ 461(b)(1)(A)(i)-(vi)), discussed in § 95.221].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The status of the defendant as a type of institution required to comply with the Expedited Funds Availability Act (Paragraph 1) [see 12 U.S.C. § 4001(12); 12 C.F.R. § 229.2(e)].

- Plaintiff's status as the holder of an account that is not subject to the new-accounts exception from the maximum hold periods (Paragraph 4) [see 12 U.S.C. §§ 4001(1), 4003(a); 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.2(a), 229.13(a); see §§ 95.222[1], 95.226[1]].

- The date and description of the deposited item with enough detail to establish the category of the item for purposes of determining when the funds were required to be available for withdrawal (Paragraph 7) [see 12 U.S.C. § 4002(a), (b), (c), (e); 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.10-229.12; see also §§ 95.224[1], 95.225[1]].

- The manner of plaintiff's attempted withdrawal or use of the funds (Paragraph 8).

- The circumstances constituting defendant's wrongful failure to allow withdrawal or use of the funds (Paragraph 9).

- The facts giving rise to any damages in excess of the amount of funds that should have been available [see 12 U.S.C. § 4010(a)(1), (2)(A); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(a); 12 C.F.R. § 229, Appendix E, Commentary to § 229.20, discussed in § 95.229[1]].

Optional Paragraph 5 is for use when defendant violated its own announced policy regarding availability of funds for withdrawal. Optional Paragraph 6 is for use when defendant failed to comply with the disclosure requirements of 12 U.S.C. § 4004 or 12 C.F.R. §§ 229.15-229.18, discussed in § 95.227.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Jurisdiction

An action under 12 U.S.C. § 4010 may be brought in United States district court or in any other court of competent jurisdiction [12 U.S.C. § 4010(d); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(d); see also § 95.430[5]]. Note that the United States Supreme Court has held that the Act provides for federal court jurisdiction not only in suits between customers and banks, but also in cases initiated by one bank against another bank [Bank One Chicago v. Midwest B & T (1996) 516 U.S. 264, 270-275, 116 S. Ct. 637, 133 L. Ed. 2d 635] .

[5] Statute of Limitations

An action under 12 U.S.C. § 4010 must be brought within one year after the date of the occurrence of the violation involved [12 U.S.C. § 4010(d); 12 C.F.R. § 229.21(d); see, e.g., Mihai Beffa v. Bank of the West (1998) 152 F.3d 1174, 1176-1177 (even if statute of limitations is tolled until plaintiff receives notice of violation, complaint was untimely because once plaintiff knew foreign wire transfer was not credited to his account, he chose to blame foreign bank rather than track it through his own bank)].

§ 95.432 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] and Notice of Adverse Claim to Funds Deposited in Bank or Savings Account [Fin. Code §§ 952, 6661]

[1] FORM Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] and Notice of Adverse Claim to Funds Deposited in Bank or Savings Account [Fin. Code §§ 952, 6661]

To _____ [name of bank or association], _____ [name of branch], and its manager _____ [name]:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that _____ [name of depositor or account holder] is a fiduciary for _____ [name of claimant] as to funds in the sum of $_____ now on deposit with your _____ [bank or association] and branch in account number _____ and in the name of _____ [name of depositor or account holder]. I believe that _____ [name of depositor or account holder] is about to misappropriate those funds and the undersigned _____ [name of claimant] directs that you refuse payment of funds from that account for a period of three court days from the date you receive this declaration and notice and for such further time as may be ordered hereafter by a court of competent jurisdiction.

The fiduciary capacity in which your above named _____ [depositor or account holder] stands with relation to the undersigned arises from _____ [set forth facts on which fiduciary relationship is founded].

The undersigned has reason to believe that such funds are about to be misappropriated from the following facts: _____ [specify].

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

[2] Use of Form

This declaration and notice is for use by an adverse claimant to prevent misappropriation of fiduciary funds from a bank deposit or savings account, pursuant to Fin. Code § 952 (banks) or 6661 (savings associations). Fin. Code §§ 952 and 6661 provide for use of an affidavit, but a declaration under penalty of perjury may be used in lieu of an affidavit if it is executed in California [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

The form sets forth the facts on which the claim of fiduciary relationship and belief of imminent misappropriation of funds are based.

The declaration and notice have the effect of preventing a bank from paying a deposit or, in the case of an association, preventing an association from paying any withdrawals or interest on an account [see Fin. Code §§ 952(a) (banks), 6661(a) (associations)]. However, the declaration and notice only have the effect of stopping payment for a period of three days [see Fin. Code §§ 952(a) (banks), 6661(a) (associations)]. Thus, they should be used preliminarily to obtaining a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction against payment of the funds [see Fin. Code §§ 952(b) (banks), 6661(b) (associations)]. For forms for use in actions seeking restraining orders and injunctions, see Ch. 303, Injunctions .

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[3] Decisions

Bank that relied on employer-depositor's forged affidavit to withdraw amount of allegedly forged checks from employee-depositor's account and to dishonor checks drawn by employee against them was liable for punitive damages ($500,000, but remanded for determination whether that was excessive) on evidence, although conflicting, that reversal and dishonor were not standard banking practices. Teitel v. First Los Angeles Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1593, 1599-1600, 1604-1605, 1607, 282 Cal. Rptr. 916

Person who is authorized by signature card to make withdrawals from account is not adverse claimant under Fin. Code § 952; notice from one of several authorized signatories on account of unincorporated association revoking authority of another signatory to make withdrawals is governed by Fin. Code § 953, and thus, formalities of Fin. Code § 952 are not required. AARTS Productions, Inc. v Crocker National Bank (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1067-1069, 225 Cal. Rptr. 203

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendants are, and at all times herein mentioned were, residents of _____ [city], _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and residence of defendants].

2. _____ [Name] died on or about _____ [date].

3. _____ [Name(s) of depositor(s)] have maintained account number _____, a _____ [specify type of account, e.g., savings account] with plaintiff at _____ [branch of bank], _____ [street address], _____ [city], since _____ [date].

_____ [Describe title of account names of parties having present right to withdraw, e.g., The account is entitled Arbuckle and Bull, joint tenants with the right of survivorship; and both parties were authorized to make withdrawals].

4. The present balance of the account is $_____.

5. Defendant _____ [name] claims the sums on deposit as _____ [describe basis of one defendant's claim, e.g., the sole surviving joint tenant, and has presented plaintiff with a certified copy of Bull's death certificate].

6. Defendant _____ [name] claims the sums on deposit as _____ [describe basis of other defendant's claim, e.g., the executor of the estate of Bull and has presented plaintiff with a certified copy of letters testamentary and a declaration under penalty of perjury stating that the decedent's intention was not to create a joint account or to make a gift of funds to Arbuckle but to allow Arbuckle to withdraw sums necessary for the maintenance and repair of certain of decedent's investment properties while decedent was traveling abroad].

7. Plaintiff is ignorant of the respective rights of the defendants, is indifferent between the claimants with reference thereto, does not know which of the claimants is entitled thereto, and cannot safely determine for itself which claim is right and lawful.

8. Plaintiff has no claim on the funds and is ready and willing to and hereby offers to deposit the same in court or to deliver the same to such persons as the court shall direct.

9. This action is not brought by collusion with any of the defendants.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. That defendants, and each of them, be restrained from initiating any proceeding or action against the plaintiff in relation thereto;

2. That defendants be required to interplead and to litigate among themselves their claims to the funds;

3. That the clerk of the court or some other person be designated by the court and authorized to receive the funds pending such litigation;

4. That on delivering the funds to the clerk of the court or to such other person as the court may designate, plaintiff be discharged from any and all liability to any and all of the defendants in relation thereto;

5. That plaintiff be awarded its costs to be paid out of the funds; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem just and proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint in interpleader is for use in situations in which a bank desires to compel two adverse claimants to a bank deposit to litigate their claims to the money deposited.

If the account in question is one governed by the Multiple-Party Accounts Law (Prob. Code § 5100 et seq.) [see Prob. Code § 5122 (defining account, discussed in § 95.270[1])], a bank faced with adverse claims between parties to the account or a P.O.D. payee or the beneficiary of a Totten trust account may prefer to rely on the protections of Prob. Code §§ 5401-5405 and honor withdrawal requests, or not, in compliance with those sections, thus effectively placing the onus on the parties to initiate proceedings to determine entitlement to the account [see § 95.270[9][a]].

If the claim in question is one governed by Fin. Code § 952 [see § 95.292)], a bank may also prefer to rely on the protections of that section and honor withdrawal requests, or not, in compliance with that section, requiring the adverse claimant to obtain and serve a restraining order within three days after serving the initial notice of adverse claim [see Fin. Code § 952].

When a depositor of a commercial or savings account has authorized any person to make withdrawals from the account, the bank, in the absence of written notice otherwise, may assume that any check, receipt, or order of withdrawal drawn by that person in the authorized form or manner, including checks drawn to that person's order and withdrawal orders payable to that person, were drawn for a purpose authorized by the depositor and within the scope of the authority conferred on the person entitled to make withdrawals [Fin. Code § 953].

Thus, this form is most apt to be used when the bank has received written notice in accordance with Fin. Code § 953 and is faced with truly conflicting instructions from persons who are authorized signatories, including possible liability for wrongful dishonor [see Com. Code § 4402 (discussed in § 95.323); see, e.g., AARTS Productions, Inc. v Crocker National Bank (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1061, 1067-1069, 225 Cal. Rptr. 203] .

If there are more than two adverse claimants, add an additional paragraph for each additional claimant, between Paragraphs 6 and 7, setting forth the basis of the claim.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraudulent Misrepresentation)

1. [Capacity and residence of defendants. See § 95.433[1], Paragraph 1.]

3. Defendant _____ [name] is in the employ of defendant corporation as _____ [specify defendant's position with bank, e.g., the branch manager at a branch of the bank conducted by defendant corporation at _____ (street address), _____ (city), California, known as defendant corporation's _____ (specify) branch].

4. At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant _____ [name] was the agent and employee of defendant corporation, and in doing the things alleged in this complaint was acting within the course and scope of his/her agency and with the permission and consent of defendant corporation.

5. On or about _____ [date], in response to plaintiff's inquiry as to the solvency and creditworthiness of _____ [name of debtor] _____ [specify, e.g., relative to his/her ability to repay a potential business loan from plaintiff to cover an overdraft in _____'s (name of debtor) commercial account at _____ (name of third-party bank)], defendant _____ [name] falsely and fraudulently represented to plaintiff, in writing, _____ [specify statements of material fact claimed by plaintiff to be false, e.g., that _____ (name of debtor) was solvent, in good credit, and worth in excess of his/her liabilities]. [A copy of _____ (identify document containing representations) containing these representations, signed by defendant _____ (name), is attached to this complaint, marked Exhibit "A," and incorporated herein by reference.]

6. The representations made by defendant _____ [name], as alleged above were, in fact, false, in that _____ [specify true facts, e.g., at the time the representations were made to plaintiff, _____ (name of debtor) was, in fact, insolvent, and neither in good credit nor worth in excess of his/her liabilities].

7. On or about _____ [date], in reliance on the representations of defendant _____ [name], plaintiff was induced to and did _____ [specify plaintiff's acts in reliance on defendant's misrepresentations, e.g., obtain a loan of $_____ from defendant corporation that plaintiff, in turn, loaned to _____ (name of debtor), together with $_____from plaintiff's own commercial account at the _____ (name of branch) of defendant corporation]. Had plaintiff known the true nature of the creditworthiness and solvency of _____ [name of debtor], plaintiff would not have so acted.

8. Plaintiff's reliance on the representations of defendant _____ [name] were justified in that _____ [allege facts showing justifiable reliance, e.g., the facts of _____'s (name of debtor) solvency and creditworthiness were peculiarly within the knowledge of defendant _____ (name), and not within plaintiff's knowledge].

9. Defendant _____ [name] knew these representations to be false when he/she made them. Defendant _____ [name] made these representations with the intent to defraud and deceive plaintiff, and with the intent to induce plaintiff to act in reliance on the representations, as alleged above, in that _____ [state facts tending to show defendant's motive to induce plaintiff to act, e.g., the _____ (name of branch) of defendant corporation stood to lose $_____ if _____'s (name of debtor) overdraft at _____ (name of third-party bank) was not covered]. At the time these representations were made, and at the time plaintiff took the action alleged above, plaintiff was ignorant of the falsity of these representations and believed them to be true.

10. Thereafter, and on or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded repayment of the sum of $_____, together with interest thereon, from _____ [name of debtor]. He/She has failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to pay plaintiff this sum or any part of it.

11. As a proximate result of defendant's misrepresentations as alleged above, plaintiff was induced to make the loan on which _____ [name of debtor] defaulted, all to plaintiff's general damage in the amount of $_____.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraudulent Concealment)

13. Plaintiff refers to Paragraphs 1 through 11 of his/her first cause of action and incorporates them into his/her second cause of action as if the same were alleged verbatim herein.

14. On or about _____ [date], in written response to plaintiff's inquiry as to the solvency and creditworthiness of _____ [name of debtor], as alleged above, defendant _____ [name] failed to reveal and suppressed the facts _____ [specify facts suppressed by defendant, e.g., that _____ (name of debtor) was insolvent and not worth in excess of his/her liabilities]. The suppression of these facts was likely to and did mislead plaintiff in light of representations made by defendant _____ [name], as alleged above, relative to _____'s [name of debtor] solvency and good creditworthiness. [A copy of _____ (identify document) reflecting these suppressed facts, signed by defendant _____ (name), is attached to this complaint, marked Exhibit "B," and incorporated herein by reference.]

15. On or about _____ [date], in reliance on the representations of defendant _____ [name], plaintiff was induced to and did _____ [specify plaintiff's acts in reliance on defendant's misrepresentations, e.g., obtain a loan of $_____ from defendant corporation that plaintiff, in turn, loaned to _____ (name of debtor), together with $_____ from plaintiff's own commercial account at the _____ (name of branch) of defendant corporation]. Had plaintiff known the true nature of the creditworthiness and solvency of _____ [name of debtor], plaintiff would not have so acted.

16. Plaintiff's reliance on defendant _____'s [name] suppressions of fact was justified in that _____ [allege facts showing justifiable reliance, e.g., these facts were peculiarly within the knowledge of defendant _____ (name) and not within plaintiff's knowledge].

17. At the time defendant _____ [name] suppressed these facts and at the time plaintiff acted in reliance thereon, plaintiff was ignorant of the existence of the facts so suppressed. Had plaintiff known of their existence, he/she would not have so acted.

18. Defendant _____ [name] suppressed facts as to _____'s [name of debtor] solvency and creditworthiness with the intent to defraud and deceive plaintiff, and with the intent to induce plaintiff to act in reliance thereon, as above alleged, in that _____ [state facts tending to show defendant's motive to induce plaintiff to act, e.g., the _____ (name of branch) of defendant corporation stood to lose $_____ if _____'s (name of debtor) overdraft at _____ (name of third-party bank) was not covered]. At the time defendant _____ [name] suppressed these facts, and at the time plaintiff took the action alleged above, plaintiff was ignorant of the actual facts and believed defendant _____'s [name] misrepresentations to be true for want of communication of the suppressed facts.

19. Thereafter, and on or about _____ [date], plaintiff demanded repayment of the sum of $_____, together with interest thereon, from _____ [name of debtor]. He/She has failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to pay plaintiff this sum or any part of it.

20. As a proximate result of defendant's suppression of facts as alleged above, plaintiff was induced to make the loan on which _____ [name of debtor] defaulted, all to plaintiff's general damage in the amount of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

On the FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____ with interest thereon at _____ percent per annum from _____ [date];

2. For exemplary and punitive damages;

On the SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION:

3. For general damages in the sum of $_____ with interest thereon at _____ percent per annum from _____ [date];

4. For exemplary and punitive damages;

On all CAUSES OF ACTION:

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court deems necessary.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a creditor in an action against a bank and its branch manager for damages for fraud arising out of the bank's intentional misrepresentation and suppression of the fact of the insolvency of a debtor of the creditor [Civ. Code §§ 1710(1), 1710(3)].

The availability of such an action appears to be limited to commercial transactions involving business entities or individuals engaged in their business capacities, inasmuch as the rights and remedies surrounding credit reporting in consumer transactions are largely regulated by the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.), the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.), and the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code § 1786 et seq.). Additionally, the definitions of consumer credit reports and consumer credit reporting agencies under Civ. Code § 1785.3(c), (d) of the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act have been held inapplicable to credit information, and a provider of that information, concerning business entities or individuals engaged in business in their business capacities and not as consumers [Mende v. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 670 F.2d 129, 133-134] . Note, however, that one who, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of assembling, evaluating, or disseminating information on the checking account experiences of consumer customers of banks or other financial institutions is subject (with some exceptions) to the laws that govern consumer credit reporting agencies [Civ. Code § 1785.5]. For discussion of consumer credit reporting agencies, see Ch. 129, Consumer Credit Reporting .

This complaint is adapted from the facts in Bank of America v. Hutchinson (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 142, 27 Cal. Rptr. 787 .

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges two causes of action for fraud and deceit. The first cause of action is for misrepresentation of a fact and includes allegations of:

- Defendant's false representations (Paragraphs 5 and 6).
- Plaintiff's justifiable reliance on the false representations (Paragraphs 7 and 8).
- Defendant's knowledge of their falsity and intent to defraud plaintiff (Paragraph 9).
- Plaintiff's damages (Paragraphs 10 and 11) [see Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710(1)].

The second cause of action is for suppression of a fact, and includes allegations of:

- Defendant's suppression of facts by giving information of other facts that are likely to mislead absent communication of the suppressed facts (Paragraph 14) [see Bank of America v. Hutchinson (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 142, 148, 27 Cal. Rptr. 787] .
- Defendant's intent to induce reliance (Paragraph 18).
- Plaintiff's justifiable reliance on plaintiff's suppression of facts (Paragraph 15-17) [see Civ. Code § 1710(3)]; and (4) plaintiff's damages (Paragraphs 19-20) [see Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710(1)].

The complaint includes an optional paragraph in each cause of action to seek punitive damages (Paragraphs 12 and 21) [see Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c)(3)].

[4] Statute of Frauds

No evidence is admissible to charge a person on a representation as to the credit of a third person unless the representation, or some memorandum of it, is in writing, and either subscribed by or in the handwriting of the party to be charged [Code Civ. Proc. § 1974]. The statute applies to all third-party deceit actions, whether based on a negligence theory or an intentional misrepresentation theory [Seneca Communications, Inc. v. International Bank of California (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 541, 547-550, 163 Cal. Rptr. 176] .

If a defendant permits parol proof of the representation of credit, without timely objection, the defense of Code Civ. Proc. § 1974 is generally deemed to be waived, since the statute relates only to a remedy and not to a right [Bank of America v. Hutchinson (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 142, 149, 27 Cal. Rptr. 787] .

[5] State Statutes

Measure of damages in actions for deceit. Civ. Code § 1709

Deceit is suggestion, as fact, of that which is not true by one who does not believe it to be true. Civ. Code § 1710(1)

Deceit is suppression of fact by one who gives information of other facts likely to mislead for want of communication of suppressed fact. Civ. Code § 1710(3)

[6] Decisions

Test of whether cause of action comes within Code Civ. Proc. § 1974 is whether action can be sustained without proof of representation of third party's credit. Seneca Communications, Inc. v. International Bank of California (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 541, 547, 163 Cal. Rptr. 176

Two tests of whether misrepresentation is within Code Civ. Proc. § 1974 are (1) if primary intent and purpose is to procure credit for another, and (2) if misrepresentation induces recipient to enter into transaction resulting in debt due from third party. Seneca Communications, Inc. v. International Bank of California (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 541, 552, 163 Cal. Rptr. 176

Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR WRONGFUL
_____ [name],	)	EXERCISE OF SETOFF
a Corporation,	)	[Amount demanded _____
Defendant.	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a corporation organized and existing as a savings association under the laws of the State of California, with it principal office in _____ [city], _____ County, California [if a county other than the county of the principal office branch is involved, add and a branch office located in _____ (city), _____ (county), California].

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff opened a savings account designated No.

_____, with defendant at its office located in _____ [city], _____ [county], California, which account stood on defendant's books to the credit of plaintiff's name and for his/her use and benefit. Plaintiff _____ [has kept deposits of money in this account ever since and to the present or maintained deposits in this account thereafter until on or about _____ (date)(, at which time plaintiff closed the account)].

3. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff had a balance of $_____ in his/her account, representing accumulated deposits and interest on the deposits to date, and which account, under defendant's regulations, was earning interest at _____ percent per annum. [The interest rate was changed to _____ percent from and after _____ (date), at which rate the account to earn interest _____ (to the present or until the account was closed).]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff became obligated to defendant in the amount of $_____, to be repaid with interest at _____ percent, [payable in periodic installments and] due on _____ [date]. This obligation arose from an extension of credit by defendant to plaintiff primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, and has never been reduced to judgment.

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant set off against plaintiff's account the above debt that it claimed was owing, in the sum of $_____, and deducted this amount from the account, leaving plaintiff unable to withdraw that amount[, or any part of that amount or interest on it,] from the account. The balance after the setoff was $_____.

[EITHER, if defendant failed to notify plaintiff of the impending setoff]

6. At no time before or after the setoff did defendant notify plaintiff of the setoff as required under Financial Code Section 6660(c), nor did defendant transmit to plaintiff a response form inquiring as to any defenses to the act of setoff as required under that code provision.

[OR, if plaintiff responded to the notice of setoff]

6. On or about _____ [date], defendant sent plaintiff a notice informing plaintiff that defendant _____ [had exercised or was about to exercise] a setoff on the account, and inviting plaintiff to make timely assertion of any defenses to the setoff. A copy of this notice is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and incorporated by reference. Plaintiff filled out the response form attached for assertion of such defenses and _____ [mailed or delivered] the form to defendant on or about _____ [date], as required under Financial Code Section 6660(d), claiming that the debt was _____ [paid or not then owing or not subject to setoff because the money in the account was _____ (describe exempt status, e.g., proceeds from an execution sale of household furnishings or other personal effects)]. A copy of this response form is attached to this complaint as Exhibit B and incorporated by reference.

[CONTINUE]

7. In fact defendant had no right to the funds in plaintiff's account for purposes of the debt's setoff because the debt was _____ [paid or not then owing or not subject to setoff because the money in the account was _____ (describe exempt status, e.g., proceeds from execution sale of household furnishings or other personal effects, and therefore was exempt pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 704.020)].

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff attempted to withdraw certain funds from his/her account, but was told personally that a setoff had been exercised and the amounts covered thereby were no longer in the account. Plaintiff thereon, and on subsequent occasion, protested to defendant that the setoff was wrongful and demanded that the setoff be reversed and the deducted amount be credited to the account, with all interest accruing on the account, immediately. Defendant on these occasions, and ever since, has refused to repay the amounts to plaintiff or credit the account with payments.

[9. _____ (At such time of protest or On or about _____ (date),) plaintiff explained to defendant that plaintiff was dependent on the ability to withdraw and utilize these amounts for the purposes of _____ (explain proposed uses for the funds), and that it would be very difficult for plaintiff to obtain the funding in any other manner. Plaintiff expended a great deal of effort in raising the funds elsewhere and finally did obtain a loan, on or about _____ (date), from _____ (name of lender) for $_____, _____ (at _____ percent interest per annum for _____ years or with a gross obligation of $_____ as interest for the full term). In raising the funds, plaintiff _____ (describe costs and inconvenience incurred in securing loan, e.g., was forced to be absent from work and to incur travel expenses, and was otherwise subject to much mental anguish in attempting to find alternate funding.]

[10. As of and from the time of exercising the setoff, defendant at all times was guilty of _____ (oppression or fraud or malice or any combination thereof) in instituting and continuing the setoff, and in refusing to reverse it and credit plaintiff's account with the deducted funds in that _____ (allege facts constituting oppression, fraud, and/or malice within meaning of Civ. Code § 3294) .]

11. As a proximate result of defendant's wrongful conduct, plaintiff has been damaged by loss of the amount in plaintiff's account owing on the date of setoff in the amount of $_____, [and] loss of interest accruing from date of setoff in the amount of $_____ [, interest on the replacement loan in the amount of $_____, loss of _____ (wages or profits from plaintiff's business) due to absence in seeking a replacement loan in the amount of $_____, and for travel and related expenses incurred in seeking a replacement loan in the amount of $_____].

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____ for loss of funds in plaintiff's account to defendant's setoff;

[2. For special damages in the sum of $_____representing interest owing on the loan plaintiff obtained to replace such account funds;]

[3. For special damages in the amount of $_____ for loss of _____ (wages or profits) in obtaining the replacement loan;]

[4. For special damages in the amount of $_____ for travel and incidental expenses in seeking replacement funds;]

[5. For punitive damages;]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a plaintiff whose savings account balance has been wrongfully subjected to a setoff by the defendant association, based on an underlying consumer debt, because of the association's improper notification procedure or the association's failure to react properly to plaintiff's return of the response form [see Fin. Code § 6660.]. For discussion of wrongful setoff, see § 95.294.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges, in pertinent part:

- The balance of the plaintiff's account before the setoff (Paragraph 3);
- A consumer debt owed to the defendant (Paragraph 4);
- The defendant's setoff against the plaintiff's account (Paragraph 5);
- The defendant's failure to notify the plaintiff of the impending setoff, or the plaintiff's delivery of a response form after receipt of a notice (Paragraph 6);
- The defendant's lack of entitlement to a setoff (Paragraph 7);
- The plaintiff's inability to withdraw funds after the setoff and the defendant's refusal to pay or credit the amount that was set off (Paragraph 8) [Fin. Code § 6660];
- The resulting general and special damages (Paragraph 11).

The complaint includes optional allegations to support special damages (Paragraph 9) and punitive damages (Paragraph 10) [see Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c)].

[4] Setoff Limitations Only Applicable to Consumer Debts and Accounts

The restrictions of Fin. Code § 6660 apply to natural persons owing a interest-bearing obligation or an obligation that by its terms is payable in installments, which has not been reduced to judgment, arising from an extension of credit primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. A "debt" under Fin. Code § 6660 does not mean a charge for savings and loan services, for a debit for uncollected funds, for dishonored checks cashed for a customer, or for an overdraft account imposed by an association on a savings account [Fin. Code § 6660(a)(4), (5)]. The restrictions of Fin. Code § 6660 also apply to account holders [see Fin. Code § 6660(a)(2) (account holder defined)] of withdrawable or repurchasable shares, investment certificates, deposits, or savings accounts as defined in 12 C.F.R. §§ 561.2, 561.16, 561.28, 561.29, and 561.42 [Fin. Code § 6660(a)(1)].

[5] Minimum Balance Requirement

An association may not exercise any setoff if it would result in an aggregate balance of less than $1,000 as shown on the association records for all that customer's accounts [Fin. Code § 6660(b)]. For form of allegation for failure to leave minimum balance, see § 95.436.

[6] Notice Requirement

Within one day following the exercise of a setoff against a customer's account an association must deliver to the account holder personally, or mail postage prepaid to the address of each customer as shown on the records of the association a written notice of the setoff [Fin. Code § 6660(c)]. For a discussion of the contents of the notice as well as a sample notice (and response), see California Legal Forms, Ch. 102A, Personal Property Liens, § 102A.345 (Matthew Bender).

[7] Effect of Returning Response Form

To contest the setoff, the account holder must return the response form that is included in the written notice of setoff and the association must receive the form within 20 days after the account holder receives the notice. If it is received within this time period, the amount of the setoff for any debt claimed to be owed to the association by the account holder and any service charges resulting from the setoff must be reversed and be credited to the account holder's account not later than the end of the third business day following receipt of the executed response form [Fin. Code § 6660(d)].

[8] Inapplicability of Limitations

The limitations provided in Fin. Code § 6660 do not apply to accounts in which the association has a security interest expressed by a written contract as collateral for the debt owing to the association by the customer [Fin. Code § 6660(e)], or when a customer previously has authorized an association in writing to periodically debit an account as the agreed method of payment of the debt [Fin. Code § 6660(f)].

[9] Punitive Damages

When a statute recognizes a cause of action for violation of a right, all forms of relief granted to civil litigants generally, including appropriate punitive damages, are available unless a contrary legislative intent appears [Commodore Home Systems, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 215, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912] . Punitive damages are available to civil litigants generally when there is a breach of an obligation that does not not arise from contract, and the defendant has been proven guilty, by clear and convincing evidence, of oppression, fraud, or malice [Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c)]. The word "contract" in Civ. Code § 3294 is used in its ordinary sense to mean an agreement between the parties, not an obligation imposed by law despite the absence of any such agreement [Ward v. Taggart (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 736, 743, 336 P.2d 534] .

Although the depositor-depository relationship between a customer and an association arises out of contract, the requirements that an association take certain steps in particular transactions such as setoff [Fin. Code § 6660] or dealing with an adverse claim [Fin. Code § 6661; see § 95.432] appear to derive exclusively from regulatory controls embodied in statutes with comprehensive regulatory features aimed at the goal of special protection for a particular class, that is, the account holder [see Hudson v. Craft (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 654, 660, 204 P.2d 1] . When there is a tortious breach of an obligation imposed by law, even if the conduct constituting the tort also involves the breach of a covenant in the contract, the plaintiff may recover punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294 [see Vale v. Union Bank (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 330, 339-340, 151 Cal. Rptr. 784 (exemplary damages awarded against trustee for breach of his fiduciary duties); Richardson v. Employers Liab. Assur. Corp. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 244-246, 102 Cal. Rptr. 547 (punitive damages awarded for tortious breach by insurer of obligation imposed by law, to deal fairly and in good faith with its insured; overruled on other grounds in Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 580-581 n.10, 108

Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032)].

Therefore, the violation of the setoff provisions, even if also constituting a breach of contract, would involve a tortious breach of an obligation imposed by statute, and if the defendant has been proven guilty, by clear and convincing evidence, of oppression, fraud, or malice, plaintiff should be able to recover punitive damages [see Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c); Hudson v. Craft (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 654, 660, 204 P.2d 1 ; Richardson v. Employers Liab. Assur. Corp. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 232, 239, 244-246, 102 Cal. Rptr. 547 (overruled on other grounds in Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 580-581 n.10, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032); Vale v. Union Bank (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 330, 339-340, 151 Cal. Rptr. 784 (cases decided before 1987 amendment to Civ. Code § 3294)].

Defendant's exercise of the above-described setoff resulted in an aggregate balance of less than $1,000 as shown on defendant's records for _____ [plaintiff's account or all of plaintiff's deposit accounts maintained by plaintiff as a customer with defendant] in contravention of the requirements of Financial Code Section 6660(b).

[2] Use of Form

This allegation may be used to plead the wrongful setoff by a defendant association against plaintiff's account, for an underlying consumer obligation, when the balance left is under $1,000 [see Fin. Code § 6660(b)]. The allegation may be substituted for Paragraphs 6 and 7 in see § 95.435, or may be made the basis of a separate count.

[3] Minimum Balance Requirement

An association is limited in exercising any setoff for a debt claimed to be owed to the association by a customer in that a setoff shall not result in an aggregate balance of less than $1,000 as shown on the records of the association for all accounts maintained by a customer with the association or any of its branches [Fin. Code § 6660(b)].

4. [Opening of checking account, incorporating governing instruments. See § 95.430[1], Paragraph 4.]

5. Defendant is authorized to charge the account for checks properly drawn in accordance with the signature card[, plaintiff's instructions,] and the laws governing checks and checking accounts. Withdrawals were permitted from the account only by check or other order bearing the signature(s) of [both] plaintiff [specify any other signatures required or authorized, e.g., and her bookkeeper, John Alias].

[EITHER, if drawer's signature is forged or by unauthorized person]

6. On or about _____ [date], check number _____ in the amount of $_____ drawn on plaintiff's account _____ [on which the drawer's signature, which purports to be that of plaintiff, had been forged or and bearing the signature of _____ (name unauthorized signer) as drawer] was presented to defendant for payment. The purported drawer's signature was made without plaintiff's knowledge or authorization. Defendant paid the check and charged plaintiff's account for that payment. [A copy of the check is attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated by reference.]

[OR, if the checks had fewer than the required number of drawer's signatures]

6. Between _____ [date], and _____ [date], there were presented to defendant for payment _____ [number of checks, e.g., 16] checks in the aggregate amount of $_____ bearing only the signature of _____ [name] and drawn on plaintiff's account. Defendant paid these checks and charged plaintiff's account for the payments. These checks were made without plaintiff's knowledge or authorization. [Copies of the checks are attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated by reference.] The checks charged to plaintiff's account by defendant were those with the following number, made for the following amounts, and charged on the following dates: _____ [specify].

[OR, if endorsement is forged, missing, or improper]

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff executed, issued, and delivered to _____ [name of payee] his/her/its check number _____ in the amount of $_____, payable to _____ [name of payee exactly as set forth in check], and drawn on plaintiff's account. On or about _____ [date], that check was presented to defendant for payment _____ [without endorsement or with the endorsement of _____ (specify endorsement that differs from payee designation) or with a forgery of the payee's signature as endorser]. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the _____ [lack of endorsement or, if endorsement differs from designated payee, endorsement by _____ (name of endorser) or, if endorsement was forged, purported endorsement of _____ (name of payee)] was made without knowledge or authorization of _____ [name of payee]. Plaintiff [has issued a replacement check to the payee and] has neither made any demand of, nor received any reimbursement from, _____ [name(s) of depositary and/or collecting bank(s) through which check was negotiated], the depositary or collecting bank(s) through which the check was negotiated. Defendant paid the check and charged plaintiff's account for that payment. [A copy of the check is attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated by reference.]

[CONTINUE]

7. Defendant's payment of the check(s) and consequent charge(s) to plaintiff's account were contrary to the signature card agreement of the parties and the laws governing checks and checking accounts.

8. On or about _____ [date], and prior to the commencement of this action, plaintiff demanded of defendant that it replace and recredit plaintiff's bank account with the sum of $_____, and defendant has failed and refused and still fails and refuses to do so.

9. By reason of the foregoing, there is now due, owing, and unpaid from defendant to plaintiff, the sum of $_____ with interest thereon from _____ [date].

[10. As a further proximate result of the unauthorized and improper charges made by defendant to plaintiff's account, _____ (describe any additional consequential damages, e.g., the balance in plaintiff's account was decreased below the amount plaintiff believed he/she maintained on deposit, causing checks properly drawn by plaintiff on the account to be dishonored by defendant. This in turn resulted in damages to plaintiff's credit reputation, in an amount according to proof.]

(Negligence)

11. Plaintiff realleges and incorporates herein by reference each and every allegation contained in Paragraphs 1-10 of the First Cause of Action.

12. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff discovered that _____ [describe actual or potential irregularity, e.g., checks numbered 1026 through 1050, inclusive, were lost or missing (and presumed stolen)]. Plaintiff immediately notified defendant of the _____ [specify irregularity, e.g., loss] _____ [specify manner of giving notice, e.g., by telephone and in a confirming letter, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit "C" and incorporated by reference].

13. Defendant so failed to exercise ordinary care in maintaining its records and operating, managing, and controlling its check processing functions as to cause unauthorized checks with _____ [specify defect in signature or endorsement, e.g., forged drawer's signatures] to be charged to plaintiff's account, to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $_____ [amount of checks].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by the holder of a checking account against a bank for the recovery of the amount of checks cashed without sufficient authorized drawer's signatures, or with a forged drawer's signature or forged endorsement. It contains two causes of action--one based on the statutory duty under Com. Code § 4401(a) only to charge items in accordance with the depositor's order, and one based on "failure to exercise ordinary care" [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (discussed in § 95.311[5])] or negligence [see Civ. Code § 1714(a); see Copesky v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 678, 694, 280 Cal. Rptr. 338 (causes of action stated for negligence and breach of contract by drawer against drawee for having paid checks on signature forged by plaintiff's employee; after Foley, no longer any tort liability for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing)].

If properly payable checks have been dishonored or returned unpaid because of insufficient funds and no overdraft would have been created by paying those items if the account had been credited for the improper charge as soon as plaintiff notified defendant of it (or an overdraft agreement was in effect), counsel may wish to add a third cause of action for wrongful dishonor [see § 95.456].

[3] Statutory Versus Common Law Action

The cause of action under Com. Code § 4401 has been equated with a contract measure of damages [see, e.g., Joffe v. United California Bank (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 541, 554-555, 557-558, 190 Cal. Rptr. 443 ; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804-805, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883] . However, consequential damages are available for the generally foreseeable wrongful dishonors flowing from exhaustion of the account balance in payment of unauthorized items [see Com. Code § 4402(b); see § 95.456].

The Division 4 measure of damages for failure to exercise ordinary care in handling an item is the amount of the item reduced by an amount that could not have been realized by the exercise of ordinary care. However, if the bank acted in bad faith, the customer may recover any other damages he, she, or it suffered as a proximate consequence [Com. Code § 4103(e)].

The older cases such as Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 321, 139 P.2d 1 , hold that it is negligence of a drawee to fail to recognize its drawer's signature and to pay a check with a forged drawer's signature. Those cases are displaced by the second sentence of the Commercial Code definition of "ordinary care" [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (discussed in § 95.311[5])].

[4] Limitation Periods Applicable

[a] Three-Year Versus One-Year

The old conflict as to whether Com. Code § 4401(a) has displaced common law negligence theories in regard to the drawee's obligations in processing checks charged against its depositor's account [compare Joffe v. United California Bank (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 541, 557-558, 190 Cal. Rptr. 443 (former Com. Code § 4401(1), now Com. Code § 4401(a), displaced common law negligence) with Commercial Cotton Co. v. UnitedCalifornia Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 514-516, 515 n.1, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551 (drawee admitted negligence)] is less compelling when consequential damages are available in any related wrongful dishonor cause of action [see Com. Code § 4402(b)]. Nevertheless, old distinctions may determine how counsel denominates the cause of action.

The statutory action is subject to the three-year limitation period of Com. Code § 4111 for "[a]n action to enforce an obligation, duty, or right arising under [Division 4 of the Commercial Code]." However, Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c) establishes a one-year limitation period for an action "by a depositor against a bank for the payment of a forged or raised check, or a check that bears a forged or unauthorized endorsement." The later-enacted and more general three-year limitation period of Com. Code § 4111 does not supersede or implicitly repeal the specific one-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c) [Chatsky & Assocs. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 873, 875, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154] . Furthermore, Com. Code § 4406(f) precludes a depositor from asserting a claim against a bank based on a forged or unauthorized signature on a check drawn on the depositor's account unless the depositor discovers and reports the matter within one year after the bank made available a statement of account showing payment of the check, regardless of either the depositor's or the bank's lack of care [Chatsky & Assocs. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 873, 877, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 (Com. Code § 4406(f) is issue-preclusion statute rather than statute of limitations, and claims that are not dependent on proof of forgery will not be precluded)]. The limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c) and the period in which a depositor must act under Com. Code § 4406(f) both begin to run on receipt of an account statement showing the wrongful payment of the check [Chatsky & Assocs. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 873, 877, 880, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 ; Roy Supply Inc. v. Wells Fargo Bank (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1051, 1074, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 309] .

Note that pursuant to Com. Code § 4406(d), if the customer fails to comply with Com. Code § 4406(c) as to reviewing items, when that person has forged checks on the account, the customer is precluded from making a claim against the bank for unauthorized payment unless the customer notified the bank no more than 30 days after the first forged item was included in a monthly statement or canceled checks, and should have been discovered. This preclusion is conditional because the customer may avoid its application by establishing that the bank failed to exercise ordinary care in paying the item and that failure contributed to the loss. Espresso Roma Corp. v. Bank of America (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 525, 528 Cal. R ptr. 2d 549.

For discussion of the award of punitive damages for bad faith assertion of the one-year preclusion, see § 95.452[3].

[b] No Limit if Action Is on Deposit, Unless Drawee Is Insolvent

If the action is based on a charge made for a check that did not have the required drawer's signature(s), as opposed to a forged one, it is considered an action to recover money deposited with a bank and is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 348, which provides no limitation on the time for initiating the action [Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 813, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 ; Far West Citrus, Inc. v. Bank of America (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 913, 917-918, 154 Cal. Rptr. 464 ; see also § 95.430]. See discussion in § 95.293[2].

"Bank" is used here to mean all the entities listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 348: banks, bankers, trust companies, building and loan associations, industrial loan companies, credit unions, and savings and loan societies. If the actions is brought to recover money or other property deposited with a "bank," it is not subject to any statute of limitations. If the bank has become insolvent and is in process of liquidation, however, "the statute of limitations" is deemed to have commenced to run from the beginning of the process of liquidation [Code Civ. Proc. § 348 (section does not indicate which statute commences to run if bank is insolvent)].

The complaint alleges the following:

- The capacity and residence of the drawee (Paragraph 1) [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; 12 U.S.C. § 94 (venue of action against national banking association); see also §§ 95.410[3], 95.412[2], 95.413[2]].

- Plaintiff's maintenance of a checking account with the defendant and identification of the account and provisions governing it (Paragraphs 4, 5) [see Hoffman v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 964, 968-969, 176 Cal. Rptr. 14 (statutes governing obligations of banks and their depositors as usually incorporated into signature card agreement)].

- The defect in the check wrongfully charged against the account, and the fact that plaintiff has no knowledge of the defect, did not authorize the facial defect, and did not benefit from the defect (alternative Paragraphs 6) [see Com. Code §§ 3403(b) (two or more signatures required), 4401(a), (b) (authorized items or items from which plaintiff benefitted), 4407 (subrogation to avoid unjust enrichment)].

- That charging the check against plaintiff's account was not in accordance with the contract of the parties or law (Paragraph 7) [Com. Code § 4401].

- Plaintiff's demand to be reimbursed (Paragraph 8).

- Entitlement to interest (Paragraph 9) [see Civ. Code §§ 3288 (interest on noncontractual duty), 3289(a) (interest on contractual duty), 3302 (right to interest in action for money); Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 801, 814-815, 148 Cal. Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109 (prejudgment interest award under Civ. Code § 3288)].

- Any other damages suffered by plaintiff as a consequence of the improper payments (Paragraph 10) [see also § 95.456 (damages for wrongful dishonor)].

The second cause of action is for negligence and alleges the following:

- By incorporation, the allegations of Paragraph 1-10 (Paragraph 11).

- That the drawee had notice of sufficiently suspicious circumstances, the risks of which were sufficiently apparent to give rise to a duty of care (Paragraph 12) [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) ("ordinary care" defined)].

- That despite this knowledge, the drawee failed to exercise ordinary care in paying the checks with missing or forged signatures (Paragraph 13) [see Civ. Code § 1714(a); Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 515 n.1, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551 (drawee admitted negligence on facts similar to those in form)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

Three-year limitation. Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a); Com. Code § 4111

[8] Decisions

[a] Bank-Depositor Relationship

Drawee bank handling collection and disbursement of royalties did not breach its fiduciary duty by paying on checks naming owner as payee but endorsed by husband alone, as bank had not expressly or by implication agreed to supervise or monitor owner's finances and accounts; bank's payment on royalty checks deposited into joint account by husband when presented by depository bank constituted final payment to owner, not husband. LaMonte v. Sanwa Bank, California (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 509, 522-523, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 861

Bank, in receiving ordinary deposits, becomes debtor of depositor; implied contract exists with depositor to discharge this indebtedness by honoring such checks as depositor may draw on it; bank not entitled to debit depositor's account with payments not made by his or her order or direction. Glassell Dev. Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (1923) 191 Cal. 375, 379, 216 P. 1012 ; Certified Grocers of California, Ltd. v. San Gabriel Valley Bank (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 281, 286, 197 Cal. Rptr. 710

Bank-depositor relationship is that of debtor and creditor; title to deposited funds passes immediately to bank, which may use them for its own purpose, does not become trustee, and cannot be charged with conversion for paying unauthorized check. Lee v. Bank of America (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 919-920, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387

No cause of action for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing stated against drawee that reinstated drawer's account with amount of unauthorized check previously paid by it within 30 days of notification from drawer that check was unauthorized. Lee v. Bank of America (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 914, 919, 267 Cal. Rptr. 387

Bank has duty to pay checks only in strict accordance with its customer's order. Danning v. Bank of America (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 969, 199 Cal. Rptr. 163

Bank authorized to honor withdrawals from account on signatures authorized by signature card; signature card serves as contract between depositor and bank for handling account. Certified Grocers of California, Ltd. v. San Gabriel Valley Bank (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 281, 287, 197 Cal. Rptr. 710

[b] Forged Drawer's Signature

Bank pays check with forged drawer's signature at its peril; payment is considered to have been made from bank's own funds so that it has no right to charge depositor's account. Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 321, 139 P.2d 1

Depositor's negligence subsequent to commission of forgeries relieves bank from its absolute liability on instruments on which drawer's signature had been forged by depositor's employee only if bank has itself been free from negligence. Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 332-333, 139 P.2d 1

Rule that when one of two innocent parties must suffer, principal employing dishonest agent should bear loss caused by agent rather than equally innocent third party inapplicable to relieve bank of liability for cashing check on which drawer's signature had been forged by drawer's agent, when it is not shown that bank was free from negligence. Sommer v. Bank of Italy (1930) 109 Cal. App. 370, 376, 293 P. 98

[c] Forged Endorsement

Checks with forged or missing endorsement not properly payable by drawee bank. Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 376-377, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 ; Joffe v. United California Bank (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 541, 554, 190 Cal. Rptr. 443

Former Com. Code § 3404(a) (now Com. Code § 3403(a)) provided only that unauthorized endorsements are wholly inoperative. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group v. Bozinovski (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 503, 508, 196 Cal. Rptr. 150 (multiple payees)

Question of whether bank has been negligent in paying on forged endorsement on check generally one for jury. Atlas Vegetable Exchange, Inc. v. Bank of America (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 868, 876, 89 Cal. Rptr. 274

Even if corporate depositor was guilty of negligence in signing checks made out by employee and based on fraudulent vouchers, that negligence did not contribute to or induce acceptance by bank of endorsements forged on those checks; thus, depositor not estopped from alleging forged endorsements and bank's negligence. Edgington v. Security-First Nat. Bank (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 849, 858-859, 179 P.2d 640

[d] Lack of Drawer's Signature

Drawee bank liable for breach of primary contractual duty if it pays check on which drawer's signature is unauthorized or forged; drawee bank charged with knowledge of its depositor's signature. Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 321, 139 P.2d 1 ; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Security Pacific Nat. Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 797, 804-805, 149 Cal. Rptr. 883

Bank is without authority to charge its customer's account for check bearing only one of two required signatures as drawer; such a check is paid out of bank's own funds. Danning v. Bank of America (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 961, 969, 199 Cal. Rptr. 163

Although ordinarily bank is liable for paying check with only one of two required drawer's signatures, oral instruction to waive second signature of officer who was out of town was binding and bank is entitled to charge account. V of I Productions v. California Bank (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 897, 904, 15 Cal. Rptr. 562

[e] Unauthorized Drawer's Signature

Under Fin. Code § 953 (authorized withdrawals), bank is not required to inquire into financial relationship of persons ostensibly authorized to make withdrawals from account who act within scope of their conferred authority until bank receives notice that authority has been revoked or bank officially learns that authorization never existed. Desert Bermuda Properties v. Union Bank (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 146, 150, 71 Cal. Rptr. 93 ; but see Com Code § 3307 (discussed in § 95.463)

§ 95.451 Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Failure to Inform Bank of Irregularities Shown on Statements or Items [Com. Code § 4406(a)-(e)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Failure to Inform Bank of Irregularities Shown on Statements or Items [Com. Code § 4406(a)-(e)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. On or about the _____ [ordinal number] day of each month following the opening of plaintiff's account, down to and including _____ [date], this defendant has rendered a statement to plaintiff showing in detail the dates and amounts of all checks paid by defendant and charged against the account of plaintiff, and of all deposits made therein, and stating the balances credited to the account as of the date of the statements. The balances contained in the statements accurately reflected the result of all transactions in the account. Together with each such statement of account, there _____ [were returned to plaintiff or was given the phone number from which plaintiff could obtain (copies of)] all of the cancelled checks that had been paid and charged against the deposit account during the month preceding the date of the statement.

2. These statements of account [and cancelled checks] were duly rendered by defendant to plaintiff and came to his/her/its knowledge and attention. [Describe method of transmission, if desired, e.g.: Defendant mailed the statements (and items) by first class mail to plaintiff's address as shown on the signature card contract, which is attached as Exhibit A to the complaint.]

3. Plaintiff at all times herein mentioned had notice, express or implied, of all the foregoing facts.

4. Plaintiff, notwithstanding its knowledge of defendant's practices as described above, failed to exercise ordinary care in that plaintiff failed and neglected to examine its statements [and returned items] and inform defendant that _____ [describe irregularity that is basis of allegedly improper charge, e.g., its signature as drawer on the checks described in the complaint was unauthorized or forged by its employee, Ron G. Doer].

5. Plaintiff, by its failure to notify defendant of the _____ [unauthorized signatures or alterations] complained of, induced defendant to believe that plaintiff had authorized and approved the payment by defendant of checks _____ [describe irregularity that is basis of allegedly improper charge, e.g., signed by Ron G. Doer or with the Ron G. Doer stamp, as drawer or Treasurer of drawer]. [With respect to the checks charged toplaintiff's account on and after _____ (date), more than 30 days after plaintiff's receipt of the first statement showing _____ (unauthorized signatures or alterations) allegedly made by _____ (name of wrongdoer), plaintiff's failure to notify defendant of the irregularities complained of prevented defendant from discovering the irregularities in the _____ (number) checks charged after _____ (date)].

6. Defendant at all times herein mentioned exercised ordinary care in processing the items drawn on plaintiff's account. The actual cause of the losses complained of is plaintiff's own failure to exercise reasonable care and promptness in discovering and reporting the irregularities.

This affirmative defense is for use by a drawee bank sued for charging a checking account to pay items that were not properly payable [Com. Code § 4401(a); see § 95.450], to assert that the actual cause of the improper payment was the drawer's failure to notify the bank of irregularities on the checks that allegedly were improperly paid [see Com. Code § 4406(c) (discussed in § 95.324)]. A bank that sends or makes available to a customer a statement of account showing payment of items for the account must either (1) return or make available to the customer the items paid or (2) provide information in the statement of account sufficient to allow the customer reasonably to identify the items paid [Com. Code § 4406(a); see § 95.451[4]; but see Com. Code § 4406(h) (requirement that customer must be able to "reasonably" identify items paid is superseded on January 1, 2015, by requirement that customer must be able merely to identify items paid)]. If the bank does not return the items, it must provide in the statement of account the telephone number that the customer may call to request an item, a substitute check [see Com. Code § 4406(g) (definition)], or a legible copy [Com. Code § 4406(a)].

In order to prevail on this defense, the customer's failure to notify the bank of the irregularity must be the cause of the improper payment [Com. Code § 4406(d)(1)]. As a practical matter, that is only likely when (1) a single wrongdoer perpetrates a series of alterations or unauthorized signatures, and (2) the bank, had the customer informed it of the first (or earlier) alteration or unauthorized signature, would have been able to prevent payment [see Com. Code § 4406(d)(2); see § 95.451[7]].

Once a bank defends on the ground of the customer's failure to promptly examine his or her statement and report irregularities, the bank places its own exercise of ordinary care in issue, and the comparative negligence standard of Com. Code § 4406(e) applies [see § 95.451[7]].

If the loss was caused by a wrongdoer in plaintiff's employ, or otherwise authorized by plaintiff to handle checks on plaintiff's behalf, the defendant drawee bank may also defend on the basis of Com. Code §§ 3404-3406 [see §§ 95.453 -95.455].

[3] Allegations

This affirmative defense alleges:

- The bank's rendering of a statement and related items to the plaintiff (Paragraphs 1, 2) [Com. Code § 4406(a), (b)];

- That the delivery of the statement and items placed plaintiff on notice of all that was contained in them (Paragraph 3);

- That plaintiff failed to examine the statement and returned items and report the irregularities complained of to defendant (Paragraph 4) [Com. Code § 4406(c), (d)]; and

- That the plaintiff's failure to report the irregularities, not the bank's lack of ordinary care, was the actual cause of the loss (Paragraphs 5, 6) [Com. Code § 4406(d), (e)].

The bracketed language in Paragraph 5 is for use when the case involves more than one forgery or alteration by the same wrongdoer and some of the items with unauthorized signatures or alternations have been returned with or described in statements rendered more than 30 days before others were charged to the account [see Com. Code § 4406(d)(2) and related UCC Commentary, discussed in § 95.451[5]].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Sufficiency of Account Information; Items or Copies

Until January 1, 2015, a statement of account provides sufficient information to allow the customer to identify an item paid if the item is described by (1) item number, (2) amount, and (3) date of payment [Com. Code § 4406(a),(h)]. The current requirement for item number, amount, and date of payment is based on the existing state of technology, and was chosen because it can be obtained by the bank's computer from the check's microencoding ("MICR line") without examination of the items themselves. The name of the payee and the date of the item cannot currently be obtained from the MICR. However, the U.C.C. Permanent Editorial Board expects that technological advances will make it possible for banks to give customers more information in the future in a manner that is fully compatible with automation or truncation systems, and will make recommendations for revising the "sufficiency of information" standard in light of those advances [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-406 (1990)].

If the bank does not return the items, it must provide in the statement of account the telephone number that the customer may call to request an item, a substitute check, or a legible copy [Com. Code § 4406(a)]. If the items are not returned to the customer, the person retaining the items must either retain the items or, if the items are destroyed, maintain the capacity to furnish legible copies of the items until the expiration of seven years after receipt of the items. A customer may request an item from the bank that paid the item, and that bank must provide in a reasonable time either the item or, if the item has been destroyed or is not otherwise obtainable, a legible copy of the item. If the paid item requested by a customer was presented as a substitute check [see Com. Code § 4406(g) (definition)], the bank must provide, in a reasonable time, either thesubstitute check or, if the substitute check has been destroyed or is not otherwise obtainable, a legible copy of the substitute check. A bank must provide, on request and without charge to the customer, at least two items, substitute checks, or legible copies with respect to each statement of account sent to the customer [Com. Code § 4406(b)].

[5] Customer's Failure to Notify Precludes Assertion Against Bank

If the bank proves that the customer failed, with respect to an item, to comply with the duties imposed on the customer by Com. Code § 4406(c), the customer is precluded from asserting against the bank both of the following [Com. Code §

4406(d); see, e.g., Espresso Roma Corporation v. Bank of America, N.A. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 525, 529-530, 535, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549 (plaintiff failed to report first of many items forged by employee with within 30 days, despite bank's monthly account statements which included canceled checks)]:

- The customer's unauthorized signature or any alteration on the item if the bank also proves that it suffered a loss by reason of the failure; and

- The customers' unauthorized signature or alteration by the same wrongdoer on any other item paid in good faith by the bank if the payment was made before the bank received notice from the customer of the unauthorized signature or alteration and after the customer had been afforded a reasonable period of time, not exceeding 30 days, in which to examine the item or statement of account and notify the bank.

If the customer proves that the bank did not pay the item in good faith, the foregoing preclusion under Com. Code § 4406(d) does not apply [Com. Code § 4406(e)].

[6] Fourteen-Day Period No Longer Reasonable

Former Com. Code § 4406(2) provided for a 14-day examination and notification period with respect to unauthorized signatures or alterations made by the same wrongdoer. Although the 14-day period was considered sufficient when the original Division 4 was drafted in the 1950s, given the much greater volume of checks at the time of the revision, the longer period was viewed as more appropriate [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 4-406 (1990)].

The purpose of the 30-day limit in Com. Code § 4406(d)(2) is to place the burden on the customer to avoid the most serious consequences of its failure to comply with Com. Code § 4406(c), namely the opportunity presented to the wrongdoer to repeat the misdeeds, and to avoid disputes regarding what would be a reasonable period for the customer to comply. If there are no losses resulting from payment of additional items, a reasonable period for customer compliance with the duties imposed by Com. Code§ 4406(c) depends on the circumstances [see Com. Code § 1205(a)], and the 30-day time limit of Com. Code § 4406(d)(2) should not be imported by analogy into Com. Code § 4406(c) [Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 4-406 (1990)].

[7] Comparative Negligence; Preclusion Inapplicable

If Com. Code § 4406(d) (discussed under § 95.451[5]) applies, and the customer proves that the bank failed to exercise ordinary care in paying the item and that the bank's failure contributed to loss, the loss is allocated between the customer precluded and the bank asserting the preclusion according to the extent to which the failure of the customer to examine the statement and items and report irregularities to the bank and the failure of the bank to exercise ordinary care contributed to the loss [Com. Code § 4406(e); see, e.g., Espresso Roma Corporation v. Bank of America, N.A. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 525, 530-532, 535, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 549 (declaration of bank's expert that bank's practices and procedures were consistent with those of all other large "bulk file bookkeeping" banks in California was sufficient to establish prima facie case that bank exercised ordinary care); see also § 95.311[5]].

Com. Code § 4406(e) replaces former Com. Code § 4406(3) and implements a modified comparative negligence test for determining liability [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-406 (1990)]. For example, in a case decided under former Com. Code § 4406(3), the customer reported checks missing four years before the bank paid them, and reported the unauthorized drawer's signatures two years after the statement and forged checks were furnished. The court found that the bank's negligence in paying the checks, not the customer's failure to report the unauthorized signatures after receiving the statement, was the sole actual cause of loss, and held the bank liable for the entire loss [Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 515, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551 (decision regarding action for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing abrogated by Copesky v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 678, 694, 280 Cal. Rptr. 338)].

The second sentence of the definition of ordinary care [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (discussed in § 95.311[5])] is intended to resolve the split of authority and to provide that a payor bank is not required to examine each check by sight if its procedure is reasonable and is commonly followed by other regional banks in the area. The effect of that sentence is to provide that in the small percentage of cases in which a customer's failure to examine its statement or returned items has led to the loss under Com. Code § 4406(d), a bank should not have to share that loss solely because it has adopted an automated collection or payment procedure in order to deal with the great volume of items at a lower cost to all customers [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-406 (1990)].

Ordinarily, question whether bank is free from negligence in paying forged or altered check, and whether depositor is negligent or estopped to deny correctness of payments, are determinations for jury. Corporation defrauded by former employee who forged checks on plaintiff's account was precluded from asserting claims against bank for unauthorized payment of checks, when plaintiff failed to report first of forged items with 30 days and bank issued monthly account statements which included canceled checks; plaintiff failed to create triable issue of fact regarding bank's exercise of ordinary care in paying items. *Espresso Roma Corporation v. § 95.452 Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Failure to Inform Bank Within One Year of Irregularities Shown on Statements or Items [Com. Code § 4406(f)]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Failure to Inform Bank Within One Year of Irregularities Shown on Statements or Items [Com. Code § 4406(f)]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that this action is precluded by the provisions of Commercial Code Section 4406(f) in that all the _____ [unauthorized signatures and/or forged endorsements and/or alterations] complained of relate to checks returned by defendant to plaintiff with [regular monthly] statements of account rendered by defendant to plaintiff between _____ [date], and _____ [date], all more than one year before the commencement of this action. During that time, plaintiff failed and neglected to examine his/her/its statements [and returned items] and inform defendant of the irregularities alleged in the complaint.

This affirmative defense is for use by a drawee bank sued for charging a checking account to pay items that were not properly payable [Com. Code § 4401(a); see § 95.450], to assert the preclusion of Com. Code § 4406(f) as an affirmative defense based on the drawer's failure, for more than a year after the statement was rendered, to notify the bank of irregularities constituting the improper charges alleged in the complaint [see also § 95.451].

[3] Absolute Preclusion for Failure to Notify Within One Year

Without regard to care or lack of care of either the customer or the bank, a customer who does not within one year after the statement or items are made available to the customer under Com. Code § 4406(a) [see § 95.451[5]] discover and report the customer's unauthorized signature on or any alteration on the item is precluded from asserting against the bank the unauthorized signature or alteration [Com. Code § 4406(f)].

If this preclusion applies, the payor bank may not recover for breach of warranty under Com. Code § 4208 with respect to the unauthorized signature or alteration to which the preclusion applies [Com. Code § 4406(f)].

The court of appeal in Commercial Cotton Co. v. United California Bank (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 511, 515-518, 209 Cal. Rptr. 551 , upheld an award of $100,000 in punitive damages against a bank for assertion of the one-year preclusion of former Com. Code § 4406(4) (now see Com. Code § 4406(f)), believing that the one-year period could only have been asserted in bad faith because the preclusion was applicable only to a drawer's action for breach of warranty regarding the drawer's own signature as drawer, a cause of action created by Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 692, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 . Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-417 (1990) specifically rejects the existence of such a cause of action.

[4] Decisions

Payroll account owner was precluded from pursuing any recovery against bank after failing to discover and report unauthorized signatures within prescribed one-year period; amendment to Com. Code § 3403 providing that signature of organization is unauthorized if multiple signatures are required and one of required signatures is lacking was clarification of existing law and therefore operated retroactively. Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1124-1125, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478

Three-year statute of limitations set forth in Com. Code § 4111 applied retroactively to unauthorized checks drawn on company's payroll checking account during two-year period in question and barred recovery for those checks. Edward Fineman Company v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1110, 1125-1126, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478

Former Com. Code § 4406(4) (now Com. Code § 4406(f)) precluded depositors from asserting forged checks against bank, and preclusion was fatal to claims for negligent payment of forged checks not timely reported to bank; code provisions are controlling and displace common law negligence principles with respect to payment of forged checks by payor bank. Roy Supply, Inc. v. Wells Fargo (1996) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1051, 1067, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 309

For deposit only to account #_____" (which account was opened and maintained by _____ (name of responsible employee or the persons responsible for the issuance of checks to fictitious payees or person acting in concert with either or both) specifically in furtherance of this fraudulent scheme)].

This form is an affirmative defense for use by a drawee bank sued for charging a checking account to pay items that were not properly payable [Com. Code § 4401(a); see § 95.450], to assert that the endorsement of a fictitious payee is good as against the drawee bank because it paid the check in good faith and in the exercise of ordinary care [see Com. Code § 3404(b)(2) (discussed under § 95.463[4] and in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)].

The "any endorsement valid" defense of Com. Code § 3404 may be asserted by a depositary or collecting bank as well, but the foregoing form would need appropriate modifications. In particular, allegations regarding the exercise of ordinary care in taking the check, and if appropriate, requiring identification of the persons negotiating it are likely to be necessary to state a defense under Com. Code § 3404(b)(2) on behalf of a depositary bank. A depositary bank is more likely to rely on Com. Code § 3404(b)(1) (discussed under § 95.463[4]) to validate the wrongdoer-holder's endorsement.

Com. Code § 3404 is intended to place the loss on the drawer, rather than on the depositary bank that took the check for collection or on the drawee. Cases involving impostors, fictitious payees, or payees not intended to have an interest in the check almost always involve fraud, which the drawer is in the best position to avoid. In some cases the person taking the check could detect the fraud and prevent the loss by the exercise of ordinary care [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-404 (1990)]. In those cases, the loss is allocated in accordance with Com. Code § 3404(d). Thus, use of this defense will put the drawee's exercise of ordinary care in issue.

[3] Changes From Previous Fictitious Payee, Impostor Provision

Com. Code § 3404 replaces former Com. Code § 3405(1)(a) (impostors) and 3405(1)(b) (fictitious payees), and changes the law in some respects. Under former law, the endorsement, to be effective, had to be exactly in the name of the named payee. Now, under Com. Code § 3404(c), it is enough that the endorsement be substantially similar, or alternatively the check may be deposited without negotiation as is allowed by Com. Code § 4205(a) [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-404 (1990)].

In the case of impostors, which is not addressed by the foregoing form, Com. Code § 3404 is broader than its counterpart under the former code. Under former Com. Code § 3405(1)(a), if an impostor impersonated Smith and induced the drawer to issue a check to the order of Smith, the impostor could negotiate the check. If the impostor impersonated Smith, president of Smith Corporation, and the check was payable to the order of Smith Corporation, former Com. Code § 3405(1)(a) did not apply. Now Com. Code § 3404 enables the impostor to negotiate the check, and renders his or her endorsement effective, in both situations [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-404 (1990)].

[4] Allegations

Paragraphs 1 and 2 allege the issuance of a check payable to a fictitious payee. Paragraph 2 is intended to illustrate a the rule of Com. Code §§ 3110(b) and 3404(b) that the intent of the person who draws the check or, in the case of an employee who prepares checks for signature by another officer, causes it to be drawn, determines the status of the payee. If (i) a person whose intent determines to whom an instrument is payable [see Com. Code § 3110(a), (b) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)] does not intend the person identified as payee to have any interest in the instrument, or (ii) the person identified as payee of an instrument is a fictitious person, the following rules apply until the instrument is negotiated by special endorsement [Com. Code § 3404(b)]:

(1) Any person in possession of the instrument is its holder.

(2) An endorsement by any person in the name of the payee stated in the instrument is effective as the endorsement of the payee in favor of a person who, in good faith, pays the instrument or takes it for value or for collection.

While an impostor may induce the drawer (or the drawer's responsible employee) to make a check payable to someone the drawer or employee believes is a bona fide creditor of the drawer, essentially making the drawer or its responsible employee the innocent dupe of the impostor, fictitious payee situations almost always involve an unauthorized drawer's signature, too [see Com. Code § 3405(b)]. Thus, Paragraph 3 alleges how, in the exercise of ordinary care, the defendant drawee could have neglected to spot any irregularity in the drawer's signature [see Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (discussed in § 95.311[5]); for UCC Commentary regarding application of the ordinary care standard in situations governed by Com. Code § 3405(b), see also § 95.454].

Paragraph 4 alleges the facts surrounding the endorsement of the check. It could be modified to allege negotiation by deposit without endorsement to an account in a name substantially similar to that of the payee [see Com. Code §§ 3404(c), 4204(a)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

4. [Defendant's exercise of ordinary care in paying the checks. see § 95.453[1], Paragraph 3.]

This affirmative defense is for use by a drawee bank sued for charging a checking account to pay items that were not properly payable [Com. Code § 4401(a); see § 95.450], to assert that the fraudulent endorsement of a responsible employee of plaintiff is good as against it because it paid the check in good faith and in the exercise of ordinary care [see Com. Code § 3405 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)]. The "any endorsement by responsible employee is valid" defense of Com. Code § 3405 may be asserted by a depositary or collecting bank as well, but this form only addresses the drawee's defense.

Com. Code § 3405 applies to two types of forged endorsements: (1) those forged on instruments payable to the employer that purport to be the endorsement of the employer [Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(A)], and (2) those forged on instruments issued by the employer that purport to be the endorsement of the person identified as the payee [Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(B)]. Only the second category is addressed by this form, on the assumption that situations involving the first category are more likely to involve litigation between the employer/payee and the depositary banks at which the thief/employee deposited or negotiated the checks on which he or she forged the employer's endorsement.

[3] Former Law Imposed Loss on Employer Only if Negligent

The first category of forged endorsements (in name of employer as payee) was governed by former Com. Code § 3406, which placed the loss on the employer only if its negligence could be proved. Now, Com. Code § 3406 need not be used with respect to forgeries of the employer's endorsement as payee [for an affirmative defense alleging drawer's negligence, see § 95.455]. Com. Code § 3405 imposes the loss on the employer without proof of its negligence [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)]. However, if the person paying the instrument (drawee bank) or taking it for value or collection (depositary bank) fails to exercise ordinary care in paying or taking the instrument and that failure contributes to the loss resulting from the fraud, the person (drawer or payee) bearing the loss may recover from the person failing to exercise ordinary care to the extent the failure to exercise ordinary care contributed to the loss [Com. Code § 3405(b)].

The second category of forged endorsements (those of payee on instruments issued by employer) was covered by former Com. Code § 3405(1)(c) (agent or employee of drawer supplied name of payee, intending payee to have no interest in instrument) [see § 95.329; see also § 95.453]. The scope of current Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(B) is somewhat broader, in that it covers some cases not covered by former Com. Code § 3405(1)(c) in which the entrusted employee makes a forged endorsement to a check drawn by the employer [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990); see Case 6 in Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990), discussed in § 95.464[7][b]].

[4] Allegations

This affirmative defense alleges:

- The wrongdoer's status as a "responsible employee" of plaintiff within the meaning of Com. Code §

3405(a)(3) (Paragraph 1).

- The ways in which the employee was authorized to, and did, deal with the checks in question (Paragraph 2).

- The employee's fraudulent endorsement and negotiation of the checks payable to the employer as payee and collection of the proceeds (Paragraph 3) [see Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(B)].

Paragraph 4 is necessary only to rebut any anticipated challenge to the defendant's (payor bank) good faith or exercise of ordinary care.

As with other amendments to Divisions 3 and 4, Com. Code § 3405 adopts the principle that the risk of loss for fraudulent endorsement by employees who are entrusted with responsibility with respect to checks should fall on the employer rather than on the financial institution that takes the check for collection or pays it. Com. Code § 3405 is based on the belief that the employer is in a better position to avoid the loss by care in choosing the employees, in supervising them, and in adopting other measures to prevent forged endorsements on instruments payable to the employer or fraud in the issuance of instruments in the name of the employer. An employer can insure against this risk by employee fidelity bonds [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[5] Bank's Negligence

If the bank fails to exercise ordinary care, Com. Code § 3405(b) allows the employer to shift the loss to the bank to the extent the bank's failure contributed to the loss [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990); see Com. Code § 4406(e) (discussed see § 95.451); see, e.g., Newman v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 73, 83-85, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 310 (complaint alleging that bank allowed plaintiff's employees to cash or deposit checks in their personal accounts despite suspicious circumstances indicating fraud stated cause of action under § 3405(b))]. The 1990 version of the Uniform Commercial Code contains several changes to the concept of "ordinary care" or reasonable commercial standards to reflect current technologies. Ordinary care equates to adherence to commercially reasonable standards as practiced in the region in which the bank operates. In the case of a bank that takes a check for processing for collection or payment by automated means, reasonable commercial standards do not require the bank to examine the check if the failure to examine does not violate the bank's prescribed procedures and the bank's procedures do not vary unreasonably from general banking usage not disapproved by Division 3 or Division 4 [Com. Code § 3103(a)(7) (made applicable by Com. Code § 4104(c))].

Com. Code § 3405(b) applies regardless of whether the employer was negligent [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)].

[a] Responsible Employee Forges Endorsement on Check Payable to Supplier

Treasurer is authorized to draw checks on corporation's account. Treasurer draws a check to Supplier Co., a company that sold goods to Corporation. The check was issued to pay the price of those goods. At the time the check was signed, Treasurer had no intention of stealing it. Later, Treasurer stole the check, endorsed it "Supplier Co." and obtained payment by depositing it to an account at Depositary Bank, which Treasurer opened in the name of "Supplier Co." The endorsement is effective under Com. Code § 3405(b) as against one who gave value and paid or collected the check in good faith. Com. Code § 3404(b) (impostor) does not apply to this case [Case 6 of Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)]. Com. Code § 3404(b) is discussed in § 95.453 and Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[b] Com. Code § 3405 Not Applicable if Responsible Employee Endorses Check in Blank Before Stealing It

Employee's duties include stamping Employer's unrestricted blank endorsement on checks received by Employer and depositing them in Employer's bank account. After stamping Employer's unrestricted blank endorsement on a check [making it payable to bearer and thus negotiable by transfer of possession alone; see Com. Code § 3205(b) and discussion in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments], Employee steals the check and deposits it to Employee's personal bank account. Com. Code § 3405 does not apply because there is no forged endorsement. Employee is authorized by Employer to endorse Employer's checks. Employee's fraud is the theft of the endorsed check, which is by then, a bearer instrument [see Com. Code § 3205(b) (blank endorsement converts instrument to bearer instrument, which may be negotiated without endorsement)]. Whether Employer has a cause of action against the bank in which the check was deposited is determined by whether the bank had notice of the breach of fiduciary duty by the Employee. That issue is determined under Com. Code § 3307 (which is discussed in § 95.463 and in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments) [Case 4 of Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)].

[c] Responsible Employee Draws Check Payable to Self

X is Treasurer of Corporation and is authorized to draw checks on Corporation's account by signing X's name as Treasurer. X draws a check in the name of the Corporation and signs X's name to it as Treasurer. The check is payable to X. X then endorses the check and obtains payment. Assume that Corporation did not owe any money to X and did not authorize X to write the check. Although the writing of the check is not authorized, Corporation is bound as drawer by the act of its Treasurer because X had authority to sign checks on behalf of the corporation. This result follows from agency law and Com. Code § 3402(a) (when signature of representative is binding on represented person). Com. Code § 3405 does not apply in this case because there is no forged endorsement. X was the payee of the check, so X's endorsement was valid under Com. Code § 3110(a) (intent of signer, whether or not authorized, determines to whom check is payable; discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments) [Case 2 of Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-405 (1990)].

[7] State Statutes

In case of instrument payable to employer, payee is bound by endorsement forged by responsible employee in name of employer as payee. Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(A)

In case of instrument issued by drawer who is employer, drawer is bound by endorsement forged by responsible employee in name of person identified as payee. Com. Code § 3405(a)(2)(B)

§ 95.455 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Lack of Care in Issuing Incomplete Instrument Contributed to Alteration or Loss [Com. Code §§ 3115, 3406, 3407]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)] to Action to Recover Money or Damages for Improper Charge to Plaintiff's Checking Account [Com. Code § 4401(a)]--Plaintiff's Lack of Care in Issuing Incomplete Instrument Contributed to Alteration or Loss [Com. Code §§ 3115, 3406, 3407]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant _____ [name] alleges that plaintiff is precluded from requiring defendant to _____ [recredit his/her/its account with or reimburse her/him/it for the amount of the check(s) mentioned in the complaint, specifically, or absorb the loss for the _____ (specify, e.g., alteration of check number _____) in] the sum of $_____, alleged to have been improperly charged to pay check number _____, drawn on plaintiff's account at defendant's branch. Plaintiff's own failure to exercise ordinary care with respect to _____ [specify, e.g., the custody, control, handling, and storage of his/her/its checkbook and maker's signature stamp and the payment of household expenses] was the actual cause of the _____ [alteration of and/or unauthorized completion of and/or making of the unauthorized signature on] that check by _____ [specify, e.g., raising the amount on the check from $150 to $1,500. It was Plaintiff's custom to sign 12 or 15 blank checks on the first of each month and leave them for household staff to fill in as payments for monthly bills that were presented for payment by grocers, gardeners, dry cleaners, poolpersons, and the like].

This affirmative defense is for use by a drawee bank sued for charging a checking account to pay items that were not properly payable [Com. Code § 4401(a); see § 95.450], to assert that the drawer is precluded from requiring the drawee bank to absorb the loss because the drawer's own negligence contributed to the fraudulent alteration, unauthorized completion, or forged drawer's signature on the checks [see Com. Code § 3406(a) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)]. The defense only applies if the drawee bank paid the checks in good faith and in the exercise of ordinary care [see Com. Code § 3406(a), (b)]. If the drawee is also negligent, and its failure to exercise ordinary care contributes to any loss, the loss is allocated between the bank and the drawer [Com. Code § 3406(b)].

The same facts may also be sufficient to invoke Com. Code § 3407(c), which provides that a payor bank or drawee paying a fraudulently altered instrument or a person taking it for value, in good faith and without notice of the alteration, may enforce rights with respect to the instrument (1) according to its original terms, or (2) in the case of an incomplete instrument altered by unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed.

If the wrongdoer is an employee of the drawer, or someone acting in concert with an employee of the drawer, the bank probably will rely on Com. Code §§ 3404 and 3405, which are discussed in §§ 95.453 and 95.454, respectively.

Counsel should also be aware of other provisions of Division 3, such as Com. Code § 3402 (when signature binds represented person, discussed in § 95.330[3]) and Com. Code § 3403 (unauthorized maker's signature as invalid except as against one who in good faith pays instrument or takes it for value). Other defenses from Division 3, such as lack of delivery or failure to complete the check, may be relevant [see Com. Code §§ 3105, 3115]. For further discussion and related forms, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[3] Illustrations

The U.C.C. Comments illustrate three cases of conduct that may preclude liability because of plaintiff's lack of care [Official Comment 3 to U.C.C. § 3-406 (1990)]:

(1) The drawer keeps a rubber signature stamp and the check forms together in an unlocked drawer. A thief steals blank checks and uses the stamp to make an unauthorized drawer's facsimile signature. Whether this method of storing the stamp and checks amounts to failure to exercise ordinary care and, if so, whether that failure contributed to the forgery are questions of fact.

(2) An insurance company with two insureds named "Sally Smith," one in Ohio and one in Illinois, mails a check in payment of a claim to the wrong one. Endorsement by the wrong one is a forged endorsement [Com. Code § 3110(a) (person to whom check is payable as determined by intent of maker)]. Whether the insurance company's mistake in using a possibly ambiguous payee designation or in mailing the check to the wrong payee amounted to failure to exercise ordinary care and, if so, whether that failure contributed to the forged endorsement are questions of fact.

(3) A company writes a check for $10. The figure "10" and the word "ten" are typewritten in the appropriate spaces on the check form. A large blank space is left after the figure and the word. The payee of the check, using a typewriter with a typeface similar to that used to write the check, adds the word "thousand" after the word "ten" and adds a comma and three zeros after the figure "10." The drawee bank in good faith pays $10,000 when the check is presented. The trier of fact could find that the drawer failed to exercise ordinary care in writing the check and that that failure substantially contributed to the alteration.

[a] Alteration

One whose failure to exercise ordinary care contributes to alteration or to making of forged signature as precluded from asserting alteration or forgery against person who, in good faith, pays instrument or takes it for value or for collection. Com. Code § 3406(a)

If bank fails to exercise ordinary care in paying or taking instrument and that failure contributes to loss, loss as allocated between parties according to extent to which failure of each to exercise ordinary care contributed to loss. Com.

Code § 3406(b)

Bank has burden of proving drawer failed to exercise ordinary care; burden of proving bank's failure to exercise ordinary care as on drawer. Com. Code § 3406(c)

"Alteration" as including unauthorized addition of words or numbers or other change in obligation of party to incomplete instrument. Com. Code § 3407(a)(2)

Fraudulently made alteration as discharging party whose obligation is affected by alteration, unless that party assents or is precluded from asserting alteration. Com. Code § 3407(b)

Payor bank or drawee paying fraudulently altered instrument or person taking it for value, in good faith and without notice of alteration, as entitled to enforce instrument (1) according to its original terms, or (2) in case of incomplete instrument altered by unauthorized completion, according to its terms as completed. Com. Code § 3407(c)

[b] Unauthorized Completion

"Incomplete instrument" defined. Com. Code § 3115(a)

Enforcement of incomplete instruments. Com. Code § 3115(b)

Addition of words or numbers to incomplete instrument without authority of signer as alteration under Com. Code § 3407. Com. Code § 3115(c)

Burden of establishing that words or numbers were added to incomplete instrument without authority of signer as on person asserting lack of authority. Com. Code § 3115(d)

[5] Decisions

Increasing amount of check as material alteration within meaning of former Com. Code § 4207(1)(c) (now see Com. Code §§ 4207(a)(3), 4208(a)(2)), which warranty is subject to exception in favor of holder in due course. *Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 688, 148 Cal. With respect to warranties against alteration, collecting bank as not holder in due course if transaction or negotiation in which it took check was so irregular as to call into question its validity, ownership, or terms or to create ambiguity as to party to pay; irregularities need not be limited to those appearing on face of check to impart notice. Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. UnitedCalifornia Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 688-690, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920

Recovery for breach of warranty of material alteration as limited to difference between raised amount and amount for which check was originally drawn. Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 690-691, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920

Depositor as negligent for not taking steps that careful and prudent businessman would take after acquiring knowledge that funds seemed to be disappearing through probable issuance of forged checks. Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316, 328-329, 139 P.2d 1

Bank as permitted to justify payment of checks with forged drawer's signature on principles of estoppel, or on basis of negligence or misleading conduct of depositor if depositor's conduct proximately caused bank to pay; however, bank as required to show due diligence before it may assert these defenses. Basch v. Bank of America (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 316,

Imposter doctrine applicable only when issuance of check has been accomplished through impersonation of payee; misrepresentation of perpetrator's agency status insufficient to constitute impersonation and, thus, to invoke imposter doctrine. Title Ins. Co. v. Commercial Bank of California (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 800, 806-807, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 735

Estoppel arose in favor of drawee bank when depositor signs checks in blank and delivers them to depositor's agent who thereafter fraudulently fills in blanks. Wright v. Bank of America (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 176, 179-180, 1 Cal. Rptr. 202

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a drawer of checks against the drawee bank for damages resulting from the bank's wrongful dishonor of the checks [see Com. Code § 4402 (discussed in § 95.323)]. The foregoing form contains allegations appropriate for loss of business credit, credit accommodations, and reputation, with optional allegations for use when there is an overdraft agreement in effect between plaintiff and defendant [see Com. Code §§ 4401(a), 4402(a)].

For allegations regarding damages for emotional distress caused by the drawer's arrest or by plaintiff's loss of a single opportunity, see §§ 95.457 and 95.458, respectively. In addition to those allegations, counsel may wish to add other causes of action, including some sounding in tort, such as intentional infliction of emotional distress or negligence in order to obtain punitive damages [see Teitel v. First Los Angeles Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1593, 1599-1600, 1604-1605, 1607, 282 Cal. Rptr. 916 (discussed in the Introduction § 95.323[2])].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- What constitutes a proper drawer's signature and the existence and amount of any overdraft credit (Paragraph 5) [Com. Code §§ 4401(a) (properly payable), 4402(a) (overdraft agreement)].

- Plaintiff's status, financial and business reputation, and credit availability before the wrongful dishonor (Paragraph 6).

- Plaintiff's relationship with the payee of the dishonored check(s) prior to the wrongful dishonor and, if relevant, the purpose of the check(s) (Paragraph 7).

- That the balance in plaintiff's account, or the unused portion of any overdraft line of credit, was, and continues to be, sufficient to pay the check(s) (Paragraph 8) [Com. Code § 4402(a); see Com. Code § 4402(c) (discussed under § 95.456[5])].

- Negotiation or deposit, presentment, and dishonor of the check(s) (Paragraph 9).

- The consequential damages caused by the wrongful dishonor (Paragraphs 10-13) [see Com. Code § 4402(b)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Standing to Maintain Action for Wrongful Dishonor

[a] Principal of Corporate Depositor

At one time, there was a split of authority on the issue of whether anyone other than the customer could recover damages for wrongful dishonor [see Com. Code § 4104(a)(5)]. The situation usually arises when the customer is a business entity and the individual principals seek to recover damages for wrongful dishonor [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)]. California courts have held that such noncustomers may recover damages for wrongful dishonor when there is substantial unity of interest and the bank looks to the individuals to repay overdrafts or loans to troubled or shell corporations [see, e.g., Karsh v. American City Bank (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 419, 421-422, 169 Cal. Rptr. 851 ; Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 956, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848] . According to the Commentary to the Uniform Commercial Code, when the wrongful dishonor impugns the reputation of principals of the business customer, the issue is not, as Kendall characterized it, one of literal versus liberal interpretation of Com. Code § 4402, but whether the statutory cause of action under Com. Code § 4402 displaces, in accordance with Com. Code § 1103(b), any cause of action that existed at common law in a person who is not the customer. While Com. Code § 4402 should not be interpreted to displace any common law cause of action, the section gives causes of action only to the "customer," however that definition is construed [Official Comment 5 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)].

[b] Payee Has No Action Against Drawee Bank

The payee of a dishonored check has no cause of action against the drawee bank for wrongful dishonor [Hansen v. Bank of America (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303, 225 P.2d 665 ; see Com. Code § 4402(b)]. After wrongful dishonor, the payee can re-present the check or sue the drawer on the underlying obligation or on the check [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(1), (3), (4)]. For forms for use by the payee to pursue its action against the drawer of a dishonored check, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments .

[5] Time for Determining Sufficiency of Funds in Drawee's Account

A payor bank's determination of the customer's account balance for purposes of deciding whether to dishonor an item for insufficiency of available funds may be made at any time between the time the item is received by the payor bank and the time that the payor bank returns the item or gives notice in lieu of return, and no more than one determination need be made [Com. Code § 4402(c)]. Banks commonly determine whether there are sufficient funds in an account to honor an item after the close of banking hours on the day of presentment when they post debit and credit items to the account. The determination is made on the basis ofcredits available for withdrawal as of right or made available for withdrawal by the bank as a matter of accommodation to its customer. If the account balance at that time is such that paying the item will create an overdraft, the bank has until midnight of the following day to return the item. Before that midnight deadline, new credits that are withdrawable as of right may be added to the account [see Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)]. For the purpose of processing items and proving balances, a bank may fix an afternoon "cutoff hour" of 2 P.M. or later [Com. Code § 4108(a)]. An item or deposit received after the bank's "cutoff hour" or after the close of its banking day may be treated as having been received at the opening of the next banking day [Com. Code § 4108(b); but cf. Com. Code § 4303(a)(5) (cutoff hour for stop-payment orders)].

If the payor elects to make a subsequent balance determination for the purpose of reevaluating its decision to dishonor the item, the account balance at the time of the subsequent determination must be used to determine whether dishonor for insufficiency of available funds is wrongful [Com. Code § 4402(c)]. Com. Code § 4402(c) was added to eliminate uncertainty regarding whether the payor's failure to make a second determination before returning the item on the day following presentment is wrongful if new credits that would cover the amount of the check are added to the account on that day [Official Comment 4 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)].

[7] Decisions

[a] Accrual of Action

Cause of action accrues when bank fails to discharge its agreement by dishonoring duly presented check. Allen v. Bank of America (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 124, 127, 136 P.2d 345

[b] Damages

"Actual damage" as used in former Civ. Code § 3320 (now see Com. Code § 4402) is not confined to amount of check if detriment occasioned by loss of property proximately resulting from wrongful dishonor of check actually exceeds amount of check. Abramowitz v. Bank of America (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 892, 897, 281 P.2d 380

Former Civ. Code § 3320 (now see Com. Code § 4402), providing that no liability attaches to bank in favor of depositor because of nonpayment of check that should have been paid unless depositor proves actual damage by reason of that nonpayment, places both traders and nontraders on equal basis so far as liability on part of bank and its depositors is concerned. Allen v. Bank of America (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 124, 130-131, 136 P.2d 345 ; accord, Official Comment 1 to UCC § 4-402 (1990)

[c] Pleading and Procedure

Having undertaken no action that could prejudice defendant, plaintiff stating cause of action in both contract and tort for bank's wrongful dishonor of check did not need to elect remedy, but was permitted to go to trier of fact on both theories. Weaver v. Bank of America (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 428, 432, 30 Cal. Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644

Sufficiency of complaint for damages based on dishonor of check is not impaired by allegations regarding items of damage that are not recoverable as long as allegations regarding recoverable items of damage are pleaded. Allen v. Bank of America (1943) 58 Cal. App. 2d 124, 131, 136 P.2d 345

§ 95.457 Allegations for Use in Drawer's Action for Wrongful Dishonor of Checks [Com. Code § 4402]--Drawer's Arrest and Emotional Distress

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Drawer's Action for Wrongful Dishonor of Checks [Com. Code § 4402]--Drawer's Arrest and Emotional Distress

1. _____ [Name of payee of dishonored check], on receipt of the returned check marked _____ [describe, e.g., insufficient funds], and in reliance on and as a proximate result of dishonor of that check and the reason given for it, caused criminal charges to be brought against plaintiff, which resulted in issuance of warrant for plaintiff's arrest. On _____ [date], plaintiff was arrested, charged with _____ [specify, e.g., petty theft], and temporarily confined until _____ [date].

2. Defendant bank and its employees knew, or should have known, that the issuance of a check _____ [describe reason for return, e.g., on insufficient funds] is a public offense that frequently results in the arrest and imprisonment of the maker. Notwithstanding this knowledge, defendant bank wrongfully refused to honor this check.

3. As a proximate result of defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of the check, plaintiff suffered humiliation, mental anguish, and emotional [and physical] distress, and has been injured in mind [and body] as follows: _____ [describe, e.g., plaintiff lost sleep, became ill, and his/her health was impaired], all to plaintiff's damage [in the sum of $_____].

4. As a further proximate result of defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of the check, plaintiff was required to and did employ physicians and psychotherapists to care for and treat him/her, and incurred additional expenses for those treatments and the medications prescribed by the physicians in an amount according to proof.

5. By reason of plaintiff's arrest and incarceration, plaintiff was prevented from performing his/her usual _____ [occupation or profession] as a _____ [specify, e.g., carpenter] and thereby lost _____ [wages or income] in an amount according to proof.

These allegations are for use in place of, or in addition to, the allegations in § 95.456[1], Paragraphs 10-13, to allege emotional distress as consequential damages suffered by the drawer because of the drawee's wrongful dishonor of a check and resultant arrest and incarceration of the drawer [see also § 95.323[2]].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[3] State Statutes

Criminal penalties for drawing check on closed account or account with insufficient funds to pay check. Penal Code § 476a

[4] Decisions

Complaint for damages for arrest and detention of plaintiff caused by defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of check stated sufficient proximate cause either under principles of tort or contract. Weaver v. Bank of America (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 428, 430-431, 434-435, 30 Cal. Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644

Arrest under bad check law is an obvious risk against which bank has undertaken to protect depositor; whether plaintiff's complaint be conceived as sounding in tort or contract, plaintiff can allege breach of duty and consequential damages that were sufficiently causally connected to state cause of action when plaintiff arrested because of defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of check. Weaver v. Bank of America (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 428, 430-431, 434-435, 30 Cal. Rptr. 4, 380 P.2d 644

Damages for emotional distress caused by wrongful dishonor are recoverable when drawer's emotional distress goes beyond subjective discomfort and verifiable events following wrongful dishonor would cause reasonable person mental suffering. Kendall Yacht Corp. v. United California Bank (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 949, 957-958, 123 Cal. Rptr. 848

[1] FORM Allegation for Use in Action for Wrongful Dishonor of Checks [Com. Code § 4402]--Loss of Benefit of Transaction for Which Check Was Issued

1. On _____ [date], plaintiff(s) drew his/her/its/their check number _____ on defendant bank for the sum of $_____, payable to the order of _____ [name of creditor], and delivered that check to _____ [name of creditor] to _____ [describe purpose of check, e.g., redeem their personal residence from foreclosure].

2. As a proximate result of defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of the check, _____ [describe loss of benefit of transaction for which check was issued, e.g., plaintiffs' home was sold to a third party at foreclosure on _____ (date) and plaintiffs were forced to vacate their residence and to reside with relatives for three months].

3. At the time of the _____ [specify lost benefit, e.g., foreclosure, plaintiffs' equity in their home] amounted to approximately $_____, all of which was lost to him/her/it/them. Additional _____ [specify other appreciation or income likely to have resulted from transaction, e.g., appreciation of that real property would likely have continued] had defendant honored the check. That _____ [appreciation or income] from the time of the wrongful dishonor until the time of trial would likely have amounted to _____ [$_____ or an amount in exceed of $_____, which plaintiffs cannot now determine].

4. As a further proximate result of defendant bank's wrongful dishonor of the check, plaintiffs were required to and did expend the following additional expenses _____ [specify, e.g., $_____ for moving expenses].

[2] Use of Form

Paragraph 1 of this form is for use in place of Paragraph 5 of § 95.456[1]. The remaining paragraphs of the foregoing form of allegation are for use in addition to, or in place of, Paragraphs 10-13 of § 95.456[1] to allege the financial losses sustained as a consequence of the drawee's wrongful dishonor of a check [see also § 95.323[2]].

It may also be appropriate to incorporate allegations regarding emotional distress from § 95.457[1].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [*Cal. [3. Agency allegation, if appropriate. See § 95.430[1], Paragraph 3.]

4. [Opening, maintenance, and existence of checking account, incorporating governing instruments. see § 95.430[1],

Paragraph 4.]

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff drew his/her/its check number _____ [number], which was properly payable from his/her/its account with defendant [and contained the signature(s) of _____ (name(s)) as drawer(s)]. The check is dated _____ [date], and is payable to the order of _____ [name of payee] in the amount of $_____. A copy of the check, front and back, is attached as Exhibit "B" and incorporated by reference. Plaintiff delivered that check to _____ [name of payee] on or about _____ [date]. [Rebut anticipated defense if desired, e.g., Although the check was issued in payment for the purchase of securities, plaintiff later learned that the securities were not qualified in that no permit for issuance had been issued by the California Corporations Commissioner and no notice of issuance pursuant to any exception to or exemption from permit requirements had been filed.]

6. On _____ [date], [add specificity if desired to overcome any anticipated defense based on "cutoff hour," e.g., at approximately 3 o'clock p.m.,] plaintiff gave oral instructions to defendant['s _____ (specify name and title of person taking oral order, if known, e.g., Operations Officer, Alfred Officer)] at its _____ [type and address of facility, e.g., main operations center at 350 Mission Street, St Elsewhere, California], not to pay the check.

7. Thereafter and on _____ [date], plaintiff [caused to be] delivered to defendant written instructions not to pay the check. (A copy of the acknowledgment of receipt is attached as Exhibit "D" and incorporated by reference.)]

9. Thereafter and on or about _____ [date], this check was presented to defendant for payment and defendant wrongfully and in violation of, and contrary to, the stop-payment notice given it by plaintiff paid this check from plaintiff's account. That account was sufficient to cover this check[, but its payment resulted in wrongful dishonor of other checks properly payable from plaintiff's account as alleged below].

10. Prior to the commencement of this action, plaintiff demanded that defendant replace and recredit plaintiff's account with the sum of $_____, and defendant has failed and refused and still fails and refuses to do so.

11. As a result of the foregoing there is due and owing to plaintiff from defendant the sum of $_____ with interest thereon from _____ [date].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in a drawer's action against a drawee bank, and its agents, if desired, for the recovery of the amount of a check cashed contrary to a valid stop-payment order [see Com. Code § 4403 (discussed in the Introduction under § 95.322)]. If more than one person's signature is required to draw on the account, any of the authorized signers may stop payment or close the account [Com. Code § 4403(a)].

Stopping payment or closing an account is a service that customers expect and are entitled to receive from banks notwithstanding its difficulty, inconvenience, and expense. The inevitable occasional losses through failure to stop payment or close an account should be borne by payor banks as a cost of doing business [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-403 (1990)]. Thus, the drawee bank is liable for failing to stop payment in accordance with a valid and effective stop payment order even if the failure was not due to the bank's negligence or lack of ordinary care [see Com. Code § 4103(a) (discussed in § 95.314)].

The loss from payment of an item contrary to a stop-payment order may include damages for dishonor of subsequent items under Com. Code § 4402 [Com. Code § 4403(c); see §§ 95.456 -95.458]. If the payment contrary to the stop payment order resulted in wrongful dishonor of other checks, appropriate allegations from Paragraphs 5-13 of § 95.456[1] may be incorporated or added as a separate cause of action.

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The issuance of a check that was properly payable from plaintiff's account (Paragraph 5) [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-401 (1990) (discussed in § 95.459[5]].

- Any oral stop-payment notice given by plaintiff (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code § 4403(b) (oral notice not confirmed in writing as effective for 14 calendar days)].

- The written stop-payment notice given by plaintiff (Paragraphs 7, 8) [see Com. Code § 4403(b) (written stop-payment notice effective for six months)].

- Any acknowledgment by the bank of receipt of the stop-payment notice or any evidence of delivery of the written notice (Paragraph 8).

- Defendant's payment of the check despite the valid and effective stop payment order (Paragraph 9).

- Plaintiff's demand for recredit or payment of the amount of the check and defendant's refusal and failure to do so (Paragraph 10).

- The amount still owing (Paragraph 11) [Hiroshima v. Bank of Italy (1926) 78 Cal. App. 362, 367-368, 248 P. 947] .

If the check was paid more than six months after the written stop-payment notice was given, counsel should modify Paragraphs 7 and 8 to alleging the giving of a renewal notice by the drawer [see Com. Code § 4403(b) (discussed in §

If there is some question regarding damages and the drawee's right of subrogation [see Com. Code § 4407 (discussed in § 95.322[4]); see also § 95.460], counsel may wish to include the optional allegation in Paragraph 5 stating why plaintiff owed no obligation to the payee, or otherwise explaining why the bank will not be entitled to subrogation.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[4] Limitation Period

An action to enforce an obligation, duty, or right arising under Division 4 of the Commercial Code must be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues [Com. Code § 4111; cf. Union Tool Co. v. Farmers etc. Nat. Bk. (1923) 192 Cal. 40, 52, 218 P. 424 (decided prior to enactment of Com. Code § 4111; no statute of limitations applicable to action to recover deposit)].

[5] When Stop-Payment Order Should Not Be Required or Accepted

A cashier's check or teller's check purchased by a customer whose account is charged to pay for the check is not a check drawn on the customer's account within the meaning of Com. Code § 4403(a). Hence, a customer purchasing a cashier's check or teller's check has no right to stop payment of that check. If the bank issuing the teller's check or cashier's check does stop payment on it as an accommodation to its customer, or for other reasons, its liability on the check is governed by Com. Code § 3411, which is discussed in the Comment to see § 95.465 [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 4-403 (1990)]. Similarly, a drawer has no right to stop payment after certification of a check, and a bank that refuses to pay a certified check will be liable in accordance with Com. Code § 3411 [Official Comment 4 to U.C.C. § 4-403 (1990)].

A bank has no right to require its customer to execute a stop-payment order of an item that is not properly payable from the customer's account. For instance, if a customer notifies a bank that an unendorsed or specially endorsed check has been lost or stolen, it is not proper for the bank to require a stop-payment order because the check when presented will likely bear a forged endorsement and not be properly payable from the customer's account [Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 4-401 (1990)].

[6] State Statutes

Check or draft is not assignment of funds in hands of drawee and drawee as not liable on check until it accepts it. Com. Code § 3408

Stop payment orders. Com. Code §§ 4303, 4403

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. At all times herein mentioned defendants were and are residents of _____ (city), _____ County, California (or other allegation establishing venue).]

4. Prior to _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of drawer] executed and issued his/her/its check number _____, dated _____, and payable to the order of _____ [name of payee] in the amount of $_____. The check was drawn on and properly payable from defendant's account number _____ at plaintiff's branch located at _____ [street address and city of branch]. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of drawer] delivered that check to defendant _____ [name of payee].

5. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of drawer] executed and delivered to plaintiff a _____ [written or oral] order notifying plaintiff not to pay the check, described in the stop-payment order as _____ [give particulars as described in order, e.g., Check No. _____, in the amount of $_____].

6. On _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of payee or endorser or person who negotiated the check] caused the check to be presented to plaintiff for payment [if endorsement or lack thereof is relevant, add: with the endorsement of defendant _____, (name of payee)], and plaintiff paid the amount of the check to defendant _____ [name of person paid].

7. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of drawer] demanded of plaintiff the return of the sum of $_____ [, and plaintiff thereon made demand on defendant _____ (name of payee and/or endorser) for the return of the sum and also made demand on defendant _____ (name of drawer) for the sum of $_____. Neither defendant has returned any portion of the sum of $_____ to plaintiff]. Plaintiff has not returned the sum or any part thereof to defendant _____ [name of drawer].

8. An actual controversy exists between plaintiff and defendants concerning their respective rights under the check and under the circumstances set out herein, and a judicial declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time under the circumstances in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her/its rights and duties.

9. Plaintiff contends that defendant _____ [name of drawer] was indebted to defendant _____ [name of payee or endorser] at the time plaintiff paid the check, or that defendant _____ [name of payee or endorser] was a holder in due course of the check at the time plaintiff made payment, and thus defendant _____ [name of drawer] is not entitled to reimbursement for the amount of the check from plaintiff and any such reimbursement would unjustly enrichment defendant _____ [name of drawer] at the expense of plaintiff.

10. Defendant _____ [name of drawer] contends that he/she/it was not indebted to defendant _____ [name of payee or endorser] at the time the check was paid [in that _____ (specify defense, if known, e.g., defendant _____ (name of payee) had not performed the work and services for which the check was intended as payment], and thus, that plaintiff's payment of the check was wrongful and caused loss and damage to defendant _____ [name of drawer], which entitles that defendant to reimbursement from plaintiff.

1. For a declaration of the rights, duties, and liabilities of plaintiff and defendants with respect to the transaction set out in plaintiff's complaint, and that if it is determined that plaintiff is liable to defendant _____ [name of drawer] with respect to the transaction set out in plaintiff's complaint in the amount of $_____, that it also be determined that defendant _____ [name of payee or endorser] is liable to plaintiff in the same amount;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a drawee bank that paid a check contrary to a stop-payment order to assert and seek a declaration in accordance with its contention that it is entitled to subrogation to prevent unjust enrichment [see Com. Code § 4407 (discussed in § 95.322[4])].

[3] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- The issuance of a check (Paragraph 4).
- Plaintiff's receipt of a stop-payment order with regard to that check (Paragraph 5).
- Plaintiff's payment of the check despite the stop-payment order (Paragraph 6).
- Drawer's demand for reimbursement of the amount of the check and plaintiff drawee's refusal to do so (Paragraph 7).
- The existence of an actual controversy regarding whether the drawer suffered any loss or damage by virtue of the bank's payment over the order and whether the bank is entitled to be subrogated to any payee or holder of the check (Paragraph 8) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1060].
- Plaintiff's contention that it is so entitled (Paragraph 9).
- Defendant drawee's contention that it is not (Paragraph 10).

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a payee to whom the check was delivered, either directly or through delivery to an agent or a copayee, against the depositary bank to recover the amount of a check cashed on a forged or missing endorsement [see Com. Code § 3420(a)(2) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments); see also § 95.327[3]]. Under Com. Code § 3420(a), as amended by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, neither the drawer or a payee or endorsee who never took delivery of a check has a cause of action for conversion [accord, Jones v. Bank of America (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 115, 119-122, 121 P.2d 94 (action by payees' assignee; checks stolen by drawer's manager before delivery to payees)]. For forms and discussion of conversion in general, see Ch. 150, Conversion .

[3] Parties' Remedies for Conversion Based on Forged Endorsement

Under Com. Code § 3420, the loss for paying a check on a forged endorsement falls on the one who gave value to the thief/forger. That is usually the depositary bank [see Official Comment 1 to U.C.C. § 3-420 (1990)]. The measure of liability is the amount payable on the instrument, and may not exceed the amount of the plaintiff's interest in the instrument [Com. Code § 3420(b); see Stenseth v. Wells Fargo (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 457, 465-466, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 (payee not entitled to recover damages under Civ. Code § 3336 for time and effort spent attempting to recover converted property)]. If the forger stole the check before it was delivered to the payee, the payee never became the owner or holder of the check, so the payee has no cause of action for conversion [Com. Code § 3420(a)(2)]. The payee may still enforce the underlying obligation [see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-420 (1990)].

Once the payee has taken delivery of the check, however, the payee no longer can enforce the underlying obligation [see Com. Code § 3310(b)(4)], so the payee needs a cause of action for conversion. Thus, if the forger steals a check after it is delivered to the payee and forges the payee's endorsement, the payee has causes of action for conversion against all the banks in the collection chain, including the payor (drawee) bank [see Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 381, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609 (payee has action against drawee)]. Although the payee may sue any bank in the collection chain, Com. Code § 3420(c) makes it far more efficacious for the payee to sue the depositary bank. Each of the other banks in the collection chain is apt to defend on the ground of having paid the proceeds in good faith to one not entitled to enforce the instrument. A payee who sues both depositary and payor banks is entitled to only one recovery [see Official Comment 3 to UCC § 3-420 (1990); see also Resh v. Connecticut National Bank (1996) 89 F.3d 598, 601 (payee ratifies payment made by drawee to depositary when payee sues both depositary and drawee in single suit in state court)].

The drawer has no cause of action for conversion [Com. Code § 3420(a)(1)]. The drawer's remedy is under Com. Code § 4401(a), for recredit of any unauthorized charge to his or her account for payment of a check on a forged endorsement [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-420 (1990)].

As between the banks, each bank has a claim for breach of warranties against the bank from which it took the check [Com. Code §§ 3417(a)(1), 4208(a)(1); Cooper v. Union Bank (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 371, 381, 107 Cal. Rptr. 1, 507 P.2d 609] , until, once again, the loss falls on the depositary bank [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-420 (1990)].

[4] Remedies for Conversion Based on Missing Endorsement

A check is converted if a bank makes or obtains payment with respect to the check, for a person not entitled to enforce the check or receive payment [Com. Code § 3420(a)]. If a bank makes payment with respect to a check, to a person not entitled to receive payment, then the bank is liable for conversion under Com. Code § 3420(a), without regard to whether the check bore a forged or unauthorized endorement or there was a missing endorsement [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310] . For further discussion, see § 95.328.

An action may be brought by a copayee who endorsed the check, on the ground that the endorsement of another copayee was missing [Gil v. Bank of America (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1377, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310

(homeowner's action for conversion of check drawn by fire insurer to pay claim was based on absence of mortgage lender's endorsement)].

[5] Allegations and Measure of Damages

This complaint alleges:

- The making, issuance, and delivery of the check, for value, to plaintiff as payee (Paragraph 4) [see Com. Code § 3420(a)(2)];

- The forging of plaintiff's endorsement, or the fact that the check was deposited without endorsement, and payment of the check by defendant on the forged or missing endorsement (Paragraph 6); and

- Defendant's refusal to pay plaintiff the amount of the check (Paragraph 7).

The measure of liability for conversion of a check is presumed to be the face amount of the check, but the payee's recovery may not exceed his or her interest in the check [Com. Code § 3420(b); see, e.g., Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group v. Bozinovski (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 503, 507, 196 Cal. Rptr. 150 (bank as not required to duplicate payment to joint payee/forger)]. Thus, the allegations of Paragraph 5 are for use to allege the extent of plaintiff's interest in the check and are necessary only when plaintiff is not the sole owner of the check.

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[6] Limitation Period

An action for conversion of a negotiable instrument must be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues [Com. Code § 3118(g)(1)]. The cause of action accrues when the conversion occurs, regardless of whether the plaintiff knows of the conversion [see, e.g., AmerUS Life Ins. Co. v. Bank of Am. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 631, 637, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 493 (insurance company's 2002 action for conversion, based on bank's payment of premium check on forged endorsement by other person that occurred in 1996, was time-barred even though plaintiff had no knowledge of material facts until 2001)], except when the defendant conceals facts constituting the conversion or when the defendant is a fiduciary of the plaintiff [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20] . If the defendant conceals facts, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the plaintiff discovers, or should discover, those facts [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561, 305 P.2d 20] . If defendant is a fiduciary of plaintiff, the limitation period does not begin until the conversion is clearly and unequivocally brought to the attention of the plaintiff [Bennett v. Hibernia Bank (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 540, 561-563, 305 P.2d 20] .

[7] State Statutes

"Unauthorized signature" is one made without actual, implied, or apparent authority and includes forgery. Com. Code § 1201(b)(41)

Effects of unauthorized signature on instrument. Com. Code § 3403

Forged endorsement by employee. Com. Code § 3405

Effect of negligence that contributes to making of forged signature. Com. Code § 3406

Conversion of instrument. Com. Code § 3420

[8] Decisions

Depositary bank's liability for statutory conversion under Com. Code § 3420 for depositing check without payee's endorsement turns on whether person who deposited check had authority to do so. In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 861-863

Com. Code § 3420(b), limiting measure of liability to amount payable on instrument, rather than Civ. Code § 3336 allowing damages for time and effort spent attempting to recover converted property, applies to conversion actions involving negotiable instruments. Stenseth v. Wells Fargo (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 457, 465-466, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192

Grant of summary judgment in favor of depositary banks was error under former Com. Code § 3419(1)(c) (now see Com. Code § 3420(a)) because material question of fact was presented regarding scope of employee's authority to endorse and deposit checks. Oswald Machine & Equipment, Inc. v. Yip (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1245-1249, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 ; now see Com. Code § 3405(a)(3) (defining "responsibility" of employee for purposes of fraudulent endorsements)

Joint payee is permitted to bring action for conversion against depositary bank and drawee bank that actually paid check. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group v. Bozinovski (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 503, 508, 196 Cal. Rptr. 150 (check was delivered to one of three joint payees, who forged endorsements of other two); Indiana Plumbing Supply Co. v. Bank of America (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 910, 917-918, 63 Cal. Rptr. 658 (check delivered to one of two joint payees who forged endorsement of plaintiff)

Bank's liability for conversion for paying check on forged endorsement is limited by extent to which any payee has received funds in accordance with drawer's intent; thus, bank as not required to duplicate payment to joint payee/forger. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group v. Bozinovski (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 503, 507, 196 Cal. Rptr. 150 ; see Indiana Plumbing Supply Co. v. Bank of America (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 910, 918, 63 Cal. Rptr. 658 (forger had no interest in check)

Drawee bank's recredit to drawer's account does not alter extent of its liability for conversion. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group v. Bozinovski (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 503, 508, 196 Cal. Rptr. 150

§ 95.462 Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Amount Paid on Check--Missing Endorsement--Authority to Deposit [Com. Code § 3420]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense to Action to Recover Amount Paid on Check--Missing Endorsement--Authority to Deposit [Com. Code § 3420]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant _____ [name] alleges that although the payee did not endorse the check, the person who deposited the check had the authority to deposit it.

[2] Use of Form

This affirmative defense is for use by a depositary bank sued for conversion for paying a check with a missing endorsement [see Com. Code § 3420 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments]. It asserts as an affirmative defense the authority of the person depositing the check to do so [see Civ. Code § 2316]. For forms and discussion of conversion in general, see Ch. 150, Conversion .

[3] Authority to Deposit Without Endorsement

Under Com. Code § 3420(a), an instrument is converted if a bank makes or obtains payment with respect to the instrument for a person not entitled to enforce the instrument or receive payment. There is no California case law directly on point regarding the conversion liability of the depositary bank under that section when the payee has not endorsed the check. A Ninth Circuit case, however, has held that a depositary bank's liability for statutory conversion for depositing a check without the payee's endorsement turns on the question of whether the person who deposited the check had the authority to do so. In In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857 , a corporation's sole director and shareholder approved the sale of all corporate assets to a corporation formed to purchase its assets, and authorized its agents to deposit checks payable to the selling corporation into a bank account of the purchasing corporation. The president and vice-president of the new corporation deposited a number of checks payable to the first corporation into the new corporation's account, without endorsement of the first corporation. The first corporation's bankruptcy trustee brought a conversion action against the bank which had accepted those checks for deposit, alleging that it improperly accepted for deposit checks payable to the debtor without the debtor's endorsement. The Bankruptcy Court found the bank liable for statutory conversion under California law and the federal district court affirmed [In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 860] .

The Ninth Circuit held the bankruptcy court erred in concluding that conversion liability arises without regard to whether the person who deposited the check had the authority to do so when the payee has not endorsed the check. The precise question presented in this matter had not been resolved by a California court in a published opinion. The federal court of appeals, therefore, was required to predict how the highest California court would decide the issue [In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 861] . It held that the depositary bank's liability for statutory conversion for depositing the check without the payee's endorsement turned on the authority of the person depositing the check, that the persons making the deposits had implied actual authority to deposit the checks payable to the debtor into an account belonging to the business formed to purchase debtor's assets, and that the agents were acting within the scope of implied actual authority as to the bank when they deposited the checks, even though their conduct was detrimental to the debtor [In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 861-863] .

[4] Burden of Proof

Once the plaintiff has shown that the necessary endorsement is missing, the burden to prove authority shifts to the defendant [In re Bartoni-Corsi Produce, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 857, 862 n.8].

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action by a "represented person" against a bank to recover the amount of a check deposited to the fiduciary's personal account at the bank. Whether the check was issued by the represented person, or the fiduciary as such, to the bank as payee [Com. Code § 3307(b)(4)] or was payable to the represented person or the fiduciary as such [Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)], deposit to the fiduciary's personal account constitutes notice, on the part of the bank, of a breach of fiduciary duty [see Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)(C), (4)(C) (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments)]. The bank would also have notice of a breach of fiduciary duty if either of those types of checks was taken (1) in payment of or as security for a debt known by the bank to be the personal debt of the fiduciary, or (2) in a transaction known by the bank to be for the personal benefit of the fiduciary [see Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)(A), (B), (4)(A), (B)]. Those situations are beyond the scope of this form, which would have to be modified for use in those situations.

Com. Code § 3307 was added by Stats. 1992, ch. 914, and is thought by some to be inconsistent with the protection afforded by Prob. Code § 18100 to third parties in their dealings with trustees.

The "represented person" can be a principal, beneficiary, partnership, corporation, limited liability company (LLC), or other person to whom the fiduciary duty is owed [Com. Code § 3307(a)(2)]. The fiduciary can be an agent, trustee, partner, corporate officer or director, LLC manager, or other representative owing a fiduciary duty with respect to the check [Com. Code § 3307(a)(1)].

The more difficult allegation to sustain under this provision is the knowledge, on the part of the person who handled the deposit of the check for the bank, of the fiduciary relationship [see Com. Code § 3307(b), and discussion under § 95.463[5]]. Com. Code § 3307 is applicable only in the relatively rare situations in which the person acting for the bank has that knowledge [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-307 (1990); but see Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 556, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 (dealing with law firms' trust account; if deposit is made to credit of person as trustee, bank is charged with notice that funds are received in fiduciary capacity)].

[3] Checks Payable to Fiduciary Personally

If the check is issued by the represented person or the fiduciary as such, and is payable to the fiduciary personally (as an individual and not as a fiduciary), the bank is not liable to the represented person for the proceeds unless the bank knows of the breach of fiduciary duty [Com. Code § 3307(b)(3)]. Such checks are the normal mode of paying the fiduciary's salary or paying the fiduciary for services or expenses incurred on behalf of the represented person and are not considered unusual. If the fiduciary is authorized to write checks on behalf of the represented person to pay debts of the represented person, a check drawn by the fiduciary as such and payable to himself or herself personally is a normal way of paying a debt owed by the represented person to the fiduciary. Thus, the bank may assume the fiduciary may use such a check for his or her personal benefit [Official Comments 3 and 4 to UCC § 3-307 (1990)].

[4] Allegations

This complaint alleges:

- Defendant's knowledge, including knowledge of the person who handled the transaction for defendant bank, of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary (Paragraphs 4, 5) [Com. Code § 3307(b); see § 95.463[5]];

- That defendant took a check issued by, or payable to, the represented person or the fiduciary as such (Paragraph 6) [see Com. Code § 3307(b)(2), (4)]; and

- That the check was deposited to the fiduciary's personal account (Paragraph 7) [Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)(C), (4)(C)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[5] Bank Must Know of Fiduciary's Status

Com. Code § 3307 only applies if the bank dealing with the fiduciary has knowledge of the fiduciary status of the fiduciary [Com. Code § 3307(b)]. Notice that does not amount to knowledge is not enough to render Com. Code § 3307 applicable [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-307 (1990)]. Knowledge is actual knowledge [Com. Code § 1202(a)(1), (3)]. An organization has knowledge of a particular fact when the individual handling the transaction on behalf of the organization has knowledge of that fact [see Com. Code § 1202(f)]. In many cases the individual who receives and processes the check for payment or collection or value is a clerk who has no knowledge of the fiduciary status of the person from whom the check is received. In those cases, Com. Code § 3307 does not apply [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-307 (1990)]. In this form, the extensive factual allegations of Paragraphs 4 and 5 are designed to establish knowledge on the part of all personnel of a particular branch who were likely to have handled the deposit of the fiduciary's status as such.

Com. Code § 3307(b)(2) and (4) also require that the person acting for the bank have knowledge of the facts that constitute the breach of fiduciary duty. In the case of a check taken for deposit to an account, knowledge of the breach is found in the fact that the deposit is made to an account other than that of the represented person or a fiduciary account for the benefit of that person [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-307 (1990); see Com. Code § 3307(b)(2)(C), (4)(C)].

When represented person is bound by signature of representative. Com. Code § 3402

Third person is not required to inquire regarding trustee's proper exercise of power. Prob. Code § 18100

[7] Decisions

Drawee bank is authorized to honor withdrawals from account on signatures authorized by signature card, which serves as contract between depositor and bank for handling of account; so long as checks drawn on that account are signed in conformity with signature card, and absent any knowledge of misappropriation, bank is free from liability for honoring check drawn in breach of trust. Blackmon v. Hale (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 548, 556, 83 Cal. Rptr. 194, 463 P.2d 418 ; but see Com. Code § 3307(b)(4) (situations in which bank may have notice of breach of fiduciary duty)

§ 95.464 Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] of Loss of Teller's, Cashier's, or Certified Check [Com. Code § 3312(a)(3)] and Notice of Claim [Com. Code § 3312(b)]

[1] FORM Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] of Loss of Teller's, Cashier's, or Certified Check [Com. Code § 3312(a)(3)] and Notice of Claim [Com. Code § 3312(b)]

To _____ [name of bank], _____ [name of branch], and its manager _____ [name]:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I, _____ [name of declarant/claimant], claim entitlement to, and hereby request payment [or recredit to my account] of, the amount of a _____ [teller's or cashier's or certified] check _____ [issued or certified] by _____ [name of bank], _____ [name of branch], on _____ [date]. I claim these funds as _____ [drawer or payee or remitter] of that check.

The _____ [teller's or cashier's or certified] check that is the basis of this claim is numbered _____, drawn on account number _____ at _____ [name of drawee bank], in the amount of $_____, and is payable to the order of _____ [bearer or name of payee].

On or about _____ [date], and while in my possession, the _____ [teller's or cashier's or certified] check was _____ [lost or stolen or destroyed]. I did not transfer the check, nor was the check lawfully seized. _____ [Describe circumstances of loss, destruction or theft, e.g., The loss occurred during a flood that forced our family to evacuate our home. I have searched diligently for it in all the papers that remained in our home when we returned].

[EITHER]

The whereabouts of the check cannot be determined.

[OR]

The check is in the wrongful possession of an unknown person.

[OR]

The check is in the wrongful possession of _____ [name], who _____ [cannot be found or is not amenable to service of process].

[CONTINUE]

Please inform me as soon as is reasonably possible at _____ [mailing address][, or by phone at _____ (phone number)], whether the check was paid before you received this notice.

[I am prepared to supply any reasonable identification you require in order to reimburse me.]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

This declaration and notice is for use to claim the amount of a cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check that has been lost, stolen, or destroyed while in the possession of the claimant. The declaration and notice need not be combined [see Com. Code § 3312(a)(3), (b)].

The claimant can be (1) the drawer or payee of a certified check, or (2) the remitter (purchaser) or payee of a cashier's check or teller's check [Com. Code § 3312(a)(3)(ii)]. For other persons entitled to enforce the check, see Com. Code § 3309 (discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments) [see also § 95.464[9]].

The claim is made to the "obligated bank," the acceptor (drawee) in the case of a certified check or to the issuer (drawer) in the case of a teller's check or cashier's check [Com. Code § 3312(a)(4)].

The statute does not specify a means of delivery of the claim. However it is sent or delivered, it seems appropriate to require a receipt or acknowledgment of delivery, such as one would receive if the claim was sent by certified mail, return receipt requested [see § 95.464[6], [7]].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[3] Claim as Warranty

Delivery of a declaration of loss is a warranty of the truth of the statements made in the declaration. This warranty is made to the obligated bank and any person entitled to enforce the check [Com. Code § 3312(b)(iv)].

[4] Required Contents of Declaration

The declaration of loss must be a written statement, made under penalty of perjury, that states the following [Com. Code § 3312(a)(3)]:

- The declarant lost possession of a check;
- The declarant is the drawer or payee of the check, in the case of a certified check, or the remitter or payee of the check, in the case of a cashier's check or teller's check;
- The loss of possession was not the result of a transfer by the declarant or a lawful seizure; and
- The declarant cannot reasonably obtain possession of the check because the check was destroyed, its whereabouts cannot be determined, or it is in the wrongful possession of an unknown person or a person that cannot be found or is not amenable to service of process.

[5] Contents of Claim

A claim to the amount of a check is a communication to the obligated bank by the drawer or payee of a certified check or the remitter or payee of a cashier's check or teller's check that does the following [Com. Code § 3312(b)]:

- Describes the check with reasonable certainty;
- Requests payment of the amount of the check;
- Contains or is accompanied by a declaration of loss of the claimant with respect to the check; and
- Is received at a time and in a manner affording the bank a reasonable time to act on it before the check is paid.

The claimant also must provide reasonable identification if requested by the obligated bank [Com. Code § 3312(b)].

The bank may not impose additional requirements on the claimant to assert a claim under Com. Code § 3312(b) [see Official Comment 2 to U.C.C. § 3-312 (1990) (procedures stated in other law for stating claims as displaced within meaning of Com. Code § 1103(b))].

[6] When Claim Becomes Enforceable

The claim becomes enforceable at the later of (1) the time the claim is asserted, or (2) the 90th day following the date of the check, in the case of a cashier's check or teller's check, or the 90th day following the date of the acceptance, in the case of a certified check [Com. Code § 3312(b)(1)].

[7] Bank's Options Regarding Payment of Claim or Check

[a] In General

Until the claim becomes enforceable, it has no legal effect and the obligated bank may pay the check or, in the case of a teller's check, may permit the drawee to pay the check [Com. Code § 3312(b)(2)]. If the check is presented by and paid to a person entitled to enforce the check before the claim becomes enforceable, the bank's liability with respect to the check is discharged [Com. Code § 3312(b)(2)].

If the claim becomes enforceable before the check is presented for payment, the bank is not obliged to pay the check [Com. Code § 3312(b)(3)].

When the claim becomes enforceable, the bank is obliged to pay the amount of the check to the claimant unless the check has been paid to a person entitled to enforce the check. Except for any liability the bank may incur for failure to return the check by its midnight deadline [see Com. Code § 4302(a)(1)], payment to the claimant discharges all the bank's liability with respect to the check [Com. Code § 3312(b)(4)].

[i] Payment to Thief

To illustrate, suppose Obligated Bank (OB) issues a cashier's check payable to its customer, P. The check is stolen from P. P files a claim with OB two days after the date of the check. Thief forges P's endorsement and deposits the check to another bank (DB), which obtains payment from OB. On the 90th day, OB is obligated to pay P [Com. Code § 3312(b)(4)]. Because of the forged endorsement, thief is not a holder or "a person entitled to enforce the check," and neither is DB [see Com. Code § 3312(b)(2), (4)]. OB can recoup its loss from DB through a breach of warranty claim under Com. Code § 4208(a)(1). As an alternative to the claim procedure, P has a cause of action against DB for conversion under Com. Code § 3420(a) [Case 3 of Official Comment 4 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

[ii] Payment to Finder Who Becomes Entitled to Enforce Check

Suppose that Obligated Bank (OB) issues a cashier's check payable to P. P endorses it in blank and mails it to another bank for deposit to P's account. The check is lost in the mail and never received by P's bank. When P discovers the loss, P files a claim with OB. X finds the check, endorses it, and deposits it to DB, which collects the check form OB before the end of the 90-day period. In this situation, because of the blank endorsement, X is a holder and entitled to enforce the check. Therefore, DB is also a holder and P is not entitled to payment of the claim [Case 4 of Official Comment 4 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

[iii] Finder of Overdue Check Cannot Become Holder

Suppose that Obligated Bank (OB) issues a cashier's check payable to P. P endorses it in blank and mails it to another bank for deposit to P's account. The check is lost in the mail and never received by P's bank. When P discovers the loss, P files a claim with OB, which OB pays after the expiration of the 90-day period. More than 90 days after the date of the check, X finds it, endorses it, and deposits it to DB, which presents the check to OB for payment. OB is not obligated to pay the check because it has already been discharged by payment of the claim to P [Com. Code § 3312(b)(4)]. DB cannot be a holder in due course, because it took the check when it was overdue [see Com. Code § 3304(a)(2)]. Thus, OB is not obligated to pay the check. For the same reason, if OB dishonors the check, P does not become liable to DB under Com. Code § 3312(c) (discussed under § 95.464[8]). DB's remedy is to charge back X's account pursuant to Com. Code § 4214(a). Ordinarily, P would by liable to DB as endorser pursuant to Com. Code § 3415(a). However, under Com. Code § 3415(e), P is released from that liability 30 days after the endorsement [Case 5 of Official Comment 4 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

[8] Claimant's Potential Liability for Reimbursement or After Dishonor

If the bank pays the amount of a check to a claimant and, after the claim became enforceable, a person having rights of a holder in due course presents the check for payment, the claimant is obliged either to pay the holder in due course or to reimburse the bank, depending on whether the bank chooses to pay the check or to dishonor it. If the bank pays the check, the claimant must reimburse the bank. If the bank dishonors the check, the claimant will have to pay the holder in due course [Com. Code § 3312(c)].

If the declaration of loss falsely alleges a loss, destruction, or theft that did not in fact occur, a holder of the check who is unable to obtain payment because the bank dishonored the check after paying the claimant [see Com. Code § 3312(b)(3), (4)] has a cause of action against the claimant/declarant for breach of warranty [see Com. Code § 3312(b); Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

[9] Alternative Procedure Available to Payee

If a person entitled to assert a claim under Com. Code § 3312(b) is also a person entitled to enforce the lost, stolen, or destroyed check, usually as payee or bearer, he or she may assert rights with respect to the check either under Com. Code § 3312 or Com. Code § 3309 [Com. Code § 3312(d)]. For discussion of Com. Code § 3309 and a form for a complaint for enforcement of a lost, stolen, or destroyed instrument, see Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments . Com. Code § 3312 is intended to offer a person who loses a teller's, cashier's, or certified check a means of getting refund of the amount of the check within a reasonable period of time without the expense of posting a bond (which may be required under Com. Code § 3309) and with full protection of the obligated bank [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

Com. Code §§ 3312 and 3309 are not coextensive. Com. Code § 3309 does not apply to the remitter of a cashier's check or teller's check or to the drawer of a certified check [Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)]. An endorsee of a check may not proceed under Com. Code § 3312 because an endorsee is neither an original party to the check or a remitter. Limitation of Com. Code § 3312 to an original party or a remitter gives the obligated bank the ability to determine, at the time it becomes obligated on the check, the identity or the person or persons who can assert claims with respect to the check. The bank is not faced with having to determine the rights of some person who was not a party to the check at that time or with whom it has not dealt. If a cashier's check is issued to the order of the person who purchased it and that person endorses it over to a third person who loses the check, the third person can assert rights under Com. Code § 3309, but has no rights under Com. Code § 3312 [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-312 (1990)].

[10] State Statutes

Action to require execution of duplicate of lost or destroyed document; indemnity. Civ. Code § 3415

"Remitter" is purchaser of instrument from its issuer if instrument is payable to identified person other than purchaser. Com. Code § 3103(a)(11)

Enforcement of lost, stolen, or destroyed instrument. Com. Code § 3309

Claim by payee, remitter, or drawer of lost, stolen, or destroyed teller's, cashier's, or certified check. Com. Code § 3312

§ 95.465 Notice of Potential Damages Likely to Be Caused by Wrongful Refusal to Pay Teller's, Cashier's, or Certified Check [Com. Code § 3411(b)]--By Payee to Issuer or Acceptor

[1] FORM Notice of Potential Damages Likely to Be Caused by Wrongful Refusal to Pay Teller's, Cashier's, or Certified Check [Com. Code § 3411(b)]--By Payee to Issuer or Acceptor

To _____ [name of bank], _____ [address of branch], and its manager _____ [name]:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that I, _____ [name], am the holder and _____ [payee or endorsee or bearer] of _____ [teller's or cashier's or certified] check numbered _____, _____ [issued or certified] by _____ [name of bank], _____ [address of branch], on _____ [date]. That check is drawn on account number _____ at _____ [name of drawee bank], in the amount of $_____, and is payable to the order of _____ [bearer or name of payee].

On or about _____ [date], I _____ [presented the check for payment at or deposited the check for collection with] _____ [name of bank], _____ [address of branch]. The check has not been paid, and no [lawful] reason has been given [or exists] for your failure to honor the check.

I intended to use the proceeds of the check _____ [specify, e.g., to meet a margin call issued by my securities broker on July 13, 1993]. If the proceeds of that check are not paid to me by _____ [date], it is likely that _____ [specify, e.g., I will not be able to make the payment required and will forfeit stocks and securities with an approximate market value of $_____, which represented a gain to me, since purchasing them, of $_____].

As a consequence of _____ [refer to event described in previous paragraph, e.g., forfeiting $_____ in securities], it is likely that I will suffer _____ [continue with as many consequences as are foreseeable, e.g., severe emotional distress, possibly manifesting itself in physical illness, impaired creditworthiness, and damages to my financial reputation and ability to obtain credit from securities dealers in the future. For the last 15 years, my primary source of income has been from investments, so impairment of my ability to maintain a satisfactory credit rating is likely to have serious long-term financial consequences for me].

This notice is for use by a person entitled to enforce a cashier's check, teller's check, or certified check to put the issuer or acceptor on notice of particular circumstances giving rise to consequential damages likely toresult from nonpayment of the check. The person asserting the right to enforce the check is entitled to compensation for expenses and loss of interest resulting from the nonpayment, and may recover consequential damages if the obligated bank wrongfully refuses to pay after receiving notice of particular circumstances giving rise to the damages [see Com. Code § 3411(b); see § 95.465[6]]. Com. Code § 3411(b) does not contain an express provision for attorney's fees, but attorney's fees are not meant to be necessarily excluded. They could be granted because they fit within the language "expenses ... resulting from the nonpayment" [Official Comment 2 to UCC § 3-411 (1990)].

To protect personal privacy and other legitimate interests, parties and their attorneys must not include financial account numbers, or must redact such numbers when their inclusion is necessary, in all pleadings and other papers filed in the court's public file, whether filed in paper or electronic form, unless otherwise provided by law or ordered by the court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.20(b)].

[3] Suggested Methods of Service

Com. Code § 3411 does not specify the means of giving notice to the obligated bank. It seems prudent to have the notice served by someone who will complete an affidavit of service, to fax it, or to send it by first class mail, return receipt requested, so that the payee will have evidence to establish when the bank received notice [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.301(6) (defining "transmission record" for purposes of fax filings)].

[4] Wrongful Refusal to Pay Cashier's, Teller's, or Certified Check

The acceptor of a certified check or the issuer of a cashier's check or teller's check may be liable for consequential damages if it wrongfully (1) refuses to pay a cashier's check or certified check, (2) stops payment of a teller's check, or (3) refuses to pay a dishonored teller's check [Com. Code § 3411(a), (b)].

[5] When Bank Is Not Liable

The person entitled to enforce the check cannot recover expenses or consequential damages under Com. Code § 3411(b) if the bank's refusal to pay occurs because of any of the following [Com. Code § 3411(c)]:

- The bank suspends payments;
- The obligated bank asserts a claim or defense of the bank that it has reasonable grounds to believe is available against the person entitled to enforce the instrument;
- The obligated bank has a reasonable doubt whether the person demanding payment is the person entitled to enforce the instrument; or

- Payment is prohibited by law.

Com. Code § 3411(c) is intended to limit recovery to cases in which the bank refuses to pay even though its obligation to pay is clear and it is able to pay. If the bank is not obligated to pay, there is no recovery. Thus, the bank may assert any claim or defense that it has, although normally it will not have a claim or defense. In the usual case, it is the remitter that isasserting a claim to the check on the basis of rescission of the negotiation to the payee under Com. Code § 3202. A bank can assert that claim only if there is compliance with Com. Code § 3305(c) (joinder of, and assertion by, person entitled to assert claim, discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments); but the bank is not protected from liability for damages under Com. Code § 3411(b) if the claim of the remitter is not upheld. A bank that seeks to defend on the basis of the remitter's defense is insulated from liability only if payment is enjoined under Com. Code § 3602(b)(1) (also discussed in Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments) [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 3-411 (1990)].

An example of reasonable doubt regarding the identity of the person demanding payment of a check is a check payable to "Supplier Co." presented for payment over the counter by a person claiming to be an officer of Supplier Co. The bank may refuse payment until it has been given adequate proof that the presentment in fact is being made for Supplier Co, the person entitled to enforce the check [Official Comment 3 to UCC § 3-411 (1990); see also Com. Code § 3307 (payor bank or collecting bank as on notice of breach of fiduciary duty if representative cashes check payable to represented person or applies it to personal obligation of representative; discussed in § 95.463 and Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments), Com. Code § 3413 (drawee bank has no duty to payee to pay check, other than cashier's check, until after acceptance)].

[6] Drafter's Intent

As an accommodation to their customers who have purchased cashier's or teller's checks or had checks certified to pay a creditor and become embroiled in a dispute with the creditor regarding the underlying transaction, banks will sometimes stop payment on a teller's check or refuse to honor a cashier's or certified check [see Com. Code § 3602 (bank as entitled to pay check despite notice of adverse claim)]. In most situations, the issuer or acceptor has no right to refuse or stop payment, and customers using these methods of payment have no right to stop payment or require it stopped. Com. Code § 3411 is designed to discourage banks from accommodating customers in this way [see Official Comment 1 to UCC § 3-411 (1990)].

Issuer's obligation with respect to cashier's check. Com. Code § 3412

Acceptor's obligation to pay draft according to its terms at time of acceptance or as accepted. Com. Code § 3413(a)(1), (2)

Acceptor's obligation to pay accepted draft that is incomplete instrument, according to its terms when completed, to extent stated in Com. Code §§ 3115, 3407. Com. Code § 3413(a)(3)

Acceptor's obligation is owed to person entitled to enforce draft or to drawer or endorser who paid draft under Com. Code § 3414 or 3415. Com. Code § 3413(a)

Acceptor's obligation with respect to certified check as amount certified, if any is stated, or, if (1) acceptance does not state amount, (2) amount is subsequently raised, and (3) instrument is negotiated to holder in due course, obligation is amount at instrument was taken by holder in due course. Com. Code § 3413(b)

Drawer's obligation with respect to drafts (other than cashier's checks or other drafts drawn on drawer). Com. Code § 3414

§ 97.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses actions involving services provided by a barber, cosmetologist, electrologist, or other personal grooming provider. It includes forms of complaint and related allegations for use in an action based on negligence brought by a patron against a personal grooming services provider [see §§ 97.110 -97.112]. The part also includes a form of affirmative defense based on the comparative negligence of a patron of personal grooming services [see § 97.113].

This chapter also discusses actions against manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers of cosmetic products. It includes forms of complaints and allegations based on strict liability in tort [see §§ 97.130 -97.131] and negligence [see § 97.132]. It also contains affirmative defenses to such actions [see §§ 97.133 -97.135].

§ 97.10 Governing Law

Statutes governing the administration of the Board of Barbering and Cosmetology (the "Board") are contained in the Barbering and Cosmetology Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq., the "Act"). Qualifications of applicants for licensing examinations are set out in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7321 (cosmetologists), 7321.5 (barbers), 7324 (estheticians), 7326 (manicurists), and 7330 (electrologists). Bus. & Prof. Code § 7337 et seq. governs licensing examinations. Requirements for establishments in which barbering and cosmetology are practiced are governed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7346 et seq. Barbering and cosmetology schools are regulated by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7362 et seq. Licenses are governed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7396 et seq., Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403 et seq. governs disciplinary proceedings. Statutes pertaining to administrative fines and citations are set out in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7406 et seq.

Federal statutes aimed primarily at products and their ingredients, packaging, and labeling are contained in the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C.S. § 361 et seq.), and in the Federal Hazardous Substances Act (15 U.S.C.S. § 1261 et seq.). Those provisions are implemented by regulations contained in 21 C.F.R. §§ 1.20 et seq. and 21 C.F.R. § 700.1 et seq.

California's Sherman Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Law (Health & Safety Code § 109875 et seq.) has provisions similar to federal legislation relating to products, their ingredients, packaging, labeling, advertising, and guarantees. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7320.2 controls the application to persons of cosmetic solutions containing phenol (carbolic acid) and corrosive sublimate (mercury), or any of their preparations, derivatives, or compounds.

The practices of barbering and cosmetology are regulated by 16 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 200 et seq. and 900 et seq.

§ 97.11 Definitions

[1] Barbering

The practice of barbering is all or any combination of the following practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(a); see Bone v. State Board of Cosmetology (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 851, 853, 80 Cal. Rptr. 164]:

- Shaving or trimming the beard or cutting the hair.
- Giving facial and scalp massages or treatments with oils, creams, lotions, or other preparations either by hand or by mechanical appliances.
- Singeing, shampooing, arranging, dressing, curling, waving, chemical waving, hair relaxing, or dyeing the hair, or applying hair tonics.
- Applying cosmetic preparations, antiseptics, powders, oils, clays, or lotions to scalp, face, or neck.
- Hair styling of all textures of hair by standard methods that are current at the time of the hair styling.

African hair stylists and hair braiders, who perform a highly specialized artistic and cultural form of hair styling and hair care whose main techniques include hair braiding, locking, twisting, weaving, and cornrows without the use of any chemicals, are not subject to the licensing requirements of the Cosmetology and Barbering Act [Cornwell v. California Board of Barbering and Cosmetology (S.D. Cal. 1997) 962 F. Supp. 1260, 1278].

[2] Cosmetology

The practice of cosmetology is all or any combination of the following practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(b); see Bone v. State Board of Cosmetology (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 851, 853, 80 Cal. Rptr. 164]:

- Arranging, dressing, curling, waving, machineless permanent waving, permanent waving, cleansing, cutting, shampooing, relaxing, singeing, bleaching, tinting, coloring, straightening, dyeing, applying hair tonics to, beautifying, or otherwise treating by any means, the hair of any person.

- Massaging, cleaning, or stimulating the scalp, face, neck, arms, or upper part of the human body, by means of the hands, devices, apparatus, or appliances, with or without the use of cosmetic preparations, antiseptics, tonics, lotions, or creams.

- Beautifying the face, neck, arms, or upper part of the human body, by use of cosmetic preparations, antiseptics, tonics, lotions, or creams.

- Removing superfluous hair from the body of any person by the use of depilatories or by the use of tweezers, chemicals, or preparations, or by the use of devices or appliances of any kind or description, except by the use of light waves, commonly known as rays.

- Cutting, trimming, polishing, tinting, coloring, cleansing, or manicuring the nails of any person.

- Massaging, cleansing, treating, or beautifying the hands or feet of any person.

The practice of cosmetology includes the specialty branches of skin care and nail care [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(c); see §§ 97.11[2][b], [c]].

The practice of barbering and the practice of cosmetology do not include the mere sale, fitting, or styling of wigs or hairpieces. Nor does it include natural hair braiding. Natural hair braiding is a service that results in tension on hair strands or roots by twisting, wrapping, weaving, extending, locking, or braiding by hand or mechanical device, provided that the service does not include hair cutting or the application of dyes, reactive chemicals, or other preparations to alter the color of the hair or to straighten, curl, or alter the structure of the hair. The practice of barbering and cosmotology also do not include threading. Threading is a technique that results in removing hair by twisting thread around unwanted hair and pulling it from the skin and the incidental trimming of eyebrow hair. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(d)].

However, a person who engages in natural hair styling, which is defined as the provision of natural hair braiding services together with any of the services or procedures defined within the regulated practices of barbering or cosmetology, is subject to regulation and must obtain and maintain a barbering or cosmetology license for those services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(e)].

[b] Skin Care

Skin care is any one or more of the following practices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(c)(1)]:

- Giving facials, applying makeup, giving skin care, removing superfluous hair from the body of any person by the use of depilatories, tweezers, or waxing, or applying eyelashes to any person.

- Beautifying the face, neck, arms, or upper part of the human body, by use of cosmetic preparations, antiseptics, tonics, lotions, or creams.

- Massaging, cleaning, or stimulating the face, neck, arms, or upper party of the human body, by means of the hands, devices, apparatus, or appliances, with the use of cosmetic preparations, antiseptics, tonics, lotions, or creams.

[c] Nail Care

Nail care is the practice of cutting, trimming, polishing, coloring, tinting, cleansing, or manicuring the nails of any person, or massaging, cleansing, or beautifying the hands or feet of any person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(c)(2)]. Application of artificial fingernails also constitutes an act of cosmetology [59 Ops. Cal. Att'y Gen. 587 (1976)] .

[3] Electrolysis

Electrolysis is the practice of removing hair from, or destroying hair on, the human body by the use of an electric needle only. It includes electrolysis or thermolysis [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7316(f)].

[4] Apprentice

An apprentice is any person who is licensed by the Board to engage in learning or acquiring a knowledge of barbering, cosmetology, skin care, nail care, or electrology, in a licensed establishment under the supervision of a licensee approved by the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7332].

[5] Establishment

An establishment is any premises, building, or part of a building in which any activity licensed under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq. is practiced [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7346]. For discussion of health requirements related to establishments, as defined, see § 97.14[1].

[6] Mobile Unit

A mobile unit means any self-contained, self-supporting, enclosed mobile unit that is at least 24 feet long and is licensed as an establishment for the practice of any occupation licensed by the Board that complies with Bus. & Prof. Code § 7354 et seq. and all health and safety regulations established by the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7354]. For discussion of health requirements related to mobile units, see § 97.14[2].

§ 97.12 Rulemaking Authority of Board

The statutes that license cosmetology and barbering are essentially public health regulations [Mains v. Board of Barber Examiners (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 459, 466, 57 Cal. Rptr. 573 ; Doyle v. Board of Barber Examiners (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 521, 526, 53 Cal. Rptr. 420] . The Board, a subdivision of the Department of Consumer Affairs, is required by statute to establish rules governing sanitary conditions and other precautions that are reasonably necessary to protect the public health and safety [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7312(e)]. For discussion of particular health requirements, see § 97.14.

A license to practice cosmetology, barbering, skin care, nail care, or electrolysis is issued by the Board to an applicant who satisfactorily completes an examination for that occupation, possesses the other qualifications required by law, and who has remitted the required fee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7342; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7321 et seq. (qualifications of applicants for licensing examinations)]. The license entitles the holder to practice that occupation in a licensed establishment and shall be issued by the board on the same day that the applicant satisfactorily passes the examination. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7342; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7347 (application for license as establishment)].

The form and content of the license issued by the Board must be determined by the Director of Consumer Affairs after consultation with the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7396; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 164]. The license must prominently state that the holder is licensed as a barber, cosmetologist, esthetician, manicurist, electrologist, or apprentice, and shall contain a photograph of the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7396]. The license holder must display the license in a conspicuous location in his or her place of business or place of employment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7397]. The Board may not issue a temporary license under any circumstances [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7399].

A license that has expired for failure of the licensee to renew may be renewed at any time within five years following its expiration upon application and payment of all accrued and unpaid renewal fees and delinquency fees and the licensee must meet current continuing education requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7417]. A license which has not been renewed within five years following its expiration shall be deemed canceled [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7418].

§ 97.14 Health Requirements

[1] Establishments

No person having charge of an establishment, whether as an owner or any employee, may permit any room or part of a room in which any occupation regulated under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq. is conducted or practiced to be used for residential purposes, or for any other purpose that would tend to make the room unsanitary, unhealthy, or unsafe, or endanger the health and safety of the consuming public. An establishment must have a direct entrance separate and distinct from any entrance in connection with private quarters [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7350].

Every establishment must provide at least one public toilet room located on or near the premises for its patrons [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7351]. Specific requirements as to how the public toilet room is to be constructed, including what materials must be used, are set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7351. Every establishment must provide adequate and convenient handwashing facilities, including running water, soap, and approved sanitary towels [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7352]. Establishments are subject to regular inspections regarding compliance with statutory requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7353].

[2] Mobile Units

Mobile units must comply with regulations adopted by the Board that assure that the unit will be kept clean, in good repair, and in compliance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 7354 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7357(a)]. All laws governing establishments in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7301 et seq., except Bus. & Prof. Code § 7346 et seq., apply to mobile units unless otherwise provided [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7361]. Each mobile unit must be equipped with a self-contained, potable water supply, hot water tanks, a flush chemical toilet, a waste container, a split-lead generator, and a sealed combustible heater with an outside vent [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7357(b)].

§ 97.15 Inspection of Facilities

The Board's executive officer and authorized representatives are required by law to have access to, and inspect, each establishment or mobile unit at any time in which barbering, cosmetology or electrolysis is being performed in order to assure compliance with the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7313(a)(1); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7353; see also § 97.11]. The Board must maintain a program of random and targeted inspections of establishments to ensure compliance with applicable laws relating to public health and safety and the conduct and operation of establishments [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7313(a)(2); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7353]. For discussion of particular health requirements, see § 97.14.

The Board's executive officer and authorized representatives must also have access to and is required to inspect the premises of all schools in which the practice of barbering, cosmetology or electrolysis is performed on the public to insure compliance with health and safety requirements adopted by the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7313(b)].

With prior written authorization from the Board or its executive officer, any Board member may enter and visit, in his or her capacity as a Board member, any establishment during business hours or at any time when barbering, cosmetology, or electrolysis is being performed, for the purpose of conducting official board business. Such a visit may not be used as a basis for any licensing disciplinary action by the board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7313(c)].

[1] Authorized Sanctions

A license required by the Act may at any time be revoked, suspended, or denied by the Board if there exists any one of the statutory grounds for disciplinary action [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403; see also Bone v. State Board of Cosmetology (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 851, 80 Cal. Rptr. 164 ; Mains v. Board of Barber Examiners (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 459, 57 Cal. Rptr. 573]. For discussion of the grounds for which discipline may be imposed, see § 97.16[2].

The Board has the authority to assess administrative fines for the violation of any section of the Act or of any rules and regulations adopted by the Board under the Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7406]. The Board must, through its duly authorized representatives, issue a citation with respect to any violation for which an administrative fine may be assessed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7408].

In addition, the Board may establish, by regulation, a system for issuing citations that contain abatement orders or an order to pay an administrative fine for violations of the Act or regulations adopted under the Act [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 125.9(a)].

[2] Grounds for Discipline

The statutory grounds for disciplinary action by the Board are as follows [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7404]:

- Unprofessional conduct which includes, but is not limited to, any of the following:

  - Incompetence or gross negligence, including failure to comply with generally accepted standards for the practice of barbering, cosmetology, or electrology or disregard for the health and safety of patrons.

  - Repeated similar negligent acts.

- Conviction of any crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the license holder, in which case, the records of conviction or a certified copy shall be conclusive evidence thereof.

- Advertising by means of knowingly false or deceptive statements.

- Failure to comply with the requirements of this chapter.

- Failure to comply with the rules governing health and safety adopted by the Board and approved by the State Department of Health Care Services, for the regulation of establishments, or any practice licensed and regulated under this chapter.

- Failure to comply with the rules adopted by the Board for the regulation of establishments, or any practice licensed and regulated under this chapter.

- Continued practice by a person knowingly having an infectious or contagious disease.

- Habitual drunkenness, habitual use of or addiction to the use of any controlled substance.

- Obtaining or attempting to obtain practice in any occupation licensed and regulated under this chapter, or money, or compensation in any form, by fraudulent misrepresentation.

- Failure to display the license or health and safety rules and regulations in a conspicuous place.

- Engaging, outside of a licensed establishment and for compensation in any form whatever, in any practice for which a license is required under this chapter, except that when such service is provided because of illness or other physical or mental incapacitation of the recipient of the service and when performed by a licensee obtained for the purpose from a licensed establishment.

- Permitting a license to be used where the holder is not personally, actively, and continuously engaged in business.

- The making of any false statement as to a material matter in any oath or affidavit, which is required by the provisions of this chapter.

- Refusal to permit or interference with an inspection authorized under this chapter.

- Any action or conduct which would have warranted the denial of a license.

- Failure to surrender a license that was issued in error or by mistake.

[3] Administrative Review

In the case of a license denial, the Board must provide a statement of reasons for the denial including rehabilitation criteria and consideration of the applicant's particular evidence of rehabilitation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(b), (c)]. If the Board's decision was based on the applicant's prior criminal conviction, the statement of reasons must justify the Board's denial of a license and convey the reasons why the prior criminal conviction is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a barber or cosmetologist [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(c)(3)]. Commencing July 1, 2009, if the denial of a license is due at least in part to the applicant's state or federal criminal history record, the Board must additionally provide to the applicant a copy of his or her criminal history record if the applicant makes a written request to the Board for a copy, specifying an address to which it is to be sent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(d)(1)]. The state or federal criminal history record must not be modified or altered from its form or content as provided by the Department of Justice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(d)(1)(A)] and must be provided in such a manner as to protect the confidentiality and privacy of the applicant's criminal history record, and the criminal history record must not be made available by the Board to any employer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(d)(1)(B). The Board must retain a copy of the applicant's written request and a copy of the response sent to the applicant, which must include the date and the address to which the response was sent [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(d)(1)(C)]. The Board must make this information available upon request by the Department of Justice or the Federal Bureau of Investigation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403(d)(2)].

For a license denial, the Board must provide a hearing within 90 days after the applicant's request; for all other hearing requests, the board shall determine when the hearing shall be conducted Bus. & Prof. Code § 7403 (e). Citations are appealable first to the disciplinary review committee, and then to the program administrator. Any administrative fines are stayed while an appeal is pending. In addition, the fines may not be increased on appeal. The review proceedings are to be conducted in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7410, 7411]. For discussion relating to administrative hearings, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication , through Ch. 473H, Alternative Procedures for Agency Decisions .

[4] Judicial Review

Review by administrative mandate apparently applies to disciplinary action taken by the Board [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Winkelman v. City of Tiburon (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 834, 840, 108 Cal. Rptr. 415] .

In a mandate proceeding for review of a final administrative decision, the court may inquire into any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b)]:

- Whether the agency has proceeded without or in excess of jurisdiction.
- Whether there has been a fair trial.
- Whether there has been any prejudicial abuse of discretion.

For further discussion and forms relating to judicial review of an agency's decision, see Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions , through Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

B. Actions Involving Barbering And Cosmetology Services

9-97 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 97.30

§ 97.30 Negligence

[1] In General

A patron of a barber or cosmetologist relies on the skill and knowledge of the person providing the treatment or rendering services [Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] . A barber or cosmetologist who fails to exercise the ordinary skill and competence of members of his or her profession may be liable for negligence [see, e.g., Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 812, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 25, 40, n.6, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860 see also § 97.30[2]]. For forms of complaint and allegations relating to a cause of action for negligence in the provision of personal grooming services, see §§ 97.110 -97.112.

For further discussion and forms for use in negligence actions generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[2] Standard of Care

As experts in their profession, the services of a barber or cosmetologist are sought because of their special skill. Therefore, a barber or cosmetologist has a duty to exercise the ordinary skill and competence of members of their profession [Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 25, 40, n.6, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860] .

For instance, when a patron of a beauty salon requests a well-known hair treatment and submits to that process, the patron has a right to expect that the cosmetologist will comply with precautionary instructions of the manufacturer regarding application of the solution to the hair [Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] .

Negligence in the application of cosmetic products may consist of failure to use pads and other protective devices to keep such color preparations away from the face, eyes, and ears. In the case of permanent wave solutions, negligence may consist of failure to confine the solutions to the hair, away from the scalp or other skin areas [see Briggs v. National Indus., Inc. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 542, 543-546, 207 P.2d 110] . Negligence may also consist of failure to make appropriate effort by test and inquiry to ascertain whether the patron has any preexisting hypersensitivity to the particular beauty preparations [see Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] .

Although a barber or cosmetologist who fails to exercise the ordinary skill and competence of members of his or her profession may be liable for negligence, a patron may not reasonably expect that a barber or cosmetologist be infallible in rendering services because the professional has not undertaken to be an insurer of the result [Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 812, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 856, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259] .

[3] Presumptions

[a] Negligence Per Se

A violation of either a statute or regulation may form the basis for an action against a barber or cosmetologist under the doctrine of negligence per se. The failure of a person to exercise due care is presumed if [Evid. Code § 669(a)]:

- He or she violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity;
- The violation proximately caused death or injury to person or property;
- The death or injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature which the statute, ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and
- The person suffering the death or injury to his person or property was one of the class of persons for whose protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted.

A duty of care and the attendant standard of conduct required of a reasonable person may be found in a legislative enactment that does not provide for civil liability [Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 928 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530 102 P.3d 915 (violation of California OSHA provisions); Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal.3d 153, 157, 164 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151 (violation of liquor laws)].

[b] Res Ipsa Loquitur

Res ipsa loquitur applies when the occurrence of the injury is of such a nature that it can be said in the light of past experience that the injury probably was a result of negligence by someone and that the defendant is probably the person who is responsible. In determining whether such probabilities exist with regard to a particular occurrence, the courts have relied both on common knowledge and expert testimony [Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645 (citing Siverson v. Weber (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 834, 836, 22 Cal. Rptr. 337, 372 P.2d 97)].

The doctrine has been applied in an action to recover damages from proprietors of a beauty parlor on account of a burn inflicted on the plaintiff's scalp while she was receiving a permanent wave [Chauvin v. Krupin (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324-325, 40 P.2d 904 ; Brown v. Higbee (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 917, 922-923 , 1 Cal. Rptr. 316] . It has also been applied when injuries resulted from the use of dyes as well as from mechanical treatments administered in a beauty salon. The rationale for applying the doctrine in such cases is that it is a matter of common knowledge among laypersons that the dyeing and bleaching of hair is not ordinarily harmful unless negligently done [Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 301, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] .

[4] Affirmative Defenses

[a] In General

Two common defenses in negligence actions against barbers and cosmetologists are negligence of the plaintiff and assumption of risk. As statements of new matter, these defenses must be affirmatively pleaded [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2); see also §§ 97.30[4][b], [c]]. For a form of affirmative defense asserting that a plaintiff patron's injuries were a result of his or her negligence in failing to advise of an allergic sensitivity to a cosmetic product, see § 97.113.

[b] Comparative Negligence

The defense of contributory negligence has been invalidated in California and replaced with a system of comparative negligence in which the fundamental purpose is to assign liability for damage in direct proportion to the amount of negligence of each of the parties. Thus, in all actions for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the contributory negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery, but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

Prior cases involving contributory negligence are, however, instructive insofar as they illustrate negligent conduct of plaintiffs. For example, a case decided under former law held that a plaintiff was negligent when she failed to disclose known allergies to a cosmetologist and refused to take a patch test suggested on the label of the hair dye container after the test had been recommended and offered by the cosmetologist [Arata v. Tonegato (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 837, 841-842, 314 P.2d 130] . Although Arata is still valid with regard to the existence of the plaintiff's negligence, under the doctrine of comparative negligence the plaintiff's recovery now would depend on the amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff and the amount attributed to the cosmetologist [see Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

[c] Assumption of Risk

In analyzing assumption of risk since Li v. Yellow Cab [see § 97.72[1][b]], the Supreme Court has distinguished between two separate types of implied assumption of risk [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696 (lead opinion); see also Ford v. Gouin (1992) 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (companion case to Knight)]. Under "primary assumption of risk," by virtue of the nature of the activity and the parties' relationship to the activity, the defendant owes no legal duty to protect the plaintiff from the particular risk of harm that caused the injury, and the doctrine operates as a complete bar to the plaintiff's recovery [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Under "secondary assumption of risk," the defendant does owe a duty of care to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff proceeds to encounter a known risk imposed by the defendant's breach of duty. In this situation, the doctrine is merged into the comparative fault scheme, and the trier of fact, in apportioning the loss resulting from the injury, may consider the relative responsibility of the parties [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

Prior to the adoption of comparative fault principles, one appellate court held that a jury could conclude that when a patron in the course of hair bleaching treatments went to a second cosmetologist for hot oil treatments that the first refused to administer on account of the condition of the patron's scalp, the defense of assumption of risk may be asserted to bar the patron from recovery because the plaintiff had placed herself in a place of known danger with knowledge and appreciation of the risk [see Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 302-303, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] . Although the Supreme Court has not yet ruled on the proper analysis of implied assumption of risk in the context of the rendering of personal grooming services, it appears that the rationale of Romero no longer applies. The lead opinion in Knight v. Jewett rejected the dissent's view that implied assumption of risk bars an action whenever there is a voluntary acceptance of a specific, known, and appreciated risk. Rather, a court would consider the nature of the activity and the parties relationship to the activity [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 312-313, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

A plaintiff who is faced with a situation similar to that in Romero, supra , might argue that his or her relationship to the defendant as a consumer of personal grooming services is distinguishable from the relationship between the parties in Knight (coparticipants in active sport), arguing that the nature of the activity and the relationship of the parties is such that the plaintiff "did not consent to negligent conduct or agree to excuse [the defendant] from liability in the event of such negligence" [see Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 316, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . Thus, defendant breached a duty of care, and plaintiff's choice to encounter the risk of such negligence only permits an apportionment of damages under secondary assumption of risk, rather than a complete bar to recovery under primary assumption of risk [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] .

[1] Services Rendered

Although cosmetic or personal grooming products are frequently used in the practice of barbering and cosmetology, whether the doctrine of strict liability in tort applies depends on the primary objective of the transaction. There remains a distinction between a transaction in which the primary objective is the acquisition of ownership or use of a product and one in which the dominant purpose is to obtain services [Carmichael v. Reitz (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 958, 978, 95 Cal. Rptr. 381] . The well settled rule in California is that the doctrines of implied warranty and strict liability do not apply when the primary objective of a transaction is to obtain services [Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 855, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259] .

While no case specifically involving litigation against barbers or cosmetologist has been found when this principle has been applied, the courts have relied on the rule against application of strict liability to persons rendering services in cases involving, among others, engineers [Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; Bonadiman-McCain, Inc. v. Snow (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 58, 6 Cal. Rptr. 52] , hospitals [Silverhart v. Mount Zion Hosp. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 98 Cal. Rptr. 187] , physicians [Carmichael v. Reitz (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 958, 95 Cal. Rptr. 381] , pharmacies [Murphy v. E. R. Squibb & Sons, Inc.(1985) 40 Cal. 3d 672, 681, 221 Cal. Rptr. 447, 710 P.2d 247] , and a test hole driller [Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 ; see generally Ch. 460, Products Liability].

Even though a beauty salon or barber shop uses and applies cosmetic or personal grooming products in rendering its services, and as such, the cost of those products used are included in the price for the services rendered to patrons, the salon or barber shop apparently would not be strictly liable for defects in such products when it is not a seller engaged in the business of selling such products but a user or consumer of such products [see Silverhart v. Mount Zion Hosp. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1028, 98 Cal. Rptr. 187 (hospital supplies and services)]. The process of manufacturing and distribution ends with the person or firm that sold or otherwise supplied the cosmetic or personal grooming products to the salon or barber shop, and the product that is first placed on the market by the manufacturer leaves the stream of commerce when it comes into the possession of the salon or barber shop [see Silverhart v. Mount Zion Hosp. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 1022, 1027-1028, 98 Cal. Rptr. 187] .

[2] Products Sold

A salon or barber shop that is a retailer engaged in the business of distributing goods to the public is strictly liable in tort for personal injuries caused by defects in the products it sells [see Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 263, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168 (automobile sales); Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 473, 479, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 58 P.3d 450] . Such strict liability in tort has virtually superseded and replaced actions for breach of implied warranty [Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 424, 432, 79 Cal. Rptr. 369] .

For discussion and forms relating to actions based on strict liability in tort arising from purchase of products, see § 97.50 et seq. and § 97.130 et seq.

§ 97.50 Strict Liability in Tort

[1] In General

The rules governing liability of manufacturers, wholesalers, distributors, and retailers of cosmetic and personal grooming products for personal injuries sustained by consumers as a result of the use or application of such products are governed by California law of products liability generally.

The plaintiff's burden of proof in a products liability case for strict liability in tort is met if he or she establishes the elements as formulated in Greenman v. Yuba Power Prods., Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 [Foglio v. Western Auto Supply (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 470, 474, 128 Cal. Rptr. 545] . That is, the manufacturer (1) places an article on the market, (2) knowing that it is to be used without inspection for defects, and the article (3) proves to have a defect (4) that causes injury to a human being [Greenman v. Yuba Power Prods., Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 ; see Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 473, 477, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 58 P.3d 450] .

The policy underlying the doctrine of strict liability is not limited to cases involving latent defects [Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163] , nor does it require a plaintiff to prove that he or she was unaware of the claimed defect at the time of the injury [Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 141-145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163] . When a party relies on the rule of strict liability, however, the requirement of showing a defect cannot be satisfied by reliance on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur [Tresham v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 403, 408, 79 Cal. Rptr. 883 ; McCurter v. Norton Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 402, 408, 69 Cal. Rptr. 493] .

For forms of complaint and allegation alleging that a defendant manufacturer, wholesaler, or retailer is liable for injuries resulting from a defective product under the theory of strict liability in tort, see §§ 97.130 and 97.131.

For a comprehensive treatment of the subject of products liability, see Ch. 460, Products Liability .

[2] Rejection of Restatement Component

Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A provides, in part, that one who sells any product in a defective condition unreasonably dangerous to the user or consumer or to the consumer's property is subject to liability for physical harm thereby caused to the ultimate user or consumer, or to that person's property, if

- The seller is engaged in the business of selling such a product; and

- It is expected to and does reach the user or consumer without substantial change in the condition in which it is sold.

The California Supreme Court rejected the Restatement standard to the extent that it requires the product to be in a "defective condition unreasonably dangerous," because adopting that requirement would impose two burdens on the plaintiff instead of one. That is, it would require proof that a defect existed, and that the defect was unreasonably dangerous. The Court held that the phrase "unreasonably dangerous" relates to the law of negligence and not strict liability, and therefore, the requirement is inconsonant with the rule of strict liability pursuant to Greenman v. Yuba Power Prods., Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 [Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 131-135, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153] .

[3] Defective Warning or Instruction

[a] Known or Knowable Risks

A manufacturer or seller must adequately warn of a particular risk that was known or knowable in light of the generally recognized and prevailing best scientific evidence at the time of manufacture and distribution [see Carlin v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 1104, 1113, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162, 920 P.2d 1347] . The warning must be given when the manufacturer or seller knows or should know that a product is dangerous to some persons, even though few in number as compared with the number of users of the product [McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 607, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 74] . Thus, for example, a manufacturer of a hair frosting product is strictly liable for failing to include a warning that some persons may have an adverse reaction to an irritant contained in the product when a manufacturer has actual knowledge of the possible undesirable consequences [McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72] .

If a product contains an ingredient to which a substantial number of the population is allergic, and the ingredient is one whose danger is not generally known or, if known, is one that the consumer would reasonably not expect to find in the product, the manufacturer or seller is required to give warning against it if it has knowledge or, by the application of reasonable, developed human skill and foresight, should have knowledge of the presence of the ingredients and the danger [Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709] . To prevent the product from being unreasonably dangerous, the manufacturer or seller may be required to give directions or warning on the containers as to its use [Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

In the case of cosmetic products containing coal tar color derivatives, the manufacturer is required by federal and California statutes to place a warning on the product cautioning the potential user that the product contains ingredients that may cause skin irritation on certain individuals, and that a preliminary test should be made in accordance with accompanying directions. The warning must also caution that the product is not to be used for dyeing the eyelashes or eyebrows, because it may cause blindness [21 U.S.C.S. § 361(a); Health & Safety Code § 111675].

A manufacturer may be liable for an inadequate warning, as well as for a complete lack of warning [see McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608 n.4, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 ; Carlin v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal. 4th 1104, 1113, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162, 920 P.2d 1347] .

[b] Adequate Warning or Unknown Risks

If a warning is given, the manufacturer or seller may reasonably assume that it will be read and followed. If a product bearing a warning is safe for use if the warning is followed, it is not in defective condition, nor is it unreasonably dangerous [Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709] . If an injury results from the particular susceptibility of the consumer to the ingredients of a product, and the ingredients are ordinarily safe for use, it is not unreasonable to put the burden on the consumer to protect himself or herself, provided that a proper warning was given [Harris v. Belton (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 595, 608, 65 Cal. Rptr. 808] .

In the absence of a showing that a manufacturer or seller knew or should have known by reasonable, developed human skill and foresight that a product is dangerous, any requirement that the user be warned of unknown and unknowable allergies, sensitivities, and idiosyncracies would place the manufacturer or seller in the role of an insurer [Carmichael v. Reitz (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 958, 993, 95 Cal. Rptr. 381 ; Huynh v. Ingersoll-Rand (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 825, 833-835, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296] . The law does not prohibit the manufacture and sale of a beauty product that adversely affects only about one in 20 users who happen to be allergic or sensitive to it, but it requires that the consumer be advised of the possibility of untoward consequences [Harris v. Belton (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 595, 607, 65 Cal. Rptr. 808] .

An adequate instruction on the use of a product may be sufficient to satisfy the warning requirement [see McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 (dicta); see also Finn v. G. D. Searle & Co. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 691, 699, 200 Cal. Rptr. 870, 677 P.2d 1147] .

[4] No Privity Limitations

The initial purchaser of a cosmetic or personal grooming product is not the only person who may recover under strict liability in tort, because the doctrine of strict liability may not be restricted on a theory of privity of contract. Rather, strict liability extends to consumers, users, bystanders, and human beings generally [see Elmore v. American Motors Corp. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 578, 586, 75 Cal. Rptr. 652, 451 P.2d 84 (defective automobile steering mechanism); Nelson v. Superior Court (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 689, 696-697, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684] .

[5] Proper Defendants

[a] Manufacturers

A manufacturer who places a defective article on the market, knowing that it is to be used without inspection for defects, is strictly liable for injuries caused by the defect [see, e.g., Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 260-261, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168 ; Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 473, 477, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 58 P.3d 450] .

The doctrine of strict liability is applicable to wholesalers [Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 130, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153 ; Barth v. B.F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 252-253, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306] . This is the case even though the wholesaler neither manufactures the product or has possession of the goods [Barth v. B.F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 253, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306] .

[c] Retailers

Retailers are subject to strict liability because, like manufacturers, they are engaged in the business of distributing goods to the public. Retailers are an integral part of the overall producing and marketing enterprise, and should bear the cost of injuries resulting from defective products. The retailer's strict liability thus serves as an additional incentive to safety, and together with the strict liability of manufacturers affords maximum protection to injured persons [Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 262, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168 ; Jimenez v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 473, 477-478, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 58 P.3d 450] .

[6] Defenses

[a] Absence of Defect

Since a manufacturer is strictly liable in tort when an article it places on the market proves to have a defect that causes injury to a human being [Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897] , a requirement for the application of the doctrine of strict liability is that the article was defective when manufactured or sold [Erickson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 793, 798, 50 Cal. Rptr. 143] . Hence, it is a defense to such an action that the product was not defective. Such a defense would take the form of a general denial, because the burden is on the plaintiff to prove that the article was defective and that the defect was a proximate cause of the injury [Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1302, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 Erickson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 793, 798, 50 Cal. Rptr. 143] .

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff's injuries were caused solely by an allergic condition, see § 97.135.

[b] Misuse or Unintended Use

Misuse of a manufacturer's product is recognized as a defense to an action based on strict liability. Misuse will refute an allegation made by a plaintiff of defective condition of the manufacturer's product [McCurter v. Norton Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 402, 407, 69 Cal. Rptr. 493] .

Strict liability should not be imposed on a manufacturer if injury results from a use of its product that is not reasonably foreseeable [Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 126, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153 ; Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1302-1303, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780] . A manufacturer or supplier is entitled to expect normal use of the product, and if the product is used in another manner or, if a specific manner of use or caution is prescribed but not complied with, no liability will attach. In addition, if a warning is given on the product or its package, the manufacturer or seller may reasonably assume that the warning will be read and followed. A product bearing a warning, which is safe for use if the warning is followed, is not in defective condition [Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709] .

The defenses of misuse or unintended use of a product are statements of new matter under Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2), and accordingly, must be affirmatively pleaded. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff's misuse of a product was an intervening cause of his or her injuries, see § 97.133. For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff's use of the product was not reasonably foreseeable, see § 97.134.

The doctrine of comparative fault, set forth in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , applies to actions based on strict products liability [Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 730, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162] . Moreover, in strict products liability claims, the separate defense of assumption of the risk, to the extent that it is a form of contributory negligence, has been merged into comparative fault, and is therefore abolished as a complete or absolute bar to the plaintiff's recovery [Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 738-742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162] . Therefore, in an action based on either strict products liability or negligence, a plaintiff's recovery will be reduced in proportion to the amount of comparative fault attributable to him or her [Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 738, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162 ; Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff's negligence contributed to his or her injury, see § 97.134.

§ 97.51 Negligence Actions

In a products liability case against a manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of cosmetic or personal grooming products, not only may a plaintiff seek recovery on the theory of strict liability in tort, but a cause of action may also be based on the theory of negligence, especially if there is a possibility of conflicting evidence concerning whether the product contained a specific defect in design or manufacture. There is no valid reason to require a plaintiff to elect whether to proceed on the theory of strict liability in tort or on the theory of negligence, hence it is still common to find both theories pleaded in product liability cases for personal injuries [see Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 384-387, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681 ; see also Pike v. Frank G. Hough Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 465, 474, 85 Cal. Rptr. 629, 467 P.2d 229 ; Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 261, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168] .

In an appropriate case, the jury may properly be instructed on traditional negligence principles, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, and on the law of strict liability in tort [Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 384-387, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681] .

Negligence of the manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer, if it exists, usually consists of the use of dangerous product ingredients to achieve product efficacy without adequate controls, and of inadequate warning of a dangerous propensity of the products when the products are sold [Briggs v. National Indus., Inc. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 542, 543-546, 207 P.2d 110] .

For a form of complaint alleging negligence based on a defective product, see § 97.132. For a further discussion of negligence actions generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[1] Defenses

[a] Assumption of Risk

"Reasonable/unreasonable implied assumption of risk" classifications as disapproved; determination of whether plaintiff's recovery is barred or merely apportioned as governed by "primary/secondary assumption of risk" classifications. Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 307, 314-315, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696

Assumption of risk when plaintiff agrees to relieve defendant of obligation of reasonable conduct as not merged into comparative negligence system. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 824-825, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

[b] Comparative Negligence

Negligence of plaintiff available as defense in negligence action when plaintiff returned for repeated treatments in having her hair bleached even though her scalp felt sore and numb after second treatment. Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 303, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645

Negligence of plaintiff available as defense in negligence action when plaintiff failed to disclose knowledge of her allergies to defendant and refused to take patch test suggested on label of hair dye container. Arata v. Tonegato (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 837, 841-842, 314 P.2d 130

[2] Negligence

[a] In General

Persons who render services as having duty to exercise ordinary skill and competence of members of their profession, for failure of which they are liable for negligence. Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811-812, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 855-856, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 25, 40, n.6, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 860

Patron coming to beauty salon as entitled to rely on skill and knowledge of operator who is issuing treatments to her. Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645

Patron of beauty salon who requests well-known treatment involving chemical as having right to expect cosmetologist to comply with precautionary instructions of manufacturer relating to application of solution to hair. Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645

[b] Violation of Statute or Regulation

Presumption of negligence as arising in California from violation of statute that was enacted to protect class of persons of which plaintiff is member against type of harm that plaintiff suffered as result of statutory violation. Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 164, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151 (violation of liquor laws)

Duty of care and attendant standard of conduct for reasonable man as being found in legislative enactment that does not provide for civil liability. Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 164, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151 (violation of liquor laws); Elsner v. Uveges (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 928 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530 102 P.3d 915 (violation of California OSHA provisions)

[c] Res Ipsa Loquitur

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as applicable in negligence actions involving dyes and mechanical treatments administered in beauty salon. Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645

Res ipsa loquitur as applicable when occurrence of injury is of such nature it can be said in light of past experience it probably was result of negligence by someone and defendant cosmetologist is probably person responsible. Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645

Application of doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in case in which plaintiff received permanent wave as proper when devices used in process were under exclusive control of defendants and injury was one that would not have occurred with use of due care. Chauvin v. Krupin (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 322, 326, 40 P.2d 904

[3] Strict Liability

Doctrines of strict liability and implied warranty as not applicable when primary objective of transaction is to obtain service. Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543 ; Allied Properties v. John A. Blume & Associates (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 848, 855, 102 Cal. Rptr. 259 ; Carmichael v. Reitz (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 958, 979, 95 Cal. Rptr. 381 ; Murphy v. E. R. Squibb & Sons, Inc.(1985) 40 Cal. 3d 672, 681, 221 Cal. Rptr. 447, 710 P.2d 247

[1] Defenses

Mere failure to discover defects in product as no defense in strict liability case. Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 127, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153

Plaintiff as under no requirement to prove he or she is not aware of danger or dangerous defect in action based on strict liability in tort for injuries caused by defective product. Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163 ; Smith v. Dhy-Dynamic Co. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 852, 857, 107 Cal. Rptr. 907

Manufacturer as not liable when specific manner of use or caution is prescribed on product package but not complied with by injured party. Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709

[b] Assumption of Risk

In strict liability action, separate defense of assumption of risk, to extent that it is form of contributory negligence, as merged into comparative fault, and therefore abolished as bar to plaintiff's recovery. Daly v. General Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 738, 742, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162 (rejecting contrary result reached in Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163); Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1302, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780

[c] Misuse of Product

Strict liability as not being imposed on manufacturer when injury results from use of its product that is not reasonably foreseeable. Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 126, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153 ; Bunch v. Hoffinger Indus., Inc. (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1302, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780

Manufacturer as not liable when specific manner of use or caution is prescribed on product package but not complied with by injured party. Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709

Misuse of product recognized as defense, since misuse would refute allegation of defective condition and include conduct otherwise labeled contributory negligence. McCurter v. Norton Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 402, 407, 69 Cal. Rptr. 493

Instructing jury on traditional negligence principles, doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, and law of strict liability in tort as permitted in proper case. Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 384-387, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681

Plaintiff as not required to elect between theories of strict liability in tort and negligence, but permitted to seek recovery on both theories. Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 384-387, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681 ; Pike v. Frank G. Hough Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 465, 474, 85 Cal. Rptr. 629, 467 P.2d 229

[3] Res Ipsa Loquitur

Requirement of showing defect in strict liability case as not satisfied by reliance on doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. Tresham v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 403, 408, 79 Cal. Rptr. 883 ; McCurter v. Norton Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 402, 408, 69 Cal. Rptr. 493

[4] Strict Liability

[a] In General

Strict liability as applicable to wholesalers and distributors. Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 130, 104 Cal. Rptr. 433, 501 P.2d 1153 ; Barth v. B.F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 252-253, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306

Doctrine of strict liability as not restricted by theory of privity of contract. Elmore v. American Motors Corp. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 578, 586, 75 Cal. Rptr. 652, 451 P.2d 84 ; Nelson v. Superior Court (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 689, 696-697, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684

[b] Defects

Strict liability action as not requiring proof by plaintiff that he or she was unaware of claimed defect. Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 141, 144-145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163

Strict liability as not limited to cases involving latent defects. Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 145, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163

Manufacturer as strictly liable in tort when article he or she places on market, knowing it is to be used without inspection for defects, proves to have defect that causes injury. Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 260-261, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168 ; Greenman v. Yuba Power Prods., Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 ; Casetta v. United States Rubber Co. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 792, 800, 67 Cal. Rptr. 645

Rationale of strict liability as being that injured person is helpless to protect himself or herself from defective product, and therefore, as between injured user and one who places product on market, the latter should bear the loss. Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 651, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709

Burden as on plaintiff to prove product was defective and defect was proximate cause of injury, in applying strict liability in tort. Erickson v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 793, 798, 50 Cal. Rptr. 143

[5] Warning of Danger

[a] In General

Manufacturer as under duty to give appropriate warning of any danger that user ordinarily would not discover, if manufacturer knows or should know article is dangerous. McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 ; Proctor & Gamble Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court of Marin County (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 157, 162, 268 P.2d 199 ; Briggs v. National Indus., Inc. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 542, 546, 207 P.2d 110

When manufacturer fails to give warning of dangerous propensity of ingredient in hair frosting product, manufacturer as not exempt from liability if instructions for use of product is insufficient to prevent adverse reaction. McKinney v. Revlon, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 602, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72

Product bearing required warning, which is safe for use if warning is followed, as not in defective condition, nor unreasonably dangerous. Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709

When warning is given, seller as being able to reasonably assume it will be read and heeded. Oakes v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 645, 649, 77 Cal. Rptr. 709

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name of personal grooming services provider] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a domestic corporation with its principal place of business at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California [or allege other capacity and residence] and licensed to do business and doing business as a _____ [specify, e.g., beauty salon].

2. Defendant _____ [name of operator or barber performing service] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a licensed _____ [cosmetologist or barber] and was the agent and employee of defendant _____ [name of personal grooming services provider], and in doing the things herein alleged was acting within the scope of such agency and employment.

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend the complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is negligently responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's losses as herein alleged were proximately caused by such negligence of the fictitiously named defendants.)]

4. At all times herein mentioned, the business of defendant _____ [name of personal grooming services provider] included _____ [describe business operations, e.g., bleaching, coloring, and otherwise treating the hair or giving permanent waves to the hair or removing blemishes and other disfigurements of the skin from the face and neck or other as appropriate] of patrons from among members of the general public for consideration, and in connection with these services the compounding, application, and use on patrons of certain chemical products hereinafter called _____ [describe products, e.g., hair color preparations or permanent wave solutions or blemish removing lotions or other as appropriate].

5. On or about _____ [date], at such establishment, plaintiff employed defendants, and each of them, to _____ [describe treatment requested, e.g., color plaintiff's hair]. At such time and place, and at all times herein mentioned, defendants, and each of them, expressly warranted to plaintiff that defendants were competent, experienced _____ [cosmetologists or barbers] and that they possessed and exercised reasonable care and skill in _____ [specify services, e.g., compounding and applying hair color preparations].

6. At such time and place, defendants, and each of them, undertook to _____ [describe type of treatment performed, e.g., color plaintiff's hair], and in connection therewith applied _____ [describe products used, e.g., hair color preparations] to plaintiff's _____ [describe, e.g., hair].

7. Defendants, and each of them, negligently and improperly compounded and applied _____ [describe, e.g., the hair color preparations] to plaintiff's _____ [describe, e.g., hair and scalp] and failed to exercise minimal and reasonable care and skill possessed by other _____ [cosmetologists or barbers] in the community.

8. As a proximate result of such negligence of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity. He/she sustained bodily injuries, and shock and injury to his/her nervous system, all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

9. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff sustained permanent injuries consisting of _____ [describe injuries, e.g., loss of hair or loss of vision or other as appropriate], all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

10. As a further proximate result of such negligence and the injuries to plaintiff thereby caused, plaintiff was, now is, and in the future will be, required to obtain and to incur expense for the services of physicians to examine, diagnose, prescribe, treat, and care for him/her and to incur other medical, hospital, and incidental expenses, all to his/her damage.

11. As a further proximate result of such negligence and the injuries to plaintiff thereby sustained, plaintiff has been prevented and will be prevented from carrying on regular employment.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages;

2. For special damages for medical, hospital, and incidental expenses;

3. For loss of earnings to date, together with future loss of earnings;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in an action for damages against a barber, cosmetologist, or other personal grooming services provider by a patron for personal injuries suffered as a result of negligence in compounding or applying a cosmetic or personal grooming product.

For discussion and forms relating to a cause of action based on negligence generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[3] Allegations

The complaint alleges the following:

- Defendant's residence and capacity (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 395(a), 395.5].

- That defendant was licensed to do business as a beauty salon or barber shop (Paragraph 1) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7317].

- The agency relationship, including the fact that the employee barber or cosmetologist was duly licensed (Paragraph 2) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7317].

- The fictitious names of unnamed defendants (Paragraph 3) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 474].

- Defendants duty of care (Paragaphs 4-6) [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P.2d 851 ; Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854 ; Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795] .

- Actions or omissions of defendants that constitute breaches of duty (Paragraph 7) [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P. 2d 851 ; Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854 ; Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795] .

- That defendants' breach of duty was a proximate cause of plaintiff's injury, resulting in general and special damages (Paragraphs 8-11) [see Hoyem v. Manhattan Beach City Sch. Dist. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 508, 513-514, 150 Cal. Rptr. 1, 585 P2d 851 ; Peter W. v. San Francisco Unified Sch. Dist. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 814, 820, 131 Cal. Rptr. 854 ; Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795] .

[4] Venue

In an action for injury to a customer caused by the negligence of a barber or cosmetologist, either the county in which the injury occurs or the county in which the defendants or some of them reside at the commencement of the action is a proper county for the trial of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If the defendant is a corporation, the defendant may be sued in the county in which the principal place of business is located or in the county in which liability arises [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

For further discussion of venue, see Ch. 571, Venue .

[5] Damages

In an action brought to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action, except in a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment. The defendant may at any time request a statement setting forth the nature and amount of damages being sought [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.11(b)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is in the superior court and is not a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial except in a limited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

§ 97.111 Allegation--Failure to Warn Patron of Products Containing Hazardous Substances and to Conduct Recommended Patch Test

[1] FORM Allegation--Failure to Warn Patron of Products Containing Hazardous Substances and to Conduct Recommended Patch Test

1. At such time and place, defendants, and each of them, undertook to _____ [describe type of treatment performed, e.g., color] plaintiff's hair, and in connection therewith, selected a cosmetic _____ [describe, e.g., hair coloring] product, known as _____ [identify trade name of product].

2. _____ [Identify trade name of product] contained _____ [identify hazardous substances, e.g., a coal tar color derivative called paraphenylenediamine], _____ [allege basis for hazardous substance classification, e.g., classified by federal and California statutes and regulations as a potentially hazardous substance and a strong allergic sensitizer].

3. Because of the classification herein alleged and the danger to potential users, and pursuant to _____ [state authority, e.g., federal and California statutes and regulations], the package of this product contains a warning _____ [state substance of warning, e.g., cautioning against using the product without first testing it on the intended recipient for potential skin irritation or other allergic reactions].

4. Defendants, and each of them, negligently and improperly failed to notify plaintiff of the warning of the product's package and the possible danger to potential recipients of the product's use, failed to make inquiry of plaintiff as to any sensitivity or allergies plaintiff might have to the product's ingredients, and failed to conduct the recommended patch test as described on the product's package, which negligence and recklessness proximately caused injury to plaintiff after the product was applied to plaintiff by defendants.

These allegations are for use in a complaint for personal injuries against a personal grooming services provider, such as a salon or barber shop, to allege negligence in failing (1) to give adequate and recommended warnings to a patron of the potentially injurious effects of a cosmetic or personal grooming product, and (2) to conduct proper patch tests on the patron for adverse effects prior to application [see Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 295, 300-301, 30 Cal. Rptr. 645] .

This form should be used with the form in § 97.110. In an appropriate case these allegations may be used in addition to, or instead of, Paragraphs 6 and 7 of that form.

[3] Federal Statutes

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a domestic corporation having its principal place of business at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California [or allege other capacity and residence], duly licensed to do business and doing business as a cosmetological establishment engaging in the service to the public of removing unwanted hair from the human body by process of _____ [electrolysis or thermolysis].

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a duly licensed electrologist and was the agent and employee of defendant _____ [name of establishment]; in doing the things herein alleged such defendant was acting within the scope of such agency and employment.

4. Defendants, and each of them, held themselves out to the public and to plaintiff as being competent, experienced electrologists and cosmetologists in removing hair from the body by _____ [describe process, e.g., use of an electric needle or the process of thermolysis].

5. On or about _____ [date], at such establishment, plaintiff employed defendants, and each of them, to remove superfluous hair from plaintiff's _____ [describe area, e.g., face or legs or other area as appropriate] by _____ [describe process, e.g., use of an electric needle or the process of thermolysis].

6. At such time and place, defendants, and each of them, undertook to remove the hair from plaintiff's _____ [describe part of body, e.g., face] by _____ [describe process, e.g., use of an electric needle or the process of thermolysis].

7. allergy to _____ [describe product] [and by refusing to have the preliminary skin patch test administered].

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use in an answer to a complaint alleging negligence by a defendant personal grooming services provider for injuries suffered as a result of negligence in compounding or applying a cosmetic or other personal grooming product. The form alleges that the plaintiff refused to disclose or denied that he or she had any allergic sensitivity and refused to permit a patch test.

Under comparative negligence, damages awarded to a plaintiff are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

A statement of any new matter constituting a defense must be contained in an answer to a complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]. If more than one affirmative defense is set forth in the answer, each defense must be separately stated [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)] and numbered [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.112(i)]. If the complaint sets forth more than one cause of action, the affirmative defense must refer to the cause of action it is intended to answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(g)].

describe products, if possible using trade name], for resale to and use by members of the general public in _____ [describe product's use, e.g., cleansing dirt and other foreign matter from the skin and pores of the face and neck or controlling underarm perspiration and odor or coloring the hair or other as appropriate].

3. Defendant _____ [name of wholesaler] ("Wholesaler") is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation duly organized and existing under [and by virtue of] the laws of California with its principal place of business at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California [or allege other capacity and residence].

4. At all times herein mentioned, defendant Wholesaler was engaged in the business of distributing, supplying, and selling certain chemical [and _____ (cosmetic or personal grooming)] products, known as _____[describe products, if possible using trade name] of defendant Manufacturer to retail stores [and _____ (beauty salons or barber shops)], including the _____ [store or salon or shop] of defendants _____ [names of proprietors], for resale to and use by members of the general public in _____ [describe product's use, e.g., cleansing dirt and other foreign matter from the skin and pores of the face and neck or controlling underarm perspiration and odor or coloring the hair or other as appropriate].

5. Defendants _____ [name] and _____ [name] ["Proprietors"] owned and operated a retail store known as _____ [store's name], located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and were engaged in recommending the sale to and use by customers from among members of the general public of _____ [cosmetic or personal grooming] products, including defendant manufacturer's product known as _____ [product name].

6. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend the complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's losses as herein alleged were proximately caused by such fictitiously named defendants.)

7. On or about _____ [date], at the retail store of defendant Proprietors, plaintiff purchased _____ [name of product] of defendant Manufacturer and applied it to his/her _____ [describe part of body, e.g., face and neck] in the manner and for the purpose as intended for such product by defendants, and each of them. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that _____ [name of product] was distributed, supplied, and sold by defendant Wholesaler.

8. Defendants, and each of them, knew that the product of defendant Manufacturer as purchased by plaintiff would be purchased from defendant Proprietors and used [and applied] by members of the general public, such as plaintiff, without inspection for defects by such members of the general public.

9. At the time of plaintiff's purchase of defendant Manufacturer's product, the product, _____ [name of product], was defective, contaminated, dangerous, and unsafe for its intended purpose in that _____ [specify].

10. As a proximate result of the defective, contaminated, dangerous, and unsafe condition of the product as manufactured by defendant Manufacturer, distributed by defendant Wholesaler, and sold at retail to plaintiff by defendant Proprietors, plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity. He/she sustained bodily injuries, and shock and injury to his/her nervous system, all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

11. As a further proximate result of the defective, contaminated, dangerous, and unsafe condition of the product, plaintiff sustained permanent injuries consisting of _____ [describe injuries, e.g., loss of hair or loss of vision or other as appropriate], all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

12. As a further proximate result of the defective, contaminated, dangerous, and unsafe condition of the product, plaintiff was, now is, and in the future will be, required to obtain and to incur expense for the services of physicians to examine, diagnose, prescribe, treat, and care for him/her and to incur other medical, hospital, and incidental expenses, all to his/her damage.

13. As a further proximate result of the defective, contaminated, dangerous, and unsafe condition of the product, plaintiff has been prevented and will be prevented from carrying on regular employment.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages;

2. For special damages for medical, hospital, and incidental expenses;

3. For loss of earnings to date, together with future loss of earnings;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use in an action for damages based on strict liability in tort for injuries against the manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of cosmetic or personal grooming products.

Retail sellers include barbers or cosmetologists who sell cosmetic or personal grooming products to members of the general public.

[3] Strict Liability in Tort

The elements of a claim for strict liability in tort by a consumer against a manufacturer, wholesaler, or retailer are that the defendant (1) has placed an article on the market, (2) knowing that it is to be used without inspection for defects, and the article (3) proves to have a defect (4) that causes injury to a human being [Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 141, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163 ; Greenman v. Yuba Power Products, Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 ; Foglio v. Western Auto Supply (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 470, 474, 128 Cal. Rptr. 545] .

[4] Allegations

This complaint alleges the following:

- The principal place of business of the defendant manufacturer as a basis for venue (Paragraph 1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; see also Ch. 460, Products Liability];

- That the defendant manufacturer was engaged in the production and distribution for resale of the product in question, and hence, placed the product on the market (Paragraph 2);

- The principal place of business of the wholesaler (Paragraph 3);

- That the defendant wholesaler was engaged in the business of distributing, supplying, and selling the product in question to retail stores and beauty salons, and hence, placed the product on the market (Paragraph 4);

- That the defendant retailers sold to product in question to the public, and hence, placed the product on the market (Paragraph 5);

- Facts demonstrating that the plaintiff used the product in question, and did so for the purpose and in the manner for which it was intended (Paragraph 7);

- That the product in question was distributed down the line from the defendant manufacturer to the wholesaler to the retailer (Paragraph 7);

- That the defendant manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer each knew that the product in question was to be used without inspection by consumers for defects (Paragraph 8);

- That the product was defective (Paragraph 9);

- That the defective product caused the plaintiff injuries (Paragraph 10); and

- Plaintiff's damages include physical injuries, as well as pain and suffering, medical expenses, and loss of earnings (Paragraphs 10-13).

8. At all times herein mentioned, defendants, and each of them, knew, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have known, that _____ [describe product, e.g., the skin cleanser] of defendant Manufacturer was a chemical product of such a nature that if it was not properly manufactured, compounded, tested, inspected, packaged, labeled, distributed, and marketed for the use and purpose for which it was intended, it was unsafe and likely to injure the person by whom it was used.

9. Defendant Manufacturer so negligently manufactured, compounded, tested or failed to test, inspected or failed to inspect, packaged, labeled, distributed, and recommended the use of its product that its product was defective, contaminated, and dangerous, unsafe for the use and purpose for which it was intended when used and applied as recommended by defendants, and each of them.

10. The defective, contaminated, and dangerous character of the product and its unsafety for the use and purpose for which it was intended when used and applied as recommended by defendants, and each of them, was known to defendants, and each of them, or in the exercise of reasonable care should have been known or discovered by them, but was not disclosed nor made known to plaintiff.

11. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity. He/she sustained bodily injuries, and shock and injury to his/her nervous system, all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

12. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendants, and each of them, plaintiff sustained permanent injuries consisting of _____ [describe injuries, e.g., loss of hair or loss of vision or other as appropriate], all of which have caused, now cause, and will continue to cause him/her great physical and mental pain and suffering.

13. As a further proximate result of the negligence and the injuries to plaintiff thereby caused, plaintiff was, now is, and in the future will be, required to obtain and to incur expense for the services of physicians to examine, diagnose, prescribe, treat, and care for him/her and to incur other medical, hospital, and incidental expenses, all to his/her damage.

14. As a further proximate result of the negligence and the injuries to plaintiff thereby sustained, plaintiff has been prevented and will be prevented from carrying on regular employment.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use in a negligence action against the manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of a cosmetic or personal grooming product. The allegations of this complaint may be incorporated into the form in § 97.130 as an alternative count in an appropriate case.

Although causes of action based on strict liability against manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers appear to have replaced actions based on negligence in most instances, negligence actions are still pleaded and still serve useful purposes in complaints [see Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 379, 93 Cal. Rptr. 769, 482 P.2d 681] .

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state: TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges:

1. The label contained on and the directions with defendant's _____ [describe product, e.g., hair color preparation] used on plaintiff directed that a preliminary patch test be made before the preparation was applied to the _____ [describe part of body, e.g., hair] to ascertain whether the patron was hypersensitive or allergic to the preparation[, which directions and warning were in compliance with federal and California statutes].

2. Plaintiff did not conduct a preliminary patch test before applying defendant's preparation to his/her _____ [describe part of body, e.g., hair]. If the test had been conducted, any hypersensitivity or allergy plaintiff may have had to defendant's product would have been discovered.

3. The failure to make the preliminary patch test on plaintiff was the sole proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries, if any, and not the result of any defect in defendant's product.

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use as an affirmative defense in an action against a manufacturer, wholesaler, or retailer based in strict liability in tort. The form asserts the defense that the plaintiff's misuse of the product was an intervening cause of the injuries [*see Cronin v. J.B.E. Olson Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 121, 126, 104 Cal. 2. Plaintiff's injuries, if any, were solely and proximately caused by plaintiff's unforeseeable use of the product, and not by any defect in the product.

[3. Plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable and ordinary care, caution, or prudence for his/her own safety to avoid the alleged accident. The resulting injuries and damages, if any, sustained by plaintiff were proximately caused and contributed to by the negligence of plaintiff in that, among other things, he/she _____ (set out acts or omissions of plaintiff that constitute negligence, e.g., applied the hair color preparation to her eyelashes)]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use as an affirmative defense in an action against a manufacturer, wholesaler, or retailer based in strict liability in tort. The form asserts the defense that the plaintiff's use of the product was not reasonably foreseeable, and therefore the defendant is not liable [*see Barker v. Lull Eng'g Co. PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-98 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 98.10

§ 98.10 Governing Law

The general principles and rules of negligence law govern the reciprocal rights and duties between bicyclists and the drivers of motor vehicles as to the ordinary standard of care required, the special standards applied when children are involved, and the legal consequences of contributory negligence, violation of statute, last clear chance, and imminent peril [Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 178-181, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659 ; Lopez v. Ormonde (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 176, 180-181, 65 Cal. Rptr. 513] .

Bicycle riders on a roadway or any paved shoulder have all of the rights and are subject to all of the provisions applicable to vehicle drivers by Veh. Code § 21000 et seq. (rules of the road), which include, but are not limited to, the provisions dealing with driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs, or the combined influence thereof (Veh. Code § 23100 et seq.), as well as Veh. Code §§ 20000-20017 (accidents and accident reports), 27400 (operating vehicle while wearing headphones or earplugs), and 40000.1 et seq. (offenses and prosecutions), except for those provisions that by their very nature can have no application [Veh. Code § 21200].

Bicyclists are also subject to the special provisions regulating the operation and licensing of bicycles as contained in Veh. Code § 21200 et seq. and Veh. Code § 39000 et seq., respectively.

Gov. Code § 831.4 provides public entities with immunity for injuries caused by the condition of roads and trails used for, or to provide access to, specified recreational activities, and this immunity has been applied to injuries sustained on bicycle trails [see, e.g., Prokop v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1341-1342, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 355 (injury allegedly caused by design of access gate to bikeway was covered by trail immunity)]. This public entity immunity is discussed in Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

§ 98.11 Definition

The Vehicle Code defines a bicycle as a device on which any person may ride, propelled by human power through a belt, chain, or gears, and having one or more wheels [Veh. Code § 231]. Bicycles are excluded from the definition of "vehicles" under the Vehicle Code [see Veh. Code § 670; Tomson v. Kischassey (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366, 301 P.2d 55] , but the code provides that a bicyclist riding on a roadway has all the rights and is subject to all the duties applicable to the driver of a vehicle, except where those provisions by their very nature have no application [Veh. Code § 21200].

§ 98.12 Motorists' Duty to Bicyclists

[1] In General

The driver of a motor vehicle who fails to exercise toward a bicyclist that care that would have been exercised by a man of ordinary prudence in the same situation and possessing the same knowledge is chargeable with negligence [Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 179, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659] .

The duties of motorists regarding the operation of their vehicles are set out in Veh. Code §§ 21000 et seq. (rules of the road). For a general discussion of the liability of owners and operators of automobiles, including the rules of the road, see Ch. 82, Automobiles: Causes of Action . For a complaint for damages for personal injuries based on the negligence of the motorist, see § 98.50.

[2] Minor Bicyclists

Ordinarily, it is necessary to exercise greater caution for the protection and safety of a youth of adolescent years than for an adult person who possesses normal physical and mental faculties. One dealing with children must anticipate their ordinary behavior. The fact that they usually cannot and do not exercise the same degree of prudence for their own safety as adults, that they often are thoughtless and impulsive, imposes a duty on those from whose conduct injury to a child may result to exercise vigilance and caution [Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 179 n. 1, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659 ; Calandri v. Ione Unified Sch. Dist. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 542, 547 n.2, 33 Cal. Rptr. 333 ; Guyton v. City of Los Angeles (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 354, 359-360, 344 P.2d 910] .

A driver approaching a child bicycling on a street or highway is not bound to guard against every possible contingency. Nevertheless, if the driver sees a child in a place of danger or reasonably apprehends that, if approached without warning, the child would through fright or bewilderment place itself in a place of danger, it is his or her duty to keep the car under such control as would be reasonably necessary to avoid a collision [Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745] . For a complaint by a minor bicyclist against driver of motor vehicle for personal injuries based on negligence, see § 98.50.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 98.13 Statutes Regulating Operation of Bicycles

[1] In General

The operation of a bicycle is governed by the same provisions of the Vehicle Code respecting rules of the road (Veh. Code § 21000 et seq.), accidents and accident reports (Veh. Code §§ 20000-20017), operating a vehicle while wearing headphones or earplugs (Veh. Code § 27400), and offenses and prosecutions (Veh. Code § 40000.1 et seq.) that govern vehicle drivers generally, except whenthese provisions can have no application [Veh. Code § 21200]. In addition, the Vehicle Code imposes specific regulations regarding the operation of bicycles, as discussed under the following subheadings, below.

[2] Riding Under the Influence of Liquor or Drugs

Any person who rides a bicycle on a highway while under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs, or under the combined influence thereof, will be punished by a fine of not more than $250 [Veh. Code § 21200.5; see Veh. Code § 23100 et seq. (driving under influence of alcohol and/or drugs)]. Violation of*Veh. Code § 21200.5* is a misdemeanor [Veh. Code §§ 21200.5, 40000.13], and a person under 21 years of age convicted of a violation is subject to Veh. Code § 13202.5, which governs suspension, restriction, and delay of juvenile driving privileges [Veh. Code § 21200.5].

[3] Keeping to Right

Every person operating a bicycle on a roadway at a speed less than the normal speed of traffic moving in the same direction at that time must ride as close as practicable to the right-hand curb or edge of the roadway except [Veh. Code § 21202(a)]:

- when overtaking and passing another bicycle or vehicle proceeding in the same direction;
- when preparing for a left turn at an intersection or into a private road or driveway;
- when reasonably necessary to avoid conditions (including, but not limited to, fixed or moving objects, vehicles, bicycles, pedestrians, animals, surface hazards, or substandard width lanes) that make it unsafe to continue along the right-hand curb or edge, subject to the provisions of Veh. Code § 21656 (requirement that slow moving vehicles turn out); or

- when approaching a place where a right turn is authorized.

[4] Riding on One Way Street

Any person operating a bicycle on a roadway that carries traffic in one direction only and has two or more marked traffic lanes may ride as near the left-hand curb or edge of such roadway as practicable [Veh. Code § 21202(b)].

[5] Bicycle Hitching to Vehicle

No person riding on any bicycle may attach the bicycle or himself or herself to any streetcar or vehicle on the roadway [Veh. Code § 21203].

[6] Riding on Seat Required

A person propelling a bicycle upon a highway may not ride other than on or astride a permanent and regular seat attached to the bicycle, unless the bicycle was designed by the manufacturer to be ridden without a seat [Veh. Code § 21204(a)].

[7] Passengers

A bicycle operator may not allow a person to ride as a passenger on a bicycle on a highway anywhere other than on or astride a separate seat attached to the bicycle. If the passenger is four years of age or younger or weighs 40 pounds or less, the seat must have adequate provision for retaining the passenger in place and for protecting the passenger from the moving parts of the bicycle [Veh. Code § 21204(b)]. In addition, Veh. Code § 21712 prohibits a person driving a motor vehicle from allowing a person to ride on a vehicle or portion thereof not designed or intended for the use of passengers. Because of a statutory provision making the duties of vehicle operators generally applicable to bicyclists [see Veh. Code § 21200], Veh. Code § 21712 would appear to prohibit a bicyclist from allowing a passenger to ride on any part of a bicycle not intended for passengers, a broader restriction than that contained in Veh. Code § 21204(b) [Tomson v. Kischassey (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366-367, 301 P.2d 55 ; La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95] . By its terms, Veh. Code § 21712 applies to the passenger as well as the bicyclist; that is, it not only prohibits a bicyclist from permitting a passenger to ride on a portion of the bicycle not intended for passengers, it also prohibits the passenger from so riding. Veh. Code § 21204(b), on the other hand, is applicable only to the bicycle operator.

[8] Helmet Requirements

A person under 18 years of age must wear a properly fitted and fastened bicycle helmet when operating a bicycle, or riding on a bicycle as a passenger, on a street, bikeway, public bicycle path, or trail [Veh. Code § 21212(a)]. This requirement also applies to a person who is a passenger in a restraining seat attached to a bicycle or in a trailer towed by the bicycle [Veh. Code § 21212(a)]. The helmet must meet the standards of the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) or the United States Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), or standards subsequently established by those entities [Veh. Code § 21212(a)]. Violation of the helmet law is an infraction punishable by a fine of not more than $25. The parents or legal guardian of a bicycle operator or passenger who is an unemancipated minor and who violates the law will be jointly and severally liable with the minor for any fine imposed [Veh. Code § 21212(e)]. However, charges against first time offenders will be dismissed [Veh. Code § 21212(d)]. Under prior law, helmet requirements only applied to passengers four years of age or younger, or weighing 40 pounds or less, when the bicycle operator was traveling on a highway [see former Veh. Code § 21204(c)-(d)].

[9] Carrying Articles

No person operating a bicycle may carry any package, bundle, or article which prevents the operator from keeping at least one hand upon the handlebars [Veh. Code § 21205].

[10] Regulation by Local Ordinance

The Vehicle Code does not prevent local authorities, by ordinance, from regulating the registration of bicycles and the parking and operation of bicycles on pedestrian or bicycle facilities, provided such regulation is not in conflict with the provisions of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 21206].

[11] Bicycle Lanes

The Vehicle Code does not prevent local authorities from establishing, by ordinance or resolution, bicycle lanes separated from any vehicular lanes upon highways, other than state highways [Veh. Code § 21207].

With certain exceptions for utility or public utility vehicles, newspaper delivery vehicles, and garbage trucks [see Veh. Code § 21211(c)-(e)], no person shall stop, stand, sit, or loiter on any bikeway as defined in Sts. & Hy. Code § 890.4, or on any bicycle path or trail if the act impedes or blocks the normal and reasonable movement of any bicyclist [Veh. Code § 21211(a)]. Neither shall any person place or park any bicycle, vehicle, or other object on any bikeway or bicycle path or trail that impedes or blocks the normal and reasonable movement of any bicyclist, unless it is necessary for safe operation or it is in compliance with the law [Veh. Code § 21211(b)].

The Department of Transportation and local authorities may, by order, ordinance, or resolution, with respect to freeways, expressways, or designated portions thereof under their respective jurisdiction, prohibit or restrict the use of the freeways, expressways, or any portion thereof by bicycles [Veh. Code § 21960(a)]. Such prohibitory regulation shall be effective when appropriate signs giving notice thereof are erected upon any freeway or expressway and the approaches thereto [Veh. Code § 21960(b)].

[13] Bicycles Prohibited or Restricted on Vehicular Crossings

Bicycles are not permitted on any vehicular crossing, except where the Department of Transportation indicates by signs that bicycles are permitted on all or any portion of the vehicular crossing, or where a special permit has been obtained from the department [Veh. Code § 23330(b)].

§ 98.14 Statutes Regulating Bicycle Equipment

A bicycle operated on a roadway must be equipped with a brake which will enable the operator to make one braked wheel skid on dry, level, clean pavement [Veh. Code § 21201(a)]. A bicycle may not be operated on a highway if it has been altered in such a way that (1) the bicyclist must elevate his or her hands above the level of his or her shoulders in order to grasp the normal steering grip area [Veh. Code § 21201(b)] or (2) the operator cannot safely stop the bicycle, support it in an upright position with at least one foot on the ground, and safely restart it [Veh. Code § 21201(c)].

A bicycle operated during darkness on a highway, a sidewalk where bicycle operation is not prohibited by the local jurisdiction, or a bikeway as defined by Streets & Highway Code § 890.4, must be equipped with the following [Veh. Code § 21201(d), (e)]:

- A white light that, while the bicycle is in motion, illuminates the highway, sidewalk, or bikeway in front of the bicyclist and is visible from a distance of 300 feet in front and from the sides of the bicycle. A lamp or lamp combination that emits a white light and is attached to the operator and visible from 300 feet in front and to the sides may be used instead.

- A red rear reflector visible from 500 feet to the rear when directly in front of lawful upper beams of motor vehicle headlamps.

- A white or yellow reflector on each pedal, shoe, or ankle visible from the front and rear of the bicycle from 200 feet.

- A white or yellow reflector on each side forward of the center of the bicycle, and a white or red reflector on each side to the rear of the center of the bicycle, except on bicycles equipped with reflectorized tires on the front and rear.

Chapter 98 BICYCLES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-98 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 98.15

§ 98.15 Negligence of Bicyclists

[1] In General

Bicyclists have the same rights to the use of the streets as automobile drivers [Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 75, 21 P.2d 432 ; Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745] . However, a bicycle rider is required to exercise ordinary care at all times to avoid placing himself or others in danger and to avoid a collision [La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95] .

The defense of contributory negligence has been invalidated in California and replaced with a system of comparative negligence in which the fundamental purpose is to assign responsibility and liability for damage in direct proportion to the amount of negligence of each of the parties. Thus, in all actions for negligence resulting in injury to person or property, the contributory negligence of the person injured does not bar recovery, but the damages awarded are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the person recovering [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

Prior cases involving contributory negligence are, however, instructive insofar as they illustrate negligent conduct of plaintiffs. Thus, cases decided under former law which held that a bicycle rider who failed to maintain a proper lookout when entering an intersection [see Fietz v. Hubbard (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 124, 131, 138 P.2d 315 ; Judd v. Webster (1920) 50 Cal. App. 743, 745-747, 195 P. 929] or who turned suddenly without looking and without warning [see Church v. Payne (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 382, 393, 97 P.2d 819 ; Peel v. California Belting Co., Inc. (1930) 108 Cal. App. 93, 95-96, 291 P. 219] was negligent are still valid under comparative negligence. However, plaintiff's recovery will depend on the amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff and the amount attributed to defendant.

A bicyclist is not, however, required to look back for vehicles approaching from behind to avoid collisions or to avoid being run over from behind [Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 75, 21 P.2d 432 ; La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95] . Thus, a bicyclist who sees approaching automobiles and then looks away because there is nothing in the situation to warn him or her of impending danger may not be negligent [Morris v. Standard Oil Co. (1922) 188 Cal. 468, 471-472, 205 P. 1073] .

The violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity gives riseto a presumption of negligence where the violation was a proximate cause of resulting death or injury [Evid. Code § 669(a)]. For example, even if it is assumed that a plaintiff bicyclist's action in allowing another to ride on the handlebars in violation of Veh. Code § 21204(b) is not excusable or justifiable, it does not follow that the plaintiff is barred from recovery absent a showing that the violation was a proximately contributing cause of the injury [Farole v. Eichman (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 822, 824, 249 P.2d 261] . Also, the presumption may be rebutted by proof that the violator did what might reasonably be expected of a person of ordinary prudence, acting under similar circumstances, who desired to comply with the law [Evid. Code § 669(b)].

The primary assumption of risk doctrine may constitute a defense for a negligent bicyclist who injures another bicyclist during an organized cycling event. Under the primary assumption of risk doctrine, a participant in an active sport breaches a legal duty of care to other participants only if intentionally injuring another participant or engaging in conduct that is so reckless as to be totally outside the range of the ordinary activity involved in the sporting activity [Knight v. Jewett (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 296, 320-321, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 2, 834 P.2d 696] . In one case, for example, an organized, long-distance bicycle ride on a public highway was a sport covered by the primary assumption of risk doctrine, even though the ride was noncompetitive. The court concluded that a ride of that kind, with a large number of riders, is an athletic activity done for enjoyment and physical challenge, and the risk of injury caused by a negligent coparticipant who swerves into another rider is inherent in the sport. The court also noted that the plaintiff in that case had signed a pre-injury release form that specifically warned of the risk of injuries caused by other participants. Under those circumstances, a negligent bicyclist could not be held liable [Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1220-1222, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] . This defense is probably unavailable, however, if the defendant was merely riding a bicycle on a public street or bike path and was not participating in an organized event [see Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1221, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198] . For a more complete discussion of the primary assumption of risk doctrine, see Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics , and Ch. 380, Negligence .

For an affirmative defense of the negligence of the bicyclist, see § 98.53.

[2] Minor Bicyclist

The defense of negligence of plaintiff may be invoked in an action to recover damages for injuries or death of a minor bicyclist where the child was of an age sufficient to exercise discretion for the avoidance of injury [see Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745] . However, children are judged by a special subjective standard of care and not by the objective reasonable man standard of care of adults. Children are only required to exercise that degree of care expected of children of like age, experience, and intelligence [Brown v. Connolly (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 582, 587, 24 Cal. Rptr. 57] . There is no precise age at which as a matter of law a child is to be held accountable for his or her actions to the same extent as one of full adult age, and the question as to the capacity of a particular child at the time to exercise care to avoid a particular danger is one of fact falling within the province of the trier of fact to determine [Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745] .

Conduct that might otherwise constitute negligence on the part of a child may not be so considered where the child's acts or omissions were done or omitted in an emergency calculated to produce fright, bewilderment, or confusion. As has been held with respect to the conduct of adults under similar circumstances, if the negligence of a driver caused fear and loss of presence of mind on the part of the child so as to impel the child to rush into danger, the child's mere error or mistake of judgment does not necessarily constitute negligence of the plaintiff [Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745] .

The presumption of negligence brought about by the violation of a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity which proximatelycauses death or injury to person or property [Evid. Code § 669(a)] may be rebutted by proof that the person violating the statute, ordinance, or regulation was a child and exercised the degree of care ordinarily exercised by persons of his or her maturity, intelligence, and capacity under similar circumstances, but the presumption may not be rebutted by such proof if the violation occurred in the course of an activity normally engaged in only by adults and requiring adult qualifications [Evid. Code § 669(b)(2)].

9-98 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 98.32

§ 98.32 Decisions

[1] Bicycle Races

Release signed by participant in bicycle race releasing sponsors and cities was valid under Civ. Code § 1668 (discussed in Ch. 380, Negligence), since bicycle racing is not compelled essential service of great public importance; no triable issue of fact existed as to whether release related to type of risk that caused participant's injuries. Okura v. United States Cycling Fed'n (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1462, 1466-1468, 231 Cal. Rptr. 429

[1A] Organized, Noncompetitive Bike Rides

Although participant did not expressly assume the risk of negligence by a co-participant, organized, long-distance bicycle rides on public highways with large numbers of riders involved physical exertion and athletic risks not associated with automobile driving or individual bicycle riding on public streets or on bicycle lanes or paths. The organized, long-distance, group bicycle ride qualified as a "sport" for purposes of the application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine [see Ch. 273, Games, Sports, and Athletics]. The release the participant signed warned of the risk of accidents caused by the participants, indicating that such accidents were an inherent risk of the activity. The rider's movements that caused the collision were not intentional, wanton, or reckless conduct totally outside the range of ordinary activity involved in the sport. Although the rider violated provisions of the vehicle code designed to protect persons using public roads, such violations did not nullify the participant's assumption of the risk. Moser v. Ratinoff (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1222, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198

[2] Negligence of Bicyclist

System of comparative negligence established. Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226

Bicyclists have same rights to use of streets as automobile drivers. Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 75, 21 P.2d 432 ; Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745

Bicycle riders must exercise ordinary care at all times to avoid placing themselves or others in danger and to avoid collision. La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95

[b] Examples

Violation of county ordinance prohibiting riding of bicycles on sidewalk was insufficient ground for dismissal of action against county for personal injuries sustained by minor bicyclist on negligently maintained sidewalk. Acosta v. Los Angeles County (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 208, 210-214, 14 Cal. Rptr. 433, 363 P.2d 473

Minor bicycle rider crossing intersection and looking into a sack was not negligent where there was nothing in the situation to warn him or her of impending danger from truck approaching from opposite direction and truck driver was negligent in turning in intersection and colliding with bicycle rider properly crossing intersection. Morris v. Standard Oil Co. (1922) 188 Cal. 468, 470-472, 205 P. 1073

Bicyclist is not negligent if he or she looks and sees approaching automobiles and then looks away, where there is nothing in situation to warn him or her of impending danger. Morris v. Standard Oil Co. (1922) 188 Cal. 468, 471-472, 205 P. 1073

Negligence of minor bicyclists in riding tandem is question for jury. Tomson v. Kischassey (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 363, 366, 301 P.2d 55 ; La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95

Negligence of bicyclist for failure to give left turn signal is question for jury. Wright v. Sniffin (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 358, 365, 181 P.2d 675

Bicyclist riding into intersection in center of roadway was not negligent where bicyclist and motorist entered intersection at about same time, view was unobstructed, and driver did not see bicyclist and did not apply brakes before collision. Green v. Pedigo (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303-307, 170 P.2d 999

Bicycle rider was negligent in failing to maintain proper lookout when entering intersection. Fietz v. Hubbard (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 124, 131, 138 P.2d 315 ; Judd v. Webster (1920) 50 Cal. App. 743, 745-747, 195 P. 929

Bicycle rider struck by automobile behind him was negligent in suddenly turning without looking and without warning. Church v. Payne (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 382, 393, 97 P.2d 819 ; Peel v. California Belting Co., Inc. (1930) 108 Cal. App. 93, 95-96, 291 P. 219

Bicyclist suddenly making left hand turn into path of car following without any warning and without looking to ascertain safety was negligent. Church v. Payne (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 382, 393, 97 P.2d 819

[3] Duties of Drivers

Driver crossing or turning into intersection and striking bicyclist in plain view is negligent. Morris v. Standard Oil Co. (1922) 188 Cal. 468, 470-472, 205 P. 1073 ; Flury v. Beeskau (1934) 139 Cal. App. 398, 402-405, 33 P.2d 1033 ; Christie v. McCall (1917) 35 Cal. App. 546, 548-549, 177 P. 507

Person who struck passing bicyclist by opening vehicle door was included within definition of "driver," for purposes of Veh. Code § 16070(a) financial responsibility requirement. Adler v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 252, 258-259, 279 Cal. Rptr. 28

Driver of motor vehicle, who fails to exercise that care toward bicyclist which would have been exercised by man of ordinary prudence in same situation and possessing same knowledge, is chargeable with negligence. Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 179, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659

Duty of driver to sound horn when conditions are such as to require timely warning of approach of his or her automobile; fact that operation of vehicle is productive of noise does not relieve driver of duty to give warning where it appears that bicyclist rightfully using highway is unaware of his or her approach. Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745

Taxi driver striking bicyclist from behind was negligent. Peluso v. City Taxi Co. (1919) 41 Cal. App. 297, 298-299, 182 P. 808

[b] Toward Minor Bicyclists

Motor vehicle drivers' special duty of care toward minor bicyclists. Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 179 n.1, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659 (approving BAJI No. 148); Calandri v. Ione Unified Sch. Dist. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 542, 547 n. 2, 33 Cal. Rptr. 333 ; Guyton v. City of Los Angeles (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 354, 359-360, 344 P.2d 910 ; Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745

Driver's knowledge that paper boy on bicycle might be in vicinity was one factor to be considered by trier of fact in determining what reasonable man would have done in same situation. Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 173, 179, 85 Cal. Rptr. 659

Truck driver striking minor bicyclist crossing street in residential area was negligent where minor was clearly visible and had looked up and down street from sidewalk edge, had seen no moving traffic, and was half way across street when struck by truck. Carter v. Saxton (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 836, 838, 27 Cal. Rptr. 671

Driver approaching child bicycling on street or highway is not bound to guard against every possible contingency; nevertheless, driver has duty, if driver sees child in place of danger, or might reasonably apprehend that if approached without warning child would through fright or bewilderment place itself in place of danger, to keep his or her car under such control as would be reasonably necessary to avoid collision. Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745

[4] Equipment

Plaintiff not required to establish that he or she was not aware of defect at time of accident. Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 136, 139, 104 Cal. Rptr. 443, 501 P.2d 1163

Requirements for imposing strict liability in tort. Vandermark v. Ford Motor Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 256, 260-261, 37 Cal. Rptr. 896, 391 P.2d 168 ; Greenman v. Yuba Power Prod., Inc. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 57, 62, 27 Cal. Rptr. 697, 377 P.2d 897 ; Barth v. B.F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 241-242, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306

Failure of bicycle to have front light or rear reflector at night was not proximate cause of accident or contributory negligence where bicyclist was visible in headlights of car which struck him from behind. Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 73, 21 P.2d 432

Presumption of negligence based on failure of bicycle to carry lights at night. Rabe v. Western Union Tel. Co. (1926) 198 Cal. 290, 295-297, 244 P. 1077 ; Joseph v. Vogt (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 439, 440-441, 95 P.2d 947

Liability under theory of strict liability in tort is not precluded because danger is obvious. Thompson v. Package Mach. Co. (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 188, 192-196, 99 Cal. Rptr. 281

Doctrine of strict liability in tort is not confined to products which are inherently dangerous; defect in article as well as proximate cause may be established by circumstantial evidence. Johnson v. Standard Brands Paint Co. (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 331, 337-338, 79 Cal. Rptr. 194

Strict liability in tort of manufacturer, wholesaler, retail dealer, or distributor; only group of persons exempt from liability is occasional seller not engaged in that activity as part of his or her business. Barth v. B. F. Goodrich Tire Co. (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 228, 250-251, 71 Cal. Rptr. 306

Presumption of negligence on failure to have lights on bicycle at night is consideration for jury in determining issue of contributory negligence and not contributory negligence as a matter of law. Wright v. Sniffin (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 358, 365, 181 P.2d 675 ; Young v. Boy Scouts of Am. (1935) 9 Cal. App. 2d 760, 766-767, 51 P.2d 191

Bicycles not required by law to have horn or other audible warning device. Green v. Pedigo (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 300, 307-308, 170 P.2d 999

Failure to have front headlamps on bicycles at night was immaterial and not negligence where two minor bicyclists riding on right edge of road at night had red reflectors on rear of bicycles and were struck from behind by negligent driver. Flynn v. Kumamoto (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 607, 607-610, 72 P.2d 248

Failure of minor bicyclist to have front light or rear reflector at night was not proximate cause of accident or negligence where it was dark, rainy, and slippery, and bicyclist was struck from behind by truck driven at high speed with dim lights which would not have shown rear reflector on bicycle in time to avoid collision. Greeneich v. Knoll (1925) 73 Cal. App. 1, 5-8, 238 P. 163

[5] Rights and Duties of Bicyclists

[a] In General

Bicyclists and minor bicyclists have same rights to use of streets as automobile drivers. Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 75, 21 P.2d 432 ; Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745

Bicycle rider not required to look back for vehicles approaching from behind to avoid collisions or to avoid being run over from behind. Hart v. Farris (1933) 218 Cal. 69, 75, 21 P.2d 432 ; La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95

Bicyclist was properly convicted of violating Veh. Code § 22350 (basic speed law) for riding bicycle at approximately 49 miles per hour; bicycles are subject to same rules as motor vehicles under Veh. Code § 21200 et seq.; bicyclist's contention that it was impossible for bicycle to travel 49 miles per hour was issue for trier of fact that could not be relitigated on appeal. People v. Fong (1993) 17 Cal. App.4th Supp 1, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 907

Bicycle rider must exercise ordinary care at all times to avoid placing himself or others in danger and to avoid collision. La Fleur v. Hernandez (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 569, 574, 191 P.2d 95

[b] Minor Bicyclists

Presumption of negligence derived from child's violation of statute pertaining to standards of conduct as set forth in the Vehicle Code is rebuttable by showing that child, in spite of violation, exercised care that children of his or her maturity, intelligence, and capacity ordinarily exercise under similar circumstances. Cummings v. County of Los Angeles (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 258, 14 Cal. Rptr. 668, 363 P.2d 900 ; Brown v. Connolly (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 582, 587, 24 Cal. Rptr. 57

Children are judged by special subjective standard of care and not by objective reasonable man standard of care of adults; children are only required to exercise degree of care expected of children of like age, experience, and intelligence. Brown v. Connolly (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 582, 587, 24 Cal. Rptr. 57

Question as to capacity of particular child to exercise care to avoid particular danger is one of fact falling within province of jury to determine, there being no precise age at which as matter of law child is held accountable for his or her actions to same extent as one of full adult age. Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 460, 294 P. 745

Negligence of driver in causing fear and loss of presence of mind on part of child so as to impel child to rush into danger and make error or mistake of judgment does not necessarily constitute negligence of child. Hunt v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1930) 110 Cal. App. 456, 461, 294 P. 745

[6] Motorcycles

Trial court properly denied preliminary injunction in action by four motorcyclists to enjoin enforcement of California Mandatory Motorcycle Helmet Law (Veh. Code § 27802 et seq.) because plaintiffs had failed to demonstrate likelihood of success at trial on merits. Buhl v. Hannigan (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1626-1628, 20 Cal. Rptr.2d 740

CAUSE OF ACTION OF PLAINTIFF _____ [name of minor]

Plaintiff _____ [name of minor], a minor, through his/her guardian [ad litem] alleges:

1. Plaintiff _____ [name of minor] is a minor child of the age of _____ years and at all times relevant herein was of the age of _____ years.

[EITHER]

2. For the purposes of this action, _____ [name] was duly appointed by order of the above-entitled court, and now is, guardian ad litem of plaintiff _____ [name of minor].

[OR]

2. On _____ [date], _____ [name] was, by order duly made in the above-entitled court, appointed guardian of the person of plaintiff _____ [name of minor], and ever since has been, and now is, the guardian of said plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

3. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner of a certain _____ [year, make, model] automobile, California License No. _____.

[4. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____ (numeral, e.g., V), inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of said fictitiously named defendants is negligently responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged and that plaintiff's injuries as herein alleged were proximately caused by said negligence.)]

5. At all times herein mentioned, _____ [street] and _____ [street] were public streets and highways in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

6. On or about _____ [date], at or about _____ [time], plaintiff _____ [name of minor] was operating a bicycle _____ [description of plaintiff's position or actions, e.g., along the right hand edge of the roadway of Main Street in a northerly direction near its intersection with First Street in said city, county, and state].

7. At that time and place, defendant negligently controlled, operated, and drove his/her automobile along and on _____ [street] so as proximately to cause it _____ [description of accident and effect of impact, e.g., to collide with the bicycle operated by plaintiff _____ (name of minor), throwing him/her violently to the pavement and dragging him/her approximately 10 feet,] and to cause the injuries and damages described below.

8. As a proximate result of the negligence[, carelessness, recklessness, and unlawfulness] of defendant, plaintiff _____ [name of minor] was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her body and shock and injury to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused and continue to cause him/her great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering.

9. Plaintiff _____ [name of minor] is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her.

10. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant and the collision described above, plaintiff _____'s [name of minor] bicycle was _____ [describe damage, e.g., totally demolished] and his/her clothing and _____ [other personal property damaged] were destroyed; for the replacement of the bicycle and the damaged clothing and personal property, said plaintiff will be required to pay approximately $_____, which is the reasonable value of the replacement necessitated by the damage.

CAUSE OF ACTION OF PLAINTIFFS _____ [names of parents]

Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] allege:

11. Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] repeat the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1-8 of the Cause of Action of Plaintiff _____ [name of minor] and make each of those allegations a part of this Cause of Action as if each such allegations were herein repeated in full.

12. Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] are, and at all times herein mentioned were, the parents of plaintiff _____ [name of minor].

13. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant and the injuries suffered by plaintiff _____ [name of minor], as alleged above, plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] were compelled to, and did, necessarily employ medical and surgical aid and attention for their minor child, and did necessarily pay and become liable therefor, and for nursing, medicine, surgical appliances, and incidental expenses; plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] are informed and believe and thereon allege that they will incur additional bills for medical, surgical, and other expenses in order to alleviate the pain and suffering and effect a cure of their minor child as a result of the injuries.

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs pray judgment against defendant as follows:

1. In favor of plaintiff _____ [name of minor] for general damages according to proof.

2. In favor of plaintiff _____ [name of minor] for damages to his/her personal property in the sum of $_____.

3. In favor of plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] for medical and incidental expenses according to proof.

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This complaint is for use by a minor bicyclist to recover general damages sustained as the result of being struck by an automobile.In this complaint, the parents of the minor are joined in a separate cause of action to recover medical expenses incurred in treatment of the minor. Alternatively, when a parent is the guardian ad litem of the minor, the minor's cause of action may include an allegation to recover such medical expenses as have not been paid [Morningred v. Golden State Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 130, 138-139, 16 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; Mattox v. Isley (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 774, 779-780, 245 P.2d 664] . Some attorneys prefer to seek medical expenses in the minor's cause of action rather than to include a separate cause of action by the parents. Recovery of the minor's medical expenses, whether sought in the minor's cause of action or a separate cause of action by the parents, will be reduced by the negligence of the parents [see Randles v. Lowry (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 68, 73, 84 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

[3] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified also, if the action is an unlimited civil case [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial even in a limited civil case when the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion see Ch. 26, Answers .

[4] Specifying Amount of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

This complaint for damages sets forth a cause of action for the wrongful death of a bicyclist killed in a collision with an automobile.

Paragraph 1 of the complaint alleges the capacity of plaintiffs as persons who are entitled to bring a cause of action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60 (permitting decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children to bring action without qualification, permitting others to bring action under specified circumstances, and permitting personal representative of decedent's estate to bring action on behalf of entitled persons). For forms of allegations establishing that specific classes of persons are entitled to bring a wrongful death action, including allegations that are required of plaintiffs who are not the decedent's surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, or issue of deceased children, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

When the plaintiff is a minor, a guardian ad litem will have to be appointed for the purposes of the action, unless the minor already has a guardian [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372]. For discussion and forms relating to appointment of a guardian ad litem generally, see Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

If the decedent incurred medical expenses before his or her death, these expenses are not recoverable in a wrongful death action [Follansbee v. Benzenberg (1954) 122 Cal. App. 2d 466, 473-474, 265 P.2d 183] . They should instead be sought by the personal representative in a survival action under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.30 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34], and counsel may wish to combine this action with the wrongful death action since both arise out of the same occurrence [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.62(a) (joinder of plaintiffs)].

[7. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____ (numeral, e.g., V), inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of such fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged and that the injuries of plaintiff _____ [name of minor] as herein alleged were proximately caused by such defendants.)]

8. Defendant _____ [manufacturer] intended that the _____ [trade name or other designation] bicycles manufactured, designed, and assembled by it were to be used for the purpose of transporting persons and property from one place to another by operation by an individual of the mechanical devices therein installed.

9. Defendants, and each of them, at all times herein mentioned knew that the _____ [trade name or other designation] bicycles manufactured, designed, and assembled by defendant _____ [manufacturer] would be purchased from defendant _____ [retailer] and used by the purchaser or user without inspection for defects therein or in any of its component parts.

10. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [name of minor] purchased from defendant _____ [retailer] at its principal place of business in _____ [city], California, a _____ [specify model, make, size, etc., and trade name or other designation] bicycle, manufactured, designed, and assembled by defendant _____ [manufacturer].

11. At the time of said plaintiff's purchase, the _____ [trade name or other designation] bicycle was defective and unsafe for its intended purpose in that _____ [specify, e.g., the bicycle chain was not attached together securely enough for its intended use resulting in its continually being overstrained by the normal and intended use of the bicycle].

12. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff _____ [name of minor] was using and operating the hereinabove described _____ [trade name or other designation] bicycle at _____ [location] for the purpose of transporting himself/herself from one place to another, and, during the course of such use and operation and as a proximate result of the defect hereinabove described, _____ [describe, e.g., the bicycle chain broke, causing said plaintiff to be thrown from the bicycle], proximately causing the injuries and damages to plaintiff hereinafter described.

13. As a proximate result of the defect and the accident proximately caused thereby, plaintiff _____ [name of minor] was hurt and injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining injury to his/her body and shock and injury to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused and continue to cause said plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering.

14. Plaintiff _____ [name of minor] is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the injuries will result in some permanent disability to him/her and that he/she is damaged thereby.

15. As a further proximate result of the defect and the accident proximately caused thereby, plaintiff _____'s [name of minor] bicycle was damaged and his/her clothing and _____ [other personal propertydamaged] were damaged; for the _____ [repair or replacement] of the bicycle and the damaged clothing and personal property, said plaintiff will be required to pay approximately $_____, which is the reasonable value of the _____ [repair or replacement] necessitated by the damage.

Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] allege:

16. Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] repeat the allegations contained in Paragraphs 1-15 of the Cause of Action of Plaintiff _____ [name of minor] and make each of such allegations a part of this Cause of Action as if each of such allegations were herein repeated in full.

17. Plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] are, and at all times herein mentioned have been, the _____ [specify relationship, e.g., parents] of plaintiff _____ [name of minor].

18. As a proximate result of the defect and the accident proximately caused thereby and by reason of the injuries suffered by plaintiff _____ [name of minor], as aforesaid, plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] were compelled to, and did, necessarily employ medical and surgical aid and attention for their minor child, and did necessarily pay and become liable therefor, and for nursing, medicine, surgical appliances and incidental expenses; plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] are informed and believe and thereon allege that they will incur additional bills for medical, surgical, and other expenses in order to alleviate the pain and suffering and to effect a cure of their minor child, all as a result of the aforementioned injuries.

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs pray judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. In favor of plaintiff _____ [name of minor] for general damages according to proof;

2. In favor of plaintiff _____ [name of minor] for damages to his/her personal property in the sum of $_____;

3. In favor of plaintiffs _____ [names of parents] for medical and incidental expenses according to proof;

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Negligence of Bicyclist

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

At the time and place of the accident herein alleged, plaintiff did not exercise ordinary care or caution to avoid the accident, and plaintiff maintained, controlled, and operated his/her bicycle in a careless, reckless, and negligent manner and thereby proximately caused and contributed to the injuries and damages, if any, sustained by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

This defense of plaintiff's negligence may be set forth in an answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30] to a complaint by a bicyclist or the bicyclist's representative. Under comparative negligence, damages awarded to a plaintiff are diminished in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to that plaintiff [Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226] .

Defendant may wish to set out in the answer the specific acts constituting the negligence of plaintiff, but there is no requirement that the defendant do so [see Singer v. Superior Court (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 318, 323-324, 5 Cal. Rptr. 697, 353 P.2d 305] .

[2] Use of Form

This general form of complaint may be used to obtain damages for personal injuries and personal property damage caused to a pedestrian by a negligent bicyclist. With appropriate modification, this form can be used if the plaintiff was also a bicyclist and sustained injuries caused by another bicyclist.

Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may wish to delete paragraphs of the complaint that do not apply. For example, if no DOE defendants are involved, Paragraphs 2 and 3 would be omitted. If no property damage is involved, Paragraph 10 of the complaint and Paragraph 4 of the prayer would be omitted.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-99 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 99.11

§ 99.11 Delayed Application for Birth Certificate

[1] Procedures

An application may be filed with the State Registrar of Vital Statistics for delayed registration of the birth of any person born in California whose birth is not registered [Health & Safety Code § 102535]. The administrative procedure provided in Health & Safety Code §§ 102525-102610 for delayed application for a birth certificate of a person born in California is not exclusive of the procedure provided in Health & Safety Code §§ 102400-102520 for live birth registration or the procedure provided in Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490 to establish a record of birth by a court proceeding; it merely offers an alternative method of establishing a record of birth [Health & Safety Code § 102525].

When the State Registrar receives an application for delayed registration of birth and the required fee, the Registrar must review the application, together with the affidavits and documentary evidence accompanying it, and must accept the application if it meets the statutory requirements. After acceptance by the Registrar, the application constitutes a delayed certificate of birth [Health & Safety Code § 102600(a)]. The Registrar is required to give priority in processing to any application for a child who has been adjudged a dependent child of, and who is subject to the jurisdiction of, the juvenile court under Welf. & Inst. Code § 300 [Health & Safety Code § 102600(b)].

[2] Use as Evidence

Delayed certificates of birth issued pursuant to Health & Safety Code §§ 102525-102610 are not considered as evidence in any action or proceeding involving estates of decedents or in any proceeding to establish heirship unless the affidavit [see Health & Safety Code § 102575] of at least one person who knew the facts was filed at the time of obtaining the certificate [Health & Safety Code § 102530].

[1] In General

Any beneficially interested person may petition the superior court for an order judicially establishing the fact, time, and place of a birth [Health & Safety Code § 103450]. The petition must be filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the birth took place or in which the person whose birth is sought to be established resides [Health & Safety Code § 103450]. If the time and place of birth are not known, the petition should contain all of the facts known to the petitioner or otherwise available and a statement of the probable time and place of birth as accurately as the circumstances permit [Health & Safety Code § 103460]. If a petitioner files a petition to correct the original birth certificate to state the actual names of the petitioner's birth parents, rather than fictitious names used when the original certificate was prepared, a trial court has the authority to adjudicate the facts concerning a possible biological relationship [Wynn v. Superior Court (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 346, 350, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 86].

If a court determines a plaintiff' birth certificate is not accurate, the court is obligated to order the issuance of a new birth certificate [Wynn v. Superior Court (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 346, 350, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 86].

[2] Presumption

Every order determining the date of birth made pursuant to Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490 establishes a presumption that the matter contained therein is a true and accurate statement of the time of birth. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof [Health & Safety Code § 103485].

[3] Recording

The State Registrar of Vital Statistics is required to send certified copies of the court order establishing the fact, time, and place of a birth to the local registrar and county recorder of the county in which the birth took place and in whose offices records for the year of the birth are on file [Health & Safety Code § 103490]. However, if the birth took place outside of California, a certified copy will be sent only to the county recorder of the county in which the petitioner resides [Health & Safety Code § 103490].

§ 99.13 Revision of Birth Records to Reflect Change of Sex

Whenever a person born in California has undergone surgical treatment for the purpose of altering his or her sexual characteristics to those of the opposite sex, a new birth certificate may be prepared for that person reflecting the change of sex and any change of name accomplished by an order of a court of this state, another state, the District of Columbia, or any territory of the United States [Health & Safety Code § 103425]. Out-of-state residency does not bar a change of gender on a California birth certificate [Somers v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1414, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 (Health & Safety Code § 103425 requirement that petition be filed in the county of residence violated Equal Protection clause and Priviledges and Immunities clause and trial court has jurisdiction to order issuance of new California birth certificate)]. In these circumstances, a petition for the issuance of a new birth certificate may be filed in the superior court of the county in which the petitioner resides [Health & Safety Code § 103425; see § 99.35[2]].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

§ 99.14 Court Proceeding to Establish Death

Any beneficially interested person may petition the superior court for an order judicially establishing the fact, time, and place of a death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)]. The petition must be filed with the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the death took place or in which the decedent was domiciled at the time of death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)].

In the event of a mass fatalities incident, a verified petition may be filed by a coroner, medical examiner, or any beneficially interested person with the superior court for the county in which the death is alleged to have occurred or in which the person was domiciled at the date of death, for an order to establish judicially the fact, time, and place of death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(b)]. In the event of such an incident, a single verified petition with respect to all persons who died may be filed by a coroner or medical examiner with the superior court for the county in which the incident occurred to establish the fact, time, and place of each person's death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(c)]. A "mass fatalities incident" is a situation in which there are more dead bodies than can be handled using local resources, numerous persons are known to have died but no bodies were recovered from the site of the incident, or numerous persons are known to have died but the recovery and identification of the bodies of those persons is impracticable or impossible [Health & Safety Code § 103451(a)]. The county coroner or medical examiner may make the determination that one or more of these conditions exists [Health & Safety Code § 130451(b)].

On the filing of a petition for a determination of the fact of death in the event of a mass fatalities incident, the clerk must set a hearing within 15 days from the date the petition is filed [Health & Safety Code § 103466]. The petitioner must make a reasonable effort to provide notice of the hearing to the deceased's known heirs up to the second degree of relationship [Health & Safety Code § 103466]. Failure to provide this notice will not invalidate the judicial proceedings regarding the determination of the fact of death [Health & Safety Code § 103466].

The State Registrar must send a certified copy of the court ordered death certificate to the local registrar and the county recorder within the area where the event occurred [Health & Safety Code § 103490(a)]. In the event of a mass fatalities incident, the State Registrar must send a certified copy of the court ordered death certificate to the local registrar and the county recorder of the county in which the incident occurred and to the decedent's spouse or next of kin [Health & Safety Code § 103490(b)].

If title to or an interest in real or personal property is affected by the death of a person, the appropriate proceeding to establish the fact of death is provided by Prob. Code §§ 200-215 [for forms, see Ch. 441, Probate: Disposition Without Administration]. Under those sections, specified documents establishing the fact of death may be recorded in the county in which the real property is located [see Prob. Code § 210]. In contrast, a proceeding under Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490 is used to obtain a registration of a death when registration is not otherwise obtainable, as when there is no body for examination and issuance of a death certificate [see Health & Safety Code § 103450].

The form in [1], above, is the official application form prescribed by the State Registrar of Vital Statistics for an application for delayed registration of birth [see Health & Safety Code § 102550]. The application may be filed with the State Registrar for delayed registration of the birth of any person born in California whose birth is not registered [Health & Safety Code § 102535]. If the person was born outside California, a court proceeding to establish a record of birth is required [see § 99.31]. The official instructions printed on the reverse side of the application form should be read carefully before the application is completed.

A copy of this form may be obtained from the county health department or from the State Registrar at the following address:

State of California
Department of Health Services
Office of the State Registrar of Vital Statistics
304 S Street
Sacramento, CA 95814

[3] Application; Who May Apply

An application may be filed with the State Registrar of Vital Statistics for delayed registration of the birth of any person born in California whose birth is not registered. If the person whose name is being registered is 18 years of age or older at the time of the application, he or she is the only person who may make the application. If the person whose birth is being registered is under 18 years of age at the time of filing the application, the application may be made only by his or her mother, father, legal guardian, or the attending physician or principal attendant at birth [Health & Safety Code § 102535].

[4] Supporting Papers and Evidence

The application must be supported by documentary evidence, affidavits, or declarations under penalty of perjury [Health & Safety Code § 102550; see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) (declaration under penalty of perjury in lieu of affidavit)]. At least one of the following must be presented [Health & Safety Code § 102585]:

- Two pieces of documentary evidence, at least one of which supports the parentage.

- One piece of documentary evidence and an affidavit or declaration executed by the physician or other principal attendant.

- One piece of documentary evidence and two affidavits or declarations executed by the mother, the father, or another person having knowledge of the facts of birth.

"Documentary evidence," as used in Health & Safety Code §§ 102525-102610, is defined as original or certified copies of a record that was executed at least five years before the date of application, which substantiates the date and place of birth of the person whose birth is being registered [Health & Safety Code § 102580]. However, if the person whose birth is being registered is under 12 years of age, the record must have been executed only two years or more before the date of application [Health & Safety Code § 102580]. Examples of documentary evidence that are generally considered acceptable are hospital records of birth, baptismal certificates or other church records, school records, census records, social security records, military service records, voting registration records, birth certificates of the child of the person whose birth is being registered, certificates of registry of marriage, and newspaper notices of birth [Health & Safety Code § 102580].

"Affidavit," as used in Health & Safety Code §§ 102525-102610, is defined as a written statement executed under oath by a person who was at least five years old at the time of birth and had knowledge of the facts of birth [Health & Safety Code § 102575]. It must include the full name of the person whose birth is being registered, the names of his or her parents, the date and place of his or her birth, and the basis of the affiant's knowledge of these facts [Health & Safety Code § 102575].

[5] Filing Fee

The filing fee for the application may be adjusted annually [see Health & Safety Code § 100430].

_____ [signature]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a petition for a judicial order establishing the fact, time, and place of a birth that is not registered or for which a certified copy of a birth certificate is not available [see Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)]. Any beneficially interested person may file the petition in the superior court of the county in which the birth occurred or in which the person whose birth is sought to be established is domiciled [Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)].

[3] Contents of Petition

[a] In General

The petition must be verified and must contain all the facts necessary to enable the court to determine the fact of and the time and place of the birth on the proofs adduced at the hearing [Health & Safety Code § 103455].

[b] Unknown Time or Place of Birth

If the time and place of birth are not known, the petition must contain all the facts known to the petitioner or otherwise available and a statement of the probable time and place of birth as accurately as the circumstances permit, and the petition in such a case will be verified only as to the known facts [Health & Safety Code § 103460].

[4] Setting Hearing

When the petition is filed, hearing is set by the clerk and at the convenience of the court at a time not less than five nor more than 10 days after the filing of the petition. The hearing may be continued beyond the 10-day period by the court for good cause [Health & Safety Code § 103465].

[5] Notice of Hearing

The statutes do not prescribe notice requirements for the hearing on the petition [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490]. Local rules of court should be consulted.

[6] Filing Fee

The fee for filing the petition is $205 [Health & Safety Code § 103470]. In addition, an $11.00 fee is payable to the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103695].

[7] Assignment to Probate Court

In counties having more than one superior court judge, the petition may be heard by any judge of the superior court hearing probate matters, or if a probate department has been designated for hearing probate matters, the clerk assigns the matter to the probate department for hearing [Health & Safety Code § 103470].

[8] Hearing and Court Order

[a] In General

The hearing may be held in chambers [Health & Safety Code § 103465]. If the allegations of the petition are established to the satisfaction of the court, the court may make an order determining that the birth did in fact occur at the time and place shown by the proofs adduced at the hearing [Health & Safety Code § 103475]. In uncontested proceedings, an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury may be used to establish a record of birth [Code Civ. Proc. § 2009; see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5].

[b] Unknown Time or Place of Birth

If the time and place of birth are not known, the court must receive and consider whatever evidence and testimony may be available, and, from the facts adduced, may, by order, fix the time and place which the court finds to be a probable time and place of birth of the person in relation to whom the petition was filed. The time and place so fixed thereafter is the time and place of birth of the person for all purposes [Health & Safety Code § 103480].

[c] State Form of Order

The order must be made in the form and on the blank prescribed and furnished by the State Registrar [see § 99.32], and will become effective on the filing of a certified copy with the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103485].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is Department of Health Services Form VS-108, the official form of court order establishing the fact of birth, prescribed by the State Registrar of Vital Statistics pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 103485. It must be used in court proceedings to judicially establish the fact, time, and place of a birth that is not registered [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490; see also § 93.31[2]]. It becomes effective on the filing of a certified copy with the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103485].

This form is included for illustrative purposes only. Only an original printed copy of the form should be used. Original copies may be obtained from the Department of Health Services, Office of Vital Statistics, local county recorders' offices, or local county health department offices. Requests for this form may be transmitted to the Department by online e-mail request [see OVRform@dhs.ca.gov], or by telephone at (916) 445-2684. The form will be accompanied by specific instructions to be used in completing the form. These instructions must be adhered to exactly or the record will not be accepted for filing with the Office of Vital Statistics.

The Court Order Delayed Registration of Birth attached to the order should be completed before the order is presented to the judge for signature.

Judicial Form MC-360] and Declaration in Support of Petition to Establish Record of Death [Cal. Judicial Form MC-360-A]. They may be used to request a judicial order establishing the fact, time, and place of a death that is not registered or for which a certified copy of a death certificate is not available [see Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)]. Any beneficially interested person may file the petition in the superior court of the county in which the death occurred or in which the decedent was domiciled at the date of death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(a)].

Although the Judicial Council has approved these forms for optional use [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.35], local practice frequently requires use of Judicial Council forms. There are various reasons why a death may not be registered. For example, there may be no registration when the body of the deceased person is not available for examination and issuance of a death certificate. In these cases a petition under Health & Safety Code § 103450 is required.

In the event of a mass fatalities incident, the petition may be filed by a coroner, medical examiner, or any beneficially interested person with the superior court for the county in which the death is alleged to have occurred or in which the person was domiciled at the date of death, for an order to establish judicially the fact, time, and place of death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(b)]. In the event of such an incident, a single verified petition with respect to all persons who died may be filed by a coroner or medical examiner with the superior court for the county in which the incident occurred to establish the fact, time, and place of each person's death [Health & Safety Code § 103450(c)]. A "mass fatalities incident" is a situation in which there are more dead bodies than can be handled using local resources, numerous persons are known to have died but no bodies were recovered from the site of the incident, or numerous persons are known to have died but the recovery and identification of the bodies of those persons is impracticable or impossible [Health & Safety Code § 103451(a)]. The county coroner or medical examiner may make the determination that one or more of these conditions exists [Health & Safety Code § 130451(b)].

[3] Verification

The petition must be verified and contain all the facts necessary to enable the court to determine the fact of the time and the place of death on proof adduced in behalf of the petitioner at the hearing [Health & Safety Code § 103455].

[4] Time of Hearing

On the filing of the petition, a hearing is fixed by the clerk and, at the convenience of the court, is set at a time not less than five nor more than 10 days after the filing of the petition. The hearing may be held in chambers. The court, for good cause, may continue the hearing beyond the 10-day period [Health & Safety Code § 103465].

On the filing of a petition for a determination of the fact of death in the event of a mass fatalities incident, the clerk must set a hearing within 15 days from the date the petition is filed [Health & Safety Code § 103466].

[5] Notice of Hearing

The statutes do not prescribe the notice to be given on the hearing of the petition, except in the case of a petition to determine the fact of death in the event of a mass fatalities incident [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490]. Local rules of court should be consulted. In the case of a mass fatalities incident, the petitioner must make a reasonable effort to provide notice of the hearing to the deceased's known heirs up to the second degree of relationship [Health & Safety Code § 103466]. Failure to provide this notice will not invalidate the judicial proceedings regarding the determination of the fact of death [Health & Safety Code § 103466].

[6] Filing Fee

The fee for filing the petition is $205 [Health & Safety Code § 103470]. In addition, an $11.00 fee is payable to the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103695].

[7] Order

If, at the hearing, the allegations of the petition are established to the satisfaction of the court, the court may make an order determining that the death did in fact occur at the time and place shown by the proof adduced at the hearing [Health & Safety Code § 103485]. The order must be made in the form and on the blank prescribed and furnished by the State Registrar [see § 99.34], and becomes effective on a filing of a certified copy with the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103485].

[8] Filing With Local Registrar

The State Registrar is required to send certified copies of the court-ordered delayed certificate to the local registrar and to the county recorder in the area in which the death occurred and in whose offices copies of the records for the year in which the death occurred are on file [Health & Safety Code § 103490(a)]. However, if the death occurred outside California, a certified copy of the order must be sent only to the county recorder of the county in which the decedent resided [Health & Safety Code § 103490(a)].

In the event of a mass fatalities incident, the State Registrar must send a certified copy of the court ordered death certificate to the local registrar and the county recorder of the county in which the incident occurred and to the decedent's spouse or next of kin [Health & Safety Code § 103490(b)].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is Department of Health Services Form VS-109, the official form for court order establishing the fact of death prescribed by the State Registrar of Vital Statistics pursuant to Health & Safety Code § 103485. It must be used in court proceedings to judicially establish the fact, time, and place of a death that is not registered [see Health & Safety Code §§ 103450-103490; see also § 93.33[2]]. It becomes effective on the filing of a certified copy with the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103485].

This form is included for illustrative purposes only. Only an original printed copy of the form should be used. Original copies may be obtained from the Department of Health Services, Office of Vital Statistics, local county recorders' offices, or local county health department offices. Requests for this form may be transmitted to the Department by online e-mail request [see OVRform@dhs.ca.gov], or by telephone at (916) 445-2684. The form will be accompanied by specific instructions to be used in completing the form. These instructions must be adhered to exactly or the record will not be accepted for filing with the Office of Vital Statistics.

§ 99.35 Petition for New Birth Certificate--Surgical Change of Sex [Health & Safety Code § 103425]

[1] FORM Petition for New Birth Certificate--Surgical Change of Sex [Health & Safety Code § 103425]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)	NO. _____
In re the Birth of _____ [name].	)	PETITION TO ESTABLISH FACT OF BIRTH

Petitioner, _____ [name], respectfully represents:

1. Petitioner was born in this state on _____ [date]. The birth was recorded in state records showing petitioner's name as _____ [name] and sex as _____ [male or female].

2. Petitioner has undergone surgical treatment for the purpose of altering petitioner's sexual characteristics to those of a _____ [male or female].

3. Pursuant to an order duly made and entered in the Superior Court of California for the County of _____, petitioner's name has been changed to _____ [name]. A certified copy of this order is marked Exhibit _____, attached hereto, and made a part hereof.

4. Petitioner now resides in _____ County, California.

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays that the court order issuance of a new birth certificate reflecting the change of petitioner's sex and the change of petitioner's name for filing in state records in lieu of petitioner's original birth record.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner

[Verification, if desired. See § 99.31.]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a petition for a new birth certificate reflecting a change of gender and any change of named accomplished pursuant to a previous court order. For discussion and a form for a petition seeking a change of name on account of a sex-change operation, see Ch. 377, Name, Change of , §§ 377.24, 377.70.

[3] Right to New Birth Certificate

If a person born in California has undergone surgical treatment for the purpose of altering his or her sexual characteristics to those of the opposite sex, a new birth certificate may be prepared for that person reflecting the change of sex and any change of name accomplished by an order of a court of California, another state, the District of Columbia, or any territory of the United States [Health & Safety Code § 103425]. Out-of-state residency does not bar a change of gender on a California birth certificate [Somers v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1414, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 (Health & Safety Code § 103425 requirement that petition be filed in county of residence violated Equal Protection clause and Privileges and Immunities clause, and trial court had jurisdiction to order issuance of new California birth certificate)].

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

The petition is filed in the superior court in the county in which the petitioner resides [Health & Safety Code § 103425]. The petition is not required to be verified.

[5] Supporting Papers

The petition must be accompanied by the affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury) of a physician documenting the sex change and, if applicable, a certified copy of the court order changing the petitioner's name [Health & Safety Code § 103430(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 (use of declaration under penalty of perjury in lieu of affidavit)].

[6] Hearing and Order

The petition will be heard at the time appointed by the court, and objections may be filed by any person who can show to the court good reason against changing the petitioner's birth record [Health & Safety Code § 10340(b)]. At the hearing, the court may examine the petitioner and any other person having knowledge of the facts relevant to the petition [Health & Safety Code § 103430(b)]. At the conclusion of the hearing, the court is required to make an order for issuance of a new birth certificate, or to dismiss the petition [Health & Safety Code § 103430(b)].

[7] Issuance of New Birth Certificate

A certified copy of the court order ordering the new birth certificate must be filed with the State Registrar within 30 days from the date of the order [Health & Safety Code § 103430(c)]. The order must be accompanied by a copy of Department of Health Services Form VS-24(S), Affidavit to Amend a Record, together with a fee of $20. Copies of Form VS-24(S) may be obtained from the Department of Health Services, Office of Vital Statistics, local county recorders' offices, or local county health department offices. Requests for this form may be transmitted by letter to the address listed below, online e-mail request [see OVRform@dhs.ca.gov], or by telephone at (916) 445-2684. The form will be accompanied by specific instructions to be used in completing the form. These instructions must be adhered to exactly or the record will not be accepted for filing with the Office of Vital Statistics.

The documents and fee must be mailed to the Office of Vital Records, Attention: Amended Records, MS5103, P.O. Box 997410, Sacramento, CA 95899-7410. Upon receipt of these documents and the required fee, the Registrar will establish a new birth certificate for the applicant [Health & Safety Code § 103430(c); see Health & Safety Code § 103725 (fee)]. Because of administrative backlog, there may be a considerable delay (approximately 10 months as of 2004, according to the Department) before the certificate is actually issued.

The new birth certificate must indicate the change of sex of the registrant as it has been surgically altered, and must reflect any change of name specified in the application and the court order [Health & Safety Code § 103430(d)]. Neither the form of the new birth certificate nor any reference in it may indicate in any way that it is not the original birth certificate of the registrant [Health & Safety Code § 103430(d)].

The new birth certificate supplants any previous birth certificate for the petitioner and is the only birth record for the petitioner that is open to public inspection [Health & Safety Code § 103440]. The application and the physician's supporting affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury) must be filed with the original record of birth, and that record must remain as a part of the records of the State Registrar [Health & Safety Code § 103440]. All records other than the newly issued birth certificate may be available only on written request of the registrant or an order of a court of record [Health & Safety Code § 103440].

The State Registrar is required to transmit copies of the newly established birth certificate for filing to the local registrar and county recorder whose records contain copies of the original certificate [Health & Safety Code § 103440]. The local registrar and county recorder is required to forward copies of the original certificate to the State Registrar for filing with the original certificate, if it is practical to do so. If it is impractical to do so, the local registrar and county recorder is required to seal a cover over the copy of the original certificate in a manner that will not deface or destroy the copy, and to forward a certified statement of his or her action to the State Registrar. Thereafter, the information contained in the record must be available only on written request of the registrant or an order of a court of record [Health & Safety Code § 103440].

The State Registrar is required to send a copy of the new birth certificate to the petitioner without additional charge [Health & Safety Code § 103445]. There is a $15 fee for additional copies.

Chapter 100 BOATS AND BOATING
PART I. SCOPE

§ 100.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses actions for damages based on tort and breach of contract in cases involving the owner or operator of a boat [see § 100.11, below] that is owned and operated for recreation. It also discusses an action between coowners of a recreational boat to settle a controversy arising from their coownership [see § 100.26, below]. Substantive admiralty law is only discussed where it provides for different rights than the law of California because in certain cases the California courts will be bound to apply admiralty law rather than state law in determining substantive rights.

This chapter contains the following forms:

- A complaint for personal injury to a water skier resulting from a collision with a boat in nonnavigable water [see § 100.60], and additional allegations that may be used in that complaint [see §§ 100.61 -100.63].

- A complaint for property damage resulting from a collision between two boats in nonnavigable water [see § 100.64].

- A complaint for property damage resulting from a collision between a boat and a stationary object, such as a pier [see § 100.65].

- A complaint for personal injury and property damage suffered by a purchaser-user of a defective boat based on strict liability of the manufacturer and/or retailer [see § 100.66].

- A complaint for wrongful death of a guest passenger resulting from negligent maintenance of a boat and its equipment [see § 100.67].

- A complaint for declaratory relief to resolve a controversy between coowners as to use or repair of a boat [see § 100.68].

- Complaints for breach of a contract to build, repair, store, rent, or furnish supplies or equipment for a boat [see §§ 100.69 -100.73].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.10

§ 100.10 Governing Law

Divisions 1-3 of the Harbors and Navigation Code govern cases involving recreational boats and boating to the extent that state law is applicable (that is, where admiralty law is not paramount).

Cases within admiralty jurisdiction are governed by admiralty and maritime law, which is contained mostly in opinions of the federal courts. Applicable statutory law is set out in Titles 33 (navigation and navigable waters) and 46 (shipping) of the United States Code and in 28 U.S.C.S. § 1333 (jurisdiction).

Administrative regulations governing cases involving boats and boating are set out in Titles 33 (navigation and navigable waters) and 46 (shipping) of the Code of Federal Regulations and in Title 14, Division 4 (Department of Boating and Waterways) of the California Code of Regulations.

Various local ordinances may have some bearing on cases involving boats and boating. This will depend on the facts of each case.

§ 100.11 Boat Defined

The term "boat" is not used in this chapter as a term of art distinguishable from "ship" and other nautical terms describing a vessel. The kind of vessel to which this chapter relates is one, whether called a boat or something else, which is owned and operated purely for a recreational purpose, notwithstanding that the owner may occasionally rent it to someone else and realize income from the transaction. The persons to whom this chapter relates are the weekend boaters, whether owners, operators, or guests aboard another person's boat, and persons who have contracts with them involving a boat, such as an artisan who repairs the boat. This definition is intended to exclude cases involving commercial activities connected with a boat or maritime trade.

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.12

§ 100.12 Scope and Effect of Admiralty Jurisdiction

[1] Extension of Jurisdiction to All Boats on Navigable Waters

The judicial power of the United States extends to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction [U.S. Const., art. III, § 2]. The federal district courts have original jurisdiction, exclusive of the state courts, of any civil case of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction, saving to suitors in all cases all other remedies to which they are otherwise entitled [28 U.S.C.S. § 1333].

Admiralty jurisdiction was given, under the federal Constitution, to the national government for the purpose of securing uniformity of the law respecting maritime trade between the states and with other nations [see Benedict on Admiralty, § 105 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. Admiralty jurisdiction has been extended, and substantive admiralty law has been applied, to cases involving pleasure craft where there is no connection with maritime trade other than use of the vessel on navigable waters, although the purpose of securing uniformity of the law respecting maritime trade does not appear to require such an extension of jurisdiction or the application of substantive admiralty law.

Because of this extension of admiralty law, analysis of the rights and liabilities of the parties in the situations described in this chapter require at the outset, determination of:

- Whether or not the particular case in question is a case of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction; and

- If it is, then what is the effect of the saving clause in 28 U.S.C.S. § 1333 on the parties' substantive rights and on the question of whether or not the injured party has a right to sue in a state court.

[2] Concurrent Jurisdiction of State Court Under Saving Clause

When Congress first created the admiralty jurisdiction of federal district courts, it did not grant those courts exclusive jurisdiction. Instead it saved to all suitors the right of a common law remedy where the common law was competent to give it. Subsequently, this saving clause was amended to save to all suitors all other remedies to which they are otherwise entitled, although this amendment did not narrow the effect of the saving clause under the original act [Madruga v. Superior Court (1954) 346 U.S. 556, 560, 560 n.12, 74 S. Ct. 298, 98 L. Ed. 290] .

The effect of this saving clause is to preserve to the federal district court an exclusive jurisdiction over maritime actions carried on as proceedings in rem, but to permit state courts to establish concurrent jurisdiction in actions in personam based on a common law remedy [Madruga v. Superior Court (1954) 346 U.S. 556, 560-561, 74 S. Ct. 298, 98 L. Ed. 290 ; Intagliata v. Shipowners & Mer. etc. Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 365, 370, 159 P.2d 1] . In essence, the saving clause affords a choice of forums in any case of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction where the remedy sought is one that a state court is competent, on common law principles, to give [see Benedict on Admiralty §§ 121-127 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)].

[3] Application of Admiralty Law

Although state courts possess jurisdiction to adjudicate maritime claims, if the case is one of admiralty jurisdiction, the substantive rights of the parties are determined by admiralty law [see Benedict on Admiralty §§ 121-127 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. This principle applies to actions for personal injury that occurred on navigable waters and actions that require the construction of maritime contracts [Assistance, Inc. v. Teledyne Indus., Inc. (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 644, 647 n. 2, 112 Cal. Rptr. 418 ; Longfellow v. Presidente Miguel Aleman (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 508, 513, 111 Cal. Rptr. 643] . It permits state courts to adjudicate personal injury actions arising under maritime law, whether based on negligence or on unseaworthiness [see Dixon v. Grace Lines, Inc. (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 278, 284-285, 103 Cal. Rptr. 595] .

In some instances of state litigation, the principles applicable to litigation under state law may conflict with admiralty principles. When this occurs, the general rule is that state law does not apply to a maritime cause if it contravenes the essential purpose expressed by an act of Congress, works material prejudice to the characteristic features of the general maritime law, or interferes with the proper harmony and uniformity of that law in its international and interstate relations. That is, state law cannot be applied in a maritime cause if it would substantially impair a substantial right arising under federal maritime law [Intagliata v. Shipowners & Mer. etc. Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 365, 373, 159 P.2d 1] . This principle has been applied to require subordination of such state rules as those regarding burden of proof [Garrett v. Moore-McCormack Co. (1942) 317 U.S. 239, 243, 63 S. Ct. 246, 87 L. Ed. 239] and periods of limitation [Longfellow v. Presidente Miguel Aleman (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 508, 513-514, 111 Cal. Rptr. 643] .

[4] Application of Harbors and Navigation Code Provisions

The Harbors and Navigation Code contains many provisions describing the substantive rights of parties in actions arising from a tort or breach of contract. They do not, however, govern such cases in which federal admiralty law is paramount, and the Legislature has acknowledged this in the code [see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 90, 240, 399, 790]. The provisions of the Harbors and Navigation Code must be understood to govern cases arising within the territorial limits of California and not subject to admiralty jurisdiction.

One of the principles of constitutional law that is, of course, paramount to admiralty law is that state law may supplement admiralty law [see, e.g., Pope & Talbot, Inc. v. Hawn (1953) 346 U.S. 406, 409-410, 74 S. Ct. 202, 98 L. Ed. 143 , superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Babbitt v. Hanover Towing, 7 F. Supp. 2d 650 (E.D. N.C. 1998) . A state is free to adopt such remedies, and to attach to them such incidents, as it sees fit, so long as it does not attempt to make changes in the substantive maritime law [Madruga v. Superior Court (1954) 346 U.S. 556, 561, 74 S. Ct. 298, 98 L. Ed. 290 (review of action by superior court in San Diego County]. The effect of this principle is to allow state law to fill in gaps in the admiralty law; and, to that extent, only provisions of the Harbors and Navigation Code may be applicable to cases of admiralty jurisdiction.

In view of the paramount authority of federal admiralty law in cases of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction, whether suit is brought in a federal court or a state court, it is necessary to determine how substantive rights under admiralty law, in cases of tort and breach of contract such as are discussed in this chapter, differ from the substantive rights of parties in such cases under the law of California.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.13

§ 100.13 Torts Subject to Admiralty Jurisdiction

[1] In General

The admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States extends to and includes all cases of damage or injury, to person or property, caused by a vessel on navigable water, notwithstanding that such damage or injury was done or consummated on land [46 U.S.C.S. § 30101(a)].

[2] Potential Hazard to Maritime Commerce That Substantially Relates to Traditional Maritime Activity

Federal admiralty jurisdiction is invoked when a potential hazard to maritime commerce arises out of activity that bears a substantial relationship to traditional maritime activity [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 362, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . Its reach is not limited to those engaged in commercial maritime activity, but extends as well to all operators of vessels on navigable waters because of the potential impact of noncommercial activities on maritime commerce [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 362, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] .

In determining whether the activity involved is potentially hazardous to maritime commerce, a court must assess the general features of the incident rather than the actual effects of that particular incident on maritime commerce [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 363, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . For example, in an action arising from a fire on a pleasure yacht docked at a marina in which there were no commercial vessels at the time, the general features consisted of a fire on a vessel docked at a marina on navigable waters, which were held to constitute a sufficient potential hazard [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 363, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . In an action arising from the collision in navigable waters between a pleasure boat and a recreational fishing boat, neither of which engaged in any commercial maritime activity, the general features consisted of a collision between boats on navigable waters (also consituting sufficient potential hazard) [Foremost Ins. Co. v. Richardson(1982) 457 U.S. 668, 675, 102 S. Ct. 2654, 73 L. Ed. 2d 300 ; see Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 363, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . Similarly, when passengers who fell off of jet skis operated on navigable waters were injured by the jets, the general features were described as harm caused by a vessel in navigable waters to passengers, which had a potential disruptive effect on commercial maritime activity [In re Mission Bay Jet Sports, LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1124, 1129].

In determining whether an incident has a substantial relationship to traditional maritime activity, courts must first define the nature of the underlying "activity," and then determine whether it relates to "traditional maritime activity" [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 364, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . In defining the nature of the underlying activity, courts must again focus on the general character of that activity, rather than on the particular causes of the harm [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 364, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . Courts must use a broad perspective in determining whether activity substantially relates to "traditional maritime activity" [Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 366-367, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . Activities found to constitute traditional maritime activity include navigation [Foremost Ins. Co. v. Richardson (1982) 457 U.S. 668, 675-677, 102 S. Ct. 2654, 73 L. Ed. 2d 300 ; see also In re Mission Bay Jet Sports, LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1124, 1129 (operation of passenger-carrying jet ski was operation of vessel in navigable waters)]. They also include, at least, any other activities traditionally undertaken by vessels, commercial or noncommercial [see Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 367, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292] . Conduct held not to constitute traditional maritime activity include air travel generally [Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland (1972) 409 U.S. 249, 269-270, 93 S. Ct. 493, 34 L. Ed. 2d 454 (regarding sinking of aircraft into navigable lake shortly after takeoff)], and aquatic recreation off a pleasure craft [see Delta Country Ventures, Inc. v. Magana, 986 F.2d 1260, 1263 (9th Cir. 1993) (claim of guest injured as a result of diving off houseboat)].

[3] Navigability Under Admiralty Jurisdiction

A body of water is a part of the "navigable waters of the United States," that is, within admiralty jurisdiction, if it is used or susceptible to use in its ordinary condition, alone or in conjunction with other waters, as a continued highway for interstate or foreign commerce conducted in customary modes of trade and travel on water [The Daniel Ball v. United States (1871) 77 U.S. 557, 563, 19 L. Ed. 999 ; Davis v. United States (9th Cir. 1950) 185 F.2d 938, 942-943] . A body of water may come within admiralty jurisdiction under this definition despite limitations in the duration, extent, or manner of use, so long it remains substantially useful for interstate or foreign commerce [The Montello (1874) 87 U.S. 430, 439-440, 22 L. Ed. 391 (river held navigable despite existence of rapids in certain sections); see also Benedict on Admiralty § 143 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. In addition, a body of water that is open to the Pacific Ocean and subject to the ebb and flow of tides is considered navigable for purposes of establishing admiralty jurisdiction, even if the particular area where the injury occurred is cordoned off by buoys and restricted in use to personal watercraft [In re Mission Bay Jet Sports, LLC (9th Cir. 2009) 570 F.3d 1124, 1127].

Thus, under this definition, inland waters that are open to and used by seagoing traffic are clearly navigable waters of the United States [see Nelson v. United States (9th Cir. 1980) 639 F.2d 469, 472 (San Francisco Bay)] . On the other hand, a body of water wholly within California would not be considered among the navigable waters of the United States, regardless of actual navigablity, if it could be used only for intrastate purposes, as, for example, in the case of an isolated lake not connected with other navigable waters [see The Montello (1871) 78 U.S. 411, 416, 20 L. Ed. 191] . Lake Tahoe, although isolated from other waters, is a navigable body of water of the United States because it lies within two states and was historically used for interstate commerce [Davis v. United States (9th Cir. 1950) 185 F.2d 938, 943] .

In the absence of a controlling judicial decision or legislative determination, the question as to whether or not a particular body of water is a navigable body of water is one of fact [United States v. Appalachian Elec. Power Co. (1940) 311 U.S. 377, 405, 61 S. Ct. 291, 85 L. Ed. 243] . The court may consider such factors as the character of the body of water, its situation and availability as a highway of commerce, and other surrounding circumstances [Bohn v. Albertson (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742, 238 P.2d 128 ; see also Davis v. United States (9th Cir. 1950) 185 F.2d 938, 943 (Lake Tahoe as navigable body of water of United States)].

[4] Navigability Under Other Standards

[a] Determinations Not Related to Maritime Jurisdiction

There have been administrative, legislative, and judicial determinations of navigability of waters for purposes other than maritime jurisdiction and under standards that differ from the maritime standards. These determinations, although apparently not binding on a federal district court, could be a persuasive authority, especially if they are in favor of navigability.

[b] Coast Guard Standards

The Coast Guard, in connection with its duty to enforce the law of navigable waters of the United States, has made an administrative determination that certain rivers and lakes in, or partially in, California are or are not navigable waters [see 33 C.F.R. § 2.10-1]. Such a determination is apparently not binding on a court, but it probably would have great weight. The criteria employed by the Coast Guard include whether the waters in question [33 C.F.R. § 2.05-25(a)(2),(3)]:

- Are subject to tidal influence;

- Are or have been used, or are or have been susceptible for use, by themselves or in connection with other waters, as highways for substantial interstate or foreign commerce, notwithstanding natural or man-made obstructions that require portage; or

- Are capable of improvement at a reasonable cost to provide, by themselves or in connection with other waters, highways for substantial interstate or foreign commerce according to a determination by a governmental or nongovernmental body with expertise in waterway improvement.

The Bridge Sections of the Aids to Navigation Branches of the Eleventh Coast Guard District in Long Beach and the Twelfth Coast Guard District in San Francisco maintain lists of California waters that have been administratively determined to be navigable. Attorneys may obtain this information in person or by phone from the appropriate district office [see 33 C.F.R. §§ 2.10-1, 2.10-5].

[c] Designation by California Legislature

The California Legislature has designated more than 40 rivers, creeks, and sloughs in California as navigable waters [see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 101-106]. Harb. & Nav. Code § 100 defines navigable waters as a water or stream of sufficient capacity to transport the products of the country and declares such waters to be public ways for the purposes of navigation and transportation.

[d] Standards Under California Decisional Law

Court decisions have ruled on navigability under a variety of standards [see, e.g., Newcomb v. Newport Beach (1936) 7 Cal.2d 393, 399, 60 P.2d 825 (Newport Bay as navigable in fact) ; People v. Gold Run Ditch & Mining Co. (1884) 66 Cal. 138, 146, 4 P. 1152 (judicial notice of navigability of Sacramento River); City of Los Angeles v. Aitken (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 460, 466-470, 52 P.2d 585 (Mono Lake as navigable because susceptible of use as a public highway)].

Recent state court decisions have developed a standard of navigability applicable to determining whether or not the public has navigational easement consisting of a right of access to the water, notwithstanding private ownership of the land under the water.

Under this more liberal test which permits use of the water for recreational boating, a body of water is navigable for purposes of a public navigational easement if it is physically navigable, by oar or motor-propelled small craft, in its natural state for a sufficiently long period each year to make it suitable, useful, and valuable as a public recreational highway [Hitchings v. Del Rio Woods Recreation & Park Dist. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 560, 568-571, 127 Cal. Rptr. 830 ; People ex rel. Baker v. Mack (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1050, 97 Cal. Rptr. 448 (Fall River as navigable)] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.14

§ 100.14 Contracts Subject to Admiralty Jurisdiction

[1] Nature of Contract Test

The boundaries of admiralty jurisdiction over contracts have always been difficult to draw [Kossick v. United Fruit Co. (1961) 365 U.S. 731, 735 , 6 L. Ed. 2d 56] . It is usually said that admiralty jurisdiction embraces all maritime contracts; in other words, the characterization by the courts depends on the nature of the contract, and is limited to contracts, claims and services purely maritime, and touching rights and duties pertaining to commerce and navigation [In re The Steamer Eclipse (1889) 135 U.S. 599, 608, 10 S. Ct. 873, 34 L. Ed. 269] . In one case, the Supreme Court explained that in determining whether a contract falls within admiralty jurisdiction, the true criterion is the nature and subject matter of the contract, as whether it was a maritime contract, having reference to maritime service or maritime transactions [Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649, 657 (quoting Insurance Co. v. Dunham (1871) 78 U.S. (11 Wall.) 1, 26, 20 L. Ed. 90)]. For a discussion of what arguments are, and what agreements are not, maritime contracts, see Benedict on Admiralty §§ 183-190 (7th ed. Matthew Bender).

Too much emphasis, however, should not be placed on the agreement and its subject matter. The real question is whether or not a court of admiralty has jurisdiction to enforce certain promises, award damages for certain contractual defaults, and give other relief to an aggrieved party to a contract. It is possible to characterize a contract as maritime and nevertheless deny admiralty jurisdiction to give the aggrieved party relief. For example, a contract for the repair of an existing vessel is unquestionably maritime [see Flowers v. Travelers Ins. Co. (5th Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 220, 221 (dictum)]. However, a cause of action based on repudiation of an executory contract to provide such repairs (or any other executory maritime contract) has been considered by at least one circuit not to be amenable to an admiralty lawsuit but, instead, to be an ordinary common law action for damages over which the admiralty court has no jurisdiction [see, e.g., Yankee v. Brewer Dry Dock Co. (E.D.N.Y. 1941) 37 F. Supp. 512, 514 (contract as executory contract to render a maritime service for which in the absence of even part performance, admiralty jurisdiction cannot be invoked even in personam); but see Benedict on Admiralty § 185 (7th ed. Matthew Bender) (action in personam in admiralty as available but not lien on vessel)].

[2] Contract to Build Boat

It appears that an admiralty court has no jurisdiction to give relief for any kind of default, by any party, under a contract to build a boat or to supply materials or services for the building of a boat [Kossick v. United Fruit Co. (1961) 365 U.S. 731, 735, 81 S. Ct. 886, 6 L. Ed. 2d 56 (dictum; contract to build); Thames Towboat Co. v. The Schooner "Francis McDonald" (1920) 254 U.S. 242, 243-244, 41 S. Ct. 65, 65 L. Ed. 245 (contract to supply materials and labor to finish building vessel where hull launched, after default by original builder); North Pac. S.S. Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine Ry. & Shipbuilding Co. (1918) 249 U.S. 119, 126-127, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 L. Ed. 510 (dictim; contract to supply materials for construction); Bond v. F/V Mermaid (S.D. Fla. 1970) 311 F. Supp. 1013, 1014 (services of marine architect in designing ship for construction)].

The rationale for the rule denying relief for default under a contract to build a boat is a triumph of form over substance. The structure does not become a ship, in the legal sense, until it is completed and launched. Prior to launching a ship is a mere congeries of wood and iron--an ordinary piece of personal property--as distinctly a land structure as a house but the moment the keel touches the water, the ship is transformed and becomes a subject of admiralty jurisdiction [North Pac. S.S. Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine Ry. & Shipbuilding Co. (1918) 249 U.S. 119, 127, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 L. Ed. 510] .

[3] Contract to Rent Boat

[a] Charter Parties

The kind of rental contract relevant to this chapter [see form at § 100.72] is similar to what in admiralty is known as a charter party. A charter party is usually effected for a commercial purpose and has been described as a contract by which an entire ship or some principal part of it is let to a merchant, called the charterer, for the conveyance of goods on a determined voyage to one or more places or until the expiration of a specified period [Benedict on Admiralty § 225 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. The purpose of the contract may be the carriage of persons as well as the conveyance of goods. A familiar example is the charter party for a sport fishing expedition.

In admiralty there are two kinds of charter parties. The kind of rental contract relevant to this chapter resembles a demise charter party, also called a bare boat charter. This is a contract by which the vessel is, in effect, leased to a charterer, who takes possession and has control of the vessel as though he or she were the owner [Assistance, Inc. v. Teledyne Indus., Inc. (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 644, 647, 112 Cal. Rptr. 418 ; see also Benedict on Admiralty § 225 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. Admiralty law governs a demise charter party-type agreement. Nevertheless, general principles governing the hiring of personal property may govern a rental contract which is not made for any commercial purpose. The object of the renter is to obtain possession of the boat for the purpose of using it for pleasure, not for transporting a cargo or passengers for profit. The parties to such a contract will seldom or never intend to make a charter party-type agreement; rather, they will intend a hiring of personal property (as the Civil Code describes it), in the same way that a car might be hired. No case in admiralty has been found dealing with this kind of contract, and it is questionable whether admiralty law relating to charter parties does or should govern the enforcement of rights under such a contract.

For a discussion of admiralty jurisdiction of charter parties, see Benedict on Admiralty § 225 (7th ed. Matthew Bender).

[b] Liability for Repairs

The Harbors and Navigation Code provides that if the owner of a vessel commits its profession and navigation to another, then that other person, and not the owner, is responsible for the repairs of and supplies for the vessel [Harb. & Nav. Code § 404]. This statute refers to a demise charter party [see [a], above]. The rule expressed in this statute is the same as the rule in admiralty law, that is, the charterer, in effect, becomes the owner during the term of the contract [see Benedict on Admiralty § 225 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. If possession alone were given, without the right to navigate the vessel also, the charter would be the nondemise type and the charterer would not assume responsibility for repairs and supplies.

The fact that the state rule expressed in Harb. & Nav. Code § 404 is identical to the admiralty rule is not significant. The state rule applies only to cases exclusively within the state's jurisdiction, and the admiralty rule applies to cases within the concurrent jurisdiction of the federal and state courts.

[4] Contract to Repair Boat

It may not appear important to draw a distinction between the original construction of a vessel and the virtual reconstruction of a vessel after extensive repairs were made to it, but the act of launching, and transforming a structure into a ship [see [2], above], is a crucial point in jurisdictional analysis. Reconstruction of a vessel is a maritime transaction, and in general, defaults under a contract for reconstruction are within admiralty jurisdiction [Wall Street Traders, Inc. v. Sociedad Espanola de Construccion Naval (S.D.N.Y. 1964) 245 F. Supp. 344, 350 (dictum; contract to alter or convert); The Ky-Ill (6th Cir. 1931) 50 F.2d 70, 71 (extensive alterations held reconstruction not original construction)]. California law recognizes that admiralty law in general governs the validity and interpretation of ship repair contracts, including exculpatory clauses [Fahey v. Gledhill (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 884, 889, 191 Cal. Rptr. 639, 663 P.2d 197] . If there is any reasonable doubt whether the subject of a contract is original construction or repairs and alteration in the nature of a reconstruction, the subject of the contract will be considered as reconstruction so as to give an admiralty court jurisdiction [New Bedford Dry Dock Co. v. Purdy (1921) 258 U.S. 96, 99, 42 S. Ct. 243, 66 L. Ed. 482] .

Within admiralty jurisdiction are defaults in obligations to pay for repairs [New Bedford Dry Dock Co. v. Purdy (1921) 258 U.S. 96, 100, 42 S. Ct. 243, 66 L. Ed. 482] , which may be relieved by enforcement of a lien [see discussion of maritime liens in Benedict on Admiralty §§ 21-66 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]; to pay for materials furnished for repairs [The Ky-Ill (6th Cir. 1931) 50 F.2d 70, 71] ; to complete repairs [Wall Street Traders, Inc. v. Sociedad Espanola de Construccion Naval (S.D.N.Y. 1964) 245 F. Supp. 344, 350] ; to pay for plans and specifications furnished for alteration [The Susquehanna (2d Cir. 1920) 267 F. 811, 813] ; and to use due care in performing contractual obligations in the nature of repairs [Fahey v. Gledhill (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 884, 890, 191 Cal. Rptr. 639, 663 P.2d 197 ; see Luckenbach S.S. Co. v. Ruddy Fumigant Co. (W.D. Wash. 1935) 11 F. Supp. 390, 390-391 (negligent performance of contractual obligation to fumigate ship)], which may be better dealt with as a tort instead of breach of contract.

[5] Contract to Store Boat

A default in an obligation to pay for another's services in providing storage for equipment removed from a yacht, including small boats, is within admiralty jurisdiction [The Navis (D. Me. 1912) 196 F. 843, 846-847] . It would therefore appear that the same rule should apply to storage of the vessel itself. There is, however, an old case that holds that a claim for wharfage of a vessel while it was laid up for the winter (when navigation was not possible) is not within admiralty jurisdiction [The Murphy Tugs (E.D. Mich. 1886) 28 F. 429, 432] . The distinction seems to be that when a vessel is taken out of service (except temporarily for the purpose of repairs or the like), a contract for services rendered to the vessel while it is thus laid up is not maritime in nature.

While no case has been found extending admiralty jurisdiction to a default in the obligations of the person promising to provide the storage, the principle of mutuality of remedy would dictate that admiralty jurisdiction extends to such a case, at least when the boat remains in service [see, e.g., Lake Union Dry Dock & Mach. Works v. United States (9th Cir. 1935) 79 F.2d 802, 803 (shipyard repairing vessel as bailee liable for negligence in case of loss of vessel by fire)].

[6] Contract to Furnish Supplies or Equipment for Boat

A default in an obligation to furnish supplies or equipment to a vessel, or the obligation to pay for supplies or equipment, is within admiralty jurisdiction [Campbell v. Loznicka (5th Cir. 1950) 181 F.2d 356, 357-358 (contract to make repairs and furnish supplies; action based on default in obligation to pay); The Sam & Priscilla (D. Mass. 1921) 275 F. 937, 939 (contract to furnish fishing net; action based on breach of seller's implied warranty of fitness for particular use)]. A person who furnishes supplies or equipment has a statutory lien on the vessel for payment [see 46

U.S.C.S. § 31342].

A contract to furnish supplies, which are items for the personal use of those on board, such as clothing, tobacco, and similar items, is not a maritime contract; a default under such a contract is not within admiralty jurisdiction [The Mary F. Chisholm (D. Me. 1904) 129 F. 814, 817 (action to recover such items furnished for crew members of fishing boat)].

[7] No Per Se Exception for Agency Contracts

The United States Supreme Court has overruled old case precedent, and held that there is no per se exception of agency contracts from admiralty jurisdiction [Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 607-607, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649 (overruling Minturn v. Maynard (1855) 58 U.S. (17 How.) 477, 15 L. Ed. 235)]. The action arose in the context of the enforcement of a maritime lien under former 46 U.S.C.S. § 971 (now 46 U.S.C.S. § 31342); the subject matter of the contract must fall within the admiralty jurisdiction for a maritime lien based on a breach of contract to exist [see Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 606, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649 ; for discussion of maritime liens generally, see Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping]. The Court noted that admiralty jurisdiction is designed to protect maritime commerce, and that there is nothing in the nature of an agency relationship that necessarily excludes those relationships from the realm of maritime commerce. Moreover, the theoretical underpinnings of previous precedent (based on the categorization of an agent's claim as a mere demand for balance of accounts, available through common law remedies, and the "hypothecation" or lien requirement for a maritime contract claim)) are not consistent with trends in modern admiralty law [Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 610-611, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649] .

The Supreme Court emphasized the narrowness of its ruling. Although lower courts may not apply a rule excluding all or certain agency contracts from the realm of admiralty, they must look to the subject matter of the agency contract and determine whether the services performed under the contract are maritime in nature [Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 611-612, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649] . In the case before it, the Court analyzed a contract between a fuel supplier and shipowner under which fuel is provided directly wherever possible, and through a third party in remote locations. The Court found that the subject matter regarding third-party fuel supply in Saudi Arabia, as in United States locations (where the supplier provided the fuel directly, and over which the district court had held that admiralty jurisdiction existed), is the value of the fuel received by the ship. Because the nature and subject-matter of the two transactions are the same as they relate to maritime commerce, if admiralty jurisdiction extends to one, it must extend to the other [Exxon Corp. v. Central Gulf Lines (1991) 500 U.S. 603, 612-613, 111 S. Ct. 2071, 114 L. Ed. 2d 649] .

§ 100.15 Actions in Rem Against Vessel

One of the peculiarities of admiralty law is the remedy of an action in rem against a vessel. The vessel itself is, in effect, a party, the style of the case being, for example, The Resolute or Smith v. The S.S. Goodship. Such an action is an exclusive admiralty remedy which the state courts have no jurisdiction over [Madruga v. Superior Court (1954) 346 U.S. 556, 560-561, 74 S. Ct. 298, 98 L. Ed. 290 ; Longfellow v. Presidente Miguel Aleman (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 508, 512, 111 Cal. Rptr. 643 (noting exception for actions to forfeit maritime property used in violation of state law)]. The function of an action in rem is to enforce a maritime lien, which certain persons may acquire under 46 U.S.C.S. § 31342 for furnishing repairs and supplies, among other reasons.

The existence of a cause of action in rem does not deprive a party of the common-law right to bring an action in personam for collection of a debt due for furnishing repairs or supplies or for any other reason giving rise to a maritime lien [see, e.g., Rounds v. Cloverport Foundry & Mach. Co. (1915) 237 U.S. 303, 307-308, 35 S. Ct. 596, 59 L. Ed. 966] .

If the law of California gives a lien for a matter that is the subject of admiralty jurisdiction [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 500 et seq. (Boaters Lien Law); see also Harb. & Nav. Code § 410 et seq. (exception for service and repair of noncommercial vessel)], that lien may be enforced in an action in rem in the federal district court sitting as a court of admiralty, although the California courts cannot enforce it by such an action [see, e.g., The J. E. Rumbell (1893) 148 U.S. 1, 13, 13 S. Ct. 498, 37 L. Ed. 345] .

If the law of California gives a lien [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 410 et seq., Harb. & Nav. Code § 500 et seq.] for a matter that is not a subject of admiralty jurisdiction, such as for a debt arising under a contract for the construction of a vessel, the lien may be enforced by any action, including a foreclosure, resembling an in rem action, which the law of California provides. Since the subject of the action is not of admiralty jurisdiction, there is no bar in federal admiralty law to proceeding in that way [see Islander Yachts, Inc. v. One Freeport 36-Foot Vessel (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1086-1087, 219 Cal. Rptr. 654 (foreclosure of lien under Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 490, 491, 495 for payment of construction of vessel as not preempted by federal admiralty law); for a form of complaint foreclosing lien, see Ch. 342, Liens and Wage Preferences ; see Benedict On Admiralty § 125 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)].

§ 100.16 Limitation of Liability

A feature of admiralty law which may become important to both sides in the kinds of cases discussed in this chapter is the Limitation of Liability Act of 1851 [46 U.S.C.S. § 30501 et seq.]. The principal provision of this act provides that the liability of the owner of any vessel for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act, matter, or thing, loss, damage, or forfeiture, done, occasioned, or incurred, without the privity or knowledge of such owner or owners, cannot exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel and pending freight [46 U.S.C.S. § 30505(a)].

§ 100.17 Choosing State or Federal Court

Where there is a choice of forums, the decision of which court to choose will usually depend on the following considerations:

- Regardless of whether suit is brought in a state court or in a federal court sitting in admiralty, the substantive rights of the parties are determined by federal admiralty law, not state law.

- There generally is no right to a jury in a trial in admiralty.

- It has been said that technical niceties play a minimal role in admiralty courts [California Pleasure Boating Law (Cal CEB 1963), Ch. 3, Pleading and Practice, § 3.5].

- Federal judges sitting in admiralty are by experience more familiar with maritime problems and facts than state court judges.

- The location of the district court may be inconvenient.

- The court sitting in admiralty has no jurisdiction to give general relief, for the purpose of doing complete justice between the parties. Jurisdiction is limited to maritime matters. That is, the court sitting in admiralty can give complete relief with respect to the maritime matter before it, including equitable relief; but the court cannot give relief on a nonmaritime matter such as might be raised in a state court by cross complaint.

- If suit is brought in a state court, a defendant, who is the owner of the vessel in question, may nevertheless begin a proceeding in the federal court sitting in admiralty for the purpose of limiting liability to the value of the interest in the vessel under the Limitation of Liability Act of 1851 [46 U.S.C. § 30511].

§ 100.18 Removal of State Court Action

Where a case of admiralty jurisdiction has been brought in a state court under the saving clause in 28 U.S.C.S. § 1333, the question may arise as to whether or not the defendant has the right to remove the action to the federal district court under the removal statute [29 U.S.C.S. § 1441]. In J.J. Ryan & Sons, Inc. v. Continental Ins. Co. (D.S.C. 1974) 369 F. Supp. 692, 697-698 , the court found that (1) if diversity jurisdiction exists, or if there is a federal question involved, the action is removable, irrespective of its being a case of admiralty jurisdiction, but (2) in the absence of diversity jurisdiction or a federal question, the action is not removable. The courts concluded that the savings clause gave to suitors, that is plaintiffs, the right to select the remedy and the forum where causes of admiralty jurisdiction can be litigated. To permit removal would, in fact, give this selection right to the defendant, since all cases within the admiralty jurisdiction that are saved are within the federal district courts' admiralty jurisdiction, without regard to amount in controversy or diversity of citizenship. Furthermore, this selection right controls the right to a jury trial and the right to seek some remedies that are available in common law courts that are not a part of the law of admiralty.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.19

§ 100.19 Substantive Admiralty Law of Collision

[1] Generally

Liability for collision is not a strict liability imposed regardless of precautions taken [The Java v. Judd Oil Co. (1872) 81 U.S. 189, 20 L. Ed. 834, 837] , but fault is premised on failure to meet the following standards:

- Statutory rules of navigation. Two sets of rules operative in the United States apply within or adjacent to California: the International Regulations [33 U.S.C.S. §§ 1601-1608] applying to navigation on the high seas, and the Inland Rules [33 U.S.C.S. § 2001 et seq.] applying to all other navigable waters.

- Other statutes and administrative regulations, both federal and state. Of greatest importance, with respect to California, are the Pilot Rules for Inland Waters [33 C.F.R. Part 93] promulgated by the Coast Guard.

- Local customs. With respect to matters governed by the Inland Rules, local custom might be included in Rule 27 providing exceptions from observance of the rules in special circumstances [see 33 U.S.C.S. § 2002(b); The Luzerne (2d Cir. 1913) 204 F. 981, 982] .

- Good seamanship and due care [see, e.g., Pentz v. The Steamer Ariadne (1872) 80 U.S. 475, 478-479, 20 L. Ed. 542 ; Stevens v. United States Lines Co. (1st Cir. 1951) 187 F.2d 670, 673] .

[2] Effect of Navigation Rules

The finding of fault often rests on the violation of one of the rules of navigation. These statutory rules are strictly and literally construed, and exact adherence is required [see Belden v. Chase (1893) 150 U.S. 674, 698, 14 S. Ct. 264, 37 L. Ed. 1218 ; First Nat'l Bank of Chicago v. Material Serv. Corp. (7th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1110, 1116] , with the narrow exception that when a vessel is placed in a position where collision is apparently imminent through no fault of the vessel and it attempts to avoid the collision it will not be held at fault for violating the rules or the standards of due care in navigation if a collision occurs [Maroceano Compania Naviera S.A. v. S.S. Verdi (2d Cir. 1971) 438 F.2d 854, 857] .

[3] Causation

Liability will not rest on fault in the abstract, but rather on fault which is the contributing cause of the collision [The Farragut (1870) 77 U.S. 334, 338, 19 L. Ed. 946 ; see also The Oregon (1895) 158 U.S. 186, 195-197, 15 S. Ct. 804, 39 L. Ed. 943] . If a vessel has been guilty of statutory fault before a collision, there is a rebuttable presumption that the fault was a contributing cause of the collision; and in order to rebut it, the vessel must prove not only that the fault probably did not contribute to the collision, but also that it could not have contributed to the collision [see The Pennsylvania v. Troop (1874) 86 U.S. 125, 136, 22 L. Ed. 148 (called the Pennsylvania rule); First Nat'l Bank of Chicago v. Material Serv. Corp. (7th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1110, 1117] .

The Pennsylvania rule only applies where there has been a breach of one of the rules of navigation or some other statute. Where a ship is at fault in some other way, such as being guilty of negligence by general standards, a causal connection between the fault and the collision must be proved in order to hold the ship liable for its half of the damages [Oriental Trading & Transp. Co. v. Gulf Oil Corp. (2d Cir. 1949) 173 F.2d 108, 110 , cert. denied, 337 U.S. 919, 69 S. Ct. 1162, 93 L. Ed. 1728] .

[4] Negligence

Negligence may be a basis for liability, under the rule that nothing in the statutory rules exonerates a vessel or person from the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen or by the special circumstances of the case [see 33 U.S.C.S. § 2002(a)]. The effect of this principle is that literal compliance with a specific rule of navigation is not always enough to exonerate a vessel from fault [see United States v. Woodbury (1st Cir. 1949) 175 F.2d 854, 861] .

[5] Determination of Liability

Liability for collision damage is determined by the following rules:

- If neither vessel is at fault, neither is liable for the other's loss [see The "Clara" (1880) 102 U.S. 200, 203, 26 L. Ed. 145] . In some cases the court will be able to see that some fault exists but will be unable, because of a conflict of evidence, to say where the fault lies. This is spoken of as a case of inscrutable fault, and neither vessel can recover [see The Worthington & Davis (E.D. Mich. 1883) 19 F. 836, 839] .

- If one vessel is wholly at fault, it is liable for the other's loss, in addition to paying for its own loss [see The "Clara" (1880) 102 U.S. 200, 203, 26 L. Ed. 145] .

- If both vessels are at fault, the liability is allocated between the parties in proportion to the comparative degree of their fault. Liability is allocated equally only when the parties are equally at fault or when it is not possible to measure the comparative degree of fault fairly [United States v. Reliable Transfer Co. (1975) 421 U.S. 397, 411, 95 S. Ct. 1708, 44 L. Ed. 2d 251 , repudiating the divided damages rule of The Schooner Catharine v. Dickinson (1855) 58 U.S. 170, 177-178, 15 L. Ed. 233] .

In collisions involving more than two ships, the courts have apportioned liability among the ships at fault (not to the owners) [see The Norwich Victory (E.D. Pa. 1948) 77 F. Supp. 264, 269 , aff'd sub nom, United States v. The Dump Scows No. 116, No. 120 and No. 122 (3d Cir. 1949) 175 F.2d 556 , cert. denied sub nom. American Dredging Co. v. United States (1949) 338 U.S. 871 ; see also United States v. Reliable Transfer Co. (1975) 421 U.S. 397, 411, 95 S. Ct. 1708, 44 L. Ed. 2d 251] .

If two ships are at fault for damages to a third party, liability is joint and several; the injured party can recover wholly from one or the other, or partially from one and partially from the other [see The Beaconsfield (1895) 158 U.S. 303, 307, 15 S. Ct. 860, 39 L. Ed. 993] .

There is a lien against any vessel at fault in a collision [see The John G. Stevens (1898) 170 U.S. 113, 122, 18 S. Ct. 544 ; see also Oriente Com'l v. Am. Flag Vessel, M/V Floridian (4th Cir. 1975) 529 F.2d 221, 222] , and, usually, personal liability in its owner [see Burns Bros. v. The Central R.R. of N.J. (2d Cir. 1953) 202 F.2d 910, 913] or in a demise charterer having the position of owner [see The Barnstable (1901) 181 U.S. 464, 467, 21 S. Ct. 684, 45 L. Ed. 954] . Collision suits may be brought in personam or in rem or both [see Burns Bros. v. The Central R.R. of N.J. (2d Cir. 1953) 202 F.2d 910, 913] .

[6] Effects of Settlement

The United States Supreme Court has established the federal common law applicable to admiralty cases in which one or more defendants have settled with plaintiff, and held that the proper calculation of the liability of nonsettling defendants is based on the jury's allocation of proportionate responsibility. The Court rejected the alternative method of giving nonsettling defendants a credit for the dollar value of the settlement [McDermott, Inc. v. AmClyde (1994) 511 U.S. 202, 114 S. Ct. 1461, 128 L. Ed. 2d 148, 154] . The rejected method is that reflected in California law regarding the effect of settlement, discussed in Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

§ 100.20 Collisions and Accidents Subject to State Law

[1] Generally

If a collision between vessels occurs on waters of the state that are not subject to admiralty jurisdiction, the resulting action will be governed by state law and relevant rules of navigation and liability provided in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 250-268 and 281-284. For discussion of these principles, see § 100.64[2] -[4].

[2] Accident Involving Water-Skier

Few decisions have analyzed the combined effect of state navigational rules and principles of negligence to define the nature of liability in an accident which involves personal injury to a water-skier [see, e.g., Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 ; Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 996-997, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817] . For a form of complaint and an analysis of liability in a waterskiing accident where there has been negligent operation of a motorboat on waters not subject to admiralty jurisdiction, see § 100.60.

[3] Liability Based on Imputed Negligence

Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 establishes a basis for imputing negligence to the owners of undocumented vessels, numbered under the Harbors and Navigation Code, when negligent operation of the vessel by another causes death or injury to person or property. For a form of allegation and discussion of the principles of imputed negligence, see § 100.63.

[4] Liability of Swimming Concessionaire

Individuals who offer the use of public waters for bathing in connection with bathhouses and other appropriate facilities maintained by them as owner or lessee of the shore may owe a duty to patrons who use the waters in the usual and ordinary way to exercise reasonable care to prevent injury [see Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 826, 346 P.2d 785] . For a form of allegation and discussion of the liability of concessionaires, see § 100.61[3].

§ 100.21 Wrongful Death Actions

[1] Death Occurring Outside State's Territorial Limits

Prior to 1970, the only remedies in admiralty for wrongful death resulting from maritime duties were statutory. The primary statute providing a remedy was the Death on the High Seas Act (DOHSA; 46 U.S.C.S. § 30301 et seq.). This statute provides a cause of action for the death of a person caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring on the high seas beyond three nautical miles from the shore of any state [46 U.S.C.S. § 30302]. It authorizes the personal representative of the decedent to maintain a suit for damages in the federal district court sitting in admiralty, for the exclusive benefit of the decedent's spouse, parent, child, or dependent relative, against the person or vessel responsible [see 46 U.S.C.S. § 30302].

The DOHSA covers wrongful death beyond the territorial limits of the State of California in the Pacific Ocean [see Gov. Code § 170 (western boundary of state as three English nautical miles seaward from coast); Webster's Third New International Dictionary (nautical mile as 6,080.20 feet [times 3 equals 18,240.60 feet] before July 1, 1954, and thereafter as 1,852 meters, approximately 6,076.1033 feet [times 3 equals approximately 18,228.31 feet]; English nautical mile as 6,080 feet [times 3 equals 18,240 feet])]. The boundary of the state in the Pacific Ocean lies approximately 3.45 land miles from the coast. The DOHSA is not the only federal statute governing death in those circumstances [see Sennett v. Shell Oil Co. (E.D. La. 1971) 325 F. Supp. 1, 7 (mentioning other possibly applicable congressional enactments)], but it is the statute most likely to apply in the kinds of cases discussed in this chapter.

The courts have construed the term "high seas" to include all waters that are not the territorial waters of the United States. Therefore, DOHSA applies to injuries that occur within the territorial waters of another nation, even if that body of water is an inland river or lake [Beckett v. MasterCraft Boat Co. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1045, 1048-1049, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 490] .

DOHSA's savings clause, 46 U.S.C.S. § 30308(a), makes federal court jurisdiction concurrent with state jurisdiction to hear DOHSA actions. Thus, DOHSA beneficiaries have a choice of a convenient forum for their wrongful death claims, although DOHSA's substantive provisions must be applied because DOHSA preempts state law [see 46 U.S.C.S. § 30308(a); Offshore Logistics, Inc. v. Tallentire (1986) 477 U.S. 207, 221-222, 232-233, 106 S. Ct. 2485, 91 L. Ed. 2d 174] . Although one California court of appeal decision nevertheless held that California state courts have no subject matter jurisdiction over DOHSA actions because the California wrongful death statute has no extraterritorial effect [Chromy v. Lawrance (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1521, 1526-1527, 285 Cal. Rptr. 400] , that decision has been criticized as contrary to the U.S. Supreme Court's holding and has not been followed subsequently by the California court of appeal [Garofalo v. Princess Cruises, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1060, 1079-1085, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] .

So long as the injury occurring on the high seas is one cause of the death, DOHSA provides the exclusive remedy, even if that injury is not the sole cause of the death [Garofalo v. Princess Cruises, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1060, 1079, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754] .

[2] Death Occurring Within State's Territorial Limits

[a] Maritime Remedy

There is no federal statute covering wrongful death on navigable waters within the territorial limits of a state. Prior to 1970, in an admiralty action based on such a death, the admiralty court would apply the appropriate state wrongful-death statute [Matter of S/S Helena (5th Cir. 1976) 529 F.2d 744, 748-749] . Subsequently, in Moragne v. States Marine Lines, the Supreme Court recognized the availability of a remedy for wrongful death, based on negligence or unseaworthiness, under general martime law in situations not covered by the DOHSA that may be applied, in particular, to deaths within state territorial waters [Moragne v. States Marine Lines (1970) 398 U.S. 375, 402, 90 S. Ct. 1772, 26 L. Ed. 2d 339 ; see also Norfolk Shipbldg. & Drydock Corp. v. Garris (2001) 532 U.S. 811, 121 S. Ct. 1927, 150 L. Ed. 2d 34, 43 (although holding in Moragne technically addressed only claims brought for violation of duty of seaworthiness, holding extends to negligence claims)]. Admiralty courts may now apply only the general maritime remedy and not the state's wrongful death statute [Nelson v. United States (9th Cir. 1980) 639 F.2d 469, 473 ; Matter of S/S Helena (5th Cir. 1976) 529 F.2d 744, 753] .

If the death occurred on the high seas, damages under the maritime remedy are restricted by the measure of damages under the DOHSA [Mobil Oil Corp. v. Higginbotham (1978) 436 U.S. 618, 623-624, 98 S. Ct. 2010, 56 L. Ed. 2d 581] . The United States Supreme Court has allowed the recovery of nonpecuniary damages (such as loss of support, services, society, and funeral expenses) in a claim brought under general maritime law with respect to a death within territorial waters, but that holding applies only to a claim based on the death of a longshore worker that occurs in territorial waters [Miles v. Apex Marine Corp. (1990) 498 U.S. 19, 30-31, 30 n.1, 111 S. Ct. 317, 112 L. Ed. 2d 275 (discussing Sea-Land Services, Inc. v. Gaudet (1974) 414 U.S. 573, 584-585, 94 S. Ct. 806, 39 L. Ed. 2d 9 , which holding is now further limited by subsequent federal legislation under 33 U.S.C.S. § 905(b) regarding longshore workers)]. For discussion of this issue, see Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping .

In Yamaha Motor Corp. v. Calhoun, the U.S. Supreme Court held that state law remedies are available in Moragne-type wrongful death actions brought for the death of a non-seafarer--that is, someone who was neither a seaman covered by the Jones Act nor a longshore worker [Yamaha Motor Corp. v. Calhoun (1996) 516 U.S. 199, 202, 116 S. Ct. 619, 133 L. Ed. 2d 578] . For a discussion of remedies afforded under California wrongful death law, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

Although a specific list of dependent relatives who are eligible to recover has not been established, the schedule of beneficiaries in the DOHSA [see [1], above] is persuasive authority [see Moragne v. States Marine Lines (1970) 398 U.S. 375, 407-408, 90 S. Ct. 1772, 26 L. Ed. 2d 339] .

The time period for bringing an action for personal injury or death arising out of any maritime tort is three years from accrual of the cause of action [46 U.S.C.S. § 30106].

For discussion of wrongful-death actions under the general maritime law with emphasis on its application to the shipping industry, see Ch. 522, Ships and Shipping .

[b] State Remedy

The California wrongful-death statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60), which applies to accidents occurring on the state's nonnavigable waters, provides that persons who may bring a wrongful death action, in addition to the decedent's personal representative (who may bring an action on behalf of a person otherwise entitled to do so), are (1) the surviving spouse, domestic partner, children, and issue of deceased children, or, if there is no surviving issue, the persons, including the surviving spouse, who would be entitled to the property of the decedent by intestate succession; (2) the putative spouse, children of a putative spouse, stepchildren, and parents of the decedent, if they were dependent on the decedent, regardless of whether or not they are entitled to succeed to the decedent's property; and (3) any other minor residing in the decedent's household for at least 180 days before the decedent's death who was dependent on the decedent for at least one-half of his or her support [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. For further discussion of death actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60, see Ch. 181, Death and Survival Actions .

The wrongful death action may be brought against the person whose wrongful act or neglect caused the death [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60], or if he or she has died, the personal representative of the wrongdoer or, to the extent provided by statute, the wrongdoer's successor in interest [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.40]. Thus, in addition to the broader category of plaintiffs who may sue under state law compared to admiralty law, Code Civ. Proc. § 377.40 also permits suit to be brought against the wrongdoer's estate, although under both the federal act and the maritime remedy the estate of the wrongdoer is apparently not subject to suit.

Even if an action may not be brought against the estate of the wrongdoer, an action in rem against the vessel is available if suit is brought in a federal district court sitting in admiralty, whether or not the wrongdoer is dead. The DOHSA expressly authorizes an action against the vessel [see 46 U.S.C.S. § 30302]; the in rem action is a traditional one in admiralty and is available whether or not the act is applicable [for discussion, see § 100.15, above].

An owner of a vessel who charters the vessel under a demise charter party is bound to see that the vessel is seaworthy and suitable for the service in which it is to be employed [see Work v. Leathers (1878) 97 U.S. 379, 380, 24 L. Ed. 1012] . The charterer must return the vessel in as good a condition as he or she received it, excepting ordinary wear and tear [see The E. T. Halloran (2d Cir. 1940) 111 F.2d 571, 572] .

The demise charterer is treated as the owner for purposes of statutes relating to limitation of liability [see Leary v. United States (1872) 81 U.S. 607, 610, 20 L. Ed. 756] . The charterer also acquires in personam liability arising out of the vessel's operation [*see Cannella v. § 100.23 Liens

Maritime contracts for goods (materials, supplies, equipment) and service (repair, storage) create lien rights by operation of law. Federal maritime lien law provides that any person furnishing repairs, supplies, towage, use of dry dock or marine railway, or other necessaries, to any vessel will have a maritime lien on the vessel [46 U.S.C.S. §§ 31301(4), 31342(a)(1)].

When a claimant under a maritime contract has a lien right, the ship itself becomes liable, to the value of the ship and freight (i.e., charges for the carriage of cargo), for the obligation, which is enforceable in an action in rem. The owner of the ship is also liable personally (in the sense that an action in personam may be maintained) for obligations under a maritime contract, whether or not an obligation is secured by a lien.

[1] United States Government

A case involving a vessel owned by the United States government or any corporation in which the United States government owns the entire outstanding capital stock, including a vessel not owned but possessed or operated by the United States government or such a corporation, is governed by the Suits in Admiralty Act [46 U.S.C.S. § 30901 et seq.]. That act provides that in cases where if such vessel were privately owned or operated, or if a private person or property were involved, a proceeding in admiralty could be maintained, a nonjury proceeding in personam may be brought against the United States or against any corporation described above in the district court of the United States [46 U.S.C.S. § 30903].

There is also the Public Vessels Liability Act [46 U.S.C.S. § 31101 et seq.], which was enacted after the Suits in Admiralty Act, providing that a civil action in personam in admiralty may be brought against the United States in the federal district court for damages caused by a public vessel of the United States [46 U.S.C.S. § 31102(a)]. It has been held that the two acts must be construed together, with the result that an action under the Public Vessels Liability Act may be maintained only where a proceeding in admiralty could be maintained if the public vessel were privately owned or operated [Mejia v. United States (5th Cir. 1946) 152 F.2d 686, 687-688 ; see 46 U.S.C.S. § 30903(a)]. The Public Vessels Liability Act did not create a cause of action; it simply removed the government's immunity [Maine v. United States (1st Cir. 1943) 134 F.2d 574, 575] .

[2] California State Government

The California Legislature has not enacted a statute similar to the Suits in Admiralty Act or the Public Vessels Liability Act. A state's sovereign immunity, unless waived, protects the state from suit in cases of admiralty jurisdiction [The Charlotte (W.D.N.Y. 1922) 285 F. 84, 86-87] and protects the state's vessels from suits in admiralty in rem [Ex parte New York (1921) 256 U.S. 503, 511, 41 S. Ct. 592, 65 L. Ed. 1063] , provided that the vessel in question, in any case, is both wholly owned by the state government and also engaged in a governmental function [The West Point (E.D. Va. 1947) 71 F. Supp. 206, 211 (dictum)].

Therefore, a case involving a vessel owned by the State of California is not a case of admiralty jurisdiction unless the state has waived its sovereign immunity (assuming that the conditions of complete ownership and engagement in a governmental function are met).

In cases of breach of contract, it appears that there never is any sovereign immunity [Souza & McCue Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 508, 510, 20 Cal. Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338 (state, in contract with an individual, as liable for breach of agreement in like manner as an individual, and doctrine of governmental immunity as not applicable)]. Since the state is liable for breach of contract in like manner as an individual, it appears that the state is subject to suit in admiralty for breach of a maritime contract and that, therefore, principles of admiralty law will govern a suit in a state court against the state for breach of a maritime contract. No reported case has so held, however.

In cases of tort, the state has waived its sovereign immunity to some extent. The Tort Claims Act [Gov. Code § 810 et seq.] provides that a public entity (that is, the state, the Regents of the University of California, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, or any other political subdivision or public corporation in California) is liable for injury proximately caused by an act or omission of an employee (that is, an officer, judicial officer, employee, or servant, whether or not compensated, excepting an independent contractor) of the public entity within the scope of employment (including both office and employment) if the act or omission would have given rise to a cause of action against that employee or personal representative other than under the Tort Claims Act [Gov. Code § 810.2 (employee), Gov. Code § 810.4 (employment), Gov. Code § 811.2 (public entity), Gov. Code § 815.2(a); see Gov. Code § 810.8 (injury defined)].

Except as otherwise provided by statute, a public entity is not liable for an injury when the employee is immune from liability [Gov. Code § 815.2(b)].

Public entities and public employees are immune from liability for injuries or damages arising out of hazardous recreational activities, which include boating, conducted on public property [Gov. Code § 831.7(a)]. This immunity applies against participants in the activity, those who assist participants, and spectators who knew or reasonably should have known that the activity created a substantial risk of injury to themselves and were voluntarily in the place of risk, or having the ability to leave failed to do so [Gov. Code § 831.7(a)]. There are specified exceptions to this immunity, such as gross negligence by the public entity or employee which proximately caused the injury [Gov. Code § 831.7(c)(5)]. For a discussion of this immunity, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

[3] Local Governments and Political Subdivisions

In California the protection of sovereign immunity extends to cities, counties, districts, public authorities, public agencies, and all other political subdivisions and all public corporations [see Gov. Code §§ 811.2 (public entity defined), 815(a), 815.2(b) (immunity of public entities)]. Therefore, the discussion of immunity and waiver of immunity in [2], above, applies to local governments as well as to the state.

Since the state has no immunity in cases of breach of contract but may be sued in the same way as a citizen may be sued, it appears that local governments likewise are not immune in such cases and also may be sued.

[4] Foreign Governments

Prior to 1976, vessels owned by a foreign government were largely immune from suit [see The Schooner Exchange v. M'Faddon (1812) 11 U.S. 116, 144-147, 3 L. Ed. 287 ; The Pesaro (1921) 255 U.S. 216, 219, 41 S. Ct. 308, 65 L. Ed. 592] . The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 (28 U.S.C.S. §§ 1330, 1332(a)(4), 1391(f), 1441(d), 1602-1611) qualified this rule, and, subject to special procedural requirements, now generally allows plaintiffs to bring in personam actions against foreign states in both state and federal courts for tort causes of action arising from vessel collisions [28 U.S.C.S. § 1605(a)(2), (5), (b)]. Foreign states do, however, remain immune from certain claims, including those for punitive damages [28 U.S.C.S. § 1606], those based on a discretionary function of the foreign state, and those based on malicious prosecution, abuse of process, defamation, deceit, or interference with the contract rights [28 U.S.C.S. §

1605(a)(5)(A), (B)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.27

§ 100.27 Boat and Boating Equipment Safety Requirements

State issuance of standards and requirements for recreational boating are generally preempted by federal law on the subject [46 U.S.C.S. § 4306; see 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 2101(1), (25), (26), 4301-4311]. Relevant federal regulations are set out in 33 C.F.R. Parts 175 (equipment requirements), 181 (manufacturer requirements), and 183 (boats and associated equipment).

The states are permitted to establish and enforce standards that are identical to those established under the act; the states may establish different standards if permitted to do so by the secretary; and where different standards are required to meet uniquely hazardous conditions within a state, that state may establish such standards regarding the carrying or using of marine safety articles, subject to the authority of the secretary to nullify them by disapproval [46 U.S.C.S. § 4306].

The Department of Boating and Waterways has established fairly comprehen sive safety regulations with the avowed purpose of better conformity with federal law and regulations [14 Cal. Code Reg § 6550]. These are set out in 14 Cal. Code Reg § 6550 et seq. With respect to the matters covered by the federal regulations, the state regulations are substantially the same.

Although federal law prohibits a state from imposing or enforcing a recreational boating equipment or safety standard that is not identical to a regulation prescribed under the federal law [46 U.S.C.S. § 4306], it also provides that compliance with the federal law does not preclude any liability at common law or under state law [46 U.S.C.S.§ 4311(g)].

The United States Supreme Court has concluded that the express preemption provisions apply only to the application of nonconforming state statutes and regulations, not to common law liability, a decision that gives full effect to the savings clause [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 62-63, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466] . Therefore, the Court held that a products liability action against an outboard motor manufacturer for the failure to install a propeller guard was not preempted, despite the Coast Guard's earlier decision not to implement a regulation requiring propeller guards [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 64-68, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466] ; see also LaPlante v. Wellcraft Marine Corp. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 282, 291-296, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 196 (because no regulation governed hand rails or grips on recreational boats, tort action for failure to provide them was not preempted)].

The Court also concluded that the federal statute did not completely occupy the field of safety regulation of recreational boats so as to implicitly preempt liability under state common law [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 68-70, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466] . However, the Court recognized that a tort action may be preempted if the imposition of liability would directly conflict with a federal regulation promulgated under the federal statute, or if it is impossible to comply with a regulation without incurring liability under state common law [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 64-65, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466] .

§ 100.28 Duty to Assist Victims of Boating Accident

[1] Duty to Render Assistance

It is the duty of the operator of a vessel involved in a collision, accident, or other casualty, if he or she can render assistance without seriously endangering the vessel, crew, and passengers, to render to other persons affected by the collision, accident, or casualty such assistance as may be practicable and as may be necessary in order to save them from, or to minimize, any danger caused by the collision, accident, or casualty [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(a)]. This provision substantially duplicates 46 U.S.C.S. § 2303(a); thus the duty is applicable to operators of vessels on waters subject to either admiralty or state jurisdiction [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 650.1(a)]. Operators of vessels on waters subject to admiralty jurisdiction also have a duty to render assistance to any individual found at sea in danger of being lost, without regard to involvement in a collision or other marine casualty, so far as he or she can do so without seriously endangering the vessel or individuals on board [46 U.S.C.S. § 2304(a)(1)].

[2] Exemption From Liability When Rendering Assistance

Any person who complies with Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(a), above, or Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 656.1, 656.2, or 656.3 (boating accident reporting requirements, discussed in §§ 100.30 -100.32), who gratuitously and in good faith renders assistance at the scene of a vessel collision, accident, or other casualty without objection by any person assisted cannot be held liable for any civil damages sought as a result of the rendering of assistance or for any act or omission in providing or arranging salvage, towage, medical treatment, or other assistance, where the assisting person has acted as an ordinary, reasonably prudent person would have acted under the same or similar circumstances [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(b)]. This provision substantially duplicates 46 U.S.C.S. § 2303(c).

Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(c) provides for the limited liability and immunity of public entities and their employees engaged in the rescue of vessels pursuant to the Harbors and Navigation Code. For a discussion of these liabilities and immunities, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.29

§ 100.29 Duty to Report Boating Accident

[1] Reporting Requirement

The owner, operator, or other person on board a vessel involved in a casualty or accident on waters subject to state jurisdiction is required to report the casualty or accident in accordance with regulations adopted by the Department of Boating and Waterways [Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 650.1, 656(d)]. The department's regulations for making such reports are set out in 14 Cal. Code Reg § 6501 et seq. They are substantially the same as the regulatons of the Secretary of Transportation adopted under federal law [see 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 6101-6104] which are set out in 33 C.F.R. § 173.51 et seq.

[2] Accident Report Inadmissible in Civil Action

Neither the report required by Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(d) nor any action taken by the Department of Boating and Waterways with regard to the report may be referred to in any way or be any evidence of negligence or due care of any party at the trial of any action at law to recover damages [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(e)].

[3] Contents of Report Partially Available

All required accident reports and all supplemental reports are to be kept confidential, except that the Department of Boating and Waterways is required to disclose the following information contained in a report to any person having a proper interest in the information [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(f)]:

- Names and addresses of persons involved in or witnessing an accident;
- Registration numbers and descriptions of vessels involved; and
- Date, time, and location of an accident.

Persons having a proper interest in such information include the operator involved, the legal guardian of the operator, the parent of a minor operator, the authorized representative of an operator, a person injured in the accident, the owner of a vessel damaged in the accident, and the owner of other property damaged in the accident [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656(f)]. This list is apparently only illustrative, and it would appear that the owner of an undamaged offending vessel, to whom liability might be imputed under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661, has a proper interest in obtaining any available information.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.30

§ 100.30 Duty to Report Property Damage

The operator of any vessel involved in an accident in California waters who knows or has reason to know that the accident resulted in damage to other property must, if reasonable to do so under the circumstances, stop at the scene of the accident and do either of the following [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656.1]:

- Locate and notify the owner or person in charge of the damaged property of the name and address of the operator and owner of the vessel involved, and on locating the owner or operator of any other vessel involved, or the owner or person in charge of any other property damaged, exhibit the vessel registration and furnish the current residence address of the vessel's owner and operator on request.

- If the owner or person in charge of the damaged property, or the owner or operator of any other vessel involved, cannot be located, leave, in a conspicuous place on the property damaged or other vessel involved, a written notice giving the name and address of the operator and of the owner of the vessel involved and a statement of the circumstances of the accident. Additionally, the law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over the waterway must be notified, without unnecessary delay. If the appropriate law enforcement agency is unknown, the sheriff of the county in which the accident occurred must be notified.

§ 100.31 Duty to Report Personal Injury

In addition to the requirements of Harb. & Nav. Code § 656.1 [for discussion, see § 100.30], the operator of any vessel involved in an accident in California waters who knows or has reason to know that the accident resulted in injury to any person, must furnish his or her name, address, the registration number of the vessel, and the name of the owner, to the person injured, the occupant of any other vessel involved, or any peace officer at the scene of the accident. Additionally, reasonable assistance, including transportation for medical treatment if required or requested by the injured person, must be rendered to the injured person, so far as can be done without serious danger to the vessel or passengers [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656.2].

§ 100.32 Duty to Report Death or Disappearance of Persons

In addition to the requirements of Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 656.1 and 656.2 [for discussion see §§ 100.30, 100.31], the operator of any vessel involved in an accident in California waters who knows or has reason to know that the accident resulted in the death or disappearance of any person must, after fulfilling the requirements of Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 440-876, without delay, furnish the information required by Harb. & Nav. Code § 656.2 to any peace officer at the scene of the accident. If there is no peace officer at the scene, the accident must be reported to the law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over the waterway. If the appropriate law enforcement agency is unknown, then the accident must be reported to the sheriff of the county in which the accident occurred [Harb. & Nav. Code § 656.3].

[1] Berth Lease

Exculpatory clause in berth lease is void; operation of private wharfs and piers is proper subject of public regulation; of great importance to public, and of practical necessity to boat owners; lessor is in superior bargaining position; transaction placed lessee's property at risk of carelessness of lessor. Pelletier v. Alameda Yacht Harbor (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1554-1557, 230 Cal. Rptr. 253

[2] Choice of Law

Failure to assert applicability of federal maritime law is a waiver; law of forum state applies unless timely request is made to invoke maritime law. Pelletier v. Alameda Yacht Harbor (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1554 n.1, 230 Cal. Rptr. 253

[3] Dry Docks

Exculpatory clause in dry dock user's agreement which repair contractor was required to sign with port district is adjunct to repair contract with Navy, and which absolved port district and its maintenance contractor from liability for losses arising from delay or disruption, is valid under both California and maritime law; thus repair contractor was unable to recover for delays caused by malfunction and absence of gantry cranes on dock. Arcwel Marine, Inc. v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 816 F.2d 468, 470-471

Under California law, validity of exculpatory clause in dry dock user's agreement is influenced by fact that repair contractor knew before bidding for Navy repair contract that user agreement with exculpatory clause would be required of successful bidder and had opportunity to increase its bid to account for risk imposed by clause. Arcwel Marine, Inc. v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 816 F.2d 468, 471

[4] In Rem

Remedy of in rem action in admiralty does not deprive party of common law right to bring action in personam for collection of debt giving rise to maritime lien enforceable by in rem action. Rounds v. Cloverport Foundry & Mach. Co. (1915) 237 U.S. 303, 307-308, 35 S. Ct. 596, 59 L. Ed. 966

State court is without jurisdiction to enforce maritime lien by in rem action, even if lien is given by state statute. The J.E. Rumbell (1893) 148 U.S. 1, 13, 13 S. Ct. 498, 37 L. Ed. 345

[5] Jurisdiction in Admiralty Cases

[a] Contract Cases

[i] Maritime Nature of Contract

Admiralty jurisdiction of contract cases depends on nature of contract and is limited to contracts, claims, and services purely maritime, or touching rights and duties pertaining to commerce and navigation. In re The Steamer Eclipse (1889) 135 U.S. 599, 608, 10 S. Ct. 873, 34 L. Ed. 269

Contract is within admiralty jurisdiction if its subject matter is maritime; policies of marine insurance are clearly within admiralty jurisdiction. Royal Ins. Co. v. Pier 39 Ltd. Partnership (9th Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1035, 1036

Insurance policy is within admiralty jurisdiction when interests insured, and not simply risks insured against, are maritime; breakwater and dock are not maritime interests. Royal Ins. Co. v. Pier 39 Ltd. Partnership (9th Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1035, 1036-1037

[ii] Contract to Build Boat

Admiralty jurisdiction does not extend to contract to build boat or to supply materials or services for building boat. Kossick v. United Fruit Co. (1961) 365 U.S. 731, 735, 81 S. Ct. 886, 6 L. Ed. 2d 56 (dictum; contract to build); North Pac. S.S. Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine Ry. & Shipbuilding Co. (1918) 249 U.S. 119, 126-127, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 L. Ed. 510 (dictum; contract to supply materials for construction); Bond v. F/V Mermaid (S.D. Fla. 1970) 311 F. Supp. 1013, 1014 (services of marine architect)

Admiralty jurisdiction does not extend to contract to supply materials and labor to finish building boat after default to original builder, even after hull is launched. Thames Towboat Co. v. The Schooner "Francis McDonald" (1920) 254 U.S. 242, 243-244, 41 S. Ct. 65, 65 L. Ed. 245

Vessel is not subject to admiralty jurisdiction until launched. North Pac. S.S. Co. v. Hall Bros. Marine Ry. & Shipbuilding Co. (1918) 249 U.S. 119, 127, 39 S. Ct. 221, 63 L. Ed. 510

Foreclosure of lien under Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 490, 491, 495 for payment for construction of vessel is not preempted by federal admiralty law. Islander Yachts, Inc. v. One Freeport 36-Foot Vessel (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1086-1087, 219 Cal. Rptr. 654

Manufacturer's lien under Harb. & Nav. Code § 491 is not enforceable until perfected by filing of complaint to foreclose it or by attachment; transfer to bona fide purchaser for value without notice of lien before perfection extinguishes lien. Islander Yachts, Inc. v. One Freeport 36-Foot Vessel (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1089-1092, 219 Cal. Rptr. 654

[iii] Contract to Furnish Supplies or Equipment

Admiralty jurisdiction extends to contract to furnish supplies and equipment for boat, and to pay therefor. Campbell v Loznicka (5th Cir. 1950) 181 F.2d 356, 357-358 (default in obligation to pay for repairs and supplies); The Sam & Priscilla (D. Mass. 1921) 275 F. 937, 939 (default in contractual obligation to furnish fishing net; action for breach of warranty)

Contract to furnish supplies which are items for personal use of those aboard is not maritime contract and is not subject to admiralty jurisdiction. The Mary F. Chisholm (D. Me. 1904) 129 F. 814, 817 (clothing, tobacco, etc., furnished to crew members of fishing boat)

[iv] Contract to Repair Boat

Contract to repair vessel is maritime. Flowers v. Travelers Ins. Co. (5th Cir. 1958) 258 F.2d 220, 221 (dictum)

Contract for reconstruction of vessel is maritime and within admiralty jurisdiction. Wall Street Traders, Inc. v. Sociedad Espanola de Construccion Naval (S.D.N.Y. 1964) 245 F. Supp. 344, 350 (dictum; contract to alter or convert)

Extensive alterations of vessel held reconstruction, not original construction. The Ky-Ill (6th Cir. 1931) 50 F.2d 70, 71

Admiralty law governs the validity and interpretation of ship repair contracts, including exculpatory clauses. Fahey v. Gledhill (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 884, 889, 191 Cal. Rptr. 639, 663 P.2d 197

[v] Contract to Store Boat

Admiralty jurisdiction extends to contract to provide storage for equipment removed from yacht, including small boats. The Navis (D. Me. 1912) 196 F. 843, 846-847

Claim for wharfage for vessel while laid up during winter (when navigation impossible) is not within admiralty jurisdiction. The Murphy Tugs (E.D. Mich. 1886) 28 F. 429, 432

In determining admiralty jurisdiction over tort cases, relationship of wrong to traditional maritime activity is often more sensible test than mechanically applied locality test. Executive Jet Aviation, Inc. v. Cleveland (1972) 409 U.S. 249, 258-261, 93 S. Ct. 493, 34 L. Ed. 2d 454

[b] Products Liability Cases

Products liability claim is subject to admiralty jurisdiction if injury occurs on navigable waters and other factors pointing to admiralty jurisdiction exist. Martinez v. Pacific Indus. Service Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 521, 524

[c] Tort Cases

[i] On Navigable Waters or Related to Maritime Commerce

Every species of tort, however occurring, and whether on board vessel or not, if on high seas or navigable waters, is case of admiralty jurisdiction. The Plymouth (1866) 70 U.S. 20, 36, 18 L. Ed. 125

Action by subcontractor injured while cleaning boiler tubes aboard United States Navy ship, claiming negligence in operation of hydroblast pump and negligence in manufacture of pump, is subject to admiralty jurisdiction; work performed by subcontractor for several years in course of attachment to United States Navy, using equipment with operations manual designed for Navy use, bears directly on function of vessel and has intimate connection with maritime commerce. Martinez v. Pacific Indus. Service Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 521, 525

Under doctrine of Feres v. United States (1950) 340 U.S. 135, 71 S. Ct. 153, 95 L. Ed. 152 , courts lack subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate claims under Public Vessels Act (46 U.S.C. § 31101 et seq.) and Suits in Admiralty Act (46 U.S.C. § 30901 et seq.) by members of armed services when injuries complained of arise out of or are in course of activity incident to military service. Bon v. United States (9th Cir. 1986) 802 F.2d 1092, 1094 n.2

[ii] Limitation of Liability

Federal district court has jurisdiction over action, seeking declaratory and injunctive relief regarding application of limitation of owner's liability under 46 U.S.C. § 30501 et seq., arising from fire aboard noncommercial vessel docked in marina that was in navigable waters, even though no commercial vessels were in marina at time of fire. Sisson v. Ruby (1990) 497 U.S. 358, 110 S. Ct. 2892, 111 L. Ed. 2d 292, 299-303

[iii] Navigable Waters

Body of water is navigable water if susceptible of being used, in ordinary condition or with reasonable improvements, by itself or by uniting with other waters, as highway over which trade and travel may be carried on with other states or foreign countries in customary modes in which such commerce is conducted by water. Davis v. United States (9th Cir. 1950) 185 F.2d 938, 942-943 , relying on The Daniel Ball v. United States (1870) 77 U.S. 557, 563, 19 L. Ed. 999 and United States v. Appalachian Elec. Power Co. (1940) 311 U.S. 377, 407, 61 S. Ct. 291, 85 L. Ed. 243

Determination of navigability. Hitchings v. Del Rio Woods Recreation & Park Dist. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 560, 567, 127 Cal. Rptr. 830

Navigability is question of fact. United States v. Appalachian Elec. Power Co. (1940) 311 U.S. 377, 405, 61 S. Ct. 291, 85 L. Ed. 243

[6] Operation of State Laws in Admiralty Cases

In matters of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, state law is permitted to supplement but not to change substantive admiralty law. Pope & Talbot, Inc. v. Hawn (1953) 346 U.S. 406, 409-410, 74 S. Ct. 202, 98 L. Ed. 143 , superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Babbitt v. Hanover Towing, 7 F. Supp. 2d 650 (E.D. N.C. 1998) ; Madruga v. Superior Court (1953) 346 U.S. 556, 561, 74 S. Ct. 298, 98 L. Ed. 290

Harbors and Navigation Code provisions applied in case of admiralty jurisdiction. Nemec v. Polley (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 453, 456, 277 P.2d 76

Claim for injuries arising on high seas is subject to substantive principles of admiralty law, while subject to procedural laws, including principles of review, of state forum. Arthur v. Avon Inflatables Ltd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 401, 404, 203 Cal. Rptr. 1

[7] Removal From State Court

Case of admiralty or maritime jurisdiction brought in state court is not removable under 28 U.S.C.S. § 1441 unless there is diversity citizenship question or federal question involved. J.J. Ryan & Sons, Inc. v. Continental Ins. Co. (D.S.C. 1974) 369 F. Supp. 692, 697-698

[8] Savings Clause

Concurrent jurisdiction of state courts and federal district courts in admiralty cases explained. Intagliata v. Shipowners & Mer. etc. Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 365, 369-375, 159 P.2d 1

Former 46 U.S.C. § 767 (now 46 U.S.C. § 30308(a)) is the savings clause giving concurrent jurisdiction under Death on the High Seas Act (46 U.S.C. § 30301 et seq.) to state courts. OffshoreLogistics, Inc. v. Tallentire (1986) 477 U.S. 207, 232-233, 106 S. Ct. 2485, 91 L. Ed. 2d 174

[9] Substantive Admiralty Law

[a] Collision

[i] Rules of Navigation

Statutory rules of navigation are strictly and literally construed and compliance is insisted upon. Belden v. Chase (1893) 150 U.S. 674, 698, 14 S. Ct. 264, 37 L. Ed. 1218

Literal compliance with specific rule of navigation is not always sufficient to exonerate vessel from fault. United States v. Woodbury (1st Cir. 1949) 175 F.2d 854, 861 (applying special circumstances rule [e.g., former 33 U.S.C.S. § 211; now see 33 U.S.C.S. § 2002(b)])

Vessel guilty of statutory fault is presumed at fault for collision; presumption is rebuttable by showing vessel's fault could not have contributed to collision. The Pennsylvania v. Troop (1874) 86 U.S. 125, 136, 22 L. Ed. 148

[ii] Determination of Liability

Liability for collision does not attach to either vessel where neither at fault; attaches to one if it is wholly at fault; or allocated according to comparative fault if both are at fault. The "Clara" (1880) 102 U.S. 200, 203, 26 L. Ed. 145 ; United States v. Reliable Transfer Co. (1975) 421 U.S. 397, 411, 95 S. Ct. 1708, 44 L. Ed. 2d 251 ; The Worthington & Davis (E.D. Mich. 1883) 19 F. 836, 839 (inscrutable fault cases)

Liability in multiship disasters are apportioned among all ships involved according to fault. The Norwich Victory (E.D. Pa. 1948) 77 F. Supp. 264, 269 , aff'd sub nom., United States v. The Dump Scows No. 116, No. 120 and No. 122 (3d Cir. 1949) 175 F.2d 556 , cert. denied sub nom. American Dredging Co. v. United States (1949) 338 U.S. 871, 70 S. Ct. 147, 94 L. Ed. 534

Liability of two ships at fault for injury to third party is joint and several. The Beaconsfield (1895) 158 U.S. 303, 307, 15 S. Ct. 860, 39 L. Ed. 993

Suits for collision are permitted to be in personam or in rem or both. Burns Bros. v. The Central R.R. of N.J. (2d Cir. 1953) 202 F.2d 910, 913

[b] Demise Charter Party

Owner's primary obligation under demise charter party is to furnish vessel in seaworthy condition at beginning of voyage. Work v. Leathers (1878) 97 U.S. 379, 380, 24 L. Ed. 1012

Demise charterer's obligation is to redeliver vessel in as good a condition as when received, excepting ordinary wear and tear. The E. T. Halloran (2d Cir. 1940) 111 F.2d 571, 572

[10] Products Liability

In injury claim subject to substantive admiralty law, Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A is applicable to assess strict liablility based on product defect. Arthur v. Avon Inflatables Ltd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 401, 404-405, 203 Cal. Rptr. 1

[11] Vessels Owned by Governments

Suits in Admiralty Act [46 U.S.C. § 30901 et seq.] and Public Vessels Liability Act [46 U.S.C. § 31101 et seq.] are to be construed together. Mejia v. United States (5th Cir. 1946) 152 F.2d 686, 687-688

Under Suits in Admiralty Act (46 U.S.C. § 30901 et seq.) and Clarification Act (50 U.S.C.S. App. § 1291), suit for death of merchant seaman from exposure to asbestos requires dismissal because administrative disallowance is required before suit may be brought, and suit must be brought within two-year statute of limitations, which is jurisdictional and not subject to extension. Smith v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 218, 219-222

Ninth Circuit declined to decide whether discretionary function exception, similar to that in Federal Torts Claims Act (28 U.S.C.S. § 2680(a)), should be implied in Suits in Admiralty Act (46 U.S.C. § 30901 et seq.), although other circuits have implied exception. Huber v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1988) 838 F.2d 398, 400, 400 n.1

[b] State

State is not subject to suit in cases of admiralty jurisdiction unless immunity is waived. The Charlotte (W.D.N.Y. 1922) 285 F. 84, 86-87

Vessels wholly owned by state and engaged in governmental function is not subject to in rem action in federal courts sitting in admiralty. Ex parte New York (1921) 256 U.S. 503, 511, 41 S. Ct. 592, 65 L. Ed. 1063 ; The West Point (E.D. Va. 1947) 71 F. Supp. 206, 211 (dictum)

State, when making contract with individual, is liable for breach of agreement in like manner as individual; doctrine of governmental immunity is not applicable. Souza & McCue Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 508, 510, 20 Cal. Rptr. 634, 370 P.2d 338

[c] Foreign Powers

Vessel owned by foreign power and in service of its government is immune from suit in courts of United States. The Schooner Exch. v. McFaddon & Others (1812) 11 U.S. 116, 144-147, 3 L. Ed. 287

[12] Wrongful Death Actions

Federal court jurisdiction is concurrent with state jurisdiction to hear Death on High Seas Act (DOHSA; 46 U.S.C. § 30301 et seq.) actions; state statutes are preempted by DOHSA whenever it applies. Offshore Logistics, Inc. v. Tallentire (1986) 477 U.S. 207, 221, 232-233, 106 S. Ct. 2485, 91 L. Ed. 2d 174

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Identity and capacity of defendant if other than a natural person, e.g., Defendant _____ (name, unless there is only one defendant) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California or Defendant is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the duly appointed, qualified, and acting personal representative of the estate of _____ (name), deceased.]

[2. Venue facts, if appropriate, e.g., Defendant _____ (name, unless there is only one defendant) is a resident of _____ County, California.]

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint and insert their names and capacities when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that such fictitiously named defendants are negligently responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged.]

4. _____ [Describe circumstances of accident, e.g., On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was waterskiing on _____ (body of water, e.g., Lake Arrowhead) in _____ County, California. At the same time defendant _____ (name, unless there is only one defendant) was operating a _____ (describe boat, e.g., an inboard motorboat) on the _____ (describe body of water, e.g., lake) in the vicinity where plaintiff was waterskiing. Plaintiff released the towrope by which plaintiff was being towed on the waterskis; the skis fell off of plaintiff's feet and floated free; and plaintiff became relatively immobile in the water and waited, being supported by the life jacket type, to be picked up by the towing boat. While plaintiff was waiting in the water, defendant _____ (name, unless there is only one defendant) operated his/her boat so that it collided with plaintiff].

5. The collision referred to in Paragraph 4 above was the proximate result of the negligence of defendant _____ [name, unless there is only one defendant] in that _____ [specify lack of due care, e.g., he/she failed to exercise due care to avoid colliding with plaintiff by, among other negligent acts, following closer than 200 feet behind the boat which was towing plaintiff so that, when he/she saw that plaintiff had released the towrope and was floating in the water, he/she was unable to stop his/her boat or to swerve so as to avoid colliding with plaintiff].

[6. Allege local ordinance or private rule of navigation, if any, which defendant failed to obey, e.g., On _____ (date), the _____ (specify, e.g., San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors) duly made and passed _____ (specify, e.g., an ordinance) for the _____ (specify, e.g., County of San Bernardino), entitled _____ (specify formal title, e.g., Rules of Navigation for Lake Arrowhead), and this _____ (specify, e.g., ordinance) was in full force and effect on _____ (date of accident). _____ (If copy is attached, add: A copy of the _____ (specify, e.g., ordinance) is attached hereto marked Exhibit A and made a part hereof or if copy is not attached, add: The _____ (specify, e.g., ordinance) provides _____ (specify, e.g., "Motorboats on the lake shall move in a counterclockwise direction at all times and shall not follow other boats closer than 200 feet")).]

[7. Allege applicable Harbors and Navigation Code sections, if any, which defendant violated, e.g., The acts of defendant _____ (name, unless there is only one defendant) described in this complaint were in violation of _____ (specify, e.g., Section 655 of the Harbors and Navigation Code), which was in effect at the time of the accident described herein and which provides that no person shall operate any vessel in a reckless or negligent manner so as to endanger the life, limb, or property of any person.]

8. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant _____ [name, unless there is only one defendant], plaintiff _____ [was injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, sustaining bodily injuries and shock and injury to his/her nervous system, which have caused, and will cause, him/her great mental and physical pain and suffering], all to plaintiff's general damage; and plaintiff has incurred [and will continue to incur] medical and related expenses; and plaintiff has been prevented [and will continue to be prevented] from attending to his/her usual occupation as a _____ [specify] with the result that plaintiff has lost earnings [and will continue to lose earnings].

9. _____ [Specify body of water, e.g., Lake Arrowhead] is not a navigable water of the United States subject to the admiralty jurisdiction of the federal courts.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment [against defendants, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof;

2. For damages for medical and related expenses according to proof;

3. For damages for lost earnings [both past and future] according to proof;

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain damages based on the negligent operation of a motorboat on a nonnavigable water resulting in collision with a fallen water-skier. This would not be a case of admiralty jurisdiction; therefore, substantive rules of California law will determine the rights of the parties. The discussion in [3]-[9], applies only to nonnavigable waters.

[3] Duty of Care

[a] Nautical Rules of the Road

Nautical rules of the road, even in a relatively confined area (such as Lake Arrowhead, for example), tend not to be absolute. Technically, the nautical right-of-way rules do not come into effect in a situation between two vessels until the possibility of a collision exists, and they are not applicable otherwise. (In contrast, Vehicle Code statutes governing traffic signals, direction of traffic, and other matters often apply regardless of the likelihood of a collision.)

California has enacted some statutes and regulations regarding both boat operation and waterskiing [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 650 et seq.; 14 Cal. Code Reg § 6600 et seq.], but none of them may have direct application to a particular case, such as a collision between a boat and a skier in the water. Federal statutes [see, e.g., 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 2301-2306, 4301-4311] may not provide any guidance. In such a case, an assessment of the conduct of the parties must necessarily be based on such standards as may be reasonably inferred from those nautical and waterskiing rules and regulations as do exist and, to some extent, on common sense.

By analogy, a water-skier would generally have the right-of-way over a motorboat. A water-skier in tow is less maneuverable than a motorboat; like a sailing vessel, the skier is dependent for continuing movement on an external force. Moreover, the skier is subject to falling into the water and, once in the water, is relatively immobile. Generally, then, a motorboat with a water-skier in tow, maintaining a fixed course, has the right-of-way over a motorboat planning to cross the channel within which the skier is moving, and the second boat is obligated to stay away from that channel. Nevertheless, a water-skier has a duty to keep a proper lookout for his or her own safety and may be chargeable with negligence for failure to do so [Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 993-994, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817 (waterskiing accident on Lake Arrowhead; motorboat collided with skier who had released towrope and was floating in water)].

[b] Imminent Peril

There is a qualification to the requirement that a person must use ordinary care for the safety of others. Under the imminent peril rule, a person who, without negligence is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with a peril arising from either the actual presence of, or the appearance of, imminent danger to the person or to others, is not expected or required to use the same judgment and prudence that is required in the exercise of ordinary care in calmer and more deliberate moments [see Shuster v. Weeks (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 225, 226-227, 21 Cal. Rptr. 388] .

This qualification may or may not apply in a case where a motorboat has collided with a water-skier. It would not apply where it was manifest from the evidence that the defendant was not confronted with a sudden and unexpected peril. In Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 997-998, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817 , the evidence showed that defendant had been using the motorboat on the lake for waterskiing for over four years and he knew that water-skiers fall or jump off their skis. The boat that concerned defendant (and caused him to overlook plaintiff) was about 700 feet behind and going slower than defendant's boat. Plaintiff was on a parallel path 150 feet away. The court concluded that to apply the rule of unexpected peril in these circumstances would convert the sport of waterskiing into a hazardous activity and encourage irresponsible conduct by operators of motorboats.

[4] Operation of Boat Towing Water-Skier

Harb. & Nav. Code § 658 places certain restriction on water-skiers and the boats that tow them [see Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(bb) (definition of "water skis, aquaplane, or similar device")]. In general these are:

- Another person, in addition to the operator, who is at least 12 years old must ride in the boat in a position to observe the progress of the skier [Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(a)].

- A person may not waterski or operate a boat towing a water-skier between sunset and sunrise, or between other prohibited hours under any applicable local ordinance, law, or regulation [Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(b)].

- A person may not maneuver a boat towing a water-skier in such a way as to cause the skier or his or her skis to collide with or strike against an object or another person [Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(d)]. This restriction does not apply where two or more persons are being towed by the same boat.

- The water-skier may not operate his or her skis in such a way as to endanger the life, limb, or property of any person [Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(e)].

The first two restrictions do not apply to a performer engaged in a professional exhibition or to a person engaged in an authorized race or other marine event [Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(c)]. Authorization for such an event may be obtained pursuant to Harb. & Nav. Code § 268.

The California Supreme Court is divided on the issue of whether Harb. & Nav. Code § 658(d) protects the towed water skier from collision with an object or person. One justice has concluded that the statute is intended to safeguard only the lives and property of third persons and that, therefore, the towed water skier is not within this protected statutory class [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 350, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (lead opinion of Arabian, J.)]. Three justices have concluded, on the other hand, that the statute's protection extends to the towed water skier [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 368, 369, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (George, J., concurring and dissenting; Lucas, C.J., concurring; Mosk, J., dissenting)]. The remaining justices have analyzed the issue within the context of traditional implied assumption of risk analysis without finding the statute dispositive of the question of assumption of risk [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 362-364, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724 (Kennard, J., Panelli, J., and Baxter, J. concurring)]. For further discussion regarding the defense of assumption of risk generally, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

[5] Res Ipsa Loquitur

There are three requirements for the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to a case of negligence [see, e.g., Roddiscraft, Inc. v. Skelton Logging Co. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 784, 793-802, 28 Cal. Rptr. 277] :

- The accident or injury in question ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence;

- The accident or injury was caused by an agency or instrumentality in the exclusive control of the defendant (and, if the defendant had relinquinshed control, which was not mishandled or otherwise changed thereafter); and

- The accident or injury was not due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff which was the cause of his or her injury.

As to the first requirement, the Supreme Court has accepted the view that boats, like automobiles, do not ordinarily run over people when driven in a prudent manner [Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 (waterskiing accident)].

There seldom will be any doubt that the second requirement exists. It may usually be shown that the defendant had sole control of the offending boat at all relevant times [see Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 559, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377] .

Whether the third requirement exists may be difficult to ascertain. When a water-skier has been struck by a motorboat after releasing the towrope and while floating in the water, it may be argued that both the motorboat operator and the skier were in the exercise of an equal right and each chargeable with the same degree of care [see Sauer v. Eagle Brewing Co. (1906) 3 Cal. App. 127, 132, 84 P. 425] , and that the skier's voluntary action in releasing the towrope negates the existence of the third requirement so that the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur does not apply. This argument has been rejected by the court of appeal in a case arising from the collision of a motorboat with a skier floating in the water after having released the towrope. In Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 996-997, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817 (trial court's refusal to give requested res ipsa loquitur instruction as error), the court reasoned that the defendant may be held to be in exclusive control of the situation even though the plaintiff is not completely inactive as long as there is evidence removing the inference of plaintiff's responsibility for the accident. The interpretation that both parties were in the exercise of an equal right is generally applied in automobile accident cases where right-of-way cannot be clearly established. But in the waterskiing situation, plaintiff had a right to be in the water corridor at the time of the accident, and it was irrelevant whether plaintiff was up on skis or in the water since waterskiing necessarily involves both activities. Although the precise parameters of plaintiff's right-of-way were difficult for the court to define, this fact did not alter the court's conclusion that defendant had a duty not to cross plaintiff's path.

[a] Identity and Capacity of Defendant (Paragraph 1)

If the defendant is not a natural person, the complaint should allege the defendant's identity as an existing entity against which the court's judgment will operate [see Tanner v. Best (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 442, 445, 104 P.2d 1084] , such as a corporation, a partnership, an unincorporated association, or a governmental agency. A defendant who is a natural person need not be identified as such.

If the defendant is sued in a particular capacity, that is, if liability depends on the defendant's having certain obligations because of holding a status (such as executor, trustee, real estate broker, or attorney) to which the law attaches special significance, the complaint should allege that capacity [see, e.g., Katleman v. First Nat'l Bank (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 520, 524, 28 Cal. Rptr. 135 (discharged executor as not subject to suit in representative capacity)]. When a defendant's capacity is simply that of a private individual, an allegation as to capacity is not necessary.

When the defendant is not a natural person sued in his or her individual capacity, it may be necessary to reflect that fact in the caption. See Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions , for discussion and forms.

[b] Venue Facts (Paragraph 2)

There is no requirement that facts establishing venue be specially pleaded. The plaintiff does not have a burden to show that venue is proper; rather, the defendant has a burden, if venue is not proper, to raise an objection and prove the point [see Code Civ. Proc. § 396b]. If venue is proper in only one county, however, it is advisable for the complaint to show what county that is. This may be done in an allegation describing the events in question. A separate paragraph devoted to nothing but venue facts is not necessary. In this form of complaint Paragraph 2 set outs a venue fact to illustrate an appropriate place for such an allegation, if it is desired.

[c] Unknown Defendants (Paragraph 3)

A plaintiff who is ignorant of the name of a defendant must state that fact in the complaint; and such defendant may be designated by any name [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. When such a defendant's name is discovered, the complaint, and any other pleading in which he or she has been designated by a fictitious name, must be amended [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. For further discussion and forms, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used (alternative forms of Doe allegations), and (forms relating to amending pleadings to substitute a named defendant for a Doe defendant).

If a defendant is designated by a fictitious name, the caption must reflect that [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.40 (title of action in complaint as required to include names of all parties)].

[d] Identity and Capacity of Plaintiff (Paragraph 4)

If the plaintiff is not a natural person suing in his or her own behalf, the complaint should state the identity of the plaintiff and the capacity in which he or she sues [for discussion, see [a], above].

If the plaintiff brings the action in a special capacity, the complaint should allege his capacity to show that the plaintiff is entitled to relief, if other facts are true [see Parker v. Bowron (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 344, 351, 254 P.2d 6 (distinguishing standing and capacity to sue); Tinsley v. Palo Alto Unified School Dist. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 871, 883, 154 Cal. Rptr. 591 (distinguishing standing and capacity to sue)].

If the plaintiff is not a natural person suing in his or her own behalf, it may be necessary to reflect that fact in the caption. See Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions .

[e] Elements of Cause of Action (Paragraphs 4-8)

To have a cause of action for damages based on negligence, the plaintiff must both plead and prove the following [see, e.g., Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795] :

- The existence of a duty of care owed by defendant to plaintiff (or to a class of which plaintiff is a member);
- Breach of that duty by defendant (either by act or by omission to act);
- Actual detriment to plaintiff; and
- A causal relationship between defendant's breach of duty and the detriment suffered by plaintiff.

For a discussion of elements of a cause of action and for damages based on negligence and a discussion of the pleading of such a cause of action, see Ch. 380, Negligence .

Regarding the pleading of statutes and ordinances, see Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances .

[f] Nonnavigability of Body of Water (Paragraph 9)

Whether or not a particular body of water is navigable so as to give the federal courts a sitting in admiralty jurisdiction is a question of fact [United States v. Appalachian Elec. Power Co. (1940) 311 U.S. 377, 405, 61 S. Ct. 291, 85 L. Ed. 243] .

[7] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages for anything other than personal injury or wrongful death (for example, property damage) must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

No claim for punitive damages may state an amount sought regardless of the nature of the case [Civ. Code § 3295(e)].

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115], see Ch. 177, Damages , and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments .

[8] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[9] Defenses

[a] Assumption of Risk

The defense of assumption of risk arises from the concurrence of three facts: (1) the plaintiff actually knew of the danger to his or her life and limb; (2) the plaintiff had an appreciation of the magnitude of the danger (the plaintiff knew that the risk of injury was great); and (3) the plaintiff had freedom of choice whether or not to expose himself or herself to that risk [see, e.g., Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 566-567, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377] .

Apparently, water-skiers do not assume the risk of being hit by a motorboat merely because they go waterskiing [see Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 565, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377 (purpose of county ordinance regulating speed of boat within 100 feet of water-skier was to protect skier from collision, and that purpose would be frustrated if skier were held to assume risk of collision)]. However, if the defendant is a co-participant in the waterskiing activity, assumption of risk may apply [see Ford v. Gouin (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 339, 344-345, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30, 834 P.2d 724] . In one case, for example, the court of appeal held that provisions of the Harbors and Navigation Code governing the use of jet skis did not prevent application of the primary assumption of risk doctrine to a collision between two jet skis driven by friends engaged in the sport of recreational jet skiing, because the language of the statutes does not demonstrate a clear intent to abrogate the assumption of risk doctrine in that context [Whelihan v. Espinoza (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1575, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 ; see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 655(a), 655.7(c); see also Peart v. Ferro (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 60, 78-82, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 (same result; personal watercraft used by parties was not technically jet ski because it was equipped with seat)].

For further discussion, see § 100.60[4] and Ch. 380, Negligence .

[b] Negligence

There is no clear principle in the few cases on collisions between motorboats and water-skiers describing what constitutes negligence on the part of a skier. There are, however, some suggestions.

A water-skier may be negligent in consenting to be towed by a driver the skier knows or has reason to know is inexperienced in operating a motorboat or towing skiers [Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 554, 568-569, 30 Cal. Rptr. 521, 381 P.2d 377] .

A water-skier's crossing of the wake of his or her own tow, with the result that he or she falls and is struck by another motorboat approaching at right angles, may constitute negligence [see Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 995 n.9, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817 ; see also Reddick v. Lindquist (Tex. Civ. App. 1972) 484 S.W.2d 441, 444-445] . For example, the skier's negligence can be established by evidence that the ski rope was extended from the boat for five minutes and the skier, who was adjusting a ski, did not make sufficient efforts to be clearly visible [Metzger v. Barnes (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 6, 11, 141 Cal. Rptr. 257] .

In general, a water-skier's failure to keep a proper lookout for his or her own safety may be negligence [Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 986, 993, 111 Cal. Rptr. 817] .

9-100 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 100.61

§ 100.61 Allegation--Defendant as Owner or Lessee of Shore Property and as Concessionaire

[1] FORM Allegation--Defendant as Owner or Lessee of Shore Property and as Concessionaire

At the time of the accident described below, defendant _____ [name] was the _____ [owner or lessee] of the real property, including the beach, that adjoins the water where the accident occurred. _____ [Describe defendant's status as concessionaire, e.g., At the time of the accident, defendant operated on that property a business providing food and drink and certain facilities for the convenience of patrons using the water adjoining the property. Defendant offered the use of the water for bathing and other water-related recreational use, including waterskiing, in connection with his/her/its business operation].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, may be inserted into a complaint [see § 100.60] if plaintiff's injury was the proximate result of a breach of a concessionaire's duty [see [3], below].

If this allegation is used, it will be necessary to insert a paragraph describing how the concessionaire breached a duty. The form in § 100.62, below, is an example of such a paragraph.

[3] Liability of Concessionaire

It is the duty of a person who offers the use of public waters for bathing in connection with bathhouses and other appropriate facilities maintained by him or her as owner or lessee of the shore, to exercise reasonable care to prevent injury to patrons who use the waters in the usual and ordinary way and consistent with the invitation extended [Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 826, 346 P.2d 785 (dictum quoting Connecticut case)]. That duty may include warning boats not to come too close to shore, providing buoys or markers to indicate an area of restricted speed because of the presence of bathers, and providing, by ropes other means, a protected area for swimmers, bathers, and beginning water-skiers. It may also include keeping an attendant on duty at all times for constant surveillance and appropriate regulation of both boaters and bathers. If a person, such as a beginning water-skier, is injured in a collision resulting from a breach of such duty, the obligor landowner or lessee (who may broadly be called a concessionaire) may be liable [see Sorensen v. Hutson (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 817, 820, 830, 346 P.2d 785 (affirming judgment against concessionaire as well as owners and operator of boat which collided with plaintiff; affirming nonsuit of concessionaire's lessor, owner of property and beach area leased by concessionaire)].

The Sorensen case involved an injury that occurred in Newport Bay; therefore, the case was one of admiralty jurisdiction. That point, however, was not referred to in the opinion of the court of appeal. The rules set out in that case would be applicable to a case in which the California courts have exclusive jurisdiction; but it is open to question whether those rules are part of the substantive admiralty law. The Sorensen case should not be regarded as establishing the liability of a concessionaire for a breach of duty which makes the case one of admiralty jurisdiction.

§ 100.62 Allegation--Breach of Duty by Concessionaire on Shore Property

[1] FORM Allegation--Breach of Duty by Concessionaire on Shore Property

Defendant _____ [name] negligently failed to provide any buoys or markers to indicate an area in the water where motorboats should reduce speed because of the presence of bathers, swimmers, and beginning water-skiers in the water; he/she/it negligently failed to provide, by ropes or other means, a protected area for such persons; and at the time of the accident hereinafter described, he/she/it negligently failed to provide an attendant to warn motorboat operators to stay away from areas where bathers, swimmers, and beginning water-skiers were in the water, and to warn such persons of the dangerous proximity of motorboats. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant _____ [name], defendant _____ [name of motorboat operator] was able to, and did, operate a motorboat in a negligent, reckless, and careless manner, resulting in plaintiff's injuries as described in this complaint, and plaintiff was not made aware of the imminent danger of collision.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, is a companion to the allegation in § 100.61, and should be inserted into a complaint immediately following that allegation. The collision and plaintiff's injuries would be described in later paragraphs, as in the form of complaint in § 100.60.

§ 100.63 Allegation--Defendants as Owner of Boat Causing Injury and as Operator With Owner's Consent

[1] FORM Allegation--Defendants as Owner of Boat Causing Injury and as Operator With Owner's Consent

Defendant _____ [name] was, at the time of the accident described below, the owner of the boat that was the instrumentality causing plaintiff's injuries. That boat was then an undocumented vessel numbered or required to be numbered under the law of California. Defendant _____ [name of operator of boat] was, at the time of plaintiff's injuries, _____ [insert if appropriate: an immediate member of the family of _____ (name of owner), namely _____ (specify, e.g., his/her son or other family member mentioned in Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a)), and was then] operating the boat with the permission, knowledge, and consent of defendant _____ [name of owner].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, may be inserted into a complaint, such as the one set out in § 100.60 when liability for negligence can be imputed to the owner of a boat under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661.

[3] Liability of Boat Owner Based on Imputed Negligence

Every owner of an undocumented vessel numbered under the Harbors and Navigation Code [see [14], below] is liable and responsible for the death of or injury to person or property resulting from negligence in the operation of such vessel, in the business of the owner or otherwise, by any person using and operating the vessel with the permission, express or implied, of the owner, and the negligence of such person shall be imputed to the owner for all purposes of civil damage [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a)].

In any action against an owner on account of imputed negligence as imposed by Harb. & Nav. Code § 661, the operator of the vessel whose negligence is imputed to the owner must be made a defendant if personal service of process can be had on the operator within California. On recovering a judgment, recourse must first be had against the property of the operator so served [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(c)].

[4] Owner and Vessel Defined

An owner of a vessel is a person having all the incidents of ownership, including the legal title, of the vessel, whether or not such person lends, rents, or pledges the vessel; or a person entitled to the possession of the vessel as purchaser under a conditional sale contract; or a mortgagor of the vessel. The term "owner" does not include a person holding legal title to a vessel under a conditional sale contract, the mortgagee of a vessel, or the renter or lessor of a vessel to the state or any county, city, district, or political subdivision of the state under a lease, lease-sale agreement, or rental-purchase agreement which grants possession of the vessel to the lessee for a period of 30 consecutive days or more [Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(p)].

A "legal owner" of a vessel is a person holding the legal title to a vessel under a conditional sale contract, the mortgagee of a vessel, or the renter or lessor of a vessel to the state, or to any county, city, district, or political subdivision of the state, under a lease, lease-sale, or rental-purchase agreement that grants possession of the vessel to the lessee for a specified period [Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(k)]. A registered owner of a vessel is the person registered by the Department of Motor Vehicles as the owner of the vessel [Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(u)].

A vessel is a watercraft of any description used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on water except (1) a seaplane on the water, and (2) a watercraft specifically designed to operate on a permanently fixed course, the movement of which is restricted to a fixed track or arm to which the watercraft is attached or by which the watercraft is controlled [Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(aa)].

[5] Use by Family Member

It is presumed that the vessel in question is being operated with the knowledge and consent of the owner if, at the time of the injury, death, or damage, the vessel is under the control of an immediate member of the owner's family. An immediate member of the owner's family may be, but is not limited to, a spouse, parent, brother or sister, or child [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a)].

[6] Vicarious Liability as Not Relieving Other Liabilities

The provisions of Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 may not be construed as relieving any person from any liability which he or she would otherwise have; however, there can be no recovery in excess of injury or damage actually incurred [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a)].

[7] Limitation on Liability of Owner

The liability of an owner for imputed negligence imposed by Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 and not arising through the relationship of principal and agent or master and servant is limited to the amount of $10,000 for the death of or injury to one person in any one accident and, subject to that limit, is limited to the amount of $20,000 for the death of or injury to more than one person in any one accident and is limited to the amount of $10,000 for damage to property of others in any one accident [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(b)].

[8] Owners' Right to Subrogation

If there is recovery under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 against an owner based on imputed negligence, the owner is subrogated to all of the rights of the person injured or whose property has been injured, and the owner may recover from the operator of the vessel in question the total amount of any judgment and costs recovered against the owner [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(d)].

[9] Bailee of Owner Deemed to Be Operator

For the purposes of joinder, recourse to property for satisfaction of judgment, and subrogation [see Harb. & Nav. Code

§ 661(c),(d)], if a bailee of the owner with the express or implied permission of the owner permits another person to operate the vessel in question, both the bailee and the actual operator shall be deemed to be operators [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(e)].

[10] Settlement and Extinguishment of Liability

When two or more persons are injured or killed in one accident, the owner of the vessel in question may settle and pay any bona fide claims for damages arising out of personal injuries or death, whether or not they have been reduced to judgment, and the payments shall diminish to the extent thereof the owner's total liability on account of the accident [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(f)].

Payments aggregating the full sum of $20,000 shall extinguish all liability of the owner for personal injury or death arising out of the accident which exists by reason of imputed negligence, pursuant to Harb. & Nav. Code § 661, and which did not arise through the negligence of the owner or through the relationship of principal and agent, or master and servant [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(f)].

[11] Conditional Seller and Buyer

If a vessel is sold under a conditional contract of sale whereby the title to the vessel remains in the conditional seller, neither the conditional seller nor his or her assignee, if any, shall be deemed to be the owner of the vessel for the purpose of imputing negligence under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661; and the conditional buyer, or his or her assignee, if any, shall be deemed to be the owner for that purpose, notwithstanding the terms of the contract, until and unless the seller or his or her assignee, if any, retakes possession of the vessel [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(g)].

[12] Chattel Mortgagee of Vessel

A chattel mortgagee of a vessel out of possession is not an owner of the vessel for the purpose of imputed negligence under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(g)].

[13] Death of Plaintiff or Defendant

An action based on imputed negligence under Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 does not abate by reason of the death of either any injured person or any person liable or responsible under that section. In any action for physical injury based on imputed negligence under that section by the executor, administrator, or personal representative of any deceased person, the damages recoverable shall be the same as those recoverable under former Civ. Code § 956 [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(h) (former Civ. Code § 956 was repealed in 1961; the substance of that section is now set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 377.34; Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 has not been amended to reflect this change)].

[14] Numbered Vessels

The provisions of Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 apply in the case of injury, death, or property damage caused by an undocumented vessel numbered under the Harbors and Navigation Code [Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a)].

An undocumented vessel is any vessel which is not required to have, and which does not have, a valid marine document issued by the United States Coast Guard or any federal agency which is its successor [Harb. & Nav. Code § 651(y)].

There is no provision for numbering vessels under the Harbors and Navigation Code. In a reorganization of the state government [see Governor's Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1969, dated March 5, 1969] those provisions were moved to the Vehicle Code [see Veh. Code §§ 9840-9924], but the language of Harb. & Nav. Code § 661(a) was not amended. Hence, that section continues to refer to vessels "numbered under this code." The Vehicle Code provisions now require that every undocumented vessel [see Veh. Code § 9840(g)] using the waters or on the waters of California must be currently numbered in accordance with Chapter 2 of Division 3.5 of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 9850 et seq.], federal law, or a federally approved numbering system of another state [Veh. Code § 9850].

If a vessel numbered pursuant to federal law or the law of another state changes its state of principal use and remains within California for a period in excess of 90 days, it must obtain a new number in accordance with the requirements of the Vehicle Code [Veh. Code § 9873(a)].

There are exceptions to the apparently absolute requirement that every undocumented vessel be numbered. Foreign vessels temporarily in the waters of California, public vessels of the United States or another state or a subdivision or municipality of another state, and ships' lifeboats need not be numbered [Veh. Code § 9873(b)-(d)]. The following kinds of vessels are also excepted [Veh. Code § 9873(e)]:

- A vessel propelled solely by oars or paddles.

- A vessel eight feet or less propelled solely by sail.

- A nonmotorized surfboard-like vessel over eight feet in length, propelled solely by sail, and with a mast which is required to be held upright by the operator in order to sail [13 Cal. Code Reg § 301.00 (adopted pursuant to Veh. Code § 9873(e))].

- Any vessel belonging to a class of boats which has been exempted from numbering by the Department of Motor Vehicles after the department has found that the numbering of vessels of that class will not materially aid in their identification. If any agency of the federal government has a numbering system applicable to that class of vessels, then the department must also find that the vessel would also be exempt from numbering if it were subject to federal law.

Under federal law (46 U.S.C.S. §§ 12301-12309), an undocumented vessel equipped with propulsion machinery of any kind must have a number issued by the proper issuing authority in the state in which the vessel is principally operated [46 U.S.C.S. § 12301]. The Secretary of Transportation is required to prescribe by regulation a standard numbering system for such vessels [46 U.S.C.S. § 12302(a)].

The numbering system employed by the Department of Motor Vehicles pursuant to Veh. Code §§ 9850-9875 is required to conform with any overall system of identification numbering for undocumented vessels within the United States which any agency of the United States government has in force [Veh. Code § 9857]. The present numbering system appears to meet this requirement [see 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 12302, 12303; 33 C.F.R. §§ 173.1-173.35].

The documentation of vessels, formerly the responsibility of the Bureau of Customs, is now the responsibility of the Coast Guard [46 C.F.R. § 66.01-3]. Vessels entitled (but not necessarily required) to be documented, vessels exempt from documentation, and vessels required to be documented are described in 46 C.F.R. §§ 67.01-1-67.01-13. In general, a pleasure boat under five net tons is not entitled to documentation [46 C.F.R. § 67.01-3; see 46 U.S.C. §§ 12103(a), 12114 (referring to recreational vehicles)]. Thus, most pleasure boats, excepting only the larger yachts, are not entitled to documentation. (The measurement of vessels is covered in 46 C.F.R. §§ 69.01-1-69.15-41. It is somewhat complex. A simplified system of measurement is given in 46 C.F.R. §§ 69.05-1-69.05-11 for pleasure vessels. Basically the system combines length, breadth, and depth of a vessel. As an example, a pleasure vessel measuring about 30 feet long, nine feet abeam, and five feet from the deck to the top of the keel would be approximately five net tons.) Since Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 applies only to undocumented vessels, the owner of a pleasure boat large enough to be documented can avoid the operation of that statute simply by having his or her boat documented.

[15] Limited Application of Harb. & Nav. Code § 661

Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 will not apply to any case of admiralty jurisdiction, and whether a vessel is documented or not is irrelevant because documentation is not a basis for admiralty jurisdiction. The sole jurisdictional question is whether the injury occurred on navigable water. Therefore, the actual effect of Harb. & Nav. Code § 661 is to give some boat owners an opportunity to escape vicarious liability. That section would not apply to the owner of a boat over five net tons (assuming the boat is documented) even though the injury occurred on nonnavigable water, that is, water exclusively within the state's jurisdiction; and it would not apply to any boat owner, regardless of the size of the boat or documentation, if the injury occurred on navigable water.

8. Plaintiff was the owner of the boat and the personal property that was aboard the boat at the time of the accident. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant _____ [name, unless there is only one defendant] plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____.

9. [Allege applicable Harbors and Navigation Code provisions which defendant violated. See, e.g., form in § 100.60[1], Paragraph 7.]

10. [Allege nonnavigability of body of water. See form in § 100.60[1], Paragraph 9.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment [against defendants, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For general damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain damages, for property damage only, based on the negligent operation of a motorboat on nonnavigable water resulting in collision between plaintiff's boat and defendant's boat, with consequent loss of plaintiff's boat and personal property aboard. This would not be a case of admiralty jurisdiction; therefore, substantive rules of California law will determine the rights of the parties.

[3] Rules of Navigation on Nonnavigable Waters

The Harbors and Navigation Code contains a few rules of navigation governing the operation of boats on nonnavigable waters, that is, waters over which the federal courts have no admiralty jurisdiction. They are set out as Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 250-268 and 281-285. The Department of Boating and Waterways has promulgated extensive rules of navigation [see 14 Cal. Code Reg § 6600 et seq.] pursuant to its authority under Harb. & Nav. Code § 652 to promulgate such rules if they are in conformity with the pilot rules contained in the federal navigation laws or the navigation rules promulgated by the United States Coast Guard [Harb. & Nav. Code § 652(b)]. These rules apply to navigation on nonnavigable waters within the territorial jurisdiction of the state; but they have no application on navigable waters over which the federal courts have admiralty jurisdiction, notwithstanding their conformity with federal rules of navigation. Except for the legislative requirement that the state rules conform, there is no necessity for conformity. To the extent that the state rules supplement federal rules and are not inconsistent with them, however, the state rules may be applied to navigation on navigable waters within the territorial jurisdiction of the state [for discussion, see § 100.12].

[4] Collision on Nonnavigable Waters

The Harbors and Navigation Code contains three rules of liability for collision, which are applicable on nonnavigable waters.

First, if a collision is occasioned by failure to observe any rule in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 281-284, the owner of the vessel by which the rule is infringed cannot recover compensation for damages sustained by the vessel unless the circumstances of the case made a departure from the rule necessary [Harb. & Nav. Code § 290].

Second, damage to person or property arising from the failure of a vessel to observe any rule in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 281-284 is deemed to have been occasioned by the willful default of the person in charge of the deck at the time, unless the circumstances of the case made a departure from the rule necessary [Harb. & Nav. Code § 291].

Third, losses caused by collision are to be borne according to the following rules [Harb. & Nav. Code § 292]:

- If one party was exclusively at fault, then the party at fault bears his or her own loss and he or she must compensate the other party for any loss which the other has sustained;

- If neither party was at fault, then the loss shall be borne by the party on whom it falls;

- If both parties were at fault and there appears to be no great disparity in fault, then the loss is equally divided;

- If both parties were at fault and it appears that there was a great disparity in fault, then the loss is equitably apportioned;

- If it cannot be ascertained where the fault lies, then the loss is equally divided.

Although Harb. & Nav. Code § 292 appears in the same part of the Harbors and Navigation Code as Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 281-284, it does not refer to those sections (unlike Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 290 and 291 preceding it). By its terms Harb. & Nav. Code § 292 is not limited to collisions occasioned by a failure to observe the rules of navigation set out in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 281-284; however, no judicial decision has clarified the scope of Harb. & Nav. Code § 292. As there is no evident reason for limiting application of that section to cases of collision occasioned by a failure to observe the rules in Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 281-284, it may probably be safely assumed, until a court decides otherwise, that Harb. & Nav. Code § 292 is not so limited, and that it applies to any case of collision.

It is interesting that, although the Legislature apparently tried to make the rules in Harb. & Nav. Code § 292 conform to the admiralty rules for distribution of loss [for discussion, see § 110.19], there are two significant differences. Under Harb. & Nav. Code § 292(d), if it cannot be ascertained where the fault lies, the loss is equally divided; but under admiralty law, in a case of inscrutable fault, the loss is not equally divided. Rather, each party bears his or her own loss, and neither one recovers anything. Under Harb. & Nav. Code § 292(c), if both parties are at fault, the loss is equally divided unless the major-minor fault rule applies. However, the admiralty rule of equal division was repudiated in United States v. Reliable Transfer Co. (1975) 421 U.S. 397, 411, 95 S. Ct. 1708, 44 L. Ed. 2d 251 in favor of allocation of liability in proportion to fault [for discussion, see § 100.19[5]].

Neither the master nor the owner of any vessel can recover damages for injuries, to the vessel or to himself or herself, resulting from a collision growing out of a failure to comply with the provisions of Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 253-258 [Harb. & Nav. Code § 259]. There is no evident reason why such a limitation on recovery should extend only to those sections.

Defendant _____ [name] manufactured the particular boat hereinafter described. In manufacturing that boat, defendant _____ [name] installed in it the _____ [specify component or associated equipment, e.g., engine] described in Paragraph 5 below.

5. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, engaged in the business of manufacturing components for boats and associated equipment which is sold to manufacturers of boats for subsequent assembly. Defendant _____ [name] manufactured and sold to the boat manufacturer mentioned in Paragraph 4 above _____ [describe component or item of associated equipment, e.g., a 50-horsepower internal combustion gasoline engine called by defendant _____ (name, make, and model of engine in defendant's terminology, e.g., a Viceroy II Model D-477 inboard engine)].

6. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, engaged in the business of selling at retail to the general public boats and associated equipment.

7. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff purchased from defendant _____ [describe, e.g., a 1994 model motorboat 13 feet in length equipped with a 50-horsepower inboard gasoline engine and called by the manufacturer a Comanche Raider].

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to obtain damages for personal injury and property damage occurring on nonnavigable water and based on strict liability of the manufacturer of a boat, and of the retailer if subject to jurisdiction, where the purchaser-user has been injured because of a defect. This would not be a case of admiralty jurisdiction; therefore, substantive rules of California law will determine the rights of the parties. Certain duties are imposed on the manufacturer and retailer, however, under federal law.

For discussion of products liability and other appropriate forms of complaint, see Ch. 460, Products Liability .

[3] Restrictions on Manufacture and Sale

Federal recreational boating safety statutes [46 U.S.C.S. § 4301 et seq.] place some restrictions on the freedom of manufacturers and sellers to make and sell boats. These statutes prohibit any person from manufacturing, constructing, assembling, selling or offering for sale, introducing, delivering for introduction into interstate commerce, or importing into the United States, any boat, or associated equipment, or component thereof to be sold for subsequent assembly, unless (A) it conforms with 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 4301-4311 or a regulation prescribed thereunder; or (B) it is intended solely for export, and both it and the container, if any, in which it is exported are so labeled, tagged, or marked [46 U.S.C.S. § 4307(a)(1); see 33 C.F.R. §§ 183.1-183.901].

The act also prohibits any person from affixing, attaching, or displaying on, in, or with a boat or an item of associated equipment a seal, label, plate, insignia, or other device which is false or misleading in indicating or suggesting compliance with federal safety standards [46 U.S.C.S. § 4307(a)(2)].

Any violation of these provisions may subject the violator, or the individual executives of a corporate violator, to civil penalties [46 U.S.C.S. § 4311].

[4] Record of Compliance With Federal Requirements

Every manufacturer subject to the provisions of 46 U.S.C.S. § 4301 et seq. is required to establish and maintain records, make reports, and provide information as the Secretary of Transportation may reasonably require to enable the secretary to determine whether the manufacturer has acted or is acting in compliance with 46 U.S.C.S. §§ 4301-4311 and regulations prescribed thereunder [46 U.S.C.S. § 4309(a)]. Those records would probably be available by subpena if not through cooperation, to counsel for the plaintiff in a lawsuit against a manufacturer based on negligence or strict liability. Trade secrets of the manufacturer cannot be disclosed [see 46 U.S.C.S. § 4309(b)].

[5] Manufacturer's Duty to Give Notice of Defects

If a boat or an item of associated equipment has left the place of manufacture and the manufacturer thereafter discovers or acquires information which he or she determines, in the exercise of reasonable and prudent judgment, to indicate that the boat or item of associated equipment, being subject to a safety standard or regulation prescribed under 46 U.S.C.S. § 4302, either fails to comply with the safety standard or regulation, or contains a defect which creates a substantial risk of personal injury to the public, the manufacturer is required to notify, within a reasonable time, the dealer or distributor to whom the boat or item of associated equipment was delivered, and the first purchaser for a purpose other than resale (subject to reasonable limitations on efforts to discover such a purchaser), and any subsequent purchaser known to the manufacturer [46 U.S.C.S. § 4310(b),(c)(1)]. The manufacturer, in giving this notice, must clearly describe either the defect or in what way the boat or item of associated equipment fails to comply with the applicable safety standard or regulation, must state an evaluation of the hazard reasonably related to it, must state what measures should be taken to correct the defect or failure in compliance, and must offer to take such measures at his or her sole cost and expense [46 U.S.C.S. § 4310(d)].

In addition to the private notices, a notice must be given to the Secretary of Transportation, who may publicly disclose the information contained in the notice, including trade secrets if necessary, for the purpose of preventing injuries from the defect or from failure in compliance and promotion of safety [46 U.S.C.S. § 4310(e)].

The secretary also has authority to determine through testing, inspection, investigation, research, or examination of reports that a boat or associated equipment contains a defect or fails to comply with applicable standards and to require the manufacturer to issue a notice [46 U.S.C.S. § 4310(f)].

Notice to purchasers for a purpose other than resale is not required, however, if the defect or failure of compliance is discovered by the manufacturer or the Secretary of Transportation more than ten years after the date of manufacture or, if the boat or associated equipment was required by regulation to have a date of certification affixed, more than ten years from the date of certification [46 U.S.C.S. § 4310(c)(2)].

[6] Effect of Compliance With Federal Requirements

Although 46 U.S.C.S. § 4306 expressly preempts any state law or regulation establishing a safety standard that is not identical to a regulation established pursuant to that federal statute, 46 U.S.C.S. § 4311(g) provides that compliance with the federal statute and its implementing regulations do not relieve a person from liability at common law or under state laws. The United States Supreme Court has concluded that the express preemption provisions apply only to the application of nonconforming state statutes and regulations, not to common law liability, a decision that gives full effect to the savings clause [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466, 477-478] . However, the Court recognized that a tort action may be preempted if the imposition of liability would directly conflict with a federal regulation promulgated under the federal statute, or if it is impossible to comply with a regulation without incurring liability under state common law [Sprietsma v. Mercury Marine (2002) 537 U.S. 51, 123 S. Ct. 518, 154 L. Ed. 2d 466, 479] .

It does not appear that any decisions have applied 46 U.S.C.S. § 4301 et seq. to a products liability action in California for the principle that noncompliance with a standard set out in a governmental safety order furnishes probative evidence of a design deficiency [see Balido v. Improved Mach., Inc. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 633, 641, 105 Cal. Rptr. 890 , criticized on other grounds, Regents of University of Cal. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 624, 641, 147 Cal. Rptr. 486, 581 P.2d 197] .

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used by the personal representative of the estate of a decedent to obtain damages for wrongful death on behalf of entitled persons [see Code Civ. Proc. § 377.60]. The decedent's death was the result of negligence, on nonnavigable water, of the owner and operator of a boat in failing to keep necessary safety equipment aboard. This would not be a case of admiralty jurisdiction; therefore, substantive rules of California law will determine the rights of the parties. For discussion of wrongful death actions arising out of recreational boating accidents, see § 100.21.

An action for damages based on wrongful death resulting from violation of maritime duties is a case of admiralty jurisdiction [Moragne v. States Marine Lines (1970) 398 U.S. 375, 409, 90 S. Ct. 1772, 26 L. Ed. 2d 339] .

[3] Liability of Boat Owner

The owner of a boat may be liable for the negligence of an operator who was using the boat with the owner's permission. In such a case, allegation of ownership should be inserted into the complaint [for a form and further discussion, see § 100.63].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Identity, capacity of defendant. See form in § 100.60[1], Paragraph 1.]

[2. Venue facts, if desired. See form in § 100.60[1], Paragraph 2.]

3. Plaintiff and defendant(s) _____ [name(s) of other coowner(s)] own as tenants in common a _____ [briefly describe boat, e.g., a sailing vessel approximately 25 feet in length having a single mast and named "The Mary Anne"].

4. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant(s) concerning their respective rights and duties with respect to the boat in that plaintiff contends _____ [specify plaintiff's contentions as to legal rights of parties as owners of boat, e.g., that the liability to pay for certain repairs done to the boat by _____ (name) on or about _____ (date), rests neither wholly nor partially on plaintiff], whereas this contention is disputed by defendant(s).

5. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her rights and duties with respect to this matter and a declaration as to _____ [specify, e.g., whether plaintiff is liable to pay any part of the charges for the repairs in question]. Plaintiff invokes the jurisdiction of the court under both Code of Civil Procedure Section 1060 and Harbors and Navigation Code Section 403 for the determination of his/her rights and duties.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For a declaration that plaintiff is not liable to pay for any part of the repairs done to the boat hereinabove described by _____ [name] on or about _____ [date];

2. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to enforce a right by one of two or more coowners of a pleasure boat against the other or others respecting the use of the boat or liability to pay for repairs. In addition, this complaint probably may be used to enforce other rights arising from the relationship of coowners.

Counsel intending to use this form should bear in mind, as pointed out in [3], below, that the question as to whether admiralty law or state law governs the substantive rights of the parties may not be settled.

[3] Action Between Owners

[a] Generally

The Harbors and Navigation Code provides that if a vessel belongs to several persons who are not, as to the vessel, partners, and they differ as to its use or repair, then the controversy may be determined by any court of competent jurisdiction [Harb. & Nav. Code § 403]. The terminology "any court of competent jurisdiction" probably means any state court having jurisdiction of the subject matter and able to get jurisdiction of the parties. It does not mean a federal court because the state cannot define the jurisdiction of a federal court, but the existence of Harb. & Nav. Code § 403 does not diminish the jurisdiction of the federal courts sitting in admiralty to determine a controversy between owners, if the case is one of admiralty jurisdiction [see Fischer v. Carey (1916) 173 Cal. 185, 187, 159 P. 577 (former Civ. Code § 964, now Harb. & Nav. Code § 403, as applicable only to cases not encroaching on federal admiralty jurisdiction)].

In most cases, a controversy between owners as to the use or repair of a pleasure boat will be based neither in tort nor on a contract. The rights and duties of the owners between or among themselves are more likely to rest solely on the legal principles governing ownership and the relations between or among coowners, rather than on the terms of a contract; and the owners' complaints will seldom arise from tortious conduct. In most cases, therefore, it will not be readily apparent whether the substantive rights of the parties are governed by admiralty law (i.e., whether the case is one of admiralty jurisdiction) or by state law.

A leading authority on admiralty has concluded that the admiralty has jurisdiction of all matters that concern owners and proprietors of ships [Benedict On Admiralty, § 201 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. The application of this principle to cases involving vessels engaged in or substantially related to maritime trade cannot be doubted; but it is questionable whether admiralty jurisdiction does or should extend to controversies between owners of pleasure boats. There are many cases dealing with controversies between owners, but they are not helpful where ownership of a pleasure boat is concerned because they all consider the rights and duties of owners whose vessels are engaged in maritime trade.

It may be important which law defines the substantive rights of the parties. For example, it is a principle of admiralty law that the majority owners of a ship may employ it as they see fit, regardless of the wishes of the minority owners, if the majority owners give a bond, for the benefit of the dissenting minority owners, that the ship will remain and return in safety [see Benedict On Admiralty § 203 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)]. This principle facilitates maritime trade, but it is ineffectual in cases of pleasure boating, which have no connection with maritime trade.

One of three owners of a pleasure boat who never has the use of it because the other two monoplize it would have no satisfaction in receiving the bond of those other two owners that they will keep the boat safe and return it from its voyages in good condition. Such owners, however, if their rights are governed by state law rather than admiralty law would be considered, at least, as tenants in common [see Higgins v. Eva (1928) 204 Cal. 231, 239, 267 P. 1081 (vessel as property which can be owned in tenancy in common)]. Each owner would have a right to use the boat and the right to enforce an equal opportunity to use it, according to the well-established principles of law governing the rights of cotenants as to use of the commonly owned property. Also, the rights of such cotenants respecting liability to pay for repairs would be the same as in any other case of coownership of personal property.

[b] Declaratory Relief

Harb. & Nav. Code § 403 does not specify what sort of action may be begun for the determination of rights between coowners as to use or repair of a vessel. The nature of the right given by that section, however, suggests that an action for declaratory relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 1060 would be appropriate.

Actions for declaratory relief are discussed in Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief . An action for declaratory relief may be maintained in the superior court as a case of general jurisdiction by anyone who desires a declaration of his or her rights or duties with respect to another, or in respect to, in, over, or on property. An action for declaratory relief may be classified as a limited civil case only when brought as a cross complaint for indemnity in an action or proceeding that is otherwise a limited civil case or in cases following nonbinding arbitration between an attorney and client where theamount in controversy is $25,000 or less [Cal. Const. art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(7)(A), 580(b)(4), 1060].

[c] Matters Other Than Use and Repair

Harb. & Nav. Code § 403 mentions only controversies regarding use or repair of a vessel. However, it is obvious that other kinds of controversies might arise between coowners, such as who has liability to pay for supplies, wharfage and similar charges, and transportation and storage fees; obligations with respect to insurance; and questions involving title. If the use of the boat is left to nonowners, a controversy may arise over distribution of the rental income.

In any such case, the state courts should be competent to settle a controversy according to state law. An action for declaratory relief, with or without other relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060], should be available for settling these kinds of controversies.

Certain kinds of relief are unquestionably outside admiralty jurisdiction. For example, an action for an accounting between coowners is traditionally not within admiralty jurisdiction [see Benedict On Admiralty § 204 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)], although a federal court sitting in admiralty has jurisdiction to order an accounting as incidental or ancillary relief. (A leading authority on admiralty has suggested that this rule should be changed [see Benedict On Admiralty § 204 (7th ed. Matthew Bender)].) Also, it appears to be the rule that admiralty jurisdiction does not extend to the enforcement of an equitable right of a coowner, other than as incidental or ancillary relief [see 2 C.J.S., Admiralty, § 59].

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used by either party to obtain damages for breach of an agreement to build a boat. Such an agreement is not a maritime contract; therefore, the case is not one of admiralty jurisdiction. The substantive rights of the parties will be determined by California law. The parties' rights are the same as in any other case of breach of contract. For discussion and alternative forms of complaint, see Ch. 140, Contracts , and Ch. 500, Sales and Secured Transactions .

[3] Actions Involving Installment or Automotive Sales or Consumer Obligations

In any action or proceeding subject to the provisions of the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) or the Rees-Levering Motor Vehicle Sales and Finance Act (Civ. Code § 2981 et seq.), or in any action or proceeding commenced as a limited civil case that is subject to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b), concerning a defendant's obligations for goods, services, loans, or extensions of credit intended primarily for personal, family, or household use, the plaintiff must file, concurrently with the complaint, an affidavit (or declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) stating facts showing that the action has been commenced in the proper court for the trial of the action or proceeding, and that the action is subject to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1812.10 or 2984.4, or of Code Civ. Proc. § 395(b). In lieu of an affidavit or declaration, the required facts may be stated in a complaint verified by the oath of the plaintiff or of his or her attorney [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a]. In cases subject to Civ. Code § 1812.10 or 2984.4, however,the facts may not be stated on information or belief when they are stated in a verified complaint [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4]. When an affidavit or declaration is filed with the complaint, a copy must be served with the summons [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a].

If a plaintiff fails to file an affidavit or declaration or to state the required facts in a verified complaint, there may be no further proceedings, except to dismiss the action without prejudice [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a]. In an action subject to Civ. Code § 1812.10 or 2984.4, such dismissal is obtained on the court's own motion or on motion of any party [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4]. The court may, however, on such terms as may be just, permit the affidavit or declaration to be filed after the complaint. In that case, a copy of the affidavit must be served on the defendant, and the time to answer or otherwise plead will date from the service [Civ. Code §§ 1812.10, 2984.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 396a; for venue allegation forms, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used ; for further discussion and forms, see Ch. 89, Automobiles: Sales and Financing Under the Rees-Levering Act , and Ch. 500, Sales and Secured Transactions].

On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], California, plaintiff, as _____ [specify, e.g., an artisan skilled in the repair of boats], and defendant, as _____ [specify, e.g., the owner of a boat needing repair], made _____ [a written or an oral] agreement for the repair of a certain boat, to wit: _____ [specify, e.g., a 50-horsepower inboard motorboat 13 feet in length], the terms of which were _____ [state terms or as stated in the agreement, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof].

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, may be used in the form of complaint set out in § 100.69 in place of Paragraph 3 when either party seeks damages for breach of an agreement to repair a boat. Such an agreement is traditionally a maritime contract; therefore, the case is one of admiralty jurisdiction [see Fahey v. Gledhill (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 884, 889, 191 Cal. Rptr. 639, 663 P.2d 197] . The state courts, however, may entertain an action in personam for damages arising from the breach of such an agreement [for discussion, see § 100.14]. The artisan who repairs the boat has a lien on it for his or her charges, but the lien may be enforced only in a federal court sitting in admiralty.

[2] Use of Form

The form of allegation in [1], above, may be used in the form of complaint in § 100.69 in place of Paragraph 3 when either party seeks damages for breach of an agreement to store a boat. Such an agreement may or may not be a maritime contract [for discussion, see in § 100.14[5]]. If it is, then the case is one of admiralty jurisdiction. The state courts could entertain an action in personam for damages arising from the breach of such an agreement. The person who furnishes storage would have a lien on the boat for his or her charges, but the lien could be enforced only in a federal court sitting in admiralty. If the agreement is not a maritime contract, the substantive rights of the parties would be governed by California law. A lien for storage charges would exist in that case, too, provided the unpaid charges due amount to $50 or more and provided the storage is wharfage or anchorage [see Harb. & Nav. Code §§ 490, 491]. Such a lien would be enforceable in an action in the state courts.

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.11

[1] Boundary

A boundary is a line or mark indicating the limit or furthermost extent of a tract of land or territory, or a separating or dividing line between countries, states, districts or territories, or tracts of land [Randolph v. County of Stanislaus (1919) 44 Cal. App. 322, 329, 186 P. 625] .

[2] Monument

A monument is any natural or artificial object used to mark the location on the ground of a boundary line or corner [see Goss v. Golinsky (1909) 12 Cal. App. 71, 74-75, 106 P. 604] . Roads, highways, rivers, streams, rocks, heaps of stones, trees [Freeman v. Affiliated Property Craftsmen (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 723, 729, 72 Cal. Rptr. 357] , fences [Rodgers v. Roseville Gold Dredging Co. (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 6, 10, 286 P.2d 536] , or even known boundary lines have been held to be monuments [Wagnor v. Blume (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 94, 101, 161 P.2d 1001] .

[3] Obliterated Corner

An obliterated corner is one of which no visible evidence remains of the work of the original surveyor in establishing it but of which the location may be shown by competent evidence [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 52, 332 P.2d 133] .

[4] Lost Corner

A lost corner is one that cannot be replaced by reference to any existing data or sources of information. A corner will not be regarded as lost when it may be located by field notes referring to discoverable natural objects [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 52, 332 P.2d 133] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.12

§ 101.12 Lost or Obliterated Corners

[1] Effect of Obliteration of Monuments

The obliteration of a monument made in a survey does not destroy the survey or justify a court in disregarding it when enough data remain to locate the place occupied by the monument by reference to the natural objects referred to in the survey. Nor does such obliteration justify the adoption of the proportionate method [see [5], below] of locating a common corner as a lost corner, when the field notes refer to certain natural objects that can be found along the line mentioned and used to locate the line approximately [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 52, 332 P.2d 133] . For a form of complaint to establish boundary and quiet title when the boundary line is in dispute, see § 101.50.

[2] Object of Court Proceedings

The task of the court, when confronted with an obliterated corner, uncertain boundary location, and the like, is to decide from the data appearing in evidence its approximate position when the exact spot cannot be found. The court will attempt to fix the place at a point where it will best accord with the natural objects described in the field notes and found to exist on the ground, and that is least inconsistent with the distances mentioned in the plat and field notes [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 57, 332 P.2d 133] .

[3] Use of U.S. Government Plats and Field Notes

The court may take judicial notice that under the laws of the United States and the regulations of the land office no sales of public lands are made until the plat and field notes have been returned and approved. The field notes of the government surveyor are available in the land office of each state. The purpose for which these notes are preserved is to enable subsequent holders of these lands to accurately relocate section and quarter section corners when the original marker or monument locating this point has been obliterated or when the corner has otherwise been lost. It is incumbent upon the surveyor to relocate the boundaries by reference to the government plat or field notes [Saunders v. Polich (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140, 58 Cal. Rptr. 198] . There is a presumption that these surveys and field notes are correct [see Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 58, 332 P.2d 133] .

[4] Use of Surveys

In seeking to locate a previously established government boundary, it is generally the duty of the surveyor to first attempt to establish these lines by reference to the monuments placed in the original survey. If such corners cannot be established, the government survey field notes should be taken and from the courses and distances, natural monuments or objects, and bearing trees described therein, the surveyor should endeavor to fix the line precisely as it is called for by the field notes. He or she should endeavor to retrace the steps of the person who made the original survey, and if by doing so the line can be located it must be done, and when so located it must control [Saunders v. Polich (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140, 58 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

If a surveyor, in relocating the boundary lines of a particular piece of property, fails to locate or utilize any markers or monuments established as section corners or otherwise by the last official government survey of the region, it makes no difference that he or she accurately ran the respective courses and distances involved. Such a survey will be deemed by the courts to be insufficient as a matter of law because, as a matter of geometric construction, there can be no certainty that the survey commenced at the same point as the government survey or that the parcel encompassed within the boundaries ascertained in the survey is congruent with or coextensive to the parcel as described in the official survey [Saunders v. Polich (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 136, 141-142, 58 Cal. Rptr. 198] .

[5] Use of Proportionate Method

The surveyor may use the proportionate method only when the original corner or monument is lost and cannot be relocated on the ground [California v. Thompson (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 368, 377, 99 Cal. Rptr. 594] . The proportionate method is a method that redistributes an excess or shortage proportionately among all owners along the particular line or lines that cannot be relocated. When used it must not contradict or conflict with the official data that are available [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 51, 332 P.2d 133] .

Chapter 101 BOUNDARIES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.13

§ 101.13 Agreed Boundaries

[1] Doctrine of Agreed Boundaries

Frequently, the exact location of the boundary line between two adjacent parcels of real property will be unknown to the owners. There may be a conflict in the common boundary line as described in the respective deeds of the parties causing a "paper" overlap, although there can be only one line of ownership on the ground, or uncertainty as to the boundary may arise for other causes, such as destruction of the monument. In such a case, the parties may wish to establish the common boundary line by agreement. These agreements are favored by the courts [see Aborigine Lumber Co. v. Hyman (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 938, 941, 54 Cal. Rptr. 371] .

According to the California Supreme Court, the doctrine of agreed boundaries may be invoked only under carefully specified circumstances. The doctrine requires that the following be persent [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 55, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034 ; Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 707, 336 P.2d 525] :

- An uncertainty as to the true boundary line.
- An agreement between the coterminous owners fixing the line.
- Acceptance and acquiescence in the line so fixed for a period equal to the statute of limitations or under such circumstances that substantial loss would be caused by a change of its position.

The long-term acceptance of a fence as a boundary may support an inference that the coterminous landowners agreed to rely on the fence in fixing an uncertain boundary [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 57, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034 ; Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 707, 336 P.2d 525] . However, when the true boundary is ascertainable from the legal description set forth in an existing deed or survey, the party asserting the agreed boundary must provide direct evidence that the neighboring owners entered into an agreement to resolve a boundary dispute [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034 see Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 902-904, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399 ; Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1256-1258, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779 ; Finley v. Yuba County Water Dist. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 691, 698-701, 160 Cal.

Strong public policy justifications counsel against application of the agreed-boundary doctrine when a legal description of the true boundary exists. The doctrine arose as a means to settle disputes at a time when surveys were notoriously inaccurate and monuments and landmarks they described often could not be found. Now, however, accurate surveys and verifiable recorded deeds are the rule. Thus, when existing legal records provide a basis for fixing the boundary, there is no justification for inferring, without additional evidence, that the prior owners were uncertain as to the location of the true boundary or that they agreed to fix their common boundary at that location [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034 ; citing Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 901-903, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399] . For additional discussion, see [3], below.

For a forms of complaint to establish a boundary and quiet title when a boundary agreement exists, see §§ 101.51, 101.52. For a form of complaint to establish a boundary and to reform a deed so that the boundary descriptions for the properties accurately reflect the true understanding of the parties to the agreement, see § 101.53.

[2] Effect

When a boundary line is established pursuant to the doctrine of agreed boundaries, it becomes in legal effect the true boundary line [Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 708, 336 P.2d 525] . It is then binding upon all consenting parties and their successors by subsequent conveyances [Kraus v. Griswold (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 698, 705, 43 Cal. Rptr. 139] . However, the application of the doctrine to successors in interest must be applied in conjunction with the rule that bona fide purchasers for value and without notice are entitled to protection against undisclosed rights and title [see Steele v. Shuler (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 698, 706, 27 Cal. Rptr. 569] .

[3] Requirement of Uncertainty

The requirement of uncertainty is aimed at preventing boundary shifts by oral agreement or acquiescence when the parties have actual knowledge of the true line [Zachery v. McWilliams (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62, 104 Cal. Rptr. 293] .

Notwithstanding the requirement of uncertainty, the doctrine of agreed boundaries may apply when existing legal records are adequate to settle the boundary dispute. The California Supreme Court has reasoned that an inflexible rule prohibiting application of the doctrine when there is a reliable legal description of the true boundary would risk destabilizing long-standing agreements made in good faith by coterminous property owners in order to resolve uncertainty as to the location of their common boundaries [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 54, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034]. However, to prevail when available legal records provide a reasonable basis for fixing the boundary, the party relying on the doctrine must affirmatively show that uncertainty as to the location of the true boundary led to an agreement between the landowners to create a boundary at an agreed-upon location [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034].

The doctrine should most plausibly come into play when legal records fail to settle a boundary dispute [Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034 ; citing Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 901-903, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399] . That failure may occur when records never existed, have been destroyed, or are inaccurate, or when the natural features or surveyors/ monuments or corners have changed or vanished. When no reliable legal description exists, the courts have resorted to the agreed boundary doctrine on the ground that it is better than nothing. But the law should not employ this residual doctrine, a last legal resort, to dispossess an owner of his or her land when a legal means of establishing an accurate boundary lies quite readily and conveniently to hand [Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1256-1257, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779 (legal description existed; court acknowledged inconsistent application by courts of doctrine of agreed boundary); see also Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 887, 901-904, 267 Cal. Rptr. 399 (requirement of uncertainty as lacking when deeds all contain consistent, accurate, and ascertainable legal descriptions; presence of fence near boundary not sufficient to create uncertainty)]. In any case, a dispute or controversy is not essential to the required uncertainty [Kunza v. Gaskell (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 201, 209, 154 Cal. Rptr. 101] .

Uncertainty as to the true boundary location is not present if the descriptions in the deeds are certain and accurate and evidence is readily available from government monuments, field notes, and fixed corners in the immediate neighborhood from which to ascertain the true line [Pedersen v. Reynolds (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 18, 25, 87 P.2d 51] . Therefore, if a person constructs a fence on his or her property and locates it for purposes of convenience rather than for the purpose of locating the boundary line, the doctrine will not be applicable [Pedersen v. Reynolds (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 18, 25, 87 P.2d 51] .

The element of uncertainty may be inferred in certain cases. For example, where a substantial fence or other structure has been constructed and acquiesced in for a long period of time, it may be inferred that there was uncertainty as to the true line at the time the structure was built or that the uncertainty arose after the improvements were constructed and the coterminous owners, by acceptance and acquiescence, agreed that the boundary of the structure constituted the true boundary line between their properties [see Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 708, 336 P.2d 525] .

[4] No Requirement of Writing; Effect of Agreed Boundary

There is no requirement that a boundary agreement be in writing [Duncan v. Peterson (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 83 Cal. Rptr. 744] , or even express [Shelton v. Malette (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 370, 375, 301 P.2d 18] . The boundary agreement does not operate to convey title to land that may be between the agreed line and the true line, but fixes the line itself and the description carries title up to the agreed line regardless of its accuracy [Kraus v. Griswold (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 698, 705, 43 Cal. Rptr. 139] . The division line thus established attaches itself to the deeds of the respective parties and defines, not adds to, the land described in each deed [Kraus v. Griswold (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 698, 705, 43 Cal. Rptr. 139] .

§ 101.14 Construing Boundary Descriptions

The following are the rules for construing the descriptive part of a conveyance of real property, when the construction is doubtful and there are no other sufficient circumstances to determine it [Code Civ. Proc. § 2077]:

- While there are certain, definite, and ascertained particulars in the description, the addition of others which are indefinite, unknown, or false does not frustrate the conveyance, but it is to be construed by the first mentioned particulars.

- When permanent and visible or ascertained boundaries or monuments are inconsistent with the measurement, either of lines, angles, or surfaces, the boundaries or monuments are paramount.

- Between different measurements which are inconsistent with each other, that of angles is paramount to that of surfaces, and that of lines paramount to both.

- When a road, or stream of water not navigable, is the boundary, the rights of the grantor to the middle of the road or the thread of the stream are included in the conveyance, except where the road or thread of the stream is held under another title.

- When tidewater is the boundary, the rights of the grantor to ordinary high water mark are included in the conveyance, and when a navigable lake, where there is no tide, is the boundary, the rights of the grantor to low water mark are included in the conveyance.

- When the description refers to a map, and that reference is inconsistent with other particulars, it controls them if it appears that the parties acted with reference to the map; otherwise the map is subordinate to other definite and ascertained particulars.

Quantity is the least reliable of all descriptions [Phelps v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 243, 248, 190 P.2d 209] .

Chapter 101 BOUNDARIES
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.15

§ 101.15 Evidence

[1] Admissibility

When the description of a granted tract of land embraced within the terms of a United States patent is clear and unambiguous on its face, that description constitutes the final word. In that case, evidence will not be admissible to show that the grantor intended to do other than that which is clearly set forth upon the face of said grant. But that rule has no application to a case in which it sufficiently appears upon the face of the description embraced in the terms of the patent itself or of the plat that accompanies and is made a part of the patent that the patent is in certain vital respects uncertain. In this case, the extrinsic evidence is admissible to explain away the uncertainties of the grant and to prove the real intent of the grantor in making the it, provided that the evidence does not go to the extent of changing the clear intent of the grant as to the premises to be conveyed [Claudino v. Pereira (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 (extrinsic evidence admissible on reference to "gulch")].

In cases of disputed boundary lines, all evidence, whether documentary or parol, which bears upon the point in issue and which is not inadmissible on general principles, may be received into evidence, including records of original proprietors, their plans and maps, the location of lands by ancient settlers [Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 55, 332 P.2d 133] , plats, and field notes [see Swarzwald v. Cooley (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 306, 324, 103 P.2d 580] .

Evidence of reputation in a community is not made inadmissible by the hearsay rule if the reputation concerns boundaries of, or customs affecting, land in the community and the reputation arose before controversy [Evid. Code § 1322].

Evidence of a statement concerning the boundary of land is not made inadmissible by the hearsay rule if the declarant is unavailable as a witness and had sufficient knowledge of the subject, but evidence of a statement is not admissible under Evid. Code § 1323 if the statement was made under circumstances such as to indicate its lack of trustworthiness [Evid. Code § 1323].

[2] Use of Expert Testimony

Surveyors and civil engineers, like other experts, may give testimony on questions involving matters of technical skill and experience with which they are particularly acquainted [Verdi Dev. Co. v. Dono-Han Mining Co. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 149, 155, 296 P.2d 429] .

§ 101.16 Defenses

[1] Adverse Possession

A defendant may defeat a quiet title action if he can meet the prerequisites for adverse possession [see Schoenfeld v. Pritzker (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 117, 121-122, 64 Cal. Rptr. 592] . The one claiming title to property through adverse possession has the burden of proving every element necessary as follows [Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421-422, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824 ; Laubisch v. Roberdo (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 702, 706, 277 P.2d 9 ; West v. Evans (1936) 29 Cal. 2d 414, 417, 175 P.2d 219 ; Harvey v. Nurick (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 213, 214-215, 74 Cal. Rptr. 94] :

- Possession must be actual occupation under such circumstances as to constitute reasonable notice to the owner.
- It must be hostile to the owner's title.
- The holder must claim the property as his own, under either color of title or claim of right.
- Possession must be continuous and uninterrupted for five years.
- The holder must pay all the taxes levied and assessed on the property during the period.

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the defendant claims title through adverse possession, see § 101.56. For a more detailed discussion and additional forms, see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession .

[2] Estoppel

A grantor may be estopped from showing the true boundary of his property where all the elements of estoppel are present [see Frericks v. Sorensen (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 759, 761, 248 P.2d 949] . The elements of estoppel are as follows [Granco Steel, Inc. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 191, 203, 65 Cal. Rptr. 287, 436 P.2d 287 (insurance company estopped from denying coverage); Crestline Mobile Homes Mfg. Co. v. Pacific

Finance Corp. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 773, 778, 8 Cal. Rptr. 448, 356 P.2d 192 (party estopped from asserting title to trailer)]:

- The party to be estopped must be apprised of the facts.
- He or she must intend that his or her conduct be acted on, or must so act that the party asserting the estoppel had a right to believe it was so intended.
- The other party must be ignorant of the true state of facts.
- He or she must rely on the conduct to his or her injury.

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff is estopped from seeking a new boundary by reason of prior agreement and acquiescence, see § 101.54.

[3] Laches

Laches applies to quiet title actions [see Muktarian v. Barmby (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 558, 561, 47 Cal. Rptr. 483, 407 P.2d 659] and to reformation of instruments [see Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Monarch Ins. Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 538, 543, 58 Cal. Rptr. 639] . Laches is an equitable defense and is analogous to the statute of limitations as applicable to actions at law [Central Pac. Ry. Co. v. Costa (1927) 84 Cal. App. 577, 597, 258 P. 991] . The basic elements of laches are as follows [Stafford v. Ballinger (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 289, 296, 18 Cal. Rptr. 568] :

- An omission to assert a right.
- A delay in the assertion of the right of some appreciable period.
- Circumstances which would cause prejudice to an adverse party if assertion of the right is permitted.

For a form of affirmative defense alleging that the plaintiff is estopped from asserting a boundary line because the claim is barred by laches, see § 101.55.

[4] Validating Act

A so-called validating act may provide a defense against a mistake in a boundary change [see, e.g., Stats. 2009, ch. 2]. According to nonbinding legislative history materials, for nearly 70 years, the Legislature's annual validating acts have boosted the stability and credit ratings of state and local bonds. The validating acts cure public officials' mistakes that might otherwise invalidate boundary changes. However, the acts do not protect against fraud, corruption, or unconstitutional actions [Bill Analysis of SB 101 on First Validating Act of 2009, Cal. Sen. Local Gov. Comm. 1 (March 4, 2009); the Analysis may be found online at http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/pub/09-10/bill/sen/sb_0101-0150/sb_101_cfa_20090226_094145_sen_comm.html]. The current custom and practice is to pass three validating acts per year that retroactively cure public officials' mistakes. The first two measures are urgency bills that go into effect when they are chaptered (i.e., spring and late summer). The third validating act generally takes effect on January 1 of the following year [Bill Analysis of SB 101 on first validating act of 2009, Cal. Sen. Local Gov. Comm. 2 (March 4, 2009)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.17

§ 101.17 Establishing Boundaries Following Earth Movement

[1] Remedies Provided by Cullen Earthquake Act

Where boundaries of land have been disturbed by earth movements such as, but not limited to, slides, subsidence, lateral or vertical displacements, or similar disasters caused by man, or by earthquake or other acts of God, remedies are provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65, the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.50].

The remedies provided by the act are cumulative and in addition to any other remedy provided by law for quieting or establishing title to real property or boundaries of it [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.64]. For a form of application to file a complaint and order under the Cullen Earthquake Act, see § 101.57.

[2] Who May Commence Action

An action authorized by the Cullen Earthquake Act may be commenced by [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.51(a)]:

- A county in which lands were affected by a disaster described in Code Civ. Proc. § 751.50 with or without the joinder of a city or cities included in the county and within the area so affected.

- A city, if the disaster has affected land in the city.

- Any other entity or person owning or having an interest in or lien on land affected by the disaster if granted permission by the court to bring the action, and if the county in which the land is located is made a party to the action [for a form of application for permission to bring the action, see § 101.57].

An entity which is a permissible plaintiff under Code Civ. Proc. § 751.51(a) may bring a separate action with respect to separate portions of the disaster area of sufficient size to equitably reestablish boundaries without harm to other areas of the common disaster, its decision regarding the desirability of the separate action, and regarding the area to be dealt with in each action, to be approved by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.52].

For a complaint to reestablish a boundary under the Cullen Earthquake Act, see § 101.58.

[3] Persons Designated in Complaint; Contents; Notice

Every entity in actual and peaceable possession of, or having an estate or interest in or lien on, any of the land affected by the action, whose possession or evidence of estate or interest is either recorded or known to the plaintiffs, the city, if the land is within a city, the county in which the land is located, and the State of California must be designated in the complaint of the action, and given notice in the manner required by Code Civ. Proc. § 751.54 [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.51(b)].

All unknown entities, including owners, lien or interest claimants, heirs, devisees, legatees, or assigns, may be described in the caption and complaint as "all entities claiming any interest in or lien upon the real property herein described or any part of it" [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.51(c)].

The complaint must also substantially include the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.53]:

- A statement of the facts that make the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65] applicable.

- A description of the exterior boundaries of the real property area sought to be affected by the action.

- A specification of the estate, title, interest, or claim owned, and in the actual possession of the plaintiff or plaintiffs in described parts of the entire real property sought to be affected by the actions.

- A specification of the estate, title, interest, or claim, so far as they are known to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, and so far as they are capable of being discovered by reasonably diligent search by the plaintiff or plaintiffs, in each separate part of the entire real property sought to be affected by the action.

- A specification of the street areas sought to be vacated or offered by the plaintiff or plaintiffs to be vacated in whole or in part for judicial equitable allocation to landowners for the mitigation of the losses inflicted on the landowners by the particular disaster or disasters to which the Act is applicable.

- A proposed replatting of the entire real property sought to be affected by the action, embodying the land boundaries as fixed by the disaster, except as these boundaries have been equitably and judicially readjusted, or as liberalized by judicially directed use of the vacated lands.

[4] Notice of Pendency of Action

A party to the action may file a notice of the pendency of the action by filing a notice of lis pendens in the office of the recorder of the county in which the property is situated [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 405.20, 751.57].

[5] Plaintiff's Affidavit

At the time of filing the complaint, the plaintiff must file with it his or her affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) fully and explicitly setting forth the following [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.09, 751.54]:

- The character of his estate, right, title, interest, or claim in, and possession of, the property, the period it has existed, and from whom obtained.

- Whether or not he has ever made any conveyance of all or any part of the property, or any interest therein, and if so when and to whom, and a statement of any and all subsisting mortgages, deeds of trust, and other liens thereon.

- That he does not know and has never been informed of any other person who claims or who may claim any interest in or lien on all or any part of the property adversely to him, or if he does know or has been informed of any such person, the name and address of such person.

If the plaintiff is unable to state any of the required matters, he must set forth and show fully and explicitly the reasons for such inability [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.09, 751.54].

For a form of plaintiff's declaration under penalty of perjury required to be filed with a complaint under the Cullen Earthquake Act, see § 101.61.

[6] Summons

[a] Contents

On the filing of the complaint, a summons issues under the seal of the court. The summons must contain the name of the court and county in which the action is brought, and the name of the plaintiff and a particular description of the real property involved, and is directed to "all persons claiming any interest in, or lien upon, the real property herein described, or any part thereof" [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.05, 751.54]. The form of the summons is prescribed by statute [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.05, 751.54; for a form, see § 101.59].

[b] Publication

The summons must be published in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the action is brought. The newspaper in which publication is to be made must be designated by an order of the court or judge thereof to be signed and filed with the clerk [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.06, 751.54; for order for publication of summons, see § 101.60]. The summons must be published in the newspaper once a week for eight successive weeks [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.06, 751.54; Gov. Code § 6065].

To each publication of the summons must be appended a memorandum stating when and where the summons was first published [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.06, 751.54].

If the affidavit by plaintiff discloses the name of any person claiming an interest in the property or a lien thereon adverse to the plaintiff, that fact and the name and address, if given, of the person must be stated in a memorandum to be appended to the summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.07, 751.54].

For the form of summons and memorandum, see § 101.59.

[c] Posting

A copy of the summons and a copy of the memorandum must be posted in a conspicuous place on each separate parcel of the property described in the complaint within 15 days after the first publication of the summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.08, 751.54].

[d] Service

If the plaintiff's affidavit discloses the name of any person claiming any interest in or lien on the property adverse to the plaintiff, a copy of the summons and complaint and affidavit must be served up that person, if he or she can be found, in the manner provided by law for the service of a summons in a civil action, other than by publication Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.10, 751.54; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10-415.40]. A copy of the memorandum provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 751.07 [for a form, see § 101.59] must be appended to the copy of the summons served on any such person [Code Civ.

Proc. §§ 751.10, 751.54].

Service must be made during the period of the publication of the summons. If the person cannot, with reasonable diligence, be served within the time of publication, a copy of the summons, memorandum, complaint, and affidavit must be mailed, postage prepaid, addressed to him or her at the address given in the affidavit, or, if no address is given, at his or her last address known to the plaintiff, or, if none, at the county seat of the county in which the action is brought, forthwith upon the expiration of the period of publication [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.10, 751.54].

[7] Answer

An answer must be served within 90 days after the first publication of the notice, or such further time not exceeding 30 days, as the court for good cause may grant [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.56(a)].

The answer must [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.56(b)]:

- Specifically set out the particulars in which the claimant's estate, right, title, or interest in or to, or lien on all or any part of the property is different from, or greater than, the interest of the claimant as it is described in the complaint.

- Be confined to rights based on events occurring at the time of, or since the time of the disaster.

For an answer to a complaint filed under the Cullen Earthquake Act, see § 101.62.

[8] Judgment

[a] Required Determinations

The judgment in an action under the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65] must do three things [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.60]:

- Determine the land boundaries of each parcel of land located within the entire area of real property sought to be affected by the action whether owned publicly or privately, as fixed by the disaster, except as these boundaries have been judicially and equitably readjusted.

- Determine the entity or entities having estates, rights, titles, interests, and claims in and to each parcel, whether legal or equitable, present or future, vested or contingent, or whether they consist of mortgages or liens of any description.

- Approve and direct the proper filing of an official map covering the entire area of real property sought to be affected by the action, as a substitute for the plat maps previously filed, but rendered inaccurate by the disaster.

In reaching the conclusions called for in the judgment, the court must give effect to the changes in land boundaries caused by the disaster, mitigated, however, so far as can equitably be done by adjustment of land boundaries and by allocating to contiguous lots parts of the land released by a city, county, or the state by its voluntary vacation of areas formerly constituting public ways. Any such vacating of streets must be approved by the judgment, and will be effective without complying with any other formalities of law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.58, 751.61].

In an action of the type authorized by the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65], judgment cannot be given by default, but the court must require proof of the facts alleged in the complaint and other pleadings [Code Civ.

Proc. § 751.59].

[b] Effect

The judgment rendered in an action under the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65] will be conclusive with the respect to land boundaries on every entity who at the commencement of the action had or claimed an estate, right, title, or interest in or to, or lien on a part of the entire area of real property described in the complaint as intended to be affected by the action, and on every entity claiming under any such person by title subsequent to the commencement of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.62].

A certified copy of the judgment must be recorded, at the expense of the plaintiff or plaintiffs in the action, in the officer of the recorder of the county in which the affected land is situated. Such recorded judgment constitutes constructive notice of the findings therein and of the official plat or plats referred to therein. The findings and plats issued in connection with such judgment supersede and control all prior plats, maps, and documents to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.63].

PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.32

§ 101.32 Decisions

[1] Agreed Boundaries

[a] Doctrine of Agreed Boundaries

Requirements of doctrine of agreed boundaries. Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034

Longstanding acceptance of fence as boundary between parties' lands is strong evidence of implied agreement to accept boundary. Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 708, 336 P.2d 525 ; Duncan v. Peterson (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 83 Cal. Rptr. 744

Agreed boundaries doctrine was not applicable when there was no uncertainty as to boundary and no agreement that existing fence established the boundary. Mehdizadeh v. Mincer (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284

Agreed boundaries doctrine was not applicable to determination of public property rights on Lake Tahoe because there was no controversy over boundary when alleged acquiescence in boundary occurred. Fogerty v. State of California (1987) 187 Cal. App. 3d 224, 236-237, 231 Cal. Rptr. 810

Element of uncertainty is not established when adequate legal description exists even though fence is not on boundary. Mesnick v. Caton (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1248, 1256-1257, 228 Cal. Rptr. 779

Agreed boundary was established by parties sighting along two trees and agreeing as to the boundary. Humphrey v. Futter (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 333, 342, 215 Cal. Rptr. 178

Agreed boundaries inference was upheld when fence connected monuments and owners had acquiesced in fence as boundary. McKinney v. Kull (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 951, 956-957, 173 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

Doctrine of agreed boundaries does not apply when land is used with owner's consent unless there is evidence of intent to fix boundary. Finley v. Yuba County Water Dist. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 691, 700, 160 Cal. Rptr. 423

Payment of taxes is not material where boundary line is fixed by agreement and acquiescence of parties. Duncan v. Peterson (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 83 Cal. Rptr. 744

Question of legally recognizable boundary line is issue of fact in boundary dispute. Tomity Corp. v. Sovkueff (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 685, 689, 53 Cal. Rptr. 328 ; Gibson v. Cobb (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 226, 230, 46 Cal. Rptr. 57

Purpose of doctrine of agreed boundaries is to secure repose, to prevent strife and disputes concerning boundaries, and to make titles permanent and stable. Kraus v. Griswold (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 698, 705, 43 Cal. Rptr. 139

Alternative or contingent judgment is permitted where original boundary line may be determined but evidence also establishes agreed boundary. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 50, 332 P.2d 133

Agreed boundary becomes in legal effect true boundary. Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 708, 336 P.2d 525

Agreed boundary line as not only binding parties but also their successors by subsequent conveyances. Kraus v. Griswold (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 698, 705, 43 Cal. Rptr. 139 ; but see Steele v. Shuler (1963) 211 Cal. App. 2d 698, 706, 27 Cal. Rptr. 569 (rule as required to be applied in connection with rule that bona fide purchaser for value without notice is entitled to protection against undisclosed rights and titles)

[c] Requirement of Uncertainty

Strong public policy justifications counsel against applying doctrine when true boundary is ascertainable from legal descriptions set forth in existing deed or survey, and party asserting agreed boundary when such legal descriptions exist must provide direct evidence that neighboring owners entered into boundary agreement to resolve boundary dispute. Bryant v. Blevins (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 47, 56, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86, 884 P.2d 1034

Doctrine of agreed boundaries requires uncertainty as to true boundary line but not that its true location be absolutely unascertainable. Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 707-708, 336 P.2d 525 ; see also Pedersen v. Reynolds (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 18, 25, 87 P.2d 51

Requirement of uncertainty is aimed at preventing boundary shift by oral agreement or acquiescence where parties have actual knowledge of true line. Zachery v. McWilliams (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62, 104 Cal. Rptr. 293

[d] Writing

No requirement that boundary agreement be in writing or even express. Duncan v. Peterson (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 607, 611, 83 Cal. Rptr. 744 ; Shelton v. Malette (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 370, 375, 301 P.2d 18

[2] Estoppel

Grantor is estopped from showing true boundary line where all elements of estoppel present. Friedman v. Southern Cal. Trust Co. (1918) 179 Cal. 266, 270, 176 P. 442 ; Frericks v. Sorensen (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 759, 761, 248

P.2d 949

[3] Evidence

[a] Admissibility

In cases of disputed boundary, all evidence, whether documentary or parol, which bears upon point in issue and which is not inadmissible on general principles, including records of original proprietors, their plans and maps, plats, and field notes, may be received into evidence. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 55, 332 P.2d 133

[b] Use of Expert Witnesses

When aggregate description of parcels in plat and field notes was ambiguous, trial court properly admitted and used testimony of land surveyor and historian to resolve the ambiguity. Claudino v. Pereira (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1286, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

Surveyors and civil engineers, like other experts, may give testimony on questions involving matters of technical skill and experience with which they are peculiarly acquainted. Verdi Dev. Co. v. Dono-Han Mining Co. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 149, 155, 296 P.2d 429

[4] Government Surveys

Surveys under Townsite Acts ascertained boundaries, but did not create them. Claudino v. Pereira (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

Townsite Acts do not provide that the plat is evidence of the parcel of land; rather "such plats, field notes and records, and certified copies thereof, shall be prima facie evidence of the contents and correctness thereof." Claudino v. Pereira (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

Boundaries shown on parcel map are not product of government survey and therefore can be challenged for failure to follow boundary lines of parcel from which smaller parcels were derived. Fripp v. Walters (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 656, 664, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 794

When survey has been made, approved, and acted upon by the state, its correctness is not to be impeached or disregarded except by direct proceedings instituted for that purpose. White v. California (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 738, 751, 99 Cal. Rptr. 58 ; see also Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 57, 332 P.2d 133

Government survey of public lands do not ascertain boundaries, but create them. Reid v. Dunn (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 612, 615, 20 Cal. Rptr. 273

Original government surveys, whether mathematically correct or grossly erroneous, control location and length of boundaries of sections and parts thereof and shape and size of tracts granted to patentees. Verdi Dev. Co. v. Dono-Han Mining Co. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 149, 152, 296 P.2d 429

Government resurvey to correct erroneous survey do not affect rights of those who have acquired an interest in lands with reference to original survey. Phelps v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 243, 248, 190 P.2d 209 .

[5] Meander Lines

Exception to general rule that meander line is not a boundary line where body of water which constituted actual boundary line no longer exists. People ex rel. Dept. Pub. Wks. v. Shasta Pipe etc. Co. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 520, 531, 70 Cal. Rptr. 618

Meander line defined. Den v. Spalding (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 623, 627, 104 P.2d 81

Meander line generally does not constitute boundary line for property bordering on body of water. Den v. Spalding (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 623, 627, 104 P.2d 81

[6] Monuments

In absence of qualifying term, designation in conveyance of monument as boundary implies middle or central point of the monument. Freeman v. Affiliated Property Craftsmen (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 723, 729, 72 Cal. Rptr. 357

Rule of construction that monuments control over distances and courses is not absolute. Luginbuhl v. Hammond (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 350, 355, 3 Cal. Rptr. 582

Monument defined. Randolph v. Stanislaus County (1919) 44 Cal. App. 322, 329, 186 P. 625

Rule of construction that monuments control over distances and courses. Williamson v. Pratt (1918) 37 Cal. App. 363, 368, 174 P. 114

[7] Quiet Title Actions

Plaintiff, in quiet title action, must prove title in himself or herself superior to that of defendant, rather than being required to establish his or her own title without relying on weakness in defendant's title. Gerhard v. Stephens (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 864, 918, 69 Cal. Rptr. 612, 442 P.2d 692

Elements of quiet title action. Ephraim v. Metropolitan Trust Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 824, 833, 172 P.2d 501

Nature of quiet title action. Thomson v. Thomson (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 671, 681, 62 P.2d 358

Under rule peculiar to quiet title actions, defendant is not required to seek affirmative relief in cross complaint; if plaintiff fails to establish title, defendant is entitled to affirmative judgment declaring rights asserted in answer. Jay v. Dollarhide (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1031, 84 Cal. Rptr. 538

[8] Reestablishing Obliterated and Lost Corners

[a] Definitions

"Obliterated corner" defined as one of which no visible evidence remains of work of original surveyor, but that may be shown by competent evidence. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 52, 332 P.2d 133

"Lost corner" is one that cannot be replaced by reference to any existing data or sources of information. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 52, 332 P.2d 133

[b] Object of Court Proceedings

Task of court when confronted with obliterated corner is to determine from available data its approximate position. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 57, 332 P.2d 133

[c] Use of U.S. Government Plats and Field Notes

In conflict between plat and field notes, field notes are superior authority. Claudino v. Pereira (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1287-1288, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464

Use of government plats and field notes to reestablish lost or obliterated corner. Saunders v. Polich (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 136, 140, 58 Cal. Rptr. 198

[d] Surveys

Steps included in retracement of lines of public land survey. Reid v. Dunn (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 612, 616, 20 Cal. Rptr. 273

[e] Proportionate Method

Proportionate measurement method is used as last resort when original corner is "lost" and cannot be relocated on ground. California v. Thompson (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 368, 377, 99 Cal. Rptr. 594

Proportionate method redistributes excess or shortage proportionately among all owners along particular line that cannot be relocated. Chandler v. Hibberd (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 39, 51, 332 P.2d 133

[9] Rivers and Other Bodies of Water

[a] Determination of Navigability

Navigability of body of water is largely a question of fact, determined from its character, its situation and availability as highway of commerce, and other surrounding circumstances. Bohn v. Albertson (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742, 238 P.2d 128

[b] Navigable Waters

Trial court properly determined boundary line between areas of littoral rights in lake by drawing line perpendicular to shoreline; slight angle in shoreline where parties' property line met shore was not equivalent to dramatic indentations or projections that would require equitable consideration to avoid unjust result. Kendall v. Walker (2009) 181 Cal. App. 4th 584, 596-597, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 262

Owner of land bordering on navigable lake or stream, where there is tide, takes to high water mark. People v. Ward Redwood Co. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 385, 390, 37 Cal. Rptr. 397

Island or accumulation of land originating in bed of navigable river belongs to state. People v. Ward Redwood Co. (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 385, 395, 37 Cal. Rptr. 397

[c] Nonnavigable Waters

Where deed described land by measurement and also specified creek as boundary, creek, however it shifted, remains boundary. Santa Cruz v. Younger (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 818, 820-821, 36 Cal. Rptr. 253

In absence of language to contrary, bed of nonnavigable stream or river deemed to be bounded by permanent banks which confine waters in their course at their highest level. Mammoth Gold Dredging Co. v. Forbes (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 739, 751, 104 P.2d 131

Banks of nonnavigable river or stream determined during times of normal flow of water, not during times of storm flow. San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake R.R. Co. v. Simons Brick Co. (1919) 45 Cal. App. 57, 61-62, 187 P. 62

[d] Tidelands

"Tideland" is land lying between ordinary high and low tide lines, covered and uncovered successively by ebb and flow thereof. Marks v. Whitney (1971) 6 Cal. 3d 251, 257-258, 98 Cal. Rptr. 790, 491 P.2d 374 ; White v. California (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742, 99 Cal. Rptr. 58

Mean high tide defined is average height of all high tide waters at particular locality over considerable period of time. Swarzwald v. Cooley (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 306, 313, 103 P.2d 580

Presumption that mean high tide does not change. Swarzwald v. Cooley (1940) 39 Cal. App. 2d 306, 316, 103 P.2d 580

[10] Natural Accretion

When parcel of land that was formerly riverbed accreted due to historic hydraulic gold mining that was performed miles from parcel, accretion was natural rather than artificial and therefore belonged to owners of land that was adjacent to parcel. State of California ex rel. State Lands Com. v. Superior Court (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 50, 56, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399, 900 P.2d 648

[11] Rules of Construction

In construing boundaries, intention of parties at time of conveyance is controlling consideration. Machado v. Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 180, 186, 99 P.2d 245 ; Freeman v. Affiliated Property Craftsmen (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 723, 729, 72 Cal. Rptr. 357 ; Santa Cruz v. Younger (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 818, 821, 36 Cal. Rptr. 253

Conveyance of definite quantity of land within and as parcel of larger tract of land well described, but without locating land thus conveyed, is to be construed as conveying undivided interest in larger tract provided deed does not purport specifically to describe smaller tract and fails to do so with reasonable certainty. Cullen v. Sprigg (1890) 83 Cal. 56, 61-62, 23 P. 222 ; Grogan v. Vache (1873) 45 Cal. 610, 613 ; Ames v. Irvine Co. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 832, 835 n. 3, 55 Cal. Rptr. 180

Construction of boundaries is limited to language of deed. Hyman v. Haun (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 891, 896, 13 Cal. Rptr. 87

Rules for awarding priorities were developed as means for determining intention of parties and as rules of construction rather than rules of property. Hyman v. Haun (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 891, 896, 13 Cal. Rptr. 87

Parol evidence is admissible to explain location of objects mentioned in description of property in deed. Williamson v. Pratt (1918) 37 Cal. App. 363, 367, 174 P. 114

[12] Streets and Highways

Transfers of land bounded by highways or streets pass title to center of highway or street, unless different intent appears from grant. Machado v. Title Guar. & Trust Co. (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 180, 186, 99 P.2d 245 ; Allan v. City & County of San Francisco (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 642, 646, 61 P.2d 1175 ; Pilkington v. Fausone (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 349, 351, 90 Cal. Rptr. 38 (applicability to alleys); Freeman v. Affiliated Property Craftsmen (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 723, 730, 72 Cal. Rptr. 357 (applicability to railway right of way); Murray v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254, 58 Cal. Rptr. 273 ; Canal Oil Co. v. National Oil Co. (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 524, 531, 66 P.2d 197 (nonapplicability to private easement)

Presumption that grant of fractional part or given number of feet of a "lot" conveys given fractional part or number of feet which is set apart for private use and occupancy and is not reduced by portion of abutting street even though boundary of lot is technically center of street. Earl v. Dutour (1919) 181 Cal. 58, 60, 183 P. 438 ; Peake v. Azusa Valley Sav. Bank (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 296, 301, 99 P.2d 382

When street easement had been abandoned on one side of tract, adjacent owners in tract had title to street even though deed description did not include street. Besneatte v. Gourdin (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1277, 1281-1282, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82

Deed granted title to middle of adjacent street and owner was entitled to possession thereof when street was abandoned. Baker v. Ramirez (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1123, 1132, 235 Cal. Rptr. 857

Description of metes and bounds including all of alley rebutted presumption that property only extends to middle of alley. Pilkington v. Fausone (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 349, 352, 90 Cal. Rptr. 38 ; but see Hixson v. Jones (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 860, 864, 61 Cal. Rptr. 883 (presumption not rebutted where metes and bounds description was inserted by title company on its own initiative)

For presumption to arise, necessary that street or highway be designated as monument or boundary. Millyard v. Faus (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 76, 83, 73 Cal. Rptr. 697

Metes and bounds description in deed to property which actually abuts street or highway is some evidence of grantor's intent to withhold any interet in abutting street or highway, and use of metes and bounds description is of itself some evidence to rebut presumption of Civ. Code § 831, providing that owner of land actually bounded by road or street is presumed to own to center of way. Millyard v. Faus (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 76, 84, 73 Cal. Rptr. 697

Presumption that grant of fractional part of a "lot" conveys given fractional part which is set apart for private use and occupancy is rebuttable. Tomity Corp. v. Sovkueff (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 685, 687, 53 Cal. Rptr. 328 ; Pierson v. Bradfield (1941) 43 Cal. App. 2d 519, 523-524, 111 P.2d 460 ; Peake v. Azusa Valley Sav. Bank (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 296, 302, 99 P.2d 382

Marginal street doctrine defined. Everett v. Bosch (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 648, 655 n. 3, 50 Cal. Rptr. 813 ; see also Los Angeles City High School Dist. v. Swensen (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 574, 580, 38 Cal. Rptr. 214

Reason for presumption that land bounded by highway or street passes title to center of highway or street. Los Angeles City High School Dist. v. Swensen (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 574, 579-580, 38 Cal. Rptr. 214

Presumption that property extends to middle of bounding street does not applying where description uses side line of street, rather than street itself, as boundary. Speer v. Blasker (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 155, 159, 15 Cal. Rptr. 528

[1] FORM Complaint to Establish Boundary and Quiet Title to Real Property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 760.020(a), 761.020]--Boundary Line in Dispute

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s), of known defendant(s)] [if unknown defendants are included, allege: all persons unknown, claiming any legal or equitable right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the property described in the complaint adverse to Plaintiff's title, or any cloud on Plaintiff's title thereto] [; and DOES I-_____, inclusive],	)	COMPLAINT TO ESTABLISH BOUNDARY AND QUIET TITLE
Defendant(s).	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner in fee simple and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description].

2. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner in fee simple and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description].

3. The above-described properties of plaintiff and defendant _____ [name] adjoin each other at plaintiff's _____ [specify, e.g., north] and defendant's _____ [specify, e.g., south] boundaries.

4. The basis of plaintiff's title is _____ [describe basis of plaintiff's title, e.g., a deed from _____ (name of grantor) granting the above-described property in fee simple to plaintiff dated _____, and recorded in the Official Records of the County of _____, Book/Reel _____, page/image _____. (If plaintiff relies on something other than record title, for instance, adverse possession, and seeks a present interest in the property, add: Plaintiff was _____ (seised or possessed) of all the property within the boundary he/she contends is the true and correct boundary within five years of the commencement of this action)].

5. Defendants claim some right, title, estate, lien, or interest in and to the lands of plaintiff hereinbefore described, or a portion thereof, and dispute and deny that the true and correct boundary line between their respective properties runs as follows: _____ [legal description of boundary line that plaintiff believes to be correct], but to the contrary, contend that the true and correct boundary line between their respective lands runs as follows: _____ [legal description of boundary line that defendants claim to be correct]. Defendants' claim or claims are without any right whatever, and defendants are without any right, title, estate, lien, or interest whatever in the aforementioned real property or any part of that property.

[6. If unknown defendants have been named, allege: The defendants herein named as "all persons unknown claiming any legal or equitable right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's title, or any cloud on plaintiff's title thereto," are unknown to plaintiff. These unknown defendants, and each of them, claim some right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the above-described property adverse to plaintiff's title and then claim or claims constitute a cloud on plaintiff's title thereto. This claim or claims are without any right whatever and these defendants have no right, title, estate, lien, or interest whatever in the above-described property or any part of that property.]

[7. If the claim of a named defendant is unknown, uncertain, or contingent, allege: The claim of _____ (name of defendant) is _____ (unknown or uncertain or contingent). (If the lack of knowledge, uncertainty, or contingency is caused by a transfer to an unborn or unascertained person or class member, or by a transfer in the form of a contingent remainder, vested remainder subject to defeasance, executory interest, or similar disposition, allege: _____ (name), age _____, is the person who would be entitled to an adverse claim if _____ (describe contingency) had occurred prior to the commencement of this action.) (If such person is subject to a legal disability, allege: Such person is subject to _____ (specify legal disability)). The claim or claims of _____ (name of this defendant) are without any right whatever, and _____ (name of this defendant) is without any right, title, estate, lien, or interst whatever in the aforementioned real property or any part of that property.]

8. Plaintiff seeks to quiet title as of _____ [date]. [If the date is a date other than the date the complaint is filed, allege why a determination as of that date is sought.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. That they be required to set forth each and every claim they may assert in and to plaintiff's lands and to the location of the boundary line set out above;

2. That this court adjudge the true and correct location of the boundary line;

3. That plaintiff's title in and to his/her lands be quieted and that it be adjudged that plaintiff is the owner in fee and entitled to the possession of the lands, that the true and correct location of the boundary line between plaintiff's land and defendants' land is as described in this complaint, and that none of the defendants has any right, title, estate, lien, or interest in or to the land of plaintiff, nor any portion thereof;

4. That defendants, and each of them, be forever enjoined and restrained from claiming or asserting any claim or interest in or to plaintiff's land, or any portion thereof, and from questioning, distributing, or interfering with the boundary line hereinbefore set out in this complaint, or attempting so to do;

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The complaint in [1], above, is a general form that may be used to establish a boundary line and to quiet title to the properties involved in a dispute between adjoining owners over the location of the boundary line.

Plaintiff may wish to obtain a title report before commencing the action. If plaintiff intends to add unknown persons as defendants, an examination of the record title and an inspection of the property will be necessary [see Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(b)]. Also, the court may order plaintiff to obtain a title report and keep it available for inspection and copying by the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.040(b)].

[3] Required Allegations

By statute, a quiet title complaint must include the following allegations [Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020]:

- A description of the property that is the subject of the action (Paragraph 1). In the case of real property, the description must include both its legal description and its street address or common designation, if any. This requirement does not preclude the joinder of several properties or of real and personal property, if appropriate [15 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. 1198 (1979)].

- The title of the plaintiff as to which a determination is sought and the basis of the title (Paragraphs 1-4). If the title is based on adverse possession, the complaint must allege the specific facts constituting the adverse possesson [see Ch. 13, Adverse Possession].

- The adverse claims to the title of the plaintiff against which a determination is sought (Paragraphs 5-7). If the plaintiff admits the validity of any adverse claim, the complaint must so state [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(c)]. If the claim or the share or quantity of the claim of a person required to be named as a defendant is unknown, uncertain, or contingent, the plaintiff must so state in the complaint. If the lack of knowledge, uncertainty, or contingency is caused by transfer to an unborn or unascertained person or class member, or by a transfer in the form of a contingent remainder, vested remainder subject to defeasance, executory interest, or similar disposition, the plaintiff must also state in the complaint, so far as is known to the plaintiff, the name, age, and legal disability, if any, of the person in being who would be entitled to the claim had the contingency on which the claim depends occurred prior to the commencement of the action (Paragraph 7) [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.020(b)].

- The date as of which the determination is sought. If the determination is sought as of a date other than the date the complaint is filed, the complaint must include a statement of the reasons why a determination as of that date is sought (Paragraph 8).

- A prayer for the determination of the title of the plaintiff against the adverse claims.

To recover real property, or possession of real property, a plaintiff must allege and prove that he or she, or his or her ancestor, predecessor, or grantor, was seised or possessed of the property in question within five years before the commencement of the action (Paragraph 4) [Code Civ. Proc. § 318; see Civ. Code § 689 (owner of present interest in real property as entitled to immediate possession)]. The requirement of seisin under Code Civ. Proc. § 318 is met, however, if plaintiff had record title even though the defendant may have been in actual possession [Tobin v. Stevens (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 945, 949-951, 251 Cal. Rptr. 587 ; Schoenfeld v. Pritzker (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 117, 121, 64 Cal. Rptr. 592] . Thus, the allegation regarding possession or seisin is not necessary when plaintiff's claim is based on a boundary described in the document establishing record title. Application of the foregoing principles is complicated by the rule that, when a boundary has been in dispute and the contiguous owners have agreed to or acquiesced in another boundary for the period of limitation, the agreed boundary becomes the true boundary [French v. Brinkman (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 547, 553, 35 Cal. Rptr. 289, 387 P.2d 1 ; Martin v. Lopes (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 618, 622, 170 P.2d 881 ; Sneed v. Osborn (1864) 25 Cal. 619, 626 ; see also § 101.51[3], [4]].

[4] Who Must Be Made Defendants

The plaintiff must name as defendants the persons having adverse claims to the title of the plaintiff against which a determination is sought [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.010]. If the name of a person required to be named as a defendant is not known to plaintiff, the plaintiff must so state in the complaint and must name as parties all persons unknown in the manner described in [5], below [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.020(a)].

The court on its own motion may, and on motion of any party must, make such orders as appear appropriate for joinder of such additional parties as are necessary or proper [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.040(a)].

If a person required to be named as a defendant is dead and the plaintiff knows of a personal representative, the plaintiff must join the personal representative [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(a)]. If a person required to be named as a defendant is dead, or is believed by the plaintiff to be dead, and the plaintiff knows of no personal representative, the plaintiff must state these facts in an affidavit filed with the complaint. When it is stated in the affidavit that such person is dead, the plaintiff may join as defendants "the testate and intestate successors of _____ (name of deceased person), deceased, and all persons claiming by, through, or under such decedent" naming them in that manner [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(b)(2)].

If a person required to be named as a defendant is believed by plaintiff to be deceased, the person believed to be deceased may be named as a defendant as may that person's successors. The successors must be denominated as follows: "the testate and intestate successors of _____ (name of person believed to be deceased), believed to be deceased, and all persons claiming by, through, or under such person" [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(b)(3)].

The form does not contain any allegations regarding defendants who are personal representatives [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(a)], heirs, intestate or testate successors [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.030(b)], of persons known or believed by the plaintiff to be deceased. If those defendants are necessary in your particular situation, use the appropriate allegations from Ch. 482, Quieting Title .

[5] Unknown Defendants

In addition to the persons required to be named as defendants in the action, the plaintiff may name as defendants "all persons unknown, claiming any legal or equitable right, title, estate, lien, or interest in the property described in the complaint adverse to plaintiff's title, or any cloud upon plaintiff's title thereto," naming them in that manner (Paragraph 6) [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(a)]. If unknown defendants are named, the plaintiff must name as defendants the persons having adverse claims that are of record or known to the plaintiff or reasonably apparent from an inspection of the property [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.060(b)]. Naming unknown defendants and serving them by publication [see [9], below] will entitle the plaintiff to an in rem judgment against the whole world [Code Civ. Proc. § 764.030], except that a person who is in open and actual possession of the property cannot be named as an unknown defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 763.010(c)].

Some people also additionally designate testate and intestate successors and "all persons unknown" as DOES. That is not recommended because it differs from the statutory language of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 762.030(b)(2),(3) and 762.060 by which those defendants are to be designated, and because it may limit the in rem effect of the judgment by limiting the number of adverse claimants in those classes [see Code Civ. Proc. § 763.030(b)]. Fictitious defendants, however, may be named as DOES pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.060 (rules governing civil actions generally as applicable in quiet title actions unless they are inconsistent with quiet title provisions)].

The form does not contain any allegations regarding fictitious defendants [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]. If those defendants are necessary in your particular situation [see [4], above], use the appropriate allegations from Ch. 482, Quieting Title.

[6] Appointment of Guardian ad Litem

The court on its own motion may, and on motion of any party must, make such orders for appointment of guardians ad litem as appear necessary to protect the interest of any party [Code Civ. Proc. § 762.080]. Appointment of guardians ad litem is discussed in Ch. 291, Guardians ad Litem .

[7] Verification

The complaint must be verified [Code Civ. Proc. § 761.020; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5].

[8] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction over quiet title actions [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.040(a)]. The actions are unlimited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 88, 580(b)(3)]. Subject to the power of the court to transfer actions, the proper county for the trial of an action to quiet title to real property is the county in which the real property, or some of it, is located [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.050(a)].

[9] Service of Summons

The form, content, and manner of the service of summons in quiet title actions is the same as in civil actions generally [Code Civ. Proc. § 763.010(a)]. If unknown defendants are named, there must also be service by publication and posting [Code Civ. Proc. § 763.010(b)]. The requirements for service by publication and posting are discussed in Ch. 482, Quieting Title . The procedure for service of summons is set forth in Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers .

[10] Lis Pendens

Immediately on the commencement of a quiet title action by filing the complaint, the plaintff must file a lis pendens in the office of the county recorder of each county in which any real property described in the complaint is located [Code Civ. Proc. § 761.010]. The lis pendens gives constructive notice of the pendency of the action to subsequent purchasers or encumbrancers [Code Civ. Proc. § 405.24]. For further discussion and forms of lis pendens, see Ch. 348, Lis Pendens .

[Caption, introduction. See § 101.50[1].]

1-3. [Ownership of respective adjoining properties by plaintiff and defendants. See § 101.50[1], Paragraphs 1-3.]

4. [Basis of plaintiff's title. See § 101.50[1], Paragraph 4.]

5. The boundary line between the land of the parties hereto is as set out in a deed from _____ [name of grantor] to plaintiff, dated _____. The deed was recorded on _____ [date], in the Official Records of _____ County, Book _____, page _____. A copy of the deed is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

6. During the month of _____ [month and year], and prior thereto, both plaintiff and defendants were uncertain and in doubt as to the true location on the ground of that certain line referred to in the deed as _____ [legal description of boundary in question contained in deed], and for the purpose of agreeing to, resolving, and establishing once and for all the true location of the boundary line, plaintiff and defendants, on or about _____ [date], and more than _____ [number] years before the commencement of this action, went on the land in question, measured off the courses and distances as recited in Exhibit A herein, and agreed and determined to locate a _____ [describe way in which boundary was marked, e.g., fence] along a line agreed to by both parties herein as that certain line _____ [legal description of boundary in question contained in deed] referred to in the deed. In accordance with the agreement of plaintiff and defendants, a _____ [describe way in which boundary was marked, e.g., fence] was constructed on _____ [date] along the line so agreed on by the parties hereto, and such _____ [specify mark, e.g., fence] has been maintained by the plaintiff herein continuously from that date to the present.

7. At all times since the _____ [specify creation of the mark, e.g., erection of the fence] both plaintiff and defendants have continuously recognized the line of the _____ [specify mark, e.g., fence] as marking the true and correct boundary to their respective lands, and have at all times since the _____ [creation of the mark, e.g., erection of the fence] acquiesced in and abided by this boundary line.

[EITHER]

8. In reliance on the agreement and the acquiescence of the defendants in the establishment of the boundary line as the true and correct boundary between their respective lands, plaintiff has _____ [specify circumstances that would cause plaintiff substantial loss if line were changed, e.g., made improvements on that portion of his/her land immediately adjacent to the boundary line, and has maintained the same continuously thereon for more than _____ (number) years preceding the commencement of this action).

[OR]

8. The defendants have accepted and acquiesced in the line so fixed for a period equal to the statute of limitations.

[CONTINUE]

9. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that defendants claim some right, title, estate, lien, or interest in and to the land of plaintiff hereinbefore described, or a portion thereof, and dispute and deny that the aforementioned _____ [specify mark, e.g., fence] marks the true and correct boundary line between the lands of the parties, and, to the contrary, contend and claim that the true and correct boundary line between the lands of the parties lies _____ [legal description of boundary line which defendants claim to be correct]. Defendants' claims are without any right whatever, and defendants have no right, title, estate, lien, or interest in or to any or all of the land of plaintiff lying between the true and correct boundary line and that line alleged by defendant to be the boundary line.

[10. Unknown defendants and unknown, uncertain, or contingent claims allegations, if appropriate. See § 101.50[1], Paragraphs 6 and 7.]

11. Plaintiff seeks to quiet title as of _____ [date]. [_____ (If the date is a date other than the date the complaint is filed, allege why a determination as of that date is sought).]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action to establish a boundary line between adjoining landowners and to quiet title to their respective lands where an agreement has been entered into between these landowners as to the location of the boundary between their lands.

[3] Essential Allegations

The doctrine of agreed boundaries requires that there be an uncertainty as to the true boundary line (Paragraph 6), an agreement between the adjoining owners fixing the line (Paragraph 6), and acceptance and acquiescence in the line so fixed for a period equal to the statute of limitations or under such circumstances that substantial loss would be caused by a change of its position (Paragraphs 7, 8) [French v. Brinkman (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 547, 551, 35 Cal. Rptr. 289, 387 P.2d 1 ; Ernie v. Trinity Lutheran Church (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 702, 707, 336 P.2d 525 ; Zachery v. McWilliams (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 57, 60, 104 Cal. Rptr. 293] .

Two additional elements which some cases list as required are a marking or building up to the agreed boundary (Paragraph 6) and occupation of the real property to such line [Nusbickel v. Stevens Ranch Co. (1921) 187 Cal. 15, 16, 200 P. 651 ; Vella v. Ratto (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 737, 739, 95 Cal. Rptr. 72] .

The essential allegations of a quiet title complaint are discussed in § 101.50[3].

§ 101.52 Complaint to Establish Boundary and Quiet Title to Real Property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 760.020, 761.020]--Existing Boundary Agreement Conflicts With Partition Agreement

[1] FORM Complaint to Establish Boundary and Quiet Title to Real Property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 760.020, 761.020]--Existing Boundary Agreement Conflicts With Partition Agreement

[Caption, introduction. See 101.50[1].]

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendants entered into a partition agreement whereby they agreed to partition and divide certain lands located in _____ County, California, theretofore owned by plaintiff and defendants as joint tenants. A copy of this agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

2. On _____ [date], the respective parties hereto executed, exchanged, and delivered deeds, one to the other, all in accordance with the partition agreement. A copy of the deed executed by defendants and delivered to plaintiff on the last mentioned date is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof. A copy of the deed executed by plaintiff and delivered to defendants on the last mentioned date is attached hereto as Exhibit C and made a part hereof. These deeds were thereafter, on _____ [date], duly recorded in the Official Records of the County of _____, Book _____, page _____.

3. As a result of the partition agreement, plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned since the partition agreement was, the owner in fee simple and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description].

4. Also as a result of the partition agreement, defendants are, and at all times herein mentioned since the partition agreement were, the owners and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ [street address(es)], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description(s)].

5. The above-described properties of plaintiff and defendants adjoin each other at plaintiff's _____ [specify, e.g., north] and defendants' _____ [specify, e.g., south] boundaries.

6. Prior to the execution of the partition agreement and the execution, delivery, and recordation of the deeds, the actual location on the ground of the boundary line between the respective parcels of land was uncertain, and neither party thereto had certain knowledge of the location of the true and correct line. The descriptions of the parcels of land, as the same are set out in Exhibits A, B, and C, attached hereto, were taken from earlier deeds to the premises and no survey of the property was made at that time.

7. On or about _____ [date], and approximately _____ [number] weeks before the execution of the partition agreement, for the purpose of agreeing, resolving, and establishing once and for all the true location of the line, and with full intent so to do, plaintiff and defendants went on the land together and orally agreed that the true boundary line between their respective parcels would be _____ [describe boundary line agreed on, e.g., a certain row of trees standing some _____ (number) feet _____ (direction) of the line of a certain fence then standing on defendants' land].

8. The true and correct description of the boundary line agreed on by the plaintiff and defendants, as aforesaid, is as follows: _____ [describe].

9. Each of the parties has acquiesced in the aforesaid boundary line continuously since _____ [date], and for more than _____ [number] years immediately preceding the commencement of this action. Plaintiff has continuously and exclusively occupied all of the land lying to the _____ [direction from agreed boundary, e.g., south of the row of trees], and neither of the parties in any way disputed the location of the boundary line until _____ [date].

10. Defendants now claim that the common boundary between the parties, as determined by a survey based on the description recited in Exhibits A, B, and C, attached hereto, does not correspond with the location of the boundary agreed on, but to the contrary, is located some _____ [number] feet to the _____ [direction] thereof.

[EITHER]

11. In reliance on the agreement and the acquiescence of the defendants in the establishment of the boundary line as the true and correct boundary between their respective lands, plaintiff has _____ [specify circumstances that would cause plaintiff substantial loss if line were changed, e.g., made improvements on that portion of his/her land immediately adjacent to the boundary line, and has maintained the same continuously thereon for more than _____ (number) years preceding the commencement of this action).

[OR]

11. The defendants have accepted and acquiesced in the line so fixed for a period equal to the statute of limitations.

[CONTINUE]

[12. Unknown defendants and unknown, uncertain, or contingent claims allegations, if appropriate. See 101.50[1], Paragraphs 6 and 7.]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, is for use in an action to establish a boundary line between adjoining landowners and to quiet title to their respective lands where an agreement has been entered into between these landowners as to the location of the boundary between their lands but the agreed boundary conflicts with a partition agreement.

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. At all times herein mentioned, defendant _____ (name) was authorized and empowered by defendant _____ (principal) to act, and did act, as the agent of defendant _____ (principal), and each and all of the things herein alleged to have been done by him/her were done in the capacity of and as agent for defendant _____ (principal).]

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract of conveyance of certain real property owned by defendant and located in _____ County, known as _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description]. A copy of the contract is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof.

3. Under the terms of the contract, defendant was to convey all of such property to plaintiff and deliver to plaintiff a grant deed describing the property.

[EITHER]

4. On or about _____ [date], as per agreement, defendant delivered a grant deed to plaintiff, but due to fraud on the part of defendant in that _____ [specify], the deed failed to convey all the property agreed on. The fraud lies in that the deed reads _____ [specify what is incorrect in description of boundaries] and the deed should instead read _____ [specify what true description should be].

[OR]

4. On or about _____ [date], as per agreement, defendant delivered a grant deed to plaintiff. The deed contained a _____ [mutual mistake of defendant and plaintiff or mistake of plaintiff] and the deed failed to convey all the property agreed on. The mistake lies in that the deed reads _____ [specify error in description of boundaries] and the deed should instead read _____ [specify what true description should be]. [If mistake is only mistake of plaintiff, add facts showing defendant knew or suspected plaintiff's mistake.]

[CONTINUE]

5. A copy of the erroneously drawn deed is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.

6. Plaintiff took possession of the property believing that the deed described all the property agreed to be conveyed by the conveyance contract.

7. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff discovered the mistake in the deed, and contacted defendant to have the mistake corrected, but defendant refused, and continues to refuse, to do so.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. That the deed be reformed to express the true intended conveyance, to wit: _____ [specify what true boundary should be] instead of _____ [give erroneous description].

2. For costs of suit incurred herein.

3. For such other and further relief the court may deem proper.

[Verification, if desired. See § 101.50[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to reform a deed so that the boundary descriptions for the properties accurately reflect the true understanding of the parties to the agreement.

[3] Essential Allegations

The elements of reformation are:

- Fraud, mutual mistake of the parties, or a mistake of one party, which the other at the time knew or suspected (Paragraph 4) [Civ. Code § 3399].

- A valid agreement made between the parties (Paragraph 2) [Paterson v. Board of Trustees (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 811, 815, 321 P.2d 825] .

- A written contract that does not truly express the intention of the parties (Paragraph 4) [Civ. Code § 3399].

[4] Reformation of Deeds

Civ. Code § 3399 providing for reformation, though by its terms applying only to "written contracts," also applies to deeds [Welsher v. Glickman (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 134, 140, 77 Cal. Rptr. 141] .

[5] Defenses

[a] Negligence

Where the failure to familiarize one's self with the contents of a written contract prior to its execution is traceable solely to carelessness or negligence, reformation as a rule should be denied; but where such failure, and perhaps negligence, is induced by the false representations and fraud of the other party to the contract in that its provisions are different from those set out, the courts, even in the absence of a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the parties, should reform the instrument [California Trust Co. v. Cohn (1932) 214 Cal. 619, 627, 7 P.2d 297] .

[b] Laches, Unclean Hands, and Waiver

Reformation, being an equitable remedy, is subject to the usual equitable defenses including laches, unclean hands, and waiver. These defenses must be pleaded affirmatively [see Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Monarch Ins. Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 538, 543, 58 Cal. Rptr. 639 (laches); Behm v. Fireside Thrift Co. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 15, 21-22, 76 Cal. Rptr. 849 (unclean hands); San Fernando Valley C. of C. v. Thomas (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 348, 350-351, 266 P.2d 891 (waiver)]. Absent unusual circumstances, a cause of action for reformation is not barred by laches if a cause of action based upon the same contract is not barred by the statute of limitations [Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Monarch Ins. Co. (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 538, 543, 58 Cal. Rptr. 639] .

[c] Statute of Limitations

An action for reformation for fraud or mistake must be brought within three years following the discovery thereof [see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]. The statute begins to run when the mistake or fraud is discovered, or when it should have been discovered by the exercise of due diligence [see Welsher v. Glickman (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 134, 140, 77 Cal. Rptr. 141 ; Tarrant v. Butler (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 235, 239, 4 Cal. Rptr. 230] .

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Estoppel by Agreement and Acquiescence

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. Defendant now is, and since _____ [date] has been, the owner and in possession of all that real property located in _____ [city], _____ County, California, consisting of a _____ [generally describe real property, e.g., house], commonly known as _____ [street address], more particularly described as follows, to wit: _____ [legal description].

2. Prior to the year _____ [year], _____ [name], a predecessor in interest to plaintiff herein, and _____ [name], then and there a predecessor in interest to defendant herein, became and were uncertain and in doubt as to the true boundary of and between their respective properties. Thereon and by reason of such uncertainty, the predecessors in interest of the parties hereto agreed that the boundary between their respective lands should be and was _____ [description of agreed boundary], and marked the agreed boundary line upon the ground as follows: _____ [specify creation of the mark, e.g., by erecting a fence].

3. Thereon and thereafter, pursuant to the agreement, the predecessors in interest and their respective successors, including plaintiff and defendant herein, for a period of more than _____ [number] years and up to the present time continuously used and occupied and acquiesced in the use and occupation of their respective parcels of land in accordance with the agreed boundary.

4. By reason of the agreement and acquiescence on the parts of the plaintiff and his predecessors in interest in the premises, as set out above, plaintiff is estopped to deny that the true boundary line between his land and the land of defendant is other than as set out in Paragraph 2 of this affirmative defense, and is further estopped from ascerting any right, title, or interest in or to any of the lands of defendant herein described.

WHEREFORE, defendant prays judgment against plaintiff as follows:

1. That plaintiff take nothing by his action.

2. That this court adjudge that the true and correct boundary line between the lands of plaintiff and defendant is as set out above and that plaintiff has neither right, title, nor interest in or to the real property of defendant described above, or any of the real property.

3. For costs of suit herein incurred.

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use as an affirmative defense to an action to establish the boundary between adjoining landowners. It alleges that plaintiff is estopped from seeking a new boundary by reason of a prior agreement and acquiescence therein [Frericks v. Sorensen (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 759, 761, 248 P.2d 949] .

10-101 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 101.55

§ 101.55 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Estoppel and Laches

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Estoppel and Laches

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff executed and delivered a deed to defendant conveying to defendant all that real property described in Paragraph _____ [specify] of plaintiff's complaint on file herein, and from the aforesaid date of conveyance to the present time defendant has been the owner and in possession of the real property.

2. Prior to the conveyance plaintiff was the owner of a larger tract of land consisting of the land coveyed by the deed, together with the land more specifically described in Paragraph _____ [specify] of plaintiff's complaint, the last mentioned land having been retained by plaintiff from the time of conveyance, as aforesaid, to the present time.

3. Immediately prior to and at the time of the conveyance plaintiff represented to defendant that the line of a _____ [specify mark, e.g., fence] then existing on the land of plaintiff was the true and correct boundary between the land retained by plaintiff and the land conveyed to defendant, as aforesaid, and defendant relied on the representations to him by plaintiff, and but for these representations defendant would not have purchased the parcel then conveyed to him by plaintiff.

4. In further reliance on the representations to him made by plaintiff, as aforesaid, defendant, during the months of _____ [specify], in the year _____ [specify], commenced and constructed _____ [specify improvements, e.g., a building] adjacent to the boundary line as the same had been represented by plaintiff at the time of the aforesaid conveyance.

5. On numerous occasions during the months of _____ [specify], in the year _____ [specify], while the aforementioned improvements were being constructed, plaintiff observed the commencement, course, and completion of the work then being done, and made no protest to defendant at any time, nor did plaintiff then in any manner object to such construction, nor did he claim any right, title, or interest to the land on which the construction was taking place, nor any part thereof, and the first knowledge defendant had that plaintiff claimed any right, title, or interest in or to any of the lands of defendant or any part thereof came when defendant was served with plaintiff's complaint herein on _____ [date], some _____ [number] months after all of the construction was completed.

6. By reason of the representations, conduct, and activity of the plaintiff in the premises, as hereinbefore set out, he is estopped to deny that the true and correct boundary line between his land and the land of defendant is other than as set out in Paragraph 3 of this affirmative defense, and is further barred by his own laches in the premises from so denying, and plaintiff is further estopped and barred by his own laches in the premises from asserting or claiming any right, title, or interest in or to the lands of defendant as bounded by the aforesaid boundary line.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is for use as an affirmative defense where plaintiff may be estopped from asserting the true boundary line and where plaintiff is barred by laches from asserting his claim.

[3] Essential Allegations

[a] Estoppel

Generally speaking, four elements must be present in order to apply the doctrine of equitable estoppel [Granco Steel, Inc. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 191, 203, 65 Cal. Rptr. 287, 436 P.2d 287] :

- The party to be estopped must be apprised of the facts;
- He or she must intend that his or her conduct be acted on, or must so act that the party asserting the estoppel had a right to believe it was so intended;
- The other party must be ignorant of the true state of facts; and
- He or she must rely on the conduct to his or her injury.

[b] Laches

The basic elements of laches are [Stafford v. Ballinger (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 289, 296, 18 Cal. Rptr. 568] :

- An omission to assert a right;
- A delay in the assertion of the right for some appreciable period; and
- Circumstances which would cause prejudice to an adverse party if assertion of the right is permitted.

§ 101.56 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Adverse Possession [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 321-325]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--Adverse Possession [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 321-325]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that:

1. Defendant now is, and at all times mentioned herein was, the owner and in possession of all that real property located in _____ [city], _____ County, California, consisting of a _____ [specify, e.g., house], commonly known as _____ [street address], more particularly described as follows: _____ [give legal description of property].

2. Defendant, by himself and by his predecessors in interest, has been for more than _____ [number of years] last past in continuous, actual, exclusive, open, notorious, and adverse possession of the real property, claiming to own the same in fee against the whole world; and during a period of more than _____ [number] years, continuously and immediately preceding the filing of this complaint, defendant has paid all taxes of every nature levied or assessed against this property.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, may be used where defendant claims title through adverse possession to property involved in a boundary dispute.

[3] Essential Allegations

The elements necessary to show adverse possession are [Dimmick v. Dimmick (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 417, 421-422, 24 Cal. Rptr. 856, 374 P.2d 824] :

- Possession must be by actual occupation under such circumstances as to constitute reasonable notice to the owner.

- It must be hostile to the owner's title.
- The holder must claim the property as his own, under either color of title or claim of right.
- Possession must be continuous and uninterrupted for five years.
- The holder must pay all taxes levied and assessed on the property during the period.

_____ [name], Plaintiff, vs _____ [names] [_____ (city)], County of _____, State of California and all entities claiming any interest in or lien upon the real property herein described or part of it, Defendants.	))))	NO. _____ COMPLAINT TO REESTABLISH BOUNDARIES UNDER CULLEN EARTHQUAKE ACT

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner _____ [specify interest, e.g., in fee simple] and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ [legal description].

2. _____ [In this and subsequent paragraphs, state the estate, title, interest, or claim, so far as known to plaintiff or so far as they are capable of being discovered by reasonably diligent search by plaintiff, in each separate part of entire real property sought to be affected by action, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, the owner and in possession and control of that real property situated in _____ County, known as _____ (street address), _____ (city), California, and more particularly described as follows: _____ (legal description)].

3. On or about _____ [date], _____ [specify type of earth movement, e.g., an earthquake or a mud slide] occurred in _____ [specify general location, e.g., Los Angeles County] moving the earth and the boundary lines within the following area: _____ [describe exterior boundaries of total area affected].

4. Attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof is a proposed replatting of the entire real property sought to be affected by this action, embodying the land boundaries as fixed by the disaster, except as these boundaries have been equitably and judicially readjusted, or as liberalized by judicially directed use of vacated lands.

5. Plaintiff _____ [seeks or offers] to have vacated the following street areas for judicial equitable allocation to landowners for the mitigation of losses inflicted on them by the _____ [specify, e.g., earthquake or mud slide].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. That this court adjudge the true and correct location of the boundary lines affected by the earth movement to be as set out in Exhibit A.

2. That plaintiff's title in and to his lands be quieted and that it be adjudged that plaintiff is the owner in fee and entitled to the possession of the lands, that the true and correct boundary lines of his property are as described in Exhibit A and that none of the defendants has any right, title, or interest in or to the land of plaintiff, nor any portion thereof.

3. That defendants, and each of them, be forever enjoined and restrained from claiming or asserting any claim or interest in or to plaintiff's land, or any portion thereof, and from questioning or interfering with the boundary lines as hereinbefore set out in Exhibit A, or attempting so to do.

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired. See § 101.50[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form of complaint in [1], above, may be used to commence an action to reestablish boundary lines and to quiet title to land in an area affected by earth movements such as earthquakes and mud slides.

[3] Requirement That Court Permit Plaintiff to Bring Suit

Any entity or person, other than a city or county, who seeks to bring an action under the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65] must obtain permission from the court to bring the action and must make the county in which the land is located a party to the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 751.51(a)(3); for a form of application for permission, see § 101.57].

[4] Plaintiff's Affidavit or Declaration

At the time the complaint is filed, the plaintiff must file with it an affidavit or declaration relating to title to the property involved [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.09, 751.54; for a form of declaration, see § 101.61].

[5] Essential Allegations

The complaint must substantially include [Code Civ. Proc. § 751.53]:

- A statement of the facts which make the provisions of the Cullen Earthquake Act [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 751.50-751.65] applicable (Paragraph 3).

- A description of the exterior boundaries of the real property area sought to be affected by the action (Paragraph 3).

- A specification of the estate, title, interest, or claim owned, and in the actual possession of the plaintiff in described parts of the entire real property sought to be affected by the action (Paragraph 1).

- A specification of the estate, title, interest, or claim, so far as they are known to the plaintiff and so far as they are capable of being discovered by reasonably diligent search by the plaintiff in each separate part of the entire real property sought to be affected by the action (Paragraph 2).

- A specification of the street areas sought to be vacated or offered by the plaintiff to be vacated in whole or in part for judicial equitable allocation to landowners for the mitigation of the losses inflicted on the landowners by the particular disaster or disasters (Paragraph 5).

- A proposed replatting of the entire real property sought to be affected by the action, embodying the land boundaries as fixed by the disaster, except as these boundaries have been equitably and judicially readjusted, or as liberalized by judicially directed use of the vacated lands (Paragraph 4).

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND

10-102 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 102.10

§ 102.10 Liability of Public Entities

[1] Limited Liability

Except as otherwise provided by statute, a public entity is not liable for an injury, whether that injury arises out of an act or omission of the public entity, or a public employee, or any other person [Gov. Code § 815(a)].

[2] Liability for Acts or Omissions of Employees

A public entity is liable for injury proximately caused by an act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his or her employment if the act or omission would, apart from Gov. Code § 815.2, have given rise to the cause of action against that employee or the employee's personal representative. Except as otherwise provided by statute, a public entity is not liable for an injury resulting from an act or omission of an employee of the public entity if the employee is immune from liability [Gov. Code § 815.2].

[3] Liability for Failure to Discharge Mandatory Duty Imposed by Enactment

If a public entity is under a mandatory duty imposed by an enactment that is designed to protect against the risk of a particular kind of injury, the public entity is liable for an injury of that kind proximately caused by its failure to discharge the duty, unless the entity establishes that it exercised reasonable diligence to discharge the duty [Gov. Code § 815.6].

[4] Liability for Dangerous Condition of Property

Except as provided by statute, a public entity is liable for injury caused by a dangerous condition of its property if the plaintiff establishes that the property was in a dangerous condition at the time of the injury, that the injury was proximately caused by the dangerous condition, that the dangerous condition created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury that was incurred, and that either (1) a negligent or wrongful act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his or her employment created the dangerous condition or (2) the public entity had actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition [see Gov. Code § 835.2] a sufficient time prior to the injury to have taken measures to protect against the dangerous condition [Gov. Code § 835].

[5] Nonliability for Dangerous Condition of Property

A public entity is not liable under Gov. Code § 835(a) for injury caused by a condition of its property if the public entity establishes that the actor omission that created the condition was reasonable. The reasonableness of the act or omission that created the condition is determined by weighing the probability and gravity of potential injury to persons and property foreseeably exposed to the risk of injury against the practicability and cost of taking alternative action that would not create the risk of injury or of protecting against the risk of injury [Gov. Code § 835.4(a)].

A public entity is not liable under Gov. Code § 835(b) for injury caused by a dangerous condition of its property if the public entity establishes that the action it took to protect against the risk of injury created by the condition or its failure to take such action was reasonable. The reasonableness of the action or inaction of the public entity is determined by taking into consideration the time and opportunity it had to take action and by weighing the probability and gravity of potential injury to persons and property foreseeably exposed to the risk of injury against the practicability and costs of protecting against the risk of such injury [Gov. Code § 835.4(b)].

If state is immune from liability for injuries caused by dangerous condition because dangerous condition was created as result of plan or design that conferred immunity under Gov. Code § 830.6, state is possibly liable for failure to warn of dangerous condition if failure to warn is negligent and independent, separate, concurring cause of accident. Cameron v. State of California (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 318, 329, 102 Cal. Rptr. 305, 497 P.2d 777

Gov. Code § 830.6, making public entity immune from liability for injuries caused by approved plan or design, is unavailable as defense if no evidence presented that injury was caused by element conforming to approved design. Cameron v. State of California (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 318, 326, 102 Cal. Rptr. 305, 497 P.2d 777

In action by motorist against city, alleging that traffic accident was caused by dangerous condition on public bridge, summary judgment for defendant as proper based on immunity under Gov. Code § 830.6 when evidence showed substantial basis on which governmental official could have decided that design was reasonable, and no triable issues existed regarding changed conditions or notice sufficient to defeat continuance of immunity. Compton v. City of Santee (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 591, 597-600, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660

Elements of design immunity defense are: (1) causal relationship between plan and accident; (2) approval of design prior to construction; and (3) substantial evidence supporting reasonableness of design. Ramirez v. City of Redondo Beach (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523, 237 Cal. Rptr. 505

Design immunity under Gov. Code § 840.6 applies even if evidence is conflicting, if evidence is substantial (that is, evidence that reasonably inspires confidence or is of solid value). Ramirez v. City of Redondo Beach (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 515, 526, 237 Cal. Rptr. 505 ; Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 306-307, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73

Gov. Code § 830.6, limiting liability of public entities and public employees for injury caused by plan or design of construction, is limited to design caused accident and does not immunize from liability caused by negligence independent of design. Flournoy v. State of California (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 806, 811, 80 Cal. Rptr. 485

Liability for creation of dangerous condition and immunity for designing it under Gov. Code § 830.6 depends on proximate causation. Flournoy v. State of California (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 806, 813, 80 Cal. Rptr. 485

If it is reasonably foreseeable that persons held to lower standard for their own care, such as children, may be exposed to substantial risk of injury from property, public entity is required to take reasonable precautions to protect such persons from that risk. Holmes v. City of Oakland (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 67 Cal. Rptr. 197

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,

	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Plaintiff, vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [names], Defendants.	)	[Amount demanded _____
	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

The plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

(Against Public Entity)

[EITHER]

1.At all times herein mentioned, the defendant State of California was a sovereign state of the United States of America.

[OR]

1.At all times herein mentioned, the defendant _____[name of public entity] was, and now is, a _____ [municipal corporation or county and political subdivision of the State of California] organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of California.

[CONTINUE]

2.Prior to the filing of this complaint and on _____[date], the plaintiff filed a claim against the defendant _____[name of public entity] for the injuries alleged herein. On _____[date], the defendant _____[name of public entity] _____ [rejected the plaintiff's claim in its entirety or allowed the plaintiff's claim in the amount of $_____ but rejected it as to the remainder].

3.At all times herein mentioned, the _____[name] Bridge was a public draw bridge of the elevator type located in _____ County, California over and across the _____[name of body of water], and was a part of the public highway designated as _____[name], running in a general _____[specify direction] at that location.

4.At all times herein mentioned, the defendant _____[name of public entity] operated, maintained, and controlled the _____[name] Bridge.

5.On _____[date of injury], and prior thereto, the _____[name] Bridge was in a dangerous condition, which created a substantial risk of injury when the bridge was used with due care in a manner in which it was reasonably foreseeable it would be used, in that _____ [specify facts rendering property in dangerous condition, e.g., the defendant failed to provide adequate lighting and warning devices to warn motorists driving over the bridge of the elevating of the draw, failed to provide barriers to protect such motorists from collision with the elevated draw section, and elevated the draw section without adequate warning to motorists on the bridge].

6.The defendant _____'s [name of public entity] failure to provide adequate lighting, warning devices, and barriers to protect motorists from the elevating of the draw created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury that is hereinafter alleged. The resulting dangerous condition had existed for a sufficient period of time prior to _____[date of injury] and was of such an obvious nature as to give the defendant _____[name of public entity] constructive notice of its existence [or allege facts sufficient to show actual notice]. The defendant _____[name of public entity] _____ [knew or should have known] of its dangerous character a sufficient period of time prior to _____[date of injury] to have taken adequate measures to protect motorists from the elevating of the draw.

7.At all times herein mentioned, the plaintiff was the legal and registered owner of a certain _____[year, make, model] automobile bearing California License No. _____.

8.On or about _____[date], at approximately _____[time], the plaintiff was operating [his or her] automobile in a _____[specify direction] on the _____[name] Bridge.

9.As a proximate result of the acts and conditions herein complained of, the plaintiff was caused to collide with the elevated draw section of the bridge.

10.As a proximate result of the acts and conditions herein complained of, and the accident caused thereby, the plaintiff sustained permanent injuries consisting of _____[specify], has suffered and will suffer great physical pain and mental anguish, and is damaged thereby according to proof.

11. As a further proximate result thereof, the plaintiff was required to and did employ physicians and surgeons to examine, treat, and care for [him or her], and incurred additional medical expenses for hospital bills [and other incidental medical expenses]. [The plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that [he or she] will incur some additional medical expenses, the exact amount of which is unknown.]

12. As a further proximate result thereof, the plaintiff was prevented from attending to [his or her] usual _____ [occupation or profession] and thereby lost earnings. [The plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that [he or she] will thereby be prevented from attending to such _____ (occupation or profession) for a period in the future that [he or she] cannot now ascertain, and will thereby sustain further loss of earnings.]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

(Against Public Employee)

1.The plaintiff refers to Paragraphs 1-5 and 7-12 of [his or her] First Cause of Action and incorporates them as if fully set forth herein.

2.At all times herein mentioned, the defendant _____[name of public employee] was an employee of the defendant _____[name of public entity], and in doing the things hereinafter described, acted within the course and scope of [his or her] employment.

3.The plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of the defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through _____ (roman numeral), inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. The plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained.]

4.The dangerous condition of the bridge created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury that is hereinabove alleged and was directly attributable in substantial part to the defendant _____[name of public employee] in that _____ [specify negligent or wrongful act of employee that was responsible for the dangerous condition, e.g., the defendant _____ (name of public employee) negligently raised the bridge while the plaintiff was operating [his or her] automobile on it without giving warning and knowing that adequate warning was not otherwise provided]. The defendant _____[name of public employee] at all times herein mentioned had the authority and other means immediately available to take alternative action by _____ [specify reasonable alternative action employee could have taken, e.g., either warning the plaintiff of the elevating of the bridge or delaying elevating the bridge until the plaintiff had passed].

WHEREFORE, the plaintiff prays judgment against the defendants, and each of them, as follows:

1. For general damages according to proof.

2. For medical and incidental expenses according to proof.

3. For lost wages according to proof.

4. For costs of suit herein incurred.

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

VERIFICATION [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5]

I, _____[name], am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge except as to those matters that are therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct under the laws of the State of California.

CAUTION:

Except as provided in Gov. Code §§ 946.4 and 946.6, no suit for money or damages may be brought against a public entity on a cause of action for which a claim is required to be presented [see Gov. Code §§ 905-905.6] until a written claim therefor has been presented to the public entity and the appropriate body within the public entity has acted [see Gov. Code §§ 912.4-912.8] or failed to act within the time provided by Gov. Code § 914.4 [Gov. Code § 945.4]. A claim relating to a cause of action for death or for injury to person or to personal property must be presented not later than 6 months after the accrual of the cause of action [Gov. Code § 911.2]. For forms of claims, see Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act .

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 946.4 and Gov. Code § 946.6, and subject to Gov. Code § 945.6(b), any suit brought against a public entity on a cause of action for which a claim is required to be presented [see Gov. Code §§ 905-905.6] must be commenced not later than six months after the date written notice the board is required to give under Gov. Code § 913 is personally delivered or deposited in the mail or, if written notice is not given in accordance with Gov. Code § 913, within two years from the accrual of the cause of action [Gov. Code § 945.6(a)].

Except as provided in Gov. Code § 950.4, a cause of action against a public employee of former public employee for injury resulting from an act or omission in the scope of [his or her] employment as a public employee is barred if an action against the employing public entity for such injury is barred for failure to properly present a claim or failure to commence an action within the time provided. This is true even though the public entity is immune from liability for the injury [see Gov. Code § 950.2].

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use as a complaint against a public entity and its employee for injuries resulting from a collision caused by the dangerous condition of a lift span bridge.

[3] Essential Allegations

[a] Against Public Entity

Except as otherwise provided by a statute, a public entity is liable for injury caused by a dangerous condition of its property if the plaintiff establishes that the property was in a dangerous condition at the time of the injury (First Cause of Action, Paragraph 5), that the injury was proximately caused by the dangerous condition (First Cause of Action, Paragraphs 9-12), that the dangerous condition created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury that was incurred (First Cause of Action, Paragraph 5), and that the public entity had actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition under Gov. Code § 835.2 a sufficient time prior to the injury to have taken measures to protect against the dangerous condition (First Cause of Action, Paragraph 6) [Gov. Code § 835].

[b] Against Public Employee

An employee of a public entity is liable for injury caused by a dangerous condition of public property if the plaintiff establishes that the property of the public entity was in a dangerous condition at the time of the injury (First Cause of Action, Paragraph 5), that the injury was proximately caused by the dangerous condition (First Cause of Action, Paragraphs 9-12), that the dangerous condition created a reasonably foreseeable risk of the kind of injury that was incurred (Second Cause of Action, Paragraph 4), and that the dangerous condition was directly attributable wholly or in substantial part to a negligent or wrongful act of the employee and the employee had the authority, funds, and other means immediately available to take alternative action that would not have created the dangerous condition (Second Cause of Action, Paragraph 4) [Gov. Code § 840.2].

[4] Verification

A public entity need not verify its answer even though the complaint is verified [see Code Civ. Proc. § 446(a)]. However, the verification of a complaint against a public entity does preclude a general denial in superior court actions and in some limited civil cases [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)].

[5] Specification of Damages

In an action to recover damages for personal injury or wrongful death, the complaint must not state the amount of actual or punitive damages demanded for this cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)].

Otherwise, the amounts claimed as damages must be alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(b)] or an equivalent statement must be included, for example, a statement that the damages for a particular loss or harm sustained [see Civ. Code §§ 3281, 3282] are not known and that leave will be sought to amend the complaint to state the exact amount when ascertained. If this is done, counsel must remember to seek leave to amend the complaint to so state before judgment.

For discussion of and forms for requesting and stating the amount of damages sought when they are not stated in the complaint, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq., and Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 425.11, 425.115].

§ 102.52 Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10] for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] for Personal Injuries--Against Public Entity--By Minor Through Guardian ad Litem--Dangerous Condition of Property [Gov. Code § 835]--Fall From Pipeline Parelleling Bridge and Attractive to Children

[1] FORM Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10] for Damages [Civ. Code § 3333] for Personal Injuries--Against Public Entity--By Minor Through Guardian Ad Litem--Dangerous Condition of Property [Gov. Code § 835]--Fall From Pipeline Parelleling Bridge and Attractive to Children

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], a Minor, through _____ [name], [his or her] Guardian ad Litem, Plaintiff, vs. _____ [name], Defendant.	))))))	NO. _____ COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES [Amount demanded _____ (exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000] [LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

The plaintiff _____[name], a minor, through _____[name], [his or her] guardian ad litem, alleges:

1.On _____[date], _____[name of guardian ad litem] was duly and regularly appointed guardian ad litem of the plaintiff _____[name of minor], a minor _____ years of age, by order of the above-entitled court, and now is the qualified and acting guardian ad litem of said minor for purposes of this action.

[2. Capacity of defendant. See § 102.50, First Cause of Action, Paragraph 1.]

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if desired. See § 102.50, Second Cause of Action, Paragraph 3.]

[4. Claim against public entity. See § 102.50, First Cause of Action, Paragraph 2.]

5.At all times herein mentioned, the _____[name] Bridge was a public bridge located in _____[city], _____ County, California over and across certain depressed railroad tracks, and was a part of _____[name] Street, running in a general _____[specify direction] at that location.

6.At all times herein mentioned, the defendant city operated, maintained, and controlled the _____[name] Bridge.

7.At all times herein mentioned, the _____[name] Bridge provided the only means within a reasonable area for pedestrians, as well as motorists, to cross over the railroad tracks in carrying on their regular activities.

8.On _____[date of injury], and prior thereto, the _____[name] Bridge was in a dangerous condition, which created a substantial risk of injury when the bridge was used with due care in a manner in which it was reasonably foreseeable it would be used in that it had attached parallel to and as part of it an unguarded pipeline.

9.At all times herein mentioned, this pipeline was attractive and alluring to children of tender years as a means of crossing over the railroad tracks, as a place of play, and as an object of childish curiosity,

10.At all times herein mentioned, a large number of children of tender years had been attracted to the pipeline for these purposes, and the pipeline and bridge so maintained by the defendant in such dangerous condition constituted a nuisance, menace, and danger to children of tender years so attracted thereto against which immature judgment opposed no warning.

[11. Foreseeability of risk and actual or constructive notice. See § 102.50, First Cause of Action, Paragraph 6.]

12. On or about _____[date], at approximately _____[time], the plaintiff was a child of tender years to wit, _____[specify] years of age, and was attracted onto the pipeline and bridge.

13. As proximate result the dangerous condition of the bridge, including the pipeline so attached thereto, the plaintiff was caused to fall from the bridge and pipeline and for a distance of _____[specify] feet onto the railroad track below.

[14-16. General and special damages. See § 102.50, First Cause of Action, Paragraphs 10-12.]

[2] Use of Form

This form is for use as a complaint against a public entity for a child's injuries resulting from its fall from a pipeline paraleling a bridge. If a parent is the guardian ad litem of the minor, the minor's cause of action may include an allegation to recover medical expenses that have not been paid [Morningred v. Golden State Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 130, 138-139, 16 Cal. Rptr. 219 ; Mattox v. Isley (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 774, 779-780, 245 P.2d 664] . Some attorneys prefer to seek medical expenses in theminor's cause of action rather than include a separate cause of action by the parents. Recovery of the minor's medical expenses, whether sought in the minor's cause of action or a separate cause of action by the parents, will be barred by the contributory negligence of the parents [Randles v. Lowry (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 68, 73, 84 Cal. Rptr. 321] .

§ 103.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter discusses the rights and obligations of real estate brokers and salespersons in California. The primary focus of this chapter is on the real estate agent's rights and obligations in relation to the agent's clients and third parties. It also includes discussion and forms relating to recovery from the Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund.

The chapter contains the following forms:

- Complaints for the recovery of a commission, allegations for use in these complaints, and related affirmative defense allegations [see §§ 103.70 -103.84].

- A complaint by the broker for equitable indemnity against the seller or buyer [see § 103.85].

- Complaints for use in actions against brokers, along with related affirmative defense allegations [see §§ 103.90 -103.100].

- Applications, notices, and an order for use in seeking payments from the Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund [see §§ 103.105 -103.109].

§ 103.10 Governing Law

The primary statutory provisions governing the real estate profession are known as the Real Estate Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq.]. The Real Estate Commissioner has the authority to adopt regulations that are reasonably necessary to enforce the provisions of the Real Estate Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080]. These regulations are set forth in Title 10 of the California Code of Regulations, Section 2705 et seq. In addition, many of the statutory provisions have been extensively discussed and interpreted in decisions issued by the courts of this state. Collectively, these sources constitute the general regulatory scheme for the real estate industry in California.

As agents and fiduciaries, real estate brokers and salespersons are also subject to the general laws of agency, as defined and interpreted by case law. The relevant rules regarding agency as applied to the real estate profession are discussed throughout this chapter.

§ 103.11 Definitions

[1] Broker

A real estate broker is a person who, for compensation or in expectation of compensation, does or negotiates to do one or more of the following acts for another or others [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131(a)-(e)]:

- Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, solicits prospective sellers or purchasers of, solicits or obtains listings of, or negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property or a business opportunity.

- Leases or rents or offers to lease or rent, or places for rent, or solicits listings of places for rent, or solicits for prospective tenants, or negotiates the sale, purchase, or exchange of leases on real property, or on a business opportunity, or collects rents from real property, or improvements on real property, or from business opportunities [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.01 regarding exclusions for certain property management persons and functions].

- Assists or offers to assist in filing an application for the purchase or lease of, or in locating or entering on, lands owned by the state or federal government.

- Solicits borrowers or lenders for, or negotiates loans or collects payments or performs services for, borrowers or lenders or note owners in connection with loans secured directly or collaterally by liens on real property or on a business opportunity.

- Sells or offers to sell, buys or offers to buy, or exchanges or offers to exchange a real property sales contract, or a promissory note secured directly or collaterally by a lien on real property or on a business opportunity, and performs services for the holders of the foregoing.

A real estate broker is also defined to include the following:

- A person who engages as a principal in certain transactions involving real property sales contracts or promissory notes [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.1 for specific criteria].

- A person who engages in the business of charging advance fees to promote the sale or lease of real property or of a business opportunity or related loans [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.2 for specific criteria].

- A person who sells, solicits, or negotiates the purchase, sale, or exchange of certain securities [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.3 for specific criteria].

- A person who either acts for others, or as a principal, in the sale, solicitation or negotiation of the purchase, sale, or exchange of mineral, oil, or gas properties or related loans or leases on the foregoing [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10131.4, 10131.45 for specific criteria].

The terms "agent" and "broker" are used interchangeably in this chapter and in the opinions of the courts. The fiduciary duties and obligations of a broker and an agent working under the license of a broker are identical [see § 103.31[1] (fiduciary duties generally)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Potential Differences in Standard of Care Relating to Brokers and Agents. Determination of the standard of care applicable to a broker or agent is dependent upon an evaluation of the facts of the particular case. The standard of care is the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise, and is measured by the degree of knowledge through education, experience, and examination required to obtain a license [Civ. Code § 2079.2]. Because brokers typically have a greater breadth of professional experience and have passed additional educational requirements, it is likely in most cases that a higher standard of care may be applied to a broker. Accordingly, it is imperative in defending real estate professionals that counsel obtain a thorough understanding of the background and experience of the agent or broker he or she is representing. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[2] Finder Distinguished

A finder is a person whose employment is limited to bringing parties together so that they may negotiate their own contract. The distinction between a finder and a broker frequently turns on whether an intermediary has been invested with authority to participate in negotiations. One who simply finds and introduces two parties to a real estate transaction does not need to be licensed as a real estate broker; such an intermediary is protected by the finder's exception to the real estate licensing laws [Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8-9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65] . A finder can collect a commission for his or her services [Zappas v. King Williams Press, Inc. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 768, 772, 89 Cal. Rptr. 307] .

The distinction between a finder and a broker is also significant in determining whether the intermediary in a transaction stands in a confidential relationship to one of the parties to the transaction, thereby subjecting the intermediary to all of the fiduciary duties of a broker [see Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 668-670, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 (broker's argument that he was merely a "finder" was unsuccessful; as a broker he had a fiduciary duty to disclose his role as a buyer to the seller)].

[3] Factor Distinguished

A broker may be distinguished from a factor in that the latter is an agent who, in pursuit of an independent calling, is employed by another to sell property for him or her and is vested by the latter with the possession or control of the property or authorized to receive payment for the property from the purchaser [see Civ. Code § 2026 (defining factor)].

§ 103.12 Broker-Client Relationship

[1] Overview

[a] "Real Estate Agent" Defined

A real estate agent is a person who represents another, called the principal, in dealings with third persons, and includes a person who is licensed as a real estate broker and under whose license a listing is executed or an offer to purchase is obtained [Civ. Code §§ 2079.13(a), 2295].

[b] Applicability of Agency and Contract Law; Creation of Relationship

A real estate brokerage contract is a contract for employment of an agent. Hence, the broker-principal relationship is governed by both agency and contract law. The law of agency supplies terms regarding contingencies not addressed by the provisions of the contract [R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1599, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 ; see also Rhode v. Bartholomew (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 272, 278, 210 P.2d 768 (agency relationship between broker and client)].

The agreement between a broker and his or her client need not be in writing, except for purposes of a broker's right to recover a commission [see § 103.21[1] (statute of frauds)]. An oral agreement authorizing someone to act as an agent and find a buyer for the principal's property, and under which the agent receives confidential information respecting the property, is sufficient to create a fiduciary relationship between the parties [Gann v. Williams Brothers Realty, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1698, 1705, 283 Cal. Rptr. 128] . An agency relationship may also be implied from the circumstances and conduct of the parties [Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1579, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] .

The question of whether an agency relationship is created can be determinative of other rights and obligations. For example, if a person is acting as a broker in relationship to his or her client, he or she is subject to all of the fiduciary and other duties of a broker [see § 103.31 for discussion of duties of broker]. It is not uncommon for a broker to assert that he or she was merely acting as a finder, not a broker, and therefore was not subject to the fiduciary obligations of a broker [see § 103.11[2] for discussion of the distinction between a finder and a broker].

For further discussion and forms relating to agency relationships, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[2] Types of Agency Relationships

[a] "Listing Agent"; "Selling Agent"; "Dual Agent"

A "listing agent" is an agent who has obtained a listing of real property to act as an agent for compensation [Civ. Code § 2079.13(f)]. A "selling agent" is either a listing agent who acts alone, or an agent who acts in cooperation with a listing agent, and who sells or finds and obtains a buyer for the real property, or an agent who locates property for a buyer or who finds a buyer for a property for which no listing exists and presents an offer to purchase to the seller [Civ. Code § 2079.13(n)]. A "dual agent" is an agent acting as agent for both the seller and the buyer in a real property transaction [Civ. Code § 2079.13(d)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Confusion Over Types of Agents. Members of the public sometimes are confused by the terms "listing agent" and "selling agent." To avoid this confusion, the real estate community also uses the term "seller's agent" when referring to a listing agent, and the term "buyer's agent" when referring to a selling agent. The terms "seller's agent" and "buyer's agent" are also used in the agency disclosure form provided in Civ. Code § 2079.16 [see [3], below (agency disclosure requirements)]. By Linda Breen Pierce

[b] Subagency

The law is not entirely clear on when a cooperating broker who brings in a buyer and splits the commission with the listing agent is a subagent of the seller, or a subagent of the listing broker, or when he or she is merely a cooperating broker who may have a contractual right to recover his or her split of the commission from the listing agent. Whether an agent is a subagent of the seller is significant for two reasons. First, if the agent is a subagent of the seller, the agent has fiduciary duties to that seller [see § 103.31[1] (fiduciary duties generally)]. Second, an agent who is a subagent of the seller may have a right to recover his or her commission directly from the seller [see § 103.20[11] (cooperating broker's standing to sue)].

Some courts assume that a broker cooperating through a multiple listing service is automatically a subagent of either the seller or the listing agent [see, e.g., Derish v. San Mateo-Burlingame Bd. of Realtors (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 534, 539, 186 Cal. Rptr. 390] . Subagency is a question of fact [Hale v. Wolfsen (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 285, 290, 81 Cal. Rptr. 23] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Creation of Subagency. As discussed above, the question of whether a subagency is created is a question of fact and presumably would be based on the same criteria as the creation of any other agency relationship [see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent , for discussion of the creation of an agency relationship]. Any language in the listing agreement authorizing the listing agent to appoint subagents, and the rules of the multiple listing service to which the agents are subscribed (if any), are important factors to apply in making this determination. By Linda Breen Pierce

[c] Dual Agency

The general rule is that a broker may represent both parties to a contract with their full knowledge and consent [Wilson v. Lewis (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 802, 806, 165 Cal. Rptr. 396] . When a broker represents both parties, he or she is known as a dual agent. A broker's real estate license may be suspended or revoked if the broker acts for more than one party in a transaction without the knowledge or consent of all parties to the transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(d)].

The payment of compensation to an agent by the seller or buyer is not necessarily determinative of a particular agency relationship between an agent and the seller or buyer. Also, a listing agent and a selling agent may agree to share any compensation or commission paid, and the terms of any such agreement will not necessarily be determinative of a particular relationship [Civ. Code § 2079.19]. A determination of whether a broker is acting as a dual agent depends on the circumstances of the particular case [Bonaccorso v. Kaplan (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 63, 68, 32 Cal. Rptr. 69] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Non-Disclosure of Dual Agency Is Rare. Form purchase/sale contracts, including those published by the California Association of Realtors ("CAR"), are utilized in virtually every residential real estate transaction. All of these contracts have a section devoted to agency confirmation [see, e.g., CAR Form DLF-14, P 41 (revised 6/96)]. The broker or agent is typically not reluctant to identify himself or herself as a dual agent because of the financial reward. As a result, it is a rare case where there is an actionable claim that the broker or agent failed to adequately disclose a dual agency. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[3] Disclosure Regarding Agency Relationships

[a] Statutory Disclosure Form

Listing agents and selling agents must provide the seller and buyer in a real property transaction with a copy of the disclosure form set forth in Civ. Code § 2079.16 and, except as provided below, obtain a signed acknowledgment of receipt from the seller or buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.14]. The front of the statutory form sets forth disclosures regarding real estate agency relationships in general, and the back contains the full text of Civ. Code §§ 2079.13-2079.24 (excluding Section 2079.16).

The agents must comply with the following requirements, as applicable, when providing this disclosure form [Civ. Code § 2079.14]:

- The listing agent must provide the disclosure form to the seller prior to entering into the listing agreement.

- The selling agent must provide the disclosure form to the seller as soon as practicable prior to presenting the seller with an offer to purchase, unless the selling agent previously provided the seller with a copy of the disclosure form as a listing agent.

- When the selling agent does not deal on a face-to-face basis with the seller, (1) the disclosure form prepared by the selling agent may be furnished to the seller (and acknowledgment of receipt obtained for the selling agent from the seller) by the listing agent, or (2) the selling agent may deliver the disclosure form by certified mail addressed to the seller at his or her last known address, in which case no signed acknowledgment of receipt is required.

- The selling agent must provide the disclosure form to the buyer as soon as practicable prior to execution of the buyer's offer to purchase, except that if the offer to purchase is not prepared by the selling agent, the selling agent must present the disclosure form to the buyer not later than the next business day after the selling agent receives the offer to purchase from the buyer.

- In any circumstance in which the seller or buyer refuses to sign an acknowledgment of receipt of the agency disclosure form, the agent must set forth, sign, and date a written declaration of the facts of the refusal [Civ. Code § 2079.15].

[b] Confirmation of Agency Relationships

As soon as practicable, the selling agent must disclose to the buyer and seller whether the selling agent is acting in the real property transaction exclusively as the buyer's agent, exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller. Similarly, as soon as practicable, the listing agent must disclose to the seller whether the listing agent is acting in the real property transaction exclusively as the seller's agent, or as a dual agent representing both the buyer and seller. These relationships must be confirmed in the contract to purchase and sell real property or in a separate writing executed or acknowledged by the seller, the buyer, and the selling agent or listing agent, as applicable, prior to or coincident with execution of that contract by the buyer and the seller, respectively [Civ. Code § 2079.17(a), (b)]. A form for this confirmation of the agency relationships is provided in Civ. Code § 2079.17(c).

PRACTICE TIP:

Practical Ramifications Regarding Deficiencies in Agency Disclosure. Given the relative complexity of Civ. Code §§ 2079.14-2079.17, it is not uncommon for a broker or agent to make a technically inadequate disclosure of agency as a result of not following one of the many steps set forth in the statutes. However, few cases arise out of issues relating to technically improper agency disclosures in residential real estate transactions. Disclosure of agency relationships is generally made, as a practical matter, even if there is a violation of the statutes. Further, it is typically difficult to establish actionable damage as a result of a statutory violation. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.13 Brokerage Contracts

[1] Listing Agreements

The following types of listing agreements between a broker and seller are defined by statute [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)-(3)]:

(1) An "exclusive right to sell listing" is a listing whereby the owner grants to an agent, for a specified period of time, the exclusive right to sell or to find or obtain a buyer for the property. The agent is entitled to the agreed compensation if during that period of time (a) the property is sold, no matter who effected the sale, or (b) the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner. The exclusive right to sell listing may provide for compensation of the listing agent if the property is sold within a specified period after termination of the listing to anyone with whom the agent has had negotiations before that termination.

(2) An "exclusive agency listing" is the same as an "exclusive right to sell listing," except that the owner reserves the right to sell directly but not through any other agent and, in that event, without obligation to pay compensation to the agent.

(3) An "open listing" is a listing that grants no exclusive rights or priorities to the listing agent. A commission is payable to the agent only if the agent procures and presents to the owner an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on the terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner, (a) before the property is otherwise sold either through another agent or by the owner directly, and (b) before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked.

A contract that creates an exclusive agency to sell does not create an exclusive right to sell, prohibiting direct sale by the principal, unless the contract expressly confers this exclusive right on the agent or contains other language indicating that the parties intended to prohibit direct sale by the principal or to guarantee the agent a commission in the event of a sale [Pacific Scientific Co. v. Glassey (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 831, 836-837, 54 Cal. Rptr. 235] . The use of the words "exclusive agency" or "exclusive sale" is not conclusive on the issue of whether the contract is one for an exclusive agency to deal with certain property or one giving the exclusive right to sell, but, as in other cases involving interpretation, all of the circumstances must be considered together [Wilck v. Herbert (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 392, 412-413, 178 P.2d 25] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Form Listing Agreements Typically Provide for Exclusive Listing. The form documents currently used as listing agreements, including the forms published by the California Association of Realtors, provide for the exclusive right to sell the listed property and also include saving clauses preserving the right to a commission after expiration of the listing. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[2] Termination of Agency Relationship

[a] Revocation by Principal

Except in the case of an agency coupled with an interest, a principal has the power to revoke an agent's authority at any time before the agent has completed performance [Civ. Code § 2356(a)(1)]. A principal may, however, curtail this right of revocation by contracting not to revoke the authority for a definite time. If the principal does so contract, he or she still retains the power to terminate the agency, and the termination cannot be prevented by the agent. However, a revocation of authority within the designated period renders the principal liable for damages for the violation of a legal right of the agent, just as in the case of any other breach of contract [Elevator Operators etc. Union v. Newman (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 799, 807, 186 P.2d 1 ; see also Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 892, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (owner had right to change agents, but was liable to original broker for commission when property was sold by second broker during exclusive listing period of first broker)].

What constitutes an interest within the meaning of this exception has not been made particularly clear by the numerous and conflicting decisions dealing with the subject. However, an essential element of this irrevocable power must be a coexisting interest in the subject of the agency [Capital Nat. Bk. of Sacramento v. Stoll (1934) 220 Cal. 260, 264, 30 P.2d 411] . For example, it was held that an agency was coupled with an interest when the agency was to manage a hotel, and the agent had a 20-year lease of one floor, without rent [Lane Mortgage Co. v. Crenshaw (1928) 93 Cal. App. 411, 428-429, 269 P. 672] .

[b] Death or Incapacity of Principal

An agency will be terminated by the death or incapacity of the principal to contract, unless the agency is coupled with an interest [Civ. Code § 2356(a)(2), (3)].

In contrast to the termination of an agency by the principal's revocation, the termination of the agency by death of the principal generally does not render the principal's estate liable for breach of contract. Death is a fortuitous event beyond the control of the decedent and cannot be deemed to be a wrongful act. However, if the personal representative of the decedent's estate ratifies or affirms the brokerage contract, or if the estate receives benefits from the broker, the estate may still be liable for the broker's commission [Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 612, 616-620, 98 Cal. Rptr. 559] .

[c] Expiration of Brokerage Contract

If a definite time for the broker's agency is fixed in the employment agreement, his or her authority terminates on the lapse of the time [Civ. Code 2355(a); Preston v. Carnation Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 43, 46, 16 Cal. Rptr. 240] . The expiration date of a brokerage contract cannot be extended through an oral agreement [Miller v. Cortese (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659-660, 271 P.2d 87] .

However, notwithstanding the termination of the broker's authority to act as an agent on behalf of the principal, the broker may still recover a commission for a sale subsequently consummated with a prospect with whom the broker had negotiated during the listing period if the employment contract includes a "safety clause" [see § 103.20[9]] or if the principal waives the termination date [see § 103.20[8]].

PRACTICE TIP:

Safety Clause Protects Broker's Interests. As noted above, form listing agreement contracts, including the form currently published by the California Association of Realtors ("CAR"), include safety clauses that provide for the recovery of a commission if certain steps are taken after the expiration of the listing period. CAR Form A-14 (revised 1/96) provides in Paragraph 5(a)(2) for recovery of a commission "if within _____ calendar days after expiration of the Listing Period, or any extension, the Property is sold, conveyed, leased, or otherwise transferred to anyone with whom Broker or a cooperating broker has had negotiations, provided the Broker gives Seller, prior to or within five [or _____] days after expiration of the Listing Period or any extension, a written notice including the name(s) of the prospective purchaser(s)." Such a clause protects the broker or agent by assuring compensation for his or her work on the transaction. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.20 Broker's Action for Commission

[1] Broker's Right to Commission

It is well established that, in the absence of any specific agreement to the contrary, a broker employed to sell real or personal property has earned his or her commission when, within the life of his or her employment contract, or any extension of that term, the broker has done any of the following [Twogood v. Monnette (1923) 191 Cal. 103, 107, 215 P. 542 ; R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1599-1600, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] :

- Produced a person who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property on terms satisfactory to the seller, and has obtained a binding and valid contract for the sale on terms proposed by the seller.

- Brought the seller and buyer together and thus enabled them to enter into a contract of sale.

- Produced such a purchaser (ready, willing, and able to buy) who has verbally accepted the seller's terms and offered to enter into a written contract embodying those terms and binding on both parties.

In these instances, the broker's right to a commission accrues when the contract of sale is executed or when an opportunity to make this contract is given the seller. The broker becomes entitled to the commission even though the seller is unable or unwilling to complete the sale [Twogood v. Monnette (1923) 191 Cal. 103, 107, 215 P. 542 ; R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal App 4th 1589, 1599-1600, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] .

For forms of complaints for the recovery of a commission generally, see §§ 103.70 -103.79. For allegations for use in a complaint for the recovery of a commission for leasing a property, see § 103.77[1].

[2] Contract Provisions

As stated in [1], above, the broker earns his or her commission in the above instances in the absence of any specific agreement to the contrary. The parties to a listing agreement are entitled to make the broker's employment and his or her right to compensation depend on any lawful condition that they agree to insert in the agreement, and the listing agreement is strictly construed according to its terms [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 963, 969, 972 n. 8, 115 Cal. Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127] .

For example, the agreement may provide that no commission will be earned until the happening of a specific event or contingency or upon certain defined terms and conditions, such as consummation of the sale, or upon receipt of funds by the seller from an escrow [Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1305, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689] . For a form of an affirmative defense to a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on the fact that certain conditions were not met, see § 103.83[1].

The agreement may also provide that the broker will receive the full amount of the commission if the owner withdraws the property from the market [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 963, 969, 115 Cal. Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127] . If the seller unilaterally terminates the agency relationship with a broker and thereafter sells the property during the exclusive listing period through another broker, the seller will be liable to the first broker for the commission based on breach of the listing agreement [Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 892, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (agency agreement specifically provided that broker would be compensated if the property was sold during the listing period, irrespective of agency relationships)].

When the listing agreement is prepared by a broker, any uncertainty in its provisions relating to the commission will be construed in favor of the seller [Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 891, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1] .

When the only agreement to pay a broker a commission is contained in the contract between his or her principal and the customer, the broker's right to compensation is dependent on performance of that contract. If the sale is not consummated, the commission does not become due [City of Turlock v. Paul M. Zagaris, Inc. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 189, 193, 256 Cal. Rptr. 902] .

[3] Ready, Willing, and Able Buyer

The readiness and willingness of a person to purchase the subject property can be shown only by an offer on his or her part to purchase. Unless the prospective buyer has actually entered into a contract binding him or her to a purchase, or has offered to the seller, and not merely the broker, to enter into such a contract, he or she cannot be considered a ready and willing buyer. To entitle the broker to a commission, the prospective buyer must be willing to purchase on the terms prescribed in the broker's employment contract. The offer to purchase on those terms must be unconditional [Martin v. Culver Enterprises, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 925, 929, 49 Cal. Rptr. 149] .

A purchaser is "able" when he or she has the legal capacity and the financial ability to purchase the property. "Financial ability" means that the purchaser has sufficient resources available to him or her to consummate the transaction when the time comes for him or her to do so. Although the purchaser is not required to have the ready cash at the time he or she makes the offer, the purchaser must have sufficient property, credit, or other assets at that time that will reasonably enable him or her to obtain the requisite funds at the prescribed time [Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1307, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689] .

When a seller enters into a valid unconditional contract of sale with a purchaser procured by a broker, the purchaser's acceptability is conclusively presumed because the seller is estopped to deny the qualifications of a purchaser with whom he or she is willing to contract [Edwards v. Billow (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 350, 359-360, 188 P.2d 748] . In contrast, when the contract is conditional, the broker's commission is not earned if the condition is not performed or is waived [Kopf v. Milam (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 600, 605, 35 Cal. Rptr. 614, 387 P.2d 390 ; see Keystone Mortgage Co. v. MacDonald (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 808, 812-816, 62 Cal. Rptr. 562 (broker did not earn commission prior to fulfillment of loan contingency in sales agreement executed by seller)]. Once any conditions in the contract have been met, the broker's commission is due. It makes no difference if the transaction is not thereafter consummated [Weber v. Ross (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 77, 80-81, 323 P.2d 465] .

[4] Broker as Procuring Cause

In the absence of a special contract, such as one giving the broker the exclusive right to sell the subject property, the broker must show not only that he or she has produced a purchaser who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the subject property, but also that he or she was the efficient agent or procuring cause of the sale. The procuring cause is the originating cause that ultimately leads to the conclusion of the transaction. However, the broker need not be the first one to bring to the attention of the purchaser the fact that the property in question was for sale [Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 319, 322-323, 317 P.2d 1027] .

To establish that a broker is the procuring cause, it must affirmatively appear that the purchaser, as the result of the broker's efforts, was induced to buy the property, or that a prospective purchaser was ready, able, and willing to buy on the terms and at the price specified by the owner [Duffy v. Campbell (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 662, 667, 58 Cal. Rptr. 653] . It is not enough that the broker contributes indirectly or incidentally to the sale by imparting information that tends to arouse interest. The broker must set in motion a chain of events that, without a break in the continuity of the events, causes the buyer and seller to come to terms as a proximate result of the broker's peculiar activities [Sessions v. Pacific Improvement Co. (1922) 57 Cal. App. 1, 17, 206 P. 653] .

Whether or not the sale is primarily the result of the broker's efforts is a question of fact [Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 829, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 (disapproved on other grounds in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 n. 5, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Broker Disputes Resolved By Local Association of Realtors. If there is a dispute as to which cooperating broker is the procuring cause of the sale, and all interested brokers are members of, and therefore subject to the rules of, the local association of realtors, this issue would normally be submitted to a committee of the local association of realtors for resolution by arbitration proceedings. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Local Rules Regarding Procuring Cause. As noted in the Practice Tip above, procuring cause issues are often resolved through arbitrations before local associations. It is not uncommon for the local associations to have rules addressing the issue of procuring cause, which obviously should be reviewed in representing a party to such an arbitration. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[5] License Requirements

It is unlawful for any person to engage in the business of, act in the capacity of, or advertise or assume to act as a real estate broker or a real estate salesperson without first obtaining a real estate license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10130]. Any person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a real estate broker or a real estate salesperson must allege and prove that he or she was a duly licensed real estate broker or real estate salesperson at the time any alleged cause of action arose as a condition to bringing or maintaining an action in the courts of California for the collection of compensation for the performance of any of the acts for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136].

Thus, an agreement employing a person to act as a real estate broker who is not licensed as such is illegal, void, and unenforceable [Fellom v. Adams (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 855, 862, 79 Cal. Rptr. 633] .

Furthermore, it is unlawful for a real estate broker or salesperson to split a commission with, or make other payments for services for which a real estate license is required to, any person who is not known to be or who does not present evidence to the broker or salesperson that he or she is licensed at the time the compensation is earned. Likewise, it is unlawful for an unlicensed person to receive payment for or perform these services [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10137-10138; Richardson v. Roberts (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 603, 606, 26 Cal. Rptr. 829] . Therefore, if a broker's performance includes services of an unlicensed person performing acts for which a real estate license is required, the broker cannot recover a commission from the seller unless he or she was justifiably ignorant of the unlicensed person's unlawful acts [Preach v. Monter Rainbow (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1454-1458, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320] .

For a form of an affirmative defense to a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on the absence of a broker's license, see § 103.81[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Broker/Agent Must Be Licensed Only at Time Right to Recover Commission Arose. In order to recover a commission, a real estate broker or agent must prove that he or she was a duly licensed real estate broker or real estate salesperson "at the time the alleged cause of action arose" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136 (emphasis added)]. This requirement does not mean that the real estate broker or agent must be licensed throughout the entire transaction. A license is required at the time that the "alleged cause of action arose" for a commission [see Estate of Lopez [1992] 8 Cal App. 4th 317, 321-324, 10 Cal Rptr. 2d 67 (broker was awarded a commission because his license was active at the time the sale was completed, even though it had lapsed when the sale was arranged and confirmed in probate)]. By Jeffrey S. Martin

PRACTICE TIP: Use of Unlicensed Assistance. Many real estate brokers and agents employ non-licensed individuals to assist them in their day-to-day work. These assistants can engage in many activities for or on behalf of the broker or agent that do not require a license. An unlicensed assistant engaged in activities that require a license can result in liability exposure for the licensed broker or agent. Brokers and agents, as well as their counsel, must be aware of the limits placed on unlicensed assistants. The California Department of Real Estate has set forth guidelines with respect to the use of unlicensed assistants. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[6] Principal's Bad Faith or Fraud

The seller owes a duty to the broker not to act arbitrarily or in bad faith to prevent consummation of a transaction when the broker has found a prospective buyer who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property, and the prospective buyer and prospective seller have agreed on the terms and conditions of the sale. If the sale is not consummated because the seller, acting arbitrarily or in bad faith, prevents consummation, the broker is entitled to the commission even though his or her contract provides that payment is to be made out of the proceeds of the sale [Stromer v. Browning (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 421, 424-425, 55 Cal. Rptr. 18, 420 P.2d 730] . This rule appears to be grounded on the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and applies equally to a broker's employment agreement with a buyer [R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1601, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425] or a lessor [Colwell Co. v. Hubert (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 567, 576, 56 Cal. Rptr. 753] .

An example of a seller's breach of the implied covenant of good faith occurred when the seller's counteroffer, which included a promise to pay a commission, lapsed and the seller and buyer thereafter independently reached an agreement on essentially the same terms, except for eliminating the payment to the broker [Torelli v. J.P. Enterprises, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1254-1257, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76] .

Similarly, if the sale is not consummated as a result of the principal's fraudulent conduct, the broker is nevertheless entitled to the commission. Fraud, however, is never presumed and must be established by clear proof. In such a situation there is a presumption of fair dealing that approximates in strength that of innocence in the criminal law [Sanstrum v. Gonser (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 732, 742, 295 P.2d 532] .

For allegations for use in a complaint for recovery of a commission based on the seller's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see § 103.78[1].

[7] Seller Renders Broker's Performance Impossible

A seller becomes liable for the broker's commission if the seller renders the broker's performance impossible. This is so even if the broker had not yet performed by procuring a purchaser during the listing period or could not show he or she was the procuring cause of the sale [Howard Gitlen & Associates, Inc. v. Ameri (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 90, 96, 256 Cal. Rptr. 36 ; see Gribin Von Dyl & Associates, Inc. v. Kovalsky (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 653, 656, 230 Cal. Rptr. 50 (seller of condominium units violated the implied covenant of good faith and prevented the broker's performance by raising the sales prices to an unreasonable level and failing to install billboards as required under the agreement with the broker)].

However, a breach of the employment agreement by an owner will not necessarily render the broker's performance impossible, and in that case, the broker may not be entitled to recover a commission [Metzenbaum v. R.O.S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 202, 210-213, 232 Cal. Rptr. 741 (owner's agreement with a second mortgage broker within the last few days of the original broker's listing was not the proximate cause of the broker's failure to perform when the original broker was unaware of the agreement with the second broker and it was evident that the original broker was unable to obtain an acceptable loan from the only lender with whom he was negotiating); see also Never v. King (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 461, 81 Cal. Rptr. 161 (similar facts and ruling)].

For allegations for use in a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on the seller rendering the broker's performance impossible, see § 103.79[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Distinction Between Real Estate Brokers and Mortgage Loan Brokers on Proximate Cause Issues. The burden of a mortgage loan broker to prove that he or she could have performed but for the owner's breach [see discussion of Metzenbaum v. R.O.S. Associates (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 202, 232 Cal. Rptr. 741 , above], may not be as difficult to surmount for a real estate broker. For example, if a real estate broker lists the property on a multiple listing service, inviting the cooperation of many other brokers, it is plausible that any one of the cooperating brokers could bring in a buyer at any time within the listing period. This situation can be distinguished from the typical situation for a mortgage loan broker, who does not rely on other mortgage loan brokers to provide a lender for his or her clients. By Linda Breen Pierce

[8] Seller's Waiver of Expiration Date of Contract

The time limit in a written contract of employment will be considered as waived and the broker will be entitled to a commission if the following occur: (1) after the time limit provided in the contract expires, the owner urges and encourages the broker to continue his or her efforts to find a purchaser for the property; (2) the broker continues with the knowledge, approval, and encouragement of the owner; and (3) the owner sells the property to a purchaser who is produced as a result of the broker's efforts [Kraemer v. Smith (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 52, 55, 3 Cal. Rptr. 471 ; see Hughes v. Morrison (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 103, 105-106, 206 Cal. Rptr. 321 (broker entitled to commission for repurchase by original buyer after foreclosure action)]. However, the waiver lasts no longer than the time during which the owner encourages the broker to render his or her services and the broker diligently complies with the owner's request [Augustine v. Trucco (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 229, 239, 268 P.2d 780] .

For allegations for use in a complaint for recovery of a commission based on the seller's waiver of the expiration date in a brokerage contract, see § 103.76[1].

[9] Safety Clause

[a] Effect; Subagents

When a broker shows property during the listing period to a prospective purchaser, and there is afterwards a sale to that prospect, the broker may be entitled to a commission even though he or she was not the procuring cause of the sale, if the listing agreement so provides [Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 649, 652, 335 P.2d 665] .

Often a listing agreement will provide that the broker may recover under a safety clause if the broker or "any subagent or cooperating broker" had negotiations with the eventual purchaser during the listing period. However, a selling agent who negotiated with the eventual purchaser during the listing period will not necessarily be deemed to be a subagent or cooperating broker of the listing agent [see Simank Realty, Inc. v. DeMarco (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 610, 617, 86 Cal. Rptr. 212 (the selling agent was not a subagent of the listing broker merely because he was another broker in the same community, when there were no dealings between the listing agent and the selling agent or the listing agent and the buyer)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Effect of MLS Listing on Status of Subagent. The opinion in Simank Realty, Inc. v. DeMarco (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 610, 617, 86 Cal. Rptr. 212 (discussed above) did not mention whether the listing was included in the MLS (Multiple Listing Service). If a listing is included in the MLS and the MLS rules provide that a cooperating broker becomes a subagent, it could be argued that an agent negotiating with a buyer during the listing period is a subagent of the listing broker. In one case the court held that an MLS "is a cooperative arrangement by real estate brokers through local boards for the pooling of listings--the sharing of information about properties for sale so that all subscribers to the service may have an opportunity to act as subagents in procuring a buyer" [Derish v. San Mateo-Burlingame Bd. of Realtors (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 534, 538, 186 Cal. Rptr. 390 (emphasis added)]. However, the question of whether a subagency is created is a question of fact and must be determined on a case-by-case basis [see § 103.12[2][b] (subagency)]. By Linda Breen Pierce

[b] Negotiated Agreement; List of Names

For these purposes, the term "negotiated" has been defined to mean "to communicate or confer with another so as to arrive at the settlement of some matter: meet with another so as to arrive through discussion at some kind of agreement or compromise about something." The fact that the agreement negotiated varies from the stated intention of the seller in the listing agreement will not deprive a broker of a commission under a safety clause [Al Herd, Inc. v. Isaac (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 749, 752, 76 Cal. Rptr. 697 (broker could recover when lease was negotiated, notwithstanding the fact that the listing agreement contemplated a sale)].

If the listing agreement requires the broker to provide the seller with a list of the names of the parties with whom the broker has negotiated by a certain deadline, that condition will be deemed satisfied as to a buyer for whom the listing broker presents an offer to the seller during the listing period. An additional or separate notice is not required [Al Herd, Inc. v. Isaac (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 749, 752, 76 Cal. Rptr. 697] .

For allegations for use in a complaint for recovery of a commission based on a safety clause provision, see § 103.75[1].

[10] Broker's Action Against Buyer

[a] Implied Promise to Complete Transaction

When a buyer retains or solicits the broker to find or show him or her property, the broker finds property satisfactory to the buyer that the owner agrees to sell at the price offered, and the buyer knows that the broker will earn a commission from the owner on the consummation of the transaction, a promise is implied on the part of the buyer to complete the transaction with the owner. If the buyer fails or refuses to purchase the property without a valid reason, the buyer becomes liable to the broker for a breach of this implied promise. The broker's damages are measured by the amount of the commission he or she would have earned if the buyer had performed [Chan v. Tsang (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1586-1587, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 14] .

[b] Third Party Beneficiary Theory

Alternatively, the broker can recover a commission from the defaulting buyer on a third party beneficiary theory. A contract made expressly for the benefit of a third party is enforceable by that party at any time before the parties rescind it [Civ. Code § 1559]. For example, an agreement between a seller and buyer for the purchase of real property that expressly provides for payment of a commission to a broker makes the broker a third party beneficiary [Donnellan v. Rocks (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 925, 930, 99 Cal. Rptr. 692] .

In order for a broker to be a third party beneficiary under Civ. Code § 1559, it is not necessary that the broker be specifically named as a beneficiary, but only that the contract be made expressly for the benefit of that third person. In this context, "expressly" means in an express manner, in direct or unmistakable terms, explicitly, definitely, or directly [Watson v. Aced (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 87, 91-92, 319 P.2d 83] .

[c] Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

When a commission is conditioned on completion of a purchase transaction, the broker's principal cannot refuse to perform under the purchase contract and thereby obtain an economic advantage unfairly derived from the broker's services. To do so violates the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and excuses the nonoccurrence of the condition [R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1593, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 (buyer liable to broker for transferring right to buy to third party who bought property without paying commission)].

[11] Cooperating Broker's Standing to Sue

A cooperating broker may have standing to sue a seller for an unpaid commission. In one case, a cooperating broker had standing to sue when the seller refused to sell on the terms of the listing agreement. The listing agreement provided that the owner authorized the listing agent to cooperate with other brokers and to divide any commission due under the agreement with them. These provisions created an implied promise to the cooperating broker to pay the commission because the owner knew of the listing broker's representation and the reliance by the cooperating broker [Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1312-1313, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689] . In addition, the court held that liability also could be based on a third-party beneficiary theory because cooperating brokers were members of a class that was intended to be directly benefited by the seller's promise to pay a commission [Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1313, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689] .

However, a cooperating broker could not bring an action against the seller in a case in which (1) the listing agreement authorized the broker to cooperate with subagents, but did not specifically refer to dividing the commission with cooperating brokers; (2) there was no written agreement between the listing broker and the cooperating broker; and (3) the commission was paid in full through escrow. In such a case, the question of whether the cooperating broker was the procuring cause of the sale is not decisive. His or her recovery from the listing broker is limited to the terms of the cooperation agreement. Whether the broker has a direct cause of action against the owner depends on whether the owner was aware of, or expressly authorized, the cooperation agreement between the listing broker and the cooperating broker, whether the seller accepted the buyer's offer by executing a contract of sale, and whether the sale to the buyer was consummated [Colbough v. Hartline (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1516, 1523-1524, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 213] .

§ 103.21 Defenses to Broker's Action for Commission

[1] Statute of Frauds

[a] Basic Requirement; Applicability to Broker's Services

An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate, or to lease real estate for a longer period than one year, or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate or a lessee or lessor of real estate when the lease is for a longer period than one year, for compensation or a commission is invalid unless the agreement itself, or some note or memorandum thereof, is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by his or her agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)].

In determining the nature of the services that will bring an employment contract within Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4), the phrase "to sell or purchase" includes "to aid or assist in the purchase or sale" of real estate. This broad construction of the term conforms with one of the primary purposes of the statute, which is the protection of real estate owners from the assertion of false claims by brokers and agents. For example, a contract employing a broker to obtain an option for the purchase of real property comes within the statute because an option is viewed as aiding or assisting in the purchase of real estate [Pac. etc. Dev. Corp. v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 62, 67-68, 301 P.2d 825] .

On the other hand, a licensed broker may be able under appropriate circumstances to recover under an oral agreement or in quantum meruit for certain services other than the purchase, sale, or leasing of real property [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1255, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 ; see Owen v. National Container Corp. of Cal. (1952) 115 Cal. App. 2d 21, 25-26, 251 P.2d 765 (a broker's special services consisting of obtaining surveys, furnishing plans, specifications, and estimates, and negotiating for the construction of a building could be the subject of a valid oral agreement); see also Carey v. Cusack (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 57, 67-69, 54 Cal. Rptr. 244 (broker could recover in quantum meruit for services rendered in subdividing property)].

When a broker's only agreement with his or her principal relates solely to specifically described property, the principal is not liable to the broker for a commission on the purchase of different property unless the broker's written employment agreement covers the other property [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1259, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] .

For a form of an affirmative defense to a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on the statute of frauds, see § 103.80[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Recovery of Commission Without a Writing. Under certain circumstances, a broker or agent may collect a commission without a written agreement [Torelli v. J.P. Enterprises, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76] . In Torelli, the plaintiff, who previously listed a residential income property owned by the defendant, located a potential buyer for the property. Plaintiff prepared an offer, which included a commission for plaintiff. Defendant seller received the offer and responded with a counter-offer that included the same commission arrangement. The counter-offer was not accepted. Shortly thereafter, the buyers' broker drafted a new offer that was identical to the previous offer except that it did not include the original commission split. The second offer was accepted. Plaintiff broker sued for the commission.

The Torelli court held that even though there was no written commission agreement, the seller's promise to pay a commission did not terminate with the expiration of the original counter-offer. The court found that the seller was bound by an implied promise not to deprive the plaintiff-broker of the benefits of the bargain to pay the commission. The Torelli court relied heavily on principles of equity, in essence holding that a broker could not be cheated out of his or her commission by the simple artifice of entering into direct negotiations and making substantially the same bargain, albeit without the commission [Torelli v. J.P. Enterprises, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1256-1257, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76] .

Regardless of the outcome of the Torelli decision, it is better practice to obtain a written commission agreement so that the broker or agent does not have to rely on the generosity of the courts. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[b] Sufficiency of Writing

The essential requirements of Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4) are that there be some written evidence of (1) subscription by the party to be charged, and (2) the fact of employment, in other words, the authority to act [Friddle v. Epstein (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1649, 1655, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85] . The writing need not include all of the terms of the contract between the broker and principal. When the above two requirements are met, the other terms, including the amount of commission, and even the agreement to pay the commission, may be shown by parol [Rader Co. v. Stone (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 10, 21, 223 Cal. Rptr. 806] . Also, if there is reference to the employment, the agreement to compensate is permissibly inferred; conversely, when there is reference to a commission, the broker's authority to act may be inferred [Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 567, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170] .

With regard to the subscription requirement of the statute of frauds, if one of a series of papers that appear to have some relation to the same matter is signed by the party to be charged, this is enough, as all the papers are to be considered together as forming one contract or memorandum. Further, subscription does not require that the signature appear at the end of the instrument, nor that it be handwritten. The name of the party will satisfy the statutory requirement if it is intended as a signature, that is, as an authentication, but not if it appears for some other purpose, as for mere identification [Rader Co. v. Stone (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 10, 23, 223 Cal. Rptr. 806] .

In addition to showing the requisite authority to act, the writing must describe the property with sufficient certainty to identify it [Woodbridge Realty v. Plymouth Dev. Corp. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 270, 274, 278 P.2d 713] . Much greater liberality is allowed in construing and curing defective descriptions in brokers' contracts than in a deed of grant of land, for, so far as the statute of frauds is concerned, the terms of the employment are the essential part. These contracts will not be declared void merely because of a defect, uncertainty, or ambiguity in the description of the property to be sold or exchanged when the defect can be cured by the allegation or proof of extrinsic facts and circumstances [Russell v. Ramm (1927) 200 Cal. 348, 370, 254 P. 532 ; Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

[c] Exceptions

[i] Performance With Consent

If the broker completes his or her part of a contract with the consent of the seller after the employment contract has expired, his or her performance will take the contract out of the statute of frauds [Love v. Gulyas (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 608, 619, 197 P.2d 405 ; see also § 103.20[8] (seller's waiver of expiration date)].

[ii] Equitable Estoppel

A licensed broker cannot rely on the doctrine of equitable estoppel to recover a commission based on an oral agreement unless there is a showing of actual fraud by the party to be charged under the invalid oral agreement. The licensed broker is presumed to know that contracts for real estate commissions are invalid and unenforceable unless put in writing and subscribed by the person to be charged. Stated another way, the broker's reliance on the oral contract is not reasonable in light of the broker's presumed knowledge of the requirements of the statute of frauds. To give rise to equitable estoppel, the promisee's reliance must be reasonable [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1259-1264, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] .

However, this restriction against the defense of equitable estoppel does not apply to the finder, who is not required to be licensed. Even though an agreement for a finder's fee is subject to the statute of frauds requirement, the doctrine of estoppel to plead the statute of frauds may be applied in a finder's fee arrangement when necessary to prevent either unconscionable injury or unjust enrichment [Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 25-28, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212] .

[iii] Actual Fraud

The statute of frauds does not preclude an action for actual fraud. To recover for actual fraud, the broker must show that he or she reasonably relied on misrepresentations. A broker cannot reasonably rely on an oral promise to pay a commission or an oral promise to later execute a writing. However, a broker might reasonably rely on a representation that the necessary contract had actually been executed [Phillippe v. Shapell Industries (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 1269-1270, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279] .

[2] Breach of Broker's Fiduciary Duty

A common defense to an action for a broker's commission is a breach of the broker's fiduciary duty to his or her principal [see § 103.31[1] -[7] (discussion of various fiduciary duties)]. However, not all breaches of a fiduciary duty will deprive the broker of a commission. For example, when a broker failed to disclose to the seller-client that he was lending his commission to the buyer as part of the down payment, the court reversed the trial court's ruling depriving the broker of his commission. The court held that while the failure to disclose was a breach of the broker's fiduciary duty to disclose a material fact, it appeared to have been inadvertent and there was no attempt made by the broker to conceal the prospective loan [Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 417, 423, 425, 210 Cal. Rptr. 428] .

For a form of an affirmative defense to a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on a breach of the broker's fiduciary duty, see § 103.84[1].

[3] No Termination Date in Contract

An exclusive employment agreement for compensation must contain a definite, specified date of final and complete termination [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f); see also Nystrom v. First Nat. Bank of Fresno (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 759, 764-766, 146 Cal. Rptr. 711] . However, an employment contract that fails to comply with this requirement may still permit a broker to recover a commission for property sold prior to the owner's rescission, but not for damages for an anticipatory breach. This exception is based on the theory that to deny the broker a commission would result in unjust enrichment to the principal [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

[4] Failure to Disclose Dual Agency

A real estate agent must refrain from dual representation in a sale transaction unless he or she obtains the consent of both principals after full disclosure [see § 103.12[2][c] (dual agency)]. In the context of residential real estate transactions, this disclosure must be in writing [Civ. Code § 2079.17; see also Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1363, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633] . Unless both principals know of the dual agency at the time of the transaction, the agent cannot recover a commission from either [L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 304-305, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680] .

For a form of an affirmative defense allegation to a complaint for the recovery of a commission based on the broker's failure to disclose a dual agency, see § 103.82[1].

§ 103.22 Intentional Interference With Broker's Contract

The following are the elements that a plaintiff must plead to state a cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations [Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1126, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587] :

- A valid contract between plaintiff and a third party.
- Defendant's knowledge of this contract.
- Defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship.
- Actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship.
- Resulting damage.

PRACTICE TIP:

Relief Against Competing Broker/Agent. Claims for intentional interference with contract and interference with prospective economic advantage [see § 103.23] may be brought against a third party broker or agent who has conducted himself or herself in such a manner as to damage a relationship between the broker/agent and his or her principal or potential principal. *By Jeffrey S. § 103.23 Interference With Broker's Prospective Economic Advantage

In a real estate brokerage context, the elements of a cause of action for interference with prospective economic relations are as follows [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 389-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] :

- An economic relationship between a broker and a seller or a broker and a buyer containing the probability of future economic benefit to the broker.
- Knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship.
- Intentional wrongful acts or conduct on the part of the defendant designed to interfere with or disrupt the relationship.
- Actual disruption of the relationship.
- Damages to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant.

In addition, the plaintiff must allege that the defendant's conduct was "wrongful by some measure beyond the fact of the interference itself" [Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] . In this context, "an act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful, that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard" [Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1153-1154, 1164-1165, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 ("act of interference with prospective §§ 564.130-565.137, 565.290-565.294 Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc.

(1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 389-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 392-393, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740] Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1134, 1153-1154, 1164-1165, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 63 P.3d 937 economic advantage is not tortious in and of itself" but requires "pleading that a defendant has engaged in an act that was independently wrongful" in order to distinguish "lawful competitive behavior from tortious interference")]. One case held that a broker could assert a claim against another broker for intentional interference with economic advantage based on alleged violations of the Rules of Professional Conduct of the American Industrial Real Estate Association [Stevenson Real Estate Services, Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Services, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235] . The court concluded that in an action between competitors who are bound by well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association, or profession, those rules may constitute "a determinable legal standard" within the scope of Korea Supply [Stevenson Real Estate Services, Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Services, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235] .

Liability for interference with prospective advantage has evolved as a broader application of the principles underlying the tort of interference with contract. This "more inclusive" tort protects the expectation of an advantageous business relation even in the absence of an existing, legally binding agreement [Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 822-823,122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 (disapproved on other grounds in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740)]. The two causes of action are similar in many other respects, although the law recognizes a wider range of justification for intrusion into relations that are merely prospective [Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1118, 1126, 270 Cal. Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587] .

This cause of action is often alleged when a prospective purchaser negotiates directly with a seller, even though the purchaser is aware of an oral agreement between the seller and the broker to pay the broker a commission. The fact that the oral agreement may be in violation of the statute of frauds is not decisive. The mere fact that a prospective economic relationship has not attained the dignity of a legally enforceable agreement does not permit third parties to interfere with performance. The cases are clear that a prospective purchaser may not induce a seller bound under an oral agreement to breach that agreement and sell to him or her at a price that necessarily excludes the broker [Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 (disapproved on other grounds in Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 n.5, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436, 902 P.2d 740)].

§ 103.30 Regulatory Duties

[1] Regulatory Statutes and General Law of Agency

Real estate brokers are subject to two sets of duties: those imposed by regulatory statutes [see § 103.10 (governing law)], and those arising from the general law of agency [Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 755, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734] . Many wrongful acts of a broker can, and often do, constitute both a breach of duty under agency law [see §§ 103.31 (liability to seller and buyer), 103.33 (liability to third parties)] and a violation of a statutory duty. References to statutory duties affecting brokers are included throughout this Part II(C) where applicable.

The general body of statutes and administrative regulations that pertain to real estate brokers and salespersons are set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq. ("Real Estate Law") and 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2700 et seq. For a general discussion and forms relating to procedures to challenge the denial, suspension, or revocation of a license, see Ch. 471B, Licensing By Public Agencies .

[2] Collateral Estoppel Effect of Administrative Ruling

If the Real Estate Commissioner suspends or revokes the license of a broker or salesperson based on the finding of a wrongful act, that ruling may, in certain circumstances, be used to prove the wrongful act in a subsequent civil proceeding between the licensee and another party. For example, in one case, a salesperson's real estate license was revoked based on his fraudulent act as a buyer-agent. The seller later sued the agent and relied on the determination of fraud in the earlier administrative proceeding to prove fraud in the seller's case for damages. The court held that the use of collateral estoppel turns on whether the administrative agency acted in a judicial capacity and resolved disputed issues of fact that the parties had an adequate opportunity to litigate. In this instance, the court concluded that it was proper to use the earlier administrative determination of fraud in the subsequent action by the sellers [Imen v.

Glassford (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 898, 906-908, 247 Cal. Rptr. 514] .

§ 103.31 Liability of Brokers to Seller and Buyer

[1] Fiduciary Duties Generally

An agent is a fiduciary [Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1579, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] . The law imposes on a real estate agent the same obligation of undivided service and loyalty to the client that it imposes on a trustee in favor of the beneficiary [Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 222-223, 169 P.2d 371] . These duties include the duties of trustees set forth in Prob. Code §§ 16002 (duty of loyalty), 16004 (duty to avoid conflict of interest), 16005 (duty not to undertake adverse trust), and 16009 (duty to keep trust property separate and identified) [see Civ. Code § 2322(c)].

Among others, the broker has the duty to do the following [Loughlin v. Idora Realty Co. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 619, 629, 66 Cal. Rptr. 747 ; see also Twomey v. Mitchum, Jones & Templeton, Inc. (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 690, 709, 69 Cal. Rptr. 222 (stockbrokers)]:

- Treat the principal's affairs with the same standard of care as that of a trustee, which has a duty to administer the trust solely in the interest of the beneficiary [Prob. Code § 16002(a)].

- Make to the principal the fullest disclosure of all material facts concerning the transaction that might affect the principal's decision.

- Disclose to the principal all offers to buy the property in addition to the offer accepted.

- Refrain from dual representation in a sale transaction without full disclosure to both principals and their knowledge and consent.

A real estate agent has a fiduciary duty of utmost care, integrity, honesty, and loyalty in dealings with the client [see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form)]. This relationship not only imposes on the agent the duty of acting in the highest good towards the principal but also precludes the agent from obtaining any advantage over the principal by virtue of the agency [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] .

The fiduciary duties of a real estate agent apply equally to a mortgage loan broker [Wyatt v. Union Mortgage Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 773, 783-784, 157 Cal. Rptr. 392, 598 P.2d 45] and to a cooperating broker who is a subagent of the primary broker [Kruse v. Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 660, 300 P.2d 855] .

As discussed in § 103.12[1] (broker-client relationship), an agency relationship can be created by an oral agreement. Although the statute of frauds is applicable to the collection of compensation or commission by the agent or broker [see § 103.21[1] (statute of frauds)], it does not apply to a cause of action to recover commissions or secret profits from a fiduciary [Gann v. Williams Brothers Realty, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1698, 1705-1706, 283 Cal. Rptr. 128] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Agent's Relationship to Buyer or Seller Who Is Not a Client. When an agent represents a seller or a buyer, but not both parties, the agent's fiduciary duties extend to the client only and not to the other party. However, this is gradually becoming a distinction without much of a difference, as the trend is for the courts and the legislature to impose similar duties on the agent with respect to all parties in a transaction without regard to agency relationships. For example, the duty of honest and fair dealing and good faith [see [7], below], the duty to exercise reasonable care [see [2], below], and the duty to disclose material facts affecting the desirability of the property [see [4], below] are all duties that each agent has to both seller and buyer without regard to whether the seller or buyer is that agent's client. Additionally, the language used by the courts does not always make clear distinctions between the fiduciary duties owed by a broker to the client and the non-fiduciary duties owed to a prospective purchaser or other parties to a transaction. Finally, there is not a clear, linear distinction between one duty and another. For example, a broker's failure to investigate and disclose a material fact that could affect a buyer's decision to buy the property conceivably could be simultaneously a breach of the broker's duty to disclose, a breach of the broker's duty of honesty, fair dealing, and good faith, and a breach of the broker's duty to exercise reasonable care in the performance of his or her duties. Depending on whether this broker represents the seller or the buyer (or both), this breach could be a breach of a fiduciary duty to the client or a breach of a non-fiduciary duty to the prospective purchaser. Counsel should be mindful that the law is not particularly linear in this area and that the trend is to impose greater duties and liabilities on the broker with respect to all parties in the transaction and to third parties as well. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Existence of Fiduciary Duty Is Significant in Analyzing Claims Against Broker or Agent. While it is true that certain duties owed by a broker or agent to a principal in a transaction are unaffected by whether the broker or agent has a fiduciary relationship with that principal, the complete scope of the broker's or agent's duties to the principal is significantly impacted by the existence of a fiduciary relationship. An evaluation of a particular broker's or agent's conduct in a transaction cannot be completed without consideration of whether the broker or agent is the plaintiff-principal's fiduciary. For example, whereas a listing agent may have to disclose a particular material fact to a buyer, the listing agent is not required to explain the significance or import of that material fact [Sweat v. Hollister (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 603, 605-609, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399] . However, the broker or agent for the buyer may be obligated to offer such an explanation to his or her client. Further, the discovery of certain material facts might require the broker or agent for the buyer to conduct or suggest further investigation. The broker or agent for the seller would not have such a duty and, in fact, he or she may have a duty not to conduct such an investigation, which could result in damage to his or her client's position. By Jeffrey

S. Martin

PRACTICE TIP: The Scope of Fiduciary Duties. Because the scope of fiduciary duty is nebulous, individuals bringing claims against brokers or agents will often claim that the defendant broker or agent breached a litany of obligations that allegedly arose out of the fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff. A recent decision in Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373 places limits on the scope of fiduciary duty in the context of claims against real estate brokers or agents. In Padgett, the court held that neither the selling nor listing broker/agent owed a duty to the plaintiff- buyer of a townhouse to inquire of the homeowners' association whether there were any construction defects in the common areas of the property or whether there was any pending or proposed litigation concerning these defects. The plaintiff in Padgett had purchased a unit in a townhouse development and learned shortly thereafter that there were construction defects in common areas and that the association was involved in litigation regarding these defects. The plaintiff-buyer argued that the agents had a duty to contact the association and ask about defects or any litigation. The Padgett court found that the statutory scheme applicable to real estate brokers and agents did not impose the duty to inspect or disclose defects that were off-site of the particular unit being sold. Specifically, Civ. Code § 2079.3 provides that "[t]he inspection to be performed pursuant to this article does not include or involve an inspection of areas that are reasonably and normally inaccessible to such an inspection, nor an affirmative inspection of areas off the site of the subject property or public records or permits concerning the title or use of the property, and, if the property compromises a unit in a planned development ... a condominium ... or a stock cooperative ... does not include an inspection of more than the unit offered for sale. ..." The Padgett court refused to expand the duty of investigation as to the selling agent, who represented the plaintiff-buyer, based on an alleged fiduciary responsibility. The court remained unconvinced that the duty of the selling agent went any further than the duty owed by the listing agent to inspect and disclose as provided in Civ. Code § 2079.3 [Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1280-1282, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373] .

For a form of a complaint for damages based on the broker's breach of fiduciary duty generally, see § 103.90[1].

[2] Duty to Use Reasonable Care and Due Diligence

An agent must exercise reasonable skill and care for the benefit of the principal in the performance of agency duties, and will be liable for any damages suffered by the principal as a result of the agent's negligence [Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633] . Furthermore, a real estate agent who is negligent or incompetent in the performance of his or her duties may have his or her license suspended or revoked [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(g)].

As a professional, a real estate licensee must exercise a higher degree of skill and diligence than a non-professional [Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353] . Specifically, the real estate broker is charged with more than a layman's knowledge of the real estate business. The broker must exercise the particular skill to be reasonably expected of him or her and to have special knowledge with respect to his or her agency [Wilson v. Hisey (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 433, 438, 305 P.2d 686] . This includes an ordinary professional knowledge concerning the title and natural characteristics of the property he or she is selling [Brady v. Carman (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 63, 68, 3 Cal. Rptr. 612] .

The existence and extent of the broker's duties are determined further by the terms of a valid agreement between the broker and principal, interpreted in light of the circumstances under which it is made. For example, when the listing agreement and other documents signed by the client clearly state that the client should consult an appropriate professional if tax advice is desired, a real estate broker will not be liable to the client for the client's unanticipated tax liabilities in an exchange [Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 754-756, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734] .

An agent's duty to exercise reasonable skill and care in the performance of the agent's duties extends to both buyer and seller, even if the agent represents only one of the parties [Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Duty of Care Extends to Non-Client Party in Transaction. As discussed above, the legislature has imposed a duty on the agent to use reasonable care with respect to both the buyer and seller, even if the agent represents only one of the parties. This is evidence of the trend to weaken the distinction between the fiduciary duties owed to a principal and the non-fiduciary duties owed to the other party in the transaction. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Duties Arising Out of Fiduciary Relationship. A broker or agent who is a fiduciary may be liable in damages if he or she provides information to the principal that has not been verified, unless the broker or agent advises the principal that the information has not been verified [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463 ; see [3], below]. By Jeffrey S. Martin

For a form of a cause of action in a complaint for damages based on the broker's failure to use reasonable care as it relates to the broker's duty to disclose material facts about a property, see § 103.94[1], Fourth Cause of Action.

[3] Duty to Investigate/Negligent Misrepresentation

[a] Nature of Duty

A broker has a fiduciary duty to investigate the material facts of a transaction, and cannot accept information received from others as being true, and transmit it to the principal, without either verifying the information or disclosing to the principal that the information has not been verified [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] . Furthermore, because the broker is charged with superior knowledge of the subject of the agency, the client has a right to rely on the statements and recommendations made to the client by the broker and has no duty to make an independent investigation [Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 162, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359] .

A broker's fiduciary duty can be much broader than the nonfiduciary duty to visually inspect imposed on sellers' brokers by Civ. Code § 2079 [see [8][b], below], and may include a duty to inspect public records or permits concerning title or use of the property, a duty which is expressly excluded from Civ. Code § 2079 [Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18].

[b] Examples

A broker representing a buyer can be liable to the buyer for representing a certain amount of net income on an apartment building when further investigation of maintenance and vacancy factors would disclose a substantially less amount [see Ford v. Cournale (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 172, 179-180, 111 Cal. Rptr. 334] . Similarly, a broker was found liable to his buyer-client for falsely representing that the subject parcel exceeded one acre and could be subdivided. The fact that the multiple listing information sheet contained a representation that the property exceeded one acre, and that the property was surrounded by a perimeter fence enclosing more than one acre, did not relieve the broker of liability. A broker who is merely an innocent conduit of the seller's fraud may be innocent of actual fraud, but the broker may be liable for negligence on a constructive fraud theory if the broker passes on the misstatements as true without personally investigating them [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 559-560, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] .

Other examples of broker liability to the principal based on the failure to investigate material facts resulting in negligent misrepresentation include:

- Advising the seller, who was receiving a note and deed of trust secured on another property, that the value assigned to the other property was a "safe figure," that the buyer assuming the note was "a financially substantial individual," and that the proposed transaction "was a good deal," without making any investigation of those subjects [see Banville v. Schmidt (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 92, 97-99, 112 Cal. Rptr. 126 ; see also Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 (similar facts)].

- Failing to discover and disclose that the lessor of the property did not have a sufficient interest to enter into a 10-year lease [George Ball Pacific, Inc. v. Coldwell Banker & Co. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 248, 255-257, 172 Cal. Rptr. 597 (summary judgment reversed based on disputed question of fact)].

- Failing to determine that the extent of an easement in favor of a water district was substantially more burdensome than represented and that the acreage of the property as represented in the listing was not accurate [Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18].

PRACTICE TIP:

Broker's Liability for Legal or Tax Advice. Civ. Code § 2079.16 sets forth the contents of the agency disclosure form that real estate agents are required to give to sellers and buyers. Included in the form is the following language: "A real estate agent is a person qualified to advise about real estate. If legal or tax advice is desired, consult a competent professional." Because the legislature intended that this advice be provided by competent professionals other than real estate licensees, it is likely that a real estate broker will not be held liable for failure to provide this advice, as was held in Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 754-756, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734 (discussed in [2], above). On the other hand, if the real estate broker undertakes to provide this advice, the broker may be liable for negligence if the advice is incorrect [see Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 651, 320 P. 2d 16 (notary held liable to beneficiary for preparing will that did not conform to California law)]. By Linda Breen Pierce

In addition to the potential liability of a broker representing a buyer for passing on false information to his or her client, as discussed in the examples above, a listing agent may be liable to the buyer for false information included in the multiple listing service. Civ. Code § 1088 provides that if an agent places a listing or other information in the multiple listing service, that agent will be responsible for the truth of all representations and statements made by the agent of which the agent had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge to anyone injured by their falseness or inaccuracy.

For a complaint for damages based on the broker's failure to investigate material facts, see §§ 103.93[1] (by seller against listing agent) and 103.96[1] (by buyer against selling agent).

[4] Duty to Disclose Material Facts

[a] In General

[i] Common Law Duty; Statutory Expansion of Duty

An agent is charged with the duty of fullest disclosure of all material facts concerning the transaction that might affect the principal's decision. Furthermore, when the principal questions the acts done by the agent in the course of the agency, the burden is on the agent to prove that he or she acted with the utmost good faith toward the principal and that prior to the transaction he or she made a full disclosure of all the facts relating to the acts under attack [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 674-675, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . The duty of full disclosure is applicable to gratuitous agents as well as compensated agents [St. James Armenian Church of Los Angeles v. Kurkjian (1975) 47

Cal. App. 3d 547, 551, 121 Cal. Rptr. 214] .

This common law duty to disclose material facts has been expanded in residential transactions to include not only facts that are within the actual knowledge of the agent, but also facts that would be revealed with a reasonable and competent visual inspection [see [8], below (statutory duty to inspect and disclose)]. Furthermore, the duty to disclose material facts is not limited to a party who is in a fiduciary relationship with the agent, but applies to both the buyer and seller, even if the agent is representing only one of the parties [Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form--agent has duty to disclose to the buyer and seller all facts known to the agent materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that are not known to, or within the diligent attention and observation of, the parties)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Failure to Disclose May Also Be Breach of Duty to Use Reasonable Care. In many instances, the language used by the courts to refer to wrongful actions by the broker include references to both reasonable care duties and fiduciary duties, including the duty to disclose material facts, the duty to act in the highest good of the principal, the duty to act in good faith, and other duties. As noted earlier, there is considerable overlapping among the various duties a broker owes to the principal. In most instances, a breach of the duty to disclose will also constitute a breach of the duty to use reasonable care [see [2], above], and/or constructive fraud [see [5], below]. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Limits on Duty of Disclosure. Sweat v. Hollister (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 603, 605-609, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 , holds that the seller and listing agent/broker are obligated to disclose material facts, but not necessarily the ramifications of the disclosed facts. In Sweat, the seller disclosed that the subject property was located in a floodplain. The seller and his agent did not disclose that a local ordinance prevented altering or enlarging the home if it was destroyed by fire or other calamity as a result of its location in the floodplain. Plaintiff-buyer sued the seller and the listing broker for failure to disclose that the property was a nonconforming use. The Sweat court found that the defendants were obligated only to disclose that the property was in a floodplain, that the information regarding the existence and effect of the city ordinance was information equally available to the plaintiff-buyer, and that actionable non-disclosure related only to the facts not discoverable by the plaintiff. The court went on to find that it was not the obligation of the seller or the listing broker to research local land use ordinances and advise the buyer as to the effect of the classification on the subject property. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[ii] Additional Disclosure Duties

A broker has a duty to disclose to the seller all offers to buy the property, in addition to the offer accepted [Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 793, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242] . Further, the Real Estate Commissioner may suspend or revoke the license of a broker or salesperson who has failed to disclose to the buyer of real property, in a transaction in which the licensee is an agent for the buyer, the nature and extent of any direct or indirect ownership interest of the licensee in that real property. The direct or indirect ownership in the property by a person related to the licensee by blood or marriage, by an entity in which the licensee has an ownership interest, or by any other person with whom the licensee occupies a special relationship must be disclosed to the buyer [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(o)].

[iii] Examples of Breaches

Examples of broker's actions that constituted a breach of an agent's duty to disclose include the following:

- Failure to disclose to the seller that the buyer's deposit check was postdated and conditioned upon inspections [see Wilson v. Lewis (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 802, 808-810, 165 Cal. Rptr. 396 (dual agency relationship)].

- Failure to disclose relevant facts about air conditioning necessary for a client to intelligently enter into a construction contract [see Chapple v. Big Bear Super Market No. 3 (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 867, 876, 167 Cal. Rptr. 103] .

- Misrepresenting the price at which the broker was able to sell the property [see Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 223, 169 P.2d 371] .

- Failure of a mortgage loan broker to disclose to an individual lender that it was illegal for her broker-employer to accept the principal's funds in exchange for an unsecured promissory note, and failure to take reasonable steps to learn and advise the principal that the actual "borrower" of the money was her broker-employer [see Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 61, 65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353] .

- Failure to disclose to the seller-client that the broker was loaning his commission to the buyer as part of the buyer's down payment [see Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 417, 421, 423, 210 Cal. Rptr. 428] .

- Failure to disclose details of an assignment transaction, when the broker entered into a written contract of purchase and sale with her principal and subsequently assigned her rights to a third party for an assignment fee of $1.2 million [see Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1568, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] .

The broker must make a full disclosure of all material facts. For example, when a broker disclosed one termite report to the buyer, but failed to disclose a second report that showed greater infestation, the broker was liable to the buyer for his failure to disclose [Godfrey v. Steinpress (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 154, 177-178, 180 Cal. Rptr. 95] .

For forms of a complaint for damages based on the broker's breach of the duty to disclose material facts, see §§ 103.94[1] (by buyer against listing agent) and 103.95[1] (by buyer against selling agent).

[b] Broker as Buyer

[i] Seller's Knowledge and Consent

The agent representing a seller may not purchase the seller's property without the seller's full knowledge and consent. This rule is aimed at not only the indirect or collusive sale or transfer, but also the direct sale or transfer to the agent. For example, brokers were held to have violated their fiduciary duty to their sellers-clients when they participated in the purchase of their clients' property without disclosing this to their clients and then later sold the property at a profit [Bate v. Marsteller (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 605, 612-613, 43 Cal. Rptr. 149] . The rule also extends to the sale to the agent's spouse, or an indirect or collusive sale to some other relative of the agent, or to the agent's partner or employee. Further, it applies to a corporation in which the agent has a large concealed interest, or indirectly to the agent in the name of a third person [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675-676, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P. 2d 101] .

This rule applies whether the agreement between the broker and principal is characterized as an option, a binding contract of sale, or a nonbinding contract of sale [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1566, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] . Thus, a broker who entered into a written contract with her principal, subsequently assigned her rights to a third party with the principal's consent, did not notify the principal that she would receive an assignment fee until he was signing papers to close escrow, and refused to disclose the amount of the $1.2 million fee, breached her fiduciary duty to the principal by refusing to disclose the details of the assignment transaction [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1568, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] . Execution of the purchase agreement did not complete the purpose of the broker's agency toward the principal and end the broker's duty toward him. The broker's contract of assignment with the third party, under which she in effect substituted the third party for herself as the buyer, became an essential part of the transaction, as did the principal's consent to the assignment. Thus, the broker's duty of disclosure extended to the assignment [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1566-1567, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] . Because the broker's $1.2 million assignment fee was a form of compensation to her that was not disclosed to the principal until after the sale of the shopping center was consummated, it was by definition a secret profit that the broker could not legally retain. The fact that the transaction yielded the principal his full asking price did not change that result [Roberts v. Lomanto (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1570, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866] .

Under most circumstances, if the agent is related to the buyer in a way that suggests a reasonable possibility that the agent himself or herself could indirectly be acquiring an interest in the subject property, the relationship is a "material fact" that must be disclosed [Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 579, 582, 163 Cal. Rptr. 764 (agent for seller breached duty by failing to disclose that buyer was agent's daughter and son-in-law)].

This rule is supported further by the agent's statutory duty to refrain from taking part in any transaction concerning the subject property in which the broker has an interest adverse to the beneficiary [Civ. Code § 2322(c); Prob. Code § 16004(a)].

A seller can recover the commission paid to his or her broker if the broker failed to disclose the fact that the broker was an undisclosed purchaser of the seller's property [Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 675-676, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101] . Alternatively, if the seller discovers the agent's failure to disclose his or her interest prior to the close of escrow, the seller can void the transaction [Newell-Murdoch Realty Co. v. Wickham (1920) 183 Cal. 39, 44, 190 P. 359] .

[ii] Exception for Net Listing Agreement

The broker's duty of disclosure when he or she is the buyer is limited when the parties have entered into a net listing agreement. A net listing agreement is one in which the principal agrees to accept a specified net price for the property to be sold, and the agent's compensation for negotiating a sale is to be any amount received in excess of the specified figure. If the broker and the principal enter into a net listing agreement in which the principal determines the net sale price without influence by the agent, the broker has no fiduciary duty to disclose the buyer's identity to the principal, even if the agent is buying the property himself or herself. On the other hand, if the principal agrees to a sales price as a result of the broker's misrepresentations, this exception to the disclosure rule will not apply [Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 795, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242 (emphasis added)].

The key factor in permitting the real estate broker relief from disclosing the buyer's identity in a net listing arrangement is the independent and completely uninfluenced determination of the net sales price by the seller [Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 579, 582, 163 Cal. Rptr. 764 (agent not exempted from disclosure requirement because seller based listing price on agent's opinion of value)].

[c] Fraud or Deceit

[i] Broker's Nondisclosure and Knowledge

In some instances, the failure to disclose a material fact to a buyer may constitute fraud. When a real estate broker or agent representing the seller knows facts materially affecting the value or the desirability of property offered for sale, these facts are known or accessible only to the licensee and his or her principal, and the licensee also knows that these facts are not known to or within the reach of the diligent attention and observation of the buyer, the licensee is under a duty to disclose these facts to the buyer. The failure to disclose these facts constitutes negative fraud or deceit [Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 866, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724 (broker represented property to be luxurious and an outstanding investment, and failed to disclose broker's knowledge of the substandard construction of property, which facts were not easily discoverable by buyer)].

Exculpatory clauses in a standardized form used in the purchase and sale of real estate will not bar a claim for intentional misrepresentation brought by buyers of real property against the sellers' brokers. A party to a contract is precluded under Civ. Code § 1668 from contracting away his or her liability for fraud or deceit based on intentional misrepresentation. The fact that the brokers are not parties to the agreement between the buyers and sellers will not preclude application of § 1668 when buyers allege that brokers induced them to enter into an agreement by means of intentional misrepresentations. The plain language of Civ. Code § 1668 shows that its provisions apply to "all contracts" the object of which is to directly or indirectly exempt "anyone" from responsibility for his or her "own fraud" [Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1501, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59 (exculpatory clauses did not preclude, as matter of law, buyers' showing of justifiable reliance)].

[ii] Confidential Relationship Not Required

Fraud may exist in this context in the absence of a fiduciary relationship between the agent or broker and the buyer [see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form--duty extends to both buyer and seller without regard to agency relationships)]. The elements of a cause of action for damages for fraud based on mere nondisclosure and involving no confidential relationship would therefore appear to be the following [Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 (buyer stated cause of action for fraud against seller's broker for latter's failure to disclose that building was in state of disrepair, that units contained in it were illegal, and that building had been condemned)]:

- Nondisclosure by the defendant of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property.
- Defendant's knowledge of these facts and of their being unknown to or beyond the reach of the plaintiff.
- Defendant's intention to induce action by the plaintiff.
- Inducement of the plaintiff to act by reason of the nondisclosure.
- Resulting damages.

[iii] No Exception for Broker-Seller or "As Is" Clause

The fact that the broker is also the seller will not relieve the broker-seller of the duty to disclose material facts [Prichard v. Reitz (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 465, 468, 223 Cal. Rptr. 734 (buyer stated cause of action against broker-seller for failing to disclose defective foundation that was known to broker-seller)]. Nor will the presence of an "as is" clause shield an agent from liability for affirmative or negative fraud [Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 304, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779].

PRACTICE TIP:

"As Is" Clause May Impact Elements of Fraud Claim. While an "as is" clause will not act as a shield to a non-disclosure claim, it should be considered when analyzing fraud claims. The inclusion in a transaction of an "as is" clause with respect to a certain condition may be used to attack the reliance element of a misrepresentation claim. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[iv] Liability of Mortgage Loan Broker

A mortgage loan broker may be liable for fraud in failing to disclose certain information to a prospective borrower. For example, when a mortgage broker knowingly conceals the fact that loans above a certain amount will expose the buyer to an increase in the broker's commission and escrow expenses, for the purpose of obtaining a higher commission, this nondisclosure constitutes fraud and deceit [Realty Projects, Inc. v. Smith (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 204, 211, 108 Cal. Rptr. 71] .

[v] Defrauded Buyer's Remedies

In an action for fraud against a broker, the defrauded buyer has the option to either rescind the sales contract or stand on the contract and sue for damages. Even though a party who elects to affirm a contract will not be completing it in "reliance" on the fraud, the party's continued performance of the agreement does not constitute a waiver of his or her action for damages. Fraud at the inception of the transaction (such as the time of entering into the purchase contract) is sufficient [Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 750, 192 P.2d 935 ; Storage Services v. Oosterbaan (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 498, 511, 262 Cal. Rptr. 689] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Discovery of Alleged Misrepresentation or Undisclosed Material Fact Prior to Close of Escrow. A plaintiff-buyer who becomes aware of a non-disclosed or misrepresented fact prior to close of escrow may close and then sue for damages [Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 313-319, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242] . In Jue, the sellers represented that the subject property was designed by a famous architect. Before close of escrow, plaintiff-buyers learned that the representation might not be true, but they decided to close escrow and then sue for damages. The Jue court found that for plaintiffs to recover for fraud in the sale of real property under Civ. Code § 3343, the reliance of plaintiffs had to be established at the time the initial contract was entered into, and it was not necessary that plaintiffs establish continuing reliance until the contract was fully executed. By Jeffrey S. Martin

For further discussion and forms relating to a cause of action relating to fraud or deceit, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit . For a complaint for damages based on fraud relating to nondisclosure of defects, see § 103.94[1].

[5] Constructive Fraud

[a] Definition

The statutory definition of constructive fraud is as follows [Civ. Code § 1573]:

> (1) Any breach of duty that, without an actually fraudulent intent, gains an advantage to the person in fault, or any one claiming under that person, by misleading another to his or her prejudice, or to the prejudice of any one claiming under him or her; or
> (2) Any such act or omission that the law specially declares to be fraudulent, without respect to actual fraud.

In other words, constructive fraud comprises any act, omission, or concealment involving a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence that results in damage to another even though the conduct is not otherwise fraudulent. Most acts by an agent in breach of his or her fiduciary duties constitute constructive fraud. For example, the failure of a fiduciary to disclose a material fact to the principal that might affect the fiduciary's motives or the principal's decision, that is known (or should be known) to the fiduciary, may constitute constructive fraud. Also, a careless misstatement may constitute constructive fraud even though there is no fraudulent intent [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463 ; see also Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353 (breach of fiduciary duty amounted to constructive fraud)].

[b] Fiduciary Relationship Required

In contrast to an action for actual fraud, constructive fraud requires the existence of a fiduciary relationship. To constitute positive or actual fraud, there must be fraud that affects the conscience, that is, there must be an intentional deception. Constructive fraud, on the other hand, is presumed from the relation of the parties to a transaction, or the circumstances under which it takes place [Mary Pickford Co. v. Bayly Bros., Inc. (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 501, 525, 86 P.2d 102] . Consequently, when nondisclosure is alleged in a fiduciary relationship, the elements of representation and falsity--always part of a cause of action for actual fraud--are absent, because the fraud consists of the breach of the fiduciary duty of disclosure of relevant matters arising from the relationship [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 926, 940-942, 268 Cal. Rptr. 609] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Constructive Fraud Distinguished From Actual Fraud. Note that for a cause of action against a broker who is not in a fiduciary relationship with the buyer or seller, actual fraud must be alleged and proved [see [4][c], above], whereas an action for constructive fraud, with its less stringent burden of proof regarding intent, may be brought when there is a fiduciary relationship between the agent and the principal. This is consistent with the higher duties of loyalty and good faith required in a fiduciary relationship [see [1], above (fiduciary duties in general)]. By Linda Breen Pierce

[c] Required Elements

The elements for the cause of action for constructive fraud are the following: (1) fiduciary relationship [see [b], above]; (2) nondisclosure (breach of fiduciary duty); (3) intent to deceive; and (4) reliance and resulting injury (causation). The intent to deceive does not require an intent to defraud; rather, it is implied from the failure to disclose [Stokes v. Henson (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 187, 197, 265 Cal. Rptr. 836] . Further, the reliance element is relaxed in constructive fraud to the extent that reasonable reliance is presumed upon the misrepresentation or nondisclosure of the fiduciary, absent direct evidence of a lack of reliance [Estate of Gump (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 582, 601, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269] .

For a complaint for damages based on a constructive fraud relating to the broker's failure to disclose defects, see § 103.95[1].

[6] Secret Profits

The term secret profits has been used by courts to describe any number of situations in which a broker reaps a profit from the subject of his or her agency without the prior knowledge of the principal.

A broker is not entitled to make any secret profit from the subject of his or her agency. The rationale for this rule is that all benefits and advantages acquired by the broker as an outgrowth of the agency, exclusive of the broker's agreed compensation, are deemed to have been acquired for the benefit of the principal, and the principal is entitled to recover these benefits in an appropriate action. The principal's right to recover does not depend on any deceit of the broker, but is based on the duties incident to the agency relationship and on the fact that all profits resulting from that relationship belong to the principal [Savage v. Mayer (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 548, 551, 203 P.2d 9] .

An example of an improper realization of secret profits is the dummy sale, in which the broker arranges for the sale of his or her principal's property to a third party (such as a relative or employee of the broker). In reality, the third party is merely a "dummy" purchasing the property on the broker's behalf. When the property is then resold at a higher price, the broker reaps the profit of the difference in selling prices [see Rodes v. Shannon (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 721, 722-723, 727, 35 Cal. Rptr. 339 (principal entitled to rescind contract)].

A similar situation occurs when the broker has an option to purchase the subject property. A broker using the option device to gain secret profits will wait until he or she has received an offer for the property that is higher than the option price. The broker then exercises the option and purchases the property at the lower option price without informing the principal of the higher offer. The final step is to resell the property at the higher price and pocket the difference as a secret profit. In such a case, the principal can recover the amount of the secret profits from the broker [see Zikratch v. Stillwell (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 535, 541, 16 Cal. Rptr. 660] .

For allegations for use in a complaint for damages based on the broker's realization of secret profits from the transaction, see §§ 103.91[1] (with an option to purchase) and 103.92[1] (with a "dummy" sale).

A real estate agent who violates the prohibition against secret profits may have his or her license suspended or revoked [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(g), (h)].

[7] Duty to Be Honest and Truthful

[a] Scope of Duty; Definition of Honesty

A broker must be honest and truthful in all activities for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10152, 10176(a)-(c), (i); Ward v. Taggart (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 736, 741, 336 P.2d 534] . This duty applies not only to a broker's dealings with the client, but also with other parties in a transaction, and is not to be confused with an agent's fiduciary duties of loyalty, diligence, and disclosure to the client [Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 734-735, 739, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800 ; see also Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form--broker has duty of honest and fair dealing and good faith to both buyer and seller, even if agent represents only one of the parties)].

For these purposes, honesty is construed to have the broadest possible meaning: a fastidious allegiance to the standards of one's profession, calling, or position; fairness and straightforwardness of conduct and speech; integrity; truthfulness; and freedom from fraud. Truthfulness has been abstractly defined as the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. A broker who makes a statement in the expectation that the facts stated will be relied on by another, and who withholds material facts and thereby creates a false understanding, is as guilty of untruthfulness as he or she would be if the facts stated were untrue [Rhoades v. Savage (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 294, 299, 32 Cal. Rptr. 885] .

For a complaint for damages based on the broker's breach of the duty to be honest and truthful as it relates to the disclosure of defects in the property, see § 103.94[1], Third Cause of Action.

[b] Breaches of Duty

A broker representing a seller may breach his or her duty of honesty and fair dealing to a prospective purchaser by failing to convey the purchaser's offer to the seller and by secretly competing with the purchaser [Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 736, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800] .

A broker's failure to disclose that he or she is bidding on property also works an unfairness on other prospective purchasers. Not only is the broker likely to have an advantage over other bidders because of the broker's knowledge of their offers and the owner's desires, but the broker's contacts with other purchasers may easily lead them to rely on his or her assistance and forego their own efforts to negotiate for the property [Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 736, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800] .

For example, a broker representing the seller was liable to a buyer for false representations made about the buyer's offer and what the seller would accept, resulting in a secret profit realized by the broker. The court reasoned that an involuntary trust should be imposed as a result of the broker's unjust enrichment due to the broker's violation of his duty to be honest and truthful in his dealings. The public policy of this state does not permit one to "take advantage of his own wrong" [Civ. Code § 3517], and the law provides a quasi-contractual remedy to prevent one from being unjustly enriched at the expense of another. Civ. Code § 2224 provides that one "who gains a thing by fraud ... or other wrongful act, is, unless he has some other and better right thereto, an involuntary trustee of the thing gained, for the benefit of the person who would otherwise have had it" [Ward v. Taggart (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 736, 741, 336 P.2d 534] .

In a situation in which the broker representing the seller fails to convey the first buyer's offer and instead buys the property for himself or herself, but does not resell it for a secret profit, the broker may be compelled to convey the property to the original buyer [see Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 740-741, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800] .

[c] Suspension or Revocation of License

A real estate licensee may have his or her license suspended or revoked for (1) making any substantial misrepresentation, (2) making any false promises of a character likely to influence, persuade, or induce, or (3) engaging in any other conduct that constitutes fraud or dishonest dealing [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10176(a), (b), (i), 10177(j)]. Additionally, a real estate licensee may have his or her license suspended or revoked for violating Bus. & Prof. Code § 10237 et seq., which imposes requirements on any transaction that involves the sale or offer to sell a series of notes secured directly by an interest in the same real property, or the sale of undivided interests in a note secured directly by real property equivalent to a series transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10177(p); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10237 et seq.; see also Civ. Code §§ 2944.6, 2944.7 (additional disclosure and prohibitions related to arranging mortgages)].

[8] Statutory Duty to Inspect and Disclose

[a] Overview

[i] Two Sets of Statutory Requirements

Two sets of coordinated inspection and disclosure requirements apply to real estate brokers involved in the purchase and sale of residential properties. The first set requires the inspection of certain residential properties and the disclosure of material facts [see [b], below], while the second set involves the completion of a statutory disclosure statement [see [c], below].

A real estate agent's license may be suspended or revoked for willful or repeated violations of the statutory disclosure provisions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176.5(a)].

For a complaint for damages based on the broker's violation of the statutory duty to inspect and disclose, see § 103.94[1].

The remaining subsections below discuss the two sets of requirements. For additional discussion of the disclosure requirements, including certain excluded transactions and the timing of the disclosure statement, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser .

[ii] Buyer's Duty to Use Reasonable Care

The court in Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 , held that the broker's duty to inspect and disclose does not relieve the buyer of the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself. So, for example, a defect in a property could be so clearly apparent that as a matter of law a broker would not be negligent for failure to expressly disclose it, as the broker could reasonably expect that the buyer's own inspection of the premises would reveal the flaw [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 103, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383] . In discharging the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself, the buyer must take into account those facts that are known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.5].

For a form of an affirmative defense based on the buyer's failure to use reasonable care relating to the alleged defects, see § 103.97[1].

[b] Inspection of Residential Property and Disclosure of Material Facts

[i] Scope of Duty; Standard of Care

Civ. Code § 2079 et seq. apply to a licensed real estate broker who has a written contract with a seller to find or obtain a buyer for residential real property containing one to four dwelling units, or a manufactured home [Civ. Code § 2079(a); see Health & Safety Code § 18007 ("manufactured home" defined)]. The broker, or another broker who acts in cooperation with the broker to find and obtain a buyer, must conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale, and must disclose to prospective purchasers all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that an investigation would reveal [Civ. Code § 2079(a)].

Civ. Code §§ 2079-2079.6 codified the rule set forth in the leading case of Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 , which held that there is a common law duty on the part of the broker to inspect and disclose to the buyer [Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 102, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383] . These statutory provisions should be construed as a definition of the duty of care found to exist by the holding of Easton v. Strassburger, and the manner of its discharge, and are declarative of the common law regarding this duty [Civ. Code § 2079.12(a)(4)].

This statutory duty to inspect does not extend to commercial real estate transactions [Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1360, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633 (broker had no duty to inspect the commercial portion of the property containing the lemon and avocado groves)] or to certain properties sold as part of a subdivision, unless the property has been previously occupied [see Civ. Code § 2079.6]. Further, the Section 2079 disclosure duty does not include a duty to independently verify or disclaim the accuracy of the seller's representations. In making the required disclosures, the seller's agent is required only to act in good faith and to not convey the seller's representations without a reasonable basis for believing them to be true [Robinson v. Grossman (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 643-644, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380] .

The statutory duty to inspect and disclose goes only toward prospective buyers and not to persons who are not parties to the real estate transaction [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564] . Thus, a broker owed no duty under Civ. Code § 2079 to a homebuyer's minor child who allegedly suffered injuries as the result of undisclosed microbial contamination of the home [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564] .

The standard of care owed by a broker under Civ. Code § 2079 et seq. is the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise, and is measured by the degree of knowledge through education, experience, and examination, required to obtain a real estate license [Civ. Code § 2079.2].

[ii] Visual Inspection

The statutory duty to inspect requires the broker "to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property" [Civ. Code § 2079(a) (emphasis added)]. This duty does not require the broker to inspect areas that are reasonably and normally inaccessible to a visual inspection [Civ. Code § 2079.3; Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 308 (broker did not breach statutory duty to inspect and disclose by failing to discover defects in foundation when lack of steel bolts was not visually apparent)].

For a form of an affirmative defense based on the fact that the defects were not within a reasonably and normally accessible area, see § 103.99[1].

Furthermore, this duty to inspect does not require an affirmative inspection of areas off the site of the subject property or public records or permits concerning the title or use of the property. If the property comprises a unit in a planned development [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003 (definition)], a condominium [see Civ. Code § 783 (definition)], or a stock cooperative [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 11003.2 (definition)], the duty to inspect does not require an inspection of more than the unit offered for sale, if the seller or the broker complies with the provisions of Civ. Code § 1368 to provide the buyer with the relevant documents pertaining to the development [Civ. Code § 2079.3].

PRACTICE TIP:

Limitations on Broker's/Agent's Duty of Inspection. Relying on Civ. Code § 2079.3, the court in Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1280-1282, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373 , held that neither the selling nor the listing real estate broker/agent was obligated to inquire of the homeowners' association for a townhouse or condominium development as to whether there were any construction defects in the common areas of the property or any pending or proposed litigation concerning these defects. As noted above, § 2079.3 specifically provides that the broker/agent is not required to inspect more than the unit offered for sale. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[iii] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for bringing an action against a broker for a breach of the statutory duty to inspect and disclose is two years from the date of possession, which means the date of recordation, the date of close of escrow, or the date of occupancy, whichever occurs first [Civ. Code § 2079.4]. However, this statute of limitations does not apply if the failure to disclose is based on intentional fraud. In that type of action, the applicable statute of limitations is three years from the date of discovery of the fraud [Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 861-865, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (buyer not barred from bringing action after two-year period when broker concealed cracks to hide defects in property and failed to disclose concealment to buyer)]. Nor does the limitations period of Civ. Code § 2079.4 apply to an action for breach of fiduciary duty brought against a buyer's broker. That limitations period commences on the date of possession, while the statute of limitations for actions involving a fiduciary obligation is triggered on the date the plaintiff discovers, or should have discovered, the negligence [Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 25, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784 (two-year limitation period did not bar action alleging broker breached fiduciary duty by failing to determine that extent of easement was substantially more burdensome than represented and that acreage of property as represented in listing was not accurate)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Open-Ended Liability for Failure to Disclose. The case of Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors, discussed above, appears to carve out an exception to the two-year statute of limitations for a cause of action based on the failure to disclose when the failure amounts to actual fraud. The statute of limitations for fraud is three years from the date of discovery of the fraud [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]. Because discovery of the fraud conceivably could occur years after the close of escrow, there is no absolute cut-off date for the broker's potential liability based on the failure to disclose. However, the broker has some protection in that the required elements for an action based on fraud include proof of the broker's intent to induce an action by the plaintiff; an inadvertent nondisclosure will not suffice. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Courts Will Closely Analyze Fraud Claims Intended to Avoid Application of the Statute of Limitations. The courts in both Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (discussed above) and Loken v. Century 21-Award Properties (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 266, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 883 , suggest that the false labeling of time-barred negligence causes of action in a complaint as "fraud" will not necessarily protect these claims from dismissal. The court in Williams held that no matter how a cause of action is labeled, if the claim is "derived from a statutory duty to inspect and disclose, it is subject to the two year statute of limitations" [Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 865, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] . The emphasis on the underlying facts of the case and not the labels in the complaint will provide opportunities for successfully asserting the statute of limitations defense. By

[c] Statutory Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement

[i] Scope of Duty

The statutory requirements discussed in [b], above, have been coordinated with a second set of statutory disclosure requirements. Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. require transferors of real property, or residential stock cooperatives, containing one to four dwelling units to complete and provide prospective transferees with a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement [see Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.6; see also Civ. Code § 1102(b) (applicability of these requirements, on or after January 1, 2000, to resale of manufactured home or mobilehome that is classified as personal property intended for use as residence)].

The types of transfers subject to these statutory disclosure requirements include sales, exchanges, installment land sale contracts [see Civ. Code § 2985 (definition)], leases with options to purchase, any other options to purchase, and ground leases coupled with improvements [Civ. Code § 1102(a); see Civ. Code § 2079.1 (lease-related transactions)].

This statutory duty to inspect and disclose is independent of, and does not in any way change or diminish, a broker's duty to disclose any known fact materially affecting the value and desirability of the property [Civ. Code § 1102.1; see [4], above, for discussion of broker's duty to disclose material facts]. In addition, the specification of items for disclosure on the statutory form [see [ii], below] does not limit or abridge any obligation for disclosure created by any other provision of law or that may exist in order to avoid fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit in the transaction [Civ. Code § 1102.8].

An "as is" sale does not constitute a waiver of these disclosure requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.1; Loughrin v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1195, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161] . Furthermore, any waiver of the statutory disclosure requirements is void as against public policy [Civ. Code § 1102(c)].

Each required disclosure under Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., and each act that may be performed in making the disclosure, must be made in good faith. "Good faith" means honesty in fact in the conduct of the transaction [Civ. Code § 1102.7].

[ii] Disclosure Form

An official disclosure form satisfying the statutory disclosure requirements, entitled the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement, is set forth in Civ. Code § 1102.6 [Civ. Code § 1102.1]. For further discussion regarding the timing of delivery and other requirements regarding this form, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser . For the official form, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 23 (Matthew Bender).

PRACTICE TIP:

Seller and Broker/Agent Have Distinct Duties Regarding Preparation of Transfer Disclosure Statement. In analyzing claims for non-disclosure or misrepresentation arising out of the purchase and sale of residential real property, it is important to recognize that the seller and broker or agent have separate and distinct obligations in preparing their respective sections of the Transfer Disclosure Statement ("TDS"). The TDS is prepared in part by the seller and in part by the broker/agent. The majority of the TDS seeks to elicit information solely from the seller regarding the condition of specific aspects of the subject property. The seller must respond to specific inquiries regarding the property. The broker or agent is required to identify those material facts discovered during a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property. In advising brokers and agents with regard to the preparation of the TDS, it is imperative to impress upon them that it is the seller's duty to make the required disclosures and to fill out the seller's portion of the TDS. It is troubling to counsel representing a listing broker or agent to learn that the broker or agent filled out in whole or in part the portions of the TDS that the seller is obligated to complete. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[iii] Limitation on Broker's Liability

A listing or selling agent will not be liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information delivered pursuant to the statutory disclosure requirements if the following factors are present [Civ. Code § 1102.4]:

- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the personal knowledge of that agent.

- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was based on information timely provided by public agencies or by certain other persons (i.e., a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, structural pest control operator, contractor, or other expert, dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise) pursuant to a request by a prospective transferee.

- Ordinary care was exercised in obtaining and transmitting it.

For a form of an affirmative defense based on the fact that the alleged defects were included in a third party report as discussed above, see § 103.98[1].

[iv] Delivery of Transfer Disclosure Statement

If more than one licensed real estate broker is acting as an agent in the transaction, the broker who has obtained the offer must deliver the transfer disclosure statement to the buyer unless the seller has given other written instructions for delivery and except as provided in the next paragraph [Civ. Code § 1102.12(a)].

If a licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering the disclosures cannot obtain the required disclosure document and does not have written assurance from the buyer that the disclosure has been received, the broker must advise the buyer in writing of his or her rights to the disclosure. A licensed real estate broker responsible for delivering disclosures must maintain a record of the action taken to effect compliance in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148 [Civ. Code § 1102.12(b)].

[v] Related Disclosure Statements: Local Option Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement and Natural Hazard Disclosure Statement

When the transfer disclosure statement must be completed for a particular transaction, the city or county in which the subject property is located may require the transferor to provide additional information regarding the property. These additional disclosures must be made on a statutory form (the "local option real estate transfer disclosure statement") or on an alternative form required by a local ordinance adopted prior to July 1990 [Civ. Code § 1102.6a(a)]. For the statutory form, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements (Matthew Bender).

When the property is located in a specified natural hazard area, the transferor and his or her agent must make certain disclosures in a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement form [see Civ. Code § 1103.2(a)] or in the local option real estate disclosure statement if that statement includes substantially the same information and substantially the same warnings that are in the statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [Civ. Code § 1103.2(e); see Civ. Code § 1103 ret seq.]. These disclosures must be made with respect to same types of transfers subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see Civ. Code § 1103(a), discussed under [i], above]. They also apply to a resale transaction entered into on or after January 1, 2000, for a manufactured home or mobilehomes that is classified as personal property intended for use as a residence [Civ. Code § 1103(b); see Health & Safety Code §§ 18007, 18008]. The disclosures must be made when the property is located in a special flood hazard area, an area of potential flooding, a very high fire hazard severity zone, an earthquake fault zone, a seismic hazard zone, or a wildland area that may contain substantial forest fire risks and hazards [Civ. Code

§ 1103(c); for additional disclosure requirements relating to earthquake hazards, see [10], below]. For complete coverage of these disclosures, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser , and California Legal Forms, Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements (Matthew Bender).

[9] Environmental Hazards

[a] Consumer Information Booklet Covering Common Environmental Hazards

If the consumer information book described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10084.1 is delivered to a transferee in connection with a transfer of real property, the seller or broker is not required to provide additional information concerning, and the information provided is deemed to be adequate to inform the transferee regarding, common environmental hazards that can affect the real property [Civ. Code § 2079.7(a)]. This does not increase the duties of sellers or brokers or alter the duty of a seller or broker to disclose the existence of known environmental hazards on or affecting the real property [Civ. Code § 2079.7(b)].

[b] Lead-based Paint Disclosures

[i] Governing Federal Regulations

Two identical sets of federal disclosure requirements concerning the residential use of lead-based paint are set forth in the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) titles in the Code of Federal Regulations [see 24 C.F.R. § 35.80 et seq. (HUD); 40 C.F.R. § 745.100 et seq. (EPA); see also Section 1018 of the Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act of 1992, 42 U.S.C. § 4852d (directing EPA and HUD to jointly promulgate regulations)]. The regulatory requirements became applicable on September 6, 1996, for owners of more than four residential dwellings, and on December 6, 1996, for owners of one to four residential dwellings [24 C.F.R. § 35.84; 40 C.F.R. § 745.102].

[ii] Required Disclosures; Failure to Comply

The regulations require sellers and lessors of most residential housing built before 1978 to disclose the presence of known lead-based paint or lead-based paint hazards in the housing. For these purposes, "lead-based paint" means paint or other surface coatings that contain lead equal to or in excess of 1.0 milligram per square centimeter or 0.5 percent by weight [24 C.F.R. § 35.86; 40 C.F.R. § 745.103]. "Lead-based paint hazard" means any condition that causes exposure to lead from lead-contaminated dust, lead-contaminated soil, or lead-contaminated paint that is deteriorated or present in accessible surfaces, friction surfaces, or impact surfaces that would result in adverse human health effects as established by the appropriate federal agency [24 C.F.R. § 35.86; 40 C.F.R. § 745.103]. The seller or lessor must also disclose this information to each agent involved in the transaction [24 C.F.R. § 35.88(a)(3); 40 C.F.R. § 745.107(a)(3)].

Sellers, lessors, and their agents who fail to comply with the requirements are subject to civil and criminal penalties pursuant to the rule's enforcement provisions, and can be held jointly and severally liable in an amount equal to three times the amount of damages incurred [24 C.F.R. § 35.96; 40 C.F.R. § 745.118]. However, failure to comply does not invalidate a sales contract or lease.

For extensive coverage of these federal requirements, see the following discussions in California Real Estate Law & Practice (Matthew Bender):

- For a description of sellers' duties under the regulations and copies of sample EPA/HUD forms, see Ch. 71, Deposit Receipts and Other Agreements of Sale .

- For coverage of lessors' duties and a sample EPA/HUD form, see Ch. 170, The Premises: Duties and Liabilities .

- For discussion of agents' duties, see Ch. 63, Duties and Liabilities of Brokers .

[c] Notification of Controlled Substance Release

A seller of residential real property who knows that any release of an illegal controlled substance has come to be located on or beneath the real property must give written notice advising of that condition to the buyer before the property's sale. Notice is given by checking "yes" on the appropriate question on the Real Estate Transfer Disclosure Statement [see Civ. Code § 1102.6] and attaching a copy of any notice received from law enforcement or any other entity, such as the Department of Toxic Substances Control, the county health department, or the local environmental health officer [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1); see Civ. Code § 1940.7.5 (similar disclosure requirements applicable to landlords)]. A seller's knowledge of the condition is established by receipt of a notice as specified, or by actual knowledge of the condition from a source independent of the notice [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(2)]. A seller's delivery of this disclosure information is legally adequate for purposes of informing the prospective buyer of the condition; the seller is not required to provide any additional disclosure of the information [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(3)].

"Illegal controlled substance" means a drug, substance, or immediate precursor listed in specified schedules [see Health & Safety Code §§ 11054-11058], or an emission or waste material resulting from the unlawful manufacture or attempt to manufacture of an illegal controlled substance, which does not include marijuana [Civ. Code § 1102.18(a)(1)]. "Release" means any spilling, leaking, pumping, pouring, emitting, emptying, discharging, injecting, escaping, leaching, dumping, or disposing of an illegal controlled substance in a structure or into the environment [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(1)].

The owner's failure to provide written notice to the buyer when required by Civ. Code § 1102.18(b) will subject the owner to actual damages and any other remedies provided by law. In addition to any other damages provided by law, if the owner has actual knowledge of the presence of any release of an illegal controlled substance, and knowingly and willfully fails to provide written notice to the buyer as required, the owner is liable for a civil penalty not to exceed $5,000 for each separate violation [Civ. Code § 1102.18(b)(4)].

[d] Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001--Future Disclosure Requirements

The Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001 [Health & Safety Code §§ 26100-26156] requires the Department of Health Services to convene a task force of various experts and interested parties to advise the Department on the development of permissible exposure limits to molds, standards for assessment of molds in indoor environments, standards for identification of molds, and remediation of mold. The Act will eventually require any person who sells, transfers, or rents specified types of residential, commercial, or industrial real property to provide written disclosures to potential buyers, prospective tenants, renters, and landlords concerning mold problems in the real property [see Health & Safety Code §§ 26140-26153]. However, these disclosure duties and requirements would not apply until the January 1 or July 1 that occurs at least six months after the Department adopts the requisite standards and guidelines [see Health & Safety Code § 26154]. Adding additional uncertainty concerning these requirements, the Act will be implemented only to the extent the Department determines that funds are available for its implementation [Health & Safety Code § 26156].

[10] Earthquake Hazards

[a] Pre-1960 Light-Frame Residential Properties

The transferor of real property containing any residential dwelling built before January 1, 1960, with one to four living units of conventional light-frame construction must, as soon as practicable before the transfer, deliver to the purchaser or transferee a copy of the "Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety" published pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149 and complete the earthquake hazards disclosure regarding the property, clearly indicating whether the transferor has actual knowledge that the dwelling has any of the deficiencies listed in Gov. Code § 8897.2 [Gov. Code § 8897.1(a)

]. The duty of a real estate licensee under Gov. Code § 8897.1 et seq. is limited to providing the seller with a copy of the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety for delivery to the transferee under Civ. Code § 2079.8 [Gov. Code § 8897.5].

[b] Pre-1975 Precast Concrete or Unreinforced Masonry Buildings

The transferor (or his or her agent) of any precast concrete or reinforced masonry building with wood frame floors or roofs, built before January 1, 1975, that is located within any county or city must, as soon as practicable before the transfer, deliver to the purchaser a copy of the Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147 [Gov. Code § 8893.2; Gov. Code § 8875.6].

PRACTICE TIP:

Commercial Guide to Be Used for Certain Residential Properties. Notwithstanding the title of the guide described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147 ("Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety"), this guide must be delivered to purchasers of residential as well as commercial properties. This requirement sometimes is misinterpreted by real estate agents to apply only to commercial properties, no doubt due to the title of the guide. By Linda Breen Pierce

[c] Earthquake Guides as Sufficient Disclosure

If the Homeowner's Guide to Earthquake Safety published pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10149 or the Commercial Property Owner's Guide to Earthquake Safety described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147 is delivered to a transferee in connection with a transfer of real property, the seller or broker will not be required to provide additional information concerning (1) geologic and seismic hazards in general that may affect real property, or (2) mitigating measures that the transferee or seller might consider [Civ. Code §§ 2079.8(a), 2079.9(a)]. Notwithstanding the foregoing, Civ. Code §§ 2079.8 and 2079.9 do not increase or decrease the duties of a seller or broker or alter the duty of a seller or broker to disclose the existence of known hazards on or affecting the real property [Civ. Code §§ 2079.8(b), 2079.9(b)].

[d] Earthquake Fault Zone or Seismic Hazard Zone

As mentioned in § 103.31[8][c][v], an agent for a seller of real property that is subject to Civ. Code § 1103 et seq. must notify prospective purchasers when the property lies within an earthquake fault zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2622] or a seismic hazard zone [see Pub. Res. Code § 2696]. The notice must be set forth in a local option real estate transfer disclosure statement or a statutory natural hazard disclosure statement [see Civ. Code § 1103.2(a), (e)]. For coverage of these disclosure requirements, see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser .

[11] Mello-Roos Tax and Street Improvement Lien Assessment Installment Disclosures

The seller of any real property subject to the disclosure requirements of Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [see § 103.31[8]] must make disclosures if the property being transferred is subject to a continuing lien securing the levy of special taxes pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act [Gov. Code § 53111 et seq.] or to a fixed lien assessment collected in installments to secure bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 [Sts. & Hy. Code § 8500 et seq.] which concerns street improvements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(a)]. The seller must make a good faith effort to obtain and deliver to the transferee a disclosure notice concerning the special Mello-Roos tax provided in Gov. Code § 53340.2, and the assessment installment provided in Gov. Code § 53754 from each local agency that levies the special tax or that collects the assessment installments [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(b)]. Special provisions require the legislative body collecting assessment installments under the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 to designate an office, department, or bureau in the local agency to handle annual assessment installment obligation information, reports, and dissemination, among other related activities [Gov. Code § 53754(a)]. For purposes of enabling sellers of real property to satisfy notice requirements concerning these assessments, the agency must furnish a Notice of Assessment on request within five working days, at a charge not to exceed $10 [Gov. Code § 53754(b); see Gov. Code § 53754(c) (prescribed form for notice of assessment)].

A seller may satisfy the disclosure notice requirements by delivering a disclosure notice obtained from a nongovernmental source that satisfies the specified requirements [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(1); see Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(3) (provision does not change ability to make disclosures under Civ. Code § 1102.4)]. With regard to each type of required disclosure, a notice provided by a private entity other than a designated office, department, or bureau of the levying entity may be modified as needed to clearly and accurately describe either of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(d)(2)]:

- A special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy a special tax pursuant to the Mello-Roos Community Facilities Act against the property. This notice must include the name of the Mello-Roos levying taxes against the property, the annual tax due for the Mello-Roos for the current tax year, the maximum tax that may be levied against the property in any year, the percentage by which the maximum tax for the Mello-Roos may increase per year, and the date until the tax may be levied against the property for the Mello-Roos and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the Mello-Roos.

- Special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 levied against the property, or clearly and accurately consolidated information about two or more districts that levy or are authorized to levy special assessments and bonds pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915 against the property. This notice must include the name of the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, the current annual tax on the property for the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915, and a contact telephone number, if available, for further information about the special assessments and bonds issued pursuant to the Improvement Bond Act of 1915.

If these required disclosures have been delivered to the transferee, the seller or the seller's agent is not required to provide additional information concerning the special tax or assessment installments, and the disclosure information is deemed to satisfy the responsibility of the seller or the seller's agent to provide this information to the transferee. In any case, these disclosure requirements do not impose a duty agent to discover a special tax or assessment installments, or the existence of any levying district not actually known to the agents [Civ. Code § 1102.6b(e)].

[12] Home Energy Ratings and Water Conservation

If the informational booklet published pursuant to Pub. Res. Code § 25402.9 is delivered to a transferee in connection with the transfer of real property, the seller or broker is not required to provide information additional to that contained in the booklet concerning home energy ratings, and the information in the booklet will be deemed to be adequate to inform the transferee about the existence of a statewide home energy rating program [Civ. Code § 2079.10(a)].

Notwithstanding the foregoing, nothing in § 2079.10 alters any existing duty of the seller or broker under any other law including, but not limited to, the duties of a seller or broker under Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., or Pub. Res. Code § 2621 et seq., to disclose information concerning the existence of a home energy rating program affecting the real property [Civ. Code § 2079.10(b)].

If the informational booklet or materials described in Water Code § 375.5 concerning water conservation and water conservation programs are delivered to a transferee in connection with the transfer of real property, including property described in Civ. Code § 2079.10(a), the seller or broker is not required to provide additional information concerning water conservation and water conservation programs [Civ. Code § 2079.10(c)]. The information in the booklet or materials will be deemed to be adequate to inform the transferee about water conservation and water conservation programs [Civ. Code § 2079.10(c)].

[13] Disclosure of Law Enforcement Data Base of Registered Sex Offenders Locations

In response to the passage of "Megan's Law" requiring law enforcement authorities to maintain a data base of the locations of registered sex offenders and to provide that information to the public [see Penal Code §§ 290, 290.4, 290.46], certain written real estate contracts must contain a notice related to that data base [see Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a) (notice)]. The notice requirement applies to every contract of sale for residential real property comprising one to four dwelling units, including installment land sales contracts [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(a); see Civ. Code § 2985(a) (definition of real property sales contract)].

The information in the notice is deemed adequate to inform the transferee about the existence of the statewide data base and information from the data base regarding the locations of registered sex offenders [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. On delivery of this notice, the seller is not required to provide any further information in addition to that contained in the notice regarding the proximity of registered sex offenders, and making those disclosures cannot give rise to any cause of action against the seller by a registered sex offender [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(b)]. However, providing the statutory notice regarding the existence of the data base of registered sex offender locations does not alter any other existing duty that a seller has to make disclosures [Civ. Code § 2079.10a(c)].

[14] Other Disclosure Duties

[a] Notice of Selling Price

Within one month after the closing of a real estate transaction, a broker must give written notice to the seller and purchaser of the selling price. If the transaction is closed through escrow and the escrow holder renders a closing statement that reveals this information, that will be deemed compliance on the part of the broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10141].

[b] Structural Pest Control Inspection Report

The transferor or his or her agent must deliver a copy of a structural pest control inspection report to the buyer as soon as practicable prior to the close of escrow, provided that certification or preparation of a report is a condition of the contract effecting that transfer, or is a requirement imposed as a condition of financing the transfer [Civ. Code § 1099(a)].

[c] Occupant's Death

The transferor or his or her agent need not disclose to the buyer or lessee any death that occurred on the property more than three years prior to the date the buyer or lessee offers to purchase or lease the property. Furthermore, the transferor or agent need not disclose that a death was related to HIV-Aids, even if the death occurred within the previous three years [Civ. Code § 1710.2(a)]. Notwithstanding the foregoing, an agent may not intentionally misrepresent any information concerning deaths in response to a direct inquiry from the prospective purchaser or lessee [Civ. Code § 1710.2(d)].

[d] Supplemental Property Tax Bills

It is the sole responsibility of the seller of any residential real property in a transfer that is subject to Civ. Code § 1102 et seq., or the seller's agent, to deliver to the prospective purchaser a prescribed disclosure notice concerning supplemental property tax bills, in addition to any other disclosure required by Civ. Code § 1102 et seq. [Civ. Code § 1102.6c(a)].

PRACTICE TIP:

Agent Liability for Seller's Failure to Disclose. In addition to the disclosure requirements of both the transferor and the agent discussed in this § 103.31, there are many other disclosure requirements that are placed on the seller [see Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser]. If the seller breaches his or her duty to disclose, the seller's agent may have some potential liability also. If the seller claims to have been unaware of a disclosure requirement, the seller might have a cause of action for equitable indemnity against his or her agent for the latter's breach of his or her duty of due care in failing to advise the seller of the disclosure requirement. Also, because the duty of a seller's agent to exercise reasonable skill and care in the performance of his or her duties extends to the buyer as well as the seller [see § 103.31[2] (duty to use reasonable care)], a buyer might have a direct cause of action against the seller's agent for breach of this duty. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Keep the Seller's Duty to Disclose Separate and Distinct. A seller has disclosure obligations that are independent from the obligations of the broker or agent. To protect against a claim by the seller that he or she did not adequately understand the duty of disclose, the listing broker or agent should provide the statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement (TDS) [see § 103.31[8]] to the seller and advise the seller to ask any questions that he or she may have regarding the TDS. The broker/agent should memorialize any questions and the responses provided as well as the failure of the seller to ask any questions. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[e] Private Transfer-Fee Requirement

If property being transferred after 2007 is subject to a private transfer fee, the transferor must provide, at the time the transfer disclosure statement required pursuant to Civ. Code § 1102.6 is provided, an additional disclosure statement containing all of the following [Civ. Code § 1102.6e]:

- Notice that payment of a transfer fee is required on transfer of the property;
- The amount of the fee required for the asking price of the real property, and a description of how the fee is calculated;
- Notice that the final amount of the fee may be different if the fee is based on a percentage of the final sale price;
- The entity to which funds from the fee will be paid;
- The purposes for which funds from the fee will be used; and
- The date or circumstances under which the obligation to pay the transfer fee expires, if it could expire.

A private transfer fee, for this purpose, is any fee-payment requirement imposed in a covenant, restriction, or condition contained in any deed, contract, security instrument, or other document affecting the transfer or sale of, or any interest in, real property, which requires a fee be paid on transfer of the real property [Civ. Code § 1098; but see Civ. Code § 1098(a)-(i) (exceptions)].

In addition, the recipient of any such fee imposed before 2008, or the person or entity imposing any such fee after 2007, must record a document, entitled "Payment of Transfer Fee Required," in which pertinent facts about the fee-payment requirement are disclosed [Civ. Code § 1098.5].

For forms of these disclosure statements, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 23, Real Property Sales Agreements, § 23.314 (Matthew Bender).

§ 103.32 Vicarious Liability for Negligence of Third Party

A mortgage loan broker can be liable to the lender for the fraud or negligence of an independent property appraiser hired to appraise property that will be used to secure the loan. The rationale is that the business of mortgage loan brokering primarily benefits the broker, not the appraiser. Furthermore, the broker selects the appraiser and is free to insist on an appraiser who is financially able to indemnify the broker for any wrongdoing. The insurance necessary to protect the broker is viewed as a cost of the broker's business [Barry v. Raskov (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 447, 454-457, 283 Cal. Rptr. 463] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Vicarious Liability of Real Estate Brokers. The decision in Barry v. Raskov, discussed above, is an exception to the general rule that a person is not liable for the negligence of an independent contractor. Query whether the California courts will extend this exception to real estate brokers. One might argue that the relationship factors between mortgage loan brokers and appraisers could apply equally to the real estate broker and a termite inspector, home inspector, title company, or escrow officer, at least in those situations in which the real estate broker selects the third party provider rather than letting the client choose. On the other hand, a distinction can be made between the two types of relationships in that an appraisal of the property is an essential part of the services provided to the lender by the mortgage broker, whereas the service provided by the home inspector, for example, is a separate, independent service from that of a real estate broker. By Linda Breen Pierce

PRACTICE TIP: Liability for Negligent Recommendation. When it is alleged that a property inspector retained by the plaintiff-buyer prior to close of escrow conducted an inadequate inspection, the plaintiff-buyer will often allege that the broker or agent was negligent in recommending or retaining the inspector on the plaintiff-buyer's behalf. To avoid such circumstances, a real estate broker or agent should provide his or her client (the buyer) with a list ofinspectors to choose from and have the buyer select the inspector. The broker or agent may also want to provide a written disclaimer that the broker/agent makes no recommendation with respect to the abilities of any particular contractor on the list. The list of inspectors and any disclaimers should be reviewed and signed by the buyer. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.33 Liability of Brokers to Third Parties

[1] In General

In some instances the duties of a broker extend to both the buyer and seller, even if the agent represents, and therefore has a fiduciary relationship with, only one of the parties [see, e.g., §§ 103.31[2] (duty to use reasonable care), 103.31[4] (duty to disclose material facts), 103.31[7] (duty to be honest and truthful)]. These duties are similar to and closely related to the duties a broker has to his or her principal and are discussed in the applicable subsections in § 103.31. This section focuses on atypical situations in which the broker has liability to third parties (parties outside the fiduciary relationship).

[2] Negligence

A broker may be liable for negligence to a third party with whom the broker is not in privity of contract. In the leading case of Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 , the California Supreme Court set forth the following guidelines that will determine, as a matter of policy, whether liability will be imposed for the negligent performance of a contract [Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16] :

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff.
- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff.
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury.
- The closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered.

- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct.
- The policy of preventing future harm.

For example, a broker who, in leasing premises, negligently fails to warn a prospective tenant of a hidden defect, is liable if the tenant is injured as a result of that defect [Merrill v. Buck (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 552, 561-563, 25 Cal. Rptr. 456, 375 P.2d 304] . However, one court placed a limit to the broker's liability in this area when it held that the broker is not liable to guests of the buyer who are injured by a defective condition that the broker failed to disclose [FSR Brokerage, Inc. v. Superior Court (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 69, 73, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 404 (partygoers were not intended beneficiaries of information supplied by broker under ruling of Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370 , discussed in [5], below); see also Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 166, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564 (homebuyer's minor child was not intended beneficiary of disclosures made by broker to buyer with regard to property, and therefore could not sue broker for injury from undisclosed mold contamination)].

For a complaint for damages by a third party against a broker for the negligent performance of a contract, see § 103.100[1].

[3] Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

Liability to third parties under the guidelines set forth in Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 [see § 103.33[2]] has also been applied to negligent interference with prospective advantage [see J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 804-805, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60] . For example, a broker was held liable to a seller, notwithstanding the possible lack of an agency relationship with the seller, for interfering with the seller's abilities to sell its property and effect an exchange in the following circumstances. The broker made an offer on behalf of a buyer that was signed by the corporate seller's representative, but expressly conditioned on the oral approval of the controller. This approval was not obtained. The broker communicated to the buyer that the deal was firm, and when the seller refused to sell to the buyer, the buyer recorded a lis pendens against the property, thereby effectively preventing the seller from selling its property. The broker was held to be liable to the seller for interference with prospective advantage [Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 270, 289-293, 175 Cal. Rptr. 767 (disapproved on other grounds in Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 205, 219, 266 Cal. Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365)].

For further discussion and forms relating to a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage in general, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[4] Failure to Disclose

The liability criteria in Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 [see § 103.33[2]] may be applied to a broker who fails to disclose information to a party with whom there is no privity or fiduciary relationship. For example, a broker was held liable to the holder of an unrecorded deed of trust for failing to notify the holder of a pending sale when the broker was well aware of the holder's interest and when the broker assured the seller that he would "take care of" the matter [Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszker (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 41-43, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228] .

However, in a case involving a duty imposed by statute, the court held that a real estate broker owed no duty of care under Civ. Code § 2079 to a homebuyer's minor child who allegedly suffered injuries as the result of undisclosed microbial contamination of the home [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564] . Civ. Code § 2079(a) provides that a real estate broker has a duty "to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale and to disclose to that prospective purchaser all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that an investigation would reveal" [see § 103.31[8][b]]. The court concluded that the statute expressly imposes inspection and disclosure duties only toward prospective buyers and not to persons, such as the minor child, who are not parties to the real estate transaction [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564] . The court further concluded that the child was not an intended beneficiary of disclosures made by the broker to the buyer with regard to the property, and therefore could not sue the broker for injury from the undisclosed mold contamination [Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 166, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Expansion of Foreseeable Risk for Broker Liability. The case of Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszker, discussed above, is evidence of a judicial trend to hold a broker liable for his or her wrongful acts to third parties well outside the typical buyer-seller transaction. By Linda Breen Pierce

[5] Negligent Misrepresentation

A person who negligently supplies false information "for the guidance of others in their business transactions" is liable for economic loss suffered by the recipients in justifiable reliance on the information. The supplier of information is liable for negligence to a third party only if he or she intends to supply the information for the benefit of one or more third parties in a specific transaction or type of transaction identified to the supplier. In an opinion that held that an auditor could be liable to third party investors for negligent misrepresentation (as distinguished from general negligence) in preparing an independent audit of a client's financial statements, the California Supreme Court stated [Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 392, 410, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745] :

> Accountants are not unique in their position as suppliers of information and evaluations for the use and benefit of others. Other professionals, including attorneys, architects, engineers, title insurers and abstractors, and others also perform that function. And, like auditors, these professionals may also face suits by third persons claiming reliance on information and opinions generated in a professional capacity.

A real estate appraiser who, although retained by a mortgage broker, knows that his or her report will be used by potential investors in the brokered loan, may also be liable to third parties for negligent misrepresentation in preparing an appraisal. The fact that the appraiser does not know the specific lenders who might rely on the appraisal is immaterial. It is sufficient that the provider supplies the information for repetition to a certain group or class of persons and that the plaintiff proves to be one of them, even though the provider never had heard of the plaintiff by name when the information was given [Soderberg v. McKinney (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1760, 1767-1769, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Potential Liability of Real Estate Broker or Agent to Unrelated Third Party. The decision in Soderberg v. McKinney, discussed above, leads to the obvious question of the potential exposure of a real estate agent or broker to a party with whom the broker or agent has no contractual or fiduciary relationship. Brokers and agents offer many opinions and prepare documents that could be relied on by third parties. For example, a broker or agent often prepares a market analysis for an owner of property who is considering retaining or who has retained the broker or agent to sell his or her property. It is possible that this documentation could end up in the hands of a third party who would rely on the information contained in it. Theoretically, a real estate agent or broker could be exposed to liability if this third party relied on this information to his or her detriment. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.34 Broker's Right to Indemnification

A broker can be liable to his or her client for misrepresenting information received from a third party if the broker fails to verify the information or disclose that the information has not been verified [see § 103.31[3]]. In certain situations, the broker may be entitled to equitable indemnification from that third party.

For example, when a broker representing a buyer falsely represented to his client that an easement existed for a landlocked property, the broker had a cause of action for equitable indemnity against the seller who originally provided the false information about the easement. To justify equitable indemnification, the wrongs of the respective tortfeasors must differ essentially in character or kind, resulting in the conclusion that the negligence of the primary tortfeasor is active, while the broker's negligence is passive [Gardner v. Murphy (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 164, 167-168, 126 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

In another action, a mortgage loan broker was sued by its client because the client did not understand that the loan would be secured by her home. The court held that the mortgage loan broker could state a cause of action against an attorney who had provided written verification that he had explained the terms of the loan documentation to the client [Home Budget Loans, Inc. v. Jacoby & Meyers Law Offices (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1283-1285, 255 Cal. Rptr. 483] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Contractual Indemnity. A broker or agent may also have a right to contractual indemnity against his or her principal. For example, many of the standard listing agreements contain a clause that provides that the seller will indemnify the broker or agent for any claims arising out of misrepresentations or non-disclosures made by the seller. The ability to raise such a claim is important, particularly in the > context of settlement. A contractual indemnity claim will survive a good faith settlement determination. Additionally, the clause typically provides for the recovery of attorney's fees by the broker or agent [for complaints for express contractual indemnity, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution]. By Jeffrey S. Martin

For a complaint for equitable indemnity by a broker against a seller or buyer, see § 103.85[1].

§ 103.40 General Purpose

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq. create a special fund ("Recovery Account") supported by license fees to compensate individuals who are defrauded by real estate licensees. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a) provides for recovery from the fund of an unpaid judgment against a licensee for actual or constructive fraud or conversion of trust funds arising directly out of any transaction when the judgment debtor was licensed and performed acts for which that license was required. Recovery is available to those who have been defrauded by either a licensed real estate broker or a licensed real estate salesperson [Vinci v. Edmonds (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1254, 230 Cal. Rptr. 308] .

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471 is a remedial statute intended to protect the public against loss resulting from misrepresentation and a breach of fiduciary duty by licensed real estate personnel who are unable to respond to damage awards. Consequently, it is to be given a liberal construction to promote its purpose and protect persons within its purview. Relief is to be granted under the statute unless to do so would be clearly forbidden by that statute [Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 896-897, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 ; Vinci v. Edmonds (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1256, 230 Cal. Rptr. 308] .

Real estate licensees acting in their capacity as licensees are outside the class of aggrieved persons entitled to compensation from the Recovery Account. The protected class is the client, not the licensee [Wallace v. Onate (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 549, 553-554, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 3 (agent who reimbursed her buyer-clients for losses due to the fraud of seller-licensee could not recover from the Recovery Account); Middelsteadt v. Karpe (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 297, 302, 124 Cal. Rptr. 840 (broker could not recover from Recovery Account based on fraud of his salesperson related to an internal commission dispute)]. In addition, title insurance companies do not qualify as "aggrieved parties" who may recover from the Recovery Account because a title insurer is neither a "client" of the broker nor a vulnerable member of the general public [Stewart Title Guaranty Co. v. Park (9th Cir. 2001) 250 F.3d 1249, 1253] . In contrast, a defrauded licensee who acts as a principal in a transaction and whose conduct does not require a real estate license is not precluded from recovering from the fund by virtue of his or her status as a licensee [Buccella v. Mayo (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 315, 327, 162 Cal. Rptr. 369] .

§ 103.41 Eligibility for Payment

[1] Type of Judgment Required

An application for a payment from the Recovery Account may be submitted if the following requirements have been met [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)]:

- An aggrieved person obtains a final judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction or an arbitration award that (1) includes findings of fact and conclusions of law rendered in accordance with the rules established by the American Arbitration Association or another recognized arbitration body, and in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. (California arbitration law) when applicable, and (2) has been confirmed and reduced to judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4. A court of competent jurisdiction, for purposes of these provisions, includes federal courts, but does not include the courts of another state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)].

- The judgment against the defendant is based on the defendant's fraud, misrepresentation, or deceit, made with intent to defraud, or conversion of trust funds arising directly out of any transaction not in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10137 or 10138 in which the licensed defendant performed acts for which that license was required.

For these purposes, a final judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction includes, but is not limited to, a criminal restitution order issued pursuant to Penal Code § 1202.4(f) or 18 U.S.C. § 3663 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)]. An application for payment from the Recovery Account that is based on such an order must comply with all of the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(e) (this provision also sets forth definitions relevant to applications based on such an order)].

[2] Acts Requiring License

The defendant must actually have been licensed during the time the activity complained of occurred. An unlicensed defendant will not be treated as a licensee simply because he or she represented to the applicant that he or she held a license [Powers v. Fox (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 440, 447, 158 Cal. Rptr. 92] .

The fact that the defendant has a real estate license is not sufficient by itself; the activity forming the basis of the judgment must consist of acts for which that license is required. For example, if the defendant-licensee engages in activity as a principal, a judgment based on that activity will not satisfy the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a) [Buccella v. Mayo (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 315, 322-324, 162 Cal. Rptr. 369 ; Robinson v. Murphy (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 763, 767-769, 158 Cal. Rptr. 246 (broker-seller selling property co-owned with his wife was not a broker who "acts for another or others" within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131, and therefore his acts did not satisfy the requirements of performing acts for which a license was required); Stout v. Edmonds (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 66, 69-70, 225 Cal. Rptr. 345 (buyer-agent receiving a portion of listing agent's commission is not acting for another and therefore is not a broker within the definition of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131)].

The language "performed acts for which that license was required" (emphasis added) in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a) limits recovery to transactions that fall within the purview of the specific license held by the judgment debtor. In other words, a broker must perform acts for which a broker's license is required, and a salesperson must perform acts for which a salesperson's license is required. If the defendant's acts exceed the scope of his or her license, recovery is not permitted from the Recovery Account [Davis v. Harris (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 507, 511-512, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591 (judgment creditors not entitled to recovery because the judgment debtor was a salesperson and performed acts for which a broker's license was required)]. Prior to January 1, 1987, the words "that license" (emphasized above) in Section 10471(a) read "a license." In a decision interpreting that earlier language, the court held that it was not required that the licensee be licensed to take part in the particular transaction out of which the fraud arose; that is, it was not necessary that the transaction in question be within the scope of the licensee's license, at least in those situations in which the licensee failed to disclose to an innocent member of the public his or her true license status [see Dierenfield v. Stabile (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 126, 131-132, 243 Cal. Rptr. 598 (claimant entitled to payment based on default judgment against salesperson who failed to disclose to claimant that he was not employed by a broker at the time he performed acts for which a license was required), following the decision in Vinci v. Edmonds (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1254-1256, 230 Cal. Rptr. 308 (claimant could recover even though real estate salesperson performed acts requiring a broker's license when salesperson affirmatively misrepresented that he was a broker)].

When the licensee performs acts outside the scope of his or her particular license, but does not misrepresent his or her true licensing status to the claimant, the claimant may not recover from the Recovery Account. The rationale for this holding is that when the claimant is aware of the agent's true licensing status and engages the agent to perform acts outside the scope of that license, the claimant is not an innocent member of the public but is acting in pari delicto (in equal fault) by entering into an illegal contract with the agent [see Merrifield v. Edmonds (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 336, 343-345, 194 Cal. Rptr. 104] .

The judgment against the defendant may be a judgment in a class action suit [Edmonds v. Augustyn (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 465, 472, 243 Cal. Rptr. 673] , a judgment by default, stipulation, or consent, or a judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 594 (nonappearance at trial or hearing) [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473; see also Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897-899, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 (stipulated judgment)].

[3] Actual and Direct Loss

The amount of payment from the Recovery Account is limited to the amount unpaid on the judgment that represents an actual and direct loss to the claimant in the transaction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)]. The Legislature intended minimum and limited rather than maximum benefits to those otherwise qualifying. The statutory scheme is not intended to ensure that applicants recover profits; rather, the intent is to prevent applicants from suffering losses on money actually paid [Dierenfield v. Stabile (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 126, 132-133, 243 Cal. Rptr. 598] .

Punitive damages and indirect damages such as attorney's fees are deemed not to be within the meaning of "actual and direct" losses [Acebo v. Real Estate Education etc. Fund (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 907, 910-911, 202 Cal. Rptr. 518] . Noneconomic losses, such as emotional distress damages, are also not recoverable [Temple v. Kerwin (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1091, 257 Cal. Rptr. 651] .

However, costs incurred in connection with the applicant's attempts to satisfy a judgment against the defendant, as well as the prejudgment and postjudgment interest portions of any judgment that remain unpaid, are recoverable, subject to the limitation of the maximum recovery amounts discussed in [4], below [Deas v. Knapp (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 69, 75-76, 171 Cal. Rptr. 823, 623 P.2d 775 (costs); Nordahl v. Department of Real Estate (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 657, 666, 121 Cal. Rptr. 794] .

The pecuniary benefit of tax write-offs from an investment resulting from the defendant's fraud may be used to offset the losses suffered by claimants to determine the "actual and direct loss" from the transaction. This serves the purpose of the statute to place the applicants "in the same position, from a monetary standpoint" that they would have been in had the fraud not occurred [Froid v. Fox (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 832, 838-839, 183 Cal. Rptr. 461] .

[4] Maximum Recovery Amounts

Regardless of the number of persons aggrieved or parcels of real estate involved in a transaction or the number of judgments against a licensee, the liability of the Recovery Account will not exceed $50,000 for any one transaction and $250,000 for any one licensee, for causes of action occurring on or after January 1, 2009, or $20,000 for any one transaction and $100,000 for any one licensee, for causes of action occurring before that date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(a), (b); Edmonds v. Augustyn (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1056, 1065-1066, 238 Cal. Rptr. 704] .

When multiple licensed real estate personnel are involved in a transaction and the individual conduct of two or more of the licensees results in a judgment, the claimant may seek recovery from the Recovery Account based on the judgment against any of the licensed real estate personnel [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474(c); Edmonds v. Augustyn (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1056, 1067, 238 Cal. Rptr. 704] .

The term "transaction" as used in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474 may involve a series of many occurrences, depending not so much on the immediateness of their connection as on their logical relationship [Dombalian v. Fox (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 763, 765-767, 152 Cal. Rptr. 86 (listing agent who was undisclosed principal and who also forged owner's initials in escrow instructions was considered to have committed fraudulent acts in one transaction only)].

[5] Application Form

An application for payment must be made on a form prescribed by the Department and verified by the claimant, and must include the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(1)-(6); 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3101(a); for form, see § 103.105[1]]:

- The name and address of the claimant.

- If the claimant is represented by an attorney, the name, business address, and telephone number of the attorney.

- The identification of the judgment, the amount of the claim, and an explanation of its computation.

- A detailed narrative statement of the facts in explanation of the allegations of the complaint upon which the underlying judgment is based.

- For an application other than one based on a criminal restitution order, statement by the claimant, signed under penalty of perjury, that the complaint upon which the underlying judgment is based was prosecuted conscientiously and in good faith. For these purposes, "conscientiously and in good faith" means that no party potentially liable to the claimant in the underlying transaction was intentionally and without good cause omitted from the complaint, that no party named in the complaint who otherwise reasonably appeared capable of responding in damages was dismissed from the complaint intentionally and without good cause, and that the claimant employed no other procedural tactics contrary to the diligent prosecution of the complaint in order to provide access to the Recovery Account.

- For an application based on a criminal restitution order, statements that (1) the claimant has not intentionally and without good cause failed to pursue any person potentially liable to the claimant in the underlying transaction other than a defendant who is the subject of a criminal restitution order, (2) the claimant has not intentionally and without good cause failed to pursue in a civil action for damages all persons potentially liable to the claimant in the underlying transaction who otherwise reasonably appeared capable of responding in damages other than a defendant who is the subject of a criminal restitution order, and (3) the claimant employed no other procedural means contrary to the diligent prosecution of the complaint in order to seek to qualify for the Recovery Account [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(e)].

- The name and address of the judgment debtor or, if not known, the names and addresses of persons who may know the judgment debtor's present whereabouts.

Additionally, the application form must include the following information and representations made by the claimant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)(7)]:

- That he or she is not a spouse of the judgment debtor or a personal representative of the spouse.

- That he or she has complied with all of the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq.

- That the judgment underlying the claim meets the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a) [see [1], above (type of judgment required)], including that the judgment was issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, which for purposes of these provisions includes federal courts, but does not include the courts of another state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)].

- A description of searches and inquiries conducted by or on behalf of the claimant with respect to the judgment debtor's assets liable to be sold or applied to satisfaction of the judgment, an itemized valuation of the assets discovered, and the results of actions by the claimant to have the assets applied to satisfaction of the judgment.

- That he or she has diligently pursued collection efforts against other judgment debtors and all other persons liable to the claimant in the transaction that is the basis for the underlying judgment. For example, failure to sue personally the principals and employees of a bankrupt corporate broker (or even to conduct discovery) was held to preclude recovery from the fund on a judgment against the corporate broker when there was evidence of possible personal liability of the principals and employees [Fine v. Southern Cal. Business Sales, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 480, 482-484, 235 Cal. Rptr. 489] .

- That the underlying judgment and debt have not been discharged in bankruptcy, or, in the case of a bankruptcy proceeding that is open at the time of the filing of the application, that the judgment and debt have been declared to be nondischargeable.

- That the application was mailed or delivered to the Department no later than one year after the underlying judgment became final.

An applicant for a payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account must also provide the Department of Real Estate with proof of the applicant's legal presence in the United States [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. For further discussion, see [7], below.

Finally, the application form must include detailed instructions with respect to documentary evidence, pleadings, court rulings, the products of discovery in the underlying litigation, and a notice to the applicant of his or her obligation to protect the underlying judgment from discharge in bankruptcy, to be appended to the application [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(d)].

[6] Substantially Complete Application

Except as provided below, and in addition to the contents of the application described in [5], above (application form), an application will be deemed to be "substantially complete" when it includes all of the following information [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3102(a)-(s)]:

(1) Proof that the judgment debtor was served with the notice prescribed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(e) (notice to judgment debtor of application for payment out of Recovery Account) [see § 103.106[1] (form)] and application.

(2) A copy of the judgment showing it to be a final judgment and any findings of facts, conclusions of law, jury verdicts, jury special verdicts, statements of decisions, memorandum decisions, or any other indication by the court or jury, as the case may be, of its decision and the reasons for the decision. If the original judgment was appealed, the application must include copies of the appellate decision and remittitur.

(3) Copies of the original complaint, answer, cross-complaints, answers to cross-complaints, and all amendments or other subsequent versions of any of those documents.

(4) Copies of any pre-trial or post-trial briefs or settlement conference statements.

(5) A listing of all depositions and interrogatories taken in the underlying action, describing the party or parties taking the deposition or propounding the interrogatories, the deponent or person responding to interrogatories, and all persons present at any deposition.

(6) Copies of any demurrers or motions for summary judgment, supporting documents, and rulings on the demurrers or motions.

(7) Copies of all documents reflecting the terms of the underlying transaction, including, for example, offers, counteroffers, escrow instructions, closing statements, deeds, notes, and deeds of trust.

(8) A detailed narrative description by the claimant under penalty of perjury of all the facts of the underlying transaction, including how he or she was damaged by the judgment debtors, and the roles of all other persons involved in the transaction (such as other brokers or salespersons, sellers, and buyers).

(9) A description by the claimant of the basis for each element of damages.

(10) If the only judgment debtor was a salesperson, a statement as to why the employing broker was not either sued or taken to judgment.

(11) If any codefendants were dismissed from the underlying lawsuit, a statement of the reason for dismissal as to each such codefendant.

(12) A list of the names of any witnesses who testified at the underlying trial and the present or last known addresses of the witnesses to the extent known by the claimant.

(13) A description of searches and inquiries conducted by or on behalf of the claimant with respect to the assets of the judgment debtor and the assets of all other persons liable to the claimant in the transaction, which assets may be liable to be sold or applied to the losses suffered by the claimants; an itemized valuation of the assets discovered; and the results of actions by the claimant to have the assets applied to the losses suffered by the claimant.

(14) If the claimant claimed any loss related to the transaction as a deduction on his or her tax return or returns, a description of the amount of the tax benefit derived from the deduction.

(15) A statement whether the judgment debtor is known to have filed bankruptcy. If so, a statement whether the claimant was named as a creditor in the bankruptcy, filed a claim in the bankruptcy, and pursued an adversary complaint to have the debt determined to be nondischargeable. If the judgment debtor filed bankruptcy and the claimant failed to take any of the foregoing actions, a statement as to why the claimant failed to take the actions.

(16) Abstracts of judgment bearing evidence of having been recorded in the county or counties in which the judgment debtor may possibly have assets.

(17) If any of the above items are not included in the initial application, or are requested in a deficiency letter and not supplied, a statement under penalty of perjury that the claimant has made a diligent effort to locate and produce the items but has been unable to locate them or has found that they do not exist.

(18) Certification by the claimant that all documents submitted are true and correct copies of the originals, and if such documents purport to be copies of documents filed in court, that they are true and correct copies of the originals filed with the court [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3101(c)].

All of the above documents or copies of documents must be clear and legible [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3102(r)].

An application with less than all of the above information may constitute a substantially complete application if the claimant believes that the information submitted with the application is sufficient for the Department to determine whether the application qualifies for payment under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq., and either of the following applies [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3101(b)]:

- The Department determines that what has been submitted is sufficient for it to make a determination whether the application qualifies for payment from the Recovery Account and so notifies the claimant.

- The application and supporting information meet all of the requirements specified in the above list of documents and information.

[7] Proof of Legal Presence

In addition to satisfying the requirements set forth in [5] and [6], above, an applicant for a payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account must provide the Department of Real Estate (DRE) with proof of the applicant's legal presence in the United States [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. A similar requirement applies to applicants for a real estate license [see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Ch. 64, Licensing and Discipline of Brokers (Matthew Bender)]. These requirements became operative on August 1, 1998, and were promulgated by the DRE pursuant to federal legislation that eliminated certain public benefits for illegal immigrants [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718; see 8 U.S.C. § 1621; see also 8 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.].

To satisfy the DRE requirements, an applicant for payment must do the following:

- Declare himself or herself to be (1) a citizen of the United States, (2) a qualified alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(d) (definition of "qualified alien," which includes an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence or granted asylum under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) [8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.])], (3) a nonimmigrant alien [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(e) (adopting INA definition of this term, which is set forth in 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15))], or (4) an alien paroled into the United States for less than one year under Section 212(d)(5) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) [8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)]. The applicant must declare this status by completing and signing the "State Public Benefits Statement" (DRE Form 205) [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(1)]. An alien who does not fall within one of the three categories described in items (2)-(4), above, is not eligible to receive a payment from the Account [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(b)].

- Present documents that are acceptable to the Immigration and Naturalization Services (INS) and are included in List A or List B of DRE Form 205. List A sets forth acceptable documents to establish U.S. citizenship, such as a birth certificate; List B identifies documents that may be submitted by an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence under the INA, such as a "green card." These documents will serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(2); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(g), (i) (circumstances under which documents must be submitted to INS for verification through Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements [SAVE] system or alternative verification-related procedures must be followed)].

When the documents presented do not on their face appear to be genuine or to relate to the individual presenting them, the government entity that originally issued the documents must be contacted for verification [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(3), (j)]. With regard to naturalized citizens and derivative citizens presenting certificates of citizenship and aliens, the DRE will request verification from the INS. If the applicant has lost his or her original documents, presents expired documents, or is unable to present any documentation evidencing his or her immigration status, the applicant will be referred to the local INS office to obtain documentation [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(f)(3), (j); see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(k) (requiring acceptance of INS verification, and denial of benefits if INS cannot verify applicant's status)].

The applicant may present documents described above that serve as reasonable evidence of the applicant's declared status prior to applying for payment from the Real Estate Recovery Fund [see 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(h)].

Any denial of a payment application pursuant to the above provisions will be subject to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act [Gov. Code § 11340 et seq.] governing formal hearings [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718(o); see Bus. & Prof. § 10100; see also Gov. Code § 11500 et seq. (hearing provisions)].

[8] Limitation Period and Delivery to Department of Real Estate

The application must be delivered in person or by certified mail to an office of the Department of Real Estate not later than one year after the judgment has become final [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(b)].

[9] Service and Notice to Judgment Debtor

The claimant must serve a copy of the application and of the notice prescribed in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(e) (notice to judgment debtor of application for payment out of Recovery Account) on the judgment debtor [for a form of notice, see § 103.106[1]]. Service must be personal, by certified mail, or by publication [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(a)]. If the judgment debtor holds unexpired and unrevoked licenses issued by the Department, service of the notice and a copy of the application may be made by certified mail addressed to the judgment debtor at the latest business or residence address on file with the Department. If the judgement debtor does not hold an unexpired and unrevoked license issued by the Department, and personal service cannot be effected through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the claimant must serve the judgment debtor by one publication of the notice in each of two successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the judgment debtor was last known to reside [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(b)].

If the application is served on the judgment debtor by certified mail, service is complete five days after mailing if the address is within California, and 10 days after mailing if the address is outside California but within the United States. Personal service is complete on the date of service, and service by publication is complete on completion of the second week of publication [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(c)].

Forms for proof of service are available from the Department of Real Estate and are normally obtained when the application is obtained.

[10] Contest of Payment by Judgment Debtor

If a judgment debtor wishes to contest payment of an application by the Commissioner, he or she must mail or deliver a written response to the application. The response must be addressed to the Department's headquarter office and mailed or delivered within 30 days after service of the notice and application. The judgment debtor must also mail or deliver a copy of the response to the claimant. A judgment debtor who fails to mail or deliver a timely response waives his or her right to present objections to payment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(d)].

§ 103.42 Administrative Proceedings

[1] Judgment Debtor's Response

Any response by a judgment debtor objecting to payment from the Recovery Account on account of the judgment against him or her must be in writing and must be filed with the Department within 30 days after mailing, delivery, or publication of the notice by the claimant [see § 103.41[9] (notice to judgment debtor); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474.1(c)]. The response must contain a verification that a copy of the response was sent to the claimant, or if the claimant is represented by an attorney, to the claimant's attorney, at the address specified in the application for the claimant or his or her attorney [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3103(a)]. If the judgment debtor is not represented by an attorney in objecting to payment of the application, the response must contain the judgment debtor's name, the address at which he or she wishes to receive correspondence and notices relating to the application, and a telephone number where he or she can be reached during regular business hours. If the judgment debtor is represented by an attorney in objecting to the application, the response must contain the name, business address, and telephone number of the attorney [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3103(b)].

A judgment debtor who fails to respond within the 30-day period described above is not thereafter entitled to notice of any action taken or proposed to be taken by the Commissioner with respect to the claim [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(d)].

[2] Service of Subsequent Notices and Correspondence

After initial service of the application on the Department and the judgment debtor by the claimant [see §§ 103.41[8] (delivery to Department) and 103.41[9] (service on judgment debtor)], and after service of a response by the judgment debtor as discussed in [1], above (judgment debtor's response), all parties must be served with subsequent correspondence and notices by first class mail as follows [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3104]:

- The Department must be served at:

  Department of Real Estate
  Recovery Account Unit
  P.O. Box 187007
  Sacramento, CA 95818-7007

- The claimant must be served at his or her address as specified in the application, or if the claimant is represented by an attorney, at the address of the attorney as specified in the application.

- The judgment debtor must be served at his or her address as specified in the response, or if the judgment debtor is represented by an attorney, as specified in the response.

[3] Deficient Application

If the Commissioner determines that the application as submitted by the claimant fails to comply substantially with the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471 or with the requirements of a regulation adopted by the Commissioner under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10080, the Commissioner must, within 15 days after receipt of the application, mail an itemized list of deficiencies to the claimant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.2(a)].

If the Department has mailed one or more itemized lists of deficiencies to a claimant and, after an unreasonable length of time, the Department has received no response to the latest such list of deficiencies, the Department may notify the claimant that, unless the application is substantially complete within a specified period of time of not less than 30 days, the application will be denied [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3107(a)]. The determination of what constitutes an unreasonable length of time is within the discretion of the Commissioner, taking into account the degree of difficulty in meeting the deficiencies specified. However, an unreasonable length of time must not be deemed to be less than six months after the last mailing of a list of deficiencies [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3107(b)]. If no response is received from the claimant after the passing of the deadline, the Commissioner may deny the application [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3107(c)].

[4] Filing of Claim With Court in Event of Irreconcilable Dispute as to Sufficiency of Application

In the event of an irreconcilable dispute between the claimant and the Commissioner on the question of whether the application is substantially complete, the claimant may immediately file the claim with the court pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.2(b); see § 103.44 (judicial review initiated by claimant)].

[5] Written Arguments

A judgment debtor who has filed a response objecting to payment to a claimant from the Recovery Account may submit written argument setting forth in detail the factual and legal bases on which he or she believes the application should be denied. The argument may be submitted at any time from the filing of the response until 30 days after the date of mailing of the notice to the judgment debtor set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(c), and must be served on the Department and the claimant [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3106(a); see [2], above (service requirements for subsequent notices and correspondence)].

The claimant has 30 days after the mailing of argument by the judgment debtor in which to submit his or her own reply argument in favor of payment. The argument must be served on the judgment debtor and Department [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3106(b); see [2], above (service requirements for subsequent notices and correspondence)].

[6] Proration of Claims

If, at any time prior to the rendering of a decision on an application, the Commissioner makes a preliminary determination that the aggregate valid applications of all aggrieved persons against that licensee are likely to exceed the limits of liability in Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474 [see § 103.41[4] (maximum recovery amounts)], the Commissioner must, in lieu of further administrative proceedings, initiate a proration proceeding pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474.5 in a superior court of any county in this state that would be a proper court for the filing of a denied application or writ of mandamus pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.5 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.6]. Proper courts for a denied application are discussed in [9], below, and proper courts for a writ of mandamus are discussed in § 103.43.

The proration proceeding will determine the distribution of the amount of liability in the Recovery Account allocated to one licensee for payment to all aggrieved persons with valid claims [see § 103.41[4] (maximum recovery amounts)]. The amount will be distributed among the claimants in the ratio that their respective claims bear to the aggregate of the valid claims, or in any other manner that the court deems equitable. Distribution of any moneys will be among the persons entitled to share in the moneys, without regard to the order of priority in which their respective judgments may have been obtained or their claims have been filed. On petition of the Commissioner, the court may require all claimants and prospective claimants against one licensee to be joined in one action, to the end that the respective rights of all claimants to the Recovery Account may be equitably adjudicated and settled [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10474.5].

For purposes of a proration petition, persons may have "valid claims" without first having obtained a judgment against the licensee from a court of competent jurisdiction (which includes California and federal courts, but does not include the courts of another state) as required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a). However, the claims of aggrieved persons who do not have a final judgment against the licensee must first be adjudicated in either the proration or another proceeding, and the judgment against the licensee must become final, before the distribution of money from the Recovery Account may be ordered. The court adjudicating the Commissioner's proration petition may adopt reasonable procedures to permit the claimants to first obtain a judgment in the same or another proceeding, allow the judgment to become final, engage in appropriate collection efforts, and finally apply for and obtain a judgment allowing payment from the Recovery Account [Edmonds v. Augustyn (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 465, 471, 243 Cal. Rptr. 673] .

[7] Commissioner's Action on Application

The Commissioner must render a final written decision on the application within 90 days after receipt of a completed application, unless the claimant agrees in writing to extend the time within which the Commissioner may render a decision. If the Commissioner fails to render a written decision in response to the claim within 90 days after its receipt or within the extended period agreed to by the claimant, the claim is deemed to have been denied by the Commissioner on the final day for rendering the decision [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.3(a)].

The Commissioner may deny or grant the application, or may enter into a compromise with the claimant to pay less in settlement than the full amount of the claim. If the claimant refuses to accept a settlement of the claim offered by the Commissioner, the written decision of the Commissioner will be to deny the claim or it will be deemed denied if a written decision is not rendered within the 90-day time limit. Evidence of settlement offers and discussions between the Commissioner and the claimant will not be competent evidence in judicial proceedings undertaken by the claimant pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.3(b); see § 103.44 (judicial review initiated by claimant)].

[8] Investigation and Discovery

In its consideration and investigation of an application, the Department of Real Estate has recourse to all appropriate means of investigation and discovery available to it under Gov. Code §§ 11180-11191 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.4].

[9] Notice of Decision

The Commissioner must give notice of a decision rendered with respect to the application to the claimant and to a judgment debtor who has filed a timely response to the claim in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.5(a)].

If the application is denied, the notice to the claimant and judgment debtor must include language stating that the claimant's application is denied, and that if the claimant wishes to pursue the application in court, the claimant must file the application in a superior court of this state not later than six months after receipt of the notice, pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472. If the underlying judgment is a California state court judgment, the application must be filed in the court in which the underlying judgment was entered. If the underlying judgment is a federal court judgment, the application must be filed in a superior court of any county within California that would have been a proper venue if the underlying lawsuit had been filed in a California state court, or in the superior court of Sacramento County [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.5(b); see § 103.44 (judicial review initiated by claimant)].

[10] Insufficient Funds in Recovery Account

If at any time, the money deposited in the Recovery Account is insufficient to satisfy any duly authorized claim or portion of such a claim, the Commissioner must, when sufficient money has been deposited in the Recovery Account, satisfy the unpaid claims or portions of claims, in the order that the claims or portions of claims were originally filed, plus accumulated interest at the rate of four percent a year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10476].

§ 103.43 Judicial Review Initiated by Judgment Debtor

If the claimant is to be paid out of the Recovery Account, the Commissioner must give the judgment debtor a notice along with a copy of the decision. The notice must specify the amount of the payment to be made to the claimant, and state that pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 10475 [see § 103.45[1] (suspension of license)], the debtor's licenses and license rights are suspended and may not be reinstated until the debtor has reimbursed the Account for the payment plus interest at the prevailing legal rate. In addition, the notice must indicate that if the judgment debtor desires a judicial review of the suspension of the licenses and license rights, the debtor may petition the superior court for a writ of mandamus. If the underlying judgment is a California state court judgment, the petition must be filed in the court in which the judgment was entered. If the underlying judgment is a federal court judgment, the petition must be filed in the superior court of any county within California that would have been a proper venue if the underlying lawsuit had been filed in a California state court, or in the superior court of Sacramento County. To be timely, the petition must be filed with the court within 30 days after receipt of the notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.5(c)].

If the decision of the Commissioner is to make a payment out of the Recovery Account and the judgment debtor petitions for a writ of mandamus, no payment will be made on the pending application unless and until the writ of mandamus has been denied and the denial has become final [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3109(a)]. If the writ of mandamus is granted on the basis that the claimant has not met the requirements for payment from the Recovery Account, the application must be denied [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 3109(b)].

§ 103.44 Judicial Review Initiated by Claimant

[1] Application

If the Commissioner renders a decision denying an application for payment from the Recovery Account, the claimant may file a verified application within six months after the mailing of the notice of the denial in superior court for an Order Directing Payment Out of the Recovery Account, based on the grounds set forth in the application to the Commissioner. If the underlying judgment is a California state court judgment, the application must be filed in the court in which the underlying judgment was entered. If the underlying judgment is a federal court judgment, the application must be filed in the superior court of any county within California that would have been a proper venue if the underlying lawsuit had been filed in a California state court, or in the superior court of Sacramento County [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(a)].

For a form of application, see § 103.107[1].

This judicial review procedure is available only to the claimant when the application is denied, and is not intended as a forum for review by the judgment debtor when the application is granted [Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897-898, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] . However, a broker-judgment debtor has the right to challenge an adverse decision by traditional mandate [Rodriguez v. Department of Real Estate (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1298, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652 ; see § 103.43 (judicial review initiated by judgment debtor)].

[2] Service and Notice

A copy of the verified application must be served on the Commissioner. The service may be made by certified mail addressed to the headquarters office of the Department of Real Estate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b)].

A copy of the verified application, together with a prescribed notice, must be served on the judgment debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b); see § 103.108[1] for notice form]. Service may be made on the judgment debtor in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b); see § 103.41[9] (service on judgment debtor)].

Finally, the claimant must file with the court a certificate or affidavit of service on the Commissioner and the judgment debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b)].

[3] Written Response and Settlement

The Commissioner and the judgment debtor each have 30 days after being served with the application in which to file a written response [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472.1(a)].

If the judgment debtor fails to file a written response to the application, the claim may be compromised or settled by the Commissioner at any time during the court proceedings and the court will, on joint petition of the applicant and the Commissioner, issue an order directing payment out of the Recovery Account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472.1(c)]. However, if the judgment debtor timely files a written response, any compromise made by the Commissioner on the claim is subject to court approval [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473 (Commissioner may compromise claim, subject to court approval)]. In any event, the Commissioner is not bound by any compromise or stipulation of the judgment debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473].

[4] Hearing

After the 30-day response period has passed, the court must set the matter for hearing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472.1(a)].

Any party may request a continuance and, on a showing of good cause, the court may continue the hearing for any time that the court deems appropriate. However, the Commissioner may request a continuance of as much as 30 days without showing good cause, which, if so requested, the court is required to grant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472.1(a)].

[5] Applicant's Burden of Proof

The claimant has the burden of proving compliance with the requirements of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471 by competent evidence at an evidentiary hearing. The claimant is entitled to a de novo review of the merits of the application as contained in the administrative record [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472.1(b); see § 103.41 (eligibility for payment)].

All matters that were finally adjudicated in the underlying action, including, but not limited to, the issues of fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds, are conclusive as to the applicant in the proceeding against the Recovery Account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473.1]. Thus, when the findings of fact and conclusions of law supporting the underlying judgment do not include fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds, the applicant is precluded from relitigating this issue in the proceedings to recover from the Recovery Account [Stuart v. Department of Real Estate (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 195 Cal. Rptr. 524] .

If the judgment in favor of the applicant was by default, stipulation, or consent, or pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 594 (nonappearance at trial or hearing), or whenever the action against the licensee was defended by a trustee in bankruptcy, the applicant has the burden of proving that the cause of action against the licensee was for fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473].

[6] Defense by Judgment Debtor

The judgment debtor may defend an action against the Recovery Account on his or her own behalf. In so doing, the judgment debtor has recourse to all appropriate means of defense and review, including examination of witnesses.

However, all matters that were finally adjudicated in the underlying action, including but not limited to the issues of fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds, are conclusive as to the judgment debtor in the proceeding against the Recovery Account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473.1].

[7] Defense by Commissioner

The Commissioner may defend the action on behalf of the Recovery Account. In so doing, the Commissioner has recourse to all appropriate means of defense and review, including examination of witnesses and the right to relitigate any issues material and relevant in the proceeding against the Recovery Account that were determined in the underlying action on which the judgment in favor of the applicant was based. The underlying judgment normally creates a rebuttable presumption of the fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds by the licensee, and this presumption affects the burden of producing evidence. This presumption does not apply, and the applicant has the burden of proof, (1) in the case of a judgment by default, stipulation, or consent, or pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 594 (nonappearance at trial or hearing), or (2) whenever the action against the licensee was defended by a trustee in bankruptcy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473; see Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897-899, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] .

The Commissioner may move the court at any time to dismiss the application when no triable issues are apparent and when the petition is without merit. The motion may be supported by affidavit of any person or persons having knowledge of the facts, and may be made on the basis that the petition, and the judgment referred to in the petition, does not form the basis for a meritorious recovery claim within the purview of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471. The Commissioner must give written notice at least 10 days before the motion [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473].

[8] Order for Payment

When the court proceeds on an application under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472, it must order payment out of the Recovery Account only on a determination that the aggrieved party has a valid cause of action within the purview of Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471 [see § 103.41 (eligibility for payment), and has complied with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472 (see [1], above) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10473; see § 103.109[1] for an order for payment].

§ 103.45 Legal Effect of Recovery Account Payment

[1] Suspension of License

If the Commissioner pays from the Recovery Account any amount in settlement of a claim or toward satisfaction of a judgment against a licensed broker or salesperson, the license of the broker or salesperson is automatically suspended on the date of payment from the Recovery Account. No broker or salesperson may be granted reinstatement until he or she has repaid in full, plus interest at the prevailing legal rate applicable to a judgment rendered in any court of this state, the amount paid from the Recovery Account on his or her account. A discharge in bankruptcy does not relieve a person from these penalties and disabilities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10475].

The fact that the statutory scheme permits this automatic suspension of the broker's license without a right to a full hearing at which oral testimony may be offered and witnesses may be confronted and cross-examined is not a violation of due process under the California constitution. The broker has the opportunity to be heard in the underlying action, a second opportunity to present his or her case in writing to the Department of Real Estate, and finally, the opportunity for judicial review by traditional mandate [Rodriguez v. Department of Real Estate (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1298, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 652 (traditional, not administrative, mandate is appropriate procedure); see § 103.43 (judicial review initiated by judgment debtor)].

[2] Commissioner's Subrogation Rights

When the Commissioner has paid from the Recovery Account any sum to the judgment creditor, the Commissioner is subrogated to all of the rights of the judgment creditor. The judgment creditor must assign all of his or her right, title, and interest in the judgment to the Commissioner. Any amount and interest recovered by the Commissioner on the judgment must be deposited in the Recovery Account [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10479].

[3] Disciplinary Action Against Licensee

Nothing in Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10470-10481 limits the authority of the Commissioner to take disciplinary action against any licensee for a violation of the Real Estate Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 11000 et seq.) or of the rules and regulations of the Commissioner. Nor does the repayment in full of all obligations to the Recovery Account by any licensee nullify or modify the effect of any other disciplinary proceeding brought pursuant to the Real Estate Law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10481].

§ 103.46 False or Willful Misstatement

Any person or the agent of any person who files with the Commissioner any notice, statement, or other document required under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10470 et seq. that is false or untrue or contains any willful, material misstatement of fact is guilty of a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10478].

§ 103.47 Waiver by Claimant

§ 103.62 Decisions

[1] Broker as Fiduciary

Broker abused trust and breached fiduciary duties to buyer when she procured legal title to condominium by making false promises and duping buyer out of monies he put toward down payment. Warren v. Merrill (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 96, 111-112, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122

Real estate brokers are subject to two sets of duties: those imposed by regulatory statutes and those arising from general law of agency. Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 754-756, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

Oral agreement authorizing someone to act as an agent and find a buyer for principal's property, and under which agent receives confidential information respecting the property, is sufficient to create fiduciary relationship between the parties. Gann v. Williams Brothers Realty, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1698, 1705, 283 Cal. Rptr. 128

Salesperson employed by mortgage loan broker was agent of investors when salesperson acted as investment counselor, negotiated loan, and signed note to investors, and thus was liable for breach of fiduciary duty to investors in not disclosing real borrower and illegality of unsecured note. Montoya v. McLeod (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 63-65, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353

Relationship between broker and his or her principal is fiduciary in nature, and imposes on broker duty of acting in highest good faith toward principal; this duty of good faith precludes broker from assuming position adverse to that of principal unless principal consents; broker is under legal obligation to disclose to principal all facts in broker's knowledge that are material to matter in connection with which broker was employed. Bate v. Marsteller (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 573, 580-581, 346 P.2d 903

[2] Broker as Dual Agent

Broker representing both parties has duty of disclosure to both principals, and failure to disclose to both precludes recovery of commission. L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 304-306, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680

General rule is that broker may represent both parties to a contract with their full knowledge and consent. Wilson v. Lewis (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 802, 806, 165 Cal. Rptr. 396

[3] Broker as Intermediary or Finder

Finder is person whose employment is limited to bringing parties together so that they may negotiate their own contract; distinction between finder and broker frequently turns on whether intermediary has been invested with authority or duties beyond merely bringing parties together, usually authority to participate in negotiations; act of solicitation under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131 of buyer when no advance fee is involved does not necessarily preclude determination that person was finder. Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65

Distinction between broker and finder is significant in determining whether intermediary stands in confidential relationship to one party to transaction. Batson v. Strehlow (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 662, 668-670, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101

Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136, prohibiting person acting in capacity of real estate broker from maintaining action for compensation, applicable to plaintiff unable to allege facts that would cast him or her in role of finder. Zappas v. King Williams Press, Inc. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 768, 775, 89 Cal. Rptr. 307

[4] Broker and Principal Relationship

As agent, broker's relationship with principal is that of trustee to beneficiary. Smith v. Zak (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 785, 792, 98 Cal. Rptr. 242

Principles of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing applicable to broker's employment agreement with buyer and also applicable to prospective lessor in his or her dealings with broker. Colwell Co. v. Hubert (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 567, 576, 56 Cal. Rptr. 753

[5] Lack of License

If broker's performance includes services of unlicensed person performing acts for which real estate license is required, broker cannot recover commission from seller unless he or she was justifiably ignorant of unlicensed person's unlawful acts. Preach v. Monter Rainbow (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1454-1458, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320

One who simply finds and introduces two parties to real estate transaction does not need to be licensed as real estate broker; such an intermediary is protected by finder's exception to real estate licensing law. Tyrone v. Kelley (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8-9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65

[6] Statute of Frauds

Licensed real estate broker presumed to know that contracts for real estate commissions are invalid and unenforceable unless put in writing and subscribed by person to be charged; broker who fails to secure proper written authorization to protect himself or herself in transaction and assumes risk of relying on seller's claimed oral promises has no cause for complaint if his or her efforts go unrewarded. Pacific S.W. Dev. Corp. v. Western Pac. R.R. Co. (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 62, 70, 301 P.2d 825

Under certain circumstances, broker or agent may collect commission without written agreement. Torelli v. J.P. Enterprises, Inc. (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1250, 1256-1257, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76

Essential requirements of Civ. Code § 1624(d) are that there be some written evidence of (1) subscription by party to be charged, and (2) fact of employment, in other words, authority to act. Friddle v. Epstein (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1649, 1655, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85

When broker completes his or her part of contract with seller's consent after expiration of time limit set forth in listing agreement, broker's performance of contract takes it out of statute of frauds and estops seller from relying on that statute. Love v. Gulyas (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 608, 619, 197 P.2d 405

[7] Broker's Employment Contracts

Principal has right to change agents, but is liable to original broker for commission when property is sold by second broker during exclusive listing period of first broker. Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 892, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

Real estate brokerage contract is contract for employment of agent; hence, broker-principal relationship is governed by both agency and contract law, and law of agency supplies terms regarding contingencies not addressed by contract. R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1599, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425

In brokerage employment contract when there is reference to employment, agreement to compensate is permissibly inferred; conversely, when there is reference to commission, broker's authority to act is permissibly inferred. Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 567, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170

Contract that creates exclusive agency to sell is not held to create exclusive right to sell, thus prohibiting direct sale by principal, unless contract expressly confers this exlusive right on agent or contains other language indicating that parties intended to prohibit direct sale by principal or to guarantee agent commission in event of such sale. Pacific Scientific Co. v. Glassey (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 831, 836-837, 54 Cal. Rptr. 235

Use of words "exclusive agency" or "exclusive sale" is not conclusive on issue of whether contract is one of exclusive agency to deal with certain property or one giving exclusive right to sell, but, as in other cases involving interpretation, all circumstances must be considered together. Wilck v. Herbert (1947) 78 Cal. App. 2d 392, 412-413, 178 P.2d 25

[8] Contract Extension, Termination, and Revocation

Exclusive real estate listing terminates by operation of law on death of owner. Charles B. Webster Real Estate v. Rickard (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 612, 614-620, 98 Cal. Rptr. 559

If definite time for continuance of broker's agency is fixed in employment agreement, broker's authority terminates upon lapse of time. Preston v. Carnation Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 43, 46, 16 Cal. Rptr. 240

Waiver of time element in broker's contract to find buyer lasted as long as sellers were encouraging plaintiff to render his services and he was diligently complying with their requests, but waiver did not last longer than that. Augustine v.

Trucco (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 229, 239, 268 P.2d 780

[9] Broker's Right to Commission Generally

Under exclusive right to sell listing agreement, broker will be entitled to commission if (1) seller terminates agreement prior to its expiration, (2) property is sold during original listing period by another broker, and (3) agreement provides for compensation to broker if property is sold by broker or any other person during listing period. Century 21 Butler Realty, Inc. v. Vasquez (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 888, 892, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1

Broker's right to commission accrues when contract of sale is executed or when opportunity to make this contract is given the seller; broker becomes entitled to commission even though seller is unable or unwilling to complete sale. R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1599-1600, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425

When buyer retains or solicits broker to find or show him or her property, broker finds property satisfactory to buyer that owner agrees to sell at price offered, and buyer knows that broker will earn a commission from owner on consummation of the transaction, promise is implied on buyer's part to complete transaction with owner; if buyer fails or refuses to purchase property without valid reason, buyer becomes liable to broker for breach of this implied promise, and broker's damages are measured by amount of commission he or she would have earned if buyer had performed. Chan v. Tsang (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1586-1587, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 14

Seller becomes liable for broker's commission if seller renders broker's performance impossible, even if broker had not yet performed by procuring a purchaser during listing period or could not show he or she was procuring cause of the sale. Howard Gitlen & Associates, Inc. v. Ameri (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 90, 96, 256 Cal. Rptr. 36

Cooperating broker had standing to sue when seller refused to sell on terms of listing agreement because it provided that owner authorized listing agent to cooperate with other brokers and to divide any commission due under agreement with them; these provisions created implied promise to cooperating broker to pay commission because owner knew of listing broker's representation and reliance by the cooperating broker. Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1312-1313, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689

When broker was to be paid commission on proceeds of installment sale based on writing describing sale, broker did not lose rights to commission when buyer defaulted and seller and buyer negotiated new contract. Hughes v. Morrison (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 103, 104, 206 Cal. Rptr. 321

Employment contract failing to comply with Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f) is not void ipso facto, and broker is entitled, on theory of unjust enrichment, to recover commissions for property sold by him or her before rescission, but broker is not entitled to recover damages for anticipatory breach. Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454

If sale is not consummated because seller, acting arbitrarily or in bad faith, prevented consummation, broker is entitled to commission even though his or her contract provides that payment shall be made out of proceeds of sale. Colwell Co. v. Hubert (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 567, 576, 56 Cal. Rptr. 753

If performance by broker is frustrated by wrongful or fraudulent act of principal, recovery is possible by broker; fraud, however, is never presumed and must be established by clear proof. Sanstrum v. Gonser (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 732, 742, 295 P.2d 532

[10] Ready, Willing, and Able Purchaser

Seller entering valid unconditional contract of sale with purchaser procured by broker is estopped to deny purchaser's qualifications; purchaser's acceptability is conclusively presumed. Edwards v. Billow (1953) 31 Cal. 2d 350, 359, 188 P.2d 748

Real estate broker has earned his or her commission when, during life of contract, or extension thereof, he or she has brought to vendor a ready,willing, and able purchaser who will take property on terms offered by seller, or when contract acceptable to seller has been entered into with such purchaser; broker is then entitled to commission even if sale is not completed. R.J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1589, 1599-1600, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425

Purchaser is "able" when he or she has legal capacity and financial ability to purchase the property; "financial ability" means that purchaser has sufficient resources available to him or her to consummate transaction when the time comes for him or her to do so. Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1307, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689

If broker produces buyer on terms set out in his or her listing agreement, and seller refuses to perform, broker is permitted to recover his or her commission on contract with seller; conversely, if broker produces buyer on terms different from those contained in listing contract, seller ordinarily has no obligation to broker. Seck v. Foulks (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 556, 569, 102 Cal. Rptr. 170

To entitle broker to commission, prospective buyer must be willing to purchase on terms prescribed in broker's employment contract; offer to purchase on those terms must be unconditional. Martin v. Culver Enterprises, Inc. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 925, 929, 49 Cal. Rptr. 149

In absence of special contract, broker is required to show, in order to collect compensation, that he or she produced purchaser who was ready and willing to make purchase on terms satisfactory to owner and that he or she was efficient agent or procuring cause of sale. Rose v. Hunter (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 319, 322, 317 P.2d 1027

[11] Broker's Inspection and Disclosure Duties

Measure of damages for real estate broker's intentional misrepresentation to buyer for whom broker acted as agent not limited to buyer's out-of-pocket losses; because broker was fiduciary, damages for intentional fraud could be measured by benefit-of-the-bargain rule. Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 229, 239, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 616

Brokers sued by purchaser of home for failure to disclose defects in property could cross-complain for equitable indemnity against home inspection companies, including companies that had inspected home on behalf of other prospective purchasers but whose reports were provided to ultimate purchaser. Leko v. Cornerstone Home Inspection (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 1119-1120, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858

Fiduciary duty of buyer's broker may be much broader than duty to visually inspect imposed on sellers' brokers by Civ. Code § 2079, and therefore may include duty to inspect public records or permits concerning title or use of property. Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 26, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784

Broker and seller's broker are not required to disclose legal ramifications of factual nature of realty, or a conclusion as to how they may adversely impact value; thus, they are not obligated to research local land use ordinances and advise buyer as to their effect on realty. Sweat v. Hollister (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 603, 605-609, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399

Brokers for sellers of property owed no duty to buyer's guests who were injured when balcony collapsed because guests were not intended beneficiaries of information supplied by sellers' brokers. FSR Brokerage, Inc. v. Superior Court (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 69, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 404

Broker has fiduciary duty to investigate material facts of a transaction, and cannot accept information received from others as being true, and transmit it to principal, without either verifying information or disclosing to principal that information has not been verified. Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463

Plaintiff-buyer who becomes aware of non-disclosed or misrepresented fact prior to close of escrow may close and then sue for damages. Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 313-319, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242

Broker representing both parties has duty of disclosure to both principals, and failure to disclose to both precludes recovery of commission. L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 304-306, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680

Broker has duty to notify third party of pending sale when broker knows that third party has loan secured by unrecorded deed of trust and that terms of sale would wipe out security. Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszker (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 41-43, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228

Fact that broker is also seller will not relieve broker-seller of the duty to disclose material facts. Prichard v. Reitz (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 465, 468, 223 Cal. Rptr. 734

Broker was liable for failure to disclose to seller that broker was loaning part of down payment to buyer. Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 417, 421-423, 210 Cal. Rptr. 428

Broker for seller has duty to buyer to conduct reasonably competent and diligent inspection of residential property for sale and to disclose all facts materially affecting value or desirability of property that inspection would reveal; this duty does not relieve buyer of duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself. Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 98-107, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383

Broker representing both parties to transaction has duty of full disclosure to both parties. Wilson v. Lewis (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 802, 806, 165 Cal. Rptr. 396

Broker had duty to disclose to seller that buyer was broker's relative even though broker and seller had net sale price agreement, under which broker ordinarily is not obligated to disclose relationship to buyer, because broker was involved in setting net price. Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 579, 581-583, 163 Cal. Rptr. 764

[12] Statute of Limitations

Two-year limitations period in Civ. Code § 2079.4 does not apply to action against buyers' broker for breach of fiduciary duty. Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 25, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784

Two-year statute of limitations does not apply if failure to disclose is based on intentional fraud; in such an action, applicable statute of limitations is three years from date of discovery of fraud. Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 861-865, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34

Negligent misrepresentation claim arising out of broker's alleged breach of statutory obligation to conduct reasonably diligent inspection and to disclose any defects in property was subject to two-year statute of limitations on claims for real estate broker's breach of statutory duties, and not to general three-year statute of limitations (Civ. Code §§ 1102, 2079(a)). Loken v. Century 21-Award Properties (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 270, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683

[13] Broker Negligence

Homebuyers could state cause of action for negligent nondisclosure against their broker, who failed to provide them notes about defects in the property that had been taken by an agent working for the broker prior to the sale of the home. Michel v. Moore & Associates,, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797

Broker was not liable in negligence for failure to advise about tax consequences when listing agreement expressly provided that broker would not give tax advice and that seller should consult tax professional. Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 754-756, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

Agent must exercise reasonable skill and care for benefit of principal in performance of agency duties, and will be liable for any damages suffered by principal as a result of agent's negligence. Smith v. Rickard (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633

[14] Principal's Right to Recover Secret Profit

Principal's right to recover secret profits made out of subject of agency does not depend on any deceit of agent, but is based on duties incident to agency relationship and on fact that all profits resulting from that relationship belong to principal. Savage v. Mayer (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 548, 551, 203 P.2d 9 (Civ. Code § 3343 [measure of damages for fraud] does not limit principal's recovery even though profits may have been acquired through fraudulent representations)

[15] Broker as Third Party Beneficiary

Contract made expressly for benefit of third party may be enforced by him or her at any time before parties rescind it; thus, agreement between vendor and purchaser that expressly provides for payment of commission to broker makes broker third party beneficiary. Donnellan v. Rocks (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 925, 930, 99 Cal. Rptr. 692

Third party beneficiary relationship is not inconsistent with agency relationship. Hale v. Wolfsen (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 285, 291, 81 Cal. Rptr. 23

[16] Real Estate Recovery Fund

Title insurance companies do not qualify as "aggrieved parties" who may recover from Recovery Account because title insurer is neither "client" of broker nor vulnerable member of general public. Stewart Title Guaranty Co. v. Park (9th Cir. 2001) 250 F.3d 1249, 1253

Claimants against Recovery Account could not rely on judgment that had been discharged in bankruptcy but as to which bankruptcy court subsequently ruled that judgment was not discharged for limited purpose of "obtaining recovery from the real estate recovery fund;" such judgment does not constitute requisite personal judgment against licensee. Zinnemann v. Bagnol (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 656, 664, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 342

Claimant who obtains final judgment against estate of deceased broker must file application for payment from Recovery Account within one year of judgment, and may not delay filing pending issuance of probate orders settling broker's estate. Mason v. Department of Real Estate (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 1355, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 278

Applications for payment from Recovery Account may be based on stipulated judgment, but when stipulated judgment and settlement documents expressly preclude possibility that judgment was based on fraud, Commissioner is not required to consider underlying facts establishing more serious offenses. Yergan v. Department of Real Estate (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 959, 968-969, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 189

Licensee whose actions give rise to Recovery Account claim must have, while licensed, performed acts for which that license was required. Davis v. Harris (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 507, 510-511, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 591

Interest at contract rate and damages for emotional distress are not recoverable from fund. Temple v. Kerwin (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1091-1092, 257 Cal. Rptr. 651

Persons without final judgments against licensee are proper parties to proration proceedings; however, final judgment is prerequisite to distribution of money from recovery account. Edmonds v. Augustyn (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 465, 470-472, 243 Cal. Rptr. 673

Recovery limited to amount actually paid out plus interest at statutory rate; additional profits lost are not recoverable. Dierenfield v. Stabile (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 126, 132-133, 243 Cal. Rptr. 598

When multiple licensed real estate personnel were involved in acts requiring license and individual conduct of each resulted in judgment, victim was allowed to seek recovery from any licensed debtor and other licensees' limits on total recovery were not applicable. Edmonds v. Augustyn (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1056, 1065-1068, 238 Cal. Rptr. 704

Punitive damages and attorney's fees are not "actual and direct loss" and are not awarded from fund. Acebo v. Real Estate Education, etc. Fund (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 907, 910-911, 202 Cal. Rptr. 518

Judgment creditor is not entitled to relitigate issue of fraud at hearing on recovery from fund. Stuart v. Department of Real Estate (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5, 195 Cal. Rptr. 524

Award from fund must be reduced by amount of any tax savings realized by applicant. Froid v. Fox (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 832, 837-840, 183 Cal. Rptr. 461

Fund was not liable when application was based on default judgment and applicant did not establish that broker was acting as licensee and not as principal. Buccella v. Mayo (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 315, 323-327, 162 Cal. Rptr. 369

Recovery against fund precluded because plaintiff had obtained judgment against defendant who, although licensed real estate broker, had not acted in that capacity in selling house owned by himself and his spouse. Robinson v. Murphy (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 763, 767-770, 158 Cal. Rptr. 246

Recovery from fund includes interest portions of judgment remaining unpaid, up to statutory limitation of recovery. Antonio v. Hempel (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 128, 130-132, 139 Cal. Rptr. 309

Real estate broker was not qualified as "aggrieved person" entitled to recovery from fund for internal dispute with her saleswoman over division ofcommissions. Middelsteadt v. Karpe (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301-304, 124 Cal. Rptr. 840

_____ [name],	)	SION
[and DOES I through _____,]	)	(Breach of Contract)
Defendant(s).	)	[Amount demanded _____
	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a resident of _____ County, California or allege other capacity and basis of venue as appropriate].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by such defendants.)]

[3. At all times herein mentioned plaintiff _____ (name) is and was _____ (an individual or allege other capacity as appropriate) doing business under the fictitious business name of _____ (fictitious business name), and plaintiff has filed the statement and published the notice as required by Business and Professions Code Sections 17910 through 17917.]

4. Plaintiff is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a real estate broker duly licensed by the State of California, doing business in _____[city], _____ County, California. [At all times herein mentioned _____ (name of corporate officer authorized to act as real estate broker) was authorized and empowered by plaintiff as required under Business and Professions Code Sections 10159 and 10211 to act, and acted, as the agent of plaintiff, and each and all of the things herein alleged to have been done by him/her were done in the capacity of and as agent for plaintiff.]

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant employed plaintiff by an agreement in writing to sell the real property owned by defendant situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California, for a period through and including _____ [expiration date]. A copy of this agreement ("listing agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference.

6. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this exclusive-right-to-sell listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property if plaintiff, defendant, or any other person produced a buyer who offered to purchase the property on the terms specified in the listing agreement, or on any other terms acceptable to defendant, as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

7. _____ [Plaintiff performed all of the duties and conditions of the listing agreement or allege any excuse for nonperformance].

[EITHER]

8. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to _____ [name of buyer] for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[OR]

8. On or about _____ [date], _____ [plaintiff or defendant or specify name of another agent] procured _____ [name of buyer], who offered to purchase, and was ready, willing, and able to purchase, the property from defendant on terms _____ [specified in the listing agreement or acceptable to defendant], for a total consideration of $_____. [Defendant accepted the buyer's offer on _____ (date).] As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

9. Defendant has failed to pay the above sum, or any part of it, to plaintiff although plaintiff has made a demand for the payment. As a proximate result of defendant's breach of contract, plaintiff has suffered, and continues to suffer, losses in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission], which is the amount of the commission now due to plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For recovery of the commission due in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.
Dated: _____.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a broker in an action against the seller for recovery of the broker's commission based on an exclusive-right-to-sell listing agreement.

An allegation based on an exclusive agency agreement is set forth in § 103.71[1], and an allegation based on an open listing agreement is set forth in § 103.72[1]. For an allegation based on the seller's written commitment in the sales agreement to pay a commission, see § 103.73[1]. Finally, for an allegation based on the seller's written commitment in the escrow instructions to pay a commission, see § 103.74[1].

[3] Allegations

The complaint in [1], above, alleges (1) the existence and terms of a written agreement between the broker and the seller (Paragraphs 5 and 7) [see [5], below (fixed expiration date in contract)], (2) the license status of the plaintiff (Paragraph 4) [see [6], below], (3) the broker's performance of the contract (Paragraph 6), (4) the satisfaction of the condition entitling the broker to a commission (Paragraph 8), and (5) the seller's failure to pay the commission according to the contract (Paragraph 9). Further, it contains an optional allegation regarding the plaintiff's transaction of business under a fictitious business name [see [5], below].

A broker may not recover a commission based on an employment agreement unless that agreement is in writing [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. For further discussion of the statute of frauds requirement, see § 103.21[1].

The broker is entitled to a commission in an exclusive-right-to-sell contract if (1) the property is sold during the listing period, or any extension of the period, no matter who effected the sale, or (2) the listing agent receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(1)]. For further discussion of the broker's right to a commission, see §§ 103.13[1] and 103.20[1].

[4] Fixed Expiration Date in Contract

Paragraph 5 sets forth the expiration date of the employment contract. An exclusive employment agreement for compensation must contain a definite, specified date of final and complete termination [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f); see also Nystrom v. First Nat. Bank of Fresno (1978) 81 Cal. App. 3d 759, 764-766, 146 Cal. Rptr. 711] . However, an employment contract that fails to comply with this requirement may still permit a broker to recover a commission for property sold prior to the owner's rescission, but not for damages for an anticipatory breach [Babcock v. Houston (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 863, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454] .

[5] Plaintiff's Capacity

Paragraph 3 of this complaint should be included when the broker transacts business under a fictitious business name. A person using a fictitious business name cannot maintain an action on, or on account of, a contract made, or a transaction had, in the fictitious business name without first filing and publishing a statement [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17918].

[6] Broker's License

Paragraph 4 contains an allegation regarding the real estate license status of the plaintiff. Any person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a real estate broker or a real estate salesperson must allege and prove that he or she was a duly licensed real estate broker or real estate salesperson at the time any alleged cause of action arose as a condition to bringing or maintaining an action in the courts of California for the collection of compensation for the performance of any of the acts for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136]. If the plaintiff real estate broker is a corporation, the optional provision naming the designated officer to act on behalf of the corporate plaintiff should be added. For further discussion of the license requirements of a real estate agent to bring a suit, see § 103.20[5].

[7] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[8] Jurisdiction

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8)]. When title or right to possession is to be tried, or permanent injunctive relief is sought, the case will be classified as an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

In limited civil cases, the caption must identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(10)], and the first page of the paper must state whether or not the demand exceeds $10,000 [Gov. Code § 70613(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.111(9) (statement regarding amount of demand must appear "below the character of the action or proceeding")].

[9] Venue

In a breach of contract action, proper venue is in the county where the defendant resides, where the contract was to be performed, or where the contract was entered into. The county in which the obligation was incurred will be deemed to be the county in which it is to be performed unless there is a special contract in writing to the contrary [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. If the defendant in the contract action is a corporation, the action may also be brought in the county in which the corporation has its principal place of business [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5].

[10] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for a breach of contract action based on a written agreement is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)].

§ 103.71 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Exclusive Agency Agreement [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)]--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Exclusive Agency Agreement [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)]--By Broker Against Seller

1. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this exclusive agency listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property if plaintiff or any other real estate broker or salesperson produced a buyer who offered to purchase the property on the terms specified in the listing agreement, or on any other terms acceptable to defendant, as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

[EITHER]

2. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to _____ [name of buyer], who was procured by _____ [plaintiff or name of another agent], for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[OR]

2. On or about _____ [date], _____ [plaintiff or name of another agent] procured _____ [name of buyer], who offered to purchase, and was ready, willing, and able to purchase, the property from defendant on terms _____ [specified in the listing agreement or acceptable to defendant] for a total consideration of $_____. [Defendant accepted the buyer's offer on _____ (date).] As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission when the underlying employment contract with the seller is based on an exclusive agency listing agreement, in contrast to an exclusive-right-to-sell agreement [see § 103.70] or an open listing agreement [see § 103.72]. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 and 2 of these allegations for Paragraphs 6 and 8, respectively, of that form.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations sets forth the terms of the exclusive agency agreement that entitle the broker to a commission. A broker is entitled to a commission in an exclusive agency listing agreement if (1) the property is sold during the listing period, or any extension of the period, by the broker or any other agent (but not if sold by the owner), or (2) the broker receives and presents to the owner any enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(2)]. For further discussion of the broker's right to a commission, see §§ 103.13[1] and 103.20[1].

Paragraph 2 of the allegations sets forth events entitling the broker to a commission, that is, that the defendant either sold the property to, or was presented with an acceptable offer from, a buyer who was procured by the plaintiff-broker or another agent.

§ 103.72 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Open Listing Agreement [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Open Listing Agreement [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]--By Broker Against Seller

1. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property if plaintiff produced a buyer who offered to purchase the property on the terms specified in the listing agreement, or on any other terms acceptable to defendant, as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff procured _____ [name of buyer], who offered to purchase, and was ready, willing, and able to purchase, the property from defendant on terms _____ [specified in the listing agreement or acceptable to defendant] for a total consideration of $_____. [Defendant accepted the buyer's offer in writing on _____ (date)]. [The closing for the sales transaction occurred on _____ (date).] As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission when the underlying employment contract with the seller is based on an open listing agreement, in contrast to an exclusive-right-to-sell agreement [see § 103.70] or an exclusive agency agreement [see § 103.71]. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the allegations for Paragraphs 6 through 8 of that form.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations sets forth the terms of the open listing agreement that provide for a commission to be paid to the broker. In an open listing agreement, a commission is payable to the broker if the broker procures and presents to the owner an enforceable offer from a ready, able, and willing buyer on the terms authorized by the listing or accepted by the owner, before the property is otherwise sold either through another agent or by the owner directly and before the listing expires by its terms or is revoked [Civ. Code § 1086(f)(3)]. Paragraph 2 sets forth facts that allege that plaintiff produced a ready, willing, and able buyer to buy the defendant's property on acceptable terms within the listing period. For further discussion of the broker's right to a commission, see §§ 103.13[1] and 103.20[1].

[4] Fixed Expiration Date Not Required for Open Listing

Paragraph 5 of the complaint in § 103.70[1] sets forth the expiration date of the listing agreement, which is a requirement in any exclusive agreement [see § 103.70[4]]. However a specific, fixed expiration date is not required for an open listing, and this portion of Paragraph 5 may be omitted if no fixed expiration date exists [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10176(f)].

§ 103.73 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Commission Included in Property Sales Agreement--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Commission Included in Property Sales Agreement--By Broker Against Seller

1. On or about _____ [date], defendant orally employed plaintiff to sell the property owned by defendant situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California. Pursuant to this agreement, defendant promised to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property upon the close of escrow for the sales transaction.

2. On or about _____ [date], defendant entered into a written sales agreement to sell the property to _____ [name of buyer], the buyer procured by plaintiff. Defendant promised in writing to pay plaintiff the commission, as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the sales agreement. A copy of this agreement ("sales agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference.

3. _____ [Plaintiff performed all of the duties and conditions of the above agreement between plaintiff and defendant or allege any excuse for nonperformance].

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to the buyer named in the sales agreement for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission when the commitment to pay the broker a commission is contained in the sales agreement between the buyer and the seller. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 4 of the allegations for Paragraphs 5 through 8 of that form.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations alleges the existence of the agreement between the plaintiff and defendant for the defendant to pay the plaintiff a commission. Paragraph 2 of the allegations alleges the basis for the written memoranda of that agreement, signed by the defendant, which is required by the statute of frauds [see Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. For further discussion of the statute of frauds requirement, see § 103.21[1].

Paragraph 3 alleges the plaintiff's performance, and Paragraph 4 alleges the closing of the sales transaction, which was the condition required for payment of the commission.

An alternative theory for recovery by the broker would be as a third party beneficiary of the sales agreement between the buyer and seller [see Ch. 140, Contracts , for cause of action based on a third party beneficiary theory]. However, this is not strictly necessary because a broker can recover directly from the seller based on an oral agreement that is reduced to writing in the sales agreement signed by the defendant [see City of Turlock v. Paul M. Zagaris, Inc. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 189, 193, 256 Cal. Rptr. 902] .

§ 103.75 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Safety Clause in Listing Agreement--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Safety Clause in Listing Agreement--By Broker Against Seller

1. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property if within _____ [number of days] of the expiration of the listing agreement, the property is sold to anyone with whom plaintiff has had negotiations [provided that plaintiff provide defendant within _____ (number of days) after the expiration of the listing agreement a written notice of the names of the prospective purchasers], as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

2. Plaintiff performed all of the duties and conditions of the listing agreement[, including, on or about _____ (date), providing to defendant a written notice setting forth the name(s) of the prospective purchaser(s) with whom plaintiff had negotiated, including the name of _____ (name of buyer)].

3. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to _____ [name of buyer] for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission when the listing agreement contains a safety clause and the property is sold after the expiration date to a buyer with whom the broker has had negotiations during the listing period. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in §

103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 3 of the allegations for Paragraphs 6 through 8 of that form.

[3] Allegations

When a broker shows property during the listing period to a prospective purchaser, and there is afterwards a sale to that prospect, the broker may be entitled to a commission even though he or she was not the procuring cause of the sale, if the listing agreement so provides [Leonard v. Fallas (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 649, 652, 335 P.2d 665] . For further discussion of recovery under a safety clause, see § 103.20[9].

Paragraph 1 of the allegations alleges the terms of the safety clause in the listing agreement, including, as an option, the common provision requiring the broker to provide the seller with notice of prospective purchasers with whom the broker has negotiated. Paragraph 2 alleges plaintiff's performance, including an optional allegation alleging that the broker has complied with the notice provisions. If the listing agreement requires notice, this allegation is mandatory. Paragraph 3 alleges the completion of the sale to the named buyer, entitling the broker to the commission.

PRACTICE TIP:

Adequate Notice Regarding Prospective Purchasers. The condition regarding the provision of written notice setting forth the names of the prospective purchasers with whom the broker/agent negotiated may also be met by simply presenting an offer during the time of the listing on behalf of individuals who eventually purchase the property. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.76 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Waiver of Expiration Date by Seller--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--Waiver of Expiration Date by Seller--By Broker Against Seller

1. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent of the selling price of the property if _____ [allege nature of commitment to pay commission, which will depend on type of listing agreement used by parties; for appropriate language, see § 103.70[1], Paragraph 6 (exclusive right to sell); § 103.71[1], Paragraph 1 (exclusive agency); or § 103.72[1] (open listing)], as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

2. After _____ [expiration date of listing agreement], defendant urged and encouraged plaintiff to continue to seek a buyer for the property by _____ [allege acts of defendant, e.g., defendant orally instructed plaintiff to continue his/her efforts to find a purchaser, and assured plaintiff that the provisions in the listing agreement regarding a commission would continue to apply].

3. As a result of defendant's actions, plaintiff continued to search for a buyer and did in fact procure _____ [name of buyer] who was ready, willing, and able to purchase the property from defendant. Plaintiff performed all other duties and conditions of the listing agreement.

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to _____ [name of buyer] for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission when the property is sold after the expiration of the listing agreement as a result of the broker's efforts based on the seller's encouragement and requests that the broker continue to locate a buyer for the property. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 4 of the allegations for Paragraphs 6 through 8 of that form.

[3] Allegations

If, after the time limit provided in a written contract of employment expires, the owner urges and encourages the broker to continue his or her efforts to find a purchaser for the property, the time limit may be considered as waived and the broker will be entitled to his or her commission if (1) the broker continues with the knowledge, approval, and encouragement of the owner, and (2) as a result of the broker's efforts, a purchaser to whom the owner sells the property is produced [Kraemer v. Smith (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 52, 55, 3 Cal. Rptr. 471] . For further discussion of this point, see § 103.20[8].

Paragraph 1 alleges the commitment on the part of the seller to pay the broker a commission. Paragraph 2 alleges the specific acts of the seller that encouraged the broker to continue looking for a buyer after the expiration of the listing agreement and the fact that the broker did in fact procure a buyer. Paragraph 3 alleges the completion of the sale to the buyer procured by the broker.

§ 103.77 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--By Broker Against Lessor

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission Based on Breach of Contract--By Broker Against Lessor

1. On or about _____ [date], defendant employed plaintiff by an agreement in writing to lease the real property owned by defendant situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California. The expiration date of the listing agreement was _____ [expiration date]. A copy of this agreement ("listing agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of the complaint by reference.

2. Among other things, defendant promised and agreed in this listing agreement to pay plaintiff a commission of _____ percent _____ [of the gross rental payments to be made by the tenant if plaintiff, defendant, or any other person produced a tenant who offered to lease the property on the terms specified in the listing agreement, or on any other terms acceptable to defendant or allege other terms of listing agreement if not exclusive], as set forth in Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement.

3. Plaintiff performed all of the duties and conditions of the listing agreement [or allege any excuse for nonperformance].

[EITHER]

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant entered into a written lease agreement for the property with _____ [name of tenant] for a term of _____ [number] years at a rental rate of $_____ per _____ [month or year]. [If listing was not an exclusive agreement, add: Plaintiff procured this tenant to lease the property.] As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[OR]

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant was presented with an offer by _____ [name of tenant], who was ready, willing, and able to lease the property from defendant on terms [specified in the listing agreement or acceptable to defendant] for a rental rate of $_____ per _____ [month or year]. [If listing was not an exclusive agreement, add: Plaintiff procured the tenant to lease the property]. [Defendant accepted the tenant's offer on _____ (date)]. As a result, defendant is indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $_____ [amount of commission based on terms of listing agreement] for and on account of the commission earned by plaintiff.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a broker's complaint for recovery of a commission based on an owner's breach of a listing agreement to lease the property. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.70[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 4 of the allegations for Paragraphs 5 through 8 of that form.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations alleges the existence of a listing agreement between the plaintiff as broker and the defendant as owner to lease the property. Paragraph 2 alleges plaintiff's performance of the agreement.

Paragraph 3 alleges the specific terms of the listing agreement in which the owner agrees to pay the broker a commission for leasing the property. Paragraph 4 provides alternative paragraphs alleging fulfillment of the listing agreement, that is, either the defendant leased the property to the tenant or the defendant was presented with an offer to lease the property on terms that were acceptable to the defendant. For further discussion of a broker's right to a commission, see § 103.20[1].

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a broker in an action against the seller for recovery of the broker's commission based on the seller's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

[3] Allegations

Paragraphs 5 and 6 allege the existence and commission terms of the listing agreement. Paragraph 7 alleges that the broker produced a prospective purchaser who was ready, willing, and able to purchase the seller's property on the seller's terms.

Paragraph 8 alleges the acts of the seller that constitute a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. The seller owes a duty to the broker not to act arbitrarily or in bad faith to prevent consummation of a transaction when the broker has found a prospective buyer who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property, and the prospective buyer and prospective seller have agreed on the terms and conditions of the sale. If the sale is not consummated because the seller, acting arbitrarily or in bad faith, prevents consummation, the broker is entitled to the commission even though his or her contract provides that payment is to be made out of the proceeds of the sale [Stromer v. Browning (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 421, 424-425, 55 Cal. Rptr. 18, 420 P.2d 730] . For further discussion of this point, see § 103.20[6].

[4] Verification

For discussion of verification, see § 103.70[7].

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

For coverage of jurisdiction, see § 103.70[8]. For discussion of venue, see § 103.70[9].

§ 103.79 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission--Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing--Seller Renders Broker's Performance Impossible--By Broker Against Seller

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Recovery of Commission--Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing--Seller Renders Broker's Performance Impossible--By Broker Against Seller

1. On or about _____ [date], defendant breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by acting in a manner that rendered plaintiff's performance of the listing agreement impossible, to wit: _____ [allege acts of the seller that rendered the broker's performance impossible, e.g., defendant orally notified plaintiff that defendant was canceling the listing agreement, effective immediately, and entering into a new agency relationship with another broker].

[2] Use of Form

The allegation in [1], above, is for use in a complaint by a broker in an action against the seller for recovery of the broker's commission based on the seller's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, when the seller has acted in a manner that rendered the broker's performance impossible. This is a variation of the complaint set forth in § 103.78[1], which is based on the seller's breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing for acts occurring after the broker has performed.

This allegation may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.78[1] by substituting Paragraph 1 of the allegation for Paragraphs 7 and 8 of that form.

When a seller terminates the broker's agency without cause, the broker may also add a cause of action for breach of contract for wrongful termination of the agency [see Ch. 140, Contracts , for a sample complaint for this cause of action].

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegation alleges the defendant's acts that rendered the broker's performance impossible. A seller becomes liable for the broker's commission if the seller renders the broker's performance impossible. This is so even if the broker had not yet performed by procuring a purchaser during the listing period or could not show he or she was the procuring cause of the sale [Howard Gitlen & Associates, Inc. v. Ameri (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 90, 96, 256 Cal. Rptr. 36] . For further discussion of this point, see § 103.20[7].

§ 103.80 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Recovery Barred by Statute of Frauds

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Recovery Barred by Statute of Frauds

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action herein is barred by the provisions of Civil Code Section 1624(a)(4) in that the contract upon which plaintiff's cause of action is based is one employing a real estate broker [to purchase or sell real estate or to lease real estate for a longer period than one year or to procure a purchaser or seller of real estate or to procure a lessee or lessor of real estate for a lease that is for a longer period than one year] for a commission, and that no note or memorandum of the contract is in writing and subscribed by the defendant.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint by the broker for breach of contract, when the complaint fails to allege that the contract for the broker's services is in writing. An agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate, or to lease real estate for a longer period than one year, or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate or a lessee or lessor of real estate when the lease is for a longer period than one year, for compensation or a commission, is invalid unless the agreement itself, or some note or memorandum of the agreement, is in writing and subscribed by the party to be charged or by his or her agent [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4)]. For further discussion of the statute of frauds in real estate contracts, see § 103.21[1].

§ 103.81 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Plaintiff Not Licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Plaintiff Not Licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred by the provisions of Business and Professions Code Section 10136 in that plaintiff did not have a real estate license at all times referred to in the complaint.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint by the broker for compensation based on any cause of action. Any person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a real estate broker or a real estate salesperson must allege and prove that he or she was a duly licensed real estate broker or real estate salesperson at the time any alleged cause of action arose as a condition to bringing or maintaining an action in the courts of California for the collection of compensation for the performance of any of the acts for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10136].

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Failure to Disclose Dual Agency [Civ. Code § 2079.17]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred in that plaintiff failed to disclose to defendant that he/she was a dual agent representing both the buyer and the seller [or the lessor and lessee] in the real estate transaction that is the basis for plaintiff's claim for a commission.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint by the broker for recovery of a commission when the broker was acting as a dual agent and failed to disclose this fact to one or both of the parties in the sales transaction. Unless both principals know of the dual agency at the time of the transaction, the agent cannot recover a commission from either [*L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp. § 103.83 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Conditions Not Met

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Conditions Not Met

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred in that, pursuant to Paragraph _____ of the listing agreement between plaintiff and defendant, the payment of a commission to plaintiff was conditioned on the closing of the sales transaction [or allege other condition that was not met], and the sales transaction failed to close due to the inability or unwillingness of the buyer to purchase the property [or allege other failure of a condition].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in an answer to a complaint by the broker for recovery of a commission when the commission was conditioned on an event that did not take place. The parties to a listing agreement are entitled to make the broker's employment and his or her right to compensation depend on any lawful condition that they agree to insert in the agreement, and the listing agreement must be strictly construed according to its terms [Blank v. Borden (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 963, 969, 972 n.8, 115 Cal. Rptr. 31, 524 P.2d 127] . For further discussion of conditions to a listing agreement, see § 103.20[2].

8. On or about _____ [date], a judgment was entered in _____ [case name and number] in the _____ [name of court] Court, adjudging plaintiff as individually liable to _____ [name of buyer or seller, as appropriate], based on the above representation made by plaintiff in reliance on information provided by defendant. Plaintiff has been damaged by this imposition of personal liability in that _____ [specify damages sustained, e.g., plaintiff satisfied the judgment for $_____ entered in the above case]. [A true and correct copy of the judgment is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference.]

[OR]

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was named as defendant in the action entitled _____ [case name and number], in the _____ [name of court] Court. Plaintiff agreed to pay the reasonable sum of $_____ to _____ [name of buyer or seller, as appropriate] in settlement of the action once it became clear that plaintiff was liable to _____ [name of buyer or seller, as appropriate].

[CONTINUE]

9. In addition, plaintiff was required to pay the sum of $_____ in costs and the sum of $_____ as attorney's fees in the course of defending the above action.

10. The damages recovered by _____ [name of buyer or seller, as appropriate] against plaintiff, and the costs and attorney's fees incurred by plaintiff, were caused solely by the misrepresentation by defendant described in Paragraph 7.

[11. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff gave defendant written notice of the action for damages commenced by _____ [name of buyer or seller, as appropriate] against plaintiff, requested a defense of the action, and indicated defendant's primary responsibility for the damages and resultant obligation to indemnify plaintiff for any loss that plaintiff might sustain as a result of the action. (A copy of this notice is attached to this complaint as Exhibit B and is made a part of the complaint by reference.) Nevertheless, defendant failed to undertake the defense of the action and refused to indemnify plaintiff for any loss resulting from the action.]

12. By reason of the foregoing, plaintiff is entitled to indemnity from defendant in the total sum of $_____, which amount includes damages paid and costs and attorney's fees incurred as set forth above, but defendant has not paid any part of this sum to plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For recovery of damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

VERIFICATION

[Add verification, if desired. See § 103.70[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form [1], above, is a complaint for use in an action by a broker for equitable indemnity against a seller or buyer of real property. It may be used when (1) the seller or buyer made a false representation during the course of the underlying sales transaction, (2) the broker passed this misrepresentation on to the other party during the course of the transaction, and (3) the broker subsequently paid a judgment or settlement in a lawsuit brought by that other party based on the misrepresentation.

PRACTICE TIP:

Claim for Contractual Indemnity. As noted in the Practice Tip in § 103.34, the potential for a claim for contractual indemnity should always be considered. By Jeffrey S. Martin

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 5 alleges the basic facts about the sales transaction. Paragraph 6 alleges the agency relationship of the defendant and either the buyer or the seller of the property. Paragraph 7 alleges the misrepresentation made by the defendant to the plaintiff, and the subsequent misrepresentation by the plaintiff to one of the parties in the transaction.

Paragraph 8 provides two alternatives: the first is an allegation of the amount of judgment paid by the plaintiff in the underlying case, and the second is the amount of settlement paid by the plaintiff to settle the underlying case. Paragraph 9 alleges the amount of costs and attorney's fees paid by the plaintiff in the underlying case.

Paragraph 10 alleges that plaintiff's damages resulting from defendant's misrepresentation. Paragraph 11 alleges plaintiff's tender of the defense to the defendant, and defendant's failure to assume the defense. Paragraph 12 alleges the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff.

When a broker makes a false representation to a party in a transaction based on information provided by another party, the broker may have a cause of action for equitable indemnity against the party who originally provided the false information. To justify equitable indemnification, the wrongs of the respective tortfeasors must differ essentially in character or kind, resulting in the conclusion that the negligence of the primary tortfeasor is active, while the broker's negligence is passive [Gardner v. Murphy (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 164, 167-168, 126 Cal. Rptr. 302] .

For discussion and forms relating to indemnity actions generally, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[4] Verification

Although verification of this complaint is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7(a)], verification will require any answer to be verified in an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446]. Verification will also preclude the defendant from using a general denial in an unlimited civil case, and will preclude a general denial in a limited civil case if the action is a claim assigned to a third party for collection [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

An action for equitable indemnity is in the jurisdiction of the superior court and is not a limited civil action [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86]. When title or right to possession is to be tried, or permanent injunctive relief is sought, the case will be classified as an unlimited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 88].

In an action for equitable indemnity arising out of a false representation, the county in which the defendant resides at the commencement of the action is the proper county for the trial of the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Defendant _____ [name] is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a resident of _____ County, California [or allege other capacity and basis of venue as appropriate].

[2. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by these fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences herein alleged, and that plaintiff's damages as herein alleged were proximately caused by such defendants.)]

3. Defendant is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a real estate broker duly licensed by the State of California [under the fictitious business name of _____], with his/her principal place of business in _____ [city], _____ County, California.

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff employed defendant by an agreement in writing to act as plaintiff's agent to sell the real property owned by plaintiff situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California. A copy of this agreement ("listing agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of the complaint by reference. As plaintiff's agent, defendant owed to plaintiff a fiduciary duty to _____ [allege specific duty, e.g., make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's interest in entering into the transaction].

5. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty as plaintiff's agent when defendant _____ [allege acts of broker that constituted a breach of fiduciary duty, e.g., failed to disclose that defendant was a dual agent, representing both defendant and the buyer identified in Paragraph 6].

6. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff sold the property to _____ [name of buyer] for a total consideration of $_____. On or about that date, plaintiff paid defendant a commission in the sum of $_____ pursuant to the terms of the listing agreement.

7. As the result of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiff has been damaged in $_____, the amount of the commission paid to defendant[, and plaintiff has been damaged further in that plaintiff could have sold the property for a higher price but for defendant's act of (allege specific act, e.g., failing to disclose his/her dual agency].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For recovery of the commission paid to defendant in the sum of $_____;

[2. For loss of compensation in the sale of property _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

3. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for breach of fiduciary duty by a seller against a listing agent. It can be adapted for any breach of fiduciary duty. For allegations in a complaint based on a broker taking a secret profit by means of an option to purchase, see § 103.91[1]. For allegations in a complaint based on a broker taking a secret profit by arranging a "dummy" sale, see § 103.92[1].

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 4 alleges the creation of the agency relationship. Paragraph 5 alleges the specific acts of the defendant broker that constitute a breach of fiduciary duty. Paragraph 6 alleges the sale of the property and the plaintiff's payment of the commission to the defendant. Paragraph 7 alleges the damages suffered by the plaintiff in the amount of the commission plus any losses on the sale of the property.

An agent is a fiduciary [Michelson v. Hamada (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1579, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 343] . A real estate agent has the same obligation of undivided service and loyalty to the client that a trustee owes its beneficiary Rattray v. Scudder (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 214, 222]. For an extended discussion of a real estate licensee's fiduciary duties and liability for a breach of these duties, see § 103.31.

[4] Verification

For discussion of verification, see § 103.70[7].

[5] Jurisdiction and Venue

For coverage of jurisdiction, see § 103.70[8]. For discussion of venue, see § 103.70[9].

[6] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for breach of fiduciary duty is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 343]. The statute begins to run when the plaintiffs discovers, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence could have discovered, the essential facts giving rise to the cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty [Stalberg v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1230, 282 Cal. Rptr. 43] .

§ 103.91 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Secret Profits From Broker's Option to Purchase--By Seller Against Broker

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Secret Profits From Broker's Option to Purchase--By Seller Against Broker

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff granted defendant an option to purchase the property at a price of $_____.

2. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty as plaintiff's agent by taking secret profits from the sale of plaintiff's property when defendant exercised his/her option to purchase the property after defendant had received a higher offer for the property without disclosing this higher offer to plaintiff.

3.On or about _____ [date], plaintiff sold the property to defendant for a total consideration of $_____. [On or about that date, plaintiff paid defendant a commission in the sum of $_____ pursuant to the terms of the listing agreement.]

4. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], defendant sold the property to _____ [name of buyer who now holds title] for a total consideration of $_____, realizing a secret profit of $_____.

5. As the result of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiff has been damaged in that plaintiff could have sold the property directly to _____ [name of third party who now holds title] for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____ [amount of profit].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a seller's complaint for damages and secret profits when the broker has breached his/her fiduciary duty to the seller by (1) exercising an option to purchase the property from the seller after the broker has received, and failed to notify the seller of, a higher offer, and (2) then reselling the property for the higher price. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.90[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 5 of the allegations for Paragraphs 5 through 7 of that form. For a complaint against a broker for secret profits arising out of a "dummy" sale to an associate of the broker, see § 103.92[1].

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations alleges the existence of the option granted to the defendant broker. Paragraph 2 alleges the defendant's exercise of that option after the defendant received a higher offer for the property and failed to disclose the higher offer to the plaintiff. Paragraph 3 alleges the sale of the property to the defendant, and Paragraph 4 alleges the defendant's sale of the property to a third party for a secret profit. Paragraph 5 alleges the damages sustained by the plaintiff.

A broker is not entitled to make a secret profit out of his or her agency relationship with the principal. A seller who grants a broker an option to purchase can recover any secret profits realized by the broker in a subsequent sale to an undisclosed offeree at a higher price [see Zikratch v. Stillwell (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 535, 541, 16 Cal. Rptr. 660] .

§ 103.92 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Secret Profits From Dummy Sale--By Seller Against Broker

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Secret Profits From Dummy Sale--By Seller Against Broker

1. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty as plaintiff's agent by taking secret profits from the sale of plaintiff's property when (1) defendant presented an offer to plaintiff from _____ [name of buyer], who was in fact _____ [allege relationship of buyer to defendant, e.g., defendant's brother], and (2) _____ [name of buyer] was taking title solely to resell the property to a third party at a higher price and then transfer the profits to defendant. Defendant failed to disclose to plaintiff the true facts of the proposed sale to the buyer.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff sold the property to _____ [name of buyer] for a total consideration of $_____. On or about that date, plaintiff paid defendant a commission in the sum of $_____ pursuant to the terms of the listing agreement.

3. Thereafter, on or about _____ [date], _____ [name of buyer] sold the property to _____ [name of third party who now holds title] for a total consideration of $_____. Based on an agreement between defendant and _____ [name of buyer], the profit of $_____ realized from the sale to _____ [name of third party who now holds title] was transferred to defendant.

4. As the result of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty, plaintiff has been damaged in that plaintiff could have sold the property directly to _____ [name of third party who now holds title] for a total consideration of $_____. As a result, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____ [amount of profit].

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a seller's complaint for damages when the broker breaches his/her fiduciary duty by arranging a "dummy" sale in order to resell the property at a profit. The first buyer is usually a friend, relative, or business associate of the broker and agrees to take title as a mere formality. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.90[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 through 4 of the allegations for Paragraphs 5 through 7 of that form. For allegations in a complaint based on a broker taking a secret profit by means of an option to purchase, see § 103.91[1].

[3] Allegations

Paragraphs 1 through 3 allege the breach of a fiduciary duty by the defendant-broker in the form of arranging a dummy sale to a buyer for the purpose of reselling the property to a third party at a profit and retaining the profit. Paragraph 4 alleges the damages sustained by the plaintiff in the amount of the unrealized profit from the sale to the third party.

A broker is not entitled to make any secret profit from the subject of his or her agency. The principal's right to recover does not depend on any deceit of the broker, but is based on the duties incident to the agency relationship and on the fact that all profits resulting from that relationship belong to the principal [Savage v. Mayer (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 548, 551, 203 P.2d 9] .

§ 103.93 Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Failure to Investigate Material Facts--By Seller Against Broker

[1] FORM Allegations for Use in Complaint for Damages--Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Failure to Investigate Material Facts--By Seller Against Broker

1. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty to investigate material facts when _____ [allege specific facts, e.g., defendant represented to seller, who was receiving a note and deed of trust secured by property owned by the buyer, that the value assigned to the other property was a "safe figure,"] without investigating whether the facts as represented were in fact true.

2. As the result of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty to investigate material facts, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, the amount of the commission paid to defendant, and plaintiff has been damaged further in that [allege damages resulting from failure to investigate, e.g., the buyer has defaulted on the above note to plaintiff in the total amount of $_____ and continuing at a rate of $_____ per _____ (month/year)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For recovery of the commission paid to defendant in the sum of $_____;

[2. For further damages for _____ (allege specific damages, e.g., buyer's default on the note to plaintiff) _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

3. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[4. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

5. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The allegations in [1], above, may be used in a seller's complaint for damages when the broker breaches his/her fiduciary duty by representing a material fact to the seller without investigating whether the information is in fact true. This will usually come up in the context of a seller carrying a loan for the buyer or taking property instead of cash for the seller's property. Obviously, the creditworthiness of the buyer and the value of the property to be received are material facts that would affect the seller's decision to agree to the transaction. These allegations may be incorporated into the form of complaint in § 103.90[1] by substituting Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the allegations for Paragraphs 5 and 7, respectively, of that form. Also, the prayer in the allegations above should be substituted for the prayer in § 103.90[1].

PRACTICE TIP:

Selling Agent's Failure to Investigate Material Facts. Claims for breach of fiduciary duty based on the failure of the plaintiff-buyer's broker or agent (selling broker/agent) to conduct an adequate investigation can arise in a multitude of different factual scenarios. Perhaps the most common would be representations or information provided by the seller and his or her broker/agent that is passed on to the buyer by his or her broker/agent without verification or without a disclaimer regarding the source of the information. If the selling broker/agent has not verified the veracity of the information provided, he or she must so advise the buyer [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] . By Jeffrey S. Martin

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 of the allegations alleges the breach of the defendant's fiduciary duty by representing to plaintiff certain material facts without investigating the truth of the facts. Paragraph 2 alleges the damages suffered by the plaintiff in the amount of the commission paid to the defendant and any further damages resulting from the sales transaction itself.

A broker has a fiduciary duty to investigate the material facts of a transaction, and cannot accept information received from others as being true, and transmit it to the principal, without either verifying the information or disclosing to the principal that the information has not been verified [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] . For further discussion of this duty, see § 103.31[3].

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud)

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written agreement to purchase the property situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California from _____ [name of seller]. A copy of this agreement ("sales agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference. The escrow closed on this sales transaction on _____ [date].

5. In this sales transaction, defendant acted as the real estate broker for the seller of the property. Plaintiff, as the buyer, was represented by _____ [name of selling agent]. Confirmation of the agency relationships is set forth in Paragraph _____ of the sales agreement.

6. _____ [Prior to the close of escrow or At some time prior to the execution of the sales agreement and continuing through the escrow period], defendant became aware of certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., the building was constructed in violation of code requirements for structural support and about to be condemned]. Defendant knew that these defects were unknown to, or were beyond the reach of, plaintiff.

7. These defects materially affect the value and the desirability of the property.

8. Defendant failed to disclose to plaintiff the existence of these defects with the intent to induce plaintiff to complete the purchase of the property. [Defendant took certain affirmative actions to insure that plaintiff would not discover the defects, namely: _____ (allege defendant's actions, e.g., defendant arranged to have all the cracks in the foundation plastered and painted over)].

9. As a result of defendant's fraudulent failure to disclose these defects to plaintiff, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Duty to Disclose)

10. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the First Cause of Action.

[EITHER]

11. Prior to the close of escrow [or At some time prior to the execution of the sales agreement and continuing through the escrow period], defendant became aware of certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., the building was constructed in violation of code requirements for structural support and about to be condemned]. Defendant knew that these defects were unknown to plaintiff and were not within the diligent attention and observation of plaintiff, and failed to disclose these defects to plaintiff.

[OR]

11. At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant failed to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property, which inspection would have revealed certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., improper soil compaction resulting in sliding and settlement problems, as evidenced by cracks in the driveway]. Defendant failed to disclose these defects to plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

12. These defects materially affect the value and the desirability of the property.

13. As a result of defendant's breach of his/her duty to [inspect the property and] disclose these defects to plaintiff, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Duty to Be Honest and Truthful)

14. Plaintiff incorporates herein by reference Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the First Cause of Action.

15. _____ [Prior to the close of escrow or At some time prior to the execution of the sales agreement and continuing through the escrow period], defendant became aware of certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., the building was constructed in violation of code requirements for structural support and about to be condemned].

16. Defendant breached his/her duty to be honest and truthful when defendant failed to disclose to plaintiff the existence of these defects, which were unknown to plaintiff _____ [allege any other pertinent facts, e.g., notwithstanding plaintiff's direct request for information regarding such potential defects]. [Further, defendant took certain affirmative actions to insure that plaintiff would not discover these defects, namely: _____ (allege defendant's actions, e.g., defendant arranged to have all the cracks in the foundation plastered and painted over)].

17. As a result of defendant's breach of his/her duty to be honest and truthful with plaintiff, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Negligence)

18. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the First Cause of Action.

19. At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant breached his/her duty to exercise reasonable skill and care in performing his/her duties in that defendant failed to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property and disclose to plaintiff certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., improper soil compaction resulting in sliding and settlement problems, as evidenced by cracks in the driveway].

20. As a result of defendant's breach of his/her duty to be exercise reasonable skill and care in performing his/her duties, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Negligent Misrepresentation)

21. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the First Cause of Action.

22. On or about _____ [date], defendant represented in writing [on the Transfer Disclosure Statement] that he/she had conducted a competent and diligent visual inspection of the property and found no defects [except _____ (allege any problems noted by the listing agent in writing)]. Defendant made this representation without a reasonable basis to believe that it was true. In fact, defendant had not conducted a competent and diligent visual inspection of the property. Defendant failed to disclose to plaintiff certain defects that would have been discovered had he/she undertaken such an inspection, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., improper soil compaction resulting in sliding and settlement problems as evidenced by cracks in the driveway]. Defendant failed to disclose these defects with the intent to induce plaintiff to complete the purchase of the property.

23. At all times mentioned in this complaint, plaintiff was unaware of the existence of these defects.

24. As a result of defendant's misrepresentations, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages _____ [in the sum of $_____ or equal to the amount required to repair the defects, according to proof];

2. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a buyer against a listing agent for the failure to disclose defects. If the listing agent had actual knowledge of the defects, all five causes of action may be included. Otherwise, the second cause of action for breach of duty to disclose based on the failure to inspect [see Paragraph 11 in [1], above] and the fourth cause of action for negligence may be used. Additionally, if the broker signed a statement indicating that he or she had undertaken the required inspection, the fifth cause of action for negligent misrepresentation may be included. For a complaint by a buyer against the selling agent or a dual agent based on the failure to disclose defects, see § 103.95[1].

The form in [1], above, may be adapted for use in a complaint by a buyer against a listing agent for the failure to disclose facts not pertaining to the property itself. In that case, the language relating to defects should be replaced with language relating to the other facts. For example, failure to disclose facts relating to impending governmental action (such as eminent domain or condemnation), or facts relating to development in the surrounding area (e.g., a hazardous waste facility coming soon to the neighborhood), could also be the basis for a cause of action for failure to disclose [see §§ 103.31[2], 103.31[4]].

[3] Allegations

[a] Fraud

Paragraph 4 alleges the basic facts about the purchase agreement and close of escrow. Paragraph 5 alleges the agency relationships.

In the first cause of action, for fraud, Paragraph 6 alleges the defendant's knowledge of certain defects that were unknown to plaintiff or beyond the reach of plaintiff. Paragraph 7 alleges that the defects materially affect the value and the desirability of the property. Paragraph 8 alleges the defendant's failure to disclose the defects to the plaintiff with the intent to induce the plaintiff to purchase the property. An optional allegation includes any affirmative acts by the defendant to hide the defects from the plaintiff. Paragraph 9 alleges the fact that, as a result of defendant's fraud, the plaintiff purchased the property, with the resulting damages in the amount of the cost to repair the defects. These allegations are the required elements for a buyer to state a cause of action for fraud against a broker who is not in a fiduciary relationship with the buyer [see Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 738, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 ; see also § 103.31[4][c] for further discussion of this cause of action].

The statute of limitations for an action based on fraud is three years from the date of discovery of the facts constituting the fraud [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]. For discussion and forms relating to fraud generally, see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

[b] Breach of Duty to Disclose

In the second cause of action for breach of the duty to disclose, Paragraph 11 provides two alternatives. The first alleges the defendant's knowledge of, and failure to disclose, defects that were unknown to the plaintiff or were not within the diligent attention and observation of the plaintiff. A listing agent has the duty to disclose these facts to the buyer without regard to agency relationships [see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form)].

The second alternative version of Paragraph 11 alleges the defendant's failure to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property, and to disclose the defects that would have been revealed by such an inspection. This duty is based on the ruling in Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 102, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 , which has since been codified in Civ. Code §§ 2079-2079.6 [see § 103.31[8] for extended discussion of the statutory and case law pertaining to this duty].

Paragraph 12 alleges the fact that the defects materially affect the value and desirability of the property. Paragraph 13 alleges that, as a result of the defendant's failure to disclose the defects, the plaintiff completed the purchase and has been damaged in the amount required to repair the defects.

The statute of limitations for an action against a broker for the failure to inspect and disclose material facts is two years from the date of possession or the close of escrow, whichever comes first [Civ. Code § 2079.4]. However, if the failure to disclose amounts to actual fraud, the three-year statute of limitations will apply [see [a], above; Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 861-865, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34] .

PRACTICE TIP:

Two-Year Statute of Limitations for Breach of Fiduciary Duty Based on Failure to Disclose. The statute of limitations for breach of fiduciary duty is four years, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 343 [Stalberg v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1230, 282 Cal. Rptr. 43] . As noted above, the statute of limitations for a failure to inspect the property and disclose material facts is two years [Civ. Code § 2079.4]. As yet, there are no cases deciding which of the two statutes applies in an action for breach of a fiduciary duty based on the failure to disclose material facts about the property. The applicable statute of limitations is determined by the substance or gravamen of the action rather than the form of the pleading [Hatch v. Collins (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1110, 275 Cal. Rptr. 476] . So, for example, in an action against an attorney for legal malpractice and a breach of fiduciary duty, the one-year statute of limitations for legal malpractice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6] applies rather than the four-year statute for breach of fiduciary duty, notwithstanding the title of the cause of action as breach of fiduciary duty. As stated in one case, the legislature intended to enact a comprehensive, more restrictive statute of limitations for practicing attorneys facing malpractice claims [see Stoll v. Superior Court (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1362, 1368, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354] . It is this author's opinion that the same analysis would apply in an action for breach of fiduciary duty based on the failure to inspect and disclose material facts. A court would most likely conclude that the legislature intended that the two-year statute of limitations for the more specific, narrowly defined duty to disclose material facts would apply, rather than the four-year statute of limitations for the general class of breach of fiduciary duty. By Linda Breen Pierce

[c] Breach of Duty to Be Honest and Truthful

In the third cause of action for breach of the duty to be honest and truthful, Paragraph 15 alleges the defendant's knowledge of certain defects. Paragraph 16 alleges the defendant's breach of this duty in failing to disclose the defects to the plaintiff, with an optional allegation referring to any acts of plaintiff requesting information regarding the subject matter of the defects. Paragraph 17 alleges that as a result of the defendant's breach, the plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the amount required to repair the defects.

A broker must be honest and truthful in all activities for which a real estate license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10152, 10176(a)-(c), (i); Ward v. Taggart (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 736, 741, 336 P.2d 534] . This duty applies not only to a broker's dealings with his or her client, but also with other parties in a transaction [Nguyen v. Scott (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 734-735, 739, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800] . A listing agent has a duty of honest and fair dealing and good faith to the buyer, without regard to agency relationships [see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form)]. For an extensive discussion of this duty, see § 103.31[7].

[d] Negligence

In the fourth cause of action for negligence, Paragraph 19 alleges the defendant's breach of the duty to exercise reasonable skills and care in performing his or her duties by failing to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property and disclose to the plaintiff certain defects in the property. Paragraph 20 alleges that as a result of the defendant's breach, the plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and suffered damages in the amount required to repair the defects.

A listing agent must exercise reasonable skill and care in the performance of his or her duties, without regard to agency relationships [see Civ. Code § 2079.16 (agency disclosure form); see also § 103.33[2] for discussion of negligence liability to parties outside the fiduciary relationship].

[e] Negligent Misrepresentation

In the fifth cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, Paragraph 22 alleges the written statement made by the defendant that he or she had conducted a competent and diligent visual inspection of the property. This paragraph also alleges the fact that this statement was not true and that the defendant failed to inspect and disclose defects to the plaintiff. Paragraph 23 alleges the plaintiff's lack of knowledge of the defects. Paragraph 24 alleges that, as a result of the defendant's misrepresentations, the plaintiff suffered damages in the amount required to repair the defects.

The statute of limitations for negligent misrepresentation relating to a broker's duty to inspect and disclose is the two-year statute of limitations provided in Civ. Code § 2079.4 [Loken v. Century 21-Award Properties (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 269-270, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683] .

3. [Defendant's real estate license status. See § 103.90[1], Paragraph 3.]

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Fiduciary Duty)

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written agreement to purchase the property situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California, from _____ [name of seller]. A copy of this agreement ("sales agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference. The escrow closed on this sales transaction on _____ [date].

5. In this sales transaction, defendant acted as _____ [the real estate agent for plaintiff or a dual agent, representing both plaintiff and the seller of the property]. Confirmation of the agency relationship is set forth in Paragraph _____ of the sales agreement. As plaintiff's agent, defendant owed to plaintiff a fiduciary duty to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's decision to purchase the property.

[EITHER]

6. _____ [Prior to the close of escrow or At some time prior to the execution of the sales agreement and continuing through the escrow period], defendant became aware of certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., the building was constructed in violation of code requirements for structural support and about to be condemned]. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's decision to purchase the property by failing to disclose these defects to plaintiff.

[OR]

6. At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant failed to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property, which inspection would have revealed certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., improper soil compaction resulting in sliding and settlement problems as evidenced by cracks in the driveway]. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's decision to purchase the property by failing to inspect the property and disclose these defects to plaintiff.

[CONTINUE]

7. At all times mentioned in this complaint, plaintiff was unaware of the existence of these defects.

8. As a result of defendant's breach of his/her fiduciary duty to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's decision to purchase the property, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Constructive Fraud)

9. Plaintiff incorporates in this cause of action by reference Paragraphs 4 and 5 of the First Cause of Action.

10. Prior to the close of escrow [or At some time prior to the execution of the sales agreement and continuing through the escrow period], defendant became aware of certain defects in the property, to wit: _____ [allege defects, e.g., the building was constructed in violation of code requirements for structural support and about to be condemned]. Defendant failed to disclose these defects to plaintiff with the intent to induce plaintiff to complete the purchase of the property.

11. At all times mentioned in this complaint, plaintiff was unaware of the existence of these defects.

12. As a result of defendant's failure to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts that might affect plaintiff's decision to purchase the property, plaintiff completed the purchase of the property and has been damaged in the sum equal to the amount required to repair these defects.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages _____ [in the sum of $_____ or equal to the amount required to repair the defects, according to proof];

2. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a buyer against a selling agent for the failure to disclose defects. It includes two causes of action that are based on a fiduciary relationship; one is for breach of fiduciary duty, and the other for constructive fraud. In addition, the causes of action set forth in § 103.94[1] may be added to this complaint by a buyer against a selling agent in appropriate circumstances [see § 103.94[3] for discussion of allegations]. For a complaint by a buyer against the listing agent, see § 103.94[1].

The form in [1], above, may be adapted for use in a complaint by a buyer against a selling agent for the failure to disclose facts not pertaining to the property itself. In that case, the language relating to defects should be replaced with language relating to the other facts. For example, failure to disclose facts relating to impending governmental action (such as eminent domain), or facts relating to development in the surrounding area (e.g., a hazardous waste facility coming soon to the neighborhood), could also be the basis for a cause of action for failure to disclose [see §§ 103.31[2], 103.31[4]].

[3] Allegations

[a] Breach of Fiduciary Duty

In the first cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty, Paragraph 4 alleges the basic facts about the purchase agreement and close of escrow. Paragraph 5 alleges the agency relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the defendant's fiduciary duty to disclose all material facts that might affect the plaintiff's decision to purchase the property.

Paragraph 6 includes two alternative allegations: the first alleges the defendant's knowledge of certain defects and the failure to disclose these defects to the plaintiff; the second alleges the defendant's failure to inspect the property and to disclose the defects to the plaintiff.

Paragraph 7 alleges plaintiff's lack of knowledge of the defects, and Paragraph 8 alleges that as a result of the defendant's breach of his or her fiduciary duty, the plaintiff suffered damages in the amount required to repair the defects.

An agent has a duty to the principal to make the fullest disclosure of all material facts concerning the transaction that might affect the principal's decision [Loughlin v. Idora Realty Co. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 619, 629, 66 Cal. Rptr. 747] . For complete coverage of this duty, see § 103.31[4].

[b] Constructive Fraud

In the second cause of action for constructive fraud, Paragraph 10 alleges the defendant's knowledge of certain defects and the failure to disclose these defects to the plaintiff, with the intent to induce the plaintiff to complete the purchase of the property. Paragraph 11 alleges the plaintiff's lack of knowledge of the defects, and Paragraph 12 alleges that as a result of the defendant's failure to disclose, the plaintiff suffered damages in the amount required to repair the defects.

The elements for a cause of action for constructive fraud are (1) fiduciary relationship, (2) nondisclosure (breach of fiduciary duty), (3) intent to deceive, and (4) reliance and resulting injury (causation) [Stokes v. Henson (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 187, 197, 265 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; see Civ. Code § 1573 (statutory definition of "constructive fraud")]. The elements of representation and falsity--always part of a cause of action for actual fraud--are absent, as the fraud consists of the breach of the fiduciary duty of disclosure of relevant matters arising from the relationship [Byrum v. Brand (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 926, 940-942, 268 Cal. Rptr. 609] . In summary, constructive fraud exists if there is a breach of a legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence that results in damage to another, even though the conduct is not otherwise fraudulent [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc.(1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] . For further discussion of constructive fraud, see § 103.31[5].

[4] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for bringing an action against a broker for a breach of the duty to disclose is two years from the date of possession, which means the date of recordation, the date of close of escrow, or the date of occupancy, whichever occurs first [Civ. Code § 2079.4]. However, the statute of limitations for breach of fiduciary duty is four years [Stalberg v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1230, 282 Cal. Rptr. 43 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 343]. There are no cases deciding which of the two statutes applies in an action for breach of a fiduciary duty based on the failure to disclose material facts about the property. For further discussion of this issue, see § 103.94[3][b].

[5] Verification

For coverage of verification, see § 103.70[7].

[6] Jurisdiction and Venue

For coverage of jurisdiction, see § 103.70[8]. For discussion of venue, see § 103.70[9].

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 103.90[1], Paragraph 1.]

[2. Fictitious name allegations. See § 103.90[1], Paragraph 2.]

3. [Defendant's real estate license status. See § 103.90[1], Paragraph 3.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written agreement to purchase the property situated at _____ [street address] in _____ [city] of _____ County, California, from _____ [name of seller]. A copy of this agreement ("sales agreement") is attached to this complaint as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint by reference. The escrow closed on this sales transaction on _____ [date].

5. In this sales transaction, defendant acted as the real estate agent for plaintiff [or defendant acted as a dual agent, representing both plaintiff and the seller of the property]. Confirmation of the agency relationships is set forth in Paragraph _____ of the sales agreement. As plaintiff's agent, defendant owed to plaintiff a fiduciary duty to investigate material facts prior to transmitting them to plaintiff.

6. Defendant breached his/her fiduciary duty to investigate material facts when defendant represented to plaintiff that _____ [allege specific facts, e.g., the net income stated on the seller's financial statements was correct], without investigating whether the facts as represented were in fact true.

7. As the result of defendant's breach of fiduciary duty to investigate material facts, plaintiff has been damaged in that _____ [allege damages resulting from failure to investigate, e.g., the net income on the property purchased by plaintiff is in fact less than half of what was stated on the seller's financial statements and therefore the value of the property is $_____ less than what plaintiff paid for the property].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For _____ [state nature of damage, e.g., loss of value of plaintiff's property] in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest on this sum at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];

[3. For reasonable attorney's fees _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a buyer against a selling agent for the failure to investigate material facts. This situation can arise when a selling agent represents certain information to the buyer about a property, such as square footage or permitted uses, without doing an investigation of these facts or disclosing to the buyer that the agent has not investigated the truth of these facts.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 4 alleges the basic facts about the purchase transaction. Paragraph 5 alleges the agency relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant and the defendant's fiduciary duty to investigate material facts.

Paragraph 6 alleges the defendant's transmission of material facts to plaintiff without investigating their veracity, and Paragraph 7 alleges the resulting damages to plaintiff.

A broker has a fiduciary duty to investigate the material facts of a transaction, and cannot accept information received from others as being true, and transmit it to the principal, without either verifying the information or disclosing to the principal that the information has not been verified [Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463] . For further discussion of this duty, see § 103.31[3].

[4] Buyer's Cause of Action Against Listing Agent

If the material facts that were communicated to the buyer originated from information included in the multiple listing service, the buyer could also name the listing agent (if other than the selling agent) as an additional party. Civ. Code § 1088 provides that if an agent places a listing or other information in the multiple listing service, that agent will be responsible for the truth of all representations and statements made by the agent of which the agent had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge to anyone injured by their falseness or inaccuracy.

[5] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for breach of fiduciary duty is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 343]. The statute begins to run when the plaintiff discovers, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence could have discovered, the essential facts giving rise to the cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty [Stalberg v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1230, 282 Cal. Rptr. 43] .

[6] Verification

For coverage of verification, see § 103.70[7].

[7] Jurisdiction and Venue

§ 103.97 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Failure to Disclose--Buyer Failed to Use Reasonable Care

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Failure to Disclose--Buyer Failed to Use Reasonable Care

1. AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred in that the defects plaintiff alleges the defendant failed to disclose were known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in a broker's answer to a complaint for failure to disclose when the defects were so apparent that the broker could reasonably expect that the buyer's own inspection of the premises would reveal the flaw.

The broker's duty to inspect and disclose does not relieve the buyer of the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself [Civ. Code § 2079.5; Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 103, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383] . In discharging this duty, the buyer must take into account those facts that are known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer [Civ. Code § 2079.5].

PRACTICE TIP:

Discovery Regarding Buyers' Failure to Use Reasonable Care. The duty of the buyer to use reasonable care to protect his or her own interest in the purchase and sale of residential real property can be an important defense. In establishing this defense, discovery must be conducted with respect to the buyer. Specifically, the buyer's sophistication and experience regarding the purchase and sale of residential real property must be explored. One starting place would be to identify all other real property transactions in which the buyer was a party and his or her previous experience with real estate brokers/agents. By Jeffrey S. Martin

§ 103.98 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Failure to Disclose--Subject Matter of Alleged Defect Contained in Third Party Report [Civ. Code § 1102.4]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Failure to Disclose--Subject Matter of Alleged Defect Contained in Third Party Report [Civ. Code § 1102.4]

1. AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred in that the defects plaintiff alleges the defendant failed to disclose were not within the personal knowledge of defendant but were in fact the subject matter of information provided by _____ [allege name and occupation of third party providing report, e.g., Bug-a-Roma Termite Company, a licensed structural pest control operator], in that certain report entitled _____ [title of report] and dated _____.

2. The information provided by _____ [name of third party] was within the scope of his/her professional license or expertise and was provided at the request of _____ [plaintiff or the seller] for the purpose of providing full disclosures to plaintiff concerning _____ [allege subject matter of alleged defects, e.g., any infested or infected areas of the building].

3. Defendant exercised ordinary care in obtaining and transmitting to plaintiff the information provided by _____ [name of third party].

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in a broker's answer to a complaint for failure to disclose when the subject matter of the alleged defects was covered by a report or other information provided by a third party professional and the alleged defects were not within the personal knowledge of the broker.

A listing or selling agent will not be liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information delivered pursuant to the statutory disclosure requirements if the following factors are present [Civ. Code § 1102.4]:

- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the personal knowledge of that agent.

- The error, inaccuracy, or omission was based on information timely provided by public agencies or by certain other persons (i.e., a licensed engineer, land surveyor, geologist, structural pest control operator, contractor, or other expert, dealing with matters within the scope of the professional's license or expertise) pursuant to a request by prospective transferee.

- Ordinary care was exercised in obtaining and transmitting it.

§ 103.99 Affirmative Defense Allegation--Defects Are Not Visible Within Accessible Area

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense Allegation--Defects Are Not Visible Within Accessible Area

1. AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant alleges that plaintiff's alleged cause of action is barred in that the defects plaintiff alleges the defendant failed to disclose are not in areas that are reasonably and normally accessible to a visual inspection.

[2] Use of Form

The form of affirmative defense in [1], above, is for use in a broker's answer to a complaint for failure to disclose defects when the alleged defects are not in areas that are reasonably and normally accessible to a visual inspection. The broker has no duty to inspect inaccessible areas [see Civ. Code § 2079.3]. For example, a broker did not breach the statutory duty to inspect and disclose by failing to discover defects in a foundation when the lack of steel bolts was not visually apparent [Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 308, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779] .

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is a complaint for use by a third party (defined as a person not in a fiduciary relationship with the agent) against a real estate agent for the latter's negligence in performing the agent's duties. The cause of action would apply to any third party, including a buyer or seller in the sales transaction.

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 4 alleges the agency relationship between the defendant and either the buyer or seller in the sales transaction. Paragraph 5 alleges the status and relationship of the plaintiff to the sales transaction to establish that plaintiff is in a class of persons to whom the defendant owes a duty of care. Paragraph 6 alleges the nature of the defendant's negligent acts, and Paragraphs 7 and 8 allege the nature and amount of the plaintiff's damages.

A broker may be liable for negligence to a third party with whom the broker is not in privity of contract. The following guidelines will determine whether liability will be imposed for the negligence performance of a contract [Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16] :

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff.
- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff.
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury.
- The closeness of the connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury suffered.
- The moral blame attached to the defendant's conduct.
- The policy of preventing future harm.

For further discussion of an agent's liability to a third party, see § 103.33.

[4] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations is two years for an action based on negligent performance of a contract [see Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)], unless the damages suffered are in the nature of a personal injury, in which case the statute of limitations is one year [Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c)]. The statute of limitations is two years for an action for assault, battery, or injury to, or the death of, an individual caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1].

[5] Verification

For coverage of verification, see § 103.70[7].

[6] Jurisdiction and Venue

For coverage of jurisdiction, see § 103.70[8]. For discussion of venue, see § 103.70[9].

Click here to view image.

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, is Form RE807A, available from the Department of Real Estate, which is to be used to apply for payment from the Recovery Account. Payment is available to persons who have a final judgment based on the defendant's fraud, misrepresentation, deceit, or conversion of trust funds arising directly out of a transaction in which the defendant, while licensed under Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000 et seq., performed acts for which that license was required [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)]. A court of competent jurisdiction, for purposes of these provisions, includes federal courts, but does not include courts of another state [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(a)].

Use of the form is mandatory [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)]. The form, instructions for filling out the form, and other related forms are available on the Department of Real Estate web site (www.dre.ca.gov) or can be obtained by mail from:

Department of Real Estate
Recovery Account Unit
PO Box 187007

Sacramento, CA 95818-7007

For further discussion of the requirements for recovery and procedures related to this remedial statute, see §§ 103.40 -103.47.

[3] Contents of Application; Proof of Legal Presence

The application form must include certain information by Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c). For discussion of the requirements for a completed application, see § 103.41[5], [6].

In addition to submitting the application, an applicant for a payment from the Real Estate Recovery Account must provide the Department of Real Estate with proof of the applicant's legal presence in the United States [10 Cal. Code Reg. § 2718]. For further discussion of this requirements, see § 103.41[7].

[4] Verification

The form must be verified by the claimant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(c)].

[5] Service and Delivery of the Application

The application must be delivered in person or by certified mail to an office of the Department of Real Estate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(b)].

Service of the application on the judgment debtor must be personal or by registered mail [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(a)]. If the judgment debtor holds a current license issued by the Department, service of the notice and a copy of the application may be made by registered mail addressed to the judgment debtor at the latest business or residence address on file with the Department. If the judgment debtor does not hold a current license issued by the Department and personal service cannot be effected through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the claimant must serve the judgment debtor by one publication of the notice in each of two successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the judgment debtor was last known to reside [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(b)]. See § 103.106 for a notice form to use when serving the judgment debtor.

[6] Statute of Limitations

The application must be filed with the Department of Real Estate not later than one year after the judgment has become final [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471(b)].

[3] Service

Service must be personal, by certified mail, or by publication [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(a)]. If the judgment debtor holds an unexpired and unrevoked license issued by the Department, service of the notice and a copy of the application may be made by certified mail addressed to the judgment debtor at the latest business or residence address on file with the Department. If the judgment debtor does not hold an unexpired and unrevoked license issued by the Department, and personal service cannot be effected through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the claimant must serve the judgment debtor by one publication of the notice in each of two successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation publication in the county in which the judgment debtor was last known to reside [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(b)].

If the application is served on the judgment debtor by certified mail, service is complete five days after mailing if the address is within California, and 10 days after the mailing if the address is outside California but within the United States. Personal service is complete on the date of service, and service by publication is complete on completion of the second week of publication [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10471.1(c)].

Forms for proof of service are available from the Department of Real Estate and are normally provided when the application is obtained.

and	)	[Amount demanded _____
_____ [name]	)	(exceeds or does not exceed) $10,000]
Defendant(s).	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]

Plaintiff and Applicant (hereafter referred to as "plaintiff") hereby makes application for an order directing payment out of the Real Estate Recovery Account, and alleges:

1. On _____ [date of judgment], a judgment was entered by this court in favor of plaintiff against defendant, based on the defendant's _____ [fraud and/or misrepresentation and/or deceit and/or conversion of trust funds] arising directly out of a transaction in which the defendant, while licensed as a real estate broker [or salesperson] under the laws of the State of California, performed acts for which that license was required. The amount of the judgment is $_____, and the judgment is now final. A copy of the judgment and a copy of the complaint on which the judgment is based are attached to this application as Exhibits A and B, respectively.

2. The judgment remains unsatisfied as to the sum of $_____.

3. On _____ [date], plaintiff filed an application with the Department of Real Estate for payment from the Recovery Account for the amount unpaid on the judgment that represents an actual and direct loss to the plaintiff in the transaction. A copy of the application is attached to this application as Exhibit C and is incorporated in this application by reference.

4. On _____ [date], the Real Estate Commissioner rendered a decision on the application that denied payment from the Recovery Account, notice of which was received by plaintiff on _____ [specify date within six months of filing application to court]. A copy of that decision is attached to this application as Exhibit D.

5. Plaintiff is entitled to file this application to this court for an Order Directing Payment Out of the Recovery Account, pursuant to Business and Professions Code Section 10472.

6. Plaintiff bases this application on the grounds set forth in the application to the Department of Real Estate that is attached to this application as Exhibit C.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays that this court make its order directing that the Real Estate Commissioner pay to plaintiff from the Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund the sum of $_____ [amount of unpaid actual damages or $20,000, whichever is less].
Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff and Applicant _____ [name]

[Add verification, if desired. See § 103.70[1].]

[2] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, may be used by a judgment creditor whose application for payment out of the Recovery Account was denied by the Real Estate Commissioner. It may not be used by the judgment debtor if the Real Estate Commissioner granted the application [Doyle v. Department of Real Estate (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 893, 897-898, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193] .

[3] Allegations

Paragraph 1 alleges the date, amount, and basis of the underlying judgment against the defendant. Paragraph 2 alleges the amount of the unsatisfied portion of that judgment. Paragraph 3 alleges the date and basic facts relating to the plaintiff's application to the Department of Real Estate for payment out of the Recovery Account. Paragraph 4 alleges the denial of the application by the Real Estate Commissioner.

Paragraph 5 alleges the plaintiff's right to file this application, and Paragraph 6 alleges the grounds for filing the application.

If the Commissioner renders a decision denying an application for payment from the Recovery Account, the claimant may file a verified application in the court in which judgment was entered in favor of the claimant for an Order Directing Payment out of the Recovery Account. The application must be based on the grounds set forth in the claimant's application to the Commissioner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(a)].

[4] Verification

The application form in [1], above, must be verified by the applicant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(a)].

[5] Venue

If the underlying judgment is a California state court judgment, the application must be filed in the court in which the underlying judgment was entered. If the underlying judgment is a federal court judgment, the application must be filed in the superior court of any county within California that would have been a proper venue if the underlying lawsuit had been filed in a California state court, or in the superior court of Sacramento County [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(a)].

[6] Service and Notice

A copy of the verified application must be served on the Commissioner. The service may be made by registered mail addressed to the headquarters office of the Department of Real Estate [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b)].

A copy of the verified application, together with a prescribed notice [see § 103.108[1] for form of notice], must be served on the judgment debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b)]. Service may be made on the judgment debtor in the same manner as service of the application to the Department of Real Estate [see § 103.105[5] for discussion of service requirements].

The claimant also must file with the court a certificate or affidavit of service on the Commissioner and the judgment debtor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(b)].

[7] Statute of Limitations

The application for an order for payment out of the recovery account must be filed with the court within six months of the date the judgment creditor receives notice from the Department of Real Estate that the application for payment has been denied [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10472(a)].

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART I. SCOPE

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.01

§ 104.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter covers the formation of building contracts, and actions for breach of contract [see § 104.10 et seq.].

Forms in this chapter for use in actions by contractors or sureties include:

- Complaints and allegations by a contractor against an owner for breach of contract [see §§ 104.210 -104.215].
- A complaint by a subcontractor against the prime contractor [see § 104.216].
- Affirmative defenses and ground of demurrer relating to whether a contractor or subcontractor was licensed or an architect's certificate was obtained [see §§ 104.217, 104.222].
- A complaint by a contractor against a purchaser for breach of contract [see § 104.218].
- Complaints by a contractor against a subcontractor for breach of contract, including the joinder of a surety [see §§ 104.219, 104.220].
- A complaint by a contractor's surety against an owner [see § 104.221].
- A complaint by a contractor against an owner for the reasonable value of work and material furnished [see § 104.224].

Additional forms for use in actions by owners include:

- A complaint and allegations by an owner against a contractor [see §§ 104.225, 104.226] and an affirmative defense by the contractor [see § 104.227] relating to delayed or excused performance by the contractor.

- Complaints by an owner against a contractor and the surety for negligent performance or nonperformance [see §§ 104.228 -104.230].

- An allegation for use by an owner [see § 104.231] and an affirmative defense for use by a contractor [see § 104.232] relating to a payment bond and terms of the bond.

- A complaint for rescission and restitution by an owner based on the contractor's inability to obtain a building permit [see § 104.233].

This chapter also discusses actions by or against contractors, subcontractors, developers, owners, purchasers, and lenders who are connected with or affected by building contracts, other than actions for breach of a building contract [see § 104.40 et seq.]. This chapter also includes coverage of statutory requirements for actions for construction defects in new residential units when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on and after January 1, 2003 [see § 104.43].

This chapter also includes forms of complaint for use by an owner against a contractor for negligence for building code violations [see § 104.250] or against a contractor and subcontractor for conspiracy to defraud [see § 104.258]; a complaint for damages for fraudulent nondisclosure of soil conditions [see § 104.257]; complaints and a denial relating to actions by a purchaser for construction defects or breach of warranties [see §§ 104.251, 104.253]; a complaint by a contractor against a public entity for injunctive relief and damages for negligence and fraud [see § 104.252]; a complaint by a tenant against a contractor for interference with prospective economic advantage [see § 104.256]; and a complaint and an allegation for injunctive relief or damages against an unlicensed contractor [see §§ 104.259, 104.260]. This chapter also includes forms relating to actions for construction defects in new residential units when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on and after January 1, 2003, including a notice of claim for violation of statutory construction standards by the owner to the builder [see § 104.261]; a complaint for damages for violation of statutory construction standards [see § 104.262]; and various affirmative defenses [see §§ 104.263 -104.269].

For further discussion of injunctive relief and the torts discussed in this chapter, see generally Chapters 269, Fraud and Deceit , 303, Injunctions , 380, Negligence , and 460, Products Liability .

This chapter also covers licensing and bond requirements for contractors, disciplinary proceedings under the Contractors' State License Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.), and the penalties for engaging in contracting work without possessing the appropriate license and for other violations of the license law [see § 104.70 et seq.].

This chapter also discusses the home improvement business, which is regulated by special provisions of the Contractor's State License Law [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150-7168; see also § 104.100 et seq.].

It includes a form of complaint for damages for inducing plaintiff to enter into a contract for a work of improvement in reliance on the contractor's or solicitor's false representations or statements [see § 104.310], and a form of complaint alleging violations of the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) [see § 104.311].

The provisions discussed in this analysis are not applicable to contracts for the construction of swimming pools to be built for the use and enjoyment of other than a single-family unit on or contiguous to premises occupied only by a single-family unit, nor do they apply to the construction of swimming pools built as part of an original building plan by the same contractor who builds a single-family dwelling unit on the premises [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7166].

Formalities required for and forms relating to home solicitation contracts are found in Ch. 128, Consumer Contracts: Statutes Regulating Specific Types of Contracts .

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.10

§ 104.10 Governing Law

Building contracts are governed generally by Civ. Code § 1549 et seq., as well as specific provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. ("the license law") [see, e.g., Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7030, 7030.5, 7034, 7164]. The formation, interpretation, performance, and enforcement of contracts generally are discussed in Ch. 140, Contracts . For discussion of the persons and activities subject to the license law, see § 104.70 et seq.

The provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) are generally applicable to commercial transactions rather than personal or consumer transactions [James Talcott, Inc. v. Gee (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 384, 388, 72 Cal. Rptr. 168 ; see Com. Code § 1102]. In determining whether a transaction is a commercial transaction or a personal transaction for purposes of applying the Uniform Commercial Code, the courts will consider the intent of the purchasing party at the time the transaction is entered into [Cessna Finance Corp. v. Pivo (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 281, 287-288, 129 Cal. Rptr. 888] , and the principal use to which the purchased property is put [James Talcott, Inc. v. Gee (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 384, 388, 72 Cal. Rptr. 168] . For discussion of the UCC, see Ch. 500, Sales: Sales Under the Commercial Code .

For discussion of the possible application of the federal Truth In Lending Act (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq., governing disclosure of credit terms) or the Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq., governing retail installment contracts) to home improvement contracts, see § 104.100 et seq.

§ 104.11 Formation of Building Contract

[1] Essential Elements

The elements essential to the existence of a valid building contract are the same as the essential elements of any other contract: (1) parties capable of contracting [see Civ. Code § 1556 et seq.], (2) consent to the contract [see Civ. Code § 1565 et seq.], (3) a lawful object [see Civ. Code § 1595 et seq.], and (4) a sufficient cause or consideration [Civ. Code § 1550; see Civ. Code § 1605 et seq.]. Except for contracts between an owner and a contractor for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(a); see § 104.13[4]], building contracts are not required to be in writing [see Civ. Code §§ 1622, 1624].

For further discussion of the formation of contracts, see Ch. 140, Contracts .

[2] Subcontractor's Bid as Offer to Contractor

Under certain circumstances, a subcontractor's bid submitted to a general contractor constitutes an offer to contract with the general contractor that the general contractor may accept by using the bid as a basis for calculating its own bid on the total project. The equitable doctrine of promissory estoppel will be invoked to prevent the subcontractor from withdrawing its bid after this use by the general contractor if the court finds that (1) the general contractor reasonably and in good faith relied on the subcontractor's bid in preparing and submitting its own bid, (2) the general contractor's bid was accepted, and (3) the general contractor will be damaged by the subcontractor's refusal to perform according to the terms of the subcontract bid [Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415, 333 P.2d 757 ; see C & K Engineering Contractors v. Amber Steel Co. (1978) 23 Cal. 3d 1, 8-11, 151 Cal. Rptr. 323, 587 P.2d 1136 (no right to jury trial because action is equitable in nature)]. Actual reliance by the general contractor is necessary to transform the bid into a binding obligation; a bid is not in any sense a complete or binding contract merely because it has been filed by the subcontractor or opened by the general contractor [People v. Olson (1965) 232 Cal. App. 2d 480, 487, 42 Cal. Rptr. 760] .

The general contractor's reliance on the bid will not be considered reasonable if the parties' usual dealings, their negotiations concerning the subject proposal, or the terms of the bid itself indicate that the bid is not in fact an offer [see

Drennan v. Star Paving Co. (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415, 333 P.2d 757] . If the subcontractor's bid is significantly lower than the range of other bids submitted to the general contractor, or the general contractor has other reasons to believe that the subcontractor made a mistake in preparing its bid, it may have a duty to check with the subcontractor before relying on the bid [H.W. Stanfield Constr. Corp. v. Robert McMullan & Son, Inc. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 848, 852-853, 92 Cal. Rptr. 669] .

The measure of a general contractor's damages for a subcontractor's failure to perform under the terms of a properly accepted bid is usually the difference between the subcontractor's bid and the next highest bid for the work received by the general contractor [see, e.g., H.W. Stanfield Constr. Corp. v. Robert McMullan & Son, Inc. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 848, 851, 92 Cal. Rptr. 669] .

[3] Estimates and Quotations

Unlike bids, estimates and quotations provided by subcontractors are usually not considered offers to contract. However, a subcontractor's characterization of a document as an estimate or quotation is not conclusive on the matter. If the general contractor has relied on the figure given in preparing and submitting its own bid, and the nature of the parties'dealings, the language of the entire document in which the figure appears, or other facts and circumstances indicate that the reliance was reasonable, an "estimate" or "quotation" may be treated as an offer by the courts [Leo F. Piazza Paving Co. v. Bebek & Brkich (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 226, 230-231, 296 P.2d 368 ; Parker v. Meneley (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 391, 398-399, 235 P.2d 101] .

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.12

§ 104.12 Prohibited Building Contract Provisions

No licensed contractor may insert in any contract, or be a party to any contract that contains, a clause that is void or unenforceable under Civ. Code § 2782 for indemnifying the promisee against liability for damages arising from his or her sole negligence or willful misconduct [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7034(a)]. Provisions in construction contracts entered into by public agencies under which the public agency purports to impose on the contractor, or relieve the agency from, liability for the agency's active negligence are similarly void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 2782(b)]. For further discussion, see § 104.41[7].

No licensed contractor may require a waiver of lien rights from any subcontractor, employee, or supplier in violation of Civ. Code § 3262 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7034(b)].

For contracts entered into before 2006, a provision in a subcontract that sets forth the subcontractor's duty "to defend" the general contractor against claims "founded upon" damage or loss caused by the subcontractor's negligent performance of its work imposes a duty to defend on the subcontractor as soon as a suit is filed against the general contractor asserting such claims, regardless of whether it is ultimately determined that the subcontractor was actually negligent [Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg. Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541, 568, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721, 187 P.3d 424] . However, with respect to construction contracts for residential construction entered into after January 1, 2006, all provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements that require a subcontractor to indemnify the builder, including the cost to defend, against liability for claims of construction defects are unenforceable to the extent the claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder, or agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder [Civ. Code § 2782(c)]. This prohibition also applies to indemnification of the builder by the subcontractor for defects in design furnished by those persons, or to the extent the claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties [Civ. Code § 2782(c)]. The prohibition may not be waived or modified by contractual agreement, act, or omission of the parties [Civ. Code § 2782(c)]. However, a subcontractor and builder may mutually agree to the timing or immediacy of the defense and provisions for reimbursement of defense fees and costs, so long as that agreement does not waive or modify the provisions of Civ. Code § 2782(c) [Civ. Code § 2782(d)].

For residential construction contracts entered into after January 1, 2008, Civ. Code § 2782(e) uses parallel language to expand the categories of project participants as to whom a subcontractor cannot be made contractually responsible for construction defect indemnity, including defense costs, "to the extent" such claims :arise out of, pertain to, or relate to" the negligence of those entities or their agents, their servants, or the independent contractors directly responsible to them. Under subdivision (e), the categories of project participants who may not obtain such contractual indemnity from a subcontractor now include not only the builder, but also "the general contractor or contractor that is not affiliated with the builder."

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.13

§ 104.13 Required Building Contract Provisions

[1] License Number

Every person licensed under the license law must include his or her contractor's license number in all construction contracts, subcontracts, and calls for bid, and in all forms of advertising used by the person [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.5; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7027.3].

[2] Licensing Statement

Except for contractors writing home improvement contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151.2] and service and repair contracts [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10], on or after January 1, 2006, every person licensed under the license law who is engaged as a prime contractor must include in all written building contracts entered into by him or her the following statement in at least 10-point type [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(a), (d)]:

> Contractors are required by law to be licensed and regulated by the Contractors' State License Board which has jurisdiction to investigate complaints against contractors if a complaint regarding a patent act or omission is filed within four years of the date of the alleged violation. A complaint regarding a latent act or omission pertaining to structural defects must be filed within 10 years of the date of the alleged violation. Any questions concerning a contractor may be referred to the Registrar, Contractors' State License Board, P.O. Box 26000, Sacramento, California 95826.

On and after January 1, 2006, licensed contractors writing home improvement contracts pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151.2 and service and repair contracts pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10 must include the following licensing statement in those contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(b)]:

> Information about the Contractors' State License Board (CSLB): CSLB is the state consumer protection agency that licenses and regulates construction contractors.
> Contact CSLB for information about the licensed contractor you are considering, including information about disclosable complaints, disciplinary actions and civil judgments that are reported to CSLB.

Use only licensed contractors. If you file a complaint against a licensed contractor within the legal deadline (usually four years), CSLB has authority to investigate the complaint. If you use an unlicensed contractor, CSLB may not be able to help you resolve your complaint. Your only remedy may be in civil court, and you may be liable for damages arising out of any injuries to the unlicensed contractor or the unlicensed contractor's employees.

For more information:

Visit CSLB's Web site at www.cslb.ca.gov

Call CSLB at 800-321CSLB (2752)

Write CSLB at P.O. Box 26000, Sacramento, CA 95826.

Although the failure of a licensed contractor to include this statement in a contract constitutes grounds for disciplinary action [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030(c)], it will not bar the contractor from bringing an action to recover compensation under the contract [Gonzales v Concord Gardens Mobile Home Park, Ltd. (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 871, 874-875, 153 Cal. Rptr. 559] .

For discussion of the licensing of contractors, see § 104.70 et seq. For forms relating to allegations that a contractor or subcontractor is unlicensed, see §§ 104.217 and 104.222. For coverage of home improvement and service and repair contracts, see § 104.100 et seq.

[3] Discipline Disclosure Required in Small Residential Contracts

Before entering into a contract to perform work on residential property with four or fewer units, any contractor who has had his or her license suspended or revoked two or more times within an eight-year period must disclose any disciplinary license suspension or license revocation during the last eight years resulting from any violation of the License Law by the contractor, whether or not the suspension or revocation was stayed. The disclosure may be provided in a bid, estimate, or other document before entering into a contract, and must appear either in capital 10-point roman boldface type or in contrasting red 8-point roman boldface type [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.1(a), (b)].

If a contractor fails to provide this discipline disclosure when required, he or she will be subject to the following penalties [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7030.1(b)]:

- First violation--$1,000.
- Second violation--$2,500.
- Third violation--$5,000 and a one-year license suspension.
- Fourth violation--license revocation.

[4] Single-Family Dwelling Contracts

There are specific requirements for every contract, and any changes in a contract, between an owner and a contractor, for the construction of a single-family dwelling to be retained by the owner for at least one year. These contracts must contain the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b), (d)]:

- The contractor's name, address, and license number.

- The approximate dates when the work will begin and be substantially completed.

- A legal description of the location where the work will be done.

- A statutorily-prescribed statement with the heading "Mechanics' Lien Warning," which informs the owner of the contractor's rights under the Mechanics' Lien Law and suggests measures the owner can take to protect himself or herself from liens [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(b)(4) (text of statement)].

- A CSLB statement that emphasizes the value of commercial general liability insurance and encourages the owner to verify the contractor's coverage and status, and a check box indicating whether or not the contractor carries commercial general liability insurance, and if so, the insurer's name and telephone number [see http://www.cslb.ca.gov/forms/glisfd.pdf].

- A notice in close proximity to the parties' signatures, in at least 10-point bold type or all capital letters, stating that the owner has the right to require the contractor to have a performance and payment bond and that the expense of the bond may be borne by the owner.

The contract may also contain other matters agreed to by the parties. It must clearly describe any other document incorporated into the contract. Before work begins, the owner must be furnished a copy of the contract signed by the contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164(c)].

In "compelling cases," contracts for the construction of a single-family dwelling may be enforced even though the statutory requirements are not met. In one case, the contractor provided design, construction, and general contracting services for construction of a single-family house even though the property owner never signed the contract. The property owner terminated the contractor without paying for all the services it had provided. In reversing a demurrer granted the property owner, the court of appeal held that the violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 did not preclude the contractor from bringing an action for breach of contract. The pleadings alleged that the property owner was a highly sophisticated homeowner with previous involvement in residential construction projects, that her legal representatives assisted her in negotiating the construction project agreement, that the contractor had already completed a substantial amount of the work when the property owner terminated the parties' agreement, and that the property owner would be unjustly enriched if she were not required to compensate the contractor for the reasonable value of its work. Under those circumstances, the court declined to hold that the contractor's noncompliance with § 7164 absolutely foreclosed it from seeking to enforce the oral agreement it purportedly made with the homeowner, which was allegedly memorialized in an unsigned, written contract [see Arya Group, Inc. v. Cher (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 610, 615-616, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815] . The rationale for Arya Group is unaffected by the subsequent repeal and enactment of a new Bus. & Prof. Code § 7164 [see 2005 Stats., ch. 48, §§ 18, 19].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.14

§ 104.14 Bond Provisions

[1] Payment or Labor-and-Materials Bond

Building contracts often contain provisions requiring bonds. One kind of bond frequently required is a payment bond [see Civ. Code § 3096], also called a labor-and-materials bond [see Sukut-Coulson, Inc. v. Allied Canon Co. (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 648, 654, 149 Cal. Rptr. 711] . By its terms, a payment bond is made to inure to the benefit of all claimants and to give these persons a right of action to recover on the bond in any suit brought to foreclose the liens provided for by the California mechanics' lien laws [Civ. Code § 3109 et seq.; see Civ. Code §§ 3110, 3111, 3112; see also Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens], or in a separate suit brought on the bond [Civ. Code § 3096]. Either an owner or an original contractor may be the principal on any payment bond [Civ. Code § 3096].

There are several types of payment bonds, depending on whether a public or private work of improvement is involved [see Civ. Code §§ 3096 (payment bond defined), 3225, 3226 (general provisions), 3235-3242 (private works), 3247-3252 (public works); Pub. Contract Code § 7103 (payment bonds on public works)]. The general purpose of a payment bond is to secure payment of the claims of subcontractors, material suppliers, or laborers who perform work on or supply materials to a work of improvement. This kind of bond is normally obtained by the general, or prime, contractor on the building contract.

An owner of property who contracts for a private work of improvement in an amount exceeding $5 million if the owner's interest is a fee simple absolute interest or $1 million if the owner's interest is less than a fee simple absolute interest, is to provide one of three specified forms of security for the project to be used only when the owner defaults on his or her contractual obligations to the original contractor. A payment bond may be used to satisfy this security requirement. The requirement does not apply to single-family residences, public works projects, and housing developments eligible for a density bonus and certain publicly-traded and qualified private companies [see Civ. Code § 3110.5].

For a form of allegation relating to payment bond, see § 104.231. For discussion and forms relating to actions to recover on payment bonds for public works, see Ch. 481, Public Works .

[2] Faithful Performance Bond

The faithful performance bond is frequently used in connection with building contracts. Under a faithful performance bond, the surety promises the obligee (the owner) that the work undertaken by the principal (the contractor) will be performed pursuant to the terms of the contract. The surety is liable for losses incurred by the obligee when the principal breaches the contract. A faithful performance bond that refers to a contract providing that the contractor will pay the claims of all persons performing labor or furnishing materials binds the surety for labor performed and materials furnished even in the absence of a payment bond [Culbertson v. Cizek (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 451, 466-467, 37 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

The sufficiency of a performance bond tendered by a contractor is determined according to an objective reasonableness test [see Weisz Trucking Co. v. Emil R. Wohl Constr. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 256, 263, 91 Cal. Rptr. 489] .

For a form of complaint joining a surety in an action by a contractor against a subcontractor, see § 104.219. For a form of complaint for subrogation by a surety against an owner, see § 104.221. For a form of complaint by an owner against a contractor and its surety for nonperformance or abandonment by the contractor, see § 104.230. For a form of affirmative defense relating to limitations set forth in a performance bond, see § 104.232. For further discussion of actions on bonds and the rights and liabilities of sureties, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.15

§ 104.15 Scope of Work

[1] Substantial Performance

California cases determining rights under building contracts have relaxed the common law rule that recovery will not be allowed on a contract until the party bringing the action has fully performed [see, e.g., Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 503, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379] . A contractor may recover for work performed under a building contract, subject to a reduction to compensate for any defects in the work, based on a showing of substantial performance of his or her obligations under the contract [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 503, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379 ; see §§ 104.211, 104.214].

For purposes of this rule, "substantial performance" means that there has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract, and no omission of any of its essential parts, and that the contractor has in good faith performed all of his or her substantive obligations under the contract. If these requirements have been satisfied, the contractor will not be held to have forfeited his or her right to recovery by reason of trivial defects or imperfections in the work performed. If the omission is so slight that it cannot be regarded as an integral or substantive part of the original contract, and the other party can be compensated for it by an award of damages, the contractor does not lose his or her right of action. This rule is particularly applicable when the other party has received the benefit of what has been done, and is enjoying the fruits of the contractor's work [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 87, 92-93, 60 Cal. Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577] .

[2] Effect of Deviations From Contract

In determining whether a contractor has substantially performed his or her obligations under a contract, the court will consider whether the contractor's deviations from the terms of the contract are so slight that they might have been made by one who was honestly endeavoring to comply with the contract [Perry v. Quackenbush (1894) 105 Cal. 299, 309, 38 P. 740 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 356, 330 P.2d 817 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959 (1959) ; see § 104.213]. Good faith on the part of the contractor is not, however, conclusive. The owner has a right to the structure, in all essential particulars, that he or she contracted for. A court may not say that anything is immaterial that the parties have made material by their contract. An owner has the right to determine for himself or herself what the owner deems a good foundation or what materials the owner desires to be used, and neither the contractor nor the court has the right to compel the owner to accept something else even if that thing is shown by witnesses to be just as good or even better than the thing contracted for [see Perry v. Quackenbush (1894) 105 Cal. 299, 309-310, 38 P. 740 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 356-357, 330 P.2d 817 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959 (1959)] .

[3] Extra Work

[a] Agreement for Extras if Original Contract Is Written

A contract in writing may be modified as follows [Civ. Code § 1698(a)-(c)]:

(1) By a contract in writing;

(2) By an oral agreement, to the extent that the oral agreement is executed by the parties; or

(3) Unless the contract expressly provides otherwise, by an oral agreement supported by new consideration; except that the statute of frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] must be satisfied if the contract as modified is within its provisions.

Under these rules, an executed oral agreement for extras, if supported by consideration, may be considered a modification of any written agreement that only extras ordered or approved in writing will be paid for [MacIsaac & Menke Co. v Cardox Corp. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 661, 670, 14 Cal. Rptr. 523 ; First Olympic Corp. v Hawryluk (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 832, 841, 8 Cal. Rptr. 728] . Similarly, although a written building contract contains a maximum limit as to cost and requires all change orders to be written and approved by the architect, by ignoring these requirements the parties can abandon the contract and proceed on a straight cost plus basis [Opdyke & Butler v. Silver (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 912, 918-919, 245 P.2d 306] .

A contractor may recover the reasonable value of extras if the extras are furnished at the request of the owner, become a part of the construction work generally described in the building contract, and are accepted by the owner, even though the request for the extras is oral and the written contract provides that the owner will be chargeable only for extras that are requested in writing [see, e.g., First Olympic Corp. v. Hawryluk (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 832, 841, 8 Cal. Rptr. 728] . The reasonable value of extras may also be recovered when the owner does not complete a change order for the extras as required by the contract, but the owner's performance of a portion of the work in a manner contrary to that set forth in the contract causes the contractor to complete the work in the same manner under the assumption that the owner's conduct amounts to an authorization for the change and for the extras necessary to accomplish it [see, e.g., Weeshoff Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 579, 582-594, 152 Cal. Rptr. 19] .

In appropriate cases, the provisions of Civ. Code § 1698 do not preclude the application of rules of law concerning estoppel, oral novation and substitution of a new agreement, rescission of a written contract by an oral agreement, waiver of a provision of a written contract, or oral independent collateral contracts [Civ. Code § 1698(d)].

For a form of complaint by a contractor against an owner relating to modifications of a contract for extra work, see § 104.215. For a form of complaint by a subcontractor against a prime contractor and a municipality for extra work, see § 104.216.

[b] Agreement for Extras if Original Contract Is Oral

A contract not in writing may be modified in any respect by the consent of the parties, in writing, without a new consideration. The original contract will be extinguished to the extent of the modification [Civ. Code § 1697].

[c] Extras Subject to Approval by State Architect

A mandatory requirement in a contract for the construction of a state building that orders for changes, additions, or extras be approved in writing by the State Architect may not be waived by subordinate field personnel [Acoustics, Inc. v. Trepte Constr. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 887, 912, 92 Cal. Rptr. 723] .

[d] Amount Recoverable for Extras

Usually, the amount recoverable by the contractor for any extras supplied is the market rate or reasonable value of the extras [see First Olympic Corp. v. Hawryluk (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 832, 841, 8 Cal. Rptr. 728] . For example, the amount recoverable for extras was determined by taking the total cost of the project and subtracting payments made as provided under the contract, when assessment of costs in the manner provided by the contract was found to be impractical due to the large number of changes made to the contract [State ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 25, 32-35, 231 Cal. Rptr. 382] .

[e] Excessive Changes Constitute Abandonment of Original Contract

When an owner imposes on the contractor such an excessive number of changes that it can fairly be said that the scope of the work under the original contract has been altered, abandonment of the contract may properly be found. In such a case, the contractor may complete the project with the approval of the owner. The contractor is then entitled to recover the value of its services on a quantum meruit basis [C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 628, 640-645, 218 Cal. Rptr. 592] .

[f] No Rescission for Breach of Subordinate Extras Agreement

The owner's breach of an agreement for extras that is subordinate and incidental to the main purpose of the underlying contract does not warrant the contractor's rescission of the underlying contract [Karz v. Department of Professional & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 554, 557, 54 P.2d 35] .

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

§ 104.16 Standards of Performance

[1] Satisfaction of Party

A stipulation in a contract to perform to the satisfaction of only one of the parties calls for perfomance that should be satisfactory to a reasonable person [Gladding, McBean & Co. v. Montgomery (1912) 20 Cal. App. 276, 279, 128 P. 790] . Performance of a building contract that is satisfactory to a reasonable person constitutes performance of the contract, even if the owner is, in fact, not satisfied [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 503, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379] . This rule does not apply when the performance involves matters dependent on fancy, taste, sensibility, or judgment of the other party, but it does apply when the question is merely one of operative fitness or mechanical utility, and especially to contracts for the erection of buildings [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 296, 197 P. 105] .

[2] Satisfaction of Architect

Building contracts often include a stipulation to perform to the satisfaction of an architect. When the parties authorize the architect, as arbiter, to determine and certify the existence of a fact when the fact becomes material to a proceeding under the contract, the duly made certificate of the architect that the fact exists is binding on the parties in such a proceeding. The architect's certificate can be impeached as to the relevant fact only by a showing of fraud or gross mistake amounting to fraud [Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 552, 150 P. 769] . If, however, the architect is satisfied with the work and arbitrarily refuses to issue the certificate, the necessity for the production of the certificate is dispensed with [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 502, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

A provision in a subcontract that work is to be done "to the satisfaction of the architect" concerns the architect's authority to pass on matters of the quality and quantity of the performance. It does not purport to give the architect final and sole authority to make a legal interpretation of the subcontract or to resolve ambiguities on the plans and specifications. That kind of power cannot be inferred, but must be unequivocally expressed [Walnut Creek Elec. v. Reynolds Constr. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 511, 515, 69 Cal. Rptr. 667] .

When the contract states that performance should be to the satisfaction of a named architect or architects who are subsequently discharged in the course of the work by the owner with no one substituted in their place, the architect's certificate is no longer required [Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 295-296, 197 P. 105] .

For a form of affirmative defense by an owner based on a contractor's failure to obtain an architect's certificate, see § 104.223.

§ 104.17 Excuses for Nonperformance

The lack of performance of an obligation, or an offer of performance, in whole or in part, or any delay in performance, is excused by the following causes, to the extent to which they operate [Civ. Code § 1511]:

> (1) When the performance or offer of performance is prevented or delayed by the act of the creditor (usually, the owner), or by the operation of law, even though there may have been a stipulation that this shall not be an excuse; however, the parties may expressly require in a contract that the party relying on these provisions give written notice to the other party or parties, within a reasonable time after the occurrence of the event excusing performance, of an intention to claim an extension of time or of an intention to bring suit or of any other similar or related intent, provided the requirement of this notice is reasonable and just.
> (2) When the performance or offer of performance is prevented or delayed by an irresistible, superhuman cause, or by the act of public enemies of California or of the United States, unless the parties have expressly agreed to the contrary.
> (3) When the debtor (usually, the contractor) is induced not to perform or offer to perform the obligation by any act of the creditor intended or naturally tending to have that effect, done at or before the time when the performance or offer may be made, and not rescinded before that time [see Civ. Code § 1512, discussed in § 104.213[6]].

A building moratorium imposed by ordinance does not provide an excuse for nonperformance based on either impossibility or commercial frustration [G.W. Andersen Construction Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 326, 334-339, 210 Cal. Rptr. 409] . Fire also will not generally excuse the nonperformance of a building contract [see § 104.18[2]].

For forms relating to delay of performance or excuse of nonperformance, see §§ 104.225 -104.227.

§ 104.18 Risk of Destruction

[1] Express Apportionment of Risk

The parties to the contract may include provisions apportioning the risk of loss from fire or other events [see Ahlgren v. Walsh (1916) 173 Cal. 27, 31-33, 158 P. 748 ; see also Varco-Pruden, Inc. v. Hampshire Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 654, 659-663, 123 Cal. Rptr. 606] . Large building contracts are usually covered by a policy or policies of insurance protecting the parties against destruction of the building prior to completion.

[2] No Express Apportionment of Risk

If a building contract contains no express provisions regarding destruction of the building by fire, or by another cause not related to either party's negligence, before full completion, the contractor and the owner each must perform their parts of the contract if the building is destroyed. If the whole price is due on completion, the contractor must complete the project before he or she can lawfully demand payment. If the price is payable in installments during the progress of the work, the contractor may not recover any installments earned but not paid at the time the building was destroyed until the reconstruction has proceeded to the stage necessary to make the installments due. The contractor must stand the loss resulting from the destruction, and must replace the destroyed building at his or her own expense [Ahlgren v. Walsh (1916) 173 Cal. 27, 31, 158 P. 748 ; see Kennedy v. Reece (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 717, 725-726, 37 Cal. Rptr. 708] .

Fire is not considered an "irresistible, superhuman cause" that will excuse the performance of a building contract under Civ. Code § 1511 [Keeling v. Schastey & Vollmer (1912) 18 Cal. App. 764, 765-766, 124 P. 445] . Nonetheless, when the building contract calls for improvements to an existing building rather than construction of a building, the destruction of the building by fire or another cause not related to either party's negligence will excuse the contractor's performance, and the contractor will be entitled to recover the reasonable value of his or her performance up to the date of the destruction [Keeling v. Schastey & Vollmer (1912) 18 Cal. App. 764, 766, 124 P. 445 ; see Civ. Code § 1511, discussed in § 104.134[5]].

§ 104.19 Time for Performance

If no time is specified for the performance of an act required to be performed, a reasonable time for performance is allowed [Civ. Code § 1657]. A reasonable time for performance in a given case must be determined by the situation of the parties, the nature of the transaction, and the other circumstances of the case [D.A. Parrish & Sons v. County Sanitation Dist. (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 406, 410, 344 P.2d 883] . Failure to commence performance of a contract within a reasonable time constitutes a breach of the contract [*Stark v. If enacted, the legislation will be operative January 1, 2011. For further information, see the Special Alert preceding Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens.

Except as it may arise through the contract or by some voluntary assumption of the obligation, the owner has no personal liability towards laborers, material suppliers, or subcontractors with whom the owner has no contractual privity [Distefano v. Hall (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 657, 675, 32 Cal. Rptr. 770 ; but see § 104.52 (owner liability under peculiar risk doctrine)]. Nonetheless, mechanics, material suppliers, artisans, and laborers will have a lien on the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished material for the value of the labor done and the material furnished [Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 3; see Civ. Code § 3109 et seq. (mechanics' liens)].

Payment bonds are often used to protect owners against suits brought to foreclose the liens provided for by the mechanics' lien laws [see Civ. Code § 3069; see also § 104.109].

For discussion of a contractor's obligation to provide notice of California's mechanics' lien laws regarding a contract of home improvement or swimming pool construction, see § 104.100 et seq. § 104.21 Stop Notices

NOTE:

SB 189, which was introduced in February 2009 as a two-year bill, would comprehensively revise the law governing mechanics' liens and associated construction remedies, including stop notices. If enacted, the legislation will be operative January 1, 2011. For further information, see the Special Alert preceding Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens.

[1] Defined

A stop notice is a written notice given by a claimant to an owner (including a public entity) or a construction lender, directing the owner or lender to withhold payment from a contractor under a building contract because the contractor owes money to the claimant for labor or services provided in connection with the contract [Civ. Code § 3103; see Civ. Code §§ 3110, 3111, 3112, 3158, 3159, 3181 (persons who may be claimants)].

[2] Owner's Obligations

An owner who has been properly served with a stop notice [see Civ. Code §§ 3160, 3183] has a duty to withhold from the original contractor or from any person acting under his or her authority and to whom labor or materials, or both, have been furnished or agreed to be furnished, sufficient money due or to become due to the contractor to answer the claim made by the stop notice and, if the owner is a public entity, to pay the entity's reasonable cost of any litigation to enforce the claim [Civ. Code §§ 3161, 3186]. If a payment bond has been recorded [see Civ. Code § 3235], the owner may, but is not obligated to, withhold this money [Civ. Code § 3161].

[3] Lender's Obligations

A construction lender who has been properly served with a stop notice is required to withhold funds under the following circumstances: (1) when the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by an original contractor, regardless of whether a payment bond has been previously recorded [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(1), 3162(a)(1); see Civ. Code § 3235 (effect of recording payment bond)]; or (2) when the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by any person entitled to do so [see

Civ. Code § 3159(a)] other than an original contractor and a payment bond was not recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3235 before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(2), 3162(a)(2), (3)].

A construction lender may, but is not required to, withhold funds on receipt of a stop notice under the following circumstances: (1) when the stop notice is not bonded, regardless of who gives it [Civ. Code § 3161(a)]; or (2) when the stop notice is a bonded stop notice filed by any person entitled to do so [see Civ. Code § 3159(a)] other than an original contractor and a payment bond was recorded pursuant to Civ. Code § 3235 before the first stop notice was served [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(2), 3162(a)(2), (3)].

In relevant situations, the lender must furnish the claimant with notice of its election not to withhold funds within 30 days after it so elects; provided that, at the time it gives the lender the stop notice or bonded stop notice, the claimant includes a written request for notice of the election accompanied by a preaddressed, stamped envelope. The lender will not be liable for failing to furnish a copy of the bond if: (1) the failure was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error; (2) the lender maintains reasonable procedures to avoid these errors; and (3) the error was corrected not more than 20 days from the date the violation was discovered [Civ. Code §§ 3159(a)(3), 3162(a)(3)].

[4] Period to Commence Action

An action against a private owner or a lender to enforce payment of the claim stated in a stop notice may be commenced at any time after 10 days from the date of service of the stop notice, and must be commenced within 90 days following the expiration of the period within which claims of lien must be recorded [Civ. Code § 3172]. An action against a public entity to enforce payment of the claim stated in a stop notice may be commenced 10 days after the date of service of the stop notice, and must be commenced within 90 days after the expiration of the period for filing of stop notices for the project [Civ. Code § 3210]. Neither money nor bonds will be held pursuant to a stop notice after the expiration of the 90-day period, unless the claimant has commenced proceedings to enforce the claim [Civ. Code §§ 3172, 3210].

For further discussion of stop notices, see Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens , and Ch. 481, Public Works .

§ 104.22 Arbitration of Disputes

[1] Public Agency Contracts

Construction contracts entered into by public agencies sometimes provide that one party to the contract, or one party's agent or employee, will decide any disputes arising under the contract. Because these provisions are unlawful, any dispute arising under such a contract must be resolved by submitting the dispute to independent arbitration, if that is mutually agreeable; otherwise, the dispute must be resolved by ordinary litigation [Civ. Code § 1670].

[2] Small Residential Contracts

In any binding arbitration of a claim for more than $3,000 involving a contract to construct or improve residential property consisting of one to four units, the arbitrator must disclose to each party whether the arbitrator, or the arbitrator's employer or arbitration service, (1) had or has a personal or professional affiliation with either party, and (2) has been selected or designated as an arbitrator by either party in another transaction. The disclosure must be provided to each party within 10 days following the arbitrator's appointment, and must take the form of a written declaration under penalty of perjury [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.95(a)]. The arbitrator is subject to disqualification by either party if the declaration reveals a potential conflict of interest, or if the arbitrator fails to furnish the declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.95(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.95(c) (disqualification procedure)].

If a contract for work on residential property with four or fewer units contains a provision for arbitration of a dispute between the principals in the transaction, the provision must be clearly titled "ARBITRATION OF DISPUTES" and must contain a specified notice [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191(a), (b)]. If the provision is included in a printed contract, it must be set out in at least 10-point roman boldface type or in contrasting red print in at least 8-point roman boldface type; if the provision is included in a typed contract, it must be set out in capital letters [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191(a), (b)]. A provision for arbitration of a dispute between a principal in a contract for work on a residential property with four or fewer units that does not comply with these requirements will not be enforceable against any person other than the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191(c); Woolls v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 197, 208-209, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 426] . In Woolls, the court held that under the facts of the case, the requirements in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7191 were not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act [9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.] because the contractor failed to show that the transaction at issue involved interstate commerce [Woolls v. Superior Court (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 197, 214, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 426 ; see Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration, § 32.24[2] for discussion of federal preemption of state law that seeks to invalidate arbitration agreements].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.23

§ 104.23 Rescission

[1] When Available

A contract may be rescinded if all the parties to the contract consent to the rescission [Civ. Code § 1689(a)], regardless of any express terms to the contrary in the contract [Rackliff v. Coronet Construction Co. (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 419, 424, 321 P.2d 50] . A contract may be unilaterally rescinded if the the rescinding party's consent to the contract, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was given due to a material mistake of law or fact [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1); Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 771, 284 Cal. Rptr. 680] , or obtained through duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of any party as to whom the contract is rescinded or any party jointly interested with that party [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)].

In addition, a party may rescind the contract in the following cases [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(2)-(7)]:

- The consideration for the obligation of the rescinding party fails, in whole or in part, through the fault of the party as to whom he or she rescinds;

- The consideration becomes entirely void from any cause;

- The consideration fails in any material respect, from any cause, before it is rendered to the rescinding party;

- The contract is unlawful for causes that do not appear in its terms or conditions, and the parties are not equally at fault;

- The public interest will be prejudiced by permitting the contract to stand;

- The rescinding party's consent is not free but nevertheless not absolutely void [see Civ. Code § 1566]; or

- There is a statutory provision allowing the rescission.

A building contract may also be rescinded for a substantial failure to make installment payments as provided for by the contract [Integrated Inc. v. Alec Fergusson Electrical Contractor (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 287, 297, 58 Cal. Rptr. 503] .

In every building contract that contains no express covenants on the subject, there are implied covenants that the contractor must be permitted to proceed with construction in accordance with the other terms of the contract without interference by the owner, and that the contractor must be given such possession of the premises as will enable him or her to adequately carry on the construction and complete the work agreed on. A failure to observe these covenants that is not consented to by the contractor constitutes a breach of the contract on the part of the owner and entitles the contractor to rescind the contract [Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 395, 199 P. 767] .

For a form of complaint for rescission, see § 104.233.

[2] When Unavailable

If the covenant breached is of minor importance and one that can readily be compensated in damages, the contractor may not rescind the contract but must perform his or her part of the contract and seek compensation in damages [Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 287, 296, 3 Cal. Rptr. 756] . For example, an owner's breach of an oral contract for extras, which was determined to be an independent covenant that was subordinate and incidental to the main purpose of the written building contract and did not go to the whole consideration of that contract, was held not to constitute a breach of the entire contract and thus not to justify the contractor's rescission of the entire contract [Karz v. Department of Professional & Vocational Standards (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 554, 557, 54 P.2d 35 ; see § 104.15[3][f]].

A party who has previously ratified a contract by suing on it waives the right to rescind the contract [Price v. McConnell (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 660, 666, 7 Cal. Rptr. 695] .

[3] Measure of Recovery

An action for damages flowing from the breach of a contract is inconsistent with an action for rescission, because the former action affirms the contract and the latter one disaffirms it [Lozier v. Janss Investment Co. (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 666, 669, 36 P.2d 620 ; Paularena v. Superior Court (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 906, 915, 42 Cal. Rptr. 366] . Nonetheless, a claim for damages is not inconsistent with a claim for relief based on rescission, as long as the damages sought are consequential damages arising from the rescission rather than damages based on breach [Civ. Code § 1692; see, e.g., Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 287, 296, 3 Cal. Rptr. 756] .

The aggrieved party in a rescission action is entitled to complete relief, including restitution of all benefits conferred by him or her as a result of the transaction, and any consequential damages [Civ. Code § 1692]. When the aggrieved party is the contractor, restitution of benefits conferred ordinarily involves payment of the reasonable value of any work completed prior to the rescission [see C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 628, 644-646, 218 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 287, 296, 3 Cal. Rptr. 756] . The aggrieved party's recovery may be reduced by any amount that the court deems necessary to justly compensate the other party or to adjust the equities between the parties, and must not include any duplicate or inconsistent items of recovery [Civ. Code § 1692].

For further discussion of recovery in actions based on rescission of a contract, see Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution .

[4] Statute of Limitations

An action based on rescission of a contract must be brought within four years if the contract was in writing [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(3)], or within two years if the contract was not in writing [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(3)]. The limitations period begins to run on the date on which the facts that entitle the aggrieved party to rescind occur, except that when the ground for rescission is fraud or mistake, the time does not begin to run until the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337(3), 339(3)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.24

§ 104.24 Contractor's Action for Breach

[1] Damages

[a] Availability and Measure

If a party to a contract elects to proceed under the contract in seeking relief for the other party's breach, his or her exclusive remedy is in damages for the breach [Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 287, 296, 3 Cal. Rptr. 756] . The measure of damages for the breach of an obligation arising under a contract is ordinarily the amount that will compensate the aggrieved party for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach or all the detriment that, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach [Civ. Code § 3300]. No damages may be recovered for a breach of contract that are not clearly ascertainable in both their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301]. For example, damages for emotional distress may not be included as consequential or special damages in an action for negligent breach of a contract to construct a home [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 558-561, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978] .

For a form of complaint for damages for breach of contract by a contractor against an owner, see § 104.210. For general discussion and forms relating to contract damages, see Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.140 et seq. If an action for breach is not appropriate, see § 104.224 for a form of complaint by a contractor for the reasonable value of work and materials furnished (common count of quantum meruit).

[b] Damages for Failure to Pay

If the owner's breach consists merely of refusing to pay the contractor for the completed project, the measure of damages is the amount due under the terms of the contract, with interest from the due date [Civ. Code § 3302; see Civ. Code § 3289].

For a form of complaint by a contractor for breach of contract to pay for improvements and purchase real property, see § 104.218.

[c] Damages for Prevention of Performance

If the owner's breach consists of some unjustifiable act or omission that prevents the contractor from completing his or her performance under the contract, a contractor who has been and is ready and willing to perform may either treat the contract as rescinded or sue to recover damages for the breach [see Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 549, 150 P. 769 (for damages); Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 171, 181, 317 P.2d 182 , cert. denied, 356 U.S. 937 (for damages); see also § 104.23].

The measure of the contractor's damages for a breach consisting of prevention of his or her performance is the profits the contractor would have made if permitted to complete the work, plus any actual expenses [Civ. Code § 1512; Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 549, 150 P. 769 ; Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 171, 180, 317 P.2d 182 , cert. denied, (1958) 356 U.S. 937, 78 S. Ct. 781, 2 L. Ed. 2d 814] . That is, the contractor should be compensated for his or her part performance and indemnified for his or her loss in respect to the unexecuted part [Bellwood Discount Corp. v. Empire Steel Buildings Co. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 438, 346 P.2d 467] . The amount of the contractor's lost profits are computed by showing how much less than the contract price it would cost the contractor to perform the contract [Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 171, 181, 317 P.2d 182 , cert. denied, 356 U.S. 937] .

If the work is substantially complete at the time the owner interferes with the contractor's performance, so that the portion lacking is nominal only, and the owner refuses to accept the performance or to allow further performance, the refusal to accept will be considered unjustifiable and the contractor may recover the entire unpaid balance of the contract price [Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 549, 150 P. 769] .

The reasonable expenditures already incurred by the contractor, the unavoidable losses incident to stopping construction, the progress attained, the unfinished part and the probable cost of its completion, the whole contract price, and the estimated pecuniary result, favorable or unfavorable to the contractor, had he or she been permitted to complete performance may be taken into consideration by the court in awarding damages [Bellwood Discount Corp. v. Empire Steel Buildings Co. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 437-438, 346 P.2d 467] .

The contractor who seeks damages on the grounds of an owner's prevention of performance of a building contract has the burden of proof that but for the owner's acts he or she was ready, willing, and able to perform [Kenworthy v. State of California (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 378, 394-395, 46 Cal. Rptr. 396] .

For a form of complaint for declaratory relief and damages by a contractor against a subcontractor for delays, see § 104.220.

[d] Interest on Damages

Every person who is entitled to recover damages certain, or capable of being made certain by calculation, and whose right to recover is vested in him or her on a particular day, is entitled also to recover interest on the damages from that date, except during the time that the debtor is prevented by law or by the act of the creditor from paying the debt [Civ. Code § 3287(a)]. Every person who is entitled under any judgment to receive damages based on a cause of action in contract when the claim was unliquidated may also recover interest on the award from a date prior to the entry of judgment as the court may, in its discretion, fix, but in no event earlier than the date the action was filed [Civ. Code § 3287(b)].

Any legal rate of interest stipulated by a contract remains chargeable after a breach of that contract, as before, until the contract is superseded by a verdict or other new obligation [Civ. Code § 3289(a)]. If a contract does not stipulate a legal rate of interest, the obligation will bear interest at a rate of 10 percent per annum after a breach [Civ. Code § 3289(b)].

Acceptance of payment of the whole principal, as such, waives all claim to interest [Civ. Code § 3290].

[2] Statute of Limitations for Contractor's Action

Subject to certain exceptions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 336a], the statute of limitations on an action on any contract, obligation, or liability founded on an instrument in writing is four years [Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)]. Most actions on contracts, obligations, or liabilities not founded on an instrument in writing must be brought within two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1); see Kralow Co. v. Sully-Miller Contracting Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1034-1035, 214 Cal. Rptr. 630] .

For further discussion of issues relating to statutes of limitations, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.25

§ 104.25 Owner's Action for Breach

[1] Waiver of Defects

An owner who, with full knowledge of all the defects in the contractor's work, accepts and pays for it thereby waives any claim for damages for the defects [Sirch Elec. & Testing Laboratories v. Garbutt (1910) 13 Cal. App. 435, 439, 110 P. 140] .

[2] Measure of Owner's Damages

[a] Cost of Completion Less Contract Price

The measure of damages for breach of a construction contract by the contractor is ordinarily the difference between the contract price and the reasonable cost of completing the work the contractor had agreed to perform [Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 993, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119 ; Amerson v. Christman (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 811, 823, 68 Cal. Rptr. 378 ; Fairlane Estates v. Carrico Constr. Co. (1967) 228 Cal. App. 2d 65, 72, 39 Cal. Rptr. 35] . Thus, for defects that can be remedied, the owner is entitled to recover the reasonable cost of remedying the defects [Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 360, 366, 330 P.2d 817 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959] .

A different measure of damages may be appropriate when a contractor intends to lease the building being constructed from the owner. In one case, a tenant/contractor breached a contract to construct a building and then lease the building from the owner for 25 years. The court declined to measure the owner's damages based on the full value of the contractor's cost of constructing the building. The owner's damages must instead be based on the discounted, present value of the building at the end of the 25-year lease [Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 387, 397-400, 186 Cal. Rptr. 218] .

For forms of complaints and allegations by an owner against a contractor for breach resulting from delays in performance, negligent work, or nonperformance, see §§ 104.225 and 104.226.

[b] Difference in Value Due to Defect

For defects that would not be practical or cost effective to correct, the owner's damages are measured by the difference between the value of the building with the defects and its value without them [Orndorff v. Christiana Community Builders (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687-688, 266 Cal. Rptr. 193 ; Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 360, 366, 330 P.2d 817 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959 ; see Jones v. Kvistad (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 836, 843-844, 97 Cal. Rptr. 100] , unless the owner establishes a personal reason to repair the building [Orndorff v. Christiana Community Builders (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688-689, 266 Cal. Rptr. 193] . The defendant contractor has the burden of proving affirmatively and convincingly that economic waste would result from the replacement of the omissions and the correction of the defects [Shell v. Schmidt (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 350, 360, 366, 330 P.2d 817 , cert. denied, 359 U.S. 959] .

[c] Compensatory Damages

An owner aggrieved by a contractor's breach is also entitled to recover damages in the amount necessary to compensate him or her for any other detriment proximately caused by the breach [Civ. Code § 3300]. For example, damages were allowed for the loss of crops planted in reliance on the contractor's promise to complete a project within the time specified in the contract [Wilkinson & Co. v. McKinley (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 100, 103, 106, 190 P.2d 35] . In another case, the owners were permitted to recover damages for expenses incurred in traveling to the construction site to complete the work, as well as damages for adverse tax consequences resulting from the delay in completing the work. The court noted that the contractor had been aware, at the time the parties entered into the contract, that the owners would be able to defer payment of the capital gains tax from the sale of their previous home only if their new home was completed by the time stated in the contract. The court did not permit recovery for medical expenses occasioned by the contractor's alleged negligent infliction of emotional distress, since those damages are not recoverable in contract actions [Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 993-994, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119] .

[3] Statute of Limitations for Owner's Action

[a] Patent and Latent Deficiencies Distinguished

The statute of limitations for an owner's action against a contractor based on deficiencies on a completed work of construction is four years if the the deficiency is patent [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a); see § 104.25[3][b]] or 10 years if the deficiency is latent [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a); see § 104.25[3][d]]. For discussion of limitations periods applicable to other breach of contract actions, see § 104.24[2].

The distinction between a patent deficiency and a latent deficiency, for purposes of determining which limitations period applies, is the susceptibility of the deficiency to detection or, put another way, whether or not the deficiency is discoverable by a reasonable inspection. A patent deficiency is apparent by reasonable inspection; a latent deficiency is not [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1(e), 337.15(b)].

What constitutes a reasonable inspection is determined with reference to the totality of circumstances in a given case. The reasonableness of the inspection varies with the nature of the thing to be inspected and the nature and gravity of the harm that is sought to be averted. One factor to be considered in assessing the reasonableness of an inspection is the knowledge possessed by the inspector. Although knowledge within the common experience of the average consumer may legitimately establish a minimum standard below which an individual inspector will not be allowed to fall, when the inspector possesses perception, knowledge, intelligence, or judgment superior to the average consumer, the law will demand of him or her conduct consistent with that superior perception, knowledge, intelligence, or judgment [Renown, Inc. v. Hensel Phelps Construction Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 413, 420-421, 201 Cal. Rptr. 242] .

In a case involving a defective roof, the four-year limitations period for patent defects rather than the ten-year period for latent defects was applied when the defects in the roof not only should have been apparent to the owners, but were in fact known to them through their agent [Renown, Inc. v. Hensel Phelps Construction Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 413, 420-421, 201 Cal. Rptr. 242] . An unfenced swimming pool was also determined to be a patent defect requiring application of the four-year statute [Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510-511, 167 Cal. Rptr. 292] . Conversely, a defect in an air-conditioning system that caused temperature fluctuations was held not to be patent because the defect was not readily discoverable [Baker v. Walker & Walker, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 746, 758-763, 184 Cal. Rptr. 245] .

[b] Patent Deficiency

Except as otherwise provided below, no action shall be brought to recover damages from any person performing or furnishing the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to real property more than four years after the substantial completion of the improvement for any of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a)]:

- Any deficiency that is apparent by reasonable inspection ("patent deficiency") [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(e)] in the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to real property;

- Any injury to real or personal property arising out of any such patent deficiency; or

- Any personal injury or wrongful death arising out of any such patent deficiency.

When the patent defect is discovered, or when the harm occurs, has no effect on when the limitation period begins to run. In all situations, it begins with substantial completion of the improvement [Tomko Woll Group Architects, Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1326, 1336-1337, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300] .

If, by reason of a patent deficiency, an injury to property or the person or an injury causing wrongful death occurs during the fourth year after substantial completion, an action in tort to recover damages for the injury or wrongful death may be brought within one year after the date on which the injury occurred, irrespective of the date of death, but in no event may the action be brought more than five years after the substantial completion of construction of the improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(b)].

Nothing in the above-described rule is to be construed as extending the period prescribed by the laws of California for the bringing of any action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(c)].

The limitation period is tolled during any period when the contractor attempts to make repairs, but is tolled only with respect to the particular defects that he or she repairs or attempts to repair [Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 282, 287-289, 261 Cal. Rptr. 605] .

The four-year statute of limitations established by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 has been described as a mere "economic regulation," since it touches neither on a suspect class nor a fundamental right, and that no equal protection problem is raised by its extension to persons associated with construction and improvements to real property benefits not conferred on persons associated with personal property [Salinero v. Pon (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 120, 128, 177 Cal. Rptr. 204] .

[c] Exclusions From Four-Year Statute

The four-year limitations period set forth by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 does not apply to any owner-occupied single-unit residence [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(f)]. Additionally, it may not be asserted by way of defense by any person who is in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of an improvement to real property at the time any deficiency in the improvement constitutes the proximate cause of the injury or death for which it is proposed to bring an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(d)].

The four-year limitation period also does not apply in cases in which damages are sought solely for reasons other than patent deficiencies. For example, Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1 was held not to apply to an action by a developer seeking damages for delay in the performance of a construction contract [Kralow Co. v. Sully-Miller Contracting Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1035, 214 Cal. Rptr. 630] .

[d] Latent Deficiency

No action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c)] may be brought to recover damages from any person, or the surety of any person, who develops real property or performs or furnishes the design, specification, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to real property more than 10 years after the substantial completion of the development or improvement for either of the following [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)]:

(1) Any deficiency that is not apparent by reasonable inspection ("latent deficiency") [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(b)] in the design, specification, surveying, planning, supervision, or observation of construction or construction of an improvement to, or survey of, real property; or

(2) Any injury to real or personal property arising out of any such latent deficiency.

Nothing in the above-described rule is to be construed as extending the period prescribed by the laws of California for bringing any action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(d)]. The relationship between the 10-year limitations period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 and the four and three-year limitations periods prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337 and 338, respectively, have been characterized as a "two-step limitation." Actions founded on a latent defect in the development of real property must be filed within three or four years after discovery, depending on whether the action rests on a breach of warranty or negligence, but in any case within 10 years after the date of substantial completion of the improvement [Regents of University of Cal. v. Hartford Acci. & Indem. Co. (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 624, 640-641, 147 Cal. Rptr. 486, 581 P.2d 197 ; North Coast Business Park v. Nielsen Construction Co. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 22, 27, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 104 ; Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 176, 180-181, 160 Cal. Rptr. 65] . According to the First District, when a claim is based on a latent construction defect that results in toxic contamination subject to the federal Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) [42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.], however, the 10-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is irrelevant. It is inconsistent with § 309 of CERCLA [42 U.S.C. § 9658], which requires that the applicable state statute of limitations begin to run when the plaintiff discovers or could have discovered through reasonable diligence the cause of the contamination. Thus, in these cases, the applicable statute of limitations is either the three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b) for negligence claims, or the four-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1) for contract claims based on a written agreement [Angeles Chemical Co. v. Spencer & Jones (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 112, 125-126, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] .

The Second District came to a different conclusion in a case in which the CERCLA preemption issue apparently was not raised. The case involved a defective underground storage tank, which caused underground contamination that the current landowner was required to remove. The landowner then sought to recover the cleanup costs from the previous owner who had defectively installed the tanks 19 years earlier. At trial, the installer unsuccessfully raised the 10-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 and appealed denial of summary judgment. On appeal, the landowner claimed that the leaking tank was a continuing nuisance and that therefore its action was not barred because it had been filed within three years of abatement of the nuisance [Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324 , citing Wilshire Westwood Associates v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 732, 744-745, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562 (applying three-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338)]. In effect, the landowner argued for creation of a "pollution exception" to the 10-year limitation period. The court, however, held that the 10-year period of § 337.15 applied to bar the landowner's action, finding that the decision was consistent with the broad term "no action" in § 337.15, and that it furthered the legislative goal of setting an outside limit to protect contractors from liability [

Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Superior Court (1996) 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 324] .

The purpose of the 10-year statute is to prevent liability of indefinite duration from impinging on the work of contractors and developers [Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Associates (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 1256, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113 (limited to its facts in A & B Painting & Drywall, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 349, 355, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418)].

The 10-year statute has been held to apply to claims for breach of contract as well as tort claims [Moseley v. Abrams (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 355, 361, 216 Cal. Rptr. 40] . Actions that are barred by the 10-year statute also include actions for indemnity arising out of any act within the scope of the statute. Nonetheless, a cross complaint for indemnity arising from the same transaction or occurrence as that sued on in the complaint may be filed beyond the 10-year period if the principal action was timely filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b)]. This rule serves the public policy favoring cross complaints over separate actions and favoring holding subcontractors liable for their work when the general contractor is liable [Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consolidated, Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 604, 613-615, 189 Cal. Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160] .

For further discussion of indemnity issues, see Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution .

[e] Commencement of 10-Year Statute

The 10-year period commences on substantial completion of the improvement, but in no case later than the earliest of the following dates [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g)]:

- The date of final inspection by the applicable public agency.
- The date a valid notice of completion is recorded [see Schwetz v. Minnerly (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 296, 309, 269 Cal. Rptr. 417 (not relevant who recorded notice as long as it was validly recorded)].
- The date of use of occupation of the improvement.
- One year after termination or cessation of work on the improvement.

For this purpose, "the date of substantial completion" relates specifically to the performance or furnishing of designs, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, observation of construction, or construction services by each profession or trade rendering services to the improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(g); see Liptak v. Diane Apartments, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 762, 770-773, 167 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; Eden v. Van Tine (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 879, 883-885, 148 Cal. Rptr. 215 ; see Nelson v. Gorian & Associates, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 93, 96, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345 ("substantial completion" is controlling date, and four conditions listed in Section 337.15(g) do not define "substantial completion")]. Thus, the statute begins to run as to a particular defendant's profession when that defendant's work on the improvement is substantially completed, rather than when the improvement itself is substantially completed [Industrial Risk Insurers v. Rust Eng'g Co. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1042, 283 Cal. Rptr. 873] . "Improvement" as used in Section 337.15 is in the singular and refers separately to each of the individual changes or additions to real property that qualifies as an "improvement," such as grading and filling, putting in curbs and streets, and laying storm drains [Nelson v. Gorian & Associates, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 93, 97, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345 , citing Liptak v. Diane Apartments, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 762, 771, 167 Cal. Rptr. 440] .

[f] Tolling of 10-Year Statute

The 10-year statute of limitations for latent construction defects is not subject to a general rule of equitable tolling while promises or attempts to repair are pending [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 363, 379, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 655,

73 P.3d 517 , disapproving Grange Debris Box & Wrecking Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 and Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Associates (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113 , to extent they held otherwise, and approving FNB Mortgage Corp. v. Pacific General Group (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841] . In so holding, the California Supreme Court reasoned that a broad tolling-for-repairs rule would contravene the Legislature's clear intent, at the time it adopted Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15, to ensure a generous but firm cutoff date for latent-defect suits, and that the extraordinary length of the limitations period set forth in § 337.15 weighs strongly against the need for such a tolling rule as a matter of fair procedure [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 363, 367, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 655, 73 P.3d 517] . However, a defendant whose conduct has induced plaintiffs to refrain from filing suit within the 10-year period may be equitably estopped to assert that the statute of limitations has expired [Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 363, 383-384, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 655, 73 P.3d 517] .

One court has concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is a special statute of repose, and therefore the tolling provision contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 356 ("when the commencement of an action is stayed by injunction or statutory prohibition, the time of the continuance of the injunction or prohibition is not part of the time limited for the commencement of the action") does not extend the 10-year statute of limitations as a result of bankruptcy stays occurring wholly within that period. Thus, in an action by homeowners to recover compensation for construction defects, the 10-year limitations period was not tolled by the contractor's filing of a bankruptcy petition [Inco Development Corp. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1014, 1021-1022, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872] .

[g] Exclusions From 10-Year Statute

The 10-year limitations period set forth by Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 may not be asserted by way of defense by any person who is in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of an improvement to real property at the time any deficiency in the improvement constitutes the proximate cause for which it is proposed to bring an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(e)]. This exclusionary provision refers to the person in possession or control at the time that the deficiency becomes the proximate cause of the damages, and not to the person in possession or control at the time when the defective latent condition was designed, installed, or built into the improvement [Eden v. Van Tine (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886, 148 Cal. Rptr. 215] . The exclusion may be applied to claims against governmental and public entities [Magnuson-Hoyt v. County of Contra Costa (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 139, 143-144, 278 Cal. Rptr. 770] . Thus, for example, the 10-year limitations period could not be asserted by a city that installed drains on city property to insulate itself from liability for defects in the installation [Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 398, 404-405, 163 Cal. Rptr. 711] .

The exclusion of owners of property from the protections of the rule has been held not to deny equal protection of the law [Barnhouse v. City of Pinole (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 171, 183, 183 Cal. Rptr. 881] .

The terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 do not apply to actions for personal injury or to cross complaints for indemnity against contractors by owners who are defendants in actions for personal injury. The terms of this section apply only to actions for deficient work or property itself or for damage to other real or personal property arising from such a deficiency. The Legislature did not intend that this section bar actions for personal injuries from latent defects [Martinez v. Traubner (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 755, 758-760, 187 Cal. Rptr. 251, 653 P.2d 1046] .

The terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 are also inapplicable to actions based on willful misconduct or fraudulent concealment [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(f); see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]. One court held that for this purpose, the term "willful misconduct" encompasses not only intentional wrongdoing, but also negligence of such a character as to constitute reckless disregard for the rights of others [Felburg v. Don Wilson Builders (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 383, 391, 191 Cal. Rptr. 92] . However, in a subsequent decision, the court of appeal disagreed with Felburg's use of the word "negligence" in defining "willful misconduct" for purposes of the statute. Instead, the court cited principles set forth in more recent Supreme Court decisions [see Ewing v. Cloverleaf Bowl (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 389, 402, 143 Cal.

Rptr. 13, 572 P.2d 1155 (willful misconduct implies intentional doing of something either with knowledge, express or implied, that serious injury is probable, as distinguished from possible, result, or intentional doing of act with wanton and reckless disregard of its consequences); Calvillo-Silva v. Home Grocery (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 714, 729-730, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 506, 968 P.2d 65 , disapproved on another ground in Aguilar v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 826, 853 n.19, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841, 24 P.3d 493] in concluding that more than negligence must be shown [Acosta v. Glenfed Development Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1296 n.13, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92] . In Acosta, the court of appeal held that a finding that willful misconduct by someone has occurred in connection with the construction of a plaintiff's home, when such construction resulted in latent defects in the home, is sufficient to preclude reliance by a developer and general contractor on the statute of limitations set forth in § 337.15, even in the absence of evidence that the developer and general contractor had actual knowledge of the willful misconduct or directly engaged in such willful misconduct themselves. The court based this rule on the language of the statute, the nondelegable supervisory duties of owners and general contractors, principles of vicarious liability, and public policy considerations [Acosta v. Glenfed Development Corp. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1278, 1301-1302, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92] .

[4] Ten-Year Limitation Period for Actions Involving Construction Defects in New Residential Units Sold on or After January 1, 2003

With specified limited exceptions, any action against a builder, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit the purchase agreement for which was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, must be brought within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. The four-year statute of limitations specified for patent defects and the 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects, specified by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1 and 337.15, respectively, do not apply to these actions [Civ. Code § 941(d)].

The action is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896-897]. It must be preceded by a pre-litigation procedure that provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all pursuant to statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938]. For coverage of these actions, see § 104.43.

§ 104.26 Prerequisites to Suit by Common Interest Development Association Against Builder Based on Alleged Defects in Design or Construction

Before a common interest development association files suit for damages against a developer for alleged damage to the common areas, or to other areas in a development that the association has an obligation to maintain and repair, the board of directors must call a general meeting with the members to discuss the problems and consider available options, including filing a civil action [Civ. Code § 1368.5]. Before an association in a common interest development with 20 or more units can file suit against a developer based on a claim for defects in the design or construction of the development, the association must initiate negotiations with the builder as part of a statutory procedure in which both parties must make a good faith effort either to settle the matter or submit it to some form of alternative dispute resolution [see Civ. Code § 1375]. Failure of the association to initiate the procedure is a procedural defect that may be raised by the builder in defense of any civil action for damages filed by the association [Civ. Code § 1375.05(g)(1)]. For complete coverage of these prerequisities to suit by an association against a builder based on alleged defects in design and construction, see Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments .

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.27

§ 104.27 Liquidated Damages Clause

Except when a statute expressly applicable to a contract prescribes the rules or standard for determining the validity of such a provision, a provision in a contract liquidating the damages for the breach of the contract is valid unless the party seeking to invalidate the provision establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [Civ. Code § 1671(a), (b)]. However, a promise by the retail purchaser of personal property or services, primarily for his or her personal, family, or household purposes, to pay liquidated damages for breach of the purchase contract is void, except that the parties may agree in the contract on an amount that shall be presumed to be the damages arising from a breach, when, from the nature of the case, it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damages [Civ. Code § 1671(c), (d)].

Liquidated damages are a penalty not favored in equity, and should be enforced only after the party seeking the liquidated damages has strictly complied with the contractual requisites to enforcement [General Ins. Co. v Commerce Hyatt House (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 460, 472, 85 Cal. Rptr. 317 ; but see Nomellini Constr. Co. v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Wat. Resources (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 240, 246, 96 Cal. Rptr. 682 (rule not applicable when statute, such as former Gov. Code § 14376, expressly requires liquidated damages clause)].

A contract to perform certain work secured by a faithful performance bond in a specified penal sum does not amount to an agreement for liquidated damages [County of Los Angeles v. Margulis (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 57, 60, 44 P.2d 608 ; see § 104.14[2]].

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.28

§ 104.28 Attorney's Fees

If the contract gives any party the right to attorney's fees and costs in any action to enforce the contract, the party determined by the court to be the prevailing party in any action on the contract will be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs, as fixed by the court, even if that party is not one of the parties named in this provision [Civ. Code § 1717(a); see Civ. Code § 1717(b) (determining prevailing party)]. The court may also determine that there is no party prevailing on the contract for purposes of awarding attorney's fees [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1)]. In the absence of any provision in the contract for payment of attorney's fees in the event of an action on the contract, the parties will be required to pay their own attorney's fees [see Civ. Code § 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021].

When the contract provides for attorney's fees, the provision will be construed as applying to the entire agreement, unless each party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the contract, and the fact of that representation is specified in the contract [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. If a contract provides for attorney's fees, neither party may waive his or her rights under that provision [Civ. Code § 1717(a)].

In an action seeking relief in addition to that based on contract, if the court awards noncontract-based damages against the party prevailing on the contract, the amounts awarded under Civ. Code § 1717 to that party are deducted from any damages awarded in favor of the party who did not prevail on the contract. If the amount awarded under § 1717 exceeds the amount of damages awarded the party not prevailing on the contract, judgment may be entered in favor of the party prevailing on the contract for the net amount [Civ. Code § 1717(c)].

For further discussion relating to the recovery of attorney's fees, see Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

§ 104.40 Governing Law

The duty of care and extent of liability of some of the parties commonly involved with building contracts, such as contractors [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7034, 7160], construction employers [see, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 3300, 6303, 6304, 6400, 6413.5], and lenders [see Civ. Code § 3434], are generally governed by statute. Also governed by statute are actions for construction defects in new residential units when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on and after January 1, 2003 [see Civ. Code § 895 et seq.]. In addition, general legal theories of obligation and recovery that have been codified include fraud [see, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710, 3294, 3343] and negligence [see also Civ. Code §§ 1708, 1714(a)]. Other theories of obligation and recovery are governed by the common law, as modified by the courts [see, e.g., GEM Developers v. Hallcraft Homes of San Diego, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 419, 431-433, 261 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 607, 615, 77 Cal. Rptr. 633 (strict liability)].

§ 104.41 Contractor's Negligence

[1] Duty of Care

A contractor's duty of care is a general duty imposed by law to use reasonable care to prevent injury to all persons who may be reasonably expected to be affected by the contractor's work, regardless of their relationship to the contractor or the owner [Chance v. Lawry's Inc. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 368, 378, 24 Cal. Rptr. 209, 374 P.2d 185] . For example, if a contractor's negligence in the supervision and inspection of the cutting, filling, and compacting of soil causes damage to a house built on that soil, the protected class is not limited to those in privity of contract with the contractor [Oakes v. McCarthy Co. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 231, 249, 73 Cal. Rptr. 127] .

A contractor is liable for breach of the duty of care even after the work has been completed and accepted by the owner [Dow v. Holly Manufacturing Co. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 720, 724-725, 321 P.2d 736] . For example, a developer may be held liable for negligence in design or construction of an improvement such as a pedestrian walkway even if the walkway has been dedicated to and accepted by the city [Fisher v. Morrison Homes, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136, 167 Cal. Rptr. 133] .

Because the general contractor is considered to have supervision over the entire project contracted for, including the work performed by subcontractors, when the contractor negligently creates a dangerous condition, either personally or through a subcontractor, he or she is primarily responsible for that condition and the consequences that may flow from it [Dow v. Holly Manufacturing Co. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 720, 725-726, 321 P.2d 736] .

[2] Accrual of Cause of Action for Defective Construction to Subsequent Owners

A tort duty runs, not only to the original owner for whom construction services are provided, but also to subsequent owners of the same property [Krusi v. S.J. Amoroso Construction Co. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005-1006, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 ; see Biakanja v. Irving (1958) 49 Cal.2d 647, 650, 320 P.2d 16 ; Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 419-425, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800] . This does not mean, however, that in a case involving damage to the property, once a cause of action in favor of a prior owner accrues, another cause of action against the same defendant or defendants can accrue to a subsequent owner, unless the damaged suffered by that subsequent owner is fundamentally different from the earlier type. Thus, if owner number one has an obviously leaky roof and suffers damage to its building as a result, a cause of action accrues to it against the defendant whose deficient construction work cause the defect. But, if that condition goes essentially unremedied over a period of years, owners two and three of the same building have no such right of action against the defendant (unless the right was explicitly transferred to them by owner number one. But owners two and three could well have a cause of action against the defendant contractor for damage caused by, for example, an earthquake if it could be shown that the construction included inadequate seismic safeguards. This is a new and different cause of action [see Krusi v. S.J. Amoroso Construction Co. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005-1006, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294] .

A cause of action for damages from latent construction defects accrues when the owner discovers, or should have discovered, the damage. Thus, a subsequent owner who discovers latent construction defects may bring an action against the builder for any resulting damage, absent proof that the previous owner suffered actual economic injuries as a result of the construction defects [Siegel v. Anderson Homes, Inc. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1009, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 462] .

[3] Negligence Presumed if Code Violations

Ordinarily, expert testimony as to the relevant standard of care for like professionals in the local community is required to prove that a contractor or other professional has acted negligently in the practice of his or her profession [Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 413, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800] . Nevertheless, a plaintiff is entitled to a presumption that a contractor has acted negligently if the plaintiff shows that (1) the defendant violated the building code, (2) the violation proximately caused the injury claimed, (3) the injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature the code was designed to prevent, and (4) the plaintiff was one of the class of persons for whose protection the code was adopted. Testimony concerning the appropriate standard of care is not required if such violations are established [Evid. Code § 669(a); Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 412-414, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800] .

For a form of complaint for negligence against a contractor based on a building code violation, see § 104.250.

[4] Contractor's Liability to Employees of Subcontractors

A general contractor may be liable for injuries to others when he or she has actual or constructive knowledge of a condition hazardous to those who come on the premises, and has a degree of control that permits him or her to take reasonable preventive or protective measures [Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 138-141, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 ; Caswell v. Lynch (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 87, 91, 99 Cal. Rptr. 880] . Thus, a general contractor will be liable for on-the-job injuries to a subcontractor's employees if he or she knew of the danger that caused the injuries and failed to take whatever reasonable measures were within his or her control to prevent the injuries [Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 138-139, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 ; Gonzales v. Robert Hiller Constr. Co. (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 522, 531-534, 3 Cal. Rptr. 832] . Lab. Code §§ 6300, 6303, 6304, 6400, and 6413.5 treat employees of subcontractors as employees of contractors for purposes of imposing liability to provide a safe place of employment. Nonetheless, these provisions do not impose an affirmative duty to supervise the safety of employees, or impute to the general contractor knowledge of a negligent subcontractor [Caswell v. Lynch (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 87, 91, 99 Cal. Rptr. 880] .

[5] Damages Recoverable

Except as otherwise provided by statute, the measure of damages for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract is the amount that will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach, whether it could have been anticipated or not [Civ. Code § 3333]. A contractor's liability for negligence for faulty construction is not limited to personal injuries, but also extends to diminution in the value of the structure [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 378, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] .

[6] Contract vs. Tort Action for Negligent Breach

While a contractual obligation may create a legal duty and the breach of that duty may support an action in tort [see North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 764, 774, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 466] , in the context of a building contract, a mere negligent breach of contract will not give rise to a tort cause of action [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 552-557, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978] . Unless the parties to the contract have a "special relationship" (such as that involved in an insurance contract), recovery in tort requires that (1) the breach of contract be accompanied by a traditional common law tort, such as fraud or conversion; (2) the means used to breach the contract be tortious, involving deceit or undue coercion; or (3) one party intentionally breached the contract intending or knowing that the breach would cause severe, unmitigable harm in the form of mental anguish, personal hardship, or substantial consequential damages [Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 105, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669 ; see Harris v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 70, 81-82, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649] .

More than mere negligence has been involved in each case in which tort damages have been permitted. The benefits of broad compensation must be balanced against the burdens on commercial stability. Tort remedies will be applied only when the conduct in question is so clear in its deviation from socially useful business practices that the effect of enforcing tort duties will be to aid rather than discourage commerce [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 554, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978 , citing Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 109, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669] . Thus, for example, a preexisting contractual relationship in the form of a building contract, without more, did not support a recovery for emotional distress when the defendant's tortious conduct resulted only in economic injury to the plaintiff [Erlich v. Menezes (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 543, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 886, 981 P.2d 978 (implying a different result if negligent construction caused actual physical injury)].

Given the above discussion, if the plaintiff does have causes of action in both tort and contract, the injured party may plead both causes of action in a single proceeding. The injured party may not, however, elect inconsistent remedies or recover duplicative damages. The pleading should segregate the tort and contract allegations in distinct counts, and be legally sufficient to put the defendant on notice of the multiple theories of liability [Perry v. Robertson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 333, 340, 247 Cal. Rptr. 74 (real estate listing agreement)].

[7] Indemnity Agreements

Except in certain insurance contracts or as specifically provided otherwise by statute [see Civ. Code §§ 2782.1, 2782.2, 2782.5, 2782.6], provisions, clauses, covenants, or agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting any construction contract and that purport to indemnify the promisee against liability for damages for death or bodily injury to persons, injury to property, or any other loss, damage, or expense arising from the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the promisee or the promisee's agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the promisee, or for defects in design furnished by those persons, are against public policy and are void and unenforceable [Civ. Code § 2782(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7034(a)].

All provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting a residential construction contract or amendment to such a contract, entered into after January 1, 2009, that purport to indemnify the builder by a subcontractor against liability for construction defect claims are unenforceable to the extent the claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to (1) the negligence of the builder or the builder's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or (2) defects in design furnished by those persons. Such provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements are also unenforceable to the extent the claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Civ. Code § 911 ("builder" defined)]. This prohibition on indemnification of the builder by a subcontractor may not be waived or modified by contract, act, or omission. But contractual provisions, clauses, covenants, or agreements that are not expressly rendered unenforceable by the prohibition are reserved to the parties' agreement [Civ. Code § 2782(c)]. This does not affect a subcontractor's insurance carrier's obligation to provide a complete defense in a construction defect action when the subcontractor added the builder to its liability insurance policies as an additional insured [see Presley Homes, Inc. v. Am. States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686]. Also unaffected are the obligations of a builder or subcontractor with regard to any action based on a construction defect generally, including a builder's or subcontractor's obligation to attempt to resolve a construction defect claim through the pre-litigation procedure prescribed by statute [Civ. Code § 2782(c); see Civ. Code §§ 895 et seq., 910(a); see also § 104.43[8]].

A subcontractor and builder are not prohibited, however, from mutually agreeing to the timing or immediacy of the defense and provisions for reimbursement of defense fees and costs, as long as that agreement, when the claims are finally resolved, does not waive or modify the above-described prohibition on indemnity [Civ. Code § 2782(d)]. A subcontractor owes no defense or indemnity obligation to a builder or general contractor for a construction defect claim unless and until the builder or general contractor provides a written tender of the claim to the subcontractor. The tender must include all of the information provided to the builder or general contractor by the claimant related to claims caused by the subcontractor's scope of work. The written tender will have the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of legal proceedings. If a builder or general contractor tenders a claim for construction defects to a subcontractor, the subcontractor must elect to either [Civ. Code § 2782(d)]:

> (1) Defend the claim with counsel of choice, in which case the subcontractor will maintain control of the defense for any claim to which the defense obligation applies [see Civ. Code § 2782(d)(1)]; or
> (2) Pay, within 30 days of receipt of an invoice from the builder or general contractor, no more than a reasonable allocated share of the builder's or general contractor's defense fees and costs [see Civ. Code § 2782(d)(2)].

If a subcontractor fails to timely and adequately perform its obligation to defend the claim as described in (1), above, the builder or general contractor will have the right to pursue a claim against the subcontractor for any resulting compensatory damages, consequential damages, and reasonable attorney's fees. Similarly, if a subcontractor fails to timely perform its obligation to pay the claim as described in (2), above, the builder or general contractor will have the right to pursue a claim against the subcontractor for any resulting compensatory and consequential damages, as well as for interest on defense and indemnity costs, and reasonable attorney's fees incurred to recover these amounts. In either case, the builder or general contractor bears the burden of proof to establish the subcontractor's failure to perform and any resulting damages [Civ. Code § 2782(e)].

If a builder or general contractor is requested to, but does not, reallocate defense fees to a subcontractor within 30 days following final resolution of the claim, the subcontractor will have the right to pursue a claim for any resulting compensatory and consequential damages, as well as for interest on the fees. The subcontractor will bear the burden of proof to establish both the failure to reallocate fees and any resulting damages [Civ. Code § 2782(e)].

A builder, general contractor, or subcontractor has the right to seek equitable indemnity for any of these claims, including against any supplier, design professional or product manufacturer [Civ. Code § 2782(f), (g)].

The provisions of Civ. Code § 2782 do not, however, prevent a party to a construction contract and the owner or other party for whose account the contract is being performed from negotiating and expressly agreeing with respect to the allocation, release, liquidation, exclusion, or limitation as between the parties of any liability for design defects or any liability of the promisee to the promisor arising out of or relating to the construction contract [Civ. Code § 2782.5; see Civ. Code § 2784 ("design defect" defined)]. Agreements to indemnify professional engineers and geologists are also permissible, if certain criteria are satisfied [Civ. Code §§ 2782.2, 2782.6].

Nor do these provisions prevent a contractor responsible for the performance of a construction contract from indemnifying fully a person, firm, corporation, state, or other agency for whose account the construction contract is not being performed but who, as an accommodation, enters into an agreement with the contractor permitting the contractor to enter on or adjacent to its property for the purpose of performing the construction contract [Civ. Code § 2782.1; see Civ. Code § 2783 ("construction contract" defined)].

§ 104.42 Contractor's Breach of Warranty

[1] Implied Warranty in Building Contracts

A warranty of quality attaches to a building construction contract [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 377-378, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] . Builders and sellers of new construction are held to what is implicitly represented--that the completed structure was designed and constructed in a reasonably workerlike manner [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] , and that the finished product is fit for its intended use [Aced v. Hobbs-Sesack Plumbing Co. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 573, 582, 12 Cal. Rptr. 257, 360 P.2d 897] . For a form of complaint by a purchaser against a contractor for breach of the implied warranty, and a form of denial by a contractor if the work was performed pursuant to plan, see §§ 104.253 and 104.254, respectively.

[2] Notice of Breach of Warranty

A buyer is required to give notice to the seller within a reasonable time after he or she discovers or should have discovered a breach of the warranty. A delay of nearly four years in giving notice has been held to be unreasonable and to constitute a bar to recovery [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] . The notice requirement is designed to provide the seller with the opportunity to correct the defects, thereby reducing the damages, to avoid similar defects in future projects, and to negotiate a settlement [Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88] .

[3] No Warranty When Plans Furnished by Owner

An exception to the warranty rule applies when the plans for the project are furnished by the owner. When the plans for the project are furnished by the owner, and the contractor faithfully performs the work as specified by those plans, there is no implied warranty that the contractor will supplement the inadequacy of the plans [Sunbeam Constr. Co. v. Fisci (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 181, 184-185, 82 Cal. Rptr. 446] . The owner having specified what is to be done, the contractor is relieved from liability insofar as he or she complies with the specifications. In such a case, the contractor guarantees not the sufficiency of the specifications to produce the desired results, but merely the effectiveness of what he or she did under them [Kurland v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 112, 118, 59 Cal. Rptr. 258 ; see § 104.254].

§ 104.43 Actions for Defective Construction in New Residences Sold on or After January 1, 2003

[1] Overview and Applicability

In accordance with Division 2, Part 2, Title 7 of the Civil Code, "Requirements for Actions for Construction Defects" [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.], any action against a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, individual product manufacturer, or design professional, seeking recovery of damages arising out of, or related to deficiencies in, residential construction, design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision, testing, or observation of construction when the property involved is a new residential unit (excluding a condominium conversion) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, is governed by detailed statutory standards related to the various functions and components of the building [see Civ. Code §§ 896, 938]. The action is preceded by a mandatory pre-litigation procedure, which provides the potential defendant with a right to attempt a repair of any alleged defect before litigation. The pre-litigation procedure also includes inspections and exchanges of documentation between the parties under certain circumstances, and mediation at various points, all pursuant to statutory time frames [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938, discussed in § 104.43[8]].

At least in the case of construction defect situations involving new residential units (excluding condominium conversions) when the purchase agreement with the buyer was signed by the seller on or after January 1, 2003, the Legislature has effectively rendered inapplicable the effects of a California Supreme Court decision in which the Court held, among other things, that construction defects must cause actual damage before they can be actionable in tort [see Aas v. Superior Court (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 627, 636-647, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 12 P.3d 1125] .

The provisions, standards, rights, and obligations set forth in Title 7 are binding on all original purchasers and their successors-in-interest. Associations are considered to be original purchasers and have standing to enforce these provisions, standards, rights, and obligations [Civ. Code § 945].

Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute (other than Title 7) [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

Title 7 does not eliminate or abrogate the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.35, which requires plaintiff's counsel to furnish an Attorney's Certificate in an action against a design professional, for claims and damages that are not covered by the statutory scheme governing construction defect litigation [Civ. Code § 937; see Ch. 56, Architects, § 56.34].

[2] Parties

A "claimant" or "homeowner" who may bring an action under Title 7 includes individual owners of single-family homes, individual unit owners of attached dwellings and, in the case of a common interest development, any association created for the purpose of managing the development [Civ. Code § 895(f)].

A "builder" against whom an action governed by Title 7 may be brought may be any entity or individual, including, but not limited to, a builder, developer, general contractor, contractor, or original seller, who, at the time of sale (1) was also in the business of selling residential units to the public for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim, or (2) was in the business of building, developing, or constructing residential units for public purchase for the property that is the subject of the homeowner's claim [Civ. Code § 911(a)]. "Builder" does not include any entity or individual whose involvement with a residential unit that is the subject of the homeowner's claim is limited to his or her capacity as general contractor, or contractor and who is not a partner, member of, subsidiary of, or otherwise similarly affiliated with the builder. These non-affiliated general contractors and non-affiliated contractors must be treated the same as subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals [Civ. Code § 911(b)].

General contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers, individual product manufacturers, and design professionals may also be liable for damages to the extent that they cause, in whole or in part, a violation of a particular statutory construction standard as the result of a negligent act or omission or a breach of contract. All actions by a claimant or builder to enforce an express contract, or any provision of an express contract, against a general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional is preserved. General contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, manufacturers, or design professionals may be held joint and severally liable to the extent that they contribute to any specific violation of the statutory construction standards. This does not apply, however, to any general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional to which strict liability applies [Civ. Code § 936].

[3] Standards for Determining When Construction Is Defective

The statutory standards used to determine the existence of construction defects relate to all of the following issues [see Civ. Code § 896(a)-(f)]:

- Water issues related to the building's windows, doors, roofs, decks and balconies, foundations, hardscape (e.g., paths and patios, landscap ing, and drainage systems), exterior surfaces (e.g., stucco and siding), retaining walls, plumbing and sewer systems, shower and bath enclosures, and ceramic tile and countertops;

- Structural issues related to the foundations, load-bearing components, and slabs, including compliance with applicable established standards for earthquake and wind load resistance;

- Soil and retaining wall issues related to the structural integrity of the building and the suitability of the surrounding land for the purpose represented at the time of the original sale, or for the purpose for which the land is commonly used (e.g., as a garden);

- Fire protection issues related to applicable government regulations, fireplaces and chimneys, and electrical and mechanical systems;

- Issues related to the operation of the plumbing and sewer systems; and
- Issues related to the operation of the electrical systems.

Issues related to other areas of construction to which standards apply include all of the following [see Civ. Code § 896(g)]:

- Cracking in exterior pathways, driveways, landscape, sidewalks, patios, stucco, exterior siding, and other exterior wall finishes and fixtures;
- Installation of products that are completely manufactured offsite (e.g., doors, windows, fireplaces, and HVAC units);
- Installation of the heating system;
- Installation of untreated wood and steel fences;
- Compliance with government standards for inter-unit noise transmission;
- Operation of irrigation and drainage systems;
- Application of paint and stains;
- Installation of roofing materials;
- Installation of ceramic tile and tile backing;
- Installation of dryer ducts; and
- General construction standards to avoid hazards to public health.

The standards set forth in the statute and summarized above are intended to address every function or component of the building. To the extent that a function or component of a building is not addressed by these standards, it is actionable if it causes damage [Civ. Code § 897].

[4] Builder's Express Warranty for Fit and Finish Items

Issues related to the fit and finish of cabinets, mirrors, flooring, interior and exterior walls, countertops, paint finishes, and trim that do not rise to the level of construction defects under the statutory construction standards are nonetheless subject to a minimum one-year express written warranty, which the builder must provide to the home buyer. The express warranty does not apply to damage to these items caused by defects in other components that are governed by the construction standards. If the builder fails to provide the express warranty, a statutory one-year warranty for these items will apply [Civ. Code § 900].

[5] Builder May Offer Enhanced Protection Agreement

A builder may, but is not required to, offer greater protection or protection for longer time periods in its express contract with the homeowner. This constitutes an "enhanced protection agreement" [Civ. Code § 901]. If an enhanced protection agreement is in place, the statutory construction standards described above no longer apply other than to set forth minimum provisions by which to judge the enforceability of the particular provisions of the enhanced protection agreement [Civ. Code § 902]. Employing an enhanced protection agreement, however, does not affect the applicability of the mandatory pre-litigation procedure [Civ. Code § 906; see Civ. Code §§ 910-938, discussed in § 104.43[8]].

The builder's election to offer its own protection agreement must be made in writing no later than the close of escrow [see Civ. Code § 895(c) ("close of escrow" defined)]. In addition to the enhanced protection agreement, the builder must also provide the homeowner with a complete copy of the statutory construction standards and advise the homeowner that the builder has elected not to be subject to the statutory standards. If any provision of the builder's protection agreement is later found to be unenforceable, as not meeting the statutory standards, the builder may use the statutory standards in lieu of the provisions in its own protection agreement that are found to be unenforceable [Civ. Code § 903]. If a homeowner seeks to enforce a particular statutory standard in lieu of a provision in the builder's protection agreement, the homeowner must give the builder written notice of that intent at the time the homeowner files a notice of claim [Civ. Code § 904; see Civ. Code § 910(a), discussed in § 104.43[8][b]].

If a homeowner seeks to enforce the statutory construction standards in lieu of the enhanced protection agreement in a subsequent litigation or other legal action, the builder may have the matter bifurcated and have an immediately binding determination of his or her responsive pleading within 60 days after that pleading is filed, but in no event later than the commencement of discovery. If the builder fails to seek such a determination in the specified time frame, he or she waives the right to do so and the statutory construction standards will apply [Civ. Code § 905].

Any nonoriginal homeowner will be deemed to be in privity for purposes of the enhanced protection agreement only if the builder has recorded the enhanced protection agreement on title or provided actual notice of the agreement to the nonoriginal homeowner. If the builder's protection agreement is not recorded or no actual notice is provided, the statutory construction standards will apply to the nonoriginal homeowner's claims [Civ. Code § 905].

[6] Homeowner's Obligation to Follow Maintenance Obligations and Schedules

A homeowner is obligated to follow all reasonable maintenance obligations and schedules communicated in writing by the builder and product manufacturers, as well a commonly accepted maintenance practices. The homeowner's failure to do so may subject him or her to the affirmative defenses afforded the builder in any subsequent action [Civ. Code § 907; see Civ. Code § 945.5(c), discussed in § 104.43[11]].

[7] Statute of Limitations

With certain limited exceptions listed below, any action brought under Title 7 must be filed within 10 years after substantial completion of the residence, but not later than 10 years after the date a valid notice of completion was recorded [see Civ. Code §§ 938, 941]. The four-year statute of limitations specified for patent defects and the 10-year statute of limitations for latent defects, specified by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 337.1 and 337.15, respectively, do not apply to these actions [Civ. Code § 941(d)].

Exceptions to the 10-year limitation period include all of the following:

- Four years for actions alleging improper operation of electrical systems [Civ. Code § 896(f)];

- One year from original occupancy of adjacent unit for actions alleging noncompliance with governmental inter-unit noise transmission standards [Civ. Code § 896(g)(6)];

- Four years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of untreated steel fences and adjacent components [Civ. Code § 896(g)(9)];

- Five years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper application of paint and stains [Civ. Code § 896(g)(10)];

- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of landscaping systems [Civ. Code § 896(g)(12)]; and

- Two years from close of escrow for actions alleging improper installation of dryer ducts [Civ. Code § 896(g)(14)].

"Close of escrow" means the date of the close of escrow between the builder and the original homeowner. If the claimant is an association, "close of escrow" means the date of substantial completion [see Civ. Code § 1351(a)], or the date the builder relinquishes control over the association's ability to decide whether to initiate a claim, whichever is later [Civ. Code § 895(c)].

The applicable statute of limitations may be tolled pending the outcome of the mandatory pre-litigation process [see Civ. Code § 928]. For discussion, see § 104.43[8][g].

The statute of limitations cannot be asserted by way of defense by any person in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of the subject residential property, at the time any deficiency in the residence constitutes the proximate cause for which it is proposed to make a claim or bring an action [Civ. Code § 941(c)].

Existing statutory and decisional law governing the tolling of statutes of limitations applies to the time periods for filing an action or making a claim for violation of the statutory construction standards, except for the special tolling provisions related to the pre-litigation procedure [Civ. Code § 941(e); see Civ. Code § 927, discussed in § 104.43[8][g]].

The above-described time limitations "... do not apply to any action by a claimant for a contract or express contractual provision" [Civ. Code § 941(e)]. Though it was probably not the drafters' intent, if taken literally, this could be construed to exempt an action based on violation of a builder's enhanced protection agreement from the 10-year limitation period specified by Civ. Code § 941(a), in which case the shorter limitation period applicable to a contract action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1)] or an action based on a patent defect [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1] arguably could apply.

[8] Mandatory Pre-Litigation Procedure

[a] Overview

Before a homeowner can file an action seeking damages for alleged construction defects based on the construction standards described above, he or she must initiate a process the main component of which is the builder's right to attempt to repair any alleged defects before the homeowner can initiate litigation [Civ. Code § 910]. The goal of the pre-litigation process is to afford the parties the opportunity for quick and fair resolution of construction defect claims without having to resort to lengthy and expensive litigation [see 2002 Stats., ch. 722, § 1(c)].

The following discussion describes the statutory pre-litigation process [see Civ. Code §§ 910-938]. In lieu of this statutory process, a builder may provide, by contract, for its own non-adversarial procedure. If the builder does so, however, and the contractual procedure either fails to resolve the construction defects or is subsequently found to be unenforceable, the builder may not then require adherence with the statutory procedure [Civ. Code § 914(a)].

When the sales agreement is executed, the builder must notify the homeowner which non-adversarial procedure--i.e., the statutory procedure or the builder's alternative non-adversarial contractual provisions--will apply to resolve any construction defects. If the builder elects to use alternative non-adversarial contractual provisions, the election is binding regardless of whether those provisions successfully resolve the ultimate dispute or are ultimately deemed enforceable [Civ. Code § 914(c)].

If the builder fails to comply with the requirements of a non-adversarial procedure or elects not to go through with such a procedure, the homeowner is released from the obligation to participate in the procedure and may proceed to file an action to resolve the alleged construction defects [Civ. Code § 915].

When the claimant is an association representing a common interest development that includes 20 or more units and the parties comply with the statutory pre-litigation process discussed below, the parties will be excused from performing the pre-litigation dispute resolution process required by Civ. Code § 1375 to the extent that the provisions of the Title 7 procedure are substantially similar to the provisions of Civ. Code § 1375 [Civ. Code § 935]. For further coverage, see § 104.26.

[b] Notice of Claim

Before the claimant can file an action alleging violation of the construction standards, he or she must provide the builder with written notice of the claimant's claim that the construction of his or her residence violates any of the statutorily-prescribed standards [Civ. Code § 910(a); see § 104.261]. The notice must be delivered via certified mail, overnight mail, or personal delivery. The notice has the same force and effect as a notice of commencement of a legal proceeding [Civ. Code § 910(a)].

The notice of claim must include all of the following [Civ. Code § 910(a)]:

- The claimant's name, address, and preferred method of contact;

- A statement that the claimant alleges a violation pursuant to Civ. Code § 895 et seq. against the builder; and

- A description of the claim in reasonable detail sufficient to determine the nature and location, to the extent known, of the claimed violation.

If the claimant is a group of homeowners or an association, the notice must identify the claimants solely by address or other description sufficient to apprise the builder of the locations of the subject residences.

The notice requirement does not preclude a homeowner from seeking redress through any applicable normal customer service procedure set forth in any contract, warranty, or other builder-generated document. If the homeowner requests this form of recourse through such a procedure, however, the request does not satisfy the statutory notice requirement [Civ. Code § 910(b)].

The builder must acknowledge receipt of the notice of claim in writing within 14 days [Civ. Code § 913].

[c] Builder's Obligation to Provide Copies of Requested Materials

Within 30 days of the claimant's written request, the builder must provide, at the claimant's expense, copies of the following [Civ. Code § 912(a)-(d)]:

- All relevant documents, such as plans, specifications and soil reports, public reports, and engineering calculations pertaining to the claimant's residence, or as part of a larger development tract;

- All maintenance and preventative maintenance recommendations;

- All manufactured products maintenance, preventive maintenance, and limited warranty information; and

- All of the builder's limited contractual warranties in effect at the time the residence was originally sold.

[d] Inspection of Claimed Unmet Standards

The builder may elect to inspect the alleged violations of the statutory construction standards specified in the notice of claim. Any inspection and testing must be completed within 14 days after the builder acknowledges receipt of the notice of claim. The builder must bear the cost of the inspection and testing [Civ. Code § 916(a)]. If reasonably necessary, the builder may, within three days of the initial inspection or testing, request a second inspection or testing. The second inspection must be completed within 40 days of the initial inspection [Civ. Code § 916(c)].

If the builder intends to hold a third party, i.e., a subcontractor, design professional, individual product manufacturer, or material supplier (including an insurance carrier, warranty company, or service company), responsible for its contribution to the unmet standard, the builder must give the third party notice sufficiently in advance to allow them to attend the initial or second inspection and to participate in any subsequent repair process. Failure to include a third party in the inspection process will not be construed to relieve the third party from liability in any subsequent action brought by the claimant [Civ. Code § 916(e)].

[e] Offer to Repair

Within 30 days of the initial or, if requested, second inspection or testing, the builder may offer to repair any violation found. The offer must also compensate the claimant for damages recoverable within the time frame for the repair. It must be accompanied by a repair plan, including a detailed statement identifying the violation to be repaired and setting a reasonable completion date, which, barring unforseen events, should be within 120 days of the claimant's acceptance of the offer [Civ. Code §§ 917, 921; see Civ. Code § 944 (recoverable damages)].

If the builder elects to repair some, but not all of the claimed unmet construction standards, he or she must also set forth in writing the reasons and support for those reasons for not repairing all claimed unmet standards [Civ. Code § 924].

The offer of repair must be accompanied by an offer to mediate the dispute at the homeowner's option. If the builder makes an offer to repair and the mediation fails to resolve the dispute, the claimant must allow the repair to be performed [Civ. Code § 919].

The builder may not obtain a release or waiver of any kind in exchange for required repair work [Civ. Code § 926].

When a repair has been made but not to the claimant's satisfaction, the claimant may proceed to file suit for violation of the applicable construction standard, for inadequate repair, or for both [Civ. Code § 926]. However, if there has been no previous mediation between the parties, the claimant must request mediation before filing suit [Civ. Code § 928].

If the builder fails to make an offer to repair, the claimant may proceed to file an action for violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 920].

[f] Cash Offer in Lieu of Repair

The builder may make a cash offer instead of making the repair. The claimant may either (1) accept the offer, or (2) reject it and proceed to file an action based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 929(a)]. In exchange for a cash payment, the builder is entitled to obtain a reasonable release the terms and conditions of which are negotiable between the builder and the claimant [Civ. Code § 929(b)].

[g] Effect of Pre-Litigation Process on Statute of Limitations

If the applicable statute of limitations has otherwise run during the statutory pre-litigation process when the process resulted in an inadequate repair, the time period for filing an action is extended from the time of the claimant's original claim to 100 days after the inadequate repair is completed. The action is not limited to the inadequate repair; it may encompass any violation of the construction defect standards [Civ. Code § 927].

If the statute of limitations has otherwise run during the statutory pre-litigation process, it will be extended to 45 days after the time for responding to the notice of claim has expired if the builder does any of the following [Civ. Code § 927]:

- Fails to acknowledge the claim in a timely manner [see Civ. Code § 913];
- Elects not to go through the statutory pre-litigation process; or
- Fails to request an inspection in a timely manner.

If the builder has elected to employ its own alternative non-adversarial procedure in lieu of the statutory procedure [' see § 104.43[8][a]] and the statute of limitations would otherwise run during that procedure, the time period for filing an action for violation of the statutory construction standards is extended from the time of the claimant's original claim to the later of either (1) 100 days after the completion of the alternative procedure, or (2) 100 days after the alternative procedure is deemed unenforceable [Civ. Code § 927].

[h] Dealing With Claims Discovered After Action Filed

Once an action has been filed, subsequently discovered claims of unmet statutory construction standards must be administered separately--i.e., they are subject to the pre-litigation procedure. However, in the case of a detached single family residence, if the subsequently discovered claim is for a violation of the same construction standard as a standard that is the subject of a pending action brought by the same claimant, the claimant need not reinitiate the process as to that standard. The same is true in the case of an attached project, if the subsequently discovered claim is for a violation of the same construction standard for a connected component system in the same building as a standard that is the subject of a pending action brought by the same claimant [Civ. Code § 932].

[9] Claimant's Cause of Action; Burden of Proof

To state a cause of action for damages resulting from a violation of the statutory construction standards, a homeowner need only demonstrate, in accordance with the applicable evidentiary standard, that the home does not meet the applicable standard, subject to specified statutory affirmative defenses [see Civ. Code § 945.5, discussed in § 104.43[11]]. No further showing of causation or damages is required to meet the burden of proof regarding a violation of the statutory construction standards, provided that the violation arises out of, pertains to, or is related to, the original construction [Civ. Code § 942].

No other cause of action for a claim for construction defects covered by Title 7 is allowed. Title 7 does not apply to any action by a claimant to enforce a contract or express contract provision, or any action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of a statute other than Title 7 [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

[10] Damages

The homeowner is entitled to recover all of the following as damages in an action on a claim based on violation of the statutory construction standards [Civ. Code § 944]:

- The reasonable cost of repairing any violation of the statutory construction standards;
- The reasonable cost of repairing any damages caused by the repair efforts;
- The reasonable cost of repairing and rectifying any damages resulting from the home's failure to meet the standards;
- The reasonable cost of removing and replacing any improper repair by the builder;
- Reasonable relocation and storage expenses;
- Lost business income if the home was used as a principal place of business licensed to be operated from the home;
- Reasonable investigative costs for each established violation; and
- All other costs or fees recoverable by contract or statute.

As to any claims involving a detached single-family home, the homeowner's right to the reasonable value of repairing any nonconformity is limited to the repair costs, or the diminution in the home's current value caused by the nonconformity, whichever is less, subject to the common law personal use exception [Civ. Code § 943(b)].

Damages awarded in an action by the claimant that was not brought under Title 7--e.g., an action to enforce a contract or express contractual provision, or an action for fraud, personal injury, or violation of another statute--must be reduced by any amounts recovered for the same items in an action under Title 7 [Civ. Code § 943(a)].

[11] Affirmative Defenses

Under the principles of comparative fault pertaining to affirmative defenses, a builder, general contractor, subcontractor, material supplier, individual product manufacturer, or design professional may be excused, in whole or in part, from any obligation, damage, loss, or liability if he or she can demonstrate that the claimed violation of the statutory construction standards was caused by any of the following [Civ. Code § 945.5(a)-(d)]:

- An unforseen act of nature, defined as a weather condition, earthquake, or manmade event such as war, terrorism, or vandalism, in excess of the design criteria expressed by the applicable building codes, regulations, and ordinances in effect at the time of the original construction [see § 104.263];
- A homeowner's unreasonable failure to minimize or prevent the claimed damages in a timely manner, including (1) the homeowner's failure to allow reasonable and timely access for inspections and repairs, and (2) the homeowner's failure to give timely notice to the builder after discovering a violation; but excluding damages due to the builder's untimely or inadequate response to the homeowner's claim [see § 104.264];
- The failure of the homeowner or his or her agent, employee, subcontractor, independent contractor, or consultant to follow the builder's or manufacturer's recommendations, or commonly accepted homeowner maintenance obligations; provided the builder can show that the homeowner had written notice of these recommendations and that the recommendations were reasonable at the time they were issued [see § 104.265]; and

- The homeowner's, his or her agent's, or an independent third party's alterations, ordinary wear and tear, misuse, abuse, or neglect, or by the structure's use for something other than its intended purpose [see § 104.266].

Other affirmative defenses include establishing that [Civ. Code § 945.5(e)-(g)]:

- The applicable statute of limitations has expired [see § 104.267];
- The builder has obtained a valid release for the particular violation claimed [see § 104.268]; and
- The builder has successfully repaired the particular violation claimed [see § 104.269].

All affirmative defenses are preserved as to any causes of action to which Title 7 does not apply [Civ. Code § 945.5(h)].

[12] Admissibility of Evidence from Pre-Litigation Procedure

Nothing that occurs during a builder's or claimant's inspection or testing during the pre-litigation process may be used or introduced as evidence to support a spoilation defense by any potential party in any subsequent litigation [Civ. Code § 916(b)].

§ 104.44 Developer's Strict Liability

[1] Mass Producers as Strictly Liable

Residential developers are held strictly liable for defective construction because of a recognition that they are the best-positioned to bear the costs associated with construction defects and to monitor and coordinate construction from start to finish. Also, they are held strictly liable because they are essentially the manufacturers of the finished product or residence, as well as the marketer of the finished product. The strict liability of residential developers therefore is in keeping with the public policy behind the doctrine of strict liability, which evolved to afford protection to individual consumers by fixing responsibility for injuries caused by defective products where it will most efficiently reduce safety hazards inherent in defective products in the marketplace [Heppler v. J.M. Peters Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1265, 1279, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 ; see La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1131, 1143-1145, 261 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

A builder-vendor of mass-produced homes is liable to a purchaser for failure to produce a home reasonably fit for its intended use on the basis of strict liability [Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228-229, 74 Cal. Rptr. 749] . Under this rule, the developer of a 190-unit condominium development was determined to be a mass producer of housing and therefore liable in strict liability for injuries to common areas of the development caused by erosion [Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting, Co. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 898, 909-914, 176 Cal. Rptr. 886] . Similarly, developers of a multiple-unit, residential planned development complex were held strictly liable for defective design and construction of the project on an unstable bluff [Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 898, 911, 913, 176 Cal. Rptr. 886] .

For a form of complaint against a developer based on strict liability, see § 104.255.

[2] Manufacturing Process Included

The manufacturer of a lot (or tract developer) may also be held strictly liable for damages suffered by the ultimate occupier of the lot as a proximate result of any defects in the manufacturing process, such as improper filling and grading that cause foundation instability [Avner v. Longridge Estates (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 607, 615, 77 Cal. Rptr.

633] . Further, a developer who mass grades land into lots and sells the lots to another developer who subsequently develops them into a residential subdivision is strictly liable to the buyers for defects in the lots [GEM Developers v. Hallcraft Homes of San Diego, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 419, 431-433, 261 Cal. Rptr. 626] .

[3] Defective Condition Required

In determining whether a house is defective for purposes of imposing strict liability, the test is one of reasonableness rather than perfection. The imposition of strict liability on mass developers does not make them insurers of the safety of all who thereafter come on the premises [Kriegler v. Eichler Homes, Inc. (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228, 74 Cal. Rptr. 749] . Strict liability does not apply unless the product (the home) allegedly causing the injury was in a defective condition. The burden is on the plaintiff to establish the defective condition of the product and to prove that the defect proximately caused the plaintiff's injury [Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 689, 703-704, 106 Cal. Rptr. 1, 505 P.2d 193] .

[4] Location of Defective System

It is immaterial in an action based on strict liability whether a defective system, such as pipes or hydrants, installed by a developer is actually located on the plaintiff's property when the purpose of the system is the protection of all the properties in the subdivision. Legally it makes no difference whether the systems are located on or off any particular lot. The doctrine that strict liability extends to bystanders is ample to protect the plaintiffs who own homes within the subdivision [Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543] .

[5] Effect of Approval by Public Entity

When a public entity approves and accepts as a public improvement private construction by a developer, the developer cannot thereafter be held strictly liable for defects in the construction [Blau v. City of Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 77, 89-91, 107 Cal. Rptr. 727 ; but cf. Fisher v. Morrison Homes, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 131, 136-139, 167 Cal. Rptr. 133 (contractor's liability for negligence not cut off by improvement's dedication to and acceptance by public entity)].

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.45

§ 104.45 Persons Not Strictly Liable

[1] Occasional Developers

The doctrine of strict liability is inapplicable to an occasional constructor of homes. It is only applicable to mass producers. Thus, it was not applicable to a developer who built only two homes at different times in different locations [Oliver v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 86, 87-88, 259 Cal. Rptr. 160] .

[2] Commercial Parties on Equal Footing

The strict liability doctrine is also not available to commercial parties who deal on an equal level, such as a commercial developer who sues a seller of graded lots [Gentry Construction Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 177, 180, 260 Cal. Rptr. 421] .

[3] Professional Consultants

Soil engineers, structural engineers, and architects of multiple-unit, residential, planned development complexes are not strictly liable for defective design and construction of the projects. Those who sell their services for the guidance of others in their economic, financial, and personal affairs cannot be held liable in connection with those services in the absence of negligence or intentional misconduct [Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 898, 914, 176 Cal. Rptr. 886] .

[4] Subcontractors

The strict liability doctrine is not applicable to subcontractors because they do not have control over the entire project and do not typically construct a finished project to their own specifications [Heppler v. J.M. Peters Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1265, 1279, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 ; La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1131, 1144, 261 Cal. Rptr. 146] . For example, a subcontractor who installed a soap dish was not held strictly liable for an injury caused by its breaking because the subcontractor was not in the business of selling soap dishes [Monte Vista Development Corp. v. Superior Court (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1681, 1687-1688, 277 Cal. Rptr. 608] .

§ 104.46 Developer's Recourse Against Supplier and Manufacturer

A contractor who is liable to a home purchaser because of a defect in a component part used in the construction of the home may in turn have recourse against the supplier and manufacturer for any loss he or she incurs. For example, if a seller of a defective component knows of the purpose for which the component will be used and representatives of the seller expressly state that the component is suitable for the intended purpose, the developer is entitled to recovery based on findings of express and implied warranties of fitness and merchantability [Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Anderson (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 224, 230-232, 87 Cal. Rptr. 893] .

A home builder may recover from a product manufacturer for economic losses caused by the manufacturer's violation of the standards set forth in the Right to Repair Act [Civ. Code § 895 et seq.; see § 104.43] through a derivative equitable indemnity action, even though a builder may not recover for those losses through a direct negligence claim against the manufacturer [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1219, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196] . Although there is generally no duty to prevent economic loss to third parties in negligence actions at common law, the Right to Repair Act abrogates that rule with respect to actions brought by homeowners against individual product manufacturers for a violation of the Act's standards based on the manufacturer's negligence or breach of contract [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1217, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196] . A builder's derivative equitable indemnity claim is premised on the homeowners' losses. Thus, the fact that the builder could not prevail on a direct cause of action against a manufacturer would not defeat the builder's derivative equitable indemnity claim [Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1218-1219, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196] .

A lender may not invoke the doctrine of strict liability in an action against a developer for defects in construction, because a lender has the power to require the developer to conform to proper construction methods and standards, and is not in the vulnerable position of a buyer who must rely on the owner's representations and expertise [*U.S. Financial v. § 104.48 Contractor's Injury to Prospective Economic Advantage

A contractor owes a duty of care to the tenant of a building undergoing construction work to perform the work in a manner that does not cause undue injury to the tenant's business, when the injury is foreseeable. Thus, a tenant has a cause of action against a contractor for negligence in not completing improvements on the premises within a reasonable time pursuant to the contractor's contract with the landlord, if the delay damaged the tenant by causing loss of prospective advantage in its business on the premises [J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 803-808, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 ; see § 104.256].

Similarly, a contractor has a cause of action against a negligent subcontractor when the subcontractor's failure to perform damages the contractor by delaying the contractor's performance [Chameleon Engineering Corp. v. Air Dynamics Inc. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 418, 421-423, 161 Cal. Rptr. 463] .

Any person who is induced to contract for a work of improvement, including but not limited to a home improvement, in reliance on false or fraudulent representations or false statements knowingly made, may sue and recover from the contractor or solicitor a penalty of $500 plus reasonable attorney's fees, in addition to any damages sustained by him or her by reason of the false or fraudulent statements or representations made by the contractor or solicitor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7160]. § 104.50 Award Against Unlicensed Contractor

[1] Treble Damages

Any unlicensed contractor who causes injury or damage to another person as a result of providing goods or performing services for which a contractor's license is required pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code 7000 et seq. (Chapter 9 of Division 3 of the Business and Professions Code) is liable to the injured person for treble the amount of damages assessed in a civil action in any court having proper jurisdiction [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(a)]. The additional damages provided may not exceed $10,000 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(c)].

For a form of complaint seeking to restrain an unlicensed person from acting as a contractor, see § 104.259. For a form of allegation for treble damages for use in a complaint against an unlicensed person, see § 104.260.

[2] Costs and Fees

The court may also, in its discretion, award all costs and attorney's fees to the injured person if he or she prevails in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(a)].

[3] Effect and Applicability of Award Provision

Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8 may not be construed to confer an additional cause of action or to affect or limit any other remedy, including, but not limited to, a claim for exemplary damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(b); see generally Ch. 177, Damages]. They do not apply to actions for unfair trade practices under the Unfair Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 et seq.) brought by persons who hold the same license as is required for the activity over which the unlicensed person is being sued, or a closely related license [Civ. Code § 1029.8(e); see generally Ch. 565, Unfair Competition].

[4] "Unlicensed Person" Exclusions

For purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8, "unlicensed person" does not include a person, partnership, corporation, or other entity providing goods or services under the good faith belief that he, she, or it is properly licensed and acting within the proper scope of the license [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(d)(1)]. This good faith exception is broader than the substantial compliance exception to the licensing requirement set forth in the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e); see § 104.83[4][d]]. "Unlicensed person" also excludes any person, partnership, corporation, or other entity whose license has expired for nonpayment of renewal fees but who is eligible to renew the license simply by paying the required fees [Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8(d)(2)].

§ 104.51 Owner's Misrepresentation

[1] Duty to Disclose Difficulties

By failing to impart its knowledge of difficulties to be encountered in a project, the owner will be liable for misrepresentation if the contractor is unable to perform according to the contract provisions because of the undisclosed difficulties [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996] . For example, the State of California had a duty to inform a contractor on a bridge repair job of tidal difficulties encountered during the prior repair of an identical part of the bridge 200 feet from the part being bid on by the contractor [Welch v. State (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 546, 555-556, 188 Cal. Rptr. 726 ; see § 104.257 (nondisclosure of soil condition)].

[2] Tort and Contract Liability to Contractor

In a situation in which the owner fails to disclose its knowledge of difficulties to be encountered in a project contracted for, the owner's misrepresentation or nondisclosure will give rise to both tort and contract causes of action [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; see Civ. Code §§ 1567, 1572-1574, 1689, 1709, 1710]. This is an important point in cases involving contracts with public agencies, since tort actions for misrepresentation against public agencies are barred by statute [Gov. Code § 818.8], but contract actions are not [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970)2 Cal. 3d 285, 293-294, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 ; see Civ. Code § 2782(b); see also § 104.12].

If the contractor elects to perform the contract and sue for damages for the misrepresentation, he or she will be entitled to recover the additional cost of construction attributable to the misrepresentation plus a reasonable profit on the additional work [Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 285, 301, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996] . Alternatively, the contractor may rescind the contract and sue for restitution of any benefits conferred on the owner under the contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689(b)(1), 1692; see § 104.23[1]].

For discussion of the right to plead inconsistent causes of action and the rules applicable to such actions, see § 104.41[6]. For a form of complaint by a contractor against a public entity for injunctive relief and damages for breach, negligence, and fraud, see § 104.252.

[3] Availability of Negligent-Reliance Defense

A defendant who misrepresents the facts and induces the plaintiff to rely on his or her statements may not assert in an equitable action that the plaintiff's reliance was negligent, unless the plaintiff's conduct, in light of his or her intelligence and information, is preposterous or irrational [Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 595, 297 P.2d 644] .

[4] Liability for Incorrect Plans and Specifications

A contractor who, acting reasonably, is misled by incorrect plans and specifications issued by the owner as the basis for bids, and who, as a result, submits a bid that is lower than he or she would otherwise make, may recover in a contract action against the owner for any extra work necessitated by the incorrect plans and specifications [Coleman Engineering Co. v. North American Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 404, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713 ; see § 104.254].

For discussion of the contractor's rights when the parties enter into an agreement concerning payment for the extras occasioned by the incorrect plans and specifications, see § 104.15[3][a].

§ 104.52 Owner's Liability Under Peculiar Risk Doctrine

Under the peculiar risk doctrine, a property owner who hires an independent contractor to perform work that is inherently dangerous can be held liable for tort damages when the contractor's negligence causes injury to others [Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 691, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721] . The property owner is entitled to equitable indemnity from the independent contractor responsible for the injury [Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 695, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721] .

This doctrine protects innocent bystanders or neighboring property owners; if the injured party is an employee of the independent contractor, the employee's remedy is the workers' compensation system, and the employee cannot reach the property owner under the peculiar risk doctrine [Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696, 701-702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; see Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 256, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 (Privette rationale precludes hirer's liability for failure to require necessary precautions in the contract or otherwise ensure that precautions are undertaken)] or under a negligent hiring theory [see Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1241, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 25 P.3d 1096] .

For further discussion of the peculiar risk doctrine and a form of complaint under the doctrine against an independent contractor and the person who hired the contractor to do a particular job, see Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts .

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.53

§ 104.53 Lender's Liability

[1] No Liability Unless Acting Outside Normal Scope of Activities or Party to Misrepresentation

A lender who makes a loan of money, the proceeds of which are used or may be used by the borrower to finance the design, manufacture, construction, repair, modification, or improvement of real or personal property for sale or lease to others, may not be held liable to third persons for any loss or damage occasioned by any defect in the real or personal property so designed, manufactured, constructed, repaired, modified, or improved, or for any loss or damage resulting from the failure of the borrower to use due care in the design, manufacture, construction, repair, modification, or improvement of the property, unless the loss or damage is a result of an act of the lender outside the scope of the activities of a lender of money or unless the lender has been a party to misrepresentations with respect to the property [Civ. Code § 3434; Nymark v. Heart Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1092, 283 Cal. Rptr. 53] . When a lender's participation has little or no effect on purchasers and is limited to that of a conventional construction lender, the lender owes purchasers of the property no legal duty to protect them from damages caused by defects in the construction [Bradler v. Craig (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 466, 476, 79 Cal. Rptr. 401] . A lender's occasional general inspections of the project, made solely to protect its security interest in the project, are within the scope of the normal activities of a lender and will not expose the lender to liability for defects in the construction [Meyers v. Guarantee Sav. & Loan Assn (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 307, 312, 144 Cal. Rptr. 616 ; see Kim v. Sumitomo Bank (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 974, 979-982, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834 (construction lender who does not have control over construction project is not fiduciary of borrower and does not have duty to inspect the project)].

[2] Active Participation With Right of Control

Conversely, a lender who is an active participant in the construction of a housing development with the right to exercise extensive control of the enterprise is under a duty to the buyers of the homes to exercise reasonable care to protect them from damages caused by major structural defects [Connor v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 850, 866-867, 73 Cal. Rptr. 369, 447 P.2d 609] . The fact that the lender was not in privity of contract with any of the home buyers does not absolve it of liability for its own negligence in creating an unreasonable risk of harm to them. Privity of contract is not necessary to establish the existence of a duty to exercise ordinary care not to injure another. Such a duty may arise out of a voluntarily assumed relationship if public policy so dictates [Connor v. Great Western

Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 850, 865, 73 Cal. Rptr. 369, 447 P.2d 609] . For a form of complaint by a purchaser against a lender for defects in construction, see § 104.251.

[3] Factors Considered

The facts and circumstances to be considered in determining whether a lender owes a duty to the purchasers of developed properties include all of the following [Connor v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 850, 865, 73 Cal. Rptr. 369, 447 P.2d 609 ; Nymark v. Heart Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1089, 1098, 283 Cal. Rptr. 53] :

- The extent to which the transaction was intended to affect the plaintiff;
- The foreseeability of harm to the plaintiff;
- The degree of certainty that the plaintiff suffered injury;
- The closeness of the connection between the lender's conduct and the injury suffered;
- The moral blame attached to the lender's conduct; and
- The policy of preventing future harm.

§ 104.54 Statutes of Limitations for Tort Actions

Actions for personal injury or wrongful death are ordinarily required to be brought within two years [Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1]. Actions based on injury to personal or real property must be brought within three years [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(b), (c)].

Actions based on patent deficiencies in the design, specifications, surveying, planning, supervision or observation of construction, or construction of an improvement to real property are governed by a four-year statute of limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(a); see § 104.25[3][b]]. If an injury to property or to a person, or an injury causing wrongful death, occurs as a result of such a deficiency during the fourth year after substantial completion of the construction, an action in tort to recover damages may be brought within one year after the date on which the injury occurred (irrespective of the date of death). In no event may such an action be brought more than five years after the substantial completion of construction of the improvement [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(b)]. The four-year limitations period may not be asserted by way of defense by any person who is in actual possession or control, as owner, tenant, or otherwise, of an improvement to real property at the time any deficiency in the improvement constitutes the proximate cause of the injury or death for which it is proposed to bring an action [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1(d)].

An action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake must be brought within three years, and the cause of action will be deemed not to have occurred until the aggrieved party's discovery of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)].

For further discussion of statutes of limitations, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

The licensing, bonding, and discipline of contractors is governed by the Contractors' State License Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.) ("the license law") and the rules and regulations adopted by the Contractors' State License Board to carry out the provisions of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7008; *see 16 Cal. The license law is administered by the Contractor's State License Board, an agency of the Department of Consumer Affairs [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7000.5 (repealed by its own terms on January 1, 2011, unless a subsequent statute that deletes or extends that date is enacted before January 1, 2011), 7010]. § 104.71 Purpose of License Law

The primary purpose of the license law is to protect the public against dishonesty and incompetency in the contracting business [*Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Consistent with this purpose, protecting the public is the highest priority of the Contractors' State License Board in exercising its licensing, regulatory, and disciplinary functions. Whenever protection of the public is inconsistent with other interests sought to be promoted, protection of the public is paramount [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000.6].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.72

§ 104.72 Contractor Defined

For purposes of the license law, the term "contractor" is synonymous with the term "builder" [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026]. It refers to any person who undertakes to construct, alter, repair, add to, subtract from, improve, move, wreck, or demolish any building, highway, road, parking facility, railroad, excavation or other structure, project, development, or improvement, including the erection of scaffolding or cleaning of grounds or structures connected with this work, or the preparation and removal of roadway construction zones, lane closures, flagging, or traffic diversions, or installing, repairing, maintaining, or calibrating monitoring equipment for underground storage tanks. "Roadway" includes, but is not limited to, public or city streets, highways, or any public conveyance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026]. The definition of "contractor" encompasses subcontractors and specialty contractors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058 ("specialty contractor" defined)]. "Master builders" or "master developers," that is, developers who provide labor and materials through licensed, third-party general contractors, are also contractors and required to be licensed [Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 929, 939-943, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] .

The term "contractor" also includes any person, consultant to an owner-builder, firm, association, organization, partnership, business trust, corporation, or company who or that undertakes, offers to undertake, purports to have the capacity to undertake, or submits a bid to construct any building or home improvement project, or any part of a building or home improvement project [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(b)].

The term "person," as used in the license law, includes an individual, firm, copartnership, corporation, association, or other organization, or any combination of the foregoing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7025].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.73

§ 104.73 Other Persons Considered Contractors

[1] Home Improvement Contractors

A contractor engaged in the home improvement business, which includes improvements outdoors as well as indoors [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151], is subject to special provisions of the license law [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150 et seq.]. For further discussion of home improvement contractors, see § 104.100 et seq.

[2] Mobilehome Installers

The term "contractor" includes persons who are involved in the construction, installation, alteration, repair, or preparation for moving of a mobilehome [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(d)(1); Health & Safety Code § 18008 ("mobilehome" defined)] or one of its accessory buildings or structures [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(d)(2); Health & Safety Code § 18008.5 ("mobilehome accessory building or structure" defined)], when the work is performed on a site for the purpose of occupancy as a dwelling [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7045, 7046].

A manufacturer who constructs a mobilehome or mobilehome accessory building or structure at a place other than the site on which the mobilehome is installed for the purpose of occupancy as a dwelling is not subject to the license law, nor is a manufacturer who is engaged solely in performing work in compliance with a warranty. The license law covers, however, a manufacturer who is engaged in on-site construction, alteration, or repair of mobilehomes pursuant to specialized plans, specifications, or models, or any work other than in compliance with a warranty [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(b)].

The seller of a manufactured home [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(d)(3); Health & Safety Code § 18007 ("manufactured home" defined)] or mobilehome who holds a retail manufactured home or mobilehome dealer's license under California law is not subject to the license law if the installation of the manufactured home or mobilehome is to be performed by a licensed contractor and the seller certifies that fact in writing to the buyer prior to the performance of the installations. The certification must include the name, business address, and contractor's license number of the contractor by whom the installation will be performed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2(c)].

[3] Air Conditioning, Heating, and Refrigeration Servicers

The term "contractor" embraces any person not exempt as an employee who maintains or services air conditioning, heating, or refrigeration equipment that is a fixed part of the structure to which it is attached [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053, discussed § 104.74[4]].

[4] Carpet Installers

Persons who install or contract for the installation of carpet wherein the carpet is attached to the structure by any conventional method (as determined by custom and usage in the trade) are considered contractors for purposes of the license law. Nonetheless, a seller of installed carpet who holds a retail furniture dealer's license is not required to have a contractor's license if (1) the installation of the carpet is performed by a licensed contractor, and (2) the seller so certifies to the buyer in a writing that contains specified information and is delivered to the buyer prior to the performance of the installation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.3].

[5] Temporary Labor Service Agencies

The term "contractor" also includes a temporary labor service agency that, as the employer, provides employees to perform work for which a license is required. A qualifying individual is not required to be present to supervise the work. This does not apply if there is a properly licensed contractor who exercises supervision on behalf of an individual or firm and who is directly responsible for the final results of the work. A contractor requesting the services of a temporary labor service agency must provide his or her license number to the agency [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7068.1(a)].

[6] Tree Trimmers and Movers

Persons not otherwise exempt from the license law who perform tree removal, tree pruning, or stump removal, or who engage in tree or limb cabling or guying, are also considered contractors. The term "contractor" does not, however, cover a person performing the activities of a nurseryperson who in the normal course of routine work performs incidental pruning of trees, or guying of planted trees and their limbs, or a gardener who in the normal course of routine work performs incidental pruning of trees measuring less than 15 feet in height after planting [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(d)].

[7] Water Well Drillers

The term "contractor" covers any person engaged in the business of drilling, digging, boring, or otherwise constructing, deepening, repairing, reperforating, or abandoning any water well, cathodic protecting well, or monitoring well [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(e)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.74

§ 104.74 Persons Not Governed by License Law

[1] Architects

The license law does not apply to a licensed architect acting solely in his or her professional capacity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 5500 et seq. (licensing of architects)]. An unlicensed architect may, however, be subject to the license law [see Cash v. Blackett (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 233, 237, 196 P.2d 585] .

[2] Civil or Professional Engineers

The license law does not apply to a registered civil or professional engineer acting solely in his or her professional capacity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6700 et seq. (licensing of civil engineers)].

[3] Geologists and Geophysicists

The license law does not apply to geologists or geophysicists who are licensed under the Geologist and Geophysicist Act and who are operating within the scope of that act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7800 et seq. (Geologist and Geophysicist Act)].

[4] Employees

Employees in the construction business who receive wages as their sole compensation are exempt from the provisions of the license law, provided that they do not customarily engage in an independently established business and do not have the right to control the final results of the work performed or discretion as to the manner of performance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053]. Thus, application of the license law may depend on the capacity in which work is performed rather than the nature of the work. A person working in the construction trades will be considered a contractor rather than an employee if he or she renders service for a specified compensation for a specified result, under the control of the owner only as to the result of the work, not as to the means by which the result is accomplished. The fact that the owner or an architect may be able to make alterations, deviations, modifications, and omissions will not change that status [People v. Rogers (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 909, 911 , 271 P. 2d 231] .

The determination of employee status for purposes of qualifying under the statutory exemption usually depends on the facts of the particular case. For example, the person will probably be deemed an employee if he or she is paid an hourly rate, and the owner supervises the construction and hires the subcontractors [see Rodoni v. Harbor Eng'rs (1961) 191 Cal. App. 2d 560, 562-563, 12 Cal. Rptr. 924 ; Denton v. Wiese (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 175, 180, 300 P.2d 746 ; Dorsk v. Spivack (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 206, 208-209, 236 P.2d 840] . Conversely, in an action in which the workers agreed to construct several houses, employed and discharged all labor without consulting the owner, kept time records of all employees' hours except their own, and were to receive, in addition to an incentive bonus for completion, such a large sum as compensation for the construction that the money could not possibly be construed as wages, the court held them to be contractors subject to the requirements of the license law [Albaugh v. Moss Constr. Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 126, 128-131, 269 P.2d 936 ; see Barry v. Contractors State License Bd. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 600, 605, 193 P.2d 979 (plaintiffs who received lump sum payment rather than wages as compensation as not exempt employees)].

The exemption of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053 does not apply to employees covered by regulations governing the home improvement business [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150 et seq.; see also § 104.100].

The presumption of Lab. Code § 2750.5, which provides that workers performing services requiring a contractor's license are employees for purposes of determining eligibility for workers' compensation benefits, does not apply to a determination of whether a worker is exempt from the requirements of the contractors' license law as an employee [see Fillmore v. Irvine (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 649, 656-657, 194 Cal. Rptr. 319] .

[5] Government Officials and Employees

The license law does not apply to authorized representatives of the United States government, the State of California, or any incorporated town, city, county, irrigation district, reclamation district, or other municipal or political corporation or subdivision of California, provided the entity or its representative is acting within the scope of the entity's or representative's official capacity [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7040(a)]. Nor does it apply to court officers acting within the scope of their offices [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7041]. These provisions, however, do not authorize an entity or its authorized representative to enter into or authorize a contract with an unlicensed contractor for work that is required by the license law to be performed by a licensed contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7040(b)].

[6] Public Utilities and Cable Television Corporations

Public utilities operating under the regulation of the State Railroad Commission or the Public Utilities Commission, and cable television corporations, are excluded from the coverage of the law under specified conditions [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7042-7042.5].

The conditions under which gas, heat, or electrical corporations, or their subsidiaries, that are regulated as public utilities may conduct work for which a contractor's license is normally required are set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7042.1.

[7] Owner Doing Own Work

The license law does not apply to an owner who owns or improves a structure on his or her property, provided [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(a)(1)]]:

- None of the improvements is intended or offered for sale; and

- Either the owner personally performs all of the work, or any work not performed by the owner is performed by the owner's employees with wages as their sole compensation.

The license law is also inapplicable to an owner who builds or improves a structure on his or her property, provided [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(a)(2)]:

- The owner directly contracts with licensees who are duly licensed to contract for the work of the respective trades involved in completing the project; and

- For projects involving single-family residential structures, no more than four of these structures are intended or offered for sale in a calendar year, and the owner does not contract with a general contractor for the construction.

A homeowner who improves his or her principal place of residence is exempt from the provisions of the license law if all of the following conditions exist [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(a)(3)]:

- The work is performed before sale;

- The homeowner has actually resided in the residence for the 12 months before completion of the work; and

- The homeowner has not availed himself or herself of this exemption on more than two structures more than once during any three-year period.

Proof of the sale or offering for sale of a structure by or for the owner-builder within one year after completion for the structure constitutes a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that the structure was undertaken for purposes of sale [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(b)(1)]. The presumption becomes conclusive if there is proof of sale or offering for sale of five or more structures by the owner-builder within one year after completion [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044(b)(2)].

Injunctive relief is available to any licensed contractor, association of contractors, labor organization, affected consumer, or district attorney, as well as to the attorney general, to prohibit violation of the license law by an owner-builder who is not licensed or exempt from the law's provisions. In such an action, the plaintiff is not required to prove irreparable injury. The prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees and all costs incurred in prosecuting or defending the action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044.01; see § 104.259].

[8] Real Estate Licensees

The license law does not apply to real estate licensees acting within the course and scope of their license. The exemption, however, does not authorize a real estate licensee or property manager to act in the capacity of a contractor without a contractor's license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044.1].

[9] Construction Managers

An entity that provides construction management services to a private owner developing commercial real property is not required to be licensed pursuant to the Contractors' State License Law. The term "contractor" does not include persons who perform construction management services [The Fifth Day LLC v. Bolotin (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 939, 950, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 633] .

§ 104.75 Surety Insurers

The license law does not apply to an admitted surety insurer whenever it engages a contractor to undertake the completion of a contract on which a performance or completion bond was issued by the surety insurer; provided all actual construction work is performed by duly licensed contractors [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7044.2].

[1] Furnishers of Materials or Supplies

The license law does not apply to persons who merely furnish materials or supplies without fabricating them into products or consuming them in the performance of the work of the contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7052].

[2] Alarm Company Operators

The license law does not apply to licensed alarm company operators who install, maintain, monitor, sell, alter, or service alarm systems [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7054; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7590 et seq. (licensing of alarm company operators)].

[3] Satellite Antenna Installers

The license law exempts electronic and appliance repair dealers whose activities consist only of installing satellite antenna systems on residential structures or property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7054.5].

[4] Structural Pest Control Operators

A licensed structural pest control operator acting within the scope of his or her license is exempt from the requirements of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7051; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 8500 et seq. (licensing of structural pest control operators)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.76

§ 104.76 Activities Not Governed by License Law

[1] Activities Out of State

The license law has been held not to apply to persons who perform construction work outside of California. Because the purpose of the law is to protect only California consumers against incompetent or dishonest contractors, the legislative objective would not be served in cases involving structures located out of state [Conderback, Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 679, 48 Cal. Rptr. 901] . Therefore, a California corporation that enters into a contract in California to do construction work in another state is not required to meet the requirements of the California license law [Conderback, Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 664, 678-679, 48 Cal. Rptr. 901] . On the other hand, foreign contractors engaging in construction activities in California are within the coverage of the license law [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 995, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370] .

[2] Activities Involving Finished Products and Personal Property

The license law does not apply to the sale or installation of any finished products, materials, or articles of merchandise that do not become a fixed part of the structure, or to any material supplier or manufacturer furnishing finished products, materials, or articles of merchandise who does not install or contract for the installation of those items. For this purpose, the term "finished products" does not include installed carpets [see § 104.73[4]] or mobilehomes or mobilehome accessory structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7045; see § 104.73[2]]. The determination of whether goods installed become a fixed part of the structure is a question of fact [Walker v. Thornsberry (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 842, 847, 158 Cal. Rptr. 862 ; see King v. Hinderstein (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 430, 436, 176 Cal. Rptr. 53 (installation of prefabricated swimming pool as not within finished products exception)].

Construction, alteration, improvement, or repair of personal property is also exempt from the license law. The term "personal property" does not include mobilehomes or mobilehome accessory structures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7046; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.2].

[3] Oil and Gas Operations

The license law does not apply to any construction, repair, or operation incidental to the discovering of petroleum or gas, or to the drilling, testing, abandoning, or other operation of any petroleum or gas well, when performed by an owner or lessee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7043].

[4] Projects Under $500

The license law does not apply to small operations of a casual, minor, or inconsequential nature on a project in which the aggregate contract price for labor, materials, and all other items is less than $500 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7048]. These operations are not exempt when the construction work is part of a larger operation by the same or a different contractor, or when the operation is purposely divided into contract amounts of less than $500 to evade the provisions of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7048; see Barry v. Contractors State License Bd. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 600, 604-605, 193 P.2d 979 ($100 aggregate limit under former Bus. & Prof. Code § 7048)].

[5] Irrigation, Conservation, and Cultivation Work

The license law does not apply to any construction or operation incidental to the construction and repair of irrigation and drainage ditches of regularly constituted irrigation or reclamation districts, or to farming, dairying, agriculture, viticulture, horticulture, or to stock or poultry raising, or to clearing or other work on the land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes. The license law does apply, however, if the work is done by a licensed contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7049]. Moreover, the license law applies to the business of drilling, digging, boring, or otherwise constructing, deepening, repairing, reperforating, or abandoning water wells [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7049; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7026.1(e) (discussed under § 104.73[7])].

§ 104.77 Examination Requirement

[1] Qualification of Individuals or Entities

The registrar of the Contractors' State License Board is responsible for the investigation, classification, and qualification of applicants for licensure by written examination [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7065, 7065.01; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7068(b), 7071 (qualification for examination of individuals, partnerships, or corporations); see also Housing Development Co. v. Hoschler (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 379, 388, 149 Cal. Rptr. 400 (manner in which general partner conducted union relations was relevant factor in evaluation of new partnership's application for license)]. Under certain circumstances, the examination requirement may be waived [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065 et seq.].

It is a misdemeanor for any unauthorized person to take the qualifying examination on behalf of an applicant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7068.5].

[2] Financial Solvency and Clean Record

Every applicant for a license must prove financial solvency, that is, operating capital in excess of $2,500. The applicant is required to provide any financial information deemed necessary by the Registrar. This information is confidential, but it may be admissible as evidence in an administrative hearing or judicial action if it is relevant to the proceeding [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7067.5].

Applicants for licensure must also show that they have never been refused a license or had a license revoked for reasons that would preclude the issuance of a license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7070], and have never been convicted of a crime, done any act involving dishonesty, fraud, or deceit, or done any act that would be grounds for suspension or revocation of a license [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 480, 7069(a)]. License applicants also must furnish a full set of fingerprints as part of a criminal history record check [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7069(b)].

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.78

§ 104.78 Workers' Compensation Insurance Requirement

An applicant or licensee must have on file with the registrar at all times a current and valid Certificate of Workers' Compensation Insurance or Certification of Self-Insurance as a condition precedent to the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, renewal, or continued maintenance of a license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(a)]. Provided all other licensing requirements have been met, a contractor must be considered duly licensed at all times in which the registrar is required to accept a certificate of insurance or self-insurance [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.3]. This does not apply to an applicant or licensee who has no employees, provided he or she files a statement with the Board, on a prescribed form, before the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, or continued maintenance of a license, certifying that the applicant or licensee does not employ any person so as to become subject to the workers' compensation laws, or is not otherwise required to provide workers' compensation insurance coverage [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(b)]. It also does not apply to the holder of an inactive license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(c)]. The insurer must report to the Registrar specified information about the policy, including the dates that coverage is scheduled to commence and lapse and any applicable cancellation date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(d)]. Until January 1, 2011, a roofing contractor holding an active C-39 license may be exempt from the workers' compensation certificate requirement for up to one year, after which he or she will be placed on inactive status [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125(e), (f)].

A certificate may be accepted up to 90 days after its effective date and, assuming the contractor is otherwise eligible to be licensed, the license will be reinstated retroactive to the certificate's effective date [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.1(a)]. Even if the certificate is not received within the initial 90-day period after it is effective, the Registrar will accept it and retroactively reinstate the license if the contractor can show that the failure to file within the 90-day period was due to circumstances beyond his or her control [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.1(b)].

The failure of a licensee to obtain or maintain workers' compensation insurance coverage when he or she is required to do so, will result in automatic license suspension by operation of law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2]. The suspension is effective on the earlier of either (1) the date the coverage lapses, or (2) the date the coverage is required to be obtained [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(a)].

The registrar must provide a licensee who is subject to suspension with a notice that includes the following [Bus. &

Prof. Code § 7125.2(b)]:

- The reason for the suspension and the effective date;

- A statement informing the licensee that a pending suspension will be posted to the license record for not more than 45 days before the posting of any required license suspension periods; and

- The procedures required to reinstate the license.

Following the suspension, the license may be reinstated at any time by showing proof of compliance with the workers' compensation insurance requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.2(c)].

The following acts related to the workers' compensation insurance requirement constitute cause for disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.4(a)]:

- Filing a false statement or exemption;

- Employing a person for whom workers' compensation coverage is required after filing an exemption certificate and without first filing a Certificate of Workers' Compensation Insurance or Certificate of Self-Insurance; or

- Employing a person subject to workers' compensation coverage without maintaining coverage for that person.

A license qualifer who is responsible for assuring that a licensee complies with the Contractors' State License Law is also guilty of a misdemeanor for committing or failing to prevent the commission of any of these acts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7125.4(b)].

§ 104.79 Issuance and Renewal of License

[1] Issuance

Once an applicant has passed the licensing examination and investigation, he or she will be issued a license on payment of the required fee as determined by the Board [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7137, 7138.1], and may then engage in business as a contractor under the terms of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7072]. An original license is considered probationary until it is renewed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7077; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7140, 7141].

If a licensee makes a conclusive showing of experience in the classification applied for that is satisfactory to the Registrar, an additional classification may be added without further examination under certain conditions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065.3].

[2] Expiration and Renewal

A contractor's license expires two years after the last day of the month in which the license is issued, or two years from the date on which the renewed license last expired [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7140; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7153.2 (expiration of home improvement registration)]. The license may be renewed before expiration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7140], or at any time within three years after expiration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7141], by filing the prescribed form with the Registrar and paying the appropriate fee [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7140, 7141; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7137, 7138.1]. If a license is not renewed within three years, the contractor must apply for a new license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7141; but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7075.1(b), (c) (when licenses may be reissued or reassigned)].

The Registrar may refuse to renew a license based on the failure of a licensee to complete the renewal application [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7145]. If a renewal application rejected for insufficiency or incompleteness is not returned by the licensee within 90 days, it will be deemed abandoned. The applicant then has 90 days after the date of abandonment to file a petition showing good cause for renewal [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7145].

§ 104.80 Reciprocity Licensure

If an applicant is a licensed contractor in a similar classification in another state that accepts the California licensure qualifications for purposes of licensure in that state, and the Contractors' State License Board ascertains that the professional qualifications and conditions of good standing for licensure in the other state are at least as stringent as California's, the Registrar may accept the applicant's qualifications on a reciprocity basis [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065.4]. In addition, if the applicant provides written certification from the other state that his or her license has been in good standing for the previous five years, the applicant's trade examination may be waived by the Registrar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065.4].

C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.81

§ 104.81 Contractors Engaged in Asbestos-Related Work

[1] Required Certificate

A contractor who engages in asbestos-related work involving 100 square feet or more of asbestos-containing materials must be licensed and must be certified under the license law to perform the work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.5]. For purposes of the certification requirements, "asbestos-related work" means any activity that, by disturbing asbestos-containing material, may release asbestos fibers into the air and that is not related to the manufacture of asbestos-containing products [Lab. Code § 6501.8; see Lab. Code § 6501.7 (defining "asbestos")].

[2] Effect of Failure to Be Certified

Any contractor, whether licensed or unlicensed, who is required to be, but is not, certified to perform asbestos-related work is subject to a fine and possible license revocation or suspension for a first offense. Conviction of a subsequent offense carries with it a larger fine or imprisonment in the county jail, or both fine and imprisonment along with mandatory license revocation or suspension [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.1]. Moreover, any owner of a commercial or industrial building or structure, any employer who engages in or contracts for asbestos-related work, any contractor or public agency, or any employee acting for any of the above who knowingly or negligently, or by failing to inquire, enters into a contract with another person who is required to be, and is not, certified is subject to civil prosecution on a first offense and to both civil and criminal prosecution on a subsequent offense [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.5].

A criminal complaint may be brought by the Attorney General or by the District Attorney or prosecuting attorney of any city, in any county in the state with jurisdiction over the contractor or employer, by reason of the contractor's or employer's act, or failure to act, within that jurisdiction [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.2].

[3] Disclosure of Financial Relationship on Inspection

A contractor who has made an inspection to determine the presence of asbestos or the need for related remedial action with knowledge that the report either has been required by a person as a condition of making a loan of money secured by the property or is required by a public entity as a condition of issuing a permit concerning the property must disclose, orally and in writing, if it is owned by or has any common ownership, or any financial relationship whatsoever, including, but not limited to, commissions or referral fees, with an entity in the business of performing the corrective work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.4(a)]. This requirement does not prohibit a contractor that has contracted to perform corrective work after the report of another company has indicated the presence of asbestos or the need for related remedial action from making its own inspection prior to performing that corrective work or from making an inspection to determine whether the corrective measures were successful and, if not, thereafter performing additional corrective work [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.4(b)].

A violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.4 is both (1) grounds for disciplinary action against the contractor, and (2) a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment in the county jail, or both [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.4(c), (d)]. Similar provisions apply to asbestos consultants [see Lab. Code § 6509.5(c), (d)].

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.82

§ 104.82 Contractors Removing or Remedying Other Hazardous Substances

[1] Required Certificate

A contractor must be certified before engaging in any removal or remedial action with regard to the release or threatened release of a hazardous substance, if the action requires the contractor to dig into the surface of the earth to remove the excavated material from a hazardous waste site [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.7(a), (d); see Health & Safety Code §§ 25322 ("remedial action" defined), 25323 ("removal" defined); see also Health & Safety Code § 25300 et seq.; Bus. & Prof. Code § 7137(j) (application fee for certification examination)]. "Removal or remedial action" does not include asbestos-related work, as defined in Lab. Code § 6501.8 (discussed in § 104.81[1]), or work related to a hazardous substance spill on a highway [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.7(d)].

[2] Penalties for Failure to Be Certified

Any contractor, whether licensed or unlicensed, who performs or engages in a removal or remedial action, as defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.7(d), without being certified to perform those activities, on conviction of a first offense, is guilty of an infraction punishable by a fine and possible suspension or revocation of any contractor's license. On conviction of a subsequent offense, he or she is guilty of a misdemeanor requiring revocation or suspension of any contractor's license and either a fine or incarceration in the county jail, or both the fine and incarceration [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.1]. Identical penalties are imposed on any contractor who, either knowingly or negligently, or by reason of a failure to inquire, enters into a contract with another person who is required to be and is not certified to engage in a removal or remedial action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7118.6].

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.83

§ 104.83 Penalties for Contracting Without Valid License

[1] Criminal Penalties

It is a misdemeanor for any person to engage in the business or act in the capacity of a contractor within California without having a valid contractor's license, unless that person is particularly exempted from the provisions of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(a)].

A first conviction is punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment in a county jail not exceeding six months, or both [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(b)]. A second conviction carries a fine of the greater between: (1) 20 percent of the contract price; (2) 20 percent of the aggregate payments made to, or at the direction of, the unlicensed contractor; or (3) $5,000 and imprisonment in the county jail for not less than 90 days, except in an unusual case when the interests of justice would be served by a lesser sentence or fine [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(c)]. A third or subsequent conviction is punishable by a fine of (1) not less than $5,000 nor more than the greater of $10,000 or 20 percent of the contract price, or (2) 20 percent of the aggregate payments made to, or at the direction of, the unlicensed contractor, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one year or less than 90 days. These penalties are cumulative to penalties available under other California laws [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(d)]. A person who engages in the business or acts in the capacity of a contractor is subject to these penalties if the person was named on a license that was previously revoked and, either in fact or under law, was held responsible for any act or omission resulting in the revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(e)]. The indictment, information, or complaint based on any such violation by an unlicensed contractor must be filed within four years from the date the contract was proposed, entered into, completed, or abandoned, whichever occurred last [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(g)].

Any person who used the services of a contractor who has been convicted of engaging in the business, or acting in the capacity, of a contractor without a valid California contractor's license is a victim of crime and is eligible for restitution for economic losses, regardless of whether that person had knowledge that the contractor was unlicensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028(h); see Penal Code § 1202.4].

Any person, licensed or unlicensed, who willfully and intentionally uses, with intent to defraud, a contractor's license number that does not correspond to the number on a currently valid contractor's license held by that person is punishable by a fine not exceeding $10,000 or by imprisonment in state prison, or in county jail for not more than one year, or by both the fine and imprisonment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7027.3 (penalties are cumulative)].

[2] Penalties for Conspiracy

Any person licensed under the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 100 et seq. (Department of Consumers Affairs) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 500 et seq. (healing arts, professions, and vocations generally) is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to the disciplinary provisions of the applicable code if he or she (1) conspires with a person not so licensed to violate any provision of the code, or (2) intends to aid or assist such a person in violating the provisions and allows his or her license to be used by the person or acts as his or her agent or partner [Bus. & Prof. Code § 125].

[3] Injunction Restraining Violations

In addition to all other remedies provided by law, when it appears to the Registrar, either on complaint or otherwise, that a licensee has engaged in, or is engaging in, any act, practice, or transaction that constitutes a violation of the license law whereby another person may be substantially injured, or that any person who does not hold a state contractor's license in any classification has engaged in, or is engaging in, any act, practice, or transaction that constitutes a violation of the license law, whether or not there is substantial injury, the Registrar may, either through the Attorney General or through the district attorney of the county in which the act, practice, or transaction is alleged to have been committed, apply to the superior court of that county, or any other county in which the person maintains a place of business or resides, for an injunction restraining that person from acting in the capacity of a contractor without a license in violation of the license law, or from acting in violation of the license law when another person may be substantially injured. On a proper showing, a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, or a permanent injunction shall be granted [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.3].

A continuing violation of the licensing statutes [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065 et seq.] by a person who does not hold a valid California contractor's license in any classification may also be enjoined, on a proper showing, on the request of a licensed contractor or an association of contractors, a consumer affected by the violation, a district attorney, or the Attorney General. The plaintiff will not be required to prove irreparable injury [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.4; see § 104.259].

[4] Actions by Unlicensed Contractor Barred

[a] General Prohibition

No person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a contractor may bring or maintain any action, or recover in law or equity in any action, in any court of California for the collection of compensation for the performance of any act or contract for which a license is required under the license law without alleging that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the act or contract. This prohibition applies regardless of the merits of the cause of action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a)]. However, it does not apply to contractors who are each individually licensed under the license law but who fail to comply with the joint venture licensing provisions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7029 (license for joint venture)]. Lack of a license may be alleged as an affirmative defense to an action by a contractor [see § 104.217].

The prohibition on actions by unlicensed contractors "represents a legislative determination that the importance of deterring unlicensed persons from engaging in the contracting business outweighs any harshness between the parties, and that the deterrence can best be realized by denying violators the right to maintain any action for compensation in the courts of the state" [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 151, 308 P.2d 713] . Moreover, the courts may not resort to equitable considerations in defiance of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 152, 308 P.2d 713] , or carve "exceptional circumstances" exceptions from the licensing requirement, such as to allow an out-of-state contractor who performs one-time construction services to bring an action to recover compensation [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 994-997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370] .

Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 does not allow a contractor who was unlicensed at any time during contractual performance to recover compensation for individual acts performed while he or she was duly licensed [MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 425, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41] . However, if fully licensed at all times during contractual performance, a contractor is not barred from recovering compensation for the work solely because he or she was unlicensed when the contract was executed [MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 440, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41] .

1989 Stats., ch. 368, § 1, added the phrase "or recover in law or equity in any action" to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a), and thus presumably abrogated application of the rationale enunciated in R.M. Sherman Co. v. W.R. Thomason, Inc. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 559, 565, 236 Cal. Rptr. 577 , to situations in which an unlicensed contractor who is sued on the contract seeks to assert the equitable defense of set-off with respect to sums owing from the plaintiff.

[b] Proof of Licensure

If licensure or proper licensure is controverted, proof of licensure must be made by production of a verified certificate of licensure from the Contractors' State License Board, which establishes that the individual or entity bringing the action was duly licensed in the proper classification of contractors at all times during the performance of any act or contract covered by the action. No person or entity controverting licensure or proper licensure is required to produce a verified certificate. When licensure is controverted, the burden of proof to establish licensure is on the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(d)]. A general denial is sufficient to controvert a contractor's pleading of licensure so that the contractor must produce a verified certificate [Advantec Group, Inc. v. Edwin's Plumbing Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 621, 627, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195] .

[c] Unenforceability of Security Interests

A security interest taken to secure any payment for the performance of any act or contract for which a license is required is unenforceable if the person performing the act or contract was not a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(c)].

[d] Substantial Compliance Doctrine

Except under narrowly defined circumstances, in cases arising from contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1992, strict adherence to the license requirement is required, and a showing of substantial compliance with that requirement will be of no avail in an unlicensed person's action for compensation based on an act or contract for which a contractor's license is required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e)].

In cases commenced before January 1, 1995, that arose from contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1992, a court may determine that there has been substantial compliance with licensing requirements if it is shown at an evidentiary hearing that the plaintiff was a duly licensed contractor during any portion of the 90 days immediately preceding the performance of the act or contract that formed the basis for the action, and that noncompliance with the licensing requirement was the result of either inadvertent clerical error, or other error or delay not caused by the plaintiff's negligence [former Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(d), (e) in effect prior to amendment by 1994 Stats., ch. 550, § 1]. A court may also apply these criteria to determine substantial compliance in cases commenced after January 1, 1995, if an action based on the same contract was commenced before that date and subsequently dismissed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(f)].

In all other cases commenced on or after January 1, 1995, a court may determine that there has been substantial compliance with the licensure requirements if all of the following are shown at an evidentiary hearing [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e), (f)]:

- The plaintiff had been duly licensed as a contractor in California before performance of the contract [see MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 434, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 (contractor that was not duly licensed "at all times" during performance of contract and could not establish its substantial compliance with licensure requirements because it had never held a valid California contractor's license "prior to" beginning performance, could not sue to recover any compensation for work performed under contract)];

- The plaintiff acted reasonably and in good faith to maintain proper licensure [see Pacific Custom Pools, Inc. v. Turner Construction Co. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1265, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 (contractor who failed to renew license on notice of expiration and whose check was dishonored when contractor did attempt to renew failed to show that it acted reasonably and in good faith)];

- The plaintiff did not know or reasonably should not have known that he or she was not duly licensed when performance of the act or contract commenced [see ICF Kaiser Engineers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 226, 241, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 (requirement met when contractor did not have actual knowledge that its license was suspended due to clerk's failure to file a bond with licensing board and board was unaware of suspension at time of its occurrence due to error in its computer records); cf. Pacific Custom Pools, Inc. v. Turner Construction Co. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1265, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 (no substantial compliance when contractor's license remained suspended for five months after contractor received notice of suspension); but see Slatkin v. White (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 963, 971, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 54 (contractor may be compensated for work performed after discovering loss of licensure if contractor did not have knowledge or notice of loss before start of job)]; and

- The plaintiff acted promptly and in good faith to reinstate his or her license on learning that it was invalid.

Effective January 1, 1990, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 was amended to provide explicitly that the substantial compliance doctrine "shall not apply to this section" [former Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(d) as amended by 1989 Stats., ch. 368, § 1]. The 1989 amendments are not retroactive [G.E. Hetrick & Associates, Inc. v. Summit Construction & Maintenance (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 318, 329, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] . As discussed above, Section 7031 has subsequently been amended to specify narrow circumstances in which a court may apply the doctrine to cases arising from contracts entered into on or after January 1, 1992. In cases that arose from contracts entered into between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1992, there were no circumstances under which an unlicensed contractor could avoid the bar to compensation recovery by alleging substantial compliance.

Before Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 was amended in 1989 as discussed above, an unlicensed person was allowed to recover in an action for compensation based on substantial compliance with the licensing requirements. This exception to the statutory bar of Section 7031 was developed by the courts to avoid what were seen as harsh consequences of strict application of the license requirement [see Asdourian v. Araj (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 276, 284-288, 211 Cal. Rptr. 703, 696 P.2d 95 ; Latipac, Inc. v. Superior Court (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 278, 281-282, 49 Cal. Rptr. 676, 411 P.2d 564 ; G.E. Hetrick & Associates, Inc. v. Summit Construction & Maintenance (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327-330, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803] .

[e] Persons Protected by License Law

"[W]hen the Legislature enacts a statute forbidding certain conduct for the purpose of protecting one class of persons from the activities of another, a member of the protected class may maintain an action notwithstanding the fact that he [or she] has shared in the illegal transaction" [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 153, 308 P.2d 713] . A member of the class for whose protection the license law was enacted generally is not in pari delicto with the contractor and can recover for the contractor's breach of contract [Fairlane Estates v. Carrico Constr. Co. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 65, 68-69, 39 Cal. Rptr. 35] .

When the person required to have a license is a general contractor, the protected class includes subcontractors, materialpersons, employees, and owners dealing with the general contractor. When the person who was required to have a license but did not have one is a subcontractor, he or she is not to be protected from his or her own unlicensed activities [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 153, 308 P.2d 713] . General contractors are among the persons protected by the licensing statute, and may assert a subcontractor's lack of a license defensively to the same extent as owners [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 ; Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 153-154, 308 P.2d 713] .

If an unlicensed person performs a contract for agreed service, and the person benefited voluntarily pays for the service, the latter cannot subsequently recover the sum paid. This does not, however, preclude the person so paying from defending on the ground of illegality against a claim for payment by a third person, such as an assignee whose claim is subject to the infirmities of the illegality [Walker v. Nitzberg (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 359, 367, 369, 91 Cal. Rptr. 526] .

The prohibition on actions by unlicensed contractors applies even though those against whom the action is brought knew that the contractor was unlicensed at the time the contract was entered into [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 ; Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 929, 941-942, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] .

[f] Actions Within Scope of Prohibition

In addition to actions on the contract and actions for services and materials rendered, the requirement that a contractor must allege and prove that he or she was licensed at all times during the performance of the contract applies to an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien by a contractor [Albaugh v. Moss Construction Co. (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 126, 132, 269 P.2d 936] and to an application for judicial confirmation of an arbitrator's award [Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 613, 204 P.2d 23] . The requirements of alleging and proving licensure must also be met in an action on a bond [Lewis & Queen v. N.M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 154, 308 P.2d 713] .

[g] No Fraud Action Based on False Promise to Pay

An unlicensed contractor may not circumvent the purposes of the licensing requirement by bringing an action for fraud based on a false promise to pay by the owner. The purpose of the prohibition on suits by unlicensed contractors is to deter unlicensed contractors from offering their services or accepting solicitations of work. Recovery is therefore precluded even if the owner acts in bad faith. The falsity of the promise to pay is irrelevant, even if the unlicensed contractor contends that he or she reasonably relied on the promise [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 998-1002, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370] .

When the plaintiff's involvement as an unlicensed contractor is incidental to the overall agreement or transaction, however, and the primary fraud involved is external to the arrangement for the construction work, a fraud cause of action may be permitted [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 1001-1002, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370] . Thus, an unlicensed contractor who improved the defendant's house in reliance on the promise of an option to buy the house was able to allege a cause of action for fraud based on misrepresentations about encumbrances on the house [Pickens v. American Mortgage Exchange (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 299, 303-304, 74 Cal.

Rptr. 788] .

[h] Actions Not Within Scope of Prohibition

An unlicensed contractor may bring and maintain an action for the breach of a contract not within the scope of the protective purpose of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 [Davis Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159, 81 Cal. Rptr. 453] . The fact that a contractor is unlicensed does not bar a cause of action for wrongful detention and use of his or her property [Leonard v. Hermreck (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 142, 145-146, 335 P.2d 515] . However, although an unlicensed contractor can assert his or her claim defensively to reduce in whole or in part the claims against him or her, the contractor cannot recover an affirmative judgment for an excess [Culbertson v. Cizek (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 451, 473, 37 Cal. Rptr. 548] .

Lack of a contractor's license did not preclude developers of two residential projects who also acted as the general contractors from asserting claims for equitable indemnity against their subcontractors after being sued on a strict liability theory for construction defects, because the primary relief sought was not compensation for the work performed within the meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031, but rather the spreading of the cost of the plaintiffs' damages incurred because of defective work by others. The developers' entitlement to equitable indemnity had a separate genesis than did their express indemnity claims against the subcontractors, which arose out of illegal construction contracts and were barred by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031. The developers could also state negligence claims against the subcontractors. The developers did not allege any negligence damages beyond those suffered by the homeowner-plaintiffs, and thus the negligence claims were closely related to the indemnity claims [Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1420-1421, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386] .

[i] Application Against Contractor's Assignee

The disability of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 attaches to the contractor's assignee to whom the contractor's right to compensation has been assigned if the assignee is not a holder in due course [Walker v. Nitzberg (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 359, 367, 91 Cal. Rptr. 526] . Additionally, if a note that is payment for a construction contract is assigned to a holder in due course, the unlicensed status of the contractor is a defense to enforcement of the note [Wilson v. Steele (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1060-1062, 259 Cal. Rptr. 851] .

For an assignee to recover, he or she must allege and prove that the contractor had a valid contractor's license during the performance of the contract. If the assignee cannot make this allegation or proof because the contractor was not licensed, but at the time of the assignment the assignee was a holder in due course or a purchaser in good faith for value without knowledge that the contractor was not licensed, the assignee must affirmatively prove the facts that relieve him or her from the taint of the assignor's disability [Walker v. Nitzberg (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 359, 367-368, 91 Cal. Rptr. 526] .

[5] Action Against Unlicensed Contractor

A person who uses the services of an unlicensed contractor may bring an action in any California court of competent jurisdiction to recover all compensation paid to the unlicensed contractor for performance of any act or contract, unless the unlicensed contractor can establish that he or she substantially complied with the licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e)]. For discussion of the substantial compliance doctrine, see § 104.83[4][d].

The recovery authorized by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(b) may not be reduced by an unlicensed contractor's claim of offset for materials and services provided in connection with the unlicensed work [White v. Cridlebaugh (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 506, 520-521, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 434 ; see Alatriste v. Cesars Exterior Designs, Inc. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 656, 672-673, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 (property owner entitled to recover payments made to landscape contractor based on landscaper's unlicensed status even though property owner knew landscaper was not licensed; landscaper was not entitled to offsets for work performed during time it held license or for materials retained by the property owner)].

§ 104.83A Prohibitions Related to Individual With Revoked License Who Performs Acts for Which License Is Required

[1] Acts Performed by Individual Whose License Has Been Revoked

An individual is prohibited from performing any act regulated under the Contractors' License Law for or on behalf of a licensee, other than as a bona fide nonsupervising employee, when that individual [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(a)]:

- Was a member, officer, director, owner, or partner of a license that was revoked;
- Had knowledge of or participated in any act or omission for which the license was revoked; and
- Is not eligible for license reinstatement.

An individual also is prohibited from performing any act regulated under the License Law for or on behalf of a licensee, other than as a bona fide nonsupervsing employee, when that individual [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(b)]:

- Furnished the qualifications for licensure and that license was revoked [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7068];
- Served in the capacity of the qualifying individual during the commission or omission of any of the acts that resulted in the license revocation, whether or not the individual had knowledge of or participated in those acts; and
- Is not eligible for license reinstatement.

A "bona fide nonsupervising employee" is a person who is exempt from the license requirement because he or she (1) receives wages as his or her sole compensation, (2) does not customarily engage in an independently established business, (3) does not have the right to control or discretion as to the manner of performance so as to determine the final results of the work performed, and (4) does not otherwise meet the test of an independent contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.8; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7053; Labor Code § 2750.5].

A violation of these prohibitions is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than $4,500, and/or imprisonment in county jail for not less than 90 days nor more than one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(c)]. An indictment for violating either of these prohibitions must be found, or an information or complaint must be filed, within four years of the prohibited act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(d)].

Before becoming an employee in any capacity by an entity that is subject to the contractors' license requirements, an individual described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(a) or (b) (see above) must provide the prospective employer with written notice of the revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.65].

[2] Acts by Licensee Employing Individual Whose License Has Been Revoked

A qualifying individual, officer, partner, or other person named on a license is prohibited from knowingly employing an individual who is violating Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.6(a) or (b) [see § 104.83A[1]], except as a bona fide nonsupervising employee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.7(a); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.8 ("bona fide nonsupervising employee" defined)].

A violation of this prohibition is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than $4,500, and/or imprisonment in county jail for not less than 30 days nor more than one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.7(b)]. An indictment for violating this prohibition must be found, or an information or complaint must be filed, within four years of the prohibited act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.7(c)].

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
C. Licensing, Bond Requirements, and Discipline of Contractors

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.84

§ 104.84 Contractors' Official Bonds

[1] Types

Various official bonds may be required of an applicant for a contractor's license or of a licensee [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065 et seq.]. They include a contractor's bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6; see § 104.84[3]], a qualifying individual's bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9; see § 104.84[4]], a judgment bond guaranteeing payment of an unpaid judgment or award against the contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17; see § 104.84[5]], and a disciplinary contractor's bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8; see § 104.84[6]].

The license of a licensee who fails to maintain a sufficient bond is subject to suspension or revocation [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.15; see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.020].

For forms of bonds and undertakings and related forms, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[2] In-Lieu Deposit of Money or Securities

Until January 1, 1999, a deposit of money or other securities could be given instead of a bond as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 995.710 et seq. [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.12(a)]. Any contractor who made a deposit with the Secretary of State in lieu of posting a bond before January 1, 1999, may continue to utilize the deposit in lieu of a bond; however, the deposit cannot be renewed [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.710(e)].

If the Contractors' State Licence Board is notified in writing of a civil action against the deposit, no portion of the deposit will be released without a determination by the court [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(b)]. If a deposit is insufficient to pay all claims adjudicated under any action for the deposit, the deposit will be distributed to all claimants in proportion to the amount of their respective claims [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.12(c)].

An action, other than an action to recover wages or fringe benefits, against a deposit given in lieu of either a contractor's bond or a disciplinary bond must be brought within three years of the first to occur between: (1) the expiration of the license period during which the act or omission occurred; (2) the date the license of the active licensee was inactivated, canceled, or revoked by the board; or (3) in a case involving a deposit in lieu of a disciplinary bond, the last date a deposit was required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.12(d)(1), (2)]. A claim to recover wages or fringe benefits must be brought within six months from the date the wage or fringe benefit delinquencies were discovered, but in no event can a civil action on such a claim be brought later than two years from the date the wage or fringe benefit contributions were due [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.12(d)(3)].

[3] Contractor's Bond

[a] Amount

As a condition precedent to the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, or renewal of a license, and as a condition to the continued maintenance of any active license, the applicant or licensee must file or have on file with the registrar a contractor's bond in the principal sum of $12,500 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6(a)]. No bond is required of a licensee whose license is inactive during the period the license is inactive [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6(c)].

[b] Form, Filing, and Beneficiaries

The contractor's bond must be executed by an admitted surety in favor of the State of California, in a form acceptable to the registrar, and must be filed with the Registrar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5]. An admitted surety insurer is a corporate insurer or a reciprocal or interinsurance exchange to which the insurance commissioner has issued a certificate of authority to transact surety insurance in California as defined in Ins. Code § 105 [Code Civ. Proc. § 995.120(a)].

The bond must be for the benefit of the following persons or entities [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5]:

(1) Any homeowner contracting for home improvement on the homeowner's personal family residence damaged as a result of the licensee's violation of the license law;

(2) Any property owner contracting for construction of a single-family dwelling who is damaged as a result of a licensee's violation of the license law;

(3) Any person damaged as a result of a willful and deliberate violation of that law by the licensee or by the licensee's fraud in the execution or performance of a construction contract;

(4) Any employee of the licensee damaged by the licensee's failure to pay wages; or

(5) Any person or entity, including an express trust fund [see Civ. Code § 3111], to whom a portion of the compensation of a licensee's employee is paid by agreement with the employee or the employee's collective bargaining agent, damaged as the result of the licensee's failure to pay employee fringe benefits.

With regard to (2), above, the property owner can only recover if the single-family dwelling is not intended for sale or offered for sale at the time the damages were incurred [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5(b)]. For purposes of (5), above, damage to an express trust fund is limited to actual employer payments required to be made on behalf of the licensee's employees, as part of the overall compensation of those employees, that the licensee fails to pay [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5(e)].

[4] Qualifying Individual's Bond

A qualifying individual who is not the proprietor, a general partner, or a joint licensee must file or have on file a qualifying individual's bond as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.10 in the sum of $12,500 [see Bus. & Prof. Code

§§ 7068, 7068.1 (qualifying individual)]. This bond is in addition to, and may not be combined with, any contractor's bond required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5 et seq., and is required for the issuance, reinstatement, reactivation, or continued valid use of a license [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9(a)].

Excluding the claim of a homeowner who contracted for home improvements on the homeowner's personal family residence that was damaged as a result of a violation of the Contractor's State License Law, the aggregate liability of a surety on claims brought against the qualifying individual's bond cannot exceed $7,500 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.10(a)]. The bond proceeds in excess of that amount are reserved exclusively for the claims of home improvement contract homeowners whose personal family residence was damaged as a result of the License Law. However, the homeowner is not precluded from claiming or recovering the full measure of the bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9(b)].

The responsible managing officer of a corporation is not required to file or have on file a qualifying individual's bond if he or she owns 10 percent or more of the voting stock of the corporation and certifies to that fact on a form prescribed by the Registrar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.9(c)].

The bond must be executed by an admitted insurer in favor of the State of California and must be for the benefit of specified persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.10].

[5] Bond to Secure Payment of Unsatisfied Judgment or Arbitration Award

As a condition precedent to the issuance, reinstatement, or reactivation of a license, and in addition to the normal contractor's bond, an applicant previously found to have failed or refused to pay a contractor, subcontractor, consumer, materials supplier, or employee based on an unsatisfied final judgment must have filed or have on file with the Contractors' State License Board a contractor's bond or other security sufficient to guarantee payment of an amount equal to the unsatisfied judgment or judgments [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(a)]. The Board is required to include on the license application a statement, to be made under penalty of perjury, as to whether there are any unsatisfied final judgments against the applicant [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(a)]. If it is found that the applicant falsified the statement, then the license will be retroactively suspended to the date of issuance and will stay suspended until the judgment bond is filed. The bond must be on file for a minimum period of one year, after which it may be removed on submission of proof that all debts have been satisfied. In lieu of filing a bond, the licensee may provide the Board with a notarized copy of any accord reached with the creditor holding an unsatisfied final judgment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(a)]. Failure to maintain the bond or to abide by the accord will result in automatic suspension of the license by operation of law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(c)].

A licensee is responsible for notifying the registrar of any unsatisfied final judgments within 90 days of judgment. Failure to do so will result in automatic suspension of the license from the date the registrar is made aware of the judgment. The suspension will be removed only on proof that the judgment has been satisfied or when a notarized copy of an accord with the judgment creditor has been submitted to the registrar. Assuming the licensee complies with the requirement to notify the registrar of the existence of an unsatisfied judgment, the registrar will notify the licensee of the obligation to maintain a sufficient judgment bond. The licensee has 90 days from that notification to either file the bond or provide the Board with a copy of any accord reached with the judgment creditor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(b)].

A license that is suspended for failure to file or maintain the bond, or to abide by the accord, can only be reinstated on proof that all debts have been satisfied or when a notarized copy of an accord reached with the judgment creditor has been filed with the Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(d)].

If, when a license is due for renewal, the licensee submits proof that an outstanding judgment has been partially satisfied, the Board may authorize a reduction in the amount of the bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(g)].

The above rules apply only to an unsatisfied final judgment that is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the license being applied for [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(e)]. The rules do not apply to an applicant or licensee when a bankruptcy proceeding has been filed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17(f)].

[6] Disciplinary Contractor's Bond

As a condition precedent to the issuance, reissuance, renewal, or restoration of a license to the applicant, or to the approval of an application to change officers of a corporation, or removal of suspension, or to the continued valid use of a license that has been suspended or revoked, but which suspension or revocation has been stayed, the applicant or licensee must file or have on file a contractor's bond in a sum to be fixed by the Registrar [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7011 (duties of registrar; repealed by its own terms on January 1, 2011, unless a subsequent statute that deletes or extends that date is enacted before January 1, 2011)]. The amount of the bond is determined by the seriousness of the violation. It will not be less than $15,000 or more than 10 times the amount required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.6 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8(b)]. This bond is in addition to, may not be combined with, and does not replace any other type of bond required by the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8(c)].

The bond must remain on file with the registrar for a period of at least two years, and for such additional time as the registrar may determine. The bond period will run only while the license is current, active, and in good standing, and will be extended until the license has been current, active, and in good standing for the required period. Each applicant or licensee will be required to file only one disciplinary contractor's bond for each application or license subject to the bond requirement [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8(c)].

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.85

§ 104.85 Claims Against Official Bond

[1] Liability of Contractor and Surety

The beneficiary may enforce the liability on a bond against both the principal and sureties [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.410(a)]. If the beneficiary is a class of persons, any person in the class may enforce the liability on a bond in the person's own name, without assignment of the bond [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.410(b)]. The aggregate liability of a surety to all persons for all breaches of the condition of a bond is limited to the amount of the bond. Except as otherwise provided by statute, the liability of the principal is not limited to the amount of the bond [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.470(a)]. Payment by a surety of the amount of a bond constitutes a full discharge of all liability of the surety on the bond [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.490(a)].

For further discussion of the liability of the principal and the sureties on a bond, see the Bond and Undertaking Law (Code Civ. Proc. § 995.010 et seq.) and Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings.

[2] Payment by Surety

If the surety desires to make payment without awaiting court action, the amount of any bond filed in compliance with the license law is reduced to the extent of any payment or payments made by the surety in good faith thereafter [see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.480(a)(1)]. Partial payment of a claim by a surety is not considered satisfaction of the claim, and the claimant may enforce the liability on the bond. If a contractor's license is suspended or revoked until payment of a claim, the license continues to be suspended or revoked until the claim is satisfied in full [see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.480(b)].

[3] Priority of Claims for Wages and Benefits

The claim of any employee of the contractor for wages and fringe benefits is a preferred claim against the bond. The aggregate liability of a surety on a claim for wages and fringe benefits brought against any bond required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065 et seq., other than a bond required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8 [see § 104.84[6]], may not exceed the sum of $4,000 [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(a)].

[4] Procedural Requirements

No license may be renewed, reissued, or reinstated while any judgment or admitted claim in excess of the amount of the bond remains unsatisfied [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(b)].

Except for claims to recover wages or fringe benefits [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(d) described below], any action against a bond (except a judgment bond resulting from an unsatisfied final judgment for failure to pay [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.17; see § 104.84[5]]) must be brought in accordance with the following limitations period [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(c)]:

> (1) Within two years after the expiration of the license period during which the act or omission occurred, provided the license has not been inactivated, canceled, or revoked during the period for which the bond was posted.
> (2) If the license has been inactivated, canceled, or revoked, within two years of the date the license of the active licensee would have expired had the license not been inactivated, canceled, or revoked, provided the omission for which the action was filed occurred before the license was inactivated, canceled, or revoked.
> (3) If the action is against a disciplinary bond filed by an active licensee, within the relevant period specified in (1) or (2), above, as applicable, or within two years after the last date for which a disciplinary bond was required [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.8; see § 104.84[6]].

A claim to recover wages or fringe benefits must be brought within six months from the date the wage or fringe benefit delinquencies were discovered, but in no event can a civil action on such a claim be brought later than two years from the date the wage or fringe benefit contributions were due [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(d)].

[5] Proportionate Distribution

If any bond that may be required is insufficient to pay all claims in full, the sum of the bond must be distributed to all claimants in proportion to the amount of their respective claims [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(a); see § 104.85[3]].

[6] Legal Fees

Legal fees may not be charged against the bond by the Contractors' State License Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(i); see Bus. Prof. Code § 7000.5 (repealed by its own terms on January 1, 2011, unless a subsequent statute that deletes or extends that date is enacted before January 1, 2011)]. However, this means only that the Board may not charge for its legal fees in enforcing the disciplinary or bonding provisions of the license law [Boliver v. Surety Co. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 22, 32-33 , 140 Cal. Rptr. 259 (surety was not exempted from liability for attorney's fees awarded to homeowner in action against contractor)].

[7] Surety's Notice to Registrar of Payments Made and Effect on Licensee

When the surety makes payment on any claim against a bond required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7065 et seq., whether payment is made through a court action or otherwise, the surety must, within 30 days of the payment, notify the registrar. The notice must contain all of the following information by declaration, on a form prescribed by the registrar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(e)]:

- The contractor's name and license number;

- The surety bond number;
- The amount of payment;
- The statutory basis on which the claim is made;
- The names of the person or persons to whom payments have been made; and
- Whether or not the payments were the result of the surety's good faith action.

The notice must also clearly indicate whether or not the licensee filed a protest, as discussed below [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(e)].

Before a claim is settled through a good faith payment by the surety, a licensee has not less than 15 days in which to provide the surety with a written protest. The protest must instruct the surety not to make payment from the bond on the licensee's account on the specific ground that the licensee opposes the claim. The protest must also provide a specific and reasonable basis for the licensee's opposition to payment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(f)].

When a licensee files a protest, the Board must investigate the matter and file disciplinary action if there is evidence that the surety has sustained a loss as the result of a good faith payment made for purposes of mitigating any damages incurred by a person or entity covered by the bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(f)(1); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.5(a)-(e)].

Any licensee that does not file a protest has 90 days from the date of notification by the Board to submit proof that it has paid the actual amount owed to the surety and, if appropriate, proof that it has paid any judgment or admitted claim in excess of the bond's amount. If proof of payment is not submitted, the licensee's license will be suspended by operation of law at the end of the 90 days [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(f)(2)].

The license may not be renewed, reissued, or reinstated while any judgment or admitted claim in excess of the amount of the bond remains unsatisfied. In addition, the license may not be renewed, reissued, or reinstated while any surety remains unreimbursed for loss and expense sustained on any bond issued for the licensee or for any entity of which any officer, director, member, partner, or qualifying person was an officer, director, member, partner, or qualifying personof the licensee while the licensee was subject to suspension or disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(g)].

The licensee and surety may reach an accord to satisfy the debt in lieu of full payment, in which case the licensee should provide the Board with a notarized copy of the accord. Failure to abide by the accord will result in the automatic suspension of the license by operation of law. A license that is suspended for failure to abide by the accord may only be renewed or reinstated on presentation of proof that all debts have been satisfied [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7071.11(h)].

§ 104.86 Discipline

[1] Grounds for Discipline

Violations of the license law that may give rise to disciplinary action by the Contractors' State License Board may be divided into the following general categories:

- Violations involving performance of work or payment of money [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7107, 7108, 7108.5, 7109, 7113, 7113.5, 7119, 7120, 7123.5; see Tellis v. Contractors' State License Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 153, 159-160, 163, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734 (discipline was proper for willful departure from trade standards and failure to complete project for price stated in contract); Viking Pools, Inc. v. Maloney (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 602, 609, 257 Cal. Rptr. 320, 770 P.2d 732 (failure to honor express warranty constituted abandonment of project); All Bay Mill & Lumber Co. v. Surety Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 11, 16, 255 Cal. Rptr. 790 (supplier may not recover for violation of § 7108 unless causal link between contractor's failure to account and resulting damage is established); Linda Jones General Builder v. Contractors' State License Board (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1320, 1325, 240 Cal. Rptr. 180 (willful departure from plans is permissible if done with consent of owner)];

- Violations of safety standards [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7109.5, 7110, 7110.5];

- Violations of administrative and licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7111(a), 7111.1, 7115, 7117.5, 7117.6, 7118, 7121, 7123]; and

- Violations involving fraud and misrepresentation [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7112, 7114, 7114.1, 7116, 7117, 7118.4, 7125(b)].

[2] Disciplinary Powers of Registrar and Board

[a] Availability

The registrar is authorized to investigate the actions of any licensed contractor or applicant for licensure, and to take appropriate disciplinary action as provided by the license law for the protection of the general public [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7090; West v. State (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 753, 764, 227 Cal. Rptr. 16] . The Registrar is not precluded from taking disciplinary action against a licensee by the fact that the licensee has corrected the conditions resulting from a fraudulent act that constitutes a ground for disciplinary action under the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7090.5]. Similarly, if a licensee has engaged in repeated acts that would have been grounds for disciplinary action except that the licensee avoided discipline for each individual act by correcting the conditions resulting from those acts, the registrar may nonetheless take disciplinary action against the licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7090.5].

The expiration, cancellation, forfeiture, suspension, or voluntary surrender of a license does not deprive the registrar of jurisdiction over any investigation of or disciplinary proceeding against a licensee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7106.5].

[b] Citation or Injunction

As an alternative to commencing disciplinary proceedings when an applicant or licensee has committed acts or omissions that are grounds for denial, revocation, or suspension of a contractor's license, the registrar may issue a written citation containing an order for correction and an assessment of a civil penalty [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7099; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7099.3-7099.5 (procedure for contesting citation), 7099.7 (civil penalty may not be assessed against bond)]. The citation procedure may also be applied to an unlicensed person acting in the capacity of a contractor who is not otherwise exempt from the provisions of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.6]. The failure of an unlicensed contractor to comply with a final citation is a misdemeanor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.17(a)].

If the license of a partnership, corporation, firm, or association is cited, any member, officer, director, or associate who becomes disassociated from the entity's license is nonetheless responsible for complying with the citation if he or she had knowledge of, or participated in, any of the acts for which the citation was issued. Failure of such a person to comply with the citation after it is final constitutes grounds for disciplinary action [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121.1; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7121]. Similarly, a qualifying partner, responsible managing officer, or responsible managing employee who becomes disassociated from a license after the act or omission has occurred that resulted in a citation is also not relieved from complying with the citation. Furthermore, if the partner, manager, or employee fails to comply with the citation after it is final, he or she is subject to disciplinary action by the registrar whether or not he or she had knowledge of or participated in the act or omission for which the citation was issued [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7122.1; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7122.5].

In addition to all other remedies provided by law, the registrar may seek aninjunction restraining the activities of any contractor who acts in violation of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7028.3; see § 104.259].

The preponderance of the evidence standard applies in an administrative citation proceeding when the only potential sanctions were orders of correction and civil penalties, and there is no potential for the restriction, suspension, or revocation of the contractor's license [Owen v. Sands (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 985, 993, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 167]. The applicable standard of proof depends on the nature of the fundamental vested property right at issue in a licensee disciplinary case. The procedural safeguards the due process clause requires in an administrative proceeding are not solely based on whether the proceeding is "disciplinary." Instead, the necessary procedural safeguards are determined through a balancing test, which includes assessing the weight of the private interest that will be affected by the official action. Licensed contractors cited for violations and subject only to sanctions such as correction orders or monetary penalties are not entitled to the same procedural safeguards afforded to contractors who face restriction, suspension, or revocation of their licenses [Owen v. Sands (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 985, 992-993, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 167].

[c] Application of Administrative Procedure Act

Disciplinary proceedings are governed by the provisions of the California Administrative Adjudication Act (also known as the Administrative Procedure Act) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7091(f); see Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.]. For discussion and forms for use in proceedings under the Act, see Ch. 473, Public Agency Adjudication, et seq.

[3] Judicial Review of Disciplinary Proceedings

The decision of the registrar in a disciplinary proceeding is subject to judicial review [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5]. The applicant or licensee is entitled to present to the reviewing court any relevant evidence in addition to that received by the registrar in the administrative hearing [Contractors' State License Board v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 557, 561-562, 10 Cal. Rptr. 95] . Because the Contractors' State License Board lacks judicial power, the findings of the registrar will not be given res judicata effect in the superior court proceedings, and administrative orders will not be permitted to interfere with the determination of the action by the court or to irreparably injure the contractor [Contractors' State License Board v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 557, 561, 10 Cal. Rptr. 95] . The court may issue a stay of the disciplinary proceeding, in which case the contractor must file a bond with the court pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 7100, and the judgment of the court will be res judicata in the disciplinary action [Contractors' State License Board v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 557, 562, 10 Cal. Rptr. 95] .

§ 104.87 Arbitration of Alleged Violations

In the case of certain specified violations, the registrar may, with the concurrence of both the licensee and the complainant, refer the complaint to arbitration pursuant to the provisions of the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7085(a)]. Comprehensive procedural rules governing administrative arbitration are set forth by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7085.5]. Arbitration is mandatory if the contract price or demand for damages is equal to or less than the amount of the required bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7085(b)]. An arbitration award is deemed to be an order of the Registrar [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7085.2]. As such, it is subject to review by the Contractors' State License Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7013]. An arbitration award may also be enforced by means of legal action taken pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 et seq., governing enforcement of arbitration awards generally [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7085.7; see generally Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review].

The disassociation of any qualifying partner, responsible managing officer, or responsible managing employee from a license that has been referred to arbitration will not relieve that partner, officer, or employee from responsibility for complying with an arbitration award rendered as a result of acts or omissions committed while he or she was acting as the qualifying partner, responsible managing officer, or responsible managing employee [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7122.2(a)].

§ 104.100 Governing Law

The home improvement business is governed by the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150 et seq., which are part of the Contractors' State License Law ("the license law") (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.). Swimming pool contracts and contractors are governed by the statutes that govern home improvement contracts and contractors generally [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7150.1, 7151], except that certain statutory provisions apply specifically to swimming pool contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7165-7168; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7166 (nonapplicability of statutes to certain swimming pool contracts)].

Home improvement contracts may also be regulated by other consumer protection laws such as the Unruh Retail Installment Sales Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) and the federal Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.), which are discussed in Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

§ 104.101 Definitions

[1] Person

As used in the provisions of the license law governing home improvement contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150 et seq.], the term "person" is limited to natural persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150; cf. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7025 ("person," as used in other provisions of license law, as including individuals, firms, copartnerships, corporations, associations, or other organizations, or any combination of the above)].

[2] Home Improvement Contractor

A "home improvement contractor," including a swimming pool contractor, is a contractor licensed under the provisions of the license law who is engaged in the business of home improvement either full-time or part-time [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150.1]. A home improvement contractor, whether engaged in the business of home improvement full-time or part-time, must be licensed under the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150.1]. On and after July 1, 2000, a contractor may not engage in the home improvement business or provide home improvement goods or services unless he or she is certified as a home improvement contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150.2(c)]. To qualify for certification, an applicant must [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150.3(a)]:

- Hold a valid contractor's license;
- Apply for certification on a prescribed form; and
- Take and pass an open book examination.

Although they are not contractors within the meaning of that term under the license law, home improvement salespeople [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7152(a)] are subject to registration requirements and other regulations under the license law [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7153.1; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7152(b) (exceptions), and § 104.101[3]]. For discussion of the persons covered by the term "contractor," see § 104.70 et seq.

[3] Home Improvement Salesperson

A "home improvement salesperson" is a person employed by a home improvement contractor licensed under the provisions of the license law to solicit, sell, negotiate, or execute contracts for home improvements, for the sale, installation, or furnishing of home improvement goods or services, or of swimming pools, spas, or hot tubs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7152(a)].

Home improvement salespersons are required to be registered with the Contractor's State License Board [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7153.1; see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7153.2, 7153.3 (renewal of registration)], except for the following persons [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7152(b)]:

- Officers of record of a contractors' corporation;

- General partners listed on the license records of partnerships licensed under laws governing the home improvement business;

- Qualifying persons [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7068];

- Salespersons whose sales are all made pursuant to negotiations between the parties, if the negotiations are initiated by the prospective buyer at or with a general merchandise retail establishment that operates from a fixed location where goods or services are offered for sale;

- Persons who contact the prospective buyer for the exclusive purpose of scheduling appointments for a registered home improvement salesperson; and

- Bona fide service repairpersons who are in the employ of a licensed contractor and whose repair or service calls are limited to the service, repair, or emergency repair initially requested by the buyer of the service.

The registration exemption for licensed corporate officers, general partners listed on the license record of a licensed partnership, and persons who qualify as contractors on behalf of other firms or individuals, applies only to those who, at the time of the sales transaction, are listed as personnel of record for the licensee responsible for soliciting, negotiating, or contracting for a service or improvement that is subject to regulation under the home improvement business statutes [Bus. & Prof. § 7152(c); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7150 et seq.].

It is a misdemeanor for any person not exempt from the registration requirement to engage in the occupation of salesperson of home improvement goods or services within California without having a registration issued by the Registrar, or to engage in the occupation of salesperson for one or more home improvement contractors within California without having a registration issued by the Registrar for each of the contractors by whom he or she is employed as a salesperson [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7153(a)].

Any security interest taken by a contractor to secure payment pursuant to a contract for home improvement good or services that is performed on or after January 1, 1995, is unenforceable if the person soliciting the act or contract was not a duly registered salesperson or was not exempt from registration when the homeowner signed the home improvement contract solicited by the salesperson [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7153(b)].

[4] Home Improvement Contract

A "home improvement contract" is an agreement, whether oral or written, or contained in one or more documents, between a contractor and an owner or between a contractor and a tenant, regardless of the number of residence or dwelling units contained in the building in which the tenant resides, if the work is to be performed in, to, or on the residence or dwelling unit of the tenant, for the performance of a home improvement, and includes all labor, services, and materials to be furnished and performed under the contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151.2; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(b)].

"Home improvement contract" also means an agreement, whether oral or written, or contained in one or more documents, between a salesperson, whether or not he or she is a home improvement salesperson, and an owner or a tenant, regardless of the number of residence or dwelling units contained in the building in which the tenant resides, which provides for the sale, installation, or furnishing of home improvement goods or services [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7151.2, 7159(b)].

[5] Home Improvement

"Home improvement" means the repairing, remodeling, altering, converting, or modernizing of, or adding to, residential property and includes, but is not limited to, the construction, erection, replacement, or improvement of driveways, swimming pools (including spas and hot tubs) [but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7166], terraces, patios, awnings, storm windows, landscaping, fences, porches, garages, fallout shelters, basements, and other improvements of the structures or land adjacent to a dwelling house. "Home improvement" also means the installation of home improvement goods or the furnishing of home improvement services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151].

[6] Home Improvement Goods or Services

For purposes of the license law, "home improvement goods or services" means goods and services that are bought in connection with the improvement of real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151]. "Goods" means tangible chattels bought for use primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, including certificates or coupons exchangeable for the goods, and including goods that, at the time of sale or subsequently, are to be so affixed to real property as to become a part of the real property whether or not severable from it [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151; Civ. Code § 1689.5(c)]. "Services" means work, labor, and services, including, but not limited to, services furnished in connection with the repair, restoration, alteration, or improvement of residential premises, or services furnished in connection with the sale or repair of goods as defined by the Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 1802.1], and courses of instruction, regardless of the purpose for which they are taken [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151; Civ. Code § 1689.5(d)]. But the term "services" does not include (1) services of attorneys, real estate brokers and salespersons, or (2) financial services offered by banks, savings institutions, credit unions, industrial loan companies, personal property brokers, consumer finance lenders, or commercial finance lenders, organized pursuant to state or federal law, which are not connected with the sale of goods or services, or the sale of insurance that is not connected with the sale of goods or services as defined above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151; Civ. Code § 1689.5(d)].

Home improvement goods and services include, but are not limited to, carpeting, texture coating, fencing, air conditioning or heating equipment, and termite extermination. Home improvement goods include goods that are to be so affixed to real property as to become a part of real property whether or not severable from the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151].

[7] Service and Repair Contract

A service and repair contract is an agreement between a general or specialty contractor, or salesperson for such a contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(f)], who is licensed or subject to be licensed with regard to the transaction, and a homeowner or a tenant, for the performance of a home improvement. A service and repair contract must conform to the following requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(1)]:

- The contract amount can be no more than $750;

- The prospective buyer must initiate contact with the contractor to request the work;

- The contractor may not sell the buyer goods or services beyond those reasonably necessary to take care of the particular problem that caused the buyer to contact the contractor; and

- No payment will be due, or accepted by the contractor, until the work is completed [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(2) (meaning of "work is completed")].

Service and repair contracts are governed by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 1759.10-1759.14 rather than Bus. & Prof. Code § 1759, which applies to "home improvement contracts" [Bus. & Prov. Code § 1759(a)(2); see § 104.101[4] ("home improvement contract" defined)].

§ 104.102 Home Improvement Contracts Subject to Content Requirements

[1] Necessity for Writing

While Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159, which sets forth the content requirements for a home improvement contract, provides that such contracts may be oral or written, there is no practical way to satisfy those requirements in the absence of a writing, although the contract may consist of more than one document. Thus, the following discussion assumes a writing is required for a home improvement contract that is between a contractor and an owner or between a contractor and a tenant, regardless of the number of residence or dwelling units contained in the building in which the owner or tenant resides, if [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(b)]:

- The work is to be performed in, to, or on the owner's or tenant's residence or dwelling unit.

- The contract is for the performance of a home improvement, and includes all labor, services, and materials to be furnished and performed by the contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151 ("home improvement" defined)].

- The aggregate contract price specified in the contract, including all labor, services, and materials to be furnished by the contractor exceeds $500.

A writing is also required for an agreement between a salesperson, whether or not he or she is a home improvement salesperson, and an owner or tenant, regardless of the number of residence or dwelling units contained the building in which the owner or tenant resides, which provides for the sale, installation, or furnishing of home improvement goods or services [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(b); see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7151, 7152 ("home improvement goods and services" and "home improvement salesperson" defined)].

The home improvement contract content requirements do not apply to (1) service and repair contracts, which are subject to their own requirements [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10; see also § 104.103], or (2) contracts for the sale, installation, and servicing of a fire alarm sold in conjunction with an alarm system, provided all costs attributable to making the system operable do not exceed $500, and the licensee complies with the requirements that are specific to the sale, installation, and servicing of fire alarm systems [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(a)(3), (4); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.9].

A licensee, his or her agent or salesperson, or a person subject to the contractor's licensing requirements, who fails to provide the required information, notices, and disclosures in the contract, or who otherwise fails to comply with any of the content requirements, is subject to discipline by the Contractors' State License Board (CSLB) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(a)(5)].

Notwithstanding the statutory requirement that a home improvement contract be in writing, recovery may be allowed on an oral home improvement contract. The cases that have allowed the contractor to enforce the oral contract have involved improvements to properties owned by sophisticated investors who were friends or social acquaintances of the contractor [Asdourian v. Araj (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 276, 291-294, 211 Cal. Rptr. 703, 696 P.2d 95 ; Calwood Structures, Inc. v. Herskovic (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 519, 521-522, 164 Cal. Rptr. 463 (Asdourian specifically disapproved Calwood Structures to the extent it held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159 excludes additional penalties by implication)]. Similarly, a contractor was allowed to recover for work done pursuant to oral changes requested by an owner who was a partner in a real estate investment and development firm [Davenport & Co. v. Spieker (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 566, 570-571, 242 Cal. Rptr. 911] .

[2] General Requirements

A home improvement contract must be legible, or if it is printed, it must be readable and printed in at least 10-point typeface with 10-point boldface headings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(1), (2)]. Before work is commenced, the contractor must give the buyer a copy of the contract signed and dated by both parties [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(d)(4)]. Because the buyer's receipt of the copy initiates the buyer's cancellation rights, the first page must include the date the buyer signed the contract along with the contractor's name and address to which a Notice of Cancellation must be mailed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(3)].

The contract must also include a statement that, on satisfactory payment being made for partial performance, the contractor must, before any further payment is made, furnish a person contracting for home improvement or swimming pool work a full and unconditional release from any potential lien claimant or mechanics' lien authorized for the portion for the work for which payment has been made [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(4)].

A change-order form for changes or extra work must be incorporated into and become part of the contract only if it is in writing and signed by the parties before any work covered by the change order has begun [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(5)]. In close proximity to the parties' signatures, there must be a notice stating that the owner or tenant has the right to require the contractor to have a performance and payment bond [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(6)]. A contract, the primary purpose of which is to construct a swimming pool, which does not substantially comply with either of these requirements, is void and unenforceable by the contractor as contrary to public policy. However, the contractor's failure to satisfy the change-order form requirement will not preclude him or her from recovering compensation for work performed based on quasi-contract, quantum meruit, restitution, or other similar legal or equitable remedies designed to prevent unjust enrichment [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7167].

If the contract provides for a contractor to furnish joint control, the contractor may not have any financial or other interest in the joint control [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)(7)].

As described in § 104.102[3], home improvement contracts have other, very specific, requirements for disclosures and other information that must be included in the writing.

For forms that conform to the requirements for written home improvement contracts, see California Legal Forms, Ch.

89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[3] Specific Requirements

A home improvement contract must include all of the following information [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(d)]:

(1) The contractor's name, business address, and license number.

(2) If applicable, the name and registration number of any home improvement salesperson that solicited or negotiated the contract.

(3) The heading "Home Improvement" in at least 10-point boldface type.

(4) A 12-point boldface statement informing the buyer that he or she is entitled to a completely filled-in and signed copy of the contract before work may be started.

(5) The heading "Contract Price" followed by the amount of the contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(1)].

(6) If applicable, the heading "Finance Charge" followed by the amount of the charge [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(2)].

(7) The heading "Description of the Project and Description of the Significant Materials to be Used and Equipment to be Installed" followed by that information, including if relevant, a plan and scale drawing of any swimming pool to be installed including the construction and equipment specifications.

(8) If a down payment will be charged, it may not exceed the lesser of $1,000 or 10 percent of the contract price and its details must be set forth in a statutory format [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(d)(8)(A)-(C); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(3) (down payment limitation)].

(9) If any progress payments are to be made, the contract must include (a) a schedule of those payments with specific reference to the amount of each payment and the amount of work or services to be performed and any materials and equipment to be supplied in connection with each payment; and (b) a statutorily-prescribed statement informing the buyer about the nature of the schedule with a notice that, while a contractor may require a down payment, it is unlawful for the contractor to collect payment for work not completed or materials not yet delivered [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7159(d)(9)(C), 7159.5(a)(4), (5)].

(10) The heading "Approximate Start Date" followed by a statement describing what constitutes substantial commencement of work and an approximate date for that commencement.

(11) The heading "Approximate Completion Date" followed by that date.

(12) If applicable, the heading "List of Documents to be Incorporated Into the Contract" followed by that list.

(13) The heading "Note About Extra Work and Change Orders" followed by a statutorily-prescribed statement informing the buyer of the nature and effect of change orders [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(d)(13)].

A contractor who furnishes a payment and performance bond, lien and completion bond, or a bond equivalent or joint control approved by the registrar covering full performance and payment is exempt from the downpayment limitation described in (8), above, as well as the details and statement regarding progress payments specified in (9), above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(8)].

If the contract provides for a payment of a salesperson's commission out of the contract price, that payment must be made on a pro rata basis in proportion to the schedule of progress payments described in (9), above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(7)].

A contract, the primary purpose of which is to construct a swimming pool, which does not substantially comply with the requirements enumerated in (7)-(9), above, is void and unenforceable by the contractor as contrary to public policy [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7167(a)].

[4] Required Notices

Notices concerning the following subject matter must be either included as part of the contract form, or, if otherwise specified, provided as an attachment to the form [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)]:

(1) Commercial general liability insurance.

(2) Workers' compensation insurance.

(3) Information concerning the performance of extra or change-order work.

(4) A mechanic's lien warning the wording of which is prescribed by statute [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(4)].

(5) Information about the role of the CSLB, including how to contact the Board.

(6) If applicable, a notice informing the buyer that he or she has three days within which to cancel the contract, the effect of which would be to place the parties in their pre-contract positions [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(6)(B) (wording of notice); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(6)(C) (format and location of notice in contract)]. The three-day notice is required unless (a) the contract is negotiated in the contractor's place of business; (b) the contract is to repair or restore residential premises damaged by a sudden or catastrophic event; or (c) the contractor is subject to licensure under the Alarm Company Act [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(6)(A); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7590 et seq.].

(7) If the contract involves repairing or restoring a residence damaged or destroyed by a sudden or catastrophic event for which a state of emergency has been declared, a notice informing the buyer that he or she has seven days within which to cancel the contract, the effect of which would be to place the parties in their pre-contract positions [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(7)(A) (wording of notice); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(e)(7)(B) (format and location of notice in contract)].

A contractor who furnishes a payment and performance bond, lien and completion bond, or a bond equivalent or joint control approved by the registrar covering full performance and payment need not include the mechanics' lien warning described in (4), above [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(8)].

In addition, any person entering into an agreement to build a swimming pool in connection with a single family residence must give the owner notice of the requirements of the Swimming Pool Safety Act [Health & Safety Code §§ 115920-115927], which imposes requirements related to pool covers, enclosures, and alarms [Health & Safety Code §

115924].

A contractor or installer who installs security or "burglar" bars on residential dwellings must provide a dwelling owner with specified warning information regarding the fire safety ramifications of security bars before installing bars on the dwelling [Health & Safety Code § 13113.9; see 19 Cal. Code Reg. § 4.3 (warning information)].

[5] Release for Partial Payment

On any payment by the buyer, and before any further payment is made, the contractor must, at the other buyer's request, obtain and furnish a full and unconditional release from any potential lien claimant claim or authorized mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3110] for any part of the work for which payment has been made. The buyer may withhold all further payments until these releases are furnished [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)(6)].

[6] Penalties for Violation of Requirements

Failure by a licensee, or a person subject to be licensed under the Contractor's State License Law, or by his or her agent or salesperson to provide the required information, notices, and disclosures in a contract, or to comply with them is cause for discipline [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a)]. In addition, misrepresentation of, or failure to include, the contract price, violation of the down payment limitations, or requesting or accepting payment that exceeds the value of work performed or material delivered is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of between $100 and $5,000 and/or imprisonment for up to one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(b)].

Any person who violates the requirements described in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(a), which generally relate to the contract requirements for contract price, finance charge, down payment, and progress payments, as part of a plan or scheme to defraud an owner or tenant of a residential or nonresidential structure, including a mobilehome or manufactured home, in connection with the offer or performance of repairs to the structure for damage caused by a natural disaster, will be ordered to make full restitution to the victim based on the person's ability to pay, as defined in Penal Code § 1203.1b(e). In addition to full restitution, and imprisonment for up to one year, the court may impose a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $25,000, also based on the defendant's ability to pay. This applies to natural disasters for which the governor proclaims a state of emergency, or for which an emergency or major disaster is declared by the President of the United States [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.5(c)].

PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Home Improvement and Service and Repair Contracts

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.103

§ 104.103 Content Requirements for Service and Repair Contracts

[1] General Requirements

A service and repair contract is an agreement between a general or specialty contractor, or salesperson for such a contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(f)], who is licensed or subject to be licensed with regard to the transaction, and a homeowner or a tenant, for the performance of a home improvement that meets the following conforming requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(1)]:

- The contract amount can be no more than $750;
- The prospective buyer must initiate contact with the contractor to request the work;
- The contractor may not sell the buyer goods or services beyond those reasonably necessary to take care of the particular problem that caused the buyer to contact the contractor; and
- No payment will be due, or accepted by the contractor, until the work is completed [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(2) (meaning of "work is completed")].

If all of these conforming requirements are not met, the requirements for a "home improvement contract" will apply, including any rights to rescind, regardless of the aggregate contract price [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(b); Civ. Code § 1689.6(a)(3)(B); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159(c)-(e) (applicable home improvement contract requirements); Civ. Code §§ 1689.6, 1689.7 (applicable rescission rights); see also § 104.102].

If all of the conforming requirements are met, the notices and requirements described in § 104.102[2] apply to the contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(c)].

For forms that conform to the requirements for service and repair contracts, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 89, Home Improvement and Specialty Contracts (Matthew Bender).

[2] Specific Requirements

A service and repair contract and any changes or attachments to the contract must be in written in the same language as was principally used in the oral sales presentation and signed or acknowledged by the parties. If the contract is written, it must be legibly written. If it is printed, it must be readable and in at least 10-point typeface with 10-point boldface headings [Bus. & Prof. Code § 1759.10(d)(1)-(3)].

Before work is started, the contractor must give the buyer a copy of the contract signed by both parties with the contractor's name, business address, and license number, and the date it was signed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(d)(4)-(6)].

The contract must include the following information, notices, and disclosures [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.20(d)(7), (8), (e); but see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(g) (contractor not relieved from compliance with other applicable laws)]:

(1) A notice, which may be provided as an attachment, with the heading "Commercial General Liability Insurance" followed by a prescribed statement indicating whether or not the contractor carries such insurance, or is self-insured.

(2) A notice, which may be provided as an attachment, with the heading "Workers' Compensation Insurance" followed by a prescribed statement indicating whether the contractor carries such insurance or is exempt.

(3) A heading "Service and Repair" in at least 10-point boldface type.

(4) A "Notice to the Buyer" in at least 12-point boldface type informing the buyer of the conforming requirements for a service and repair contract [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(1)(A)-(D)].

(5) A12-point boldface notice informing the buyer of his or her right to a completely filled in and signed copy of the contract before work begins.

(6) If applicable, a "List of Documents to be Incorporated Into the Contract."

(7) When the contract is for a fixed amount, the heading "Contract Price" followed by the relevant amount.

(8) If there will be a finance charge, the heading "Finance Charge" followed by the amount, which must be set out separately from the contract amount.

(9) If the contract is estimated by a time and materials formula, the heading "Estimated Contract Price" followed by the estimated contract amount. The contract must disclose the set rate and estimated cost of materials. It also must disclose how time will be computed, e.g., in increments of quarter hours, half hours, or hours, and the statement: "The actual contract amount of a time and materials contract may not exceed the estimated contract amount without written authorization from the buyer."

(10) The heading "Description of the Project and Materials to be Used and Equipment to be Installed" followed by that description.

(11) A prescribed statement informing the buyer that the contractor is obligated to offer the buyer any replaced parts with a checkbox to be initialed if the buyer does not want the parts.

(12) If applicable, the heading "Amount of Service Charge" followed by the service charge and a prescribed statement informing the buyer that he or she may be charged only one service charge.

(13) In immediate proximity to the space reserved for the buyer's signature, a 12-point boldface notice, the wording of which is prescribed by statute, informing the buyer of his or her cancellation rights. The notice may be included as an attachment in which case it must be signed and dated by the buyer [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(e)(12)(C); see also Civ. Code § 1689.6(a) (cancellation rights)].

The notice of cancellation rights described in (13), above, informs the buyer that he or she may cancel the contract anytime before work begins. Even after work has begun, the buyer may cancel within three business days of signing a contract for normal service and repairs, or within seven business if the contract is to repair and correct conditions resulting from a sudden or catastrophic event for which a state of emergency has been declared, if the contract does not conform to any of the four basic requirements for a service and repair contract specified by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(a)(1)(A)-(D). The right to cancel may be exercised by email, postal mail, fax, or personal deliver to the contractor at his or her place of business with the relevant three- or seven-day period. The cancellation must include the buyer's name, address, and the date he or she received a signed copy of the copy and the notice of cancellation rights. The effect of cancellation is to return the parties to their pre-contract positions [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(e)(12)(A)]. The cancellation notice does not apply to home improvement contracts entered into by a licensed alarm company operator provided the operator complies with the cancellation provisions applicable to such contracts under the law governing home solicitation contracts [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.10(e)(12)(B); see Civ. Code §§ 1689.5-1689.7].

[3] Release for Partial Payment

On any payment by buyer, the contractor must, at the buyer's request, obtain and furnish a full and unconditional release from any potential lien claimant claim or authorized mechanics' lien [see Civ. Code § 3110] for any part of the work for which payment has been made [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.14(a)(11)].

[4] Penalties for Violation of Requirements

Failure by a licensee, or a person subject to be licensed under the Contractor's State License Law, or by his or her agent or salesperson to provide the required information, notices, and disclosures in a contract, or to comply with them is cause for discipline [Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7159.11, 7159.14(a)]. In addition, misrepresentation of, or failure to include the contract price, violation of the down payment limitations, or requesting or accepting payment that exceeds the value of work performed or material delivered is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of between $100 and $5,000 and/or imprisonment for up to one year [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.14(b)].

Any person who violates the requirements described in (3)-(7) in the list in § 104.103[2], as part of a plan or scheme to defraud an owner or tenant of a residential or nonresidential structure, including a mobilehome or manufactured home, in connection with the offer or performance of repairs to the structure for damage caused by a natural disaster, will be ordered to make full restitution to the victim based on the person's ability to pay, as defined in Penal Code § 1203.1b(e). In addition to full restitution, and imprisonment for up to one year, the court may impose a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $25,000, also based on the defendant's ability to pay. This applies to natural disasters for which the Governor proclaims a state of emergency, or for which an emergency or major disaster is declared by the President of the United States [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.14(c)].

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART II. LEGAL BACKGROUND
D. Home Improvement and Service and Repair Contracts

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.104

§ 104.104 Financing Provisions

[1] Enforceability

"Home improvement" as used in the following provisions means "home improvement" as that term is defined in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7151. Goods are included within the definition whether or not they are to be attached to real property or so affixed to real property as to become a part of the real property [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(e)].

No home improvement contract is enforceable against the buyer if obtaining a loan for all or a portion of the contract price is a condition precedent to the contract, or if the contractor provides financing or in any manner assists the buyer in obtaining a loan or refers the buyer to any person who may loan, or arrange a loan for, all or part of the contract price, unless all the following conditions are met [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(a)]:

- The third party, if any, agrees to make the loan;
- The buyer agrees to accept the loan or financing; and
- The buyer does not rescind the loan or financing transaction, within the rescission period prescribed in the federal Truth in Lending Act or Regulation Z, if applicable [see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales].

Until these three conditions are met, it is unlawful for the contractor to deliver any property, perform any services other than obtaining building permits or other similar services before the commencement of the home improvement for which no mechanic's lien can be claimed, or represent in any manner that the contract is enforceable or that the buyer has any obligation on the contract. A violation of this provision also renders the contract unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(b)].

An alternative set of conditions may be applied to swimming pool contracts to be financed by third-party lenders [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7165].

[2] Return of Property or Consideration Given by Buyer

If the contract is unenforceable for failure to satisfy required conditions [see § 104.104[1]], the contractor must immediately and without condition return all money, property, and other consideration given by the buyer. If the buyer gave property as consideration and the contractor does not or cannot return it, for whatever reason, the contractor must immediately return the greater of the property's fair market value or its value as designated in the contract. Nothing in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163 prohibits a contractor from receiving a down payment otherwise permitted by law, provided that the contractor returns the down payment in accordance with this provision if the contract is unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(c)].

[3] Payment for or Return of Property or Services Given by Contractor

Except as provided in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(d)(2) (discussed below), the buyer may retain without obligation in law or in equity any services or property provided pursuant to a contract that is unenforceable for failure to satisfy the conditions set forth in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(a) or (b) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(d)(1); see § 104.106[1]]. If the contract is unenforceable and the contractor has delivered property to the buyer, the buyer must make the property available for return to the contractor if all of the following requirements are satisfied [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(d)(2)]:

- The property can be practically returned to the contractor without causing damage to the buyer.

- The contractor, at the contractor's expense, first returns to the buyer any money, property, and other consideration taken by the contractor, provided that the property is returned in the condition that it was in immediately prior to its taking. If applicable, the contractor must, at its own expense, reinstall any property taken in the manner in which the property had been installed prior to its taking.

- The contractor, at its own expense, picks up the property within 60 days of the execution of the contract.

[4] Remedies as Nonexclusive

The rights and remedies provided to the buyer under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163 are nonexclusive and cumulative with regard to all other rights and remedies under other laws [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(f)].

[5] Waiver of Rights and Remedies

Any waiver of the provisions in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163 is contrary to public policy and is void and unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(g)]. Nonetheless, the buyer may waive the conditions of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(a) and (b) to the extent that the contract is executed in connection with the making of emergency repairs or services that are necessary for the immediate protection of persons or real or personal property. The buyer's waiver for emergency repairs or services must be in a dated written statement that (1) describes the emergency, (2) states that the contractor has informed the buyer of the provisions of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7163(a) and (b) and that the buyer waives those provisions, and (3) is signed by each owner of the property. Waivers made on printed forms are void and unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7163(g)].

[6] Unruh Act

The Unruh Act (Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.) governs retail installment contracts [see Civ. Code § 1802.6 ("retail installment contract" defined)] for the purchase of goods to be used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [Civ. Code § 1802.1] or services, including those furnished in connection with the improvement of real property, for other than a commercial or business use [Civ. Code § 1802.2]. The provisions of the Unruh Act are expressly made inapplicable to any contract or series of contracts providing for the construction, sale, or construction and sale of an entire residence, including a mobilehome, or all or part of a structure designed for commercial or industrial occupancy, with or without a parcel of real property or an interest in such a parcel; and to any sale of a lot or parcel of real property, including any site preparation incidental to the sale [Civ. Code § 1801.4]. Home improvement contracts do not fall under any of these descriptions, and may thus be subject to the Unruh Act if they involve installment payments.

The Unruh Act was designed to protect consumers from abusive credit practices. The protection, however, was not deemed by the Legislature to be necessary in transactions between equally competent business persons dealing with each other in arm's length transactions, and it was not the intent of the Legislature that consumer transactions be governed by the same principles that govern business transactions. Thus, transactions subject to the Unruh Act are ordinarily not subject to the provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code, and vice versa [see Cessna Finance Corp. v. Pivo (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 281, 287, 129 Cal. Rptr. 888 ; James Talcott, Inc. v. Gee (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 384, 386-387, 72 Cal. Rptr. 168] . However, transactions subject to the secured transaction provisions of the Uniform Commercial Code [Com. Code § 9101 et seq.] are subject to the provisions of the Unruh Act [see Com. Code § 9201(b)]. In the case of a conflict between the two statutory schemes, the provisions of the Unruh Act control [Com. Code § 9201(c)].

For a form of complaint by a purchaser against a contractor for violation of a provision of the Unruh Act, see § 104.311. For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales , and Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions .

[7] Federal Truth in Lending Act

The stated purposes of the federal Truth In Lending Act (15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.) are to assure a meaningful disclosure of credit terms so that consumers will be able to compare more readily the various credit terms available to them and avoid the uninformed use of credit, and to protect consumers against inaccurate and unfair credit billing and credit card practices [15 U.S.C. § 1601(a)]. The Truth in Lending Act applies to credit transactions in which goods or services are purchased primarily for personal, family, or household purposes [15 U.S.C. § 1602(h)].

Like the Unruh Act, which covers similar types of transactions [see § 104.133[10]], the Truth in Lending Act may apply to home improvement contracts that involve the extension of consumer credit. The Truth in Lending Act is inapplicable to credit transactions involving extensions of credit primarily for business, commercial, or agricultural purposes, or extensions of credit to governments, government agencies or instrumentalities, or organizations [15 U.S.C. § 1603(1)]. It is also not applicable to credit transactions, other than those in which a security interest is or will be acquired in real property or in personal property used or expected to be used as the consumer's principal dwelling, in which the total amount financed exceeds $25,000 [15 U.S.C. § 1603(3)].

For further discussion, see Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales .

[8] Requirements for Contracts Secured by Real Property

[a] General Requirements

No home improvement goods or services contract of $5,000 or less can provide for a security interest in real property, except for a mechanics' lien or other property interest that arises by operation of law. Any lien purported to be created by such a contract is void and unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.2(a)].

When a home improvement goods or services contract of more than $5,000 is secured by a mortgage or deed of trust on real property, the person or entity making the loan may pay the contractor only by an instrument payable to the borrower or jointly to the borrower and contractor; or if the borrower so elects, through a third-party escrow agent pursuant to the terms of a written agreement signed by the parties before the funds are disbursed [Bus. & Prof. Code §

7159.2(b)].

[b] Notice Requirement for Door-to-Door Sales

With specified exceptions, any contract for the sale of home improvement goods or services offered by door-to-door sale that contains or is secured by a lien on real property, must be accompanied by a notice in 18-point boldface type that informs the buyer that he or she may lose his or her house if any required payments are missed. A security interest created in any door-to-door sale contract that does not provide the notice is void and unenforceable [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.1].

The notice requirement does not apply to any of the following [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.1(a)-(c)]:

- Contracts subject to the Unruh Act [see Civ. Code § 1801 et seq.; see also § 104.133[10]];
- Mechanics' liens [see Civ. Code § 3109 et seq.; see also Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens]; and
- Home improvement goods or services contracts of $5,000 or less [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7159.2(a); see also § 104.106[8]].

Chapter 104 BUILDING CONTRACTS
PART III. RESEARCH GUIDE
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.134

§ 104.134 Decisions

[1] Architect's Certificate

Architect's certificate was not required when contract named two architects and stated performance was to be to their satisfaction, but owner later discharged both architects. Thomas Haverty Co. v. Jones (1921) 185 Cal. 285, 295, 296, 197 P. 105

Intent to confer on architect power to make legal interpretation of subcontract or resolve ambiguities in plans must be unequivocally expressed. Walnut Creek Elec. v. Reynolds Constr. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 511, 515, 69 Cal. Rptr. 667

[2] Bond

City entitled to recover under performance bond when developer failed to build contracted-for improvements, even though improvements were subsequently built by another developer. City of Merced v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1324, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 788

Recovery is proper under contractor's bond only if violation of Contractor's Licensing Law caused damage. All Bay Mill & Lumber Co. v. Surety Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 11, 17, 255 Cal. Rptr. 790

When contract was made part of performance bond, liquidated damages clause in contract was covered by bond, and surety was liable for liquidated damages even though contractor abandoned work and surety had to finish performance. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Berkeley (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 145, 150-154, 204 Cal. Rptr. 387

Lender who was defrauded into believing that person was contractor on job and loaned person money was not able to collect on contractor bond because person was neither contractor on job nor acting as contractor. Brown v. Surety Co. of Pacific (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 614, 619-622, 176 Cal. Rptr. 143

[3] Construction Defects

Civil engineer was not liable for defective construction notwithstanding engineer's signing of plans when plans omitted certain details of project not requiring his participation and engineer had not assumed responsibility for all aspects of project. Wynner v. Buxton (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 166, 176-178, 158 Cal. Rptr. 587

[4] Damages for Breach by Contractor

Sale of property after damage from construction defect did not assign cause of action for damage, and owner at time of damage had cause of action against contractor for damage. Vaughn v. Dame Construction Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 144, 148-149, 272 Cal. Rptr. 261

Damages for restoration costs in excess of diminution of value are proper if there is reason that is personal to owner for restoring original condition. Orndorff v. Christiana Community Builders (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 683, 687-688, 266 Cal. Rptr. 193

Damages for breach of contract involving construction and 25-year leaseback of building by defendant were based on discounted, present value of used building at end of 25-year lease rather than on full value of defendant's cost of constructing building. Sanders Construction Co. v. San Joaquin First Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 387, 397-400, 186 Cal. Rptr. 218

Measure of damages for contractor's breach of building contract was reasonable cost to plaintiff to finish work in accordance with contract. Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 993, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119

Measure of damages for contractor's breach of building contract included lost profits and prejudgment interest. Burnett & Doty Development Co. v. Phillips (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 384, 389-392, 148 Cal. Rptr. 569

[5] Excuses for Nonperformance

Building contract contained implied covenant that owner would not interfere with or prevent performance by contractor. Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 395, 199 P. 767

Moratorium imposed by ordinance did not provide excuse based on either impossibility or commercial frustration. G.W. Andersen Construction Co. v. Mars Sales (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 326, 334-339, 210 Cal. Rptr. 409

[6] Extra Work

Right of contractor who, acting reasonably, is misled by incorrect plans and specifications issued by another contracting party as basis for bids and who, as result, submits lower bid than he or she would otherwise have made, to recover under contract for extra work necessitated by incorrect plans and specifications. Coleman Engineering Co. v. North Am. Aviation, Inc. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 396, 404, 55 Cal. Rptr. 1, 420 P.2d 713

Measure of damages for extra work obtained by taking total cost of project and subtracting payments made was proper when assessment of costs as planned was difficult or impossible. State ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 25, 32-34, 231 Cal. Rptr. 382

Absence of change order as required by contract and acceptance of compensation by contractor did not preclude contractor's recovery of compensation for extra work when contractor was performing according to contract, owner thought otherwise and demanded that work be performed according to contract, contractor requested but did not receive clarification of owner's views, owner subsequently performed portion of work in manner different from contract requirements, and contractor thereafter finished work in that manner on assumption that owner's conduct amounted to authorization for change. Weeshoff Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 579, 582-594, 152 Cal. Rptr. 19

[7] Statute of Limitations

Ten-year statute of limitations for latent construction defects not subject to equitable tolling while promises or attempts to repair are pending. Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 363, 379, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 655, 73 P.3d 517 , disapproving Grange Debris Box & Wrecking Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 and Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Associates (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113

Homeowners' action against builder for latent construction defects was barred by 10-year statute of limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15; fact that builder owned home for year and a half between notice of completion and sale of property did not preclude builder from asserting Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 as defense. Gundogdu v. King Mai Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 310, 314-315, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 489

Ten-year limitations period for latent construction defects [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15] does not apply to contractor's indemnification claim against subcontractors based on willful misconduct and pursued using cross-complaint. Pine Terrace Apartments, LP v. Windscape, LLC (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1, 14-15, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 630

Although county landfill built on leased property was "improvement" within meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15, statute did not bar lessor's contractual and indemnification claims or claims to recover remediation costs arising out of contamination from landfill. San Diego Unified School Dist. v. County of San Diego (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 288, 309-311, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 796

Tolling provision in Code Civ. Proc. § 356 (when commencement of action is stayed by injunction or statutory prohibition, time of continuance of injunction or prohibition is not part of time limited for action's commencement) does not extend Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 10-year statute of limitations for bankruptcy stays occurring wholly within 10-year period. Inco Development Corp. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1014, 1021-1022, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872

Ten-year limitations period [Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15] is not tolled during period of repair after initial completion. FNB Mortgage Corp. v. Pacific General Group (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1116, 1132, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841

For purposes of 10-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15, statute begins to run after "substantial completion" of each individual change or addition that qualifies as an improvement, and four conditions listed in Section 337.15(g) do not define "substantial completion"; thus, action for subsidence damage by purchasers of lot in "lots only" development was barred because it was brought more than 10 years after grading was completed on lot, even though action was filed less than 10 years after notice of completion was filed. Nelson v. Gorian & Associates, Inc. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 93, 96, 97, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 345

If plaintiff obtains repairs by third party, 10-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15 is not tolled because plaintiff is not relying on the defendant to remedy problem; thus there is no basis for tolling statute. A & B Painting & Drywall, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 349, 354-355, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418

Patent defect limitations period is applicable to all actions based on patent defects, including actions by persons who did not have access to location of defect and thus could not have discovered it. Geertz v. Ausonio (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1369-1370, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318

Definition of "substantial completion" is applicable to all improvers, including developers. Schwetz v. Minnerly (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 296, 306, 269 Cal. Rptr. 417

Filing of cross complaint beyond 10-year period is permissible when main action was filed within 10-year period only if cross complaint is transactionally related to main action. Sandy v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1282-1284, 247 Cal. Rptr. 677

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15's 10-year limitations period for latent defects is applicable to products liability actions, such as strict liability action. Stoneson Dev. Corp. v. Superior Court (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 178, 180-181, 242 Cal. Rptr. 721

Limitations period is tolled during period of repair after initial completion. Cascade Gardens Homeowners Assn. v. McKellar & Assocs. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 1256-1257, 240 Cal. Rptr. 113 , disapproved by Lantzy v. Centex Homes (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 363, 367, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 655, 73 P.3d 517

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1's four-year limitations period for patent defects was not applicable to developer's action for delay in performance of building contract. Kralow Co. v. Sully-Miller Contracting Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1029, 1035, 214 Cal. Rptr. 630

Second action for damages for further subsidence under foundation was barred by statute of limitations and res judicata. McCloskey v. Carlton Builders (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 689, 691-693, 211 Cal. Rptr. 659

Period of limitation in action for negligent fill and fraudulent concealment of fill conditions commenced when negligence and fraud were discovered or should have been discovered in exercise of reasonable diligence. Allen v. Sundean (1982) 137 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222-224, 186 Cal. Rptr. 863

Defect in air-conditioning system that caused temperature fluctuations was not patent defect because it was not readily discoverable. Baker v. Walker & Walker, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 746, 758-763, 184 Cal. Rptr. 245

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1's four-year limitations period for actions against contractors for patent defects is constitutional. Salinero v. Pon (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 120, 127-129, 177 Cal. Rptr. 204

Unfenced swimming pool was patent defect requiring application of four-year limitations period under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.1. Mattingly v. Anthony Industries, Inc. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 506, 510-511, 167 Cal. Rptr. 292

Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15's 10-year limitations period for latent defects was not applicable to person in actual possession of property at time of injury and thus did not insulate from liability city that installed drains on city property. Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 398, 405, 163 Cal. Rptr. 711

Code Civ. Proc. § 337's four-year limitations period running from discovery of defect and Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15's 10-year limitations period running from substantial completion of improvement are mutually exclusive; shorter of two periods applies in cases of latent defects. Anderson v. Brouwer (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 176, 180-181, 160 Cal. Rptr. 65

[8] Venue

When action is for damages for construction defects and does not allege breach of contract, venue is proper only in county where property is located under Code Civ. Proc. § 392, which sets venue in actions for injuries to real property. Foundation Engineers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 104, 108-112, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469

§ 104.152 Decisions

[1] Fraud and Misrepresentation

Misrepresentation was established when contract contained implied representation that other contractor would have dredge available and dredge was not available, causing extra expense to contractor. Tonkin Constr. Co. v. County of Humboldt (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 828, 832-833, 233 Cal. Rptr. 587

Measure of damages for fraud in inducement consisting of contractor's misrepresentations as to completion date of house to be constructed. Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 995-996, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119

[2] Indemnity

Indemnity between general contractor and subcontractor is governed by particular agreement except when general contractor is vicariously liable. Western Contracting Corp. v. Southwest Steel Rolling Mills, Inc. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 532, 539-541, 129 Cal. Rptr. 782

[3] Negligence

Individual who was president, director, and 50 percent stockholder of business that subcontracted to build patio and driveway at plaintiffs' home could be held personally liable for negligence; defendant's stipulation that he was negligent in constructing patio and driveway acknowledged that breach of duty owed to plaintiffs as third parties was violated, rather than merely breach of duty defendant owed to corporation, and plaintiffs alleged facts indicating defendant could be personally liable for negligent act by his direct participation and decisionmaking in construction of patio and driveway. Michaelis v. Benavides (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 681, 686, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 776

Economic as well as physical loss is recoverable in negligence action against contractors, and proof of building code violations as sufficient for presumption of negligence; testimony about standard of care is not required. Huang v. Garner (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 404, 412-414, 419-420, 203 Cal. Rptr. 800

Corporation's complaint for damages resulting from contractor's improper construction of condominium, alleging it was charged with duty of maintaining and repairing common areas of condominium but failing to allege that corporation owned real property or that it was in possession or had right to possession, failed to state cause of action. Friendly Village Community Assn., Inc. v. Silva & Hill Constr. Co. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 220, 224-225, 107 Cal. Rptr. 123

[4] Owner's Liability to Third Parties

Explanation of "peculiar risk doctrine" as stated in Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 413, 416, and instruction to be given jury on doctrine. Griesel v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 585-587, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503

General contractor who claimed power to control all safety procedures on worksite could not be held liable to injured employee of subcontractor for failing to direct subcontractor to take safety precautions when there was no evidence that any conduct by general contractor contributed affirmatively to injuries. Kinney v. CSB Construction, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 28, 36, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594

[5] Strict Liability

Strict liability in tort was not applicable unless home was in defective condition. Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 689, 703, 106 Cal. Rptr. 1, 505 P.2d 193

Settling defendants who were strictly liable for construction defects not entitled to recover on joint and several basis from other joint tortfeasors whose negligence was proximate cause of injuries; equitable indemnity principles apply in such circumstances. Expressions at Rancho Niguel Assn. v. Ahmanson Developments, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1140-1141, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 895

Developers of multiple-unit, residential, planned development complex were strictly liable for defective design and construction of project on unstable bluff, but soil engineers, structural engineers, and architects were not liable in absence of negligence or intentional misconduct. Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. v. Imperial Contracting Co. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 898, 914, 176 Cal. Rptr. 886

Developer was strictly liable for failure of water distributing system resulting in harm from fire to properties in subdivision. Stuart v. Crestview Mut. Water Co. (1973) 34 Cal. App. 3d 802, 810-811, 110 Cal. Rptr. 543

When public entity approves and accepts as public improvement private construction by developer, developer is not strictly liable for defects. Blau v. Los Angeles (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 77, 89-91, 107 Cal. Rptr. 727

[6] Warranty

Builders and sellers of new construction are held to implied warranty that completed structure was designed and constructed in reasonably workmanlike manner. Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88

Action alleging concrete slabs under plaintiffs' houses were defective was certifiable as class action as to breach of warranty claims. Hicks v. Kaufman & Broad Home Corp. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 908, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 761

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.173

§ 104.173 Decisions

[1] Actions Barred for Lack of License

Corporate subcontractor who submitted bid to general contractor before it obtained corporate contractor's license and who performed some work on the project before license was issued was barred from bringing suit against general contractor, because subcontractor was unlicensed during period in which it performed services that could only be performed by a licensed contractor; fact that subcontractor's president held individual license did not constitute substantial compliance with license requirement. Great West Contractors Inc. v. WSS Industrial Construction Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 581, 592-593, 596, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 8

Licensed contractor whose unlicensed corporation entered in subcontract with general contractor could not sue to recover compensation even though contractor's license number appeared on all documents relating to contract, because corporation was contracting party. Opp v. State Farm Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 71, 76, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 260

Contractor failed to show substantial compliance with licensing laws [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031] when its license remained suspended for five months after contractor received notice of suspension and contractor failed to renew license on notice of expiration. Pacific Custom Pools, Inc. v. Turner Construction Co. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1265, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756

Unlicensed contractor's breach of contract action against city was barred when, in lieu of payment of money, contract gave contractor fill rights on city land, which contractor would exploit by collecting dumping fees from third parties; court construed those fill rights as "compensation" which contractor could not collect without license. K&K Services, Inc. v. City of Irwindale (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 818, 823-824, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 836

[2] Actions Not Barred for Lack of License

Claims brought under Contractors' State License Law against unlicensed contractor may form basis for writ of attachment because agreement for the performance of services lies at heart of such a claim. Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845, 853, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603

Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 does not bar civil rights claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 for racial discrimination; non-licensed contractor may pursue nominal damages, emotional distress damages, and punitive damages, but may not recover contract damages. Holland v. Morse Diesel Internat., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1453, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 439

Contractor demonstrated substantial compliance with licensing requirements [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e)] when contractor did not have actual knowledge that its license was suspended due to clerk's failure to file a bond with licensing board and board was unaware of suspension at time of its occurrence due to error in its computer records. ICF Kaiser Engineers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 226, 241, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88

Business that simply furnished laborers to subcontractor and did not actually perform or supervise any construction services or contract was not acting in capacity of a contractor and therefore was not barred by its lack of license from enforcing its rights under contract with subcontractor. Contractors Labor Pool, Inc. v. Westway Contractors, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 152, 166, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715

Lack of license did not preclude claims against subcontractors for negligence and equitable indemnity by developers/general contractors sued on strict liability theory for construction defects. Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1420-1421, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386

Lack of license does not preclude owner's suit against unlicensed contractor for breach of contract. Domach v. Spencer (1979) 101 Cal. App. 3d 308, 311, 161 Cal. Rptr. 459

[3] Contractors' State License Law

Purpose of Contractors' State License Law is to protect public by prohibiting dishonest, incompetent, inexperienced, or financially irresponsible persons from acting as building contractors. Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 217, 225, 244 Cal. Rptr. 637

[4] Discipline of Contractors

Discipline was proper under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7109 (willful departure from accepted trade standards) when inference that contractor knew his work was substandard was supported by evidence that violation was based on 17 instances of substandard work involving significant errors, which contractor ultimately agreed to repair. Tellis v. Contractors' State License Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 153, 159-160, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

Contractor's failure to correct defects after repeated requests constituted violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 7113 (failure in any material respect to complete project or operation for price stated in contract); even though cost of repairs was minor in proportion to cost of project, there was evidence supporting reasonable finding that cost, nature, and amount of substandard work was substantial or material, as opposed to trivial. Tellis v. Contractors' State License Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 153, 163, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734

Disciplinary provisions of Contractors' State License Law did not preempt municipality's authority to temporarily preclude dishonest contractor from bidding on that municipality's public work projects. Stacy & Witbeck, Inc. v. City and County of San Francisco (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1093, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 472

Contractors' State License Law governs licensing requirements for and disciplinary actions against contractors; causes for discipline are contained in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7107 et seq.; disciplinary proceedings are subject to Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code § 11501; Bus. & Prof. Code § 7091(f)). Linda Jones General Builder v. State License Bd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1320, 1324, 240 Cal. Rptr. 180

Disciplinary proceeding against licensed contractor required to be initiated by accusation specifying statutes and rules that contractor allegedly violated Gov. Code § 11503; fulfillment of requirement is statutory predicate for disciplinary action, so that only violations properly charged in accusation will support disciplinary action. Linda Jones General Builder v. State License Bd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1320, 1324, 1326, 240 Cal. Rptr. 180

Building contractor was not subject to discipline under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7109 (willful and prejudicial departure from accepted trade standards for good and workmanlike construction) or Bus. & Prof. Code § 7113 (failure to complete project for contract price), based on contractor's deviation from architect's plans and specifications and subsequent damage to house constructed by contractor, because contractor was owner of property when house was built, there was no construction contract, and there was no third-party owner whose consent was required, although contractor later sold house to third party. Linda Jones General Builder v. State License Bd. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1320, 1323-1328, 240 Cal. Rptr. 180

[5] Licensing Requirements and Procedure

Penalties imposed under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7108.5 for failure to pay subcontractor are recoverable in either disciplinary action before Contractors State License Board or civil action filed by subcontractor. Morton Engineering & Construction, Inc. v. Patscheck (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 712, 720, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815

Contract to construct foundation for residence is within scope of general engineering contractor's license and is legal if it requires specialized engineering knowledge and skill, even though residential foundations are not specifically enumerated in Bus. & Prof. Code § 7056. Ron Yates Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 337, 344-348, 230 Cal. Rptr. 629

Lab. Code § 2750.5 is not applicable to determinations of whether one is employee or unlicensed contractor under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 7031 and 7053. Fillmore v. Irvine (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 649, 657, 194 Cal. Rptr. 319

Demurrer for defendant-owner was not proper when factual issue existed as to whether plaintiff's contract to maintain condominium grounds required work for which license was required or whether plaintiff was doing such work. Executive Landscape Corp. v. San Vicente Country Villas IV Assn. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 496, 499-501, 193 Cal. Rptr. 377

Contractors' State License Law does not provide for issuance of conditional or probationary contractor's license. Housing Development Co. v. Hoschler (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 379, 390, 149 Cal. Rptr. 400

Effect of running of statute of limitations [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7091(a)-(e)] on acts warranting discipline on subsequent application for license. Housing Development Co. v. Hoschler (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 379, 388, 149 Cal. Rptr. 400

Partnership did not acquire vested right to contractor's license merely because its qualifying partner had previous affiliations with company that had once been so licensed. Housing Development Co. v. Hoschler (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 379, 386, 149 Cal. Rptr. 400

Scope of judicial review of denial of application for contractor's license; when Registrar of Contractor's decision will be set aside for abuse of discretionary powers. Housing Development Co. v. Hoschler (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 379, 385-387, 149 Cal. Rptr. 400

1. Plaintiff is, and at all times herein mentioned was, duly licensed by the Contractors' State License Board of the State of California to conduct business as a contractor within this state and to engage in the work described below.

2. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California with its principal place of business in this state in _____ County or Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a resident at _____ (address), _____ County, California].

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes that each of these defendants is an agent and employee of defendant _____ (name), and proximately caused plaintiff's damages as herein alleged while acting in such capacity.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a[n] _____ [written contract or oral contract or contract implied by conduct] in which plaintiff agreed to provide all labor and materials and to _____ [specify in general terms the work to be performed by the contractor, e.g., construct _____ (specify type of structure) on the property of defendant situated at _____ (street address), _____ (city), _____ County, California]. Defendant agreed to pay plaintiff the total sum of $_____ [specify payment schedule if relevant, e.g., in progress payments to be made as follows: _____]. [If the contract is oral, specify other pertinent provisions. If the contract is written, attach a copy as an exhibit and add: A copy of the contract (together with the pertinent plans and specifications) is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.]

5. Plaintiff has performed all conditions, covenants, and promises under the contract to be performed on his/her/its part [precedent to defendant's payment of the $_____ progress payment due on _____ (specify date or event, e.g., completion of the foundation work)][, except _____ (describe condition not performed), the performance of which was excused on the ground that _____ (specify facts excusing performance)].

6. On or about _____ [date], defendant breached the contract by _____ [specify defendant's acts constituting a breach of the contract, e.g., failing and refusing to pay plaintiff the progress payment due on that date under the contract].

7. As a result of defendant's breach of the contract, plaintiff has suffered damages as follows: _____ [specify items and amounts, e.g., an unpaid progress payment in the amount of $_____].

8. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff made demand on defendant for the payment of his/hers/its total damages as set forth in Paragraph 7, but defendant has failed and refused and still fails and refuses to pay the sum, and the whole sum remains due, owing, and unpaid.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For compensatory damages in the sum of $_____;

2. For interest on the sum of $_____ at _____ percent per annum from and after _____ [date];

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages is a general form for use by a contractor for the owner's breach of a building contract.

[3] Allegations

The complaint contains the following allegations:

- Plaintiff was a duly licensed contractor at all times relevant to the action (Paragraph 1) [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); see MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 425-426, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 (contractor is ineligible to recover any compensation if, at any time during performance of agreement for contractor services, he or she was not duly licensed); see also § 104.83[4][a]];

- The existence and terms of the contract, and whether it is written, oral, or implied by conduct (Paragraph 4) [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g); see Civ. Code §§ 1622, 1624];

- Plaintiff has substantially performed all of his or her obligations under the contract precedent to defendant's performance, except as plaintiff's performance is excused (Paragraph 5) [Civ. Code §§ 1439, 1511; Code Civ. Proc. § 457; see § 104.15[1]];

- Defendant's breach (Paragraph 6); and

- The existence and amount of plaintiff's damages (Paragraph 7) [Civ. Code § 3300].

[4] Jurisdiction and Venue

The superior court has jurisdiction of the action, which will be classified as an unlimited civil case unless the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, is $25,000 or less, in which case it will be classified as a limited civil case [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 85, 86(a)(8)].

Proper venue for this action is established by the allegation concerning defendant's residence (Paragraph 2) [Code Civ. Proc. § 395(a)]. For forms of allegations of venue based on other considerations, see Ch. 571, Venue .

In limited civil cases the caption must state whether the demand exceeds or does not exceed $10,000. The caption must also identify the case as a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. § 422.30(b); Gov. Code § 70613; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule

2.111(9), (10)].

[5] Performance of Conditions and Excuses for Nonperformance

Paragraph 5 asserts that plaintiff has performed all conditions precedent to defendant's performance, and contains an optional clause for describing any conditions not performed and the excuse for the nonperformance. In pleading the performance of conditions precedent in a contract, it is not necessary to state the facts showing the performance. It may simply be stated that the party duly performed all the conditions [Code Civ. Proc. § 457; see also § 104.17].

[6] Damages

For the breach of an obligation arising from contract, the measure of damages is ordinarily the amount that will compensate the aggrieved party for all the detriment proximately caused by the breach or all the detriment that, in the ordinary course of things, would be likely to result from the breach [Civ. Code § 3300]. The detriment caused by the breach of an obligation to pay money only is deemed to be the amount due by the terms of the obligation, with interest [Civ. Code § 3302; see Civ. Code § 3289]. No damages may be recovered for a breach of a contract that are not clearly ascertainable in both their nature and origin [Civ. Code § 3301].

For discussion of the recovery of interest on a damages award, see § 104.24[2][b].

[7] Verification

Verification of a complaint for damages for breach of contract is not generally required, but verification of the complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer in a superior court action other than a limited civil case [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 92(b), 446(a)] and precludes a general denial in superior court and in some limited civil cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d)]. For further discussion of the effect on the answer of verifying a complaint, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[8] Attorney's Fees

If the contract sued on provides for the recovery of attorney's fees in an action to enforce the contract [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021], those fees are recoverable as an item of the costs of suit [Civ. Code § 1717(a)]. In such a case, because the fees are not an item of damages, they would not be alleged in the body of the complaint, but would instead be mentioned as an item of costs in the prayer. For further discussion, see § 104.28.

[9] State Statutes

Necessity of alleging and proving license in action on building contract. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031

Excuses for nonperformance. Civ. Code § 1511

Complaint in action on contract is subject to objection by demurrer or answer if it cannot be ascertained from pleading whether contract is written, oral, or implied by conduct. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g)

Pleading performance of conditions precedent in action on contract. Code Civ. Proc. § 457

PART IV. FORMS
A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.211

§ 104.211 Allegation--Substantial Performance by Contractor

[1] FORM Allegation--Substantial Performance by Contractor

1. Plaintiff has substantially performed all the terms, covenants, and conditions of the contract except for certain omissions and deviations consisting of _____ [specify portions of the project not fully completed]. These omissions and deviations resulted from inadvertence, and were not willful or intentional. They are slight and trivial, and may be corrected and supplied at the cost of $_____.

2. On or about _____ [date], defendant breached the contract by failing to pay plaintiff the sum of $_____, which represents the contract price of $_____ less the sum of $_____ as stated in _____ [specify number of preceding paragraph as incorporated into complaint, e.g., Paragraph 5].

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use in a complaint in a breach of contract action by a contractor against an owner. These allegations may be substituted for Paragraphs 5 and 6 in the complaint in § 104.210 when the contractor has substantially rather than fully performed the contract.

[3] Suit Permitted by Substantially Performing Contractor

A contractor may recover for work performed under a building contract, subject to a reduction to compensate for any defects in his or her work, based on a showing of substantial performance of the contractor's obligations under the contract [Patrick J. Ruane, Inc. v. Parker (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 488, 503, 8 Cal. Rptr. 379] . For purposes of this rule, "substantial performance" means that there has been no willful departure from the terms of the contract, and no omission of any of its essential parts, and that the contractor has in good faith performed all of his or her substantive obligations under the contract [Lowy v. United Pac. Ins. Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 87, 92-93, 60 Cal. Rptr. 225, 429 P.2d 577 ; Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 556, 150 P. 769] .

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.212

§ 104.212 Allegation--Defendant Is Municipality

[1] FORM Allegation--Defendant Is Municipality

1. Defendant City of _____ [name] ("the City") is now and at all times herein mentioned has been a municipal corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and situated in _____ County.

2. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written contract with the City, in which plaintiff agreed to furnish all work, labor, and materials for the construction of a _____ [describe construction project] in the City, according to the plans and specifications prepared by the City. The contract was known and designated as Contract No. _____, City of _____ [name]. A copy of the contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

3. Plaintiff has filed with the _____ [specify appropriate city officer, e.g., Controller] of the City a verified claim for the amount of such damages, but the City has _____ [rejected the claim or failed to act within 45 days of the filing of the claim] and the whole of the amount is due, owing, and unpaid from defendant the City to plaintiff. A copy of the claim is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use by a contractor in an action against a municipality for damages for breach of a building contract. The three paragraphs set forth in this form should be substituted for Paragraphs 2, 4, and 8, respectively, of § 104.210. The resulting form of complaint may be used, for example, in situations in which the municipality has breached the complaint by refusing to pay the contractor [see § 104.210, Paragraph 6], failing to timely furnish sufficiently detailed plans and specifications to the contractor, failing to make prompt decisions regarding modifications of plans and specifications, requiring unreasonable time in making inspections in connection with the work in progress, hiring inexperienced personnel to make inspections of the work in progress, failing to approve materials within a reasonable time, or failing to accept structures on completion.

[3] Presentation of Claim Allegation Required

The third paragraph of the above allegations concerns plaintiff's presentation to the city of a claim for his or her damages and the city's action on the claim. When a municipality has breached a building contract, a claim for damages must be presented to the city's board of supervisors within one year after the accrual of the cause of action for breach [Gov. Code § 911.2(a); see Gov. Code §§ 900.4 (city within definition of public entity), 901 (determining accrual date), 915-915.4 (manner of presentation of claim)]. The claim must be acted on or deemed rejected by the board before the plaintiff may bring a suit for money or damages for the breach [Gov. Code § 945.4].

[4] State Statutes

Public entity is capable of suing and being sued. Gov. Code § 945

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a contractor in an action for damages for breach of a building contract when the owner breaches the contract by preventing the contractor from performing it.

[3] Allegations

Optional Paragraph 5 contains alternative allegations to be used if plaintiff performed preliminary work or began actual construction before his or her performance was prevented by defendant. Optional Paragraph 6 is to be used if defendant has entered into an agreement with a third party for the work for which it previously contracted with plaintiff. Optional Paragraph 9 is to be used if the contract expressly requires that any party relying on the provisions of Civ. Code § 1511(1) to excuse his or her performance of some or all of the contract give written notice to the other party or parties of an intention to bring suit, or of any other similar or related intent [see Civ. Code § 1511(1)].

For a form of allegation to be used in a complaint based on prevention of performance when the contractor has substantially completed his or her work under the contract at the time of the owner's prevention of further performance, see § 104.214.

[4] Alleging Owner's Prevention of Performance as Excuse for Contractor's Nonperformance

The complaint should allege that plaintiff attempted to perform the contract, and was prevented from doing so by plaintiff (Paragraphs 5, 7, and 8). The lack of performance of an obligation, or an offer of performance, in whole or in part, or any delay in performance, is excused when the performance or offer of performance is prevented or delayed by the act of the creditor (usually, the owner), even though there may have been a stipulation that this shall not be an excuse [Civ. Code § 1511(1)].

[5] Implied Covenant of Permission to Enter on Premises and Perform Contract

It is not necessary to allege that the contract provided that defendant would allow plaintiff reasonable access to the building site or that defendant would permit and cooperate in plaintiff's performance of the contract. Every building contract that contains no express covenants to the contrary includes implied covenants that the contractor must be given possession of the premises as required to complete his or her performance and must be permitted to proceed with construction in accordance with the terms of the contract without interference by the owner [Gray v. Bekins (1921) 186 Cal. 389, 395, 199 P. 767] . For further discussion, see §§ 104.23[1], 104.24[1][c].

[6] Damages for Prevention of Performance

Plaintiff should allege damages in the amount of the net profit he or she would have made if the contract was performed according to its terms, plus any amounts already expended in performance or preparation for performance and less any progress payments already received (Paragraph 11). The measure of the contractor's damages for a breach consisting of prevention of his or her performance is the profits he or she would have made if permitted to complete the work, plus any actual expenses [Civ. Code § 1512; Stark v. Shaw (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 171, 181, 317 P.2d 182 , cert. denied, 356 U.S. 937] . For further discussion, see § 104.24[1][c].

If at the time the owner interferes with the contractor's performance the work is substantially complete, so that the portion lacking is nominal only, and the owner refuses to accept the performance or to allow further performance, the refusal to accept will be considered unjustifiable and the contractor may recover the entire unpaid balance of the contract price [Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 549, 150 P. 769 ; see § 104.214].

[7] Time for Performance

If no time is specified for the performance of an act required to be performed, a reasonable time for performance is allowed [Civ. Code § 1657]. For further discussion, see § 104.19.

[8] Cross References

For a related form, see § 104.210.

§ 104.214 Allegation--Contractor's Performance Substantially Complete

[1] FORM Allegation--Contractor's Performance Substantially Complete

1. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff commenced performance of his/her/its duties and obligations under the contract. Plaintiff proceeded with his/her/its duties and obligations under the terms of the contract until _____ [date], at which time the work was substantially completed [except for _____ (specify portion not completed, e.g., the installation of smoke detectors in each bedroom in the complex)].

2. Plaintiff has demanded that defendant either allow plaintiff to complete performance of the contract, or accept plaintiff's substantially complete performance and pay plaintiff the contract price of $_____ [, less installments already paid totaling $_____], but defendant has wrongfully refused to do either of these things.

3. As a result of defendant's unjustifiable refusal to either allow plaintiff to complete performance of the contract or pay plaintiff the contract price, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, which is the entire unpaid balance of the contract price.

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use by a contractor in a complaint alleging prevention of performance [see § 104.213]. These alternative allegations should be used when the contractor has substantially completed the construction project and seeks damages for the owner's refusal to either pay the contractor or accept performance of the remaining, nominal work to be done by the contractor. The paragraphs set forth in this form may be substituted for Paragraphs 5, 8, and 11, respectively, in § 104.213.

[3] Damages for Prevention of Further Performance When Performance Is Substantially Complete

The third paragraph of this form seeks damages in the amount of the entire contract price rather than the amount of profit the contractor would have earned on the contract [see § 104.213, Paragraph 11 (contrasting allegation)]. If at the time the owner interferes with the contractor's performance the contractor's work is substantially complete, so that the portion lacking is nominal only, and the owner refuses to accept the performance or to allow further performance, the refusal to accept will be considered unjustifiable and the contractor may recover the entire unpaid balance of the contract price [Connell v. Higgins (1915) 170 Cal. 541, 549, 150 P. 769] .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages for breach of a building contract is for use by a contractor when the contract has been modified by a written agreement or an executed oral agreement calling for extra work. A contract in writing may be modified as follows [Civ. Code § 1698(a)-(c)]:

- By a contract in writing;
- By an oral agreement, to the extent that the oral agreement is executed; or
- Unless the contract expressly provides otherwise, by an oral agreement supported by new consideration, except that the statute of frauds [Civ. Code § 1624] must be satisfied if the contract as modified is within its provisions.

A contract not in writing may be modified in any respect by the consent of the parties, in writing, without a new consideration. The original contract will be extinguished to the extent of the modification [Civ. Code § 1697].

For further discussion, see § 104.15[3][a], [b].

[3] Damages for Breach of Extras Agreement

The complaint must state the amount the plaintiff seeks to recover for the extras [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)(2)]. If the extras agreement does not specify the price to be paid by the owner for the extra work, or the manner in which the price is to be determined, the contractor should allege the market or reasonable value of the extras [see First Olympic Corp. v. Hawryluk (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 832, 841, 8 Cal. Rptr. 728] . Alternatively, if the changes imposed are so excessive that it can fairly be said that the scope of the work under the original contract has been altered, the contractor may allege that the original contract has been abandoned and seek recovery for the value of his or her services on a quantum meruit basis [C. Norman Peterson Co. v. Container Corp. of America (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 628, 640-646, 218 Cal. Rptr. 592] . For further discussion, see § 104.15[3][e].

[Caption. See § 104.210.]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Licensing allegation. See § 104.210, Paragraph 1.]

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant prime contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

4. Defendant City of _____ [name] ("the City") is now and at all time herein mentioned has been a municipal corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California, and located in _____ County.

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [contractor] ("defendant contractor") entered into a written agreement with the City under which defendant contractor, in consideration of the payment of the sum of $_____, agreed to _____ [specify work to be performed by prime contractor under contract].

6. On _____ [date], plaintiff entered into a written subcontract with defendant contractor under which plaintiff, in consideration of the payment of the sum of $_____, agreed to furnish all labor, tools, materials, and scaffolding necessary to _____ [specify work to be done by plaintiff as subcontractor on project]. The work provided for in the subcontract is a part of the work described in the agreement between defendant contractor and the City described in Paragraph 5. A true copy of the subcontract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

7. During the course of the work performed by plaintiff under the subcontract, at the special instance and request of defendant contractor, plaintiff furnished certain extra labor, materials, and equipment for which defendant contractor agreed to pay the reasonable cost. The extra labor, materials, and equipment furnished, and the reasonable cost of these extras, are as follows: _____ [list extra labor performed, materials and equipment furnished, and the cost of each item]. The total sum of these costs is $_____.

8. Before this action commenced, plaintiff delivered to defendant contractor a detailed written statement and account describing the extra labor, materials, and equipment furnished by plaintiff during the course of the work performed by plaintiff under the subcontract, and the reasonable cost of these items. A true copy of that statement and account is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

9. The total amount payable to plaintiff by defendant contractor, pursuant to the subcontract and for the extras, is $_____. Defendant contractor has paid to plaintiff the sum of $_____, leaving a balance due, owing, and unpaid of $_____.

10. Plaintiff has fully performed all the terms and conditions on his/her/its part to be performed pursuant to the subcontract and the agreement for extras.

11. All of the labor, materials, and equipment furnished as set forth in Paragraph 7 were furnished with the knowledge and consent of each of the defendants. All of the labor, materials, and equipment were furnished at the prevailing rates for such items in the City.

12. All of the labor, materials, and equipment described in Paragraph 7 were actually furnished by plaintiff and all were used and consumed in and entered into the erection and construction of the improvement described in Paragraph 6. The improvement became and since has been affixed permanently to and is an integral part of the real property on which it was constructed.

13. On or about _____ [date], in compliance with Civil Code Sections 3183 and 3184, plaintiff delivered to the City and to _____ [name], its controller, a written, verified notice to withhold payment. A copy of the notice is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C.

14. The City, in compliance with Civil Code Section 3186, is withholding from amounts payable by it to defendant contractor, pursuant to the contract between the City and defendant contractor described in Paragraph 5, a sum sufficient to pay plaintiff's claim of $_____. The City is joined as a party to this action as provided by Civil Code Section 3210, and for the reason that the sum is withheld and retained by the City pending the judgment of the court in this action.

15. On _____ [date], the City recorded a written notice of completion certifying that defendant contractor had completed all the work described in the contract between defendant contractor and the city. The notice was recorded in Book _____ at Page _____ of the Official Records of _____ County.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint seeking damages for breach of a building contract for extras is to be used by a subcontractor when the prime contractor fails to pay the subcontractor for the extras. The public entity that contracted with the prime contractor for the main project may be joined in the action if the public entity withheld payment from the prime contractor pursuant to a stop notice filed by the subcontractor [see Civ. Code § 3181 et seq.].

A cause of action on a prime contractor's payment bond is often included in a complaint for damages based on a contractor's failure to pay for extras [see § 104.231 (allegation for use in complaint by owner against contractor on payment bond)].

[3] Time for Filing Action Concerning Stop Notice

An action against the original contractor and a public entity to enforce payment of the claim stated in a stop notice may be commenced 10 days after the date of service of the stop notice, and must be commenced within 90 days after the expiration of the period for filing of stop notices for the project [Civ. Code § 3210]. For further discussion, see § 104.21.

[4] State Statutes

"Stop notice" defined. Civ. Code § 3103

"Subcontractor" defined. Civ. Code § 3104

§ 104.217 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--By Prime Contractor to Action by Subcontractor--Subcontractor Not Licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--By Prime Contractor to Action by Subcontractor--Subcontractor Not Licensed [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant _____ [name] alleges:

1. Plaintiff subcontractor entered into the contract with defendant, and acted as a contractor within the meaning of Business and Professions Code Section 7026 at all times relevant to this action, but without holding a valid contractor's license as required by Business and Professions Code Section 7028.

2. Therefore, plaintiff is barred by Business and Professions Code Section 7031 from bringing or maintaining any action for collection of compensation for performance of the contract, any act under the contract, or any agreement for extras to be furnished in connection with the contract.

3. This bar extends to any action against defendant.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a contractor in an answer to a complaint by a subcontractor to recover for the subcontractor's services. A contractor, including a subcontractor, may not maintain an action for the collection of compensation for the performance of any act or contract for which a contractor's license is required without alleging that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); see MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 425-426, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 (contractor is ineligible to recover any compensation if, at any time during performance of agreement for contractor services, he or she was not duly licensed)].

For further discussion, see § 104.83[4][a]. For forms of answers generally, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] Contractor's Right to Assert Defense Against Subcontractor

General contractors are among the persons protected by the licensing statute, and they may rely on the defense of a subcontractor's lack of license to the same extent as owners [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 ; Lewis & Queen v N. M. Ball Sons (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 141, 153-154, 308 P.2d 713] . The lack-of-license defense may be used even when the person for whom the work was performed knew that the contractor or subcontractor was unlicensed [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 ; Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 929, 941-942, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] .

1. [Licensing allegation. See § 104.210, Paragraph 1.]

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract under which plaintiff agreed to provide all labor and materials and to construct _____ [describe in general terms the type of structure to be built], on certain property owned by plaintiff in _____ County, California, described more particularly in Exhibit A to this complaint. Defendant agreed to pay plaintiff the sum of $_____ for the structure and property on completion of the construction. A true copy of the contract (together with the pertinent plans and specifications) is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

5. Plaintiff fully performed all of the duties and obligations to be performed by him/her/it under the contract, and constructed and completed the structure on the property referred to in Exhibit A, at a total cost to plaintiff of $_____.

6. After performing his/her/its duties and obligations under the contract, plaintiff demanded that defendant perform his/her/its part of the contract by paying to plaintiff the sum of $_____ for the structure and the property.

7. Defendant failed and refused, and still fails and refuses, to comply with the demand and to perform the contract.

8. On defendant's refusal to perform the contract, plaintiff promptly advertised and sought to sell the property and structure described in Exhibit A, employing all due diligence to obtain the best price for the property and structure, at a cost to plaintiff of $_____. Plaintiff received from _____ [name of third-party buyer] an offer to purchase the property and structure for $_____, which was both the best offer received by plaintiff and a sum equal to the fair market value of the property and structure at that time.

9. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff advised defendant in writing that defendant was in default of the contract, that an offer had been received by plaintiff for the property and structure, and that unless defendant performed the contract within _____ [number] days, plaintiff would sell the property and structure and hold defendant liable for damages by reason of his/her/its failure and refusal to perform the contract.

10. Defendant failed and refused to comply with the demand in a timely fashion.

11. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff sold the property and structure to _____ [name of third-party buyer] for $_____. A copy of that sales agreement is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

12. By reason of defendant's failure and refusal to perform the contract, plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $_____, which is the difference between the contract price and the price for which the property and structure was sold, plus the sum of $_____ incurred by plaintiff to obtain a buyer for the property and structure.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages for breach of a building contract and real estate sales agreement is for use by a contractor when the purchaser fails to perform and the property and structure are sold to a third party for a price lower than the contract price.

[3] Allegations

The essential elements of a contractor/seller's action for a purchaser's breach of a building contract and real estate sales agreement are (1) a valid contract (Paragraph 4), (2) the plaintiff's performance or excuse for nonperformance (Paragraph 5), (3) the defendant's breach (Paragraphs 7, 10), and (4) resulting damages to the plaintiff (Paragraph 12) [Reichert v. General Ins. Co. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 822, 830, 69 Cal. Rptr. 321, 442 P.2d 377 ; see Civ. Code §§ 3300, 3307

].

[4] Statute of Frauds for Real Property Sales Agreements

The complaint should allege that the building contract and sales agreement were in writing (Paragraph 4), because contracts for the sale of real property or any interest in real property must be evidenced by a writing in order to be valid. The writing must be signed by the party to be charged, or by that party's agent. If the writing is signed by the party's agent, the agent must be authorized to act in that capacity by a writing signed by the party [Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3)].

For further discussion of the statute of frauds, see Ch. 530, Statute of Frauds .

[5] Measure of Damages and Allegation of Property's Value

When a buyer defaults on an obligation to purchase real property, the measure of the seller's general damages for the breach is the difference between the contract price and the value of the property to the seller at the time of the breach [Civ. Code § 3307]. A complaint for damages for the buyer's default must allege the value of the subject property at the time of breach (Paragraph 8), or it will be subject to demurrer for failure to state a cause of action [Employees' Participating Asso. v. Pine (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 299, 300-301, 204 P.2d 965 ; Caspar Lumber Co. v. Stowell (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 58, 61, 98 P.2d 744] .

[6] Resale Price as Indicator of Property's Value

The value of the property to the seller at the time of the breach is ordinarily its fair market value [see, e.g., Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 828, 840, 83 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; Beason v. Griff (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 382, 386, 274 P.2d 47] . Fair market value may be defined as the best price obtainable from a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to buy at the time of the breach [Major-Blakeney Corp. v. Jenkins (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 325, 334, 263 P.2d 655] , for cash or its equivalent [Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 101, 142, 135 Cal. Rptr. 802] . The court may, but is not required to, consider the actual price the plaintiff obtained in the sale of the property to a third party as evidence of the property's fair market value at the time of the breach [see, e.g., Royer v. Carter (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 544, 548, 233 P.2d 539 ; Wickman v. Opper (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 129, 132-133, 10 Cal. Rptr. 291] . This complaint claims damages in the amount of the difference between the price obtained from the third-party sale and the contract price (Paragraph 12), and alleges that the price obtained from the third-party buyer was in fact the true value of the property to the plaintiff at the time of the breach (Paragraph 8).

[7] Diligent Resale Efforts Required

The complaint should allege that plaintiff made prompt and diligent efforts to find another buyer for the property following defendant's failure and refusal to perform the contract (Paragraph 8). A seller of real property has the duty to exercise diligence and resell the property within the shortest possible time after learning of the buyer's breach. If the property increases in value after the breach and the seller does not diligently resell, the seller will not be permitted to recover benefit-of-the-bargain damages against the defaulting buyer [Spurgeon v. Drumheller (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 659, 665-666, 220 Cal. Rptr. 195 ; but see Askari v. R & R Land Co. (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1101, 1110-1111, 225 Cal. Rptr. 285 (rule not applicable when failure to resell is caused by buyer's actions)].

[8] Consequential Damages

In addition to general damages, plaintiff claims consequential damages in the form of expenses incurred in selling the property and structure to a third party following defendant's breach (Paragraphs 8, 12). The damages recoverable in an action for breach of an agreement to purchase real property include consequential damages according to proof [Civ. Code § 3307]. Reasonable expenses incurred in selling the property to a third party, such as escrow expenses, broker's commissions, and advertising costs, is an accepted element of consequential damages [see Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3

Cal. App. 3d 828, 848, 83 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; Barton v. White Oak Realty, Inc. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 579, 585, 76 Cal. Rptr. 587] .

5. Prior to _____ [date subcontract entered into], plaintiff entered into a written contract with _____ [name of owner] for the construction of _____ [specify work to be done by plaintiff under primary contract]. A copy of this contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

6. On or about _____ [date], during the time plaintiff was performing work required by the contract described in Paragraph 5, plaintiff, as prime contractor, entered into a written subcontract with defendant

_____ [name of subcontractor] ("defendant subcontractor"). Under the terms of the subcontract, defendant subcontractor agreed to furnish all of the materials for and perform all the work required under the following portion of the contract described in Paragraph 5: _____ [specify portion of prime contract to be performed by subcontractor under subcontract, e.g., Paragraph E6 of the contract, which provides for the installation of electrical wiring throughout the ground floor of the building to be constructed by plaintiff]. A true copy of the subcontract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

7. Under the terms of the subcontract, defendant subcontractor agreed to commence work on _____ [date] and to complete the work required under the subcontract in coordination with plaintiff so as not to delay the job. For the performance of these requirements on the part of defendant subcontractor, plaintiff agreed, under the terms of the subcontract, to pay defendant subcontractor the sum of $_____.

8. According to the terms of the subcontract, defendant subcontractor was to furnish plaintiff with a performance and material bond.

9. Pursuant to the requirements set forth in the subcontract, defendant surety executed its bond for the faithful performance of the subcontract on the part of defendant subcontractor, which by its terms incorporated the subcontract, in the sum of $_____. A true copy of the bond is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C.

10. On or about _____ [date], after defendant subcontractor had partially performed the subcontract, defendant subcontractor breached the subcontract in that _____ [specify defendant's act or acts breaching the subcontract, e.g., defendant subcontractor abandoned the further performance of the subcontract without cause or reason and failed thereafter to perform any work or furnish any materials to carry out the terms of the subcontract].

11. Plaintiff then, within the time and in the manner provided by the bond, served written notice on defendant subcontractor to proceed with the work as required under the terms of the contract within _____ [number] days after the date of notice.

12. Defendant subcontractor failed and refused after receipt of the notice to perform his/her/its duties under the subcontract within the time stated in the notice. [2] Use of Form

This form is for use by a contractor in an action for damages for breach of a building contract by a subcontractor, with the subcontractor's surety joined. When a civil action is brought to enforce liability on a bond, both the principal and the sureties must be joined as parties to the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(a)].

[3] Liability of Principal and Surety on Bond

Paragraph 13 of this complaint alleges that plaintiff holds defendant subcontractor and subcontractor's surety responsible for any and all damages flowing from the subcontractor's breach. The beneficiary may enforce the liability on a bond against both the principal and the sureties [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.410(a)]. The aggregate liability of a surety to all persons for all breaches of the condition of a bond is limited to the amount of the bond. period of _____ [number] working days after _____ [date], for plaintiff on a certain tract of land located in _____ [city], _____ County, California. This work was part of a construction project that was the subject of a contract between plaintiff and _____ [name of other party to prime contract]. A true copy of the contract between plaintiff and defendant is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A. [A true copy of the contract between plaintiff and _____ (name of other party to prime contract) is attached and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.]

5. Defendant commenced performance of the contract sometime after _____ [date], but proceeded so slowly that there were substantial portions of the work unfinished on _____ [date], at which time plaintiff first complained to defendant, by written notice, of the delays and defendant's poor performance. Plaintiff made further written complaints on _____ [dates]. [True copies of plaintiff's complaint notices are attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C.]

6. As a result of defendant's delay in the performance of the contract, a result of _____ [identify any other specific contributing factors, e.g., seasonal heavy rains doing certain damage to portions of the work that were in an unfinished condition when the rains began], and a result of certain portions of the work being poorly done by defendant and not in accordance with the terms of the contract, plaintiff was compelled to do certain portions of the work for defendant.

7. Plaintiff has expended $_____ for the work done by him/her/it as described in Paragraph 6, which is the reasonable cost of the work.

8. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant. Plaintiff contends that he/she/it had a right to do the work for defendant and to charge defendant $_____ for the work. Defendant contends plaintiff had no right to do the work and that plaintiff has no right to charge defendant $_____ or any sum for the work; that on the contrary plaintiff owes $_____ to defendant for the work the latter did under the contract[, of which plaintiff has paid defendant only $_____].

9. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of his/her/its rights and duties, and a declaration as to whether plaintiff had a right to do the work of defendant and to charge defendant $_____ for the work.

10. The declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her/its rights and duties.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For a declaration that plaintiff had the right to do the work for defendant and to charge defendant $_____ for the work;

2. For damages in the sum of $_____;

3. For interest at _____ percent per annum on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date];

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for declaratory relief and damages is for use by a contractor when a subcontractor delays in performing and the delay results in damages to the contractor. It is based in part on the facts in Ely v. Bottini (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 287, 3 Cal. Rptr. 756 , in which heavy but seasonal rainstorms were held not to be an unforeseeable and superseding cause of plaintiff's damages when the parties contemplated at the time the subcontract was executed that rain damages would occur if the subcontract was not performed in the time stated.

If the subcontractor has provided a bond in connection with the contract, the surety must be joined as a party to the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(a)]. Paragraphs 4 (capacity and residence of surety), 8 (bond required by contract), and 9 (issuance of bond) in § 104.219 may be added to this form if a surety is involved.

[3] Jurisdiction

An action for declaratory relief is in the jurisdiction of the superior court as a case of unlimited jurisdiction. An action for declaratory relief is a limited civil case only when it is brought as a cross complaint for indemnity in an action or proceeding that is otherwise a limited civil case or in a case following nonbinding arbitration between an attorney and client when the amount in controversy is $25,000 or less [Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(7)(A), 580(b)(4), 1060].

[4] Essential Allegations for Declaratory Relief

A complaint for declaratory relief must allege facts showing that the subject of the action is a proper matter for declaratory relief (Paragraphs 8-10) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]. For further discussion of required allegations in a complaint for declaratory relief, see Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief .

[5] State Statutes

Declaratory relief is required to be necessary and proper at the time under all the circumstances. Code Civ. Proc. § 1061

Declaratory relief is cumulative remedy. Code Civ. Proc. § 1062

Priority given to actions for declaratory relief. Code Civ. Proc. § 1062.3

Plaintiff alleges:

1. At all times herein mentioned plaintiff was, and now is, a corporation, organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of _____ [state of incorporation]. At all times herein mentioned plaintiff was, and now is, authorized to conduct and is conducting an insurance and surety business within the State of California.

2. [Capacity and residence of defendant owner. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

4. On or about _____ [date], _____ [name of contractor] ("the contractor"), a duly licensed contractor, entered into a contract with defendant for the construction of _____ [specify construction project, e.g., a two-story steel and concrete building]. [A copy of the contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.]

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff issued its labor and material bond for the faithful performance of the contract on the part of the contractor, in the sum of $_____. A true copy of the bond is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

6. Thereafter the building was substantially completed and occupied by defendant beginning on or about _____ [date]. The building was accepted by defendant on _____ [date].

7. The total revised amount of and contract price for the construction of the building, which figure has been and is agreed to by plaintiff, contractor, and defendant, is $_____. Defendant has paid the sum of $_____ to the contractor. The sum of $_____ became due on _____ [date], and now remains due, owing, and unpaid. This sum, together with interest on it from and after _____ [date], is now due and owing to the contractor or its assignees or plaintiff.

8. After the completion of the building pursuant to the terms of its labor and material bond, plaintiff was compelled to, and did, pay labor and material claimants sums far in excess of the sum of $_____ still due and owing from defendant. By reason of those payments plaintiff became subrogated to all the rights and entitled to enforce all the remedies of the contractor against defendant. Plaintiff is entitled to all sums now due and owing to plaintiff from defendant.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For the sum of $_____;

2. For interest at _____ percent per annum on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date];

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a surety against the owner for monies owed by the owner to the contractor. A surety, on satisfying the obligation of the principal (the contractor), is entitled to be subrogated to the rights and remedies of the principal against the creditor (the owner) to the extent of the surety's expenditure in satisfying the obligation [Civ. Code § 2848; see Estate of Elizalde (1920) 182 Cal. 427, 432, 433, 188 P. 560] .

§ 104.222 Ground of Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)]--No Allegation That Plaintiff Is Duly Licensed Contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

[1] FORM Ground of Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)]--No Allegation That Plaintiff Is Duly Licensed Contractor [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

The complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against this defendant, in that there is no allegation by plaintiff that he/she/it was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the _____ [act or contract] mentioned in the complaint.

[2] Use of Form

This form of ground for demurrer is for use by a defendant in an action by a contractor when the contractor fails to allege in the complaint that he or she was at all relevant times a duly licensed contractor [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]. Under the license law, no person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a contractor may bring or maintain any action, or recover in law or equity in any action, in any court in California, for the collection of compensation for the performance of any act or contract for which a California contractor's license is required without alleging that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of that act or contract [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a); see MW Erectors Inc. v. Niederhauser Ornamental and Metal Works Co. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 412, 425-426, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 755, 115 P.3d 41 (under terms of § 7031(a), contractor is ineligible to recover any compensation if, at any time during performance of agreement for contractor services, he or she was not duly licensed)]. Persons entitled to assert a defense or demurrer based on this provision include general contractors defending against suits by subcontractors, persons contracting with out-of-state contractors, and even persons who knew that the contractor was unlicensed at the time the work was contracted for or performed [Hydrotech Systems, Ltd. v. Oasis Waterpark (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 988, 997, 277 Cal. Rptr. 517, 803 P.2d 370 ; Vallejo Development Co. v. Beck Development Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 929, 941-942, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 669] .

For further discussion of the prohibition against actions by unlicensed contractors, and discussion of the narrow "substantial compliance" exception to this prohibition [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(e)], see § 104.83[4].

For further discussion of demurrers, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgments on the Pleadings .

[3] Statement of Ground for Objection

A demurrer may be disregarded by the court unless it distinctly specifies the grounds on which any of the objections to the complaint, cross complaint, or answer are taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.60].

[4] Time for Filing Demurrer

A demurrer must be filed within 30 days after service of the complaint or cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.40(a)].

[5] Affirmative Defense

An objection to a complaint, cross complaint, or answer may be made by demurrer to that pleading when the ground for the objection appears on the face of the pleading [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)]. If the ground for the objection does not appear on the face of the pleading--as is the case, for example, when the contractor properly alleges licensure but was not in fact duly licensed at all times during the performance of the contract--the objection may be taken by answer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b)]. For an example of a form of affirmative defense based on lack of licensure, see § 104.217.

1. The contract required plaintiff contractor to obtain a certificate of satisfactory completion from _____ [name of architect], architect for the project, as a condition to payment by defendant.

2. Plaintiff has failed to obtain the certification.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by an owner in an answer to a complaint by a contractor for breach of a building contract. It may be used when the contract provides for an architect's certificate of completion as a condition to payment by the owner and the contractor has failed to obtain the certificate.

The defense asserted in this allegation will be effective only if the contractor is responsible for the failure to obtain the certificate.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by a contractor against an owner stating a common count for quantum meruit. An action in quantum meruit is used to recover the reasonable value of services rendered by the plaintiff to the defendant when the defendant is not liable for a fixed sum [McFarland v. Holcomb (1898) 123 Cal. 84, 86, 55 P. 761] . An action in quantum meruit may be used to recover money due under an express or implied-in-fact contract [Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 778, 793, 256 P.2d 947] .

[3] No Prayer for Prejudgment Interest

In an action to recover the reasonable value of services rendered, the amount, character, or value of which can only be established by evidence in court, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest prior to the verdict or judgment [Swinnerton v. Argonaut L. & D. Co. (1896) 112 Cal. 375, 379, 44 P. 719 ; Parker v. Maier Brewing Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 630, 634, 4 Cal. Rptr. 825] .

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages is for use by an owner when the contractor fails to complete his or her performance within the allotted time and the owner is damaged by the delay. This form of complaint may be used in connection with both residential and commercial construction projects (see alternative language in Paragraphs 6 and 7).

[3] Damages Proximately Caused by Breach

The complaint claims damages for the owner's costs to rent a home or office during the period of delay (Paragraph 6), to make two moves instead of a single move (Paragraph 7), and for miscellaneous other costs incurred due to the delay (Paragraph 8). If the owner wishes to claim unusual damages such as, for example, damages for adverse tax consequences resulting from the delay, the complaint should indicate that the contractor was aware, at the time the contract was executed, of the potential for those damages if his or her performance was not completed in a timely manner [see Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 993, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119] . If this is not the case, the owner may have difficulty establishing that the damages were proximately caused by the breach or likely, in the ordinary course of things, to result from the breach [see Civ. Code § 3300].

For further discussion of the damages recoverable by the owner for a contractor's breach, see § 104.25[2].

[4] No Time Specified for Performance

Paragraph 4 specifies the date on which the contractor's performance was to be completed under the terms of the contract. If a building contract does not specify a completion date, the contractor will be allowed a reasonable time to complete the project [Civ. Code § 1657]. For further discussion, see § 104.19.

A. Building Contracts and Actions for Breach

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.226

§ 104.226 Allegation--Liquidated Damages [Civ. Code § 1671]

[1] FORM Allegation--Liquidated Damages [Civ. Code § 1671]

The contract provided that the amount of damages that plaintiff would sustain by reason of delay in the completion of defendant's performance would be impractical or extremely difficult to determine and that defendant would pay to plaintiff liquidated damages in the sum of $_____ per day for each and every day the work remained uncompleted beyond the completion date specified in the contract.

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use in an owner's complaint for damages for the contractor's delay in completing performance of the contract when the contract contains a liquidated damages provision. It may be used in the complaint in § 104.225, in place of Paragraphs 5 through 8 of that form.

[3] Recoverability of Liquidated Damages

A provision in a building contract liquidating the owner's damages for the contractor's breach of the contract is valid unless the contractor establishes that the provision was unreasonable under the circumstances existing at the time the contract was made [see Civ. Code § 1671(b)].

[4] Joinder of Surety

If a performance bond incorporating the contract has been issued, the surety must be joined to the action so that it may be held liable for the liquidated damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(a)]. When a contract containing a liquidated damages clause is made part of a performance bond, the liquidated damages clause is covered by the bond and the surety is liable for liquidated damages [Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Berkeley (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 145, 156, 204 Cal. Rptr. 387] . Paragraphs 4 (capacity and residence of surety), 8 (bond required by contract), and 9 (issuance of bond) in § 104.219 may be used to join the surety to this action.

[5] Owner's Responsibility for Delay

The owner will not be allowed to recover liquidated damages for the contractor's delay in performance if the delay occurred through the combined fault of the owner and the contractor [Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co. v. Board of Trustees (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 337, 340-341, 35 Cal. Rptr. 765] or if the owner's acts contributed substantially to the delay [General Ins. Co. v. Commerce Hyatt House (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 460, 472, 85 Cal. Rptr. 317] . If, however, the owner and contractor each caused some delay and the portion of the delay caused by the owner can be identified and separated from the portion caused by the contactor, the owner may recover for the portion of the delay attributable solely to the contractor [Jasper Const. v. Foothill Junior College Dist. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14-15, 153 Cal. Rptr. 767] .

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant _____ [name] alleges:

Plaintiff unreasonably delayed the construction of the project contrary to the agreement of the parties to the contract, and as a proximate result of this unreasonable delay, the cost of the project has been substantially increased. By reason of the unreasonable delay plaintiff has committed a substantial breach of the contract and defendant is thereby excused from further performance of the contract.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a contractor in an answer to an owner's complaint when the owner has delayed the contractor's performance of the contract. It may be used as a defense to an owner's action alleging delay by the contractor [see § 104.225], or to an owner's action for abandonment of the contract [see § 104.230]. The contractor's nonperformance of the contract will be excused to the extent that his or her performance is prevented or delayed by the owner's acts [Civ. Code § 1511(1)]. § 104.228 Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10] for Damages [Civ. Code § 3300] for Breach of Building Contract--By Owner Against Contractor--Negligent Work and Defective Materials

[1] FORM Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10] for Damages [Civ. Code § 3300] for Breach of Building Contract--By Owner Against Contractor--Negligent Work and Defective Materials

[Caption. See § 104.210.]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

3. Plaintiff is now and was at all times herein mentioned the owner of a parcel of real property located in _____ [city], _____ County, California, and described as follows: _____ [set forth legal description or street address].

4. [Formation and terms of contract. See § 104.225, Paragraph 3.]

5. Defendant began to purchase materials for and to perform labor on the construction project in accordance with the contract on or about _____ [date]. Defendant completed the project on _____ [date].

6. Defendant has at all times failed, refused, and neglected to perform according to the terms of the contract and the plans and specifications referred to in the contract, in that defendant so negligently and carelessly _____ [specify negligent labor performed or defective materials furnished, e.g., performed the paint work on the interior and exterior of the premises as to necessitate that all the surfaces be repainted or caused a type of paint wholly unsuitable for the purpose to be applied to the exterior; defendant knew or should have known that the paint was unsuitable for this purpose].

7. On or about _____ [date(s)], plaintiff demanded in writing that defendant _____ [specify work to be refinished or replaced, e.g., repaint the interior and exterior of the premises or remove the unsuitable paint and apply appropriate exterior paint], but defendant failed and refused and continues to fail and refuse to perform this work. [True copies of the demands are attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.]

8. By reason of defendant's breach of the contract, plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $_____, the amount reasonably expended by plaintiff to pay another contractor to correct defendant's work and make it conform to the contract and the plans and specifications.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages for breach of a building contract is for use by an owner when the contractor negligently performed the contract or performed the contract using defective materials. Performance of a contract in a negligent manner may give rise to a breach of contract action even if no express contract provisions are violated [see, e.g., Perry v. Robertson (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 333, 340, 247 Cal. Rptr. 74] .

The suggested language concerning the contractor's use of defective or unsuitable materials includes a statement that the contractor knew or should have known that the materials used were unsuitable (Paragraph 6). For a form of complaint setting forth both tort and contract causes of action, see § 104.250. For further discussion of combined tort and breach of contract actions, see § 104.41[6].

[Caption. See § 104.210.]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

3. Prior to _____ [date], defendant constructed a building for plaintiff pursuant to a [written] contract between plaintiff and defendant[, a copy of which is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A]. Thereafter a dispute arose between plaintiff and defendant as to whether the roof of the building was defective, and as to the extent of damages caused by leakage resulting from the roof.

4. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff and defendant compromised the dispute by an agreement in writing, under the terms of which defendant agreed to repair the claimed defects, and to pay for all damages to plaintiff's property in the building caused by leakage resulting from the defects, in consideration of plaintiff's forbearance to sue defendant on the original contract. [Under the terms of the agreement, defendant was to make the repairs and pay the damages to plaintiff before _____ (date).] A copy of the compromise agreement is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

5. Plaintiff has performed all conditions, covenants, and promises to be performed on his/her/its part under the terms of the compromise agreement.

[EITHER, if compromise agreement specified deadline for defendant's performance]

6. On _____ [date], after the time for defendant's performance of the compromise agreement had passed without defendant having performed the agreement, plaintiff made [written] demand on defendant to repair the roof of the building and to pay for all damages to plaintiff's _____ [describe damaged property, e.g., stock and merchandise].

[OR, if no deadline for defendant's performance was specified in compromise agreement]

6. After the expiration of a reasonable time for defendant's performance of the compromise agreement, plaintiff on _____ [date] made [written] demand on defendant to repair the roof on the building and to pay all damages to plaintiff's _____ [describe damaged property, e.g., stock and merchandise].

[CONTINUE]

7. Defendant has failed and refused, and continues to fail and refuse, to perform any part of the compromise agreement.

8. The reasonable value of the cost of replacement and/or repair of the roof is $_____. Plaintiff has sustained damage to his/her/its _____ [describe damaged property, e.g., stock and merchandise] in the building in the sum of $_____.

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint is for use by an owner in an action for a contractor's breach of a compromise agreement to repair a defective roof constructed under a building contract and to pay for property damaged as a result of the defect.

[3] Compromise Agreements

Paragraph 4 sets forth the consideration given by the contractor (repair roof and pay for damaged property) and the owner (forbearance to sue) for the compromise agreement. A compromise agreement to repair a defectively constructed building must be supported by consideration [Enslow v. Von Guenthner (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 318, 321-322, 14 Cal. Rptr. 231] . Forbearance to sue is a sufficient consideration for such an agreement [Civ. Code § 1605; Louisville Title Ins. Co. v. Surety Title & Guar. Co. (1976) 60 Cal. App. 3d 781, 792-793, 132 Cal. Rptr. 63] .

[4] Time for Performance

The first Alternative Paragraph 6 should be used if the compromise agreement specified a deadline for the contractor's performance, and the contractor failed to perform by the deadline. The second Alternative Paragraph 6 should be used if the compromise agreement contained no deadline for the contractor's performance, but a reasonable time for the performance has expired and the contractor has failed or refused to perform in response to the owner's demands for performance. If no time is specified for the performance of an act required to be performed, a reasonable time for performance is allowed [Civ. Code § 1657]. For further discussion, see § 104.19.

[Caption. See § 104.210.]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity and residence of defendant contractor. See § 104.210, Paragraph 2.]

[2. Fictitious name allegation, if appropriate. See § 104.210, Paragraph 3.]

3. [Capacity and residence of defendant surety. See § 104.219, Paragraph 4.]

4. On or about _____ [date], in _____ County, California, plaintiff entered into a written contract with defendant contractor for the construction by defendant contractor of _____ [briefly describe project to be constructed, e.g., a certain building in that county]. A copy of the contract is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit A.

5. On or about _____ [date], in accordance with the contract, defendant surety executed and delivered to plaintiff, and plaintiff accepted, its bond ensuring the faithful performance by defendant contractor of the contract according to its terms, plans, and specifications, and promising to pay to plaintiff, on contractor's failure to so perform, all damages caused by such a failure in a sum not exceeding $_____. A copy of the bond is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit B.

6. Defendant contactor has failed and refused to faithfully perform the contract in that _____ [specify acts showing nonperformance or abandonment of project].

7. No notice of completion for the building has been filed.

8. On or about _____ [date], [and several times thereafter,] plaintiff made written demand on defendant contractor to faithfully perform the contract, but defendant contractor has failed, refused, and neglected to do so.

9. As a proximate result of contractor's failure and refusal to faithfully perform the contract, plaintiff has been damaged in the reasonable sum of $_____, the difference between the contract price and the cost of the agreement obtained by plaintiff from _____ [name of new contractor] to [perform or complete performance of] contractor's obligations under the contract. Defendant surety is liable to plaintiff on the bond to pay these damages, as well as any and all other damages or loss sustained by plaintiff by reason of defendant contractor's breach of the contract.

[10. Also as a proximate result of contractor's failure and refusal to faithfully perform the contract, plaintiff has been damaged in the amount of $_____ for lost rent. The building that is the subject of the contract was not and could not be occupied by plaintiff's tenant until _____ (date). The tenant's occupancy was delayed for _____ (number) _____ [weeks or months] after the completion date agreed on in the contract between plaintiff and defendant contractor. The rental agreed on by plaintiff and his/her/its tenant for the occupancy of the building was the reasonable sum of $_____ per month.]

11. In compliance with the condition of the bond relating to notice to surety, on or about _____ [date], plaintiff gave defendant surety written notice of the failure and refusal of defendant contractor to faithfully perform the contract and the damages to plaintiff occasioned by defendant contractor's breach, and made demand on defendant surety for payment of plaintiff's damages. Defendant surety has failed and refused, and still fails and refuses, to pay any part of plaintiff's damages. A copy of the notice and demand is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C.

12. Plaintiff has faithfully and fully performed all of the conditions and covenants required of him/her/it by the terms of the contract.

[Verification, if desired. See § 104.210.]

[2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for damages for breach of contract is for use by an owner against a contractor. The contractor's surety is joined to allow recovery on the faithful performance bond [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(a)]. When a civil action is brought to enforce liability on a bond, both the principal and the sureties must be joined as parties to the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.430(a)].

[3] Time for Filing Action

If the faithful performance bond contains a condition concerning the time within which an action against the bond must be filed, any action against the surety on the bond must be filed within that time [Jew v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 310, 314-316, 16 Cal. Rptr. 542] . A condition waiving the statute of limitations must be in writing and signed by the waiving party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5].

[4] Extent of Recovery Against Faithful Performance Bond

The complaint includes an allegation seeking damages for the costs of completing the construction work called for by the contract (Paragraph 9), and an optional allegation seeking damages for lost rent (Paragraph 10). Allegations concerning other types of damages proximately caused by the breach, or that would be likely in the ordinary course of things to be caused by the breach, may also be added [see Civ. Code § 3300]. The extent to which the surety will be liable for the damages depends mainly on the terms of the contract and the bond [Cates Constr. Inc. v. Talbot Ptnrs. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 28, 39-40, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 855, 980 P.2d 407] . For example, when a contract is made a part of the performance bond, a valid liquidated damages clause in the contract [see Civ. Code § 1671] is covered by the bond and the surety will be liable for liquidated damages even when the contractor abandons the contract and the surety is compelled to complete his or her performance [Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. City of Berkeley (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 145, 156, 204 Cal. Rptr. 387] . For further discussion of the liability of a surety under a faithful performance bond, see Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

PART IV. FORMS

10-104 California Forms of Pleading and Practice--Annotated § 104.231

§ 104.231 Allegation--Contractor Furnished Payment Bond

[1] FORM Allegation--Contractor Furnished Payment Bond

On or about _____ [date], in accordance with the contract, defendant surety executed and delivered to plaintiff owner, and plaintiff accepted, its bond ensuring that if defendant contractor or his/her/its subcontractors failed to pay for any materials, provisions, or other supplies used in, on, for, or about the performance of the contract, or for any work or labor of any kind performed on the contract, or for any amounts due under the Unemployment Insurance Act with respect to the work or labor, defendant surety would pay for the same in an amount not exceeding $_____. The bond also provided that if suit was brought on the bond, defendant surety would pay a reasonable sum, to be fixed by the court, for attorney's fees. A copy of this bond is attached to and incorporated into this complaint as Exhibit C.

[2] Use of Form

This form of allegation is for use by an owner in a complaint against a contractor and the contractor's surety when the surety has provided a payment bond. It may be included in a complaint such as the one set forth in § 104.230.

[3] Claims Payable From Payment Bond

A payment bond is a bond for payment in full of the claims of all claimants, which is also by its terms made to inure to the benefit of all claimants and to give these persons a right of action to recover on the bond in any suit brought under the California mechanics' lien laws [Civ. Code § 3109 et seq.] or in a separate suit brought on the bond [Civ. Code § 3096]. A payment bond allegation is thus appropriate in an action in which the lien claims of subcontractors, suppliers, or other persons who provided labor or materials for the performance of the contract are an item of the owner's damages. For further discussion, see § 104.14[1].

[4] Payment of Lien Claims Under Faithful Performance Bond

A faithful performance bond that refers to a contract providing that the contractor will pay the claims of all persons performing labor or furnishing materials binds the surety for labor performed and materials furnished even in the absence of a payment bond [Culbertson v Cizek (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 451, 466-467, 37 Cal. Rptr. 548] . For further discussion, see § 104.14[2].

§ 104.232 Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--By Surety to Action by Owner--Plaintiff Failed to Commence Suit Within Time Provided by Performance Bond

[1] FORM Affirmative Defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)]--By Surety to Action by Owner--Plaintiff Failed to Commence Suit Within Time Provided by Performance Bond

AS A [_____ (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], defendant _____ [name] alleges:

1. Defendant surety denies that plaintiff has duly performed all of the conditions of the surety bond on his/her/its part.

2. Paragraph _____ [number, letter, or other paragraph designation] of the surety bond, Exhibit _____ of plaintiff's complaint, provides _____ [set forth provisions of surety bond pertinent to commencement of action, e.g., that no suit, action, or proceeding to recover on the bond shall be sustained unless commenced within six months from the completion of the structure or work of improvement, as "completion" is defined in Civil Code Section 3086].

3. On or about _____ [date], in Book _____, Page _____, Official Records of the County of _____, there was recorded a notice of completion, executed by plaintiff. "Completion" as used in the notice constitutes "completion" as defined in Civil Code Section 3086. A copy of the notice of completion is attached to and incorporated into this answer as Exhibit 1.

4. Plaintiff's complaint was filed on _____ [date], which was more than _____ [specify period provided for in bond condition, e.g., six months] after the completion of the structure or work of improvement.

[2] Use of Form

This form of affirmative defense is for use by a surety in an answer to an owner's complaint on a performance bond. It should be used when the complaint was not filed within the time specified in the conditions to the bond. Ordinarily, conditions of this type specify that an action on the bond must be filed within a certain number of months after completion of the structure or work of improvement that is the subject of the underlying contract. For forms of answer generally, see Ch. 26, Answers .

[3] Shortening of Statutory Limitations Period

Contracting parties may agree on a shorter period of limitation for bringing an action than that prescribed by statute, so long as the time allowed is reasonable [Jew v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 310, 315, 16 Cal. Rptr. 542] . If the bond sued on is a payment bond rather than a performance bond, the period for bringing an action on the bond may not be shortened to less than six months, and may not be shortened at all as to claimants, unless the bond is recorded before the work of improvement is commenced [Civ. Code §§ 3239, 3240]. A condition waiving the statute of limitations must be in writing and signed by the waiving party [Code Civ. Proc. § 360.5].

5. On execution of the contract, plaintiff paid to defendant $_____ in cash.

6. Plaintiff and defendant agreed on the plans and specifications for the contract, including the labor and materials to be used in the construction of the _____ [building or improvement]. The plans and specifications agreed to by plaintiff and defendant are attached to Exhibit A. [2] Use of Form

This form of complaint for restitution of money paid by an owner to a contractor is for use when the owner has rescinded the contract due to the inability of the contractor to procure a necessary building permit.

[3] Failure to Obtain Permits as Grounds for Rescission

A contract may be unilaterally rescinded if, among other reasons, it is unlawful for causes that do not appear in its terms and conditions, and the parties are not equally at fault, or if the consideration for the obligation of the rescinding party becomes entirely void or fails in any material respect, from any cause, before it is rendered to the rescinding party (Paragraphs 6-8) [see Civ. Code § 1689(b)(2)-(5)]. Ordinarily, the contractor's inability to obtain a building permit will permit the owner to rescind the building contract. However, if the contractor's inability to obtain the permit is due to the owner's failure to provide information necessary to the permit application or determination, the owner may not rely on the failure to obtain the permit as a basis for rescinding the contract [Bellwood Discount Corp. v. Empire Steel Buildings Co. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436, 346 P.2d 467] . For further discussion, see § 104.17.
